Patroness Hall Burned

In the forenoon of Sunday, January 2, while practically all of the college people were in attendance at the church services more than a mile distant from College Hill, fire broke out in the roof of Patroness Hall, the dormitory which was built for the girls by the efforts of that noble band of women, Patronesses of Graceland College, about twenty years ago.

The fire was not discovered until a large part of the roof was ablaze. The Lamoni Fire Department was called and fought as best it could, but nothing could be done except to protect Briggs Hall, formerly known as Bide-a-wee, the splendid and comparatively new building standing just east of the burning structure. Every effort was made to rescue the personal property of the students, but only a small amount was removed, those who occupied the third floor losing practically everything.

Patroness Hall was occupied by the kitchen and dining hall, these taking almost the entire ground floor, and some of the appurtenances to these departments were removed. The second and third floors, where thirty-six girl students made their homes, suffered almost entire loss. No one was injured, yet no effort was spared to reach and reclaim the property of the girls.

Patroness Hall was a large, well-constructed frame building, erected while David Allen Anderson was president of Graceland College, about twenty years ago. It was insured for nine thousand dollars, which was all that the college authorities could secure on the building. The building was dry. A considerable wind was blowing from the west at the time of the fire, which made it hazardous for Briggs Hall, not more than twenty feet away and in the course of the wind. The heat caused the metal window frames to warp, breaking the glass. Smoke and heat caused some damage to this building and its contents.

Patroness Hall; taken from Northeast

A splendid spirit is being shown both by the citizens of Lamoni and by Graceland's student body, and temporary provision for the necessities of the students affected is being made and accepted. Lamoni citizens have always reacted in the most magnificent way in such cases of exigency.

The boys who were occupying Marietta Hall are being transferred to various places, many of them to Herald Hall, and this will give place for a number of the girls. The basement of the gymnasium is being equipped as a kitchen and dining hall, and the meals will be provided here.

The fire which destroyed Patroness Hall is supposed to have originated by sparks falling on the shingle roof. There is only one shingle roof left in the group of college buildings, the roof being over Marietta Hall, which stands at a considerable distance from any other structure, and the fire hazard of which is small in comparison to that of the lost building.

The passing of Patroness Hall as one of the units in the college group will bring afresh to the minds of Graceland alumni memories of college days, inseparably connected with this old building which has housed hundreds of Graceland students. Many will remember the particular room they occupied; they will remember who lived next door; and who across the hall; the struggles and trials of college experiences; the friendships formed in the reception room of the old building. Its walls saw many happy reunions at the beginning of the school term and many tearful partings when students separated at the end of the school year.

No one who has ever been touched with the spirit of Graceland will deny to the college alumni the memories sacred to Patroness Hall.

Students who lost clothing and accessories in the fire should not be compelled or permitted to replace the property at their own expense. Many of them are working their way through Graceland, and all the property possessed by some of these ambitious and energetic young women was contained in their rooms and was consequently destroyed. These losing young women have been promised that their property will be replaced, the officers of the college and of the church believing that the membership of the church and the alumni of the college will desire to contribute to that end. Already several have signified themselves as desirous of helping, and among these are individuals, aid societies, and women's organizations.

A systematic way of replacing the property will be worked out by the college and church authorities and all will be given opportunity to help. Announcement of the details of the plan will be made in the HERALD of January 12.

Success lies, not in achieving what you aim at, but in aiming at what you ought to achieve, and pressing forward, sure of achievement here, or if not here, hereafter.—R. F. Horton.

Scientific Property

At different times when talking of the social order which would or should prevail under stewardships, I have called attention to the fact that every man functioning according to his dominating or chief talents, and surplus being socialized, research work would become more common, because its cost would be distributed more widely. As it is now, research is a matter largely for endowed institutions or persons. The nearest we come at present in socializing the costs and the results of research work is where it is carried on by state or national departments, and the findings published. But even here the present system too often permits the few to benefit (in profits), because the beneficial results of state or national research are appropriated or commercialized by private capital.

In the ideal social organization, needed research would be carried on at general expense, and the results would become common property.

Here again it is seen how admirably the law of surplus works out social problems, working in parallel with the law of need. Many a patient, devoted searcher for truth and needed solution of problems, goes unrewarded from his success, while others, seizing the results he attained, have gained selfish advantage.

The problem this whole matter presents, is set out in an editorial in the January issue of the Scientific American, under the caption, "Scientific property," as follows:

What recompense is offered by modern civilization to the men of science who make great discoveries which will perhaps bring about marvelous changes and enormous advantages to industry and enable others to become fabulously rich? Nothing! In other words, jurisprudence, which, in the course of its evolution, has already succeeded in evolving and protecting the rights of the author and inventor, has not yet succeeded in evolving the rights of the man of science nor in finding a means of rewarding him.

Thus Senator Ruffini, quoting the Italian writer, Luzzato, states the case of the research worker in pure science for whose achievement, however great, there is no material reward. The Committee on Intellectual Cooperation of the League of Nations has approved Senator Ruffini's masterly report and has adopted a resolution declaring: "A new right should be created for scientists whose discoveries have been properly applied."

This new right has been called "scientific property." It may be defined as a property right in a scientific discovery, similar to that which inventors and authors enjoy with regard to their creations. In other words, the scientist would obtain a quasi-patent for his discovery with the privilege of deriving a royalty from any manufacturer who applied the scientist's new principle to an industrial product.

Arguments there are, of course, against the project. It is more than a coincidence that the objections to the creation of scientific property are precisely the same as those advanced against the creation of a patent system; yet who today will deny that the patent system is one of the most important cogs in the machinery of modern progress?

John H. Wigmore, dean of Northwestern University of Law, declares in a letter to the writer:

"I would say that I regard the subject of scientific property as one of the most immense significance in the near future. The Scientific American would do well to stimulate discussion upon it. Hitherto, in this country, no attention has been paid to it, but the matter is well under way in Europe; although, as this country stands at the head in practical inventions and among the first in scientific discovery, we ought to be more deeply interested than any other people."

Fortunately, however, there are signs that we are about to become more alive to the problem. The value of research in pure science is recognized as never before. As one of many tokens, we have the effort of Secretary Hoover and the National Academy of Science to raise a fund of $20,000,000 that scholars with suitable equipment may discover new worlds for industry to conquer. It is not enough, however, to provide men merely with tools with which to work. There must be a fitting reward for these men who blaze new trails. For a man whose discoveries make possible a long step forward in civilization to suffer, while others wax rich from the application of his principles to industry, is a crying injustice.

By what system can the scientists share in the rewards? Perhaps by the method suggested by M. de Torres Quevedo to the Committee on Intellectual Cooperation—creating a tribunal to establish priority of scientific discovery and granting to the scientist a right of authorship so that he may enter into agreements with subsequent inventors or manufacturers. Always, however, there must be a recognition of this principle—no scientist who is alive to the ethics of his profession may stay the march of progress by preventing the application of his discoveries by others in the field of applied science. The problem is an intricate one, but its solution is being sought earnestly, intelligently, and with sympathy.

The whole approach to the problem as ^{has} set out by the editor of the Scientific American ^{is} from that of reward to the individual. The law of ^{the} surplus and need, as set out in the phrase, "From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his needs," is from the social approach and gives the solution at once. Looked at from the viewpoint of the writer of the article quoted, the problem is intricate, but becomes simple seen from the viewpoint of stewardships. The one with ability as a searcher, searches; and he gets his needs. His surplus goes to society. Those who see the applicability of the discoveries to industry, apply them, and they get according to their needs while their surplus goes to the group. The appeal for research work, as well as for application to industry, is betterment of social conditions. Contribution to community weal. And it is no less strong than the appeal of rewards; as every true scientist knows work for the love of it is a social dynamic somewhat rare now; but the time surely is coming when it will be common.

F. M. S.

Do your work—not just your work and no more, but a little more for the lavishing's sake; that little more which is worth all the rest. And if you suffer as you must, and if you doubt as you must, do your work. Put your heart into it and the sky will clear. Then out of your very doubt and suffering will be born the supreme joy of life.—Dean Briggs.

Blue Pencil Notes

"I am sure," said Deacon Goodentart, "that Charity is still anxious to cover a multitude of shins."

Jazz takes a sublime and sacred old strain of music and weaves it through a maze of gibbering jazz until one might imagine hell trying to sing the doxology.

Last week we had some sport with certain forms of so-called science. But we have no irreverence for those serious-minded men who valiantly and devotedly spend their lives in search of the truth. At times almost the spirit of the prophet descends upon them.

Speaking before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at Philadelphia, December 27, the retiring president, Doctor Pupin, said:

"The next twenty-five years will not see merely men speaking to men all over the world. The earth itself, and the sun, that great center of all our terrestrial energy, which means all our life, will be speaking to men by electrical communications, and men will understand the message.

"Earth and sun are speaking now, but as yet we do not understand. We call their voices 'static,' or 'fading,' earth currents, and other disagreeable terms. The means of electrical communication which the coming generation will develop also will be powerful instruments for the study of the electrical activity of our solar system. That study will decipher the messages we now do not understand.

"I already have watched on my instruments the arrival of these cosmic messages. The earth currents in trans-Atlantic cables and the fading of radio messages, for instance, rise and fall, rise and fall, very, very slowly, taking hours and hours to complete a cycle. It is like watching the deliberate, irresistible breathing of a cosmic giant."

We catch here a hint of the "sphere music" heard by poets; of the time when the "morning stars sang together" recorded by the prophets. We seek God through prayer, as he has commanded. These men in the only way they know, by research, strive to come to him, and truly they sometimes climb the trail far up toward the great white throne.

Before the same convention, December 30, Doctor Curtis, director of the Allegheny Observatory, declared that a life-time of study of astronomy and allied sciences has convinced him of the immortality of the human soul. He said:

"I find it impossible to regard Handel's 'Largo,'

Keats's 'Ode to a Grecian Urn,' and the higher ethics as mere by-products of the chemical interaction of a collection of hydrocarbon molecules. With energy, matter, space, and time continuous, with nothing lost or wasted, are we ourselves the only manifestation that comes to an end, ceases, is annihilated, at threescore years and ten?

"What we crudely call the spirit of man makes new compounds, plays with the laws of chemical action, guides the forces of the atom, changes the face of the earth, gives life to new forms and takes it away from millions of animals and plants. Here is a flame that controls its own flaming, a creative spirit which can not reasonably be less than the continuity it controls.

"This thing, soul, mind, or spirit, can not well be an exception. In some way, as yet impossible to define, it, too, must possess continuity."

Ministerial Conference Banquet

Attending this banquet in Zion Monday evening at 5.30, were sixty-eight of the ministry of the church, about thirty of whom were from mission fields in the Central States. It was in fact a miniature conference, yet devoid of some of the features that characterize a conference gathering, from the fact that the ministry were gathered for the purpose of intensive study, that individual preparation might be made for intensive work in their fields of labor.

Fervent handclasps and expressions of confidence in exchanging greetings made one instantly aware that here was a group of men whose faces were set Zionward and determined to discharge their ministry acceptably.

Apostle J. F. Garver presided, and responses were made to the following: "The price of progress," Bishop M. H. Siegfried; "Conditions of progress," Elder J. A. Thomas; "Assurance of progress," Bishop Albert Carmichael. At this point telegrams were read sending greetings and best wishes for success from Brother Oliver McDowell, Flint, Michigan; Brother T. S. Williams, Detroit; and Bishop Harry E. French, Columbus, Ohio. Apostle Garver called on President Smith to occupy the last ten minutes of the time allotted for the banquet, and his response thrilled those present with a determination to prepare to meet the issues confronting the church, the keynote being "Expansion through understanding," that we might be ready for the endowment and the larger tasks confronting the church beyond 1930.

Tuesday morning session opened at the Institute Building with a devotional service in charge of Presidents Elbert A. Smith and Floyd M. McDowell. A wonderful spirit of unity of purpose pervaded the entire devotional service.

In the class work to follow the remainder of the ten days, a unanimity of feeling exists, looking forward to the inspirational character of the subjects to be discussed, with the assurance that the theme of the opening devotional services will pervade the entire session of the conference; that is, without God we can do nothing. With this thought in mind, the men are earnestly preparing, laying aside everything that would hinder this theme being in full operation.

It is hoped that this is the first of many regional ministerial conferences to be organized and promoted in the various fields of labor throughout the entire church.

K L D S Radio News Notes

K L D S At Dallas Meeting

The South Central District of the National Association of Broadcasters held its second meeting at Dallas, Texas, December 13 and 14. It was well attended by broadcasters from the eight States included in this district. Two days were devoted to the discussion of broadcasting problems and to educational features. Doctor Frank C. Elliott, manager of W O C and past president of the National Association of Broadcasters, was the guest of the South Central District men, and all benefited by the wealth of experience by this pioneer super-power broadcaster. In the absence of E. H. Rollestone, owner of K V O O and Regional Director of the Association Brother Arthur B. Church, a director in the National Association, acted as chairman during the meetings. The two principal problems confronting the broadcasters are those of radio legislation and the copyright situation. The next regional meeting will probably be held at Wichita, Kansas.

To Broadcast Sunday School Lessons

K L D S, in cooperation with the general Sunday School Department, is planning to broadcast regular weekly Sunday school lessons. These will probably be broadcast on Saturday evenings, from 6.30 to 7:30. Elder C. B. Woodstock, who will be in Independence this week, will probably conclude the necessary arrangements so that definite announcements concerning lessons and schedules can be published in the HERALD next week.

W O S to Broadcast Next Week

During the annual Missouri Farmers' Week, beginning Monday, January 17, W O S will broadcast many of the features of the meetings, and K L D S has given the State Marketing Bureau station Tuesday and Thursday evenings, in addition to the regular W O S schedules on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings. On Tuesday, the 18th, and Thursday, the 20th, K L D S will broadcast only from 7 until 7.30. W O S has also made arrangements to broadcast news features of the State Legislature. Bulletins will be on the air each evening, except Saturdays and Sundays, at six o'clock.

"Cooperation Among Other Social Movements"

In the last issue of the HERALD we began an article on the cooperative movement to which we invited the attention of our readers. In this issue we conclude the reprint.

I should like to suggest to our close students of stewardships the advisability of having in our literature a comparative study of cooperation and stewardships.

In presenting our social philosophy, we are frequently confused in the minds of many with followers or devotees of the cooperative movements, with socialism and with communism, for our philosophy contains beliefs in common with all. Any broad and effective social philosophy will, and we may even say must. The universality of the doctrine of stewardships in the betterment of social conditions has a charm which should stir our students and members to splendid efforts.

Ministerial Conference and Institute

A gathering of the General Conference appointees of the central portion of the country, both of the pastoral and the missionary branches, opened in Independence Monday evening by a banquet at the Stone Church Dining Hall. Read of this banquet in an adjacent column.

The daily program is to be observed about as follows:

8:30 a. m. to 9:30 a. m., Prayer meeting, Presidency in charge.

9:45 a. m. to 10:30 a. m., Class work; Religious education and the church program, F. H. Edwards.

10:45 a. m. to 12:00 a. m., Class work: Missionary methods, Pastoral methods.

2:00 p. m. to 2:15 p. m., Community singing, Frank A. Russell.

2:15 p. m. to 2:30 p. m., Questionnaire.

2:30 p. m. to 3:30 p. m., Joint lecture and round table discussion.

3:45 p. m. to 5:00 p. m., Recreation, J. F. Sheehy.

7:30 p. m. to 8:00 p. m., Community singing, Frank A. Russell.

8:00 p. m. to 9:00 p. m., Preaching.

Class work, prayer meetings, and all save the evening preaching services are to be conducted at the Institute Building, and the preaching services will be conducted in the beautiful church of the Walnut Park congregation. The public is invited to these preaching services, where the following subjects will be treated: "The mission of the church"; "Church organization"; "Priesthood; its origin and authority"; "The stewardship of priesthood"; "Historic places of Christianity," illustrated; "Necessity and place of the principles"; "Fruits of the Spirit"; "Evidences of divinity"; "The gospel of Christ." The speakers will be such representative men as President Elbert A. Smith, Apostles J. A. Gillen, J. F. Curtis, Paul M. Hanson, J. F. Garver, and possibly others.

The Law Taught Systematically

Elder Eli Bronson writes from Portland, Oregon, in December: "We believe this to be an opportune time of the year to make a special call for the filing of financial statements. At a district priesthood meeting held at our reunion, August 1, 1926, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: 'Resolved, that we, the priesthood of the Portland District, express our confidence in the leading quorums of the church, and that we pledge our mental, moral, physical, financial, and spiritual support as long as this program and policy continue in harmony with the law of God, as we believe the present program and policy to be.'

"Copies of this resolution will be sent to every branch and isolated member in the district, with an appeal for each member to file his inventory, the first step in stewardships, the call being made first to each district officer, second to each branch officer, third to each other member of the priesthood, and fourth to each member of the church not included above. We hope to have this much quite well finished by January 1.

"As soon after January 1 as the Christmas offering drive is finished, we expect to cooperate with district and local Sunday school workers in making tithing a special feature in Sunday school work. Each Sunday school child in the district, including home classes, will be provided with tithing cards, and taught to tithe their pennies. This, we believe, will not only be good for the growing generation, but will also have a good influence upon parents and teachers.

"In the meantime our local forces will be preaching, teaching, and talking the great constructive issues of this momentous hour, not forgetting to ask for the help of heaven."

Such campaign as this should be productive of spiritual conditions far in advance of those now enjoyed. Knowing and keeping the detail of the law will bring rewards in mental and spiritual condition, and will sanctify business and profession to a degree beyond comprehension of those who indifferently hear the word.

Stories From Life of Social Worker

Sister Ida Etzenhouser has written recently two stories taken from the life of a person engaged in social work. The first of these appeared on page 1235, HERALD for December 15, 1926. The other is in the news department of the present number. Each contains a lesson. Read both of them and see what your verdict is.

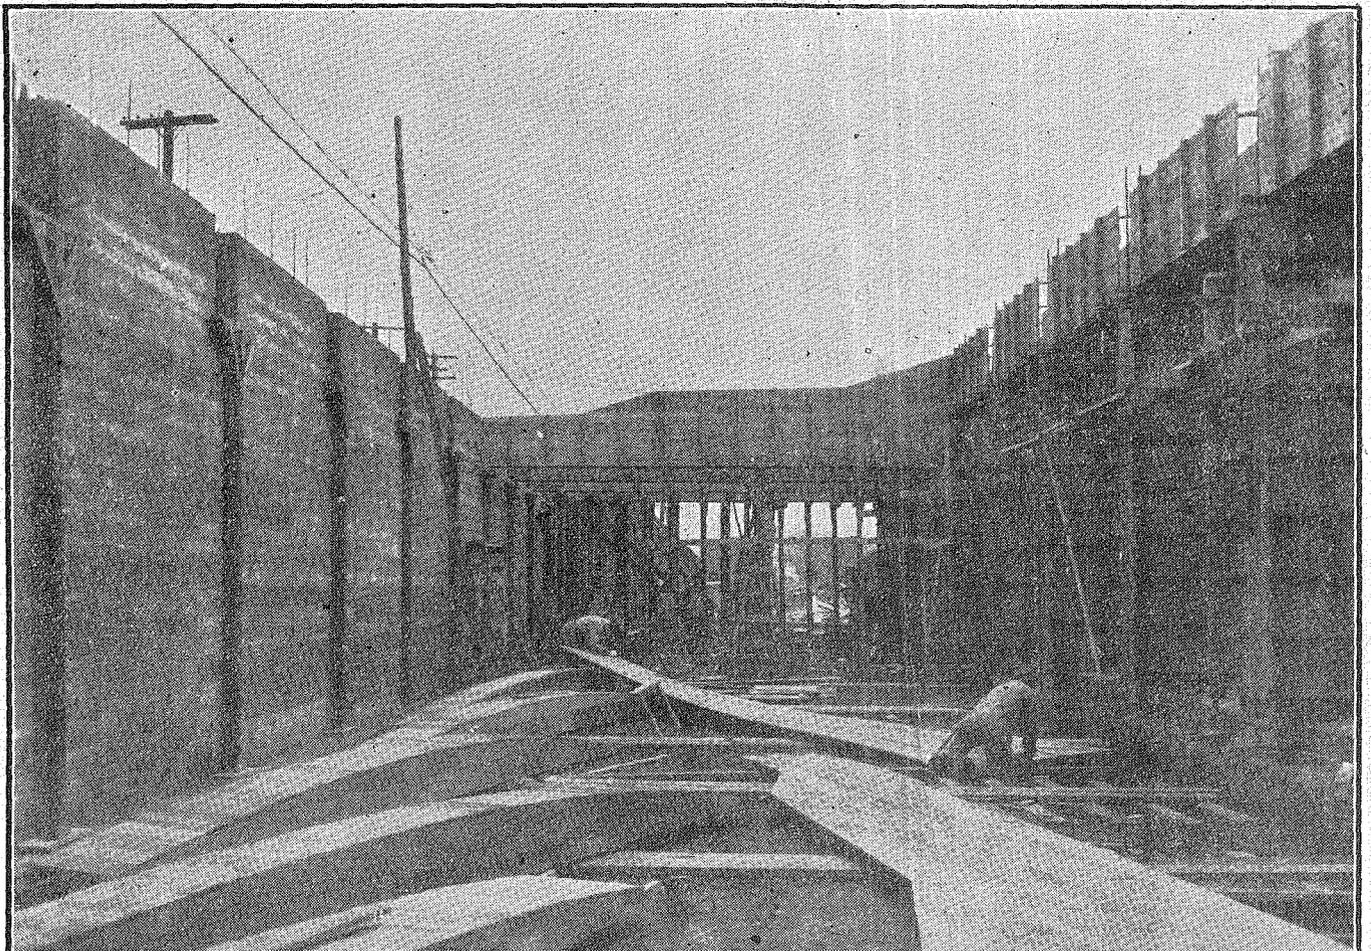

We expect to receive from the pen of Sister Etzenhouser several stories of like occurrences, as they happen, or as they recur to her mind. And we shall pass them on to HERALD readers in the hope that the work may be aided, efficiency and Christian economy advanced, and justice and mercy intelligently administered.

Subway Entrance to Auditorium

The accompanying cut shows the construction of the subway entrance to the Auditorium. The view is taken from a point near Grand Avenue on the west, looking through the subway to the east toward River Boulevard. The concrete on the left is the retaining wall on the north side of the subway which is immediately beneath the main entrance to the building at the surface level. The subway permits entrance to the building at the basement level, from which entrance to the main auditorium or first floor may be gained by the use of ramps located at both the left and right of the basement entrance. This affords an easy incline in gaining access to the main auditorium.

The form work seen in this picture connecting the retaining wall on the north with the piers on the south indicates the location of the steps at the surface level forming the approach to the main entrance of the Auditorium Building. This will be shown in a later picture.

It will be of interest to many to know that the concrete has been poured for this main approach, being completed December 23. Steady progress has been made in forwarding the construction except on days when inclement weather would not permit.

Revelation and Reason on the Word of Wisdom

BY EARNEST A. WEBBE

Does Food Affect Mentality?

Perhaps we should better express it, "Food does affect mentality," for surely in this age and with the promises of the Word of Wisdom before him, no true Latter Day Saint will deny the proposition. So the writer would like to commend the article under above caption in HERALD of December 8. It is always interesting to read what science has to say when it follows up the revelations given us, so I append an excerpt or two that I have noted in reference to above:

Otto Carque in his book on rational diet says: "Meat eating is one of man's habits acquired comparatively late in his history. It appears that this deviation from natural diet was by no means voluntary, but caused by extreme want and necessity. While food has played an important part in the development of the human family . . . the most potent factor in the great increase of his cranial development and thought force has been the severe struggle for existence"; and "The growth of man's spiritual forces will finally lead him out of the age of barbarism in which he is still living."

Again he quotes Thoreau in Higher Laws, where he says: "I believe that every man that has ever been earnest to preserve his higher faculties in the best condition has been particularly inclined to abstain from animal food and from much food of any kind. . . . It is part of the destiny of the human race, in its gradual improvement, to leave off eating animals as surely as the savage tribes left off eating one another when they came in contact with the more civilized. . . . He shall be regarded as a benefactor of his race, who shall teach man to confine himself to a more innocent diet."

Was Joseph Smith a benefactor of his race? Shall we suppose this revelation was not practiced or taught with any greater attention than we now view its philosophy? No; I would rather think that it had much to do with the wonderful development of the first decade of our church history; in very fact, the priesthood were strongly admonished to its proper and due observance. How else could they teach it?

In the above work of Carque on the matter of Food and Mentality, is also the following, and I consider Mr. Carque as perhaps the greatest authority on food chemistry and dietetics, in America. He quotes Seneca, among others, recognizing the benefits occurring from a nonflesh diet, as saying, "It seems my intellectual aptitudes have become more and more developed." Also that Isaac Newton adhered to a strictly vegetarian regime while performing the prodigious intellectual work which made his name immortal. Mention is made that philosophers and artistic souls who have followed or advocated such a temperate regime may be found in Shelley, Byron, Maeterlinck, Linneus, Wagner, Goethe, Tagore, Pope, Voltaire, and a host of others.

Incidentally, concerning the tradition that fish constitutes a brain food, we are reminded of Mark Twain's advice to an aspiring young author—that he would do well to eat a whale a day. The blessings of wisdom and health and endurance are promised with the use of the grains of the field and the wholesome herbs that bring the essential elements of the soil at first hand for the replenishment of our natural forces. In the last days, men conspiring for gain will endeavor to teach us and fasten upon us false customs.

Mr. Carque calls our attention to this: "Doctors and chemists in the employ of the packers are trying by all means to increase the consumption of flesh products by misleading arguments in order to extol the supposed merits of meat." These powerful forces even influence our governmental Department of Agriculture to alignment with them for commercial profit, even though it be against the real health of the Nation.

At the annual convention of meat packers, 1922, at Chicago, their committee chairman said: "It must be apparent to all of you, that in order to overcome the falling off per capita of consumption of meat, which has been emphasized before, you and all the interests and individuals you represent must believe in meat as a fundamentally desirable human food-stuff," and stated that they must go out into the world and impress that as a fact upon all "as a proper food for the child, the adolescent, the adults, the aged, and the brain worker."

Have we been duly forewarned against such conspiracy? Don't we know that meat is not a child's food? that the problems of adolescence are only aggravated by its use? that the adult has need of all his natural health without the handicap of uric acid and purin poisons? that the aged had best conserve what vitality of organic ability is left them without loading these same effete substances into the system? And the brain worker had better keep his blood as clean and refined as possible if he would make the most of that organ.

So pass up the butcher's "Eat more meat" campaign, and look up your Word of Wisdom section, or read that first chapter of Daniel again. If this is too old-fashioned, lend an ear to Benjamin Franklin: "My brother boarded his apprentices in a neighboring family; my refusing to eat animal food was found inconvenient, and I was often scolded for my singularity. I then said that if I were allowed one half per week what was paid for my board I would maintain myself. The offer was immediately embraced, and I soon found that of what was given me I was able to save half. This formed a new fund for the purchase of books. When the rest went to dinner I remained behind and dispatching my frugal meal I had the rest of the time for study, and my progress therein was proportioned to that clearness of ideas and quickness of conception which are the fruits of temperance in eating and drinking." He goes on to tell of various studies he accomplished easily that before his adoption of a simple dietary had proved impossible for him to attain.

Mr. Otto Carque is also a student and authority on political economy, and his writings lead one to see the solution of our economic problems, as a church with a program. Some day we will have to face the incongruity of slaughterhouses in Zion or eliminate them from our requirements—and they will go as narcotics have gone; the saloon has gone; that tobacco must go! Meanwhile knowledge and elucidation must be passed along until the coming of the perfect day.

Permit one further comment on contents of December 8 HERALD, in "The church and the world's business and work," in which is quoted Mr. Albert F. Coyle as editor of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Journal. Mr. Coyle is another authority on sociological topics and a personal friend of your writer, and at whose invitation he has visited Kirtland and the Temple and lectured in the auditorium to our people on the principles of cooperation. He has often inquired concerning our church ideals during visits to his offices in the magnificent skyscrapers, builded and owned in the heart of Cleveland by the cooperative principles of the Engineers' Brotherhood. Truly, we have much to learn even from the children of this generation!

I trust that many who have benefited from practice of the things given us as a direct revelation from the Master of life and the Great Physician of our souls, will feel bold to confess the good they have received, that others who are weak may be strengthened and inspired to travel in the way of peace and prosperity.

The Place of Cooperation Among Other Social Movements.—No. 2

By V. Totomiantz, Professor in the University of Prague in "Revue Internationale de Sociologie." Translated from the French by Louis J. Ostertag.

Let us now examine in what ways the principles of cooperation differ from the principles of socialism and of anarchy. Speaking of socialism, we must remember that different schools give different interpretations of the idea. There are several schools of socialism. The dominant school is that of the scientific socialism, or Marxism; the other, Utopian socialism is less popular. But there still exist up to this time in France some groups which adhere to the theories of Saint-Simon and of Fourier.

Municipal socialism in the realm of urban industrial enterprises is very scattered in many nations. There are socialists who preach the nationalization of the earth, but most of them, with Henry George leading, refuse to be called socialists. There is also the so-called state socialism, which embraces a large number of representatives of scientific socialism on the one side and representatives of private economic science on the other. The leader of the former, Adolph Wagner, attacked with all his strength the German social-democratic party.

Most of the French, Italian, and German socialists are in reality state socialists. By whatever name they call themselves, Marxists, revisionists, or reformists, they are all state socialists. This has been demonstrated during the last war, at which time, under the pressure of those same socialists, a number of enterprises passed under the domain of the state. They are the principal agents of nationalization or socialization; that is to say, of state socialism.

In general, we can say that the dominant school of actual socialism considers the state the socialist state, not private, as the tutor of the popular masses. We do not speak even here of the dictatorship of pauperism proclaimed in Russia, and by virtue of which the representatives of the people, having taken possession of the power, cause the passage of the most radical reforms from higher up. Either by voice of pacific conquest, or by violent revolution, it is always the state which, according to the Marxists, is the best instrument of social reorganization.

Opposed to this idea, the devotees of cooperation do not recognize the right of the state as an instrument of social reform. In cooperation the reforms and the social reorganizations come from the individual, who is the principal agent of social progress.

The conception of cooperation is as follow:

The social order depends upon qualities of individuals. Progress depends very little upon governments, but can very well be set in motion by the masses organized and educated. Cooperation represents the creative work of associated individuals. Thus, contrary to the state socialists, the cooperators start the construction of the structure from the bottom, by shifting the most important of social reforms upon the individuals. Such a conception is unquestionably more democratic than the one which places the government at the apex of the angle and bases itself upon legislation and state decrees.

Cooperation, or in other words, cooperativism, assigns great importance to personality, while Marxism effaces it. The Marxist socialists affirm that everything is dictated by society and economic conditions, and that the individual is upon the second plane of life and is only the plaything of destiny.

Cooperation is based upon a conviction directly opposite, that of the great creative value of the individual will, as found in history. The participation of the individual in the organic construction of social forms is one of very great importance.

It is natural that cooperation, in placing such high hopes in the individual, be so very exacting towards him. From him to whom much is given, much is required. That is the reason why cooperation imposes certain duties upon the individual, that which gives him moral character. In several works on cooperation, specially in the book of Munding entitled The Rights and Duties of the Cooperative Employees, great emphasis is laid upon the importance of moral and religious motives among the cooperators (taking the word religious in its broadest sense).

Such is the fundamental difference between cooperation and the movement called Marxian socialism.

If, in cooperation, the individual must let himself be guided by some moral and pacific principles, it is clear that it does not recognize the war of classes as an agent of progress. Cooperative establishments have also some battles to wage in practical life. Cooperation has also recourse to contention by word and by action; but that is not the war of classes proclaimed by Marxianism as a supreme principle.

Instead of that, besides the workmen, the peasants and the members of the middle class also can participate in cooperation. All those who so desire are at liberty to enter cooperative societies and associations of credit. The war of classes which we see in the other organizations does not exist here. Instead we can demonstrate the fruitful results of cooperation among workmen, peasants, and the members of the middle class. The classes do fight one another in other spheres of life, but this antagonism almost disappears completely where cooperation exists. Among the bourgeoisie it is those individuals who are above the consciousness of class who take part in cooperation. In this manner there is in cooperation a natural selection of the elements capable of creating works of wonder and good understanding. There we see the peasant alongside the workman, and the intellectual rubbing elbows with the industrial. Besides that, the peasants, the workmen, and the middle class are rallied in the cooperative societies by common interests of consumers.

Up to this point we have talked about the difference between cooperation and socialism. But they have also a few things in common. Cooperation harmonizes itself with socialism, anarchism, and the other social and religious movements in its desire for reasonable reorganization of society. Cooperation does not admit as does anarchism that society can be transformed in the twinkling of an eye, in a short time, as a city, for instance, can be rebuilt after an earthquake. Cooperation does not believe in the possibility of such a cataclysmic change in humanity. That is the reason why it centers all its attention upon education and the organization of the popular masses, at the same time radically transforming the economic system.

Cooperation tries to reorganize society step by step by means of competition with capitalism and private capital: the better of the two will win the battle. That is the surest path to attain the goal, and perhaps it is not so long as one might think. Cooperation is not an external form; it is not a cloak that can be changed and rejected, but a radical betterment of the institutions and customs, as well as a change in the economic structure.

Let us now examine the relations between cooperation and socialism. Most of the members of the German socialist democratic party consider cooperation as a movement absolutely independent and take part in it only inasmuch as it does not infringe upon their political neutrality. These socialists do not introduce their own politics into the movement, recognizing it is only a question of autonomous organization. On the other hand, other socialistic parties in certain countries regard cooperation exclusively as a means of class contention and political warfare, and deny its autonomous character. This has been observed in Belgium, where cooperative means were employed in political fights, which caused the breakdown of cooperation in that country. That is the reason why Belgium does not occupy the place in universal cooperation which belongs to her.

A few French socialists identify cooperation with socialism. Thus, Albert Thomas, ex-recruiting minister, affirms that the expression socialist cooperation is without sense, as if one would say socialist socialism, or cooperative cooperation. He is right in saying that the noun cooperation is enough to designate this movement, and that the qualification of socialist would frighten away people who would otherwise take part. But it is true that it is only A. Thomas's viewpoint that cooperation and socialism are identical. This way of thinking is not shared by the French cooperators, whose chief, Charles Gide, regards cooperation as a social system completely independent.

Let us now point out what distinguishes, and what is common between, cooperation and anarchy. The anarchists, as also most of the socialists, bespeak their sympathy for cooperation. A large number have founded among themselves some agricultural cooperative societies.

We are assured by Kropotkin, author of Mutual Aid as a Factor of Evolution, that anarchists attach to cooperation a great importance. The socialist we have just named, exposed in his book the ideals of cooperation by affirming that it is mutual aid and not fighting, which is the principal factor of progress. Furthermore, the anarchists do not consider the state as an instrument of social reform, and even deny the state and its right of existence. The cooperators do not go that far. They recognize in the state certain fields of useful activities. The cooperators resemble the anarchists in that they create associations which are world wide and united of their own free will. The anarchic ideal is a society without government and established upon free associations. That is the reason why Kropotkin, like the French anarchists Reclus and Proud'hon, showed so much sympathy toward cooperation. The ideas of Kropotkin are profusely scattered among the English cooperators.

Let us now note the relations between cooperation, nationalization, and municipalization. Let us not forget to remark that cooperation doesn't hold any spite toward the other systems of social reorganization. Let us demonstrate this attitude of mind by the words of a delegate of the International Cooperative Congress of Cremona. In answer to some one who had asked him to what party he belonged, he said: "Not to any. We are the friends of all and the enemies of none."

To be friendly with all of the world is a difficult task, but nothing can demonstrate better the tendencies of cooperation. There is no antagonism between cooperation and nationalization, no matter how different are the roads they may follow. Only it must not be forgotten that municipal and government enterprises are very costly, and soon become liable to red tape. Cooperation can easily compete with municipal enterprises. But there are certain domains which are still inaccessible to cooperation; for example, the railroads, although there is in Italy an association which has built and manages the Reggio-Ciano Railroad.

In Russia, because of the particular conditions of social life, cooperatives have even absorbed into their activities public education. But public education is indisputably within the scope of government or municipal control.

As to agricultural cooperation, on account of the nationalization of land, it is necessary to here recall the opinion of Kautsky, chief of the German orthodox Marxists. Marxianism, according to him, the smaller industry, rural as well as urban, must give place to the larger one. Thus, according to the Communist Manifesto, the larger industries little by little would completely absorb the smaller ones, until the time when the number of capitalists would be diminished to a degree that would render expropriation easy, and the power would pass to the proletariat, which would realize the social system. The result is, that even the form of small rural property is not perfect in itself, and cooperation, according to Kautsky, has no importance whatever.

The theory of nationalization of land, according to the American, Henry George, as stated in his book, Progress and Poverty, does not agree with the German Marxist, even though there exists in Germany a society for the propaganda of an agrarian reform which follows the ideas of Henry George. At the head of the society is found the economist, Damaschke, who does not consider himself a socialist. But the social-democrats treat this society with skepticism, just as Kautsky does in his pamphlet consecrated to the agrarian problem in Russia. Kautsky thinks that to nationalize the lands is to deprive the rural proprietors of their property, leaving it in the hands of the urban capitalists, the industrials, and merchants, these latter being just in the process of thriving on the spoils of others. It would be unjust and very unreasonable to take away the property of the one and to leave the property to the other. It is necessary to dispossess the big landowners in the country as well as in the cities.

Let us now see what are the problems of cooperation in the domain of agriculture. We have just proved the fact that the representative of orthodox Marxianism, Kautsky, does not give to cooperation the importance which is given it by Bernstein and David. David has devoted two chapters of his book, The Agrarian Problem, to cooperation. Another representative of this same school of socialism, Herz, attributes a very great importance to cooperation, and does not believe that the large property can completely absorb the small one, and in his controversy with Kautsky, proves that the former lacks vital forces while the latter is drawn into cooperation.

As to the opinions of the Italian socialist-reformists, Professor Gatti, in his book, Socialism and Agriculture, also attaches very great importance to cooperation, without failing to recognize, however, the importance of large rural property, which can sometimes serve as examples to agricultural enterprises.

In France the socialist Comp'ere-Morel is a great partisan in agricultural cooperation.

The cooperators must naturally find great joy in seeing the increase in the cultivated surface of the earth. Large land areas oftentimes remain waste, or serve as pastures for cattle, as it often happens in England. As a result the cooperators can not be in sympathy with the aggrandizement of the land of the peasant except on condition that it must be cultivated. The consciousness of property is very strong in the peasant. The word nationalization is often incomprehensible to him and leaves him indifferent.

When, as in Turkey where religion does not allow the land to be private property, the government gives the farm land for eternity, the peasants consider it as their private property. In New Zealand means have been found to reconcile the nationalization of land with private property. Land is given to the peasant for farming for a term of 999 years; that is to say, nearly millennium. Is not that absolute ownership? For even when this millennium is completed, the government does not take these lands away from the peasants' descendants.

The science of economics has established the fact that the landowning peasant is better than the renter because the latter cultivate the land poorly and do not give it any rehabilitation. The longer the term of farming, the more the land will gain. And if the term of farming is unlimited, the idea of nationalization of the land is in perfect accord with the idea of private property.

Cooperation finds that governmental intervention is necessary in the realization of agrarian reforms, especially for the expansion of cultivated surfaces, estimating that the small rural land will increase agricultural production. If the peasant inherits much land, but does not exploit it to its fullest extent, the result will not be good, either for himself or for the government. The land would be exhausted and the peasant would remain in a deep barbaric state.

Under these conditions cooperation comes to the aid of the peasant. It tends to replace extensive culture by intensive culture. Cooperation reunites the peasants in associations for the buying of seeds, fertilizers, agricultural implements; cooperation of credit provides the necessary means for these purchases. In this fashion the peasant, in receiving the land, learns at the same time, due to the good will of cooperation, to better cultivate it, which augments the national production.

Let us cite the example of Denmark, where cooperative creameries have supplanted not only private capitalistic enterprises of this kind, but also municipal enterprises. Denmark had many privately owned creameries which were managed poorly enough; for the peasants who were not of themselves interested furnished them with bad milk. On the other hand, in cooperation everyone is immediately interested, which makes abuse impossible. The peasants, not wishing to injure their own interests, give to the cooperative creameries excellent milk.

Cooperation has such a footing in Denmark that even the bigger proprietors have joined it as members. At the present time 90 per cent of the butter in Denmark is produced by the cooperatives. The same thing is to be observed in connection with the production of canned meats. In Denmark 70 per cent of the cattle for eating purposes pass through the cooperative slaughterhouses. The collection and exportation of eggs is done mostly by cooperatives. Danish butter is considered the best of the whole earth's market. The English prefer the Danish agricultural products to any of the others. It is interesting to remark that the Danes use the Siberian butter for themselves and sell their own to foreigners at higher prices.

Due to cooperation the Danish peasants are prosperous. Land is private property in Denmark. There is neither nationalization nor socialization, but for all that the peasants have attained such a high degree of civilization that they have even established rural universities. After having finished the course at one of these rural universities, which gives practical knowledge, the peasant does not go into the cities to earn his living as it is practiced in other nations, but stays in the village, where he works for the betterment of rural civilization.

After having established the main differences between cooperative movements and other movements and organizations, we must observe that a new cooperative idea is being formed. It is evident that the idea of most of the cooperators is ethical and idealistic, while the idea of most of the socialists and anarchists is materialistic. The idealistic conception of cooperators does not hinder them from being, if necessary, more practical than a number of partisans of economic materialism, who, while professing the latter, prefer in reality political organization to economic organization. Most of the originators of cooperation ascribe such very small importance to political activity that they could have said with Swift, the English satirist, author of The Travels of Gulliver, that the man who has caused two stalks of wheat to grow where one grew before is more useful than all the politicians put together. The father of cooperation of credit, Raiffeissen, has not taken part in any of the suffrages and has joined no party, saying that as cooperator he served the entire world, and hence has no reason to serve any party.

There has developed lately among the cooperators a new current which tends toward the participation in suffrage and in parliamentary life in general. The prime cause of this change of ideas is the frequent misunderstanding of governments, the rosters of parliament, and the needs of cooperation; and second, a sentiment of discontent provoked by the attitudes of all parties, the workmen's party included. This has brought about, for a short time only in England, the formation of a new group of cooperative parties which has given birth to other economic parties. The political party will occupy in Parliament an entirely independent place, but that does not exclude the possibility of an agreement with other parties, especially with the labor parties. Other nations have not followed the example of England, and a large majority still hold themselves to political neutrality. This is especially true of Switzerland, Denmark, and Germany.

To the present, independence and political neutrality have been very useful to cooperation. They have made it possible to unite in it the best men of all parties by presenting them with a neutral field for the exchange of relations and labor. If the future changes this tactic the result shall be, because of the formation of new cooperative parties, an even greater shutting off of cooperative credit. It devolves upon cooperation not only to elaborate a new concept, but also to create a new social order.

Proudhon has said somewhere that he will realize a social system different from the system of individual ownership, that of collectivism—that is to say, that of socialism. It has not been his lot to realize that system, but cooperation has already begun to do it. The cooperation of consumption and of credit practically realizes the association of classes. It is necessary in societies of consumption that there be found among their members not only poor but rich. The buying power of the latter is so much more considerable. On the other hand, due to them, the society of consumption can vary its products and sell the objects of comfort which bring most profit. In this manner it is not obliged to try to obtain the greater part of its profit from the things of prime necessity. While the Belgian socialist societies do not hold in their stores a large stock of merchandise, and especially sell bread at high prices, the English, German, Swiss, and Italian societies of consumption do not try to make large profits from bread. As for example the Italian society of consumption, "Unione Cooperativa," of Milan, having among its members a large number of well-to-do, and selling everything, can during hard times sell the bread at cost price, even at a loss if necessary, because it can compensate its losses from the profits derived from other merchandise. In this manner the poor members benefit without the least vestige of humiliation, and without appearance of charity, because among the members of the cooperatives are rich and opulent persons. We can see the same mutual aid and assistance of classes in cooperative credit. The principal functions of these cooperatives are the remission of loans and the banking deposits. Who is it that has need of loans? The needy members. Who is it that brings the most funds? The rich members. In that way a part of the members use the cooperative more often for loans, and the other for savings. If the cooperatives of credit were to admit as members only the poor classes, they would soon lead a passive existence, or suspend the operation of credit because of the lack of funds.

Thus is realized practically in the cooperation of consumption and of credit the high ideals of fellowship among men of all classes to which Leon Bourgeois has given the name of brotherhood. Cooperation realizes not only the help of oneself and the help of one another, but also mutual responsibility and good fellowship.

Still a few more words concerning the terminology of cooperation. Cooperative institutions resemble in their external form capitalist institutions. But this resemblance, as we shall see in the following, is external and not internal. For example, a member of a society of consumption enters the stock room of the society. Externally this stock room is exactly the same as the capitalist's stock room. But in reality the member enters a stock room of which he is coproprietor, for the stock room is the property of all the members and does not belong to a single proprietor or to a small group of proprietors. In buying, or rather providing himself with merchandise from his own stock room, the cooperator receives at the end of a year or half year a dividend upon his purchases, which in the capitalist's sense is not a dividend but the excess payment that the society returns to him. For this reason the term dividend is replaced in France by the expression ristourne. In Germany it has been supplanted in the phraseology of cooperatives by the word Rückvergütung, which could be translated as rebursement of payment. The word action is replaced in the societies of consumption and the other cooperatives by the expression social part. In Germany one employs in place of action the word Geschäftsanteil, which means "taking part in the enterprise." Instead of saying sell, one says distribute, and the English societies of consumption call themselves "societies of distribution." In reality the societies of consumption do not sell, but distribute the products among their members at the common cost price. Professor Stauding has even

Do You Laugh at Your Children?

"If you please, mother, may I please have some jelly on my toast, please," ceremoniously asked little Billy at the breakfast table.

It was an unusually long speech for him, but he was very much in earnest about it. Mary, Billy's cousin, giggled. Billy's big blue eyes opened wide in surprise, then filled with tears.

"Indeed you may, son. Here it is all nice and thick. Don't you think that fine?"

But the little fellow said nothing before he again turned to look across at Mary. She had in the meantime received a message from his mother's eyes and was also serious. So he finished his breakfast contentedly.

"Mary," said his mother after Billy had gone out to play, "you are preparing to be a teacher, and I can give you a helpful suggestion: Never laugh at little children. Laugh with them but never at them."

"Why, Aunt Lenora? Will laughing hurt? What Billy said was very funny."

"It was, indeed, and we can have a good laugh about it now that he is not here. We should not do it before him. He was trying to learn to say 'please.' I may have some trouble now to get him to try again."

"We always laughed at William Bailey and Juanita when they did funny things. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards have the best time imaginable laughing at the mistakes of Dot and Eddie."

"I know all that, but because of that very laughing William Bailey is convinced he is slow to learn, which is not true, while by the same method you have made Juanita think she is extra brilliant, which she is not. You have handicapped your brother for years to come and started the little sister on a path that will result in many hard bumps before the conceit is taken out of her. Few people love a conceited child."

"What about the Edwards children, then?"

"You can plainly see the effect there in the way both children love to 'show off' continually. They are never satisfied unless they are the center of an admiring, laughing, applauding group. They make things disagreeable when they are not."

"Well, that is true, but I never thought about it before. Can we always keep from laughing?"

"Yes. It may be a little hard, but when you remember how much is at stake you can exercise the proper amount of self-control."

"You think, then, that children are affected in one of two ways by older persons laughing at them. Either they are made very timid—sometimes morbidly shy—or they immediately begin to perform all sorts of ridiculous actions upon the slightest notice."

"Exactly right, Mary. Both are equally harmful. Children need to be watched carefully but not laughed at. As I said before, laugh with them all you wish. There's a great difference."—Lenora Bailey.

'Tis by Faith and Love

By Bondie Shireman

When you have reached the top of the world
And only the stars remain,
Where there is never the sound of storm
And neither cold nor rain,
Will it be by wealth, success, or fame,
That you mounted to your goal?
Nay, I mount only by faith and love,
And God's goodness to my soul.

When you have reached the top of the world,
And the higher stars grow near,
When greater dreams succeed our dreams,
And the lesser disappear,
Will the world at your feet seem good to you,
A vision fair to see?
Nay, I look upward for one I love,
Who has promised to wait for me.

For to those who reach the top of the world,
The things of the world seem less
Than the rungs of the ladder by which they climb
To their place of happiness;
And I think that success and wealth and fame
Will be the first to pall;
For they reach their goal but by faith and love,
And God's goodness over all.

proposed to replace in cooperation the word capital by the new term social. Conforming to this new spirit in cooperation, the cooperative legislation changes also little by little in different nations. For example, in Russia, Canada, Denmark, England, Tchechoslovakia, and Switzerland the cooperatives are no longer placed by legislation in the rank of ordinary commercial enterprises. In other countries, however, the public treasury still continues to quibble with the societies of consumption. And that need surprise no one, for legislation is generally incapable of keeping apace with new social forms.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The Sunday School Officers' and Teachers' Meeting

Reports coming in from the local schools of the church indicate that new interest is being aroused in these meetings. We hope the brief outlines may be helpful. If such sessions have not been a success in the past, we urge that superintendents make a new effort now to secure hearty cooperation in an effort to prepare every worker for a more efficient service. Our calling as teachers and leaders is important in the great program of the gospel designed to develop and train real Zion builders for the life and work of the church. By study and by faith must we seek to show ourselves approved as workmen with the Master.

The lessons are based directly on the text, How to Teach Religion, by Betts. Other texts should be used for reference. The lesson should be carefully planned and thought out by the leader. The discussions should have definite relation to the immediate problems of the local school. By all means, the officers' and teachers' meeting should give a specific training for better service, and it should open the way to the solution of many difficult local problems, and the removal of some handicaps.

Brother Superintendent, are you really fulfilling your mission, are you answering to your call in the church unless you are determined to grow yourself, and to bring growth and development to your school?

We congratulate you upon your opportunity, and wish you all the joys of success and achievement in the new year.

Lesson for January

Theme: The foundations of religious education.

Text: Betts, How to Teach Religion, Chapter III.

We shall set out but three fundamental considerations which are equally effective in all educational effort: (1) The aim or goal of our teaching; (2) The selection and use of our subject matter; (3) The methods of presentation by which we shall achieve our goal or purpose.

The growth of worthy, Christlike character in the church is not accidental, it is not mystical, it is not impossible. From the first, it is the product of an intelligent effort on the part of some one to instruct, to nurture, to guide, to encourage, to unfold in rare beauty and strength the physical, mental, and spiritual endowment of the child.

Life itself sets the aim. We are to help the individual meet the demands and the problems of his everyday life, that he may most fully realize his own potentiality and most fully serve his generation.

Fruitful knowledge is a first essential if we are to build an intelligent faith; a knowledge of the gospel plan, and of life and its meanings; a comprehension of God, and of our relations to him and to our fellows.

But knowledge has little value except as it may be put to work at once in the life of the child or the adult. It is not what we know, but what we do that counts.

With knowledge which guides our steps there must come impulses that drive to right action, that get desirable things done. There must be a sense of worthwhileness that leads to achievement. This compelling sense of desire we may arouse and develop through interests, enthusiasms, affections, ambitions, ideals, appreciations, standards, and loyalties, which have functioning power as they predominate in one's life.

The type of character one possesses depends upon the attitudes of life which have become springs of action and incentives to endeavor.

The ultimate aim of religious education is found in conduct, in right living, in the habits and choices each day through which people express their attitudes.

And this is the crucial test of the effectiveness of our teaching effort; how much change for the better, how much strength, purity, and nobility of character are we able to bring into the lives of those whom we would teach.

We may note a few guiding principles:

1. The songs, the scripture lesson, the prayer, the lesson study, every exercise of the school should be a vital means to awaken thought, to store the mind with fruitful truths, to arouse new interests, to create ideals, and to lead the life into touch with God.

2. Every activity of the school must capture the interests of childhood, and bind the loyalty of the child to the church and its ideal expression of the Christ life.

3. Our choice of lesson material should depend upon the child to be taught. It must give him the knowledge he needs, train the attitudes he requires, and lead to acts and conducts which should rule his life.

4. To have functioning power, subject matter must be presented in terms quite within the range of comprehension and experience of the child. The most beautiful truths and inspiring incidents to an adult may have little significance to childhood.

5. Our one point of approach and contact with the child mind must come through the immediate interest or activity in child life. Hence it is essential that we keep in close, sympathetic touch with the mind and heart of childhood, and adapt our means and methods to their needs.

6. Definitions, rules, general truths have little value to children except as they grow out of rich experiences of story and life incidents which are keenly sensed by them.

7. The first task of all teaching is to arouse self-activity. Any effort at instruction is wasted unless we may so understand our class and so use our subject matter as to grip their interest and compel attention. Only so may we lead them into a mental alertness and response which will enable them to group, assimilate, remember, and apply the truths we would teach.

8. The second task is to so handle the lesson material that we skillfully shape the trend of thought and direct the discussion into fruitful channels. We must get results. This presupposes on our part a definite and wide knowledge of human nature, its interest and its needs, a personal acquaintance with the membership of our class, an extensive contact with source material, and a consecration to our task, that our keen appreciation of the law of the teaching process through our work may be effective.

Suggested Topics for Written Papers or Oral Discussions

1. Contrast the "knowledge" with the "conduct" aims in religious education.
2. Do habits or ideals function most in life?
3. How shall we make our teaching vital?
4. How may we improve the selection of our subject matter?

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief— Where?

In the near thirty years of my ministry, I have seen many men inducted by ceremony and necessary procedure into priestly and administrative office; and it has always afforded me pleasure to see men, in proper spirit of humility and consecration, accept churchly responsibility and service. On the occasions when I have played a part in officiating where men, either by legislative enactment or by ordination, have been "set apart" for ministerial work, I have found cause for keen rejoicing. And in the passing years I have seen steadily increase the numbers of those holding priesthood and office.

On the other hand, I have had, perforce, to see men tripped through uncontrolled ambition or temptation (or both), lose "the spirit of their office and calling" and be divested of official responsibility, both priestly and administrative. On a few occasions (very few in fact) I have (again perforce of circumstances) been the official instrument through which unfrockment has been had. These occasions have been poignant with sorrow. We grieve when Saints die, but it is easier to officiate at the funeral of a departed Saint, one who has died "in the faith," than to see men become unfit for priesthood by proving untrue to ideals and trust.

On one of my journeys, I'll not say when or where, I experienced the grief which comes in the way of which I have spoken. It would not be well for me to tell the details, but perhaps my readers may sense some of my feelings if I tell how I addressed myself to a man from whom it became necessary to withdraw representative rights. His offense was serious—one which required not only silencing, but excommunication; and while it hurt me much to act, because of his friendship and family, yet I was filled with righteous indignation when I thought of the havoc his conduct would work; and so, after saying to him that to be called upon to assist at his funeral would not be more painful than to do what I must, I tried to "sum up" the seriousness of his offense and the following is about what I said:

"I wonder if you, while seeking the fugacious pleasure of that which has been forbidden, have comprehended what you have done by your sin, and how far the consequences reach! Not only have you violated your covenant with God made in the waters of baptism and repeatedly renewed in the sacrament, but you have shattered that made with your companion and the implied one with your children, and proved untrue to one of the most sacred of trusts, the family tie. You have violated the trust imposed in you when forgiveness was extended for a former offense, violated at once the conditions of forgiveness and official confidence put in you. You have prostituted a religious office. There were those who trusted you, yet you proved untrue, untrue to family, untrue to friends, untrue to fellow officers, untrue to the church you were to serve, untrue to the ideals instilled by mother, father, teacher, and the church.

"And see what you have done with your birthright! From your father and his fellows you had the birthright of priesthood to function as a minister serving God by service to his people. This brought opportunity, large opportunity to do good, the opportunity to help people to higher living, lifting them up towards God; the opportunity to help steady the feet of people made unsteady by temptation. And this wonderful birthright you have sold! And for what price! A mess of vile pottage! Such is the cargo with which you were intrusted on the sea of life, and which you have lost by yielding to a perverted appetite. At a time above all other when sex should be sublimated into what makes old age beautiful, a patriarch, a stalwart to others in times of temptation, you have perverted it and shaken the faith of those who have trusted you. What a terrible price you have paid for the fugacious pleasures of the flesh!

"What is your excuse? And what do you propose doing? Your yielding to temptation puts up to you the necessity of recasting the lines of your life. Are you equal to the great task? Will you reform the shattered ideal and struggle upward? Or will you abandon those ideals and surrender yourself to the buffetings of Satan? You have severed the bonds of church fellowship. These may be rebound, but the gateway through which you may return lies at the top of a long, hard road, difficult to negotiate, and over which without divine help you are not likely to pass. Surely the road of the transgressor is hard! Can you to a degree at least atone to those whom you have wronged, those who trusted you? On this upward road we stand ready to help you, if we can; but the heavy task is yours. God grant you may have enough real manhood to make the effort."

This is a sad journey, my readers, that I tell of, and pray God I may never have to make another similar one.

The Important Individual Becomes Converted

BY IDA ETZENHOUSER

"When I have a dollar to give to the poor, I am going to give it direct," said the Important Individual as he brought his hand down with a resounding whack on the desk of the Social Worker. "Too much of the money that is given to social agencies goes to overhead expenses. Why, I have heard that twenty-five cents out of every dollar given to charity never reaches the poor in the way of groceries, but is consumed en route!"

The Social Worker was about to speak, but was rudely interrupted by the Important Individual: "Yes, yes; I know just what you are about to say. I have heard it before. 'Investigations must be made.' But I say," and here the Important Individual raised his voice and became very emphatic, "when a man is hungry, what he wants is food, and not advice. When a family is in need, help should be given and not a lot of questions asked, such as 'Of what disease did your grandmother's aunt die?'"

"Now there is the Jones family," continued the Important Individual. "I heard before Thanksgiving that they were in need. I talked it over with some of my neighbors, and we decided to make up a basket for them. There were chicken, potatoes, celery, cranberries, bread, butter, and other trimmings. We made no fuss about it. Just got the money together and bought the dinner. If that family had been reported to a social agency they would have been all tied up in red tape."

"Let me see," said the Social Worker. "Is that the family that lives on C Street, where the mother was ill and there were five children all under twelve years of age?"

"Yes; that's the family. The father does odd jobs around town and takes care of the family after working hours. The condition of the home was something awful. The man of course was doing the best he could, but the home surely showed the need of some one to take care of things."

"How is the family getting along now?" asked the Social Worker.

"Well, I hardly know," answered the Important Individual. "You see, I am very busy with my own work and so have not had the time to visit the family. In fact, I have not heard from them or seen any of them since I delivered the basket."

"Men who are in business and busy housewives could hardly be expected to take the time necessary to do what is called 'follow-up work,'" answered the Social Worker. "We so often find that at Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year many good people are anxious to distribute good cheer to needy families. It is not these holidays that Social Workers are interested in. It is the days, weeks, and months that intervene when few people think of the needy. Even you, whom I recognize as a man who wants to be helpful, have confessed that you found the Jones family about four months ago in direst distress. The man without steady work, merely doing odd jobs, the woman ill and in bed, and five little children in the home. Yet you confess that you have made no inquiry since Thanksgiving as to how the family is getting along. Surely you must have known that the food you took to the family at that time was consumed long ago."

"Yes, yes; but you can't expect me to neglect my business to take care of the poor, can you?"

"No, we can not," answered the Social Worker. "You have your own family and business to care for, which must not be neglected. As you do not have time to do it, you must delegate others to act for you: those who make it their business to take care of the needy. You can contribute dollars, and they can contribute trained service. In this way the community through its recognized agency cares for the needy."

"Let us get back to the Jones family," continued the Social Worker. "The family was reported to the social agency just after Thanksgiving. Through our investigations we learned that Mrs. Jones had two sisters who had died of tuberculosis. Her mother had also died of this same disease." With a humorous twinkle in her eyes, the Worker added, "In this case it was not the grandmother's aunt who died." Then more seriously she added, "Because of the unfavorable health history of the family of Mrs. Jones, we felt that each member of her immediate family should be examined by a lung specialist. The physician reported that Mrs. Jones was definitely tubercular; little Mary was suspicious; but Mr. Jones and the other children were free from the disease. The physician insisted that the family must be removed from such an unfavorable environment, as their vitality was low. The children, if left with their mother, would probably contract tuberculosis within a year. Mrs. Jones is not hopelessly ill. If given a fighting chance, she will probably recover. However, she must have plenty of proper food, good nursing, and sleep out of doors."

"After unwinding some more red tape, we learned that Mrs. Jones has a brother who is well-to-do. He lives out in the country and was quite willing to make a home for the children until such time as his sister is able to reestablish her home. The State has a wonderful sanitarium for those suffering from tuberculosis where we could place Mrs. Jones at State's expense. It took us about a month to make the necessary investigations and to get Mr. and Mrs. Jones to see the health problem as we saw it. We wanted their hearty cooperation to our plan, and at last they consented. The children have been taken out to their uncle's farm. Mr. Jones is also there, working as a farm hand for a small wage and the care of his children. Mary, who showed symptoms of tuberculosis, is under the care of a physician and is being examined every month. The children are in school and are already showing increase in weight and improved school record. Mrs. Jones is in the state sanitarium, and we hear that the physician in charge thinks the case is quite hopeful. All of this took time and money. Yes, money which was paid for service instead of food."

"Perhaps I was too hasty in my remarks about social agencies," said the Important Individual, now more humble. "I believe from the way your agency handled the Jones family you did a better job than a private individual could have done. Certainly a much better job than my neighbors and I did in giving that basket of food on Thanksgiving Day and then promptly forgetting the family." Then taking his check book out of his pocket he added, "You have converted me. From now on I will donate the dollars, and the social agency can begin unwinding the red tape that at least leads somewhere, while promiscuous giving leads nowhere. Here is my check for $100. If I can be of any service at any time, just call this number." With a smile he handed the Social Worker his business card, picked up his hat, and with a pleasant "Good-day" opened the door and walked out, a convert to the work of social agencies.

Waterloo, Iowa

December 25.—Several changes have taken place in our branch of late. On December 13 election of officers for the year 1927 was held, with the following results: Elder C. A. Kress, of Independence, Missouri, branch president. We felt this selection necessary because of existing conditions and some contemplated necessary changes. Our church building must be enlarged or a new one builded, and as Brother Kress seems to be a natural organizer, one seeming to have a special talent in discovering the ability of others and placing them where they can serve most effectively, the responsibility of the local work was given to him.

Brother Fred Jackson was elected to preside over our Sunday school, thereby taking the place of Brother William Wood who has served in that capacity for two years, and under whose direction the Sunday school has made advancement. Brother Jackson has had long experience in Sunday school work and at one time was district superintendent of this department in Gallands Grove District. Brother Harrison Rhyan was elected to assist him. Brother Rhyan is a recent addition to this branch, having moved here. We feel that under the direction of these men our Sunday school will grow.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is to be presided over by Brother Clifton Nichols, with Brother Dare Trusty to assist him. We also expect to see these two brothers bring the work forward. This department has been under the direction of Sister Phoebe Hinds for the past two years.

Sister Hazel Jackson was placed in charge of the music, taking the place of Sister Mabel Hall, who is moving to Des Moines, Iowa, in the near future. Sister Hall has been chorister here for the past year, and has given much time and thought to the work. Sister Jackson is qualified to carry on the work of this department, and with the help of Sister Beulah Rhyan, who is in charge of the music of the departments we are assured that the work of this department also will continue forward.

Sister Pearl Jackson was chosen superintendent of the Department of Women, which office for the past year has been in charge of Sister Ivy Fisher, and has been doing excellent work. Sisters Elizabeth Miller and Izetta Jackson are to preside at the piano the coming year.

Interest is such that already the church is being crowded with a goodly attendance at all services. There was a good crowd present at the Christmas entertainment on Christmas Eve. A good time was enjoyed.

On December 28 a banquet will be given for the members of the priesthood and their wives at the home of Brother Alma Tally.

Last evening there occurred the wedding of Brother Kenneth Wolf and Sister Grace Fisher at the home of the bride's parents, 1221 Ackermant Street, Elder A. J. Fisher, father of the bride, pronouncing the ceremony. We extend our hearty congratulations to the happy couple. Also today Brother Dare Trusty, our young deacon, takes a wife. We do not know just where the wedding is to take place, as the bride is not a resident of Waterloo. However, we have met the young lady several times, and feel that Brother Dare has been wise in his selection of a life companion. To them also are our congratulations extended.

Brother Bert Miller and family, of Oelwein, Iowa, have recently moved to Waterloo and have thus added to our membership five worthy souls. Brother Bert is a priest and can be of great assistance here in the work.

The publicity work has changed hands: Brother Kress appointed the writer to that office. We feel that our work is cut out for each of us here this year, and if we will only put our shoulders to the wheel we can accomplish our work. We will try to have something more interesting about which to write next time, for those who are acquainted with Brother Kress know that there is generally something interesting occurring wherever he is.

GUY M. HAYNES.

Fall River, Massachusetts

December 26.—The Christmas holiday season passed pleasantly at Fall River. There was the usual Christmas tree and cantata by the children, entitled "A surprise for Santa." The cantata was given under the direction of Sister Margaret Chesworth. Wilfred Brindley and Walter McGuire (the young superintendents) with their committee decorated the church very attractively. Candy, apples, and oranges were given to all present and sent to the absent ones.

About eighteen young people went from home to home singing carols on Christmas Eve. They met at Sister Baldwin's and were served a potato pie supper. They were given thirty-two dollars and probably will receive more; this money will be given to the branch.

The Department of Women sent beautiful plants and baskets of fruit to the sick or aged.

A sacred cantata of story and song "And now when Jesus was born," was given the Sunday evening before Christmas. The reader was Gladys Coombs, and the soloists were Gladys and Henry France, Alma Coombs, and Margaret Chesworth. A silver offering was taken for the Christmas offering.

The next gathering will be for bank breaking January 1. A juvenile bank breaking will take place at the church, December 28. A little prize will be given the child bringing the most dimes in his little red stocking.

Sister Hattie Howlett's class of boys, about thirteen years of age, gave an entertainment for the benefit of the Christmas offering. They received about seventeen dollars for their effort and expect to have thirty or more at bank breaking time.

The Department of Women had a supper and sale which was very well attended. A group of the sisters went to New Bedford to the home of Sister Lottie Burdett, president of the department, and presented her a lamp in appreciation of her services. A new president will doubtless be chosen this year, because of the removal of Sister Burdett.

Elder Herman Chelline was with his family at Fall River for the holidays. Recently he has been holding services at Dover, New Hampshire. Brother Chelline was the speaker here, December 26, in the morning, but the evening service was not held because of a heavy snowstorm.

The December sacrament was carried to the sick by Brothers J. W. Heap and Alma Coombs. There was a heavy snowstorm that day also.

Sister Myra Cockcroft returned from the Trumbull Hospital just after Thanksgiving and stayed at the home of her sister, Nellie Nickerson, until after Christmas. Sister Myra is recovering nicely from the operation, but still suffers considerable pain. The Boston Saints were very kind to her.

Brother Thomas McGuire and son, Chester, spent Christmas with Sister Beatrice York, of Boston.

Sister Margaret Slater, of New London, Connecticut, was at Fall River and went with the Christmas singers, but had to return to New London for the services there on Sunday. Sister Slater's little girl, Marian, now has the bandages removed, and her face is healed nicely. We all pray that sight will be restored to the eye.

Mrs. Johanna Falconer passed away in her sleep a week before Christmas. She left a husband and six children and was the mother of Sister Mary Falconer, and the sister of Sister Sophia Brodie, Sister Margaret Chesworth and Brother John Henderson. Services were in charge of Reverend Henry Arnold, of the Christian Church. Among the many beautiful flowers were some from the Temple Builders and some from the Department of Women. Mrs. Falconer was a good mother and a kind friend.

Brother John Gilbert met with an injury, and flowers were sent him from the Sunday school.

Sister Ruth Sheehy Baker and family, of Boston, visited her father, Brother Moses Sheehy, for the Thanksgiving holidays.

Brother John Jackson, deacon, of Providence, assisted in the pulpit at one of the services. We always enjoy his singing. Brother John Henderson, deacon, of Fall River, also assisted several times in the pulpit.

Good Word From Providence

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

During the past month we have had some splendid activities, culminating last Sunday in the most spiritual sacramental service we have had in months. This bespeaks the fact that our trend is for the better in spiritual accomplishments.

I received your two letters recently touching our activity relative to tithing and inventories. With D. F. Joy, our bishop's agent, we will advocate and urge these matters during December and January, as you suggest.

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND, November 10.

T. J. ELLIOTT.

Hammond, Indiana

Because of the bright outlook for the new year, the Saints of Hammond Branch are very happy and encouraged. We held our business meeting for the election of officers December 8, 1926, in which meeting Brother J. H. McGuire was elected by a large majority to be our pastor. Brother McGuire has done some extensive traveling, and has a wide circle of friends who will be pleased to hear that he is in charge of the work here.

Our appreciation is extended to Brother E. O. Butler, our former pastor, and other officers who have spent their efforts in hard, long hours, trying to build up God's work in this location, and surely they have done a good work.

It is customary at this time of year to make new resolutions, and whether they shall be broken or not, time will tell; we surely hope and pray that they will not, for the Saints of Hammond have pledged themselves anew. We have resolved to be more devoted to the program of the church, denying ourselves some of the so-called pleasures in order to prepare ourselves for greater service, to harmoniously labor in a more energetic manner, to make ourselves wanted in the kingdom of God, and to sail Zionward, which is our course.

Much credit and praise are due Brother Philemon Pement for the wonderful work he is doing in making regular trips from Chicago to our city to deliver the gospel message in his appealing way, a way that is characteristic only of Brother Pement. Surely the fruits of his labors are beginning to be realized, for there are those who have been regular in attendance at his lectures who are changing from former contentions, and some coming out of Catholicism have already expressed their desire and willingness to be baptized. Appealing indeed is the gospel of Christ, and those who will read and consider it will find there is no other doctrine that can compare with the one we have been so fortunate as to receive. We were also visited by Sister Pement and their son Harold. Brother and Sister Pement and their son, Brother and Sister McGuire, Brother and Sister Herbert Myers and children were the guests of Brother and Sister Slater, Sunday, December 12.

Our departmental officers for the new year have been elected as follows: Sunday school superintendent, Brother Herbert Myers, assisted by Brother Henry Gunion; president of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Brother Roy W. Smith, assisted by Brother D. H. Smith, the latter also being our district Sunday school superintendent; supervisor of the Department of Women, Sister Alta Myers, assisted by Sister Ed. Mose. The expressions heard from both officers and members of each department promise both cooperation and success.

We are now expectantly looking forward to a promised visit from the district officers who have been canvassing the district, advising and encouraging the local workers. We know we will receive some valuable instruction and hope for a spiritual feast.

Indian Mission Doing Nicely

(From letter of Bernard Case, Indian Mission, Decatur, Nebraska, December 17, 1926, to President F. M. Smith.)

Work at the mission is progressing nicely at present. Have had about seventy in attendance for the last two Sundays, and the Indian Saints are beginning to feel better.

Brother Hunker was here three days, and I believe he could have done some fine work here if he had stayed for a while. He was liked by the Indians fine. Also Brother Hunker did some good work at Walthill, Nebraska.

Lincoln, Nebraska

Sunday, November 28, the young people held prayer meeting at a quarter of nine. Because some had gone home for Thanksgiving recess, there was a small attendance, but as usual it was a one hundred per cent meeting, and a goodly spirit was present. They again held their prayer meeting on December 12. At the Sunday school hour, Sister Irene Turpin sang a solo. Brother C. H. Porter, of Geneva, worshiped with us on this date. He preached two excellent sermons in the morning and evening. Brother Robertson conducted a class in teacher training at four o'clock. A good number have expressed a desire to take up this study, as outlined in the HERALD each month. We realize fully that we need trained workers. The orchestra met for practice at five o'clock and expect to meet at the same hour each Sunday. New music has been procured, and a number of new players have joined, making a splendid showing. At evening services, Ezra Oehring's father and mother and Miss Mary Wink, of Neleigh, Nebraska, worshiped with us. Attendance at church services is increasing steadily. The program at Religio hour consisted of music by the orchestra.

Brother George Fike, who suffered a stroke of paralysis a few weeks ago, is greatly improved. He has great faith in his heavenly Father.

The wife of Brother Skinner passed away December 18, after a long illness. Although not of our faith, she called for the elders to administer a number of times. Funeral services were in charge of a Presbyterian minister, and burial was at Wyuka.

The Department of Women met at the home of Sister Robertson on Wednesday, December 1. Brother Robertson conducted a class in church history, the study chosen for this winter. Sister Robertson served refreshments at the close of the study hour.

Brother Robertson made a trip out in the district over Sunday, December 5. Sacramental services were in charge of Brothers Bilyue and Brockway. There was a splendid feeling of unity and understanding among the members, and a very good meeting was enjoyed. At Religio hour Brother Brockway taught the class; we were favored with a piano solo by Margurite Melick, and the orchestra gave several numbers. Brother Bilyue was the speaker at half past seven.

On December 12 Brother Robertson preached both morning and evening. The orchestra played several selections at Religio hour.

Brother Robertson spoke at morning and evening services on December 19. Brother Shakespeare stopped in Lincoln a few days the latter part of December. He was on his way home to spend the holidays. Among the guests in Lincoln for Christmas are Brother and Sister McFarlane, of Independence, who are visiting at the Chapple home. Some of our young people have gone home for the holiday recess but expect to be back for young people's convention, which will be an event of history very soon. We are looking forward to and expect much benefit from it.

On Christmas Eve there was a tree, with treats for young and old. A nice program was given, mainly by the little ones, who did their part very nicely. Our dear old Grandma Horn has been sick and was not able to come, so a group of the Temple Builders went to her home to wish her a Merry Christmas and sing songs for her.

Modesto, California

December 22.—The branch at Modesto is moving along as usual. The Saints were pleased to have a visit from Brother Virgil Etzenhouser and Brother Savage, whose business was boosting for the young people's meeting, held in Oakland on November 26, 27, and 28. All enjoyed their visit.

At a business meeting held December 13, officers were elected for the coming year. Priest A. E. Frazier was elected president of the branch; Sister Ethel S. Coplen, superintendent of the Sunday school; Sister Daisy Frazier, superintendent of the Religio; H. W. Patterson, deacon; and Sister Estella E. Swall, leader of the Department of Women.

The annual Christmas tree and program will be held tonight. The cantata, "Story of the star," will be given under the direction of Sister A. E. Frazier, who has worked hard with her assistants to make it a success, and all will enjoy it tonight.

The Department of Women will have a watch social on New Year's Eve.

The branch seems to be increasing in attendance, and there are more present at Sunday school and Religio, so everyone feels that the local is gaining, small and slow though it may be, all the time.

Moorhead, Iowa

December 22.—While weather and road conditions and some sickness have somewhat diminished our attendance at the services, yet Moorhead Saints are striving to press forward and keep the gospel banner afloat. Some changes were made in our late election of officers for the different departments, and we trust that all will work together for the best advancement of the Lord's work.

Several of our young people are trying to develop their musical talents and are bringing their instruments and assisting in that department of the work. We are greatly in need of a leader in this line and would gladly welcome some one among us who could meet with and assist these young people in their efforts.

Our district president, Brother Joseph Lane, recently spent several days among us, assisting in the sacramental service and occupying the pulpit in the evening of December 5. His visits to our homes, encouraging the Saints with his timely counsel and advice, are much appreciated by Moorhead Saints, as elsewhere.

The Department of Women held their annual bazaar December 4 and netted around one hundred and forty dollars.

Our aged Sister Bollinger has again as usual gone to Nebraska to spend the winter with her daughter and family. We miss her from our services, as we also miss Sister Emma Mann, who is spending the winter with her daughter, Sister Carl Mann, of Huron, South Dakota.

We are dispensing with this usual Christmas tree and entertainment at our church this year, and the Saints are assisting in the community entertainment at the schoolhouse on Friday evening. However, a short Christmas program is being prepared for the Religio hour on Sunday evening.

The Saints are pleased to receive cards from Brother and Sister Baldwin, and to learn that they are privileged to spend the holidays with home folks in the East.

Brother and Sister Ira Wilson have disposed of their mercantile business in Onawa on account of their poor health and are staying at present at the home of Brother and Sister Dale Wilson at Ute. Friends are remembering them at present with a card shower.

Sister Dena Mortensen was recently called to Missouri Valley on account of the death of her son-in-law, Mr. Lawrence Hearn.

The little folks in the homes of Brothers and Sisters Elmer Amundson and Chester Davis have been suffering from whooping cough, but we are pleased to learn that they are all on the road to recovery. Little Veda Ozell Amundson was very ill at one time, as she had convulsions with the cough.

Nauvoo, Illinois

December 28.—Winter has come again to Nauvoo. The ferry has taken refuge in the new harbor, and mail is transported via the ice route. Skating, the favorite winter sport, is now being enjoyed.

An epidemic of chicken pox that swept through the community threatened to disrupt the Christmas program, but fortunately all were able to be present Sunday evening and carried their parts through successfully. A pageant, entitled "The manger King," was given by the Sunday school under the direction of Mrs. A. L. Sanford. Bethlehem scenery, a stable effect and a flaming star, made a realistic scene. The children, who had come with their parents to be taxed, gathered upon the hills in the early morning hour about a camp fire built by the shepherds. They were dramatizing the story of David and Goliath when shepherd lads appeared and told the story of the angel's visit. The children returned to their families to make the glad news known and gain permission to go to see the infant Jesus. They met again outside the stable and witnessed the arrival of the three wise men from the east, and all rejoiced together.

The following officers were elected at the quarterly business meeting, on Monday evening, December 27: President, J. W. Layton; secretary, Mrs. A. L. Sanford; treasurer, C. E. Fusselman; chorister, Mrs. August Lee; pianist, Irene Layton; solicitor, J. W. Layton; auditors, David Stevenson and Wilfred Wood; publicity agent, Mrs. L. H. Lewis; historian, Mrs. August Lee; superintendent of health department, A. L. Sanford; librarian, Mrs. J. W. Layton; superintendent of Sunday school, T. J. Henderson; assistant superintendent, Arnold Ourth; secretary, Eleonore Snively; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, A. L. Sanford; secretary, Mary Lee; boy leader, L. H. Lewis; girl leader, Mrs. L. H. Lewis.

On Thursday evening, December 16, a banquet was held in the church in honor of the birthday of our pastor, H. C. Snively, and he was presented a pair of driving gloves. An enjoyable evening was spent.

In return for the Halloween party given the boys by the girls' class in Religio, the boys entertained with a surprise party at the Lewis home. The boys proved royal entertainers, and a well-planned evening was spent. They had let their mothers in on the secret and asked them to bake a pie, so for refreshments they served pie a la mode.

One Sunday afternoon during the summer, the young people on one of their hikes discovered a beautiful spot just above David's Chamber, which commanded a splendid view of the river. Situated here is a private burying spot. Two headstones of an early date are inclosed with a stone wall, and here the young people frequently met under the direction of their leaders, Brother and Sister L. H. Lewis, to sing hymns and offer prayers. A few weeks ago, the last visit of the season was paid to this altar on the hill; hymns were sung, a prayer offered by A. L. Sanford, and a talk by T. J. Henderson on the responsibilities resting upon the young people. They then responded by telling what they hoped to accomplish during the coming year. All enjoyed the presence of the Spirit on this occasion.

Central Illinois District

The year now so near a close has been one of busy work in this district for missionary E. L. Ulrich and the writer. Owing to so many demands for work, we have not been able to labor at the same time at the same place, but we have been able to work in unity just the same. As district president, I am sure my work has been very pleasant and satisfactory. The several branches have all been doing a very good work, and our new branch at Decatur has done exceptionally well. I have been here at Decatur the last three Sundays, holding two weeks of meetings, with very good interest.

The new church erected this last summer is none too large with the addition of twenty-six new members and quite a few friends who attend, and who, we hope, in time will make more members. The Sunday school numbers over seventy, and more scholars are coming in as the days go by.

At Springfield we have a school even larger, but which is forced to meet in a hall on the third floor. But as they now have a church lot paid for, and some money raised, they are hopeful of a new church in the near future.

The branch at Quincy is also in need of a church, and they are laboring and praying that they too may in time have a building.

We have decided to ask Bishop Carmichael to attend our conference at Taylorville, in February, and hope there will be a good turnout from all parts of the district.

The reunion committee has procured the same grounds at Edinburg, had last year, and the date for the reunion will be July 29 to August 7 inclusive. A later date was desired, but this is the latest possible date, being twenty days later than last year. So as the old year closes, we look forward to the coming year with all its possibilities. May the Lord greatly strengthen the borders of Zion, and may there be many raised up to stand behind the program of the church, now open before us.

Very hopefully laboring,

JASPER O. DUTTON.

Wichita, Kansas

December 27.—The Sunday school gave an interesting program at the church on Christmas Eve, December 24, which was in charge of the superintendent of that department, Brother Goodfellow. The church was attractively decorated. The program consisted of instrumental music, songs, readings, and a play, which were enjoyed by old and young. Following this, a treat consisting of candy, nuts, and fruit was given out to all.

At this time of the year, the spirit of giving seems to be prevalent, and as a group, we did our utmost to make this Christmas a happy one for our pastor and his wife. At the close of the Sunday school, the superintendent presented to Pastor and Sister Whalley the gifts brought in by the group, and a well-filled purse was presented to them by the branch treasurer.

Brother Lawrence Brockway, who is attending the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, is spending the holidays at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Brockway. Miss Klett, a teacher of the university, accompanied Brother Brockway to Wichita, and is being entertained at the Brockway home.

On December 8 our regular business meeting for the election of officers for the branch and for the various departments was held. Brother Whalley was reelected pastor for the next year; Brother Goodfellow, superintendent of Sunday school with Mrs. C. C. Jacquith as his assistant; Miss Eleanor Williams, superintendent of Religio with Brother Whipple as assistant; and Mrs. A. A. Buschow was re-elected head of the Department of Women. Not many changes were made, for all seemed to be satisfied with the present officers.

Death has invaded our ranks and has claimed our beloved sister, Mrs. Mary Bozarth, who because of her advanced age and her frail, little body has not been able to meet with us often of late, but when present she never failed to bear her sweet testimony. She was ill or confined to her bed a very short while, being stricken with paralysis and never regaining consciousness. A sweet spirit has gone to its rest.

Sister Helen Hague has gone to Kansas City to be at the home of her aunt. Helen has been sick for some time, and we trust that under the care of her physician at that place, she will soon be able to return to us.

Miss Stella Holsworth, of Independence, Missouri, is visiting during the holidays at the home of her sister, Mrs. L. R. Field.

Saint Charles, Missouri, Branch

The Saint Charles Branch is a unit of the Saint Louis District and as such has been operating for a number of years. We hold the regular order of services of a duly organized branch: Sabbath school at a quarter of ten on Sunday and preaching service at a quarter of eleven. Our remaining meeting is prayer service on Wednesday evening.

We have an active Department of Women, and they are striving now to raise a mile of pennies, so that they can put a basement under the church building and raise the yard back of the church by filling in same. They have been active, too, in assisting with the church expenses.

We had Brothers R. C. Hands and Roy Remington of the district officers with us on December 19 and enjoyed their visit. Brother Hands gave us a good lecture during the Sunday school hour, and Brother Remington gave us a live discourse on the law of tithing at the morning hour. We then held our semiannual election of officers for the branch. Brother A. B. East is our new branch president, succeeding Brother I. L. Snedeker, who has gone to Texas. Brothers David Lehman, John Price, and Timothy Martin make up the other officers of the branch, while Brother John McNeely is secretary and Sister Lovie Trask is organist.

We will be glad to entertain any visitors at our branch. You may call or write the branch president, A. B. East, 626 Adams Street, Saint Charles, Missouri, or phone Saint Charles 450 J.

Young Saint Speaks of His Desires

I feel this night that it is no more than my duty to add a few words, if I can, to the many helpful and encouraging messages sent to the HERALD. As I write these few lines, it is with a feeling of thankfulness for the abundance of God's love manifested through his many blessings and with a feeling of sadness that we are so easily removed from the straight and narrow way, so often forgetting God's holy and everlasting mercy.

Even I, in my youth and inexperience, can see and understand to a certain degree the carelessness with which the world lets the Father's holy and everlasting gospel pass from them without accepting it, and esteem it as naught. I realize that this blessed gospel is too precious for us to esteem so lightly, for without accepting and living this gospel we can not get all out of life that our heavenly Father wills we should.

We have not been having Sunday school very regularly during the past few weeks on account of bad weather and roads.

I wish to say that I am among those who are looking forward to the accomplishing of the stewardship plan and the redemption of Zion, hoping that the Saints will pray for me that I may live in worthiness, acceptable to God as one of his servants, helping what I can in the building up and redemption of Zion.

I am one of the young of the church and realize that I am very weak, and I ask the Saints to remember me in their prayers, for those who have grown up in the church as well as those who have grown up out of the church, probably realize that it is hard to live true to the gospel plan under the best of circumstances.

I would certainly appreciate hearing from some of the young, for I desire to come in closer brotherhood with the Saints.

EVERETT LANDON.

PAWNEE CITY, NEBRASKA, December 26.

Northern California Young People's Convention

A long-hoped-for event was realized in the convening of the first young people's convention of the Northern California District November 26, 27, 28, at the Oakland Church. The committee in direct charge was made up of various Saints of the district: V. B. Etzenhouser, chairman; W. H. Dawson, pastor of Sacramento Branch; G. P. Levitt, district missionary; Ethel Christensen, Oakland; Cecil Hawley, of the district bishopric; Gerald Hawley, of Melrose Mission. Other workers were Mrs. Birdie Clark, Sacramento, district chorister; E. C. Burdick, orchestra leader; Mr. and Mrs. Gus Gorsky, banquet chefs, Oakland; Elder H. W. Savage, general booster, Papeete, Tahiti; Women's Department of Oakland; Mission Women's Department, and Saints in every part of the district. The distinguished guests of this convention were President F. M. McDowell and Apostles J. A. Gillen and Myron A. McConley. Brother McConley was unavoidably detained in Los Angeles and was not present.

At 2.30 p. m. the 26th, the first session of the convention was held. It was an organization and pep meeting, and from the singing of the first song under the able direction of Elder Levitt, the Spirit of our Master was present and the success of our first venture was assured. President McDowell in his inimitable way gained the love and confidence of the entire convention. He struck a tender chord in the heart of all, and we knew we were bound together by the strong bands of Christian fellowship. Brother Gillen, beloved by all Californians, in his characteristic style filled his hearers with an intense desire to push forward and support without stint or mental reservation the cause of righteousness. Brother C. W. Hawkins, one of God's noblemen, although over seventy years of age, in no uncertain terms voiced his support of the convention.

The opening prayer by Brother J. A. Saxe was a most beautiful appeal for divine direction and guidance. Younger workers in the persons of Mrs. Gladys Bolton, of Stockton; Ethel Christensen, of Oakland; Elder Robert Cowden, of San Jose; Brother L. R. White, of Chico; and Miss Lilly Jennings, of Fresno, pledged their support to Brother McDowell in his fight against sin and injustice. The earnest and eager interest of the large audience assured the leaders of their whole-hearted support.

The entertainment and get-together party in the evening was very fine, and its spicy nature was enjoyed by all. Brother McDowell's address, "A creed for youth," found him at his very best, and the evidence of the use of notebooks attested the value of his message in the minds of all. The program was under the direction of Mrs. Irene Pike.

The early morning prayer meetings on Saturday and Sunday were a real test of the interest of our youth in their spiritual welfare. The attendance was beyond the expectation of all, and by his Spirit did the Master voice his approval of our humble efforts to adore and praise his holy name. The testimonies were filled with hope and appreciation for the gospel of his dear Son. Meetings of this character are not soon forgotten. Brothers McDowell and Gillen presided at each meeting.

Brother McDowell's classes were well attended, and his subjects were vital to the life of all Latter Day Saints. His frankness and desire to be understood as a friend of youth brought teacher and pupil together upon the most favorable basis. The happy combination of teacher and minister in the person of "our big brother" makes him the efficient servant for Christ that he is. The notebooks used by everyone were carried home crammed with gems for thought and meditation. Four happy and most profitable hours of class work were held.

The desire of the committee to have variety of activity and also to sharpen the wits of their guests was evidenced by a little diversion in the form of an excursion on beautiful Lake Merritt and a big party in the De Femmery Park Hall just across from the church. All returned to the church enthused and ready to eat turkey. Gerald Hawley had direct charge of the event.

The banquet will long be remembered. From the call to order by the toastmaster, Brother Etzenhouser, until the prayer of benediction by Cecil Hawley, a most wonderful spirit prevailed. Each person on the program, each guest at the table, each waiter and waitress, in their serving, our chefs in the kitchen, and our dishwasher, Brother Frank Briggs, sensed his individual responsibility and determined to make the banquet a success. Over two hundred twenty-five persons were served without one single unpleasant experience. The spirit of cooperation will do everything. Turkey with all the trimmings was served to the delight and satisfaction of all. The addresses of the evening were by Elder G. P. Levitt, President F. M. McDowell, and Apostle J. A. Gillen. Responses were made by Roy Weldon, of Oakland, Miss Lilly Jennings, of Fresno, and Elder Robert Cowden, of San Jose. Throughout the dinner the orchestra played, and a number of beautiful vocal selections were given by Miss Eveline Green, of Sacramento; Mrs. Hazel Powell, of Tulare; and Mrs. Birdie Clark, of Sacramento.

While it was generally thought that the church had been already overtaxed at previous sessions, a point was stretched on Sunday, and the building was literally jammed at every session. The picture of the people sitting on the floor at the feet of Brother McDowell, others supporting their backs against the pulpit, brought to our minds that picture of long ago when the multitude was so great that Christ pushed out into the waters of Galilee because of the press. Why not? Is the selfsame message not being preached today? Rubbing elbows with your neighbor is a good thing any time; better yet when it is done in the congregation of the Saints. The message of the hour was a challenge to go forward, and every person understood better his part in Zion's redemption.

Under the direction of Brother E. C. Burdick, the orchestra gave an hour of entertainment. We are very proud of the work of our brother and his musicians and know that there is much in store for this type of music in our district.

Brother Gillen's sermon at half past two was brimful of enthusiasm and words of godly counsel. Those who might be looking for the great endowment to come realized that our brother was bathed then in the Spirit of the Christ, and this one sermon in the minds of many was worth all the effort and sacrifice which the convention entailed. A. J. Damron and C. J. Cady were in charge of this meeting.

The closing session of our glorious convention was just as loyally supported as was the first. The interest was just as intense; and though it was the seventh session of the day, Brother McDowell showed no signs of fatigue, either in mind or body. The message was a most fitting climax to three happy, busy, and profitable days. Brothers J. A. Gillen and V. B. Etzenhouser presided at this meeting.

At the close of this session, the congregation filed past our brethren and in a warm, hearty handshake rededicated their lives anew to the Spirit which made this convention so glorious. The worth of this convention in a spiritual awakening and reconsecration can never be estimated; but one thing we do know, such meetings as this one will save hundreds of our youth to the church.

November Twenty-Sixth, Twenty-seventh, and Twenty-Eighth, Nineteen Twenty-Six, have been indelibly stamped upon our minds.

V. B. ETZENHOUSER.

Brentwood Branch

Since our last report, our Department of Women and Temple Builders gave a supper at the church. And such a feast. They netted a tidy sum, and this was promptly placed in trust for our new pews.

At our election of officers, Elder C. J. Remington was again sustained as pastor, with Elders F. F. Struebling and Roy Remington chosen to act as his counselors in the presidency of the branch. Elder Struebling was also chosen to act as presiding priest, Brother Mills Nelson as teacher, and Brother Ivor N. Cooke as deacon. The secretary's work was again handed to Ralph Remington for the fifth consecutive term.

Sunday school officers were all reelected, with the exception of assistant superintendent, Brother F. F. Struebling succeeding Brother I. N. Cooke for that office.

Brother C. J. Peat was stricken with a spell of weakness and is in a serious condition, his advanced age being against him. We hope he will be spared to us, though, for he is one of the old school who can and usually does give good counsel, and adds zest to many of the prayer services, with thrilling testimonies of his experiences in the church.

Brethren C. J. and Roy Remington have occupied the pulpit for the most part recently, business cares and other things holding the attention of other of the priesthood-bearing members at service time.

We are closing a successful year at Brentwood—having gained in the knowledge of spiritual things and having a bright outlook for the progress for the year to come.

Our pastor is C. J. Remington, 1324 Cecelia Avenue, Webster Groves, Missouri, phone Webster 2054 W.

Attleboro, Massachusetts

As I have been a reader of our church papers for fifteen years, and have enjoyed the letters of the brothers and sisters whom we knew and learned to love, I thought it was time that I write and let them know that we are still in the work and that we often think of them.

Attleboro, "The hub of the jewelry world," is blessed with Saints who are still doing their part to keep the gospel banner clean and unsullied by their support of the officers, general and local.

Our preaching services by the visiting brethren are inspiring, and we trust they will come often. Our prayer services are well worth attending, as there are many helpful thoughts expressed in the testimonies.

We are blessed in having a young man as pastor, one who is untiring in his zeal to make Attleboro Branch the best in the Southern New England District. This brother, known among men as Earl Bradshaw, besides being pastor finds time to be leader of the choir, to teach a class of younger old men in the Sunday school, and twice a month a class of young men on the Book of Mormon. He is ably assisted by Elders John Heap and Raymond Bradshaw, Priests John Colburn and Edward Coombs, Teachers John Marchington, George Heap, and George Baldwin, Deacons Lawrence Power, Ralph Spinney, Harold Cash, and the writer.

Our choir adds to the services by singing sweet songs that touch the heart.

Our Sunday school is growing, and John Colburn is superintendent, with Harold Cash as assistant. They are supported by George Heap and Harold Bradshaw as secretary and treasurer, and Lillian Siddall, pianist. Adult teachers are Mary E. Rogers, who has the largest class in our school, composed of our young ladies; Lillian Siddall, young girls; Charlotte Wilcox, older young women; Raymond Bradshaw and Harold Cash, the younger boys; and our pastor teaches the older young men.

In the primary department Sister Mildred Heap is superintendent, and with her as teachers and organist are Hazel Scrown, Florence Siddall, Florence Cash, and Lillian Broadbent.

As Brother McDowell says, we have set our sails, and the course of the Attleboro Branch is Zionward. With this theme in mind, I am inclosing the words of our pastor written in verse form:

Zion Builders

To be sung to the tune of "He keeps me singing," by L. B. Bridgers.

To thee, dear Lord, we lift our grateful hearts,
Asking for thy strength divine,
That ever true and faithful to thy cause,
We may be thoroughout all time.

Chorus

Zion, Zion, Zion,
Dearest place to me;
Home of righteous people,
Throughout all eternity.

Help us, Lord, to work for Zion.
Give us strength for every task,
Consecrating all to thee, we'll share
In the victory at last.

Zion, we will work and pray for thee,
Till our day on earth is done,
Then a home in that fair land there'll be,
In that glorious day to come.

I am wishing all of God's children a happy new year of service.

ROY M. CHURCHILL.

SOUTH ATTLEBORO, MASSACHUSETTS, Box 24, December 22.

Maryland Heights, Missouri Branch

We of the Maryland Heights Branch have the peculiar privileges afforded small branches near a great metropolis. We are just a few miles outside the city of Saint Louis, and our community is made up largely of "commuters" who find their livelihood in the city. We have a small branch here and experience the usual struggles of the pioneers, but we are blessed in our efforts and know the good seed sown will some day bear fruit, and we shall rejoice at the harvest.

We have only about a dozen mature members in our branch that are actively engaged in the work, but our Sunday school is quite largely attended. We have an average attendance of thirty-five, the majority of whom are children in the community whose parents do not belong to the church.

Our Christmas entertainment was good, a number of the children taking active part. Our district Sunday school superintendent, Brother Roy Remington, was with us on the 26th and gave us a good talk at the Sunday school, showing the importance of being Sunday school scholars every day in the week, and on Sunday, too. The children responded heartily when he promised them a Testament for the best all-round scholar in the classes for the next three months. After the program, the children got their Christmas treat from the Sunday school, and prizes for attendance were awarded, and memory verse recitation for the year.

Brother Remington occupied the morning hour, his subject being, "What shall be my accounting to the Lord?" His explanation of the inventory and tithing blank provided by the bishopric was instructive as well as interesting, and the questions allowed and answered were pleasing and instructive. He left some of the blanks with Brother A. H. Daly, branch president, and has the assurance that Maryland Heights wants to get started right and do all possible to show that they mean what they say when they sing:

"Thank the Lord for the plan he has given,
That will render us pure as a child;
That will change this cold world into heaven,
By its spirit so holy and mild."

Elder A. H. Daly, Anglum, Missouri, Route 38, is branch president, and if any are contemplating coming close to Saint Louis he will appreciate hearing from them, for he is in the business of providing homes for those of moderate as well as good financial rating.

British Mission, Northern District

Jubilee Conference in October

For several months the Saints of the Northern District of England had been planning and looking forward to a jubilee conference during the month of October, 1926. They had planned their work, making out a program in detail; had published the program and song sheet, containing twenty-five songs of the Saints, and on the second day of October met at James Street, Bradford, Manchester. On Sunday, October 3, they met in Rusholme Public Hall.

Elder W. H. Chandler is president of the district, and his two counselors are Elders G. W. Leggott and J. W. Green, and under their care and direction the whole jubilee conference was conducted.

In the latter part of the month of October there was transmitted to the editors of the HERALD the stenographer's abbreviated account of the meeting, etc., and in an accompanying letter it was stated that more elaborate notes would follow. These have not yet arrived, and for fear they are lost, we are giving publication to the condensed account as it came from the pen of the stenographer, through Brother Chandler.

One can hardly read this story of the Northern England District Jubilee Conference without the deepest respect for the lives of those who have demonstrated their abiding faith amid circumstances which have not at all times been encouraging. But God has made good his promises to these people in England as he has to the church in America, and across the sea we join hands in Christian love and devotion to the cause of Christ, while we ponder the work each of the other, and thank God that he is very near to every one of us.

It may be possible to give readers of the HERALD a more full account of some of the meetings of most general interest in this jubilee conference at a future date.

From the Letter of W. H. Chandler

President F. M. Smith, Dear Brother: The whole matter passed along without a hitch, and everyone felt lifted up and made to rejoice.

On the Saturday evening the veterans were invited to a tea and social held in their honor. About two hundred and fifty sat down to a splendid repast, given free of cost by Elder John Green and his wife, Sister Ada Green; we all appreciated this great kindness on their part. After tea the jubilee was declared open, and a roll call of the veterans was made according to the years of service, each veteran being asked to stand, and the history of their association with the church from the beginning of the Reorganization over here was mentioned, bringing in the facts of how the work of the church was carried from one district to another.

Then came the social side, and items of musical interest were interspersed between speeches. Fruit was served, and the Saturday gathering was brought to a happy close, leaving a good feeling of joy and cooperation among the Saints for the Sunday services.

The district rented the Rusholme Public Hall for the Sunday services, for we felt that we had no building in the district of sufficient size to accommodate the many Saints who would gather for this event. The services commenced with a preaching service, High Priest G. W. Leggott being the speaker. Sunday afternoon was devoted to a testimony meeting, preference being given to the veterans.

Sunday evening opened with community singing before the usual meeting and while the Saints were gathering. After the meeting was called to order, the usual preaching service was under way, the speaker being Elder Nephi Dewsnup, district historian.

The meals, dinner and tea, were offered free to all the visitors on account of the industrial depression, and served in the schoolroom of the Beresford Road Church, kindly loaned to us for this purpose.

I am sure, judging from the splendid feeling exhibited, that everyone enjoyed himself, and felt he belonged to a church the history of which compelled attention and the work of which lay immediately before him and demanded expression in human life.

The expense of this conference was provided for by the district fund, and I am sure we came out of it with credit to all who labored so untiringly for its success.

Stenographer's Notes of the Conference

A district tea, provided by Sister Green, was held on the Saturday evening, and tables were arranged in the James Street meeting room. The jubilee committeemen and their wives were seated at a table on the platform; the veterans and pioneers of the church work were seated at a table alongside the platform; and the rest of the guests were seated at other tables. The grace, "Be present at our table, Lord," was sung, then a very appetizing tea was consumed. Much fun was occasioned by pulling crackers inside of which were paper hats and masks.

Distinguishing ribbons were worn by the committee and the veterans, the committee wearing blue rosettes. Brother Green, who is the district representative for Sunday schools, had a white border to his. Those who were present at the inauguration of the work in Manchester were termed "pioneers" and wore gold ribbons. Those who were members of Grosvenor Street wore silver ribbons. Clarendon Street members wore green ribbons, and those from Dickenson Street wore yellow ones. From here the different branches were formed, and these were indicated by red ribbons.

After the tables were cleared and everyone comfortably settled, Brother Leggott took charge of the meeting, and opened with the singing of the hymn, "We come with joy the truth to teach you," from the hymn sheet and program printed specially for our jubilee.

Prayer was offered by Brother W. H. Greenwood, after which the district president officially opened the jubilee and introduced Sister Blanche Edwards, who was present. Brother Leggott drew our attention to the fact that on the program Brother W. R. Armstrong was announced to have been chairman at this conference, but as he was not present, Brother W. H. Greenwood was called upon to make remarks. He said we would have to be the judge as to whether he filled the bill. He has been connected with the work for almost forty-eight years, and interested us very much with some of his experiences. He said he would need the whole of the conference to tell all. Afterwards we sang "In the light of God," and then the historian called the roll, i. e., he explained who the various "veterans" were, and what the different ribbons signified, and as each veteran's name was called, he or she was requested to stand, so that all could see, and we all clapped them.

Brother Chandler next pronounced us to be in conference session, and the district secretary read letters received from President F. M. Smith, Brother Judd, Southern District, Welsh District, and one with reference to Sister Blanche Edwards.

Sister Edwards was now called upon to speak. She told us how glad she was to be with us, speaking especially to the women, and giving us our slogan, "Go forward to 1930."

After Brother Chandler had announced the various destinations of the long distance Saints, a solo was rendered by Brother W. Hall. It was entitled, "Land of hope and glory." Brother James Schofield made a few remarks regarding catering and singing. Sister Ruth Schofield gave an "Impersonation of a wedding."

Brother Leggott said he did not think it would be right to leave without first giving a vote of thanks to the committee. Brother T. Taylor moved that the best vote of thanks be extended to the jubilee committee, Sister Green, the historian, and stenographer; this was seconded by Brother G. Towers and two sisters. Sister Green responded to the motion, saying she was only too happy to be able to do her bit. Brother Nephi Dewsnup also responded, but Sister Olive Heywood did not feel disposed to speak, although she was also happy in service. The meeting was brought to a close by singing hymn, "Inspirer and hearer of prayer," and prayer by Brother Waugh.

Sunday, October 3, 1926

The meeting was called to order at half past ten in the morning with the singing of "God of the morning, at whose voice," and prayer by Brother J. Austin, of Sheffield. This was followed by the song, "Shout the tidings of salvation." Brother Abel Hall, who was in charge of the meeting, said that at a jubilee people do not wear long faces, and he hoped we would not. A letter was read from Midland District. Brother Armstrong read the lesson about the man who had been blind from birth, and Jesus made clay and caused him to see. Brother Leggott was announced as the speaker for the morning and gave a very edifying sermon. Before the sermon Brother W. Hall sang a solo, "There is always something you can do." The meeting was brought to a close by singing the old favorite, "Father, bless thy work to all," and prayer by Brother T. Taylor.

After lunch, which was served at the Beresford Road Church, the meeting was opened for prayer and testimony, in charge of Brother J. W. Green. The first song was, "Beloved brethren, sing his praise," and the prayer was by Brother John Schofield, of Birmingham, followed by "Lift up your heads, ye heirs of glory." Sister Harrison, of Sheffield, a sister from Leeds, Brother John Foden, a sister from Sheffield, and Brother E. Maloney were administered to by Brother Chandler, Brother Waugh, and Brother T. Taylor. Brother Fawcett, of Wigan, sang a solo, "Consecration." After Brother Green had said a few words with reference to the Sunday school work, the veterans, three or four, gave their testimonies of what had been accomplished during the last fifty years. The meeting was brought to a close by singing hymn, "Once more before we part," and prayer by Brother Leggott.

The Saints gathered together about a quarter till six for community singing, and at half past six the service began with hymn, "Praise ye the Lord." The secretary read notices for the various branches, and we sang "When earth in bondage long had lain." Elder T. Taylor read the Bible lesson, Acts 5:12-42, Twentieth Century Translation of the Bible. Sister Blanche Edwards was called upon to occupy for five minutes, after which Elder Nephi Dewsnup preached on the subject, "Our growth," giving a very impressive and stirring sermon, and the meeting was closed by the song, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet," and prayer by Brother Mather and the vesper.

Altogether we had an enjoyable time, and one long to be remembered by all present.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The spirit of Christmas has indeed pervaded Kansas City throughout the last week or ten days, Santa Claus having made his appearance with his reindeer from his home in Icy Cape, bringing with him his several assistants, in the persons of Eskimos. He was glad to see all his little friends, and they in turn were quite pleased to see him. He was a busy old fellow, visiting the sick children in the hospitals, appearing at schools, and spreading cheer here and there, not only to the wee children, but the large children as well. The down-town section of the city was prettily decorated in smilax, pines, and evergreens, and was a beautiful sight to behold, especially at night, with all the pretty lights shining forth in their rays of dazzling splendor.

The children of primary, junior, and intermediate departments of the Sunday school rendered their Christmas program on Tuesday evening, which is always an interesting event to the older people, to see the little ones do their bit. The junior and intermediate departments displayed a very lovely spirit in the way of giving, by announcing that they would forego the pleasure of receiving the usual Christmas treat, and requested that this money be spent for something for the Sunday school.

The Sunday morning services were not so well attended, there being a number of absentees, which was to be expected. The eleven o'clock preaching hour was occupied by Elder C. E. Wight, who gave a very inspiring sermon to the Saints, which the many readers of the HERALD well know he is capable of doing. A vocal solo entitled, "There's a song in the air," by Oley Speaks, was rendered by Brother Clayton Wolf at this service, which was highly pleasing, as Brother Clayton has a wonderful tenor voice and the people are always pleased to hear him.

The evening hour was occupied by the choir in the rendition of the cantata, "Peace on earth." The soloists, Sister Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock, soprano, assisted by Sister Alice Smeeton; Sister Estella Moore, contralto, assisted by Miss Melba Blankenship; Brother Clayton Wolf, tenor, and Brother C. G. Lewis, basso, assisted by Brother Roscoe Hampton. The story of the birth of the Babe born in a manger was very beautifully told in this cantata, and the audience listened very attentively for an hour and a half. The Central Choir is to be commended for their good work in assisting in the services and in the advancing of the spread of the latter-day gospel. The cantata will be repeated again next Sunday night at the Grandview Church in Kansas City, Kansas.

Sister Mertie McNemar passed from this life on December 17, after a lingering illness of several months. Her only living relative is Grandma Every, now ninety-three years of age, who is in the Saints' Home at Holden.

Sister Lura Mannering, who has been ill for the past six weeks, was able to return to the services Sunday.

Brother and Sister Roy Howery announce the birth of a son born December 19. He has been given the name of Donald Roy.

The members of the priests' quorum have been discussing the subject of stewardship at their monthly meetings, and Bishop Fred B. Blair has addressed them. We understand some very fine thoughts have been brought out at these meetings, and much good has been derived therefrom.

Officers for all departments will be installed next Sunday, as they will be in the other thirteen churches of the stake.

Argentine Church

The morning speaker was Stake Missionary W. D. Tor-doff, basing his remarks on the subject of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, emphasizing the brotherhood of man as very necessary. The Latter Day Saint name loses its significance without the brotherhood of man. We must think in terms of the present, that the future may be provided for. Selfishness must be abolished. We dispense a message that is charged and surcharged with hope. The cry during the recent war was, "Make the world safe for democracy." We should make the cry, "Make the world safe for Christ." We should work together in groups. It is the greatest thing we can do.

The evening occupant at the sacred desk was former missionary Elder William I. Fligg, now missionary in the Fremont District. Under the subject of "The business of being a saint," Jesus said that we "must be about our Father's business." We should be one hundred per cent Saints. On the blackboard he made the comparison of the importance of the various requirements as one hundred per cent Saints, grouping thus:

A belief in God, Jesus Christ, and the Holy, Ghost, in relative importance at	15%
Repentance, in relative importance at	10%
Baptism, in relative importance at	10%
Laying on of hands, in relative importance at	10%
Golden rule, in relative importance at	10%
Tithing, in relative importance at	10%
Eternal judgment, in relative importance at	10%
Resurrection, in relative importance at	10%
Stewardship, in relative importance at	15%
	100%

A short explanation as to the necessity of each was made, which made a very plain, hence clear setting of their place in the gospel economy.

Quindaro Church

Bishop F. B. Blair in his discourse Sunday night, December 12, selected as his subject the two ways, using quotations from Matthew 7: 13, 14. Also Luke 13: 24. To make modern application of the principle under consideration, the speaker said it is a dangerous practice to always follow the crowd, because many go that way to be with the crowd regardless of what may be the crowd's point of interest. He also emphasized the thought that it is a good thing to travel alone if necessary to maintain righteous ideals, and if such are reached we may be compelled to travel alone. "Because, strait is the gate and narrow is the way, and few there be that find it."

Last Sunday night Brother Fred J. Cleveland gave a continuance of his illustrated lecture on the life of Christ, which interested those present, especially the little folks.

About the first of December a contest was started by dividing the Sunday school in halves known as the Reds and the Blues, for the purpose of raising funds to apply on our church debt. This will continue till the end of the year, and at that time the losers will give a dinner to the group. The results of this effort have been successful up to the present time.

Heathwood

A surprise farewell party was given by the Heathwood Mission in honor of Brother and Sister A. Wallace Eskridge, at the Heathwood Church after the prayer service Wednesday evening, December 15. Brother Eskridge has been pastor and assistant pastor since the organization of this mission. Sister Eskridge has been active in choir and orchestra work. Brother Eskridge will assume the pastorate at the Quindaro Church January 1. It is with deep regret that they leave us. We wish them Godspeed.

Grandview

The Sunday school campaign which has been in progress since October 1, for the purpose of a larger attendance, lessons studied, all students on time, and spiritual growth, draws to a close with the end of the year. Those in charge report good success, feeling that, as a result, the Sunday school will continue to be better and even larger in 1927. At the close of the campaign, a visiting committee of three, Brother Joseph Cookley, Sisters Alma Warren, and Mildred Swearingin, will begin their duties, keeping in touch with all members in an effort to keep them in Sunday school.

The Sunday school orchestra, under the direction of Sister Juno Cook, is progressing nicely and is highly appreciated.

A half past six study hour is now in progress each Sunday evening, in charge of Brother Joseph Cookley; classes in Bible history and Book of Mormon have been organized. A special program conducted by Sister Pearl Muir is given after each period, with the young people, especially, taking part.

The Department of Women gave their annual bazaar December 2. A chicken dinner was served by the Gleaners' class, and a rabbit supper at a later date. The proceeds of all these efforts amounted to three hundred and forty dollars and will be turned in to the bishop to apply on the debt of our new church.

Richard Anthony, the infant son of Brother and Sister Simon P. Gress, was blessed at the December sacrament service by Patriarch H. O. Smith and Brother Richard Bullard.

Patriarch John F. Martin recently gave a very interesting lecture on Kirtland Temple. Other speakers have been Elders Ralph W. Farrell, Cyril E. Wight, C. D. Jellings, L. W. Hayes, and W. D. Tordoff, stake missionary.

Ottumwa, Iowa

December 28.—December has been a busy month for the Saints here. Especially has the Department of Women been active, beginning with a chicken pie supper in the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday, the 11th. This was well attended by people from all walks of life, and all seemed well pleased with the good supper. More than sixty-seven dollars was made in profit. The department was entertained at the Y. W. C. A. on Friday afternoon preceding the supper, Sister E. Hughes being the hostess. A very pleasant afternoon was spent, and refreshments served. On the night of the 21st this department held a Christmas exchange at the home of Miss Mary Price, and the ladies celebrated a pleasant time.

The annual election of officers was held this month with the following results: Elder F. C. Bevan, branch president; Elder L. W. Edwards, assistant branch president; Brother G. A. McMickle, branch clerk; Brother Orie LaPoint, treasurer; Sister Epperly, chorister; F. C. Bevan, Sunday school superintendent; A. Erskine, assistant; Myron LaPoint, secretary; so our workers for 1927 are all chosen, and we look forward to their making a success of their combined work, being assisted by the branch members.

The Sunday school held its Christmas program on Sunday, December 26, and after the program each member of this department received a treat.

The sermons of the past month have been by our pastor, and he has been calling our attention to the necessity of our filling out our inventories and the blessings derived by so doing. The other speaker this month was Brother Orie LaPoint.

We are happy that one soul has united with us. She was baptized at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening, the 11th.

We have enjoyed some pictures shown at our Religio. They concerned our church history, and a lecture by our pastor accompanied the pictures. Some also were shown on the subject "The Christ in America," the lecture being given by Brother Glen A. McMickle. All were interested in these pictures.

The day before Christmas several baskets were filled with good things to eat and given to those whom the Department of Women deemed needy; some of the foods were paid for by the department, and all who received them appreciate them.

We regret that Brother E. R. Lewis is still in the Ottumwa Hospital. And Sister Annie Scott is still confined to her home. Owing to her health she is not able to meet with us, but remains strong in the faith. Sister L. W. Edwards has not been well of late, and she, too, has been at home, but is happy to be in the gospel work.

IndependenceStone Church

Under the leadership of Elders J. E. Vanderwood and D. O. Cato, the young people's morning prayer meeting assembled at the newly chosen hour, half past eight, on Sunday morning for the first time in the new year. The number in attendance was increased, and all seemed to want to start the new year by taking part in the service. Songs were sung; earnest desires were voiced in prayer; gratitude for past blessings and a determination to prepare for more efficient service were given expression in the testimonies. Participants agree that this was a fitting way to begin their work of the year.

The usual hour of half past nine found the student body of the Sunday school assembled for that session. A pleasing song service, enthusiastic forty-minute lesson study in the brand new quarterlies, and a number, "When clouds have vanished and skies are blue," by the orchestra, outline the features and activities of the morning.

A large crowd was present at the first sacramental service of the year. Pastor C. Ed. Miller in charge of the meeting called upon Apostle R. S. Budd to make the opening remarks. Stating that the past can not be changed except by our acts in the future, Brother Budd dwelt upon the need of a land of beginning again, a place and time, where we may repent of our transgressions and having made reparation make a new beginning in our lives. God in his wonderful foresight of the needs of his children has prepared this place about his altar, where if his Saints partake worthily they form a new base line for their activities. Patriarch H. O. Smith offered a humble and earnest prayer for all those afflicted in body and spirit. How sweet were the old, familiar hymns mingled with the prayers and testimonies of the faithful ones! How cheering were the talks of the members of the missionary force! And how rich and full of profit and instruction were the testimonies of the older Saints who have seen lives of service and action!

In the twenty minutes' time for social service in the junior department at the Campus, there were eight prayers and more than fifty testimonies. And if the desire of those who spoke is realized, the year 1927 will bring us nearer the redemption of Zion, and our life's pages for this year will be whiter, as our wish is the same as one little sister's who said she hoped her page would not have as many blots on it as the page of the past year had.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At half past eight in the morning, the program of the Bible Study Hour was broadcast. Music was by the junior department of the Watson Memorial Methodist Church under the direction of Mrs. C. A. Shoop. Sermonet was by K L D S Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell.

The musical program of the eleven o'clock service was arranged by Elizabeth Okerlind, contralto, assisted by Thelma Vincent, soprano; Fred Friend, tenor; Frank Russell, bass; Mary Okerlind, pianist. There was a violin duet by Orrin Fry, jr., and Gomer Cool. Sermonet by U. W. Greene.

Reverend C. H. Koehler, of Saint Luke's Evangelical Church, conducted the three o'clock K L D S Radio Church. Features of the program were an anthem by Saint Luke's choir; quartet numbers by Mrs. E. H. Riske, Miss Edna Wulfekammer, the Reverend C. H. Koehler, and Mr. Wattenberg. Edna Wulfekammer, organist.

At the radio vesper service music was furnished by Lily Belle Allen, Edna Daniel, Alma Kearns, and Wingfield Lewis. Sermonet by Elder U. W. Greene.

The Latter Day Saint studio service at a quarter after nine o'clock featured music by the Stone Church Choir; Robert Miller, organist. Bishop Albert Carmichael delivered the sermonet.

Evening Services

Having missed its meeting on last Sunday evening on account of the rendition of "The Messiah," the Religio assembled with good attendance, the total being three hundred and nineteen, at six o'clock in the evening, and the classes resumed their study. President Floyd McDowell was present and spoke to his class, which is pursuing a course in the methods of teaching.

At this hour the Young People's Religio Class which meets in the Y. K. T. classroom held their annual election of officers with the following results: President, Delbert Withee; vice president, Elmer Highland; secretary, Muriel Smith; and treasurer, Pearl Halstead. Chairmen were also chosen for the various committees.

The program following the lesson period consisted of a pleasing piano solo by little Kathryn Cato, and a violin duet, a and b numbers, by Orrin Fry, jr., and Gomer Cool, accompanied by Brother O. K. Fry.

"Triumphant Zion! lift thy head," was the hymn which began the evening preaching service, and the invocation was offered by Elder J. A. Thomas, of Tulsa, Oklahoma. Following an organ number by Robert Miller, the Stone Church Choir, under the direction of Professor Paul N. Craig sang a beautiful anthem. A pleasing solo was sung by Mrs. Cyril E. Wight, of Kansas City, Missouri.

Bishop Albert Carmichael was the evening's speaker, and commenced his discourse with the question, Do we as Latter Day Saints sense the great task and responsibility before us in the coming year? Rapidly he drew a vivid picture of the conditions which surround us and the difficulties we must overcome before God's will can be fulfilled among us, showing that in our strength and power of mind we can do nothing, but with the guidance and help of divine revelation, that thing which characterizes us as a people, we can accomplish the tremendous tasks before us. Taking the stand once taken by the prophet, Joseph Smith, he declared that the abiding Comforter, which Christ promised to his children, when it is found within a man is a sixth sense which correlates and coordinates the other five senses, leading and guiding the man into all truth. Having been born of the water and Spirit we are ready to be led into the way of all truth, and we must have within us the sixth sense, which augments and enlarges the other senses. As a people, we claim to have this sixth sense, but many of us do not realize the responsibility this claim brings with it. The world has many problems to be solved, and it is waiting for a demonstration of our faith. Our objective is to stand by the fundamentals of the church and look forward to its social program. We must cease making our religion a by-product, and must sell ourselves to the purpose of redeeming Zion by first complying with God's law and preparing ourselves. Referring to the Doctrine and Covenants, he showed that the gathering is on, the hastening time is here. We have not time to sow discontent and turmoil, but the priesthood and membership of the church should be hopeful and having faith comply with the law.

This was a powerful sermon, being delivered with force and clearness born of inspiration, and a large crowd was present to profit by its instruction. The closing song was "Guide us, O thou great Jehovah."

Quarterly Conference in Zion

The quarterly business meeting in Zion convened at the Stone Church, Monday evening, January 3, at eight o'clock, President Frederick M. Smith presiding. Two hours were spent in the transacting of local business and election of delegates for the General Conference in April. A spirit of unity and willingness to cooperate was manifested by the large crowd, and a great deal of work was accomplished in the single session. The following is a brief report of matters considered and work done by the conference:

Usual reports from quorums and departments were read.

Approval of recommendations of bishop's court granted withdrawal from church membership of T. J. Sheldon, Gilbert Lewis May, Dorothy May Spencer, Elizabeth Pearl May, Mrs. Anna Letitia Crick May, and Mrs. Bertha Smith.

Elder Samuel A. Thiel was elected superintendent of Sunday School Department, with Miss Bertha Constance as assistant; Elder D. Ronald Carmichael, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, with Elder John F. Sheehy as assistant; and Mrs. Alice M. Cowan, superintendent of Department of Women.

Pastors, as selected by the various congregations, were approved, as follows: Second Church, R. J. Lambert; Walnut Park Church, Gaud A. Smith and B. J. Scott; Enoch Hill, W. J. Brewer; Liberty Street, Leonard White; Englewood, C. F. Davis; Spring Branch, D. R. Snively; East Independence, Nathaniel Carmichael; Gudgel Park, P. A. Sherman.

The following names were approved for ordination: Roy R. Redfield and Walter E. Curtis to the office of elder; Raymond George Wrigley, John A. Harper, Zeno Booker, and Willard A. Atwell, sr., to the office of priest; Irwin A. Hartley, teacher; Anthony Robinson and Thomas William Thatcher, deacons.

Elders C. Ed. Miller and R. V. Hopkins were sustained as assistants to the Presidency in the pastoral work in Zion.

Bishop G. W. Eastwood has sustained as assistant to the Presiding Bishopric in charge of local finances.

Delegates to the 1927 General Conference were nominated. The conference selected a committee of tellers consisting of R. J. Lambert, G. W. Eastwood, and Howard W. Harder, who prepared and distributed ballots. The vote was taken, and final results will be announced in a later issue of the HERALD.

Budgets for the various churches as recommended by the Bishopric were approved as follows:

Stone Church	$7,995.48
Second Church	1,173.45
Walnut Park	2,466.63
Liberty Street	1,664.63
Enoch Hill	584.63
Englewood	225.00
Spring Branch	209.00
East Independence	196.40
Total	$14,515.22

The following significant paragraph was incorporated in the report of Bishop G. W. Eastwood:

"The trend of our local expense fund is such that some steps must be taken to relieve the situation. Either a better support must be forthcoming from the members to supply our local funds, or steps will have to be taken to reduce the operating expense in a substantial manner, which can only be done by curtailing the use made of the church properties. We do not feel justified in our present policy to advance the deficit from general funds and will deem it necessary to await the payment of bills until the means are available in the local fund."

In the Departments

Ninety-two persons were present at the Y. K. T. Class banquet held in the dining hall of the Stone Church, Tuesday evening, December 28. This was the first formal gathering the class has had for some time, and special features on the program included a toast by President Floyd M. McDowell, an address by President Elbert A. Smith, and a talk by President Frederick M. Smith. Roland Flanders, class president for the ensuing six months, outlined the contemplated achievements of the class for the next year.

The Silver Wing Temple Builders, of the Liberty Street District, gave their pageant, "Have they lived in vain?" on Tuesday evening at the Stone Church. More than twenty girls participated in this program, and the violin numbers were furnished by Miss Columbia Wiggins, a former member of the chapter, and now a student of the Chicago Sherwood School of Music. A silver offering was taken, half of which was applied to the general expense of the Stone Church. The girls wish to thank all those who made possible the rendering of this pageant for their generous and kind assistance. The pageant will be given at Englewood next Sunday night, January 9.

A general reception for the college and university students of the church in Independence was held at the Independence Institute last Thursday evening. This reception has formerly been held at the home of the dean, but due to the increase in the number of students it was found necessary to hold it this year in the Institute Building. The rooms were given a homelike appearance by means of floor lamps, ferns, rugs, and a fire blazing in the fireplace.

It was interesting to observe the splendid spirit shown as old schoolmates and former classmates met again, and new acquaintances were made which will be more appreciated in later work of the church. The evening was spent in singing songs and performing stunts, the latter being presented by the schools having sufficient representation to entertain the crowd. Even the mothers who have had college and university training gave a demonstration of their home tasks while the melody of "Home, sweet home," was softly played. President Frederick M. Smith called the roll of the colleges and universities represented, and they were numerous.

At last good-byes were said, and the guests departed, many of them expressing themselves as having felt and sensed the spirit of the Institute, which has been developing rapidly in the past few months.

According to previous arrangement and announcement, the Religio watch party was held in the dining hall of the Stone Church on Friday night. Beginning at eight o'clock a large group of young people with a few middle-aged and older members took part in games directed by Brother Francis Holm, superintendent of the Stone Church Religio, and Brother Gordon Kress, superintendent of the recreational activities. Apples, doughnuts, and cider were served at intervals after ten o'clock, and much fun was had taking part in the exciting games, such as chariot race. There were contests of many kinds, matches, and grand marches. With the ringing of the bells and blowing of whistles announcing the advent of the new year, the party "broke up," all going home tired but happy.

A young people's revival meeting will be conducted at the Stone Church from January 16 to the 23d. Next Sunday morning, January 9, a rally service will be held at the morning preaching hour in each branch in Zion. This will be followed by a mass meeting of the young people of Independence in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church on Wednesday evening, January 12. President Floyd McDowell will open the revival meeting by a talk on the morning of the 16th, and will introduce Apostle R. S. Budd, who will speak Sunday night and each night following at the Stone Church at eight o'clock until Saturday. On Saturday and Sunday, the 22d and 23d, there will be a young people's convention conducted by President McDowell. The evening's sermon will be preceded each evening by a half hour song service. Authorities in charge of the revival invite and request the support and attendance of the young people as well as those older in Zion. Brother Budd has been very successful in meetings of this kind elsewhere, and much good has been derived from them. Here is an opportunity to learn. Don't miss it.

Interesting Personals

The three members of the First Presidency, the three members of the Presiding Bishopric, and most of the apostles are in Independence attending the ministerial conference which opened yesterday. Apostles J. F. Garver and D. T. Williams arrived in Independence from Lamoni, Iowa, Monday. Apostle Clyde F. Ellis is on his way to his field in Canada, having recently attended a conference in Cedar Rapids, and Apostle Myron A. McConley is in California. The rest, Brothers Gillen, Garver, Gleazer, Hanson, Budd, Williams, and Edwards, are in Independence.

Miss Ada A. Moore, daughter of Brother and Sister E. D. Moore, 1015 West Van Horn, Independence, and Mr. Clarence O. Mann were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, at three o'clock in the afternoon, January 1, Elder J. E. Vanderwood officiating. Only the immediate families witnessed the ceremony. The young couple will make their home in Independence.

Brother and Sister Charles Fry, 1225 West Hayward Avenue, celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Saturday evening, January 1, at half past seven o'clock. Thirty guests were present, among whom were President Elbert A. Smith, Patriarch F. A. Smith, Bishop Albert Carmichael, Sister Floyd M. McDowell, Apostle J. A. Gillen, Elder J. M. Terry, who performed the ceremony, C. Ed. Miller, who acted as toastmaster, and Frank A. Russell. An interesting program helped to pass the evening. Evan Fry sang two solos; Miss Ada Griffice contributed two violin solos, accompanied by Byron Neville; Lucy McDowell spoke on the subject, "Looking backward to Iowa." Bishop Carmichael talked on "Old auditing days," Brother Gillen gave a short address on the topic, "Missionary work in England," President Elbert A. Smith spoke on "Fellow workers in Christ," and Brother J. M. Terry read an original poem. Then delicious refreshments were served.

In the twenty-five years of their married life, Brother Fry has spent nineteen years in the mission field, part of three years in the field, and three years at home. They have three sons, Evan, Charles, jr., and Ammon. Brother Fry gives Sister Fry the credit for the work he has accomplished, saying that she has never in any way hindered him in his work; that she has always helped him.

Mabel Lillian Curtis, seventeen-year-old daughter of Apostle J. F. and Sister Margaret Hall Curtis, died at the Independence Sanitarium Tuesday morning at ten o'clock, following an operation for appendicitis last Wednesday, December 29. She developed pneumonia soon after the operation, and peritonitis also appeared. Sister Mabel was a dear, interesting personality, a member of the junior class, William Chrisman High School, and of the Shakesperian Literary Society of the school. The members of the immediate family who survive are: Her father and mother; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Cochran, Miss Flora of the home address, and Miss Nelle, of Tulsa, Oklahoma; two brothers, Orville, of 403 North Chrysler, Independence, and Earl R. of the home.

Funeral has been arranged for Thursday afternoon, 2.30, at the Stone Church.

Liberty Street

A new year's watch party which was a general get-together meeting was held at the church. An excellent program began at half past eight. Some of the most enjoyable numbers were those given by the ladies' quartet from the Second Church. It is always a pleasure to hear them. Also the baritone solos by Jack Custead and duets by Sisters Bernice Griffith and Viola Parsons were much appreciated. A number of readings were had, including those given by the Misses Beryl and Carrol Crawford, Wilma Delzell, and Betty Crawford. At ten o'clock a lap luncheon was served, after which the program went on until the New Year was rung in. The proceeds are to be used in painting and furnishing the church.

Sacramental service was well attended, and many strengthening testimonies and experiences were told.

The Religio program was one of the most enjoyable we have had thus far this winter. It was given by the babies and wee ones of the congregation, and although some of them forgot, or else when they opened their mouths no words would come, we appreciated the very fact that they had tried, and are proud of our tiny tots. May our heavenly Father bless our babies.

In the evening Elder J. Charles May spoke, reading Romans 12, and presented the admonitions of Paul, which though widely separated in thought are vital elements in building Christian character. In plain, simple language he showed his congregation that it is not necessarily those who leave and go to foreign lands who are offering the living sacrifices.

When we sing the old, dearly loved hymns, "Jesus, I my cross have taken," or "My times are in thy hands," do we sing from the heart and with understanding or do we sing reservedly, putting our own interpretation on the song? He gave some interesting explanations of results when our people have broken their contract with God.

Walnut Park

Attendance at Walnut Park Sunday school Sunday was three hundred and thirty-four. Brother R. Barnhardt is again the choice for superintendent, with Doctor P. B. Griffin associate. Brother Weldon Wood, remembered as the first church worker in the district, is again worshipping here and was elected superintendent of the adult department. Sister E. E. Moorman was sustained as junior superintendent, and Sister Chester Constance elected for primary superintendent. Guy Reynolds has charge of all finances for the Sunday school.

Attendance at sacramental meeting was three hundred and sixty-eight. It was a refreshing, edifying service. Following the partaking of the emblems, Apostle E. J. Gleazer, who chanced to be in the congregation, was asked to give a talk appropriate to this first sacrament of the year. His thoughts centered on the scriptural passage, "Hitherto hath the Lord brought us," thus causing us to look backward to past blessings and forward to where our course may lead if we live worthy of His guidance.

Two baby girls were blessed, Edith Louise, daughter of Brother and Sister David A. Childers; and Laura Eva, daughter of Brother Carl and Sister Laura Mann Bateman.

Among the visiting Saints was Elder R. L. Hirst, from the Central Branch of Chicago.

The six o'clock Religio found one hundred and fifty-seven present, sixty of these in Bishop B. J. Scott's stewardship class, where for about twelve months this one subject has been discussed by the class with increasing interest.

At the half-past seven preaching service, a contralto solo was much enjoyed, sung by Mrs. James Tyrrell, from Bennington Heights. The sermon was by Brother B. J. Scott. His effort was to impress upon his congregation the right attitude toward New Year resolutions, and it seemed all must have learned the lesson that the only New Year resolution worth making is a covenant—a vow—made with the heavenly Father as a partner; not only resolving on a course that will benefit ourselves but one that will tend also to make us partners in seeing God's will done on earth. Brother Scott's earnest endeavor gave his hearers new hope and courage with which to start out on a new year's journey.

Throughout the ministerial conference, evening preaching services, arranged by the First Presidency, will be held at the Walnut Park Church, beginning at eight o'clock. Everyone welcome every evening from January 4 to 14.

Sunday, the 9th, will be young people's rally day, beginning with the eight o'clock morning prayer meeting and continuing at the eleven o'clock service. Plans are made for an interesting session, which will be enjoyable and profitable to the youth and their coworkers.

At the Religio hour on the 9th, a preliminary declamatory contest will be held, with five or six participants, the winner at this time to take part in a later contest with other districts in Zion.

Enoch Hill

The January sacramental service was well attended and enjoyed by many. Earnest prayers and testimonies of hope, strength, and encouragement were voiced, and a gentle spirit of peace and unity prevailed.

Apostle James A. Gillen spoke to a large crowd on Sunday evening. He was given excellent attention, and every Saint was profited and instructed by his earnest discourse. Enoch Hill Saints wish that Brother Gillen could come to speak in their church more frequently.

On the night of December 31 the young people's class of the Religio gave a fine musical program consisting of vocal and instrumental numbers, followed by an interesting play. For some time this band of young workers has been endeavoring to revive the Religio and bring it back to its former standards. In this they have largely succeeded, and their efforts are to be heartily commended, but they need the combined assistance of every other member of the district.

The orchestra has been reorganized and now has twenty-five members, all young people. Officers of the organization are: president, William Worth, jr.; vice president, Mae Chronister; secretary, Beulah Bronson; treasurer, Mildred Hill; leader and director, A. L. Waters. The orchestra is practicing regularly and producing admirable results. They, too, are to be commended and assisted by the branch members.

Englewood

Quite naturally at the close of a year we look back over the past to see what we have accomplished, and peer into the coming year to see what we may do. On January 2 the first sacramental service of the year was a good meeting, well attended and enjoyed by all. We were greatly pleased to see Sister Kelly out again. She said it was only by the goodness of our heavenly Father that she was able to be out at all. We sincerely hope she continues to improve. We are also made glad because of the fact that Robert Morrison is still improving.

Elder J. E. Warne, our pastor for the past three years, was in charge of the sacramental service. His remarks at the beginning of the meeting contained much good advice. He expressed the hope that our new pastor, Elder C. F. Davis, will be able to impress on us the necessity of being more quiet between services. It seems to be characteristic of our congregation to be visiting and chattering, not being careful to quiet down when the time for service has arrived. Brother Warne has been faithful in his work among our group at Englewood. Many times while we were holding services in the little church on Wayne Avenue, he came and built fires and swept and dusted if necessary. Brother Joseph Farrow also has been faithful in working with the Sunday school, and many will miss his happy, jolly ways. Our new superintendent is Brother Lee Moore. He has recently moved here from Quindaro Branch, Kansas City, Kansas. Brother Cunningham, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression takes the place of Brother George Willis. Brother Willis has worked hard to make a success of this department, but attendance has been low, and at times makes it very discouraging.

On Sunday, December 12, Elder T. A. Hougas preached for us at the eleven o'clock hour. Brother C. F. Davis was the evening speaker.

The choir will meet each Thursday evening at a quarter till eight for practice. All those who have helped in any way in the music in the past are requested to be present.

Next Sunday evening the Silver Wing Temple Builders of the Liberty Street District will present the pageant, "Have they lived in vain?" We wish to greet them with a full house. One who saw this pageant said it was worth five dollars.

East Independence

At the last Religio of the old year we dispensed with class study, and Brother Vance Eastwood showed the pictures of the work on the Auditorium, preceding the pictures with an interesting talk concerning them. As we viewed the magnitude of this work, we could not help but feel the need of each one doing all he can to assist in its accomplishment.

On Sunday morning the Sunday school superintendent gave a good talk in regard to the work for the year. It was an incentive for each member of the school to endeavor to do all he can for the upbuilding of this department, the district, and the redemption of Zion. There were three members of this department who were perfect in attendance for the last quarter. They are James Stowell, Robert Smith, jr., and Richard Smith. How many will there be in the next quarter? Let all of us try.

A good spirit prevailed at the sacramental service, and the feeling shown in the testimonies seemed to be a universal desire to move forward. Bishop and Sister Eastwood and son Vance worshiped with us. We hope this service is an index of the spiritual life of the branch for the coming year.

Pastor Carmichael and Elder Hubert Case have been playing the role of Santa Claus for the past week. They went the rounds of the district with toys and fruit, and on Sunday morning had more fruit to distribute to the children.

Apostle R. S. Budd was the evening speaker, and gave us much food for thought. We hope that we shall be able to apply his instructions to our lives. May all our talents, all our wealth, all our power be used for the good of humanity and the glory of God!

Graceland Chats

Christmas Vacation at Graceland

Vacation began December 17 at 4.35. Edith Wood, the student president, felt responsible for helping those who were spending their vacation on "the Hill" to have a good time. A meeting was called immediately after the Friday chapel, of those who were planning to stay. As Edith entered the room, she asked, "Are we going to have a good time during vacation?" Immediately the "gang" answered with a "Yea, Bo," which shook the old Ad Building. Some committees were then appointed to arrange for various events and activities, and quite a lot of pep was generated. That evening the "gang" was down to see their home-going friends off on the 8.30 train. I'm sure the little depot never saw a more jovial crowd. The little group left on the platform yelled the old "Who-Wa-Wa" and sang "Graceland forever" as the train pulled out. Of course, everyone would like to have gone home for their vacation, but that was impossible for folks from Australia, England, Palestine, and many of the States. Back to the hill they went, each with a determination to forget himself and do all possible to make the group happy.

The Family

Sunday night we went to church. The Gracelanders all sat in a group near the front.

After church was dismissed and we had again reached the reception room of Patroness Hall, we settled ourselves on the tables and chairs to enjoy some walnuts. Then it was through some chance remark the family was organized. Surely no one would ask who were mother and dad! Could there be a more fitting couple than Edith and Georgette? Indeed, the titles rested upon their dignified shoulders very gracefully.

The eldest daughter, Floy, found she had her time quite well occupied in keeping the twins, Oliver and Ferne, and little brother Harry out of mischief. But then, she had the assistance of big brother Donald and her younger sisters, Madeline, Mary, and Anna Mae.

The family would not be complete without the beloved aunts and uncle. There were Aunt Charlotte, Aunt Martha, and Uncle Herman. Their presence was certainly appreciated, as they added so much enjoyment and good cheer to the group.

Monday the ladies of the family spent the greater part of the afternoon baking pies, because a wonderful thing had been planned for the evening—a pie supper and

A Hay Ride

The family rode together in one wagon. Surely the wind ceased to blow and the birds stopped their singing as the sweet, musical voices of ma and pa led out in melodious song, in which the voices of the children and Grandma and Grandpa Jones, who had joined us, entered in.

Ss-sh! Here we are at the little country schoolhouse. The auctioneering has started, so there is little use to talk—we could not be heard.

Who had known before that Beezer was so handsome as to merit nomination as the homeliest boy, or that ma was so appreciated as to hear her name sung out as the most popular girl. Although the competition was close, Beezer and ma were both defeated. But what matters that? They had gained for themselves well-deserved fame.

On the way home, again the fowls of the forest and the beasts of the air were made to stand and listen. In fact, the din grew so voluminous that pa had to threaten to send some of the children to the woodshed if more quietness were not observed.

At last the college hill was reached. The family being deposited on the ground with some difficulty, the wagon rumbled out of sight and hearing. We found our way into the dormitory and our rooms.

Did we dream of the hay ride, the pie supper, the good time? Perhaps. But who did not lie awake and dream of the good fellowship, the clean sportsmanship, the peace and harmony among the students who dwell, for a time, on the old college hill.

Christmas Eve at Graceland

Christmas Eve was another of those rollicking good times which the "family" enjoyed together. A number of guests came from down town to the party which had been arranged, swelling the numbers to over fifty. The visitors were greeted at the door by the eldest daughters of the family and, before long, were engaged in a game called musical arms. This game showed that it was "the way they have at Graceland," for they didn't need much teaching. Most of the games consisted of contests under the direction of "Beezer" and Ot. Stevens. Rivalry was keen in these contests, even to the making of the potatoes flat instead of round, so as to make carrying easier. It was strange how each side treated the potatoes the same. In the midst of the jollity, a loud knocking quieted the people, and Santa Claus bounded in. He looked quite a kindly old gent and began to read the numerous letters he had received from Aunt Charlotte, pa and ma, and others. He seemed to fulfill the expectations of each one, for pa received a turkey-red tie, ma received a rolling pin to settle arguments with pa, and the children received trumpets and dolls, etc. Santa was also loaded up with candy, and he left a paper sack full for each good little boy and girl. The "children" gave Santa fifteen rahs; and Santa replied in a hollow voice by giving fifteen rahs for Graceland. After the party broke up, the family gathered together and spent quite a pleasant hour waiting for Christmas morn to come.

Christmas Dinner at Graceland

After waiting eagerly for half an hour, the dining-room door was opened, and immediately everyone took advantage of it. To give the room the proper Christmas atmosphere, it was decorated in red and green, and it was given a ruddy glow by lowering the shades and covering the lights with red crepe paper, and also by lighting large red candles on the tables. The small tables were drawn together so that everyone could sit around one big table. A small decorated Christmas tree was in the center of it, from which streamers passed to the candles at either end. Sprigs of holly were used as place cards.

The dinner was served in good old-fashioned style, and consisted of chicken, cranberry sauce, candied sweet potatoes, and everything else necessary to a complete Christmas dinner. Ice cream was served as dessert.

While the dessert was being served, songs were sung, jokes cracked, and it was found that eleven States and three foreign countries were represented at the table. Afterwards, outside, a picture was taken of the group. ROY DAVEY.

Graceland Students Give Christmas Cheer

Some of the Gracelanders who enjoyed their vacation in Lamoni experienced some of the real spirit of giving when they gave cheer to the old people in the Homes on Christmas Day and the day following.

About a dozen of the students met at Herald Hall Christmas afternoon and sang to "Tex," who was sick there. From there they journeyed on to the Saints' Home and sang for the old people. Floy Roberson gave a reading, which they enjoyed immensely. Then the old folks joined the young folks in singing "Redeemer of Israel" and several more of the old favorites. One of the ladies, who is blind, took much pleasure in showing some of her fancywork to the girls, and they were very much interested in hearing her read from some of her books.

The group left the Home feeling happy that they had made Christmas merrier for the old people, and most of them have firmly resolved to go up to the Home oftener; for to be really appreciated gives joy to everyone. The same program was followed the next day at Liberty Home, and the same kind of a reception was extended to the Gracelanders.

FAE EMMERSON.

Rochester, New York

December 29.—The Saints of Rochester, New York, after a period of several years as a mission, have at last realized their wish and have been organized into a branch. The organization took place November 7 when we held an all-day meeting. We were pleased to have with us Apostle R. S. Budd, who gave us an excellent talk on "Organization," also Brother P. L. Weegar and family, of Buffalo, and Brother and Sister Christy, representing the district presidency and missionary arm of the church.

We have two elders, Brothers Shea and Bliss, and one priest, Brother Ibbotson being ordained to that office at this time. We are hoping that in the near future a suitable place of worship will be found where we can hold a series of meetings and present this message of salvation to the people of this city.

It would seem that the Lord would have a people in these parts where the ensign of latter-day work was first lifted up, but although we are only about twenty miles from Palmyra there is an astonishing lack of knowledge with regard to our church and its teaching here.

The first marriage to be recorded in our branch took place December 23 when Sister Mirian Green, of Rochester, and Mr. Stanley Sexton, of Mount Bridges, Ontario, were married by Brother Ibbotson. Later in the evening a Christmas Tree and social evening were had, everyone receiving a remembrance for this Christmas season.

Sunday school is being held at the home of Brother William Ibbotson, 701 Park Avenue, each Sunday at half past two, and is followed by preaching service.

We are also holding midweek prayer services at the different homes, and feel that they are very beneficial to all of us.

We would be pleased to welcome any Saints coming to, or passing through Rochester, and trust we may be faithful to the work intrusted to us.

Orion, Michigan

December 31.—Tonight at midnight the year 1926 will pass into history, and a new year will be ushered in with pages white and fair upon which we must write our destiny. As I review the past year in regard to the Orion Branch, I can see where we have made progress in many ways.

Our sermons have been uplifting and helpful, and the lectures on stewardship given by our pastor, John L. Hall, on Sunday morning have helped us to a better understanding of that phase of God's work.

Our prayer services have been very spiritual, and the Spirit of the Master has been with us in our sacramental services. The Sunday school and Religio have been well attended and enjoyed by all. The Department of Women also has been in a flourishing condition throughout the year.

At our annual business meeting the following officers were elected: Branch president, John L. Hall; branch secretary, Julia Hammond; treasurer, Emma Schaar; chorister, Mona Schaar; librarian, Helen Hall; Sunday school superintendent, Julia Hammond; assistant superintendent, Albert Melendorf; secretary, Ardyce Schaar; superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Frank Davis; assistant superintendent, Arthur Grange; secretary, Olga Davis; superintendent of the Department of Women, Mae Forbes; publicity agent, John L. Hall.

Our aim for the coming year is to make our branch as nearly one hundred per cent tithing payers as possible, so we are urging each member to file an inventory. We expect to take up the teachers' training course on Sunday mornings and a study of stewardships in the Department of Women under the leadership of Sister Arthur Koehler, wife of our district missionary. We also expect Brother Koehler here to hold a series of meetings in the near future.

Our Christmas program under the supervision of our efficient chorister, Miss Mona Schaar, was a success from start to finish, and the best program ever given in our chapel. We have some fine musical talent in our branch, and hope to see our young people occupying the choir seats. The musical numbers rendered by Misses Verna Harriett, Ardyce Schaar, and Anice Gonyon last Sunday evening were beautiful and appreciated by all. We trust they will use the talent God has given them to his honor and glory.

December 24.—The Saints held a Christmas program at the church this evening, and the building was packed to its limit. The exercises were opened by a song, "Silent night," by the congregation. Brother William Candage offered prayer, and then there was a twenty-minute demonstration of Sabbath school work under the direction of Sister Elizabeth Barton. This was followed by a twenty-minute demonstration of Sunday school work in the junior church department in which there was a clever little monologue worked in, with the scene in the stable in Bethlehem. The characters involved in this cherished bit of sacred history were also shown. The Department of Women put on a demonstration, as did the Department of Recreation and Expression. Then Santa Claus arrived by way of the handsomely decorated old-fashioned fireplace in the church, and distributed presents to the children. The closing hymn was "Joy to the world," and Brother Archie Beggs offered the benediction.

The branch president is planning a great deal of work for the branch this winter, and there will be special exercises at each holiday in order to put across the gospel plan.

The Saints hope that God's people in every branch are desirous of working in every way possible to advertise the gospel. We pray for the Saints everywhere. Our Sunday school attendance last Sunday was the largest for the year. The work is progressing here. We pray 1927 may bring happiness and prosperity to the chosen people. May God bless us in our aim to redeem Zion.

CANCER—CANCER—CANCER

I want to warn all Saints and friends not to use PORK or any of its byproducts for this reason: In 30 years of research, we find that nearly every case of Cancer can be traced to this diseased, unclean and unwholesome meat. Many other ailments such as Boils, Tumors, Growths, Diseased Skin, Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Weak Eyes, etc., are caused by the flesh of the scavenger. Carefully and prayerfully read Deuteronomy 14:8. Seldom do we find Cancer among the Orthodox Jew and never where no meat is used. Only 5% of Cancer patients can be cured by a strict plant-life cure. Not one by surgery in last 100 years. Heed the admonition in Word of Wisdom, if you must have hog see that he is fed on rye—not diseased garbage and dead animals.

Conference Notices

Northern California District, at Sacramento, California, February 19 and 20, 1927. The business session will convene at 10 a. m. Saturday, at which time a district president should be elected to serve until the conference of July, 1927, and delegates to the General Conference should also be elected. Branch secretaries, please have your credentials reports, which should include a statement of your present membership, sent to the district secretary as soon as practicable. Cecil Hawley, district secretary, 1955 Napa Avenue, Berkeley, California.

The Southern California district conference will convene in Los Angeles, Central Church, corner of Thirty-ninth and Grand Avenue, at 10 a. m., February 19, continuing over the 20th. There will be a prayer service at 9 a. m., February 19, before the convening of the conference; also a banquet in the dining room of the church Friday evening at eight. All the priesthood of the district are invited. This will be a real get together priesthood meeting. Apostles James A. Gillen and Myron A. McConley and others of the general church officials are expected to be with us. This is a mass conference. Come and enjoy it. N. T. Chapman, district president.

Convention and Conference Notices

The young people's convention and semiannual conference of the Central Oklahoma District will convene at Tulsa, Oklahoma, Tenth and Rockford Streets, February 11, 12, and 13, 1927. Theme of the convention will be "Definite action." Conference will convene at 2 p. m. on the 12th, and at this time delegates to General Conference will be elected. We hope to have a member of the Presidency or Bishopric with us, but if not, suitable speakers will be provided for the edification of all. The young people of the district, as well as those of adjoining territory, are especially invited, but the older will be just as welcome. The first service will be preaching at eight o'clock in the evening of the 11th. F. Ed Dillon, district president, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, 300 1/2 East Grand.

Marriages

PAUL-PETERSON.—A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Brother and Sister N. J. Peterson, of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, on Wednesday, December 22, at three o'clock when Sister Dora Paul, of Prince Albert, a recent graduate of Saint Paul's Hospital, Saskatoon, and Brother Ray Peterson, of Saskatoon, were united in marriage by Brother W. H. Brant, presiding priest of the Saskatoon Branch. The bride was attended by Sister Ruth Peterson, sister of the groom, and Brother Paul Schmidt acted as best man. Sister Laurel Whiting and Sister Emma Saul sang the hymn, "Where love leads the way." A bountiful repast was served. The Saints and friends of this young couple wish them a long, peaceful, and happy journey through life.

Conference Minutes

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.—District conference convened at Marion, Illinois, December 4 and 5, in charge of District President R. L. Fulk, assisted by E. L. Ulrich, and H. M. Curtis. After the usual form of opening and reading of the minutes ministerial reports were given by R. L. Fulk, F. L. Sawley, Miles W. Brown, Johnny L. Simmons, Hallick Milner, W. M. Clements, Lindolph Casey, L. C. Moore, H. M. Curtis, Ernest Roberson, J. M. Henson, F. M. Flemmens, O. C. Henson. Statistical reports came from the following branches: Dry Fork, Casey, Centralia, Mount Vernon, Brush Creek, Skillet Fork, and Marion. The report of the bishop's agent was read, and a motion that the bishop's agent act as treasurer for each department was approved. District officers elected are: District president, R. L. Fulk; counselors, J. M. Henson and L. C. Moore; secretary, Mrs. E. S. Choate; chorister, Ruth Holman. It was moved, seconded, and approved that the presidents of the departments act as the budget committee. F. L. Sawley was reelected Sunday school superintendent; assistant superintendent, I. T. Webb; secretary, Essie Hall; president of the Department of Women, Bessie Burgess. In the afternoon Apostle Clyde F. Ellis was placed in charge. The conference approved the recommendation of the ordinations of Lindolph Casey to the office of elder; I. T. Webb, to the office of priest; E. S. Choate, deacon. Delegates for General Conference elected were: H. M. Curtis, L. C. Moore, Sister W. C. Choate, Bessie Burgess, I. T. Webb, E. S. Choate, Myrtle Choate, R. L. Fulk, J. M. Henson, Arthur Henson, Grace Henson, and F. L. Sawley. Sacramental service was held on Sunday. There was one baptism, and a baby was blessed. Short talks were given by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis and E. L. Ulrich. An invitation was extended to hold the June conference at Mount Vernon, Illinois. The district was well represented, and everyone enjoyed the conference.

We wish to extend to all our best wishes for a prosperous and very happy New Year.

The Stewardship of Priesthood

I. AN AUTHORITATIVE PRIESTHOOD

And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the slight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive, but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ.—Ephesians 4: 11-15.

In the stewardship of priesthood there must be at least three factors, viz, authority, responsibility, and opportunity. It may not be easy or even possible to separate them. They are quite closely intertwined: "A threefold cord is not easily broken." I hardly know how to consider one without the others. Certainly no man could exercise authority in the priesthood and escape responsibility; and it would be most unfair to ask a man in any position to assume responsibility and deny him authority. But I shall perhaps have to talk about these factors one at a time, so I shall take up first the question of authority.

Brethren, remember this, we have an authoritative religion. Some years ago Doctor Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, said, "Whatever the religion of the future may be, it will not be a religion of authority." He meant by that, I presume, that it will not be a religion that in any sense came to men from above, but one that shall rise up out of the human soul, out of its experiences, and meet the approval of the human conscience—the "evolution of religion" from within man, supported by the voice and the conscience of the people.

Now that would be perfectly all right if in the beginning we came by accident and have developed without guidance. That would be a good enough religion for me if I believe that, because I would not have use for any religion at all. But we are committed to the initial postulate of scripture: "In the beginning God created." To the created being, he revealed his religion. Our religion most certainly did come down from above. It may and it truly does have approval of our conscience and is justified by our experiences; but it came not from man; neither was it taught us by man.

We have an authoritative doctrine. Jesus said when he was here as a man, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."—John 7: 16, 17.

We have an authoritative organization. "God set in the church" apostles, prophets, teachers, and so on, as stated in 1 Corinthians 12: 28. And as stated also in the very splendid introduction to section 17 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants:

The rise of the church of Christ in these last days, being one thousand eight hundred and thirty years since the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in the flesh, it being regularly organized and established agreeably to the laws of our country, by the will and commandments of God.

The doctrines, these ordinances, this organization, all are to be administered by an authoritative priesthood. Christ himself came with authority. The people noticed that he "spake as one having authority." And we are told:

So also Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, today have I begotten thee. As he saith also in another place, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec.—Hebrews 5: 5, 6.

If Jesus came with authority as a high priest, it is equally true that he said to his disciples, "As my Father hath sent me into the world, so send I you." One of his first acts in organizing his church, as chief presiding officer of that church, was to call and set aside and ordain twelve apostles. We have that recorded in Matthew (10: 1-4), and Mark gives us to distinctly understand they were not simply twelve men, twelve brethren in the fellowship of brotherhood alone, but twelve ordained men (Mark 3: 14), and to them Jesus said: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain."—John 15:16. They were called, chosen, ordained, and sent forth by the Lord—an authoritative ministry. Others were similarly called—elders, bishops, seventies, evangelists, etc.

Some people have felt that we were attempting to establish in Graceland College or somewhere else a school that would presume to "make" ministers for God. Let me tell you such a thought was never in the mind of the church. We teach and trust that we ever shall teach, that no man shall be ordained until he is definitely called, and the testimony comes through some proper channel that it is God's will that he should be ordained. But then it may not be out of place in Graceland or elsewhere to help the men whom God has called to prepare themselves for their ministry: not making ministers for God, but helping those called to learn their duty and go out and do it.

In these last days the priesthood was again restored and in a manner that marks us a peculiar people, unique from all other peoples, and sustains me in the statement that we have an authoritative priesthood.

Joseph Smith says concerning the restoration of the priesthood that they went out into the woods in May, 1829, and prayed, and he says:

While we were thus employed, praying, and calling upon the Lord, a messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands upon us, he ordained us, saying unto us, "Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion, for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness." He said this Aaronic priesthood had not the power of laying on of hands, for the gift of the Holy Ghost, but that this should be conferred on us hereafter; and he commanded us to go and be baptized, and gave us directions that I should baptize Oliver Cowdery, and afterwards that he should baptize me. Accordingly we went and were baptized. I baptized him first, and afterwards he baptized me, after which I laid my hands upon his head and ordained him to the Aaronic priesthood, and afterwards he laid his hands on me and ordained me to the same priesthood, for so we were commanded. The messenger who visited us on this occasion, and conferred this priesthood upon us, said that his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist, in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James, and John, who held the keys of the priesthood of Melchisedec, which priesthood he said should in due time be conferred on us—and that I should be called the first elder, and he the second. It was on the fifteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, that we were baptized and ordained under the hand of the messenger. Immediately upon our coming up out of the water, after we had been baptized, we experienced great and glorious blessings from our heavenly Father.—Church History, vol. 1, pp. 35, 36.

Oliver Cowdery has an account of the same marvelous incident in which he says:

The Lord, who is rich in mercy, and ever willing to answer the consistent prayer of the humble, after we had called upon him in a fervent manner, aside from the abodes of men, condescended to manifest to us his will. On a sudden, as from the midst of eternity, the voice of the Redeemer spake peace to us, while the veil was parted and the angel of God came down clothed with glory, and delivered the anxiously looked for message, and the keys of the gospel of repentance; What joy! what wonder! what amazement! While the world was racked and distracted—while millions were groping as the blind for the wall, and while all men were resting upon uncertainty, as a general mass, our eyes beheld—our ears heard. As in the "blaze of day"; yes, more—above the glitter of the May sunbeam, which then shed its brilliancy over the face of nature! Then his voice, though mild, pierced to the center, and his words, "I am thy fellow servant," dispelled every fear. We listened—we gazed—we admired! 'Twas the voice of the angel from glory—'twas a message from the Most High! and as we heard we rejoiced, while his love enkindled upon our souls, and we were rapt in the vision of the Almighty! Where was room for doubt? Nowhere: uncertainty had fled, doubt had sunk, no more to rise, while fiction and deception had fled forever! But, dear brother, think, further think for a moment, what joy filled our hearts and with what surprise we must have bowed, (for who would not have bowed the knee for such a blessing?) when we received under his hand the holy priesthood, as he said, "Upon you my fellow-servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer this priesthood and this authority, which shall remain upon earth, that the sons of Levi may yet offer an offering unto the Lord in righteousness!"—Church History, vol. 1, pp. 37, 38.

This priesthood, as restored, both Melchisedec and Aaronic, has come down to us; and the late President Joseph Smith said concerning the authority of that priesthood:

The priesthood so conferred was endowed with all the rights, privileges, and authority to bring forth the church of Christ, conduct its expansion and watch over its development and welfare until the coming of Christ should bring its work to a triumphant and glorious consummation.—SAINTS' HERALD, May 21, 1902.

The priesthood then has authority under divine direction to bring forth the church, to watch over its expansion and development and conduct its affairs until Christ himself shall come; and in so doing to preach the gospel, and officiate in all the ordinances.

Jesus said, "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."—Matthew 16:19.

We used to hear a great deal about keys. We do not hear so much about them now, but keys as a symbol of authority have by no means lost their significance. When as representatives of God the priesthood officiate in the sacred ordinances, that which they do has validity on high as well as on earth. Here, we will say, is a man who has been a sinner. He is converted by the preaching of the gospel, the power of God unto salvation. He wishes to lay aside his old life with all its evil habits and sins. The minister takes him into the waters of baptism, and he is immersed as a symbol that his spirit is cleansed and his sins washed away. The minister officiates in that ordinance, and that man comes up out of the water a free man—free indeed. "Whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." And at the day when that man stands at the eternal judgment bar, if he abides in that freedom, he shall yet be a free man. And when within the church one falls into iniquity and it becomes necessary for the priesthood of the church to invoke forces that through the tribunals and under the laws of the church shall bind him and cast him out, he is not bound alone on earth, but also in heaven. It is literally true that you have the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and what you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven, and what you bind on earth shall be bound in heaven.

It is yours to declare the will of God, to speak forth his word to the children of men, to state and expound his law:

"What I the Lord have spoken I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice, or by the voice of my servants, it is the same."—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 8.

Graceland Work Onward Despite the Fire

Last week we published news of the burning of Patroness Hall at Graceland College, news which will be received sorrowfully by all alumni and friends of Graceland, and they are legion. This sudden passing of a landmark is likely to create a strong desire in the heart of every alumnus of the college to make generous contribution toward replacing the hall. As an alumnus, I find myself wishing I could say to the authorities: "Never mind, here's enough to build a finer and larger and better appointed hall." But that wish, like many others concerning "the cause," must for the present remain unfulfilled for the same reason David Crockett didn't buy the canoe oar. Some friends may respond to the impulse to contribute. But no drive will be put on, for the church and college authorities, after due consultation, have decided it would be unwise and inopportune.

At the suggestion of the Presidency, the college trustees met in the office of the First Presidency, at Independence, the 5th of January, and discussed the situation with the Presidency and Church Architect, Presiding Bishopric, and president of Graceland, and steps were decided upon to meet the emergency. The church authorities offered to the college the privilege of using the building recently used as a Children's Home, how to be used being left to the judgment of the college authorities. It was decided that eventually, of course, a new dormitory should be erected; but this is subject to authorization of General Conference and officers. So for the present, the emergency has been met by using the basement of Zimmermann Hall for dining purposes, while the girls who were domiciled in Patroness Hall have moved into Marietta and Briggs Hall, the boys gallantly vacating Marietta Hall for this purpose, going to Herald Hall and to temporary quarters. Some of the girls will remain in homes thrown open to them by Lamoni citizens.

Insurance money which will be collected (a small amount) will be used toward the new building, it being estimated that this amount will about construct the basement, which can be used for dining room and thus permit Zimmermann Hall to be used only for the purposes for which it was designed. But no work will be done on the basement, even with the money in hand, till General Conference has authorized the erection of the new dormitory. It is quite likely that conference will approve it.

Besides the property loss to the college and thus the church, there were personal effects lost to an amount approximating two thousand dollars. In some instances these losses fell so heavily as to mean inability to continue in school; but the Patroness Society, one of Graceland's best-organized friends, came promptly to the aid of the girls who were in dire need, supplying clothing and bedding, etc., and arranging to do more. Besides this, many friends of Graceland have indicated a determination to aid in making good the losses sustained by the girls, and it is not at all unlikely that a few score of such friends will organize among themselves a drive with this end in view.

In the meantime, the splendid "Graceland spirit" has shown itself, the students, with one or two exceptions, have cheerfully adapted themselves to the conditions changed by the calamity, the school authorities have met the emergency with promptitude, and the school work moves on. It is just what we would have expected of our students and our faculty. Courage, students and faculty, and onward, for your friends are with you, and behind you.

F. M. S.

We exaggerate misfortune and happiness alike. We are never either so wretched or so happy as we say we are.—Balzac.

Unity, and "Our Task"

In another column we issue an article by Bishop A. Carmichael under the caption, "Our task," which we commend to the attention of the men of the ministry. Bishop Carmichael feels keenly the heavy official responsibility which rests upon him, and senses the necessity of united effort if we are to accomplish the purposes of the church. We all do. And we are pleased to see the multiplying evidences that unity of purpose and endeavor is spreading through the ministers of the church; for this holds promise of the endowment which has been foretold.

Next General Conference to Be Held in the Auditorium Basement

Many times the question has been asked of me, Will the next General Conference meet in the Auditorium? I have been unable to answer because of certain factors. It became apparent some time ago, in fact was quite well known from the time work began on the building, that the basement would not be finished by next April, so it was a question of how much temporary work might be necessary in order to have the auditorium in the basement in condition to be used with safety and comfort.

One of the advantages would be the accommodation of a larger number than the Stone Church will seat; and as the question of getting seats is an important one to all conference visitors, the attendance at next conference would to considerable extent be influenced by decision of where to hold the conference. With the purpose, therefore, of having early announcement of conference meeting place, I some weeks ago, asked the architect and the one in charge of construction to estimate the cost of extra or temporary work. With this in hand, I called a conference of several of the officers, after already having personally discussed the question with others. After carefully considering the various factors, it was unanimously decided that the extra cost would be justified. This will be less than was the cost of holding in a tent in previous years.

So the decision was reached to hold the next conference in the basement of the Auditorium. It is estimated that some seventeen hundred and fifty persons can be seated there, with perhaps one hundred and fifty or two hundred on the rostrum. So that with the chairs that can be placed around the outside, perhaps three thousand or even more can be seated where they can see and hear (by the aid of loud speakers) what is going on. So it will be seen that fifteen hundred or two thousand visitors, besides delegates and ex officio members, can be seated. At the Stone Church perhaps less than one fourth this number could be accommodated. This will be encouragement, perhaps, for many to visit the conference who would not attempt it if the Stone Church were to be used, as formerly.

The accommodations will not, of course, be what they will when the basement is finished, but at that they will likely be much better than those of a tent; but I am sure the attending Saints will rejoice to meet in the Auditorium, looking forward with keener pleasure to the time when the whole building will be ready for occupancy.

City Planning

In another column we reproduce an article from the Engineering News-Record on the question of zoning laws. I cannot but feel this is of practical interest to us, in view of the beautification and utilitarian improvement of the committee we are likely to be interested in in the development of our Zionite ideals. We commend the article to the careful reading of our students.

Are Hospitals Well Managed?

Recently, I used in an editorial a statement from the editor of the Scientific American on "Charity on a businesslike basis," in which Scientific American charged modern hospitals with being inefficiently managed from a business standpoint.

The hospital of today is quite a different one from that of olden times. It is more than a hotel for sleeping those who are sick. With additional conveniences in the room, increased attention to patients, improved dietetics, laboratory and X-ray services, the equipment of hospitals today is much more expensive than that of a few years ago, while prices of rooms are not much higher.

At the time I wrote the editorial comments on those of the editor of the Scientific American, I addressed a letter to the editor of Modern Hospital and asked him if the position of the Scientific American editor was sound. In reply, Mr. McNamara wrote as follows:

I have looked over the editorial on page 12 of the January Scientific American, and I assure you that my observations do not check with those of the writer of this paragraph.

This is an erroneous quotation from a speech delivered last September. At that time the newspapers gave it wide circulation, and I am surprised that the Scientific American has not gone more thoroughly into the subject, but has taken the newspaper report as true.

Generally speaking, hospitals are exceptionally well managed; and it is seldom that we find one where mismanagement is directly the cause of high costs. Compared with other industries, it is safe to say that hospitals are better managed and that there is less waste. The reason that costs

Our Task

BY BISHOP ALBERT CARMICHAEL

The passing of the years brings no change in the principles to be used in the constructive work of Zion's redemption. There always have been and will continue to be two great fields of activity for us to occupy until the work of the Lord is accomplished. These two fields of endeavor are the missionary and the gathering.

Our church is and always will be a missionary one. Our first great achievement must be to preach the gospel theoretically, to bring souls to Christ, but we should not forget that we must feed these sheep. They must be gathered into a place of safety—Zion.

Logically, then, the gathering follows the missionary activity. The activities of the church of Christ will always be found under one of these two heads. There can be no gathering until there are people to gather. Therefore, the need of the missionary arm of our church first, and then the need of solving Zion's problems, or what today are known as our social problems. Principles are eternal; only methods change. We may approach the solution of the principles of our missionary and Zion's tasks by changing our methods, but we can not change the underlying principles.

These two tasks are ours. We can not release ourselves from the responsibilities thereto attached. We may shirk these responsibilities, but for our actions we must answer before the bar of Jehovah.

The passing of time awakens us to the necessity of our doing the things necessary to be done that Zion may be. Zion can not be, except in the way God has decreed. It remains, then, for the servants of God, his holy priesthood, to know the way God intends that his work may come to pass. If not, they can not teach, for they are not qualified to teach.

Here and there individuals are being endowed with the Spirit so essential to qualify for this work. This is as it should be, but we are looking for and eagerly expecting that there will come to our church a great endowment. No individual representative of God's church has a right to expect his endowment unless he, both in the spirit and letter, fully complies with the law. So, of the group endowment, we can not expect the Master to recognize us until we have placed ourselves fully in accord with God's requirements. We long to see the day come when the priesthood will find favor with God, so much so that they will not only have received their individual endowment but also their group endowment. This is our task, men of the church of the living God—to so work that the power of heaven may come to us, for without it we can not accomplish our work.

And how may we expect to receive this blessing? Only by doing the things that God has commanded us. We of the priesthood must first put ourselves right with the law. We can not go to the members of the church and speak "with assurance," with authority from God—speak in a way that will bring conviction to the minds of the people—unless we are in accord with God, for "In vain do ye call me Lord, Lord, and do not the things I command you."

The times call for action—wise action—and the great army of Saints are not only willing but anxious to do their part. This army of believers can be gathered successfully only as led by the Spirit of the Christ. Our task, then, demands of us that we live close to God—seek him earnestly for divine guidance, to be motivated by the spirit of intelligence, for Zion with all its intensely complex and intricate problems can be established only by an intelligent effort. As a group of men whose duty it is to lead the people, we must be second to none. Our time should not be spent in frivolity or anything of such like. The responsibilities of eternity rest upon us. We must always be mindful of who and what we are.

We greet you and every member of the church, praying that God who guides the destinies of all men may be your constant companion during the year before us. Our task demands this of us. May we so live to be worthy of His guidance.

Always pay; for, first or last, you must pay your entire debt. Persons and events may stand for a time between you and justice, but it is only a postponement. You must pay at last your own debt. . . . He is great who confers the most benefits. He is base—and that is the one base thing in the universe—to receive favors and render none. In the order of nature we can not render benefits to those from whom we receive them, or only seldom. But the benefit we receive must be rendered again, line for line, deed for deed, cent for cent, to somebody. Beware of too much good staying in your hand. . . . Pay it away quickly in some sort.—Emerson.

We must gather together the fragments of truth and make them into a whole in our lives, a factor in the redemption of Zion.—Bishop Albert Carmichael.

Questions and Answers

ANSWERS BY THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

Question: Should children be encouraged to make inventories and pay tithes before they come into the church? If so, at about what age?

Answer: Children should be encouraged to make inventories at a very early age, just as soon as they can begin to sense the responsibility of doing so. We have had parents make their little children gifts and then bring them into the office and help them make out their inventory and pay a tithe on the gift. Doing this forms a habit for good in a child's life.

Question: In making out first tithing report, should clothing be listed as personal effect? And in making out annual tithing report, should clothing be listed in necessary living expenses?

Answer: In making out the first tithing report or financial report, the clothing should be listed. In subsequent reports, the clothing should not be listed unless it has increased in value. To illustrate:

Suppose in your first inventory you list your clothing at $100. The next year your clothing is the same, you do not list it. The third year your clothing is the same, you do not list it. But suppose the fourth year you purchase enough clothing to make it $200 instead of $100. You should then list the $100 extra, and tithe it.

Question: I understand that when inventories are filed, the tithing due should be paid, or arrangements be made to pay. Am I right? If so, what am I to understand by arrangements? Are we to take notes from those who are not in a position to pay when their inventory is filed?

Answer: When a financial statement is filed and it shows a tithe due, there should be some arrangements made to pay the tithe. This is a debt we owe the Lord, and we are just as much obligated to see that the Lord's debt is paid as that we owe any man. Just what arrangements may be made for paying the debt would depend on the circumstances of the one making out the financial statement. They may wish to make monthly payments or make payments whenever convenient; or they may wish to give their note. The advantage of the note is this: that in the case of the death of the one giving the note before it is paid, this note would be paid out of the estate, and thus the Lord would get his part. If a note is given, the one giving the same should be made to understand that it is a solemn obligation and should be paid, though the church might never try to enforce legally the payment of the same while the giver of the note is alive. The above statement relative to the payment of the tithe is also true of the payment of the surplus.

Question: What is the difference between the person who pays his tithing and all his surplus annually and the individual whom you call a steward? Are we not all stewards if we keep the law by paying all the tithing (surplus)? Is it not a fact that all are stewards, either just or unjust?

Answer: Yes; all are stewards, either just or unjust. We cannot shift our responsibility as a steward. It makes no difference whether we are members of the church or not. Every member of the human family is a steward and must answer sometime and some place for this stewardship. There is a difference though between those who understand the stewardship law and those who do not. Those who understand it and fail to comply cannot expect to receive the mercy of those who are ignorant of this responsibility. As we understand it, the man making out his financial statement and paying his tithe and surplus, if any, and continuing to do this annually is a steward in deed. Note the words in deed; not in theory but in deed. In other words, he is not a passive steward but an active steward.

As to the formal setting apart of a steward, we believe the time is not far distant when this will be done. It has already been agreed to as correct by the Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, Presiding Bishopric, by the Standing High Council, and by the three Quorums of Seventies. This ceremony will simply be the blessing of the steward to his work, or he will be set apart by the laying on of hands to the same. It will confer no ordination to priesthood. The fact that the steward has not been set apart should not deter him from going ahead with his duty at the present time, filing his inventory and complying with the rest of the law.

Question: If the husband objects to the wife making an inventory and paying the tithe, what should the wife do?

Answer: The church has long taught that no interpretation of the law shall be given that will cause any difficulty between husband and wife. If the wife is a member of the church and her husband objects to her filing a statement, the responsibility before God will rest with him and not with her. In community property, that is, where they both own it conjointly, if the husband is willing his wife should make out a statement showing her half of the property and paying a tithe on the same, it would be well for her to do so. If a wife has property of her own that does not belong to the husband, she is entitled to make out a statement and pay tithing on the same.

Education as Religion

BY ELDER W. W. HIELD

"Religion, if it be true, is central truth; and all knowledge which is not gathered round it, quickened and illuminated by it, is hardly worthy the name."

This pronouncement of the essence of religion and its relation to true knowledge, by Channing, may start our thought to a consideration of the unity of education and religion. This attitude that finds science and religion both having the more abundant life as their objective is not new, but should be more generally accepted.

Arnold refers to religion as "that voice of the deepest human experience." This does not in any sense shut God out. George Herbert Betts says: "The Christian religion assumes a beneficent supernatural power that rests over or works in men's lives, acting as a stimulus, urge, or inspiration, to increasingly higher planes of response—that is, to higher levels of ideals and action." This is, in the language of an educator, the same as saying that the Spirit of God has operated in the lives of men to bring them "on unto perfection." The bulk of religious writings and curriculum materials are the recorded experiences of the lives thus influenced. Then religion has for its chief objective the bringing of lives into accord with this spiritualized or inspired experience of the men of God who have lived and learned "here a little and there a little, line upon line and precept upon precept."

One of the oldest definitions of education is that of Plato: "Education is that constraining and directing of youth toward that right reason, which the law affirms and the best of our elders have agreed to be truly right." This definition, of course, refers to the more conscious or formal education usually referred to when speaking of that education received in organized schools. We should not forget, however, as Carlyle puts it, that our "school hours are all the days and nights of our existence," and that observation more than books, experience more than persons, are our prime educators.

Religion and education alike have definite objectives or aims. Achievement in either field can be made only by consistent and concerted effort to realize these aims. Are these aims similar for education and religion? Let us compare a list of the aims:

Educational Aims

Tools of knowledge
Health
Vocational Avocational
Social Civic

Worthy home membership
Ethical character

Religious Aims

Tools of knowledge
Health
Stewardship
Avocational (recreation and expression)
Brotherhood
Membership
Family relationship
Ethical character

The list of educational aims here given is that which has been much emphasized of recent years in American educational teaching. The aims of religion here set out, while perhaps not all inclusive, do, I believe, cover most of the functions and goals which religion hopes to achieve.

The first two in both lists are identical and quite universally accepted as essential. The tools of knowledge, the common branches, are necessary to anything like a satisfying type of life. A man must first be a healthy animal before he can be his best in any sphere of action. The third in the lists is vocational and stewardship. Educators hold that every man should be taught a means of making a living. Religion in its stewardship concept indorses the vocational aim and qualifies it by demanding that the vocational activity shall be such as will contribute to the general welfare, and also that the idler shall not eat the bread of the toiler. The last clause does not of course exclude true charity.

The social aim on the educational list recognizes that man is a gregarious animal and that he must learn to live harmoniously with his fellows. Brotherhood carries this aim a bit higher, to a point where man is not only willing to live and let live, but has adopted the realization that each individual finds his greatest possibilities only as the group as a whole is benefited.

The social and civic aims are not altogether distinct and must be considered together. Under the civic aim, education endeavors to bring the individual to a loyalty to and articulation in the civil government. The religious aim of membership is somewhat caught up in brotherhood and carries also the implication that I am my brother's keeper; that in membership under a common Father we have a kinship and responsibility to and for all of his children. Even as the father sacrifices for his children as his only compensation that they in turn may do well by those who come after them, so the motive of service to mankind is a part of the aim of membership in the body of Christ.

Worthy home membership as an educational aim recognizes the home as the fundamental foundation unit of society. Though the home is not what it was a few generations ago, its functions must be carried on. The religious aim of family relationships has throughout the Christian era been largely responsible for the adoption and adherence to these factors which have made the family such a powerful factor in the well-being of the Christian peoples. Monogamic marriage, virtue, obedience to parents, filial and parental love, have all come largely through religious channels and influence. Today the church finds the need for its emphasis upon these greatly increased, due to the changes in occupational, educational, and avocational activities, which have tended to separate the members of the family for so large a proportion of their time.

Ethical character as an aim of education is an avowal of the necessity for moral habits common to the group if they are to dwell together in peace. As a religious aim, ethical character is the same, but with its essentials authorized and confirmed by a spiritual sanction that gives a greater assurance and motive for the establishment of such habits.

With all factors considered, it is difficult to conclude anything but that education and religion are inseparable allies. Religion being central, truth as revealed to man by the Creator surely must find the best and most expeditious ways of reaching and transforming the thought and actions of man. This process is the essence of the highest form of education.

Development of the Divine Character in Man

BY JOHN ZIMMERMANN, JR.

Being the digest of a sermon preached in 1923, at Independence, Missouri . . .

And before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats: And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his angels: For I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal.—Matthew 25: 32-47.

I want to talk to you upon the subject of the development of the divine character in man. Jesus said, "Ye must be born again," and, "Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom." Unless there comes into our lives a transformation of character, a remolding of our thoughts and actions according to the divine pattern, we can not hope to see the face of God. We have talked here a great deal about Zion and its establishment in these latter days.

Now it so happens that the great Teacher gave his disciples an account of the last day, when to those on his right hand he would say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world": and he then goes on to state the issues upon which man shall be judged and our lives approved or condemned. And those grounds for approval or condemnation are certainly worthy of consideration. They should give us a very definite idea of the nature of the grounds on which the judgment will be made. When we come to examine them, we find them very significant in view of what they contain. What is the character of this judgment? What are the determining factors in the approbation or rejection of the judged. To the righteous he will say: "I was hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." And the wicked are condemned because they have not performed these things.

The context shows that the virtue of the righteous does not consist in the rendering of these specific services to the judge himself. The construction is indeed very liberal. Evidently such acts of kindness and mercy to even the least of his brethren is what is covered in the judgment. The golden rule covers it all. This is the Law and the Prophets.

The approval is to be given to a certain kind of a character, which is defined as having done something, and the condemnation is to fall upon those who have come short of filling these rather simple requirements. How does it happen that the world has wandered so far from such standards of righteousness? Why is it that the standard for examination in this world is so different in character from what is indicated by the Great Teacher?

There never has been a time when the business world as a whole believed that business could be carried on with success by following the golden rule. It is probably true that many men who serve as managers in our shops and factories would be unable to succeed with such a policy. And yet it is certainly true that many of our labor troubles might be averted if superintendents better understood human nature. It is, however, probably too much to expect that they shall all be philosophers. And yet there are managers working hundreds of men, whose men never strike, and the secret is simply this: without making any formal announcement of such a policy, they run their shops on the golden rule.

I was reading the other day of a manager who had spent a considerable sum of his company's money in paying the wages and surgical attendance of a poor boy—the only support of a widowed mother—while he recovered from an injury. There was no obligation to do this; the injury had been received in rough play during the noon hour. But he had found the boy making a brave effort to work when he should have been in a surgeon's hands. The boy pleaded to be allowed to continue his work because of the needs of his mother, but the manager sent him home, engaged a surgeon to care for him, told him his wages would continue, and the company pay the bills. He explained that he preferred to treat his men in this way because it gave him pleasure to do so, and he had convinced his company that he could make it pay. He made each man feel that he was a friend, and consequently they gave him hearty and enthusiastic service. This same man, during a strike in which his men did not take part, is quoted as having said: "I don't want any soldiers; my men will defend our works.

To be capable of such things requires qualities that all men do not possess. I do not think this man was following this policy merely because he thought it his duty to do so, nor do I think he was seeking profits in this world or rewards in the future world. He was doing it in response to his own personal instincts. It was a kind of action which was characteristic of him as a man. This man was a real captain of industry.

In estimating the value of such men to society, it must be admitted that one who does right because he knows it is right, is capable of much greater things than one who is continually tempted to do wrong, and who succeeds in resisting the temptation.

A musician who for the first time plays a grand harmony, must give continual attention to each succession of simultaneously sounded notes. But he very soon plays it without conscious effort, and then he begins to feel and can give musical expression to the tumults of passion, the bursts of divine exaltation which swept the soul of the composer, and which his music can awaken in those who hear. And just so it is with the man or woman who has learned to engage in good works, to lend the helping hand, to share the sorrows of the unfortunate or stricken ones of the earth, to comfort and encourage the broken hearted; that person, I say, is beginning to appreciate the great symphonies of eternal life.

We are told that "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Does it require too much of a stretch of the imagination to grasp the fact that the keynote of this great symphony was struck in the simple mandate of the Master, "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

Some of you, perhaps, may be familiar with the stories that have been told concerning the quest for the Holy Grail. You will recall that the Holy Grail was the cup from which the Savior administered the sacrament just before his death and crucifixion. I recall one tale about a brave knight who started upon this search, and was stopped at the very gates of his castle by a crippled beggar who held out a tiny tin cup and entreated the knight to fill it with water at a nearby spring. But the knight had a very important errand and could not tarry, so he brushed the beggar aside and hurried on. I will not burden you with the details of the story. Suffice it to say that after years of fruitless search, after much suffering, sickness, privation, and sorrow, this knight returned home a wiser and more humble man. At the gateway of his castle, once more he found the crippled beggar. This time he did not ignore the plaintive petition of the suffering one. Years and years of his own sorrow had taught him the lesson of love, and getting down from his horse, he took the cup and filled it at the spring. But as he passed it to the stranger, a great change took place. It seemed as if a cloud had passed from before his eyes, and there before him stood the Savior, holding in his hand the Holy Grail!

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me!" In our search for the great things of the kingdom, let us be careful that we don't ignore the humbler brother of Jesus Christ, who may be sitting upon our doorsteps.

There are two artificial incentives which prompt some people to do right. The first is, the fear of punishment. It is sad, but none the less true, that many people in this world refrain from deeds of evil simply because of their fear of being apprehended and dealt with according to their misconduct. But the Son of man has taught us that he who refrains from wrongdoing merely from fear of punishment is still a wrongdoer in the moral sense. He is a standing threat against society. He is continually planning to do the wrong and elude the officers of the law. The Savior said, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." The evolution of the divine character within us is probably the result of thought much more than of action.

Another class of people is prompted to do the right in the hope of a promised reward. Such people remind me of the old broken down race horse that was goaded on to run his last race by waving before his eyes a bundle of hay. Such a plane of ethics is somewhat higher than that occupied by those who refrain from wrongdoing to avoid punishment; nevertheless, it is not a high plane. The idea of securing the favor of heaven by barter, or as a sort of bounty money upon the delivery of good deeds done here, is repulsive to us. That kind of inducement to righteousness may be suited to a certain grade of moral development; it may still appeal to many who must be reached who must raise themselves to this level before they can reach a higher level.

The followers of Christ do not live in the fear of favor of the law, but in the love of God. The doing of deeds of love and mercy has become a part of their natures. They do right because they are right-doing people. They are not tempted by those things which tempt depraved wretches. They can not be. They have become like their divine Master. They have begun to develop the character to which he urged his disciples when he said to them, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

Men who are under the law, who must be repressed and controlled by mandatory influence from without, can not understand this injunction. Former ages have ignored it because they did not understand it, but what a world of meaning it has to him who has learned to live in the love of Christ and his fellow man. He may not be perfect in all things, but he is surely well on the road to perfection. The man who shares the sorrows of the poor, who lightens the burdens of the weary and the heavy laden, and who does such deeds not merely because he considers it his duty to do so, not because he is bargaining under the divine law for heavenly favors, but because it has become his nature to them, that man has reached the divine heights.

How the frivolities of fashionable society, with its endless round of anxieties about nothing; how the ambitions and the successes of the Mammon worshipers shrivel into nothingness as we contemplate such a career—the career of him who goes about doing good!

I recall a story that our old high school principal Doctor Thompson, used to tell. The tale is of eastern origin, coming from a Moslem tribe called the Soofis. It seems that a certain king while hunting in the forest met a woman carrying a pitcher of water and a lighted torch. He asked what these were for, and she replied, "To quench the fires of hell and to burn up heaven, that man may love God without fear of punishment or hope of reward."

The evolution of the divine character among the busy masses of men, each struggling with the problems of his own life, each of necessity a minute part of civilization constantly changing in its character and growing in its nature, goes on by slow degrees. These grand precepts of the greatest of teachers have been working in men's minds and hearts for nearly two thousand years, and still there is work for them to do. The uplifting of humanity into godlikeness is not the work of a day. It is a growth which in the individual and in society continues as long as growth of any kind is possible. In the individual it continues through life. In society it lasts through the ages.

We hear doleful tales of corruption and fraud in business, in politics; and in business politics or political business such evils can never be cured by political revolutions or by replacing the rule of one party by that of another. It can only be done by means of education—education that begins at home and in the family. It can only be done gradually by replacing men who do right from fear of punishment or from hope of some personal advantage; by men who do right because they are the kind of men who do right; who do right as the meadowlark sings its own song, and is never tempted to croak like a bullfrog. The man who must be bribed to do right is in danger of being bribed or hired to do wrong; with him it is merely a question of price.

Society has assumed the right, and it necessarily possesses the power to punish those whose moral sense has not been quickened into self-control. But the laws of the State lay no hand on the murderers who have not found their opportunity, or upon the thieves who have not stolen. They make no distinction between those who refrain from crime from fear of punishment, those who are deterred by fear of some kind of punishment, and those who are not criminals.

It is most demoralizing to society that the idea has become current and is given general credence that while stolen property is under some circumstances evidence of guilt, it is not always so; that when the property is very valuable and the thieves very influential, possession of such property is nine points in the law of defense for permanent ownership. The educational side of such proceedings is by far the most important element in the matter to every citizen. It far outweighs any mere matter of dollars and cents that may be involved.

The law of the State so far as it touches the question of good and evil, demands simply that the citizen shall do no wrong to his brother. It does not touch the questions of righteousness upon their affirmative side. It seems that even in ecclesiastical history men have been approached by such appeals as they were able to grasp. Rewards have been offerred to the righteous, and if we go back far enough we find a lower standard because men were on a lower plane. Certainly, one could hardly conceive of a more businesslike proposition than is contained in the vow of the Patriarch Jacob. When he was seeking a wife and had the dream of the ladder which reached to heaven, he made a vow in which he said, "If God will be with me and will help me in this way that I go and will give me bread to eat and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father's house in peace, then shall the Lord be my God. And this stone that I have set up for a pillar shall be God's house, and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give a tenth unto thee."

Here we have one who seeks to secure divine favor in return for specific service. It may be that even such service will not be rejected, but what a fathomless gulf there is between such a spirit and that to which the Son of Man appealed when he said, "Be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," with no fear of punishment, no thought of reward, but as a result of having partaken of the divine nature. For moral grandeur, what is there on earth to compare with this? It appeals to the noblest instincts of mankind. It contains within itself the germs of all that is best in individual life and character. It is a promise of endless growth through generations yet unborn. It is one of the greatest and most inspiring sentences that ever fell upon human ears.

The law of the State, with its threats of punishment, forces us upward and away from the lowest depths. It is like the pushing locomotive at the rear of a train of cars. Ecclesiastical law also has its threats of punishment, but by its promises of reward, men are drawn to higher moral levels. In this respect it is like the pulling locomotive at the head of the train. There is no mechanical distinction between a push from below and a pull from above. Both are artificial incentives, of a rather low order, imposed upon the individual from without and tending to lift him to higher moral and ethical planes. But to be perfect, as God is perfect, is to be an intellectual, moral, and spiritual prime mover, equipped with one's own machinery, vitalized, energized, and made active by the fires of eternal truth!

If thou workest at that which is before thee, following right reason seriously, vigorously, calmly, without allowing anything else to distract thee, but keeping thy divine part sure, if thou shouldst be bound to give it back immediately; if thou holdst to this, expecting nothing, fearing nothing, but satisfied with thy present activity according to Nature, and with heroic truth in every word and sound thou utterest, thou wilt live happy. And there is no man who is able to prevent this.—Marcus Aurelius.

Music in the Nursery

The United States is advancing rapidly in disseminating a knowledge of music among the masses of the people. Year by year, the number of towns and communities observing National Music Week is increasing. Music festivals are becoming quite common, and even grand opera is being brought within the reach of people of limited means. More public schools are engaging music supervisors, and children are taught the rudiments of music in the first and second grades. Music memory contests have become a regular part of the yearly program. This is splendid, but I wish to go farther back than the first school days, even to the infant in its mother's arms. For ages much has been said about the songs our mothers crooned us to sleep with, and I am writing this to give a bit of experience I have had, and am still having, with my own three children.

First, let me say that I have rarely rocked any of my babies to sleep with singing in the old-fashioned way, but I can not number the times I have played them to sleep. My eldest, a boy, was one month old when his musical training began. If that sounds extreme, all I ask of any mother is to give this method of wooing sleep to restless little eyelids a fair trial. I used selections in which the harmony and rhythm are peculiarly soothing. Dvorak's "Humoresque" is splendid: "Melody in F" is also, and there are numerous others. Repeatedly I have had my son, when crying as loudly as his strong lungs would permit, cease the instant he heard the first chords of the piano. He very soon learned to cry for the music; if I stopped playing his wails began again. Usually, however, it required not more than five minutes, ten at most, to get him safely into dreamland. This early training continually shows its effects. At two or three years, he would stop in the midst of interesting play in the yard when he heard me at the piano, come in and remain by me as long as I would play for him. He is six years old now and very fond of good music. He is not a musical prodigy either, just a normal boy. I have never given him a music lesson, though I shall perhaps in another year or two.

Will a child less than a year old show any preference with regard to the music he hears? I am experimenting with that question, and I have begun to think some babies may. "Humoresque" seemed to be most effective with my eldest, but the second was

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Zoning Upheld by United States Supreme Court

Euclid, Ohio, case brings first ruling of highest court on exclusion of business and industry from residential areas—height and other limitations taken as already accepted.

Municipal zoning ordinances are upheld in a decision of the United States Supreme Court rendered by Justice Sutherland on November 22. Three judges (McReynolds, Butler, and Van Devanter) dissented but filed no opinion. (Village of Euclid, Ohio, vs. Ambler Realty Company, on Appeal from Federal District Court for Northern Ohio, which had held the ordinance to be unconstitutional, as reported in 297 Fed. 307.) The opinion is directed particularly to the exclusion of business and industry from areas zoned as residential, never before ruled on by the United States Supreme Court, but in passing it upholds zoning in general as a proper exercise of the police power, stating that height limitations and certain use restrictions other than the one specifically ruled on in the Euclid case are already accepted as constitutional.

Euclid Case.—The ordinance in question was adopted November 13, 1922, by the village of Euclid, Ohio, a suburb of Cleveland, with a population of 2,363 in 1920. It divides the village into six use, three height, and four area districts. The Ambler Realty Company is the owner of 68 acres of land always more restless. He seemed to prefer something with a swifter movement. I do not say positively that he did, but always Sinding's "Rustle of spring" seemed most effective with him. My baby girl shows a tendency to have a disposition more like the eldest. I am using "Humoresque," "Traumerei," "Spring song," and things of that type with her.

I hope this will not appear far-fetched, or out of reach of the ordinary mother. I am ordinary myself. I do my own housework and care for three children, and then do some other things besides. Naturally, I do not have much time to devote to practice, and so it has been a great blessing to me to discover this method of handling my children. It is good for their nerves and mine as well. I put them to bed at a regular hour, leaving the bedroom door open so that they may hear the piano plainly, and then I have a little time for music that I would not otherwise have. A mother who does not play any instrument can easily try this experiment with the victrola or radio, of course taking great care in her selections. For this purpose, only the very best should be considered.—Elizabeth Fulgham.

abutting on Euclid Avenue to the south and the Nickel Plate Railroad to the north. To both the east and the west of this tract are "restricted residential plats upon which residences have been erected." Under the zoning ordinance the Ambler tract was distributed between three use districts: U-2, residential, for one-family or two-family houses only; U-3, residential also, but permitting apartment houses; U-6, industrial, within which most of the land in question lies.

The Ambler Realty Company, quoting now from the opinion, in its "bill" alleges "that the tract of land in question is vacant; that for years it has been held for sale and development, for which it is especially adapted, being immediately in the path of progressive industrial developments; that for such uses it has a market value of about $10,000 per acre, but if the use be limited to residential purposes, the market value is not in excess of $2,500 per acre." The company also held that the Euclid Avenue frontage would have its value cut from $150 to $50 per front foot if limited to residential uses.

The suit was brought to set the entire ordinance aside as preventing the use of the land "for lawful and legitimate purposes," again to use the language of the decision, and because the ordinance "constitutes a cloud upon the land, reduces and destroys its value, and has the effect of diverting the normal industrial, commercial, and residential development thereof to other and less favorable locations." The company based its application for an injunction on the allegation that the ordinance violates section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution by depriving the company of liberty and property without due process of law, besides denying it the equal protection of the law. The company also claimed that the ordinance offends portions of the constitution of the State of Ohio.

In the lower court a motion was made on behalf of the village to dismiss the bill because the real estate company had made no attempt for relief from the Board of Zoning Appeals. The Supreme Court declares that "the motion was properly overruled."

The Supreme Court agrees with the lower court that, in the light of the record, the real estate company's land along Euclid Avenue would normally be used "for general trade and commercial purposes" while the remainder of the land would normally be used "for industrial and trade purposes." Nevertheless, the Supreme Court upholds the ordinance, even though it "in effect, constitutes a present invasion of appellee's property rights." The opinion disposes of allegations as to the ordinance violating the constitution of Ohio by saying that the question is the same under either the Ohio or the Federal Constitution. After pointing out that zoning laws are of recent origin and have come along with many other things due to urban growth that would not have been tolerated a century or perhaps a half century ago, but would have been rejected by the courts "as arbitrary and oppressive," it then says that such regulations are changed "under the complex conditions of our day, for reasons analogous to those which justify traffic regulations, which before the advent of automobiles and rapid transit street railways, would have been condemned as fatally arbitrary and unreasonable." Continuing, the Supreme Court says:

The ordinance now under review and all similar laws and regulations must find their justification in some aspect of the police power, asserted for the public welfare. The line which in this field separates the legitimate from the illegitimate assumption of power is not capable of precise delimitation. It varies with circumstances and conditions. A regulatory zoning ordinance, which would be clearly valid as applied to the great cities, might be clearly invalid as applied to rural communities.

In solving doubts, the maxim sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas, which lies at the foundation of so much of the common law of nuisances, ordinarily will furnish a fairly helpful clew. And the law of nuisances, likewise, may be consulted, not for the purpose of controlling, but for the helpful aid of its analogies in the process of ascertaining the scope of the power. . . . A nuisance may be merely a right thing in the wrong place—like a pig in the parlor instead of the barnyard. If the validity of the legislative classification for zoning purposes be fairly debatable, the legislative judgment must be allowed to control.

After discussing at some length the municipal ordinance governing heights of buildings and excluding certain nuisance-producing and related industries from stipulated districts, all of which the Supreme Court says has been well established and gives citations to support the assertion, the decision goes on:

We find no difficulty in sustaining restrictions of the kind thus far reviewed. The serious question in the case arises over the provisions of the ordinance excluding from residential districts apartment houses, business houses, retail stores, and shops, and other like establishments.

This question involves the validity of what is really the crux of the more recent zoning legislation, namely, the creation and maintenance of residential districts, from which business and trade of every sort, including hotels and apartment houses, are excluded. Upon that question this Court has not thus far spoken.

The decisions of the state courts are numerous and conflicting; but those which broadly sustain the power greatly outnumber those which deny it altogether or narrowly limit it; and it is very apparent that there is a constantly increasing tendency in the direction of the broader view. We shall not attempt to review these decisions at length, but content ourselves with citing a few as illustrative of all.

The Supreme Court opinion then cites the decisions upholding zoning in the courts of nine States—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, Louisiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kansas, and California—and adverse decisions in three States—New Jersey, Maryland, and Texas. It notes "evidence of a decided trend toward the broader view" that in some States earlier decisions adverse to zoning have been reversed, mentioning Michigan. The opinion quotes at length from the Illinois Supreme Court decision

(City of Aurora vs. Burns) and from the Louisiana Supreme Court decision upholding zoning (State vs. City of New Orleans). State decisions upholding zoning are summarized in the present opinion as follows:

The decisions enumerated in the first group cited above agree that the exclusion of buildings devoted to business, trade, etc., from residential districts, bears a rational relation to the health and safety of the community. Some of the grounds for this conclusion are—promotion of the health and security from injury of children and others by separating dwelling houses from territory devoted to trade and industry; suppression and prevention of disorder; facilitating the extinguishment of fires and the enforcement of street traffic regulations and other general welfare ordinances; aiding the health and safety of the community by excluding from residential areas the confusion and danger of fire, contagion, and disorder which in greater or less degree attach to the location of stores, shops, and factories.

Another ground is that the construction and repair of streets may be rendered easier and less expensive by confining the greater part of the heavy traffic to the streets where business is carried on.

After stating that "Zoning has received much attention at the hands of commissions and experts" and referring to "comprehensive reports" on the subject, the opinion continues:

These reports, which bear every evidence of painstaking consideration, concur in the view that the segregation of residential, business, and industrial buildings will make it easier to provide fire apparatus suitable for the character and intensity of the development in each section; that it will increase the safety and security of home life; greatly tend to prevent street accidents, especially to children, by reducing the traffic and resulting confusion in residential sections; decrease noise and other conditions which produce or intensify nervous disorders; preserve a more favorable environment in which to rear children, etc.

With particular reference to apartment houses, it is pointed out that the development of detached house sections is greatly retarded by the coming of the apartment houses, which has sometimes resulted in destroying the entire section for private house purposes; that in such sections very often the apartment house is a mere parasite constructed in order to take advantage of the open spaces and attractive surroundings created by the residential character of the district. Also, coming of one apartment house is followed by others, interfering by their height and bulk with the free circulation of air and monopolizing the rays of the sun which otherwise would fall upon the smaller homes, and bringing, as their necessary accomplishments, the disturbing noises incident to increased traffic and business, and the occupation, by means of moving and parked automobiles, of larger portions of the streets, thus detracting from their safety and depriving children of the privilege of quiet and open spaces for play, enjoyed by those in more favored localities—until, finally, the residential character of the neighborhood and its desirability as a place of detached residences are utterly destroyed.

Under these circumstances, apartment houses, which in a different environment would be not only entirely unobjectionable but highly desirable, come very near to being nuisances.

If these reasons, thus summarized, do not demonstrate the wisdom or sound policy in all respects of those restrictions which we have indicated as pertinent to the inquiry, at least, the reasons are sufficiently cogent to preclude us from saying, as it must be said before the ordinance can be declared unconstitutional, that such provisions are clearly ar-

NEWS AND LETTERS

Report of Department of Women to Conference in Zion

The Department of Women is pleased to report all departments fully organized and active.

The Cradle Roll Department, with Mrs. William Bath as superintendent, has effected a more complete district organization this year. There are eleven district workers, and 258 babies enrolled. The cradle roll paper, The Golden Now, is being sent to 2,563 mothers. Seven cradle roll classes, also mothers' classes, are being conducted in the Sunday schools, and a new cradle roll room has been well equipped in the Stone Church Sunday school. One hundred eighty-seven babies have been remembered with birthday and Easter cards, and 1,892 special visits have been made.

Another division of our department is the Young Women's Bureau. During the last two years its objective has been more complete organization, so as to reach more effectively the girls in each district. Nellie E. Sampson has been the general superintendent, assisted by her sister, Blanche Sampson, also by ten district supervisors. Working under the direction of these district supervisors, there have been 27 leaders, or monitors. There have been 10 Temple Builder Chapters, with a membership of 140; 15 Oriole Circles, membership 167; 4 Bluebird Bands, membership 64. Each circle meets about once a week in its home district, endeavoring to carry out the work as outlined in the manuals. Each month a council meeting is held at the Stone Church for the district supervisors and leaders. Last spring a three-day convention was held in Independence, at which time Miss Edwards was able to meet with us. During the summer our girls prepared for a sewing, cooking, and miscellaneous contest, which was exhibited at the Campus Labor Day, individual and district awards being given. The girls were also pleased to have a small part in the Harvest Home Festival this year. Various bitrary and unreasonable, having no substantial relation to the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare.

Considerable space is devoted to elucidating the principle that although a decision like the present one may uphold the general legality of an ordinance, yet some of its details might work injury which would demand relief, but such details must be left, the decision points out, to adjudication each on its merits. The decision then concludes as follows:

Under these circumstances, therefore, it is enough for us to determine, as we do, that the ordinance in its general scope and dominant features, so far as its provisions are here involved, is a valid exercise of authority, leaving other provisions to be dealt with as cases arise directly involving them.

And this is in accordance with the traditional policy of this Court. In the realm of constitutional law, especially, this Court has perceived the embarrassment which is likely to result from an attempt to formulate rules or decide questions beyond the necessities of the immediate issue.

It has preferred to follow the method of a gradual approach to the general by a systematically guarded application and extension of constitutional principles to particular cases as they arise, rather than by out of hand attempt to establish general rules to which future cases must be fitted. This process applies with peculiar force to the solution of questions arising under the due process clause of the Constitution as applied to the exercise of the flexible powers of police, with which we are here concerned.

worth-while activities have been engaged in as district projects.

The work accomplished by the Department of Women is as follows:

Number of general meetings for all women of Independence	14
Executive council meetings	22
Number of districts fully organized and reporting	12
Total number of groups	41
Number of groups active	39
Total number of group meetings	938
Total attendance	5,563
Average attendance at group meetings	7
Visits reported made by calling committees	2,163

Classes and Lectures—At the Institute

A course is being conducted for two days each week in Home Building, covering the following subjects: "The child; his nature and his needs"; "Woman stewardship"; "Etiquette for mothers"; "Leisure time"; "Eugenics"; "Nutrition and dietetics"; "Home management and sanitation"; "Landscape gardening"; "Story-telling"; "Play"; "Interior decoration"; "Handcraft and sewing"; "Social service."

The total enrollment for these classes is 324. One of our aims has been to have a trained social service worker in every group. Sixty-four women have enrolled in the social service class.

These institute classes and lectures are free to any woman of Independence, as they are financed by the Department of Women as a community project.

In the Groups

The number of classes taught in the groups during the year has been: "Mothercraft," 7; "Mother, teacher of religion," 2; "Social service," 1; "Stewardship," 4; "Doctrine and Covenants," 4; "Church History," 6; "Book of Mormon," 5; "Home nursing," 5; "Food and body," 1; "Interior decoration," 3. Total, 38 classes.

Health and social hygiene lectures given, 23. Conducted one Temperance Institute and arranged for 18 temperance talks in our Sunday schools.

In addition to class work, our women have engaged in the usual activities; such as sewing, bake sales, socials, bazaars, dinners, etc.

We are still sponsoring the clinic known as the Independence Health Center. Doctor Brickhouse Wilson and Miss Faye Franklin, with other assistants, are striving earnestly every Thursday to keep up the excellent reputation gained. Over 1,000 babies have been cared for during the past year.

Our women are also sponsoring the Commodity Shop. Each group has a special officer who looks after this work. Mrs. Mary Bush is superintending the shop and is especially qualified for the work.

Summary of Financial Report From the 39 Groups

Budget needed for 1927		$1,000.00

As I have endeavored to sum up the work of the Department of Women for 1926, I have felt keenly the great responsibility, for these are cold facts and figures, and they do not represent as they should the willing sacrifices of time, strength, and means, and the earnest cooperation required to accomplish these results; nor is it possible to report the labors of love for the sick and discouraged, and the hundreds of prayers that have given strength and inspiration, making all this possible. Surely the Department of Women has no small part in this the hastening time. Our goal toward the redemption of Zion is:

All homes beautiful and well ordered.

Every inmate functioning according to divine standards. The groups uniting for the common good, and all together upholding the program of the church.

ALICE M. COWAN, Superintendent of Department of Women in Zion.

Burlington, Iowa

December 30.—Since our last contribution to the HERALD, we have had many interesting events in the branch as well as some sorrows and considerable sickness, but we find that every cloud has a silver lining.

Patriarch Ammon White was with us in the summer, and he and President Elbert A. Smith were present at our district conference, and Apostle James A. Gillen spent ten days here in September. Needless to say, every sermon was a soul feast and an added strength to all.

On September 23 Brother Theodore Kunz and Miss Marjorie Robbins were married at Fort Madison, Iowa, Elder William Gunn officiating. A wedding also was solemnized October 30 at the home of Sister Jane Willey, when her granddaughter, Cecyle Anderson was married to Mr. Clarence Hartquist, of Stronghurst, Illinois. Elder E. R. Williams officiated, and the single ring ceremony was used. Sister Floyd Barker took her place at the piano at four o'clock, and the bridal party was accompanied by the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march. Immediately following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served to members of the family and a few friends.

Preceding the prayer service on November 3, Mrs. Theodore Kunz entered the waters of baptism, Brother E. F. Kunz officiating. The confirmation took place at the service of prayer and was administered by Brothers E. R. Williams and A. F. Bromann.

On Thanksgiving morning at half past eight, the Saints met in a Thanksgiving service, and the spirit of the day was manifested with a goodly number present.

The "S" Chapter of Temple Builders, young married women of the church, entertained their families at a Halloween party, given at the Sister J. H. Lanbacher Farm. All had a wonderful time, and agree that such meetings are conducive to sociability among members and those whose companions are backward in coming to our larger gatherings. All are anxious for the "next time." We can never tell what fine results may be brought about from good, clean sociability. We are looking forward to our watch party to be held at the home of Brother and Sister G. E. Schweers. Brother Schweers will act as Father Time and little James Kunz as the New Year. Games, a program and carol singing will furnish amusement for the evening. Eighteen or twenty grown-ups and seventeen children will be present, as usual. The regular meetings of this Temple Builder chapter are held every two weeks, on Thursday at 2 p. m., at which time we study home economics.

November 30 the Temple Builders gave a mother and daughter banquet at the home of Brother and Sister E. F. Kunz. The home was lavishly decorated in pink and white, and the affair, under the direction of Sister Jennie Kunz, was a success.

Sister W. H. Green, of Ottumwa, was the out-of-town guest, who with Brother Green spent Thanksgiving with their daughter, Sister H. F. Bromann.

We welcome Sister Walters and her family from Aurora, Illinois, into our branch and trust they will be as happy with us as we are to have them.

The two teams, led by Sister Esther Kunz and Brother

Bert Kunz as captains, gave a chicken dinner at Eagles Hall, December 4, and a nice sum was netted as a result of their labor. Donations were received from the surrounding towns of New London, Salem, and Hillsboro, and we sincerely thank all for their interest and support.

On December 14 the Temple Builders held a Christmas exchange at the home of Brother and Sister A. H. Kunz. Two days later the "S" Chapter of Temple Builders held a Christmas exchange at the home of Sister E. O. Bierman. Sister Lydia Cummins acted as Santa Claus, and leave it to Lydia to do things right, but she must be careful where she leaves her bells when children are around.

A Christmas pageant was given on Christmas night in the basement of the church. This was entitled, "The first Christmas," and it was not only a success in every way, but was very impressive. The choir rendered appropriate songs from a concealed position in the kitchen. Sister Barker played the piano, and solos were sung by Sisters E. O. Bierman, Melva Weishaupt, and Hazel Kunz. There were also two quartets. The angels, children, sang as they marched down the aisle and up the platform to the prepared stable to see the baby Jesus in the manger. The three wise men, Robert Winders, Fred Kunz, and E. R. Williams, carrying gold, frankincense, and myrrh, also marched from the rear of the building to offer gifts to the mother of Christ, represented by Sister Emma Bromann. The angels who first appeared to the shepherds were Ruth Kunz, Mildred Rayer, Winnie and Virgie Duke, and Edith Hoverson. The shepherds were Kenneth Duke, Bert Kunz, and Clarence Williams. Sisters E. O. Bierman, Sister Jennie Kunz, and Sister Barker composed the committee which had charge of the program.

For the past two weeks, Sister Willey has been seriously ill, but we are glad to report that the Lord continues to hear our pleadings in her behalf, recognizing her faith and desires, and through his servants has bestowed upon her many blessings. She is much improved, but we wish to ask that all the Saints remember her at the throne of grace.

Sister Duke is at home again and getting along nicely in her wheel chair. Her daughter and son-in-law are caring for her, and she feels a keen desire to walk. We can truly say from the depths of our soul, "My God, how wonderful thou art!"

Mr. Finkle, husband of Sister Margaret Finkle, has been suffering from trouble with his back, but he is able to return to his daily responsibilities.

Sister Louisa Stadtlander also has been confined to her home for some time, suffering with her limbs. Being an energetic woman, it makes it doubly hard for her to be so handicapped. A card or call is always welcome and appreciated, especially at this time. Sister Stadtlander's daughter-in-law, Clara, is also in poor health, and for the present she and her husband are with the Stadtlander family.

Mrs. Albro, wife of Brother F. E. Albro, has been confined to her home all winter, being crippled with rheumatism, but she is now able to be out again.

Sister Ernest Wilke, Sister Bierman, and Sister Mary Duke have been on the sick list, but we are pleased to note that all are improving. Sister Mary is able to meet with us again, and it is hoped that before long the other two sisters will be able to do likewise.

Our pastor has provided a way whereby every family can be a subscriber to the church papers without such a heavy taxation at one time. The papers will be sent weekly, and one pays as he receives his paper; this necessitates the pending of a very small sum at one time. Brother Theodore Kunz is taking charge of this. When the plan gets under way, we believe it will prove satisfactory. So far many have responded and received one set, and are anxiously awaiting the next issue. By this method papers are getting into homes that could not afford to subscribe for them by the year.

Our district president, Brother Bevan, and our local priesthood opened a mission in New London, where there once was a branch, now disorganized. Members of the priesthood are taking monthly turns in caring for the mission, and we find some very sincere and good people there.

On November 21, under the supervision of our assistant district Sunday school superintendent, Brother Burt Kunz, a Sunday school was organized, and Sister Gladys Callaway, of New London, was elected superintendent. The Sunday school convenes at two o'clock in the afternoon, and preaching begins at three every meeting save the first Sunday of the month, which is sacrament meeting. There on December 26, a nice little Christmas program was given, under the direction of Sister Callaway, who had a hearty response from the children. Music was furnished by the Burlington Choir. After the program a bag of candy was presented to each one present, and a gift for every child adorned a huge Christmas tree, furnished by Sister Callaway. The interest at that place is good, and nonmembers recognizing our feeble efforts are donating the use of the hall when services are conducted.

The December 8 election of officers resulted as follows: President, E. R. Williams; Sunday school superintendent, Sister Julia Ortleb; superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Robert Winders; superintendent of Department of Women, Sister Len Rayer; Department of Music, H. F. Broman. Several of these members were re-elected to fill the places they so satisfactorily filled last year. Thanks are extended to retiring officers for their generous effort.

We have had a chicken supper, oyster supper, and socials in the church parlors in addition to the above mentioned. We are all busy and earnestly working for the one great cause, and there is a great amount of unity and interest among us. However, there are many strides yet to be taken, and with a renewed impetus we have every reason to believe this branch will continue to grow, and its members will be Zion builders in word and deed.

"Though the task be great that lies before us,
We trust in one divinely strong,
Knowing well at last we'll be victorious,
And we pray that the time will not be long."

Omaha, Nebraska

December 28.—Preaching services were held here November 21 to 28 inclusive, by Brother Richard Baldwin. The Saints gave good attendance, and the gospel was preached to many strangers. Sister Baldwin gave the teachers and officers of the Sunday school an instructive chalk talk, outlining it as the ten "thou shalt" commandments. Those of us who were privileged to attend the cottage prayer meetings held in connection with services were strengthened in spirit beyond measure. A feeling of unity and peace prevailed.

On December 8 the branch business meeting convened, in charge of Pastor J. L. Cooper, whom we sustained in that office. Brothers Carl T. Self and B. M. Anderson are to act as counselors or associate pastors; clerk, A. A. Thiehoff; treasurer and bishop's agent, solicitor, Fremming Self; chorister, Roland W. Scott; historian, Carl T. Self; librarian, Marion Cooper; branch correspondent, Grace Thiehoff; superintendent of Sunday school, Rose Adams; superintendent of the Department of Women, Grace Thiehoff.

This meeting was the last one that Sister Audentia Anderson will be with us. She left on the 9th for Orlando, Florida, to visit her daughter, Sister Doris Fredrick, until after the holidays. About January 1 the family will move to Lincoln, Nebraska, where Brother Anderson's business now takes him. We will miss these good people in many of our departments. Sister Anderson's class of young men in the Sunday school will be taken by Brother J. L. Cooper, choice of the boys. Brother Cooper also instructs the young people on social problems on Sunday evening following choir practice at half past six.

Brother John A. Gardner, of Independence, paid us a visit on December 15 and met with us in social service. His message was encouraging, as it had a forward note in it, not to be denied or ignored. We noticed this trend also in Brother Baldwin's talks with us. Brother R. S. Salyards recently visited us and delivered a fine sermon.

The Christmas program was presented at eleven o'clock in the morning, December 19. Three gifted soloists sang for us. They were Robert Jacobs, Nelle Kelley, and Harry Greenway. Our young pianist, Ann Self, played "Spanish caprice," by Moszkowski, and there were tears of thankfulness in appreciation of the art of this fair-haired maid, who at so tender an age is qualifying for high places. She is here recognized as a talented musician. We were also able to vision the juniors as true builders after the pattern of Christ, as they were led by the clear sweet voice of little Rosalie Fleming singing, "We will work for Jesus." A playlet, "Dust of the road," directed by Harold Kirkpatrick, portrayed the spirit of Christ and the spirit of Judas Iscariot; the spirit of the latter had only Christmas Day each year on which he could do good to balance his long-standing account of evil. With his thirty pieces of blood money in his pocket, he wandered to and fro as dust of the road, doing good deeds on Christmas Day. The parts were well taken by Elma Hicks, Marion Cooper, and Harold and Minard Kerns. There were various other musical offerings and numbers, which revealed to us deep and far-reaching principles. A fitting title to the whole program would be, "Christ on exhibition."

On the morning of December 26, Carl T. Self brought us some good, sound advice on earning and saving, spending and giving. We concluded if we could not be an arc light in our earning and giving, we will continue to be candle rays which warm many a heart by their tiny glow and clothe and feed many a missionary while he sows the seed of righteousness.

Brother Albert Merrick and family were made very happy on Christmas Eve by a visit of a special messenger, leaving them a check for more than twenty-five hundred dollars back compensation from the Government to the stricken World War veteran who has been confined to his bed for the past two and a half years. This money was secured through the efforts of our sister, Mrs. Peter Jensen, State Liaison Officer of the American Legion.

Included in the list of our many holiday visitors are Miss Merile Self, Peggy and Lois Scott, from Graceland, and Vivian Wrenn, from Stevens College, Columbia, Missouri, who are visiting their parents. We enjoy having these young ladies with us once more.

At the close of the year, we feel the spirit of peace with us, and all have received comfort from the words of encouragement and support delivered to us from time to time throughout the year by the Spirit of revelation.

GRACE THIEHOFF.

Young People's Convention at Lincoln

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA.—The first young people's convention of the Southeastern Nebraska District has now passed into history, and there seems to remain nothing but sweet memories, as there was a spirit of good fellowship which prevailed throughout that is hard to excel. We received instruction which we are sure will continue to help us in the year that is to follow.

Each meeting was well attended, and sometimes it proved rather difficult to find a seat if one were late. We feel that we were very fortunate in having Brother John F. Sheehy, of Independence, with us. He was able to draw interest from the audience at any time, whether he was talking seriously or otherwise. We also consider ourselves very fortunate to have had President Elbert A. Smith here for Sunday.

The convention opened Friday evening at eight o'clock. That was New Year's Eve, and a program had been arranged to take up most of the time intervening between the hour of eight and the New Year. The program consisted of violin solos and duets, piano solos and duets, readings, talks, vocal solos, orchestra numbers, and some others. Lawrence Brockway talked to us awhile, welcoming our guests to the convention. Brother Robertson gave a short talk, "Our work, past and future"; Brother Sheehy talked on several things, mainly "The old, old path." Brother Porter gave us a sketch of his travels this summer. The hour had grown quite late before refreshments had been served, and the people would reach their homes late, so Brother Robertson announced that the prayer meeting would not be held until half past nine on New Year's Day.

The New Year dawned bright and clear. We gathered at half past nine and enjoyed a very spiritual prayer service with Brothers Sheehy and Brockway in charge. The theme of the meeting was "The new year." We all felt that we had very fittingly begun, and it was up to us to continue in the same way each morning of 1927; not, of course, in a group, but to begin each day with prayer of our own.

Brother Sheehy talked to us at eleven o'clock. Some of us felt somewhat ashamed when he asked us questions concerning church history. The most outstanding incident was when he asked us: "What did the Lord find in the character of Sidney Rigdon to make him one of the witnesses of the Book of Mormon?" Of course many of us began enumerating various virtues of the man until some one suggested he was not a witness of the Book of Mormon. That is just one of many incidents which took place to test whether we were "awake" or "asleep."

Brother Sheehy talked to us again at half past two on "Thou shalt not lie." We were favored with a beautiful violin solo by Miss Salisbury, of Council Bluffs, and a vocal solo by Brother Shakespeare. In the evening Brother Sheehy showed us some slides of the Auditorium, which is under construction at Independence. We feel that we now realize more fully the magnitude of the building. The orchestra played several selections, and a male quartet composed of Brothers Shakespeare, Wolfe, Sheehy, and Poague sang, "May the Lord depend on you?"

Sunday was begun with a prayer service with Brothers Robertson and Elbert A. Smith in charge. The theme suggested was, "What the church means to me." There was no time wasted, and the meeting was enjoyed by each one present. Sunday school began at ten o'clock, and Brother Elbert Smith preached at eleven. He said he would preach a gospel sermon and a practical sermon that day, and he wanted us to decide which of the two he was preaching that morning. He gave us some things which might well be taken very seriously. He asked us if we would be one that the officers of the branch might depend upon, or would be one who holds back and does not attend church very often. He also said that anyone who was looking for an easy job could find fault.

Brother Sheehy talked to us at half past two. His subject was "The child." We agreed with him that it was more important to teach the child than the lesson. At this meeting the quartet again sang, Brother Wolfe sang a solo, and Annabelle Chapple and Thelma McWilliams played a violin duet.

In the evening Brother Elbert preached us the "other sermon," but we believe the gospel is practical, so he gave us two practical, gospel sermons that day. There was orchestra music, and Brother Wolfe sang a beautiful solo. When the benediction had been given by Brother Elbert, we all felt that indeed we had profited from the effort which had made the convention possible, and at the same time we could draw a breath of relief, because the two days had been rather strenuous, although there is not one of us who would have missed any of it.

The noon and evening meals were served in the basement by the Department of Women. The towns represented at the convention were: Wilber, Columbus, Plattsmouth, Nebraska City, Lincoln, Tecumseh, and Council Bluffs. When Brother Robertson asked how many would want another convention, every hand went up. A rising vote of thanks was given Brothers Smith and Sheehy for coming to be with us.

CARRIE HALE.

Sherrill, New York

Our institutes for branches at this end of the New York District in the fall came thick and fast. After our trip to Greenwood the first of September, which was mentioned in our last, we met with Fulton, September 19. They hired a commodious hall. Doctor Weegar and Brother and Sister Christy were there to help make it a success. The Fulton Saints turned out fine, and the meetings were of a high spiritual order. Brother Stark and family came from Red Creek, and he opened up the first discussion by enumerating the most necessary requisites in a successful member of the priesthood, the first being, to his way of thinking, dependability. Brother G. L. Davison suggested that there should be some form of operation possible to be performed on "feelings," to save a great deal of trouble in church work. He did not mean to infer that people should not have feelings, but that they should be held in subjection.

An interesting program was given Saturday evening by young and old. The Sunday morning prayer service was well attended and was very good. Brother Christy was troubled with a serious hoarseness Saturday, but was enabled to speak to us Sunday afternoon. He stayed to preach to the Fulton Saints Sunday night, while the rest of us hurried home to hold evening services.

The Fulton Saints treated us royally; the tables groaned with good things to eat, and they hired rooms for those whom they themselves could not accommodate.

Two weeks later we met in convention capacity at Syracuse, and again enjoyed a treat similar to that at Fulton. Syracuse Saints hired the hall one floor higher than their regular one, which was lighter and quieter. Plans for a reunion in this district were discussed, question having been brought up at the June conference. Committee reported, advice given by others was heeded, and for this year at least it was put off. The offer of the Lowbanks grounds by the brothers in Toronto was thoroughly appreciated, and in some other capacity than district reunion the offer may be taken advantage of.

We had with us Brother George Landes and wife, and her sister, Sister Tillie Lambert, from Niagara. The services were well attended, Fulton and Sherrill turning out very well.

Syracuse fed us to our capacity Sunday noon in the hall, and we returned to our home branches feeling that the institutes are surely a great help, and wishing we were not so spread out as a district and could meet oftener. Brother and Sister Christy stayed that night with the Syracuse Saints, going next day over hill and dale many miles to accept an invitation to the golden wedding anniversary of the parents of Brother and Sister Floyd Rathbun, Brother George Rathburn and wife of East Pharsalia.

We learn Brother and Sister Christy are located in Niagara Falls now. We know they will do good wherever they are. We look forward to having them here with us in Sherrill later on for special effort.

Due to the prospects of a still smaller membership in Sherrill to support the work, the body voted to sell the building and rent from the Masons, having made little or no progress of late in getting rid of the debt—and there being necessary quite an outlay of funds in the way of putting in city water and toilets, painting, repairs, sidewalks, etc. The funds are to be kept intact and at interest as they come in, so that another building may be possible if conditions permit. The new owners have been installing steam heat, and finishing the basement for social uses. We hold a five-year lease, with privilege of renewing. Time will tell whether this was a wise move. Naturally there are serious regrets on the part of some, for it is good to feel ownership; by some it is appreciated and by some it is not.

We usually have some nonmembers in attendance at services; in fact, we have some who attend who seem to appreciate the work more than the membership in general and who are a source of encouragement; but more people in Sherrill go to the Oneida Sunday night movies than go to church, it is safe to say, and many spend their Sunday evenings playing cards, so we are told. It looks and sounds like the Bible prediction of the last days.

We were glad to hear a report of a branch organized at Rochester during their institute meeting on November 7. We who usually get to their institute meetings regretted our inability to attend this time. It is difficult to hold interest in one's own branch and be gone often. There are some noble souls in Rochester, and we hope they may have much encouragement to do the work to be done there.

The Department of Recreation and Expression announced a candy pull at the home of the Montgomerys for Saturday night, the fourth of December. But few came, and those who did had a fine time. Sister Lucy Dean has spent a week in Sherrill lately, going on Thursday, the 9th, to her old home in Corbetsville. We can always welcome Sister Lucy, and hope she returns in time to stay with us again.

The Temple Builders, organized not many weeks ago, had charge of the Christmas program plans. As a result we had a program of surprises, one family not knowing what the other was to do. One of the fathers spoke, "Twas the night before Christmas," and did it very well. Only one duplication occurred from not comparing notes, Richard Mesle sang "Silent night," his first solo, after Sister Dunn had sung it, accompanied on the piano by her daughter and on the violin by her son. After the distribution of gifts we adjourned to the basement and spent a social hour and served refreshments.

Brother James Breegle and wife and her mother, Sister Hageman, stopped off with us in Sherrill in September, en route to their home in Ticonderoga. Now they are in Niagara Falls, we understand. Brother G. W. Robley was in Sherrill on his way to a conference in Pennsylvania, in October.

It is uphill business at the best to keep the work going—always some discouraging features. If the janitor has not missed having the steam up to the right point to have the building warm, some of God's people have undervalued their privilege of attending, and some newcomer to the church finds the pews nearly empty, and the pastor (and his wife as well) feel disheartened.

There are so many things to attract the youth of today; the gospel needs to be well embedded in their souls to keep them to their duties. If they could only appreciate the blessing of being a coworker with God and helping to move the work onward, what wonders could be accomplished. A few can do wonders if they will, but when they go hand in hand with the world it is hard to get results. For the size of our congregation in Sherrill, it is safe to say it averages better than the other churches, but this is not saying enough.

We are sorry to report Brother Morris Whitehead is in the hospital in Syracuse (Crouse-Irving) seriously afflicted as a result of a fall on the ice in his rounds in a town in Pennsylvania, having ruptured a blood vessel in the upper part of his limb, and the limb has become infected. It looks as if it will be a long time before he can be about again. We remember him in our prayers in Sherrill. Being in Syracuse for Christmas Day we also called on Sister Eudora Scoville, who is sadly afflicted, awaiting the end, which seems near. Her son Harold has just returned from Florida where he has been for some time.

The Christmas season has served to bring to our minds the glorious event of the birth of the Christ child, and by greetings exchanged with many friends and Saints has made us more appreciative of life. May the New Year find our minds and hearts fixed on a better service this year than ever before, that the cause of Zion's redemption may prosper.

The Work in Detroit

(From a letter to the First Presidency.)

I am pleased to report that conditions here are continually looking up, and the prospects for future work seem bright indeed.

As I look back over the year's work, it seems the year has been indeed a long one, so many things have happened. The first four months of that time were spent in Wichita, my old appointment. It was with considerable sadness in our hearts that wife and I left the people of that city with whom we had labored for three and one half years. One cannot labor among a people like the folks of the Wichita Branch and not regret his leaving them. I am glad I had the privilege of associating with the Saints there, because they helped me a great deal. Nor shall I forget the Saints at Winfield, Hutchison, Hardtner, Rolla, and other places in the district. May God bless them all.

While it is the lot of the church appointee to form social ties with his people and then be called to other fields of labor, he is also made conscious of the fact that by his change of appointment his circle of friends and acquaintances is consequently widened. I have met many good people since coming to this great city. For this, too, I am thankful.

The work here, or rather my part in it, is quite different from what it was in Kansas. I there found time to get in touch with the people by way of personal visits, but here I find my opportunity along this line somewhat limited, due to the large amount of executive work necessary in such a large branch. I find my time taken up with officers' meetings, committee meetings, and the regular meetings of the several congregations.

Beginning with September we began the publication of a branch paper, a periodical of about eight pages. This has been a success so far, and we hope to make it of greater value to the church by making it our advertising medium.

The paper heretofore has been intended to reach the Saints alone, but under our new plan we think to have it smack of a missionary tone, having one good article along that line each month, and distribute it in the community surrounding each church. We think to ask each family to take a number home with them and distribute them in their neighborhood. Beginning with the April number, we are to get five thousand copies. Since we are to do the distributing, we will have quite a job on our hands, but I believe we will make it. It seems a very fine way to get the church before the people in this great city.

Another matter which I believe I failed to mention before is our plan to develop a bureau of graphic arts. We have a moving picture machine which surely offers a very fine opportunity for work in this avenue. We have selected Brother Wallace Janrow to head and develop this work. He has had some experience along this line, and we are expecting some great things in this work.

The big thing before us now is the organization of the priesthood into groups for visiting the Saints. It is our plan to have these men organize for cottage meetings of a missionary as well as a pastoral nature. They to consider themselves missionaries as well as pastors. I believe this will work well, for a large portion of the men are very anxious to work. In fact, I never met a group of men anywhere who were more desirous for work.

As you already know, we have now five divisions in the city: Central, East Side, Highland Park, River Rouge, and Wyandotte. The last was recently organized from a mission into a division and has fine prospects for future development. Elders Kenneth Green, Louis Richards, Richard Ulman, Wilbert Wood, and Amos Surbrook, respectively, are the pastors of these divisions for the coming year. We have also a Sunday school organized in the northeastern section of the city and are making preparation for a mission in Brightmoor in the northwestern section of the city. Elder Clyde Gault will have charge of this point. We also have some promise of another mission in Dearborn, but have not as yet had opportunity to investigate.

We were very fortunate in buying a new church in Highland Park, which surely elevates our prospects for future development in that section. We are planning to reconstruct the place of worship in River Rouge soon. This should enhance the work in that part of the city.

I would not leave out of my report mention of our effort to establish classes in religious education. Elder Mottashed is teaching the subject: "Missionary methods"; Peter Uhl, one of our promising young men, "Religion"; Edgar Montross, another fine prospect for church work, teaches "Bible"; and Elder Willard Shotwell is teaching "Doctrine." These courses are not going as well as we would like, but perhaps better than we expected. So we are encouraged.

Last, but by no means least, I must mention the bazaar held recently by the Women's Department, December 2, 3, and 4. They held a bazaar in the East Side of the city, where they cleared about six hundred dollars. Not satisfied with this, since they had goods left, they held another December 15, 16, and 17 and cleared something near three hundred dollars. This, with one hundred dollars they made selling cocoa, will make near one thousand dollars, which I am informed they will turn over to the finance committee.

In spite of the fact that my work has been more taxing than ever before, I believe this is the most interesting task I ever had, and I feel to go on with it to the best of my ability. This church grows more interesting to me every day. I have always believed this church was of God, and I believe it more today than ever before in my life. I know from my own experience that God is in this church today, and so far as my experience goes his power is manifested in greater abundance than at any time in my life. I am sure that those who say the Almighty has left us alone need to examine themselves.

Before I close I must tell you about a financial blessing which came to this branch recently. Mrs. James W. Smith, whose husband died recently, gave two thousand five hundred dollars to be used primarily for seating the Highland Park Church, as a memorial to her husband. Mr. Smith's mother and two sisters are members of the church. President Smith will no doubt remember these people.

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, December 28.

Gray's Harbor, Washington

December 22.—As we look back over the year 1926, and see how little advancement we have made, we feel the need of a more consecrated service. And if we as Saints here intend to do our part in the building up of Zion, we must move forward.

We are glad to announce since our last report the arrival of two families of Saints; Brothers Brookover and Vanderwood. We are hoping they will make this their home, as we are in need of more workers.

Imagine our glad surprise when our district missionary, A. C. Martin, and district president, Brother Cook, arrived here Saturday evening, December 18. No one knew they were coming, and they were as surprised as we, for neither knew the other one was coming. Brother Cook came to give us a report of the young people's convention at Seattle.

Brother Martin occupied the pulpit Sunday evening, December 19, and his theme was one of the statements of Christ, "I will build my church." Services were held Monday evening with Sister Billars, Brother Cook in charge and Brother A. C. Martin the speaker. They left us much food for thought.

Brother Cook brought his violin he himself had made from a piece of hemlock, furnished him by one of the Saints here on one of his former visits. We enjoyed the music he furnished while here.

They both left Tuesday morning. Brother Martin said he had to hurry home to help the "kiddies" hang their Christmas stockings. We wish them a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. We hope to have them with us again soon for a longer visit. Brother Cook said that when he returns he is going to bring a big supply of inventory blanks and get busy among us.

The Department of Women took in thirty-five dollars at a food sale and bazaar, held December 5. They are pleased with the returns, as there are so few of them to do the work.

The Department of Recreation and Expression held its annual election of officers Sunday evening, December 19, as the Christmas program is to be held Sunday, the 26th. The election of Sunday school officers will be December 26.

We wish the Saints everywhere a Happy New Year, and may God's blessings be with us in our onward march to 1930 and on.

Mapleton, Kansas

December 28.—Perhaps it would be of interest to many of the Saints to learn of the progress of the work in Mapleton. At the present time the work seems to be in better condition than it has been for some time past. Brother Holly Dennis is our pastor, and he, like a good shepherd, believes in leading his flock instead of driving them. By his cheerful, congenial, patient effort he has won the love and confidence of his membership, so that there seems to exist a greater unity in the branch than there has been for a number of years.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely. The election of officers for the coming year resulted in Brother Arthur Dennis being elected superintendent; assistant, Perry Gardner; secretary, Lois Quick; treasurer, Alfa Dennis; chorister, Orion Dennis; pianist, Lulu Wellington.

The writer has been a constant reader of the church papers for more than forty years, and judging from the reports which appear in their columns, it seems to me that the work has made greater progress in the last year or two than it ever has in the same length of time. When I study the revelations given to the church and contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, it seems to me we are making greater headway toward their fulfillment than we have at any time since they have been given. This proves to me that we are living in the hastening time, when God will hasten his work, and if we keep pace with it we must take the church papers and read them; we must be awake and have our lamps trimmed and burning; we must always be on the lookout, lest our Savior come and we will not be ready. It does my soul good to read Autumn Leaves and to note how many of the young of the church are preparing for service. Surely, no person can read the magazine without its creating a greater desire to prepare for greater service in the kingdom of the Lord.

There are so many ways in which we can help each other. Those who have the ability to do, if they only forget self and do as the Master has commanded, preferring one another, may accomplish great things. In our various organizations, some have served for years and are experienced, while others have the ability to be of service if only they had the opportunity for development. Why can we not put into practice the teachings of the Master, and put those who lack opportunity in a position where they may develop the latent powers within them and where they may help others develop? Let the strong help the weak labor for the uplifting of humanity around us. When reflecting upon this great work, I sometimes find myself wishing I had understood what was required of me in the gospel work forty years ago as I do now, or wishing I could recall that many years of my life. I would certainly do more than I have done.

Our Sunday school gave a very nice program Christmas Eve. The attendance was not what it usually is, owing to the bad roads, yet in spite of the mud and rain which hindered the children from getting together for practice, and the fact that two of the program committee were taken seriously ill so they were unable to assist in the work, Sister Frank Graham, the only one left on the committee to carry on the work of preparing the program, trained the children so that the program was very successfully rendered. Brother Holly Dennis, who is always ready for any emergency, came to her assistance, and all went off nicely.

Sister Ward Wellington was recently stricken with appendicitis and rushed to the hospital for an operation. At this writing she is greatly improved. Sister Angie Quick, the third member of the committee, was also taken to the hospital, fearing she, too, would have to undergo an operation. However, she is recovering without one.

Brother Lee Quick has been another of our sick ones. He has been ill for the past few weeks. We have missed his pleasant smile and wise counsel. He is in the mission field most of the time, but we look forward to his sermons when he is home on a visit. This time he has been confined to his bed, and we know we have missed a great deal in not hearing his splendid sermons. The Saints are praying he may speedily recover and again be able to give us comfort and cheer from the Great Source of inspiration.

Jennie Alice, little daughter of Everette Hughes, is recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia,

We are praying for the speedy redemption of Zion.

MRS. H. C. HUGHES.

Lansdowne Branch

EAST SAINT LOUIS, ILLINOIS.—Our Sunday school Christmas program was held on Friday night, December 24. The program committee, consisting of Sisters Mabel O'Bryan, Flora Doepke, and Ruth Brown, did very nice work in arranging the program and working with the children to see that they all learned their parts well.

The choir gave a sacred program on Sunday night, December 26, and it, too, was excellent. Sister Elsie Barraclough is chorister.

On New Year's Eve the Temple Builders gave two plays, and otherwise entertained the branch. Sister Dessie Stroud has charge of the Temple Builders.

Our new officers for the year are as follows: Branch president, Elder George F. Barraclough; superintendent Sunday school Department, Prosper Carl; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, Arthur Anderson; and superintendent Department of Women, Sister Florence Bean.

CLINT DICKENS.

Shenandoah Favored With Program by Graceland Students

Three of our young people, John Topham, Clara Topham, and Alta Royer, who are attending Graceland, came home to spend the Christmas vacation, bringing with them three other students: Margaret Nichols, Shawnee, Ohio; Beatrice Gates, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; and Harry Runkle, Pisgah, Iowa.

On Sunday evening, December 26, the Graceland students favored us with a splendid program in charge of John Topham, occupying the Religio hour. The opening prayer was by John Topham, followed by the hymn, "The old, old path." Beatrice Gates and Clara Topham sang a duet, and Sister Gates gave a talk, "Girls' dorm life." There was a piano duet by Alta Royer and Margaret Nichols, a talk, "Boys' dorm life," by Harry Runkle, and a talk, "Music at Graceland," by Alta Royer. A pleasing piano solo by Margaret Nichols preceded a talk, "Athletics at Graceland," by John Topham. The closing number was a song, "Graceland forever," and Clara Topham offered the benediction.

The music was splendid and talks very good, inspiring everyone present. These Graceland students were very enthusiastic about their college life, and some beautiful sentiments were brought out in their talks, such as: "Graceland means everything to me." "When I was just a little tot, mother and I talked of the time when I could attend Graceland and of the things then to be accomplished." "Graceland is a place for the building of a well-rounded personality." "We can not always have the sunshine of the world, so we are taught to accept our disappointments as stepping-stones to higher achievements." "Graceland means the making of better men and women, fitting them for the church work and the goal, building Zion." "Graceland means to me the realization of my ambitions. It means the developing of a real personality that I may be of use to my heavenly Father in return for his blessings and goodness in giving to me the opportunity of attending Graceland."

They told us how they look forward to the Wednesday evening prayer services in the Administration Building and what the meetings mean to them. On their returning to Graceland, everyone among the Saints here gave them their best wishes for the new year, wishing them success and that they will realize the fruition of their hopeful ambitions.

January 3.—No doubt some of the HERALD readers will be glad to know how Christmas was spent at the Saints' Home, at Lamoni. It did not differ so much from the yuletide observances in many private homes as one might imagine.

For a week or more previous to Christmas there were many mysterious packages going out and coming in. Some were marked "Do not open till Christmas morning." And for this reason Christmas morning was eagerly anticipated. None of the Home family were forgotten. Among other remembrances was a letter to each member of the home from the stake bishopric, bringing Christmas greetings and good wishes. Also there came a Christmas card to each from the stake presidency, a box of candy from Sister Greer, and a package of homemade candy to each member from Sister Dancer, the matron.

About four o'clock in the afternoon a group of young people from the college came over and held a little song service. A comic reading in Negro dialect was contributed by one young lady. The old people seemed to enjoy the entertainment immensely. Brother George Lewis, a young Australian brother who is attending Graceland, was in charge. They promised to come again when "Uncle Roy" gets back. He is spending the holidays with his parents at Rhodes, Iowa.

The Home is as much like a real home as any public institution can be made, thanks to the wonderful woman who presides over it. A number of the inmates of the Home always attend the Sunday morning service at the church. The first Sunday of the New Year a very good sacramental service was held, presided over by Brethren Stubbart and Keown. There were eleven present, and five prayers and eight testimonies were offered. Brother Stead preached a good sermon at the Home on Sunday night.

Everyone was startled and grieved when news reached the Home Sunday morning that Patroness Hall, the girls' dormitory on College Hill, had burned to the ground. Many private homes are being opened for temporary residence for the girls.

ONE OF THE FAMILY.

Spokane, Washington

December 29.—The Spokane district conference and young people's convention is now over. It was a decided success. There were about thirty members from out in the district, representatives of nearly every branch, besides all of the Spokane Saints. Very spiritual young people's prayer services were held every morning at 8.30. Brother Albert Nelson was ordained an elder at the Sunday afternoon sacramental service, under the hands of Brothers Thorburn, Van Eaton, and Case. Brother Van Eaton was the spokesman for the ordination. Brother Thorburn, of Deer Lodge, Montana, was the principal speaker for the conference. His sermons were greatly appreciated.

Brother Oscar Case, district president, made several trips to Wenatchee, Washington, during the past month in the interest of the mimeograph, which was donated to the district by a brother living there. This mimeograph is to be used for the printing of a monthly bulletin for the district. Brother

W. W. Fordham accompanied him on one trip in the interest of tithing. He also called at Sawyer, Idaho. Brother Fordham is our bishop's agent.

The district Sunday school voted at the convention to establish a circulating library of materials for the use of the primary department. One month's supplies will be mailed to each Sunday school, to be used during that month, then forwarded to some other Sunday school for another month.

The Spokane Sunday school is growing and developing very satisfactorily under the leadership of Brother Reuben Porter. We have an enrollment of about ninety in the Sunday school, with about forty in the primary department alone.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is flourishing under the direction of Brother W. W. Wood. It is now having a contest between two groups, known as the Reds and the Blues. The group gaining the most members for the department is to be entertained at a banquet given by the losing side.

The Department of Women of the Spokane Branch held a very successful miscellaneous sale the Saturday before the convention, at which forty dollars was cleared. This was immediately placed in the savings account for a future need.

Everyone in the district seems to be filled with the desire to "sail Zionward."

OLIVE GUNTER HARRIS.

Close Old Year and Begin New

BRADNER, OHIO, January 4.—Since the busy holiday season is past, we are face to face with a new year and find ourselves ready to go forward with newly elected officers. Brother Will Smith was retained as branch president; Brother Huffman, president of the Religio; Brother Oria Smith remains in the office of Sunday school superintendent; Sister Bell Slye is president of the Department of Women.

As the Saints express it, the past year has been full of blessings, and we feel it is the desire of all to be faithful. While in the past year mistakes have been made and will be made in the year before us, yet we trust the spirit of forgiveness and love will prevail, and that God's favor and blessings will crown our efforts with success, that at the end of this year we shall be able to look back and truthfully say we have done the best we could.

Our Christmas program was well attended in spite of the unpleasant weather conditions. The pageant and tableau, "He that cometh," was solemn and impressive. After the program there was a treat for everyone. We feel that even though the treat was just a small box of candy it helped to increase the spirit of good will and cheer that should especially be manifested by Latter Day Saints.

Elder Grice closed his series of meetings December 12 with four baptisms. It was a cold day, and the ice had to be cut. Some nonmembers, men of prominence who attended the service, were heard to remark, "Those people surely have faith and courage to go down in those icy waters." The baptismal service was beautiful, and even though it was cold each candidate came forth with a smile, and as we stood around the icy pond, singing, we were again made happy in the gospel.

The Sunday school institute, held December 5, was made very interesting by the presence of our general superintendent, Brother C. B. Woodstock, who gave us some very beautiful lessons. We hope to develop and profit by his good instruction. Toledo, Sylvania, and Oak Harbor were represented, and a lovely dinner was served by the women at the home of Brother and Sister Slye.

We were also privileged to have with us Apostle R. S. Budd, who preached for us and for a lesson read, "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for my yoke is easy and my burden light," and he explained that a yoke is for two, that we must come where Christ is and take his yoke upon us and learn from him how to pull, for if we lag behind or pull back, we are liable to get a sore neck, and learning to pull means work. We must react. So we got the lesson; even the children could understand. Come again, Brother Budd, we like to hear you.

Brother E. L. Ulrich was at home for the holidays. While here, he was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of an old soldier friend of the church.

Brother and Sister Slye and Brother and Sister Ulrich did some Christmas caroling to the sick folks in town, and on New Year's Eve the young people gathered at the home of Sister Edna Sheplar and enjoyed the evening. There they played games and pulled taffy, while the older folks went home from Religio with Sister Ulrich and enjoyed the radio and games. Refreshments were served at both places, and so the Saints began the New Year together.

Joplin, Missouri

As the old year takes its departure, and we enter into the new year, we can say the closing of this year's work in the Joplin Branch finds us on the upward move, both financially and spiritually, in all departments of the work. We trust that the end of another year may find us still growing until we shall reach that standard of perfection, which will enable us to assist in redeeming Zion.

Thanksgiving was observed with special services, Pastor O. C. Karlstrom preaching the Thanksgiving sermon at half past seven in the evening.

The conference at Webb City, Missouri, was well attended by Joplin Saints, all reporting a splendid meeting. Apostle John F. Garver, District President Amos T. Higdon, Bishop Ellis Short, sr., and Elder Lee Quick, who were in attendance at Webb City conference, visited our branch Monday, November 29. Brother Garver preached for us at the half-past-seven hour.

Quite a number of our branch have been on the sick list, and we have missed their presence and good work at the different services. Sister G. E. Carter has been sorely afflicted for several weeks, but we are glad to report at this writing that she is considerably improved. Sister J. A. Outt, daughter of Sister Jennie Hutchinson, also has been in a serious condition, but is improving.

On Sunday, December 5, all services were of a high spiritual order. The time was well occupied at the sacramental service, and the sweet influence of the Holy Spirit hovered around, bringing us into a unity and realization that God is still recognizing us as his people.

We are pleased to report the fact that the music department has taken on renewed interest during the past month, favoring us with special song service including some very beautiful quartet numbers.

On Tuesday, December 7, branch officers were elected for the coming year. Elder C. T. Sheppard succeeded Elder O. C. Karlstrom as pastor, the latter having served two years. There was a close race between these two brethren, Brother Sheppard having one majority in the vote. C. E. Wilson was reelected clerk; pianist, Lucile Sheppard; chorister, Marguerite Sheppard; financial clerk, C. E. Gray; in charge of flower committee, Sister G. E. Carter; Raymond Troyer succeeded Sister O. C. Karlstrom as publicity agent, she having served two years; girls' supervisor, Sister S. G. Carrow; boys' superintendent, Raymond Troyer; supervisor of the Department of Women, Sister J. A. Graves; Elder S. N. Gray was reelected Sunday school superintendent; and Chester Carter succeeded Elder S. G. Carrow as superintendent of the Religio. The above named officers will begin or resume their work January 1.

The Department of Women served a chicken dinner in a store building on December 16. Food served at this dinner was donated by friends who are not members of the church, as well as the sisters who gave chickens and other eatables which go to make a chicken dinner, including pie. The price of the meal was thirty cents. A good social time was spent by Saints and friends, and the department cleared more than twenty-two dollars.

Sister A. P. Free departed this life December 21, at the home of her eldest daughter, Sister J. E. Briswalter. Sister Free was a member of the church many years and was well known by many in the church. Brother Free preceded her in death a few years ago. In 1916 they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Sister Free lived a long and useful life, dying firm in the faith and leaving behind a beautiful example for others to follow. Funeral services were held in the chapel of the Frank Severs Undertaking Company, Elder O. C. Karlstrom preaching the sermon to a large congregation.

Elder V. E. Sheppard, missionary in the Spring River District, is home for the holidays.

Elders O. C. Karlstrom and G. E. Carter motored to Galena, Kansas, December 22, where William Lee was led into the waters of baptism. Elder Karlstrom was in charge and Elder Carter officiated.

The Christmas program, a cantata, was given on Sunday night, December 26. The opening prayer was by Brother Karlstrom and the closing prayer by the superintendent of the school, Elder S. N. Gray. One of our neighbors, a member of an orchestra, was successful in getting the other members of his orchestra, together, and they furnished music for the Christmas program. All of the orchestra were non-members except Sister Bonnie Leslie, who presided at the piano. The large basement was filled to its capacity.

Sister Nellie Calkins, formerly of Joplin, whose home is now in California, spent the holidays with friends here. Sister Nellie is a student at Graceland.

The Department of Women will hold a pie and chili supper New Year's Eve, and after the food is sold a watch meeting will be held and an interesting program rendered.

Springfield, Missouri

January 1.—Friday evening, December 3, the Department of Recreation and Expression put on a radio program. The rostrum was arranged to resemble a broadcasting station, having the "mike" and all apparatus to make the program as real as possible. Some of the best talent in the Springfield Branch took part in the program which included instrumental and vocal music and readings. Also, an address by Pastor Ansley and District President A. M. Baker. The latter, being a little enthused with the missionary spirit, talked a little loudly, and the messenger boy brought a telegram that "his talk was heard at the North Pole."

Southern Missouri district conference convened at Springfield December 4 and 5, which proved to be the best that we have had for some time. Brother George Davis and family, Sister Salem and son, Sister Miller and daughter, Sister Ricketts, and others, of Thayer, Missouri, were present. Brother Sidney Gray and wife and Brother and Sister Hotlhausen motored up from Joplin for the morning and afternoon services. A basket dinner was held in the basement Sunday at noon, and this was enjoyed by all.

Brother A. Carmichael arrived Saturday morning and from that time until services closed Sunday night, he was kept busy. Brother Carmichael's visit has been a wonderful help to the work in this district. His clear-cut way of presenting the church program, added to his congenial personality, won the hearts of all his hearers.

A birthday dinner was given December 12 at the home of Brother and Sister A. W. Duemler in honor of Mrs. J. B. Ansley, wife of our pastor. A large, candle-lit cake graced the center of the table, and covers were laid for twenty-six guests. In the afternoon, music and games were enjoyed, and Mrs. Ansley was presented with a special gift.

The Mizpah Chapter of Temple Builders had a chicken dinner down town on December 18, and $76.35 was made above all expenses. Seventy-five dollars of this was paid on the new furnace.

December 19, we had occasion to use the baptismal font, six being baptized by the pastor, and it was an occasion of rejoicing. They were confirmed at the evening service by Brothers Henry Sparling and A. W. Duemler.

December 26 the junior department had a very impressive program in the basement. With their sand tables they arranged a miniature city of Bethlehem, the Sea of Galilee, the Temple, inn, stable, Herod's palace, all made of cardboard, colored with crayons. As the story of the birth of our Savior was read, two of the children illustrated with the characters named, in harmony with the story being read, making it very impressive and showing they had a full understanding of the story. At the end of the program they turned their Christmas offering over to the branch solicitor, who responded with a short talk and prayer.

Duluth, Minnesota

December 29.—As we endeavor to write to our official paper, our minds are made to dwell upon the great sacrifice of our Father when he sent his Son into the world, that whosoever believeth on him shall not perish, but have everlasting life. We realize the goodness of our Savior, who offered himself for the redemption of the human race. Can we not now dedicate our lives anew to our Master, allowing the influence of the gospel we love to radiate from us to the convincing of others of its divine truth? The spirit of giving should follow us through our daily life, for the Master has said, "Freely ye have received, freely give." The greatest gift of all is self.

Brother A. C. Bundy was the speaker on November 28, devoting his attention and effort to the theme, "Our heritage," and reading Isaiah 29. Elder P. G. Schnuckle, our pastor, spoke in the evening, using 1 Corinthians 13, the theme of the sermon being charity. What a small word charity is, but what a wealth of meaning, such as patience, kindness, absence of envy, humility, decorousness, unselfishness, even temper, pure-mindedness, cheerfulness, truthfulness, belief, hopefulness, long-suffering, endurance, temperance, it has. Charity is fully exemplified in the pure love of Christ for the sinful world.

Sacramental service the 5th of December was in charge of Pastor P. G. Schnuckle, assisted by Elder Samuel Case. W. C. Stauty passed the emblems. Many earnest prayers and testimonies were given, and a desire on the part of the Saints to go forward more after the likeness of their Maker was manifested.

Brother Stauty was the speaker on the morning of the second Sunday of December, reading Colossians 3, and using as a topic, "Christian duties and graces," laying stress upon our right conception of prayer in order that it may ascend on high. We should especially guard that our attitude of mind is such that we can attune ourselves to God, that he may grant unto us the desires fitting for our mortal needs.

Elder Schnuckle spoke in the evening, employing the thought found in Hebrews 10:23-39. He also preached in the evening of December 19, reading Proverbs 3, his text being verses 9 and 10: "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase: So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." He brought out the necessity of filing our inventories and of complying with the law of tithing, using Malachi 3:8-12 inclusive as a specific example.

The Sunday school children gave a Christmas program on the evening of December 26. Sister Velma Erickson, chairman of the program committee, with the aid of others, was responsible for the success of it, and the little tots did fine, each one taking part. When Santa Claus was drawn out of the well in the old oaken bucket by Wesley Blake, Sunday school superintendent, with bags of goodies, you could see the smile of pleasure on the face of each youngster.

Our desire in the coming year is to go forward, so that when we look back we may be able to see many improvements in our lives. The gospel becomes more beautiful daily, and while we realize there is too much of the human element about us and not enough of the divine, we are still hopeful of arising in the strength of our Savior and putting on the full gospel armor. The Adversary is always busy trying to thwart the purposes of those who would do good. Paul said, "When I would do good, evil is ever present." Our prayers are that God will be merciful to one and all who lawfully strive to walk in his ways. May 1927 be a prosperous year to the church and to each individual who has named the name of Christ.

Central Chicago Branch

Sixty-sixth and Honore Streets.—The close of 1926 finds our branch in good condition. The Department of Recreation and Expression was the first to elect new officers: superintendent for the coming year, Brother Richard Keir; secretary, Brother Kelly Speace; junior treasurer, Brother Stephen Lester; chorister, Brother Carlyle Kueffer; pianist, Sister Faye Bell.

Brother H. P. W. Keir is conducting a class in the study of Old Testament history, which is most enjoyable and instructive.

The Sunday school officers for the coming year are: superintendent, Sister Hattie Bell; assistant superintendent, Brother Clem Evans; secretary, Sister Grace Thoman; treasurer, Sister Freda Bell; chorister, Brother George Kerr; pianist, Sister Pearl Kerr; librarian, Brother Kelly Speace.

The Christmas entertainment was a musical one, given by the combined effort of the senior and junior choirs, illustrated by pictures, as was also the story of "The other wise man," told by Sister Bell in a very interesting manner. The entertainment was in charge of Brother Carlyle Kueffer, conductor, and Sister Faye Bell, accompanist.

Brother Sherman, who was badly burned a few weeks ago, is doing nicely.

We are glad to once more welcome into our midst Sister Wainwright who has been in the Northwest for two years. Her sister, Sister Hare, is with her for a short visit.

Brother J. J. Oliver is a proud grandfather, a little one having come to gladden the home of Brother and Sister C. Oliver.

The branch business meeting will be held January 17.

From the Hoosier Capital

On Sunday, December 5, the heart of our financial officer was made glad by the presentation to the branch of a check for one hundred and twenty-five dollars by a visiting friend. Truly, it was appreciated by all of us, and we are led to exclaim, "God moves in mysterious ways."

On the following Saturday Sister Sarah M. Walker was seriously injured by an automobile, her right arm being broken in two places, and she sustained a scalp wound and numerous body bruises. She was taken to the Christian Hospital, where she received excellent care. A wonderful blessing was given from the Lord through the administration of the elders. She was taken to the home of her daughter on January 3, and we hope soon to enjoy her presence with us in the services at the church.

Sunday, December 19, our pastor and wife worshiped with us, having just returned from Bay City, Michigan, where they held a series of meetings. Sister Margaret Stephenson, of Duluth, Minnesota, and Sister Ina Hawn, both Graceland students, spent the Christmas vacation with the latter's parents. They had many nice things to say about "our Graceland."

Brother Glen Tice, our branch chorister, surprised us with a vesper service, composed mostly of musical numbers, suitable for the season of the year, on Tuesday evening, December 21. This was an innovation, and while it was not attended as well as we wished, it was a commendable effort and gave us a clearer vision of what can be attained by united effort and consecrated service.

The annual Christmas tree and visit from Santa Claus was celebrated Friday evening, December 24. This was a pleasant occasion, one that is always looked forward to by the children, young and old. Those who had charge of the program, as well as the children who took part, are to be commended upon the success of their undertaking.

Patriarch Matthews, wife, and son-in-law, of Columbus, Ohio, worshiped with us on Sunday, December 26. Brother Matthews was the speaker at the morning hour and gave us much food for thought, which we appreciated. Come again, Brother Matthews.

The Sunday school business session at which officers for the year 1927 were elected was filled with a spirit of unity of thought and purpose which augurs for the good of this department of the work. Very little change was made in the official personnel.

The annual branch business meeting convened on Tuesday evening, January 4, and here the branch officers for the ensuing year were selected. Elder J. A. Robinson was chosen president; clerk, Sister Bernice Krichbaum; treasurer, Elder Arthur W. Gage; the priesthood of the branch and all departments were sustained. The treasurer's report showed progress in a financial way, and we are satisfied if the same spirit of unity and cooperation which characterized this meeting can be retained (and there is no legitimate reason why it should not be) the year 1927 will be productive of much good for the work in our city.

Second Columbus Branch

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 1.—It was very encouraging to have our missionaries, Jacob Halb and E. D. Finken, to meet with us in a prayer meeting on December 1, and we hope they will call again very soon.

Sacramental service on the 5th was well attended, and the Spirit of the Master was there to encourage the faithful. In the evening Elder C. W. Clark preached an interesting sermon, closing his series of sermons on Sunday evening. We hope he will come again.

On December 7 the Department of Women held a monthly business meeting at the home of Sister Minnie Turvey, and the following officers were elected: leader, Sister A. H. Neman; secretary, Vera M. Hunter; treasurer, Anna French; historian, Vassie Sheets. This department has its program for the year made out and expects to have some very interesting meetings in the course of time. The sisters are studying parliamentary law and will have papers on different subjects each meeting. The new year looks very bright, and it is hoped that by the end of 1927 we will each one be better prepared for service.

Patriarch G. T. Griffiths preached a spiritual sermon on December 12, taking for a text Jude 3: "Contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints."

In the evening the Columbus School of Music gave a very interesting lecture on the life of Christ, using stereopticon pictures. These were beautiful, and the lecture was enjoyed by all. We were favored with three solos, two duets, and two choir selections, and these being illustrated by pictures were a real treat.

James E. Bishop, district president, preached a wonderful sermon on December 19, selecting as a topic of discussion, "Authority." In the evening Doctor W. B. Reeves preached.

On Christmas Eve the Sunday school gave a Christmas program. We were surprised and pleased at the splendid talent which is being developed by our workers. Santa Claus attended in his glory and presented the children with presents and candy.

Bishop H. E. French preached on the morning of the 26th on the theme, "What think ye of Christ?" In the evening G. H. Kirkendall discussed the topic, "The other wise man." Special numbers for morning and evening services were beautiful. Our chorister, Sister Hazel Gribben, is to be congratulated on the splendid response she is getting in her work.

Brother and Sister J. E. Matthews were privileged to meet with us again on December 31 at our last prayer service of the year. It was a source of encouragement to have them with us, but they leave January 3 for Saint Joseph, Missouri, where they will be located for some time. The Saint Joseph Branch will gain two splendid workers, and our loss will be their gain.

Our business meeting resulted in the unanimous choice of Brother H. E. French for branch president, and he chose Doctor W. B. Reeves and A. H. Nieman as counselors. Other officers chosen were: organist, Vera M. Hunter; assistant, Maud Reeves; chorister, Hazel Gribben; assistant, Lucinda Madden; treasurer, C. B. Turvey; branch clerk, Lucinda Madden; publicity agent, Vassie Sheets. The committee reported that we had cleared our church of debt, and the date of dedication will be published in the HERALD just as soon as we hear from President F. M. Smith.

Long Beach, California

January 1.—On Thanksgiving evening at half past five, about one hundred Saints and their friends met in the basement of the church and partook of a bounteous dinner of chicken, with all the trimmings, prepared by Division One of the Department of Women, under the supervision of Sisters Effie Gregory and Dicie Rogers. The basement was divided into four sections, each one beautifully decorated and presided over by a Temple Builder, wearing cap and apron in harmony with her own particular color scheme. The five pastel shades used blended harmoniously, transforming an otherwise ordinary appearing basement into a veritable fairyland. With the leader of the Temple Builders, Sister Enid Moran, acting as head waitress, the large crowd was served in record time. After the inner man was satisfied, all were invited to the upper auditorium, where an impromptu program was rendered. The Temple Builders were again in evidence, this time participating in several humorous stunts, much to the enjoyment of all. A number of those in the audience were unexpectedly called upon to contribute to the program, and all very graciously responded. As an appropriate closing to a happy evening, Pastor W. A. Teagarden gave a short talk in keeping with the day, pointing out the many blessings of the past year for which our little branch should give thanks.

Our young people were much in evidence at the banquet lately held in Los Angeles in connection with the young people's convention. Under the direction of Sister Leola Nice, they contributed to the enjoyment of the banqueters by staging a humorous stunt entitled "Wild Nell," or "The pet of the plains." Both young and old were privileged to hear Brother Floyd McDowell deliver two inspiring sermons.

The past month has been a very busy one for all workers. The Sunday school Christmas program under the supervision of Enid Moran was very creditably rendered on the evening of the 23d. It consisted of readings, musical numbers, and a three-act play, "Mr. Richie changes his mind." Our young brother, Jack Milner, deserves much credit for the way in which he directed the play, as well as his portrayal of Mr. Richie, the cold-hearted business man who would have nothing to do with Christmas, but who after spending an evening alone with thoughts of mother and his boyhood days, experienced a change of heart and made amends by scattering Christmas cheer throughout his entire business organization.

Sunday, December 26, was a happy day. At the close of the Sunday school study period, we listened to talks on Sunday school work by Brother Herbert Pedersen, district Sunday school superintendent, and Brother Wilbur D. Gillen. At eleven o'clock Brother Gillen again addressed the Saints, and was led by the Spirit to forsake his prepared outline in favor of a discussion of stewardships and the Zion program. His interpretation of these two vital subjects was an inspiration to many. The choir rendered several Christmas anthems.

The entire evening service was given over to members of the Department of Women, who presented the pantomime, "Holy night," opening with a beautiful garden scene in which the angel, Gabriel, appeared to the Virgin Mary, and closing with the warning to flee into Egypt. The birth of the Christ was portrayed in six impressive scenes, each one closing with a tableau in which soft colored lights were used. To add to the beauty of several of the scenes, Brother Harry Sacry very skillfully painted for us a copy of the hills of Judea, with the Sea of Galilee in the distance. This background when used with the colored lights made a beautiful picture. Between the scenes a vested chorus sang appropriate songs. Like most things in California, this pantomime was quite "unusual." No one under thirty-five was given a part, and one of the prominent characters has passed threescore and ten. Several others are nearing threescore, while a number of others have passed the half century mark. Many nonmembers were present, and of these a number expressed surprise that anything so beautiful and impressive could be staged in the limited space we have, our platform being quite small and without stage equipment of any kind.

The Sunday school is starting the new year with a missionary campaign, their slogan being, "Every member of the branch a member of the Sunday school."

Several families of Independence and vicinity are spending the winter in Long Beach, and we are glad to have them meet with us.

Brother Carl Rouf, of Saint Joseph, Missouri, has been with us several months. This energetic young brother is studiously preparing himself to be of greater service to the church. He is also training for the Catalina Channel swim January 15, at which time a purse of thirty thousand dollars will be awarded the victor.

Sister Arian Motejl, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is wintering in Long Beach, and she is a great help in Sunday school and Religio work.

Our branch journeyed en masse to Los Angeles recently to obtain first-hand information about the Auditorium from President F. M. Smith. We were shown pictures of the progress of the work, and every bosom thrilled as our President painted for us his vision of the time when the towers of Zion will glitter.

The Long Beach Saints are very much interested in the reports from the different branches appearing in the HERALD. We are always on the lookout for new ideas to put into effect, and welcome any innovation which will improve our local work.

Onaway, Michigan

January 3.—The series of meetings held in our branch by Elder E. N. Burt were much enjoyed by the Saints.

We are sorry to have to report that Sister Luella Hoedel and family and Sister Ruby Brooks and family have moved away for the winter. We hope they may be with us next summer.

The Sunday school put on a very pleasing play by the older classes and a program by the younger members of the school on Christmas Eve.

At our annual business meeting we voted to work under the coordination system for the coming year. Elder Max A. Kramer was reelected branch president; assistant, Elder Fred Truax; Sister K. Gagie was sustained as clerk; treasurer, Deacon John Fairman; Sunday school superintendent, Deacon Owen Wood, with Sister Ruth Roberts as assistant.

Elder E. N. Burt has been indisposed with la grippe and blood poisoning of his hand, but is somewhat improved at the present time. Sister Brown, Sister Wood, and Brother and Sister Davis have also had la grippe.

Four carloads of Saints recently went from our branch to Cheboygan to attend a very interesting and instructive program given at that place.

The members of our branch who live at Afton are continuing active in their Sunday school work this winter. They also held a watch party at the home of Sister Garfiedo and enjoyed a coasting party from the home of Sister Ormsbee in the past week.

Brother and Sister Truax have rented a house in town and will spend a portion of their time here this winter.

Independence

Stone Church

A spirited song service precluded the lesson study of the Sunday school hour. The school, led by Miss Marcine Smith, sang "Trust and obey," "I know that my Redeemer liveth," and "Tenderly lead thou me on." Following the class work, the congregation was favored with a violin-cello duet by Gomer Cool and Stewart Tandberg. They played the "Flower song" and were accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Stewart Tandberg.

Superintendent Hartshorn read the list of visitors present, naming some from the various States, and from this report it was learned that three young Hawaiian brethren were present.

The singing of the hymn, "Lord, may our hearts be tuned to sing thy great and everlasting praise," announced the opening of the morning preaching hour, and the invocation was offered by Apostle D. T. Williams. The offertory, "Volga boat song," was followed by a choir member, "Sing to the Lord," by Mendelssohn.

This was a rally service observed in similar manner in all the branches of the church in Independence, for the purpose of stimulating interest and causing the young people to rally to the gospel ensign and support the young people's revival, which opens here next Sunday.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer had been selected and announced as the speaker for this hour, and he presented for the attention and consideration of his hearers the scripture lesson John 12: 19-33. Taking the subject, "Lifting up Christ," he carefully analyzed the scripture reading, forcefully impressing upon the minds of his congregation the necessity of co-operation among men before Christ can be lifted up before the world. We can not live to ourselves alone, but must die to self before we can perform our part of the mission of Christ. There is just as much the cry today, "We would see Jesus," as there was nineteen hundred years ago; in business, society, fraternal organizations, etc. People are seeking Jesus and the principles of life he laid down as a pattern for us to follow. It is our privilege as the church of Christ, established in the latter days, to bear up the cross of Christ, to lift him up to the world, remembering that if we would see him, we must die to selfish interests.

K L D S Sunday Activities

The morning Bible study hour was conducted by Pastor Ralph W. Farrell. The music for this service was furnished by the junior department of the Walnut Park Church, under the direction of Mrs. E. E. Moorman. This was followed by a sermonet by Pastor Farrell.

The usual eleven o'clock service in the main auditorium was broadcast.

At three in the afternoon the Radio Church took the air, music being furnished by ministers of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and sermonet by J. A. Koehler, bishop of the Holden Stake.

Musicians from Walnut Park supplied the musical numbers at the half past six vesper service, and Evangelist U. W. Greene preached the sermonet.

The Latter Day Saint studio service at fifteen minutes after nine completed the day's radio program, and Elder James A. Thomas, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, delivered the sermonet; Second Church Choir furnished the musical program.

Evening Services

An exceptionally attractive Religio program followed the lesson study of that department on Sunday evening, the 9th. There was a delightful reading by little Miss Helen Rich, a baritone solo by Gordon Kress, accompanied by Miss Melva Ward, two saxophone solo numbers by Mr. Harry Robinson, and a pleasing anthem, contributed by the Religio Quartet, composed of Miss Lois Cool, Miss Nida Vincent, Mr. Ronald Smith, and Mr. Gordon Kress. This is the quartet's first appearance in 1927, and members of the Religio hope to hear them many times before the year is out. They were accompanied by Miss Melva Ward.

At a quarter till eight, a program arranged to observe the installation of officers and teachers of the Stone Church Sunday school was begun. The program was as follows:

March selection, Stone Church Orchestra.

Song, "Earnest workers," Congregation.

Invocation, Superintendent in Zion, S. A. Thiel.

Musical number, Orchestra.

Presentation of general superintendents, President Floyd M. McDowell.

Response, Superintendent G. S. Trowbridge.

Musical selection, Orchestra.

Presentation of department superintendents, officers, and teachers, General superintendent, C. B. Hartshorn.

Address, with charge to officers and teachers, Sunday school superintendent, C. B. Woodstock.

Song, "We'll scatter good seed," Congregation.

Benediction, President F. M. McDowell.

This well-ordered program was both attractive and impressive, and as the congregation looked into the faces of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school, seated in the choir loft, they sensed the fact that these are indeed earnest workers, seeking to come up higher, to reach their goal—effective teaching. This is a goal for those who wish to do a good work in a better way and are willing to make the effort to qualify for a more effectual service in Christian education.

In his address Brother Woodstock described the teacher's contract, a contract drawn up between the teacher and the Sunday school, wherein the teacher agrees to attend regularly; to qualify for the position by pursuing one or more of the teacher training courses offered at the Independence Institute, in a special class under departmental management, by correspondence with the general departments, or to read at least one approved book or its equivalent on religious education; to attend regular teachers' conference and institute sessions as may be provided or recommended by the officers of the school when it is possible; to assist in maintaining discipline, cooperation, regular attendance, and punctuality among the pupils; to respond to committee assignments; to devote at least one hour per week to constructive preparation for the task of Sunday teaching; and to endeavor to live consistently a godly life, as well as other provisions. Truly, they will be trained workmen, approved of God.

Brother Woodstock expressed a wish that a like contract could be placed in the hands of parents, which would provide that the parents of Zion must subscribe to the maintaining of the sacred responsibility of child rearing; to respect Christian training; to guard the rights of heredity; maintain physical strength; prevent disease; provide reasonable hours of rest, work, play; maintain righteous development; set examples of love and patience; make joyous companions; establish an altar of family worship; give themselves to study; obey financial law, etc.

Much effort has been put forth during the last week to call the coming young people's revival to the attention of every young person between the ages of fourteen and forty in Zion. A letter giving the details concerning this meeting was mailed to every home in Independence last week, and this week young volunteers about one hundred strong are distributing cards at each home. At three o'clock Sunday afternoon a group of workers and those interested in the coming event met at the Y. K. T. classroom for a service of prayer. This was a fine meeting, and all were encouraged to greater zeal in the cause of the Lord. There will be a mass prayer meeting of the young people in Zion in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church tonight, that all may be in a spiritually receptive condition for the opening of the revival, which will occur at the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning, the 16th. At that hour President Floyd M. McDowell will be the speaker and will introduce Apostle Roy S. Budd, who will speak Sunday evening and each succeeding evening till Saturday night. These evening meetings will be preceded by a community song service at half past seven, and special musical numbers will be furnished by the various districts.

Saturday and Sunday, January 22 and 23, a young people's convention will be conducted by President F. M. McDowell.

Interesting Personals

The greater part of the corps of leading officials of the church is still in Independence, attending the ministerial conference, which will end Friday, the 14th. President Frederick M. Smith departed for points in the East last Thursday, January 6, and the next day Bishop Albert Carmichael left on a two weeks' trip. Presidents Elbert A. Smith and Floyd M. McDowell, Bishops J. A. Becker and M. H. Siegfried, and all the apostles with the exception of Brother McConley, who is in California, and Brother Ellis, who is in Canada, are here. Missionaries and members of the Seventy are here at the center place from many parts of central United States.

Bishop M. C. Fisher, of Somerville, Massachusetts, spent five days in Independence last week, renewing old acquaintances, making new ones, and informing himself concerning the progress the church is making here in Zion.

The funeral of Elder Edward Rannie occurred at the Stone Church Sunday at 1.30. Brother Rannie died on Friday, January 7, as the culmination of a serious breakdown in health which came several years back. For months he had been confined to his home, being cared for by his wife who mourns his departure. His two sons, Alma E. and Paul R., were in attendance. The services were in charge of Apostle J. A. Gillen, who was assisted by Evangelist Hyrum O. Smith, and the sermon was delivered by Evangelist Frederick A. Smith. Pallbearers were chosen from his long list of close friends among the high priests, and many ministers were in attendance. The community senses the fact that a man of great integrity has passed away, and that a useful, tireless minister has finished his work in the earth. The obituary read by Apostle Gillen will be published in another HERALD column in the near future.

The funeral service of Mabel Lillian Curtis, daughter of Brother and Sister J. F. Curtis, occurred Thursday afternoon at half past two. The large attendance almost filled the entire auditorium and gallery, showing conclusively the sympathy of the Saints and friends, and the standing of the deceased. Apostle Paul M. Hanson spoke words of encouragement and deep sympathy; members of the school she attended furnished the music, cared for the beautiful floral offerings, and bore the casket. Interment was at Mound Grove Cemetery.

Second Church

Religio sessions were resumed on Friday evening, and good attendance and interest giving encouragement to the officers, Brother Scott and Brother Kroesen presiding. All should be in attendance January 14, as Brother Rawlings will be present with a matter of importance for the consideration of the society.

Sunday's young people's prayer meeting was well attended and encouraging.

Morning and evening sermons were delivered by Elders E. A. Curtis and Ray Whiting, to large and attentive audiences. These ministers are in attendance at the ministerial conference which closes on Friday.

A young people's meeting was conducted at 10.45, at which several of the young women and young men expressed themselves as intensely interested in the forthcoming meetings to be opened next Sunday morning at the Stone Church. Large numbers of young were at the meeting and remained to hear Elder Curtis's sermon.

Liberty Street

During the past week a great deal of much-needed repair work has been done on the church. The interior has been greatly beautified by a four-tone coat of paint. Several other improvements are to be added; then our congregation can sit through a service with a feeling of satisfaction, knowing that our church is as clean and attractive as we wish our homes to be.

Bishop G. W. Eastwood met with the Silver Wing Temple Builders Friday night and gave them considerable information concerning inventories. Most of the girls filed their inventories and expressed their joy in getting initiated into the business methods of the church.

There is keen interest among the young people of our district over the young people's revival which is to be held at the Stone Church, beginning the 16th. We believe a great amount of good will be accomplished.

The junior choir under the direction of Sister Leona Robinson is doing good work. They rendered two special numbers Sunday morning, one of which deserves especial mention, a duet, "Who will our pilot be?" by Bessie Totty and Dorothy Peek, two of our very young sisters, neither of them yet thirteen years old.

Elder John Gardner spoke Sunday morning in behalf of the coming revival. A true soldier hates to hear a bugle sound retreat. So should every loyal Latter Day Saint be. We must be ready for marching orders and take up the cry of "Forward to 1930." Can we count the cost in lives and sacrifices? can we estimate just how far we have come? then can we turn our eyes and see how far we have to go? Our speaker recounted the sacrifice of death of many in the past, and the scores of living sacrifices on every page of our history. Do we as a people, especially the young people, stop short of the goal in thinking out our problems? Can any of us do things that hurt our consciences and get by with them? Almost without exception those who are pillars of faith and works are those who at some time in life fought out serious battles. Can we get a true perspective of our church and its program, or are we so occupied with our own problems that we can not see the bigger things?

In closing he added, "I would like to leave this message with every young person, 'Think your problem straight through.'"

Pastor Leonard White from the fullness of his heart added his tribute to the work of this revival, admonishing his people to make all preparation possible to attend.

In the evening Elder W. D. Tordoff preached. His subject was "Prayer," and the scripture reading was from Luke 18: 10-18. The attitude in which we come to God in prayer is the principal factor in the sort of a blessing we receive. If we come in faith and humility as did the publican, we receive the blessing. If we can bring ourselves to trust our heavenly Father as our little ones trust us and look to us for protection and care, we have come a long way on our preparation to be subjects of his kingdom.

Walnut Park

Large crowds from the various districts greet the speakers from the ministerial conference who occupy each evening in the Walnut Park Church. While the sermons are being preached especially to the members of the priesthood, many others are attending and receiving light and confirmation. The sermons are being reported for publication. Speakers last week were John F. Garver on Tuesday evening, Elbert A. Smith Wednesday, and J. A. Gillen Thursday and Friday. Frank A. Russell directs the singing. The meetings will continue next week, closing Friday night.

The eight o'clock prayer meeting Sunday was an interesting one, more than half a hundred being present and many taking part—young and old.

At the eleven o'clock hour a symposium of rally day talks was had on the subject "Forward to 1930," the meeting being in charge of Elder W. T. Gard. Scores of young people marched up the aisles to the choir seats, singing "Onward, Christian soldiers," the orchestra accompanying and the congregation joining in the singing. Prayer by Earl J. Cox. Song, "Something to do for the Master each day," led by Sanford Downs. Brother Gard spoke briefly and introduced the following speakers, all young people:

Agnes Adams talked on the church program, wherein the work of the youth is involved, stressing their part in the financial line. Marion Schafer spoke with positiveness on requirements in young people vital to success, emphasizing the pure life.

After all sang together, "We're marching to Zion," Ada Fallon gave her talk, heartily and sincerely, on the beauty of living together harmoniously and helpfully. While all can not become good leaders, all can be good followers, which is fully as important. The last speaker, Clyde Bullard, has apparently been trying successfully to live his religion amid adverse conditions and was happy to be among so many young people unholding the ideals he has striven toward. His talk was deeply religious, stating that among his greatest desires was the gaining of knowledge, wisdom, and vision, particularly a vision of his work and how it can be accomplished. Glaud Smith sang, "Zion the beautiful beckons us on," and the closing hymn followed: "Earnest workers for the Master."

On such occasions one is led to notice the wealth of beauty and meaning our church hymns possess, which by sincere participation can fittingly express the longing, the zeal, and the hopes of many.

At the preliminary declamatory contest at six o'clock, those taking part were Velva Butterworth, Ottelene Colebank, Ferne Price, and Agnes Adams. The judges named Agnes Adams for first place and Ferne Price as alternate.

The song service at half past seven was led by Earl J. Cox. A trio, Ada Fallon, Alberta Lanpher, and Margaret Gard, contributed one excellent number.

A babe was blessed at this meeting, John Calvin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Woodman. Two great-uncles of the baby officiated, John A. Dowker and David E. Dowker.

The evening sermon was by Elder David E. Dowker, who spoke with liberty and power as he sought to cause his hearers to come face to face with their responsibilities, reminding them that each must eventually return to God his individual commission with a statement of how he has used it.

On Sunday morning Brother E. Y. Hunker was the speaker and gave his attention to a consideration of the duties lying before us. He spoke with good liberty and left many new ideas in the minds of his hearers.

Elder F. C. Bevan, of Ottumwa, Iowa, occupied the evening preaching hour, giving us a straight-forward talk, and reminding us to keep our minds on the goal for which we are striving, looking neither to the right nor left but keeping our eyes straight ahead of us on the path we must follow.

On Monday evening a farewell party was given to Brother and Sister Clements at the church. Because of the ill health of Brother Clements, they are moving to Pontiac, Michigan. They hope to return in about two years. A large crowd was present to bid them good-by, and a suitable program was rendered for them in the basement while the orchestra had regular practice upstairs, later furnishing musical numbers which were appreciated. Refreshments were served, after which all reassembled upstairs. The pianist began to play a wedding march, and to the surprise of many a bridal party entered. Brother Charles H. Hunsburger, son of Sister Clements, was the groom, and Miss Flossie Harvey, daughter of Sister Brown, was his bride. Pastor W. J. Brewer officiated. Everyone was then invited to attend a reception given at the home of the bride's mother on Tuesday evening. The young couple will accompany Brother and Sister Clements to Michigan. The Saints and friends wish them a long, peaceful, and happy journey through life.

Every Saint and friend enjoyed the party, and a spirit of mutual love and friendship was manifested by beaming smiles and hearty handshakes. Indeed, the people of Enoch

Hill rejoice that God has seen fit to bless us with a like-mindedness which makes us one big family, with a mutual love, and concern in the welfare of each other.

East Independence

There was good attendance at the midweek prayer service, and an excellent meeting was enjoyed. At the Religio, on Friday evening, there was not as large an attendance as we hoped to see, but an interesting session was held.

Roy Stepp, eldest son of Brother and Sister D. Stepp, is very low with pneumonia. We trust that the Lord will give him the blessing he so much needs when he is administered to, that he may soon be back in his place in school and in church services.

On Sunday morning Brother Charles J. Smith was the speaker. He related many interesting experiences from his own life. This was rally day for the young people, and Brother Smith's sermon was especially fitting for this time.

Elder Hubert Case had been announced to give an illustrated lecture in the evening on the life of the Indians. But we had the lecture minus the illustrated part. Some accident had happened to the picture machine, and although a helper was sent to Independence to try to replace the broken part, the effort was unsuccessful. However, we all enjoyed the lecture, and at the close Brother Case gave opportunity for questions. The pastor asked this one: "Will you give us the pictures Monday night?" It was decided to do so, and we were promised that he would try to have more pictures. On Monday night, January 10, the showing of the pictures necessarily involved more talking. We enjoyed the evening, and are reminded of the old saying, "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good."

Holden Stake

Warrensburg

We are very sorry to hear of Brother W. S. Macrae's illness at Holden, and hope he will soon be able to return to his home in Warrensburg.

The Department of Women held its last meeting of the year at the home of Sister Viola Blain. The sisters have finished a beautiful comforter.

Brother Robert Burgess, of Knobnoster, spoke for us Sunday morning, the 19th. We are always glad to have Brother Burgess with us.

The Christmas program was given Sunday evening, the 19th. Among the outstanding numbers were the following: A quartet, "Sing to the star," with dramatization by the junior class; pantomime, "The shepherds," Hazel Ball and Edna Mae Haring; violin solo, Brother Albert McCullough, accompanied by Alberta Kimbal; solo, Wilma Rasche; pantomime, Inez Johnson; solo, Hazel Johnson Ball.

Atherton

On the evening of November 21, Brother Samuel Smith was the speaker, giving a very interesting sermon to his hearers. On the following Sunday, Brother J. A. Roberts, of Independence, was with us and preached a very interesting sermon at the morning hour and again on the evening of December 5. Brother D. O. Cato, also of Independence, occupied in the evening of November 28, and all enjoyed his sermon. He made many encouraging references to the young, and "Consecration," was a most fitting song for closing. For both morning and evening on December 12 we had the happy privilege of having Brother Frank Veenstra with us. He and his wife sang songs in their native tongue, which is the language of Holland. Their daughter Bertha also sang both morning and evening. Brother Veenstra told of his trip to and from Holland while on his recent mission. The Saints surely enjoyed the services of this day.

On this Sunday Brother William Self and Brother Cleland were with us for morning and evening services.

Knobnoster

Three new babies have taken up their residence in our branch. Gaylon Lawrence has taken up his abode at the home of Brother and Sister James Hansen; Lyndon Robert is found at the home of Elder and Sister M. R. Shedd; and Robert Paul with Elder and Sister R. E. Burgess.

Our annual election of officers took place on December 9 and resulted in the election of John T. Nutt, pastor; Sunday school superintendent, M. R. Shedd; Religio superintendent, Blanche E. Norman, who also heads the department of music; branch treasurer, Earl T. Ross; superintendent of the Department of Women, Sister John T. Nutt.

Evangelist T. C. Kelley made us a visit December 12 and preached two splendid sermons. We hope to secure his services for a series of meetings in the near future. Our pastor occupied the pulpit last Sunday, the 19th, at eleven o'clock and again at a quarter till eight in the evening.

Elder G. W. Rodger, of Sedalia, gave a lecture on Australia, using the stereopticon and a splendid group of slides secured from the Graphic Arts Bureau. The lecture was very instructive, as well as entertaining. Come again, Brother Rodger.

Elder J. E. Bozarth, of Warrensburg, for a number of years pastor at this place, was the speaker December 26 at eleven o'clock. His subject was, "Is there a chance of salvation after death? If so, how?" He was blessed with good liberty in presenting his subject, and his effort was well received.

Wedding bells have been ringing recently, proving to us again and again that Cupid is still busily engaged in shooting his darts at the young people.

Sister Wanetta Norman and Mr. Fred Parker were quietly married by Elder R. E. Burgess at the residence of the latter, November 27. Also Sister Lola Henderson and Mr. Leonard Miller were married at Sedalia, November 15.

The outlook for the work here is more encouraging than it has been for some time, and the closing of the old year finds an increasing number with their faces Zionward.

Grandview

Sunday morning, November 21, Brother Depuy, of Lees Summit, was the speaker, and as usual his sermon was edifying and interesting.

We observed Thanksgiving Day by meeting in a prayer service at ten o'clock, followed by a basket dinner and visiting in the lower auditorium. Mrs. Reese, of Grandview, Mr. Bedell, of Martin City, and Sister Mary Riddle, of Dow City, Iowa, were our guests on that day.

The following Lord's Day, members of the local priesthood had charge of the meetings and occupied as speakers.

A very good communion service was enjoyed on December 5, and at half past two in the afternoon the election of pastor and the superintendents of departments took place, in charge of Brother McWethy. Brother Hopkins was reelected pastor; Sunday school superintendent, Brother Cockefair; superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Brother I. N. Mathis; head of the Department of Women, Sister Crandall; and leader of the Department of Music, Sister Cockefair.

At seven o'clock the election of other branch officers was held. It was also voted at this time to adopt a budget system to finance our branch.

At the eight o'clock service Brother McWethy gave a splendid talk, which was well received. Sunday morning, December 12, Brother Hartnell, of Independence, was the speaker. Many favorable comments were heard regarding this sermon. Brother Hopkins spoke Sunday evening, his theme being, "Be thou clean."

We are pleased of late to welcome to our branch Brother and Sister Mays and little daughter Virginia, who have moved here from Blue Springs. They come to us well recommended as being real Latter Day Saints.

A recent visitor to our branch has been Sister Riddle, of Dow City, Iowa, who has been visiting her aunt, Sister Goddard, and family.

We are pleased to report the condition of Sister Cline as being improved. She has received considerable relief from administration.

We also report the death of Sister Hopkins's aged father, Mr. Huff, of Olathe, Kansas. He passed away in November.

Baby Clinic Work in Lamoni

There are many vital reasons why clinics should be established in every community. The main reason is that the child may be successful in entering kindergarten or primary schools physically fit. In our clinic work in Independence, we have been able to correct numbers of defects, and by the time the child has grown to the age of five, he is physically able to do his best. Those who have visited the clinic in Independence know what a success it has been. In just the few years it has been in operation there, hundreds of babies have received help and benefit from it. I have in mind one little mother there who had two children that were ruptured in early babyhood, and they suffered extremely, causing the mother and father great anxiety and worry. She was one of the first mothers to patronize the clinic, and in a few months both children were well and physically able to enter kindergarten. She, with hundreds of other parents, knows well the value of the clinic to the community.

A few days ago the Department of Women began a baby clinic in Lamoni, Iowa, and from the first day it has become a popular community project.

We were successful in securing a physician who is particularly interested in children of preschool age, our nurses volunteered their services, and we owned good scales which had just recently been bought from a physician who was moving from our vicinity. From the State Board of Health we procured health charts and beautiful health posters. With a fair beginning, we expect to push on toward success. Every child who is weighed and measured in our clinic is checked up by the national standard of weights and measurements and parents are given the definite knowledge of the child's needs. The parents seem eager to bring their babies and see to it that adjustments are made whenever we find the need of them.

DONA CLARK HADEN,

General Superintendent Department of Cradle Roll.

Skiatook, Oklahoma

December 27.—On this glad Christmas the little band of Saints at Skiatook, Oklahoma, have much for which to be thankful. Of late we have been favored, instructed, and encouraged. Our new building is nearing completion after some very hard and earnest labor. On account of our present crowded condition, we have been unable to have any missionary meetings for some time, but Brother J. W. Davis, missionary of Central Oklahoma District, has helped us very materially by painting the church building in the daytime, and preaching at the nearby towns at night. His presence has been a big help to us.

We were fortunate in having Bishop Hunt with his inspirational message, which was gladly received, and helped us to catch the larger vision of our work.

Brother Fitzwater also has been with us, and encouraged us with a few meetings, but on account of bad roads and most of our members being widely scattered, he has not been able to hold very many meetings. We are looking forward to better weather and more meetings. We are trying to decide on the kind of a crop we will put in this year. Perhaps it would be interesting to you to know that the building of our new church has been financed by the branch planting Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, and Bermuda onions, the work being done by men, women, and children. The proceeds were used to purchase materials for the construction of the building. The brethren have entirely built the church with their own hands, their time and labor being donated. Brother M. E. Haskins has been on the job continually, assisted by other men of the branch when occasion permitted.

Our Department of Women has not been idle and has worked hard to help. Also our newly organized Temple Builder girls have helped, by holding a bazaar of their own, besides the bazaar of the Department of Women. Their efforts were well rewarded.

This glad Christmastide, with Zion in view and the coming of our Lord once more to look forward to, gives us renewed hope and courage to work on despite all odds, that we may at last triumph.

MRS. E. P. HOPKINS.

Central Church

The first Sunday of the New Year dawned very beautifully, and there were 293 present at Sunday school, with a collection of $14.55. The new officers were in charge and consisted of Burdette Root, Sister Burdette Root, and Mrs. F. B. Blair, superintendents; Sister Emma Thomas, secretary; Brother Roscoe Hampton, chorister.

The auditorium was filled to capacity for the eleven o'clock service, when the sacrament was administered and a number of good short testimonies were given, the principal theme being the desire of renewing the covenant that had been made at the water's edge and a determination for a more consecrated life to the service of God the ensuing year.

Brother Tanner related a very touching picture that had passed before him while in deep meditation, and it revealed that some of the children of God were wandering into forbidden paths, such as the dance hall, the theatre, and even some had gone so far as to the gambling room. This, of course, would naturally be painful to a pastor to know that some of his flock were doing such things, and there was such an earnest appeal made and the scenes were so touching, that surely every one who attended that service left with a determination to live better.

The evening preaching service was occupied by Brother J. A. Tanner.

Yesterday there was quite a contrast in the weather over that of last Sunday, it being a clear, cold day, with a raw wind whipping from the north; nevertheless, there was an attendance of 315 at Sunday school with a collection of $13.75.

The eleven o'clock service opened with "Triumphant Zion, lift thy head," prayer being offered by Brother J. A. Gunsolley. The choir rendered the anthem, "I will lift up mine eyes," under the direction of Brother T. B. Dunn.

Apostle Paul N. Hanson delivered a very fine discourse, dwelling particularly on our failure to see God and his handwork, that if we would but open our eyes a little wider, unstop our ears and catch the music and laughter of the children around us, hear the trickling water, and catch that which opens our intellect, what wonderful opportunities we would have! He cited the wonderful character of Helen Keller, who has been deaf and blind from birth; how the touch of her finger on her teacher's lips conveyed to her that which we see and hear, and how, despite that condition, she has gathered much of joy and has given much of service to mankind; and if she in that condition has been able to do so much and to recognize the work of God, what should we do?

Brother George H. Hidy, long an active member of Central Church, passed from this life Friday evening at his home, 3918 Holmes Street. He was a member of the First Kansas City Branch located at Twenty-fourth and Wabash, which later moved to Ninth and Lydia, and from there to its present location. In his younger years he was quite active in church work, having officiated in the office of teacher; on September 14, 1924, was ordained to the office of elder and worked in that capacity until his death. He was a lover of the beautiful, was a devoted companion and a loving and faithful father, and we recall many times he has responded to the sick, in their calls for administration. Like Paul of old, he has fought a good fight, kept the faith, and finished his course, and surely there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness. His last testimony, only a few weeks ago, was of his faith in God and his love for the gospel and his desire to press on. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ida L. Hidy, two daughters, Mrs. Allen Rush, of Kansas City, and Mrs. E. C. Harrington, of Independence; a son, John C. Hidy, of Peking, China; six grandchildren, and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held at the church Sunday afternoon conducted by Brother J. A. Tanner, assisted by Seth S. Sandy. Sister Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock and Luella Wight very beautifully rendered a duet, "Oh, morning land," assisted by the Central Choir. He was laid to rest in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Bennington Church

If the meetings of today are indications of what Bennington Heights is to experience in the future, the year 1927 will be a very happy and prosperous year.

The attendance at the Sunday school today was 152. The first Sunday in 1923, the attendance was 51; the first Sunday in 1924, the attendance was 49; the first Sunday in 1925, it was 99; and the first Sunday in 1926, the attendance was 101. Our number is steadily increasing. Some are coming from other cities or branches, while others are coming in to the Sunday school who are not Latter Day Saints. These nonmembers become interested in the gospel work, and some request baptism.

This morning in the sacrament meeting, Sister E. H. Agin and her son and daughter, Harvey and Margarite, were confirmed. They were baptized last Friday evening. Brother S. S. Armstrong, who was baptized a little over a year ago, was selected for Sunday school superintendent for this year. His wife was baptized at the same time, and she also is an active worker in the Sunday school. Sister (Mrs.) Georgia Binninger, who was baptized last spring, is to head the Women's Department this year.

Two babies, Mary Louise Armstrong and Shirley Irene Goold, were blessed this morning. The meeting was well attended, over a hundred being present. All enjoyed the presence of God's influence, and the effects were easily seen. Some who in the moment of dissatisfaction had acted hastily, were made to realize their mistake; some of the new members believe this to be the happiest New Year of their life; and others rejoiced because of the manifestation of the Spirit in the time of physical distress. Aged Sister John Steffee was able to be present after a long sick spell, and told of a vision in which she saw Christ. Sister George Steffee rejoiced because her small son, George, was able to be about, although he was recently struck by a motor car. She feels that only the hand of the Lord prevented it from being serious.

Brother George Garrett is in the Sanitarium, where he underwent an operation last week. We believe he would appreciate the prayers of the Saints. Brother John Steffee also is reported sick. Brother Jacob Goldflam, who met with a street car accident, was able to attend church this evening.

Brother Roy Jones has returned home after being in Chicago a few weeks. Brother W. A. Helm, who works on a farm near Clifton Hill, Missouri, is now home to spend the winter weeks with his children and his home branch. There is no branch where he works, but he is sometimes able to hear K L D S. Brother Seth Sandy, of the Kansas City stake presidency, visited with us this forenoon.

Elder Francis Smith preached this evening. He told us of some of the miracles he had experienced in his life. Apostle Roy S. Budd and Missionary William Bath preached last Sunday.

Our prayer is that the Saints may enjoy a happy and prosperous new year in the gospel work.

Fourth Church

As the year 1926 has passed, we can say for Fourth Church that it has increased in numbers and spirituality. Many new ones have come to worship with us and help carry on the work. The spirit of oneness and brotherhood has been in our congregation, increasing throughout the year. With this feeling in our midst, God's work will move forward as it never has before in this locality. Prejudice on the part of our neighbors has been broken, and many are investigating the gospel of Christ.

Wednesday evening prayer meetings have been well attended, and we are thankful God bestows his Spirit so abundantly at these services. Strength is thereby given that we may press on and overcome trials incident to various experiences.

Each Sunday at 11 o'clock, junior service is held for children of sixteen years and under, Sister Tyra Lucking directing. Much effort has been put forth in the junior church. The speakers have made the gospel story so simple that the children can understand. With the gospel foundation laid in their early years, they can more fully understand its beauty, thereby strengthening their faith, thus preparing them for work in the Master's vineyard.

The Sunday school has increased in numbers, and the interest is good, as also the Religio.

The social features of the congregation have been arranged by the Department of Recreation and Expression. Its effort will be to make them better acquainted with each other and provide recreation for the young. It is hoped that the time will soon come when the departments will come forward, so they will merit the support of all the membership. Their sessions are not less in importance than the preaching services.

The Women's Department has a study class which meets weekly, thus fitting the members for church work.

As a whole they have made progress. The ranks have not been invaded, as God's hand has been over them. Elder J. O. Worden, pastor, and his wife continue to direct them as leaders for whom God's blessing is asked. The favor of God is also asked on the work of the year just ahead, that each may be found doing his part, as assigned him.

Argentine Church

A week ago the evening sermon was by Patriarch Ammon White on the great commission enunciated by the Savior of men, found in the sixteenth chapter of Mark.

Today the speaker for both morning and evening was Elder George Jenkins, of the missionary force. He was supplied by the ministerial conference, now sitting in Independence, they also furnishing speakers for the other thirteen churches of the stake. Brother Jenkins's morning effort was to show that the lamps of the ten virgins were the word of God. (See Psalms 119 and 105.) Note that lamps are mentioned in the plural. Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants contain God's word. The word of God was meaningless to the five foolish, because they did not inform themselves concerning it. His evening discourse had to do with the philosophy of Jesus Christ. It is to help his people to help themselves. He said there was equality in opportunities. Education is most necessary.

Quindaro

Attendance at Sunday school Sunday was one hundred and thirty-two with an enrollment of one hundred and twenty-five. Brother Clarence Penticuff is our new superintendent, with Sister Dora Halverson assistant. The orchestra under the leadership of Sister Wallace Eskridge renders valuable service to this department.

At eleven o'clock Brother Wallace Eskridge was in the stand, with Brother J. O. Dutton, of Illinois, as speaker. Brother Dutton gave us good food for thought, also kindly advice to our young in regard to amusement. He said we should never go where we could not ask God's protection over us while there.

The half past six hour found seventy-five present for Religio, with Brother Frank Murrah in charge, assisted by Brother Charles Graham. Three classes have taken up the Book of Mormon study. The B □ class will give a box supper in the church basement, January 18.

Elder Dutton again occupied the pulpit at eight o'clock, using as a basis of his remarks Revelation 3:20: "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Brother Dutton explained that as the Savior knocks at the door of our hearts, he is inviting us up to higher ground; that the righteous should develop and grow as the palm and the cedar trees. Some of the evils which are lowering the moral standards today are the moving pictures, the dime novels, and cheap magazines, and the speaker closed with the admonition: "Come out of the world, and be ye separated from them."

A very beautiful anthem was rendered by the choir. It was "He leadeth me." Evelyn Helm was the soloist.

A New Year's Greeting to the Presidency

SHENANDOAH, IOWA, December 26.

To the First Presidency,
Reorganized L. D. S. Church, Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brothers: The Shenandoah Branch and Sunday School extend to you hearty New Year Greetings. We extend our best wishes to you and may the new year bring about a realization of your hopeful ambitions.

We are on the threshold of a new year, one we hope is destined to be a prosperous and productive year for the church. We hope that the church will step across into 1927 with good will toward all, and with this spirit we may each one be of aid in carrying on the work to a successful end.

We stand by the church unitedly, hopeful of better conditions in the future, which we believe are even now at our door.

It is that faith in Jesus Christ and in the gospel restored to us in these last days that is inspiring the hearts of the faint, giving new courage to the hopeless, lifting mountains of doubt, giving solace to the afflicted, and strengthening the footsteps of the aged as they go tottering down to their graves.

That faith blooming and blossoming into unselfish service will bring about that condition that we have so long prayed for and sung about and earnestly looking forward to, and we pray that God will give you courage and strength and inspire your minds in directing the work in these last days.

L. D. S. BRANCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

in hospitals are advancing is the same reason that costs everywhere else are advancing, plus the fact that the patient of moderate means insists upon having private rooms with all the extras that he can not afford. Another contributing reason is that some superintendents are lax in collecting from all types of patients, and as a result the burden is thrown upon those that come under the classification of pay patients. However, the whole subject is working itself out in a perfectly sane and logical manner.

I am very grateful that you have called this editorial to my attention.

It will be interesting to note what a future number of Modern Hospital will have to say on this.

MISCELLANEOUS

Change in Conference Date

The Northern California district conference will be held at the Saints' church, Sacramento, California, February 12 and 13, instead of February 19 and 20, as announced in January 5 HERALD, page 32. The business session will convene at 10 o'clock a. m. Saturday, at which time a district president should be elected to serve until the conference of July, 1927, and delegates to General Conference, April, 1927, should also be chosen. Branch secretaries, please have your credentials reports sent to the district secretary as soon as practicable, including therein a statement of your present membership. Cecil Hawley, district secretary, 1955 Napa Avenue, Berkeley, California.

General Conference Delegates and Visitors

Brethren G. W. Eastwood and C. Ed. Miller have been requested by the Presidency to act as Reception Committee. All persons expecting to visit Independence at conference time had best get in touch with these brethren on the matter of location and board. Address your requests or communications to Reception Committee, Box 255, Independence, Missouri.

FREDERICK M. SMITH, for the Presidency.

January 5, 1927.

Sister Susan Quinn, Wabash, Indiana, requests the Saints of South Bend, Indiana, to call on her nephew, Adron Mc-Neeley, 513½ East South Street. He has two daughters he would like to put into Sunday school. He is a motorman on the city cars and does not know where the Sunday school is held.

Our Departed Ones

YOUNG.—Edwin Guy Young was born in Livermore, California, December 13, 1879. He joined the church April 13, 1890, and remained an earnest and faithful member until his death. On November 4, 1907, he married Miss Jessie Haste at Santa Rosa. Brother Young was held in the highest esteem by his brothers of the church and the people of his community. No man in the neighborhood was more universally loved and respected than he. He was a pioneer in Farm Bureau work and was a prominent figure at the State conventions of this organization. It is very rare in this age of rapid change and transition for one to die in the house of his birth, but on December 19, 1926, just forty-seven years and six days from the date of his birth he passed away. CANCER—CANCER—CANCER

Over 20,000,000 are in the first stages of Cancer, 240,000 died last year, and this year it will reach 250,000. This dreaded, loathsome disease! Only about 5% can be cured with fruit and vegetables. Surgery—None.

Nearly every case of Cancer is directly due to PORK and its byproducts. Deuteronomy 14:8 tells us not even to touch it, let alone eating it. Hog is merely a diseased scavenger so filthy that a dog even goes shy of it. Where there is no hog there is no Cancer. The Orthodox Jew will not touch hog, and it is seldom you hear of cancer among this people.

mourn are his companion, two daughters, May and Dorothy, and his aged mother, Mrs. A. J. Young and brothers and sisters. Funeral services were held from the local undertaking parlors, Elder V. B. Etzenhouser officiating.

WESTMORELAND.—William Thomas Westmoreland, son of John P. and Elizabeth Westmoreland, was born February 22, 1843, in Wayne County, near Jeffersonville, Illinois. On February 5, 1864, he married Narcissus Burkett. He spent more than four years in service during the Civil War. He united with the church May 31, 1869; was ordained to the office of teacher, and lived a faithful Christian life. His footsteps were ever found in the pathway of duty to his God, his home, his country, and humanity. He encountered the joys, disappointments, and sorrows that are common to man, but always he could see the hand of the Lord in his affliction. Died November 2, 1926, leaving to mourn his departure a loving companion, one foster daughter, Mrs. Bessie Westmoreland; two foster granddaughters, Mrs. Katie Burgess and Mrs. Gladys Burroughs; two sisters, one brother, seven half brothers, and two half sisters. Funeral services at the home of Elder Hilliard Henson, assisted by Elder William Clements. Interment in the nearby Henson Cemetery.

BECKLEY.—Mary Parmelia Beckley was born June 7, 1847, in the State of Michigan. In 1865 she married W. H. Cutts. Mr. Cutts died in 1869, and in 1871 she married Benson Day Beckley. Sister Beckley embraced the gospel in 1898, and her twenty-eight years of membership were filled with loving service to God and his creatures. Her life was an open book, and all who read therein were strengthened and encouraged to come up higher. She was valiant in testimony and constant in the service of the cause. She was the devoted mother of ten children, grandmother of twenty-nine, and great-grandmother of fifteen. At 10.15 p. m., December 16, 1926, she peacefully passed into the great beyond at the home of her youngest child, Mrs. Inez Peterson, Oakland, California. Funeral services at Oakland in charge of Bishop Cecil Hawley; sermon by Elder V. B. Etzenhouser. Interment at Modesto, California.

FREE.—Mary Jane Free was born November 19, 1849, at Clinton, Kentucky. She married A. P. Free March 15, 1866, and to them nine children were born. Sister Free had been a member of the church forty-six years, always bearing a strong testimony for the work. Death came December 21, 1926, at the home of her eldest daughter, Mrs. J. E. Briswalter. Surviving her are five children: Mrs. J. E. Briswalter, of Joplin, Missouri; Mrs. W. A. Haglin, Memphis, Tennessee; Mrs. P. K. Norman, Peoria, Illinois; Mrs. Ellis Rogers, Joplin; and J. W. Free, Kansas City, Missouri. Sister Free neighbors, and this was beautifully expressed by floral offerings and the service rendered bereaved relatives. Funeral sermon was by Elder O. C. Karlstrom, Elder T. J. Sheppard assisting. Interment in Mount Hope Cemetery.

GALLAND.—Abram Noah Galland, son of Benjamin and Maria Galland, was born May 27, 1859, in Harrison County, Iowa. When he was a child, his parents moved to Crawford County, where he lived until his death. He married Miss Laura A. Gleem September 15, 1884, and to them four children were born, two sons and two daughters: Leon Earl, of Denison, Iowa; Mrs. Ethel Newcome, of Cameron, Missouri, and Mrs. Inez Dobson, Denison, Iowa. One son preceded him in death. Brother Galland was baptized into the church forty-five years ago and was a loyal member till death. For the past two years he has been suffering, and he fell asleep in Christ at his home in Deloit, December 19, 1926. Those left to mourn are his wife; three children; two brothers, David, of North Dakota, and Charles, of Council Bluffs; one sister, Mrs. Nelson, Oakland, California, ten grandchildren, and other relatives. Elder C. W. Winey was in charge of the funeral, and the sermon was preached by Elder W. A. Smith. Interment in the Deloit Cemetery.

WHITEAKER.—Isaac B. Whiteaker was born March 20, 1854, at Fort Wayne, Indiana; married Martha Jannette Coleman, August 25, 1908; baptized in May, 1925, by Elder J. O. Dutton. He was a faithful member to the end of his life, his last labors being on a little church building under repair, and this was occupied for the first time by the Saints at his funeral. He died Sunday, November 21, at La Crosse, Wisconsin. Funeral was at the Saints' church in Bell Center, Wisconsin. Sermon by Elder E. J. Lenox. Surviving him are his wife, one daughter, three step-children, three brothers, two sisters, and many grandchildren.

NORRIS.—Gertrude Grace Jones Norris was born in Ransom County, North Dakota, January 5, 1896. On December 31, 1913, she was married to Gilson R. Norris, and to them eight children, seven boys and one girl, were born. She and her husband were baptized by Elder George W. Thorburn into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints September 22, 1918. She passed away October 28, 1926, after a short sickness, leaving her family of small children in the care of a loving father and kind friends. Her last request was that her husband continue to teach their children the gospel, and her last testimony that this is the true church of Christ. There remain to mourn her departure her husband, seven sons, one daughter, her father, one brother, two sisters, and many friends. The body was laid away in the beautiful Couer d'Alene Cemetery, Couer d'Alene, Idaho. Sermon by Elder Eli Bronson.

GABLER.—Candace Mariah Evans Gabler was born at Garden Grove, Decatur County, Iowa, February 5, 1849; baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, March 28, 1866, by Jacob Jamison. She was married to Ruben Gabler April 22, 1868. To them six children were born, five of whom, with her companion, preceded her in death. She was a loyal wife, a devoted mother, and faithful Saint, and to know her was to love her. She passed away at her home on East Park Avenue, Rich Hill, Missouri, December 2, 1926. Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. Peter Seibert, of the home address, one brother, seven grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the Saints' church, Rich Hill, Missouri. Sermon by Joseph Curtis. Interment in Green Lawn Cemetery.

GREENWALT.—Mary Olive Burkett Greenwalt, daughter of W. I. and Parthelia Burkett, was born in Wayne County, Illinois, December 8, 1899; baptized into the church August, 1913, remaining a true member during the rest of her life. She was united in marriage to Floyd Greenwalt, January 1, 1916. To them were born four children: Julia, who preceded her mother to the beyond; Lyla, Vera, and Reba. Sister Greenwalt was a loving companion, a kind mother, and an obedient daughter. She passed away December 1, 1926. Surviving to mourn her departure are her companion, three children, father, mother, and four brothers: Ernest, Everett, and John, of Keenes, Illinois; and Earl, of Mount Vernon, Illinois. Funeral sermon preached by Elder R. H. Hanson. Interment in the Garrison Temple Cemetery.

MATTI.—Opal Louisa Dean Matti was born September 28, 1905, at Soldiers Grove, Wisconsin, and was the daughter of Martin and Minnie Dean. Her mother died about sixteen years ago, and the child was afterward cared for by her aunt, Mrs. Norman Montgomery, later Mrs. Hutchcroft. The girl was baptized in June, 1916. Married Walter Matti February 19, 1925, afterward making her home in La Crosse, Wisconsin. She was a devoted member of the church until called away in death, December 2, 1926. She leaves a young husband, a father, a brother, three sisters, and a six-month-old baby girl. Sermon by Elder E. J. Lenox from the Dwyer funeral parlor, La Crosse, Wisconsin; interment in the Oak Grove Cemetery, La Crosse.

Responsibility and Opportunity

Authority brings its own responsibility. Responsibility carries with it opportunity. The great primary responsibility conferred upon the ministry was in the general commission Jesus gave: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."—Mark 16: 15. But then he turned to some others and said to them, "Lovest thou me?" They said, "Yes, Lord." And he said, "Feed my sheep." Some are to go abroad and carry the gospel to those who have never heard it. That is missionary. But some are to feed those who have heard the gospel and embraced it and become sheep of his fold. That is pastoral. We have a twofold program in the church that carries with it a twofold responsibility and a twofold opportunity.

You remember Jesus said, in reply to the lawyer's question, that there were two great commandments:

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.—Matthew 22: 37-39.

So we need not be surprised that in our twofold program all our responsibility and all our opportunity hang on these two great commandments.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God." The missionary goes out under the commission, "Go ye and preach the gospel," to tell the world about God so that they may know him and come to him and learn to love him and so keep that first commandment. That is the missionary calling, opportunity, and responsibility.

Paul felt that responsibility weighing down upon him very heavily. He was the great missionary, the outstanding missionary, perhaps, of all time, and he felt the responsibility, and his eyes were also opened to the opportunity, so that he said within himself, "I must preach the gospel in Rome." And he said also, "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!"

—1 Corinthians 9: 16. That compelling spirit within him led him to seek the most prominent places from which to sound abroad the word. He went into the courts of kings. He went to Athens, even to Mars Hill. The Mount of Olives stands out in the pages of history as symbolical of spirituality and religion, but Mars Hill stands forth as symbolical of learning and culture. It was the center and seat of intelligence and learning. Here the philosophers gathered. Paul, as he went up the hill, noticed on every hand altars and inscriptions to many gods. When the ancients saw the manifestation of divinity anywhere, they thought it a new god and built another altar; one god here, another there. But Paul at last came to one marked To the Great Unknown God, which was their confession that they had as yet failed to find the one God. That was Paul's opportunity as a missionary, and he stood before them and said, "Whom ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." There are not many gods, some here, some there, but one, the great I Am, who reveals himself everywhere and always. "He is not far from any one of us."

That is the stewardship of the missionary, to carry the gospel, the revelation of God as Creator, Father, and ever present help to the children of men, and thus set their faces definitely Zionward.

Then begins the work of the pastor. If Paul was a typical missionary, John the Beloved was a typical pastor. Read his epistles. The theme that runs all through them is the second great commandment, "Love thy neighbor." There is a tradition that when John was very, very old and could no more stand up to preach, young men would carry him before the congregation, and seated in his chair he would deliver himself of the one injunction, "Little children, love one another." In his young manhood, when he had lain upon the bosom of the Master, as he seems to have done at the Last Supper, that was the message caught from those lips, the pastoral message he had learned. That is the theme that runs through his epistles. "We love God because he first loved us." "This is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another." "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren."

So it is the stewardship of the pastoral arm of the priesthood to gather the people together in flocks and feed them, first in groups, then in branches, then in districts, then in stakes, and last, please God, in Zion.

There are certain rather specific stewardships that come along in the line of this priesthood; for example in Doctrine and Covenants 122:2:

The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time.

And in the third paragraph:

It is the duty of the Twelve to preach the gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof, as is directed in the scriptures which ye have received. They are called and set apart to this duty; and are to travel and preach, under the direction and counsel of the presidency.

The stewardship of the President of the high priesthood and his counselors is to bear the burden of the whole church.

Again in section 122, and elsewhere, the Lord points out the duties of the standing ministry, those in pastoral work, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, deacons, who watch over and care for the Saints. The duty of the Twelve and Seventy primarily is to carry the message abroad. These stewardships interlock. There is scarcely a missionary who is not in some sense a pastor; and every pastor is in some sense a missionary. But at least there is this difference in part; and with them, of course, the stewardship that comes to the bishops to administer the finances of the church.

It is committed to the ministry as a part of their stewardship to administer the ordinances and the sacraments, and in so doing they have part in the covenants made between immortal souls. They are witnesses who stand between God and man in these covenants, as when a man goes down in the waters of baptism and is cleansed and is committed in the eyes of the world and of the church and himself to a new life, that ordinance being a memorial that he will ever remember: the minister is the sealing witness of that ordinance, and later, placing his hands on that man's head, he implores for him the Holy Ghost and initiates him into the church, into a new fellowship and brotherhood.

Brethren of the priesthood, you come in contact with the souls of man at great epochs of life. When they are sick unto death, when their loved ones lie afflicted and their hearts are torn and humanity has no aid, they send for you to come in and anoint with oil and offer the prayer of administration.

You preside at the sacrament of the communion of the Lord's supper, when all the people kneeling before the altar in the presence of the emblems are committed to the prayer offered, that they will "always remember him and keep his commandments which he has given them, that they may always have his Spirit to be with them." Your hand takes to them those emblems to remind them of their Lord and Master.

You officiate when love has come into their hearts and they have in secret pledged their troth in their engagement, and they then come publicly and stand at the altar and ask you in the name of God to pronounce them husband and wife so that they may be free honorably in the sight of all men and under the blessing of heaven to go out and establish a home and bring children into the world. Later they bring those children to you to be blessed, and named, and set aside for holy purposes.

As pastors and priests you are enjoined to visit the homes of all the Saints. There is no foreign mission more important or sacred than that, to go into the privacy and sacred precincts of the homes of the Saints and administer to the needs of father and mother and children. It certainly is a wonderful stewardship, a great responsibility and opportunity. And as you go out to preach, as I said to you in the class the other morning; you go first of all as representatives of Jesus Christ, the gentle man of Galilee, the gentleman of Galilee. What a stewardship! You go out to represent the church and the thousands and thousands of men and women and children of the church who trust you to speak for them. They are inarticulate. They love the gospel, but they can not go out and preach it; they trust you to do so for them. They pray for you, and with their tithes they support you that you may go out and, speaking for them, tell that gospel to the people, that you will tell it as powerfully as you may, and will keep yourself so clean that no smirch from your conduct will mar the message they have sent you to bear. And perhaps in the courts of glory the eyes of the dead, who in years gone by gave all they had for the gospel, look down to see whether you in your day are carrying forth the message of the Lord as they would that it might be carried.

What is the objective of this stewardship? Apostle Garver last night in his statement concerning the mission of the church gave that to you. He anticipated me on that point. All of this stewardship, all this preaching, this baptizing and administering, all this teaching leads up to one great objective:

"Till we all come to the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

Blue Pencil Notes

People seem to marry earlier and oftener than they did.

Praise for another is poison to the jealous heart.

"Can a man take fire into his bosom and his clothes not be burned?"—Proverbs 6: 27.

Soft hands and hard eyes do not forecast domestic happiness.

It is reported that the widow of Henry Hagemeyer, of Holden, Missouri, received a letter from a penitent man who inclosed one dollar to pay for two onions stolen from the Hagemeyer grocery store thirty-five years ago. No doubt the memory of those onions oftentimes brought tears to that man's eyes; but after the lapse of thirty-five years he is able to see clearly.

Pastor C. Ed. Miller says: "Many years ago I saw a comet blaze across the sky. I was lost in wonder and admiration. By contrast all the stars seemed dim. I could scarcely see them. But the comet soon passed away, while the stars shone on. Years later I located Polaris, the North Star. It does not seem particularly conspicuous or brilliant—but it is always on the job. By it men have taken their bearings for centuries. It can be depended on. I do not care to be brilliant or dazzling. But I do wish to be dependable—always on the job."

The testimony just quoted was borne during a prayer meeting at the regional priesthood conference in Independence. It lingered in my mind until it took form in verse which I dedicate to one of our dependable men, Brother C. Ed. Miller:

A comet across the night sky
Went blazing across its glorious route;
And as the bright stranger went by
The stars seemed like candles blown out.

So bright that it dazzled mine eyes,
I saw it ascend in its flight;
From darkness I saw it arise—
And sink once again into night.

I saw it one moment, divine,
Fill the earth with its wondrous ray;
Then darkness and groping were mine,
And midnight came down on my way.

But there in the North was one Star,
Polaris, serene in his place;
And soon I beheld near and far
Were others in beauty and grace.

So light came again, and my way
Was certain and fixed as the Pole;

I held it, assured that the day
Would rise from the East on my soul.

Then like the fixed stars let us be,
Not brilliant, to dazzle, then blind;
But like the North Star that men see
And know that their goal they shall find.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Sacrificing to the "Treasure Chest"

Some weeks ago a sister came to the office bringing a string of beads. They were turquoise matrix. She wanted to give them to the Auditorium, thinking that sometime they could be used in some way in decoration of the walls or fixtures. I said they would be put in the Auditorium "treasure chest." A few days ago Bishop Koehler brought to the office two rings, one a pearl set ring, the other a diamond. He said a sister had handed them to him, saying that she felt she could not wear and enjoy them when the church was needing money to carry on its work. So she consecrated them to the church. And they will be sold or added to the "treasure chest."

It is a wholesome sign when persons want to give their treasures to the church. "Where the treasures are, there the heart is," etc. It might be paraphrased: "Where the heart tends, there the desire is to give." And there is no cause which stirs the heart like that of religion and the church.

We as a church are undertaking big tasks; but with the hearts and the love of the Saints prompting to sacrifice and willing service, we are assured of success.

An Elder Reports

In a bundle of letters and reports recently laid on my desk, I saw a "report" from an elder who, I recognized at once, was not under appointment. I was curious, and read with interest the "figures" concerning his work for "ten months," then the "remarks" as follows:

Believing that an elder, even though not under General Conference appointment, should advise you periodically of his activities, I take this opportunity to submit this report. I was ordained March 7, 1926; hence the report covers such work since that time.

My faith is daily becoming stronger and my determination to do all in my power to advance the Master's cause in whatever capacity my lot may fall is hereby reaffirmed.

My prayers are for the advancement of the work and the speedy redemption of Zion.

Thanks, John A., for report, and your interest in the cause. Many are glad to see you zealous in the cause so valiantly defended by your father. With your zeal warm, your heart stout, I am sure you will find many opportunities to serve the church—your hands will find much to do.

Stop, Look, Listen

In Other Words, Use Your Head

The large number of automobile accidents at railway crossings has given rise to discussions in many journals—technical, secular, and news—as to methods of preventing such accidents. Of course, the most effective will be the elimination of grade crossings by constructing subways or viaducts. This method is expensive, and it is quite likely that it will be many years before even the more dangerous crossings are thus safeguarded. In the interim, now and then, the railway trains will probably continue taking toll in lives of drivers who through carelessness get caught, or those who through "bravado" race the train to the crossing. Evidences abound to show that thoughtlessness and lack of due caution on the part of automobile drivers are responsible for most of the deaths and injuries at railway crossings. It is likely that such accidents will continue until it is made impossible for automobiles to be driven onto railway tracks. Until that time preventative measures are necessary. What are they?

Nothing can take the place of good judgment and due caution on the part of drivers; and gates, watchmen, and automatic warning signals are not effective against the thoughtless drivers, or those who deliberately take chances. Laws have been proposed and in some States adopted, requiring cars to come to a stop at grade railway crossings; yet even here accidents continue. Passing of laws seems ineffectual in reaching the individuals who hold the law in little esteem, and those who fail to use their heads. Under the caption, "Making a stop law absurd" the editor of the Engineering-News Record presents the grim humor of the situation. He says:

Railroad men apparently still believe that to require automobiles to come to a full stop before a railroad crossing is to insure safety and to reduce grade-crossing accidents. Railway Age a few weeks ago, for instance, had an editorial note entitled, "Why stop laws should be enacted," which strongly urges this reform and as an instance of why it is needed, cites the following occurrence: "Recently, at a railroad and highway intersection on the Denver & Rio Grande Western, an automobile was driven into the side of a slowly moving freight train. While the train crew were moving the damaged car from the crossing, another automobile was driven into the opposite side of the train."

This shows a remarkable faith in the efficacy of law, a faith which is quite refreshing in these days when so much inveighing is done against the ordinary citizen's disregard of law; but it carries faith to an absurd conclusion. Does anyone really believe that a man who would drive an automobile head-on into a perfectly evident freight train is going to be deterred from such an insane performance by the fact that there exists some kind of an ordinance requiring him to stop? Is the fear of the law and its punishment greater than the fear of injury or death?

In answer to the query presented, all we can say is, It is not likely. Yet that does not prevent us hoping that a much-to-be-desired time may come when habitual obedience to law will help the situation, and that thoughtfulness and law combined will greatly reduce the crossing accidents while we await the final elimination of grade crossings.

February "Autumn Leaves"

February Autumn Leaves is eight pages larger than usual. The cover is a very fine picture of Washington, done in sepia. The Monthly Message, by Elbert, is entitled "Nature's beauty shoppe." He brings a timeworn subject right up to date with the immortal Lincoln as his inspiration.

"Keeping up with the Joneses" is a two-part story by Alta Kimber, begun in this issue. Stewardships is her theme. Young people will enjoy this story. "The melting pot" is a story by Donna Manning, a very real bit of dream work.

"Paradise lost," is an article by Doctor A. W. Teel, Church Physician. He has had the needs of our youth especially in mind. Photographs connected with his home in Nauvoo District are used to illustrate the article.

"Thy neighbor as thyself" is a valentine story by Nina Brooks, of the Pen and Ink Club, and who is featured in the "Who's who" columns. "Self-knowledge" is a splendid article by Daniel T. Williams, full of life and truth. "The futility of war," is an oration by Howard M. Sheldon, who was second of the 1926 contestants among the Graceland students.

Apostle John F. Garver finishes his Twelve Talks on Stewardships. But the theme will be continued indefinitely in question and answer form.

The center section contains photographs furnished by Brother Muceus, who is in Norway, entitled, "Church work in Norway." Brother Clarke in his "Circus Tales" tells of "Jealousy in the elephants' camp."

Everyone will enjoy Howard W. Harder's diary of "A day with President Smith in his office." There is a new photograph of President Smith with it.

There are two people living who attended Amboy Conference in 1860. You will hear from them and enjoy their pictures.

Leta Moriarty has furnished an interesting variety in the columns for Our Girls this month. Anne Friend Roberts has an unusually interesting Who's who" section; it concerns the Baby Clinic at the Campus. There are half a dozen pictures, too.

Book Reviews will be a regular feature in Autumn Leaves in the future. We in Zion have become acquainted with the author of a new and splendid work entitled, "Drama in education." The review is by J. A. Gardner, who furnishes photograph of this author. She has been holding Campus students spellbound with her lectures.

Four very interesting young men occupy another of the pages.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards has the second of his twelve puzzles ready for us. And it is a puzzle. Eugene Closson furnishes five suggestions for "February Fun." You are missing something of educational value and real pleasure if you do not read Irene Layton's "My vacation abroad."

"Washington and charity" is a selected story which will interest all.

"The gist of it" is very fine. Albert McCullough's "Little stories of life" is finished this month. He will furnish our book reviews in the future.

There are a number of splendid poems, especially an unusually fine one by G. A. Kelley, entitled "To the discouraged." "Evil speaking," and "The marriage problem" are timely quotations from an address by President Smith.

Drawings for the stories are done by John Charles Thoman and Aileen Bullard.

"Into the latter-day light," the life story of Elder J. J. Cornish as told by himself, contains many wonderful experiences.

The editorial contains vital information and statistics concerning the replies to the recent questionnaires which were mailed to subscribers in the fall. Autumn Leaves is anxious to render an acceptable service to the youth of the church. The replies to these questionnaires are invaluable in guiding Autumn Leaves editors in their future course. ARE YOU A SUBSCRIBER TO AUTUMN LEAVES?

Regional Ministerial Conference

The ministerial conference or institute which ended its sessions of ten days on Friday, January 14, in the city of Zion, was a pronounced success, whether one judges by the feelings of common investigation, study, and mental effort, or by another standard, that of good fellowship and a nearer approach to unity and understanding of the common purpose.

It was primarily a gathering of the General Conference appointees in the central region of the church mission field, including both ministers of the missionary arm and those of the pastoral department. The morning prayer service occupied daily and was a source of joy and strength to the men who presented themselves at 8.30 at the Institute Building on the Campus.

Following, there came study classes the remainder of the forenoon, consisting of one combined class at 9.45 to 10.30; a missionary class at 10.45 to 12, and a pastoral class 10.45 to 12.

In the afternoon a questionnaire meeting (fifteen-

THEY SAY...

John S. C. Abbot, in speaking of Abbe de Vermond: "Like all new converts, to prove the sincerity of his conversion, (he) went far in advance of his sect in intemperate zeal."

Doctor Hull, of Des Moines: "Will the church be able to count on us, or just count us?"

Furst, an American engineer: "I care very little what the world thinks I am, but I care a lot about what I am, because I've got myself to live with."

Van Dyke: "Don't expect too much of anybody, not even yourself. But expect something from everybody, including yourself."

Abbott: "It is easy to condemn. It is better for the heart to pity."

Some One: "The remedy for the ills of democracy is more democracy."

Somebody said that "familiarity breeds contempt," and another commented on this by saying: "The most potent antidote for the effects of familiarity is a more intimate acquaintance with the real nature of commonplace things."

Abbott: "Pleasure, like all false gods, rewards his votaries with satiety and disgust."

Van Dyke: "It is natural for those who believe nothing to be forbearing in regard to the beliefs of others."

A proverb: "A clear conscience makes a soft pillow."

A German saying: "Speech is silver; silence is golden."

John S. C. Abbott: "Time will diminish the poignancy of every sorrow save those of remorse."

Some One: "'I have' is a better bird than 'If I had.'"

Van Dyke: "Live by admiration rather than by disgust."

"Judge other people by their best, not by their worst."

"Consider how long it took us to attain our present knowledge, and how small and dim it is even yet."

"Cheerfully give to others the same liberty we claim for ourselves."

"Remember: In every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted by him."

"If by him, why not by us?"

John S. C. Abbott, speaking of Marie Antoinette: "Her faults were the excesses of a generous and magnanimous spirit."

A German proverb: "When I would do what I should, then am I able to do all I would."

Another proverb: "Fidelity is a rare guest: hold him fast, thou who hast him."

At What Time of Year Was Jesus Born?

BY EDWARD W. WEAVER

I desire, briefly, to set forth my position on the time of our Master's birth. I shall present such scriptural evidences as I consider are very conclusive, hoping thereby to awaken a spirit of investigation.

Let me take you to Luke's testimony first. Here (1: 26) we find the angel Gabriel appearing to Mary and making the announcement of our Savior's conception in the sixth month. Mary heard his message and then said, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word." (Luke 1: 38.) Evidently conception took place at that time or very shortly afterward.

Now the whole of Palestine was a part of the Roman Empire at that time, and had been for many years, hence they were using the Julian calendar, established by Julius Cæsar. The sixth month, then, would be our June, when conception took place. Even if they still clung to the Mosaic calendar whose year began with the spring equinox (Exodus 12: 1, 2; 13: 4; Deuteronomy 16: 1), his conception took place in our September. As the period of pregnancy is well known, his birth would have to occur either the following March or April by the Julian calendar, or June or July by the Mosaic calendar.

Mary did not make the long trip to Bethlehem and Jerusalem in her condition to be present at a tax collector's office, but that she might be present at the Passover feast as commanded in the law. It was necessary that they should congregate at the place the Lord chose. (Deuteronomy 16: 5, 6.) As Jerusalem was the place established by decree, it became necessary for Mary to go there. (See 2 Chronicles 30: 5.) This once more establishes the date of our Lord's birth.

At the time of our Lord's birth, the shepherds were caring for their flocks by night. What would the shepherds be doing in the field with their flocks at Christmas time? Their presence would be necessary in the spring to care for the little lambs, hence the angels found them there at that time.

When Jesus was twelve years old, not twelve years, three and one half months, he and his parents went up to Jerusalem to the Passover feast. While there he reasoned with the doctors. (Luke 2: 41-50.)

Further than this, we find that when Jesus was baptized the record says (Luke 3: 23): "He began to be about thirty years of age." He was not thirty, but began to be about thirty. Now let us follow him for a few days after his baptism. "The next day after, John stood, and two of his disciples." (John 1: 35.) "The day following, Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me." (John 1: 43.) "And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there: And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage." (John 2: 1, 2.) After this he went down to Capernaum, he, and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples: and they continued there not many days." (John 2: 12.) "And the Jews' passover was at hand; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem." (John 2: 13.) By the foregoing scriptures, we prove that but a short time passed after his baptism till the passover. As he was about thirty years old when he was baptized, this short period let him complete his thirtieth year, and once more was he permitted to commemorate the anniversary of his birth in Jerusalem at the passover.

Christmas Day is a Catholic date. The day was fixed by the church, and a mass commanded to be read, called the Mary and Christ mass. Protestants shortened and changed this to read Merry Christmas, but still held to the same day of same month.

Our Lord said, "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, the first and the last." (Revelation 1: 8-11.) Would he not have been consistent with the year he gave to the Israelites, to be born in its first month, Abib? I think so. I believe also that when he told Joseph Smith to organize the church on the sixth day of April, 1830, and said it was 1,830 years since his coming to the earth, he was exact to a day, even to his own natal day.

If we, as citizens of this great Nation, think so much of our Nation's birthday, July 4, and hold to it so tenaciously, establish as a national holiday the birthday of the Father of our Country, George Washington, on February 22, what about the birthday of King Immanuel? Let us set apart April 6 as such date, commemorate our Lord's birth and the organization of the church by opening our General Conference on such date. And who will say that the Prince of Peace will not return to claim his bride on the anniversary of his and her birthday? Born at the passover season, crucified at the passover season, well might the Apostle Paul say: "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us." (1 Corinthians 5: 7.)

Less Hours, More Happiness?

It is too early to judge whether the American Federation of Labor's pronouncement in favor of a five-day week is a gesture or a policy. Coming as it did right after the Ford Company announced its five-day week program, the labor leaders' action received wide publicity, but neither Mr. Ford nor the American Federation can escape some questioning of their motives.

There are signs, for instance, that the saturation point for the Ford car is being approached, what with increasing competition in low-priced cars and the ever-rising aspiration of the Ford owner. Possibly all the cars that are needed can be turned out in five days, and for the time being the drop in demand may be met better by having everyone work but five days instead of having five-sixths of the force work six days. Or possibly it is only the latest move of our shrewdest industrialist to insure for himself the cream of the available labor.

The American Federation move, on the other hand, is obviously inside politics. Labor knows that it can hardly build up a national campaign for higher wages; there remains to fight for, then, only fewer hours. The eight-hour day, for so long a battling point, has been won; the next redoubt to be captured is the five-day week. For the present, the campaign need not be taken too seriously, but the pennant has been unfurled.

Meanwhile there remain certain truths. General well-being is a function of the unit productivity of each consumer. In proportion as each individual can produce more specialized goods at a lower cost, does the general consumptive demand of the individual increase. It has been found that to a certain limit this unit production will increase with decrease of man-hours of labor. Instead of the sixteen hours of old, we now work eight. But how much lower can we go and still continue to increase or even maintain the economical unit productivity? No one knows, and no one can know until we try. What will happen is a gradual experimentation; a plant here and a plant there will try the scheme out, the bricklayers and the carpenters will become envious of the five-day plasterers, and the machinist will demand the privileges of leisure the Wall Street broker enjoys. And then one day it will be found either that the five-day week works, just as the eight-hour day worked, or else it will be found, as it has been in Germany, which has returned to the nine and ten-hour day, that more labor must be expended to bring the unit productivity back to its economic balance.

We can't keep on indefinitely lowering the hours of labor, but we can recognize that after all there is more theological than economic significance in the much quoted injunction, "In the sweat of thy face, shalt thou eat bread." Until that happy time comes when every man has found his work and loves it so that laboring at it brings joy beyond the rewards that his wage can buy, until that time labor will be largely drudgery. To reduce the term of that drudgery is surely laudable, if in so doing there can be assured an individual reward which permits the pursuit of happiness in the additional leisure gained. The catch in the five-day week program of both Mr. Ford and the American Federation of Labor is that so far there is no assurance that we have reached the stage of industrial development when it will work.—Engineering News Record, October 14, 1926, page 610.

Holding Companies and Public Ownership

At a meeting two weeks ago at the American Academy of Political and Social Science, a lady from Connecticut startled the assembly with the statement that her electric light and power bill, from a private company, was $29, whereas had she lived in Ontario under the benevolent dispensation of the publicly-owned Hydro-Electric Power Commission, the same use of lighting and household appliances would have cost her but $8. In the November issue of the Atlantic Monthly, Professor W. Z. Ripley, continuing his pointed comments on certain corporate and financial divagations of the present day, holds up to public view the dangers that exist and lie ahead in the growing tendency to group under one large holding company, a purely financial machine, the manifold activities of many diversified and geographically widespread electric power companies. This coincidence of two really unrelated events may well prompt the user and the producer of electric energy to thought.

Professor Ripley is not an advocate of public ownership. He shows no signs of having absorbed the superficial theory that all private power production is essentially selfish and costly and that the people are being mulcted of millions of dollars, present and prospective, by their foolish reluctance to take over power production. What he does emphasize is that the domination of the private power field is in the hands of financiers whose whole trend of thought, though he does not say so in so many words, is strangely similar to that of the railroad magnates of the last century, who to their own great profit so thoroughly demoralized the transportation industry of the country that it has for twenty years been struggling to release itself from the slough of government control and popular disapproval into which it was thrust by those same financial manipulators.

Professor Ripley's citations are familiar enough and thoroughly sound. They range all the way from the uncontrovertible benefits of business and technical coordination to the excessive complication of financial structure which makes almost impossible any reasonable control of rates of the subsidiary producer of power and allots to the marginal, and as a rule inside, holder of holding company securities exceptional profits, at the same time storing up possibilities of future distress among thousands of small holders in case of a depression which would be reflected in reduced profits or even in losses. His charge is, in effect, that the holding company theory is essentially a financial theory in which the legal and financial mind dominates, and that type of mind is always more concerned with legalities and present profits than with moralities and future progress.

One man can not win a battle, but if he is sufficiently shrewd and intelligent he can direct a war. Professor Ripley would be the last to claim that his recent series of articles on certain forms of financial and corporate abuse were in themselves powerful enough to effect desired reforms, but it is only testimony of how effective is truth as a weapon that these articles are beginning to force changes of public opinion which show signs of penetrating to our financial centers. The men who are directing our power production may well take this thought to heart. On the one hand they find the calm arraignment of their policies, and on the other they are blind if they do not see the rising tide of resentment, and ignorance, that is so aptly revealed in the unbalanced charges of the lady from Connecticut. Many people are coming to believe that power, particularly water power, is the prerogative of the state. Partly this obsession is due to misunderstanding of what power production really is, of the complications of production by both steam and water, and the endless interweavings of transmission and distribution. To most laymen, power today is a simple commodity, made by utilizing the eternal energy of moving water and by some mysterious, though simple, means transformed into the electric bulb and washing machine. But on top of this ignorance is a very real resentment at financial operations which are so complicated as not to be understandable and therefore to be suspected.

Those who believe that government ownership of power is dangerous because it is bound to be uneconomical will have to take cognizance of this growing tendency of thought. Defeats of the public ownership movement in the West may lead to overconfidence. They must not forget that in New York an administration was returned which has consistently advocated public ownership and in so doing has had the support of the leading newspapers of the State. The movement is by no means dead, and no small part of its vigor is due to the abuses that Professor Ripley is pointing out. There are, as he says, good holding companies; there are restrictions of law which make some of their obvious evils necessary; there are as yet unsolved problems of national versus state control which make some corporate ambiguities necessary. But the writing is on the wall. If the power industry does not want to follow the railroad industry into the dark shadow, it had better soon begin to clean house. It might as a starter subordinate a few of its legal and financial lights to the more far-seeing, and strange as it may seem to some of these gentlemen, more social-minded engineer.—Engineering News Record, November 11, 1926, p. 775.

Missouri Highways

JEFFERSON CITY, January.—Missouri's major achievement will be recorded when the State Highway System is complete, according to Judge I. R. Kelso, of Cape Girardeau.

"A great highway system is the key to state development," says Kelso. "Confident that the people would support a plan to construct such a system provided it could be done without levying a direct property tax, the Federation of Missouri Commercial Clubs, shortly after the Armistice in 1918, initiated the movement, and the Legislature cooperated enabling Missouri to finance construction of two roads running approximately north and south, and east and west across each county, connecting 114 county seats.

"This 7,640-mile system, according to the Highway Commission, will accommodate 90 per cent of highway traffic and will cost $212,000,000 to construct; $106,000,000 has been expended, and the new highways now produce a 'tourist crop' that yields $60,000,000 annually.

"Located at the crossroads of the Nation, transcontinental tourists discover that Missouri is rich in natural scenery, typifying the United States in miniature. Any form of recreation is available in Missouri. That's why people come here.

"Missourians know that modern highways conserve human energy, lead to good health, better schools, greater churches, create markets, facilitate national defense, and benefit the State from center to circumference. They make government secure,

Patriarch Griffiths Exhorts to Faithfulness

The year 1926, which brought sorrow, sadness, and disappointments, as well as much joy and many blessings to many, as did its predecessors, has now passed into eternity. The new year of 1927 has made its appearance, bringing with it the thought as to what it may have in store for us. Many dear and loving friends have been called to the other side, and we naturally wonder who will be the next to be summoned.

At this time of the year we find practically all business firms and heads of industries taking an inventory to ascertain their financial standing as to assets and liabilities. Perhaps it would be wisdom if we as Saints and members of the church would take an inventory of our record of the past year and thereby ascertain what our spiritual condition is before the Lord; that is, how do the scales balance with us? Do the liabilities overbalance the assets? In other words, what has been our spiritual growth and what have we contributed to the Lord's grand work during the past year? Are we nearer the goal than we were the year previous?

As we contemplate our spiritual development, we consider such matters as:

Have we been regular in our attendance at Sunday school, Religio, and church services, when not prevented by conditions over which we had no control?

Are we in debt to the Lord? that is, Have we paid our tithing and otherwise contributed of our means towards the work of the Lord in such matters as branch expenses, etc.?

Are we in any way indebted to our fellow man and making no effort to meet our obligations?

Have we supported the church authorities, those upon whom the Lord has placed the responsibility of progress of his work, by our faith, prayers, and confidence?

Have we learned to love our brothers and sisters as the Lord has said we should? Or do we begin another year still nursing a hatred toward some brother or sister?

Let us not lose sight of the fact that today is the day of salvation. Therefore, let us take advantage of our hour of golden opportunity to be coworkers with Christ to bring to pass the great designs of the Lord, the redemption of Zion.

Since last writing to the HERALD, I have visited a number of places, performing ministerial labor in Alliance, New Philadelphia, Steubenville, and Barberton, Ohio; Wellsburg, Wheeling, Moundsville, and Clarksburg, West Virginia. I spread knowledge, advance science, and enlarge the social life of the whole people.

"The legislature, which is the all-powerful factor in state highway affairs, recognizes that the State must keep faith with the people. To date, 3,336 of the 7,640-mile system has been hard surfaced; 1,000 miles made all-weather highways because of heavy maintenance; and 1,500 miles are ready for surfacing. During 1927 approximately $13,000,000 will be expended in the construction of 200 miles of cement road, 350 miles of gravel, 600 miles of graded earth, and 175 miles of sub-soil treatment roads. It will cost $3,000,000 for maintenance. The 'PAY-AS-YOU-GO PLAN,' according to the commission, will make available over $10,000,000 during 1928 and more than $14,000,000 annually thereafter until completion of the highway system."

found the spiritual condition of these branches good, but as is the case in all places, there is room for improvement.

Brother Thomas Newton is in charge of the work at the Clarksburg Branch and is a very faithful and devoted servant to the cause, one who tries to live his religion, and one who is well versed both as to the doctrine of the church and in the current events of the day. Brother Newton is always ready to give a helping hand, and especially so to those who might be weak and faltering in the work. Of Brother Newton it might be said, as was said of the Lord, "He is a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." He, too, has had his Gethsemane, notwithstanding which he is patient, kind, and loving to all with whom he meets and mingles. He displays wonderful confidence in his heavenly Father. Brother Newton is greatly beloved by the Saints.

There are a number of bright and intelligent young men and women in this branch, who, if they are faithful, will be very useful and a power for good in their day and time.

We certainly enjoyed our sojourn among the Saints here for they showed us every kindness and consideration.

The branch at Alliance, under the presidency of Brother Smith, has made wonderful strides. We were greatly surprised to see the growth made by them in the past year, and there is every evidence that development will continue there.

The branch at Moundsville has erected a very commodious building in which to worship, which was very much needed. The brothers and sisters here are live wires, and they believe in doing things. There are a number of sisters who are hustlers in the truest sense of the word. It is much easier for the brothers to carry on the work when they have such good and faithful workers encouraging them by their co-operation. We shall rejoice with them when they shall have canceled the debt on their new building.

The Wheeling Branch is presided over by our old-time faithful servant, O. J. Tary, and we are pleased to report a great improvement in the branch of late, both as to activity and spirituality. The future for the work here looks promising.

The Wellsburg Branch is also developing. They are putting forth an effort to acquire a larger place in which to worship, as the present place is entirely too small to accommodate the people. The branch is presided over by William Allen. He is ably assisted by other branch officers. Here, as in Moundsville, they are fortunate in having earnest workers among the sisters.

At Steubenville, Brother William Richards, president of the district, is in charge of the work. He is ably assisted by Brother David Collin. This branch is not very large as to numbers, as several families have moved to other places. However, they seem to be holding their own. They have an active Sunday school and Religio. Steubenville is the home of our worthy brother, James E. Bishop, with whom we made our sojourn during our stay. As usual, we found Brother James alive to the interest of the work and prepared to defend it against all odds that might be brought to bear against it. The church is fortunate in having such a capable and worthy representative. He, too, is fortunate in having a companion who supports him in his efforts. One is always made to feel at home in their pleasant little home, which means a great deal to a missionary.

New Philadelphia has as its president our faithful and devoted worker, William Goudy. His efforts are being supplemented by our old stand-bys, Brothers Cramer, Carlyle, and Klar. They also have a mission in Uhrichsville as a result of ministerial labors on the part of Brother William Patterson. So the work in these parts is still thriving.

At Barberton we found Brother Rhodes, president of the branch, on the job, and the majority of the officers and Saints were backing his efforts to keep the camp fires blazing. Our dependable and worthy Patriarch A. R. Manchester is always ready with his wise and fatherly counsel, which is greatly appreciated by the officers and Saints, by whom he is greatly beloved and held in high esteem. It may well be said of him, as it has been said of some others, "An Israelite indeed."

The president of our district, Brother George Neville, has been actively engaged in the work pertaining to his office, going here and there each Sabbath through snow and rain. Such efforts are worthy of commendation.

Brother Budd held a series of meetings here which was profitable to the Saints and which already has had its reflection in the lives of some of the Saints. We are sorry we were not here to receive the benefit of Brother Budd's efforts. This brother's efforts are effectual wherever he goes.

Bishop Charles Fry, after many months of faithful service in this branch and district, returned to his home for the Christmas holidays. We shall be glad to welcome him to our midst upon his return. He is one of our most faithful and diligent workers and always is to be found at his post of duty.

Patriarchs A. E. Stone and John Martin are at home during the holidays after a season of absence attending to the Lord's work. It is a great pleasure and very gratifying to be associated with such noble and trustworthy men in the work of the ministry.

Our young brother, Stewart Armington, has been sustained as president of the branch here for another year. This demonstrates the fact that he has the confidence of the Saints. We live in hopes of seeing great progress made in the work here during the coming year, as well as in all places throughout the church.

The Christmas greetings sent out by the First Presidency were highly appreciated by the Saints. Let us hear from you often, brethren, as things of this sort are encouraging and stimulating to God's people. They love to hear from their leaders and spiritual advisers.

Wishing all of God's people a new year of happiness and prosperity and that it shall be to them one of great spiritual development, I remain,

Your brother in the one faith,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

KIRTLAND, OHIO, January 1.

Toronto, Ontario, Canada

December 30.—The month of December has been a very busy one, with varied activities from all departments of our branch.

The Department of Women held their annual bazaar at the church on Friday afternoon and evening, December 10. All kinds of fancy and dry goods were on sale. The Oriole Girls and the young ladies, under the leadership of Faye Gould McLean, also contributed articles and had separate booths at the bazaar for the sale of their merchandise. They turned in a goodly sum of money to the department as a result of their splendid efforts, which was greatly appreciated by the Department of Women. The Primrose Class of the Sunday school, the president of which is Mrs. Walter Norris, also worked for, and ran a separate booth at the bazaar, and were able to contribute a nice sum to the department from their sales.

The Toronto district ministerial conference took place at the Toronto church from December 10 to 12. Apostle E. J. Gleazer was the lecturer for the sessions of the conference. An intense interest was manifested in his lectures to the priesthood. A number of men from other branches were present at the conference.

The annual elections of officers were held in the branch, Sunday school, and Religio this month. The branch again elected J. Leslie Prentice president for the year 1927. Benjamin H. Hewitt and Doctor C. A. McLean were chosen as counselors to the president. The Sunday school elected W. J. Bavington as superintendent, with Faye Gould McLean, assistant. The leading officers of the Religio have not accepted office as yet. During the holiday season the Religio ceased to function; the opening meeting will be held on January 7.

On Tuesday, December 21, the Sunday school departed from the usual custom of having an entertainment of individual children's numbers and presented a pageant depicting the first Christmas, or the birth of Christ. A large screen was placed at the front of the platform on which silhouette pictures were projected from our lantern. The children were also posed between the lantern and the screen, making up some very effective shadow pictures. Musical numbers were given by the children and some of the choir members as these pictures were on the screen. The story of the birth of Christ was read at intervals between scenes by some of the boys of the Sunday school, representing the four apostolic writers, Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. This feature was again under the direction of Blanche Allen Needham and Faye Gould McLean. Already they are preparing for an Easter program for the children. The officers of the Sunday school and branch appreciate the sterling efforts of these two ladies in this work with the children.

On the Thursday before Christmas, our choir leader, Mr. Clifford G. McCormick, presented his usual organ recital over radio station C F C A. At this time he was assisted by the male quartet of our choir which sang Christmas carols. The quartet is composed of Doctor C. A. McLean, first tenor; James Irving, second tenor; C. H. Dudley, first bass; and W. J. Bailey, second bass, and was announced over the radio as "a male quartet from the Reorganized Latter Day Saints' Church." Mr. McCormick's organ recitals are broadcast twice weekly over station C F C A, and he is very favorably received by his radio audience.

On Christmas Sunday the Toronto Choir gave the annual Christmas service, assisted by the Simpson Avenue United Church Boys' Club Orchestra of ten pieces. The singing was done by choir members, the soloists being Miss Norma Rathwell, Mrs. Hazel Weaver, and Mr. James Irving. Dr. C. A. McLean took the solo parts in the anthems rendered by the choir. Bishop A. F. McLean spoke fittingly of the birth of Christ. The whole program was well planned and splendidly presented.

We welcome Miss Vida Taylor to our branch again after her six months work for the church in the Department of Women. She was a decided asset to our branch, and we surely are glad to have her here again. Other of our former members who will be returning shortly are Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Farthing who have spent three years for the church in the Society Islands. They will find a warm welcome from their many friends in Toronto.

We regret the loss by death of two of our brothers, Albert J. Leslie, in his sixty-sixth year, and George Atherley, in his fortieth year.

San Diego, California

About a year ago an S O S call was sent out from San Diego for help through the prayers of the Saints, especially those "who know the worth of prayer." Doubtless there are those who are wondering what has been the result of the year's efforts. There have as yet been no marked evidences of change. The Saints have continued in their regular services, and some have been added to our numbers. There have been five baptisms of adults, and four of children, with two marriages and one death.

At the beginning of the conference year, Elder P. R. Burton, seventy, was sent as missionary to Southern California. In the latter part of June he made this his headquarters and began a series of meetings in church, cottages, and the district tent, that continued into August. Since that time he has been busy in the northern part of the district.

The Department of Women has been reorganized, and about a month ago the Religio was again organized after a lapse of some years. These are encouraging signs.

Our annual business meeting was held the last week in December, and Elder A. T. Gray, recently from Los Angeles, was elected president, to succeed Brother Ray Wetherbee, priest, who had been selected to take the place of Elder G. H. Wixom, whom conference sent to Arizona. Elder Gray had met with us several times before coming here to reside, and we are hopeful for the future.

I continued preaching on the street every night until the end of March, since which I have preached there on Saturday evenings only. The need for which the S O S call was sent out still continues. May I ask that those who responded thereto continue to remember us, not forgetting that "The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong; but to whom the Lord our God shall give it"; and also, that the Lord has said, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit."

Our church is located at 4328 Alabama Street.

Pensacola, Florida

January 6.—Since Old Father Time has stolen the old year away from us and ushered into our midst a new one, we find the Pensacola Saints busy, trying to adjust themselves to start in for another year of service.

The Christmastide went by very quietly, and the program and tree were successful in their purpose of bringing cheer and happiness to everyone. This program was rendered on Christmas Eve, and there was a good attendance. It lasted about an hour, carried out the theme of Christmas time with songs, readings, tableaux, etc., combining all those elements which go to make us feel more grateful to God for having sent his dear Son into the world that we may have life and have it more abundantly. After the program, old Santa Claus with his cheerful, smiling face, entered from the rear door, and of course the little ones were overjoyed to see him. One little girl was heard to exclaim, "Oh, mother, let me kiss him, so he'll bring me what I want tonight." Santa departed after distributing the gifts, stating that he had many more little children to visit. This ended the program for the evening.

The sacramental and prayer service Sunday, January 2, was enjoyed by all, as the attendance was unusually large, and a good Spirit present. Many good, earnest prayers and testimonies were heard, and the new year resolutions were for more and better service for the Lord.

The annual Sunday school business meeting was held on January 2 during the Sunday school hour. Brother H. W. Sandiford was elected superintendent, with Brother E. C. Shelley as assistant; Brother W. M. Cobb, secretary and treasurer.

The Department of Recreation and Expression held its annual business meeting on Sunday evening. Brother E. C. Shelley was chosen superintendent; assistant, J. E. Row; secretary and treasurer, W. M. Cobb, and others to complete the organization.

We are always glad when the business meetings are over to see each one going about his work. We are having the best of attendance, and the work in Pensacola is on a firmer foundation than ever before. May we be able to accomplish more in this year that now lies before us, and may many souls be gleaned from out the world.

We welcome among us again Brother Wilson Raley, who has been in the Navy Hospital for some time. There he underwent a serious operation for gallstones. However, Brother Raley is out far in advance of the average case, and he does not fail to give the Lord the praise for his speedy recovery.

A sad accident was that which befell little Don Willis, who, while swinging on a rope which he had tied to a tree in his back yard, fell backward, when the rope broke, into a tub of boiling water, causing a very serious burn. This occurred about November 11, and little Don is just able to be out now.

We are glad to have with us once more Mr. Coley Blue, who has been away at sea for some time serving Uncle Sam. Of course Sister Blue is very much pleased to have him at home. They have just returned from Perry, Florida, where they spent the holidays with Mr. Blue's parents.

The monthly Religio social was held at the home of Brother and Sister H. W. Sandiford. There was a good attendance, and a pleasant evening was enjoyed.

We do not like the thought of the Bishops leaving us to move back to Dixonville, where Brother Bishop intends to get his farm going this year. If they move again, we hope it will be back to Pensacola.

We welcome among us Brother and Sister E. C. Shelley, who have recently moved here from McKenzie, Alabama. We need them, as they are earnest workers in the gospel, and there is always room for those who will thrust in their sickle and reap. As the Lord has said, The fields are white already. We welcome all Latter Day Saints and others to Pensacola, for it is a good place to live and boasts a wonderful climate.

Cadillac, Michigan

January 5.—Another year has passed into history, and a new year has dawned upon us. We feel that through past experiences we are better equipped to cope with the problems before us. On January 1 we had our annual business meeting, at which time officers were elected. Elder R. E. Jones, district missionary, was in charge. Officers chosen were: branch president, Sidney Price; secretary, Joseph Scott; treasurer, Elmer B. Decker; pianist, Ruby Price; chorister, Clyde Price.

The following day was Sunday, the day for the partaking of the sacrament. A goodly number of Saints met at the church to offer up thanks to God for blessings received in the past year, and many expressed a desire to do a greater work this year than they have ever accomplished before.

Efficient workers have been chosen to head the departmental work here. Owing to the scattered condition of the Saints, we have no Department of Women here, but hope to soon be able to take up that work again.

Brother Peter Price and family expect soon to move to Marion, Michigan. They have been faithful workers in our branch, and the prayers of the Saints will follow them to their new field of labor.

ANNA L. DECKER.

Interesting Times at Sperry

SPERRY, OKLAHOMA, December 31.—The approaching of the new year causes us to look at our ledger and see how our balance sheet looks for our branch and ourselves individually. We have all had our trials along with our pleasures, and we hope that the ledger sheet of our lives will show a nice margin of gain at the close of this year. Our branch has progressed in its development and activities, and of this we are justly proud.

On December 5 our young people held their morning sacrament, having about twenty-five members present, and at eleven o'clock the usual sacramental service was held, there being about thirty attending. Each one enjoyed the meeting.

On the preceding day, at our pastor's home, Brother Claus Stephens and Sister Elizabeth Cook were united in marriage. To this young couple go the best wishes of the branch and their many friends, for a long and happy life of service.

The Sunday school furnished the branch with a fine Christmas program and treats for everyone. This is a usual custom, and one to which we look forward each year. We chose Pastor W. P. Rumsey for our Sunday school superintendent for the coming year, and this is an office he has held for a long time, one he has controlled to the interest of all, for there is only one Brother Rumsey.

Brother Selma Stephens was selected to lead the Religio; his work in the past speaks for the interest he has manifested in that office. The old officers were sustained by the branch, and to them we extend our loyal support with best wishes for the coming year.

Brother and Sister Oley Brown gave an anniversary dinner. Our pastor and family were among the invited guests. The senior Religio class held a watch party in the basement of the church, at which time games and refreshments furnished the evening's entertainment, and an enjoyable time was had by all.

The Department of Women served dinner to the Commercial Club this month. This activity is alternated with two other churches, and furnishes the sisters with a nice income; they are to be congratulated for their wonderful work in supporting this branch.

On December 7, Bishop Ellis Short, sr., preached for us. He reminded some of the older Saints of some fifteen years back when with the aid of Sister Earl D. Bailey they secured a little white schoolhouse in this neighborhood and preached some of the first sermons in this neighborhood. To see on our brothers' face the smile of approval as he beheld our new church was worth all our efforts to obtain it. We are looking for another visit from Brother Ellis.

To the church and to the Saints go our best wishes for a happy and prosperous year.

Colorado Springs, Colorado

January 5.—It has been several months since a letter has appeared in the HERALD as coming from Colorado Springs. That, however, is no indication that we are not doing anything, but as we often say to our friends, we have been "too busy" to write. We wish to extend to the Saints throughout the world the season's greetings, and hope that the new year will bring prosperity and success to one and all.

The Sunday School Department gave a very fine Christmas program Christmas Eve. It was of the old type, which consisted of dialogues, recitations, songs, and music. At the close of the program Santa Claus made his annual visit and brought a well-filled bag with a treat for all the children and young people. Just before the program, Brother J. D. Curtis was called to the home of Sister Laura Sade to perform the marriage ceremony of her daughter Ina, and Floyd Engstrom. They are an estimable young couple. Brother Engstrom is a former Graceland College student and has been teaching school in Colorado for several years. Ina has held a responsible position in Colorado Springs for several years. She has been acting as church pianist for months. The branch extends to them its best wishes.

The semiannual business meeting was held on December 28. A fine spirit prevailed throughout. Nearly all of the motions were passed unanimously. With one exception, all of the old officers were sustained. We are anticipating a prosperous time in the six months ahead. The Sunday school held its business meeting and election of officers the following Sunday. All of the old officers were sustained.

Brother W. E. Rogers, who has been working in Borger, Texas, since last March, came home for the holidays.

R. S. Salyards, jr., who is employed in Denver, spent the holidays with his family here.

Mr. George Robertson, of Montana, is visiting his family here. He expects to locate in this part of the country.

Brother Drake, one of our deacons, who has been employed in Calahan all summer, has again taken up his business here.

Sister Florence Templeton has recently left for California for the rest of the winter.

Frances Nelson Sorensen, of Fairmont, West Virginia, is assisting her mother, Sister Otto Nelson, in caring for Brother Nelson, who has been afflicted for several years.

Brother S. P. Holm, who has been living on his ranch near Peyton for some time, spent Christmas with Sister Holm here.

Brother and Sister B. E. Brown ate Christmas dinner with the W. E. Rogers family.

Sister W. B. Root, who underwent an operation in Pueblo some time ago, is rapidly improving.

While Brother and Sister B. E. Brown were attending the Christmas program, a large box containing good things to eat was left at their apartment. It was donated by the members of the branch.

There was a good attendance at the sacramental service last Sunday, which was accompanied by a goodly degree of the Holy Spirit. Brother Brown occupied the pulpit in the evening. He delivered a very forceful sermon and gave the Saints a lot of serious things to think about. He is just getting over an attack of the "flu."

MRS. B. E. BROWN, Correspondent.

Bisbee, Arizona, and Christmas

January 3.—Under the auspices of the Sunday school, a Christmas program was held Wednesday, December 22, which was enjoyed by about sixty persons in spite of the rainy evening. Santa Claus, by special invitation, came up from Douglas, and at the proper time in the program called the young people up to the platform where a candy treat near the Christmas tree awaited distribution. Santa Claus availed himself of the opportunity of shaking hands with the little folks, to their great delight, and with appropriate remarks handed them their candy, then called the older ones forth to participate in the distribution.

On December 26 and January 2, the annual election of officers for the branch and Sunday school respectively was held, both meetings being well attended, resulting in the unanimous election of Elder David L. Evans for branch president; Brother T. R. Davis as chorister for the branch and Sunday school and superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Brother F. M. Dearborn, superintendent of the Sunday school and branch treasurer, he being also sustained as branch publicity agent. Sister Daisy Short was sustained as branch clerk, and Sister D. L. Evans as secretary of the Sunday school. Brother Raymond Ratterree was elected assistant Sunday school superintendent; and Sister Della Porter and Sister D. L. Evans, members of the library board. Brother T. R. Davis has been appointed to act as teacher in the branch in conjunction with his office as priest. Brother Perry O. Puckett, deacon, formerly of Phoenix Branch, has been given the responsibility of the care of the building and comfort of the Saints. Brother Charles F. Rehwald, deacon, who for many years has faithfully discharged his duties in his office as deacon and branch treasurer, announced his inability to continue active work on account of his failing health.

The Department of Women, which has been inactive for some months, is assured new life by the unanimous election of Sister John Dingle, as leader, and regular meetings are to be held for the advancement of the work in that line.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, which closed some months ago, is to be revived under the direction of Brother T. R. Davis, its superintendent. Their first meeting will be held January 9, when announcement will likely be made for the election of the other needed officers.

Elder George H. Wixom, who has been with us the past few weeks, left December 27 to spend the New Year holidays with his family at San Bernardino, California.

On January 2 Brother June Taylor, recently elected branch president of the Douglas Branch, motored up from Douglas to attend the priesthood meeting. He was accompanied by Brother S. D. Condit, bishop's agent for Arizona, who spoke in the evening regarding church finances, including the filing of inventories. His talk was very interesting and well received. At the priesthood meeting, the duties of the priesthood were discussed, and for future priesthood meetings it was suggested that the Presidency be communicated with, that proper outlines may be obtained of suitable subjects for future study that all may progress in their calling.

There has been a substantial increase in attendance at all services during the past few weeks, and we look forward to a steady and greater progress for 1927.

Saints Use Church Journals as Christmas Gifts

Here is a sample letter: "Please send the Ensign to _____, _____, _____, for which I inclose one dollar. She is a worthy Saint who is rearing a large family, and I feel she can not afford to be without the Ensign, so am sending it to her. Please inclose our compliments with the first number sent her."

And this Saint and her family will have at least fifty-two reminders of the donor's friendship, in addition to the reading of sermons, letters, and editorial treatises contained in 832 pages of the Ensign.

MADISON, WISCONSIN, January 5.—Entering in upon a new year, and looking back over the one just passed, we see wherein we have made some progress and have been an active unit in the army of the Lord. And this gives us a greater desire to make this year one of greater profit.

The branch business meeting was held on the evening of December 14. This being a very cold night, the branch was not as well represented as it might have been had the weather been a little milder. But a good spirit was present. Our able Brother H. W. Woodstock was sustained as branch president; Sister Woodstock also was sustained branch clerk and organist; Brother Carl Wirth was elected branch treasurer, also chorister; Archie Root, librarian. The branch solicitor reported seventeen hundred and seventy dollars sent to the bishop during the last year. We have gained eight by baptism the last year. The publicity agent's report showed three new subscribers for the Ensign; for Autumn Leaves, eighteen; HERALD, nine; Bibles bought, two; Books of Mormon, three; Doctrine and Covenants, three; church history, three; and much miscellaneous literature was ordered. The amount of money sent to the Herald Office was $127.62. Weekly announcements have been put in the three Madison papers, and monthly letters have been sent to the HERALD.

On December 19, at a quarter till ten, the regular Sunday school hour was spent in the election of officers for that department. Brother Carl Wirth was sustained Sunday school superintendent; Archie Root, secretary and treasurer.

The Religio at its regular hour of assembling in the evening held an election of officers. Archie Root was selected president; Emerson Bull, vice president; secretary and treasurer, Aletha Clark. These elections were carried on very smoothly, a good spirit prevailing.

The last prayer service of the old year and the first of this year were the best we have experienced for some time. Under the influence of the Spirit, many beautiful testimonies were borne. Also the sacramental service was reported as being a very spiritual one. Surely the Lord is mindful of his people and is willing to bless them inasmuch as they come to him with humble and contrite spirits. His promises are the same today as in the days of Israel of old, when the Spirit came upon Azariah, and he told the people, "The Lord is with you while ye be with him, and if you seek him, he will be found of you. Be ye strong therefore, and let not your hands be weak, for your works shall be rewarded." The Lord has been very good to us in the last year, showering many blessings, temporal and physical as well as spiritual, upon us. Our unfortunate ones have been blessed. Our sick have been healed. Even those who have been at death's door have been restored to health again, and many blessings have been poured out upon us. As we have sought to be a blessing to others, by putting a touch of rosy sunset into the life of another, we have worked with God. The poet says:

"We get back our mete as we measure,
We can not do wrong and be right.
Nor can we give pain and gain pleasure,
For Nature avenges each slight."

"Each day we live by some small word or deed,
We sow the seed
From which some harvesting of joy or sorrow,
We'll reap tomorrow."

Brother Charles Clark has been home enjoying the holidays with his family. He has preached some interesting sermons for us. We are sorry he can not stay with us, as he is a great help to the branch.

Brother L. Houghton is home from his field of labor in Illinois, spending the holidays with his family. His son Allan was home from the Iowa University, and Leonard and Warren came from Chicago, where they are employed.

Even though Brother Houghton is home resting from his ministerial labor, he is always willing to occupy the pulpit while here and help out in whatsoever way he can.

Lee Root was also home during vacation from the Plattville Normal.

On the evening of December 10, the young people with Brother and Sister Carl Wirth as chaperons went on a sleigh ride party. Upon returning from their ride, they stopped at Brother and Sister William Pratt's, where Sister Pratt had a large kettle of vegetable soup and crackers awaiting them.

On December 27 the young people gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Carl Wirth to surprise and help Eunice Johnson celebrate her birthday. Games were played, lunch served, and before leaving they presented Eunice with a beautiful gift, one which all girls enjoy having.

Three days later the young people also enjoyed a skating party on beautiful Lake Monono. We do not want anyone to think that all our young people enjoy is parties and recreation. They believe in being cheerful in their warfare that they may be joyous in their triumph. Our young people are good churchgoers; they are always present at prayer services, as well as other services, and contribute their bit.

The Christmas program was a marked success. The church was very prettily decorated by Brother Archie Root. At the close of the program, gifts and treats were given out. A joyful Christmas spirit prevailed, and a good social time was enjoyed.

In the coming year we hope to continue firm and hopeful in the great work which is before us, and do our bit toward the redemption of Zion.

Dow City, Iowa

We are glad to report that the Saints here are striving to do their part in the great cause of the Master, and as there is opportunity for each one to do his part in the redemption of Zion, it is hoped that not one will fall short.

Thanksgiving service was observed at the church. The eleven o'clock hour was devoted to prayer service.

All came with baskets filled with good things to eat, and about one o'clock dinner was served cafeteria style in the church. About fifty were present and enjoyed a bountiful feast and the association of their friends.

At half past two Brother W. A. Smith, of Independence, Missouri, was the speaker. His discourse was very appropriate and enjoyed by all. Preceding the sermon four of our young ladies sang "Count your blessings," very beautifully.

Brother Ward Johnson and family and Brother Fred Baber and family, of Denison, Iowa, were present, and all enjoyed their association. Those who were present are hoping this will be made an annual affair.

On November 28 occurred the junior service, the music being furnished by the junior choir. A special musical number was a vocal solo by Leta Riley, accompanied at the piano by Phyllis Pearsall. Brother Ward Johnson, of Denison, was the speaker. His talk was interesting, instructive, and encouraging, and followed along the line of junior work. We will be glad to have Brother Johnson with us again.

Sacramental service on December 5 was not very well attended, but those present enjoyed a portion of God's Spirit encouraging them to go on in the work.

The Sunday school Christmas tree and program were given Friday evening, the eve of Christmas, at the church. The building was filled to its utmost capacity. A very beautiful pageant, "Holy night," was given by the young people, and an interesting play, "The toy shop," was presented by the primary pupils. Both of these efforts were very much enjoyed by all present. The tree was beautifully decorated, and a treat for all present afforded much pleasure. The annual branch business meeting was held on December 26, and at this time officers were elected for the ensuing year. There were but few changes in the corps of officers, which served us so well last year. Also the Religio and Sunday school held their election of officers with but few changes in official personnel. The Department of Women met December 29 and elected officers for the coming year.

In all the departments, the branch is entering into the work with renewed energy and a strong determination, with the help of God's Holy Spirit, to do better and more efficient work in the coming year. Arrangements are in progress for a musical institute to be held in Dow City in the near future with a view that much good may be accomplished therefrom. The date of meeting had not been fixed at the last report.

The first sacramental service of the year was well attended, and this was a very encouraging start for 1927. The trend of the testimonies seemed to be a strong desire to go on in the work and to accomplish more good than has been done in the year just closing.

Brother C. E. Butterworth was the speaker Sunday evening, January 2. He took for his subject, "The new man," and spoke very ably.

Seattle and British Columbia District Young People's Convention

The second annual young people's convention of the Seattle and British Columbia District has passed into history, and from general appearances can well be acclaimed a success in every way.

The convention opened Friday evening, December 10, with an all-district young people's program, after which President F. M. McDowell, the convention speaker, was introduced and spoke on, "Youth and its possibilities." Brother McDowell gave parts of conversations and told of actions of childhood and youth in its different stages, so that his hearers could well understand just who he was talking about when he said "Youth." Then he spoke of some of the great possibilities of youth.

Saturday was given over entirely to study work. The subjects under discussion were: "Religious education" and the "Social program." In the evening, President McDowell addressed the convention on, "Why I believe in the social program of the church."

The young people's prayer service Sunday morning was one of the best that has been held in the district. The center section of the church was filled to capacity with attentive, active, and alert young people. Brother McDowell, who was in charge of the service, suggested a very wonderful theme, "Lengthen the ropes, but strengthen the stakes." He explained that each one should lengthen his ropes by preparation, qualifying for a bigger task, but at the same time or during this period of preparation he should become so grounded in the gospel of Jesus Christ that at no time will he forget the object of his preparation, that of service to God and humanity; that when he has lengthened his ropes to the greatest possible length, the stakes will have been driven so deep there would be no chance of collapse, thus meaning a failure in that person's life. From this theme many beautiful and earnest testimonies were given. Many expressed a desire to sing with true meaning those words in Zion's Praises, "I'll go where you want me to go; I'll be what you want me to be; I'll say what you want me to say." At the close of the service, all were strengthened and had a greater desire and determination to render unto God and to his fellow men a greater service.

The Sunday school for the little folks was held in the lower auditorium, while in the main auditorium President McDowell addressed the adults on, "Our greatest task." He stood six small children on the platform and asked, "How many believe that these boys and girls are naturally bad?" No hands went up. "How many believe that they are naturally good?" and a few hands went up. Then he asked, "How many believe that their characters can be molded for good or for bad?" and every hand went up. Then from this Brother McDowell concluded that our greatest task is to mold the characters of the children for good.

At the eleven o'clock hour President McDowell took as his subject, "A creed for youth," which I understand is to be published in Autumn Leaves.

The church, under the direction of Brother McDowell, is making a survey of the thoughts, likes, dislikes, desires, wishes, aims, and purposes of the youth of the church. Six hundred questionnaires have been filled out in Independence and fifty at each of the four conventions which Brother McDowell has just attended on the coast.

Our Big Brother preached his last sermon of the convention at 2.30. He took as a subject, "Things which keep youth from God." He then left immediately for Independence, via San Francisco.

Through the efforts of a few of the Seattle Saints, Mrs. Claude O. Young, of Portland, Oregon, soloist, was secured to help out with the convention program. Mrs. C. Livingston, also of Portland, assisted us with the program.

Elder A. C. Martin, the district missionary, delivered the closing sermon of the convention.—From the Monthly Bulletin—district paper.

Fort Collins Branch at Work

FORT COLLINS, COLORADO, January 7.—The Saints of this place are working along in much the same manner as at this time last year. That is what some might think who were just "lookers-on," but to those who dig to the bottom of things, there appears to be an improvement along certain lines; at least.

Each year the branch president is gaining experience, his vision of the work is broadening, his ideals are of high type, and of course the work would progress if—if he had the co-operation of his associates, which he has to quite an extent.

The church school under the supervision of Sister C. E. Stevens, is taking on a commendable dignity. There have been some changes made of late in the routine which would be a credit to any small school, and Sister Stevens's mind seems to be trying most of the time to find something that will be of further improvement and uplift to the work.

The school, including members of the beginner class to the adult class, gave a service called "The Christmas waif," in which the real, true spirit of Christmas was demonstrated in tableau, in act, and in song. There were a number of visitors present who expressed themselves as well pleased with the entertainment. The only criticism heard was that it was too short.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has again elected Brother Clifford Cable as supervisor of its activities. The members decided last Sunday evening to take up expressional work. Just to think that all this time they have been dragging the religious education into this department, but now this department will try that for which it was intended and leave the religious education in the church school where it belongs.

The Bluebird Class took the lead in this matter. They have the best of times back in their corner behind the screen. They meet occasionally at the home of their leader, where they sew and practice their rhythmic orchestra and play games. There is an interesting Boy Scout class, too. You see the adults were left to fall in line, which they have done. Fort Collins is not the only place that is slow. There are others.

Helene Fleet received word December 30 that her father, B. D. Fleet, was ill with pneumonia in Excelsior Springs, Missouri. She at once left for Missouri. A message came later that he had passed away January 1. Helene will remain at Lamoni for a while, visiting relatives before returning to Colorado.

A very sad accident occurred here yesterday morning. Mr. Lloyd Reigle, employed by the Public Service Company as operator at its electric substation, died at the hospital at four o'clock in the morning as a result of burns received about midnight following an explosion of kerosene with which he was starting a fire in a heating stove at the station.

His wife, Sister Jennie Reneau Reigle, will be remembered by many Graceland students. It was her brother who was drowned several years ago while attending Graceland. Two such tragic deaths in her family in so short a time are quite sufficient to cause a very depressing state of mind, but Sister Reigle is a very brave little woman. She, with her two little sons, Jack and Buddie, have the sympathy of all their friends and acquaintances. The funeral service will be Sunday afternoon at the Day Funeral Home. Elder K. G. Broliar will have charge of the service and will preach the sermon.

Wiley, Colorado

January 7.—As another new year opens before us, it is with new courage that the Wiley Branch contemplates the future. Brother Brown, our district president, was a visitor a few weeks ago; and more recently Brother J. R. Sutton has made a longer visit that has been much enjoyed.

Just prior to the Christmas festivities, the friends of Joe and Mary Ralston were called upon to mourn with them the loss of their oldest child, little Lucille, who was buried on her fourth birthday. The funeral sermon was preached by Brother Sutton.

A very pleasing Christmas program was given at the church, and all enjoyed an unusually generous treat.

One accomplishment that has given much encouragement to every member of the branch who attends the services, is the new decoration of the interior of the church. Brothers Gomer and Gordon O'Dell very generously gave as their Christmas gift to the church, a thorough painting of walls and woodwork. Others of the decorating committee helped in other ways, and the result is one of the most attractive churches in the community. Some Sunday school classrooms were arranged in the main auditorium, and a different seating arrangement gives an entirely new appearance to the auditorium. Other changes are in prospect, and if everybody continues as they have started, they will be accomplished without undue burden upon anyone. When everybody does his small share earnestly and willingly, the work can not fail to progress.

Sister Vida M. Fletcher was elected Sunday school superintendent for the third year, and a very promising corps of officers were elected to assist in this department of the work.

Brother Leslie Allen and family have moved to Lamar and are lending every assistance in their power.

Sioux City, Iowa

A Happy New Year to HERALD readers. The Christmas pageant given by the Sunday school was a marked success and an enjoyable affair, many making favorable comments. The caste included the manger, Joseph, Mary, angels, shepherds, wise men, gift bearers, and the carol singers. The customary Christmas tree and its decorations were more beautiful, as colored lights were flashed upon it at intervals. Candies and nuts were plentiful, and many gifts were distributed.

At the annual business meetings of the church and the departments, the following officers were elected: Presiding elder and pastor, G. Scott Daniel; clerk and statistician, Sanford Vandel; treasurer, Jay E. Keck; chorister, Mrs. G. Scott Daniel; Sunday school superintendent, Jay E. Keck; Religio superintendent, Frederick Vandel; Department of Women superintendent, Mrs. R. L. Sheetz. Jay E. Keck has been retained by the general Publicity Department to act as local publicity agent. As yet no bishop's solicitor has been selected, although R. L. Sheetz, a special agent of the bishopric, receipts for tithes and offerings.

A new envelope system is being used in the Sunday School Department, which is the quickest method for collection of offerings we have found. Each member is supplied with a small carton containing fifty-two envelopes. Each envelope has two compartments—one for Sunday school offering and one for tithes and Christmas offering. The money is placed in its proper place at home. The teacher, or class officer, is furnished each Sunday with a class envelope which receives the individual envelopes. The large envelope is then collected by the treasurer.

Elder G. Scott Daniel and family are comfortably located at 1606 Villa Avenue. They came during November from Independence. Prior to their short stay in Zion, the Daniels served the Burlington, Iowa, Saints for three years. Surely our gain is a great loss to Burlington.

Sister Benner, of Walthill, Nebraska, visited her son Adron and family during the holiday season.

A baby girl, first child, came to bless the home of F. W. and Mrs. Moore (nee Mary Baker) January fifth.

Mark and Sister Brady are contemplating moving to Saint Louis soon, where Mr. Brady will be employed in a former position.

Hutchinson, Kansas

January 9.—Some wonderful meetings have been recently held in our branch, and the good spirit, brought here by our brothers, still prevails. We wish to express our thanks and appreciation for these meetings, even if we are a little late in doing so.

We looked forward to the first day of December when Brother H. V. Minton, missionary for the Southwestern Kansas District, should arrive and hold services. These had been planned ahead, but at the last minute who should come with Brother Minton but Brother Peter S. Whalley, pastor of the Wichita Branch, with whom some of us were acquainted, having met him in Omaha, where he and Sister Whalley had grown dear to our hearts.

The meeting was opened by Brother Whalley, who occupied the first three nights, as he had but a few days to be with us, and we gave him our earnest attention while he related some of his experiences in the World War. Our hearts were touched and melted into a bond of sympathy for our brother in the hardships he underwent for our sakes, and we resolved to lead better and truer lives that we would merit that same protection in times of trouble. After Brother Whalley left for his home, Brother Minton continued the meetings, with the assistance of our pastor, Gomer T. Turpin.

However, before, we describe these meetings, we wish to relate a few things that happened which were hard for us to understand at that time, but since have been explained.

We had planned to distribute tracts brought by our brother, in order to interest others in the work, but while we all prayed to be shown how to go about it so that they might be interested, we did not receive light, and it seemed that our hands were tied. Even after the meetings had started, we felt the same way, and we decided to wait and see if the reason would be given why we all felt this way. As our missionary presented the wonderful truths to us night after night, we could feel God directing him with his Spirit, giving us exactly what we needed. Oftentimes he spoke on an altogether different subject than that which he had thought to speak on when he arose to occupy. Brother Minton could not understand why he was directed in this manner. But we, the Saints, knew the voice of God was speaking through our brother, and we drank in every word, and it was meat to our souls. We were made to realize the Master's meaning when he said, "Feed my sheep."

As the meetings continued, we were cemented closer and closer together in that bond of love and fellowship which Saints should feel for one another, and we then began to realize that the food we had received had been expressly for those who are already in the fold and would not have been so interesting to a nonmember, although some did attend for a time, but the weather was bad, and they ceased to come.

We have a small branch here, about eight families in all, and we are earnestly trying to serve God and carry on the work. The stewardship plan was made beautiful to us, and we all filed our inventories and are going to start the new year just as nearly right as we know how. Our pastor loves this gospel with all his heart and soul, and is happy when we are all attending and doing our part. We have some wonderful prayer services and have felt the presence of angels in our midst. We desire the prayers of the Saints, that nothing may mar our progress in living good, clean lives for this gospel's sake.

CATHERINE NITZ.

Attleboro, Massachusetts

January 11.—As we look back over the year just past, we can say that Attleboro has been trying to do her part in the building of God's kingdom. As the Saints returned home in the fall from the reunion, it was with renewed strength and a greater desire to work.

The choir started off with an outing at the farm of Elder Fred Roberts, of Cranston, Rhode Island. Five auto loads made the trip. After making a few wrong turns and losing each other, we finally arrived at the farm, where Brother and Sister Roberts welcomed us. As we looked about the farm, we saw a whole field of corn waiting to be shucked, so taking advantage of this opportunity we had our first "huskin' bee." All went at it as though they really enjoyed it, especially the young men, who were eager to find the red ears. Games were played and strolls about the fields enjoyed, when finally a fire was built, wieners, doughnuts and cheese, and sweet cider were brought, and a real wiener roast was in progress! Surely it was a gay party, and how those wieners disappeared! As dusk came on, we were invited into the home of our brother and sister, and a real home it was. With its quaint yet artistic setting, it made one long to remain. As we were admiring the beautiful oil paintings on the walls, we were surprised to learn that they were the work of Sister Roberts, a talent which we had never known she possessed. We have learned to love this consecrated couple and look forward to another visit to the farm sometime. Brother Roberts comes out to Attleboro to preach for us occasionally, and they are always welcome visitors.

The departments are active and doing good work. A teachers' training class meets every two weeks, with a membership of fifteen. Sister Anna Baldwin is the teacher and continues to hold a good interest. Our branch has lacked leaders in the past, and we hope this difficulty will be overcome somewhat as these young people prepare for greater service.

The Ladies' Aid of the Department of Women have met every week and sewed for their bazaar, which was held just before Christmas, at which they made nearly one hundred dollars. A social is held by them once a month, each member contributing something in the line of refreshments. The associated charities of the city sent an appeal through our daily paper for funds to help the poor in our city, and our Department of Women contributed in a material way toward this fund.

The Mary E. Rogers Class has also been doing things worthy of mention. This is an organized class of young women that meets once per month. They have been studying the church history, and are now taking up the study of the Book of Mormon under the instruction of Gertrude Robbins. This class also raises money in various ways, using it in some good way, such as sending flowers to the sick or helping some one in need. They heard of a needy family through the District Nursing Association. The father and mother were sick, and there were seven children, so they presented a pitiable condition, as the parents are incurable. This class packed a Christmas box of toys and useful things, also fruit, nuts, and candy, as well as warm clothing, shoes, and rubbers. Some of the children had never owned a pair of rubbers before. The superintendent of the poor said he was very glad that so much had been done for them, as they had never had a real Christmas before. The class also sent the mother five dollars, and the city provided them with a Christmas dinner, all cooked. They were all made very happy, but I am sure the happiest were the ones who gave. The Oriole Girls also contributed their part to help this worthy family. Ten dollars was also sent to the Associated Charities to help in their work of helping the distressed and the poor.

Our city is greatly concerned about the unfortunates and does all it can to help them. For weeks before Christmas, the firemen sent an appeal to bring all discarded toys to the stations. They repaired and painted them so they looked like new, and many a kiddie was made happy by those truck loads of toys. The class also sent a shower of post cards to an aged brother and sister, also five dollars to an aged sister who is a widow. These things all helped to bring the real spirit of Christmas to us. This was also augmented when on Christmas Eve the choir, twenty-one in all, started out at one o'clock in the morning, going to the homes of all the Saints and awaking them by singing Christmas carols. Under the leadership of John P. Pilling, we left the home of Brother and Sister John Heap who started us off with refreshments and a warm drink, finally ending up at our pastor's home, where his mother had prepared a hot breakfast for us. We returned home at 5 a. m., tired but happy. We had felt the Spirit of God with us as we sang of the Savior's birth in the crisp morning air. Word has come to us from nonmembers that the singing was the most beautiful they ever heard.

The Equality Club meets every two weeks for study and sociability. This is a young men's club made up also of several nonmembers. They are studying the Book of Mormon, our pastor, Earle Bradshaw, being the instructor. After the lesson a social hour and refreshments provided by two of the members follow. On Christmas Eve the club presented the pastor a new tire for his Ford. This was in appreciation of his work among them.

A very pleasant time was enjoyed at our Christmas Eve program given by the Sunday school. A program was given by the children, followed by the appearance of Santa with jolly wit and bag of toys and candy for the children. The Christmas tree, beautifully adorned with colored lights, was weighted down with gifts for all. Our pastor, Earle Bradshaw, was presented with a gift of money and a beautiful floor lamp by the members of the branch. He was completely overwhelmed with surprise and pleasure.

The work of the branch is onward. The priesthood meet for study and discussion of problems each month under the leadership of the pastor. Our meetings have been very spiritual, especially the sacramental service in October. Those who attended will long remember the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The priesthood had met as usual at 9.30 a. m., for prayer. They had prayed that God would search out his people and give them a desire to come to the service that morning. The result was that a great number came, including some families who had to hire a taxi to bring them the long distance to the church. The Lord spoke to the priesthood, telling them he had heard their prayers and was pleased with the attitude in which they had met, and their concern over the welfare of his children. He promised, if they continued thus he would bless them with greater power of his Spirit. The Saints were also given a word of great encouragement, also our pastor. We were told to continue on in the unity of spirit which we had shown thus far. All felt the power of the Spirit, and many testified of its enveloping them as they had entered the church door.

Our pastor has been in very poor health of late, but despite his ill health every ounce of strength he has spent in the service of the Master. He was unable to meet with us at our New Year's sacramental service, being under the doctor's care. We were all deeply concerned and wondered if there were something in us that hindered a blessing from coming to him. We prayed earnestly for him, and although he had been unable to lie down for two nights, we learned that on Monday he ate his breakfast and was wonderfully improved. Surely God does answer prayer. Do we pray enough?

We have had a number of visiting elders the past few months, among them Elders John Rogerson, Arthur Nichols, Fred Roberts, Edmund Brown, and James W. Heap. Our pastor advertised a young people's meeting the second Sunday in November and invited Brother Ed. Brown, of Providence, Rhode Island, to speak. His subject was "Personal service," and his talk was very impressive to the many young people present.

Our local priesthood are doing good work in their offices. A priesthood program was held a few weeks ago, and three young men, a priest, a teacher, and a deacon, occupied the morning hour. It is planned to have two more, a teacher and a deacon, occupy on January 23. In this way these young men have opportunity for development, and the Saints have the chance to learn what is in the hearts of these men who have been called to be God's servants.

Many of our people are "fishing" to get K L D S, but thus far only our pastor and his brother have been successful. But the rest are still hoping. We should like to see K L D S increase its power in every way—in watts as well as in good works. We are happy that the gospel is being preached over the air, for who knows how many will recognize the voice of the Good Shepherd. The Radio Number of the Autumn Leaves was great. Seeing the radio artists makes us feel that we know them better. May K L D S continue to waft o'er the ether waves the tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.

I. M. POWER.

Detroit, Michigan

Your paper is a welcome visitor to our home, and we are pleased to note the difference in the articles printed. We read with interest the letters and try to keep up (in fancy) with the travels of Brother F. M. Smith, but 'tis easier far to read of his work than to follow. May he be given peace of mind and a strong, healthy body.

We do not see many letters from this city, but it is still on the map, and our hopes are brightened by the efforts that are being planned for the future.

Brother T. S. Williams has a mighty task in being the pastor of Detroit, and if he can get the support of the Saints, will get the wheels in motion. Is it not strange that we will protest in loud tones how we love the work but fail to put love into action. True love wants to do something—the more we love, the more we give. We need to trust our leaders; they are in God's hand; he really is the pilot, so let us follow and trust our leaders, from the Prophet down even to the least, if there be any such.

We are pleased to say that we recently have purchased a nice church building on the corner of Rosslyn and Louise Avenues, Highland Park. It is not on some obscure lot, away back in no man's land, as is the case with many of our churches. It has a good-sized basement and other accommodations. Mrs. Sarah Smith, a lady who recently lost her husband, has donated twenty-five hundred dollars in memory of her husband, to furnish the church. I believe I am correct in saying that neither are members of the church but have been friendly for years. Number two church also has blossomed out with repairs—basement, new paint, etc., and good meetings.

We have work in Wyandotte and River Rouge, and now comes the news of a mission Sunday school to start under the care of Elder Clyde Gault. There is also an opening in Dearborn—the home town of Henry Ford. So the prospects are bright. We have a city paper, The Beacon Light, that keeps us in touch with all the activities.

Our young people are making a good showing in athletics. They have a basket ball team, baseball in season, and have made a record not only for their skill in the game, but for their clean way of playing.

We had some inspiring music for Christmas; that is, the Sunday preceding Christmas. It caused our eyes to fill with tears of gladness. The Saints are coming up higher in the knowledge of music, and perhaps some day we can sing the song of Moses and the Lamb and sing it correctly.

We hope and trust that some day the ether waves will deal kindly with Detroit and allow us to catch the welcome sound of K L D S. It seems to be almost impossible to get. Maybe this is for the best, for it would be a temptation hard to resist on a cold, wintry night and twelve miles to church.

May the year 1927 be a year long to be remembered for the work done, the unity of effort, and the onward march toward our goal.

MRS. NETTIE M. GAULT.

DETROIT (REDFORD), MICHIGAN.

Alexander, Kansas

January 8.—The branch at Alexander is starting the new year with a series of fine sermons preached by Missionary Silvers. Meetings started Sunday evening, January 2, and the Saints have been attending fairly well.

Chrystal Teeters, who is going to Graceland College, came home for the Christmas vacation. When asked, "Is Graceland fine?" she answered, "Yes, indeed!" We hope others may go from here after seeing what happiness and content is brought to her.

Brother and Sister Clarence Thompson, of Alexander, have moved to La Crosse, Kansas, during the past week. Their two oldest boys, who are attending high school here, are staying to finish the semester.

Brother and Sister Ebert's home was the scene of a real home-coming Christmas Day. The children were all back home with father and mother.

A Christmas program was rendered Christmas Eve. It mainly consisted of several short plays, in which the middle-aged as well as the young took part. The little ones enjoyed the tree and the candy to the fullest extent.

The Saints at Alexander wish the new year to be one full of love and work for their Master.

Boone, Iowa

The Saints of Boone Branch are busy in every department. The Department of Women on December 4 held a bazaar and food sale and realized a neat sum. The sisters meet each week and are studying stewardships. Sister O. L. D'Arcy is teacher, and she was chosen leader for this year and superintendent of the Sunday school. This sister is alive to the work, causing others to catch the enthusiasm, hence many are getting busy.

Elder D'Arcy was out in the district previous to the many home-comings, but returned for the holidays and has been giving us some wonderful sermons.

The Sunday school under Sister D'Arcy's supervision, assisted by Harold and Clyde Ross, rendered a beautiful Christmas pageant on Christmas Eve. The pageant was entitled, "The pathway of the star." Each participant did well, including Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, who talked entertainingly to the children and distributed the Sunday school treat.

Brother Frank Walters was sustained as branch president for this year, with Brothers O. Tesdahl and O. L. D'Arcy as counselors. Brother Walters is doing all he can, as a shepherd, to encourage the Saints and in directing the work of the branch. He has been hindered some the past few weeks, having been injured in the woods while cutting mine props, but is better now. He also had to assist in caring for his brother-in-law during the latter's illness. The brother-in-law was buried the first Sunday in January.

A choir, under the leadership of Sister R. C. Cassiday, has been organized and is meeting each week for practice. Sister Mamie Rose is musical director.

The Sunday school is sponsoring an interesting contest between the adult classes. The contestants are two classes of sisters, "The True Blues," and two classes of brothers, "Pure Gold." The men are anxious to win, as they do not want to serve the banquet which the losers have pledged to serve the winners. The four classes have pledged one hundred and forty dollars as their goal for the Christmas offering.

The Department of Recreation and Expression meets each Friday evening. Brother Louis Crandall acts as superintendent. A pie social is the order for this week.

In this branch the Temple Builders are also busy, having held about forty-two sessions in 1926.

We are expecting Bishop Clark to visit us during this month in the interest of inventories, etc.

Sunday, January 16, Brothers Stephen Robinson and Doctor Hull are expected. These brethren are always gladly welcomed. We are hopeful for the future of the branch.

Fall River, Massachusetts

January 5.—The annual bank breaking for the Christmas offering was held January 1. So far the offering has reached the total of three hundred and ninety dollars. This is the largest amount ever sent from Fall River. A musical program was enjoyed at this time, and refreshments were served.

On the first Sunday of the new year, about forty attended the sacramental service. The meeting was in charge of the district missionary, Elder Herman A. Chelline. It was the first service of this kind he has attended since coming to Fall River, he being busy in other places.

Sister Susan Sinclair and youngest son, of Boston, were present, at both the sacramental service and the bank breaking.

The annual election of officers for the branch was held January 3. All officers were reelected. An entertainment was planned to be given in the near future, as the branch is in need of funds.

Sister Martha Jackson has been ill with the grip. She is the mother of the Fall River organist. Special mention should be made of the Christmas music played by Sister Elizabeth Jackson.

Sacrament was carried by the pastor, James W. Heap, and Alma M. Coombs to Sisters Martha Jackson, Elizabeth Hargraves, Sarah Halstead, and Myra Cockcroft. In the evening a priesthood meeting was held, with good attendance.

Coffeyville, Kansas

It has been some time since the activities of the Coffeyville Branch have been recorded in your columns; this does not denote, however, that it has not been active. A retrospection of the activities of the branch for the past year shows that we have made some progress. The outlook for the work in 1927 presents us more abundant opportunities than we have ever before realized.

The election of officers at our recent business meeting resulted as follows: Mrs. Head, Sunday school superintendent; Thelma Walton, Religio president; Mrs. Orpha Cummins, Department of Women leader; Margie Pitcock, supervisor of music; the writer as branch president.

We were very pleasantly surprised recently to have come into our midst Brother Beal and family, of Saint Joseph, Missouri. There has been a great need for workers here, and especially for those holding the priesthood; hence Brother Beal, holding the office of elder, was immediately pressed into service. We enjoyed his sermons, for they are instructive and inspirational.

The evening of January 7 found the Saints assembled in the capacity of a fellowship banquet, which was held at the church. It was considered by all attending to be one of the most enjoyable events in the history of the Coffeyville Branch.

Talks were made by the heads of departments and priesthood members. These were well received, and it is good to say there was a desire in the mind of each speaker to be of greater service. Following the talks, a short program was given by the young people, consisting of selections by the "Humanophone" and the "Kitchen Mechanics Sympathy Orchestra." The instruments composing the orchestra were made of household accessories and varied from a tub to a clothespin on a crowbar. However crude the instruments might have been, the merriment derived therefrom was not lessened.

Ample credit goes to Mrs. R. C. Walton and her assistants for the splendid food provided. The writer acted in the capacity of toastmaster.

It is with anticipation that we look forward to the series of meetings beginning February 6 and continuing to the 20th. Brother V. E. Sheppard, of the district missionary force, will be the speaker. We are confident that much good will result from these meetings, and judging from the enthusiasm shown by the membership, we are assured they will be a success.

We were pleased to have in attendance last Sunday, Clarence Ward, formerly of Independence, Missouri, who will be in our city for some time. Anyone visiting here will find the church located at the corner of Eleventh and Washita.

HOWARD P. ANDERSON.

Chatham, Ontario

January 7.—The election of officers and semiannual business meeting of the branch was held the first Monday in December, resulting in the selection of the following: President, Elder R. H. Jones; counselors, Elders V. E. Pritchard and R. R. Wood; branch clerk, R. R. Wood; chorister, Mrs. R. H. Jones; organist, William Clark; superintendent of Sunday school, Elder V. E. Pritchard; superintendent of School of Expression and Recreation, Leslie Wood; auditors, William Clark, Ivan N. Pritchard. The auditors' report showed healthy balances in all departments. Some improvements to the church were discussed, and the president stated he looked forward to a progressive year in 1927.

On Thursday evening, December 23, the annual Christmas concert, with the Christmas tree of the Sunday school, was held. A nicely decorated tree was on display, and had upon it many presents for all and a treat for all the scholars. The program consisted of dialogues, recitations, solos, and choruses, and late in the evening Santa appeared to amuse the children.

On New Year's Eve the School of Expression and Recreation held a watch night service, commencing at eleven o'clock, with Leslie Wood, president, in charge. It was a new idea in the branch and took very well, judging by the number present and the interest shown. Solos, scripture readings, and a short talk made up the order of the service, and a wonderful feeling was present.

On Sunday evening, December 26, Elder Duncan Clatworthy, a former president of the branch, but now of Buffalo, was the speaker. All enjoyed his sermon and welcomed him back.

The new officers in the departments have taken over their duties, and we are looking forward to a prosperous year.

Lansing, Michigan

We have just turned the page of another year, and with that turning hope to improve upon the record just ended.

Elder S. A. Barss is again pastor. He has won our respect and love through his past administrations, and we know the same good fellowship toward him will continue.

Brother Alva Dexter is starting his second year at the head of Sunday school work assisted by Brother Carl Hicks. Brother Carl Hicks has recently come to our branch from Detroit. His enthusiastic efforts tend to inspire us to greater action.

Religio work is in charge of Brother Frisbee. The Book of Mormon class has begun the study course offered by Graceland College. We take it as a wonderful opportunity and feel it quite well worth our time.

Mapleton, Kansas

January 9.—We join in wishing everyone a very happy New Year, full of prosperity, health, and happiness. The last year, 1926, is gone. What have you gained from it? We hated to bid it good-by but welcome the beginning of another year and hope to make it a great success, and so fill the coming months with good deeds and gospel work that at the end of 1927 the goal of every true Latter Day Saint will have been reached.

On Christmas Eve we had our program and tree, much to the delight of the children; more so when Santa Claus came with pack and treat for all.

Election of officers was held on December 15. Those elected are: Pastor, Hollie Dennis; priest, Everett Hughes; teacher, W. H. Duncan; deacon, A. L. Needham; chorister, Arthur Dennis; pianist, Nellie Dennis; clerk, D. M. Dennis. The pastor wishes the cooperation of the officers as well as the branch, and with that view in mind the year will be a thriving one.

We are sorry Brother Lee Quick has been ill. We have greatly missed his presence but are glad he is again able to be up and hope he will continue to gain in health.

Mrs. Ward Wellington has come home from the Mercy Hospital at Fort Scott, Kansas, having had an operation for appendicitis. She is improving.

Sister Wellington and granddaughter, Lula, have returned home from a two months' visit in Nebraska and Missouri.

Sister H. C. Hughes, and her son, Everett, have both moved into their new homes.

On New Year's Eve the young people's class gathered at the home of Brother A. L. Needham to watch the old year out and the new year in. At a late hour refreshments were served, and the Old Year was watched out of sight by singing "The old, old path." Those present from other towns were: Lucy Barraclough, Prescott, Kansas, and Hubert Ellithorpe, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Fanning, Kansas

January 11.—The church here is forging along to the fore. There has been good attendance, and an increased interest is being manifested. Though we are in a rural community, last year a number attended the Sunday school almost every Sunday. Special mention should be made of one young lady, Miss Hazel Thomas, who lives three and a half miles away, over hill road, too. She came every Sunday last year and was assistant teacher of a primary class; she is now the secretary of the school.

About the middle of December, at a business meeting of the branch the election of officers was had, with this outcome: Branch president, F. G. Hedrick; Sunday school superintendent, William Marsh; president of the Religio, Sister Vera Twombly; president of the Department of Women, Sister Helen Tilden. With these efficient officers the activities of the branch start off on the right foot. These will meet with the Troy group soon to select officers there.

The usual Christmas tree and a very good program with a generous treat for all the school were had on Christmas Eve.

There are those of our number who have been seriously sick. Sister Rachel Long suffered partial paralysis, and had to have one arm amputated to save her life. Brother Lewis Jeschke is recovering from a four-week siege which started from an ulcerated tooth.

Some from here attended the two-day meeting last Sunday, the 9th, at Netawaka, Kansas. The weather was fine and roads good. They expected Brother and Sister Peter S. Whalley, of Wichita, to be present, besides the district force and local ministers.

Brother F. G. Hedrick, our branch president, preached a very splendid sermon Sunday, the 9th; it was meat in due season.

On January 2 the sacramental meeting was well attended, and many prayers and encouraging testimonies were given. The midweek prayer meetings are also an inspiration; more are coming out; so the good work goes on.

The Department of Women is preparing to give a supper next Friday night, January 14, at the Fanning Schoolhouse, to help the work along.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, January 6.—We have of recent weeks been having some exceptionally spiritual prayer meetings; and because of this, many of the branch have been encouraged and made to realize their part in the work to such an extent that the branch is getting along nicely.

Sunday school attendance is very good for a country church, and we are looking forward to the fast-approaching time when Brother Jacob Halb, a seventy, from Middletown, Ohio, will be in our midst. We are assured that much good will be accomplished.

On Sunday, December 26, occurred the election of Sunday school officers. Brother Luther Crabtree, our teacher, was chosen to act as superintendent, to be assisted by Brother Roy Culp; secretary, Sister Ora Altman; assistant, Brother Edgar Balor; treasurer, Sister Hulda Culp; librarian, Norman Pollock. Brother Charles Altman is teacher of class number 1; Sister Rosa Pollock, teacher for the Willing Workers Class, number 2; Sister Pearl Culp, class 3; Sister Julia Culp, beginners' class.

We were again made sad to know of Brother Mark Crabtree's departure for Parkersburg, West Virginia. But we know our loss is their gain.

February 6, the eighteenth anniversary of our organization as a branch, is the date set for the business meeting and sustaining of officers.

The Saints of Pleasant Valley Branch request all who read this letter to fast on the first Sunday in February and pray for Brother Shirdan E. Crabtree, who has been ailing with his nerves for the past few months. Brother Alfred Anderton, of Columbus, Ohio, also requests special prayers.

Union Branch Thinks 1926 a Good Year

BATTLE LAKE, MINNESOTA, January 7.—A review of the year just past is encouraging; progress in many lines of work is evident. Progress has been made in reconciliation of the honest-hearted; in good feeling; in reviving a greater interest among the isolated; and in many other ways. This is evidenced by the news columns of the church papers, by the spirit of the season's reunions, by private letters from distant friends, and by a keener desire to learn duty and to perform it. This is for the church in general.

But the church is made up of stakes and districts, and can not advance unless the stakes and districts show advancement. The districts in turn are composed of branches; branches of families; and families of individuals. Simmered down, then, the progress made by the church during 1926 is only an indication of individual advancement among the membership.

This is true for the Union Branch at Clitherall; better interest, better attendance at church services, and better home conditions have been the big factors in the progress made here. And although 1926 was not a profitable year considered agriculturally in this section, there is a degree of satisfaction felt over the spiritual progress.

For 1927 there is hope and courage in looking forward to still greater advancement. The development of the stewardship plan and the general interest taken in that subject are gratifying. The coming General Conference is a source of confident speculation; greater systematizing of the work is looked for, and a clearer crystallizing of the ideals of the church confidently expected.

During December only two or three families were able to meet for occasional service on account of the weather and roads.

Branch President Lester Whiting recently returned from an enjoyable visit to Independence, bringing back encouraging reports of the work and the people there.

Stockton, California

The Department of Women, together with the Temple Builders and Oriole Girls, held their annual bazaar and food sale on December 9, 10, and 11, in the basement of the church. It was one of the best and most successful events the department has ever held. More than one hundred dollars was cleared. This will be used for making payment on floor-covering debt, also district pledge.

On December 8 the annual election of officers was taken up at the regular branch business meeting. Brother G. L. M. Brokaw was unanimously elected president. Practically all the officers of branch and the various departments were re-elected to serve another year.

The Sunday school gave an entertainment and Christmas tree on the evening of December 19. Santa Claus distributed candy to everyone present and gifts to all the children.

During the month there were about four social gatherings at the different homes, and all attending were benefited. More of these gatherings are planned in the near future, and are being looked forward to with some anticipation, especially by the young people, who seem to be taking greater interest in the activities of the branch.

The departments are moving along nicely, and everyone is looking forward to another year with more hope and a greater determination to move onward.

Young People at Moline

MOLINE, ILLINOIS, December 1.—It is with a feeling of gratitude to God that we report to HERALD readers the success of our young people's convention at Moline, which has just closed. Everyone seemed to think it was the biggest and best convention held in the district, and that is just as we prayed and wished it would be, but we don't want it to stop at that. Each year we want to see an increase in numbers and quality of these meetings until every young person in the district will plan a year ahead to attend the next one, and then in 1930 we will come to you one hundred per cent strong. "Forward to 1930!" is our slogan.

Thursday evening, November 25, the opening of the convention found the church well filled with Saints and friends ready to hear the welcome program, which was given by the local branch. This was well received and quietly applauded by those present. Brother and Sister Thomas Gainey were the oldest young people on the program. He is eighty-five and she seventy-seven. He sang a vocal duet with Sister Cora Anderson, and Sister Gainey read a Thanksgiving story. Brother and Sister Gainey sang a duet for us Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock service. The two very youngest people to sing for us Sunday afternoon were the little daughters of Brother and Sister Ben Hulsen, Henrietta and Grace, five and seven years respectively.

On Friday morning Elders John F. Sheehy and Ammon White, of Independence, were with us, prepared to give the young people a good time in class work and recreation, teaching them to pray as well as play together. There was a prayer service at nine in the morning, with a good attendance considering the weather, which behaved very much like a blizzard, but by noon had cleared away and was altogether forgotten by evening. At half past ten classes were formed, Brother Sheehy teaching the younger, and Brother White the older. The young people fell in love with "Uncle John," as he told them stories, each one with its special lesson, and played games. The slides, pictures, and songs certainly made a "hit" with everyone, especially the slides showing the progress of the work on the Auditorium. These gave us a good idea of the size and beauty of the structure as it will stand when completed. All were enthused and felt a desire to help complete the building, for it promises to be a wonderful piece of workmanship when finished. And we feel that God must have the praise in directing the minds of those who have planned the entire building. We all want to assist.

Brother Ammon White entertained the older young people with doctrinal subjects, and we are better informed for having been under his instructions.

Brothers Sheehy and White each preached good sermons during the convention, and their discourses were much appreciated by members and nonmembers.

The choral organization of the district, under the leadership of our district chorister, Mrs. Orpha Holmes, of Joy, Illinois, presented the musical cantata, "Saul, king of Israel," which was highly praised by those who heard it. The Sun Ray Symphony Orchestra with first, second, and third Italian mandolins and the symphony harp guitar played at the Thursday night welcome program and also during the serving of dinner Sunday noon. This orchestra is composed of three sisters: Goldie, Gladys, and Pearl Sheppard, and their leader, Mrs. Edward Ray. These sisters would like to get in touch with Brother Ralph Smith's mandolin and guitar club.

Meals were served in the basement of the church by the Department of Women, assisted by the younger girls and boys who waited on the tables.

Saints were present from Oelwein, Clinton, Muscatine, and Davenport, Iowa; Kewanee, Joy, Millersburg, Matherville, Savanna, and other points in Illinois, besides a large delegation from Rock Island, Silvis, East Moline, and Moline, and were at the Sunday services which began with a prayer service at half past eight, in charge of Brothers White and Sheehy. Many prayers and testimonies were offered, and the Spirit of God was much enjoyed by those present. At half past nine Sunday school opened in charge of District Superintendent Harley Cady. So many were present that it was impossible to form classes, so the crowd was divided, Brother Ammon White taking part into the annex, and Brother Sheehy talking to those in the main auditorium.

At eleven o'clock Brother Sheehy preached on the topic, "Why do good?" This sermon was reported to be very good, but the writer was busy, assisting in the preparations of dinner in the basement and did not get to hear it.

The cantata before mentioned was rendered at half past two in the afternoon. At the evening service, beginning at half past seven, Brother Sheehy led the congregational singing, and the discourse was delivered by Patriarch White on the subject, "Prophets of our age."

Among the many who helped in this convention I must not forget to mention the untiring efforts of District President E. R. Davis, who presided over the assembly and contributed to its success.

Thus closed the third annual convention of the Kewanee District, but we are still marching Zionward. Let's go! Forward to 1930!

MRS. G. E. WILLMAN.

Jesus came to teach and demonstrate a way of living. Unless he can succeed in winning us to that way, he lived and died in vain. To live lovingly with all men is Jesus' will in this age. Today the world is our parish. Swift ships move back and forth across all oceans. Cables bind all lands together. Airplanes sweep around the world either to destroy or to save, while in the last five years the radio has come, so that seven times within the brief space of a second the human voice may be heard all over the globe and far out into infinite space. Is there no significance in all this? Moreover, the Bible has been translated into every known tongue, and the last remote country, Thibet, has permitted the entrance of Christ's messengers. For the first time all peoples and nations can understand one common heavenly will. And what is that will? That peace may come on earth, that men may live together as brothers.—John R. Ewers.

Vales Mills, Ohio

January 10.—The Vales Mills Branch is still alive and, we hope, doing some good both for ourselves and the community. We have regular meetings: Sunday school, prayer service, sacramental service the first Sunday of each month, and our Religio on Sunday evening. The Sunday school officers for this year are: Superintendent, Clyde Brown; secretary, Madeline Martin. The Religio officers are: Superintendent, C. B. Wells; secretary, Mrs. Ada McLaughlin.

We have had with us the past year Brother A. E. Anderson, Apostle R. S. Budd, District President J. G. Halb, Brother and Sister Gard Kirkendall and daughter, Norma Ann, and Sister Margery Williams.

Our attendance during the latter part of the year was below the average, due to much sickness, bad roads, and much rainy weather, and we are still traveling over muddy roads.

On New Year's Eve the young people entertained with a watch party at the church. Quite a crowd attended, and many stayed till the New Year came in. Apples, pop corn, and pie were enjoyed during the evening. There were contests, games, stunts, and music to make the time pass, and it passed all too soon. More than eight dollars was realized from a pie sale, and the young people voted to use it in buying more books for our library.

We expect to keep the work alive and moving at this branch, and though few in number we are trying to accomplish good. We want to train and teach the younger generation, that they may follow up, and when we older ones can labor no more, they may be prepared and willing to take up the leadership, that the work may continue. What a comfort it is to even think that the seed we are sowing may fall on good soil and that much fruit may yet be gathered in for the Master.

Weir, Kansas

January 4.—At the close of another year, I am glad to report the work at Weir as moving onward and upward.

Our Sunday school is growing, and the interest among the young is apparent. Sister Pearl Jones, our superintendent, is on the alert for new ideas, and with the support of the school is able to put many of them into practice. Good programs were given on Easter, and Children's Day; and on Christmas Eve a tree with treats for all and program were enjoyed. Each teacher trains her own class, thus making the work lighter for all.

The eleven o'clock hour of the second Sunday in each month is given over to junior church, since we do not have a separate room in which to hold it each Sunday. Sister Jones has been reviewing The Church in an Early Day, and the majority of the older folks stay and enjoy these services.

The Oriole Girls were quite active during the summer months. They contributed tea towels to the barrel sent to the Sanitarium by the Department of Women, and also by having doughnut sales, etc., were enabled to pay their pledge to the Endowment Fund and contribute toward the insurance on the local church.

The Department of Women, under the leadership of Sister Emma Mobley, is very active. Her home is opened for public meetings when it is necessary to raise funds, and the reputation of the services, food, and articles put out for sale by our Department of Women is of the best. Regular meetings are held each week and during the winter months are held at the home of Sister Fannie Hudelson. Her kindness and hospitality make it more convenient for all, as well as saves fuel for the church. The study of the Book of Mormon is pursued with increasing interest, and the group is, no doubt, better able to give a reason for the hope that lies within the heart of each member in regard to that one of our standard books. Second to the desire to advance along spiritual lines is the desire to improve our church building and make it a more acceptable place in which to hold our meetings. The goal toward which we are working now is a new vestibule and repainting of the church as soon as the weather permits. The Department of Women is careful to pay tithing on its earnings, and the members attribute their success to that fact and to the fact that they strive to maintain a spirit of unity. The testimonies of the different missionaries as to the presence of the Spirit in our meetings is a source of much encouragement. Sisters Crawley and Hickle are quite active as friendly visitors. Regular visits are made to the homes of the sick, and much clothing has been solicited and made over for the needy, both in and out of the church.

Brother W. S. Stricklin has given as much of his time as is possible in the past year to the duties of branch president. Ten have been added to the church through baptism. A special service was arranged for Mothers' Day which was enjoyed by all present. All have paid their pledges toward the Graceland endowment fund. As branch solicitor, Brother Stricklin reports an increase in the amount of tithes and offerings paid in the last year, which is indicative of spiritual growth. He reports also that all have paid their Auditorium pledges.

Brother C. B. Woodstock was the first to visit our branch during the past year. He was with us one evening in January and left us much food for thought along the Sunday school line and training of the young.

Brother Amos T. Higdon preached each evening during the last week of March. His sermons were especially to the Saints and were words of encouragement and admonition. The main theme of his sermons was that we must be fully consecrated if we expect to draw others.

Brother Virgil Sheppard was also with us for several meetings during the year. Brother Sheppard has an active personality and a keen interest in his work. The best wishes of the Weir Saints go with him in his life work for the Master.

Probably the outstanding day of the year was the rally day held the last Sunday in June. Patriarch J. E. Matthews, Brother Amos T. Higdon, Eben Miller, and Virgil Sheppard were all with us, together with a large number of visiting Saints from surrounding towns. The day was begun with a prayer service at half past eight, followed with Sunday school at ten. Brother Matthews preached at eleven o'clock. His sermon was a spiritual feast for all present, a prophecy being delivered, admonishing the Saints not to become discouraged but to hold up the hands of the prophet, and the Lord's work will prevail and no power can stay it. The Saints felt encouraged to press forward. A good prayer service was held at half past two, in charge of Brother Higdon, after which Brother Miller talked at length in regard to the marble interests of the church in Colorado. Brother Matthews preached again in the evening, bringing to a close a most enjoyable day.

Brothers Matthews and Miller came again August 8 and spent the day with us. Brother Miller talked to the Sunday school, telling Bible stories in a most interesting way. Brother Matthews conducted junior church at eleven o'clock and then preached his farewell sermon to the Weir Saints in the evening, since his work was taking him to other parts. The Saints of this place surely enjoyed his inspiring sermons and songs, and hope he may sometime visit here again. Brother Miller, still being located at Pittsburg, has promised us other visits from time to time.

Brother and Sister Jesse Holsworth and family, of Independence, were with us one Sunday in July. The two little daughters played special numbers during the Sunday school session, and Brother Holsworth gave a short talk telling how the Stepping Stones received its name. The eleven o'clock hour was given to Brother Holsworth, at which time he related some of his spiritual experiences. The Saints present were truly edified and encouraged to try to live in a more acceptable manner before their Maker.

Brother Quick was called to Weir to preach the funeral sermons of Brother Daniels and Stark, and while in our midst preached several soul-inspiring sermons. Brother Quick is always warmly welcomed, but his stay with us is never long enough.

The annual election of officers was held in all the departments in December. Brother John Jones was elected branch president; Sister Emma Mobley was sustained leader of the Department of Women; and Sister Pearl Jones was sustained Sunday school superintendent. All have a full corps of able officers to assist them, and it is hoped much good may be done as the new year goes forward. The prayer as versed by the poet may be an inspiration for each of us:

"Lord, help us serve the whole wide world,
Teach us to do the best we can
To make this world a better place,
And happier for our fellow man.

"If gift of ours can cheer a soul,
And hearten it along the way,
Let us not keep that talent hid,
Let us make use of it today.

"Let us not ask for praise or pay,
For all the songs of cheer,
Let us in humbleness rejoice
To do our bit of service here."

Deloit, Iowa

January 6.—Our Sunday school gave an interesting program at the church on Christmas Eve. It was in charge of the superintendent of this department. The program consisted of songs, readings, pantomime, and a play. It was enjoyed by young and old. Then Santa appeared and assisted in distributing the treats, which were a delight to many.

Cupid has again been in our midst shooting his fiery darts in different directions, one of them piercing the heart of our superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Brother Chris Plain. The results were as follows: a pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Brother and Sister J. F. Newcom, when their daughter, Crystal Wave Newcom, became the bride of Brother Chris Plain. Elder C. W. Winey officiated. We are glad they are going to be in our midst, living on a farm near by. We wish them all the good things in life, and believe they will be of assistance to our branch.

On January 1 the eldest son of Elder C. W. Winey, Merrill C. Winey, was united in marriage to Miss Ella Martin. They, too, will live on a farm near by. May prosperity and happiness be theirs to enjoy.

The entire branch mourns the loss of our faithful brother, A. N. Galland, who passed away December 19, 1926.

The annual election of officers was held December 30, and the following officers were chosen: Branch president, Brother Lacy O. Myers; secretary, Sister Edna Newcom; treasurer, Brother W. H. Rounds; publicity agent, Myrtle Myers; elders, C. W. Winey and M. O. Myers; priests, H. G. Newcom, and G. R. Johnson; teacher, B. W. Richardson; deacon, W. H. Rounds; Sunday school superintendent, B. W. Richardson; assistant, Gordon Graham; secretary, Opal Richardson; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Chris Plain; assistant, H. G. Newcom; secretary, Sister Eunice Johnson.

Our pastor and branch solicitor, Brother M. O. Myers, are calling our attention to the necessity of filing our inventories for the year.

Sunday, January 2, sacramental service had a good attendance. The Spirit was present, which we trust may continue during the coming year, and all hope we may make greater progress for the upbuilding of God's kingdom.

Another Word From the Land of Salt

Well, Christmas and New Year's days are past, but I am going back to the sixteenth of December, as on that date Brother Floyd M. McDowell paid us a visit. We had been looking forward to this visit, but did not know just what date he would arrive. We were looking forward to the visit, as the children were looking forward to Santa Claus. You see the Ogden Branch has been deprived of a regular missionary for some eight months now, which I think is the first time in the history of the branch that this condition has existed. We very much appreciate visits from Brother Calvin H. Rich, who is assigned to Salt Lake City; in fact, they are not often enough.

Brother McDowell gave us what he termed a short discourse on the social program, but we would add that he covered more ground in the short space of time allotted him than do some maps. His visit and talk were enjoyed by everyone. After the close of the meeting, refreshments consisting of chili and crackers were served by the ladies. The writer believes that Brother McDowell's talk gave every member of the Ogden Branch a broader concept of stewardships and the true meaning of Zionic conditions. May we have another visit from Brother McDowell when he is out this way again.

The first Sunday in the New Year our Sunday school lacked only one member of having one hundred per cent present; and in our sacramental service the same morning, the resolution made by all was to exert themselves for a bigger and better year for the Ogden Branch in 1927. Attendance at all meetings is splendid at the present time, and everything looks very encouraging. During one of our recent midweek prayer meetings, we were blessed by the voice of the Spirit, at which time one of our worthy brothers was given much encouragement, as well as the promise of many blessings to come.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has taken a new lease on life and is meeting each Sunday evening before regular church services, with an average attendance of about thirty.

The evening of January 7 witnessed our first social for the New Year. Box lunches were prepared and served in the parsonage, and I think that for once, at least, all the male members of the Ogden Branch had all they could eat. This was caused by there being about twice as many women and girls as there were men and boys. Our pastor must have been saving up for the occasion, as he purchased six of the boxes. We can not vouch for his eating the contents of them all, but he was still eating the last that was seen of him, about eleven o'clock. The funds derived were turned over to the branch for the purpose of helping in paying our paving bill. This social is the first of a series that will be held by this department during the year.

We wish the Saints in all the land a very spiritual and prosperous year of 1927.

From Historic Grounds

Once more we will write you a few lines from old Pentucket. This you will readily see is an old Indian name. We have here besides a branch of modern Israel, many relics of the ancient Lamanite people. Also this is the birthplace of the Quaker poet, Whittier. So much for some of the historical facts of this city.

We have here a lively branch of the church. We are small in numbers, but we make up for that in zeal. We had a very fine pageant at Christmas time, entitled, "The voice of prophecy." It was very well rendered, under the direction of our talented leader in dramatics, Sister Susie Jordan. This play was given Sunday night, and on Christmas night we had a tree for the children of the Sunday school.

We have among us some very able officers who are striving to help our cause Zionward.

Spiritual prayer meetings, at which all take part, are ours to enjoy. All, from the youngest to the oldest member, offer up their prayers in behalf of the leaders of our people, especially our noble and worthy brother, President Frederick M. Smith.

Graceland Chats

They say one should acquire adaptability through college. Graceland students feel as if they have had real lessons in adaptability of late. A chance visitor, judging by the attitude and activity of our student body, would not guess that we have lost a dormitory, including a dining room and kitchen. Yet the loss of Patroness Hall has put a real handicap upon the college in the way of lack of convenience and comfort for the students. They are to be complimented upon their attitude in making the best of conditions—more than that, by showing the finest sort of spirit through it all. The girls joke over the “warmest reception” they ever received upon returning to Graceland. Marietta is now “Merry Hall,” and the former isolation hospital, now occupied by boys as a dormitory, is struggling for the name, “The Country Club.”

Nevertheless, we feel keenly the need of the new dormitory and are happy to know that work on it is to begin in the spring.

We believe HERALD readers are interested in knowing what Graceland students are doing, and thinking. That is why the “Graceland Chats” column exists. Therefore, at times we shall publish discussions or papers written by students. Often these papers have been written as a theme assignment, and thus show both what the student is thinking and what he is doing in class work.

What I Expect to Gain From College

One of the questions of the hour is, “What is the purpose or value of a college education?” Every leader of education gives a different answer to this question. Some of the answers given by eminent educational leaders are: “To train us mentally and physically and to give us the stored-up treasures of the race”; “to train us to the height of our capacity, that we may function to the extent of our ability”; “to perfect the coordination of mind and body, and to complete the adjustment to environment.” But we may also get an individual answer from every college student. So, when I ask myself the question, “What do I expect to gain from college?” I am conscious of a threefold purpose.

First, I expect college to help me formulate a philosophy of life. Youth is many times called upon to give its answer to the question, “What is the purpose and meaning of life?” This is not a question to be answered lightly or casually, or one to be answered without a firm foundation and understanding of the simple laws and principles that govern life. This foundation is begun in our early years and continually strengthened through the grades and high school. But in the four years of college that are to come, I expect to gain new ideals and purposes and more firmly fix the old ones, so that I may be able to formulate a logical and consistent philosophy of life.

Second, I expect college to train me professionally. I have chosen teaching for my profession, and have every right to believe that, with the proper attitude and diligence on my part, I shall receive the preparation necessary to teach others. I expect to receive a better understanding of personality and the human mind, that I may better control these things in others. I expect to receive the practical fundamentals of the teaching problem, so that I shall be able to meet the problems that are to be met in teaching; and I expect to receive the material I must have to present to those whom I would teach.

Last, I expect to gain from college-life friends that will be both lasting and valuable; who will be constant reminders of the experiences of college life, and who will help me to be true to those fundamental principles received.

There are many other things I expect to gain and some things I will gain that I do not know of, but the most important things I am looking for now are a philosophy of life, professional training, and worth-while friends and associates.

What My College May Expect From Me

This discussion is based on an interview which I had with Mr. W. W. Hield, superintendent of Lamoni public schools. Mr. Hield enumerated five points which should be taken into consideration. First, that we as students should pass on the knowledge that we acquire; second, to act confidently, without being self-centered; third, to hold ourselves responsible for the environment in which we live; fourth, that we consume less than we produce; and fifth, to cultivate and dispense optimism.

The single principle that he stresses most is the first, that we should pass on the knowledge that we acquire. For by giving we grow, but by withholding that which we have, we shrink within ourselves. If we acquire knowledge only to keep it secluded in our own minds, without making it useful to ourselves or to others, we will soon lose the significance of that which we have learned. Impression without expression is almost useless; therefore, by passing on that knowledge which we acquire we shall not only benefit others but be strengthened ourselves.

We should, second, act confidently without being self-centered. This statement is self-explanatory. There is need for self-confidence in school work and in life, but no one can afford to be so confident in self as to exclude confidence in others.

The other points of the discussion apply to the kinds of lives we lead after finishing school, and involve environment, our attitude toward life, and our contribution to society in comparison with that which we take from society. In each phase of our after school life, we are personally responsible for our success or failure; and the attitude we manifest during our school career will be bound to continue in later life. Therefore, it is important that we come up to the expectations of the college by choosing an adequate environment, regard life and its problems cheerfully, and offer a worth-while contribution to humanity.

FERN COX.

Artland, Saskatchewan

A few Sundays ago Elder William Osler, president of Alberta District, attended a harvest home at Michigan Branch, and preached acceptably to the Saints and friends of this branch in the evening. He preached on the plan of the All-wise, who has placed us on this earth, and we, like the weavers who weave beautiful, costly carpets, may not be able to see the completed carpet of life, yet if we follow the plan of the Designer, a perfect life will result. Many enjoyed his discourse.

Brother Richard Cornish, a brother of Elder J. J. Cornish, sold his farm, and with his wife, and sister-in-law, Sister George Atkinson, and son, William, motored to Rutland, British Columbia, where Brother Cornish will make a new home. A little farewell was given then at the home of Brother Rudolph Cornish the evening before they started. Mrs. Atkinson has also sold her farm and plans to buy a home in the West.

Although it has been decided to have a program for Christmas, yet the work moves dishearteningly and slowly because three families: Elder A. J. Cornish, Brother Franklin B. Atkinson, and Brother Edwin Chase, are quarantined with measles, and before they are out, Christmas will be nearly here. In these three families there are sixteen children quarantined, so it almost looks as though our effort will have to be a grown-up program, which will not be so appropriate a celebration for the great annual children's festival. We hope for the best.

The box social held for the benefit of the Christmas program and Christmas offering was not largely attended because of so much sickness, yet a good time was had, and about twelve dollars was raised for the above-mentioned purposes. This seems small when compared to other affairs we have had when no one was quarantined.

Elders J. J. Cornish and E. Leslie Mogg have their heads together this week making some new gospel charts. They will be displayed later in their discourses.

Elder W. J. Cornish is expected home soon from his annual tour of the branches of the district.

Writes of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana

Standing at the portals of 1927, and looking backward over the highway traversed by six thousand years of recorded history, we behold our present era, one of splendor, a golden age, a towering eminence from whose broad summit the eye may survey the mighty expanse of world unfolding. In looking forward, does the curtain rise, and is the radiant goal of God's ideal looming in the far distance just at the terminal of the crackling artillery of latter-day facts? This is a day of "seeing visions and hearing voices," and ears are to the ground as well as in the air. The keyboard has been touched by divine fingers, and floods of light bathe the earth, revealing the dark shades in the picture. 'Tis an unfortunate status that permits a dark screen to bar out the spiritual back of the material, as revelation affirms that the spiritual is visible by the things which are made. But such is the fact—this is a material age.

The latter-day work has been giving off light for a hundred years—forecasting as a great searchlight the pathway to the consummation. As I view the world at large, the Restoration movement has made a huge dent, has cracked the shell, made its impress to be felt, offered its contribution, and much has been accepted by the world, which is perhaps unconscious of its origin. We are assured much more will be accepted, as it is decreed "Every knee shall bow and every tongue confess." Also, "When the Lord shall build up Zion, he will appear in his glory." To be sure, this work of construction will not go on without specifications, without a program, and it must be the Lord's program, or we can not say, "The Lord builds." But can we see it? Napoleon once said: "The man who sleeps till noon can not know how beautiful is the sunrise." Let us—you and I—awake early and note in the very sunburst of the latter-day work how Zion was embosomed within it, and was not an afterthought.

This district (Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana) is giving evidence of stability, with robustness of faith. It is doing fine, recovering from the shock of unsavory invasions. We spent eighteen days at Lansing in November, occupying both pulpit and musical gamut. The atmosphere at that place is bright. However, as in most parts of the world, there are some who can do but will not. It is glad news to know some who turned their faces away have now faced about. Brother Barss, who presides at this place, is a strong, hopeful man, one who believes in the essence of truth. In November the Lansing Saints organized a Sunday school in a suburban locality just over the municipal line. They are occupying one of the rooms of a new school building. By resolution, the Sunday school is conducted for the current year under the auspices of the Latter Day Saints, with Elder Andrew Dudley as superintendent; Sister Buck, pianist; Brother Eastlech, a deacon, acting as secretary and treasurer. Thus the Latter Day Saints are on the ground floor in the new mission.

Coldwater is my home, but I have performed quite an amount of ministerial work in this city and vicinity. The branch pursues a peaceful and dignified plane. The former officers as a whole were reelected for the ensuing year on last Tuesday evening. This branch is staid and, perhaps, one of the oldest in the Reorganization. The children came right along and adjusted themselves to charter members' mantles. I have quite frequently addressed the fraternal societies here, and while they seem to care little for the doctrines of the Saints, they think very highly of the members. Herein, I learn that our people do not cultivate the fraternal spirit enough, or at least these societies inform us thus. Jesus would tell his disciples to "Launch out," "Cast your nets on the right side."

The Sunday school is doing very good work, and an able corps of officers is helping things along. The Christmas program was participated in by old and young. Bubbling childhood, from four to six years of age, eagerly took the platform, and with scarcely a blunder gave astonishing evidence of future capability.

Hibbard Saints are to be congratulated for the manner in which they have conducted the work at that place, laboring under adverse circumstances. Orthodoxy recognizes their standing and ability and seeks to join efforts for Christmas entertainments. For the second time has the Evangelical Church there joined with them without compromise in programs.

We were at Clear Lake, Indiana, Sunday, January 2. At this place our members are doing splendid work. They have Sunday school at ten in the morning. We were placed in charge of the senior class, and it consisted of seventeen adults. The school has an enrollment of over thirty-three, and Brother Ross Worthington is superintendent, with Brother Dale Teeters acting as secretary. At a quarter till twelve sacrament was administered, a goodly number participating. This was followed by preaching on the theme, "Zion." Then a cafeteria dinner was served, it being brought together by sisters from far and near. At half past two Brother Cassell called time, preaching was resumed, the theme of the morning being continued. I want to speak of the very fine spirit characterizing the day's services, but I refrain. May heaven continue to smile joy and gladness into the hearts of those Saints. They are ardently pushing forward, while opposition and sacrifice beset their pathway. Here, also, are some who were halted in their march for the goal, now facing the light with beaming countenances, and they are finding their places as of yore in the true sanctuary which God pitched and not man. Others are hesitant, stumbling over technicalities with an over gorge of philosophy. But what is a technicality? So far as I have ever been able to see, a technicality is simply: "Heads I win, tails you lose." I have been unable to satisfactorily locate the technicalist. He is hazy and as indistinct as a kerosene lamp in a London fog. We make this statement by virtue of some experience in debate.

We learn that the group of Saints at South Bend is growing every day. Six were baptized at that point a few Sundays ago. Faith in the Restoration is strong, and prospects grow brighter. We believe we speak the sentiment of all when we say, "When the roll is called up yonder, the Southern Michigan and Northern Indian District will be there." The necessity now is to enlarge the field of operation, to stretch out the curtains, take in more ground. Every branch and group grows narrower at the change of population and personnel in surrounding vicinities, and when this occurs, influence wanes, for the newcomers in many places do not know much of Latter Day Saints.

We hope for great success in the effort of Zion's redemption. We are yet in the faith.

COLDWATER, MICHIGAN, January 4.

A man can not speak but he judges himself. With his will or against his will he draws his portrait to the eye of his companions by every word. Every opinion reacts on him who utters it. It is a thread-ball thrown at a mark, but the other end remains in the thrower's bag. Or rather it is a harpoon hurled at the whale, unwinding, as it flies, a coil of cord in the boat, and, if the harpoon is not good, or not well thrown, it will go nigh to cut the steersman in twain or sink the boat.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Independence

Despite a heavy, slushy snowfall on Wednesday evening, an encouraging number of Zion's young people assembled in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church for the mass prayer meeting preceding the opening of the young people's convention, which commenced Sunday, the 16th. In the stand with Elder John F. Sheehy, who was in charge, were President Floyd M. McDowell, Pastor C. Ed. Miller, Elder M. T. Williams, and Brother Frank Hershey, leaders of the convention. Brother Miller gave the opening remarks. The hour and a half of meeting was well filled with fervent prayers and earnest talks from members representing the various districts of Independence and the young people's work. Appropriate songs were sung, and this happy gathering together fired the hearts of each one with a renewed ambition and a new courage and determination to do all he can for the work.

The early Sunday morning prayer meeting for the young people was also a season of strength and consecration. Brothers R. S. Budd, J. F. Sheehy, Frank Hershey, and D. O. Cato were in the stand.

Sunday morning was a wintry one, but eleven hundred and fourteen persons came to Sunday school, some of them tramping several blocks through the snow. Noses and cheeks reddened by the frosty wind were in evidence, but inside the church was physical and spiritual warmth. The sunlight streamed through the many-colored glass windows, making everything it touched beautiful. After the lesson session, the special number, a violin solo, "Scenes from old Ireland," was played by Mr. Gomer Watson, a member of the Stone Church Orchestra. The pleasing piece was one of Mr. Watson's own compositions.

One of the items of special interest mentioned by the secretary of the Sunday school is the fact that the class of Sister O. C. White, a class of intermediate girls, has been perfect for five Sundays in succession. They have established a record. How long will they hold this title alone?

A teachers' training course for the benefit of all members of the senior department, under the tutorship of Sister Eunice Winn Smith, will commence next Sunday morning at the Sunday school hour. The class will meet in the lower auditorium with the primary department. Not only will the methods and theories of teachings be taught, but the class will visit various Sunday schools and observe the methods in practice.

"Soldiers of Christ arise, and gird your armor on," was the hymn which began the eleven o'clock meeting. Prayer was offered by Apostle J. F. Curtis, and Robert Miller played "Traumerer" while the collection was being taken. The choir sang "Holy Father, great Jehovah," Miss Thelma Vincent singing the incidental solo.

President Floyd M. McDowell was the speaker chosen to open the young people's revival services, which continue throughout this week. He selected Isaiah 2:3: "And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths," paraphrasing it to read: "Come up to the mountain of the Lord; learn his way; be taught his paths and walk therein." Stating that the inspiration of the mountain top, received in his recent trip over the towering Rockies, still lingered with him, Brother McDowell told how his physical, mental, and spiritual horizons were widened. He was there given a greater understanding of his task with the young people. The task is a difficult one, one made twofold more difficult by the conditions as they are found in present-day civilization. "The only thing that will help youth," he asserted, "is an affirmative, constructive program, one taught by precept and example." This program is one which will teach him the happiness of obedience to law, the beauty of virtue, the intelligence of decency and clean living, the glory of achievement; it is one which will help him to discover a vital religion through a vital living church; it will make clear to him the meaning and divine purpose of life. The young should see the beauty in those things which God intended to be beautiful. One writer has said, "The purpose of inspiration is not so much to show us other things but to show us the same things differently." For this reason the inspiration of the mountain top may cause us to see God in a different light, not as the age-old figure of a vindictive tyrant, but a God of love, one upon which we can depend for inspiration, one we may love so deeply that we will love nothing else too much. The inspiration of the mountain top will show us that without God everything is chaos. We have a God who cares. He created us for a purpose and left a part of his work undone that we might do it, and by so doing fulfill our purpose in life. The inspiration of the mountain top may even change our attitude toward Christ; we will not think so much about him as of him. The speaker assured his hearers that in endeavoring to understand the needs of society, he had become convinced that the only solution of modern ills is a proper obedience of God's laws. Young people want thrills, and real religion is the most thrilling adventure which can be undertaken. In it youth will learn to substitute love for hate, to establish an aim of service instead of selfishness, righteousness instead of unrighteousness, and to develop character. The thing the world needs today is a saner belief in the righteousness of the invincible forces of love and the spiritual forces and factors which determine the course of our lives. Young people of the church, there is a great goal before us. We can make the world over. This is our conquest.

K L D S Sunday Activities

The Bible study hour, conducted by the K L D S radio pastor, Ralph W. Farrell, opened the day's radio service at half past eight. The musical program was furnished by the junior department of Second Church, directed by Miss Vera Redfield: Boys' quartet, girls' quartet, vocal solos, Chester Ray Curtis and Norman Inman; string trio, Billy, Jamie, and Dayton McPherson; piano solo, Lucille Street; children's story, Miss Lillie Hansen.

The eleven o'clock service in the main auditorium of the Stone Church was broadcast.

At three in the afternoon K L D S Radio Church service was conducted by Doctor John W. Bradbury, of Bales Avenue Baptist Church, Kansas City. The musical program was presented by a double quartet; Mrs. J. W. Bradbury, soprano; Mr. Morris Beaman, baritone; Mrs. C. S. Richardson, organist.

At half past six K L D S radio vesper service began. Music was by Thelma Vincent, Lulu Tyrrell, Fred Friend, and Frank Russell. Piano solo, Katherine Haberlein. Sermonet, Elder U. W. Greene.

The K L D S studio service at a quarter after nine concluded the radio activities of the day. Music was furnished by members of Central Church, Kansas City. There was a male quartet composed of Clayton Wolfe, Henry Hampton, Roscoe Hampton, and A. D. Hitchcock. Soprano solo, Mrs. J. O. Worden; organ numbers, Mrs. Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock. Sermonet.

Evening Services

The Religio program consisted of a reading by Lilly Oviatt; a pleasing vocal solo by Miss Hazel Vanderwood, accompanied by Miss Everyn Barto; a piano duet by two visiting musicians: Misses Mae Chronister and Ruby Johnson of Enoch Hill District, and was concluded by a number by the Religio Quartet.

By half past seven the church was well filled, young faces predominating, and before eight those who came were asked to sit in the choir seats, as every seat on the main floor and in the gallery was taken.

Promptly at half past seven, the song service began under the direction of Elder John F. Sheehy, and everyone demonstrated the fact that they liked to sing with him. "Earnest workers," was the first; and then "Great and marvelous are thy works," "Faith of our fathers," "Glorious things are sung of Zion," were sung with mighty spirit and volume. The eight o'clock hour was opened by the singing of "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet." The invocation was by Brother Roland Flanders; and Robert Miller played a beautiful organ offertory while a special collection was being taken to defray the expense of the revival services. Mr. Edward Brackenbury contributed a tenor solo, being accompanied at the piano by Professor Paul N. Craig. By means of an organ prelude of the air, and a switching off of lights, the Mothers' Quartet obtained a pleasing effect in rendering "Brightly beams our Father's mercy.

The speaker, Apostle Roy S. Budd, was introduced by Elder M. T. Williams, one of the "earnest workers" who always has the interest and needs of the young people at heart. Brother Budd read Matthew 11: 28-30: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." Taking up this reading, the speaker carefully analyzed it, explaining each phrase so that its meaning could not be misunderstood, and applying it to the church and the youth of the church. The church has religion to offer its youth, a religion which has to do with life right now; Christ said, "I am come that ye might have life and have it more abundantly." The ideals of this church are not a future proposition. Then he drew parallel cases of the man who has the possibility of becoming a child of God, the acorn to become an oak, and the pig to become a hog. Just as mother earth surrounds the acorn with that which causes it to expand and grow, so the church will surround its youth with those influences which will cause them to develop into children of God. Christ came to give us a more abundant life, which means happiness. The church offers to help youth keep in touch with the divine; it invites them to become partakers of a more abundant life. Will youth accept the invitation?

Everyone is enthusiastic over the revival. It started with a great show of enthusiasm, and all look for much good to be accomplished.

The second semester of work at the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences will commence Monday, January 24. New classes will begin in economics, commercial law, and business English, all of which are high school subjects. In the normal training course new classes on church history, adolescence, and child guidance will be started. Tuition for high school subjects is five dollars, half of which will be refunded at the end of the year; normal training tuition is a dollar and twenty-five cents for each subject.

Mr. George Mesley, of Lamoni, Iowa, will begin a series of lectures on the subject, "Leadership of boys," at the Stone Church and Institute Building January 30. Mr. Mesley is one of the lecturers brought to Independence by the Independence Institute in the special lecture course it is providing this school term.

Miss Vesta Towner, dean of the School of Religious Education, Kansas City, will begin a course of lectures on storytelling in the Y. K. T. classroom February 6 at two in the afternoon. These lectures will continue until conference, the amount of registration fee depending upon the number enrolling. Those who are interested in this course may call the Independence Institute, Independence 829.

Mrs. Eunice Winn Smith will discuss the use of the project method of teaching in religious education with President McDowell's class, which assembles at the Religio hour in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church, each Sunday evening for several weeks. Some very definite work is being planned in this course, and it is hoped this will be a long step toward the working out of the great project, Zion building. Parents and teachers are urged to come. The attendance for the past few Sundays has been very good.

On Tuesday, January 4, Elder John Blackmore, pastor at Cameron, spoke to the women at the Institute Building on the subject, "Christian stewardship." A week later, the 11th, Elder James A. Thomas, pastor of the Tulsa Branch, talked on "Stewardships from the parents' viewpoint." There was good attendance of the sisters at these lectures, which commenced at half past two, following a class session on "The child, his nature and his needs," taught by Sister M. A. Etzenhouser. Great interest has been manifested in this class, and the students are very grateful to Sister Etzenhouser for her faithful service. Officers of the Department of Women hope also to continue these half-past-two lectures.

Yearly Report of Laurel Club

The first meeting of the Laurel Club was held at the Campus January 5 after a one o'clock luncheon. Reports of the officers were read, and new officers were elected with very little change in the personnel of the club. All officers reported last year's work as very pleasant and seemed desirous of continuing to assist in the onward march to Zion, also to work in harmony with the church program.

These items from the secretary's report may be of interest to our members scattered abroad. Our net total receipts for the year 1926 were $1,345.85. This fund was obtained from dues, donations, bazaars, banquets, socials, Konference Karnival, a trip around the world, oyster supper, and one rummage sale, and we were asked to have a fish pond and pag-ean in connection with the celebration committee to add to the funds for the upkeep of the Campus grounds. At the beginning of 1926, we still owed one hundred dollars on our five hundred dollar pledge to the Graceland Endowment Fund. This was paid. Our obligations to the Sanitarium for dishes, trays, also yearly payment to International Encyclopedia for the library have been met. The first of the year we unanimously agreed to make our year's work as much as we could to go to furnishing the kitchen and dining room of our Auditorium. So many have been anxious to assist. It has all helped, and again we wish to express our appreciation for the cooperation of local and distant friends for their generous donations.

We have about thirty-five active and a few social members on our list.

The new officers are Mrs. Anna Watkins, president; Mrs. Ida Williamson, Mrs. Hatty Harve, assistants; Mrs. Eva Holsworth, secretary; Bishop G. W. Eastwood, treasurer; Mrs. Viola Short, historian; Mrs. Nettie Kemp, press agent. Various committees are to be appointed by the executive.

Work of the Young People's Revival

The Monday night meeting of the young people's revival, which began at the eleven o'clock service Sunday, was a success in every phase from which it may be judged. A large crowd was present and heartily joined Brother John F. Sheehy in the song service. The Stone Church orchestra was present and rendered several pleasing numbers. The theme of the evening's sermon was "Youth's way of discovering God," and very clearly and forcefully did Brother Budd show that the only way is by earnest prayer.

Following the benediction the audience was asked to remain, and President McDowell took charge, explaining the nature of the business to be transacted. He with others who are particularly interested in the work of the young people has long wanted to see them organized, their efforts centralized into greater accomplishment, and their aims and ambitions more united. At this hour such an organization was begun, the young people of each branch in Independence meeting in separate groups to elect from among them a representative to act on a permanent young people's council. The Stone Church having five districts in its territory was privileged to choose five representatives. They are: Harry Barto, Roland Flanders, Lillian Williams, Wayne Smith, and Helen Hulmes. Ammon Badder will represent Walnut Park; Vera Redfield, Second Church; Glen Davis, Liberty Street; Harold Hattay, Enoch Hill; F. H. Cunningham, Englewood; Winogene Smith, Spring Branch; Joseph Friend, East Independence; Earl Sherman, Gudgel Park, making a council of thirteen. Later in the week another council, numbering forty-four, will be elected, one representative from each group.

Interesting Personals

Of the higher official quorums, President Frederick M. Smith is still in the East, and Presidents Elbert A. Smith and Floyd M. McDowell are both in Independence. Bishop Albert Carmichael also is in the East, but his counselors are in the center place at present. Apostle Clyde F. Ellis is at Weyburn, Saskatchewan, Canada. Edmund J. Gleazer left for Indianapolis, Indiana. Brothers Garver and D. T. Williams left last week for their homes in Lamoni, preparatory to carrying out some of their plans of work. Brother Mcconley is in California, and the remainder of the Quorum of Twelve are in Independence. These are J. F. Curtis, F. H. Edwards, Paul M. Hanson, J. A. Gillen, and Roy S. Budd, the last-mentioned being the speaker for the young people's revival, which is now under way.

Second Church

Friday evening's session of Religio was occupied by a band concert rendered by Walnut Park's band, composed largely of very young people, some in their early teens and younger. They were under the leadership and direction of Brothers Orlando Nace and E. E. Moorman, who have shown much devotion to the interests of these young people and expect still to do much for them. The time was well spent, and a hearty invitation was extended to return and give the Second Church another evening of entertainment.

Elder H. E. Winegar was the speaker Sunday at eleven o'clock. He used the theme, "What is your life?" and was successful in bringing together many good thoughts.

Sunday afternoon's prayer service was a one hundred per cent meeting. Not a soul present but what testified of his faith and of God's goodness or kindness, and there were several prayers and songs presented. It was a good place for the Saints to be.

The evening sermon was delivered by Patriarch Hyrum O. Smith, and while all the young people were in attendance at the Stone Church, yet quite an audience greeted Brother Smith and listened attentively to his argument for a live church which believes in the principle of revelation and the ordinances which Christ placed in the church.

The choir is doing splendid service in the church, both Sunday morning and evening. About twenty voices are generally present.

Walnut Park

The series of preaching services begun in the church the 4th continued until the 13th, though the cold and snow hindered attendance somewhat the last few nights. The speakers were Paul M. Hanson Monday with his pictures of the Holy Land, Elbert A. Smith Tuesday, D. T. Williams Wednesday, Paul M. Hanson Thursday.

Missionary George Jenkins preached the morning sermon Sunday on the call to us as Saints to be an ensign to the nations, discussing ways individuals may share in this according to their means and talents.

At six in the evening an installation service was held where the officers for the year, numbering about twenty-five, were formally presented. Pastor Glaud Smith had charge of the meeting, Elder F. R. Schafer offered the opening prayer, and Associate Pastor B. J. Scott, by request, talked to the congregation concerning the officers, reading from Exodus 17 concerning Aaron and Hur holding up Moses' hands, that Israel might prevail. His pleas for the sustaining support of the congregation for the officers they had elected gave the congregation a consciousness that their work is as important as that of the officers.

Following this, Elder C. Ed. Miller talked to the officers, instructing them that God calls many to work besides the ordained ministry, and that these should feel keenly the burden of their responsibility and qualify themselves for leaders—not seeking to be conspicuous but to be real helpers; not taking offense easily, but working too busily to have time to grieve over adverse criticism. The charge by Brother Miller was followed by Brother Glaud Smith in prayer for divine help to heed the good counsel given.

At half past seven Bishop J. A. Becker was the speaker, his sermon including various scriptural reminders of the Lord's desire for his people "who would serve him" to "gather together" when undertaking a great work. He gave a few incidents of some who had participated unwisely in the gathering at this place and taught us how one should prepare, both for his own good and the good of the work in general. The sermon was interesting throughout and will doubtless add interest to future discussions in the stewardship class at Religio.

A number of the local young people are preparing to enter the contest to be held in the spring among church members, and Mrs. Ammon Badder, who will enter as dramatic reader, was given a hearing Sunday preceding the installation service. She read "The soul of the violin." Next Sunday local contestants in the oratorial contest will be heard at six o'clock Religio. On Friday evening, the 28th, at Second Church the eliminating contest will continue. There will be try-outs there between Second Church and Walnut Park in debate and by the ladies' quartets and male quartets. And at Walnut Park on the evening of January 30, Second Church and Walnut Park will meet in a preliminary try-out in dramatic reading, humorous reading, and oratory. Semi-finals will be arranged later.

Enoch Hill

The installation of officers and teachers of the Enoch Hill Sunday school was observed at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning, the 16th. Our Sunday school has twenty-one teachers and fourteen officers. An attentive congregation was present to hear the excellent addresses made by visiting church officers. The program was as follows:

March selection, Enoch Hill Orchestra. Song, "Earnest workers," Congregation. Invocation, Pastor W. J. Brewer. Special number, Choir. Clarinet duet, W. M. Worth and Alfred Waters. Presentation of general superintendents, Superintendent S. A. Thiel. Response, and presentation of Sunday school officers and teachers, General superintendent R. E. Whitsitt. Charge to officers and teachers, Superintendent S. A. Thiel. Address, Apostle F. Henry Edwards. Song, "Be up and doing," Congregation. Benediction, Pastor W. J. Brewer.

At half past seven in the evening, Brother H. E. Winegar spoke, giving in an interesting and instructive manner the tactics used by missionaries to convince the world of the truth of the gospel.

Mrs. Jennette Armstrong, eighty-two years old, passed away Saturday, January 15, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ed. Briggs, 1423 South Pleasant, Independence, where she has lived for the past six years. Her funeral was held at the Carson chapel at three o'clock Monday, the 17th, Elder W. D. Bullard preaching the sermon. The body was sent to Stewartville, Missouri, Tuesday, where a short service was held before interment. Surviving her are these daughters: Mrs. Alice Briggs and Mrs. Emma Sterrett, both of Independence, Mrs. Jessie Doudna, Lees Summit, and Mrs. Mary Gain, of Thompson, Nebraska, and a son, Elmer Armstrong, Stewartville, Missouri. There are sixteen grandchildren, thirteen great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild.

Vinal Haven, Maine

The Saints put on a tableau November 28, representing the reception of the Indians by the Pilgrims at Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1621, and showing the religious attitude of the Indians in those days, using the Book of Mormon in the demonstration. The decorations on floor and walls were most beautiful, showing Indian wigwams, Indians, and Pilgrims. There were appropriate songs, readings, and lectures. The attendance was large, and the tableau highly praised.

The junior church had an attendance of nineteen children last Sunday and is getting along nicely.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is enjoying success with a large attendance each week.

Many lively times for the benefit and enjoyment of young and old are planned for this winter by the president of the branch.

It has been many weeks since we had a missionary with us. Elder Amos Berve was the last one to visit us, and we hope to see another soon.

Elder Archie Beggs and Priest William Candage are occupying the pulpit on Sundays.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Elders' quorum meeting at two o'clock with fair attendance, studied lesson 6 in the adult Gospel Quarterly for 1926, subject, Meaning of authority.

At 3 p. m. the monthly ministry meeting was held, Stake President J. A. Tanner presiding. He emphasized the necessity of the local priesthood who are not engaged with fixed responsibility, to engage in missionary work in the city.

The resolution, introduced by Stake Bishop F. B. Blair at the recent stake conference, which provided that no man be ordained to the priesthood unless he had complied with the financial law, was discussed at some length, but as time would not admit of its being finished, more time may be given for further discussion at the next meeting, which will be the 20th of February.

Stark Acres Church

The interest of the work here is fine. The future looks bright. Last Sunday the attendance at Sunday school was 35; at Religio there were 23; and at church service in the evening about 60. The Sunday previous there were about 75. More room is needed. They are encouraged to go on with their work. They started under some difficulty, but courage won out.

Bennington Church

William Beaman, of England, went to Canada, where he met Miss Emily McNight, who became the girl of his dreams. He told her of his love; she accepted his proposal of marriage. Last Wednesday evening they invited the Saints into their home after the prayer meeting, to help them celebrate the fortieth wedding anniversary of their marriage. Over fifty guests attended the celebration, and presented them with a picture. After they were married in Canada, they went to Wisconsin for a few months and then to Michigan, near Lake Huron. While they were in Michigan they were converted to the gospel, after they had been married two years. Half of their married life has been spent in Missouri. They have been in the vicinity of Bennington Heights for seventeen years. They have a daughter, a son, and three grandsons living.

Brother Beaman is no longer a young man, but he is an energetic worker in the church work. He made the first efforts to spread the gospel story in the community of the Stark Acres Mission. Although he lives across the street from the Bennington Heights Church, he is superintendent of Stark Acres Sunday School. Brother Beaman desires to work where he is needed most.

Mary Agin, of the girls' intermediate class in Sunday school, was baptized. She was confirmed in the evening.

Brother H. A. Higgins, pastor of the Des Moines church, preached for us today, both morning and evening. Bishop Blair, of the Kansas City Stake, visited us this evening.

Brother George Garrett, who underwent an operation at the Sanitarium, was taken to his home today.

Sister (Mrs.) Myrtle Ragan had an operation performed last Saturday, and at this time seems to be getting along very well.

Heathwood Church

Services at the Heathwood Church have been very interesting. Sunday evening, January 2, Bishop F. B. Blair, preached one of his uniformly good sermons.

Through the efforts of Brother C. A. Wilson, superintendent, the Sunday school has been steadily increasing in attendance. His plans for an imaginary trip around the world have now been completed, and each class has entered into it with much zeal and interest. Happenings of interest have been planned to conform with the trip and also the Sunday school lessons. Sister Tucker's class of seniors is now in the lead.

Sunday morning, January 9, Sister Roy Newkirk visited our group and during the Sunday school period gave a beautiful talk on the girls' work, which resulted in organizing an Oriole and Blue Bird Chapter.

Missionary Haden preached both morning and evening, January 9, and imparted much food for thought.

The Department of Recreation and Expression which meets each Sunday evening at 6.30, is planning an original program for January 23 and 30.

Providence, Rhode Island

The activities of the branch for the past few months have been many and varied. Special interest has been shown in the work of a number of the departments. The ladies' aid has been especially alert and on the job, getting first-hand opportunities that have afforded them special privileges for social enjoyment and a ready and open door for the bringing in of cash for their financial undertakings.

Our Sunday school also has improved in a decided way. The increase in interest due to diligent work upon the part of our officers is most satisfactory to all; also the increase in our attendance is encouraging and has had a tendency to enthuse and put new life into our workers.

The juniors, now promoted to the intermediate department, have practically carried off the prize for the real, live, peppy swing that has gauged their gait during the past quarter. Under the leadership of Edward Joy and Gladys Cooke, the coming year is to far outstrip the past.

A very pleasant surprise was had on the family of our pastor, Brother T. J. Elliott, on Thanksgiving Eve. About sixty of the Saints assembled, and after unloading their arms, it seemed as if it had taken a young auto truck to bring the abundant amount of food and products they showered upon the family. There was also a very fine turkey in the way of a generous purse. After receiving this, Sister Elliott graciously extended the word of thanks for the family. With games and refreshments, a pleasant social evening was enjoyed.

The ladies' aid had one entertaining social away out in the country, with the Hatfield family. Money was raised to pay the fifty cents per auto ride, and when the refreshments were served all were profuse in their praise of the Hatfield homemade ice cream (pure cream).

Next the sisters decided to undertake a rummage sale. They secured a store on Mauton Avenue, Olneyville, and with their own cast-off articles and a generous contribution of like articles from people outside of the church, in two short sale days they realized one hundred and fifteen dollars. Then they decided to have a sale of fancywork, made by themselves, in the downtown district just preceding Christmas week. A store in the heart of the business district on Matheson Street was secured, and in the two days' sale here they sold one hundred and forty-four dollars worth of goods to citizens who came in to purchase. It is needless to say that they were greatly encouraged at this success, for it helped them to the extent of being enabled to subscribe a total fund of some seven hundred dollars toward the installing of new pews in our church.

We would not overlook one very pleasant experience we enjoyed in a visit to one of our shut-in families. Brother and Sister Bradford Harrington and their little son have been cut off from church association, due to the illness of Brother Harrington. About six auto loads of Saints visited them one Sunday afternoon, and with Brothers T. J. Elliott, D. F. Joy, and Edmund M. Brown in charge, an old-time cottage meeting of gospel power and spiritual fervor passed the hour in a way that will long be remembered. The Harringtons reside thirteen miles from the church, at Washington, Rhode Island.

The Sunday after Christmas was a splendid day for our church. We had a symposium on the Christmastide and spirit. Brothers T. J. Elliott, G. W. Robley, A. O. Toombs, G. T. Robley, and J. P. Spinnett spoke, and Hildred Grange assisted. The splendid thoughts expressed warranted, we believe, a resorting to this departure again in the future.

At our sacramental meeting in December, there was an inflowing tide of spiritual power that touched the hearts of many of our young people. Their response brought not only strength and conviction to themselves, but the blessings and prayers of their elders for their signal triumph in the work God has assigned for them to carry on. Efforts are now being made to stress the keeping of the complete law, and encouragement offered to have all who possibly can file inventories. Be it said to the credit of our young, two boys last Sunday were the first to ask for inventory blanks. You may say they have no tithing or surplus, but in the past many who had tithing and also surplus have not learned or understood this part of the requirement of God's law, and the way to have future Latter Day Saints not duplicate the errors of the past is to train them in the doing of all God's law from their youth.

San Jose, California

January 12.—The San Jose Branch is still actively keeping up with its various features of work. On December 3 the Organ Boosters Club put on another of their operetta programs at one of the country schoolhouses near San Jose. It was at the Pala School and proved to be quite a success. They divided half and half with the school for the use of their auditorium, netting twenty-eight dollars to the school and to the club. The name of this operetta was "Ohara San." The club is planning to present this program again in the near future at the Woodrow Wilson Junior College, here in San Jose. This is the fourth time that they have given this program, each time at a different place. They intend to have a pipe organ all right, and no doubt some day you will hear its melodious music wafted over the radio to Zion, the center stake. So may it be.

On December 5 was held the regular sacramental service of the branch, and a good meeting was had. The visiting Saints were Brother Schall and his mother, from Palo Alto. Brother Schall is attending Stanford University.

Brother C. J. Cady preached the sermonet at the Religio in the evening.

Elder Robert E. Cowden was the speaker at the morning hour Sunday, December 12. In the evening the Department of Recreation and Expression used up all of its time in a program and no sermonet was delivered.

The branch held its regular annual business meeting December 15, conjointly with its quarter meeting. At this time the election of branch officers was had for the coming year; it resulted in the election of the following: branch president, Elder Robert E. Cowden; branch deacon and treasurer, Hale F. Hawkins; secretary, Sister Almeda Christopher; musical director, Sister Ruth Bradley.

The usual Christmas entertainment was held December 22, and it was a credit to those in charge. A very neatly designed two-leaf program was printed and circulated in the neighborhood of the church with an invitation to attend the entertainment. When the night came the church auditorium was well filled, about one hundred and fifty persons being in attendance. Sister L. B. Shippy was the chairman of the program committee. She is a capable worker and organizer, and the membership rallied to her call for help, and made it possible for her to put over a splendid program.

The heads of departments elected for the coming year, are: Sunday school superintendent, Sister L. B. Shippy; Department of Recreation and Expression superintendent, Sister Leah Harris; superintendent of the Department of Women, Sister May Gilbert; head of publicity department, Elder C. J. Cady; branch correspondent, C. W. Hawkins.

The branch with all its departments is starting the new year full of zeal and pep with a determination to make it a banner year. There are many prospects for achievement.

minute period) was conducted, and a combined lecture and round table period of an hour or more followed. Recreational activities were indulged for a succeeding period, closing the afternoon.

Representative speakers were detailed to preach at Walnut Park Church in the evenings, nine good sermons being delivered. One of these by President Elbert A. Smith is being presented last week and this to HERALD readers: one by Apostle Paul M. Hanson goes to readers of Zion's Ensign this week; and others will follow in the weeks to come.

There were between three and four score of these men who met daily, and from many we heard the sentiment that better understanding of each other and of their common work and interests had resulted from the sessions and association in study. Anxious to get back to their fields of labor, yet loath to separate, almost all these men left Independence on Friday evening and Saturday morning. May the Lord of the great harvest in which they are spending the precious years grant to them an ever-increasing understanding of their work and of each other.

Teach Me Thy Way

By Catherine Nitz

Rebuke me, Father, in my way.
Till I am made to feel
That not my way is best for me,
But thine, and help me kneel
To thee in supplication.
As nighttime follows day,
Help me to follow meekly.
Teach me thy way.

And give me strength to stand,
When for thy cause I plead.
Help me to know thy righteous way;
Fill thou my need,
Till I shall measure up
To what thou want me to.
Help me, as days go by,
These things to do.

And when the time is up
For trials to come no more.
When Saints all gather round
For what thou hast in store;
I'll know thy love was great,
That I was made to see.
For when thou bidst me come,
A place was made for me.

"Immanuel"

By Joseph Ecclestone

All Hail! thou King Immanuel!
The mighty host on high
Are pouring forth sublimest strains,
To thy great majesty.

The gate of heaven now swings ajar,
And through ethereal space
They come; they come; yes, from afar,
To the appointed place.

The shepherds were affrighted, when
In robes of spotless white,
Appeared the heavenly messengers,
Mid rays of dazzling light.

The spirit band around them stand,
And, thrilled with ecstasy,
Their eyes were opened to behold
The vision gloriously.

When suddenly the heavenly choir
In note of triumph sang;
Until Judea's hills and vales
With sacred echoes rang.

Peace! Peace! On earth "Good will to men!"
The Day Spring from on high
Has visited the troubled earth;
Salvation draweth nigh!

His name shall be the Prince of Peace,
He shall the nations sway;
For he of whom the Prophets spake
Is born! is born today.

What meaneth this? the shepherds cried.
Come, let us go and see;
For long ago the sages wrote
Of this strange mystery.

But can it be a maiden fair,
Could thus be turned away—
And seek a lowly shelter where
The gentle oxen lay!

The Magi from the East have come,
With mystic, solemn tread—
Gold, frankincense, and myrrh they bring,
And kneel beside his bed.

The child thence to the temple borne,
Whilst reverently they kneeled;
The future of the Holy One
Was to the priest revealed.

Now lettest thou thy servant, Lord,
From thee in peace depart;
Mine eyes have thy salvation seen,
Thy blessing now impart.

Arise! and shine, "Thy Light hath come,"
Ye tribes of Israel see!
Ye Gentile nations hear the song,
The song of liberty.

The wheels of Time roll on apace,
Still noble ones combine,
To worship toward thy dwelling place,
And linger at thy Shrine.

Hail! Mighty Prince! Incarnate God,
Who dwells in realms above;
Though nations fade away and die,
Still reigns thy matchless love.

District Sunday school officers elected were: B. E. Barlow, W. H. Drake, and J. T. Coleman. The conference adjourned to meet at the call of the district presidency.

Our Departed Ones

RANNIE.—Edward Rannie was born near Minersville, in Pennsylvania, on January 14, 1857. In 1862 the family moved to Mount Carmel, Pennsylvania, at which place he attended the public schools until about fifteen years of age. The family then moved to Nebraska, where he continued his public school education, also taking some work in the college at Omaha, Nebraska, until about twenty-one years of age. Later the family removed to Dodge County, Nebraska, engaging in farming. Brother Rannie continued with his parents at this place for about eleven years. His first contact with the Reorganized Latter Day Saints came in January, 1876, when, as the result of investigation, he subscribed for the True Latter Day Saints' Herald. He and his mother were baptized on December 23, 1877, by Elder James Caffall. A branch of the church was soon organized near Jamestown, Nebraska, and he was ordained a priest. In that capacity he performed his first ministerial duties in caring for the branch and in preaching. In 1878 he was associated with H. H. Robinson in some missionary work away from the branch. In 1882 he went to Omaha and was elected president of the branch there. On April 26, 1887, he was married to Miss Mary Rumel, and of the four children born, two survive: Alma E. Rannie, of Independence, Missouri; Paul R. Rannie, of Chicago, Illinois. Edward Rannie has performed pastoral and missionary labor in a number of States. In 1888 he was elected president of the Omaha, Nebraska, Branch, and served in that capacity three years. He performed missionary work in the Eastern Colorado District; in 1903 in the Kewanee District; 1904, Eastern Iowa; 1905 to 1910 inclusive, North and South Dakota; 1911-12 Southern Nebraska; 1913 Gallands Grove; 1914 Fremont. In 1913-14, due to sickness, he was unable to fulfill his conference appointments and submitted to three operations at the Independence Sanitarium. In 1915 he was appointed to the Eastern Iowa District; 1916 to the Southeastern Mission; 1917, 1918, 1919, Central Oklahoma; 1920 Clinton, Missouri, District. His ministerial service to the church was rendered through four offices of the priesthood, namely: Priest, elder, seventy, high priest. Brother Rannie is the father of four important resolutions on our church record, which have been of great help to general church interests, namely: A resolution providing for the publication of the juvenile history of the church in 1910. In 1913 a resolution providing for a scholarship at Graceland College for worthy young people. This was financed by the Religio. A resolution providing for the annual collection for College Day to become a revolving scholarship fund. A resolution providing for the publication of an authoritative statement of the temporal law of the church. The book published under the name, Law of Christ and Its Fulfillment, was the direct result of this resolution. The life of Elder Edward Rannie was a consistent one, always forward looking, optimistic, and loyal to the church. He has performed a valuable work and has gone to his reward. It can be truly said of him, He has done what he could. Severe illness has confined him to his home for the last three or four years, during which time his great desire was to regain his health that he might again take the field in the interest of this church. During his illness his letters to the church papers and to friends proved his abiding faith in the gospel of Christ of which he was a staunch defender the major portion of his life. Besides his two sons who survive him, there remain his widow, Mrs. Mary Rannie; two brothers, Alexander Rannie, of Trinidad, Colorado, and Joseph Rannie, of Omaha, Nebraska.

BUCKMINSTER.—Alfreda Emily Buckminster was born July 21, 1921. Died at the home of her parents, Mr. Emory and Sister Emily Buckminster, at Sunshine, Maine, December 25, 1926, at the age of five years, five months, and five days. The funeral was from the Adventist Church, and the sermon was by Amos Berve. Interment in the Evergreen Cemetery.

RALSTON.—Margaret Lucile Ralston was born December 23, 1922, at Wiley, Colorado. She died December 21, 1926, at Lamar, Colorado, leaving father, mother, a baby sister, two grandmothers, two grandfathers, and other relatives and friends. Her body was laid in the grave on her fourth birthday, there to await Christ's triumphant call of the righteous.

BENTLEY.—Nathan Bentley was born at Douglas Center, Wisconsin, June 1, 1846. Married Elizabeth Miley June 1, 1871, at Girard, Kansas. To them was born one son, Frederick. He was baptized July 23, 1899, and lived firm in the faith. He spent many years as a pioneer in Kansas and the Dakotas. Died at the home of his son in San Francisco, California, December 26, 1926. Funeral services were conducted by Elder J. A. Saxe.

RANDALL.—Orson Oliver Randall, son of Curtis and Cecelia Randall, was born October 24, 1866, in Boone County, Illinois; at the age of four years, he came with his parents to Kansas. Baptized August 6, 1877. He

Sermon by President Elbert A. Smith before the Regional Priesthood Conference, at Independence, Missouri, January 5, 1927.

CONCLUSION

(This concluding portion of the sermon is dedicated to the wives and mothers of the ministry.)

It is presumed under the laws of homiletics that the climax of the sermon, the closing thoughts, should sum it up or grow out of it, and it may be that what I have to say in conclusion will appear to wander away from the subject; but if I violate the laws of homiletics and offend any of the brethren, at least the sisters will stand by me; and if they be for me, who shall be against me?

It is not given to woman to have the stewardship of priesthood. No; she is not asked to bear the stewardship of priesthood. All that she is asked to do is to go down into the valley of travail from whence come new souls and come up out of that valley bearing in her arms the male child that shall be a priest; to take him to her bosom and feed him and warm him and clothe him; and as he grows older, to teach the priest, who later shall teach the people. When he grows to manhood and becomes the very apple of her eye, as beautiful to her as Apollo, as wise as Solomon, as brave as Daniel, and as good as John the Beloved, when she has invested in him all that she has and all that she is and all she ever expects to have and to be, then to give him to the church and to God; to pray for him all the days of his ministry; and when she has grown old in body and fatal disease has set its hand upon her and she stands in the valley of the shadow of death between the pillars of eternal mystery, to bear, as my good mother did, her last testimony to the divinity of this work that will ring like a golden bell in the heart of her son forever; perchance later to come back unseen and invisible to observe her son and see whether he has kept the trust.

No, it is not given to woman to have the stewardship of priesthood; but every priest sometime is the stewardship of some woman.

I was down in Oklahoma City some months ago, and some one said to me, "Sister Sorden wants to see you. You know Sister Sorden, the mother of Dan, who is over in Jerusalem on a mission. She wants to know if you have time to talk with her?" Why, certainly, if anybody had claim upon my time it was she. So she came and said, "Brother Smith, what about my son, Dan?"

Well, Dan had been gone a long time—two years, three years, four years, five years, six years, in a foreign field, when every day of those six years if she could have had him with her it would have been worth more to that mother than all the oil wells of Oklahoma. So I said to her, "It must have been a great cross to you to have him gone so long."

"Oh, Brother Smith," she said, "I don't care where my son is or how long he stays just so he is engaged in the work of the Lord."

I was in Plano, Illinois, and stayed in the humble home of Brother and Sister W. A. McDowell. I thought many times while there of how that sister had sent her husband, Brother W. A. McDowell, forth a missionary all these years, and now her son Oliver as a pastor in Michigan, and Floyd as a member of the Presidency—three ministers to whom she had said, "Go preach." When I bade her good-by I felt honored to put my arm around her shoulder and kiss her good-by. Brother Joseph used to say to the ministry, "If you must kiss the women, kiss the grandmothers." And as I kissed her good-by, she said, "Take my love to my son Floyd." She seemed to rise up in stature as she said, "Take my love to my son—my son Floyd."

No; it is not given to woman to have the stewardship of priesthood, but every high priest has been some woman's stewardship.

Perchance a woman shall marry a missionary. She does not have to preach. I heard a missionary's wife say, "I thank God I don't have to preach." All she has to do is to let him go, and cheerfully tell him good-by so his going may not be hard to him; to stay behind, manage the household, stoke the furnace, manage the business affairs; to be husband and wife, to be mother and father, to love gently like a mother and discipline firmly like a father; when she writes him, to write cheerful letters and leave out the matters that might make him homesick; and when he becomes old and is superannuated to speak to him as did Sister E. L. Kelley when she said, "Edmund, you have been in a very responsible position as Presiding Bishop, and now you are released and retired and put on the shelf, and furthermore a generation of young people will come to the work who will do things differently from what you did; but let us resolve that whatever comes we will always keep sweet."

No; woman does not have the stewardship of priesthood, but every priest is her stewardship.

Emma Smith was not ordained as a priest. She could not baptize. She could not lay hands on the sick. All she could do was to stand in the doorway of the Mansion House and watch Joseph as he rode away that June morning, go out to the gate to catch the last glimpse of him as he rode over the hill to Carthage; and when the dead body was brought back to her, make a clean bed to lay him on, and after he was buried to set up the altar in her home, close her ears to appeals to go here or there, and say, I have no home but this and no friend but God; to establish her "school of religious education" and teach Joseph and Alexander and David, and later give to the church two men for the Presidency and one for the Quorum of Twelve. She did not have the stewardship of priesthood; but three high priests were her stewardship.

When Mary was crowded out so there was no place for her in human habitation and she must needs lay herself down on the straw in the manger, and the Son of God, from the courts of glory, crept into her arms, he became her stewardship. She taught him—the one who should teach all men. When she took him to the temple to be blessed, Simeon took him from her arms and said, "Mary, because of him a sword shall pierce through thy very soul." Think you that during those forty days and forty nights when he wrestled with Satan in the wilderness Mary slept? And when he was in the Garden of Gethsemane and the twelve apostles could not keep awake, not one hour to watch with him, when they who had the stewardship of priesthood all slept, do you think Mary slept? And when she saw him hanging on the cross——. No, she did not have the stewardship of priesthood; but the great high priest of our profession who entered once into the holy of holies, was a woman's stewardship.

So it may finally be when his work is all done and the minister comes into the presence of God, and God says, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," he will also turn to the man's wife and mother and say, "Exceedingly well done, good and faithful servants; enter in also with him into my joy. Without you, he could never have served; without you now he could never have joy."

Blue Pencil Notes

Most men know enough to slow up for a funeral procession; but unfortunately they do not always see their own coming in time.

"Strikes me," said Deacon Goodentart, "that what our men needs most is a wife with brains enough for two."

We love to sing that he is coming "to gather his sheep and plant them in Zion in love"; and sometimes we seem quite willing to plant the man who does not agree with us—but not in love.

Henry Steen, ten years old, desired the position of page in the Texas Legislature, according to press reports. When he applied for the position, he was told that he was much too small; in particular his legs were too short to run errands. He took a tour of the capital, looked the assembly over; and came back to the house committee with the declaration, "Gentlemen, what this legislation needs is brains, not legs." He got the coveted position.

The sad story of Charley Chaplin, comedian, who has made millions laugh and who now laughs with no man reminds us that happiness is not to be purchased. It is not bestowed by popular approval. It is not to be found in some distant place. Happiness is to be found at home if at all. The man who is not happy at home can not be happy anywhere. The man and woman who cooperate to maintain a happy home are fundamentalists; they are doing their first duty to themselves and society.

The fact that William Wrigley of Avalon should pay George Young of Toronto twenty-five thousand dollars to swim twenty-two miles across San Pedro Channel from Catalina to the mainland is not so interesting of itself. That seems quite a sum of money to pay just to see if it could be done. As a boy, I once tried to jump across an old well just to see if it could be done. Before I got out of the well, more worthy objectives in life suggested themselves. But George Young seems to have had a worthy objective. He erected his own goal. The story that warmed the heart of the world centered around the Toronto mother, who is in ill health, and the seventeen-year-old boy who desired to earn money to take her to California. She gave him one hundred and thirty-five dollars, all her savings, and he bought an old motorcycle and rode overland to California.

Have You Purchased a Bond?

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Independence, Missouri, offers its first bond issue, $350,000, ten year gold bonds, five per cent interest, payable seminannually.

1. Authorization

The General Conference of 1926—the highest legislative body in the church—unanimously approved the recommendation of the Order of Bishops for an issue of church bonds to the amount of $350,000. This action unreservedly commits the moral and financial support of the church to this bond proposition.

2. Reasons for Bond Issue

First, it is good, sound, business procedure, unanimously recommended by the Order of Bishops and approved by business men of the church. This issue of church bonds does not increase indebtedness, but simply changes the method of carrying present indebtedness. Extending over a period of years, many Saints and friends having money for which they had no immediate use have left it on deposit with the church. This now amounts to $327,272.14. A large part of this money is subject to call at any time, and for this reason the church has frequently had to meet these demands at most inopportune times. The proceeds of sale of these bonds will refund the notes and accounts payable, as shown on the accompanying statement. Those having money on deposit will be given an opportunity to accept bonds equal to the amount they have loaned the church. The church can not consistently carry large cash balances especially for the purpose of meeting demands recalling loans without notice.

3. How Church and Members Alike Will Benefit

Persons desiring to place money on deposit with the church for either a long or short time can secure Against one hundred and one other trained contestants he pitted himself and was the only one to win through the fog and the cold and the treacherous cross currents. His mother when she bade him good-by said, "Don't fail. Whatever you start, finish." He finished what he started—for his mother. church bonds guaranteeing them a regular income at the five per cent interest rate, and also making it possible for them by having the investment in the form of a bond to sell or transfer the principal sum at any time. It also has substantial value as security for short time loans at the bank.

4. Additional Security

The church has agreed to set aside $35,000 each year as a budget appropriation to reduce the general church indebtedness, including this bond issue. This has priority over all other budget appropriations.

5. Safety

According to the financial statement of the general church, it will be seen that there are $7,000 in net assets for each $1,000 of the bonds now offered. Banks and investment companies say that a bond or mortgage should have a ratio of at least 2 to 1. The church offers its bonds on the basis of 7 to 1, which gives them three and one half times the security demanded by banks.

6. Moral Obligation

The net worth of this church testifying of its ability to pay, together with the promptness with which it pays its obligations, determines its credit standing. The banks of the country have taken the church notes for bank loans, and never has it been asked to mortgage its property to secure these notes. The church property is not mortgaged to secure these bonds. It is unnecessary, because the moral obligation of this church and this people is far more valuable and important as security than any deed of trust. Its 100,000 members, each motivated by a deep religious conviction of the divine purpose in its organization, will today as unhesitatingly as they have in the past, guarantee its credit. The obligations of this church will be paid.

7. Earning Power

This issue of church bonds bears five per cent interest, payable on the second day of January and July in each year. The rate of interest paid by banks on savings deposits is about four per cent. Government bonds draw interest at the rate of from two per cent to four and one half per cent. The earning power of these bonds combines a substantial rate of interest with the maximum of security.

8. Markets

The Presiding Bishopric of the church will endeavor at all times to maintain a market for the sale and transfer of these bonds. By this it is meant that they will keep in touch with interested purchasers that in case the holder of a bond desires to sell, the Presiding Bishopric will act for both seller and buyer, without the expense of commission.

9. Par Value

These bonds are issued in denominations of $100, $200, and $1,000 bonds. The $100 bonds may be purchased by paying $10 down and $10 per month until the face value of the bond is paid in full. The church will allow four per cent interest to the purchaser, on such installment payments, when full payment of the bond is made. Government bonds will be accepted at their market value in exchange for church bonds.

To this date several thousands of dollars in church bonds have been disposed of to members of the church in various parts of the world, in lots of from $100 to $11,000. Many are taking advantage of the installment plan of securing a bond, and are opening accounts on the church books saving money toward that end.

Some young people are purchasing these bonds with the idea of having a fund available to complete their education; some treating it as a savings account. Many more are investing their savings accounts in church bonds at five per cent rather than in industrial or government bonds carrying a lower rate of interest. The security is ample. The interest paying periods being in January and July come at the most convenient time of year.

Orders for these bonds may be sent to the Presiding Bishopric, Box 255, Independence, Missouri. Bonds are available at once and will be sent as ordered.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

Call for a Convention of Music

Music is one of the most important functions of our church. Its work is growing so rapidly that the church must place it on a still higher plane of activity. Therefore, the First Presidency in conjunction with the present officers of the Department of Music hereby issue this call for a convention of the music workers of the church, to be held April 7, 8, and 9, at Independence, Missouri, during the coming session of the 1927 General Conference, the exact hours and place of meeting to be announced later.

The object of this convention is educational. We desire to acquaint the music workers of the church with the ideals and objectives of the Department of Music. But above all do we seek to impart to these the great vision of our future, if we do as God desires in our music.

This will not be a delegate convention, nor will it have legislative powers. Its proceedings will be reported to the First Presidency, and out of the experiences of the association of kindred minds there should come, through conclusions and recommendations, much that will be of value to us in our future development.

Let districts and branches and their officers throughout the church urge their music workers to come to this convention. In such districts that have yet to choose General Conference delegates, it might be well to select some who can best participate in this work. Every section of the church should have some one present at this convention who, in returning, can bring back the good things done.

K L D S Radio Flashes

Lane, Kansas.—We listened in last evening to your beautiful rendition of "The Messiah." Words are inadequate to express our appreciation. We consider last evening's program the finest we have received this year over our radio.—Mrs. F. M. Koontz, Route 2.

Plover, Wisconsin.—We received your program very clearly and distinctly and assure you it was very much enjoyed by our family and friends. We look forward to your broadcasting, and every program is enjoyed here.—Mrs. Robert Altenburg, Route 1.

Independence, Missouri.—We wish to thank you, and all who participated in your splendid program this evening. It was surely great! Please let us have more like it.—Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Carnes, 824 South Park Avenue.

Jefferson, Oklahoma.—Enjoyed Ralph Smith's mandolin and guitar club. It's the best music we have had for many a day.—E. W. Elswick.

Palacios, Texas.—Your programs very much enjoyed at our home, and hope to hear more of them.—Mrs. F. J. McCall, Box 171.

Sioux City, Iowa.—It was my privilege last evening to listen to a magnificent rendition of Handel's "Messiah," as broadcast from your station. I believe I have never heard finer balance or more outstanding voices of quality than were evident in the splendid chorus giving this number.—F. A. Wood, 3016 Nebraska Street.

Kansas City, Missouri.—You have the best on the air. I think each program is a little better than the last; they are so refined and uplifting.—Mrs. R. E. Proctor, 327 Myrtle.

Liberal, Missouri.—It has been quite a while since we have written, but have been listening in just the same. We do our best to get each program, as nothing on the air is so good as what comes from K L D S.—Mrs. Bertha Miller.

Maywood, Missouri.—To all of you who participate in that hour of prayer, every Tuesday and Friday morning, I send greetings. It is the most profitable hour I have in the whole twenty-four.—Mr. H. E. Otto, Route 6, Box 277.

Saint Joseph, Missouri.—I enjoyed your program very much Saturday night. The numbers were all good and it came in loud and clear. I enjoy all of your programs, and especially the early morning ones.—Estella Hesnault, Route 6.

True Prophets Inspired

BY J. F. CURTIS

On the same day that the church was organized, April 6, 1830, the Lord gave a revelation to the church, section 19, in which Joseph Smith was to "be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ, an elder of the church," etc. In order to occupy properly, one in such position would need much inspiration. In paragraph 2 the Lord admonished the church as follows: "Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and the commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith."

Some have objected to these words, claiming that Joseph Smith was making extravagant claims. The Doctrine and Covenants has been questioned because it claims that God puts words in the mouth of Joseph Smith.

Turning to the Bible we find some statements on this subject. The Lord requested Moses to go into Egypt to deliver the Israelites, but Moses said: "I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue." And the Lord said unto him, "Who hath made man's mouth? or who maketh the dumb, or deaf, or the seeing, or the blind? Have not I the Lord? Now therefore, go, and I will be with thy mouth, and will teach thee what thou shalt say."—Exodus 4: 10-12.

However, Moses seemed to lack faith in this promise of God, as some do in this dispensation, so the Lord selected Aaron, of whom it is said, "I know that he can speak well" (Exodus 4: 14), to go with Moses. Further instruction was given by God to Moses: "And thou shalt speak unto him [Aaron] and put words in his mouth, and I will be with thy mouth and with his mouth, and will teach you what ye shall do."—Exodus 4: 15.

Shall we reject the Bible because the Lord put words in the mouths of Moses and Aaron?

Note the case of Balak and Balaam: "And the Lord put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus shalt thou speak."—Numbers 23: 5. And when Balak requested Balaam to "Come curse me Jacob, and come, defy Israel." Balaam replied, "How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the Lord hath not defied?—Verse 8. And again, "Must I not take heed to speak that which the Lord hath put in my mouth?"—Verse 12.

Shall we doubt both God and his Prophet Balaam, or shall we believe? Turning to the writings of the Prophet Jeremiah, we read: "O Lord, . . . thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart; for I am called by thy name, O Lord God of hosts."—Jeremiah 15: 15, 16. Again, "thou shalt be as my mouth." (Verse 19.)

Shall we discredit the writings of Jeremiah, or shall we let them stand?

The golden-tongued prophet, Isaiah, records the words of God to him on this subject, "I have put my words in thy mouth, and I have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand, that I may plant the heavens, and lay the foundations of the earth, and say unto Zion, Thou art my people."—Isaiah 51: 16. One more quotation from Isaiah will be sufficient to suit my purpose on this subject, "As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord; my spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth shall not depart out of thy mouth nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and forever."—Isaiah 59: 21.

We can not afford to go back on the Lord. It is a good thing for some that this statement is in the Bible instead of in the Doctrine and Covenants. In the New Testament, when Jesus was speaking to his disciples in reference to their being brought before kings and rulers for his name's sake, he said, "Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer, for I will give a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist."—Luke 21: 14, 15.

Shall we doubt the words of Jesus? No, we will not doubt them, but believe them, and rejoice because they are true.

Hear the words of the Apostle Peter, whose instructions in spiritual things were received from Jesus Christ: "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."—2 Peter 1: 21.

God is working today as he has ever worked in the past, and his law is the same. Speak, Lord, and let thy servants hear.

What divine truth Jesus taught when he put forth the simple word: "Give and it shall be given unto you." The little boy, listening to the echo in the hills, found out that when he spoke kindly the voice answered kindly and that when he spoke harshly, the voice came back harshly. The world is built like that.—John R. Ewers.

The Development and Conservation of Man Power in the Church; the Branch as a Factor

BY T. S. WILLIAMS

Our theme assumes three things: First; there is within the church a certain degree of energy which for our convenience we call "Man Power." Second; that energy or power is potential, and may or may not be developed. Third; after this potential power is developed, it may be used rightly or wrongly or not at all.

Since the branch is the primary organization of the church, it is a very important factor in the development and conservation of this potential energy. In fact, it is the most important factor, because as the branches are, so is the church. The church is the sum total of its branches, and the branch is the sum total of its membership.

If the branch qualify in the manner outlined in our theme, it must recognize that all talents are potential and must be developed and directed. Second; that the development and direction of these talents is the stewardship of the branch. If it be that the branch is the primary organization of the church, then it is also just as true that the responsibility for the development and direction of the people rests primarily with the branch.

The branch must furnish such an environment for its membership that each individual will get the stimulus necessary to spur him on to the development of his powers. He must be made to realize his personal responsibility and opportunity in this direction. Each individual must exercise his own initiative in this way, but the branch must furnish him the stimulus. If an individual joins a group of live, energetic, studious people, it is to be expected that he will become like them. Men receive their stimulus from their environment.

The responsibility of the branch does not end here, however. If it is to function as a decided factor in the development and direction of men, it must have a program. Certain organizations should be effected which will look to the spiritual uplift, mental development, and physical welfare of each individual. It is becoming more and more universally recognized that physical vigor, mental ability, and spiritual power are inseparably connected, and that all these represent the soul of man.

It is interesting to note that the three books of the church do not ignore our responsibility regarding the physical and mental man. Section eighty-six and section eighty-five, paragraphs twenty-one and thirty-six, clearly point out the position of the Lord regarding this matter. It is evident that a man physically fit and mentally developed can be a better man spiritually. And, too, it is just as clear that a man's physical strength and mental power is a spiritual responsibility. Consequently, when considering the development of man power in the church, the whole man must be considered. Man's physical, mental, and spiritual development must be comprehended in our educational program.

Classes looking to a better understanding and more universal practice of the laws of health as outlined in section eighty-six, and as presented by specialists in that line, should be sponsored and instituted in the branches. This will assuredly lead to better health and greater physical strength and a resultant increase in man power. The Sunday school, Religio, Department of Women, and priesthood meetings could with profit to the church lend their efforts in this direction and spend less time in discussing mooted theological questions which they nor anyone else can expect to answer.

It is impossible to estimate the man power the church has lost through ignorance of the laws of health. Hours, days, and years have been spent on beds of affliction, and many have died before their time, because they have violated the laws of their physical beings. This has taken place while their teachers have been discussing, perhaps, the location of Hill Cumorah. In the development and conservation of man power, the branch must not overlook its opportunity in this direction.

Need we argue that greater power will come to the church if more heed would be given the Lord's instruction contained in section eighty-five and paragraphs twenty-one and thirty-six. The technical ability and trained minds developed by studying things in the earth, under the earth, and above it, would contribute and have contributed to the man power of the church. The idea that a study of the sciences would end in harm to the church is a mistaken assumption. It will add to the strength of the church.

The branch could with profit to its people give its attention and support to a more systematic effort to increase the spirituality of the church. There is a great demand for a more concentrated effort on the part of the whole church in this direction. Suggested topics, prayers for certain things, experience meetings along certain lines would be a great help. In this manner the thoughts, testimonies, and prayers of the people can be concentrated and unified. Unity of thought and purpose will assuredly bring greater spiritual results to the church.

Of course care should be taken that the meetings do not become too stiff or formal. But one need not go to this type of prayer meeting to witness stereotyped and formal prayers and testimonies.

We have heard many times the same prayer and testimony over and over. A prayer meeting with a theme helps relieve this situation.

The prayer meetings, services, and Sunday school lessons should be coordinated so that at the end of a certain period each institution shall have contributed its part to a definite purpose. A spiritual lesson should be selected, and for a certain period (month or week) each department should contribute its part in presenting and impressing some phase of the lesson. Surely a religious truth is more deeply imprinted upon the consciousness of its adherents if they talk, sing, and pray about it.

In short, the branch must do all in its power to increase and develop the talents of its people, and at the same time generate sufficient spirituality that they will give rightful expression and direction to these talents. The work of the branch should be so organized that the maximum of result might be obtained with the expenditure of a minimum of effort. Its work should be so arranged that duplication of effort and overlapping of work will not exist. Each individual should give his strength to the accomplishment of his own particular task, and yet coordinate his efforts with those of his fellows to the realization of a common end.

The branch must be made to realize that its man power can not be conserved when strife and contention prevail. If the energy of the branch be used up fighting within itself, it will have no strength to combat its common enemy, the forces of evil. The branch must conserve its own strength by using its institutional machinery to the end that unity of effort and the spirit of cooperation might prevail. We must be made to know that the law of cause and effect rules within the church—as well as elsewhere in the world.

The branch as a primary organization of the church must be made to recognize the ultimate and goal of the whole church and lend its efforts to that end. The divinely given task of the church is, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." The branch, then, must vision this larger task and organize its membership in a way that it will contribute its part to the salvation of the world, and by so doing will perhaps save itself.

The gospel is no more changeable than Christ, and the facts, commands, ordinances, and promises of the gospel are so intimately connected with the life and teaching of Christ that they stand or fall together. What the Lord did and taught while on earth, what he suffered, his death and resurrection—all these are in the gospel; and whoever believes and obeys the gospel, and lives according to its requirements, will, in a very vital sense, reproduce the life and work of our Lord. We become living arguments in proof of the deity of Christ, "an epistle of Christ."—Mrs. Ira M. Boswell.

Tested in a Texas Norther

A savage middle Texas norther was whistling through the Spanish moss that hung in ten, fifteen, perhaps twenty-foot festoons from the spreading branches of the big live oaks that so resembled giant apple trees—green leaves and all, if that might be at Christmas.

A rare snow had fallen, covering all small plants and bushes sufficiently to make them look like Eskimo snow igloos with green-clad plant inhabitants peeping from under.

The roadway was miserable, being a muddy river between banks of waving moss.

In a carriage on this road were a mother, two children, and a driver. The mother must reach the ten o'clock train for her northern home. The driver was her father in whose home she had enjoyed a two weeks' happy holiday, ending in this necessary trip which should have been a scenic pleasure.

One of the children, a boy of ten months, snuggled under the wraps in his mother's arms, peeping his hooded head out occasionally to fill his eyes with what was really a wonder scene in green and white. The other was a boy of four who wished to see and stood right up to do it, pulling the robes and wraps from brother, mother, and grandfather.

The fierce norther caught this boy and fairly took his breath away. He soon began to cry, and the tears were almost frozen on his cheeks. He pulled off his mittens and cap and dug his knuckles into his eyes. Soon his wet fingers were bitten by the cold, and he raised his voice in a lugubrious howl.

"Sit down, Ned, sit down," begged the mother. "You are freezing yourself, and brother, and grandpa, too."

Dear slave, she said nothing of herself. Continually she begged the miserable boy to snuggle into the warmth and comfort of the wraps, but he would not listen.

"I want to see, ma; I want to see! Oh, oh, I am cold!"

These words and many like them he wailed as he sniffed down the wind. Everyone was in discomfort because this boy had not been taught obedience.

"You should be more firm," said grandfather. "Firmness is kindness. Teach the child obedience to laws of home and nature. In that is safety and the only real liberty."

"Ned, sit down," ordered the mother, herself al-

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

News of the Departments

Following the return of Miss Vida A. Taylor to Toronto in December, Mrs. Leslie E. Wight was asked by the Presidency of the church to serve as acting head of the Department of Women. Mrs. Wight was formerly Miss Lydia Thomas, daughter of a missionary, a graduate of Graceland College and of Iowa State University. She taught school a number of years, but has spent the past twelve years as a mother and home maker. For some years she has been an ardent student of parent and home problems, serving efficiently as superintendent of the Department of Women in Lamoni Stake and in Lamoni Branch. She has the confidence and esteem of the entire community where she has lived and worked.

Sister Wight is spending part time in the office for the present. She brings a trained mind, a consecrated heart, and a large fund of information and experience to her task, as well as an abundance of initiative and willing service.

As an assistant in the Department of Women, and immediately in charge of the Young Women's Bureau, Mrs. Lenoir Woodstock has been selected. Mrs. Woodstock has had several years of most valuable experience as a leader of girls in Camp Fire and other movements. With her husband in public school work, she has been in intimate contact with the lives of young people and their problems. Possessed of a natural talent for art and a love for the beautiful in nature, she has greatly enjoyed studying and teaching, romping and camping, with groups of girls. The past year in Lamoni her life and her home have been shared by scores of girls who have sought her instruction, sympathy, and leadership. The past summer was spent in reunion work in the middle East, where she was able to reach and keep groups of girls and their leaders.

Mrs. Woodstock will have an unusual opportunity to serve the church in perfecting the plan for the organization of girls from eight or nine to twenty years of age in Blue Bird, Oriole, and Temple Builder movements.

Due to illness of Mrs. Anne Friend Roberts, the entire charge of the Cradle Roll has been transferred to Mrs. Dona most in tears. "Ned, do please sit down. You are freezing us all."

The helpless family drove on more miserable than the mules, which had occasion for discomfort. The grandfather pondered what to do. The mother was near hysteria. It seemed sad when all this misery could be ended by one firm move of his good left hand putting a foolish boy into a warm nook on the seat, and covering him snugly up. But——. It was only three miles to the station, and the boy was permitted to wail it out to the complete distress of all and the spoiling of the most beautiful hour of the visit.

This boy by no means ended in the penitentiary. He became a good worker, graduated from the public school with honor, and is now working his way through college. He became imbued with the family spirit; the fine example of his mother told at last.

Yet there was a better, easier, and safer way to bring him up—the kind way of obedience.—By John Swanze Ward.

Haden, of Lamoni. Mrs. Haden is the wife of Elder W. E. Haden, a missionary in the church. Sister Haden, as home maker, mother, and student, has found time to take a kindergarten course and for some time has devoted her spare time to service in the interests of the little ones. Formerly in Independence and later in Lamoni, she has organized and conducted Sunday morning kindergartens for the cradle roll children. In addition she has conducted a week-night school of kindergarten methods for young mothers.

Mrs. Haden has entered with joy into the larger field of service. It is her ambition to assist at the very fountain head in building healthy bodies, strong minds, and Christian character for the Zion of tomorrow.

At the close of a young people's convention held in Toronto, Ontario, in March of last year, a committee of five was chosen to make a searching investigation of the recreational needs and opportunities of youth in Canada in the light of the gospel ideal and purpose. They were especially requested to suggest a wholesome, sane, constructive recreational program for youth, which should conserve natural forces, and develop and train latent talents and powers of personality unto the enriching of life and the perfecting of Christian character through self-expression.

In a recent letter, Doctor C. A. McLean tells of several meetings of their committee, and gives the following terse opinion which will doubtless furnish the basis of their further work.

"Our opinion is that the best solution to the condition is to have real consecrated leaders, whose lives are clean, who are able to enter into all the activities of young people. It is an exceptional leader who can lead young people, if that person is not able to play ball, skate, play games of various kinds with a fair degree of skill. The leader must be able to associate actively with them to be a successful young people's leader. His personality must stand out; his everyday activities must be a silent sermon to the young people he is trying to influence. My experience is that they will not be susceptible—permanently—to constant preaching to the degree that a clean-living, yet socially and athletically inclined person can influence them."

The fifth number of the Women's Department Bulletin, "Suggestions for Something to Do," will be off our mimeograph press and ready for mailing this week. The neat little bulletin has grown in size and continues to increase in its promise of usefulness. The February number contains lessons for each week in home management, handcraft, and foods, with some splendid suggestions and directions for cradle roll workers.

The lessons are all practical, and are such as may readily be used in class study or by individuals in isolated homes. Copies are mailed without charge to each district superintendent to supply one for each local. Single copies may be had at ten cents each. Address The Departments, Lamoni, Iowa.

A Word to Encourage

This is just a word of encouragement to the HERALD, its editors, and readers. We can not get along without this paper, as it records all the news of our church, telling of the advancement of all the departments. It is most especially interesting to read of the young, their prayer meetings, their ambitions, and desires. Our hearts burn within us, as we realize that God is marshaling his army of young people, every one of them having a desire to help. Their shining faces are Zionward. Our Father will surely bless all who have been instruments in building his kingdom on earth. May we all try to do our best to help in the place in which we are needed to move Zionward in 1927. MRS. FRANK LEAPER.

NEWS AND LETTERS

An Unprecedented Sunday School Attendance

CHEROKEE, IOWA, January 18.—As a branch of God's church we have decided that we will do a greater and better work this year than ever before. Every worker will put forth every effort to increase the efficiency of each department. There will be less talk and more real work. This is our aim, and under this banner we can not but succeed, with our heavenly Father's assistance.

Our Sunday school broke all records for the last quarter of 1926 when the secretary's report showed that the average attendance was only one less than the enrollment of the school. The attendance so far this year is doing fully as well or better.

Some temporary partitions are being installed in the church to help divide our Sunday school classes to better advantage for their work. They are so built that they can be used in the new basement when it is finished.

The Christmas entertainment, under the direction of Sisters Ruth Haynes and Tena Crippen, was a success. The children did all of the entertaining and performed their parts well. The parents were very proud of them, and many pleasing comments were heard from the large crowd present. The church was beautifully decorated, and the tree was loaded with gifts for the little folks. Santa came and furnished the usual amount of fun. He seemed to think dolls were in demand, as we noticed most of the little girls were caring for one.

Sister Mary Yarrington, our pianist, has been quite sick, but is some better at the present. Her place is being filled by the assistant, Sister Elsie Webb.

On account of bad weather most of the time, our cottage prayer services have not been very well attended. However, the meetings have been very spiritual. Our sacramental service was well attended, and much enjoyed, the Spirit being present throughout the meeting.

The priesthood service, held the first Sunday of the year, was very spiritual, and the best we have attended for a long time. It was decided to go ahead regardless of obstacles, and every member of the priesthood will report to the branch president once a month. A conference will be held every three months, and all departments will report, in order that we can keep a record of the work. Every member of this corps of workers must make some calls on members, or furnish a good excuse for not so doing. We must go forward, and the only way to do so is to work. This we will do. We believe we are beginning to get a vision of the work required as we have never before had; we are also enjoying more of God's Holy Spirit.

It has been decided to begin excavating the basement under the church as soon as the frost is out of the ground. The work will be done by the brethren of the branch, and it is planned to have it ready for a new furnace by fall.

Our two deacons, John Julius and Alfred Ballantyne, occupied the stand the morning hour of January 16. This was their first attempt, and assisted by the Spirit the efforts were fine. These brethren are doing a good work in their calling and are a great assistance in the work.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is having a Bible baseball contest, which is arousing interest as well as making us study our Bibles a little more. Superintendent Albert Haynes is the umpire.

The Department of Women held a splendid meeting at the home of Sister Reeder. Nearly all were present, and the new officers for the year were installed. Sister Kurdle, the retiring superintendent, said the past year she had many times met the words, "I can't," and she hoped this year all would decide to say, "I can," and then do it. The sisters have decided to say "I can and I will," and go ahead with the work. They have a fine program for the year outlined, and no doubt their light will shine brightly in the activities of the branch for the year.

We are going ahead and already have a nice start. We wish all of God's people success in this new year.

Branch Organization at Aurora, Illinois

AURORA, ILLINOIS, January 17.—A branch has been organized at Aurora. On the evening of November 17 the few scattered Saints gathered at the home of Brother and Sister J. E. Wildermuth, who live at 62 Elmwood Drive. Brother D. E. Dowker and Apostle J. F. Garver were with us and helped us organize. Brother J. F. Wildermuth, who has been active here for a long time, when we were only a mission, was chosen branch president. He has been a willing worker and has done much good in the past. Brother Malcor, who moved here last May and who has had many years of experience in church work, was elected to be his assistant.

Although we have not our full corps of officers, we feel confident that God will bless us and fill each need as the branch grows. Since we have united into a branch, a Department of Women has been organized. Previous to this there was already an active Sunday school and Religio. The Sunday school gave a splendid entertainment Christmas, and the children are doing well in spite of the lack of space.

We are looking forward to having a hall, or church, in the near future, as we are rapidly outgrowing the homes in which we meet. The work is new here, but we feel sure there are many honest-hearted people in Aurora who will be glad to accept the truth when they hear it.

MABLE SANDERSON REEDY.

Fargo, North Dakota

January 12.—The Saints of Fargo wish all the Saints, both near and far, a Happy New Year, and hope each day with its pages clean and white will be filled with service to God. "He that overcometh shall wear a robe of white" should be kept in mind every hour. We should struggle to crucify the human within us and let the Spirit of the Master hold first place in our lives. By endeavoring to get the right viewpoint and maintain the right attitude, we will be helped to be more broad-minded and look at conditions through the light of the gospel. We will be more charitable.

Christmas Eve found the Bungalow Church adorned with Christmas decorations and a gayly lighted Christmas tree. The program was very much enjoyed, and when it was finished bags of candy and nuts were distributed to all. Christmas carols were also enjoyed over the radio, so kindly furnished by Sister John Konietzka.

A surprise was given the Saints by Mr. Otto Wendt, a non-member, whose children have been enrolled in our Sunday school, when he sent over a box of apples and a pail of candy and nuts. These were certainly appreciated.

Sister Jane Perchie, of Alberta, Canada, stopped off here last week on her way to Clifford, North Dakota, to visit her sister, Sister Barbara Thompson.

In the last epistle from Fargo, a report of the election of officers was given, stating that Sister Fern Shackow was elected musical director. We wish to state that Sister Elsie Brown is elected musical director and Sister Fern as assistant.

On Monday evening, January 3, the older Saints were warmly invited to Sister Worth Couey's pleasant home, which has recently been remodeled, to "spin the platter" and remember the gladness of their youth, which they did to their satisfaction, especially when lunch time came. Sister Couey is noted for her generosity along this line. Then on Friday evening, January 7, Sister Couey and husband again entertained. The young people were the lucky guests on this night. A very pleasant evening was spent.

Sister R. H. Freeman, who has been ill with acute bronchitis, is much improved.

Sister Mahala Bundy, of Duluth, is visiting her daughter, Sister J. Hennaman, of Moorhead, and has been attending services here. Her testimony in this latter-day work grows stronger as she advances in years. It is good to be a valiant soldier in the army of the Lord.

Saints were pleased to hear our young brother, Drexel Mollison, of Independence, Missouri, broadcasting a piano solo from K L D S. He with his parents, Brother and Sister Fred Mollison, were formerly of Fargo and active workers while here. Brother Mollison directed a fine orchestra of young Saints in our branch. Their absence is still felt.

Elder Robert Gunlock stopped over Sunday on his way to spend the holidays at his home in Rock Island, Illinois, and preached Sunday morning, December 19, on making out inventories. He read letters from Brothers Gillen, Carmichael, and others. He encouraged all, old and young, to file their inventories, and said it was a fine thing to get children started right along this line. By doing this in their youth, they will find it easier in later years.

Brother George Day, of Bemidji, Minnesota, pleasantly surprised the Saints on this same Sunday and preached in the evening on "The birth of Christ." Some of the points he brought out were: Christ's mission was to save men from their fallen condition. We should learn to appreciate our mission in life. The most foolish thing to do is to discuss which man is to be greatest. We should never assume the attitude that we can not be taught, nor should we harbor doubt. Humility will win out in this work. Serving God and each other in love will bring success.

Sister Marvin Zieck, of Minneapolis, arrived Monday, January 3, to visit her mother, Sister Minnie Peterson. Saints were happy to see our recently wedded sister, Eleanor, again. Two showers were given her during her visit. She received many pretty and useful gifts. Delicious refreshments were served both evenings. She returned to her home Friday evening, January 7.

The ground was covered with ice and snow.
The Latter Day Saints had no place to go.
So Sister Eva threw open her door,
And said, "Come to my home, and want no more."
With hearts full of glee, they entered in,
With baskets of dainties full to the brim.

Yes, a very pleasant time was spent on New Year's Eve at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Konietzka, where a community dinner was enjoyed, after which games were played, readings were given, and songs sung. All went home feeling it was good to mingle with those we love, and a bit of merriment helps to drive dull care away.

Our pastor, Elder Thomas Leitch, preached Sunday, December 26. His theme was, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him shall not perish, but have everlasting life." He stated that if we have not belief in Jesus Christ, we will be led in wrong paths. We should put personality away, seek to raise the other one up; then the gifts of God will be among us.

On the second Sunday of January, Brother Leitch read from Genesis 1, speaking on the creation of the world. One thought he left with us was that God's laws are trampled under our feet when we follow after pleasures of this world. By so doing we are eating of the forbidden fruit.

A committee of three, consisting of Sisters Dehn, Shackow, and Farley, has been elected to collect money to purchase new song books for the church.

The Department of Women met with Sister John Konietzka Wednesday evening, January 12, to discuss plans for the coming year. Last year Religious Education in the Family was studied. The department decided to study the Doctrine and Covenants this new year. It was also decided to serve lunch only once every three months, and have that a social meeting, instead of lunch each session. Sister John Rotzien was chosen assistant superintendent of the department. Dainty refreshments were served.

Sister Irma Walker has gone to La Moure, North Dakota, to spend three months with her sister, Mrs. Robert Good, on account of ill health.

Brother and Sister J. Muffle, of Straubville, North Dakota, spent the night of January 11 at the home of Sister Richard Walker, on their way to Bottineau to visit Sister Muffle's sister, whose husband is not expected to live.

Brothers Milo and Murle Bullis, of Leonard, spent Christmas here with their sister, Mrs. Weidling.

A letter from Evangelist J. A. Gunsolley states that it is not probable he will return to North Dakota this winter on account of extreme cold here, which might make it impracticable to do much missionary work. Saints regret to hear this, although they can not blame him if such a plan is decided upon. The Saints treated him royally while here as one of the royal family, and truly it is so, for are we not all members of the household of the great King?

Sister Florence Rife, of Sheldon, spent the holidays with relatives in Fargo and attended services while here.

The Saints were sorry to hear of Sister E. E. Weddle's accident at Lamoni, Iowa, in falling and breaking one of her legs. Sister Weddle moved from here to Lamoni last June. We hope she is much improved by this time.

Sunday, January 2, the prayer service was conducted by Sister William Shackow, and a very peaceful spirit was felt. The prayers were earnestly offered and the testimonies filled with good resolutions and desires to live closer to our heavenly Father. The meeting was closed by singing.

"How gentle God's command;
How kind his precepts are.
Come cast your burden on the Lord,
And trust his constant care."

Moorhead, Iowa

January 16.—Under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression, about forty Saints assembled at the home of Brother and Sister Lynn Wilson on New Year's Eve and celebrated the occasion by enjoying an oyster supper and playing games till the advent of the new year, which we hope will be a very successful one for God's people.

Our hearts are made sad and our sympathy goes out to our afflicted ones, as we continue to have some among us. Brother and Sister Ira Wilson are sorely afflicted at the home of Brother and Sister Dale Wilson, of Ute. Through administration Sister Pearl has received much relief, and our prayers continue in their behalf, that the Lord's blessings may be theirs to enjoy.

Sister Ella McIntyre returned Saturday from Sioux City, where she has been visiting at the home of her son, Hayne, while taking some treatments. We are pleased to hear that her condition is very much improved.

Sister Ella Jennings recently returned from Boone and Webster City, where she has spent a few weeks visiting at the homes of her sons, Herbert and Harry.

District President Joseph Lane spent a few days among us during the past month, and of course was welcome, as he always is.

Sister C. R. Hield is enjoying a visit from her father, Brother Vandell, of Pleasanton, Iowa.

On the afternoon of December 29, Brother T. O. Strand preached the funeral sermon of Sister Delora Crews, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Brother Charles Crews. Sister Delora has been in ill health for nearly a year, the most of the time being spent in Colorado where she was accompanied by relatives who hoped that her health would be restored, but she continued to decline in spite of all that loving hands could do, and passed away at Seibert, Colorado. The body was brought home by her father and sister Mildred, who were her constant companions, her mother having passed beyond several years previously. Brother Strand was assisted by Brother Lane in this service. Interment in the Spring Valley Cemetery.

On Sunday morning, January 16, Brother George Vandell and two sons, of Sioux City, were in attendance at services, and we were very much edified by the discourse delivered by Brother Vandell. We always appreciate hearing from visiting brethren, and local men appreciate their assistance.

Our financial agent, Brother Chester Davis, is supplying the Saints with financial statement blanks, and some are preparing to file them with the bishop.

The first of this week several of the brothers met and put up wood for Sister Hallie Crandal and mother.

Sister Delana McElwain has been quite sorely afflicted of late, but we are grateful that she is improving. We all miss "Aunt Lanie" when she is not present at services.

On Monday evening, January 17, about thirty-five Saints met at the Aid House for a social time and flower benefit. A contribution was made which amounted to twelve dollars. After deducting the expense of the oyster supper, a nice little sum will be left for the flower fund.

Collections were taken last Sunday morning and evening for the benefit of the students who lost their belongings in the fire at Graceland.

Waterloo, Iowa

January 12.—Many things of interest have happened in our branch since our last report. On December 28 the members of the priesthood and their wives were invited to a banquet at the home of Brother Alma Tally. The hour was a quarter after seven, and the tables were set for seventeen persons. Before each plate was a pink morning-glory with the name of the person who was to occupy that place. Brother C. A. Kress summoned us to the dining room, and acted as toastmaster. After each one had been assigned his place, we sang "Blest be the tie that binds," singing with more meaning than we usually do. It certainly seemed that there was a tie that bound not only our hearts in Christian love, but by other ties born of sweet association. A strong feeling of friendship and fellowship was experienced by all. Elder A. S. Fisher offered the prayer, thanking God for the gathering and for his many blessings to us, and also asking his blessing upon the bounties of life prepared for us. We then proceeded to do justice to the three-course dinner.

During the banquet hour Russell Wood favored us with a solo, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Russell is studying under Professor Hyde. The professor has just recently become acquainted with our doctrine, and is intensely interested. Next we were favored by a duet by Brother F. F. Jackson and Ben Gerdes. As toastmaster, Brother Kress called on each one present for a talk. Brother Guy M. Haynes talked along the line of responsibility; Sister Fisher followed with a talk on the Department of Women and cooperation. She stated that it was time the priesthood realized the fact that the Department of Women was a strong arm of the church and that there should be cooperation between this department and the priesthood. Then Brother Herbert Hinds addressed the gathering on priesthood. His talk is summed up in the following words: God has order and cooperation in the kingdom of heaven. These two conditions are necessary, or all is chaos. Man is lost without priesthood. Brother Edward Toper in his speech testified of the fact that he is satisfied God called him into the priesthood. Brother Ed thinks we have some good cooks (we think so too, Ed.), and thanks were extended to the sisters who prepared the banquet, Sisters Pearl Jackson, Emma Tally, Effie and Hazel Nichols. Brother Fisher's contribution was a brief reminiscence of boyhood days and the part that women, his mother, a Sunday school teacher, and his wife have played in his life. Brother Fisher is rich in experiences of life and tells them with a view to helping others. Brother Woods stated that it is impossible to cooperate with any movement unless one is in harmony with it. One of his remarks was that we should all pull. Some of us have to push, and sometimes we can push more than we can pull.

ing that he came unprepared to talk, that he was told all he needed to bring was his wife. He asked all to cooperate with him in the many new duties and responsibilities which have been placed upon him. Sister Hall told of early days in organizing the branch, eight years ago, and said that it was the cooperation in the beginning that has been the stepping-stone to our success now. Brother Bert Miller responded to the call by saying that the priesthood must be endowed with the Spirit in order to be true shepherds of the people, adding that it is the duty of the priesthood to cooperate with the young people. Sister Esther Purinton stated she was ambitious for work, but home duties tied her down, and that it was lack of study that was hindering her. We feel her work is just opening up. Brother Bert Purinton gave a short talk along the line of cooperation. We feel this get-together meeting has been a real source of comfort and strength to us.

Our sacramental service January 2 was a spiritual feast, at which time two of our worthy brethren were called to labor in the priesthood. Brother F. F. Jackson was called to the office of priest, and Brother Harrison Rhyan to that of teacher. This last-named office makes our official family complete, as we have had no teacher here. Both brothers were ordained at this service. In the evening Brother C. A. Kress, our pastor, gave us an inspiring sermon, which was profitable to all.

Brother Arthur H. Mills, of Independence, secretary of the general Department of Music, was with us on December 29 and 30, giving us much needed help and advice along musical lines. He also assisted in the selection of a choir, and this department, under the direction of Sister Hazel Jackson, should develop into a power in the cause of Christ.

On January 5 we had the pleasure of listening to Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, who gave us a very inspiring sermon, reading for his scripture lesson 2 Corinthians 6:10-18, and taking for his text 2 Thessalonians 2:8. It would be impossible to tell all the good things that came to us as we listened to Brother Ellis. He stated that the real beauty, glory, and radiance of this latter-day work is that which is reflected from the lives of the Saints. And truly one can see God reflected from the face of Brother Ellis, and we were brought to a realization of what it means to walk close to God. Surely our brother has walked close by the side of the Master, for his words of exhortation were like a blessing to us. As he goes on his mission, we wish him Godspeed; our prayer is that his kindly words of comfort and the personal contact he may bring to the Saints may be the source of blessing and strength to the recipients.

Brother Kress, who has been at Independence, Missouri, for the past two weeks, will be with us again next Sunday. We are looking forward to some more of the good things of the gospel, for he comes directly from the ministerial conference in Zion.

The work here is forward. Yet we still have to work by faith a little while. Inventory and tithing reports are coming in, and most of the Saints are anxious to do God's will in all things. May God help us to consecrate our all to the cause.

Melcher, Iowa

January 16.—Today, with the help of Brother Robinson and Brother Castings, our district superintendent, from Des Moines, we organized the Melcher Sunday school. We wish to study the adult quarterly from the beginning series, and we are sending only a small order, for we are having to begin in a small way financially. We are going to work hard in order that our work will be a success and that we may accomplish our hopes. We want to have a part in the great harvest.

"Never be discouraged, patiently endure,
God doth often test us—trials make us pure;
Soon will come the reaping, then with joy we'll sing,
Praise the Lord of harvest, praise the heavenly king."

ROY CACKLER.

Boyne City, Michigan

Many HERALD readers may enjoy reading a few items concerning the work of the church in Boyne City Branch. Since the holidays a greater interest is being shown in all the activities of the branch.

The election of officers of the various departments resulted in the selection of these leaders: Pastor, C. O. Howe; Sunday school superintendent, Sister Goldier Whiteford; president of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Brother Arthur Clute; leader of the Department of Women, Sister Alice Jubenville. Each officer has a capable assistant. We truly feel the work is progressing and hope to see it continue.

Many of the younger people have safely passed through a quarantine period, and we are grateful that there were no fatalities. We regret to report the death of little Myron, six-year-old son of Brother Cecil, December 5. The little fellow had lived with Sister Helen Clute and family for over a year and a half and is greatly missed by them. While in Cadillac during the quarantine of Sister Clute and Victor, who were ill with scarlet fever, Myron slipped on the ice, falling and striking his head on a cement step. This caused his death from concussion of the brain five days later. The body was brought to the home of Sister Clute, who had been released from quarantine only two days, and the funeral was held from the church, being conducted by Elder H. C. McKinnon, of East Jordan. Interment in Maple Lawn Cemetery.

During the holidays Brother Arthur Clute gave the young people the rare treat of a sleigh ride. On January 4, at nine o'clock in the morning, he loaded his sleigh with children and drove to Boyne Falls, returning at noon to the Saints' Hall, where Sister Ivah Hutton and Sister Verna Hartnell, assisted by some Oriole Girls, had prepared a nice, hot dinner. After dinner the beginners went for a nice trip. Arthur very kindly let each child have his turn at driving the "Sparkies," and we assure you they were not at all slow about it. At half past five a larger sleigh was filled with the older children, and "over the river and through the woods" to East Jordan they went, where they were royally entertained. For several weeks we feared Brother Arthur was going to leave us, but our anxiety is over, as he has gone into business where he may remain at home.

Next Friday evening the Sunday school will entertain at the Saints' Hall, and all are eagerly looking forward to one of our jolly times. The teachers are "racking their brains" to provide games, contests, etc., appropriate for such an occasion.

Our pastor, Elder C. O. Howe, is always on the alert and endeavoring to do his part, realizing that he needs the members beside him to encourage and assist in carrying the burden. He delivered an excellent sermon Sunday evening, January 16, using a chart, and speaking on the principles, organization, gifts, and secondary principles of the doctrine and church. We regret that every seat was not filled.

Sister Zina Clute visited the family of Elder Allen Schreur, of Gaylord, over the week-end and found them all well except Brother Schreur, who recently suffered an attack of flu and was just too busy to stop and care for the malady.

Classis Numerus Duo (Class Number Two), which was organized in August of 1926, met with Sister J. A. Hartnell last week. A good crowd attended, and the afternoon was spent in studying the adult doctrinal course, sewing, and visiting. A delightful lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter, Adah. This class holds its regular meeting the last Friday of each month. It is the only organized class in this branch. A special meeting will be held at the home of Sister Robert Watson next Tuesday afternoon, January 25.

Brother Vern Whiteford was granted permission to use one of the upper rooms in our hall for the boys in his Sunday school class. We do not know just what Brother Whiteford has in mind to do with these laddies, but are sure there will be something doing every minute, as they are a bunch of live wires, but Vern can manage them. Sister Whiteford is a supply teacher in Boyne City public schools.

Sister Ella Clute went to Detroit recently, where she expects to be employed. We miss Ella's smiles and reconcile ourselves with the fact that our young sister will do her part in whatever field she may labor.

Brother Floyd Alldread, who teaches in the public school at Clare, Michigan, spent the holiday season with his mother, Sister Ada Alldread, and brother Carlyle, in this city.

Brother J. A. Hartnell left this week to enter into his duties as an inspector for the Grand Trunk Railway. His family will remain here, as his work calls him to many different localities.

Let us take an imaginary trip out to beautiful Park of the Pines, our district reunion ground, and view the new commodious dining hall, kitchen, and missionary quarters, which have been erected since the 1926 reunion in August. More work will be done about the park when warm weather again comes to us.

Brother and Sister John Paulson, who are now living in Flint, spent the holidays with their son, Kenneth, and many friends here. We enjoyed having these worthy people again with us, and as the brother is a member of the priesthood, we had the pleasure of seeing Jack-in-the-pulpit.

SISTER VERNA M. HARTNELL.

Minneapolis Branch

The old year in Minneapolis closed with a busy rush of activities, and now the new year is well under way. The Christmas Eve program was much enjoyed by all, and numbers were presented by both young and old. The distribution of gifts and treats by Santa Claus at the close was delightful to the children especially, but the adults also enjoyed the fruit, nuts, and candy provided. Sister Sadie Johnson was in charge of the program.

On Monday, December 27, the annual business meeting was held, and the following officers were elected: Ray Whiting, pastor; Charles Johnson, counselor; Leon Judson, secretary and publicity agent; Carroll Olson, correspondent; Cora Levorson, member of the Library Board; DeWayne Fisher, Sunday school superintendent; Walter W. Tutty, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Sister Charles Lundeen, head of the Department of Women; and Grace Tutty, as leader of the junior church. The meeting was characterized by love, peace, and harmony. The present finance committee, under the chairmanship of Leslie DeLapp, was sustained.

At the Sunday school business meeting held the following Sunday, the various offices in this department were filled by several capable workers, as follows: Assistant superintendent, Lloyd Anderson; secretary, Ruth Calhoun; head of the primary department, Ardyce DeLapp; organist, Loleta Johnson; chorister, Sister Charles Johnson; and member of the library board, Alta Olson.

At the regular meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression the following were elected: First assistant, Alice Light; second assistant, Mr. Hoadley; secretary, Irene Tutty; member of the library board, Grace Tutty; organist, Loleta Johnson; and chorister, Ray Whiting.

The Department of Women also selected several officers to assist Sister Charles Lundeen as head: secretary, Ruth Lundeen; friendly visitor, Sister W. W. Tutty; young women's leader, Lois Harris; sewing department head, Sister O'Hara; and teacher, Lois Harris.

With a complete corps of officers throughout, the branch is ready to move forward into the new year and accomplish great things. This spirit was well exemplified in the sacramental service on January 2. The meeting was characterized by unity, cooperation, and active participation. The theme had to do with the prospects for the new year, and many declared it their purpose to forget the discouragements of the past and press on into the future for the great prize which is in store for those who run the race of life successfully.

Pastor Whiting has just returned from a ten days' institute at Independence, and in his sermon last Sunday morning showed he was thoroughly imbued with the ideas he had received there.

While he was gone, a couple of unexpected visitors stopped off at Minneapolis, Apostle Ellis and Elder Page. Brother Ellis preached a very edifying sermon in the morning, and in the evening showed his slides of the South Sea Islands, and the pictures and explanation were much enjoyed. Brother Page gave a short talk to the Saints at Religio.

The young people are meeting every Sunday morning at 8.45 for a short prayer meeting, and the first two meetings of the year have been blessed greatly. Brother Vernon Lundeen is in charge of this phase of the work.

The junior church under Grace Tutty is also doing very well, and the children are very much interested in the Sunday morning meetings. This is an important field for religious education, and the prospects for constructive development under enthusiastic leadership are encouraging.

Idle Words

I went to call on a friend a few days ago. As I stepped into the room, I saw there were other callers. They seemed to be enjoying themselves, chatting and laughing over the tea. I expected to have a pleasant afternoon, as one lady is a Sunday-school teacher, another an author and writer, and a third a successful mother who has reared a family to be proud of. I am an art student, and the tea was perfect. What a good combination.

But soon I noticed that they were not talking of art, books, religion, or even motherhood. Instead they were talking about this neighbor and that one, calling attention to the defects, sins, or peculiarities of each with whom they daily came in contact. They meant no harm. But God says, "Love thy neighbor as thyself." Do we tell of our sins or mistakes, thereby endangering our reputation? No. Then why do that of a brother or sister, a neighbor or friend?

On my way home, I wondered how many wrecked lives have been caused by idle words.

It has been my privilege to have had the confidence of many young people. About three years ago, a boy of fifteen came to me to bid me good-by, saying he was going away where no one knew him to start out for himself. This boy had no father, and his mother was in the hospital. After talking to the boy, I found that idle tongues had been at work, and had almost wrecked his life. He felt that no one wanted or trusted him, and things were being told about him that were untrue. I said to him, "No; you are not going away. You are going to stay here and fight for your reputation, and show these people that the things which have been said are not true."

It took a long time for him to regain his courage, but he won. He is an honest, trustworthy lad, and I am confident that he will make a good man. But think what would have happened had he gone away feeling as he did, and who would have been to blame?

I also recall others, one a girl of seventeen who was making her living the "easiest way." She roomed next door to my house. She used to come to the fence and play with my baby. I often wondered about her, she seemed so pretty, young, and sweet. One day she told me her story.

Her father and mother had separated. Both married again, and neither stepmother nor stepfather wanted her. So she began going around anywhere just to get away from home. Soon neighbors began to talk, saying she was wild and no good. Finally, she left the little town and came to the city, where no one knew her. She tried to get work, but she had not been trained for any special thing, so she could not make a living. Poor little girl! I believe that those who drove her away will have to answer for her ruined life at the great judgment.

Brothers and sisters, let us watch ourselves and be careful of what we say about our neighbors, especially the young ones. Let us try to help the young instead of tearing down their reputations. We Latter Day Saints have much to do if we are going to build Zion. And if we do our duty, we will have no time for idle words.

GLADYS MYERS.

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, 3418 Smart Avenue.

Pleasantview Branch

TRYON, NEBRASKA, January 15.—January 2 was rally day here. Saints from North Platte Branch were present, and some came from thirty miles west of here. The program of the day was as follows: Sunday school at ten in the morning, sacrament and prayer meeting at eleven; then a family dinner was served. At two in the afternoon Priest Charles Bellow called the meeting to order and introduced the speaker, W. L. Sivits, priest of North Platte. These sermons are appreciated by the Saints. In fact, every bit of these meetings is appreciated, and it is hoped that they will be continued. Much strength is received from the association of the Saints of these two branches.

Officers of the Department of Women are planning to get the department into action. The young are very desirous of helping them, and we hope great things will be accomplished.

At present the publicity work is very slow; yet there are prospects for more work to come. The home department work is still moving, and the earnestness of the pupils gladdens the heart of the superintendent. Their application repays every effort.

The Saints were made sad by the death of an aged brother January 4.

Pleasures in Life of Eighty-Year-Old Saint

Brother William H. Gray, of Mitchell, Ontario, sends the HERALD the following clipping taken from the Mitchell Advocate of January 13.

"Mr. William H. Gray, of the South Ward, had a very pleasant surprise on Wednesday, January 5, when his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, including Mrs. Hodgson and two sons Clifford and Aslon, of London; Mrs. George G. Levy, of Simcoe; R. W. and Alma Gray, of Hibbert; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sadler and son William, of Dublin; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Moore and daughter Gladys, Wartburg; and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Hodgson, of Science Hill, arrived. They came to banquet him, bringing with them roast goose, plum pudding, birthday cake, and many other good things which go to make a real feast. They came to celebrate Mr. W. H. Gray's eightieth birthday. After partaking of the bounteous repast, Mr. Gray was presented with an address and a purse of money. Mr. Gray replied in a very feeling manner, thanking them all for their kindness and many good wishes showered upon him and for the many happy returns of the day."

Brother Gray also writes: "Being with my sons, R. W. and Alma Gray, on Sunday, January 2, forty miles north of London, Ontario, it was wonderful how distinctly and clearly we heard the musical program, which included singing by the choir broadcast from K L D S. I am thankful that I have lived to hear the songs sung and music played in Zion, the prospective city of God. I enjoyed reading the December number of Autumn Leaves and seeing the pictures of so many old-time workers. Especially was I interested in the record of the works of Bishop E. L. Kelley and the editorial by President Elbert Smith, whom I met at a Kirtland reunion about fifteen years ago."

New London, Connecticut

January 19.—Christmas was celebrated here by an entertainment of interest. The program consisted of recitations, dialogue, tableau, special singing, and congregational singing. Miss Antis, a talented Jewish girl, favored us with several violin solos. She has volunteered her services in this capacity for any time the chorister desires. Brother Charles Alves was a most genial and friendly Santa Claus. Gifts, candy, and fruit were given all children present.

The Department of Women has been active of late. They served a meat pie supper and had a fancy goods sale in the basement of the church recently. Thirty dollars was cleared.

Officers for the year 1927 were elected at the last business meeting of the old year. Elder Alma T. Whipple was elected branch president; Sister Florence F. Whipple, secretary; Deacon Charles Alves, treasurer; Hiram I. Simmons, chorister; Sister Pearl Blastow, pianist; Sister Dora M. Whipple, publicity agent. Sister Rose Tourtellot is the president of the Department of Women.

The musical program of the branch has become of much interest. Every Sunday of the new year at the preaching service a male quartet has sung. Sister Slater, who is chorister of the Sunday school, has also put forth a special effort to teach new hymns.

Elder Herman A. Chelline has just concluded a series of missionary services here. Due to several snowstorms and other bad weather conditions, his work was put to a bit of disadvantage. However, the meetings were attended by a goodly number. The sermons were of an unusually instructive and interesting order. The good labors he has been enabled to perform here will never be forgotten. The Saints are always pleased to welcome Brother Chelline.

Prayer services are well attended and are of a fine spiritual nature. A special prayer service was held in behalf of Sister Christine Crandall, who is very ill. She seems quite a bit improved.

Mallard, Iowa

January 18.—Missionary W. A. Smith was with us for two weeks, and held meetings every night. He taught us many lessons and gave us new light, and a stronger desire to live close to the laws and commands of our Master. The weather was unfavorable for him to make a longer stay at this time. There were a few nonmembers at some of these services.

On December 12 we held an all-day meeting. Brother Smith was with us and spoke three times during the day. There was a good attendance, nine visitors being present. We received much good instruction from these services.

Our annual business meeting was held on December 17, and it was voted to have all officers hold office for another year. All have done well, the best they could, and it is our desire to contribute our best effort in assisting them in moving forward in this great work. We know there is a great work for us to do, and our prayer is that we may each receive light in our different duties, that we may be able to perform that which has been asked of us and intrusted to our care.

We had a very nice Christmas program, consisting of music, readings, and Christmas stories.

Sunday, January 9, was a very stormy day. There were only nine at Sunday school, and they were forced to gather around the stove to keep warm while the lesson was heard. We studied about the sower and the seed, and the few present enjoyed the lesson, finding much food for thought in it. We rejoice to know that God's Spirit will be with us, even though we are few in number.

Hears From Zion in West Virginia

While in Fairmount I had a unique experience. While listening to the radio, I heard you, Brother Elbert, preach on the first principles of the gospel. Your voice sounded as natural as though I was in the same room with you, and yet I was a thousand miles away. This wireless telegraphy to me is wonderful. It is past my comprehension. When I see these wonderful things that are now taking place, I am impressed with the words of our divine Master, when he said, "Behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder," and he surely is doing it.—From letter of Thomas Newton, Clarksburg, West Virginia, January 11, 1927, to the First Presidency.

Woodbine, Iowa

January 18.—Department heads elected for the year are: Pastor, Fred A. Fry; Sunday school superintendent, George Young; superintendent of Religio, Dick Young; leader of the Department of Women, Floy Holcomb. We are hoping that each department has so builded that the work of the year just finished may be used as a stepping-stone to broader and greater achievements for good in this present year.

On January 9 Brother Joseph Lane gave us one of his whole-hearted, encouraging sermons. We always welcome Brother Lane with his zeal and good cheer. We are glad to report that Brother and Sister E. A. Rosenberger have recently moved from their farm into town. We appreciate their help and association.

A baby girl has come to reside at and bless the home of Brother and Sister Dick Young.

On December 20 more than forty Saints and friends gathered at the church to help Brother and Sister William Butterworth celebrate their golden wedding. Arrangements for this were quietly made, and Brother and Sister Butterworth were not apprised of the plans until evening, when they were called up over the phone and asked to meet with the people at the church.

After singing, Joseph Lane offered an earnest prayer. Brother Fred A. Fry gave an address, and this was followed by the reading of a poem fitted to the occasion and composed by their son, Eugene. They then joined hands and renewed their covenant made fifty years ago, Brother Fry officiating. He also made the presentation speech when gold coins were given these good people.

After congratulations, the crowd betook itself to the basement, where an oyster supper, provided by the children of Brother and Sister Butterworth, was thoroughly enjoyed.

This occasion, and at this time, was rather unique, inasmuch as, because of almost impassable roads, the same mode of travel was resorted to as was used half a century ago when Brother Butterworth took his bride to their new home in a lumber wagon drawn by the faithful horse team. In our day we may boast of progressiveness and up-to-date-ness, but at times modern wisdom and invention are compelled to step behind the curtain and invite the less modern into the limelight.

Graceland Chats

A Way We Have at Graceland

Graceland's happy faculty of developing a philosophy of life in her students is functioning to the nth degree at the present time—such is the opinion of Dean Jones. His comment is: "The happy, progressive wholesomeness and the attitude of mutual understanding has been more manifest in the last two weeks than ever before."

How would we like to have student government in this institution? True it is that student government functions well in places, and often furnishes development for the participants, but here in this institution we have the finest student government ever formed. Student government here formed itself from the very wholesome attitude spoken of by Dean Jones. Instead of getting together and agreeing to be responsible for their individual and group conduct; and instituting an involved and floundering machine to help them out (and which in truth stifles them), the Graceland students almost without exception have taken it upon themselves individually to be responsible for their conduct toward the community of students in which they live. How about it? Isn't that the truest and finest type of government ever instituted among a group of students?

Do you know that nine out of every ten students going into the Dean's office go of their own accord to talk over their philosophy of life and its specific problems—only one out of the ten is called in; and often that is only to call attention to things not criminal, but neglected.—Graceland Record.

Graceland's Prayer Meetings

One of the Meccas in the life of Graceland students is the prayer meetings held in the chapel on Wednesday evenings. With Uncle Roy in charge, always suggesting a theme that is practical, Graceland's students find a stepping-stone to higher ground. At times the meetings are of quiet meditation, with but a few testimonies; at other times it is most active. It is here that we see a side of each other's lives that we do not see in the walks and talks about the campus. We see our fellow student in the light of his ideals and aspirations, and it is here that we learn to really know each other. Our vision and our ideals are clarified, and we enter into the remaining work of the week with renewed vigor. It is an oasis in our college experience.

On the third Wednesday evening of each month, we go to union prayer meeting at the Brick Church. There we can mingle with the townspeople, who always receive us with the brotherly and sisterly spirit that is characteristic of Lamonis Saints. Yes, we enjoy these prayer meetings, because they are a part of the development of the well-rounded life which Graceland offers to her students. As some one has expressed, "One is never really a part of Graceland unless he attends the prayer service."
MADELINE CLARK.

President G. N. Briggs attended the program of the thirteenth annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges held at Chicago, January 12 to 15. The theme of the meeting was "The effective college."

Basket Ball

Basket ball ranks high among the topics discussed on Graceland's campus at the present time. Of course there are the regular intersociety games, with fast and furious competition for first place. But of most importance are our college games. You will remember that at the football banquet, the Graceland Varsity men were dubbed "Yellow Jackets." Thus far they have lived up to their name by gathering honey in the form of the basketball, flying from one end of the floor to the other with it, and placing it through the iron hoop into the honeycomb basket. Graceland's record last year in basketball was far from good, but if she maintains the standard with which she has started this year, she will have a quite different reputation by the end of the season. Six times this year Graceland has met other teams, and six times she has stung them, winning by a wide margin each time.

Expectations

Talk! chatter! buzz! and all other synonyms for wasted vocal energy; but what is it all about? You would know before spending many minutes on the campus.

It was time to study "trig," and being very ambitious—ahem—I was making my way in the general direction of the library. On entering the hall of the Administration Building, habit made me stop at the bulletin board to look at the announcements, but as usual not to see them. As can be expected these days, there stood two young ladies earnestly discussing proposed plans for the new dormitory which is to be built.

"Well, I think a—"

"Look, though, Fern; what we want is the type of dorm that will be the best for the girls."

"Yes, yes; that's just what we want," broke in Harry, as he crossed the hall toward them, carrying the characteristic mood of jolly sarcasm. "Now you girls are doing fine; you'll soon receive your degree in dormitory building."

"Oh, what do you know about it?" retorted the somewhat serious Fern.

"'Bout the same as you. What do you know?" Harry returned.

"Well, I know they'll have to make the stairways larger than they are in Marietta. Why, they are so narrow I can hardly get up," reported the other girl.

"Ha! Ha! I guess you scored one that time," chuckled Harry, leaving.

I can not stop to listen to all the dormitory discussions, or nothing else would ever be accomplished. I went into the library and sat down in my accustomed place and made way to study my "trig." Gertrude and Verna were sitting across the table from me, busily arguing over some drawings they had made of their proposed new dormitory. After making about five attempts to settle down to study, I decided my location lacked the essential principles which go to encourage study, so I hunted a more quiet place to lose myself in concentration.

On finishing my "trig" preparation, I set to work on the required theme on the new dormitory. The subject of the new dormitory is so common and popular that a person hardly knows how to write it and still be somewhat original. Yes; everyone likes to think himself pregnant with originalities, although he is not. I conceived the idea that I might get an inspiration for an original thought by visiting the determined location of the new dormitory.

I stood south of Briggs Hall by the tennis courts and looked at the spot of ground lying just west of them. There lay the ground as nature had treated it, with a thin layer of snow. In January, 1928, if I should stand at this same spot, I hope I shall not be looking at the snow-covered ground, but at a large dormitory made of brick, concrete, and reinforced steel, a fireproof building, making the third unit of Graceland's wonderful building program.

EARL T. HIGDON.

The "Country Club"

While everyone is busy wondering whether we shall have a new dormitory, what kind it will be, or how soon, they seem to overlook the new dormitory that we do have. There can be no four-hour exodus unless there is some place to which one may make his exodus. So when the fairer sex invaded Marietta Hall, there departed therefrom twenty-six distraught males. Part of them went to Herald Hall, but twelve landed in the once so-called "pest house." Now this house isn't what it sounds as though it might be. It is a clever little six-room edifice, with everything modern except heat, water, and sewer. It is located within easy walking distance of the college and is furnished with beds, study tables, dressers, wash room, stoves, and twelve irresponsible homo sapiens, who can debate on any subject from "Resolved, that it is better to make a fire than to freeze to death and take chances on getting heated apartments in the hereafter," to "Resolved, that life should be ninety per cent sleep."

In short, the "Country Club" ("Pest House" being an erroneous title) is, or will be in the spring, the best-situated, most congenial, last adopted, and least appreciated dormitory now connected with Graceland College. JAMES BRIGGS.

Academy Extemporaneous Speaking Contest

The academy students held their annual extemporaneous speaking contest last Friday at the regular chapel hour. The contest was interesting and well received by the student body. It was very representative of the Academy Department, fifteen students being entered in the preliminaries. The speeches were well constructed in both thought and preparation, besides being well given.

First place was won by George Njeim, of Syria, his subject being "Graceland's new dormitory." Besides having his subject well in mind, his material was well organized and his delivery was excellent. Second place was won by Hilard Cox. His subject was "The youthful criminal." This speech drew many favorable comments and was well appreciated by his audience. Ruth Allison took third place with the topic, "Graceland's new dormitory."

Others entering the contest were Fred Shepherd, Lela DeBar, and Frank Parsons. Interest has been centered on these speakers who for the last few days have worked hard to make a place for themselves.

This is only one of the many forensic contests to be held by the Academy Department during the year. The results were very pleasing and show the talent that may be wrought out in future contests. HALE DAVIS.

Local Priesthood Appreciated

DENNISON, IOWA, January 20.—We have passed into the new year hopefully and with a few changes in the personnel of our official corps of workers, and we are glad to report that the work is moving onward under the leadership of our new branch president, Brother Warren Oliver. We feel that gratitude and praise are due our former president, Brother Lloyd Winans, for his faithful service and watchcare as a shepherd over the sheep of this fold. We are also glad that our lot has been again cast with our brothers and sisters of this branch, as we have been made to rejoice with them during the past year in many spiritual meetings which have been as food to our souls.

Since the beginning of the new year, the local priesthood have been occupying the pulpit, having taken up many good subjects which were beneficial and educational to their interested listeners. This band of earnest brothers is to be commended for willingness to occupy whenever called upon.

Brother Jack Allen was reelected Sunday school superintendent for the ensuing year. Much credit is due Brother Allen, as he has been a most efficient and successful worker in this department, devoting a faithful service to it during the last two years. Despite the discouraging features which he has had to encounter, he has bravely pressed on, and with the help of a good program committee and the ready response of the pupils of the school, has been able to enjoy the fruits of his labors. One of his rewards, as well as the reward of others, was had in listening to a well-prepared program on Christmas Eve. At the close of the exercises, Brother Baber acted as Santa Claus, presenting the children with treats.

The Department of Women has again organized, retaining their president, Sister Min McCord. Some few changes have been made in this department, but all are willing to do their part for the cause in which we are all enlisted.

There has been some sickness throughout the branch, due to colds, but we are happy to report that all are improving and that our aged sister, Grandma Montgomery, is enjoying her usual good health.

Sister Ward Johnson was called upon to mourn the loss of her mother, whose death came very unexpectedly before Christmas. This cast a shadow of grief over our sister during the holidays, and we extend our deepest sympathy to her over the loss of a faithful mother.

Missionary Enjoying His Work

(From a letter to President Smith.)

Your letter containing Christmas greetings reached me yesterday. I appreciated it very much, for it breathes the spirit of love and brotherhood.

I am closing the twenty-seventh year in the missionary field, and I can truly say that the last two years have brought greater joy and peace of mind in the presentation of the angel's message than any two years of my experience. Many times in this last year while preaching the gospel to the people, it was a common thing to see even non-members in tears.

They were short of help at the young people's convention which was held December 17, 18, 19, at Spokane, and by the invitation of those in charge I went over and gave them a little help. Just returned Tuesday. The meetings were well attended, and a good spirit characterized every meeting.

I pray the good Lord to bless you in all your labors of love. GEORGE W. THORBURN.

Elder R. C. Russell Writes of Healing of Daughter

I am very thankful to be able to say God has heard and answered the many prayers which have so graciously been offered in behalf of my daughter Pearl, Mrs. A. C. Harneden, who was taken to the hospital in this city on Christmas Day with a very severe case of rheumatic fever, with very dangerous heart complications, out of which very, very few ever come. Her immediate attendant, Doctor O'Brien and several specialists, had gone as far as human skill could go Saturday night, and after five attempts had failed to draw the fluid from around her heart, which was smothering her, and they said unless God intervened she would almost certainly pass out before morning. But Elder John Taylor had come down from Grand Valley twice, and Bishop McLean from Toronto, while the branch president, Elder Charles Hannah, came often and administered, and the Saints here and in many other places were constantly upholding her in their prayers, and when the specialist examined her on Sunday he declared, "The fluid has cleared away." Since this time she has quite steadily improved, until this morning her physician said, "After today the day nurse may be dispensed with."

Word from the Presidency's office tells us of the special priesthood prayer meeting, and others on her behalf, while many telegrams and letters tell of the rally to her rescue in like manner throughout the church where they received the S. O. S. call, and immediately they appealed to the Head Physician with the results as stated above. Again we thank you sincerely.

The ministry and other officials of the Saint Joseph Hospital, in which she is, were offering prayers in her behalf, for which we kindly thank them.

Under such conditions as the present, Latter Day Saints can surely appreciate the gospel, not only as the power to save, in a spiritual sense, but to save our loved ones to us when all else has failed.

R. C. RUSSELL.

Independence

Zion Young in Revival and Convention

The revival of the young people of Zion which began Sunday morning, January 16, with a masterful sermon, "Going up to the mountain," by President Floyd M. McDowell, has surpassed the expectations of all. Though the weather throughout the week was cold and sleety, with a deep snow on the ground, there was excellent attendance, noticeably increasing each evening. Young of all sizes and ages have crowded into the building, and yes, the older ones, too. They are interested.

This is the third annual series of young people's meetings conducted in Independence. Brother Roy S. Budd was the speaker each night, beginning on Sunday with the subject, "The church's invitation to youth." Monday night brought many truths to young and old under the theme, "Youth's way of discovering God;" on Tuesday night came "God's way of adjusting youth to his plan." "God's way of guiding youth," was set forth with power and earnestness on Wednesday night. Thursday evening brought "Be sure your sins will find you out," to the waiting congregation; and "True and false notions of happiness," differentiating between pleasure and happiness, enlightened a large crowd on Friday night.

Elder John F. Sheehy was in charge of the half hour song service which preceded the sermon each evening, and those who know Brother Sheehy know that he can get a ready response of song from any audience. Each night some young worker or officer introduced the speaker, and a young member of the priesthood gave the invocation and benediction. The young men of the districts willingly took their turn in acting as ushers, and everyone was glad to help in any way he could.

Special music was furnished by the orchestras, bands, choirs, quartets, trios, and soloists of Zion, and all are grateful for their splendid service. On Monday evening the Stone Church Orchestra was present and assisted in the song service as well as rendering several numbers. On the following evening the ladies' quartet from Second Church composed of Mary Field, Mrs. Clara Curtis, Mrs. Frank Good, and Gladys Good, sang two pleasing numbers. The Enoch Hill Choir and male chorus occupied the choir seats Wednesday night and by song contributed to the happiness and hope of the evening. About seventy-five Temple Builders from the different districts of Independence were seated in the choir loft on Thursday evening, and the Oriole and Bluebird girls with their monitors enjoyed a like privilege on Friday night. Each of these choruses sang special songs. Also on this night the Walnut Park Band, largely composed of young boys and girls, under the direction of Brothers Orlando Nace and E. E. Moorman, rendered two pleasing numbers.

Interesting moments which will be given a sacred spot in the memory of many occurred frequently. One of these happened at the close of the Monday meeting. As the organist had gone, Brother Sheehy requested some one who could play to come forward. Miss Melva Ward, a young Saint recently come to Zion from Centralia, Washington, responded, and the audience feelingly sang, "Nearer, my God, to thee." When two verses were finished, Brother Sheehy requested all to engage in silent prayer for the success of these meetings and the good of the young people, while the pianist softly played through verse and chorus. We feel this prayer was certainly and powerfully answered. On the following night Sister Lida Budd Robertson, a sister of Brother Budd, read the poem, "The land of beginning again." Once the congregation was asked to rise and engage in silent prayer for a young sister who is in training at the Sanitarium. She is far from her home and very ill. On another night, while the congregation sang "America," two uniformed Temple Builders removed a large American flag from a miniature Kirtland Temple when they came to the words, "Thy woods and templed hills." The songs of the Oriole Girls and Bluebirds under the direction of Sister Ada Fallon, of Walnut Park District, were sweet and appealing. Brother Sheehy brought to the minds of his singers the purpose for which we are all come to Zion, proving that we have indeed come "from all States (lands), from the isles of the ocean."

During these meetings a definite step has been taken toward the organization of the young people of the center place into a working unit with initiative, alertness, zeal, faith, and consecration. On Monday evening following the sermon, the young people of the various districts met with their districts and chose one to represent them from names submitted by their pastor. Those chosen were: District 1A, H. G. Barto; District 1B, Roland Flanders; District 2, Vera Redfield; District 3, Ammon Badder; District 4, Harold Hattey; District 5, Glen Davies; District 6, Lillian Williams; District 7, Wayne Smith; District 8, Helen Louise Hulmes; District 9, F. H. Cunningham; District 10, Winogene Smith; District 11, Joseph C. Friend; District 12, Earl Sherman; Group 41, Ronald Sherman.

On Thursday evening representatives were chosen for each group, and are: Group 1, Mrs. Catherine Dooley; Group 2, Wilma Criley; Group 3, Leslie Sellers; Group 4, A. B. Taylor; Group 5, Earl Curtis; Group 6, Harold Morgan; Group 7, Kathryn Haberlein; Group 8, Clarence Erickson; Group 9, Evelyn Barto; Group 10 North, Bruce Gold; Group 10 South, Clark Woodford; Group 11, Paul Gould; Group 12, Lyle McFarlane; Group 13, Mrs. James Willoughby; Group 14, Alice Chappelow; Group 15, Lora Weir; Group 16, Mark Diefendorf; Group 17, Palace R. McPherson; Group 18, Carol Gillen; Group 19, Virgil A. Julian; Group 20, Zeno Booker; Group 21, Mollie Cochran; Group 22, Gomer Cool; Group 23, Orvar Svenson; Group 24, Esther Scott Hubbard; Group 25, Ruby E. Inman; Group 26, Mrs. Mabel Sellars; Group 27 North, Lila Green; Group 27 South, Ada Fallon; Group 28, Agnes Adams; Group 29, Armand Grenawalt; Group 30, Forest Ballinger; Group 31, Agnes Edmunds; Group 32, Minnie May Chronister; Group 33 North, John Quick; Group 33 South, Fernoy Alexander; Group 34, Angus Williamson; Group 35, Alice Baker; Group 36, Lee R. Moore; Group 37, Mrs. Sarah Katschowsky; Group 38, Laura Teeter Thomas; Group 39, Roberta Collins; Group 40, Michael Friend; Group 41, Ronald Sherman.

All these are anxious and pledged to the work of serving God more efficiently, more faithfully, and more sincerely this year than ever before. They, with the help of their comrades and the older people, wish to raise the standard of Zion high, that all may see it as an ensign of peace of mind in a world of turmoil, as a hope for eternity, and an emblem of a Christlike life in a place where all will have their just wants and needs and enjoy happiness.

According to the schedule of the young people's convention, the young people assembled for a prayer and testimony meeting at eight o'clock Sunday morning. Brothers Floyd M. McDowell, F. Henry Edwards, M. T. Williams, and Zeno Booker occupied the stand and were in charge of the meeting. This was a happy meeting together of a large number of the young, and already results of the week's meetings were shown in the expression of earnest desires, ambitions, a greater determination to qualify for service, and a willingness to work as one toward the one great goal—Zion.

At the Sunday school hour, Sister Bernice Griffith was in charge of the music. Eleven hundred and sixty-three souls came out to participate in the lesson study, and six classes were perfect. A pleasing number was played by the orchestra, and the session drew to a close.

The program preceding the eleven o'clock sermon consisted of the hymn, "How firm a foundation," sung by the congregation, prayer by Brother A. B. Taylor, offertory by Robert Miller, and an anthem, "Glorious is thy name," by the K L D S Choir, directed by Professor Paul N. Craig.

Apostle R. S. Budd at this time delivered the last sermon of his series conducted throughout the week, speaking on the theme, "Lifting up the standard of the church." As a scripture reading, Brother Budd called attention to Isaiah 62: 1, 2, selecting verse 10 as a basic thought or text: "Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people." Webster says a standard is that which is established by an authority or sovereign power as a rule and measure by which others are to be adjusted. Jesus Christ came into the world to restate the standard of life, to lift it up again, and to demonstrate to the world that this standard was the only true one by which we may mold our lives. He came to test it. We have the opportunity to grow "unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." The speaker then made clear the distinction between the critic and the faultfinder; the former points out the mistake and offers a constructive suggestion by which the one who has made the mistake will be able to remedy it, but the latter only tears down, offering nothing as a substitute. Paul was a true critic, and he once criticized the Saints of Corinth for measuring themselves by themselves. We must take care that we do not fall into that same habit; society is today measuring itself by itself. We can not determine our stewardship by the stewardship of our brother. The two kinds of conscience were then mentioned and explained: there is the brittle conscience and the elastic, and the latter is the kind that will stretch to include any act no matter how questionable. Three characteristics are found in the truly religious: doing justice, loving mercy, and walking in humility before God. These bring about right thinking, true thinking, deep feeling, and wise acting. The standard of Jesus Christ causes one to have pleasure of mind rather than of body; it will give us a foundation for determining between pleasure and happiness. The world will treat us about like we treat the world. It is not the part of the youth to complain because other folks are not living up to the standard of life; youth must lift up the standard.

Brother Budd concluded his sermon with this charge to the young: "Go through the gate; cast up the highway; gather out the stones; and lift up the standard, that the world may know, that the Gentiles may see you are a righteous people and this righteousness will go forth to the ends of the earth; and it will be recognized by all people that you are thinking clearly, thinking deeply, walking humbly, and acting wisely."

"Be with me, Lord, where'er I go," was sung by the congregation, and Brother Charles Chapman gave the prayer of dismissal, after which the people were requested to be seated, and President Floyd McDowell in behalf of the young people of Zion presented Brother Budd a new Bible, and his family a ten-dollar gold piece. Brother John F. Sheehy, who has rendered faithful service in conducting congregational singing, also received a similar coin. After a grateful acceptance on the part of Brothers Budd and Sheehy, the crowd was dismissed.

A young people's mass meeting assembled in the main auditorium of the Stone Church at half past two in the afternoon. There was a good attendance, and the meeting was in charge of President Floyd M. McDowell. Three of the members of councils of thirteen and forty-four were present to speak in behalf of the young people. Brother Orvar Svenson, chairman of the council of forty-four, gave his attention to the topic, "What youth is thinking." Miss Lillian Williams, member of the council of thirteen, spoke on the subject, "What youth expects of the church." And Miss Helen Hulmes, also a member of the council of thirteen, was assigned the theme, "What youth offers to Zion." Pastor C. Ed. Miller then talked on the subject, "What Zion expects of youth," and with a few words showed the many, many things to be undertaken which are awaiting the youth. He expressed the hope that the youth will have a pioneer spirit in their work and go forward with initiative. "What the world expects of the youth of Zion," was the topic taken by Apostle F. Henry Edwards, representing the missionary arm of the church. He vividly told of the many noble sacrifices which have been cheerfully made by the youth of the world, and pictured how the youth of the church may make their sacrifice to the highest ideals, and give their lives to the interpretation of those things for which the church stands. President McDowell then spoke in explanation of the work, the intent, and purpose of these councils of young people, that the young may have a working organization which will parallel with the organization of the church existent in Zion, that the two thousand young people in the center place may get together and work within the departments. These councils will be under the executive direction of the Presidency, represented by Brother McDowell and may be called into council with the officers of the other departments of the church.

A motion of approval of this organization was made by Brother C. B. Hartshorn, superintendent of the Stone Church Sunday school, and seconded by Brother Francis Holm, president of the Stone Church Religio, and was unanimously approved by all present.

Musical numbers of this session were furnished by the high school quartet, composed of Miss Lois Cool, Miss Nida Vincent, Mr. Ronald Smith, and Mr. Gordon Kress. Two splendid organ numbers included in the three o'clock K L D S program were given by a visiting artist. A song, "Youth's prayer," written by Miss Bertha Constance, was sung for the first time by the Saints.

The program which followed the Religio was of high order and shows the talent being developed by some of our young people. A vocal duet was sung by Miss Thelma Vincent and Miss Elizabeth Okerlind. Little Miss Lois Jean Williams gave two readings, and Mr. Ewart Ragan contributed a well-executed piano solo.

At half past seven the song service in charge of Elder J. F. Sheehy began, and all heartily entered into this meeting. The eight o'clock hour opened with the singing of the hymn, "Yes, we trust the day is breaking," and how good it was to hear the sweet voices of hundreds of Saints—the house was filled to capacity—accompanied by organ and piano raised in praise and hope to the heavenly Father! The invocation was offered by Brother Silas Robertson, and an offering was played by Robert Miller. A baritone solo was sung by Donald Plum.

"Why longer go limping?" was the theme chosen by President Floyd M. McDowell to conclude the young people's revival and convention. "The great dramatic moments of history center around the making of choices," he stated in commencing his talk. What more dramatic moments can be imagined than when the Israelites came to the Red Sea with the Egyptian army behind them? They were frightened and weary and reproached Moses, and he sought God. There were experiences in the lives of Joshua, Elijah, and others equally dramatic. Elijah asked the children of Israel: "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him."

There have been various philosophies taught in the world, and some have been radical, but when Christ came he took the good out of all these philosophies and used them in the great, true philosophy of life. He told us that if we would live we must lose ourselves in order to save ourselves. We must seek first to build the kingdom of God and establish it in righteousness; this is the cause Christ brought to us. Every person has many choices to make. We may put them off and thus hope to postpone our decision, but in our very procrastination we choose. We are daily choosing; we can not escape it. We may avoid making up our mind, but we can not avoid making up our lives.

There are four classes of youth: Those who seek a good time, and need an increasing amount of pleasure to keep them from the disgust of self-discovery; those who take life as it comes, the followers; the purposeful youth who make leaders; and the radical minority, free speakers. The third mentioned or purposeful youth are the hope of the world. There are two philosophies from which the youth may choose the direction of their life's course. One of these says there is no God; no purpose back of the world; no purpose for men; there is no greater power than a man's mind; let yourself go; if you have talent, use it to accumulate wealth for yourself. This philosophy helps no one and brings despair to all those who embrace it. The other philosophy says there is a God, and he created the universe; he created us for a purpose; the world can be made better; we can find happiness in obedience to law; the gospel law is the only true law; man's first duty is to seek the kingdom of heaven. This is a sane, intelligent philosophy and fills spiritual, mental, and physical needs of all. It brings hope to every heart and leads to Zion—Zion, a beautiful people living in beautiful homes, actuated by beautiful ideals, working together for a beautiful world. We talk of projects—what more do we want than the hundreds of projects which lie before us in the redemption of Zion? Why longer go limping?

To close this sermon, Brother McDowell pledged himself with the two councils of young people to a more Christlike life, efficient, sincere, and consecrated service in the redemption of Zion and making the world a better place in which to live. And together they sang the new song, "Youth's prayer."

Stone Church

The juniors at the Campus were glad to have for their speaker, Brother Hyrum O. Smith. He told how all can be missionaries, from little children to those whose hair is silver. We feel sure from the hands raised, of those boys who want to be missionaries, that many earnest-hearted workers will be raised up for the work needed to be done for the Lord. This was Brother Smith's first visit to us, and we hope to hear from him again in the near future.

The need felt by some of the young married people of Independence for some kind of recreation led to the organization of the Tuesday Club. It is the first aim of the club to uphold the ideals of the church in their recreation. Detail organization will include social development for their children; and a plan to materially help in furnishing the Auditorium. Mrs. F. M. McDowell has been chosen president, Mrs. H. W. Harder vice president, and Mrs. J. Glenn Fairbanks, secretary.

Interesting Personals

Members of the First Presidency, Presiding Bishopric, and Quorum of Twelve are beginning the last lap of work before General Conference in April. President Frederick M. Smith is still in the East; President Elbert A. Smith returned to Independence Monday after a week-end in Saint Louis. Following a week of strict attendance of the young people's revival, a great amount of supervision and work in regard to these meetings, besides the many duties included in his regular work, President Floyd M. McDowell is still in Independence. He is at home but does not have the time to rest. Bishop Albert Carmichael is expected home from his stay in the East this week. Bishop J. A. Becker is in town after attending a conference at Fort Dodge, Kansas, over Saturday and Sunday. Brother M. H. Siegfried is in Independence. Of the Twelve, Apostle McConley is busy in his field in California, Brother Ellis is in Saskatchewan, and D. T. Williams is at work in his field in the North. Apostle Garver returned the first of this week from Aurora, Illinois. Of those who are in town, Brothers Gillen, Gleazer, Edwards, Budd, Hanson, and Curtis, most of them are planning to leave this week or next in order to make the late winter and early spring work count.

Second Church

The attendance at Religio Friday evening was small, a large number of the younger people from District Two being in regular attendance at the Stone Church during the series of services specially designed for them; and, too, the weather was very cold, which prevented some of the children attending. Brother Scott, who has been presiding for two months or more, made a suggestion that the resignation of President Levi W. Rawlings, which had been presented the week previous, be not acted upon at this meeting, but that we fix a date upon which to consider the changing of time of Religio meeting to Sunday evening, and at that same time we consider the matter of the necessity for accepting the resignation of Brother Rawlings. The suggestion was acted upon favorably, and February 4 was set as the date to transact these items of business.

Superintendent Heman H. Davis spoke to the school at some length as to their neglected opportunities, especially that of the young people's prayer meeting at eight o'clock each Sunday morning, which he urged should be neglected no longer.

Elder William H. Kelley was the speaker at eleven o'clock Sunday morning, upon the subject of "Presidents, and a First Presidency in the church." He established several leading points which uphold a former and a latter-day presidency; that in order to be consistent in our belief in even the very early revelations of any particular date or place of publication, we must acknowledge the First Presidency to be comprehended in the establishment of the church of the Restoration; that "first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers" is a description of what did occur in the order of establishment at the building of the New Testament Church. His logic was good, his evidence direct, his understanding comprehensive, and while he was only able to present a small portion of the matter prepared, neglecting entirely one or more important branches of the subject because of the expiration of time, he accepted the invitation of the pastor, indorsed by the audience, and will occupy the morning hour of January 30. He announced that he would likely speak particularly of the division of the subject known as heredity in the presidency and in priesthood. We predict a house full of listeners for Brother Kelley.

Sunday evening Elder J. W. A. Bailey gave the people an illustrated lecture on the types and symbols of the Scriptures as they pertain to Christ, using more than fifty choice pictures for the purpose. His large audience listened in quietude and with deep attention while he lectured for most an hour and a half. At the close many were speaking in commendation, and several asked that he repeat the lecture before long.

The choir is doing some very acceptable work these days, under the leadership of Sister J. A. Curtis, and a deep interest in their work is apparent. We need two or three more soprano voices, specially, who can attend regularly. The next choir meeting is Thursday evening at the church at 7.30 p. m. Let us see some new faces and hear some new and good voices.

Liberty Street

On Saturday, January 22, at half past two in the afternoon, a sad rite was observed, that of the funeral service of Eleanor Jean, infant daughter of Brother and Sister Vernon White, of Independence. Eleanor Jean was born June 23, 1926, and passed beyond January 20, 1927. Brother and Sister F. M. Hancock, grandparents of the baby, and family, came from Lamoni, Sister White's girlhood home, and were accompanied by Sister Addie Newcomer and son; and many friends were present to pay their last respect to this little child of cheer. President Elbert A. Smith preached the funeral sermon, and those who bore the tiny body were: Elva Curtis, Dorothy Peek, Naomi Chrestensen, and Irma Willis. Wee ones from the primary department were flower girls.

On Sunday morning Apostle J. A. Gillen spoke on the text, "Whither goest thou?" reading the entire first chapter of James. Nowhere in the word is the royal road that leads to life everlasting made plainer than in this lesson. Again and again the speaker centered attention on the words he had read, or paused and reread them. Just as the all-wise Creator provides that even the flowers of the field must grow to crown themselves with blossoms, so he has provided means that we may grow from darkness to light, from death to light, from sin to righteousness, from mortality to immortality. Here clouds obscure and doubts assail, but remember that all this is the work of that being whose delight it is to drag souls down. God made such perfect provision that he sent his Son to take on the body of flesh, to be tempted and tried even as struggling humanity is tried, and this Son demonstrated before men that God gives strength and means to overcome every obstacle, even death. We go into conditions God did not plan for us, nor approve. We may derive temporary enjoyment and forget that the thing we are doing sells us to the being of darkness. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked." If we sow to sin, we shall reap disaster, for our lives are builded from the thoughts we entertain. Daily we exemplify the law of opposites, and we can go in only one direction at a time. We can not serve two masters.

"To every man there openeth
A Way, and ways, and a Way,
And the high soul climbs the high way,
And the low souls gropes the low,
And in between, on the misty flats,
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every man there openeth
A high way and a low.
And every man decideth
The way his soul shall go."

Just so Saints should climb as a vine or tree reaches up to the sun, so we must climb on and on to the perfect way. Brother Gillen compared Christianity with the long climb from the valley to the Lick Observatory. Upward the way, constantly enlarging the view, and with this comes increased understanding. It is not necessary for God to move out of his sphere to bring in some new thing, for he created a great reservoir for the needs of man, and we but turn the faucet and our help is there, or if it be electricity, we push the button. The faucet or the button is the prayer of faith. God's desire is to give us happiness, and it is our own fault that we have missed spiritual joy, light, and peace. God has not failed. Through temptation we grow strong if we are constantly on guard and pray without ceasing. The time has come when we must draw the line between sin and righteousness. It is not long when those who are sons of God shall command the elements, and they will obey. How long shall we deny the power which makes us sons of God?

Apostle J. F. Curtis preached in the evening, using Matthew 16: 24-28 for the scripture lesson. He called attention to the variation of language used by Mark in recording the same incident. This prophecy of the Lord was fulfilled in the transfiguration. Only three of the apostles were privileged to see that wonderful demonstration, and this is a lesson to us that God deals differently but kindly with his children, always considering our need and ability. Using Isaiah's reference to the marvelous work and a wonder that should be brought about in the latter days, Brother Curtis defended our belief not only by reading scripture after scripture, but by revelations of this dispensation that have been fulfilled to the letter. Not only by the revelations that have come to our prophet, but individual direction, the power of God's Spirit has given to his ministry again and again. So often things have come to our people, devout men of God, and these things can not be explained. Why are we not willing and glad to give God the glory, and praise him for his loving-kindness to his children?

Walnut Park

The eight o'clock morning prayer meeting Sunday in the church basement was reported an exceptionally good one, and the pastors expressed regret that more can not, or at least do not, form the habit of attending. Some of our sick ones for whom prayers have been repeatedly offered are improving, after very severe affliction.

Attendance at preaching services was markedly much smaller while Apostle Budd was preaching at the Stone Church. The officers were well pleased to have it so, as it indicates that their efforts to interest the young people in attending the series there were successful.

Brother Ralph W. Farrell occupied the pulpit at eleven o'clock. He gave a lesson from the New Testament, portraying graphically the geography of the land of Palestine and weaving in the old, old story—the life of Jesus Christ. He is prepared to teach the whole Bible in this way, geographically and biographically, and also understands how to apply the lessons gleaned from the great teachers of the Scriptures.

After a short lesson period at Religio, further preparation for the coming inter-Religio contest was had—orations by Kenneth Morford and Lewis A. Mauzey, and numbers by a ladies' quartet and a male quartet.

The evening speaker was Patriarch Hyrum O. Smith on "The immutable law of God." He brought forth his "strong reasons" for honoring the law, and especially bore testimony to the truth of the Doctrine and Covenants.

Pastor Glaud Smith will be the speaker next Sunday forenoon, and especially asks all of the young people of his district to be present. He wishes to be enlisted with them in the stronger forward movement begun during the Stone Church services.

Enoch Hill

On Sunday morning, Apostle Paul M. Hanson spoke words of admonition and encouragement to the youth. He read Hebrews 11: 23, then taking up the life of Moses, he advised the young people to be humble, taking God into confidence in all things, and working with faith for the advancement of the program as it is set before the church.

Elder R. D. Weaver began a series of meetings Sunday night, which will continue throughout the week. This series will be based upon the theme, "Building according to the pattern." He showed us very plainly that Christ is the Master Builder, and that the greatest work we can do is to build the church after the pattern God has given. Moses was directed to build a tabernacle in the wilderness, and he was given specific directions as to how it should be built. Our task is to build and maintain a church according to the divine pattern. This sermon will be a pivot for the remaining sermons of the series. During the week there will be a special song service at half past seven, and the choir will be present to help. The large crowd present on this evening was an index of the interest manifested in this series of meetings.

Our choir and male chorus supplied the special musical numbers at the young people's revival held at the Stone Church on Wednesday evening, January 19. We are glad that our musicians are able and willing to assist whenever and wherever they are needed.

Englewood

We have had a splendid group of sermons of late. On the evening of sacrament Sunday, Apostle E. J. Gleazer delivered a very practical sermon. Bishop M. H. Siegfried delivered the morning discourse on January 9, and caused everyone to feel the necessity of doing our duty in every way for the betterment of mankind.

On Sunday evening, January 9, the Silver Wing Temple Builders presented the beautiful pageant, "Have they lived in vain?" We had a full house and appreciated the program very much.

Elder S. S. Smith delivered both sermons on Sunday, January 16. During the morning hour of the 23d, Brother S. A. Thiel, superintendent of the Sunday schools in Zion, had charge, and the officers for the coming year were installed. It was a very impressive service, and after the splendid talks by Brothers Thiel, Moore, and Hartshorn, one who had been asked to take a class was heard to say that she was willing to do the work after all she had heard in this program.

Our pastor, Elder C. F. Davis, gave us a beautiful sermon the evening of January 23. We are very glad to have him back with us again. He had been away for two weeks because of an accident which resulted in the death of his sister and her husband. He has our sincere sympathy. Brother Davis made a special appeal for a better attendance at the Wednesday night prayer service. He said this service was the barometer of the spirituality of the branch.

East Independence

On January 16, Brother J. B. Barrett was the morning speaker, and Brother Harvey Minton, who attended the ministerial conference in Zion, spoke in the evening. Brother Minton has been at his work in the mission fields, and he had many interesting experiences to tell us. Both of these sermons were encouraging and helpful.

Quite a number from this district have been attending the young people's revival and convention held at the Stone

Church last week, and considerable interest has been manifested.

Last Sunday Bishop B. J. Scott spoke words of comfort, cheer, admonition, and instruction to the congregation in the morning, and our pastor, N. Carmichael, was the speaker at the evening hour.

Spring Branch

Sunday services started off auspiciously with a goodly number out to the 8.15 prayer service. A good spirit prevailed. The service was in charge of Elders W. F. Smith and Alma Tankard.

At the Sunday school hour, nearly a full attendance was recorded, and a pleasant and profitable service was enjoyed. We particularly appreciate our new comfortable and commodious quarters for the Sunday school work. A special saxophone number was given by Brother George Sutterfield at the close of the lesson period.

The eleven o'clock preaching service was in charge of Pastor D. R. Snively and was opened by invocation by Brother G. W. Weston, followed by an anthem by the choir. The choir is composed of about twenty-five voices and was recently organized under the able leadership of Sister Corrine Haines French. In addition to the regular choir work, Sister French has organized a class in technical choir work study. They meet on Thursday evenings at half past seven. In all this work, she is being ably assisted by Sister Rosamond Filson at the piano.

Brother R. D. Weaver, the speaker at the morning hour, held the attention of the audience in his usual pleasant and forceful manner, and his sermon was enjoyed by all.

Brother Herbert L. Barto, of the presidency of Far West Stake, held his audience in the evening to the conclusion of his able discourse on "The word made flesh."

Kansas City Stake

Bennington Church

It was our good fortune to have President Elbert A. Smith for our speaker last Sunday morning. Brother Smith said that he sometimes thinks we rely too much on just presenting the written laws of the gospel to people and telling them to either accept or reject them; but this is not enough. We are expected to do more. Christ was born among the people, lived among them, and died among them, that he might convince them by the example of his life as well as by his preaching. Brother Smith has discovered in his experience with his boys that it is not enough to just tell them what to do and what not to do; it is necessary to be a companion and get down and play marbles with them and convince them by his association what is the best. Likewise, in our association with other people we can convince them by example that the world would be better if people would obey the gospel.

Brother James E. Cleveland, our pastor, preached last Sunday evening.

Sister Aubrey Ballew has moved into this vicinity and attended Bennington last Sunday for the first time. With her came Sister Joseph Guerin, Sister Elizabeth Atkinson, and Brother Louis Lewis. They live a little too far away to walk to the Bennington Heights Church and have been attending church at Mount Washington, where they have direct street car service. Brother Lewis formerly lived in Bevier, Missouri.

Brother William McCarison has been reported sick.

Sister Edna Sevcit has been very sick. She was unable to recognize or answer anyone, and the doctor recommended that she be removed to a hospital. The elder called at her home yesterday and administered to her. After the administration, Mr. and Mrs. Dorthy, neighbors of Sister Sevcit, who witnessed the administration, expressed themselves as being very much interested in our church and invited the priesthood to visit their home to talk to them. They are not familiar with the church, but after talking to Sister Sevcit's mother, who has come to take care of her, they desire to know more. They intend to visit the church.

In the conversation following the administration, Brother Cleveland mentioned the words, "Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing psalms. Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed any sins, they shall be forgiven him." For the first time during the day, Sister Sevcit showed evidence of hearing what was being said in her presence, and she asked where the words were found. This morning she was able to sit up and eat breakfast.

The elder also called at the Agin home and administered to Teddy Agin, one of our cradle roll boys. He has been very sick, refusing to eat, and pneumonia was feared. His parents were very tired, nursing him night and day. A phone call this morning revealed that he was much better and was eating. His fever is gone.

Last Thursday evening we held our January birthday party in honor of those who have birthdays in January. Owing to the weather and icy footing, our number was not as large as usual; about fifty were present. Miss Lyra Ferguson, a reading teacher, assisted us with our program by giving several readings. She frequently attends our parties and favors us with readings. While refreshments were being served, all enjoyed visiting with each other; and as one sister said, "It seemed as if everyone was glad to see everybody else."

Brother B. F. Wright is in Winfield, Oklahoma, where he has gone for work.

Malvern Church

One noble family in this community, including father and mother and the oldest child—the only child old enough for baptism—have definitely set the time for baptism. They first became favorably impressed with the church through the fact that their children were attending the religious day school and brought home splendid reports of what they had learned there. We feel encouraged, and we certainly extend to Brother and Sister Wagner the warmest kind of welcome.

We have hopes that our stake missionary, Brother W. D. Tordoff, can be with us about the last week of February, and we are trying to do our part to help make these meetings a success. We have instituted a "community night," with our first meeting on Friday evening, January 21. At this time we were shown some splendid slides on Bible history for one half hour, after which we had a "community sing" under the leadership of Sister Crinklaw, the head of our department of music. Sister Crinklaw is doing a wonderful work along this line, and the congregation at Malvern Hill is to be congratulated upon having a leader so talented and consecrated as she. Next week there will be a community program before the "sing," and we hope the large attendance of last Friday night will be still further increased.

The religious day school is doing splendidly with Sister Florine Hands, the superintendent, and many of her splendid corps of teachers always "on the job." There was an attendance of one hundred and forty-three last week. The most of these pupils represent families outside of the church. We are sure the branch and the church appreciate this school and the possibilities for accomplishing good that it holds forth.

On Friday, January 21, the Women's Department of Malvern Hill Group met at the home of Sister George Sherman. Under the inspirational leadership of Sister Fern Lloyd, the stake superintendent of the Department of Women, and of Sister Sherman, the superintendent of the Malvern Hill Group, many forward-looking activities were enthusiastically planned; and we are sure that the present year is going to prove a decided success. At present we are studying Woman and Stewardship; and we are much enthused also over our classwork in Practical Suggestions for Something to Do, put out by the general department.

Sister Post, our energetic Sanitarium worker, has announced that January 30, 1927, will be Sanitarium Day, and has requested us to bring towels. This is the first collection for the New Year, and we are going to try to make it a big one.

Armourdale Church

If present conditions continue, it will be necessary to enlarge the meeting place, as each successive meeting shows an increased attendance. There is an enrollment of 107 in the Sunday School. The increasing attendance is due to quite an extent, to the progressiveness of the pastor, Elder Richards, who is a successful leader.

Recent speakers have been Elder E. R. Davis, of the missionary force. Brothers Hoover and Caselman and the pastor have preached some very inspiring sermons.

Recently a social event was had by the Women's Department at the home of Brother and Sister William Powell, and the forty present workers entertained themselves by popping corn, and other activities pertaining to their work, an enjoyable time being reported.

Armourdale has a very fine orchestra, which makes the meetings very attractive by rendering special musical numbers, consequently a goodly number not of our faith attend all the services. The department heads, with their assistants, are very much alive, and as a result the Sunday school, Religio, and Women's Departments are doing some very valuable work.

Argentine

Missionary W. D. Tordoff is in the midst of a series of meetings and is encouraged as to prospects, as several not of our faith are constantly in attendance who seem to be much interested. He will continue till Sunday, the 30th, when he is due to enter a like series in another place.

Quindaro

Attendance at the Quindaro Church is on the increase. Sunday morning, January 16, Sister Roy Newkirk occupied the eleven o'clock hour. She gave a very interesting talk on the work of the girls of the church, which was inspiring to all. The result of her effort was the organizing of three chapters of Temple Builders, two seniors and one junior. A new Oriole circle was organized, as many of those girls were made Temple Builders. There was a demand for a Bluebird chapter, which was organized. Leaders chosen were: Sister Delpha Morrison, Sister Lela Eskridge, Sister Alice Baker, Sister Emily Foley, Sister Marie Muir; Mrs. Walter Burton, supervisor. Sister Newkirk gave Quindaro Oriole Circle, under the leadership of Sister Foley, much praise for their work the past year as the star circle of the Kansas City Stake. Eighty-seven dollars were sent the bishop beside many other useful things being done.

Sunday, January 23, found a large attendance, extra seats being necessary. Some new members are added to the orchestra.

The eleven o'clock hour was occupied in prayer and testimony. At five o'clock teachers' meeting was conducted. Some good suggestions were made in which to improve our Sunday school. At half past six the glee club of the Northwest Junior High School rendered a very pleasing program. This chorus numbered thirty-five and was led by Miss Luther.

Through the efforts of the Burgoon sisters, Professor Koonty's Ladies' Band of twenty-two pieces occupied from eight to half past nine. The program consisted of solos, duets, and band numbers, and was enjoyed by all. An urgent invitation was extended by the pastor to these two societies to come again.

I am content to know that God is great,
 And Lord of fish and fowl, of air and sea—
 Some little points are misty. Let them wait.
 —Norman Gale.

Cameron, Missouri

Old Far West Branch

January 24.—We had a fine Christmas program on Christmas Eve. It consisted of readings, songs, music, recitations, dialogues, a drill, pantomime, etc. The committee in charge of the program was composed of Mrs. M. M. German, Mrs. Grace Sparks, and Miss Agnes McKee. The decorating committee was Mrs. Mollie Gover and Miss Laura Day. Mrs. John Webber and Miss Eva Peterson acted as the buying committee.

Our regular services held in this branch are Sunday school, Religio, preaching service, Wednesday night social service, and regular meetings of the Department of Women and the Temple Builders.

The Sunday school officers for this year are: Superintendent, M. M. German; assistant superintendent, Clarence Peterson; secretary, Agnes McKee; treasurer, Miss Gloma Littrell; chorister, Emma Peterson; pianist, Laura Day; librarian, Clarence Peterson. Teachers are: Class Number 1, Mrs. Walker Sackman; Class Number 2, G. B. Koger; young people's class, Mrs. May Littrell; intermediate class, Clarence Peterson; junior class, Melissa McKee; beginner class, Laura Day.

The election for Religio resulted as follows: Superintendent, M. M. German; secretary, Melissa McKee; treasurer, Mrs. Grace Sparks; chorister, Mrs. M. M. German; pianist, Emma Peterson; librarian, Lee German. The teachers are: senior class number 2, George Peterson; young people's class, Laura Day; junior class, Agnes McKee.

Branch officers are: Branch president, G. B. Koger; presiding priest, H. O. McKee; presiding deacon, M. M. German; secretary, Mrs. Grace Sparks; chorister, Mrs. M. M. German; pianist, Emma Peterson; librarian, Lee German; publicity agent, Laura Day. The women of the branch have as their leader, Mrs. M. M. German; and the Temple Builders' leader is Mrs. Mollie Gover.

We are not numerous, but are generally trying to do the best we know for the work.

We are soon to miss two of our respected and loved young people, as Brother Howard McKee, priest, and Miss Eva Holbrook were quietly married December 24, at the home of Sister Holbrook's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Koger. Immediate relatives were present. Both persons were always willing workers wherever possible. Howard has been attending Graceland College since September, 1926, and Eva will join him and attend college there also, about the last of this month.

Laura Day.

By our presence let us show our appreciation of the effort of the general church in providing a good speaker, that the Saints may be instructed and edified. Trains will be met by notifying W. F. Bolinger, 907 Parallel Street. To the members of the priesthood: Let's keep up the good record made at our last conference by sending in your reports to Dave Little, Burlingame, Kansas. Mrs. H. C. Pitsenberger, district secretary, 2331 Buchanan, Topeka, Kansas.

Mobile District, at Bay Minette, Alabama, February 11, 12, and 13. Conference will commence with a preaching service on the evening of the 11th, conference on the 12th, and preaching on the 13th. Priesthood reports should be sent in prior to the conference. Delegates to General Conference will be elected at this conference. Miss Edna Cochran, Vancleave, Mississippi, district secretary.

Addresses

William Patterson, 444 Chestnut Street, Nelsonville, Ohio.

Our Departed Ones

JONES.—Henry Emmonds Jones was born December 25, 1846, in Franklin County, Vermont; married Sarah Bowen January 8, 1880, in Manitoba, Canada, and to them were born eight children, seven of whom survive, one having died in infancy. Brother Jones was baptized thirty-nine years ago by O. P. Sutherland, and later was ordained an elder, serving as pastor of the Webb City (Missouri) Branch for several years. He died at his home north of Oronogo, Missouri, January 17, 1927. The surviving relatives are his wife, Sarah Jones, one brother, Oscar S. Jones, Brockton, Massachusetts; four daughters, Mrs. Ella Rider and Ruth Davis, Fairmount, Missouri; Mrs. F. L. Freeman, Webb City, Missouri; Mrs. Elizabeth Herndon, Miami, Oklahoma; three sons, Andrew J., of Columbus, Kansas; James M. and Robert E., of the home address; also seventeen grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. Funeral in the Webb City Church in charge of Elder Amos T. Higdon, assisted by Jesse Weaver, pastor of the Tower of Light Congregational Church. Interment in the Weaver Cemetery.

HAWLEY.—Alma Hawley was born March 5, 1853, at Fredericksburg, Texas. In his early years, he with his parents moved to Pine Valley, Utah, where they lived until 1870, when they moved to Gallands Grove, Iowa. In 1888 they moved to Missouri. He married Mary H. Ford, of Ravenwood, Missouri, November 21, 1894, locating near this place. To them three children were born. They were Mrs. Nina Jensen, of Conception, Missouri; Guy G., and Cecil H. Hawley, of Hamilton, Missouri, to which place they moved in 1914. He united with the church at Gallands Grove, Iowa, October 20, 1871. Ordained to office of teacher August 27, 1911. He was a faithful member, and a loving husband and father. Departed this life January 7, 1927. Beside his immediate family he leaves four brothers and two sisters: Mrs. Lucy Gates, Mrs. Carrie Powell, Ben Hawley, of Ravenwood; Eber and Isaac, Lamoni, Iowa, and Frank, Deerfield, Missouri, as well as many friends. Funeral was at the Oakdale Church, in charge of Brother Thomas Fiddick, the sermon being delivered by J. W. Roberts. Interment in the beautiful Hamilton Cemetery.

SALISBURY.—Solomon Jenkins Salisbury, eldest son of Wilkins J. and Catherine Smith Salisbury, and nephew of Joseph Smith the Martyr, was born in Kirtland, Ohio, September 18, 1835; died at Burnside, Illinois, January 12, 1927, aged 91 years, 3 months and 24 days. Leaves two sons and two daughters, eighteen grandchildren, twenty-three great-grandchildren, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. Death came suddenly through valvular trouble of the heart. He was baptized October 3, 1872, by Joseph Smith, ordained a priest in 1873, and an elder in 1874. He has remained faithful and died firm in the faith. Buried at Burnside, Illinois; funeral in charge of F. A. Smith assisted by the Methodist minister.

GATENBY.—Ida L. McCormick Gatenby was born at Green Bay, Wisconsin, January 23, 1864. She was united in marriage to Fred S. Gatenby, March 19, 1890, at Neligh, Nebraska. To this union two children were born: Floyd E. and Lottie Fern, now Mrs. Frank Konopasek, of Clear Water. She united with the church in company with her husband May 30, 1896, and remained faithful unto death. She died at the Lutheran hospital in Norfolk, Nebraska, January 15, 1927. She leaves to mourn her departure her husband, two children, seven grandchildren, two brothers, two sisters, and a large circle of friends. Funeral sermon by Elder Levi Gamet and interment in Laurel Hill Cemetery, Neligh, Nebraska.

HIDY.—George Henry Hidy was born at Defiance, Iowa, September 14, 1858. He united with the church March 10, 1872, and in his younger years was quite active in the church work. He resided in Kansas City, Missouri, for the past twenty-seven years. He was ordained an elder September 14, 1904, having occupied previously to this ordination in the office of teacher for a number of years. He was a charter member at the time of the purchase of the old Central Church at Ninth and Lydia Streets, following the church in her progressive step to the present location, Thirtieth and Tracy. He was a member of the men's Bible class, and at different periods was the teacher of the class. Passed away January 7, 1927, and leaves here with us his wife, Mrs. Ida L. Hidy; two daughters, Mrs. E. C. Harrington, of Independence, Missouri, and Mrs. Allen Rush, of Kansas City, Missouri; one son, John Arthur Hidy, who is in Pekin, China; a brother, John C. Hidy; six grandchildren and a host of friends. Services conducted from Central Church by J. A. Tanner, assisted by S. S. Sandy. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence, Missouri.

SHERMAN.—George W. Sherman, Company "K", Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry, was born in Ironton, Ohio, May 11, 1846; he enlisted in the Union Army in the year 1861, and served the duration of the Civil War. United with the Reorganized Church in 1921. He died January 9, 1927. Surviving him are his wife, Mary J. Sherman; three sons, George O., Roy, and John H.; two daughters, Mrs. Bertha Mae Golden and Mrs. Eva E. Riley; one brother, James; and one sister, Lottie Parsons. Service conducted by J. A. Tanner from Malvern Hill Church. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence, Missouri.

IRVINE.—Stella May Saunders Irvine was born May 6, 1898, near Luther, Lake County, Michigan. She was baptized on September 29, 1914, and always tried to live a Christian life. Married Ray A. Irvine November 9, 1924. She was solicitor for the Chase Branch for several years. Departed this life on Tuesday, December 28, 1926, at the age of twenty-eight years, seven months, and twenty-two days, after an illness of several weeks' duration. Funeral services were held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Saunders, December 30, 1926, Elder Alvin Ellis, of South Boardman, officiating. She leaves her husband, mother, father, two sisters, Helen and Evelyn Saunders, her grandmother, several uncles, aunts, cousins, and other relatives, and friends.

SALANDER.—George Willis Salander was born in Illinois, February 27, 1860. He united with the church October 21, 1906, and was for a number of years presiding deacon at the old Central Church, Kansas City, Missouri. Died January 5, 1927, in Chicago, Illinois. Surviving him are his wife, Ida V. Salander; two sons, Ryla C. and Willis LeRoy; one brother, E. N. Salander, Wichita, Kansas. Funeral service conducted from Newcomer's Chapel by J. A. Tanner. Interment in Memorial Park Cemetery, Kansas City, Missouri.

WHITE.—Eleanor Jean White was born June 23, 1926, at Independence, Missouri. She was blessed August 1, 1926, at Lamoni, Iowa, by Apostle John F. Garver, and Elder Wilber E. Prall. She died January 20, 1927, at the age of six months and twenty-seven days. Left to miss her merry little presence are her young parents, Brother Vernon and Sister Avis White, four grandparents, Brother and Sister W. A. O. White, of Independence, Brother and Sister M. F. Hancock, of Lamoni, and many aunts, uncles, cousins, and friends. Funeral services conducted at the Liberty Street Church, Independence, Missouri, January 22, 1927. President Elbert A. Smith preached the funeral sermon. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

"The most discouraging thing about this here evolution," complained Deacon Goodentart, "is the long way some folks has got to go yet."

It is wonderful what a good night's rest will do to one when he misses it.

—Julia Johnson Davis, in The Century.

Press reports say that "the vessel was crushed in the ice like an eggshell." Yes, "like an eggshell." That is always the classic illustration of frailty—frail as an eggshell—thin as an eggshell—crushed like an eggshell. Yet the Creator trusted life to an eggshell—nearly all forms of life were trusted to some form of eggshell. He did not encase life in steel or granite. Safety lay not in armor, but in the vitality of life itself. Despite the frailty of eggshells, and the tender softness of mothers' forms, shrinking and hiding from danger, life has come down the centuries through storm and earthquake, flood, tempest, heat, cold, famine, pestilence.

Life is the conqueror. Safety is in the virility of life. Jesus said, "I have come that you might have life, and that you might have it more abundantly." That life he has intrusted to frail humanity, frail as an eggshell. Easily tempted, oftentimes, discouraged, prone to turn aside, attacked by many enemies of our faith and calling, our defense is not to be found in any artificial encasements of protective devices, but in the very vitality of the life of Christ within us—the more abundant life that he has promised us.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

The Challenge of God

One is impressed by the increasing number of students who are willing to accept history of the Bible that Jesus lived and was such a character as would impress itself upon any age, yet who assume the role of the agnostic. It would seem that the only end to the first admission that such a character as Jesus lived, would be the acceptance of the one claim which he made paramount, that he came as the Son of God in the flesh, for the purpose of pointing the way to eternal life for the man who would open his mind to the message.

The Jew believes in Jehovah, the God of his fathers. He also believes that Jesus of Nazareth was born, lived a short but brilliant life, and died a death brought upon himself by blasphemy. Between this, the normal and all but universal concept of the Jew, and that of the modern Christian, who accepts Jesus as the Christ, the Son of the living God, there are a number of degrees of belief, but there rings out above all the voice of the Spirit of the living God, "This is my beloved Son; hear him!" No less than a full compliance with the command of the Spirit can please God the Father, or can bring salvation to the children of men.

A contemplation of this paradox in which many self-styled independent thinkers place themselves (that of belief and unbelief with reference to the same character) and at the same time has brought forth some beautiful and transforming thoughts in the literature of the past.

And in the issue of the London Spectator for December 25, 1926, there comes the appended editorial.

The Challenge of God

There are many nowadays to whom the story of Bethlehem stands as no transforming fact, no ever-present reality—it is to them “as the words of a very lovely song;” and it is nothing more. They have probably not thought out the subject for themselves, but their minds are influenced by things they have heard and read, and it does not strike them that though many of the arguments brought forward are impressive and not to be overlooked, they leave untouched—they can not touch—an army of facts which stand proved for all the world to see.

If the Infinite God never lay cradled in a human mother's arms, with manger for cot and stable for home, if no wandering shepherds were summoned by the Angel Host and no wise men were led by a star to worship in that humble spot, then who will explain to us how that strange story stamped itself on the consciousness of the world? What magic did it possess that ever since that night long ago a countless procession, from all nations and kindreds and peoples and tongues, has followed in the footsteps of shepherd and sage to wonder and to worship at their side? And the present, no less than the past, brings its witness, for on this Christmas, as on all those other shining Christmas days stretching right across the ages, in every quarter of our little cloud-girt earth will kneel a multitude innumerable in adoring love before the Infinite Mystery. To ears attuned, the voices of the great host of living and of dead, in triumphant acclaim, are as the sound of many waters drowning in their thunder the baffled questionings of the groping human mind. “So make me to possess this Mystery that I may not desire to understand,” said Coventry Patmore, and if we made his prayer our own, perchance we should more easily find the path to light.

We do not understand, we can not so long as we have only a finite brain to bring to bear on Infinite Verity—but we believe; and for such a belief who would not stake all that he has and all that he is? The only faith that counts is the faith that we rest for ourselves at first hand. To read about God, to learn what other men have to teach, are things necessary to us all, but they do not take us far; to know God nothing will avail but personal relation, actual experience. Do we know our friends in any other wise? We must carve our way for ourselves through the muffling world of sense, and it takes long courage and perseverance if we would arrive; but there is no hopeless reaching out into a vague unknown for one who believes that God himself has cut his way through to man, that he has pierced through the material wall which divides us from him, to touch us with human hands and look upon us with human eyes.

The best we can ever have to give to our fellow man is the certainty of our own souls, a conviction by which we live and for which we would die; and to win for ourselves this certainty, it is well worth hazarding all that we have. The instinct of gambling is a curiously strong one in human nature, and here, if anywhere, surely, we are justified in turning it to account. Against what Christ lived and died for to give to humanity, what the Saints have striven and fought for, the life of love and self-giving, are there any so-called realities and hard facts which the world can offer that count in the balance?

Many adventurous spirits have given up all that they held dear to set forth on perilous quest to some earthly El Dorado and have sailed uncharted seas for the sake of a dream. And if such as they deemed the cost that they had to pay not too high, what of him who pays but the same price for an infinitely greater prize? And think you that when his seeking soul returns from its adventure he will care aught when men tell him that there is no such place as the kingdom of his desire? What power can they have over us, those feeble human voices, when once our ears have heard another Voice, when we have seen with the eyes of our soul what tongue can never describe, but what the heart will hold forever?

Year by year Christmas returns with its eternal challenge. The Everlasting God, the Creator of the ends of the earth, took upon himself human flesh and lived and suffered and died. He emptied himself of his glory and was among us as One that serveth; he showed us what his idea of love is, his conception of self-giving. It was the challenge of the Son of God—his challenge to the sons of men. “All that he has he gives; all that we are he asks.” Single-handed during the short span of his mortal life he wrestled with the monsters of disease and sin, bringing life and light wherever he went, consuming in the fire of his wrath all meanness and hypocrisy, sweeping aside the human traditions under which men lay enslaved, setting up new standards of perfection.

Those who heard him caught for a moment with startled eyes a glimpse of the splendor of God, but the heights to which he beckoned them could be reached only by paths steep and hard, for a man must be prepared to renounce self and give all that he has if he would take his share in the redemption of the world. One by one of his followers forsook him, and he died at the hands of his enemies, a failure because mankind would not respond to his call. But he rose again, and today there is hardly a corner on the globe where his name is not known, and though he has not conquered yet, he will conquer. Men cry: “Christianity is a failure; give us something new.” They have cried so, ever and again, for 2,000 years, but Christianity renews itself as surely as the earth renews itself in spring, and like the living Christ himself bursts from its man-made tombs.

It is man who has failed. He has not responded to the challenge of God.—The Spectator, London, England, December 25, 1926, page 1142.

Education's Beginnings in Missouri

It will soon be one hundred years since missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints came to the State of Missouri, locating in Jackson County, which was really frontier territory. The History of the Church states that one of the deprivations which these people coming from Ohio, New York, and other Eastern States experienced was the lack of schools. However, they immediately set to work and established their own schools, having among their leaders men who were from the ranks of the teaching profession and educators, among them being Oliver Cowdery, William W. Phelps, Doctor Frederick G. Williams, and others, to whom the lack of schools seemed a real menace.

So Latter Day Saints peruse with interest the collated information recently dispensed by the State Historical Society of Missouri, and are surely comforted to know that it was not because of their non-progressiveness that persecution came down upon them in 1832 and 1833. Indeed, it seems probable that their advancement, both in the ground taken on national political questions, and public questions such as education, was one of those differences which caused the fight to be made to banish the early Saints from Jackson County.

In its most early settled localities the history of education in the State dates back to about 1825 or 1826, to even the Spanish and French periods of possession, but it was not until 1839, nineteen years after entering the Union as a sovereign State, that this fast-developing and wonderful commonwealth had anything which bore resemblance to a public school system. The famous Geyer Act, establishing a system of public schools, was passed February 11, 1839, and began to be administered shortly afterward.

Up until this time the State's schools, confined to the larger towns, were private, and were under the direction of the French priests and private tutors, their curriculum being very elementary. Early settlers up till now had considered education to be a function of the family and not of the government. Early American settlers coming from the South—Virginia, Kentucky, and other States—were of this opinion, and coming to Missouri early in the nineteenth century, were instrumental in fastening this conviction or persuasion upon the inhabitants of the section or State. They brought with them the idea of the private school, or academy, which was supported by those who were able to pay, and which was attended by the children of its founders and supporters. The idea of free public schools was quite new then, except, possibly, in the East, and New England particularly, and the system was not acceptable to these Southern settlers in the new State.

However, the State's first constitution incorporated the free education idea. The public school land and its income were to be preserved, and one school in each township was to be established, but no specific system was created. As the State grew in population and the need for education increased, however, small groups of families formed themselves into a sort of voluntary association and organized subscription schools. School-teachers were hired and paid by the families, each in proportion to the number of children they had enrolled. These schools seldom lasted over three months a year. They could be found until as late as the early forties.

But all this time the idea of free public education, supported by the State, was gaining adherents, and many efforts were made to realize it. Legislative acts of 1835 and 1837 provided for the organization of school districts and the investment of school funds realized from the sale of public lands.

The great step in the realization of the idea, however, was made in 1839, with the passage of the Geyer Act. It may be said that Missouri's school system really had its origin in that act. The act transplanted to the State the educational system of Virginia as proposed by Thomas Jefferson. The scheme provided for elementary schools, academies, colleges, and a university at the head. It created the office of state superintendent of schools, and the permanent school fund.

Unfortunately for the cause of education, there were inadequate funds to carry out the plan; moreover, public opinion at that time was not such as to offer support and cooperation in the establishment of the scheme. Free public education for any except the poor was still considered by many as an expression of charity or as an unjust public expense. Some even refused to send their children to these schools.

In 1853 the school laws were thoroughly revised so as to create uniformity in course of study. By this time the public attitude had changed materially, and schools were increasing in number and enrollment. Then came the Civil War. It threw the schools into chaos, many of them closing their doors until the war was over. It was not until after the war, when a number of the laws were adopted leading up to 1874 with the passage of the Revision Acts, that the schools were again placed on their feet. From that time on to the present, the idea of free public education has been attaining realization.

The Geyer Act was drafted by Henry S. Geyer, regarded in his day as one of the most profound lawyers in the State. He was born in Maryland, but came to Saint Louis in 1815, where he began the practice of law. He served several terms in the state legislature and a term in the United States Senate. He was connected with the famous Dred Scott case. He died in 1859.

A Cordial New Year's Greeting

Among the season's greetings which have reached the desk of President Smith is one from Rotterdam, Holland, the writer being Brother Arie Pyle, and the greeting being from the Rotterdam Branch. We quote the portion of the message written in English:

"New mercies, new blessings, new light on thy way,
 New courage, new hope, and new strength for each day;
 New notes of thanksgiving, new chords of delight;
 New songs in the morning, new songs in the night;
 New wine in thy chalice, new altars to raise;
 New fruit for thy Master, new garments of praise;
 New gifts from his treasures, new smiles from his face;
 New streams from the fountain of infinite grace;
 New stars for thy crown, and new tokens of love;
 New gleams of the glory that wait thee above;
 New light of his countenance, radiant and clear!
 All this be the joy of thy Happy New Year!"

Why do you note the splinter in your brother's eye and fail to see the plank in your own eye? . . . You hypocrite! Take the plank out of your own eye first, and then you will see properly how to take the splinter out of your brother's eye.—Doctor Moffatt.

The Three Books

BY EDWARD RANNIE

Early in November we received from the pen of Elder Edward Rannie, since deceased, an article under the caption, "The three books." We have made some study of this, his last contribution to the literature of the church, and believing that there are many points of merit contained herein, we have concluded to publish at this time, asking the Saints to note the broad ground assumed, and to study the production carefully.

In an appended note Elder Rannie says: "I have written under great difficulty because of my physical condition. Write a half hour, then rest for as long time as I had written, work an hour sometimes, then lay it by for one or two days until my physical and mental condition would justify another effort. I could not well do justice to the subject and make it shorter, and could likely have done better to have made it longer."

Words that are emphasized have been emphasized by the writer to call the reader's attention in a special manner to these words, and not to change the meaning of the passage.—EDITOR.

What Is Meant by the Three Books

The Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants are the standard books of the church, from which we learn the faith, doctrine, and law to govern the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

And again, the elders, priests, and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings, as they shall be directed by the Spirit; and the Spirit shall be given unto you by the prayer of faith, and if ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 5.

And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written, . . . —Doctrine and Covenants 83: 8.

It is reasonable to believe that the "former commandments" referred to were revelations given for the benefit of the church prior to 1832, the year in which the above was given, and later became a part of the Doctrine and Covenants which was approved by the church in the General Assembly of 1835.

On August 17, 1835, a committee that had been appointed on September 24, 1834, to compile the revelations given to the prophet of the church, and to some others, made their report to a General Assembly that met on that date. The revelations and other matter that the committee presented was given the name of "Book of Doctrine and Covenants," and included from section one to one hundred and thirteen. It was submitted to the several quorums composed of members of the Melchisedec and Aaronic priesthoods, and also to the membership of the church, and received their indorsement by a unanimous vote. (Doctrine and Covenants 108 A.)

Immediately following the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith was a "dark and cloudy day" for the church. The shepherds had turned from their holy calling of feeding the flock of God to the sins that would destroy both spirit and body. The sheep were soon scattered, and in their sorrow they appealed to that God whom they had trained in the past, believing that he would answer their prayers. The Lord chooses whom he will to speak to his people, and upon this occasion he spoke to a young man by the name of Jason W. Briggs, who had been trying to care for the scattered sheep and at the same time pleading with God for light. In answer to his earnest supplications, the Lord gave him a revelation directing him as to what he should do. It is found in Church History, volume 3, pages 200, 201. From it we make the following brief extract:

Therefore, let the elders whom I have ordained by the hand of my servant Joseph, or by the hand of those ordained by him, resist not this authority, nor faint in the discharge of duty, which is to preach my gospel as revealed in the record of the Jews, and the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

In the concluding paragraph is found the following promise: "And whomsoever will humble themselves before me, and ask of me, shall receive of my Spirit a testimony that these words are of me." Having reference to revelation given to Jason W. Briggs.

From the above we learn that the Reorganization had its beginning by commandment from the Lord. Copies of the revelation were sent to several communities where members of the church were living, and arrangements were made for a conference to be held at Beloit, Wisconsin, in June, 1852. Jason W. Briggs was chosen to preside. The important business was a series of resolutions presented by Zenos H. Gurley, sr., and one of them was as follows: "Resolved, That the whole law of the Church of Jesus Christ is contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants."—Church History, volume 3, page 210.

About the year 1878, there began to be rumors carried around among the Saints that the church had not by conference action approved of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, making it one of the standard books of the church. That was not a strange condition, when we take into consideration that at that date we had no church history authorized and published by the church, and that the HERALD commencing in 1860 was published as a monthly until 1863 and as a semimonthly until 1883; also the membership being widely scattered they would not know as readily as now what was occurring in the church. And that our people might know the attitude of the church, if such a need existed, the following resolution was passed, it being one among a series that was presented to the General Conference in western Iowa in September, 1878:

Resolved, That this body, representing the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, recognize the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, the revelations of God contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and all other revelations which have been or shall be revealed through God's appointed prophet, which have been or may be hereafter accepted by the church as the standard of authority on all matters of church government and doctrine, and the final standard of reference on appeal in all controversies arising, or which may arise in this church of Christ.—Church History, vol. 4, p. 239.

At the time the above resolution was passed, Zenos H. Gurley was a member of the Quorum of Twelve, and his field of labor was in the Rocky Mountain country. He was absent from the conference. When the news reached him, he set his mind against it and was not willing to be governed by the rule thus laid down. On October 15 he wrote a letter to the church, stating his reasons why he could not accept the action of the General Conference, and asking that his resignation as a member of the quorum be accepted. (Church History, volume 4, pages 259, 260.) It was presented to the General Conference at Plano, Illinois, in April, 1879, and his resignation accepted. (Church History, volume 4, page 261.) The matter under consideration was not disposed of by the acceptance of Elder Gurley's resignation: "A resolution from the Decatur District was presented to the conference [September, 1879], asking that the church define more clearly its position on the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. This was referred to the First Presidency, who subsequently reported as follows." Then follows the report of the First Presidency. (Church History, volume 4, pages 283-285.) In General Conference Resolution it is number 222.

The document is too lengthy to quote in full, so I will be content to quote only a part of it, and suggest to the reader that the entire document be read with care, because it is one of the most important documents ever presented to the church, and a faithful compliance with its instructions would save us a great deal of trouble, and avoid much controversy and contention among the elders.

The first paragraph tells why the church reaffirmed its belief in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants as standards of reference of the faith and doctrine of the church.

Then follows a paragraph in special reference to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

We are further of the opinion, that it is not the intent and meaning of the said resolution to make a belief in the revelations in the Book of Covenants, or the abstract doctrine possibly contained in it, a test of reception and fellowship in the church; but that the things therein contained relating to the doctrine, rules of procedure, and practice in the church, should govern the ministry and elders as representatives of the church.

That resolution is very plain and easy to understand. It is not the intention of the church to make a belief in the Doctrine and Covenants, any revelation in it, or sections that are not revelations, a test of reception and fellowship in the church. God or the church has no desire to proscribe the liberty of conscience and deny to his people the right to think and form opinions of their own, even though at times they might not harmonize with the church or with God. Neither one expects that a young man at the age of twenty will have the same ideas in regard to the revelations and other matter as the man of more mature judgment, at the age of sixty. Some men are careful students of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; others make the boast that they seldom read it, and never refer to it when preaching. How can such persons have a common understanding of the book? There are three things in that document that we will refer to, that the church wants us to pay heed to.

First: The ministry in their ministrations among the Saints are to refrain from teaching contrary to the revelations in that book. That is not their mission; there is a proper time and place to give consideration to controverted questions in the church.

Second: The work of the ministry is to teach the beautiful gospel of Jesus Christ, the things that will "build up the kingdom of God and establish his righteousness." Controversies never do that.

Third: Speculative theories, abstruse questions that do not affect our salvation, are not the mission of the faithful minister. They never brought anyone to a knowledge of Jesus Christ and his gospel. The only proper place to give consideration to such questions is in the quorums or schools of the elders.

Inspiration

"For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."—2 Peter 1:21. The Holy Spirit is God's servant and messenger; it is acting for him and is omnipresent; whether we call it an influence or personage or Spirit, it is the means he has to enlighten our minds and guide us into all truth (John 16:13), and the only means by which we shall have a correct knowledge of the things of God: "Even so the things of God knoweth no man, except he has the Spirit of God."—1 Corinthians 2: 11, Inspired Translation. In the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, there are many passages by holy men of God who have lived from the time of Adam, and including the period since the restoration of the gospel. Those three books are not free from error. Men wrote their own thoughts and feelings when they were not guided by the Holy Spirit. Read the 23d Psalm and then the 109th, and you will discern the difference between David's own words, and when the Holy Spirit directed him what to say. When he wrote the last, he was angry and said many cruel and unkind things about his enemies, which were contrary to the teachings of Jesus Christ.

Paul saw the importance of men being inspired by the Holy Spirit when they talked or wrote of the things of God, and gave instruction to Timothy as follows: "And all scripture given by inspiration of God, is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—2 Timothy 3: 16, 17, Inspired Translation. In the common version of the Bible, King James's, the word is follows the word scripture in the first line, and it is in italics, which indicates that it was not in the original manuscript, but was added by a translator. If the translator had left it as in the original, it would have agreed with the translation by Joseph Smith:

For behold, they have taken away from the gospel of the Lamb many parts which are plain and most precious; and also many covenants of the Lord have they taken away; and all this have they done that they might pervert the right ways of the Lord; that they might blind the eyes and harden the hearts of the children of men: and after these plain and precious things were taken away, it goeth forth unto all the nations of the Gentiles.—Book of Mormon, 1 Nephi 3: 168, 169, 172.

The above is part of a prophetic statement by Nephi, and it has reference to the Bible, and the part quoted seems to have specific reference to the New Testament, the power being charged with this great sin is the "great and abominable church." Notwithstanding the Lord has plainly told us that the Bible is a standard of authority, and that was before the Inspired Translation was given to the church, he also informs us through one of the prophets in the Book of Mormon that that important witness had been tampered with. It is also the testimony of some of the great students of the Bible of the present and past generations that the Bible has had its foes that corrupted the text in such a manner as to cause confusion in the minds of the reader. For proof of our assertion, we refer the reader to the preface of the Inspired Translation, from which we will make a few extracts. The words that are emphasized are as they are found in the preface:

It can not be said that no fault has crept into the Scriptures by the negligence or inadvertency of the transcribers, or even by the boldness of those who have ventured to strike out, add, or change some words which they thought necessary to be omitted, added, or changed. (Page 4.) The critics have sometimes reformed the text, because they looked upon it as faulty; they have met with a sense that shocked them in the text, and which might be reformed by taking away one single word; they have determined that the text ought to read so and so, and have boldly corrected the text upon a mere conjecture. (Page 5.)

Recapitulation

First: The Lord and the church on several occasions have stated that the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants are our standards of authority to determine our system of government and what the faith, doctrine, and practice of the church should be.

Second: In the three books is a divine message from the Lord, and the human is mixed with it, which makes it necessary to be careful and not undervalue the divine part or exaggerate that which is manifestly human.

Third: Members of the church may differ and hold ideas so divergent in regard to the meaning of many things in the books that there is no hope of reconciliation. A member, or the church officially, has no just reason for complaining, unless those divergent views are used as the basis of a propaganda which would cause strife and contention in the church.

The Value of Doctrine and Covenants

The executive, legislative, and judicial officers of the United States have their headquarters at Washington, District of Columbia. Can we imagine what confusion would be there if the Constitution did not define what were the duties of each officer? In a measure it is so in regard to the church. The Bible and Book of Mormon do not give a clear and definite statement of the prerogatives, duties, and responsibilities of the several officers of the church. In the historical part of the New Testament, we learn of things that as ministers they did. It does not define the duties of the officers named, and there may be officers that have not been mentioned. We have the writings of only five apostles, and there were thirteen, including Paul. The Methodist Church makes the bishop a spiritual officer; the Presbyterian Church leaves that officer out. It is because of indefiniteness of the Scriptures that the various Christian churches have different forms of organization. The spirit of revelation being a fundamental principle of the church which is in harmony with the New Testament, it was the proper thing that the Lord would give the church needed light in regard to church organization. The revelations in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants give us the needed information on church organization and the duties of the officers. The revelations also give definite information concerning doctrine, laws, and customs for the government of the church. Several of the Protestant churches have divided because of contention in regard to the use of musical instruments in the church. We also had trouble on the same subject, and the Lord spoke to the church and gave the needed instruction. There was much discussion concerning the Sabbath; some were for observing the seventh day, and others were just as determined for the first day of the week. The Lord spoke and set us right on the troublesome question. (Doctrine and Covenants 119:6, 7.) We had contention in regard to the partaking of the sacrament; the needed instruction came and set us right, which saved us from the ills that follow contention. The careful student of the book will find much light to help him to a better understanding of things in the Bible and how to govern the church.

The following extract is from an editorial by the late President Joseph Smith, who was a wise man and full of love, who was careful to give the church only such things as would build it up in righteousness. It is found in the HERALD of May 22, 1886, page 305. The reader will find it profitable to read the entire editorial. The title is, "The Doctrine and Covenants."

These provisions are so definite and comprehensive that there are no grounds for conflict or confusion in respect to church government. And we here assert, that the heresies and differences existing in the past or present with Latter Day Saints have resulted from treating lightly, or with contempt or neglect, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. There is not, nor has there been one essential matter in church government, organization, doctrine, or general church polity, but could have been and should have been regulated and properly settled by an appeal to that book—and all this harmonizing with and rendering available and effective the teachings of both the Bible and Book of Mormon.

As a fitting close to this article, a quotation from a revelation given to the late President Joseph Smith is worthy of consideration as showing forth the high spiritual condition to which man's mind can reach when touched by the Holy Spirit:

And now I say unto you mine elders, apostles and high priests of my church, Continue ye in the ministry unto which you have been called; and if ye cannot fully agree on all the points of the law, be patient and be not contentious; so far as you can agree work together without heat, confusion, or malice. Ye are equal in worth of position and place in the work of the church; and if in honor ye shall prefer one another, ye will not strive for precedence or place in duty or privilege, and shall be blessed of me.—Doctrine and Covenants 122:16.

That is one of the most beautiful messages that ever came from the courts of heaven to bless mankind. It has the same significance as the words,

"How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth."—Isaiah 52:7. It means, "On earth peace, and good will toward man."—Luke 2:14.

The faith of Gideon, with three hundred men, routed the hosts of the Midianites, and so also can the faith of the apostles, high priests, and elders of the Lord's church rout the archenemy that would fill our souls with malice, hate, jealousy, and envy. How many of us are ready and willing to be local men or missionaries and literally carry out the instructions contained in that paragraph? It would be a demonstration such as the church and the world have seldom seen; never in our day. How kind our heavenly Father is; he does not ask the ministry to fully agree, but so far as we can, and then work.

Zion and Its Ideals

BY MRS. D. R. HUGHES

Zion: What a big word! what a wonderful word! what a beautiful word! What a beautiful thing to visualize, and what a more beautiful thing to see realized!

"Where there is no vision the people perish."

When there arises in our lives a need, we first visualize; then we hold that mental picture continually until there is a realization; but before that realization we put forth every effort, and bend every energy, and qualify.

When I was a little girl, my whole ambition was to be a school-teacher. When we returned home from school in the evening, we usually played school, and I was always the teacher. When at school during recess, and games were in order, I'll never forget how I used to say, "Let's play school; I'll be the teacher," and I said it so rapidly that no one else had a chance. That was my goal. I visualized. I put forth every effort to qualify, kept a constant mental picture of the thing in realization, until at last I had the happy privilege of realizing the thing I had visualized.

God told Noah to build an ark, which was an ark of safety from the flood of destruction to come upon the world. Noah, no doubt, began to visualize, and kept before him constantly a mental picture of the finished ark; of him and the other occupants shut therein; of hearing the rains descend until the waters covered the whole earth. He began to prepare, and put forth every effort until the thing happened. Holy Writ says Noah did all God commanded him to do. God told him exactly how to build that ark, and no other way would have kept the ark afloat and have brought to them safety.

God has told us to build Zion, our ark of safety: a saving from the flood of destruction which is to come upon the whole earth, except Zion. That destruction is not in the far distance; in fact, we can see it now upon our horizon. Shall we go forth and prepare and put forth every effort, as did Noah? It will require no more and no less of us than it did of Noah, that of doing all God has commanded. God says when we do he is bound.

Zion is a condition not had in its fullness since the days of Enoch. Then we must make a condition different from anything to be had upon the whole earth today, both temporally and spiritually. Yes, a condition different from anything found among Latter Day Saints today. The world and its folly will have no place there. Nothing unclean shall enter.

Let us visualize Zion. First we must know the location and learn some of the things God has told us to do, that we may prepare and qualify and work thereto.

God has told us that the center place of Zion is in Independence, Missouri. He tells us in section 57 of Doctrine and Covenants, to purchase the land. Section 98 says that God commands us to buy the land in Jackson County and the counties round about. Section 102 says it is his will that the Saints should purchase these lands, and after they are purchased that the Saints possess them according to the laws of consecration; and he says further, that Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom. Section 77 says we must be equal in earthly things, for if we are not equal in earthly things we can not be equal in heavenly things. He further says, "If you will that I give you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things I have commanded you and required of you.

You may wonder why I have quoted the above paragraphs, and have already said to yourselves that we women have nothing to do with the buying of the land and the settling thereon, etc.

Indeed, the major part of that responsibility, perhaps, may rest upon other shoulders, but the women have their part to play, and a big part, too.

God has expressed that it is his wisdom, his will, and his command that this land be bought and possessed by the Saints. A very necessary step toward the redemption of Zion.

Now should our husbands be impressed to buy land and move thereon, it is our business to willingly go with them, encourage them, and help and assist them, and put forth every effort to make Zion a realization. Possess it according to the laws of consecration. Should they be impressed to enter upon the stewardship, whether they have money to buy land or not, be willing to go with them. Be willing to do all things whatsoever God commands, knowing his will is best. Should you be called to leave the city and its pleasures and conveniences, go; to help in that big step toward realizing our vision.

Holden Stake is an agricultural stake, and glad we may be that it is. The world could not live without farmers; neither could Zion. Other organizations or associations than those simply pastoral and agricultural, the Lord has said, may be placed of such sorts as the varied qualifications existing among workmen may demand.

In forming our mental picture of Zion, we see those who have complied with the law of consecration and have entered in upon their stewardship as agreed between the individual and the bishop, or those upon whom this responsibility rests.

The inhabitants therein are the "pure in heart."

In a late HERALD I read the statement from a recent manifestation which said that nothing imperfect should enter Zion. That means, then, that all things must be perfect to dwell in Zion. Its people must be perfect, or as nearly so as it is possible to become, before the coming of our Lord.

To become perfect, we understand, is to keep all of God's laws. In section 44 we read where God said that by the organizing of ourselves we may be preserved in all things and be enabled to keep his laws, and every band may be broken wherewith the enemy seeketh to destroy his people.

The enemy, his Satanic Majesty, makes inroads on our physical, mental, moral, and spiritual beings. God has given laws governing our whole being; hence for a perfect being these laws must be kept.

In Zion, or at least those who are assisting in its upbuilding, we see those who have come to a realization that the highest duty is self-perfection, and that one of their first duties is that of making a physical body that is healthy as can be made under present conditions, that it may be a fit dwelling place for the soul. They recognize and appreciate the Words of Wisdom given by our Maker and have acquainted themselves with the laws of health.

I wish to quote a little verse here:

Cherish your body, for God made it great,
It has a guest of might and high estate,
Keep the shrine noble, handsome, high, and whole,
For in it lives God's guest, a Kingly Soul.

We see those who are healthy mentally. They think on things that are true, things that are honest, things that are just, things that are pure, things that are lovely, and things that are of good report.

They strive to have the mind in them which was also in Christ Jesus.

With this physical and mental poise, they can open the windows of the soul and listen and hear the message, "Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people." "Peace, my peace, I give unto you."

A perfect physical body, a well-developed and a well-poised mind, and a soul in attune with the Infinite makes a human trinity, whose developments are illimitable.

We vision each home well cared for by those who answer the above description, man and wife. President E. A. Smith said at a picnic held for the priesthood and their wives recently, that he was glad to see the wives with the men, and he said, "A good man in the ministry with a good woman by his side was almost sure to succeed."

We might say that a good man with a good woman by his side on the soil or in his stewardship is almost sure to be successful.

While he comes in contact with the forces in the outside world during the day, she builds a little sanctuary, a holy of holies within which he can retreat when the storms blow and receive warmth and courage. He does not forget that she, too, needs warmth and courage, and he recognizes the forces she has to meet, and together they retreat for divine strength.

God gave a revelation to Emma Smith, the wife of Joseph. He said at the close of that revelation that what he said to her was his voice to all. In that revelation he told her to be faithful and walk in the paths of virtue, and God would preserve her life and she should receive her inheritance in Zion. She was told to comfort her husband; to lay aside the things of this world and seek for the things of a better; to be meek and to beware of pride, and to keep God's commandments continually.

In our picture of Zion, we see each home set in order as God has commanded.

The excuse that we are living in the last days and it is only the fulfillment of prophecy when children are disobedient to parents, is not heard, for child training has become an art through a thorough preparation by study and prayer. A beautiful environment is placed around the children of Zion, and they absorb the beautiful characteristics of those into whose care they are intrusted. They are taught reverence for God and for all things that are holy. They are taught to have respect for each member of the family and for their associates. In all things we find a well-poised home, which is the center of civilization, a miniature Zion.

Imagine now that around each home, if not a farm, there will be found at least a garden where the family can sow, and plant, and reap from the soil the things God has ordained for the health of man. Where they can gather the fruits of the trees, of the vines, and vegetables from above and underneath the soil, and in doing so are made to appreciate the love of God and to exclaim, "My God, how wonderful thou art!"

Each member of the family takes his physical exercise by working in the soil, and the produce is from the labors of their own hands. They beautify their surroundings with flowers and shrubbery, and I am here reminded of a statement taken from A Popular History of South America and Panama, written by Hezekiah Butterworth, wherein he said, "There are great legends, mostly of noblest representation in poetry and art, that belong to the desk of American tradition. One of these relates to Quetzalcoatl, who came from the Eastern World to Guatemala, and to the golden age that arose under his preaching; when the birds sang never so sweetly; when the flowers bloomed never so brightly; and when a single ear of corn taxed the strength of a man, and no violence was done to man or beast or bird.

Quetzalcoatl, of whom the beautiful bird is still a reminder, according to John Lloyd Stephens, the explorer, is "the most beautiful thing that flies." This Quetzalcoatl is supposed to be the Christ.

Then in Zion we expect to see and hear birds singing as we have never heard them before and see flowers as we have never seen them before.

In each home we will see erected a family altar where each bows in divine presence morning and evening, and each thanks God for Zion; to have the privilege of dwelling in Zion and laboring therein, for in Zion there shall be no idlers.

The mother, having so qualified and understanding the combinations of foods, prepares the same with singleness of heart. The homes are cleanly kept and furnished with the needs and just wants of the family. They live frugally, for the surplus goes to further the cause of Zion. In it are no poor, for the rich are made low and the poor exalted, each having his just wants and needs, and an equal opportunity to provide the same. Their garments are plain, and the beauty is the beauty of the workmanship of their own hands, and they are free from excessive ornamentation. They care not for costly garments, but rather to be clothed in robes of righteousness: they care not to be decked with jewels, but rather seek to be a gem when Christ comes to gather his jewels; they care not to live in palaces, but send up treasures to build their eternal homes; they seek not the honor of this world, but to live day by day to meet divine approval.

They observe the two great commandments.

First: "Love the Lord with all thy heart, mind, might, and strength." Second: "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

The best words to tell you how I vision them living together are found in an old, old hymn. You all know it, perhaps word for word, but I will read it now and perhaps it will seem more beautiful than ever before:

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

Before our Father's throne,
We pour our ardent prayers;
Our fears, our hopes, our aims are one,
Our comforts and our cares.

We share our mutual woes;
Our mutual burdens bear;
And often for each other flows
The sympathizing tear.

This mutual love revives
Our courage by the way;
While each in expectation lives,
And longs to see the day

When from all sin and pain,
The ransomed shall be free;
And perfect love and friendship reign
Through all eternity.

When they meet, they worship in spirit and in truth, and respect with holy reverence their place of worship. They live humbly and meekly. Indeed, they are a peculiar people, living in a peculiar way, so much so that the world will say, Let us go up to Zion and learn of her ways. For the condition in the world will be such as to cause men's hearts to fail them. The floods of destruction are come upon the world, but Zion triumphs.

"Get ye up then to your mountain!
Zion of this closing day!
For the glory of my coming
Waits to break upon your way!
Forth from thence your testimony
Shall to trembling nations go,
And the world confess that with you
God has residence below."

There is born within man a ceaseless urge that spurs him on and on from the cradle to the grave, says one writer. The baby kicks and squirms until he crawls from room to room in search for he knows not what. Soon he toddles out in the great wide world; he is urged on and on, but where? And will he arrive? The tramp, the man in the wagon, the man in the automobile, the man in the airplane, is urged on and on, but will he arrive, and where?

Zion is the thing that creates a ceaseless urge in Latter Day Saints. Will they arrive? Well can we see the inspiration in the words of the song written by our President F. M. Smith, when he said, "Zion the beautiful beckons us on."

The field for the women is opening up as never before and calls for our preparation to enter into the ranks of those who will participate in the redemption of Zion. In our circles, the theme should be Zion. We should accept every avenue of preparation afforded us, and develop physically, mentally, and spiritually, and set ourselves and our homes in order.

Some Essentials of Religion

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

It may be observed that religious concepts differ according to the differences found in human nature. The value of these concepts are evidently in proportion to the intelligence that conceived them and their adaptability to human purposes. Even the various definitions of the term that have been offered indicate something of this intellectual background. Perhaps the most ancient of these is, "Revering the gods." Scripturally revealed it was conduct arising from concepts of God, or God-consciousness expressed in human behavior.

Other definitions of religion show the concept of human association also. Professor Wright defines it as an "Endeavor to secure the conservation of socially recognized values." In his work, The Psychology of Religious Experience, Professor Ames affirms that "Religion is the social consciousness in its most intense form." Doctor Shailer Matthews has noted a common definition as, "Morality tinged with emotion." In this connection he points out, however, that while all religions have an ethical element, not all ethical experiences are by any means religious.

A Changed Concept of Religion

A comparison of early ideas and practices with those of recent time will show a distinct change as having taken place. Among other things, it appears to show that the former contemplation of the future world and things unseen has measurably given place to a more pronounced consideration of the present world and its needs. Not a few observers believe this to be a healthy and normal evolution in religious life. Others are greatly concerned with this, to them, evidence of growing worldliness. But when this contemplation is with a view to the betterment of human affairs, a most intensely religious motive evidently prompts it, for it appears to be quite in accord with the declaration of the Apostle James, that pure religion is "to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from [the vices of—Inspired Version] the world."

There may be, indeed, two distinct motives in the consideration of our fellow man. One of these is to serve man because it is a duty enjoined by God. The other is to render service because the human sympathies are aroused by a brother's need. In many instances both love and duty combine to produce the kindly deed. But is not duty at best simply a stepping-stone to love? And by universal acclaim love is declared to be the supreme quality, of which others are but supplemental.

Religion a Sentiment

Some have feared to recognize love as the foundation of religion because love is a sentiment, and they are doubtful of a religion founded on sentiment. But such should not forget what Doctor Charles W. Eliot has pointed out, that "The great powers of the world are all sentiments." And religion itself is a sentiment, a power of unmeasured greatness, the all-pervading influence of human actions. It is the great stabilizer of human conduct, and preserves the world from chaos. Without it no place on earth would be safe for us. It is in its effect therefore something more than sentiment. It gives direction to sentiment in all the walks of life where man should tread.

From the root of religion the tree of maternal, paternal, and fraternal love derives its symmetry and beauty, and its fruit receives therefrom its most exquisite and satisfying flavor. Without it love is soon turned into the ashes of death, and has no vision beyond the tomb.

So great is the potency of the religious sentiment that it transforms the human into the divine nature by the plan of God. It is the means of making wrongs right, of converting error to truth, of guiding fear to love, of transforming ugliness into beauty, of turning sorrow into joy, of raising from despair to hope, of exchanging bondage for freedom, of resurrecting from death to life. The potent, all-pervading religion that abides when all else has perished is the religion of unselfish love. It is the only religion that successfully answers every challenge, for this concept of religion is self-evident truth.

Is Religion a Mystery?

To some it is a mystery that so many religions infuse the lives of men and yield so many differing and even contradictory ideas and purposes. But I think it can be shown that the more closely our natures harmonize with the divine nature the less these differences exist, for they spring from defects of human nature and not from God. Such religious motives are at times complex, and may contain gold mixed with dross. They are often not understood even by the individual who is moved by them, and quite naturally not by others.

The degree of mystery attaching to religion largely depends upon the ability of the individual to conceive the divine character and purpose. Our limited vision doubtless makes a mystery of many things in religion that are not intended to be mysterious. The motives actuating us are certain to color our viewpoint to some extent, hence the act of God that may be incomprehensible to one is not necessarily so to another person whose concept of justice or other divine quality is more accurate.

To point this thought let us note that religious motives which spring solely from fear are necessarily more distorted than those which arise from a broader concept of the divine nature and purpose. The religion born of fear serves its own cowardice rather than God. It was evidently of such that Carlisle said, "Thou wouldst do little for God if the Devil were dead." Such an individual tries to appease God rather than to serve him, his object being to gain his own selfish and self-centered desires without paying the penalty. His false concepts are sure to yield him an abundant harvest in his perverted nature. To such persons religion is mystery and hypocrisy.

Let us further remember that motives of religious fear are liable to be most dangerous. To them are traced some of the world's great tragedies, most horrible crimes, and many of the most perverted deeds known to history, which have brought untold misery, anguish, and despair to many people. But religion is not intended by the Creator to produce torment, but happiness, righteousness, and well-being. We may largely measure the purity of our faith by this standard, the love standard, and thus come to a clearer realization of ourselves and the ideals inspiring us.

When we consider, however, that true religion springs from the Infinite, the Eternal, the Author of all things, who is wholly comprehended by no one in mortal life, it is not strange that there should be much of mystery in religion to the limited understanding of the human mind. Nevertheless, I believe our experiences show that the purest and most ideal religious concepts are the most clearly understood.

The Anchor of Religion

Of necessity true religion is of the very essence of truth itself. It can not deal in substitutes or in subterfuge. It must be genuine and dependable, and its purpose can not vacillate or swerve. When a small boy I was impressed by the proposition of a leading lecturer on theosophy, that "There is no religion higher than truth." And when I recall the answer of Jesus to Pilate, affirming that he came into the world to "bear witness unto the truth," it seems to me that the application of principles of truth in our lives must put our souls in harmony with the divine Author and Finisher of our faith.

But the deep sea of eternal life has never been sounded by man, hence progressive revelations of truth from the Infinite Intelligence are essential to the attainment of life's great purpose. Having been created in the image and likeness of God, we are permitted to call God our Father and to endeavor to be like him in character. Religion is the means by which we may attain this great end. It needs no argument to show that the path of this accomplishment must be lighted by the rays of heaven, for to attain the divine nature we must have glimpses of that which is divine. This must come to man by revelation from him who possesses the divine nature in fullness. It is revealed religion.

From this it will be rightly inferred that revealed religion deals with the adjustment of man's nature to the divine nature. A true concept of God is the result of revelation from God, just as a right understanding of his will is derived only from a revelation of his will. Revealed religion is therefore the only religion authorized of God, and may be possessed and expressed in human conduct by means of the divine authority. The revelation of God to man consists primarily in a revelation of the God-nature with a view to inspiring human endeavor in the right direction. The organization of the divinely authorized church was the outgrowth of this purpose, and is essentially God's instrument of its accomplishment through associate and unified action of his Saints.

Emotional response has always been a native quality of higher forms of religion, and when it consists of a response to the revealed will of God it results in that relationship with God which is fundamental to the purpose of revealed religion, and is the dynamic power in its constructive work. Without it the divine purpose can not be executed by man. We can not have a religion that will anchor our little barks on the tempestuous sea of life when we rule divine revelation out of our faith and practice. Without it comes back like an engulfing billow the uncertain wave of human caprice by which the world has been tossed and wrecked through the centuries.

Every Christian is, by virtue of his or her relationship to Jesus Christ, an evangel, one whose business it is to disseminate the gospel, which "is the power of God unto salvation."—Abe F. Bennett.

Education

BY S. F. MATHER

Latin, Educatus, brought up.

French, ex and ducero, to bring up.

Systematic and practiced habits of study produce education and culture.

The chief object of this article is to foster and encourage the art of reading to its very highest proficiency. At the present time, owing to a much overcrowded curricula, there is a tendency to overlook and neglect due attention to the fundamental elements of education, commonly called the three R's, viz, reading, writing, and arithmetic. The first of these is undoubtedly the most important.

Of all literature, ours is the richest in that manner of great writing that tells the deepest things in the most simple language. The masterpiece in this kind is our Authorized Version of the Bible. We have no finer narrative or lyrical prose, none simpler, more vivid, or more direct in its human appeal. We will do well to restore the Bible to the place it once held in the heart of the people.

Doctor J. H. Hertz, chief rabbi, says of the Bible, "It is the foundation of English literature. It is not only a book, but a library, written by princes, warriors, prophets, priests, peasants, courtiers, dreamers, martyrs, sages, and merchants. Quantitatively and qualitatively it is a book of great influence." Huxley pronounces it as the "Magna Charta" of the poor and oppressed. General Smuts says, "The father of the League of Nations is Isaiah of Jerusalem."

In the sixteenth century, people were not allowed to read the Bible. Henry VII prohibited the reading of it (officers of state were exempt). Catholic Queen Mary was still more rigorous and forbade it under penalty of death.

Doctor Franklin's family possessed a Bible and concealed it under the lid of a stool.

The British and Foreign Bible Society has circulated considerably over 300,000,000 copies.

To properly understand the Bible is an education in itself of untold worth.

The effort to discover something that would discredit it has often demonstrated more convincingly its reliability.

There is a book who runs may read,
Which heavenly truth imparts;
And all the love its scholars need,
Pure eyes and Christian hearts.

Our forefathers certainly spoke a nobler and purer language than we, and perhaps knew purer and nobler aspirations from their intimate knowledge and love of the Bible.

The late Right Honorable John Bright, Esquire,

M. P., attributed his well-earned reputation for eloquence to his being taught to read a portion of the Bible daily.

The prevalence of bad literature, cheap, flashy, and shoddy, is the greatest obstacle to the acquisition of a taste for the good. We should do all in our power to read and relish the best.

In the present day, when cramming for examinations has so largely usurped the place of real education, we are tempted to estimate the value of all subjects of study according to their direct and immediate utility, and not as to their service towards mental growth and self-improvement. Thus real education is obstructed and degraded.

See Doctrine and Covenants, 85:36: "Seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom."

The last century has seen within its own limits two great periods of literature, each remarkable for poetry, imaginative fiction, and noble essays.

In the first half there lived and wrote Samuel Taylor Coleridge, William Wordsworth, George Gordon, Lord Byron, and Walter Scott.

The three greatest writers of fiction of the latter half are William Makepeace Thackeray, Charles Dickens, and George Eliot.

The two greatest historians are Thomas Babington Macaulay and Thomas Carlyle. The two greatest poets of this period are Alfred Tennyson and Robert Browning. The two noblest prose writers are Matthew Arnold and John Ruskin.

Style and vigorous expression in the majority both of poets and prose writers, have risen to a greater height in this latter half of the nineteenth century than they ever did before in the history of England.

As a test of citizenship we are asked today, "Which do we know most about, the history, development, constitution, and laws of the country which give us freedom, or the dance, the play, and the sex novel which hold us in thrall?"

In the time of George III (1760-1820), education was confined to the wealthy and professional classes. Even in 1837 only fifty-eight persons in every one hundred could read and write, and in the beginning of the century there were many fewer.

In Scotland things were very much better. Thanks to the parish schools, the children even of the poorest had a fair education.

In 1870 the Elementary Education Act was passed. The chief object of this bill was the creation of school boards in all parts of England where they were needed, and making attendance compulsory.

The chief object of education is to enable us to be efficiently useful in the business of life, both temporally and spiritually.—The Envoy, London, England.

Keys and First Apostles

BY ELDER J. M. STUBBART

In God's great plan of redemption, he has placed certain responsibilities and conferred certain rights and authority on suitable persons for the accomplishment of special purposes. Such responsibilities have carried with them the right to go to God, the fountain of all true knowledge, to receive light and wisdom necessary to perform the work required of them. This right, privilege, and authority in the Scriptures is called a key or keys.

All people have the right to go to God for light and wisdom; but, as God has placed added responsibility on individuals, he has extended this right and privilege in proportion to the responsibility.

Ordination to different offices gives keys in proportion to the responsibility placed on the individual. Ordination to the Melchisedec priesthood gives "power and authority over all the offices in the church . . . and is to hold the keys of the spiritual blessing of the church; to have the privilege of receiving the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven; to have the heavens opened unto them; . . . to enjoy the communion and presence of God the Father," etc. (Doctrine and Covenants 104:9.) The privilege enjoyed by the lesser priesthood is not so great.

Christ, when speaking to the apostles, said, "I have chosen you and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever you should ask the Father in my name he may give it you."—John 15:16.

This shows the rights conferred by ordination.

Christ held the key of salvation. He opened and closed the door. (Revelation 3:7.) Michael, or Adam, held similar keys under Christ, "The Holy One." (Doctrine and Covenants 77:3.) Moroni held the "keys of the record of the stick of Ephraim." Elias held the keys of "restoration" for the latter days. Elijah held the "keys of the power of turning the hearts of the fathers to the children," etc. (Doctrine and Covenants 26:2.) Peter, to whom Christ gave the title of "seer" (John 1:42, Inspired Translation), was commissioned by Christ to hold the "keys of the kingdom of heaven." (Matthew 16:19.) Just before Christ's ascension, he conferred those keys on James and John, as well as Peter, in this language: "Unto you three I will give this power and the keys of this ministry until I come." (Doctrine and Covenants 7:2.)

Peter, James, and John in turn conferred the keys of this ministry upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery as recorded thus:

And also with Peter, James, and John, whom I have sent unto you, by whom I have ordained you and confirmed you to be apostles and special witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry.—Doctrine and Covenants 26:3.

I have given unto him [Joseph Smith] the keys of the mystery of those things which have been sealed, even things which were from the foundation of the world, and the things which shall come from this time until the time of my coming, if he abide in me, and if not, another will I appoint in his stead.—Doctrine and Covenants 34: 4; Book of Commandments 37: 19.

Joseph, or his successor, was to hold those keys, like Peter, James, and John, till Christ comes. Joseph, or his successor, who held the keys, was to be "at the head of the church, for I have given him the keys of the mysteries and revelations, which are sealed, until I appoint unto them another in his stead." (Doctrine and Covenants 27: 2; Book of Commandments 30: 6.)

Joseph was to be "at the head of the church" for this reason, "for I have given him the keys of the mysteries," etc. He was not only to be "at the head of the church," but he and his successors were to be the only ones to receive "commandments and revelations" to govern the church. The Lord said:

Behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, no one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church, except my servant, Joseph, for he received them even as Moses; and thou [Oliver] shall be obedient unto the things which I shall give unto him, even as Aaron.—Doctrine and Covenants 27: 2; Book of Commandments 30: 2, 3.

Hiram Page, about this time, had received revelations from a stone that were not right. God told Oliver Cowdery to tell him they were not of God, but the Devil had deceived him:

For behold these things have not been appointed unto him, neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants, for all things must be done in order and by common consent in this church, by the prayer of faith.—Doctrine and Covenants 27: 4; Book of Commandments 30: 12, 13.

The Lord would not permit even Oliver Cowdery, who had been ordained an apostle and was to "bear the keys of your ministry" (Doctrine and Covenants 26: 3), with Joseph, to receive revelations to govern the church. (Doctrine and Covenants 27: 2; Book of Commandments 30: 5.)

To give special emphasis to this law, the Lord repeated it and strengthened it in section 43 in the Doctrine and Covenants, and 45 in the Book of Commandments, as follows: "Ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church through him whom I have appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations from my hand, and this ye shall know assuredly, that there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken, if he abide in me."

But verily, verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead; and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations, or commandments; and this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me.—Doctrine and Covenants 43: 1, 2; Book of Commandments 45: 2-6.

None could receive "commandments and revelations" to govern the church "except him and his successors," and none could be his successor except by his appointment.

Joseph's councilors were also to hold "the keys of the kingdom" with him: "They [Sidney Rigdon and F. G. Williams] are accounted as equal with thee in holding the keys of the kingdom." (Doctrine and Covenants 87: 3.)

These "keys of the kingdom," "of the mysteries," "of the ministry" belonged to the First Presidency as a quorum, and not to Joseph, or the first president, only, for we read:

My servant, Joseph Smith, jr., unto whom I have given the keys of the kingdom, which belongeth always unto the presidency of the high priesthood.—Doctrine and Covenants 80: 1.

As the keys "belongeth always" to the "presidency of the high priesthood," those to whom they were given must have held place in that quorum.

Oliver Cowdery was ordained an apostle to "bear the keys of your ministry." (Doctrine and Covenants 26: 3.) He was to hold the "keys of this gift, which shall bring to light this mystery." (Doctrine and Covenants 16: 12, 13.) He was to hold the "gift of Aaron," "and you shall hold it in your hand and do marvelous works." (Doctrine and Covenants 8: 3.) This likely was the Urim and Thummim, as Aaron held that. He was also to translate. He and Joseph were the "first apostles." He is often mentioned in Church History as one of the "heads" or "presidents" of the church. And in naming the committee to prepare copy for Doctrine and Covenants, the following appears:

Moved that presiding elders, Joseph Smith, jr., Oliver Cowdery, Sidney Rigdon, and Frederick G. Williams compose said committee.—Doctrine and Covenants 108 A: 2.

These statements seem quite clearly to establish the fact that Oliver was one of the presidency, "presiding elder."

Objection may be offered that this was before the high priesthood was given. Yes, before it was given in full, yet elders were ordained the days the church was organized, and Joseph and Oliver had been ordained apostles some time before that by Peter, James, and John. And Joseph was a prophet, seer, translator, and revelator before any human ordination had taken place. They held the divine ordination and only awaited the human confirmation of the same.

The day the church was organized, revelation 17 records that "Joseph Smith, jr., was called of God and ordained an apostle of Jesus Christ, to be the first elder of this church, and Oliver Cowdery, who was called of God an apostle of Jesus Christ, to be the second elder of this church. (Doctrine and Covenants 17: 1; Book of Commandments 24: 3, 4.) History says they were ordained elders on that day, and "before separating on this memorable sixth of April, further revelation was given." (Church History, volume 1, page 79.)

This "further revelation" was section 19 of the Doctrine and Covenants, or 22 of the Book of Commandments.

This revelation says:

Behold there shall be a record kept among you, and in it thou [Joseph] shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ. . . . Wherefore, it behooveth me that he should be ordained by you, Oliver, mine apostle.— Doctrine and Covenants 19: 1, 3; Book of Commandments 22: 1, 13.

At the beginning of this organization meeting, these two men were ordained elders. They then administered the sacrament, then confirmed the members, ordained others, and "before separating" this revelation was given, and in it Oliver is called "mine apostle," and directed to ordain Joseph. The question is, To what office? He had been ordained an elder. This later ordination must have been to the apostleship. The divine ordination had been given; now the human ordination needed to be performed.

At any rate, the Lord called these two men apostles. Yet they never occupied in the Quorum of Twelve Apostles, who were chosen and ordained nearly five years later. These then were the "first apostles."

Christ himself was "the apostle and high priest of our profession." (Hebrews 3: 1.) Webster says, "The first missionary who plants the Christian faith in any region" is an apostle. It was in this sense that Christ was an apostle. For the same reason Joseph and Oliver were rightly ordained apostles, and in this sense Paul evidently used the term when he said, "God hath set in the church, first apostles." (1 Corinthians 12: 28.)

Christ called Peter "a seer." (John 1: 42, I. T.) Joseph was to be recorded "a seer." Both held "the keys of the kingdom." Joseph's counselors were to hold the keys with him. James and John held the keys with Peter. So were evidently his counselors. Peter is always mentioned first, speaking of the three. The New Testament shows that Peter took the lead in selecting Judas's successor, was the chief spokesman on Pentecost and various other occasions, detected the fraud of Ananias and Sapphira, etc. These facts show Peter was at the head of the church after Christ, and one of the "first apostles."

Shortly after Pentecost James was killed. Paul and Barnabas and Andronicus and Junia were men-

What Makes It Rain?

Dan, aged five, was given to asking questions. When something that he wanted to know came into his head, out popped the question, and the nearest adult was at his mercy. One morning in the kindergarten when the other children were modeling, he sat watching the rain splash against the window-pane. Suddenly he called to his teacher, "Miss Rutherford, what makes it rain?"

"This is quiet time," remonstrated Miss Rutherford. "I'll tell you after kindergarten."

After kindergarten Dan's big brother was in too much of a hurry to get home to lunch to wait for Dan to ask any of his questions. "Will you tell me, then, George," begged Dan as he tried to keep step with the long strides of his brother, "what makes it rain?"

"Oh, I'm too wet and hungry to answer questions," replied George in a lordly manner. "Hurry along, kid, or you will be soaked."

When Dan reached home he ran up to his mother's room. "Mother," he began, "what makes——"

"Danny!" exclaimed the child's mother, "take those wet things right downstairs."

Dan obediently shed his wraps below. When he returned, his mother was putting on her hat. In one breath he shouted, "Mother, please tell me what makes it rain!"

"I can't stop, dear; I'm late for my party now. Run down to Pearl and she will give you your lunch."

Dan found Pearl dishing up his soup. "Say, Pearl," he began, "do you know what makes it rain?"

"The Lo'd, I suppose, honey. Now come git yo' lunch." And that was all Dan could get out of Pearl.

All the afternoon it rained, and Dan wandered from the nursery to the kitchen and back again. At the sound of the door bell he peeped over the banisters and spying the visitor rushed downstairs with a joyous cry, "Aunt Grace!" He patted the wet

The fact of their being in the presidency did not take the apostleship from them, for we have learned that Jesus, Joseph, and Oliver were apostles and not of the twelve, but were at the head, hence the "first apostles."

mackintosh. "Auntie," he began before his aunt had time to drop her wet things, "what makes it rain?"

His aunt laughed, knowing that Dan knew that she was an easy victim. "Well, Dan," she replied, "let's see if we can find out." Leading the excited child over to the bookcase, she took down the Century Dictionary and, turning to "Rain," began reading aloud.

"Tell me," interrupted Dan.

"I'll tell you, dear, but I just wanted to show you where we have to go to find out things that we don't know." And letting the little fellow climb up into her lap, Aunt Grace began a laborious explanation in child language, interspersed with many questions, about evaporation, atmospheric saturation, condensation, and so forth. In the midst of it, Dan's mother came home. "Poor Grace!" she exclaimed, "has he cornered you again?"

"Yes," laughed the aunt, "but we've had a fine time, haven't we, Dan?" she asked, giving the child a hug.

"You bet," said Dan, returning the hug, and jumping to the floor he began to tell his mother what makes it rain.

"Why, he really understands it," commented the boy's mother.

"Of course he understands it," replied the aunt. "If we grown people would only take the trouble to inform ourselves first and then answer a child's difficult questions in his own language, we could not only give him some background information, but could also excite his desire for further knowledge. Don't you think so? It seems to me the more we encourage a child's natural desire to know things of this nature the more we are going to help that child to grow into a well-informed man or woman."

"As usual, Grace, you're right; but it does take so much time and energy," replied Dan's mother.—Lucy Chandler Fuller.

Everyone knows the all-pervading influence of literature at the present day, and how much the opinions and passions of mankind are under its control. The mere contests of the sword are temporary; their wounds are but in the flesh, and it is the pride of the generous to forgive and forget them; but the slanders of the pen pierce to the heart; they rankle longest in the noblest spirits; they dwell ever present in the mind, and render it morbidly sensitive to the most trifling collision.—Washington Irving.

Tells of Solomon Salisbury's Life

The following story of the life of Elder Solomon Salisbury, whose death was chronicled in last week's HERALD, will enable a number of the younger Saints to know more of a unique personality and the elements entering into its formation. Many Saints have met "Uncle Solomon," as he was affectionately known, and have heard from his own lips many tales akin to those here recited.—EDITOR.

CARTHAGE, ILLINOIS, January 17.—A picturesque life, the story of which might well supply the theme of an American saga such as "The covered wagon," closed with the death last week on his Hancock County farm, of Solomon J. Salisbury, patriarch and nephew of the Mormon prophet, Joseph Smith.

His was a life span connecting the log cabin with the skyscraper; the prairie schooner with the automobile and the airplane, and was interwoven with much of the history of the Illinois valley. His memories embraced such episodes as the Mormon emigration, the coming of the "iron horse," and the campaign of Abraham Lincoln.

"Uncle Sol" was ninety-one years old and had lived in Hancock county eighty-eight years.

As an infant he was brought by his mother, Catherine Smith Salisbury, a sister of the Mormon prophet, into Missouri in a covered wagon. When proslavery Missourians rose against Joseph Smith and drove his band of Yankees from the State, his mother carried Solomon in her arms as she floundered through the snow and crossed the ice-bound Mississippi to Quincy, then to Nauvoo, Illinois, where the Latter Day Saints established a city—now only a shadow—which in 1844 had twice the population of Chicago.

One of his earliest memories was of being carried by his mother into the famous $1,000,000 temple at Nauvoo.

Of recent years his birthday celebrations have been an institution in Hancock County. The anniversary was the occasion of a picnic in the big grove near his farm, a day of rustic sports and feasting, in which the entire countryside, old and young, participated. Oratory rang out under the trees, the band played, and the juicy apple pies for which the Salisbury menage was noted were consumed by the hundred.

On these occasions the patriarch would give rein to his memories and entertain his guests with reminiscences of the early days.

Among the many pictures he would conjure up was one of a log cabin where, in 1840, with some of his schoolmates from the log schoolhouse near Carthage, he went to visit an old trapper and his wife.

For breakfast, he recalled, the woman grated corn meal and baked it in rude cakes on the hot coals of the fireplace. Bouncing the cakes out onto the hearth to remove the ashes, she wiped them with her apron before serving. The children watched her hungrily as she set the johnny cakes on the table with wild honey, wild plums, buttermilk, and venison. For dinner they had wild turkey.

Indians roved Hancock County at that time, and game of all kinds was plentiful. It cost twenty-five cents to get a letter from the post office after it had arrived by stage coach. Wheat was cut with a sickle and tramped out as in Bible times.

"Uncle Sol" lived to see these primitive customs give way to modern life, and on his eighty-ninth birthday, despite the protests of his anxious relatives, he made his first flight in an airplane.

In the summer of 1844, the anti-Mormon feeling rose to such a height that his uncles, Joseph and Hyrum Smith, were killed by a mob at Carthage. Warnings were pinned at night to the door of his mother's cabin, stating that unless they left at once, they would be burned out and shot.

They fled to Beardstown, but encountered such hostility that they proceeded to Nauvoo in a covered wagon. That was a bitter winter, and their sufferings were intense. Ice formed on the river to a depth of three feet.

The family might have found asylum in Utah with Brigham Young and his colony, but Solomon's mother was opposed to polygamy and could not be reconciled to Young for advocating it, especially as he had placed the responsibility on the shoulders of her brother, Joseph Smith, after the latter's death.

Solomon's father died of typhoid fever, leaving the family destitute among their enemies. These were bitter days for the boy, who was persecuted by his schoolmates and his neighbors as a Mormon. Even when helping the harvest hands, he was obliged to trudge back to his home for dinner, as the farmers' wives, because of the prejudice against the sect, refused to have him eat at their tables.

His first love affair, owing to the same prejudices, was a tragedy. The girl's parents broke off the engagement, and the wound thus made in the young man's heart remained throughout the years that followed.

Marrying another girl, he rented a farm, but this time encountered political obstacles and was told by his landlord that if he voted for Lincoln he would have to leave the farm. He disobeyed the edict, voted as his conscience dictated, and took the consequences.

As a minister of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints, "Uncle Sol" remained true to his faith.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

Officers' and Teachers' Meeting

We are encouraged by an increasing number of reports coming to the office stating that in many places monthly officer and teacher meetings are being successfully held for the first time, using the outline prepared in the HERALD. It is with this hope that they are published. Teachers and officers who have had but limited opportunity for educational advancement should welcome this chance to study under direction, that they may be better qualified for their tasks.

Preparation for teaching and leadership does not consist alone in study, any more than it does in inspiration alone. We should "seek learning, even by study and also by faith." While we put forth our utmost effort to gain knowledge of human nature and of the pupils we are to teach, we should also learn and observe the important laws of the teaching and learning processes, and we should ourselves know and appreciate the beautiful, life-giving truths we would teach. We must, ourselves, exemplify in great measure the plan we would have others adopt. We must have faith in the gospel we would teach. We can not love as the Christ loved when he came into the world to teach.

Lesson for February

Theme: The Knowledges of Most Worth.

Text: Betts, How to Teach Religion, Chapter IV.

The child mind in infancy is a blank, but a potential seed bed in which we may plant what we will. As he grows he instinctively responds to the appeal of religion, but the kind and quality, if not the quantity of his religious ideas and concepts, will depend upon the religious atmosphere of his home and community and the instruction and training he receives.

That religious knowledge is fruitful which can at once be set to work in shaping attitudes, molding ideals, guiding conduct. That knowledge is of most worth which promises most effectively to awaken and quicken the dormant spiritual forces of the individual, giving to his life purpose, poise, richness, and power as a revelation of the Spirit of God which dwells within.

The child's concept of God must be essentially true and definite enough to enlist his love and prompt his following in the God-directed way. The child's idea of God as a Gradually, as fanaticism died out, he gained the respect of his neighbors and was honored by them with the offices of supervisor, tax collector, and justice of the peace. Religious differences were forgotten on the occasion of his famous birthday parties.

"Uncle Sol" came from staunch New England stock. His grandfather, Gideon Salisbury, was captain of the New York Light Horse in the Revolutionary War. His great-grandfather, Solomon Mack, fought with Israel Putnam's forces in the French and Indian Wars, and with the Green Mountain Boys in the Revolution.

He was a direct descendant of the Smiths and Goulds who founded Topsfield, Massachusetts, and of the Loomis, Gates, and Spencer families, who contributed soldiers to the colonial wars and statesmen to the colonial legislatures.—Chicago Evening Post, January 18.

loving heavenly Father and of Christ as our elder brother, Savior, Companion, and Friend need never change. The child shall expand and extend his ideas as he gains experience. But all teaching which leads to concepts which must later be admitted as false, is an obstacle in the way of spiritual development.

The child's concept of religion must be a growing consciousness of certain guiding principles which are taking shape in his life in harmony with which he finds his supreme satisfactions. This growth is stimulated by instruction, guided by wise counsel, and given depth of meaning through the example of worthy men and women who daily live the Christ ideal. It should be accompanied by such an emotional response on the part of the individual that his day's work and play and worship are illumined by his nearness to God.

Religion must be inseparably connected with life. Christ came to reveal the way, to exemplify the law, and the gospel has been restored in organized form in latter days, yet religion is not chiefly a matter of formal obedience to law or outward show of observance. Effective religion must find Christlike expression in the thought and deeds of every hour of every day.

Those truths of biblical and moral teaching are most vital which serve to stir his imagination, fire his ambition, and harden his will for righteous endeavor. Day by day must there be cultivated in the child heart, mind, and muscle those personal characteristics which shall enable him to become successively the child, youth, and adult contemplated in his sonship with God.

The Bible, with its parallel in the Book of Mormon, and supplemented with latter-day revelation, is the natural storehouse of the spiritual wisdom of the ages and contains the revelation of God's will so far as given down to our day. If we would have a working knowledge of the Way of Life, we must lay hold upon the promises of God and gain inspiration and guidance through acquaintance with the fundamental truths declared and found effective in the three books.

In evaluating and selecting passages of scripture for use in religious education, it is not so important how many are memorized or studied and forgotten, but how many truths are daily being builded into character.

The plan of salvation was first taught to Adam, it was lived and taught by patriarchs and prophets of old, it was given fresh meaning and emphasis by Christ, and it has been revealed again in its fullness in latter days. The church has ever been the center of religious thought and expression.

The child should be led to sense the power resident in a godly life and ministered to humanity through the priesthood of the church. He should realize the helpful mission of the church and be encouraged to give hearty and loyal support to its ideals and its program. As his knowledge and appreciation grow, he should be led to give himself in membership and service in the church.

The child's early notion of the church will be gained from his intimate experiences in home, Sunday school, and church. Gradually his concept should grow more definite and clear as he learns to appreciate the particular meaning of our own faith, belief, and church program. There should also be cultivated a feeling of tolerance and respect for the religious beliefs and customs of others. By all means there should be afforded a general knowledge of the history of the Christian church from the days of Christ, through the Apostasy, the Dark Ages, the Reformation, and the Restoration.

Music and art must be given a large place in religious feeling and expression.

Note: Several pages of this chapter express the popular sectarian view of the universal Christian church. It shall be only in the true spirit of the Master that we shall be able to maintain the integrity of our own faith without engendering denominational prejudice on the one

NEWS AND LETTERS

Peace or War?

The metaphysicians are right. We do not create conditions by the images we hold in mind. If your mind attaches the image of opposition to your wife or child or partner or friend, you will surely get opposition from each and all of them. If, instead, you give them the face of peace, from them you will get peace and help. If we shall learn that difference does not mean opposition, we shall learn a great lesson.

We may conceive that the universe was created in some such way as this: God being one, and in a large sense all, conceived the idea of creating individuality other than himself, agency other than his own, difference that must learn not to be opposition. Whether by successive acts of fiat limitation, or by processes of evolution, he will develop individuality and agency into an understanding that shall bring all back into a multiple unity.

All things in this world tend to group and recombine, tending toward a greater oneness. We see the greatness and the truth of the vision of a poet or a president in the "Parliament of man," the federation of the world. The scattered beginnings of learning, of science, have grown and come together into one mass. As a boy I studied some separate sciences. My children began with the study of "general science."

History exhibits a thousand attempts to find God—a thousand crude gods created in human imagination. These primitive thinkers even conceived wars between the gods. But these ideas of God grew larger and approached each other. Paul declared the Athenians ignorant worshippers of the true God. Today who does not see some relation between his religion and that of others? How few now speak intolerantly of the religion of another.

Could we but see the unity of intent and purpose that lies beneath our surface differences—what deep strivings for the same ends we utilize by our conflicts—what gross misunderstandings our mental image of our brother leads us into; what penitence we would feel, what words would we recall, what superstructures would we sweep away, that we might build the glorious temple of God and man upon the foundation that we know is steadfast and sure.

Today, standing on the sidelines of the work of the Latter Day Saints, I see one of the finest inspirations ever crystallized into an organization, threatened with defeat because hand, or an unwarranted conceding of denominational claims on the other. It must be remembered, too, that our major emphasis must be upon the child and his needs, rather than upon subject matter. In this lesson we have turned aside to consider one of the important means or tools to be used in the religious development of the child.

Suggested Topics for Written Papers or Oral Discussion

1. How shall we teach our children to understand and appreciate God?
2. By what tests would you determine the most fruitful knowledge to give a child?
3. How shall we connect religion with life?
4. Discuss means of helping a class to become familiar with the Scriptures and to rightly value them.
5. What attitude shall we cherish toward churches other than our own?
6. Suggest ways and means of securing religious values through music and art.

Brothers, although no longer one of you, I would give my life to tear from you this false mask, that you might see each other as you are. There are self-seeking men among you, but they are few, very few. Their end is near, God pity them. Let the rest of you know that while each one has his errors, they can be submerged in the great tide of progress that will sweep on when you, each and all, are ready to surrender. Surrender, not your judgment of men, but your opposition to them: When you are ready, from the greatest to the least of you, to examine self for error, and finding it, to have charity for a brother's fault.

The days in which your church was founded were great days of divine impulse for human betterment. Even agnostics like Marx and Engels were touched with the need of human brotherhood and propounded socialism. In the Protestant churches there was an inspiration toward a higher spirituality. Your founder caught the inspiration of this divine impulse more clearly. He saw the connection between material and spiritual brotherhood, and laid down some outlines for its expression in the body of the church. Today, there is no other movement in the world with such an opportunity for expressing the interdependence of body and spirit, of the temporal and the spiritual.

I am not a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but sometimes I think that a little seership is granted to me. This I see clearly: Differences exaggerated into opposition; opposition growing into animosity; contention for and against a few words blinding men and hiding God. I draw the veil over the end of the vision in the hope that a revival of the spirit of humble, faithful brotherhood may prevent its fulfillment.

May God help you to see through your masks of opposition, to see each other face to face.

Your brother,
A. J. KECK.

January 25.—The new year has brought new officers and workers into service, and as a result new ideas are being put over which we hope will bring much better success than those they have replaced. As the army of the Lord moves forward, it needs these new ideas to help meet present needs more advantageously.

The Department of Women has changed its leader. Sister Fortune Davis now leads the work, and Sister Fullmer is assistant. The sisters met at the home of Sister E. H. Lewis the first Thursday afternoon in January to make plans for 1927. One of their decisions is to put twenty-five dollars each month into the building fund. On the 25th, this department handed seven hundred dollars to the building fund, and paid the balance of their tithing to our local agent. This amounted to twenty-nine dollars. The sisters are not forgetful of the Lord's share; and in everything they make, the Lord receives his tenth.

On January 20 the department met at the home of Sister Freburg, and our pastor met with them and expressed his appreciation and the appreciation of the church for the work they have done and what they are planning to do. He will meet with this department as often as he can, at least once a month, and talk about the Doctrine and Covenants.

The Sunday school is in action, with a good band of officers and teachers. The Religio is on the job, and pictures have been shown at its meetings this month. Brother Glen McMickle has been the lecturer and has made things very interesting. Brother Myron La Pointe is the president of this department, and Sister Mildred Hunt secretary.

We are happy to find Brother Glen McNickle a boys' leader with his group of boys, all members of the Y. M. C. A., where they will meet for recreation and thus keep the boys fit, in order that they will always be ready for action.

Sometime ago Brother Howell Price wrote a play entitled "Grandpa's birthday," and his daughter, Sister E. Hughes, put this play into action and gave him a big surprise on his seventy-first birthday. There was a large attendance, and the surprise was a real one. Refreshments were served.

Speakers for this past month have been the pastor, Brothers La Pointe and Albert Erskine. Considering the amount of cold weather we have had, the attendance at services has been good. Forward to 1930 and beyond is our motto. Let's go.

The Way of the World?

Another Christmas has come and gone. In how many homes among Saints was the day celebrated in the true Christmas spirit as the birthday of the Savior of the world, a day of giving to the needy, to the missionary, to the Auditorium Fund, to the church in the name of that Savior?

To how many children, and adults, too, did it mean just "Santa Claus"? To how many did it mean a burden, a giving of costly presents to those who had no need, simply because they knew presents would come to them and they would be expected to give back?

How many pastors and Sunday school superintendents took this opportunity to teach the children the great lesson, the beautiful lesson of the most important event in all the history of mankind—the birth of a Redeemer? And how many schools featured the Christmas tree and Santa Claus? Would we be far wrong if we hazarded a guess that this last was largely in the majority?

When, oh, Lord, are we going to learn that, though we are in the world, we must not be of the world? When heed the injunction, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that we receive not of her plagues"?

Is the Christmas celebration the only thing in which we follow after the way of the world? Or is it pretty much everything else?

Does our attitude toward the fashions in clothing, both male and female, our ideas about cars and household furnishings differ one whit from the way of the world? Do we, like the world, spend all we can make in keeping up appearances, in putting on as good a front as the Jones family next door? Like the world, are we running after doctors and medicines and operations, instead of using the plan God gave us for taking care of our bodies and having them healed?

How does the power of the God-given priesthood compare, in the average home, to the power of the doctor, the druggist, and the hospital? How many times must the elder wait (if he is called at all) while the doctor sees the patient first?

Where is our faith? In God? or is it in so-called science, in the arm of flesh?

How about the food we eat? Must we keep up with the world in that, too, even if that way leads to sickness and premature death? Must we turn night into day, and day into night, because the world does?

What shall I think when I read the promise in section 83, Doctrine and Covenants: "And any man that shall go and preach this gospel of the kingdom, and fail not to continue faithful in all things, shall not be weary in mind, neither darkened, neither in body, limb, or joint," and then look around me and fail to see scarcely one member of the priesthood, all down the ranks, from high to low, in whom that promise is being fulfilled?

Why are the minds of many of the priesthood darkened so that they turn away from the truth in part, or in whole? Why are so many of them nearly physical wrecks in one way or another? Why do some suffer a nervous breakdown that impairs their usefulness to the church and causes them untold suffering physically and mentally? Why do many of these men fail to demonstrate the promise in the latter part of section 86?

Is the key to the answer in the significant words, "and fail not to continue faithful in all things"? Is the word of God true, and does the fault lie in unfaithfulness? If so, in what are these men unfaithful? They are making great sacrifices for the work, leaving home and loved ones, devoting life itself to the cause, moral, upright, righteous as the world and the church judge righteousness; and still the promise is not fulfilled. What, then, is the reason for this lack of response on the part of God?

In spite of all of the beautiful promises of protection to us as the favored people of God, are we any more protected from sickness, accidents, plagues, and calamities than our Catholic and Protestant friends who claim nothing?

If we believe that God is true, where lies the trouble? Is the answer found in the fact that the whole church, with few exceptions, is running after the way of the world? Who can deny this charge? In just what lies the peculiarity that marks the Saint from the people of the world today? Wouldn't it tax our imagination considerably to find many points of difference?

Are we, who claim to believe the Doctrine and Covenants, and yet completely ignore much of its plain teachings, and treat with contempt and ridicule, and even with anger, those who do try to keep the advice therein given, very much superior in the sight of God, to the men who went out from us, openly and frankly declaring that they do not believe that book as the revelations of God?

When Zion is redeemed, I say when, not if, it will not be in the way of the world; it will not be by a people who pattern after the world! it will be redeemed by a people who come out of the world and are not partakers of her sins and who receive not of her plagues; a people who consecrate their lives by sacrifice on the altar of love through obedience to the smallest injunction given in the three books.

"I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise."

May God hasten the day when the priesthood of this church awaken to the fact that it will need all the gospel to redeem Zion; that we need it all taught, and that we need some teaching by example as well as by precept.

H. W. ELLISON.

Christmas Activity in Norway

(A letter to the Quorum of Apostles.)

The month of December is always a quiet month in Norway as far as missionary work is concerned. Christmas is quite an event in this country, and much preparation is made for it. The housewives begin about December 1, cleaning house, baking cakes, and doing numerous other things so that all can be in order for Christmas, at which time much eating, drinking, visiting, and making merry is indulged in. During this period of preparation and often during the holidays, it is impossible to get people to attend church. Even our own members do not want many meetings at that time. However I was able to hold six preaching services during the month and twelve other services, but our attendance has not been large.

We have devoted considerable time to practicing the children for their Christmas program. The date set for the program was yesterday (January 2). It was necessary for us to rent a larger building than our church in which to have the program, for we knew we would have a large crowd. The children alone fill our building. As it has been the custom at this place to have a Christmas tree social affair for the children each year, we decided to have that the same day as the program. It began yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. The Sunday school children and their parents were invited. We charged a small admission fee to cover the expenses of the affair. There were 127 children and 76 adults who paid admissions. There were others admitted who didn't have the money to pay with. In all we had about 215 people present.

Soon after the people began to gather, they started marching around the Christmas tree and singing songs, as is the custom here. About 4.30 I called the people to order, and we opened the meeting with song and prayer, after which I gave a short address of welcome and made some explanation about our Sunday school work and its object. We then began serving refreshments, it taking about three hours to serve so many people. Only thirty could sit at the table at a time. Santa Claus visited our gathering and gave each one present an orange. His presence was the source of much merriment. Sister Ruch had made 150 sticks of candy, which were given away to the children.

At eight o'clock our program began. It consisted of songs, music, drills, dialogues, and a demonstration by Sister Ruch of the methods employed by her in teaching the Sunday school lessons. There were several who came to the program who were not present earlier in the day. We had at least 250 present to see the program. Many expressions of appreciation were heard, and all seemed well pleased with the program, as well as the social event held just preceding it.

We are to have an Old Folks Day on the sixteenth of this month. Of that I will be able to tell you in my next letter.

I trust that this year of 1927 will bring much peace, prosperity, and spirituality to the church.

BØN, NORWAY, January 3.

V. D. RUCH.

Montrose, Iowa

January 22.—At the yearly business meeting of the branch, the following officers were elected: President, Orval T. Miller; clerk, Ida B. Holmes; acting deacon, Joseph H. Reed. All called officers were sustained in their office and calling; Orval T. Miller, elder; B. F. Strange, priest; Joseph H. Reed, priest; Raymond N. Smith, priest and teacher. Sister Ida B. Holmes was appointed publicity agent. At the annual Sunday school election, the following were chosen: superintendent, Raymond N. Smith; assistant superintendent, B. F. Strange; treasurer, Sister Beulah Smith; secretary, Sister Vallie Strange; teacher of adult Bible class, Sister Ida B. Holmes, assisted by Orval T. Miller. To the writer, the outlook for the branch is very encouraging. At present there is a great degree of unity and peace existing, and the Spirit's power is very manifest.

In June the branch was greatly strengthened by a series of meetings conducted by Patriarch Ammon White, who by his logical preaching and his wholesome, fatherly advice wonderfully strengthened the branch. In September Brother Bevan, district president, preached some powerful sermons to the edification of many. In November Brother Nephi Snively preached for one week, and as a result one sister, Ruth Poole, united with the church. A short time ago our hearts were made glad when Junior and Wendell Smith, two small boys of the Sunday school, united with the church. Thus we see the influence and results of godly training in the home where children from infancy are trained in the fear and admonition of the Lord and where prayers daily ascend to the throne of grace for their protection.

Sister Beulah Smith and Vallie Strange, feeling that there was not enough sociability in the branch, started a plan whereby a party would be given on the birthday of each member of the branch, providing it was so desired. So far, four parties have been held at different homes, and a watch night meeting at Brother and Sister Strange's home.

The midweek prayer meetings are being held at the homes of the members, and all testify to the great good received from thus assembling together. Church services are held at the church.

Because of sickness prevailing among the members of the branch, some thought it advisable to set aside a time for fasting and prayer, so some went to the church a half hour before Sunday school and prayed for the restoration of the sick. We were gratified to know that our prayers were in a measure answered, and one sister, in particular, gave God the glory because her health was improved.

The writer has been assisted in her work as publicity agent by Sister Beulah Smith, Brother Joseph Reed, and Brother B. F. Strange. Sister Smith has sent many papers to those she knew would be helped by them. Brother Reed has distributed HERALDS among his friends in Keokuk, where he teaches. Brother Strange, because of his deep humility and consecrated Christian life, has been able to do much good among his fellow laborers in the pen factory at Fort Madison, where he has distributed tracts and also sold some religious books.

We would ask you to remember our branch in your prayers, that the work of the Lord may continue to grow and prosper.

IDA B. HOLMES.

Fall River, Massachusetts

January 20.—Last Thursday evening the Department of Women met at the home of Sister Mathison for the election of officers. Sister Olive Chelline was chosen president; Sister Mary Bowden, vice president; Sister Margaret Chesworth, secretary, and Sister Sophia Brodie, treasurer. This department looks forward to a prosperous year. Several of the younger women have joined them. Sister Mathison served a bountiful lunch. It was the first meeting in her beautiful new home on the Highlands.

The election of officers of the Sunday school took place January 17. Ralph Baldwin, the youngest deacon of the branch, was elected superintendent; Elvin Baldwin, assistant superintendent; Donald Chesworth, secretary and treasurer; Wilfred Brindley, pianist; Margaret Chesworth, primary department superintendent, and Sophia Brodie and Florence Wood, cradle roll superintendents; Mary Bowden, librarian. This business meeting was very well attended, and Elder Herman Chelline urged all to make extra effort to attend prayer service.

The Sunday school gave twenty-five dollars to the branch for coal, and also will help the branch pay for a vacuum cleaner.

In the issue of SAINTS' HERALD January 5, it was stated there was no church service in the evening of December 26. The snow ceased falling, and Elder Chelline came out and preached to several. The writer was told they were well repaid for going.

Sister Myra Cockcroft was at Boston last week for treatment, and was quite ill for a while there. Sister Beatrice Sinclair and Sister Sarah Fisher cared for her. Sister Myra states that she never will forget the kindness of the Boston people to her.

Elder Herman Chelline will be the speaker at New Bedford January 23. During the week he will go to Haverhill, Massachusetts, and from there to Dover, New Hampshire, to hold special services.

Mishawka, Indiana

January 20.—The new year has found the Saints of South Bend and Mishawaka hopefully looking forward to a year of service. There is much to do where the work is just being established, and it is an earnest band here that is trying to accomplish this work.

On December 12 six members were added by baptism, four adults and two children. The day was spent at the church and will be one long remembered by the branch as the Lord remembered us with an especial portion of his Spirit. Then on January 2, Brother John Hoover, the husband of Sister Maude Hoover, who labored and prayed that the work of the Lord might be established here, made a covenant with the Lord by baptism. Brother Hoover had been converted to the gospel for years, but had never shown any interest until now. He has given a full, consecrated spirit, dedicated to service.

All services of the group are well attended. There is a deep interest in all the books of the church. One thing that is very nice here is that with few exceptions husbands and wives are coming into the work together. There seems to be a general desire to keep the full law, and we believe a splendid foundation is being laid for the future of the gospel here in South Bend. The blessing of the gospel is following those that believe, and the Saints are not left without testimony. It touches one's soul to hear strong men, who have never borne testimony or made any profession, so earnestly help in all the services of the church.

At our recent election of Sunday school officers, Brother Lee Coonfare was chosen superintendent, with Brother Forest Myers as assistant.

The Saints are hoping a series of meetings can be arranged when King Winter's reign is ended. We are hopefully looking forward.

Galva, Illinois

It may be of interest to the readers of the HERALD to know that we have made a start to establish the work here at Galva. For years there has been a scattered membership here but no regular services. Elder James Lord came to Galva in 1867 and lived here to the end of his life. His daughter, Mrs. A. E. Bridgeman, and Brother A. E. Bridgeman still live here and have done much for the work in years gone, when elders and missionaries have held meetings here, mostly at private homes. For several years the reunion of the Kewanee District has been held at Spring Lake, about two miles northwest of the city. During these reunions, or at least some of them, preaching services have been held in the city park, and quite a few have heard of the work by that means. In August, 1926, Elder and Mrs. J. O. Dutton, of Madison, Wisconsin, located here, and in August Missionary L. Houghton and J. O. Dutton held a ten-day series at the city park with some degree of success. Then Sister Dutton followed up with tracts to those who attended the park meetings.

On January 2 the Saints here having rented a hall and furnished it for services, Elder Edward Jones, president of the Kewanee Branch, organized a Sunday school with twenty charter members. Thomas Niece is superintendent; Sister A. E. Bridgeman, assistant superintendent. On the 16th Elder Dutton began a series of meetings in the hall, to continue two weeks. The hall would seat one hundred and fifty if we had the seats and the people to fill them. We now have only fifty chairs, but more will be had as needed.

Elder A. E. Davis, district president, and Elder L. Houghton will be welcome for services, as will any other elders who can give a helping hand.

The second Sunday in January, Elder Edward Jones, of Kewanee, was the speaker. He and others of the priesthood of Kewanee will help out here at Galva when Brother Dutton is at his field, in central Illinois. So in due time, if the Saints are faithful, we hope to see a branch organized here. Come over and help us.

J. O. DUTTON.

Wants to Assist in the Work

I am writing a few lines to let you know that I am still enjoying the peaceful influence of the Holy Spirit from day to day, and am growing in grace and knowledge of the truth. I am trying to let my light shine and to lead others to the light of this glorious gospel. We are still meeting regularly with the Nazarene Church at Harmon and have a good Sunday school. They are very friendly, and I love to meet with them, but long to be where I can meet with the Saints. I want always to be subject to the will of God and to do what he wants me to do, to go where he wants me to go. If I can be the means of doing some good here, I am willing to stay until he opens the way for us to gather with the Saints.

I have greatly enjoyed reading the HERALD, especially that article on stewardships in a recent number. I read it through blinding tears of joy and emotion, and enjoyed the Spirit in great power.

I am deeply interested in the redemption of Zion and stewardships, as I believe it is God's plan, and he wants us to be one temporally as well as spiritually. It is taught in the Scriptures, and I am thankful that we believe in a God that reveals his will now as well as in olden times.

I would like to help in this work, but under present circumstances I am not able to do much, as I am getting old and am unable to do much work. If it were not for our two oldest boys helping us, we would suffer for the necessities of life. I am not complaining of my lot, but am trusting in God and praying that he will open up the way and bless us, so that I may be able to assist in this work in a material way. I am hoping and praying for the welfare and progress of Zion.

G. L. SWEET.

HARMON, OKLAHOMA, January 21.

La Junta, Colorado

January 19.—We are basking in the beautiful sunlight for which Colorado is noted and are having a very light winter. However, we have had some zero weather.

District President Bruce E. Brown paid us a visit the first of December, and this was greatly enjoyed by all. We always enjoy his good sermons and timely advice.

At Christmas we gave an entertainment entitled "The Christmas gift," taken from Autumn Leaves. We had a full house, and it was a treat for all.

Our sacramental service the first Sunday in January was very spiritual, the Lord speaking words of encouragement to a sister, Pastor E. P. Darnell being the mouthpiece.

Brother Darnell is a very forceful speaker and able defender of the gospel. We all love him and are going to try to give him even greater support during the year 1927 than ever before. We had a surprise and pound party on him and his family New Year's week. It was a real surprise, too. We met at the home of Brother and Sister Kesey and came from there by truck and auto to the Darnell home in Las Animas. While we were there, Brother Darnell tuned in on K L D S for the evening program. Thus did the La Junta Branch have the privilege of listening to K L D S in a body, and that alone was worth the trip. After a splendid evening spent with our pastor, we journeyed homeward, with one little delay on account of a puncture. To say we had a good time would be putting it mildly.

On January 9 we had the pleasure of having with us Brother J. R. Sutton, of Genoa, who preached for us at the morning service, delivering a wonderful sermon.

The young people are awake and busy, helping in every way they can. The Department of Women is also busy and trying to do its part.

Brother Walter Weller, from near Denver, has been with us the past seven weeks, doing some educational work. Brother Weller was a boyhood friend of myself and wife, so it was a great pleasure to meet him again. All in all, we feel that the Lord has wonderfully blessed us throughout the past year. We owe a little debt on our church building yet, but have formulated a plan whereby we expect to reduce it soon.

May all of God's people be actually and actively engaged in the work of the Master and the redemption of Zion!

VICTOR E. WILLIS.

Runnells, Iowa

January 26.—The work of the Lord is onward, however slow may be our progress.

The Department of Women has made a splendid showing for the past year, and the sisters' annual bazaar and oyster supper brought them sixty dollars after expenses were paid. The church basement was used for the event, and a large crowd of people attended. Some who are not members of the church donated articles and food. A happy time was had by all.

On Saturday night, January 22, a general supper was given and twenty-two dollars realized. The improvements to the basement are something more than one half paid for. Games were enjoyed by the youngsters during the evening of the 22d, while the older people visited and had a pleasant social time together.

The Religio Department is suffering from lack of interest just now. The play which was to have been given by the young people failed to materialize because of too many outside influences at work, which kept some from rehearsing. They made up for it, however, with a cash offering to help pay for the basement.

Our Religio superintendent left Sunday night for Saint Louis, Missouri, to find employment, expecting to move there soon. He was accompanied by Everett Tingle. When these young men and their wives leave us, our rank of workers will be depleted. A group of singers went to the train as the boys were leaving and tried to cheer them with such songs, as "I would be true," "Consecration," and "God be with you till we meet again."

Our Sunday school is under the leadership of Sisters Nora Park and Lola White. An increased interest and attendance of young people was noticed last Sunday.

During January we have been favored with visits from Brothers Vern Deskin, N. V. Anderson, and H. A. Higgins, who preached on the observance of the financial law. Their sermons were greatly appreciated and fruitful of results.

Three baptisms were recorded this month, those of Mrs. Grace Tingle, Miss Harriet Tingle, and Miss Lillian Bray. These are all earnest workers who are looking Zionward. Sister Grace Tingle insisted that her husband file an inventory and pay their tithing before she was baptized.

The baptismal service was held in the church at Des Moines Sunday evening, the 16th. Confirmation was at the evening service, Brothers Anderson and Castings officiating.

A campaign for distributing tracts is in progress, and all of the Saints have been asked to save their church publications for distribution in this channel. A spirit of inquiry about our work seems to prevail among our neighbors, and we are trying to get our literature into their hands.

We are needing the prayers of the Saints to help us.

Nauvoo, Illinois

January 27.—Nauvoo has been experiencing real winter weather. On January 13 the thermometer dropped to eighteen degrees below zero, and the following day a heavy fall of snow covered the ground, which was considered fortunate for vegetation, owing to the continued low temperature.

A coasting party was held by the young folks one beautiful moonlight night, on Schenk's Hill. Elonore and Esther Snively, who are from sunny California, enjoyed this sport for the first time. A bobsled party was held another evening, the young folks driving out to the Webb Farm, where they were served with doughnuts and hot cocoa.

A meeting of the young people, under the direction of their leaders, Brother and Sister L. H. Lewis, was called last Sunday afternoon to outline some of their activities for the winter. As a result of this meeting, a phase of missionary work is to be tried. The church books such as Joe Pine, Timbers for the Temple, Two-Story Book, etc., are to be purchased by the Religio, and the young people are to loan these, hoping to break down prejudice and win friends to the church.

A home talent play entitled, "An old-fashioned mother," was given in the high school auditorium for the benefit of the public library, seven of our young people taking part.

Inventory month has been observed in our branch. Those responsible for the taking of inventories have been very busy. Every home has been visited and every individual canvassed. As a result, we have inventories from all but three, which showed that each had some tithing to pay. The young people are one hundred per cent tithe payers. All the children unbaptized have also paid their tithing, including two-year-old Mabel Henderson, who paid fifty-two cents. On the second Sunday of the month, A. L. Sanford, bishop's agent, held a junior service, using as his topic, "Spiritual inventories." His object was to teach the children that while they had made out their financial inventories, a spiritual inventory was even more important in helping them appreciate their "present character."

At the close of a one hundred per cent prayer meeting last Wednesday evening, a pleasant half hour was spent in charge of Mrs. August Lee, in honoring the seventy-fifth birthday of our pastor, J. W. Layton. Several short speeches were given; and Brother Layton's favorite hymn, "Jesus, the giver," was sung by a group of girls.

Mr. Frank Kerl, violin maker of Nauvoo, presented J. W. Layton with a violin made from a piece of black walnut taken from the Old Homestead. This violin is beautifully made and has a splendid tone. It will be added to the other interesting relics kept at the Mansion House.

The following item of interest appeared this week in our local paper: "The Icarians owned all of what is known as Temple Block in Nauvoo during the period of the community here. Their intention was to rebuild the temple which some years before had been burned. Work had been begun on the reconstruction, when suddenly, one afternoon, a fierce black cloud appeared in the west, having ominous portent. A group of workmen were in the path of the cyclone, for such it was, as it came moving directly toward the massive walls; alarm was given, whereupon the men hurriedly sought refuge in the basement. In a moment the walls were thrown down, but not a single workman was injured; their escape was marvelous. It is said by old-timers that this was the only cyclone recorded as ever having struck Nauvoo, that the contour of the land is not conformable to the action of cyclone, or its formation. It seems that like the temple at Jerusalem, there was not one stone to be left upon another of the Nauvoo Temple."

Topeka, Kansas

January 24.—Greetings to HERALD readers! After a month's illness, the writer as correspondent finds words inadequate to express her appreciation to the Giver of all good gifts for the measure of the gift of health received, and to the priesthood and members for their ministrations and thoughtfulness in the hour of suffering. As we assume the thread of correspondence, may we add a word of appreciation for the visits of some of our junior Saints for their encouragement.

The Department of Women gave a bazaar on the 19th of December and netted a neat little sum for the building fund.

The Sunday school gave a Christmas program on the evening of the 20th. There was a tree and a treat for the children. In some unaccountable way, some of the big children turned time back and got in on the treat.

A number of Saints from this point motored to Netawaka, Kansas, where Elder Peter S. Whalley, of Wichita, was the speaker at a two-day meeting held there January 8 and 9. The weather was fine, and the services enjoyed by those in attendance. F. O. Kelley spoke here in the morning to those who remained, and C. C. Graham in the evening.

Appropriate services in harmony with prohibition week were held both morning and evening on the 16th. C. H. Smith spoke in the morning, contrasting the sufferings of the promoters of early Christianity with those caused by intemperance. Then in the evening the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a short program previous to the temperance sermon by A. P. Crooker. Brother Silas Robertson, of Independence, Missouri, was a visitor at the A. P. Crooker home and rendered assistance at all services throughout the day. He gave a piano solo in the evening, and many bore evidence of the spirit that accompanied it. We trust the time is not far distant when this may be said of all our efforts, regardless of what they may be, when performed unto the Lord.

The annual business meeting was held Wednesday evening, January 19, in charge of Dave Little, district president, assisted by the presidency of the branch. C. C. Graham was elected president of the branch; C. J. Sheets, custodian of funds; Sister C. J. Sheets, clerk; Sister H. C. Pitsenberger was sustained as publicity agent and branch correspondent; J. G. Juergens, chorister; John Killen, librarian; F. O. Kelley, superintendent of Sunday school, with Leonard Pitsenberger, secretary; Clayton Crooker, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Lyman Pitsenberger, secretary; Leonard Pitsenberger, superintendent of boys' department; Sister Amia Alfrey, head of girls' department; Sister Helen Hays, supervisor of the Department of Women. At this meeting Elder James Baillie, of Scranton, was present.

On January 23 C. C. Graham, the newly elected branch president, spoke in the morning, outlining his views with reference to the year's work. He stressed the necessity of keeping the law given to govern our conduct as Saints, thus promoting the bonds of unity and peace, that we may merit the favor of God and the work may progress. In harmony with the morning's discourse, C. H. Smith spoke in the evening from the scripture found in John 14: "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." Sisters C. J. Sheets and C. C. Graham sang a duet at the opening of both services. J. G. Juergens sang a solo at the close of the morning service.

The following was quoted in connection with the evening sermon, and we pass it on to HERALD readers:

"Argue it pro and con as you will,
And flout each other with words,
But the rose will bloom, and the summer still
Will bring us the song of birds.

"And what does it matter? the clover blows
And the rose blooms on the tree,
And only the God in heaven knows
How these things come to be.

"So why bother your heads at all?
And why does your faith grow dim?
You take the flower on the garden wall,
So why will you not take Him?"

Another year has passed into history, and as we look back over the past year, we feel we have much to be thankful for, and wonder if we are worthy of all these many blessings bestowed upon us by the bountiful Giver. The church work looks progressive to us. The Saints seem to want to be helpful in the program of building up Zion. How thankful we should be that we are privileged to live in this day and age, when we can be of help to bring about the redemption of Zion. Let us all do the best we can, spiritually and financially. God loves the cheerful giver.

Our little branch, as we now call it, for our numbers are not large, is in fair working order, with the same officers in charge.

Our two-day meeting, which was held January 8 and 9, was much enjoyed by the Saints, but there was not as large an attendance as we had hoped to see. Brother Harrington, our district president, and Brother Blett, of Grand Rapids, were the speakers. If we put into action the many good thoughts they gave us, we surely will come up higher along spiritual as well as temporal lines.

Sister Myrtle Perry, who is employed in South Bend, was home for the meetings and was active and much appreciated in the Sunday school and Department of Women, since some who are district workers were unable to be here. Come often, Sister Perry. Our Sunday dinner was served in the basement.

The women assist in financing the branch by holding baked-goods sales, rummage sales, etc. Plans are being made for a supper to be held soon in the basement of the church.

Cheering Words From Veterans

(From letters to the First Presidency.)

Working as Strength Permits

During the past year I have preached perhaps half a dozen times; not more than that, I think. Have assisted a few times, very few, at other services. I usually attend the forenoon preaching service, but it is very seldom that I go out of evenings, that is, unless it is for a short walk.

I still love this gospel, and would be glad to labor in the interest of the same; but my work is done unless I should, like King Hezekiah, receive a new lease on this earth life; and that is not at all likely, as I never considered myself of that much importance.

Am as well, I suppose, as might reasonably be expected. Anyway, I have no kick coming on that score. The Lord has been good to me, and I have much, very much, for which to be grateful. And yet it is not very pleasant to be compelled to give up and stand aside when there is so much work needing to be done.

Trust the Lord may bless you in your work, directing by his Holy Spirit for the building up of Zion. I hope for the final triumph of the Lord's work.

Wants to Die in Harness

Greeting for the New Year.

I am still on deck, if not much good. I wish we had a church group here and place where we could meet. I would feel more at home than I do. I have been enjoying the privilege of listening to Brother Luff, who has given us some as clear and logical sermons as I ever listened to, and some few outsiders are becoming interested. He obtained the use of the Civic Club House to preach in at 2.30 each Lord's Day and has from fifteen to twenty-eight out to hear him.

I am wanted at Elk Mills, and if I shall be alive next spring, I shall ask to have the privilege of going there and doing what I can. I want to die with the harness on and doing all I can. If it is not much, the Lord will accept it as well as the church. It's better than a fellow as young as I am (seventy now soon) doing nothing. If I am close to the church, not more than a block, I can walk, though I have not the natural use of the right leg yet. I can get along slowly and make about that distance before I play out. This will let you into my present condition and desires.

Best wishes for the uplift of the Zioniac cause,

A. H. PARSONS.

Holds Meeting in Basement of New Church

I closed my meetings in New Westminster last night, and I believe good has been accomplished. Several of the Saints expect to file their inventories, and all seem enthusiastic in the cause of Zion.

The weather was stormy, and as a result some who would have liked to attend were not able to get out part of the time, but the few that could get out seemed to enjoy the presenting of the stewardship plan of the church.

They are now meeting in the basement of their new church. They will have one of the best church buildings in the district when completed.

I begin special services in Vancouver tonight.

I am hoping for the good of the work.

Appreciates Spirit of Ministerial Conference

Words can not express my appreciation of the sessions of the regional priesthood conference in Independence. They were the most wonderful meetings ever held by the church, I believe, in regard to the spirit of unity and fraternity felt, and I feel that if much of the time of our quorum sessions at conferences could be largely of the same nature it would be of great benefit for the progress of the work, and would tend to unify the ministry.

May the Lord bless you in your labor of love for the church, and your efforts to unify the priesthood.

A Report of Progress and Cheer

(Excerpt from letter of W. H. Dawson, Sacramento, California, December 1, 1927.)

Sacramento Branch is entering today on the last month of the most blessed spiritual uplift the Saints here have experienced in more than twenty years. The gifts of the Spirit have been manifested in a marvelous way, wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, discernment of spirits, tongues, interpretation of tongues, prophecy; indeed we have been made to feel that in truth "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." A better spirit of unity has prevailed than ever before to our knowledge.

Our records show the attendance has more than doubled at all the services. Increased attendance at prayer meetings from thirteen in January to as high as eighty during the summer, and our average nearly sixty from an average of nine.

Our budget meeting of twenty-three minutes in January brought us pledges of $728. Most all of the pledges were paid in full, but some have not been as yet. We hope these will be paid up this coming year. Street debts are all paid. The branch has never to my knowledge paid in so much tithing, oblation, and other funds as this present year. The saying is true, "Get the Good Spirit, and the money comes in."

There have been many additions to the branch by letter and twenty-one by baptism.

Two young men were separated and ordained to the Aaronic priesthood, George C. Price to the office of priest, and Fred A. Taylor to office of teacher. The voice of the Spirit (in tongues and gift of prophecy and interpretation of tongues by Brother Levitt) promises "others" if they will humble themselves and otherwise qualify.

Finds More Than He Can Do

I came into this country from Eads on Monday. Excepting last week, I spent about three weeks, or nearly so, at Wiley and Lamar. However, one week ago last Sunday I spent at La Junta by urgent request of the Saints there. I was truly pleased to meet so goodly a number of Saints and to note the apparent zeal of all at that place.

Brother Paul Darnell seems to be doing good work at La Junta and has, I believe, the support of almost the entire branch. At Wiley the Saints are doing very well and are united and moving along and have put the church building there in splendid condition. I am also pleased to inform you that the young men at Wiley holding the priesthood are manifesting deep religious zeal and diligence in service. That place has needed, for a good while, some of the real red blood of younger men which at present seems to grace the church there. For that reason I feel especially hopeful for the outlook there.

A nice bunch of Saints at Eads, but no one to look after them, so I spent over a week there visiting them in their homes, every one, also preaching in various places among them.

I will be at this place until over next Sunday, thence homeward.

When I can do so I hope to go to Seibert and other places. If I were to try to answer one half the requests to render service in various places, of course I would not be at home at all. I have tried to help the work wherever I have labored and encourage the Saints to keep in touch with the present movements of the church.

May the Master by his Spirit comfort and inspire you in all your labors.

J. R. SUTTON.

From a letter from J. A. Gunsolley we glean the following paragraph: "The footings of my 1926 diary show the following items: Sermons 175; in charge 11; assisted 23; other services 226; total services 435; baptized 2; confirmed 7; assisted to confirm 6; ordained 4; assisted to ordain 3; children blessed 3; assisted in blessing 1; administrations 82; assisted in administration 2; patriarchal blessings 98; administered sacrament 1; house to house visits 58; I have received as donations from the Saints and friends for current expenses about $375, and have traveled by rail in round numbers 4,000, and by automobile 2,000 miles."

A Real Cosmopolitan Day's Work

(A letter to President Frederick M. Smith.)

[Brother Waller is at present in San Francisco. This letter shows the line of his activity when at home and on the job. It was not written for publication, but we take the liberty to publish it thinking it to be of general interest.]

Your communication of September 8, asking for information regarding district conferences, conventions, and other church meetings has received attention, but inasmuch as we do not have the conferences, conventions, and meetings of like character that you have in districts on the mainland, I can report but little regarding what is being done here.

The priesthood meetings are held once every month by Brother Williams at the Main Branch (Honolulu), and Brother Chase also holds meetings of like character in Hilo.

As far as I am concerned, I do not have much time for extra meetings outside of my regular church work.

From the following weekly program of the work that I do you will realize that my spare time is pretty nearly all taken up with the church work to which I am giving my attention.

Each Sunday morning I attend the Japanese Sunday school in the district of Kalihi at about eight o'clock. From there I go to the Chinese Sunday school, which meets at 9.45 and is held at the Wah Mun School in Honolulu. At 11 a. m. I have the service at the Chinese Branch to attend, of which I am the president. At 12.30 I attend a Sunday school held at the home of one of the members of the Honolulu Branch in the Palama District. This brother has recently erected a new home and has turned over his old home to the church. The property is worth about $1,000. At 1.30 Sunday afternoon I attend the service of the Japanese Branch, of which I am the president. During the remainder of the afternoon I try to take a rest.

At 6.30 in the evening I attend the meeting of the Chinese Department of Recreation and Expression, when I teach a Book of Mormon class. This meeting is followed by the evening service of the Chinese Branch, which takes place at 7.30. On this occasion I generally preach. I also preach frequently at the morning service. All the Chinese members understand English. At the Japanese meeting in the afternoon I have to use an interpreter. I occasionally on Sunday evenings exchange places with Brother Williams and preach at the Main Branch, while he speaks to the Chinese.

Monday evening I try to keep free.

Tuesday evening I teach a class of young Chinese and also attend the meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression of the Chinese Branch. They usually meet and have games on this evening.

On Wednesday evening I attend the midweek prayer meeting at the Japanese Branch.

On Thursday evening at 7, I teach a Doctrine and Covenants class of Chinese members, and at 7.30 we have our Chinese Branch prayer meeting.

Friday evening I teach a class of Orientals at the home of one of our Chinese members in the Kalihi District.

On Saturday afternoon, or early in the evening, I visit a home for tubercular patients called the Leahi Home, where we have some members.

As pastor of the Chinese and Japanese Branches, I am also called upon to do, as you will readily understand, considerable visiting.

I find that the Japanese have great faith in administration, and have been surprised at times at the help that the Lord has extended to them through this ordinance.

I have also my duties as bishop's agent and church historian to attend to. I also meet frequently with Brother Williams and assist him when called upon to do so in connection with the affairs of the Main Branch.

While I try to care for the work under my charge, still there are many things that should be done that I have not the time to do.

G. J. WALLER.

Graceland Chats

Athletics

Thus far in the season Graceland's basket-ball team has played eight games—seven won and one lost. January 17 we played Clarinda and won with a score of 27 to 19; January 21, Creston, with a score of 29 to 12. January 24 Still College played us in Zimmermann Gymnasium. We lost with a score of 45 to 28. The games have been good ones, hard fought.

Literary and Musical

In accordance with our custom, the literary societies last Saturday evening elected new officers, who will serve during the second semester. It is interesting to know that three of the new presidents are freshmen in the college. The persons elected are the following:

Niketes: President, Treasa Nowack; vice president, Ruby Sandage; secretary, Fern Wilson; treasurer, Frank Fry; sergeant, Craig Siegfried.

Victorian: President, Floy Roberson; vice president, Foresta Briggs; secretary, Oliver Cooper; treasurer, Harry Emmerston; sergeant, Walter Trachsel.

Kappa Delta: President, Ewan Walden; vice president, Hazel Willard; secretary, Roy Goode; treasurer, George Fender.

Alpha Pi Sigma: President, Lloyd Stephens; vice president, Alta Royer; secretary, Doris Waterman; treasurer, Raymond Smith; sergeant, Joseph Shank.

The College Players provided the number for the Lyceum Course on January 21. The program consisted of three one-act plays: "Moonshine," "For distinguished service," and "Judge Lynch." The plays called for a rather wide variety of roles, which were well played by the students. "Moonshine" is an enjoyable bit of comedy. "For distinguished service" contains a pertinent comment on some of the social tendencies of the day. "Judge Lynch," with the racial hatred and misunderstanding between the white and the Negro as its theme, gave us food for thought. Altogether, the evening was worth while.

HERALD readers will be interested in knowing that a chapter of Lambda Delta Sigma has been organized at Iowa University by former Graceland members. It is splendid that these people have made this step, which will aid in spreading the Lambda Delta Sigma organization and ideals.

January 29 marks the end of the first semester of the college year. Examinations are held January 27 and 29. A few days ago, a student, inspired by the reflections of Hamlet in the Shakespearian play, wrote the following:

To study, or not to study: that is the problem:
Whether 'tis better in the school to bear
The "digs" and "slams" of indignant teachers,
Or to take up texts against a host of exams,
And by studying master them. To pause; to rest:
No more; and by a rest to assert we dispatch
The headache and the mental gymnastics
That students are subject to, 'tis an extremity
Fervently to be desired. To pause, to rest;
To rest; perhaps to "flunk": ah, there's the pinch;
For in that rest in pausing what "flunks" may occur,
When we have discontinued our scholastic pursuits,
Must give us hesitancy: There's the consideration
That makes a tragedy of too much schooling.

ROY DAVEY.

Independence

Stone Church

Sunday was a clear day, the first warm Sunday for many weeks, and the sunshine and warm wind brought an unusually large number out to Sunday school. Thirteen hundred and fifty-five were reported present, and seventeen classes were perfect. The lesson study was heartily entered into, and helpful to all, and the orchestra favored the school with a pleasing number, "Meditation."

Preceding the sermon of the morning, the congregation sang "Sovereign and transforming grace," prayer was offered by Brother H. G. Barto, an offertory, "The prize song," was played by Robert Miller, and the K L D S Choir sang "Unfold, ye portals everlasting," Robert Miller at the organ and Jeanette Kelley Craig at the piano.

The speaker of the hour was Apostle D. T. Williams, who read Deuteronomy 2: 1-3, using the third verse: "Ye have compassed this mountain long enough: turn you northward," as a basis for his discourse. After briefly sketching the history of the journey through the wilderness from Egypt to the promised land, and explaining that the time had come when the children of Israel having learned many things from bitter experience were ready to pass on to greater learning and to their goal, the speaker asked the question if we as a church have not compassed our Mount Seir long enough. Sometimes we are too anxious to be rid of the difficulties which face us and want to put them aside, regardless of the lesson we might learn from them. We should in our adversity take the lesson which is taught us, like Jacob, who wrestled with the angel all night, and seized him at break of day and would not let him go, saying, "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me."

As a church we have contributed to the religious life of our age. We were established on the principle of divine revelation at a time when the world taught that God revealed his will to his children of ancient days, and would again at some time in the future, but did not now. This church claimed that God not only can and would reveal his will today, but does. This teaching has been taken up and is believed by many in the world today. At that time people believed God to be a sort of a monster who as a reward for good took his children to eternal glory, or for some punishment sent them to eternal punishment. This church taught that God does not punish for his glory, but for man's good; that out of the experience of punishment he may rise a wiser and better man. The world has also taken up this belief and has widely taught it, some being so extreme as to abolish all punishment. We also taught divine healing, and today this is taught and believed by some of the popular churches. Thus our contributions have been great, but the task which lies before us is greater. We have compassed our Mount Seir long enough; we should turn to Mount Zion and establish the city where we will enjoy the brotherhood of Christ and fatherhood of God. Zion means the equality of opportunity, and that is one of the world's greatest needs today. "How rich this world would be if all the talent in it could be developed," Brother Williams exclaimed, and told of conditions existing today in our own America which are preventing the development of God-given talent and quenching the divine fire of the human soul. He quoted two verses from Gray's "Elegy written in a country churchyard," as illustrative of this condition.

"Perhaps, in this neglected spot, is laid
Some heart, once pregnant with celestial fire—
Hand, that the rod of empire might have swayed,
Or waked to ecstasy the living lyre.

"But knowledge to their eyes her ample page,
Rich with the spoils of time, did ne'er unroll;
Chill penury repressed their noble rage,
And froze the genial current of the soul."

This is our task. Our work is before us. It may require us to sail out on uncharted seas. We shall have to venture. Many have ventured before us, and found their goal. Are we ready to venture for our great goal? The world today wants not so much doctrine as deed, not words but works. Let us go on to Mount Zion.

As a fitting close for this service, the congregation sang "Awake, ye Saints of God, awake."

K L D S Sunday Activities

At half past eight in the morning the Bible study hour was conducted by the K L D S radio pastor, Ralph W. Farrell. The musical program for this hour was furnished by talent from Walnut Park Branch and was under the direction of Mrs. E. E. Moorman. It included a chorus by the junior department; clarinet duet, Thelma Moorman and Drexel Mollison; piano solo, Mary Elizabeth Mosier; vocal duet; reading, Joyce Tucker; vocal quartet. The children's story was told by Hallie M. Gould.

The eleven o'clock service in the main auditorium was broadcast. The afternoon K L D S Radio Church service was conducted by Doctor M. N. Waldrip, of the Central Methodist Church, of Kansas City. Music was furnished by the Central Methodist Church Choir, under the direction of John R. Jones; Miss Laura McDonald, organist; Miss Lucille Bragg, pianist.

Music at the vesper hour was supplied by the Taylor-Chapel quartet of Kansas City. Sermonet by Evangelist U. W. Greene.

The Latter Day Saint studio service at a quarter after nine completed the radio activity for the day. The K L D S Male Quartet, and Pauline Becker, organist, were featured on the program, and Apostle D. T. Williams delivered the sermonet.

Evening Services

The previous announcement that on Sunday night would occur the elimination contest for the Stone Church District, preparatory to the inter-district contests to be held later on, a larger crowd than usual gathered for Religio. There was no lesson session, and the tryout to see who would represent the Stone Church in dramatic readings, humorous readings, began sharply at six o'clock. The judges were Miss Florence Stevenson, Mrs. E. G. Haberlein, and George Bartholomew. In the dramatic readings Miss Dorothy Benson was given first place, and Miss Allegra Luff, second; in the humorous readings, Miss Rilla Leeka was awarded first place, and Miss Aileen Hutchins, second. It was also announced that Don Lee Pierson will represent this branch in the oratorical contest, and the ladies' quartet will be composed of Thelma Vincent, Jeanette Kelley Craig, Hazel Koehler Moler, and Elizabeth Okerlind. The elimination contest for the debate will occur about the middle of February, and the male quartet also will be decided upon at a later date. Officers and members of the Religio are anxious to measure Stone Church talent with that of other branches, and all who are not present at later preliminary and final contests will miss a great deal.

It has for some time been the desire of Brothers C. Ed. Miller and John F. Sheehy to see the Sunday evening at the Stone Church a "family" service, to which the whole family may come and each member derive good therefrom. The meeting will be arranged with especial attention to the interests of the young. A junior choir will be organized under the direction of Brother Paul N. Craig, and inspirational and educational programs are being planned. Sunday night was the first effort in this direction, and all high school students were requested to sit in the choir loft. About a score complied and heartily joined Brother Sheehy in the half hour song service preceding the opening of the eight o'clock service. Pauline Becker presided at the organ and rendered a pleasing solo at the beginning of the evening service. The opening prayer was by Bishop M. H. Siegfried.

Apostle J. F. Curtis occupied the hour, reading Galatians 2: 16-21, calling special attention to the twentieth verse: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me. In his preaching and teaching, Paul made it clear that obedience to the law of Christ was the only way men could be saved. He was positive in his declaration of the principles taught by Christ while here on earth. He taught that there is no compromise between the teachings of Christ and the teachings of the world: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ," he said to the Galatian saints. He urged Timothy to preach the word of God for the time would come when the people would not accept it in its fullness. Such is the condition today, and Brother Curtis related some of his missionary experiences to show that in many cases people are unwilling to accept the unadulterated teachings of the Master of men. The speaker quoted several passages from the writings of Paul, which teach that only by a full acceptance of the gospel and by a shaping of our lives to its mandates, can we hope to make progress and to accomplish the work which Christ has told us is ours to do. The full text of this good sermon will soon be published in Zion's Ensign.

Interesting Personals

The majority of the members of the First Presidency, Presiding Bishopric, and Quorum of Twelve are now out in the field, and some will not return until General Conference convenes. President Frederick M. Smith is still in the East, President Elbert A. Smith is at home in Independence, and President Floyd M. McDowell is taking a brief rest this week but expects to spend this week-end in Lamoni, Iowa.

Bishop Albert Carmichael arrived home the first of last week, and his counselors also are at home. Of the apostles, Clyde F. Ellis is in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan; Paul M. Hanson in Cleveland, Ohio; Myron McConley is in California; and J. A. Gillen is speeding over western mountain and desert to the Golden State. Apostle D. T. Williams, of Lamoni, spent the week-end in Independence and preached at the Stone Church in the morning, returning home the following day. J. F. Garver made a flying trip to Independence the first of the week, and Roy S. Budd is in Philadelphia. F. Henry Edwards is occupied with his regular work in Independence, and J. F. Curtis also is at home in Independence. Last Sunday he occupied the morning hour at Enoch Hill, and in the evening talked to the Stone Church congregation.

General Conference Delegates

At the conference of the churches in Zion, which was held January 3, the delegates to General Conference were chosen. We are appending a list, in the order of their choice, the one heading the list having received the highest number of votes, the next in position receiving the next highest number of votes, and so to the end. The list comprises a delegation of forty-nine, as follows: Elbert A. Smith, C. Ed. Miller, Albert Carmichael, Ammon White, Frederick M. Smith, F. M. McDowell, R. S. Budd, J. A. Becker, M. H. Siegfried, B. J. Scott, J. F. Sheehy, R. J. Lambert, G. W. Eastwood, J. A. Gillen, Hubert Case, J. F. Curtis, E. J. Gleazer, D. O. Cato, F. H. Edwards, Harry Barto, Alice M. Cowan, J. Charles May, J. M. Terry, N. Carmichael, Mrs. E. A. Smith, Charles Fry, H. O. Smith, Glaud A. Smith, Leonard White, A. K. Dillee, Mrs. R. S. Budd, R. W. Farrell, Charles Koehler, Bertha Constance, F. A. Cool, F. A. Smith, Ellis Short, sr., Mrs. Howard W. Harder, Mrs. C. J. Hunt, M. A. Etzenhouser, M. T. Williams, Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Amos Allen, W. J. Brewer, D. A. Whiting, W. M. Self, Paul M. Hanson, Mrs. Ellis Short, sr., and D. R. Snively.

In the Departments

The Department of Women will hold its regular open meeting in the basement of the Stone Church Friday, February 4, at 2.30. Some special musical numbers will be given. Pastor C. Ed. Miller will be the speaker, and talk on the subject, "Our program for 1927." Preceding this meeting at 1.30 the Frances Willard Union of the W. C. T. U. will hold its monthly business meeting.

Second Church

The Friday evening session of Religio drew a large attendance, approximately a houseful of people. They came to witness the debate and contests between male quartets and ladies' quartets, which is a part of the competitive work being put on by the Department of Recreation and Expression in the city of Zion.

The debate was over the question, Resolved, That the church program is feasible in the light of modern sociology. There were three debaters on each side of the question; Second Church team consisting of Brothers William Fetter and Ted Scott, and Mrs. Heman Davis, taking the affirmative, while Kenneth Morford, Ruth Bryant, and Agnes Adams presented the negative for Walnut Park. The judges awarded victory to Walnut Park, two votes being cast for the negative, one for the affirmative. In the ladies' quartet the judges unanimously decided for the Second Church singers, who were Mary Fields, Mrs. J. A. Curtis, Mrs. Frank Good, and Gladys Good. Walnut Park's men's quartet also won a unanimous decision.

On Sunday evening three Second Church readers went to Walnut Park to contend for honors in humorous, dramatic, and oratorical branches, winning the oratorical.

Sunday morning the young people's prayer meeting drew more than forty attendants, and an enjoyable session ensued. It was easy to see what can be done if only the young will enter in and vigorously occupy their places and time.

Junior service is conducted by Brother Lane Bolt at eleven o'clock each Sunday morning and draws an attendance of fifty or more. It is doing a large amount of good.

Elder William H. Kelley was the speaker Sunday morning on the subject of lineage in the presidency, and his sermon was reported for future use in the HERALD. Evidence and reason were called on to establish the fact that lineage is the law of God, the law of Nature. A large audience heard this wonderful sermon.

A Sunday afternoon meeting of more than ordinary interest was enjoyed by the Saints, and this meeting was followed by a priesthood meeting of great comfort to the men assembled. They compared notes, somewhat, on the financial campaign being prosecuted for church expenses in Zion, and concluded they could accomplish the end attempted. They feel quite assured of being able to report a filled quota by February 10.

Sunday evening Elder Samuel Thiel, of the Sunday School Department in Zion, came over and conducted an installation service. The officers for the year 1927 were presented, also the entire corps of teachers, after which these were addressed by Brother Thiel and by Elder C. B. Hartshorn, who presented some of the most wholesome instruction and advice. It was an enjoyable occasion.

Elder R. D. Weaver is to be at the Second Church on Sunday evening, February 6, and we predict another houseful of listeners.

Enoch Hill

Apostle J. F. Curtis occupied the morning preaching hour Sunday, using Romans 6 as a Scripture reading, and basing his discourse on the theme, "He that overcometh." He gave his hearers some timely advice, reminding them that the main thing in our lives is to control our words, thoughts, and actions. Christ is our pattern, and our important task is to learn the requirements of the gospel and then live up to them.

Saints of Enoch Hill are encouraged by the interest manifested in the series of meetings which is being conducted by Elder R. D. Weaver. Beginning Sunday, January 23, they continued throughout last week with increasing attendance. Members and nonmembers alike have attended in numbers. The meetings will also last this week. Under the general theme, "Building according to the pattern," Brother Weaver has skillfully and clearly set forth the first principles of the gospel and has applied them to our daily lives. All are happy because of the attention these meetings have, and the good they will accomplish in this district. Some of the sermons were reported, and will later appear in the church publications.

The choir of Enoch Hill Branch has assisted in the program almost every evening, but on Friday evening, the 28th, we were favored with some musical numbers by members of the Stone Church congregation. Miss Thelma Vincent sang a solo, and a quartet composed of Lois Cool, Nida Vincent, Ronald Smith, and Gordon Kress, rendered some pleasing numbers. They were accompanied by Miss Melva Ward. Brothers William Worth, jr. and Alfred Waters also gave two clarinet duet numbers, being accompanied by Ruby Johnson.

The yearly business meeting of the Department of Women of District 4 resulted in the choice of the following officers: For Group 32, Sister W. J. Brewer, leader; Sister George Street, assistant leader; Sister Alfred Chrestenson, secretary and treasurer; calling committee, Sisters Brewer, Street, Brown, and Chrestenson; social committee, Sisters G. L. Gouldsmith, Amos Allen, and E. H. McKean. For Group 33 South, Sister Dollie Masterson, leader; Sister Joe Rodgers, secretary and treasurer; calling committee, Sisters Masterson, Burrows, Bates, and W. R. Hill; sick committee, Sisters Brunson and J. C. Alexander. For Group 33 North, Sister O. H. Bagley, leader; Sister Hermon Petre, assistant leader; Sister Leonard B. Crowl, secretary and treasurer; calling committee, Sisters Bagley, Stevens, and Crowl. This department has set out to do more this year than they have ever before accomplished in the short time of twelve months.

On Monday evening, January 24, they held a pie and chili supper in the church basement. Although it was not what they expected, the attendance was good, and the department cleared more than eighteen dollars. This effort is only a starter of what the sisters hope to accomplish.

Central Chicago Branch

'Tis with deep sighs of satisfaction that members of Central Branch settle themselves to worship in their pretty, clean little church, for our auditorium has been redecorated. Brothers Cochran and Hall donated their services.

At our election Brother W. I. Cochran was chosen president of the branch, Brothers H. P. W. Keir and David Dower completing the presidency. Brother Ray Hurst was elected clerk. Brother William Bell was sustained as treasurer, and Sister J. E. Thoman correspondent, the publicity work in general being added to the duties of the clerk.

The choir was granted the privilege of presenting its own selection of officers to the body for ratification. It will hold its election Tuesday, January 25.

Little Dorothy Lucile Oliver was blessed January 9 by Brothers Keir and Oliver.

As a branch, we believe we are steadily advancing and hope to do much the coming year.

Brother R. C. Russell Declares Himself

To the Readers of the Herald; Dear Saints: As we are living in the most trying times the church has known in this dispensation, and the evil power is doing all in his power to shake the faith of the church and disrupt it in every possible way, we may not be surprised to hear false rumors regarding the church and its members, to the injury of those thus affected. With the intent of quieting a rumor that particularly affects myself, I wish to state that neither now nor at any time in the past, have I contemplated severing my association with the Reorganization, that I might, under any conditions prevailing, in the future, unite with any other body of people. Neither have I so intimated by word or letter to any party—Dame Rumor to the contrary.

Respectfully yours,

R. C. RUSSELL.

HAMILTON, ONTARIO, 99 Belview Avenue, January 21.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Bright skies and a beautiful, sunny day, with the thermometer's mercury in the forties, were quite welcome this last Sabbath, and 321 souls were in attendance at Sunday school, with a collection of $14.02, an increase of 66 over that of a year ago.

The teacher training class, recently organized under the instruction of Sister Lulu Sandy, report a very fine enrollment and are progressing nicely. The Seven Laws of Teaching, by Gregory, and The Making of a Teacher, by Brumbaugh, are the textbooks being used in this course. It promises to be very interesting, especially with so capable a teacher as Mrs. Sandy at the helm.

The Sunday school orchestra, under the direction of Sister J. L. Johnson, rendered a very pretty number at the Sunday school service. These young people are doing nicely in their work, and are to be commended in the cultivation of their talents; likewise their leader, who so faithfully directs their work and is ever ready to assist them.

Pastor J. A. Tanner has occupied the sacred desk the last three Sunday mornings, giving such counsel to the Saints as is needed to encourage and strengthen them in their daily walks of life. Elder Seth S. Sandy occupied at the 7.45 hour last Sunday night, and Elder Fred S. Anderson spoke last night.

The angel of death has again visited our ranks, claiming Brother P. A. Silsbee, father of Sister Helen Silsbee Smith. Their former home being in Lamoni, the body was returned there for its final resting place.

The funeral of Brother George W. Salander, who died in Chicago on January 5, was held January 10 from Newcomers, Brother J. A. Tanner conducting the service. Brother Salander was one of the first deacons at Central Church, Ninth and Lydia, and was always very conscientious about his work, very studiously looking after the welfare of the church and the people. He was very kind and patient and was an active worker in the church in Chicago. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ida L. Salander, two sons, Riley C. and W. L. Salander, a brother, E. N. Salander, of Wichita, Kansas, and three grandchildren. He was laid to rest in the Masonic section of Memorial Park Cemetery.

Sister Dora Blankenship, who underwent a major operation over a week ago at the Independence Sanitarium, is reported doing nicely.

Bennington Heights

Last Saturday the snow thawed a little, and in the evening it sleeted considerably. Toward morning it became colder, freezing the wet snow and sleet; and it was very difficult to get around. Contrary to expectations, there was a good attendance at all the meetings last Sunday. There were 106 at Sunday school and 29 at the junior service.

Elder Ross Higdon preached last Sunday morning on "Counting the cost," and in the evening Apostle J. A. Gillen preached. Brother Gillen called our attention to the fact that we too often consider lightly the administration for sickness. Except in case of emergency, we should request the elders to administer to us only after much prayer and meditation. We should remember to fast.

Sister Burdette B. Root, of Central Church, was the speaker in the junior meeting.

The local priesthood met last Sunday afternoon and discussed their activities at Bennington. The priesthood voted to organize a class of its members to study "Duties of church officers," by President Elbert Smith. The class is to meet each Sunday evening in the Religio hour.

The Religio is being well attended. Last Sunday evening Edna Durbin, William Fahey, Robert Davis, and Frederick Witte debated a resolution. They are inexperienced in speaking in public, but they entered into the debate with a determination and made it very interesting. This is the first debate the Religio has held, and some expressed a desire to participate in future debates.

Howard Fillipo, a member of the young people's class in the Sunday school, was baptized last Tuesday evening.

Sister James E. Cleveland was reported on the sick list this week.

Brother S. S. Spangler, an employee of the Ford Motor Company, invited the Saints to visit the Ford assembly plant last Monday evening. The Ford plant is in the neighborhood of the Bennington Heights Church, and about twenty-five went and saw the Ford car assembled, painted, and driven away under its own power, all done in eleven minutes.

Argentine Church

Notwithstanding our stake missionary, W. D. Tordoff, came unannounced, his two weeks of meetings were a decided success. An average of a dozen people not of our faith attended each night. It seemed that they were waiting for the message which he brought. The truths he presented were in sharp contrast to the similar subjects discoursed upon by those of other faiths. There was a readiness to compare in a strict sense the gospel thus plainly presented, with the plan of salvation previously taught them. Result: Five precious souls accepted the truth of Christ and united by baptism and confirmation with the church. The eleven o'clock service, usually a preaching service, today was changed to a prayer meeting in charge of Brother Tordoff, at which the time was wholly occupied. Many touching testimonies were borne, seasoned by the Spirit of God, which, with spiritual supplications by young and old, made a refreshing session. Those present were melted to tears as the relating of experiences continued.

At half past six the five candidates were confirmed. All give promise of becoming useful citizens in the church—one a child and four adults.

At the close of the evening meeting, Brother Tordoff was given a sum of money as a token of esteem and appreciation by the members. It is thought probable that he will return again at no distant future date and finish the work of gathering in, as there are several who seem near the kingdom. His stay, though short, was sufficiently long for us to become acquainted with the brother, and to be acquainted with him is to love him. He goes immediately to Des Moines, Iowa; after which he will return to the stake and take up the work at one of the churches.

Northeast Mission

The Women's Department is starting out nicely since the first of the year.

Elder J. E. Vanderwood is conducting a series of meetings under the general subject of "A practicable, workable religion," commencing the 23d.

Armourdale

Sunday morning, January 23, at eleven o'clock, Brother E. P. Sanders was the speaker. He chose as his subject, "Preparedness."

At a quarter till eight Brother J. A. Tanner, stake president, was the speaker. He used as a basis for his talk the words of Apostle Paul, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation." He took the six principles of the gospel and analyzed them, showing very conclusively that there was power in the gospel plan sufficient to save a man. His sermon was certainly enjoyed by all present. The attendance was good at all services of the day, considering the inclemency of the weather.

Monday evening, January 24, a party of some ten or twelve of the Armourdale Saints went over to Argentine, where the stake missionary, Brother Tordoff, is holding a series of meetings. They all stated that they enjoyed a most excellent sermon.

The First Quorum of Priests of the stake has been having some very excellent and instructive quorum meetings. Brother Blair, the stake bishop, has been giving them some lectures on stewardship, and since he finished they have been studying public speaking under Brother F. V. Elliott, pastor of Malvern Hill Church. The attendance and interest have been good, and those of the quorum who have not been taking advantage of these good things have been missing something worth while.

The Graphic Arts Bureau

Recently the bureau received a photograph of a paper announcing the death of General George Washington (December 14, 1799); also a photograph of the Ulster County Gazette of January 4, 1800, which contains a reply to the senate from President John Adams.

Bishop Charles Fry has placed in the keeping of the bureau a silhouette photograph of the father of the late E. C. Brand. This mode of picture taking was the initial effort of photography. When Daguerre had progressed that far in the art, he one day emerged from the mysterious dark-room and enthusiastically said to his wife, "Wife, I can tack your shadow to the wall." This statement confirmed the good woman in the belief that her husband had gone crazy, so the family physician was consulted.

Doctor J. S. Lawton, of Saint Joseph, Missouri, attended the young people's revival services at the Stone Church, and on Friday evening at the "get-together" meeting in the dining hall he was so impressed with the singing of the old folk songs and hymns which were illustrated with lantern slides, that he had the bureau purchase a fine Bausch and Lomb instrument, which will be for the use of the Far West Stake.

In the next two weeks, lantern slides fully illustrating the Auditorium, will be available from depots in various parts of the United States and in Canada. There is no rental charge on these sets for the first week. Write the Graphic Arts Bureau, Box 255, Independence, Missouri.

Delegates to General Conference to be chosen, also the report of the committee on the purchase of permanent reunion grounds to be considered. All reports from branch presidents and secretaries should be in the hands of District President J. Arthur Davis, Rupert, Idaho, by March 1. Gladys Chambard, district secretary.

May He Hear From Saints of Texas?

Brother George Elgie, Box 192, Alamo, Texas, requests that any Saints living in the Lower Rio Grande Valley communicate with him, that together they may be able to start the gospel work in that section, and establish church privileges if possible.

Young People's Convention

The London (Ontario) District young people will hold their annual convention in London, February 19 and 20. The program will include winter sports, indoor social and recreational activities on Saturday afternoon and evening, and a well-balanced arrangement of devotional and educational services on Sunday. Hours of meeting: Saturday, 2.30, 7, and 8 p. m.; Sunday, 9.30 and 11 a. m., 2.30 and 7 p. m., in Saints' Church, Maitland Street, London, Ontario. George C. Tomlinson, jr., district president.

A convention of the young people of the Southwestern Kansas District will be held in Wichita, February 11, 12, and 13, 1927. A welcome will be extended to all who can attend. President Floyd M. McDowell is expected to be here; also Brother A. H. Mills, who will have charge of the music. Mrs. L. R. Field, district secretary.

General Conference Visitors

Those desiring rooms during General Conference should write the General Conference Reception Committee, at Box 255, Independence, Missouri.

C. ED. MILLER, for the Committee.

Appointment of District Department Heads

Owing to vacancies existing, the presidency of the Wheeling District have, in consultation, made the following appointments as district heads of the departments, subject to the action of the district conference: Superintendent of Sunday school, Paul Lannum, of Wellsburg, West Virginia; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Herbert Voltman, of Steubenville, Ohio; and superintendent of Department of Women, Mrs. Lily Bishop, of Steubenville. These appointments have the approval of the general heads of departments.

SAMUEL A. MARTIN, District Secretary.

WILLIAM RICHARDS, District President.

Requests for Prayers

Elder and Mrs. Benjamin Pearson, Ava, Missouri, write for the prayers of the Saints in behalf of their son, Milo W. Pearson, who is in Ward 33, U. S. Veterans' Hospital, Boise, Idaho. They ask that any elders or Saints in Boise will visit him. He is not a member of the church but has done much for the traveling ministry where he has lived.

Brother Eli Hartford, of Rond Eau, Ontario, requests the prayers of the Saints for his son, Ira Hartford, who is in the hospital at Chatham, Ontario, suffering from lung trouble. Brother Ira is a member of the church, and sorely needs the remembrance of his brothers and sisters.

Our Departed Ones

BAILEY.—Myrtle Bailey was born April 6, 1892. She was baptized into the church at nine years of age by Charles Irvin. Married Roy Bailey February 6, 1909, and to them two children were born. She suffered two years with tuberculosis, and bore her pain with patience. A few hours before she passed away she wrote a beautiful letter to her sister, telling of her hope in the gospel. Her death occurred January 20, 1927, at Wilburton, Oklahoma. Surviving her are her companion, two children, father, three sisters, and one brother. Funeral sermon by E. A. Erwin.

HUSTON.—Phebe J. Huston was born July 29, 1852, in Fremont County, Iowa. She was the second daughter of David and Mary A. Study who were among the first settlers in that county, and here Sister Huston spent her life. She was married to John Huston April 14, 1870, and was baptized into the Reorganized Church August 25, 1888. She was true to her covenant until the end. She died at her home near Bartlett, Iowa, January 16, 1927, at the age of seventy-four years, five months, and seventeen days. Sister Huston leaves three daughters, Mrs. H. N. Pierce, Mrs. J. N. Greenwood, and Mrs. C. C. Sigler, all of Bartlett, three grandchildren, one sister, and one brother. Funeral services were held at the Latter Day Saint Church in Bartlett, January 17. Sermon by Elder N. L. Mortimore. Prayer by C. W. Forney. Interment in the Thurman Cemetery beside her husband.

LAND.—Charlotte Ann Land, daughter of A. B. and Emma E. Smith, was born January 17, 1863, near Council Bluffs, Iowa. United in marriage to Charles W. Land in 1880. They resided in Iowa until March, 1904, when they moved to near Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, living there until November, 1921. Thence they moved to Shellbrook, Saskatchewan. She was baptized November 26, 1908, by J. A. Beckman, near Saskatoon, and was a faithful member till the end. She suffered much pain caused by cancer, high blood pressure, asthma, and a weak heart, but in patience she endured all. She passed into the great beyond January 10, 1927, at her home in Shellbrook, her companion having preceded her by two months. Surviving her to mourn their loss are five sons: Roy, of Senlac, Saskatchewan; Ben, Norman, and Vern, of Shellbrook; Harlan, of Council Bluffs, Iowa; three daughters, Mrs. S. A. Beckman, Shellbrook; Mrs. S. Cooper, Senlac; Mrs. J. F. Harper, Prince Albert, Saskatchewan; eight grandchildren, one sister, three brothers, of Council Bluffs, also other relatives and many friends. Interment beside her husband in the Shellbrook Cemetery, January 13, 1927.

CHENEY.—William Cheney was born August 8, 1880, in Ingham County, Michigan, and was married January 8, 1902, to Naomi Kinsey. To them three children were born, two of whom survive Bessie and L. A., both at home. In 1914 he was baptized into the church, and a year later was ordained a priest. Died suddenly in an Owosso hospital January 4, following an operation performed December 30. Brother Cheney leaves his daughter and son, two brothers and one sister, Elmer and Burt, of Flint, and Dora Winterlee, of Louiston, Michigan. Funeral services were conducted at the Brant Methodist Church January 6. Elder G. W. Burt, of Beaverton, was assisted by Elder John Wade, of Saint Charles.

Sanballat played a clever game. His strategy was excellent. A student of the most modern psychology could scarcely improve upon his methods.

Sanballat desired to frustrate Nehemiah's endeavor to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. His first weapon was ridicule. Men fear to be laughed at. Ridicule cuts like a whip lash. So Sanballat and his confreres "mocked Nehemiah."

When Nehemiah turned a deaf ear to ridicule, then Sanballat tried intimidation. The psychology was not so good at that point. A man who does not fear ridicule is not likely to fear violence. But it was the best psychology that could be used by one in Sanballat's position—which was a negative position, the attitude of one who will not build Jerusalem himself and who seeks to prevent others who would build.

When intimidation failed, Sanballat resorted to palaver. Four times he invited Nehemiah to come down and "talk things over." At the least, time would be lost; and diplomatic palaver has often succeeded where violence has failed.

When palaver failed, Sanballat tried rumors. "It is reported" (Nehemiah 6: 6) that the "Jews think to rebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall."

When Dame Rumor failed, then the appeal was to selfishness. The attempt was from within the ranks. One was hired to urge Nehemiah to save his own life—to hide in the temple while others worked.

Nehemiah knew that thus he might indeed save his life but lose it.

That strategy was clever. But the dignified and adequate answer to it all was couched in the simple statement: "I am doing a great work, so that I can not come down."

Then comes the triumphant conclusion of the whole story: "So the wall was finished."

Markham's Tribute to Lincoln

When the Norn-Mother saw the whirlwind hour,
Greatening, and darkening as it hurried on,
She bent the strenuous heavens and came down
To make a man to meet the mortal need.
She took the tried clay of the common rood—
Clay warm yet with the genial heat of earth,
Dashed through it all a strain of prophecy;
Then mixed in laughter with the serious stuff,
It was a stuff to wear for centuries,
A man that matched the mountains, and compelled
The stars to look our way and honor us.

The color of the ground was in him, the red earth;
The tang and odor of the primal things—
The rectitude and patience of the rocks;
The gladness of the wind that shakes the corn;
The courage of the bird that dares the sea;
The justice of the rain that loves all leaves;
The pity of the snow that hides all scars;
The loving-kindness of the wayside well;
The tolerance and equity of light
That gives as freely to the shrinking weed
As to the great oak flaring to the wind—
To the grave's low hill as to the Matterhorn
That shoulders out the sky.

And so he came.
From prairie cabin up to Capitol.
One fair ideal led our chieftain on.
For evermore he burned to do his deed.
With the fine stroke and gesture of a king.
He built the rail pile as he built the state,
Pouring his splendid strength through every blow,
The conscience of him testing every stroke
To make his deed the measure of a man.

So came the captain with the mighty heart;
And when the step of earthquake shook the house,
Wrenching the rafters from their ancient hold,
He held the ridgepole up, and spiked again
The rafters of the home. He held his place—
Held the long purpose like a growing tree—
Held on through blame and faltered not at praise,
And when he fell in whirlwind, he went down
As when a kingly cedar, green with boughs,
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills
And leaves a lonesome place against the sky.

Some One: There are times when we should not stand upon a punctillio.

Doctor Cadman: "Some people derive virtue from the graves of their ancestors."

Helen C. Bennett, writing in American Magazine on the Library of Congress, quotes Mr. Ashley, the librarian of Congress, as saying that "the most popular reference work in the building" is Americans of Royal Descent, by Browning.

Churchill: "A poem is not a poem unless it is well spoken."

Some One: "Prodigious actions may as well be done by a weaver's issue as by a prince's son."

Clark (in The Crossing): "Some day you will learn that foresight sometimes comes to men, but never to assemblies. But it is often given to one man to work out the salvation of a people, and be destroyed for it."

Doctor Cadman: "War is even worse for what it leaves than for what it takes."

Anonymous: Architecture in its highest form is frozen music."

Elihu Root: "Nations always will differ. They differ in inherited characteristics and predilections and traditions and modes of thought and feeling, but there never is a difference so great that it can not be peaceably settled if approached in the right spirit, and there never can be a difference so trifling that it may not be made the occasion of war if it is approached in the wrong spirit."

Churchill: "Few men dare to set their will against a multitude when there are no fruits to be won. Columbus persisted, and found a new world; Clark persisted and won an empire for thoughtless generations to enjoy."

Some One: "A man's judgment is no better than his information."

Clark (in The Crossing), to David: "Serve the people, as all true men should in a republic. But do not rely upon their gratitude."

Major Colfax (in The Crossing), to David: "Commonwealths have short memories. They will accept

William Henry Channing: "To live content with small means, to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never; in a word to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious, grow up through the common; this is to be my symphony."

Duties of District and Branch Officers

Every member of the priesthood should be vitally concerned about two things. First, his duties in his particular rank of priesthood; and, second, the relationship he bears to the officers and to the membership.

To be accurately informed, every ordained man should secure a copy of the new booklet just published, Duties of District and Branch Officers. This book can with profit be made the text for study and discussion in priesthood meetings throughout the church. The price (15c each) makes the booklet available to all. The membership as well should study this matter.

"The Sublimation of Labor"

This is the title of a pamphlet recently printed, and is the report of a sermon preached by President F. M. Smith at the 1926 General Conference. It can be used to advantage in interpreting the attitude of the church on the question of capital and labor in connection with our social program.

This question is always a question of current issue of vital interest. Ministry and membership alike should supply themselves with copies of this pamphlet and give them to interested persons. Scarcely a week passes but what this subject is discussed by pulpit and press, and therefore it reaches into the home circles throughout the land. It is important that the position of this church be clearly stated on this matter in these times when people are thinking for themselves.

The price of this sermon pamphlet is ten cents. Orders for these pamphlets should be given to the branch publicity agent, and by ordering a quantity at one time carrying charges are greatly reduced. If no agent has been appointed in your branch, send orders direct to the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, and the books will be sent promptly.

Special Offer to New "Autumn Leaves" Subscribers

For the months of February and March, Autumn Leaves will be sent to new subscribers only for five months for fifty cents. To those who have never subscribed for Autumn Leaves this offers an opportunity to give the magazine a fair trial at a minimum price.

Those who are now taking Autumn Leaves may subscribe for some friend in or out of the church who does not read the magazine.

You can hardly make a better investment of fifty cents than by offering this inspirational magazine to some young person who is struggling to give direction to his life. Hundreds have testified to its helpfulness.

Those in branches who have appointed a publicity agent should send their orders through him; otherwise they may be sent direct to the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

"Brother Joseph"

By Minnie Eugenia Warnock

Oh, blessed his dear memory!

A nobleman of earth was he,

A prince, a friend to everyone.

No truer soul could ever be.

He had a personality

So great it drew all men to him,

And fixed in them a confidence

Nor time, nor trouble could bedim.

He was a leader in a cause

So great, there could no greater be;

But he was humble, full of love;

From arrogance was ever free.

We well recall those lustrous eyes,

So full of human sympathy;

And ringing voice that made the hymn

Swell out a glorious symphony.

Oh, Brother Joseph, your great life

Has left its impress deep on ours:

So faithful, cheery in your work,

Though many were your sad, sad hours.

And we are happy and content

To carry on the work you loved.

You kept the banner floating high;

You were a prophet well approved.

We thank our God for you and yours;

For you, your father, and your son.

A great "succession" it has proved,

This trio great of steadfast men.

To bring to triumph his blest work,

God chose this "stock" of truth and worth

To lead, direct his blessed church,

And make her shine through all the earth

Dear Brother Joseph, once again

We hope to hear your cheery voice

And clasp your warm and friendly hand

And with you in God's work rejoice.

April, 1926.

The Church of Our Fathers

BY JOHN F. GARVER

The first of a series of seven sermons in the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, in November, 1925, under the general theme, "The faith of our fathers."

I count myself happy to be privileged to undertake with you the work which is just before us. Most certainly do I appreciate this magnificent audience; and if I may do so without offense to those who have grown silvered in the service, I would like to speak of my special appreciation of the large number of young people I see here, who, with us, are interested in the faith of our fathers.

We are come together at a propitious hour. As a people we stand at the dawning of a new day. We enter upon that epoch towards which in confidence, in faith, in hope, and in charity the eyes of good men and women have been turned from the beginning of time. So it is that upon the threshold of this our opportunity it gives us great pleasure to endeavor together a reevaluation of that faith known as the "latter day glory," which our fathers in this church brought forth in such fervent testimony.

The theme of this evening is "The church of our fathers." As a point of departure for this theme, we turn to the 16th chapter of Matthew. Jesus was ever forward in advancing the interests of the church. So on this occasion he took advantage of the stir among the people, of the spirit of inquiry, of the talk about his mission, that by that means he might impress the apostles the more seriously with the charge imposed upon them as the keepers of the faith. So we have the lesson:

Whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

From this lesson we take as the text for the evening these moving words of our Lord, coming ringing down to us through the corridors of time, the promise of God through his own Son, "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

The Church of Our Fathers

We speak of the church of God. The church of our fathers. That great church of the living Christ. The church with a purpose. Which purpose, despite the strongholds of hell itself set against it, shall be achieved in the end of time.

The promise of the living Christ is that he will build his church. That it shall be known in the midst of the earth as the temple of God. This church, whose builder is deity, whose greatest day is to be its latter day, this church of divine promise, whose foundation is sure, whose completion is at hand; this church of our fathers I come, my friends, to declare unto you.

I speak of the great church of Jesus Christ restored in these last days; brought about through the most holy ministry of our fathers in this cause; sealed with the blood of their martyrdom; set up by the hands of angels; never again to be taken from the earth; functioning through such as are here represented tonight—this great church declare I unto you.

The Purpose of the Church

Now, the purpose of the church is made clear in the Scriptures. The mighty Apostle Paul has said it is the purpose of the gospel through the church to bring to pass life and immortality, the salvation of man. To bring life real to man here in this present experience, through an equality of things of substance into equality in the things of the spirit. That God's chosen and covenant children may stand fast in that salvation in Zion, and out of that high place bear testimony to all mankind to draw all men unto Jesus, the Master of every man. Life here and immortality hereafter, the goodness of God in time and in eternity—this is the purpose of the church.

And my dear friends, that purpose, as God lives, shall be achieved. And furthermore, the set time to favor the church has come. Zion will be redeemed. Zion is being redeemed. And out of Zion to every country, in every language, to the last honest-hearted man, shall the gospel of Jesus Christ go to his redemption, and to the glory of God in him, if he will. The purpose of the church will be achieved.

The Organization of the Church

May we refer briefly to the organization of the church. The organic form of the church has been determined out of consideration for the peculiar work it is called to do. The purpose of the church, as we have said, is to save men and women. Consequently first of all, and of necessity, it is a great missionary church.

It is a great missionary church with a great missionary arm—an army of proselytizers called of God, ordained to that purpose, and sent forth to fill the earth with the sweet story of Jesus. A missionary arm of necessity, that men might be called to God. A missionary arm which has always existed, which exists today, which always will exist, functioning in the bringing of men and women out of the wilderness to the church, out of sin unto righteousness.

So we have the missionary arm of the church. With its apostles, and its seventy, and its other seventy, and its elders. And, thank God, with its great army of cooperating Saints, who with the eldership are called to this specific purpose of preaching the gospel in all the world.

The church also has its local arm. Its arm for the shepherding of the flock called out of the world into the fold of Christ. Of necessity it must be so, that these newborn babes in Jesus may be so cared for, so led, so guided, so developed, so delivered from evil, so inspired to righteousness that they may mount up to the heights of eternity, and, clasping the hand of our Lord, make possible Zion's redemption and its word of testimony in all the world.

So we have the local arm, the shepherding arm of the church, with its high priests, its elders, its priests, teachers, and deacons. And, thank God, in association with these holy men, that great army of cooperating Saints, into whose hands the Father of Light has committed the keeping of the faith, the prosperity of the church. That welcoming throng unto whom shall be made possible by the bye the dear day of the coming of our Lord.

And since it is necessary in this experience that temporal means or means of substance be used to spiritual ends, there is that great army of the church we call the temporal arm. Also a work of necessity, for the financing of the whole cause, the care and custody and direction of the temporal holdings and interests of the church; and for the nurturing of its needy.

So we have the temporal arm of the church, with its bishops, and agents, and colaborers. And, thank God once more, its great band of cooperating Saints, from whom come the "sinews of war," in whose integrity is held fast the hope of the church, and with whose cooperation alone God can achieve in this age his divine purposes, the glorification of Zion, and the preaching of the gospel in all the world.

And to make the organization complete, of necessity, and always will it be so—it always has been so, it is so today, it always will be so—of necessity there must be a First Presidency. That there might be, as it were, a great central clearing house for the coordination of interest, the unification of effort, the well-balanced endeavor in every department to a common end. That each department in its endeavor to advance the cause of Christ may make its well-timed contribution to the whole, as each is directed with consideration of general needs, and the contribution of the others, there must needs be a First Presidency.

The First Presidency, then, was had in the church of our fathers, and is in our church; with its three high priests; with its great prophetic office, functioning to the glory of God and the good of the body; and, by the way, my dear friends, constituting a quorum and an office and a function so well established in our constitutional law and in our practice as a people as to make it absolutely impossible of being uprooted by any wild wind of doctrine or smooth-tongued sophistry from any source whatsoever. A quorum so ably accounted for from this pulpit a few weeks ago by my Brother J. F. Curtis, I am told, as to make quite unnecessary any further word from me in its defense.

A Word of Personal Testimony

This is the church. My friends, I am come to you tonight as an apostle of Christ to say, This is the church of our fathers. This is the church! I shall stand some day before the great white throne of the Almighty to answer for this testimony. I fear God. I have not given all the twenty-five years of my ministry to this church for nothing. I fear God. And to bear a testimony here which is not true, I would not dare to. This is the church. I know it is the church. I know it by the testimony of Jesus Christ, burned into my consciousness that day now nearly a third of a century ago when this church favored me with membership. I know it is the church of God by that divine directing of vision, by the power of the ministry that has been mine all through the years, and that I feel surging anew through my being this very hour. I bear this testimony boldly. This is the church!

Many years ago I joined this church of our fathers, in Mills County, Iowa, a boy without home, without people of promise, without friends, without hope in the world. I believed the testimony of elders who declared to me, "This is the church of God. And it shall be your testimony if you will obey." I went forth in humble supplication before my Father. And even the very day I was baptized, indeed, the day before, and the day after, and on many succeeding days, out of the goodness of his matchless mercy my Father filled my soul with the divine consciousness this is his church.

Those were golden hours in my experience. Again and again under the stars of heaven, kneeling between the rustling rows of ripening corn, for I was on the farm, and it was autumn, upon my bended knees, and with my face in humiliation in the dust of the earth, many times I sought my Father, and always that testimony was renewed.

Nor is this all, for that testimony has been mine through the years. That testimony is mine tonight. I repeat it in all solemnity, with the consciousness I must some day meet you at the judgment seat of Christ, This is the church of my Lord, the same church I joined a third of a century ago.

The Testimony of the Brotherhood

But, friends, I do not stand on this platform alone in this testimony. For with me, side by side, shoulder to shoulder, hand in hand here tonight in this divine presence stands in testimony every man who took a mission from this church last April; and who by his activity in the field bears testimony to you and to the world this is the church of God, which by his ministry he seeks to build in the earth. In these undying acts of our great brotherhood, we have sure testimony this is the church of our fathers; well worthy our trust.

I have heard it said some of these men are out in the field today for no other purpose than this, that their families might eat bread. I do not believe it. My confidence in these men, born of their integrity and measured by their offering all through the years of my personal association with them in this most holy ministry, my manhood unfolded under their moving example, resents this insinuation. I brand it as a miserable misrepresentation of these noble men! They, too, resent this insinuation by actions that speak louder than words. They, too, say this is the church, worthy of our confidence, our support, our all.

The Testimony of the Deity

Nor is it left to men alone to bear testimony this is the church. Many of you were present in this auditorium during the General Conference of 1925, prayer meeting, and partook of the divine unction of that hour, when that man who is loved by us as no other man in this church is loved, and who carries the confidence of the rank and file of the people of this church as no other man carries it—you were here present when Elbert A. Smith served as the medium for the Deity who himself bore testimony this is the church of our fathers, when in prophecy it was declared:

I have a word of consolation for my people. Did I not establish my church by the hand of my Son and declare that the gates of hell should not prevail against it? And did I not restore the gospel in these last days and give you again the church through the hands of my servant Joseph? . . . Some of you have said in your hearts, Was that indeed the church of God which was established by Joseph Smith in that early day? I say unto you, Yes, that was verily the church of God. Some of you have said in your hearts, And is this still today the church of God? I say unto you, Yes, this is verily the church of the living God.

This Church Shall Prevail

This, my friends, is the church of the living God. The church of our fathers. This is the church, and it shall prevail. It has for its foundation the rock of ages. Its stones in human form are being tried, that they might be found to be true. Its cement, the pure love of God, binds these lively stones—binds you together in one. Its Master Builder himself works mightily in every field, even as he works here in Zion that his cause he might achieve. God is among you here tonight. You good people know it is true. Believe it, and he will be with you in greater power. God is to him who believes. In all his power, in all his majesty, in all his love, in all of his saving grace, he is to him who believes.

Brother Gardner, just before I rose to speak, handed me a note saying that in answer to the call of the church for Graceland College Endowment and stewardships, Independence with a quota of $15,000, up to six-fifteen o'clock tonight had answered with $16,000, and has not yet finished her solicitation. This is an evidence that God is with you. God in you is measured by the thing which you do for his cause. God works here as he works in every field.

This is the church of Christ, the church of our fathers. Its progress is marked. Its strength is certain, as evidenced to us in every reunion, in every conference, in every assembly of the Saints everywhere the past season. As made manifest to us in the courage, and the faith, and the confidence, and the sacrifices with which our people have responded to the call, Come let us go forth as one and establish stewardships, the divine social order, that God's people may be one both in the things of earth and in the things of heaven.

The Hope of the Church

My dear friends, today, this day of our Lord, the 8th day of November, 1925, is the greatest day this Reorganized Church ever saw. We stand, as I said in the beginning, in the dawn of a new day. It is the day of our God, who stands at the door of each heart and knocks, and who by that knocking says to each of you who will receive it, I press into the open palm of your hand the keys of the kingdom.

For, my friends, the hope of the church of our fathers is in you. Members in particular in this household of faith, lively stones in the living temple, the hope of the church of our fathers is in you. For that scripture, despite what other interpretation we may justly put upon it, is literally true, and to be taken on its face which says, "The kingdom of God is within you."

The kingdom of God can not come where you do not come. The kingdom of God can not do that which you do not do. The kingdom of God can minister only as you minister. The kingdom of God can speak in testimony only as you speak in testimony.

My friends, the church of our fathers, past, present, and future—its consummation lies with you. You are the hope of the church. And this kingdom of our Christ according to those words of prophetic significance which furnish us our text tonight, this kingdom of such as you is to achieve and accomplish the purpose of the God who sent it. Of that there can be no question. The church of our fathers shall in reality live in such as you are. Its work is highly necessary. Its purposes divine. Its organization is effectual. Its foundation sure. Its builder is God.

This people are forward in every good work. And looking upon us and upon such as are here tonight, Jesus says to us, Out of you I will build my church.

My friends, he says more than that. For to those who listen to catch the intonation of his voice, Jesus Christ the Master Builder says, Within you I am this night building my church. The church of your fathers. And your church. I am building the church in you.

He says, furthermore, to those who attune their ears to his voice, I will build the whole of my church in you. I will perfect it. I will beautify it in you. And at the end it shall roll forth to fill the earth.

Christ Will Build His Church

I will in you establish my church in the midst of the earth, is the word of Jesus our Master to us as a people. And I will do it, not only for my own name's sake, not only for my Father's sake, I will do it for a benediction upon the offering of your fathers in this most holy faith. And I will do it as a reward for your endeavors. I will through you speak forth my praise. For you shall, bye and bye, having mounted up the slopes of Zion's hill, stand revealed as a great light illuminating the whole world, until men and kings and nations shall come to inquire of the source of your power, recognizing that you have been with, and learned of, and served, and now speak for God in the midst of the earth.

I will build my church! No man can gainsay that. No movement can gainsay it. No storm from without can gainsay it. No force at work within can gainsay it. The words of Jesus Christ our Lord to us tonight are true and faithful: I will build to its completion my church, restored in these last days. I will build the church of your fathers, which is your church. No power, no weapon formed against it can prosper. Not even hell, nor the strongholds of that wicked city, can turn my purpose aside. I will build my church! I will build my church!

I lay it down therefore for a rule, that the whole man is to move together; that every action of any importance, is to have a prospect of public good: and that the general tendency of our indifferent actions ought to be agreeable to the dictates of reason, of religion, of good breeding; without this, a man, as I have before hinted, is hopping instead of walking, he is not in his entire and proper motion.—Sir Richard Steele.

What Are the Duties of a Teacher?

BY J. A. TANNER

In writing upon this subject we do so with the understanding that it is a much mooted question, and that there is no other office in the church upon which so much difference of opinion is expressed in regard to the prerogatives of the office; and in writing this paper we shall try to avoid discussing the opinions of anyone, and present purely an affirmative description of the duties of said officers.

Webster, in defining the word teacher says, first, "One who teaches or instructs"; second, "An instructor, a preceptor, a tutor, one whose business or occupation is to instruct others"; third, "One who instructs others in religion, a preacher, a minister of the gospel." The above definition is sufficient to warrant a belief that the teacher has some duties in common with other officers of the church.

To illustrate, the elder is to teach; so is the teacher. The elder is to instruct; so must the teacher.

The priest's duty is to warn; so must the teacher. The priest's duty is to exhort; so must the teacher; hence we see a parallel in some of the prerogatives of officers, differing in grades. For evidence see section 17, paragraph 11, Doctrine and Covenants.

Having found parallel prerogatives and duties in common with other officers, let us ask, What is he to teach? Answer: The gospel, and all of the features which grow out of the gospel, such as faith, charity, patience, virtue, knowledge, brotherly kindness, and godliness, etc.

Whom is he to instruct? The church, and we mean by the church the entire membership under his charge. Instruct them in what? Their duties and responsibilities to God, church, and each other spiritually, physically and temporally. How is he to exhort and expound? By preaching, analyzing, simplifying, explaining, making plain, and causing the Saints to know. And right here we believe it fitting to connect with the above an extract from an address to the Saints in Europe in the month of November and year 1868 by President Joseph Smith. It reads as follows: "Teachers observe to teach the members to do their duty in the family, in the social circle, and in the assembly, and counsel and observe to procure the frequent meeting together of the flock, seeking to the Lord for wisdom and the elder and the council for advice. Hear no complaints where reconciliation has not first been sought, nor repeat to others what you hear until required to tell it to the council." (See Church History, volume 3, page 511.)

The above no doubt is reflected from section 17, paragraph 11, Doctrine and Covenants, which says, "The teacher is to watch over the church always and be with and strengthen them and see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other; neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking; and see the church meet together often, and see that all the members do their duty." In the light of the law just read, is the teacher a general visiting officer? We answer, yes, from the fact that it would be impossible for that part of the law to be made effective unless visiting in a general sense was done. The question might arise here, Will that imply and permit of the teacher and priest or elder laboring together? We answer, Yes, so far as their duties are in common with each other and their prerogatives on a parallel; but they should not labor together where their duties do not in common exist, especially in "iniquity, hardness of heart, backbiting, lying, etc.," and we think we can see the wisdom of God in making this difference, and outlining the work of the officers, for if the elder should become involved in cases of iniquity, hardness of heart, lying, backbiting, etc., laboring with those who are guilty of such, he certainly is disqualified for his superior work of looking after the interest of the church, for he could neither appoint courts or jurisdiction nor prosecute at such courts, nor could he prepare and administer the sacrament, teach to pray, and attend to all duties consistently while being involved.

The same reason as the above will apply to the priest. He should not become involved, by labor, in the evils mentioned, so far as his duties are in common with the elder's duties. "Teachers are standing ministers." This certainly means continued ministering in the work specified by the Lord, so that the Saints may be continuously fed and cared for. To do this requires qualification of wisdom, discernment, and good sound judgment, and a perfect knowledge of the law, church custom, and usages.

It is the teacher's duty not only to labor with miscreants and evil-doers, but he can decide when sufficient labor has been performed and so notify the branch president, who will have charges made out and served upon the evidence submitted by the teacher of having labored enough. The teacher may, however, prefer a charge himself, but it does not necessarily follow that he must do so. And at no time is the teacher a constable in the sense of employing compulsory methods of making members refrain from evil, and to arrest Saints, but he is to serve charges or see that they are properly served, and there his work practically rests, awaiting the action of court and branch.

As standing ministers they have the right to preside in the absence of elder and priest. See section 17, paragraph 11, Doctrine and Covenants. The following from the pen of President Joseph Smith is pertinent and worthy of belief and practice: "The fact the teacher has been given authority to take the lead of meetings, the fact that paragraph 22, section 83, Doctrine and Covenants, provides that teachers should be appointed to watch over the church, to be standing ministers to the church; the fact that King Mosiah granted Alma authority to establish churches and to ordain teachers over them; the fact that Nephi did consecrate teachers over the land of the people; the fact that God gave teachers to the church; the fact that God hath 'set' teachers in the church, and the fact that there were teachers in the church as before cited, are all evidences that teachers may preside over churches, watch over and care for them, counsel them, rebuke them, reprove them, cherish them, strengthen them, comfort them, and build them up. . . . His duties differing from the duties of a deacon still so closely allied to them that he may require the deacon as an assistant."—Exegesis of Priesthood, page 82.

In the light of the law and the above terse statement, it is plain to be seen that the teacher is the undershepherd of the flock, to nurture, care for, and provide with every spiritual benefit within his office; to reprove, rebuke, and take steps to have them fulfill every requirement of the household of God.

It will also be seen that the importance and privileges of his office are equaled only by the importance and privileges of the branch or presiding elder's office.

After careful study one is agreeably surprised with such wonderful privileges and opportunities of the teacher as an undershepherd of the flock, and one is fully satisfied that the importance of the office has been overlooked and its worth underestimated when ordaining and placing men in said office, and as we continue to study the office we become more appreciative of the importance of the statement in Doctrine and Covenants, section 17, paragraph 12, which says, "Every . . . teacher . . . is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him."

We conclude with the important thought in section 104, Doctrine and Covenants, paragraph 44, "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty and to act in the office in which he is appointed in all diligence." Also the one in section 85, paragraph 7, which reads, "For what doth it profit a man if a gift is bestowed upon him, and he receives not the gift? Behold, he rejoices not in that which is given unto him, neither rejoices in him who is the giver of the gift."

That we should do unto others as we would have them do unto us—that we should respect the rights of others as scrupulously as we would have our rights respected—is not a mere counsel of perfection to individuals—but it is the law to which we must conform social institutions and national policy, if we would secure the blessings and abundance of peace.—Henry George.

Spiritual Life

BY THOMAS S. WILLIAMS

Life Manifested in Movement

When a physician examines an apparently lifeless or unconscious patient, he notes whether or not the respiratory organs are functioning, endeavors to discover the pulse, and looks to the heart to determine if it is at work. In short, he examines the body for signs of organic movement. If he discovers none, he pronounces his patient dead. If the lungs and the heart are active, he knows his patient to be alive. He is quite sure of this because experience has shown him that life is manifested in movement. This, however, is about as far as his knowledge of life goes.

He understands that life is expressed in activity, but knows not what it is. Herbert Spencer defines life to be a "correspondence with environment." This simply tells us that life is manifested in the activities of the organism, and this, to continue, must harmonize itself with the conditions dictated by the environment. We are forced then, to lay as our first premise: "Life is a vital force manifested in action."

One would be just as helpless should he attempt the definition of "spiritual life." He could not describe it. He knows not from whence it comes nor whither it goes, but experience has demonstrated its existence by what it has done and is doing. In the same manner that physical life is known to us as a dynamic moving force in the material world, do we know spiritual life to be a vital energy manifest in the lives of those who experience it. This being true, we safely assume that where spirituality is professed and no performance is forthcoming, such does not exist.

Movement Determines Strata of Life

But the mere manifestation of movement is not enough. One's activities may be good or evil, and either be manifestations of life. Our next rule must be; the type of our movements will indicate the strata of life in which we live. By observing the type, direction, and range of the movements of each form of physical life, we can determine its station and degree of existence.

It is a broad step from the condition of life experienced by that of the jellyfish, whose movements are decidedly limited, to that of the bee, whose activities are not so confined, and then to that of mankind, who is privileged with an almost unbounded range of operation. The type of their movement, the direction they are going, and the space covered by them indicate their mental and physical level.

So in the field of religious experience, the character of our movements, the direction in which we are going, and the scope of our activity manifest the quality, grade, or degree of spirituality enjoyed.

Type of Movement

There is a decided difference in the type of movement seen in the activities of the jellyfish and those of the bee. The former drifts aimlessly about, feeding upon what happens to come its way. Its limited manner of getting about and its low degree of intelligence prevent it from giving itself to any definite program and objective. The bee has a program and surely gives itself to its objective. This one thing it does: It works, gathering food, not only for the coming winter, but for the next generation.

But the activities of the bee are limited, and his movements can not be compared with those of mankind. The efforts of the bee are confined to gathering those things for which the hive is noted, and its methods are those used by its ancestors for thousands of generations past, without any noticeable degree of improvement or variation. Its movements are instinctive and show no indication of change or advancement.

While many of man's movements are inherited, he has also the capacity to adapt himself to a variety of occupations requiring unlike motions in their accomplishment. By giving himself to certain activities, he can travel across land or sea in various ways, with great speed; he can fly above the clouds and can dig himself into the depths of the earth. He is able to adapt himself to almost any climate in the earth. If his environment is unsuited to his well-being, he is able in a large measure to change it to suit his convenience.

The type of its movement, it is clear, determines the level of life in which an organism shall continue to exist. The complex arrangement of the human body, together with man's intellectual capacity, makes possible his participation in a number of activities not enjoyed by the lower animals, thus making possible his opportunity to enjoy life to a higher degree than they.

The type of movement expressed by those who are spiritual will be creative and constructive. They will seek to build up the kingdom of God and to establish his righteousness in the earth. They must lend their efforts to increase the power and stability of the church; they must strengthen and preserve it with all their ability.

"Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," while reconstructive, was at the same time creative in its demands. The call to repentance, which was the message of Jesus and the prophets, was a constructive effort on their part. "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men," was an invitation to make men, and consequently creative in its call. "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him to a wise man, which built his house upon a rock," surely sounds like a building program.

The amount of creative effort and constructive labor found in one's activities will demonstrate in a large degree the level of his spirituality—in fact, will determine whether or not spirituality exists.

The Direction of Movement

The mere fact that one is engaged in creative action is not sufficient to fully demonstrate the level of his spirituality. The horse may be engaged in constructive effort, the galley slave was no doubt employed in a similar effort, and so with any man who may be forced to his task. Their efforts may not be prompted by motives which would contribute to their spirituality.

As the direction of a man's movements may be lifted above that of the lower forms of life, so should the line or course of the spiritual man be lifted above that of the carnal. The Apostle Paul gives us to understand that the line which separates the carnal from the spiritual is the line which divides spiritual life and death.

The highest exhibition of physical life is found in the control and direction of energy. Energy directed to the accomplishment of a specific task denotes a high degree of precision and control of movement. Then, too, the height or worthiness of our purpose, the end toward which we are directing our efforts, displays the quality of our spirituality. Spirituality is not manifested in what one possesses, but in how we possess and use it.

To what end, then, must one direct his energies in order to experience the highest degree of spirituality? Jesus answers our question: "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh to the Father but by me." We know a man by what he has done. Jesus symbolizes the way of sacrificial love. "He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." "He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love." Eternal life is to know God; and to know God is to love your brethren.

Thus life in its highest manifestation is somehow related to love. He who would experience eternal life must learn to love. Love will find its direction in sacrificial activity. If activity is absent, love does not exist, for love will demonstrate itself in sacrifice. Love which expresses itself in sacrifice is another exhibition of one's spirituality.

Range of Movement

And yet one's activities may be constructive and altruistic, and not be spiritual in their fullest aspects. A man's energies may be confined to family ties, restricted by tribal lines, or circumscribed by national boundaries. Creative, sacrificial love, to be productive of the highest spiritual life, must be world-wide, in its range. It must be sufficiently ambitious to comprehend all nations and peoples. Jesus points the scope or field of one's activities in the following: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations"; "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

As the range of man's movements is wider and broader than that of the lower species, so should the energies of the spiritual man be expended in a larger world than that of the carnal man. The selfish man surely lives in a small, restricted world. In fact, his world is just the size of his narrow and contracted soul. It is the unselfish man who has breadth of vision and bigness of soul. He is able to give his life in service to his fellows, because his world is big enough to include them in it. The selfish man is unable to recognize the need of his brethren, because his world does not comprehend them.

How, then, can one make his scope of religious activities world wide? The answer is: Join yourself to a group of people whose objective is the salvation of the world, and then lend your efforts to this end. Your activities will not be limited by family, plan, or national lines. Your movements will be world wide in their range, which at the present time is the limit of a man's possibilities. I might add that the payment of your tithing is the easy way for all real Latter Day Saints to make their endeavor world wide in its scope and to thus raise the level of their spirituality.

Conclusion

Though we are limited in our ability to define spiritual life, we can in some measure determine whether it exists or not. We invite you to use the type, direction, and range of your activities as a measuring rod to discover the elevation of your spirituality. The grade and quality of a man's spirituality is comprehended in his whole life. A man's spirituality is witnessed in the direction of his love, his efforts to increase his intellectual powers, the way he goes about his work, his attitude toward others, his regard for the beautiful, and every phase of his experiences in life.

The Truth Shall Make You Free

BY O. SALISBURY

Jesus said unto those Jews that believed on him, "If ye continue in my word, ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

The cry on every hand is, "Freedom," as it should be. Today many young people, as well as older, want no restraint, but insist on having their freedom. Caution should be taken when using a great word, and freedom is a great word.

Take the apple, the plum, and the cherry tree, and when planted, for protection we put barrier posts near them and tie the tree to the post until the tree can put its roots deep into the soil and acquire strength sufficient to stand alone. No doubt any one of these young trees would spurn such a program, yet it is necessary.

If we would have freedom, we must be able to stand alone and be able to produce the kind of fruit that will be a benefit to mankind.

It is said that Egypt can not at present have what is called "freedom." That is, govern herself, because ninety-five per cent of her citizens are illiterate. This suggests that freedom can come to a group, state, or nation, only as the individual members of the group, state, or nation become capable of standing alone.

The highest state of freedom will come to the citizens of Zion, as Zion in both a place and a condition. The place must be purchased and the conditions developed.

It is therefore necessary for each of us to become educated in the laws of Zion, and her purposes, so that we can stand alone, yet work together to produce the fruit of freedom.

Take the step now, obey the law of stewardship, not for selfish purposes, but for the carrying forward of the ideal of Zion which will in time bring to the citizens that much-cherished and continually-sought-for "freedom."

That the present world calls for large plans, not small, that matured programs of cooperative charity and human betterment are necessary as against the individual, perhaps impulsive act of other days, does not spell deterioration but rather advance and faithfulness to the duty of the times. It is surely imperative to keep the spirit of the Good Samaritan—this efficient and resultful age needs to be reminded that where there is no heart in a gift or a million, it is sounding brass and nothing.—New Haven Journal-Courier.

"The Child's First School Is the Family."—Froebel.

A Child's Moral Development Through Nature

One of our well-known educators has said, "If a child lives close enough to nature for the first fourteen years of his life, he will never go astray." It is a broad statement and worthy of consideration.

Not every child who lives in the country lives "close to nature," nor is this living impossible to the city child. All children should have their attention called to the natural wonders that are always within reach in some form or other. In the winter there are frost, snow, ice, the leafless tree, and the evergreen. These will give rise to many questions, the answers to which will furnish valuable insight into the workings of nature. Let the child coax to his door with bits of suet and bread the few jolly little birds which dare to stay with us through the cold season; he will feel that he is helping to maintain life, and he will be making worth-while friends that will thank him with sincerity.

Of course, a little country boy or one who lives in a small town has special opportunities. Winter offers him continuous inspiration, and he can always find a place to enjoy himself freely and safely to his heart's content, giving happy and orderly outlet to his superfluous activity. Nevertheless, in most cases, he will need to be taught to see nature and to hear her voice, but it will be easy teaching. Then the great expanses of white purity before him will give him an awed sense of the infinite wonders. The curious tracks in the snow may tempt him to follow a rabbit or a squirrel to its home and thereby learn of its mode of living in winter. The squirrel may be trained to make daily visits to his door, for nuts, if but coaxed the least bit with a sample nut. He may become even more interested in the birds in winter than in summer because of his close relation to them in feeding and caring for them. And perhaps the beautiful, bad blue jay will change his screech of "thief, thief" to a song of the snow and sing "knee deep." The cocoon swaying on the leafless tree can tell the little country boy a story of transforming life going on in the perfect silken cradle. Within doors, if he is ever forced to stay in, there is still something for him to study—icicles on the eaves, ice formations on the windowpane, frost on cobwebs in a sheltered corner of the window. At night he may be lulled to slumber by the song of the wind in the chimney; and, happy and healthy, his activity directed into wholesome, constructive

War Risk Life Insurance

*By the President of the United States of America
A Proclamation*

During the World War, the United States Government insured, at an exceedingly low premium rate, nearly 5,000,000 members of the armed forces of the country against death or total permanent disability. The insurance thus granted was for the greater protection of the insured and their dependents than was afforded in the compensation, independently of insurance and unconnected therewith, which was provided for death or disability resulting from personal injury, or disease contracted in the military service.

Statutory provision was made for the continuance of this war risk insurance after the termination of the war, and its conversion within a limited time into such form or forms of insurance, usually issued by life insurance companies, as the insured might request. Many veterans do not seem to have had knowledge of this continuing privilege, and for one reason or another have permitted their war risk insurance to lapse. Under the terms provided for the reestablishment of lapsed insurance, normal health conditions will permit reinstatement upon the payment of two monthly premiums; and for those whose service disabilities render them otherwise not insurable, and who are not permanently and totally disabled, provision is made for reinstatement upon the payment of premiums and interest for the period of lapse. Even these payments channels, he may sleep the sleep of contentment. Is he not laying a foundation for everything worth while in life?

And the little city boy, since nature does not come to him as abundantly as she does to his country friend, must go in search of new wonders, and the wise mother will see that he does. Tramps in the park through the snow, or in the country at the end of a car line to look for winter birds, a moment's pause in a snowstorm to see the formation of the snowflakes on coat or mittens, the care of plants or bulbs or a canary in the apartment will help to develop in him the love of nature. The acquaintance of the nearest farmer is greatly to be desired, and a Saturday spent on his farm at regular intervals through the winter will mean more to the child than all the moving picture shows in the world.—Elsie F. Kartack.

may be temporarily waived for those whose resources do not permit immediate compliance.

The law provides that no reinstatement of war risk life insurance which has lapsed shall be made after July 2, 1927. After that date, such war risk term insurance can not be reinstated. On or prior to that date, therefore, such insurance must be reinstated and converted, at the election of the applicant, into one or more of the seven standard forms of life insurance provided by the Government. If such insurance is now in force, the insured must convert it into one of the forms above mentioned on or before the above date.

The potential protective value of the insurance thus provided is apparent, as affecting the future economic and domestic welfare of veterans and their dependents. Provision is made for extended insurance, paid up values, loan values, cash surrender values, and dividend participations. No premium is charged during total permanent disability. Thousands of our national defenders are passing on each year. All veterans of the World War should be generally and fully informed of their right to procure the safe and certain protection for themselves and their dependents of the insurance afforded by the Government.

Detailed information with reference to such insurance may be obtained from the Central Office of the United States Veterans' Bureau, Washington, District of Columbia, or from its Regional Offices located throughout the country.

Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby designate the period January 31 to February 7, 1927, as a time during which special effort should be made to inform all veterans of the World War of the right they have to reinstate lapsed war risk life insurance, and to convert it into United States Government life insurance; and that all such veterans may, in some manner, be properly informed, I urge all citizens, particularly employers, the press, labor organizations, women's associations, professional groups and civic and patriotic bodies, to secure full information and use such means of informing the veterans as may be most effective.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this eleventh day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand, nine hundred and twenty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and fifty-first.

(SEAL)

By the President

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Peter John DeSmet and His Work

In answer to the Macedonian cry of old, "Come over and help us," Reverend Father Peter John DeSmet, S. J., Missouri's foremost Catholic missionary, penetrated the darkest and most remote regions of the northwestern United States to carry to the savage Indians a religion of practical Christianity, food, raiment, and friendship. DeSmet was born in Termonde, Belgium, January 30, 1801, and died in Saint Louis, Missouri, May 23, 1873, at the age of seventy-two.

DeSmet was a man who fearlessly, courageously, and unselfishly sought to carry a message of love, kindness, and peace to his fellow man. His was a life filled with hardships, struggles, and sacrifices, but he found that wherever he took friendship, the Indians were kind to him.

Given chronologically, the important events of DeSmet's life are as follows: 1821, sailed from Amsterdam and entered the Jesuit Novitiate at White-marsh, Maryland; 1823 to 1830, location at Florissant, sixteen miles from Saint Louis; 1830 to 1837, founding of the Saint Louis college which later became the University of Saint Louis, and in which Father DeSmet held the positions of professor of English and procurator. His first sojourn in Europe was made during this period.

On his first trip up the Missouri River in 1838, 1839, he founded the Potawatomi Mission at Council Bluffs and effected a reconciliation between the Sioux and Potawatomi Indians, who were on the verge of a desperate war. 1840, his first journey to the Rocky Mountains; 1841, 1842, second journey to the Rocky Mountains, and founding of the Saint Mary's Mission on Bitter Root River in Montana, on a historic site between Bitter Root River and the present city of Stevensville.

During 1843, 1844 occurred his second trip to Europe; 1844 to 1846, several missions established in the Oregon country; 1847, 1848, third voyage to Europe; 1849, made assistant to the vice-provincial and procurator general of Missouri; 1851, a delegate to the Laramie council, and 1849 to 1858, an apostolate in Saint Louis.

Then in 1853 to 1860, occurred other of his journeys to Europe to secure help to extend his small missions in Oregon and California. 1862, 1863, a tour of the missions; 1864, a journey of pacification to the Sioux Indians, who were becoming unmanageable; 1865, 1866, his seventh journey to Europe and his last journey to the Rocky Mountains, and 1869 to 1872, his last visit to Belgium and his last works as a missionary.

On September 23, 1878, a statue to his memory was unveiled at Termonde, Belgium. The monument stands in the center of a square beside Notre Dame College.

Although he ran away from home with four companions, because he feared that his parents would not give their consent to his journey to America as a missionary, he wrote this glorious tribute to his sister, Rosalie, "The lessons of piety taught me in childhood were the seeds of that desire, which I conceived and afterward executed by God's grace to give myself without reserve to his service."

He is known in the United States as "The Apostle of the Rocky Mountains." He was familiarly known among the Indians as "Blackrobe," and "Black-gown," a symbol which to them meant kindness and understanding. It is said that when DeSmet would return from one of his journeys, the Indians at his many missions would clamor to be the first persons to greet him.

Father DeSmet calculated that, up to 1853, his journeys by land and water totaled a mileage of more than five times the circumference of the earth.

He was universally known for his work in the United States. The Belgian Messenger of the Sacred Heart said: "In the history of the Catholic apostolate, few careers have been so glorious as that of the Reverend Father DeSmet."

The French Journal La Croix said: "The life of Father DeSmet reads like a novel, but one so realistic, so thrilling with interest, that you can not tear yourself away from it."

Father DeSmet was also an author, and his best-known works are: The Oregon Missions and Travels over the Rocky Mountains; Indian Letters and Sketches; Western Missions and Missionaries and New Indian Sketches.—Compiled by the State Historical Society of Missouri.

Race Unfinished

By C. J. Spurlock

For years I've run the Christian race
Cheered by hope, sustained by grace;
Yea, to the end I hope to go,
Run not too fast, nor yet too slow.

For to the end we must endure
If we eternal life secure:
The swift may fall out by the way,
Yet by truth the righteous stay.

The fight of faith so well begun,
Let's fight with valor as we run;
So do not stop or turn aside,
And thus give way to ease or pride.

Just how to run that we obtain
Is in the word of God made plain:
Deny oneself of worldly lust,
And in the strength of Jesus trust.

True soldiers bold we all must be
If we the Savior's face would see
And hear him say, "With me sit down,
For you've endured and won the crown."

NEWS AND LETTERS

"Paying the Fiddler"

The Social Worker watched the end of the story one cold drizzling day in autumn, as she stood before the judge of the county court with Mary Elizabeth, a child-woman, and heard the judge render his decision that Mary Elizabeth should be placed in the state home for the feeble-minded, there to remain the rest of her life, supported from public funds, as it was his opinion that she was a menace to society.

The beginning of the story, so the case records of the Social Agency showed, was about twenty-eight years ago, in a small town many miles away from the large city where Mary Elizabeth now found herself.

In this country town, there lived a girl whom the children of the neighborhood nicknamed "Silly Lizzie." She had dropped out of school after repeating the second grade the third time and failing to pass. Her parents were busy providing food for their children, and so Lizzie was allowed to wander at will without any directing care.

When Lizzie was about fifteen years old, she made the acquaintance of a boy who made his living doing odd jobs around town. The boy did not have any trade, so in his seasons of unemployment he loafed at the corner saloon near where Lizzie lived.

The little community where the boy and girl lived was much amused one day when it learned that there was to be a wedding to which all were invited, and that "Silly Lizzie" was to be the bride. A big charivari followed the wedding, in which all of the neighborhood youngsters took part. The bride and groom felt very much pleased with the attention they had received, but a wise old woman in the community shook her head and remarked, "When you dance, you must pay the fiddler," and believe me that wedding will not have a good ending."

Within a year after the wedding, Mary Elizabeth was born, and by the time she was eight years old she had five brothers and sisters. The prophecy of the old woman came true, and the little community was called upon to "pay the fiddler" for the wedding which they found so amusing.

The family had always been more or less of a public charge, as the husband and father was not capable of providing the necessary food. Lizzie was not mentally capable of caring for her home and children, so the women of the neighborhood did the sewing and helped care for the family in times of sickness.

Mary Elizabeth was just ten years old when her mother died. Within a year the father married again and moved away, taking the younger children with him. He left Mary Elizabeth behind, as he felt that she would not fit into his new family because she was mentally deficient.

An aunt of Mary Elizabeth was induced to give her a home, but soon found that the girl had developed bad habits which made her a menace to the little children of the community. The aunt closely supervised Mary Elizabeth for a number of years; then because of failing health and the numerous complaints received about the conduct of Mary Elizabeth, the Social Agency was called into the case.

The Social Worker arranged with a psychologist to give Mary Elizabeth a mental test, that she might know what to expect of the child-woman in her mental reactions. The next step in the development of the case was to take her to a health clinic, where she could be given a thorough examination by specialists in social disease, endocrinology, and neurology. This that any physical handicap which may be back of the mental retardation might be corrected. The next step was the locating of relatives of Mary Elizabeth, who, because of the tie of blood, should be willing to meet the expense of caring for the afflicted one. Through a social agency in another city, the Social Worker learned that the father of Mary Elizabeth now had eight children. Several of them had become social delinquents and were considered below normal. He would not be able to contribute toward the support of Mary Elizabeth, as he and his family had for years been partly supported from public funds.

After the Social Worker had gathered together the social history and had received a report from the psychologist and a medical history from the health clinic, a conference was held to pass upon the various reports and make a plan for the future of Mary Elizabeth. The supervisor of the social agency, who presided over the conference, said, "Before we hear the various reports and form judgments, it might be well to call attention to the order in which you must give consideration to the matter presented. In hearing the evidence, hold in attention first, the protection of society; second, the happiness of the individual. While we work with the individual and try to fit her to become capable of caring for herself and perhaps contributing to the group, yet if she is a menace to society and her mental and physical condition is such that it endangers the health or morals of those with whom she comes in contact, then the individual must be sacrificed for the good of the group."

The Social Worker then gave her report:

"Mary Elizabeth, age 27, mental age 6 years. Heredity poor. Mother dead. Father unable to contribute to support of Mary Elizabeth. Brothers and sisters thought to be below normal. Social agency where family lives reports several of the children as being delinquent. Family partly supported from public funds. Health of Mary Elizabeth good at present. Medical remedial work done: has received treatment for social disease; has had defective teeth and tonsils removed, and has been treated for hypothyroidism. Morals bad. Psychologist reports strong sex instinct, with poor inhibitory powers because of low mentality. Easily influenced; falls a victim to companions, good or bad. Prognosis bad; because of age of patient cannot expect much improvement along mental lines. If had received serum and thyroid treatment when a small child, probably mentality could have been improved. Did not make favorable response to special training which was provided. Patient has always been supported by relatives, the church of which she is a member, and public funds.

"Estimated cost to society:

"Board and clothing for 27 years at $5 per week	$7,020.00
"Medical and hospital care,	250.00
"Money for special training,	200.00

"Total$7,470.00"

The supervisor then added:

"To this amount should be added the time of the normal person who was taken out of productive employment to care for Mary Elizabeth, and the cost to the State of the family of Mary Elizabeth in nonproductive labor, such as, policemen, probation officers, judges and jury that tried the cases of crime brought before them, the jailors and jail attendants, social workers, physicians who gave free service, serum treatment provided by the State, as well as food provided by social agencies. All of this expense to society has grown out of the wedding that was allowed to take place twenty-eight years ago. The saddest thing to be considered is the lives of these nine children who will probably never be able to cope with their problems, and who had the right to be well born.

"The question now to be considered is, How may we protect society from a repetition of this history in the case of Mary Elizabeth? We must protect society from social disease and the probable birth of children who are unfit."

The vote was taken and the decision was that Mary Elizabeth should be placed in the state institution for the feeble-minded. And so it was that on that cold, drizzling, autumn day, the Social Worker with Mary Elizabeth listened to the decision of the judge of the county court as part of the price paid in "paying the fiddler" for those who danced at the wedding of Sissy Lizzie.

Thinks Ministerial Conference Valuable

(Letter to First Presidency.)

I returned from the ministerial institute Saturday morning and found things in very fine shape. Apostle Ellis spent Sunday, January 9, with the Saints here, and his sermons were greatly appreciated.

In the preaching service yesterday morning, I tried to carry to our people the spirit of the meetings held recently in Independence, and believe I was quite successful. They gave me close attention, and expressed themselves as anxious to accept anything that will advance the work in this place. I am holding a council meeting tonight with the idea of rearranging some of our activities in harmony with ideas gained at the institute.

The institute just held in Independence will prove to be of more worth to the church, I believe, than any series of meetings ever held in the church to the present time. To me the three outstanding things of the conference were: the love of the brethren; unity of purpose; and a determination to make our dreams a reality. I have every confidence in the world that this church will do the task set before it.

I received light in regard to organizing and managing my work here, and I feel confident that I will be a better pastor because of having attended.

RAY WHITING.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA, January 17.

Portland Branch

January 24.—A pretty wedding was solemnized at the church here on December 18, when Miss Sylvia Lasley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Lasley, became the bride of Mr. Lawrence Root. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mildred Lasley, and Mr. Guy Allen acted as best man. Little Waldo Lasley carried the ring on a tiny satin cushion, and June Lasley acted as flower girl. Elder Walter H. Barker pronounced the ceremony. The wedding march was played by Perry Hunt, and the Temple Builders, of which organization the bride was a member, sang "I love you truly." Mr. and Mrs. Root are active young people in the church here and have the good wishes of a host of friends. They are making their home in Portland.

Our missionary, Brother Eli Bronson, has just finished a series of meetings in Vancouver, Washington, and reports fine interest. The little church was filled to its capacity much of the time.

Officers of the Sunday school were sustained at the January election, and Miss Chloe Shaw was elected to succeed Clark Livingston as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Clark now has three jobs instead of one, that of janitor for the Religio services, teacher of the Erodelphian Class, and critic. Nothing like being democratic we believe.

Brother Bronson is working throughout the district, interesting the Saints in, and impressing them, with the necessity of making out their financial statement this month. Portland hopes to be proud of her answer to the call of the bishopric to take the first step in stewardship by filing of inventories.

The organization of Bluebirds has been completed under the leadership of Sister Bertha Appleman. Portland now has a complete organization of Bluebirds, Orioles, Temple Builders, and Boy Scouts.

Sisters Sylvia Root and Ethel Larson, members of our library board, gave a program and basket social on January 18, raising something like twenty-two dollars. This will certainly be a decided help in improving our library.

The Department of Women is starting the new year with a full program. At the weekly meetings, one hour is devoted to the study of "Food and the body," and one hour to a course in sewing conducted by Mrs. Esther Roycroft. Mrs. Eli Bronson was reelected superintendent of this department at the January election of officers, with Mrs. Allie Moore as her assistant.

The young people of the early Sunday morning prayer service have challenged the adults of the Wednesday evening services to a contest in attendance, also keeping in mind the percentage of those participating in the meeting. The adults started in the lead with a large percentage, but the young people's meetings have been growing until they now are ahead in both points. The contest will last until March 1. It seems merely a matter of getting the habit of attending, as the young people are interested in their early morning service once they get started, and we hope each young person will so enjoy the meetings which he attends during the contest that nothing will induce him to remain away after the contest has closed. The theme the last two Sundays has been Brother McDowell's "Creed for youth" in the editorial of the January Autumn Leaves. Which reminds us, more and more of us are reading the Autumn Leaves.

An Appeal for Attendance at Conference

To the Saints of Southern Missouri District; Greeting: During the years that have intervened since I was elected secretary and treasurer of this district to-wit, in March, 1909, we have witnessed the ebb and flow of Saints coming in and going out; branches organized only to be disorganized sooner or later, and the members transferred to still other new branches, and always there were some who were lost sight of in the scattering. These, with the numbers that move into Southern Missouri and are recorded in our nonresident group, would if gathered together in a conference far outnumber the membership of the branches, who are supposed to cast their votes on the business of the district at the conference.

But during all these years, neither the branches nor the nonresidents have been fairly represented at our gatherings. This is wrong, and we are asking you all to so adjust your work that at least fifty per cent of the Saints will be present at our conference at Kennett, Missouri, February 18 to 20, 1927. We can not expect to reap if we do not sow, and why should we expect the appointing powers to send missionaries into the district when we have not done our part; or the members of branches expect the conference to meet with them, if they do not abide by the rules and by-laws enacted to carry on the work, and to assist the work by paying the small amount assessed for each conference?

If this had been done, the treasurer would not have to report a deficit the past few conferences. Therefore, we appeal to the Saints to come to the rescue, attend the conference, and help with this great work. If you are longing for the association of Saints, come, and bring the spirit of the work with you. Freely ye have received, freely give: time, talents, or both. This conference will end our eighteenth year as secretary.

BENJAMIN PEARSON.

Sharon, Pennsylvania

January 25.—Many months have elapsed since the last report of the doings of the Sharon Branch. This silence is not attributable to lack of interest in the work of the church. The local men have carried on the branch activities, which frequently were handicapped by a lapse to indifference. Sometimes the bulb refuses to burn, not because it has burned out, but because it is not tightened in the socket to make a contact. Moral: Sometimes we are not in contact with the power house.

At the beginning of the year, Elder William Patterson, who has been temporarily assigned to this district, came to Sharon to arrange for meetings.

On the evening of the 8th a program was given at Mayesville, a village contiguous to Sharon, by the local branch talent, at which time Brother Patterson contributed to the entertainment with his wonderful talent. The success of the program was marked by an invitation to return and reproduce it. This event is worth mentioning because of the extreme opposition and prejudice against the church in this locality.

A two-week series of meetings was begun Sunday, the 9th.

Elder Patterson preached in the morning and evening at Sharon and in the afternoon at Hamburg, Pennsylvania. The subject matter of the first week deals with Zion and its problems, and was particularly directed to the membership. The second week was an appeal to both members and non-members. The gradual increase of interest in the meetings culminated Sunday evening, the 23d, when a large congregation requested a continuance of the meetings another week. The request was granted.

We have been requested by the Methodist Church at a town in Ohio to put on a program in their church, which we hope to do February 9. This is another place where much opposition prevails against the church. We expect to put this program on also in the Sharon Branch February 10. We will have a complete change of program to present at Mayesville, February 12. These programs are worked up and presented by talent of Sharon Branch, under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression. This is the first series of meetings Brother Patterson has held in the Sharon Branch, and the Saints are more than pleased with the good counsel and advice he has given us. His sermons are wonderful, and through them is impressed upon the Saints the necessity of leading better lives in order to forward the establishment of Zion. The motto he has put before us is, "Onward to Zion." He is truly a man of God.

E. B. JONES, District Secretary.

West Pullman Church, Chicago, Illinois

It has been some time since the news of this thriving little branch appeared in these columns, but we are still on the road of progress. Many important events have passed into history since our last writing. Deaths and families moving away may have somewhat depleted our ranks, but others still continue to be added, so our membership remains about the same.

January has been a very busy month with us. On sacrament Sunday we had the pleasure of the company of Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and also Brother M. C. Fisher, of Boston, Massachusetts. The service was one long to be remembered by all who were privileged to be present, as the Master poured out his Spirit in abundance, and all rejoiced under its influence.

In the evening Bishop Fisher spoke to a very attentive and appreciative audience on the subject of tithing, and continued his discourse on Monday evening to the enlightenment of her hearers. We now have almost one hundred per cent tithe payers, and our aim is to make it one hundred per cent as quickly as possible.

On Tuesday evening, January 4, Brother Baldwin gave us another one of his forceful sermons, which was appreciated by all, and it was with sincere regret we had to wish them a safe journey back to their field of labor at the same time we bade Bishop Fisher adieu.

The regular yearly election of the Sunday school resulted in the following being placed in office, John Wahlgren, superintendent; Charles Cotton, assistant superintendent; Edna Cotton, secretary and treasurer, with Laverna Fields as assistant; and Irene Cooper, pianist.

On Sunday, the 9th, our pastor delivered unto us the bread of life in no uncertain terms, and we are certainly glad to have such a man of broad vision and in such accord with the policies of the church to lead us, for we expect to grow in 1927, not only numerically, but spiritually as well.

Our regular business session resulted in only a few changes. Our pastor, Edgar O. Byrn, was unanimously re-elected. Roy F. Healy, publicity agent; John Wahlgren, tithing collector; Charles Scribner, branch clerk; Josephine Tripp, financial agent; Irene Cooper, chorister; and Naomi West, pianist. The regular election of the Department of Recreation and Expression preceded our branch meeting, with E. O. Byrn and R. F. Healy, the district superintendent, in charge. Sister Irene Cooper was elected superintendent for the ensuing year; Laverna Fields, secretary and treasurer; Harold Buseth, chorister; and Naomi West, pianist.

A new and active scout committee was elected, with Deputy Commissioner R. F. Healy as chairman. The troop is developing rapidly under the able leadership of Scoutmaster Charles Scribner and his assistant, Herbert Cotton. They expect to enter our team in the sectional championships in first aid early in March. We are indeed proud of our scouts.

On the 16th our priest, Charles Cotton, spoke to us from Holy Writ, and in the evening our pastor again addressed us. On the 23d we had as our speaker the district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Brother Roy F. Healy, and at night our pastor again broke the bread of life to us.

The last Sunday of the month we were pleased to have with us Brother Charles Wessner, of First Chicago Branch, and in the evening Stephen Lester, of Central Branch, both of whom left us with food for thought.

Our Women's Department is flourishing under the able leadership of Sister Robert Burwell.

Our doors are always open to visitors and traveling missionaries who perchance are in Chicago at any time. You are a stranger only once here. Try us and see. Our pastor's address is 12011 Stewart Avenue; telephone Pullman 7418. Our publicity agent's address is 7436 South Michigan Avenue; telephone Vincennes 0999. Call either if you are in the city.

Young People's Convention at Lincoln

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, January 29.—Our young people's convention held on December 31 and January 1 and 2 was the outstanding feature of the month. As it has already been reported, we will not report it in detail but wish to say we are sure much good was accomplished, and we thoroughly enjoyed having Brothers Elbert A. Smith and John F. Sheehy with us, as well as the other visiting Saints. Brothers Shakespeare and Porter were also here and assisted in the services with music and speaking.

Because of the convention, the sacramental service was held a week later, January 9. Brothers Bilyue and Wall were in charge. On that date Brother Lawrence Brockway was the evening speaker.

Brothers Robertson and Shakespeare went to Independence to attend the ministerial conference, which was held there during the first part of January.

At the annual business meeting of the branch, the following were sustained in their respective offices: Pastor, Marcus Bilyue; priests, Grover Wall and Lawrence Brockway; teacher, George Weller; deacons, Nelse Steinberg and Ernest Taylor; publicity agent, Sister Chapple; branch clerk and correspondent, Katie L. Hale. Ernest Taylor was elected finance clerk; Irene Turpin, chorister; Carrie Hale, pianist. For the Department of Women, Sister Chapple was sustained as president, and Sister Allen secretary and treasurer. Sister McCart was elected cradle roll superintendent; Sister Rawlins Temple Builder leader. For the Sunday school, Eunice Jean Easton was sustained as superintendent; Ruth Turpin, elected secretary; Juanita Wilcox, pianist; and Elsie Hale, chorister. For the Religio, Brother Ezra Oehring was sustained president, and Sister Irene Turpin was elected his assistant; Lawrence Brockway sustained secretary. The budget system was adopted for branch, Sunday school, and Religio use.

The Department of Women earned about fifteen dollars at their monthly food sale and bazaar. They met for business at the home of Sister Robertson on Wednesday, the 19th. Their hostess served a delicious luncheon.

On Monday evening, January 17, a number of Saints and friends gathered at the home of Sister Bilyue, surprising her on her birthday. The evening was spent playing games, and refreshments were served. A nice birthday cake was presented to Sister Bilyue by Sister Smith.

The young people's class was defeated in the contest in Sunday school attendance and lesson preparation. They served an oyster supper to the school Friday evening, January 21. They are to be commended for the splendid effort they made in this contest, even if they did lose.

On January 23, Brother Fred Gatenby, of Neligh, Nebraska, worshiped with us and favored us with a splendid sermon. Our pleasure in greeting him was clouded by the absence of his companion, Sister Gatenby, who had always accompanied him to Lincoln heretofore, and whose cheery smile will be missed so much by all. We can only say that we sympathize with Brother Gatenby in his bereavement. We know he has been able to say, "Not mine, but thy will be done." He expects to spend ten days in Lincoln and will be able to attend and assist in the series of meetings to be held here beginning February 6. Apostle F. Henry Edwards will conduct these meetings.

Cheboygan, Michigan

January 10.—On November 14 occurred the marriage of Sister Pearl Sheffer, youngest daughter of Elder and Sister W. H. Sheffer, to Mr. Richard Lynts, Elder Sheffer officiating. After the ceremony Sister Sheffer served a lovely dinner to the relatives. The young couple are making their home at Blaney, Michigan.

Little Elaine Sheffer has been suffering with an abscess. She is better now.

Brother Ray Ellis, of South Boardman, recently visited in the home of Brother and Sister George S. Wilson. Brother Ray teaches school near Posen.

Sister Aldean Olds, who has been living near Alba, has moved to Belding.

Sister Lalone's mother, Sister Wittum, has been sick, but is better now.

Our Christmas program was in charge of Sister Walter Emerson and was all we could wish it to be. The music and singing were fine. The children did their parts very nicely. Our hall appeared very pretty and was filled with friends, some coming all the way from Onaway and Afton. Brother and Sister W. H. Sheffer were given a pair of lovely blankets by the aid members. Brother and Sister Irving Sheffer were presented a pretty quilt made by the Oriole Girls. Those who wondered why the Oriole Girls and their monitor, Sister Emerson, were so busy before Christmas found out when every member of the branch, old and young, was given a useful present made by them.

Sister Irene and Etta Wilson spent their vacation at home.

Sister Nina Lynts came home from Flint on Christmas, returning to that city shortly after. Elder E. N. Burt and Elder and Sister Max Kramer and several others, of Onaway, attended our Christmas program.

Sisters Lince, Emerson, and Sayers are on our sick list. We pray that they will soon be greatly improved in health.

Brother Sayers, who was home from Detroit for a few weeks, has returned to his work there.

If Sister Harry Darling, of Flint, sees this letter in the HERALD, will she please write Sister Wilson, as the latter has lost her address and wants to write her.

I am sending money for the December HERALD. I do not want to miss a copy, for there is no one who enjoys reading the church paper any more than do I. We are almost isolated here, though I understand there used to be a live branch at Grannis, (Arkansas). We have a good church building, and through the efforts of the few Saints here a new shingle roof has been put on and the interior has been papered; also we have some new windows. We feel as if we are now entitled to some preaching. The missionary in this part of the vineyard has not put in his appearance as yet, but we hope he will soon find time to come this way, as we are getting hungry for the gospel message. S. R. Clift.

Sperry, Oklahoma

January 30.—The month of January to us has been a very busy one, although the weather was disagreeable. The departments of our branch went on as usual.

The young people's department has a very nice program outlined for the coming months. Sister Hanthorn, who is a teacher of English in our high school, was elected president of our senior Religio class, and she has promised some interesting things for us in the future.

Brother and Sister A. W. Smith paid our pastor, W. P. Rumsey, a visit this month. They are pioneers of this branch and are always welcome visitors. They moved to Kiefer, Oklahoma, and at that time Tulsa was the closest branch, and that distance was soon overcome. Jenks Church had as starters such faithful workers as they. Brother Smith's work took him to Billings, Oklahoma, about four months ago, and not being satisfied without church privileges they at once set to work. Our latest report is they have secured a schoolhouse for meetings. The aid of Brother "Jimmie" Davis, Oklahoma's missionary, was at once sought. He is preaching in the schoolhouse to a good crowd, and the interest is good. Sister Smith was elected to lead the Sunday school with about forty-five enrolled. Although they are missed by our branch, we are always glad to lend their services, and with Brother Davis there to help them, we feel sure of the results at Billings.

Brother Earl D. Bailey, of Tulsa, was the speaker for us at eight o'clock, January 30, and we all like to hear him.

One vacant place in our church was noticed by all, and the reason was at once sought. Brother Dail Senior fell on the ice last week with serious results to his back. We hope he will soon be with us.

Wichita, Kansas

January 26.—Following a few weeks of springlike weather, King Winter returned to this section of the State, but notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, our attendance at the various services has been very good. The work here is moving along nicely under the leadership of Pastor Peter S. Whalley, and the spirit of unity seems to prevail.

Brother Whalley has been in Independence attending the ministerial conference, and while there he was invited to address a class of young people, at which time he was blessed with the spirit of inspiration. He attended the group meeting, which is presided over by Brother J. A. Holsworth, and there he gave some of his personal experiences. Brother Whalley is always able to give encouragement to the Saints because of his Christlike life. He also held a two-day meeting at Netawaka, Kansas, although the weather was quite severe. The Lord certainly recognized his efforts, and he was blessed to a wonderful degree with the sweet spirit of peace and comfort and did his best to strengthen and encourage the Saints at that place. During his absence here, the work was left in charge of District President E. L. Barraclough and Brother Whipple, who gave us some good sermons which were food for thought.

Our district president gave a very good report of the sub-conference held at Dodge City on January 22 and 23 for the scattered Saints of the western part of the State. The work at Dodge City is under the supervision of Brother J. N. Madden. Brothers Barraclough and Pooler, from our city, were in attendance, also Bishop J. A. Becker, of Independence. Brother Barraclough preached the opening sermon. Brother Becker gave some wonderful sermons, and his theme was, "The building up of Zion and stewardship." The main thought expressed was that it is impossible to build Zion without the stewardship plan. A sacramental service was held on Sunday, some testifying that this was the first time in years that they had had that privilege. The assembled Saints received an outpouring of God's Spirit. He surely recognizes his people when they put forth the effort to serve him. The weather was very cold and stormy, but notwithstanding this, some drove many miles to be in attendance at these meetings, the average attendance being thirty. Many more would have been present had the weather been moderate.

We are planning a gathering here on February 11, 12, and 13. A three-in-one service is outlined: district conference, musical institute, and young people's convention. President Floyd M. McDowell and Brother Arthur H. Mills, of Independence, will be in attendance. Our young people are very much enthused over these meetings, and are anticipating an enjoyable time, as this will be the first young people's convention held in this district. We trust all will do their part to make it a success.

Sister Martha Truman, sister of our former pastor, Brother T. S. Williams, underwent a very serious operation but is now on the way to recovery. At this time Sister Anna Miller is very ill.

The work of the various departments is moving along. Our midweek prayer services are well attended, and we are blessed with the Spirit at these meetings.

As a united band, we are endeavoring to uphold the banner of righteousness that we, together with you, will help to be builders in Zion.

They Are Looking Toward Zion

After reading the letters of the Saints, I am impressed to write a few lines. We are isolated, but get to Fargo, North Dakota, once in a while during the summer months, for which we are thankful. As a little band of eleven, we try to keep the camp fires burning by having prayer meeting every first Sunday in the month. We try to keep our faces Zionward, toward the promised land. We are ever praying for the Saints, especially the leaders; also for the working out of the stewardship plan, and the completion of the Auditorium, that we as a great family may move onward to our high standing. We may not see the temple completed, but hope to see it started.

It causes me to rejoice to see a young man or boy get up, and hear him bear his testimony, and I think of the timbers used for the building of Zion; also a young woman or girl, the mothers of our future Zion. Excuse me if I drop a word here, but do not use anything to cover up the complexion, for we older people love to see the soul shine out when a testimony is given.

I am glad to see the marked change which has come about in the last year or two, and to know that the Saints are more alive and active. This is a sure sign of the hastening time. Pray for us, Saints, who are scattered over the land, braving the winds of sects on every side. Pray that we may not waver.

ALFRED M. RIFE.

SHELDON, NORTH DAKOTA, January 30.

Battle Lake, Minnesota

January 31.—On account of the roads and weather, there have been no regular meetings held in the Union Branch since the first part of November. However, the Tucker families and Horne families are still able to meet occasionally and enjoy good services—Sunday school, prayer meeting, and Religio.

Even among the isolated, interest is increasing, as is evidenced by the Christmas offering sent in; some of those who rarely have the opportunity to attend services being among those who contribute the most. Another sign of loyalty to the work is that the young are paying tithing. One of the factors that contribute to this condition is the fact that the branch has been fortunate in securing a capable man for president, one who enjoys the loyalty of the members and the respect and esteem of nonmembers. He was called to Bemidji the latter part of January to conduct funeral services for Sister Agnes Whiting, the promising daughter of Ora and Sister Ruth Whiting. In the pleasant affairs of life his association is greatly appreciated, but there are many who are able to furnish entertainment and pleasures; it is in times of stress and grief that a man's true worth is shown, and the president of the Union Branch is the first one called upon in times of death, both by members and nonmembers, for he has proved that he is able to carry comfort and consolation to those who mourn, as well as pleasure to those who rejoice.

Thirty-two Added at New Albany

NEW ALBANY, INDIANA, January 30.—I have never written to your paper, which I esteem highly. I desire to let the Saints of other places know we are still trying to let our lights shine so that others may see our good works and by so doing may be led into the light. I would ask the Saints to pray that we may retain the oil for our lamps, that we may have the brightness that never fadeth away.

We are in a place here in which we have been for three years. It is sold now, and I understand we are going to have to give it up. I also ask the prayers of the Saints that the way will be opened up whereby we can get a place in which to meet together and receive our spiritual food which is in store for us if we are sincere and faithful.

We have a nice band of Saints, and all are working in harmony and trying to press forward and upward. For our leaders we have Brother A. E. Jaegers, of New Albany, and Brother W. O. Robertson, of Louisville, Kentucky. They are giving us wonderful service, and may the blessings of God be with them. We want to make mention of Brother O. J. Hawn, who was with us at Byrnsville, near here, five weeks, the latter part of October and first of November. He performed a marvelous work, baptizing thirty-two, most of these being adults. He is now in Michigan, and our hearts' desire is that he will be sent back here in the near future, as we feel sure there is yet much good which can be done by him. He is a man of God, seeking after the hearts of men.

For all these years, we have been regularly holding our services. Sunday school is every Sunday at half past nine, preaching service an hour later. We observe our sacrament every third Sunday, prayer meeting every Wednesday night, Religio on Friday evening. Any visiting Saint will be most welcome. As we have to give up our place, pray for us that we may not be deprived of these opportunities. We hope and pray for the completion of Zion. G. S. S.

First Columbus Branch

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—The year 1927 looks especially favorable for all departments of our work. Having a definite aim and goal outlined for the uplift of the latter-day work as it should be, and the motto "Forward to 1930," seems to have waked the Saints to a deeper sense of their opportunities for the truer Zion conditions for which we are all striving.

Elder J. B. Williams was reelected branch president, and other officers are: clerk, Miss Mabel Sinclair; financial deacon, Brother Homer Owen; musical director, Nathan Weate; church school superintendent, Elder A. E. Anderton; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Charles Ferguson; president of the Department of Women, Mrs. C. W. Clark. The condition of the branch is much better than a year ago. Everyone seems to want to be doing or preparing for a better work.

The church school has a very bright outlook, with aims for larger membership, increased Christmas offering, and a special aim of raising three hundred dollars for work on the local church. The primary department is starting with a great stride for the young, having revolutionized the past years' system with older teachers, thereby permitting several girls to better prepare themselves by study to work more efficiently in the near future. Prayer and songs are being taught, and stressed more on these young minds.

The choir is aiming to get better material and a better mutual understanding of its mission to the church.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has outlined a grand program of activity, one which means plenty of work for everyone. It should be a joy for all to help to do this work. Such items as athletic events, social programs, debating teams, Oriole Girls, Temple Builders, young men's classes, boys' classes, and a teacher training class add to the advancement and development of the members of this department and this branch for that more abundant life.

The Department of Women is, as usual, faithfully up and doing. Two study classes are organized as special features and meet weekly. A meeting was called on Sunday, January 23, at 3.30 p. m. completing its organization, and the newly elected girls' leader gave a talk to mothers on the psychology and sociology of girls during the adolescent age.

We were especially glad to have our missionary, Elder Jacob Halb, with us Sunday, the 16th. He gave us some very excellent thoughts and ideals, which always bring Latter Day Saints closer together when trying to do right. Patriarch G. T. Griffiths, who rightly seems a father to Columbus Saints, was with us over Sunday, January 23, and gave us words of comfort and encouragement to remain faithful to the end. He followed out on the Zion theme presented at the morning service.

Second Columbus Branch

Sacramental meeting was in charge of our pastor, H. E. French, and J. E. Matthews, and instruction given was edifying. The Spirit was present in power, and all felt a greater determination to do more in the new year. Our hearts were filled to overflowing, and we could not help but say, "Oh, God, how wonderful thou art!"

At six o'clock Patriarch J. E. Matthews baptized two candidates. We welcome our new members, Robert Willison and Mrs. Florence Weber. Confirmation took place at the evening service, the former being confirmed by H. E. French and J. E. Matthews, Brother French being mouthpiece; the latter was confirmed by the same brethren, Brother Matthews being the mouthpiece. Brother Matthews preached at the evening hour, taking for a theme, "Mission of Christ in the world." This was a beautiful sermon and will long be remembered by all who heard it.

On the following Sunday morning, H. E. French preached a very instructive sermon, taking for a theme, "The purpose of the sacrament." At half past seven G. H. Kirkendall selected for a text John 3:16: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Brother and Sister J. L. Wemlinger are the proud parents of a baby girl, born January 12.

The Department of Women met January 13 at the home of Mrs. Caslow, with nineteen members present. At 12.30 they were served a chicken dinner, which all enjoyed. We are studying parliamentary law with Vera M. Hunter as teacher, and home management with Ethel Kirkendall as teacher. Our meeting was one to be remembered, not because of the good things to eat, but because of the presence of the Spirit and the wonderful instruction given. We hope to be better prepared for efficient service by the end of this year.

On January 16, in the morning hour, G. H. Kirkendall preached a beautiful sermon, stressing the need of prayerful preparation for our work. A. H. Nieman preached the evening sermon on the topic, "Men loyal to Christ."

The Sunday school gave an entertainment on the 18th, and a splendid program was given. Ice cream and cake were served, and everyone had a good time.

Our women's study class is progressing, and interest is increasing. We are ready to start the second volume of church history.

On January 23 at 10.30, H. E. French preached, taking for a text Ephesians 5:5: "Nor covetous man, who is an idolater." At the evening hour, Doctor W. B. Reeves took for his subject, "The life of Abraham." Both sermons were very interesting.

Our basket ball team playing in the South Church League has won three games and lost one. We are proud of the splendid work they are doing.

On last Sunday our Temple Builders sang a beautiful anthem, "Call to service," following G. H. Kirkendall, who preached a good sermon. John F. Martin made us a visit and gave us one of his eloquent sermons in the evening. We hope he will come again soon.

Cross Timbers, Missouri

Since the organization of the Cross Timbers Branch last June, we have tried to keep up our regular meetings and interest, though the weather and roads have interfered with our attendance to a slight degree. However, the interest is very good, especially among our young people. One young man, recently ordained a priest, occupies the pulpit whenever called upon and does very well.

The pale reaper took this young man's mother, and this leaves seven children without a mother.

We met at the Oak Grove schoolhouse to watch the old year out and the new year in. About fifty were present. We had instrumental music, singing, games, a treat of pop corn, pop corn balls, and peanuts; and at midnight while some tolled the bell, others sang "Gently he leads us," and "The old, old path." All pronounced it an enjoyable occasion.

We are now planning for our district conference to be held February 11, 12, and 13, at Rich Hill, Missouri.

Lachine, Michigan

Our little branch is on the upward move, but on account of weather conditions our gatherings are small. We hope the brothers and sisters will be able to meet with us again soon.

The Christmas program proved to be a success, and the little church was filled.

We are made sad to hear of the death of our young sister, Mrs. Esther Ross, formerly Miss Esther Blackmore; but while we feel to mourn because of her departure, we are happy to report that Elder Guy, who has been seriously afflicted in body, is rapidly recovering. As we met together on Sunday, knowing his condition, the officers requested that we assemble in prayer and fasting for him. We recognized the fact that there is one who could aid him, and our brother was exceedingly blessed as a result. On the following Sunday he was able to meet with us again.

Elder E. N. Burt, of Onaway, motored to Long Rapids and paid a visit to Brother and Sister Kyser. A conversation was started on the second coming of Christ. It was very interesting and lasted until the early hours of morning.

Brother S. T. Pendleton expects to be with us February 3 and plans to hold a series of meetings. We hope to see many in attendance and great good derived from this effort.

GERALDINE COLE.

After Sixty-five Years

PERSIA, IOWA, February 2.—Since our last report we have had church services several times. On January 2 was the usual sacramental service, and after some appropriate remarks by the president of the branch, the sacrament was administered to those present; then we had a testimony and prayer and song service, which reminded one of days long gone, when the Saints of the early Reorganization came together. It was in 1860 and 1862 when the writer took shelter under that organization, and I have never felt sorry for that step, and still live in the assurance that there will always be sufficient shelter under Immanuel's banner.

There are some few who joined the Reorganization in those days who were members of the Persia Branch, but they have passed on to their reward, and with others are waiting for those who are to come.

FREDERICK HANSEN.

Oelwein Welcomes Some Visitors

OELWEIN, IOWA, January 27.—The last of December and all of January up to date have marked a series of red letter days in our community, and it seems that we have been especially blessed with a greater portion of the Spirit. Also we have had some excellent visitors.

The last week in December, Elder Arthur H. Mills, author, musical director, and composer, was with us for a few days. The musical young people and some of the old gathered at the hospitable home of Brother and Sister Fred Clark to meet Brother Mills. They were not disappointed in him, for he is not only a musical genius, but a man of many social graces, and above all the soul of geniality. He not only gave a most interesting talk on music, but also on the church, its inspired leaders, and the great work they are carrying on, how the young men and women of the church are coming forward as never before and taking hold of the work with vigor and vim. The young people here had a new insight into music, and when Brother Mills played the piano and led the singing, it seemed as if every heart and voice responded to the superb music. After the meeting, a light luncheon was served, and Brother Mills proved himself a most entertaining story-teller, keeping his hearers convulsed with laughter. Long may he live and prosper.

A number of our young people attended the young people's convention at Cedar Rapids and were royally entertained. A very good spirit was shown in these meetings, and it seemed as if our young people were getting right in the great wave of enthusiasm that is sweeping over the church.

Apostle Clyde F. Ellis was with us two evenings the first week in January. Thursday evening he preached a most inspiring sermon, which was heard by a goodly number of nonmembers. On Friday evening he showed his magic lantern colored views of the South Sea Islands. The minister of the Christian Church here kindly loaned him his magic lantern and was kind to him in many ways, seeming anxious to talk to him. The superintendent of schools, Professor Moon, very courteously loaned Brother Ellis the high school screen. On that evening the church was crowded till there was hardly standing room, and Brother Ellis heard praise on every side for the beautiful views and his excellent lecture on the climate, manners, and customs of the people of the South Sea Islands. We think it has helped the gospel work along here a great deal. Quite a number of nonmembers have been asking about the work and taking an interest in our missionaries. One of the ministers, a genial, broad-minded man, has been very tolerant, and talked with some of our members in a manner which proved him to be without the prejudice that has existed in so many of the churches of the world.

Elder C. A. Kress, district missionary, has been with us for two days this week, Monday and Tuesday, and preached in the homes of some of the members. His sermons were both very good, but the one Tuesday evening seemed a most inspiring one, and there seems to be an awakening among some Saints who have grown cold and distant to the work and seldom come. Brother Kress is an organizer of ability and seems to reach many people by not only preaching but by fireside visiting. We feel that the Lord has especially blessed us in allowing us to be visited by such men as the brethren who have lately been here. It seems as if "showers of blessings" follow in their footsteps.

We expect a visit from the head of the Department of Women in our district, Miss Esther Vickerstaff, of Clinton, Iowa. She will meet with the department Saturday afternoon, January 29. We expect a most beneficial meeting, as Sister Vickerstaff, though young in years, is a person of excellent judgment and well fitted to cope with all the problems that are to be met by the women in this latter-day work. We anticipate that much good will result from her visit.

We are only a small band of Saints, but we are truly striving to come up higher and obey all the commandments given to our church.

Sacramento, California

The year 1926 for the Sacramento Branch was one of greatly renewed interest, attendance, and accomplishment, with a splendid spirit of unity throughout. Elder W. H. Dawson was elected pastor, with Elder T. J. Lawn, assistant. Two young men called and ordained during the year were: George C. Price, priest; and Fred A. Taylor, teacher. These brethren, with visiting missionaries Guy P. Levitt and Joseph H. Yager, have filled our pulpit to the edification and spiritual growth of the Saints. Our weekly prayer services increased from an average of nine to sixty. The sacramental services, held monthly, averaged eighty, with occasionally over one hundred present. The gifts of speaking in tongues, the interpretation, and prophecy, were given in power on several occasions, and three have testified of visions given in the church, and one elderly brother had the gift of knowledge that his son would be healed of asthma at his baptism, which was proved later. There were eighteen baptized by the pastor and three by Elder Levitt, during the year.

Brother Levitt gave us two separate week's services during the year, and we are now planning with him for a full missionary series, with tracting and advertising, beginning immediately at the close of the district conference, which convenes here at 10 a. m., Saturday, February 12 and 13, at the local church at Twenty-fourth and Kay Streets.

Bishop Edw. Ingham, of Oakland, has addressed us on the financial program of the church, and our visiting missionary and the local men have also made plain the Lord's plan for the equality of his people, and many are making out inventories and paying their tithes.

Our Women's Department, with Sister Birdie Clark superintendent, held three bazaars uptown and cleared $404.60. They also made $77.39 from four cake sales. Their monthly meetings at the various homes were well attended, and on one occasion they went by autos eighteen miles to Roseville to the home of Sister Grace Hook.

Our superintendent for this new year is Sister Geneva Beebe, with Sister Amy Beebe, bazaar chairman. Our Sunday school, with Sister Gertrude Bidwell, superintendent, has increased in interest and attendance until it verily looks like "the church at study." During this hour we are shown the need of a new building, with more spacious quarters.

Our Department of Recreation and Expression, with Brother John Dawson, superintendent, maintained its interest and well filled its mission to prepare our youth.

During the year this department and the Women's Department sponsored a number of social gatherings, from Valentine to Halloween, with suppers and outdoor picnics in between. The Sunday school also entertained us with their annual picnic in the summer days, and the Christmas entertainment just passed. The latter was "The Babe divine" (Ira B. Wilson). Our junior choir girls dressed in white robes gave the tableaux, and the children sang with them in the choruses; and with the decorations and the tree (secured and arranged by Brother Ralph Ensley and his helpers), a beautiful program was given. The program committee was: Sisters Ella Dawson, Hazel Blöhm, and Flossie Levitt. Our choir, with Sister Birdie Clark, chorister, numbers twenty, ten juniors and ten adults. They have an average of nearly full attendance at all rehearsals and give splendid support at all preaching services, rendering beautiful numbers, as well as their special day programs. Their Christmas cantata was "The awakening" (William Baines). They also enjoyed their second annual New Year's party at the home of the chorister, with a chicken supper at 1 a. m.

Last August, after the district reunion, Brother Edwin Burdick, our newly appointed district orchestra leader, a new member in the church as well as our branch, organized an orchestra here, and at the reunion. Our local group now includes ten, three violins, four cornets, two clarinets, one saxophone, and a bass horn, with others preparing. They, too, have weekly rehearsals and render fine music for the Sunday school, Religio, and church services. One young brother of this group, Brother James Lamprey, has been elected as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression for this year.

Our Oriole Girls, with Sister Mary Honeychurch leader, enjoyed their group activities last year, and are going forward this year as Temple Builders, with Sister Bertha Austin, leader.

Brother Levitt located his family here last fall, and Sister Levitt and son, Cleland, are taking an active interest.

Duluth, Minnesota

January 25.—While the thermometer is hovering around twenty degrees below zero here, people may think our ardor is probably cold; but far from it. With the great plan of salvation ever before us, and Zion only in the making, could we be satisfied to be cold in the work we all should love? It is as Elder Ray Whiting said in his discourse on Sunday, the 24th, the word must be made flesh in us.

Brother Samuel Case spent a week at Ashland, Wisconsin, at the home of Brother and Sister William Dennis, near the first of the year, giving encouragement to the Saints living there, and holding meetings. Brother W. C. Stauty also journeyed to Ashland New Year's Day, returning Sunday, the 2d. They enjoyed mingling with those of like faith.

On January 9, W. C. Stauty was the speaker at eleven o'clock service, the subject being, "God's universal purpose." Samuel Case spoke in the evening, reading Ephesians 4 and taking his text from 3: 3, 5. His theme was, "The new man." He showed the need of putting off the old man, and putting on the new man after the pattern of the Man of Galilee, our Lord and Savior.

The branch has been fully incorporated, with six trustees, and its members met on the 12th to perfect their organization; electing Elder P. G. Schnuckle, chairman; Robert Zuelsdorf, secretary; choosing by lot the length of term of each according to the laws governing. P. G. Schnuckle and Robert Zuelsdorf, three years; Louise Blake, Samuel Sloan, two years; Mollie Feathers and Martha Schnuckle, one year. Two trustees will be elected each year at the annual business meeting. Brother Robert Zuelsdorf was the speaker at the morning service of the 16th, and Brother A. C. Bundy occupied in the evening.

The Religio hour of the 21st was given over to preaching service, when Elder Ray Whiting, of Minneapolis, favored us with a splendid sermon entitled, "The word made flesh," showing the need of the gospel radiating from us, that the Christ life be more in evidence among the people of the church. This will indeed need to be if Zion will be Zion to us. The church is advancing rapidly, and we must move with it or we will be left behind, out in the cold world, where is not found that love which will be fully demonstrated in the church of the living God. May we progress onward and upward to the perfect man in Christ Jesus, loving the Lord God with all our might, mind, and strength, and loving our neighbor as ourselves.

Elder Robert Gunlock, missionary to Minnesota and North Dakota, was the speaker at the morning service January 24, and was an inspiration to us to move forward. Especially did he stress the need for study and qualifying for the task that lies before us. The rostrum was occupied in the evening by Elder Ray Whiting, our district president. He read Deuteronomy 30: 10-19, taking verse 19 as a text and coupling it with verse 15: "See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil; I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live." The discourse was one applied to us today. Shall we not choose life with its blessings instead of death with its cursings?

Sister Mary A. Carlson, of Barnum, passed beyond the portals of this life on January 16, to meet her Maker. Her life was one of devotion to her God and the church of her choice, living to an age of seventy-two years, a pattern worthy to follow. Our prayers ascend for those left to mourn the loss of a mother, a sister in the gospel, and a friend. Elder Ray Whiting officiated at the funeral held at Barnum, Saturday, the 23d. At this place two of her daughters, Sister Bertha Eckley and Sister Louise Dathe make their homes, and there she was living at the time of her death.

Elder J. A. Gunsolley, patriarch, started a series of sermons Monday, the 25th, using as a theme of his discourses, "Individual excellence," and dividing it into three parts: physical, subdivided first cleanliness, body, clothing; Doctrine and Covenants 38: 9; 42: 12; 85: 38; 119: 3; second, sleep, Doctrine and Covenants 85: 38; 119: 9; third, work, Doctrine and Covenants 85: 38; 38: 9; 42: 12; 87: 5; 104: 44; 118: 4; fourth, cheerfulness, 119: 3; 59: 4; fifth, diet, Doctrine and Covenants 86; 119: 3; 59: 4; sixth, dress, 42: 12. The second division was intellectual, and was subdivided into: first, all good books, 55: 2; 85: 36; second, study and faith, 85: 36; third, guide into all truth, John 16: 13; fourth, all knowledge, Doctrine and Covenants 90: 12; 42: 17. Third division, spiritual: first, Hyrum Smith, Doctrine and Covenants 10: 11; 11: 4; second, wisdom and treasures of knowledge, 86; third, angels, 83: 15; 86: 3; fourth, gifts, 46; 1 Corinthians 12; fifth, laughter, Doctrine and Covenants 59: 4; 85: 37; 119: 3; sixth, rewards, Doctrine and Covenants 59; 76: 5-7. Brother Gunsolley brings to us the plainness of the scriptures, showing us the road to travel to reach the goal of perfection. He is with us at this writing, feeding to us the divine truths in simple terms, and showing us the need of individual excellence. He is indeed a father in Israel.

The Department of Women of the Duluth Branch feels very grateful for the success it has had in its endeavors in the past year. Its members feel sure that when there is unity there is strength, and surely the Lord is there.

The activity of the members in attending and bringing their neighbors and friends has meant much in the support of the work. From the financial standpoint they feel quite grateful. They have held one fancywork sale in the city and a parcel post sale in Two Harbors, and the usual collection has made it possible for this department to take credit for the lovely piano that was put into our church. The sisters have also helped considerably on the church debt.

For the past year the members have studied Mother Teacher of Religion, by Anna Frelove Betts, giving their attention to the two absorbing topics, children and religion. The study has been very much enjoyed by all, especially the mothers who are trying to make God real in the hearts and lives of their children. To keep the "soul of the home" alive, it is necessary to know these things. This department has also received several good talks from different missionaries during the year, and the sisters were helped to keep their inspirations living.

A few members have been lost from the branch, having moved away, but some have also been received, and therefore the work rolls on. We trust the Lord will be with the sisters the coming year for the advancement of this department in his work.

Good News From a Small Branch

AUDUBON, MINNESOTA.—In our humble and weak way, we are trying to let our light shine out in doing our bit for the Master. Though isolated and seldom hearing a sermon, our little band of workers is keeping up its aid society, organized in 1914 by Sister Kate Martin, of Frazee. Then there were quite a few members at Audubon and Frazee to carry on this work, and joining together we gave entertainments, had sales, and suppers.

At present there are only four officers and two members, but we meet together once a month at the home of a member, serve lunch, paying the sum of ten cents. It is only a little for the Master's cause, but through our efforts, trusting God who gives to all who love him, we have been able to help the needy ones, care for the sick, help with Christmas offerings, the endowment fund, and in other ways doing our bit for our Savior and being of service in his vineyard.

During the summer and as long as the weather permits, Elder Marcus Erickson meets every second Sunday of the month at the home of Sister Anna Olson, where a few of the Saints come to partake of the sacrament. Truly can we testify of God's goodness; his holy presence is strongly felt, so that our souls are uplifted, and with tears streaming down our cheeks we are led to testify of his love and care over us. During last August, we were given the pleasure of having Brother Swen Swenson, of Independence, with us, preaching to us some very good sermons, which were food to our hungry souls. While here he baptized six worthy souls, some of whom have been on my home department record since 1916. May God's blessings attend them!

Another treat was in store for us when Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley visited us for a few days in October. His talks on stewardship and Zion were very uplifting and beneficial. Before leaving he was pleasantly surprised at the homes of Sisters Walter and Jacob Harpster, being presented with an offering to help him purchase a new overcoat, little Clarissa, adopted daughter of Brother and Sister Walter Harpster, giving her little mite first "to help Uncle Gunsolley (as she called him) buy a new overcoat."

Brother Barnes, of Frazee, was taken suddenly ill with cancer at his home during the month of November. The children were called home, thinking to bid him good-by. Elder Marcus was called to administer to him. The following Sunday being our sacrament meeting, we had a prayer service, praying especially for our sick brother and Brother Swen Swenson, who also was sick at the time. God's holy presence was with us in power. We were comforted and felt assured our prayers would be answered. Today the brother is well, a living testimony of what our heavenly Father can do for those who live in faith, obeying his commandments, and keeping his laws.

We earnestly ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that we may be ever faithful, earnest workers for the Master and do all we can in the great work of building Zion.

Missionaries will be welcomed at any time at our home.

SISTER WALTER HARPSTER.

An Exhortation Gathered From Scripture

To the Saints scattered abroad; Greetings: It has been quite a while since you have read a line from my pen. About twenty years of my life have been spent for the church of Christ, known among men as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. A preacher representing the above-named church baptized me in the month of January of 1905. He told me when we came up out of the water, "Some day you will be doing this kind of work."

Two years later I went out as a missionary and baptized forty-two. From the book of God I have been made to believe that there is one true church. "I will build my church," said Christ (Matthew 16: 18). God gave Christ to be the head over all to the church, which is his body (Ephesians 1: 22), for the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church, and he is the savior of the body. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might present it to himself a glorious church having no spot or blemish, but that it should be holy. One church, one Lord, one faith, one baptism. "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily, prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, . . ."—1 Corinthians 12: 28. "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.—Ephesians 4: 11-13. Saints, note what God has done for you, that your life might be perfected. He set in the church those officers to do that work.

Latter-day revelation says: "If my people will respect

these officers whom I have called and set in the church, I will respect these officers; and if they do not, they can not expect the riches of gifts and the blessings of direction."—Doctrine and Covenants 125:14. What of the time? There is no time to waste. "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" "Let the dead bury their dead. Come follow me."—Christ. "Wherefore, I, the Lord have said, Gather ye out from the eastern lands, assemble ye yourselves together, ye eldest of my church; go ye forth unto the western countries, call upon the inhabitants to repent, and inasmuch as they do repent, build up churches unto me; and with one heart and with one mind gather up your riches that you may purchase an inheritance which shall hereafter be appointed unto you, and it shall be called the New Jerusalem, the land of peace, a city of refuge, a place of safety for the Saints of the most high God; and the glory of the Lord shall be there, and the terror of the Lord also shall be there, insomuch that the wicked will not come unto it; and it shall be called Zion, and it shall come to pass, among the wicked that every man that will not take his sword against his neighbor must needs flee unto Zion for safety. And there shall be gathered unto it out of every nation under heaven, and it shall be the only people that shall not be at war one with another, and it shall be said among the wicked, "Let us not go up to battle against Zion, for the inhabitants of Zion are terrible, wherefore we can not stand."—Doctrine and Covenants 45:12, 13. "But in the last days it shall come to pass that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountain, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it, for the law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."—Micah 4:1, 2.

Saints, seeing that the world is fast becoming an unsafe place to live in, we should waste no time in our work for the redemption of Zion. For some time I was much disturbed, but today I am becoming stronger than ever before. I did not understand supreme directional control. Paul compares the church to the body of man, and we know that all the members of the body are directed by the head; therefore our feet walk. When the head says to the eyes, Look! our eyes look. Therefore, when all the officers in the church find their places and are willing to work, Zion will soon be redeemed. And as for me, I stand by the same church that I have been in for twenty years, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I was baptized into the Reorganized Church. I was ordained a minister in the Reorganized Church. All the gifts and blessings from heaven have come to me while working in the Reorganized Church. The Reorganization is the church in harmony with the New Testament church.

As a member of the Reorganized Church and an officer in it, I am for the advancement of the church. I will put forth my efforts to advance the cause of Christ in his church known among men as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

May God bless our efforts in his church to the good of all its members, is my prayer and labor as the pastor of the Mount Vernon Branch.

Fairview, Montana

January 29.—The Christmas season passed pleasantly for most of the Fairview Saints. The Sunday school gave a program Christmas Eve. Although the children and young people had not practiced as much as those in charge would have liked, the entertainment was carried out very well. It consisted of songs, recitations, musical readings, and a pantomime, "Holy night," as well as a dialogue or two. About a hundred people were in attendance, and there were treats for all. Decorations and lighting were in charge of a young man who is not a member of the church, but he is a member of the Stampeders' class which assisted him.

The success of the program shows how far earnestly applied effort will go, and it should encourage us to greater activity.

Bradford, Massachusetts

February 1.—Once more we wish to tell of the activities which are taking place in this branch of the Lord's vineyard.

We were pleased to welcome among us for a short stay Elder Herman Chelline, who favored us with some very instructive sermons which were of an uplifting nature.

Recently we held a surprise party for our pastor, Elder L. E. Jordan. He was taken very much unawares, much more so than we had surmised he could be. We spent an enjoyable evening together. After the social period, the folks were called to order by the chairman of the occasion. Our pastor was called to the center of the room, and after a few remarks by the chairman he was presented in behalf of the Saints of the Haverhill Branch with a loose-leaf notebook with genuine leather corners with his name stamped on it in gold letters. In a few well-chosen words our brother expressed his appreciation to the Saints for their gift and said he would use it in his pastoral work.

The young people of the branch are planning on a social for Valentine Eve. It is to be entirely in charge of the junior Saints.

The work is forward in this part of the world. The Saints here desire to be remembered by all in their prayers. They always pray for the membership of the church throughout the world, that together we may carry on the Lord's work to a successful ending.

Fine Spirit Among English Saints

For some time I have been going to write to let you know what is being done here in London. Unfortunately for the Saints, we are still without a meeting place. Nothing is being done except the holding of a class each Friday evening in the Religio Home Department. As you see, this is only a home department and not a fully organized Religio. We are holding these classes at the home of the later London branch president, J. W. Worth. We have an average attendance of nine, consisting of the young Saints of three families. This is all that can be done till such time as we are able to obtain a meeting place. None of the Saints are in a position to have meetings in their homes.

Our little department is going along nicely, and we realize that we have been blessed in the little we have endeavored to do. We finished up the study of the Book of Mormon for last year. This year we are taking up the young people's church history. Also we are having a prayer and testimony meeting once a month. Last year we had a regular sacramental meeting every Friday evening after the first Sunday in each month for the benefit of the young people who were not able to attend the nearest branch, Enfield. This we shall continue this year.

For our church history classes, we are appointing a reader for each week who reads to us for a half hour, after which we have discussion and questions. Our first class, held on Friday, January 21, was a real success. All present were interested, and we had questions and discussion from all.

At the prayer meeting we are to have an article from the HERALD or Ensign read to begin the evening. This we thought would get our minds centered upon things of God and give us something on which to base our testimonies, or give us a thought on which we could give expression for the benefit of all.

This will be our program for the coming year. But unfortunately there are only a few young Saints taking part. We have regular classes each Friday evening, but owing to circumstances Brother Worth is unable to let us make a regular meeting place of his room. Therefore we are unable to invite all that would be interested.

Our few young Saints are to be commended in what they have done in a financial way during the past year. During the Graceland College drive they managed to collect the amount of two pounds, seven shillings, and six pence toward the amount allotted London Saints. For two years they have been taking up Christmas offerings. Last year they collected four pounds and received donations amounting to a pound from London Saints. This made the total five pounds Christmas offering for 1926, and was ten shillings more than last year. When it is remembered that the average number of the class is nine, including J. W. Worth, superintendent, and the writer, I think you will agree with me that we have done remarkably well. We hope with the blessings of God to make our offering even more this year.

We are hoping and praying for the time when the work will be reorganized in London. No meetings of the Saints have been held since June, 1924. The branch was disorganized in June, 1926.

To all the Saints we send our best wishes, and pray that they will be blessed in their endeavors for the Master. Especially would we extend our greetings to the earnest workers of the old London Branch now in Zion, Brother and Sister Roderick May, Sister Pearl Crick and sons, Brother and Sister Baldwin, and Brother and Sister Sorden, hoping their little girl has grown up to be a fine, robust, little Saint. She was only a baby when we saw her. Also we would like to extend greetings to Brother and Sister Newton and Brother and Sister Cliff and families, now in Canada.

We do not hear much concerning these Saints, but have pleasant memories concerning them and do not forget them. God bless them all!

We hope and pray that the church will ever move Zionward; that when the end of this year comes, we can say she has made a great forward move. May God bless you all in your work for him.

Learning the Financial Law

The late Ministerial Conference at Independence and the conference at Aurora, Illinois, have been great assets to me, and I have been greatly encouraged by the things presented and the spirit which characterized our services.

I have tried to carry that spirit into my field with me, and as I have been devoting my time largely to teaching the financial law, as well as helping our local men to more fully sense their great calling and responsibility, it has met with a ready and willing response. In most cases, they are anxious to learn and do, though occasionally one feels it is something new, and to many it is. But to God, who gave the law, it is not new; and to those who have studied well and have been anxious to do it is a great inspiration, and we are catching the vision of God's plan of making men and preparing them for the endowment when they will be called upon and will be ready to do a far greater work.

Several young people have filed their inventories and paid their tithing; and while their present stewardship is small, they will learn to manage well and increase their stewardship a hundredfold.

Among the things listed from some small children are dolls, sleds, trunks, wagons, clothing, and in some instances a little cash; and a pure heart is revealed through it all. Truly Jesus said, "Except ye become as little children, ye can not enter into the kingdom."

I would not forget to speak of the older Saints who have responded cheerfully, for their responsibility is great and their obedience commendable. Children have faith in works of others; and when Saints live the whole law, they are living for and blessing the lives of others. And this is what some did when they learned how much they owed the Lord in tithes; they said, "It is the Lord's; I will pay interest on it if I can not pay all," treating God as they would treat another, and they gave their note. One sister asked me to help her figure her tithing, which I did, and learned she owed the Lord sixty-one dollars, but she said, "That isn't enough; I will pay one hundred."

Brother Holloway has been at work in Madison for some time, but will close his services soon and start a series in this place next Sunday evening, February 6. I have been doing what I can to prepare for the services in organizing and advertising; and we are sure, with the spirit manifested by the Beloit Saints, they are ready for meetings and will help to make them a real success.

The work is onward here, and several new names have been presented for baptism next spring.

E. J. LENOX, District President.

BELOIT, WISCONSIN, February 2.

Hammond, Indiana

February 1.—The phrase, "This day we sail Zionward," is insignificant unless we have indeed sailed Zionward, and to sail in that direction one must have the ultimate in mind at all times and labor to that end. The Hammond Branch feels very much encouraged as the first month of the new year draws to a close. It is good to think of the past and what you have accomplished, and when you see you have made progress, it inspires you to greater service. Such is the feeling of this group.

In our last letter we commended Brother Philemon Pement on the good work he was doing in giving spiritual advice and his service to this branch, but more credit is due him for his latest accomplishments. On January 3 we began a series of meetings which continued until January 16, inclusive. Brother Pement was the speaker. The first night found among us several interested people who were not of our faith. We opened the series, after a twenty-minute song service, by singing that good old hymn, "We come with joy the truth to teach you," and the invocation was offered by Pastor J. H. McGuire. Following the scriptural reading, we were entertained by a selection by our branch quartet. Brother Pement then entered the stand and very impressively laid the foundation for his following discourses. An hour and a half passed as though it were but thirty minutes, the closing hymn was sung, and our pastor offered the benediction.

For three nights Brother Pement stressed the fact that God speaks now. After all were convinced of that, he laid bare the gospel in a way that only Brother Pement can. When he explains the work to people, they had better accept it and be baptized, for otherwise they can not stand before the judgment bar and plead innocence on the ground of ignorance. So plain of speech is he that anyone under the sound of his voice can understand. Great interest continued through out the series, and a fitting climax was reached when the Chicago choir, composed of twenty young people under the able leadership of Brother Carl (Jack) Kueffer, accompanied by his sister, Larena Kueffer, at the piano, and several other Chicago Saints visited us on our last evening, Sunday, January 16. Only those who know the power and appeal of good music can realize how deeply we appreciated their effort.

Four baptisms resulted from these meetings, and preparations are being made for another series of meetings in a new opening in a city twelve miles distant from here.

The following Saturday opened the two-day ministerial conference held January 22 and 23, at Aurora, Illinois. This was held for the Northeastern Illinois District, and also included Southern Wisconsin District and Hammond, Indiana, Branch. Five members of our local priesthood attended that conference, and each returned with a determination to qualify for greater service, having received much good from the advice and instruction given by Bishop Albert Carmichael and Apostle J. F. Garver.

Our midweek prayer service is always enjoyed by those who attend.

After several days of very cold, gloomy weather, we awakened Sunday morning, January 30, expecting to find the same condition existing, but the sun arose out of the east and poured out its golden light, filling all with a love for everything. The singing of the hymn, "To Sabbath school," announced the opening of the morning services. The eleven o'clock hour was well occupied by Elder T. J. Butler, "Faith" being the subject of discourse.

Very beautiful and impressive was the confirmation service in the evening. The good spirit that was felt during the song service lasted throughout the evening, and as the candidates marched forward, "'Tis a glorious thing to be in the light" was sung. Peace and quiet rested over the congregation as each candidate in turn was confirmed a member of the great body of Christ. As they again took their places in the congregation, the hymn, "God is marshaling his army," was sung, and after a little matter of business was transacted the pastor dismissed us.

Next Friday evening, February 4, the men of the Department of Recreation and Expression will give a surprise supper for the benefit of the building fund.

Stereopticon Brings Attendance

(Excerpt from letter of James E. Bishop, Wellston, Ohio, January 27.)

Our meetings this far have been successful so far as attendance and order are concerned. We started with the "Life of Christ" on Sunday night, and the church was two thirds full. Monday night we had the following plan: Thirty minutes singing from hymn slides, prayer, sermon by Brother Finken, slides, "The parable of the ten virgins." Tuesday night we had the singing and prayer and lecture (stereopticon) on church history. Last night we had the same arrangements as Monday night. Tonight we will have singing and lecture, with slides on the Book of Mormon.

The attendance is remarkable, even if the majority are youths and younger. Tuesday night the church was packed and some standing in the vestibule, and last night almost as many were present and stayed and gave good attention to the sermon, after which we had a few slides on Pike's Peak.

Now this is the point I want to impress in this report: Under the conditions here, an average attendance of about twelve would be a fair estimate, as I have tried it without slides. Every place has variable factors, and what draws a crowd in one place may not in another. But I am sure the slides can be used to make a universal appeal. If we had the right kind of follow-up work (good teachers, etc.), many of these who attend could be held. At any rate, in this place we are preaching the gospel to one hundred and ninety more souls than we would without the stereopticon, and the Word says, "My word shall not return unto me void," and I believe that, even in the absence of immediate results and concrete developments.

But here is another "rub." After this week all our slides will have been shown. There ought to be thousands of slides available. The Sunday School Department ought to invest in the one hundred or more slides made up by a leader in the world of religious education and put these at the disposal of those who could use them. In the hands of those able to use them, such slides would have a tremendous effect in getting our people to see some essential principles that they do not see now in connection with teaching. Some of the branches are deplorable on this point, and if we had proper methods applied we could hold many young people and children that are away from the church.

I am attaching a clipping that may have some value for the Graphic Arts.

Sister Mary S. Scott, of Blue Rapids, Kansas, writes: "I am sending my renewal for the HERALD. It is a welcome paper to me, and I do not want to miss a copy. I am glad the precious gospel was brought to earth by the angel to the boy, Joseph Smith, that we might all obey and keep God's commandments. I want to live faithfully to the gospel, for I know it is the power of God unto salvation. Pray for me, dear Saints, that I may be worthy of his blessings which are in store for the faithful."

From the Hoosier Capital

With the holiday season past and a new pastor elected in our branch for the ensuing year, the Saints are renewing their diligence in an effort to sustain and carry out our pastor's program. We are hopeful of a prosperous year for the work in this city. The Sunday School Department is pushing ahead, the officers and teachers working together with a will and determination that is good to behold. The Department of Recreation and Expression is holding its own, and the illustrated lectures given by Pastor Robinson are proving a potent factor for good in this department. The Department of Women has elected its officers for the year, and new life and enthusiasm seem to pervade its ranks. A study of the Book of Mormon is being taken up in connection with their social work, and we are looking for even better results from this already important arm of the Master's service.

Apostle Gleazer made us a brief visit recently, attending a business session and giving us excellent legal advice and counsel; also, he addressed the priesthood of the branch, imparting wise counsel and instruction to them. He was the speaker at a well-attended service and delivered a sermon replete with lessons on the life of a Saint, such as it is our duty to exemplify as the children of God. All enjoyed his visit, and we say, Come again, Brother Gleazer, when you can stay longer.

Sister Sarah Walker is recovering from the injuries received in December. The broken bones are knitting, and we look forward to the time when she will be able to again attend services.

On the evening of January 22, a company of Saints and friends assembled at the home of our former pastor, Elder O. J. Hawn, to help him and Sister Hawn celebrate a birthday anniversary and bid them Godspeed on their journey. They were leaving for an extended missionary effort in Michigan. A pleasant social evening was enjoyed, games were played, and songs of Zion sung. A beautiful flower basket was presented to them as a token of esteem and remembrance.

We are still desirous for the advancement of the work here and are endeavoring to avail ourselves of every legitimate means to advance our interests. We solicit the cooperation of general church officers and conference appointees passing our way to stop whenever convenient and "give us a lift."

Madison, Wisconsin

January 31.—At the close of the first month of 1927, we are much encouraged, as we see some of the plans for the new year being carried out. We started out to make this year of more profit to ourselves than any in the past. The officers holding over and the new ones who have taken up the responsibility of the work seem sure we will accomplish our aim.

The sacramental service on January 2 was in charge of Pastor H. W. Woodstock, assisted by Brothers Houghton, Wirth, and Clark. A very good spirit was enjoyed. The earnest prayers and testimonies of the Saints showed their determination to go forward.

The prayer meeting on Wednesday night was one that will long be remembered by those present. Brother L. Houghton was in charge, and at the close he told the Saints it was the best prayer meeting he ever attended at Madison. So we feel that we were getting a good start.

On the evening of the first Sunday of 1927, Brother Houghton gave a splendid sermon on, "Why we believe Joseph Smith was a prophet of God."

A week later Pastor Woodstock was the speaker at the morning hour. He used as his text Hebrews 6:1: "Let us go on to perfection." He called attention to the words of the Master; where he commanded, "Be ye perfect." He held out the hope that it was possible for us to fulfill this command; in fact, that it is necessary that we do. In the evening of the same day, Brother Charles F. Clarke gave a very good sermon on the subject of "Our wonderful God."

A sermon was delivered January 16 by our pastor, based on 2 Peter 3: 11, "What manner of persons ought ye to be?" Have we fully kept our promise? do we knowingly violate the law? were some of the questions our pastor asked. He then spent some time on the financial law, calling attention to the fact that this law must be kept, as well as any of the others.

At the evening hour, Brother Clarke again gave us a very good sermon on the difference between the true and false church. He left no doubt in the minds of his hearers that he represented the one like unto the one that the Master set up.

In the evening of January 20, some of the Saints gathered at the home of Brother and Sister James Pratt to bid God-speed to Brother Jim, as he was leaving for the West. He has been ill and unable to work for the past year, having tuberculosis, and is seeking health and employment in the promising West.

The 23d of January marked the beginning of a series of lectures by Brother L. G. Holloway. He expects to be with us for about two weeks. He is using lantern slides. Attendance and attention are good. We are very glad he can be with us. And as we said at the beginning, we have every reason to think we are off on a good start.

Akron, Ohio

January 31.—Amidst a pretty "room scene," the children of our Sunday school rendered the play, "Santa saves the day," in a very fine manner, and much commendation is due the directors who were Sisters John Dildine, Daisy Hartz, and Doris Kelsey, for their patience during the many rehearsals, and also the various committees who assisted in the make-up and decorations.

At the annual election of Sunday school officers, Brother George Brown was elected Sunday school superintendent to succeed Brother Ira Kelsey. Sam Gilchrist, secretary; Raymond Linehan, librarian; Brother John Dildine, chorister, assisted by Beulah Brown, pianist.

Elder Ernest Knight was sustained as branch president, as was also Brother John Dildine, chorister. He also occupies as Religio superintendent.

Sister A. R. Manchester is recovering from a severe attack of flu, which confined her to her bed for several days.

An old-fashioned box social was held Friday, January 28, in the basement of the church, and a good social time was had by all who attended. A radio program is planned for February 10, and several other entertainments will follow from time to time. The Religio attendance is steadily increasing, and it is the object of Brother Dildine to try to stimulate a better social feeling by the frequency of these entertainments.

A beautiful thought was voiced by Elder E. G. Hammond in the first sermon of the new year, when he said, "I am able to discern a good spirit here this evening, a better feeling than is sometimes present, and I wish I might speak with authority to assure you that those who have contributed to this good feeling are approved of God to the measure of that contribution."

May this good spirit continue in the Akron Branch through 1927. May it spread throughout the world—on to 1930, and on to the redemption of Zion, is the prayer of the Akron Saints.

In renewing her subscription to SAINTS' HERALD Sister Catherine Colvin, 3396 Sixteenth Street, San Francisco, tells of her appreciation of the paper in these words: "It is with pleasure that I send money for the renewal of my subscription to the good paper I have learned to love. I cherish it as one of my best friends, for it tells me of the many dear Saints and the good times they are enjoying in the kingdom on earth before passing on to the next world in Christ. Pray for me that I may so live that I may reach that condition which will permit me to live where Christ reigns supreme. My prayers are for the Saints."

Independence

Stone Church

Sacramental service for the month of February began promptly at eleven o'clock, the auditorium having been filled early and to its capacity. Pastor C. Ed. Miller was in charge of the service, and the congregation under the direction of Brother Paul N. Craig sang "In thy name, O Lord, assembling." Elder Thomas Hartnell offered the opening prayer, and all feelingly sang, "My God! how wonderful thou art!" In this service the spirit and work of the missionary were emphasized, and Elder George Jenkins, an active missionary, gave the opening remarks. He spoke of the spiritual progress the church is making, of the advantages of this glorious age, and sketched a vivid word picture of the time when the Saints will so pattern their lives after the great Pattern that Christ himself will be in our midst in such meetings as this. Then we will behold him, and angel choruses will sing to us. But before these things can occur and these joys be ours, we must partake of the Spirit of God; we must obey his commandments; we must love one another; and we must progress.

Two other missionaries, Elders Swen Swenson and E. A. Curtis, were present and spoke of their work, their knowledge that this is the true and only church of the living God, the joy which is theirs in their labors, and their desire to see the people of God move on in their accomplishments until Zion may be redeemed. Several elderly Saints also bore their testimonies to the truthfulness of the gospel, and the blessings and strength which have been their portion. Sister Emma Burton, for many years a missionary with her husband, Joseph Burton, who has gone on, rose and quietly and simply told of her faith in the work and the testimonies and blessings which have been given to her. All present were made to realize the truth of these words:

"God is love; his mercy brightens
All the paths in which we rove;
Bliss he wakes, and woe he lightens;
God is wisdom, God is love.

"He with earthly cares entwineth
Hope and comfort from above.
Ev'rywhere his glory shineth;
God is wisdom, God is love."

The young people's sacramental service, which is held each sacramental Sunday for those between the ages of eight and twenty, had a good attendance Sunday morning, numbering about one hundred and seventy-five. There was a splendid song service, and four prayers were voiced and eleven testimonies borne. These meetings were begun about a year ago, and interest seems to be increasing.

Fifty-seven testimonies and prayers by the children and nine by the grown-ups were offered in the twenty minutes' time given for social service at the Campus Sunday morning. It is very encouraging to see the broadening of the children's vision. Some who started with just a few words can now give an interesting testimony.

Evening Services

Priesthood meeting at 2.30 p. m., drew a splendid attendance. Special features were an address by George A. Gould, elder in charge of Group 11. He spoke on group work. His effort was very well received. John F. Sheehy made a stirring address on missionary work which resulted in a number of the elders pledging to go out in automobiles next Sunday to find openings for preaching services in a radius of twenty miles of Independence. Brother Sheehy said the young people are anxious to help any missionary work by their attendance and with music and song. Bishop Carmichael gave an illuminating talk on missionary work, the church's mission, and an appeal for consecrated lives to the Lord's service. The meeting closed with the priesthood fired with holy zeal.

An interesting program followed the lesson session of the Religio. There were readings by two little girls, Sybil Barrett and Maxine Budd, a piano solo by Anita May, vocal solo by La Rena Bullard, and two numbers by the Religio quartet.

It has been the ambition of those in charge of the work at the Stone Church to see the Sunday evening meeting a regular "family service," where the whole family would be in attendance. As Pastor C. Ed. Miller faced the audience Sunday evening, he said this ambition was realized. The church was filled to capacity. It was an inspiring sight to see the parents with their children sitting there in the house of the Lord. John F. Sheehy had the audience singing the songs of Zion as only "Uncle" John can get them to sing. The spirit of reverence and of peace came with the congregational singing. Then some splendid organ and vocal numbers followed. Sister Ina Hattey, our talented young soprano, excelled herself in a number she rendered. Brother Miller said he wasn't going to preach, but would just talk about some spiritual experiences he had had which confirmed him in the faith and which he hoped would strengthen his hearers in their faith in the gospel. He exhorted the young people to make a consistent effort to get in touch with their heavenly Father. There was no substitute for personal contact with the Lord. Such an experience would make an indelible impression upon the mind. Therefore every member of the church should seek for personal experiences. After the talk, "Zion Builders," by John R. Grice, was thrown on the screen, and it was sung in fine spirit. Then a reel of pictures of Bethlehem was shown, which occupied fifteen minutes. This was followed by a beautiful new hymn entitled "Youth's prayer," by Bertha Constance. Again the soul of the people found expression in song. After the service was over, many among the young and old said they considered it one of the most satisfactory services ever held in the Stone Church. May beautiful "family services" be held all over the church.

In the Departments

At the general meeting of the Department of Women of Zion Friday afternoon, February 4, at half past two, Pastor C. Ed. Miller was the speaker, talking on the topic, "Our program for 1927." In able language he showed that just as a beautiful bridge is of no value without the keystone, so Zion can not be Zion without its keystone, the saintly home. He commended the sisters for their work of the past year and in a convincing way showed that the church needs intelligent, consecrated, good workers, those who will not be easily offended. And the biggest and best piece of work which the sisters can undertake this year, 1927, is in their own homes to make them one hundred per cent success, he asserted. It is a tremendous task to build a Godlike home in this age, but the home is the keystone of Zion and must be realized before Zionian plans can be perfected. The sisters may well sing:

"Though the task be great that lies before us,
We trust in one divinely strong;
Knowing well at last we'll be victorious,
And we pray that the time will not be long."

*Preceding the address of Pastor Miller, Mrs. S. A. Burgess contributed two pleasing vocal numbers and was accompanied by Mrs. Howard W. Harder. There also was a short round table discussion of the homes and aims which the women have for 1927, at which time it was decided to hold a meeting for the officers of the groups and districts to discuss their records, the need of keeping them, and how they should be kept. This meeting will be at two o'clock Friday afternoon, February 11, in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church. The large number present was encouraging and pleasing to officers in charge of this department.

At half past one occurred the monthly meeting of the Frances Willard Union of the W. C. T. U.

The Life of Christ class, taught by Elder Ralph W. Farrell in the Stone Church Sunday school, will next Sunday seek more commodious quarters on the second floor of the Library Building, just across the street. This class is the only Bible class in the Sunday school and is increasing in interest and numbers.

A meeting of the pastors and supervisors of the city of Zion was held in the council chamber of the Battery Block, Monday evening, February 7. The meeting was for the purpose of discussing and considering the problems which are to be solved in each district, and is the first of a series to be held on the first Monday of each month during the year.

The ladies' aid society of the Stone Church, led by Sister Margaret Craig, has met each week for the year 1926. They have eighteen members, and an average attendance of ten. Their meeting time is Thursday afternoon, and they assemble either in the Y. K. T. classroom or in the dining hall. During the last year they quilted fifteen quilts, and many of these were for ladies living in Kansas City. One hundred eighty-five dollars and forty-five cents have been cleared from their efforts.

Interesting Personals

Many are interested in the whereabouts of those who are stanchly representing the church to the world in the capacity of missionary work. But it would be impossible to tell of the travels of all the missionaries, so we shall have to content ourselves with the knowledge of where the members of the smaller quorums of the church are and what they are doing. President Frederick M. Smith is in the East and is expected home next week. President Elbert A. Smith is here in the center place, but plans to leave for California the middle of this month. President Floyd M. McDowell returned the first of the week from Lamoni. He will spend this coming Saturday and Sunday in Wichita, Kansas.

Apostle J. A. Gillen arrived in California last week and took up his work in that field with Brother McConley with renewed vigor. Apostle Clyde F. Ellis still finds himself very busy in Saskatchewan, and J. F. Curtis left last week, en route to Canada. Brother Budd is in Philadelphia; Brother Hanson is in his field in Ohio; Brothers Garver and Williams are in Lamoni. E. J. Gleazer returned to Independence the first of the week from Lamoni, where he had conducted a meeting of exceptional interest throughout last week, and F. Henry Edwards is attending a conference in Lincoln, Nebraska, this week.

Bishop Albert Carmichael left his home and office in Independence Monday for California. Bishop J. A. Becker is expected home today from Taylorville, Illinois. Bishop Siegfried is in Independence.

Sister Elizabeth White, wife of Alfred White who died about five years ago, passed into eternity at 12.45 Monday, February 7, 1927, at her home, 1038 West Lexington Street, Independence. Sister White leaves three sons: John D., of Berkeley, California; A. R., Kansas City, Missouri; and Leonard, of Independence, pastor of the Liberty Street Church; nine grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, one sister, Emma White, wife of Patriarch I. N. White, deceased, and one brother, James Trussel, of Texas. This beloved and faithful sister was born September 9, 1841, and for more than fifty-eight years has been a member of the church. Funeral services were at the Stone Church this afternoon at 2.30 in charge of President Elbert A. Smith, assisted by Patriarch F. A. Smith.

Second Church

Friday evening the Religio decided to change its time of meeting to Sunday evening at fifteen minutes past six, and the first Sunday session was held February 6, and was seemingly very successful. The society also decided to postpone action on the resignation of Brother Levi Rawlings, who was selected in September as its president, as the society desires to retain his services.

Sunday morning's prayer meeting was attended by something more than fifty Saints, most of them of younger years, and it was a very enjoyable season.

The sacramental service was well attended by the Saints. Elders R. S. Salyards and Richard Bullard were visitors and assisted materially in conducting the meeting. Several sick are reported, and they were remembered at this service.

Sunday evening Elder Richard D. Weaver made his promise good by coming to the Second Church and giving us a sermon—as he promised, “the best that shall be in me.” The brother had been engaged nightly at Enoch Hill for two weeks, but he surely received the very best of attention and support from an audience which crowded the house to the walls and doors.

The work at Second Church seems to be moving forward with a consistent stride, and should the young continue to increase their devotion and activity in the next few months as they have recently, General Conference time will find Second Church ahead of what it has ever been.

Walnut Park

On Sunday, January 30, Brother Glau A. Smith was the forenoon speaker from the scripture, “The glory of God is intelligence,” and “This is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality, and eternal life of man.”

His sermon was an appeal to his congregation to make use of, or cultivate, the intelligence God has endowed us with to guide us in the care of body, mind, and spirit. Our free agency gives us this responsibility. The speaker covered a great deal of ground in picturing numerous ways in which an individual's intelligence may work for the good of himself and those around him and the harm a lack of using ordinary intelligence sometimes creates. No conscientious person could soon forget such positive, practical teaching.

The evening sermon by Elder C. Ed. Miller was a look backward at what had been endeavored and accomplished in 1926 and an upward, onward, hopeful anticipation of the work to be done in 1927.

Elder John F. Sheehy is giving the young people's Sunday school class an extended series of talks at their regular class session—talks that all young people might profit by.

On Sunday morning, February 5, Brother Weldon Wood had the happy experience of baptizing his youngest son, Cecil, who was confirmed at the eleven o'clock sacramental service. Three babies were also blessed at this time—Inis May, daughter of Brother and Sister C. L. Redfield; Paul Raymond, son of Brother and Sister G. F. Davis; and Wilma Darlene, daughter of Brother and Sister Laverne Geary.

Prayers were asked for Sister Fanny Craig, a loyal Sunday school worker among the juniors, who had the misfortune to break her ankle on Saturday and who may be confined to her bed for many weeks.

At the evening preaching service the male quartet furnished two special numbers, and U. W. Greene preached the sermon. Though not well physically at the time, Brother Greene is strong in spirit and in a desire to respond to a call if at all possible. His sermon on the Restoration, with various testimonies as to its divinity, had that old-time ring always very enjoyable and heartening. He talked interestingly of his visits among the patients at our Sanitarium, where he is asked by those of various faiths to tell them of our belief, to pray with them, administer to them, and bring them church literature.

Enoch Hill

The Saints of Enoch Hill District find themselves encouraged to face the problems of life with renewed zeal, determination, and interest as a result of the splendid series of meetings conducted from Sunday January 23 to February 4. “Building according to the pattern,” was the main theme followed by Elder R. D. Weaver, who was the speaker. During this series Brother Weaver enjoyed good liberty, and many were the new ideas he placed before the people. He spoke and they listened. Everyone on “the Hill” was interested and came. During the first week special musical numbers were supplied by the Enoch Hill Choir, but last week music was principally furnished by outside talent. One night the Enoch Hill Orchestra, a commendable group of young people, presided; at another time the Temple Builders, under the leadership of Sister H. E. Winegar, rendered a musical program of pleasing worth and general appeal. There were good old-fashioned song services, conducted by Brother Charles Warren. Truly, each evening was a joy to all, a real get together of the Saints of God, touched by the loving Spirit of our Savior. On Friday evening a purse was made up and presented to Brother Weaver as a feeble expression of the deep gratitude and love of the members of this district. We are assured of the truth of the hymn:

“Blest are the souls that hear and know
The gospel's joyful sound;
Peace shall attend the path they go,
And light their steps surround.”

The sacramental meeting Sunday morning was one in which the people expressed their joys, hopes, gratitude, and desires. A calm and holy spirit prevailed, and all who attended were blessed with peace and assurance.

Elder George Jenkins was the evening speaker, basing his discourse on the parable of the ten virgins. He was given excellent attention by the crowd present, and his sermon was appreciated.

On Sunday afternoon Mrs. Ellis Vell Park was baptized and confirmed at the evening service by Brothers J. F. Petrie and George Jenkins.

The Saints of the district extend sympathy to Sister Ethel Martin, wife of Roy Martin, in the loss of their twin babes. The infants were born February 4, Friday, and before the day was done had passed on into eternity. Funeral services were conducted in Carson chapel, and Pastor Brewer preached the sermon. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Sister Agnes Hartman, supervisor of the Department of Women in our district, reports an unusually good attendance in Group 33 South women's meeting last week. There were twenty-one present. The sisters in each of the groups are organized and meeting regularly. They are very busy.

Spring Branch

Those in attendance at the prayer service Wednesday night, January 26, were strengthened and refreshed by the good Spirit which prevailed during the service, at which time the Lord manifested his will to and pleasure in this group in its activities.

Bad road conditions made the attendance at Religio Friday evening, January 28, smaller than usual, but the beautiful Sunday following brought out a good attendance at all services.

About thirty attended the quarter after eight prayer service in charge of Brothers W. F. Smith and Henry Badder. One hundred and twenty-one were at Sunday school, and this shows a steady and healthy growth in numbers, already suggesting the necessity for the upper auditorium of our church in the near future. The eleven o'clock sermon by Bishop B. J. Scott was preceded by the song, “Scattering precious seed,” prayer by Brother John Soderstadt, anthem, “Hear, O Israel,” by the choir, and a solo, “God shall wipe away all tears,” by F. Flaxington Harper, sung by Sister Fairbanks. The central thought of Brother Scott's discourse was built around the admonition, “Watch and pray.” The audience was prepared for these various offerings by the soothing strains of “The autumn song,” a voluntary, by Sister Rosamond Filson.

Brother W. B. Paul preached in the evening, taking as a text John 3:16. At this service a quartet composed of Sisters Winogene and Ruth Smith, Guilford Mabbott, and Perry Mingle rendered “Youths' prayer” in a pleasing manner.

The past week has been one marked with good services. Though only a few were out at the midweek prayer service, a good spirit attended and the evening was profitably spent.

Nearly thirty reported for choir practice Thursday night, and others are arranging to take advantage of the splendid opportunity being offered for development along this line.

At the Religio Friday night, a service also well attended, a future program was mapped out for literary and social activities. This will cover a period of several weeks. A basket social and valentine party will be held Monday night, February 14. The price of the baskets being offered will be fifty cents, and a prize is to be given for the prettiest basket. Proceeds will be applied to the budget fund. All are invited.

Twenty-five were out to the young people's prayer service Sunday morning. At this service there were five prayers, twelve songs, and twenty testimonies. Brothers Alma Tankard and Ernest Smith were in charge. The Sunday school attendance equaled that of Sunday previous, one hundred twenty-one.

Quite a number who have not previously worshiped with us attended the sacramental service, thus increasing the attendance to about a hundred and fifty. This meeting was enjoyed by all.

The closing service of the day was also well attended. A splendid half hour song service was enjoyed, after which Pastor D. R. Snively preached on what he called his hobby, Zion. Much food for thought was given us that we might be able to meet our obligations, both temporal and spiritual.

At the close of the service it was voted to extend an invitation to Brother R. D. Weaver to hold a series of meetings in this branch during the month of March. May the Lord bless this effort.

East Independence

On Sunday, January 30, at the eleven o'clock hour Brother Samuel Thiel conducted an installation service. He presented Brother Albert Thatcher, jr., as superintendent, and Brother Thatcher, in turn, presented the various officers and teachers of the Sunday school. Following this Brother Thiel gave a short address. He was followed by Apostle F. Henry Edwards, who gave us many encouraging and helpful thoughts, making us resolve to be more faithful to the duties we have to perform.

Brother G. S. Trowbridge was the evening speaker and kept his hearers interested, not only for the hour they were there, but gave them ideas which will cause them to ponder and think for days to come.

A good spirit prevailed during the sacramental service, at which meeting Brother Thomas W. Thatcher was ordained to the office of deacon under the hands of Bishop Albert Carmichael and Brother Nathaniel Carmichael.

Brother and Sister Rowe attended services here Sunday morning. Also Brother Thiel made us a short call at the opening of Sunday school.

Brother J. J. Teeter was the speaker of the evening hour and gave us a good, spiritual sermon.

Grandpa Stowell, as he was called by nearly everyone, passed away at the home of his son, Brother G. W. Stowell, February 1. He had had several bad spells with his heart, and he passed away very suddenly Tuesday evening. He was seventy-six years of age and left thirteen children, ninety-seven grandchildren, and twenty-five great-grandchildren. The funeral was held from Carson's Undertaking Parlors, Sunday, February 6, at two o'clock. A good man has gone to his reward.

Englewood

"We believe a spiritual awakening is about to take place in Englewood." This remark has been heard a number of times of late by different members of our group. Elder C. F. Davis announced the continuation of our prayer service of Sunday morning, February 6, to be held at the eleven o'clock hour February 13. As many as possible should be present at this service to fortify themselves against the working power of the Adversary. At such meetings we gain spiritual strength to help us with our problems each day.

An orchestra was organized Friday evening at the church. Brother Alma Kearns is to be the leader. All who can play instruments, or would like to learn, are urged to attend the practice hour to be held at the church each Friday evening at a quarter till eight.

On Sunday morning, January 30, a very impressive service was held, when three small babies were blessed. Brother R. D. Weaver gave us a short but very interesting talk after this service. Sunday night of the same day our speaker was Patriarch F. A. Smith. Elder C. F. Davis, our pastor, talked to us on the evening of February 6. Both sermons were splendid.

The women have organized, with Sister Mossman as leader, and Sister Taylor, secretary and treasurer. They have splendid plans for the year, and you will hear more of them. A supper will be given at the church February 22. All are welcome.

Graceland Chats

Special Assembly

Monday's chapel is ordinarily a short, thirty-minute chapel, but last Monday we were called together a half hour earlier for the purpose of hearing Apostle Gleazer's talk. His pleasant personality and forceful manner won our attention, and the student body thoroughly enjoyed the hour spent in listening to his advice, his encouraging remarks, and his views of Graceland.

His text was that familiar quotation, "Whatsoever you sow, that shall you also reap." He modified it, however, to suit the occasion and presented it in this way: "Whatsoever Graceland sows, that shall Graceland also reap." In his characteristic way he told how the church regarded Graceland, and how the people of the church looked to the students coming from Graceland. We were made to realize more clearly how great our responsibilities are, as our conduct, our works, and our personalities may either recommend or discredit Graceland. Apostle Gleazer pointed out to us that we as students can do more to sell Graceland to the people than any other force can do.

He made our hearts glad by telling us that Graceland was growing in favor with the church people and predicted the time when Graceland would not be the small college that she is today, but in the future, by her growth she would be the university that every Graceland student hopes she will be. In order to do this, several things are necessary. We must be consecrated to our work. Without this our program will fail. We must be properly fitted for our work, so that our hopes and ambitions can be supported by our ability to do the work necessary. This will make it possible to compete with other forces, as it will naturally increase our earning capacity. Altogether we were made to realize how we could help others by improving ourselves, and what part Graceland. Apostle Gleazer pointed out to us that we as students of the church program.

Graceland Welcomes New Students

The new semester brings with it a group of nine new students. Seven are taking college work, and two are in the academy. These are: Fern Wilson, Moorhead, Iowa; Lucille Heizer, Lamoni, Iowa; Orpha Lorance, Bazine, Kansas; Ruth Hansen, Weston, Iowa; Betty Sagle, Ontario, Canada; Darlene Schneider, Clearfield, Iowa; Eva Etta McKee, Cameron, Missouri; Elvin Vanderwood, Independence, Missouri; and Walter Killpack, Logan, Iowa.

We are happy to have them join our ranks, and from the splendid beginning which they are making we feel sure that they will be a real asset to Graceland.

INA HAWN.

The Engineers' Society

There is in Graceland an organization, prominent, yet not much heard of, the Engineers' Society. It is made up of fifteen young men taking the pre-engineering course and of those who are in school who have taken it before.

They have planned a very interesting program for the year. One event on this program is a visit to the Keokuk Dam. Here they plan to make an engineer's study of the dam and power house. This will be a very interesting study as well as a treat to look on one of the longest dams in the world.

The society is under the very able leadership of Professor Roy H. Mortimore, with Roy Goode as president.

Special Services at the Brick Church

Each evening during the past week one could see Graceland students leave their dormitories and join company with a band of Lamoni people, all on their way to the Brick Church.

It was our happy privilege to have Apostle Gleazer as our speaker. Brother Gleazer was heartily welcomed to Lamoni, and we feel certain that a bond of friendship was formed that will not soon dissolve.

"Modern civilization is going somewhere," says Brother Gleazer, "but just where we don't know." We Gracelanders believe we are modern, so decided to go to this land of somewhere. Brother Gleazer suggested that we go with him to modern Jericho by way of the modern highway. This we consented to do, but we were soon informed that the road was dangerous; that thieves infested the highway; thieves of material possession, thieves of physical strength, and thieves of moral and spiritual virtues. Realizing the magnitude of our task, we set out on our journey armed for the fight of making the road to modern Jericho safe for future travelers. But we soon discovered that if we were to accomplish our objective, we must play the part of the good Samaritan, for all along the road we met sin-sick people who begged for aid. Having supplied their needs and bound their wounds, we traveled on. The longer we journeyed, the more complex our problems became, until finally, wayworn and tired, we arrived at the Mount of Transfiguration. Here we found adequate supplies in the form of physical, moral, and spiritual strength to continue our journey; so we traveled on. Our supplies became exhausted again, our crippled "Jews" more numerous, and our courage much weaker. We were at the verge of crying, "Enough!" when the challenging words, "Be not disobedient to your heavenly vision," flowed from our captain's lips. These words fell upon us with no uncertain weight, and under their influence we stepped forward and, like Peter of old, we said unto our dying friends, Silver and gold have we none, but what we have, give we unto thee. We gave unreservedly and pressed onward until at last compelled by the wrath of man, and motivated by the purposes of God, we reached the land of somewhere, the modern city of Jericho, the city of Zion.

DONALD FLETCHER.

The Home Economics Department

We hear of the music department, the language department, the social science department, and all the other departments that make up the college, but to me the most interesting one is the home economics department. Previously this department has been content to remain in the background, but this semester it is intending to bring itself into the limelight.

A series of luncheons are to be served with each girl in the class taking her turn as hostess. The first luncheon was served in honor of Apostle Gleazer, who is holding services at the Brick Church.

A new course, applied design, has been introduced. This is a continuance of the elementary design course. The girls will do leather work, such as making coin purses, book marks, and memory books.

The money obtained from the enterprises during the first semester has been used for new stoves. This will be of great value to the girls in the cooking classes.

Soon our home economics department will be one we can point to with pride. May it continue to advance.

VIVIAN LAUGHLIN.

Zimmermann Hall

The fulfillment of the desire held dear by the friends of Graceland will soon be realized. Boosters for Graceland, who have sensed the ultimate "business" of the church college, have been looking forward to the completion of Zimmermann

Hall as one stepping-stone toward the goal of the future. We are informed that in two weeks the construction work will be finished. Student labor is now utilized in making everything ready for the plasterers, who are to be here when the construction work is finished. The amount of plastering to be done in the building will require approximately fifteen days. No time estimate can be placed upon the work of putting in the fixtures and accessories, but this will be pushed rapidly to completion.

The work on the building has been retarded some by the necessity of using the lower rooms for the commissary department of the college, and the almost constant use of the basket ball court. However, it will be only a few months until the building will be turned over to the regular routine work of the college. Zimmermann Hall, when completed, will cause a just pride in every true "Graceland" and help to glorify the work of Graceland College.

HARLEY LORANCE.

The Library

Which is the quietest place on the whole campus of Graceland College? Why, the library. When one enters, he sees the great emblem of wisdom—the owl—perched up amongst the books, and he is reminded of the purpose of the room.

Quietly one takes his place at the table to hurry through some belated assignments or read a magazine. Whenever a "reserve" book or a reference book from the shelf is required, one can always count on receiving help from the obliging and efficient corps of librarians under the direction of Lyda Elefson.

To Lyda is due praise and recognition for the efficient way in which the work is organized. The books have been nicely numbered and placed in their proper sections and sequences; quiet prevails, and help can be obtained at any time. One can rest assured that when all his own searching has proved fruitless, he can turn to our honored librarian and her staff, and the whole library will be turned over in order to locate the material, if it is anywhere to be found.

We who are students surely do appreciate the work of our librarians. Of course, sometimes we receive warning glances when we become too engrossed in social conversation with our neighbors, but the "bawling out" is done in such a lovely way that one respects the librarian in performing her duty.

Miss Elefson has started several innovations which have proved very successful. One is that of providing current literature on the rental plan. This has filled a long-felt need.

It is now a pleasure to study in our library, and nearly all students take advantage of the opportunity to browse around.

New Organ at Denver Brings Rejoicing

DENVER, COLORADO, February 4.—The dreams of our chorister, Ed. Fishburn, of the little chapel on Speer Boulevard and Logan, Denver, came to a realization Sunday morning, when we were taken into the realm of glory upon hearing our new pipe organ for the first time. If there ever were angels in our little place of worship, they were there then in abundance. We sat entranced by the glory of God within its depth, and felt as though the very heavens had opened her arms to embrace us and held us there close to her breast.

We are so happy and feel so blessed, after these many years of just getting along, and we pray that our efforts may continue in the future to be for the upbuilding of the great cause, and that our hearts and souls will be throwing out just such beautiful melody and harmony as did that wonderful little instrument last Sabbath morning.

All higher motives, ideals, conceptions, sentiments in a man are of no account if they do not come forward to strengthen him for the better discharge of the duties which devolve upon him in the ordinary affairs of life.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Monday, February 28, and Tuesday, March 1, at 7 p. m. class work for Sunday school and other department workers under direction of General Superintendent Charles B. Woodstock, and Sister Alice Baldwin, who has had years of experience in teaching and department work.

All Pottawattamie department workers are urged to attend, and workers of surrounding districts are invited. O. A. Currie, superintendent of Potawattamie District.

Home-Coming at Lucas, Iowa

The Lucas, Iowa, Branch will hold its fiftieth anniversary Sunday, February 20. General invitation is given to all former members to attend. Good speakers and a pleasant time are anticipated. J. W. Talbot, secretary.

Notice to Saints of Eastern Iowa District

As Brother Victor A. Hall, who has been superintendent of the Department of Sunday school, has resigned on account of removal from the district, we have appointed Brother Clarence Beil, jr., 428 North Second Street, Clinton, Iowa, to fill out the unexpired term. Clarence Heide, district president, Fulton, Iowa.

Conference Notices

Southern Nebraska district conference will convene with the Nebraska City Branch, March 5 and 6, with an entertainment the evening of March 4. Delegates to General Conference will be elected, and the regular business of the district attended to. President Floyd M. McDowell will be with us for the entire time, and we also expect Elder H. A. Higgins, from Des Moines, Iowa, and the district ministers. It is desired especially that all members of the priesthood, and all young folk who are interested in the educational program of the church, be present. Mail reports to Mrs. E. F. Robertson, 2745 P Street, Lincoln, Nebraska, before March 1. Mrs. E. F. Robertson, secretary.

The annual business conferences of the Pittsburgh District will meet at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Saturday and Sunday, March 5 and 6. First meeting will convene Saturday at 3 p. m., when the business of the conference will be transacted. This will include the business of the departments. The meetings for the day following will be left in the hands of the conference presidency. Apostle Paul M. Hanson will be in attendance during the entire conference, and we are desirous of having a good representation to greet him. Every member of the district ought to make an earnest effort to attend these meetings. J. A. Jaques, district president.

Kewanee district conference will be held at Rock Island Church, corner of Eighteenth Avenue and Tenth Street, February 26 and 27. The first meeting will be a prayer service at 9 a. m. Saturday, followed by business sessions at 10.30 a. m. and 2.30 p. m. and a preaching service at night. The Sunday services will be: Prayer meeting at 8.30; Sunday school at 9.45; and preaching at 11.00, 2.30, and 7.30. The main business will be the election of delegates to General Conference, fixing time and place for the reunion, and place for the May conference. It is expected that we shall have a general representative of the church from headquarters with us. Will all district officers kindly have their reports in the hands of the secretary in plenty of time? The visiting Saints will be cared for in the homes of the Saints of the Tri-Cities, and meals will be served in the basement of the church. E. R. Davis, district president, 410 Fifty-first Street, Moline, Illinois.

Wheeling District will hold a special conference for the election of delegates to the General Conference and to choose the place for the next regular district conference, at the church in Bellaire, Ohio, at 4635 Harrison Street, March 5 and 6. First meeting will be a short business session at 3 p. m. Saturday, and the rest of the conference will be devoted to instruction on stewardship and inventories and other spiritual lines. Some of the general church authorities have been invited to be present and are expected. A full attendance is desired. District priesthood session early Sunday morning. Samuel A. Martin, district secretary.

The semiannual conference of the Eastern Colorado District will be held in Denver on February 25, 26, and 27. The conference will open Friday afternoon with a short prayer service, and the remainder of the afternoon will be devoted to departmental work, which will consist of talks, papers, round table work, etc. Sister Tilton, of the Department of Women, will have charge of the evening program. There will be a prayer service and two business sessions on Saturday. Delegates for General Conference will be elected at this time. Will those who contemplate going to General Conference be present or notify the district secretary? The usual program will be carried out Saturday night and Sunday. We are expecting one of the general officers from Independence to be in attendance. Bruce E. Brown, district president.

The conference of Northeastern Nebraska District will convene at Omaha, February 25, 26, and 27. Election of district officers and General Conference delegates. Friday evening, the 25th, 8 p. m., program; Saturday, 10 a. m., prayer service; 2 p. m., business session; 8, preaching. Sunday will be a full day. Friday and Saturday services will be held at Omaha South Side Branch, but in order to accommodate the large crowd anticipated, it will be necessary to hold all Sunday services at the Omaha North Side Branch. President Floyd M. McDowell and Patriarch Richard Baldwin will be with us. A profitable and good time is assured. All are welcome. Come! H. A. Merchant, district president.

Our Departed Ones

DuBOISE.—James W. DuBoise was born August 24, 1872, at Moulton, Alabama. He was baptized into the church by Elder J. F. Curtis, December 31, 1909, and ordained a priest December 10, 1910, and an elder January 22, 1915. He married Miss Mary V. Cundiff, at Bevier, Kentucky, and to them were born six children, five of whom are living. He was a coal miner for a number of years and spent six years in the mission field. He passed from this life at the Independence Sanitarium, January 25, 1927, being fifty-four years, five months, and one day old. Surviving him are his wife, Mary Virginia, and five children. The body was sent to Jemison, Alabama, for interment.

MAWHINEY.—Effie Luella Teague Mawhiney was born November 21, 1887, four miles north of Cross Timbers, Missouri; married George Evert Mawhiney December 25, 1904, and to them ten children were born, three preceding her in death. She was baptized March 2, 1913, and has lived the life of a faithful member ever since until the Lord saw fit to call her home. She died January 12, 1927, at the age of thirty-nine years, one month, and twenty-two days. Left behind to mourn are her husband, and seven children: Evert, Shelley, Opal, Bonnie, Kenneth, Wilma, and Lucille, beside five sisters, four brothers, and many friends. Funeral sermon by Ralph Murdock.

RICE.—Mary E. Rice was born in Lemrick, Ohio, March 25, 1853, and was united in marriage to Ezra Rockwell in 1870. To them five children were born, three of whom are living. Mr. Rockwell passed away in 1879. In 1881 she married John W. Rice, at Lemrick, Ohio. To this union five children were born, four of whom survive. Mrs. Rice was a good neighbor and a kind and loving mother. She was a member of the church over thirty years. After a long illness, she passed away December 30, 1926. Left to mourn are her children: Sol Rockwell, of Saint Charles; John Rockwell, of Sergeant, Kentucky; Fred Rice, of Hamden, Ohio; Edward Rice, of Saginaw; Mrs. Oscar LePard, and Mrs. Frank McKenna, of Flint; and Harvey, at home; also twenty-eight grandchildren, and ten great-grandchildren. She leaves two sisters: Mrs. Rachael Rockenbaugh, of Columbus, Ohio, and Mrs. Agnes Rogers, of Wabeck, North Dakota; one brother, Stephen McLaughlin, of Columbus, Ohio. Funeral services were conducted from the home Sunday at 2.00 o'clock. Elder G. W. Burt, of Beaverton, assisted by Elder John D. Wade, of Saint Charles, officiated. Interment in Saint Charles cemetery.

BOREN.—Wilford A. Boren was born in Council Bluffs, Iowa, October 24, 1848, and came with his parents and the pioneer Latter Day Saints, over the plains to Utah and later to California, arriving in San Bernardino in 1854. His father, Judge A. D. Boren, became one of the prominent citizens of San Bernardino, and was one of the pioneers in building up the church work in that city. Brother Wilford Boren conducted the first telegraph office in his home city and was prominent in all civic affairs. In 1894 he was elected to the office of county treasurer, which office he occupied until 1898, and in 1923 was elected city treasurer, which office he held up to the time of his death. In the early years of his life, Brother Boren was of a very skeptical turn of mind and had very little use for religion, but in later years he became interested and after a very careful investigation, he became a staunch and loyal member of the church and remained faithful to the church to the last. Brother Boren was held in very high esteem by all who knew him, and out of respect for him and to show the high regard he was held in by the city officials, the mayor of the city, Grant Holcomb, ordered the offices of the city closed, that all might be permitted to attend the funeral in a body. Sister Lois Aldridge Johnson sang two beautiful solos, which act was very much appreciated by all. The sermon was by Elder G. H. Wixom, who was formerly the mayor of that city and the pastor of the church in that city. Surviving Brother Wilford A. Boren are his widow, Sister Sarah Boren, and his three sons, Elder Will A. Boren, of Shalals, Washington; Guss W., of San Bernardino; and Professor Frank H. Boren, one of the teachers in the Stanford University of California.

Blue Pencil Notes

If only the biggest and wisest and best
Sat down in our councils or ate with the blest,
I ask you, consider this problem a bit:
Dear brother of mine, where would you and I sit?

"Nobody thinks any more," complained Deacon Goodentart; "they all react."

If I knew you and you knew me—
If both of us could clearly see,
And with an inner sight divine
The meaning of your heart and mine,
I'm sure that we would differ less
And clasp our hands in friendliness;
Our thoughts would pleasantly agree
If I knew you, and you knew me.

If I knew you and you knew me,
As each one knows his own self, we Could look each other in the face
And see therein a truer grace.
Life has so many hidden woes,
So many thorns for every rose;
The "why" of things our hearts would see,
If I knew you and you knew me.

—Nixon Waterman.

A good Methodist minister was approached by a neighbor who was greatly troubled over some things in the Bible, such as the story about Jonah and the whale, Joshua commanding the sun to stand still, etc. The minister replied: "When I have a good dinner of fresh mackerel, I do not waste much time over the bones. I lay them to one side and eat the meat." Some people spend their lives picking at a few bones in the Bible and never do get around to nourish their souls with the meat. If they would accept it, they would find the fundamental law of the Lord wholesome and satisfactory, capable to recreate their own lives and the whole social order. But all they see is bones, and in the end all they have to offer old earth is bones.

Watching the stars seems to have convinced Doctor Heber Curtis, of the Allegheny Observatory, that man's soul is immortal. He seems to have learned the lesson taught in Doctrine and Covenants: "The earth rolls upon her wings; and the sun giveth his light by day, and the moon giveth her light by night; and the stars also giveth their light, as they roll upon their wings, in their glory, in the midst of the power of God. Unto what shall I liken these kingdoms, that you may understand? Behold, all these are kingdoms, and any man who hath seen any or the least of these, hath seen God moving in his majesty and power."—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 12.

In his address before the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Philadelphia, Doctor Curtis declared that since matter and time have eternal continuity, he is driven to conclude that the finer things that dominate matter and challenge time also continue. He said: "There seems at present to be a gap between the outer universe and that of the atom. Personally I am ready to admit another gap between the world of matter and that of spirit, with energy, matter, space and time continuing, with nothing lost. Are we ourselves the only manifestation that comes to an end, stops, ceases, is annihilated at three-score years and ten? What we crudely call 'spirit' of man makes new compounds, plays with the laws of chemical action, guides the forces of the atom, changes the face of the earth, gives life to new forms; a creative spirit which reasonably can not cease to be. This thing, soul, mind, spirit, can not well be an exception. In some way, as yet impossible to define, it, too, must possess continuity."

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Church Regains Possession at Clear Lake

Legal right to the church building and premises at Clear Lake, Indiana, has been clearly established by court action. The brethren of the Church of Christ had some months ago made claim to and took possession of the church property, whereupon the Reorganized Church brought suit to regain possession. On February 11 the case was heard before the court. The defendants in the suit relinquished all claims on the church property, and possession was given the Reorganized Church at once.

An all-day meeting was held by the Reorganized Church in the church building Sunday, February 13. It is hoped that the Saints will unitedly center their interests and combine their strength in supporting the gospel of Christ at the Clear Lake Branch.

Graceland Commencement-Convention, Institute, etc.

Heads of departments meeting with church officials and Graceland College authorities at Lamoni, Iowa, recently have determined on some activities to mark the close of the school year early in June, embracing not only the college commencement and home-coming, but in addition the young people's convention of the church and also an institute for intensive study. The dates to be used are June 1 to 12. Already plans are being made by some of the young of the church to be in attendance at these activities, and success is assured.

The Institute of Methods in Religious Education will open for enrollment on June 4, Saturday, and continue for eight days of strenuous work, closing June 12, Sunday. It is hoped to make this a thoroughly practical school of methods and demonstration. Trained and experienced leaders and instructors are secured, headed by President Floyd M. McDowell and Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, dean of the School of Religious Education of the University of Chicago.

Detailed announcements will be made as plans are worked out, and all should watch closely for these and plan to attend and get out of these activities all that is suited to their special needs—there will be much for all. One of the leaders says that an attendance of officers, teachers, and leaders of departmental work has been assured from a large majority of the organized districts of the church.

Radio News Notes

To Change Sunday School Schedule

Beginning the first Saturday evening in March (March 6), the radio Sunday school lessons will be broadcast beginning at 7 o'clock, instead of 6.30. It has been found that the 6.30 period is not as convenient for many listeners as one beginning a half hour later.

The Sunday school lessons follow the grades series of the Gospel Quarterlies, including beginner, primary, junior intermediate, and senior grades. The lessons are presented by Eunice Winn Smith, Miss Helen Kelley, Elder John Sheehy, and Mrs. Christiana Salyards. These people are glad to hear from their listeners and will welcome criticisms and suggestions, so that the lessons may be presented in a manner most interesting to the listeners. The radio Sunday school lessons are still in the experimental stage, but they will be made a permanent K L D S feature if there are enough listeners to appreciate them. Sunday-school teachers and mothers are especially urged to write K L D S concerning these lessons.

Radio Legislation Near?

HERALD readers have doubtless followed the newspaper articles on the radio legislation situation and have noted that the White-Dill compromise bill has passed the House and is now before the Senate. President Coolidge has already signified he would sign the bill. Several members of the Senate who oppose the bill have done everything possible to keep the Senate from voting on the measure. The majority of Senators favor it. Congressmen and Senators have been deluged with letters and telegrams from listeners of the country, and it is this kind of pressure by the public that will cause the Senate to pass the measure before Congress adjourns. Responsibility for the bill's passage, therefore, rests largely upon the public. HERALD readers are again urged to write their Senators, urging an immediate vote and their support of the White-Dill compromise measure.

To Broadcast From New Auditorium

Plans are already being made for the broadcasting of several features from the new Auditorium during General Conference. These features include the opening conference session at 10 o'clock, April 6, and others which will be announced later.

Moved K L D S Office

The K L D S office, which during the past year has been located in the Battery Block Building, has been moved to 210 West Maple Avenue, where the station director, Brother Arthur B. Church, conducts a radio store. The new arrangement makes it possible for Brother Church to concentrate his office work, making it more effective. The ideal situation would be to have the K L D S office in connection with the studio, which is not at present practicable, but such an arrangement is planned for the new Auditorium.

Return of Sister Blanche Edwards

In the news columns of this week's HERALD, under the heading, "News from the departments," we find news that on January 20 Sister Blanche Edwards had cabled from Birmingham, England, that she would close her visit there and embark for the United States on the Celtic February 12. Sister Edwards is said to have been doing intensive work for the Department of Women and other departments during her stay of several months in England.

Elder Robert J. Farthing Returning

Elder Robert J. Farthing and wife, who have been in the Island Mission for several years, sent wire dated February 10 aboard S. S. MaunGANUI, which says they expect to arrive in San Francisco February 18.

The Doctrine of Our Fathers

BY J. F. GARVER

The second of a series of seven sermons in the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, in November, 1925, under the general theme, "The faith of our fathers."

We are to speak tonight of the doctrine of our fathers. We have for this theme a well-laid foundation in the 6th chapter of Hebrews, as follows:

When for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat. For every one that useth milk is unskillful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe. But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment. And this will we do, if God permit.

From out this lesson we draw for the text the words of the Apostle Paul, "Let us go on unto perfection."

This is a significant saying, Let us as Saints of God go on unto perfection. Building upon these six foundation principles. Building upon these six principles of the doctrine of Christ. Building upon these first oracles of the living God. Guided by these unerring counsels, let us as the children of this most holy covenant go on unto the Christ character. It is a significant saying.

Why this admonition? Is it that God, because he is God, without reason imposes upon us some extraneous processes, in yielding to which we shall find ourselves some day by him made perfect? Or is it because that he, being God, and recognizing these as principles of life, possible of operation in each one of his children, creative forces unto the new Christ character, has in his wisdom and love made choice of them to his glory and to our redemption?

God does nothing without reason. We are safe, therefore, in the deduction that these which are called forth from the forces of righteousness and chosen in the wisdom of divinity to constitute the six cardinal principles of the gospel of Christ, are so chosen because they are creative forces calculated to lift us up to the throne of God.

And it is even so. These principles we find operative, and each of them most powerfully, in every field of human endeavor. Without the operation of these, there can be no human achievement. Without the operation of these in the earth, there can be no divine achievement. These principles, six, revealed in the latter day through the faith, the undying devotion, the sacrifice of our church fathers; and interpreted for our consideration in the light of their offering of love—these cardinal principles of our fathers, these fundamentals of the doctrine of Christ, these declare I unto you.

The Principle of Faith

We speak first of the principle of faith. The principle to become first operative in the candidate for divine fellowship. By the principle of faith we work in every field. Faith is a universal, basic principle without which no thing can by man be done.

Science is based on faith. William James, the great psychologist, has said, "There are causes where a fact can not come unless a preliminary faith exists in its coming."

Lord Kelvin has said, "Science positively affirms creative power." Says this man of science, Creative power is a presumption of faith and faith alone.

We see about us the great expanse of a mighty creation. And in our confidence it has been so, as scientists we presume the creator of it all. This is Kelvin's creed of faith. Science rests on faith.

Government is based on faith. Confidence in the general principles of government, confidence in the particular government in which men have their part, confidence is the cement and the only cement which draws men together and holds them together in human government. And, my dear friends, as a people we ought long ago to have known that confidence is the cement and the only cement which draws men together and holds them together in the government of God. Government is based on faith.

Marriage and the home are based on faith. Mutual confidence and the trust growing out of it, unto a great labor of love, confidence, is the great dynamic that holds the home together as the unit of society. Marriage, happy marriage, and the home are based on faith.

Faith, as I have said, is a universal, basic law, operative in every field of human endeavor. And since it is so, God, since he is God, and conceiving the principles by which we might operate in cooperation with him in his kingdom, has made choice of this principle by which we work everywhere else, and has made it the rule of our Christian life and warfare.

And by faith do we move forward. By faith are we moving forward in the power of God unto that ultimate achievement which is the heritage of the faithful of the earth.

The Principle of Repentance

With the principle of repentance it is the same. The second principle to become operative in the candidate for divine fellowship. Repentance is but the universal, the basic law of adjustment. That eternal process by which we attune our bodies to life. That process by which we attune ourselves to each other. That process by which in the earth we attune nation to nation in the interests of international peace and amity. Repentance is but another word for that great and divine dynamic by which planet is held in juxtaposition to planet, star to star, and the great universe to God. So do we by the principle of repentance right ourselves to God.

Repentance, universal law everywhere else operative, in the wisdom of God has been chosen to become the gauge of our change from sin to righteousness, by means of which, and in harmony with which, in the measure it does operate in us, we do move up the scale of perfection.

The Principle of Baptism

We come now to the principle of baptism, the third principle to become operative in the candidate for divine fellowship. Baptism is but the universal law of cleansing. Baptism is an ordinance of the gospel unto forgiveness of sins. It is a symbol of cleansing, typified in the water that we use, typified in water as the universal, common element of washing away the earth and its defilements from our bodies, and our clothing, and our homes, and our cities. Baptism is a public ceremony evidencing the turning of oneself away from evil unto the new life. Baptism is a type of the Christ life in earth. Entering into the kingdom by this door, we recall his death, signifying his burial, and we celebrate his resurrection.

The principle of baptism is operative in our every other human experience, a process by which we rid ourselves of wrong ways and consequences, that we may take up right ways for their rewards. And since it is a principle so common to our every other experience, God, because he is God and all-wise, has incorporated it in the gospel plan.

And he has done it since man understands ideals best as they are expressed through symbols; since man is best impressed through ceremonies; and since by coming to him through this rite we identify ourselves as candidates for his divine fellowship through the Spirit of our blessed Lord, who went before us in the way, calling to us to become one with him in perfection, in action, in endeavor, in life, in service, and in achievement.

The Principle of Laying on of Hands

We come now to the principle of the laying on of hands. An ordinance of the gospel unto the baptism of the Spirit.

The imposition of hands has a great and a universal significance. The laying on of the hands of the elders in confirmation is a symbol of divine approval and blessing, a symbol of rights and privileges bestowed. The laying on of hands is a public ceremony in and through which the candidate is inducted into the kingdom of God. The laying on of hands of the elders is representative of the hands of God. The laying on of hands of the elders signifies the need of the divine touch.

The laying on of hands of the elders is in harmony with that universal custom and practice from the beginning of human experience, in which the hand has been used not only as the instrument of achievement, but the instrument of acknowledgment and of conveyance. And since in the doctrine of Christ it could be made to stand for so much; and since God has known that man best understands in terms of symbols, and is best impressed through ceremony, he has in his wisdom appropriated this thing with which we have to do every day, and has associated it as one of the cardinal principles of the doctrine of Christ.

And as in the confirmation of the person baptized, it is the same in the other ordinances of the gospel.

When we have builded a home, and God in his wisdom has found it best to make that home complete by sending us a baby, we do not name it as we name a dog. No, we take it before the church. That we might name it? Yes, and more: that we might dedicate it to God. And when the elders take it in their arms, and put their hands upon it, the act symbolizes the great love of Christ who takes the babe in his arms, presses it to his bosom, and would breathe upon us, could he do it, the wisdom and the power by which it might be kept pure, and returned to him in maturity.

And when our sick one suffers, we do not leave him to die as the beasts of the field. No; we commit him to the hand of God, whether he shall live or pass to his reward. The elders come, and representing God, under their outstretched hands in his stead, they pray that his peace may follow that stricken soul. And it does.

And when we ordain a man to the ministry, we do not just go out on the street and say, That man looks good to us. We will choose him and send him forth to preach. No, we do not do it that way. We wait until the Lord speaks and says, I would that man should be set apart to this office. And then we set him up before the church, and the elders put their hands upon his head and pray a prayer of consecration, setting him apart to the holy ministry. Their hands in this act stand for all God in his matchless power purposes to do in that man, and through him for the glory of his name.

Hands! Yes, hands of man and hands of God—these are joined together in the fourth cardinal principle of the doctrine of Jesus Christ.

The Principles of Resurrection and Judgment

We speak, too, of the resurrection of the dead. We are wont to call it a coming to life again after we have died. But, my dear friends, it is not so. The resurrection of the dead is but a continuation of life in the broader sense. It, too, is a principle of life everywhere operative in this experience.

We see the power of the resurrection made manifest in every season, on every morning of every day. The lilies of the field each autumn lay down their bodies to rest in the nurturing bosom of Mother Earth, the while Nature draws over them a beautiful and warm blanket of white. They lie down at the autumn time to rest in the earth in the confidence that by the power of the resurrection of Almighty God they shall live above the earth again in the spring.

The resurrection is like that. A principle everywhere else made manifest, God by the power of the spirit encased in this frail capsule of clay, as he brings forth the lily in the spring, shall bring forth my form some day.

Last is the principle of eternal judgment. Nothing more nor less than the operation of the great law of compensation. Everywhere else operative in all our experience of every day, God in his wisdom has appropriated it as one of the cardinal principles of the doctrine of Christ. Eternal Judgment, the principle of the reaping after the sowing; the measure of the fruits of our labors. And as sure as eternity, the measure in time as well as in eternity of the fruits of life's work and achievements.

These Are the Principles

These are the principles, the doctrines, of our fathers. The first four not to be laid aside immediately we have come under their operation, as things with which we have finished, which we will need no more in life's experience; for they are principles by which we must direct our course, following their indications as a great divine compass, if we would achieve here in the Christian warfare, and realize yonder on our spiritual investment. The last two in their operation not to wait until after we die, but in the midst of which, and in the consequences of which, and in the glories of which we live every day, and every hour of every day. For all these operate in us now, either to our condemnation or to our glorification.

These are the principles of our fathers, and their significance. These are the principles of the doctrine of Christ which our fathers discovered anew in this age, which they taught, which they stood for, by which they lived, and which they have handed down untarnished to us.

In Appreciation of Our Fathers

Nor do I hold in honored memory tonight only those first fathers with whose blood the cold snows of Missouri were turned crimson; nor yet only those noble first fathers of this Reorganization, almost all of whom have gone to their reward; for let me tonight pay tribute, let me press a crown of glorification on still other heads. Let me bespeak to you, my dear brothers of the silver brow yet with us, the appreciation of this great people for the offering you have made, for the faith you have espoused, for the righteous cause of Christ for which you have lived in your day, that on to us these principles of the doctrine might be passed, whose hands are strong for the fray. Let me put the rose in the hands of you men ere you pass from us. This is the faith of our fathers. And all honor to those noble men who have been true, and who are yet true to the trust imposed to their keeping.

A Word of Testimony

These, my dear friends of most holy covenant, are the principles which we must rediscover for ourselves. And let me say unhesitatingly that no principle of the doctrine of Christ can save me in any measure, only in the measure in which I for myself discover it anew and apply and live it in my life. These are the principles Jesus our Lord made possible unto us in this great new day in the church and kingdom of God, which we for ourselves in turn must discover anew, which we must teach, which we must stand for, by which we must live, and which, if they be handed down at all, we must hand down to our posterity.

My friends, will you permit me to say by way of personal testimony that from the deepest recesses of my soul I know these are the principles of the doctrine of Christ? I know for myself and not for another that the gospel is true.

As a lad I took this church at its word. The elders told me that he that doeth the will of the Father shall know of the doctrine. I believed that God would answer my faithful obedience by the testimony that the gospel is true; and he did. I know for myself and need no man to tell me that the power as couched in these six cardinal principles is the power of God unto salvation. I know it. And to that number who are not thus favored of our blessed Lord, who are not given to know, but to believe upon the testimony of those who do know, to such as may receive this feeble expression of my trembling lips tonight, let me testify, I know that these principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ are true.

This great gospel found me as a lad without people of strength in the world, without friends, without hope, without vision, without desire to live; dead, as it were, among living men. And by its power it transformed and carried me over from the crumbling foundation of disobedience and planted my feet on the eternal rock of Christ's divine truth. It brought me a mighty people. It brought me friends. It brought me hope. It brought me work. It brought me vision and enlargement of soul, so that tonight with that good man of olden time I can say, I am no more the manner of man I once was. The things I once loved I now hate. And the things I once hated I now love. And by this testimony am I made sure that in a measure I have passed from death into life, because I do love my brethren, whether or not they love me. The gospel is proved true in me.

Yes, my dear friends, it is not only by the voice of God speaking to my soul that I know these principles are true. For it is by this process of which I speak I know these principles are life, because they have wrought in me a great and a marvelous change.

And if I may say more, let it be this: By that same sweet Spirit, by that same surging of God through my being, by that same undying fire, by that same witness and companionship and testimony do I now know, as I have known through all the years, that this is the doctrine of Christ I declare unto you.

Let Us Go on Unto Perfection

And you know it as I know it. I speak not to boast, but to revive in you that faith, that hope, that charity, that virility which has been yours all through the years. This is the doctrine of our fathers, and in this doctrine we stand fast and true. You know it, even as I know it. And by the same testimony and process of unfoldment.

Let us, then, have faith. Let us have faith in ourselves. Let us have faith in each other. Let us have faith in the group. Let us have faith in this doctrine of our fathers. Let us have faith in the church. Let us have faith in God.

Let us under the principle of repentance adjust ourselves to each and to the group and to the church and to God.

Let us by the power of the Almighty God of heaven working in us—true to the meaning of baptism, let us absolve ourselves from sin, and so far as it may be possible under God's goodness, recover ourselves from the consequences of that evil.

Let us claim with all its power and potency the divine touch of the Spirit, for without it no man can achieve.

Let us, as it were, mounting up on the wings of the resurrection of Christ, come unto the very throne of God. And let us there in God's just judgments claim the portion of the righteous.

In short, my friends, let us go on unto perfection.

In this the faith of our fathers we stand, in the stead of our fathers. And by the promise of God under this doctrine shall we achieve unto the hope of our fathers in a Zion redeemed, and the truth rolling forth in our testimony to fill the world.

And oh, the glory of it! Men may say what they will say: men not of the church, men of the church may say what they will say. Men may do what they will do: men of the church, men not of the church may do what they will do. Yet ye know we stand in the light of our fathers. Men may accomplish what they may accomplish: men not of the church, men of the church may accomplish what they may accomplish. Yet we veritably know we stand not only in the fear of God, but also in the light of the doctrine of our fathers. And we know that by these unerring counsels shall all God's purposes be brought to pass in and through us.

My dear friends, we plead not guilty. Let me say it dispassionately; let me say it gently; let me say it in the love of God, but let me say it—we are not apostate. We are not rejected of God. We are not recreant to that great trust which Almighty God and a moving people have imposed in us.

I call you in every pew here tonight to witness, Is it not true that God's Spirit bears witness with our spirits that we stand in his most holy favor? And does not that same divine presence bear witness with our spirits that, standing fast in this the doctrine of our fathers, we shall achieve the end unto which they have died? Answer me, and you will say, Yes, to a man.

And thus shall we justify the trust God has imposed in us. And the anguish of soul through which our great fathers have passed that this high privilege might be ours of entering into the Zion of promise. And when we have done it, and may I be one of that number—and when we have done it, may we be found worthy to run to the end of the earth to tell men it has been so.

Let us go on, then, in the faith of our fathers. Let us go on in the faith of our Lord. Let us go on unto perfection.

The good character, like everything else that is builded, must have a good foundation. At the foundation of character is purpose. One may not be conscious that some overmastering purpose leads him to do and say the things that go into the making up of his character.—Mattie M. Boteler.

Gardening and Truck Growing

BY J. W. A. BAILEY

Gardening and truck and fruit growing is one of the most interesting and scientific occupations in the world, and when properly carried on will produce health, pleasure, and profits. There is not anything that will afford so much comfort to the home as the growing and use of fresh vegetables, fruits, and flowers. A very few acres properly located and properly managed will furnish a paying livelihood for a large family; even a small plot of good soil will produce all the small fruit and vegetables that a family would use.

With the increased population and value of land, we should do our best to make the soil produce its capacity, and in doing so we become benefactors to society.

As all wealth is derived from the soil, either directly or indirectly, we should become acquainted with this chief branch of industry. Agricultural life is the real natural life for man. Let this industry stop for even a short time, and the wheels of commerce will close down. The real agriculturist has the greatest opportunity of becoming acquainted with God, for he must cooperate with him, becoming acquainted with the laws of nature, which are God's laws.

To make a success of this business, one must have a good stock of energy, and take a real interest in the work, be a close observer, study the business, read good books, papers, etc., on the subject, and when it is possible visit large gardens and truck farms; by so doing you will obtain a broader vision of this most wonderful science—intensified farming.

Everyone should become acquainted with the different kinds of soil, and especially the nature of his own plot, for all kinds of fruits and vegetables will not be a success on all kinds of soils. For general purposes, a rich sandy loam is the best, but most any good, well-drained land can be made into good garden soil. One acre of good, well-prepared soil is worth more than ten acres of poor, impoverished soil. You can not have your soil too thoroughly prepared if you want to raise fine marketable produce. Good soil, good seeds, good plants, and plenty of energy properly applied, are the fundamental principles of success.

Select only the best seeds and plants that can be procured, for the best is not too good for planting. Poor plants and poor seeds, as a gift, are very costly. Learn the system of planting in proper rotation and succession. Proper rotation is the best preventive against diseases and insects. Be sure to protect the birds and toads, for they are our best friends in the garden.

All crops should be thoroughly cultivated at the proper time, as a few days of neglect will mean ruin to a crop. A successful grower can tell you more about the business than a hundred theoretical ones, hence watch only those who make a success, and exchange thoughts with them.

All fruits and vegetables should be properly graded for the market. Try to excel; be wide-awake to your business; have a definite purpose of your own and work to the objective; then you will succeed.

By a close observation we can see how wonderfully God has arranged the laws of nature in production of the necessary things for man. Early in the spring we have the tender vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, rhubarb, asparagus, radishes, green onions, etc., just what we need after the winter's blast. Then come the early cabbage, turnips, beets, carrots, potatoes, and some early fruit. In fact, we have the early fruit and vegetables for the early part of the season when so much needed; then the later fruit and vegetables for the late summer and fall, and the apples, potatoes, turnips, beets, parsnips, etc., for winter use, besides the main root crop, and the golden grain, which is the staff of life. God has so wonderfully arranged the growth of these herbs, fruits, and grains, every one in the season thereof, for the constitution, nature, and use of man; and if we would only learn to respect this God-given program, we would live longer, and better in every respect.

The following table will serve as a guide for planting in ordinary seasons for this locality—parallel 39. Sometimes our springs and falls are two or three weeks earlier or later, so we will have to be governed accordingly; therefore no set rule for planting can be laid down. Everyone should be an observer of the time of the late and early frosts in his locality. All vegetables listed to plant early means as early as you can get the ground into good working condition. And while this is not complete, yet I hope it will serve for all general purposes.

A Monthly Table for Planting

FEBRUARY

If there be no wintered plants on hand, first of the month sow cabbage, lettuce, cauliflower, in well-protected cold frames or hotbeds for early planting. Sow onion seed in hotbeds for transplanting, to be used in the place of sets. Sow celery seed in flats in greenhouse or hotbeds for early crop.

MARCH

First of the month sow tomatoes and peppers in hotbed for early planting, and if necessary transplant to cold frames before setting in open ground. As soon as possible, prepare the soil thoroughly for early planting. Set out wintered cabbage, lettuce, and cauliflower in open ground, plant some early potatoes, set out onion sets, sow radishes, lettuce, spinach, beets, turnips, carrots, parsnips, mustard, parsley; plant hardy peas, pulverize the rhubarb beds and ridge up the asparagus, and apply nitrate of soda or some good fertilizer.

APRIL

First of the month, make hotbeds for sweet potatoes, and bed them about the 12th. Set out rhubarb, asparagus, and strawberry plants, and plant potatoes. Sow seeds of all hardy vegetables, such as lettuce, radishes, spinach, beets, turnips, peas, etc. Plant onion seed, salsify, and parsnips. Plant cucumbers and melons in pieces of sod or frames in hotbeds or cold frames, and when the danger of frost is past and melons are large enough, set them out in the open ground. Last of the month plant first of the tender kinds of vegetables—sweet corn, etc. Sow celery seed for late crop.

MAY

For succession sow lettuce, radishes, spinach, beets, turnips, peas, etc. Plant sweet corn, beans, cucumbers, melons, squash, and pumpkins. Set out sweet potatoes, tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, celery. Sow carrots and salsify for main crop. Sow cabbage seed for late plants.

JUNE

Plant sweet corn, beans, cucumbers, melons. Set sweet potatoes, tomatoes, peppers. Sow beets, spinach, kale. Plant white potatoes; about the 15th navy beans, rutabagas. Set celery plants.

JULY

Plant cucumbers for pickles. Set tomatoes, celery, cabbage, cauliflower. Sow carrots, beets, rutabagas. Plant beans, sweet corn. Latter part of the month, turnips, winter radishes, kale, and spinach.

AUGUST

Set celery and cabbage plants. Sow for late crops, beans, spinach, kale, turnips, winter radishes.

SEPTEMBER

First of the month sow turnips and winter radishes. Middle of month sow kale and spinach to winter over for spring use. Latter part of the month sow cabbage, lettuce, and cauliflower for plants to be wintered in cold frames. Sow rye or sandy vetch on all discarded patches for winter covering and green manuring. Green manuring is one of the chief items in garden work.

OCTOBER

Dig and cure the sweet potatoes before frost; then, if possible, sow the ground to rye for winter covering. When the ground freezes and the plants are asleep, cover the strawberries, rhubarb, and asparagus, the first with straw or strawy manure, the latter with strawy manure or even heavy manure. If winter sets in cold, put some covering over the spinach and kale for protection. The man who is wide-awake will find plenty to do the rest of the year, preparing for the next year's crop so that when the spring comes again he will not be behind with his work.

The following is a list of vegetables and the dates they may be planted, so they will mature under ordinary conditions in good soil, properly cultivated. You may plant with success even earlier and later than these dates some seasons. For instance, I have planted early Winningstadt cabbage (the seed) as late as July 10, and made good cabbage, and beans as late as August 10, beets August 15, sweet corn July 20. But this is not a safe rule to go by.

Time-Table

Asparagus from the seed takes three to four years before cutting should be made. Beans, May 1 to August 1. Beets, early to August 1. Cabbage plants, early to August 1. Cauliflower plants, early to August 1. Carrots, early to July 10. Celery plants, May to August. Cucumbers, May 1 to July 1. Endive, April to August. Horseradish, early to July. Lettuce, early to September 20. Melons, May 10 to July 1. Mustard, early to August. Onions, March to June. Oyster plants, early to June. Parsnips, early to June 10. Parsley, early to July. Peanuts, May 10 to June 10. Peas, March to July 15. Potatoes, March 20 to July. Pepper plants, May 10 to July. Pumpkins, May 10 to June 15. Radishes, early to September 10. Rhubarb, early spring. Rutabagas, June 20 to July 15. Sweet corn, April 15 to July 15. Sweet potatoes, May to July. Spinach, early to September 20. Squash, same as pumpkins. Tomato plants, May to July 10. Turnips, early to September 1. Kohl-rabi, April to July 15. Kale, early to September 20. Pumpkins, May to June 15. Winter radish, August to September 6.

Insecticides and Fungicides

Every successful gardener and fruit grower must fight against insects and plant diseases. The first and best preventative is proper rotation and quick growth. But oftentimes we have to resort to drugs; then we must know what ones to use and how to use them. Copper and lime, when properly mixed, is the best fungicide known. How to mix: Dissolve six pounds of copper sulphate (bluestone) in about ten gallons of warm water in a wooden vessel; then slake four pounds of fresh lime, adding enough water to make it a creamy whitewash; then pour the two together into a 55-gallon barrel, using a gunny sack for a strainer. Stir it thoroughly. Then add enough water to make fifty gallons of the mixture to every six pounds of the copper sulphate. Into this mixture the arsenate of lead or Paris green can be put, thus combining the fungicide and insecticide, by which we can prevent blight and destroy insects at one spraying.

How to Mix and Use the Insecticides

Kerosene, arsenate of lead, buhach, and Paris green, when properly mixed and applied, are the best of insecticides. Kerosene made into an emulsion or used with a sprayer attachment will kill almost all kinds of bugs, worms, lice, maggots, soft slugs, and beetles. Use one quart of soft soap, one pint of kerosene, two quarts of water, and churn or beat together until a perfect union or emulsion is formed—then add two gallons of soft water, and apply with a fine force sprayer.

For larger mixtures, dissolve one half pound of soap in one gallon of water over a brisk fire. When dissolved, remove from the fire and add two gallons of kerosene oil; then churn the mixture thoroughly a few minutes, or until a creamlike emulsion is obtained. If properly made, it will thicken like jelly, which will adhere to glass without oiliness. Be sure there is no free oil, for it will injure the foliage. Use rain water or sweet milk for diluting. For scale insects use 1 part emulsion to 10 parts of water. For most kinds of insects use 1 to 15 and for soft insects, like plant lice, use 1 to 20 or 25. The surest way to use kerosene is with a kerosene attachment, which mixes the pure kerosene and water together as you spray.

For the insects that will not succumb to the use of emulsion, we use an insecticide made of arsenate of lead, which is better in many respects than Paris green, as it will not burn the foliage, when properly applied. Dissolve eleven ounces of acetate of lead and four ounces of arsenate of soda in 150 gallons of water. This forms the arsenate of lead solution. To this add two quarts of glucose or molasses to glue the poison to the foliage. If mixed in the Bordeaux mixture, the latter is not needed, as the lime will glue the poison fast. Do not use arsenate of lead on anything you are to eat, like lettuce, spinach, tomatoes, etc., after they have formed. Arsenate of lead is a deadly poison and will not wash off. It is especially for spraying fruit trees, Irish potatoes, melon vines, etc. You can buy arsenate of lead in the paste form from most any druggist. I prefer the paste.

How to use Paris green: For potato beetles (old stock), use 1 pound of Paris green to 100 pounds of plaster, wood ashes, or air-slaked lime, thoroughly mixed, and dusted on the young plants. For the slugs, 1 pound to 50 gallons of lime water or Bordeaux mixture; apply with a fine sprayer. Don't use Paris green without milky lime-water, or it will burn the foliage. Arsenate of lead is better for spraying tender plants.

For the cabbage worm: Use buhach, or California insect powder. Get the pure article; the stale

"The Child's First School Is the Family."—Froebel.

Big Moments in Little Lives

Too often the big moment in a small child's life is wholly overlooked, not even recognized many times, by the parents. These moments are very important and really need watching for.

When Bobby was taken out for the first time on a star-lit night, he wondered at the glory of the heavens. In his early-to-bed regime he had never stood under a sky with twinkling stars, and as he looked he marveled, and suddenly tightening his grip on his mother's hand he said joyously: "Why, mother, I fink I almost seed God." This was indeed a big moment. Fortunately for Bobby, he had a mother who understood. She knew that her child had visualized God in his power more than he had ever done in his baby life before. This moment needed her attention.

Billy, who was a sadly willful child and was always being checked or chided on account of some misdemeanor, quite unaccountably did an unusually kind, self-sacrificing act. When he realized that he had been responsible for this voluntary goodness, he said in great surprise: "Why, muvver, I isn't all bads, is I?" This was a big moment in his life, and his stuff is no good. One tablespoonful mixed to a paste; then dissolve in two gallons of water and apply with a fine force sprayer. Or use one spoonful to four of plaster, wood ashes, or air-slaked lime, and dust on where needed.

Repellers

Tobacco dust or tobacco tea is the best repeller and louse killer we have. One pint of crude carbolic acid to one bushel of plaster, wood ashes, or air-slaked lime is good. Also one tablespoonful of kerosene to two quarts of plaster, wood ashes, or air-slaked lime is good. The above are to be used lightly. Lime and tobacco are not only good for the things herein described, but they are fine fertilizers.

If seed potatoes are scabby, they should be soaked in a weak solution of corrosive sublimate, using 2 ounces of pulverized corrosive sublimate to 15 gallons of water. Soak the seed whole in a gunny sack for about one hour and a half. Then dry, cut, and plant in clean soil. Be careful with the seed thus treated; for this is a deadly poison.

This article is written in the interest of the honest toiler who loves nature.

mother, recognizing the truth of his statement, began at once to take a different course in her training of Billy. Today Billy and she have found out that her small son has many more "goods" than "bads," and they are both enjoying the quest for them. Billy has to be punished only rarely now, because in a moment when his own self awakened to his actions his mother awakened also.

Little Betty, who sat upon the floor with a large family of dolls surrounding her, said with quiet decision: "I want to be a real mother of real children some day, mother." She wasn't laughed at nor told not to be thinking such silly things yet; she was helped in her awakening moment. Taking her on her lap, her mother told her that to be a mother was one of the most wonderful things on earth, and that both she and Betty were already interested in just that thing. Then the mother told her that each day she would try to help her in the things that went to make her lovely motherhood.

Can any parent afford to miss these moments—moments when the soul of the child begins to be felt by itself; moments when some divine touch reaches the child and opens up the future pathway of life; moments that need the companionship of a true comrade?—Margaret Conn Rhoads.

"Hail ye small, sweet courtesies of life,
For sweet do ye make the road of it."—Sterne.

While Aunt Emmy-Lou and I were calling at Doria's, small Throck trotted in from school.

"Good afternoon, Aunt Emmy-Lou. Good afternoon, Mrs. Medill," he nodded, cap in hand.

"Mother, I think——"

"Don't speak to me, Throck. You greeted my guests, but never a little 'Good afternoon' for mother," Doria whined.

"But, mother, I——"

"Run along, Throck, I don't care to be bothered now. Can't you see I have company?" And in a most impressive way she waved an exit.

The child hung his head and got away as quickly as possible, his small face scarlet.

"I will command respect and courtesy from my son," Doria declared.

And then Aunt Emmy-Lou said, "Oh, Doria, I'm ashamed of you!"

"Ashamed of me? Why, Aunt Emmy-Lou, what do you mean?"

"Just this: Parents who expect courtesy from children must set examples of courtesy. Courtesy begets courtesy. And you were positively rude to Throck."

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys With the Editor

It seems my lot to be on the move more or less continuously, though the passing of years may increase the desire to stay under the home roof-tree and enjoy more frequently the comforts of the home hearth.

The closing month of last year saw me journeying to the west coast of the United States and back home in response to urgent calls and demands involving the interests of the church, whose servant I am.

It has not been my intention in writing these little messages to the readers of the HERALD to make it a diary of my activities, though the Saints seem to derive some pleasure from knowing where I go and something of what is done. Of the last journey to the West I have not thought to write much. It was onerous and trying, and I want to give pleasure rather than pain to the readers. Of course, even on that trip there was much of the pleasant, and meeting with the Saints and officers of San Francisco and Los Angeles is always pleasant.

The long journey to Los Angeles from Kansas City was filled by activity with my pencil and papers, as was the return trip, though it was broken up by short stops.

Just before Christmas I returned home, and the holidays were spent, outside of office routine, with loved ones in efforts to reduce to a minimum a loneliness not hitherto experienced at this season of the year. I have been thankful for "much to do."

The interests of the work seemed to indicate the wisdom of a trip east with Brother Carmichael, and it was on the night of January 6 that we left Kansas City together on a Rock Island train for Chicago. Too early for retiring, papers were taken out, and church problems were worked on till bedtime.

Next morning found us in the La Salle Street Station, Chicago, waiting for a Nickel Plate Railway train for Buffalo. In the interim, arrival and departure at 10.40 o'clock, breakfast and newspapers occupied our time. Once on the train, however, tables were secured, and we "tackled" our bulging portfolios. Being "shut in" on a running train, away from office buzzers, telephones, dictaphones, callers, etc., has the advantage that one has time to "think through" some of the problems awaiting solution, and Brother Carmichael and I were in frequent consultation and conferences as we worked, each at his own mail and writing. There is very much in common in the mail and desk duties of President and Presiding Bishop, and problems seem to work out more easily when easy and frequent consultation is possible.

I shall not try to tell of the journey from Chicago to Buffalo. It is one I have taken frequently, for most of my trips to the East have been over the Nickel Plate. Suffice it to say, we went to bed late in the night of the 7th, some time after leaving Cleveland, and awoke the next morning

"But——" Doria hesitated, "he was discourteous to me when he came into the room."

"Not intentionally so, my dear. He was so intent on telling you something, he simply forgot. While you were intentionally rude to him, humiliating him before us. He'll not soon forget it."

"Oh, Aunt Emmy-Lou," Dora answered after a moment's thought, "I do thank you."

And wouldn't it be well for us all to remember that if we wish our boys and girls to be courteous and considerate of others, we ourselves must set the example?—Helen Gregg Green.

to find ourselves somewhere in New York State (near Elmira) in the Lackawanna, the car having been transferred at Buffalo sometime in the early hours of the morning.

Breakfast over, work was resumed. We had intended both going to New York City, then probably to Philadelphia; but a change was made in our plans, and it was decided that at Strandsberg Brother Carmichael would leave the Lackawanna and entrain for Philadelphia to spend Sunday with the Saints there, while I went on to New York. It was at noon, the 8th, when Brother Carmichael left me. Lunch over, I went back to the table and my work and kept at it till just before reaching Hoboken.

Off there about 3.20, on the ferryboat, and I was soon at Twenty-third Street, New York. There I was met by Brother W. E. Nichols, and in his car taken to his home in Forest Hills, where I always find a warm welcome and am made to feel "at home."

Sunday, the 9th, at the church in Brooklyn in time for Sunday school, I was "pressed into service" for the day by Brother Hull, who, like some others I have met, likes to put "the chief" to work when he is around. I do not know how Brother Hull had announced himself for that day as pastor, but anyway he used me as the speaker for morning and evening; a case of proxy, I guess. And in discussing some of the problems (practical and theoretical) of Zion, I found a good response from most if not all of the Saints present. I enjoyed making the effort. Between services, lunch with the Nicholoses, a drive through parts of Long Island communities, and a rest at home filled in the time.

Having made arrangements by telephone, next day, about one in the afternoon, I left New York for Philadelphia and was met at the North Philadelphia Station by "Hoxie"; and the rest of the day was spent in his "den," talking personal and church problems connected with the Department of Music. After supper with the Zimmermanns, Brother Carmichael, who had spent Sunday with the Philadelphia Saints discussing and presenting church and Zion affairs, and I were taken by Brother Zimmerman, sr., to the church at Howard and Ontario Streets. It was business meeting night. Brother Stoff, the pastor, was for "deferring business" and having me occupy the time, but I insisted on the business being carried on, saying that when that was finished, if there were time left I would be pleased to speak. So I had the pleasure of seeing the Philadelphia Branch in action in business meeting. Things went smoothly, and in about an hour the pastor declared the business finished and announced me. So I spoke for perhaps three quarters of an hour. The remainder of the evening and all next day Brother Carmichael and I were in conference with various persons concerned with personal and church problems—Bishop Zimmermann, his son John, "Hoxie," Miss Copeland, Bishop Irwin, etc. On the morning of the 13th we were taken to the train by Bishop Zimmermann, and at 9.14 we left for New York, thence to Forest Hills. At 41 Ibis I found "W. E." and "Katherine" confined to the house, "nursing" "bad colds." (I have found all "colds" bad—never saw a good one.) But Billy, the son, took Brother Carmichael and me to Brooklyn, where, after getting Brother Hull, we looked over the church property, then took Brother Carmichael to the home of Lee Hartshorn, and I returned to Forest Hills.

Brother Carmichael and I had planned to leave New York the next day for Boston, to leave on the Fall River steamer. The next day brought rainy, heavy weather. The forenoon spent in writing and preparation, in the afternoon I drove to Brother Hartshorn's place and got Brother Carmichael, intending to return to Forest Hills and from there take train to the Pennsylvania Station, then the subway to Pier 14 where the steamer lay; but Howard Nichols, a brother of W. E., offered to take us down. So Brother Carmichael and I, in W. E.'s Hudson, trailed Howard in his Oakland back to Forest Hills, where we were there, bidding good-bye to the Nicholoses, got into the Hudson and under Howard's piloting went to New York. Having some time to spare, despite the rain we went to Morning Side Heights for a hasty view of the great Cathedral of Saint John the Divine, to note the progress being made in the building, up Riverside Drive to Grant's Tomb, then back down town and to Pier 14. The weather had thickened, and the city was shrouded in a mantle of fog.

Baggage in stateroom, just before leaving time I went forward to a favorite place just beneath the pilothouse to watch again the always interesting passing of the boat down North River into East River, through Hell Gate, into Long Island Sound. At the railing I found Brother Carmichael. Below us on the lower deck a few more had gathered to "see."

For a time the fog seemed to thicken; and when the big boat moved away from her dock and slowly out into the Hudson River, her deep-toned whistle sounding a long blast, other craft on the great stream were shut from view, except when only a few feet away. But we knew they were there; for whistles' steam and whistles' air, whistles deep and whistles high, whistles coarse and whistles fine were tooting their signals of warning and passing; bells big and bells little were clanging to tell the whereabouts of craft and wharf, while through the gray mantle would come the occasional but regular blasts of foghorns. It was growing dark, and through the heavy mist the lights of the great buildings, tall and short, of Manhattan glowed dull yellow.

Just over our heads the careful and care-weighted captain leaned out a window in the pilothouse to see and hear the better, giving occasional low-voiced orders to the helmsman, or issuing a louder-toned command to some sailor on watch on the deck below. To be on that big boat moving into the gray fog bank onto a water course thronged with craft large and small was a bit awesome, and the passengers were hushed; all but one, who persisted in whistling. "Stop that whistling!" bawled the captain. But the whistling continued until a sailor on watch below laid a hand on the shoulder of the whistler and roughly repeated, "Stop that whistling!" And why not? That captain's ears were strained for every sound, sounds which told of passing craft or stationary pier, or sunken ledge. Every squeak seemed to have a message, and a whistling human right then was more of a nuisance than a talking one. But that crowd of watchers was saying little—just a word or two now and then.

Before Battery Point was reached, the fog seemed to lift a bit, the shore line and buildings became visible, the lights of the tall buildings brightened, and before Brooklyn Bridge was reached the fog signals had ceased. We enjoyed the sights for a while, until the cold wind suggested the comfort of the cabin and saloon. So we went inside. But as we ate our dinner the boat stopped when just in the sound. The fog had shut down again, and the steamer's fog whistle was blowing regularly. Only for a short time, however; then onward we went. Just before retiring to our cabins, a look outside revealed a fog which shut out far-away lights but enabled nearby craft and short signals to be seen. And the steamer plowed steadily on its course to Fall River. Feeling quite sure that the captain and his crew did not need our help, Brother Carmichael and I retired to our rooms to read, then to turn out lights and seek Morpheus.

The boat had been at dock some time before I awoke; but dressing and going below, I found Brother Carmichael up and waiting for me. A light breakfast on the boat, and we were soon on board the boat special for Boston.

It is not a long run for a New York, New Haven & Hartford railway special to Boston from Fall River, and about half past eight we found ourselves at the South Terminal. We were met by Brother Traver, president of Boston Branch, and taken by him to his office in Somerville. Telegrams read and answered, we were soon in touch with Bishop Myron C. Fisher; and after leaving our baggage at the home of Brother Traver, we went to Boston. Following lunch we expected to go to Lexington, etc., to show Brother Carmichael some of the historic spots; but the weather man interfered with our plans. Rain freezing as it fell made driving more dangerous than usual, so we stayed in Boston instead and later went to Brother Traver's home, the four chatting on common problems and matters of common interest.

The home Brother Traver took us to is the one he recently secured in Arlington. The family was just moving in. But we found a delightful home and a characteristic welcome and were soon made to feel quite at home.

For several days I had been feeling the bad effects of a cold which I could not shake off. To use a common expression, I was "nursing a cold." Just why we say this, I do not see. We "nurse" something we want to save. What I was really doing was fighting that cold. I didn't want it; was trying to get rid of it. Isn't it strange how we take a cold when we have not the slightest desire to have it, and catch it even when trying to run away from it? By the time I reached Brother Traver's home that Saturday afternoon, I had determined to surrender to that cold to the extent of "staying in" till I was better. And so while Brother Carmichael next day met with and talked to the Saints morning, afternoon, and evening, I "laid up for repairs," repairs which took till Thursday to make. In that time I was out of the house on but two occasions. Tuesday noon Brother Traver took me to Rotarian lunch, and Wednesday night I had dinner with "Jim" and "Fern" Houghton and from there went to prayer meeting.

And most of the time I was alone, for on Sunday Sister Traver was called to Maine by the death of a niece, and did not return till Thursday night. So I "fought the cold," read, wrote, acted as cook and housekeeper, etc., helping "Bert" and "E. L." as best I could. I was helped by the stay in a comfortable home.

On Monday Brother Carmichael and I separated, he returning to Brooklyn for some meetings there before returning home.

Thursday Brother Traver and two of his business associates had occasion to visit Westfield, Massachusetts, and planned to drive. As they would pass through Worcester, I went that far and spent the day there, returning with Brother Traver and the others in the evening.

Before Brother Carmichael left, we had discussed plans, and it was thought wise that Brother M. C. Fisher and I should make a trip into Maine; so Brother M. C. and I planned to leave Boston Friday night. It looked for a time as though the plans would go awry, for M. C., too, "caught cold" and was laid up for two or three days. But Friday night Brother Traver took us to the North Station in time for the nine o'clock train. Our destination was Jonesport, via Columbia Falls. Of Jonesport visit more anon.

Leaving and Cleaving

"Some social problems seems to be as old as human history," said the Social Worker to the Psychiatrist as she sat in his office reporting on cases in which both were interested. "It would appear," continued the Social Worker, "that even back so far as the time of Adam some men had a tendency to remain tied to their mother's apron strings and neglect their wives. In Genesis and in the New Testament there is this admonition, 'Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh.' There must have been a need for the admonition, or it would not have been given."

"Yes," answered the Psychiatrist. "The mother complex is as old as the hills. It is found more often with sons than with daughters. It nearly always has for its foundation a broken family, where the love life of the mother is not satisfied in a normal way. She therefore focuses all her pent-up affections upon her son, tying him to her in such a way that he is rarely successfully able to break away and establish a normal home of his own.

"If mothers would only remember," continued the Psychiatrist, "that all of childhood is merely the preparation for adulthood, when the child should break away from his parents without any great mental disturbance and establish a new home! Mothers many times are loath to let go of their child. The son is torn between the old clinging love for his mother; who has satisfied his every need, and the new love which calls for a manly sacrifice of many of his personal desires, that he might bring happiness to another. One is a childish love, that asks much and gives little. The other is adult love, that gives much and asks little."

"An interesting case was reported to our office about a month ago," said the Social Worker. "I would appreciate your help in solving the problem, as it has as its basis the complex which we have been discussing."

"State your problem; I am always glad to be of service to your bureau," said the Psychiatrist.

"Mr. Ted Smith called at our office some time ago, asking for commitment papers for his wife. He was sure she was insane and wished to bring her case before the county court and have her sent to the hospital for the insane. Of course we never are a party to the commitment of any person to an institution without first making a thorough investigation of the case. Mr. Smith based his opinion of the insanity of his wife upon the fact of her behavior toward their little three-year-old son. His life seemed to be in danger, as Mrs. Smith would beat him until his little body was black and blue. She professed to love the child and yet would indulge in fits of rage which were given an outlet by severely punishing the child.

"We persuaded Mr. Smith to defer any action in the matter until we could investigate the causes back of the behavior of Mrs. Smith," continued the Social Worker. "Mrs. Smith was given a thorough physical examination. The physician stated that she was extremely nervous, being somewhat neurotic. She was suffering from hyperthyroidism, and needed rest and quiet, especially freedom from worry. The thyroid gland would probably function normally and the patient cease to be so nervous if the unfavorable environment could be corrected.

"The next step in our investigation was to get at the source of worry. This uncovered some interesting data. Mr. Smith was an only child. His father died when he was a baby, and his mother focused all of her pent-up emotion of love on her child. When he got through school and went to work, he turned over all of his wages to his mother, who kept house for him, and she in turn gave him what she thought he would need for expenses. His mother treated him as though he were a child. She waited upon him, and continued to bathe him long after the usual boy would have learned to wait upon himself. When he fell in love with the girl whom he later married and told his mother of his intention to marry, his mother broke down and cried. She accused him of not loving her and reminded him of the sacrifices she had made for him. The matter was compromised by Mr. Smith agreeing that his mother should have a home with him as long as she should live, and that he would not allow any other love to come between him and his devotion to his mother. Mr. Smith talked the matter over with his prospective bride, and she agreed to share their new home with his mother.

"The new home was established. The bride was inexperienced in home making, and the mother would talk with her son, calling attention to the mistakes made by his wife and what she called her wastefulness. Mr. Smith would then talk to his wife, saying, 'Mother tells me that you baked bread, but it was so bad that you had to throw it away. Mother suggests that it would be cheaper to buy bread than for you to try to bake it.'

"Within a year after the wedding the baby boy was born. The mother again interfered, and everything that Mrs. Smith did for the baby . . . was wrong. Though she followed the doctor's orders in feeding the baby, the mother insisted that she was starving him. When Mr. Smith came home of an evening, he would say to his mother, 'Well, what is the news?' Later mother and son would go out in the garden and talk together. Mrs. Smith felt that she was being spied upon and that the mother was reporting to her son everything she had observed throughout the day. Mrs. Smith told me she did not complain about his mother, as she had promised before their marriage that his mother could live with them as long as she lived. However, she built up a strong feeling of resentment against her husband and his mother. The baby took a great deal of her time, and the mother took over household tasks which pertained to the comfort of Mr. Smith, such as the darning and mending of his garments. Waiting upon him in the home with the air of, "This is what you get for being married; just look how you are neglected! See these buttons off your shirt and these holes in your socks!"

"It was about this time that Mrs. Smith developed the outbreaks of temper. She cannot explain why she would beat the baby, but said that she felt that she must beat some one. Sometimes the mother would interfere, and when this happened Mrs. Smith said she would feel as though she were losing her mind, she would become so intense in her rage. These spells of rage would be followed by periods of despondency, where she was filled with regrets because of hurting her baby. It was at this period of the development of the case that Mr. Smith came to us asking for commitment papers, to place her in an asylum.

"I had a long talk with Mr. Smith, trying to persuade him to arrange for his mother to make her home somewhere else, but he would not hear to this arrangement. We finally persuaded him to allow us to talk with the mother and persuade her to accept a position with a family who needed an older woman in their home. The work would be light and she would be one of the family. He consented to this arrangement only if we would not in any way give his mother the idea that she was not welcome in his home. The mother tearfully consented to leave her son's home as suggested. She moved about a month ago, and already we can see a decided improvement in the physical and mental condition of Mrs. Smith. She is less nervous and so far has not had another outbreak of temper. The baby does not dodge now when he happens to pass near his mother, and it is a beautiful sight to see Mrs. Smith holding her baby in her arms and singing a lullaby to him with the love light in her eyes. It is going to be an uphill pull for her, but we feel very optimistic.

"We are going to need your help with Mr. Smith. He goes to see his mother at least three times a week and wants to spend Sunday afternoon with her. He is not weaned from his mother and comes under those who need the admonition given in the Bible, 'Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh.' He will need your assistance in the 'leaving' and 'cleaving' process."

"Yes," answered the Psychiatrist, "Mr. Smith needs to be reeducated. It will take some time, but I shall be glad to help him to make his adjustment. We will see if we can stimulate the man to put away childish things and to become an adult. I would like to see Mrs. Smith, too; it may be that I can help her."

As the Social Worker arose to leave, the Psychiatrist reached out his hand in a friendly way: "It is a wonderful work that we are engaged in," he said. "You have robbed a state institution of one of its prospective boarders, but you have saved a home."

Two years have gone by since Mr. and Mrs. Smith were first taken to visit the Psychiatrist. The Social Worker has received his report that the case is dismissed as cured. She has visited the Smith home and noted the growing bond of love that exists between husband and wife. The son is now in kindergarten and comes home from school full of new experiences that he can hardly wait to tell daddy. Mr. Smith's mother is almost contented. She still thinks of her son as being her baby boy, but is becoming reconciled to being away from him. Her son visits her often and remembers her birthday, but is firm in his attitude that it is best that she shall not live with them. He is willing to provide for her when she becomes too old to care for herself, but for the present she expects to stay in the home where she now is.

News From the Departments

To date two hundred and two of the questionnaires sent out to local Sunday schools under date of November 22 have been returned. There may be various reasons why the other six hundred have not come back, but this gives us a fair indication of some conditions throughout our schools. Replies indicate that in about one school in five, regular weekly or monthly officer and teacher meetings are held. Often it is difficult to secure a convenient time for meeting, or to inspire our leaders and teachers to try to cooperate in bringing up the efficiency of the school to the extent that they will support a regular meeting.

As a means of helping each local superintendent to secure and hold the interest of his workers in a series of monthly discussions which should be constructive in nature and helpful in the solution of local problems, we began to publish on October 27, 1926, and appearing the last week of each month in the SAINTS' HERALD, special outlines based on the text, How to Teach Religion, by Betts. Already one out of ten of the schools of the church report using them with very gratifying results.

In one out of eight schools there is a regular teachers' training class in progress at some convenient time in the week. The Sunday school hour is most popular, but various other hours are used, as well as week-day evenings. Many progressive schools are able to maintain both a teacher training class and a regular officers' and teachers' meeting.

Of the schools replying, about one in three report one or more teachers with some specific training for their job.

Almost universally schools report the members of the priesthood as active in the work of the school; especially is there good cooperation on the part of the officers of the branch.

One school in four reports a close cooperation of the Sunday school with the other departments and the branch in the larger religious educational program of the church. This is usually brought about by participation of the local Sunday school superintendent with the heads of other departments and the branch president in a council meeting as often as necessary to organize and conduct a program of activities throughout the year. In this way the needs of all ages are considered, the available workers are distributed to the best advantage, new leaders are encouraged in their preparation, conflicts of dates and varied interests are avoided, and all established activities tend to be adequately supported.

A strong desire is expressed in almost every report for additional song material for primaries, juniors, and young people. This has long been felt as an imperative need, and immediate steps are being taken to have it supplied at an early date.

Many excellent suggestions are given for the improvement of our present quarterlies and for the preparation of new series. The new adult courses in Sunday school and Religion are generally highly commended.

A cablegram from Sister Blanche Edwards, dated Birmingham, England, January 20, informs us that she plans to sail for the States on February 12 on board the Celtic. This is good news to her host of friends here who have looked forward to her return. Sister Edwards has continued to serve as general superintendent of the Department of Women while on a leave of absence for one year, with her parents. She has been doing intensive work for the departments throughout the British Mission.

An important meeting of the heads of departments, with President McDowell of the Presidency and F. Henry Edwards, of the Twelve, was held in Lamoni on February 4 and 5. Plans were made for a series of vital leadership courses in various phases of religious education to be given in two class hours early in the forenoon of each week-day during General Conference, beginning April 7. The central theme is to be home and home building as the basic unit of our Zionie effort.

Plans were also made with the Graceland authorities for a combined Commencement-Home-Coming-Convention-Institute, occupying the days from June 1 to 12. Specific announcement will appear of each of these functions. The Institute of Methods in Religious Education will open for enrollment on Saturday, June 4, and continue over Sunday, June 12. The institute will be a thoroughly practical school of methods and demonstration. A group of trained and experienced leaders has been secured, headed by President McDowell, and Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, dean of the School of Religious Education of the University of Chicago. We have been assured of the attendance of officers, teachers, and leaders of departmental work from practically every district of the church in America. Watch for detailed announcement, and begin to make plans to attend.

Recognizing the unity of our task as departments of the church having but one objective and a single program, there has developed in The Departments a feeling of close inter-relationship, a defining of specific fields in the one big program, and a spirit of hearty cooperation with each other and with the general church in the achievements of the tasks necessary to Zion's redemption. What has been true of the general departments under the leadership of President McDowell of the Presidency, should hold in every stake, district, and branch of the church. Unity of effort through clearness of vision, a broadening of our understanding, a deepening of our sympathies, an extension of our appreciations, and a quickening of our spiritual powers should hasten the day of the promised endowment.

Port Huron, Michigan

With one month of the new year past, we find ourselves very busy in planning for the big events of February. The local priesthood, assisted by the Department of Women, are busy on the Every Member Canvass. Over a hundred names have been submitted to the majors of the two teams, and they have selected their workers and are at work on the drive.

This canvass is being made for the purpose of finding the many members of the church that become careless and indifferent and have not been attending church regularly. This is a forerunner to the campaign being fostered by the local church at which Apostle E. J. Gleazer will be the speaker for two weeks. The church has been redecorated, and everything is ready for the meetings to open the 13th and continue till the 27th.

Recent visitors to Port Huron have been very few. The last of the year we had a one-day visit from Elder E. J. Gleazer en route from Toronto to Bay City, Michigan. His sermon on Monday evening, December 13, was well received and enjoyed by the local membership. Last Friday Elder O. J. Hawn spoke at the Varney Avenue Church, stopping off over night en route to Crosswell for a series of meetings.

The sacramental meeting of January will be long remembered by the many who attended. Ten branches were represented at the meeting, it being an international gathering, as many of the Canadian Saints were present. Four brothers were ordained. A. E. Ledsworth, a priest; William Phetteplace, Fred Brecken, and George Rockwood, from the Harbor Beach Branch, were ordained deacons.

Elder William Grice, former president of the Eastern Michigan District, was present and offered the opening remarks. Three of the four members of the district presidency were present and took part in the service. A comment from a nonmember was, "I never felt such a calm and peaceful influence in my life as I did at that meeting, and I hope to enjoy more of such experiences." All enjoyed the meeting and are looking forward to more of the same kind.

The annual meeting of the Department of Women revealed some interesting figures. From a financial standpoint, the year 1926 was perhaps the most successful of any recent years. The receipts for all divisions and groups show a total of close to $1,225. This was turned in by the Temple Builders and the groups from the Varney Avenue Church and the Harker and Lynnwood Avenue missions.

From an educational standpoint, perhaps as much progress was noted. Two study classes under the leadership of Mrs. R. Brown and Mrs. Jacob Volz both reported considerable done in their lines. Perhaps a little on Mrs. Volz's class would not be out of order. This is a class of young women, the majority not in the church, who are interested in our study work. Last night, February 3, they asked permission to hold a bean supper in the church, the proceeds to go to the local church work. A big crowd was handled by them, and considerable credit is due them for their success, as the non-members did their share of the work and did it very graciously.

On the night of the 18th of January, Troop 10 of the Boy Scouts was reorganized at the church. This troop was transferred from the Mueller Brass Company last year but did not thrive much during the remaining part of the season. At the organization meeting, sixteen boys of scout age were present and signified their willingness to attend and become members of the troop. Tuesday evening is set aside for this work; and under the leadership of James Greens, scoutmaster, and Leslie Whenham and Mr. B. C. Bassett, assistants, with a good troop committee, it looks like a real "go" this time.

We are sorry to chronicle the passing of Sister Ida Nagle. Sister Nagle was an ardent worker at the Mortonville Mission and did all she could for the good of the church. She is greatly missed in her little group. Elder F. W. Cadow preached the sermon on January 5.

Aside from considerable sickness among us, all show a regular attendance at the various meetings. The missions are ably presided over by Elder F. W. Bailey at the Harker Street Church, and Elder Tennyson Summers at Mortonville. As a whole, progress can be reported in our work since our last writing.

Delegates to the General Conference will be chosen at the one-day conference at Applegate on the 13th, the results of which we will tell you next time.

Stockton, California

The first sacramental service of the year was well attended, and a peaceful and quiet spirit was present.

On the 9th of January the infant son of Delbert and Sister Evelyn Delarm was blessed under the hands of Brother Brokaw; Dan Earl was the name given.

Our missionary, Elder Guy P. Levitt, was with us January 11 and 12, and gave us two excellent sermons on stewardship. Everyone was made to feel as never before his duty to file an inventory. Nearly all responded, and this included many who had not before done so.

On Sunday, January 16, Brother W. H. Dawson and wife, of Sacramento, also District Bishop Ingham, of Oakland, paid our branch a visit. Brother Ingham spoke at the morning hour, after which a basket lunch was served in the basement. At the urgent request of all, Brother Dawson spoke in the afternoon. From such visits and sermons as these the members are surely benefited.

The departments are moving along nicely. The Sunday school has a class of eleven enrolled in the Graceland teachers' training course. They meet at different homes on Tuesday evenings. All are interested and determined to do their utmost.

Brother and Sister Caryl Holden are again with us, after an absence of several months. Brother Briggs is making his business headquarters here. We do indeed welcome them. All are good workers.

The Department of Women held a food sale at a down-town store on Saturday, January 29. Over thirteen dollars were cleared. It will be turned over toward branch expenses.

A peaceful spirit prevailed throughout the branch.

Scranton, Pennsylvania

February 1.—With the old year gone and the new year well under way, the work of Scranton Branch is found to be on the upward move in all departments. The spirit which now prevails among us is expressed in a desire to be earnest workers for the Master.

At our business meeting held in December, Elder Richard J. Hawkins was again elected president of the branch. This starts the sixth year for our brother to hold this office, beside caring for the little flock in Archbald, Pennsylvania. Our Sunday school superintendent is Brother David James. For some time our brother has been very sick, and while many of us thought he should have been resting in bed he was at his post of duty.

Brother Alfred Jones, recently come to Scranton from Wales, has made quite a hit with the young boys of the Sunday school. The loss of the branch he left in Wales is our gain, for we feel sure that a good, spiritual man has joined our numbers, and we hope the time is near when his family may also be welcomed to our branch and city.

The choir, with Albert Lewis as leader, is preparing some special music for the coming conference to convene in Scranton March 19 and 20. We hope a large number of visitors will be present.

The Department of Women, with Sister Nellie Davies as superintendent, also Temple Builder leader, and Sister Florence Litts, Oriole monitor, meets Monday evening at the church. A goodly number attend. As superintendent of this department, I think if Sister Lentell could only see us now, the tears of sadness she shed over us because of our slothfulness when we were younger would now be tears of joy to know that the seed she sowed has brought forth some good fruit.

Brother George W. Robley held a series of meetings here last week. Those who had the privilege of hearing our brother were strengthened and encouraged to press onward. So, though conditions with some of the Saints of Scranton are not as pleasant as they might be, because of the mines working only a few days a week since Christmas, we desire not to be discouraged, but to press onward and upward.

SISTER NELLIE DAVIES.

Wagner, South Dakota

Departmental election was held in this branch December 26, 1926. With the dispensing of class work on Sunday morning, December 26, with the exception of the teachers' report, the annual election of officers was held with the following results: superintendent, John T. Coffman; secretary, Ida Caldwell; treasurer, Mrs. W. L. Coffman; chorister, Vivian Caldwell; organist, Mrs. W. L. Coffman; adult teacher, Amos Lamson; junior teacher, Mrs. W. L. Coffman; primary teacher, Mrs. Electa M. Hare; with the vote of the body, the new superintendent was given full authority to choose his assistant, and Charles W. Hare was selected.

The writer wishes to thank the branch in behalf of the outgoing officers for the hearty cooperation tendered them in the past two years. With renewed energy all are looking forward to a better and more prosperous year. May the Lord bless and guide the new officers in all their efforts in the betterment of the cause.

At the evening hour the Department of Recreation and Expression likewise elected its officers: President, John T. Coffman; assistant, Charles W. Hare; secretary, Electa M. Hare; treasurer, Amos Lamson; teacher, Mrs. W. L. Coffman; chorister, Edna B. Lamson; and organist, Mrs. W. L. Coffman.

A branch Sunday school of the Wagner Branch, which has been holding its meetings in a country church five miles south and one and one half miles west of Avon, known as the Wagner Church, held its election of officers and chose: Superintendent, Rosa Sells; assistant, Brother Brieturbock; secretary, Julia Sells; treasurer, Mrs. Ross Crosby; organist, Julia Sells; senior teacher work, temporarily in charge of the superintendent; intermediate teacher, Mrs. Ross Crosby; and primary teacher, Julia Sells. This is a thriving little school, and the work is being carried on without a shepherd to watch over them, save it be the Lord with his divine direction. It is prospering nicely. They are privileged to hear a sermon only when some member of the priesthood of Wagner Branch goes there to minister to their needs.

Wagner Branch held its session of quarterly business meeting December 30 in charge of Pastor Amos Lamson. Officers selected were: Presiding elder, Amos Lamson; priest, Charles W. Hare; teacher, August Tolberg; deacon, John Coffman; secretary, Mrs. W. L. Coffman; and organist, Mrs. W. L. Coffman.

The Department of Women also elected its officers: Superintendent, Mrs. W. L. Coffman; assistant, Winifred Tolberg; secretary and treasurer, Pearl Amundson.

Brother August Tolberg, who has been in Detroit, Michigan, the past year, returned to be with his family during the holiday week. He brought us excerpts from President Frederick M. Smith's talk in Detroit, and these were inspiring morsels of spiritual food.

May the Lord bless all of his servants in their labors and efforts in every part of the earth. CHARLES W. HARE.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

There are many cases of sickness and affliction here at the present time, but the heavenly Father has recognized the ordinance of healing and the power and authority of his servants as in days of old.

The branch is divided into four groups for the convenience of visitation and looking after the interests of the membership. Each group has an elder, priests, teachers, and deacons associated. Some reports since the first of the year are very encouraging.

Some who seem to take delight in creating doubts in the church have been leaving and sending literature, which makes various attacks on the prophet through whom God restored the authority to minister for him, and who was to build up and establish the church, and upon the organization and doctrines of the church, with some personal attacks on present officials of the church. But with these efforts some of the disturbed ones are returning to their first love, and we rejoice at their return, and hope for others to be reconciled to God and his work represented by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. All the attacks can be satisfactorily answered to every honest soul, and if sufficiently humble and prayerful each may receive from the Lord the answer he needs.

Missionary efforts have been conducted by Elder W. I. Fligg since January 16, and are still being continued in the branch. Two weeks were spent at Central Church, and these meetings are being continued with some interest at the Riverside Mission. His sermons are sermons of faith, and the Saints have been edified and sinners have felt the enlightening influence of the word and have been drawn nearer to God.

The Department of Women of the branch had its annual social and business meeting last week, with sixty-two present, their report showing much work of a beneficial nature done last year. The Temple Builders, Oriole Girls, and Bluebirds are represented in this department.

Ministerial conference of the Little Sioux, Gallands Grove, Pottawattamie, and Fremont Districts in Iowa, and the Southern and Northeastern Districts in Nebraska, was held at Council Bluffs, January 29 and 30, conducted by Bishop A. Carmichael and Apostle J. F. Garver. It resulted in much good to the ministry. Seven sessions were held. Twenty-five were present at the ten o'clock session on Saturday, and this number was increased till the Sunday service at 2.30 p. m. when one hundred and twenty-one were present, some not of the priesthood, but the majority of them represented the priesthood of the above-mentioned districts.

A vote was favorable to the organization of quorums of the different grades of the lesser priesthood in the districts represented. The history of the present understanding of the law of temporalities was given; and clear, definite instruction of the stewardship plan as outlined by the Lord, and as now taught by the church was presented to the satisfaction of those present.

The church began to pay tithing at Kirtland, and although many if not most of those who had thus tithed themselves had lost part if not all, they had tithes during the troubles in Missouri. When the Saints were at Far West, Missouri, they wished to know what the Lord then required of them, as a people, and were answered, to pay all their surplus and continue to pay their tithing, the answer of the Lord being section 106 of the Doctrine and Covenants. Some differences occurred in the Reorganization as to this section and some other instruction that had been given, and inquiry was made, and April 18, 1902, the Lord gave definite information as found in Doctrine and Covenants, 126:10. This gave conclusive instruction that the interpretation of the temporal law as rendered by Bishop E. L. Kelley was to be acceded to, and all the bishops since have so taught and are now teaching.

An effort is being made to get the Autumn Leaves into every home where there are young people, and the HERALD into every home. These periodicals are being enjoyed by those who are taking them.

Omaha, Nebraska

February 6.—Our church was filled to capacity for sacramental service held January 2. There was a good spirit prevailing. We were thankful to renew our covenant and pledge our service for another year.

Superintendent of Sunday school, Mrs. Rose Adams, recently introduced us to a new member of the Sunday school, who will be with us for at least a year. Her name is "Ima Booster," and her February program will be "Loyalty." The school is functioning in all departments, carrying classes in all courses offered by the general department and meeting regularly for teachers' and officers' meeting. Last meeting, January 6, at the home of Mrs. W. E. Stoft, all teachers and officers were present except three. We planned our work for the coming year and heard our pastor, Brother J. L. Cooper, speak to us very definitely on leadership, to be demonstrated not only in the Sunday school but in social services as well. This talk was timely and appreciated. For the past two years these meetings have been preceded by a dinner. The order is changed now. Fasting and prayer will take precedence.

Nell Kelley sang for us. We have a short program each Sunday following the lesson study.

January 16 Mae Wellman put on a splendid review of the intermediate girls' work, touching on the week of passion and resurrection, with Alma Dingle at the blackboard. These girls are getting a liberal foundation from their consecrated teachers, Mrs. W. T. Wellman and Mrs. A. E. Larsen.

January 30. A voluntary number offered by Mrs. W. E. Stoft and small son, Junior, portrayed the undying love, that of a mother for her son.

January 16. Our pastor occupied the pulpit in the morning, giving us two views of a Latter Day Saint, the true, and the nominal only. He brought out quite clearly that by the law of compensation the children of the latter will not be saved to the church.

That evening Brother C. T. Self, our historian, explained to us the value of defending our church, when necessary, with historical court proceedings, and cited the Kirtland Temple case in Illinois, the case in the Canadian court as to whether we were a Christian church, and the Temple Lot Suit, held in Federal Court, Kansas City, all three of which were decided in our favor.

January 23. By action of our pastor, the day was granted to the Department of Women for a rally day. By previous arrangement, Mrs. Richard Baldwin talked on dramatization and recreation at eleven o'clock. Her topic in the afternoon was, "The Beautitudes of a Women's Department," which left with us some beautiful thoughts and many practical suggestions. She had a full, active day, which ended with her presenting thoughts from Brother F. M. McDowell's booklet, Can We Do as We Please, to the young people at six in the evening.

The ending to this perfect day was listening to our venerable brother, Elder James Huff, who will be eighty-two years of age next March 20. He spoke on "The signs of the times" and inspired us by his conviction.

January 27. The women held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Grant Rydberg, 2420 Fontanelle Boulevard at half past two in the afternoon. The regular order of business was carried out. An interesting book review by Mrs. R. W. Scott and piano solo by Ruth Rydberg comprised the program, in charge of Rose Adams.

January 30. Visited by Elder J. F. Rudd, of New York, who was pastor here thirty-five years ago, preceding Brother F. A. Smith in that capacity. Brother R. W. Scott spoke to us in the morning and Brother Rudd in the evening.

We have had special solo work this month by Harry Greenway, Anna Hicks, R. W. Scott, Lois Francis, and Ann Self. There may be others, as notes for January 9 were lost. We are holding two cottage prayer meetings a month now, which are the means of reaching some not able to come to the church.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Bingham moved here recently from Kansas City, Missouri, and are staying at the Henshaw Hotel.

The condition of Mrs. Paul S. Fleming, 5405 Florence Boulevard, who underwent a major operation at the Methodist Hospital February 1, is satisfactory. We have united our prayers for her restoration to her family.

Francis Kinney, our fifteen-year-old brother who is quarantined for scarlet fever, finds the quarantine much harder on him than the disease, as he has completely recovered from the effects of the latter but the former still hangs on.

January 5. Mr. R. J. Bishop and wife, of 3401 North Forty-second Street, have united with us. Brother Bishop's attention was called to this work by the gift of healing, of which he was the recipient under the hands of our elders some six weeks ago.

Denver, Colorado

The new pipe organ is installed and seems to be satisfactory. The next thing will be to enlarge the auditorium to give it expression. We need the room, as we can not accommodate the Sunday school as it should be. The classes are crowded so close together that they interfere with one another in study. The Sunday school enrollment is about one hundred thirty-five, which is quite an increase. The Christmas offering of the school was two hundred sixty-two dollars and eighty cents. We did not quite reach our goal.

February 6 the church was crowded to attend the sacramental service, and a splendid meeting was had.

There is a great number of cases of scarlet fever in the city, but so far most of the Saints have escaped. Sister McCormack's children had it but in a mild form.

Eight were baptized in the font two weeks ago.

Our pastor has been assisted in the preaching recently by Elders J. F. Rudd, E. A. Davis, and Bruce E. Brown.

District conference is to meet February 26 and 27.

How rarely reason guides the stubborn choice,
Rules the bold hand, or prompts the suppliant voice.
How nations sink, by daring schemes oppressed,
When vengeance listens to the fool's request.

—Samuel Johnson.

Independence

Stone Church

An encouraging number of young people assembled at the hour of half past eight for a service of testimony, song, and prayer. The Spirit was present with its peaceful influence of comfort, and the expressed desire of all seemed to be to prepare for service in God's vineyard. Brothers D. O. Cato and Albert McCullough were in the stand.

After a busy Sunday school hour in which eleven hundred and sixty-three persons took part in the study session, a young brother, Frank White, very ably executed a difficult violin solo, being accompanied by the pianist of the school, Mrs. Stewart Tandberg. At this meeting one hundred and forty-four visitors were present, and eleven classes were perfect.

At eleven o'clock Brother Granville S. Trowbridge addressed the junior church in the lower auditorium.

In the main auditorium the Sunday morning congregation was not as large as usual, due to the steady drizzle of a February rain. The meeting was opened with congregational singing, and Elder Wilbur B. Paul led in prayer. Brother Robert Miller contributed a pleasing offertory, one of Schubert's beautiful compositions, and the choir rendered the anthem, "Glory to God."

Titus 2:14: "Jesus Christ who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works," was the scripture upon which President Elbert A. Smith based his morning discourse. He explained how the world is prone to think of the peculiarity of God's people from a superficial standpoint, that of dress, speech, and conduct; and oftentimes we ourselves lose sight of the fundamental ideals of the gospel as being peculiar or outstanding in the belief of the world. Christ gave himself that he might purify unto himself a peculiar people, but we must not forget that this peculiar people will also be zealous in good works. As a church we are peculiar; our origin was peculiar; we are peculiar in our belief of present-day revelation, that our canon of scripture is not closed. We think of God as the great I Am and as a Father. We also have been taught and believe in the brotherhood of man. "Let every man esteem his brother as himself: for what man among you having twelve sons, and is no respecter to them, and they serve him obediently, and he saith unto one, Be thou clothed in robes and sit thou here; and to the other, Be thou clothed in rags and sit thou there, and looketh upon his sons and saith, I am just."—Doctrine and Covenants 38:5. The speaker gave quotations from sections 70 and 101 along this line; also Jacob 2 of the Book of Mormon; and from these the church is taught that unless we are equal in temporal things we can not be equal in spiritual things. If we are a converted people, we will be engaged in the lifting up of the world; we will be working in God's great orchard, that fruit may bloom and bear. Then Brother Smith clearly and beautifully showed how all are stewards; everything is God's by right of Creation; there is enough and more for all; and poverty is the child of faulty distribution of wealth. The only way to straighten out the economic, social, and religious tangle of the day is for each Saint to realize his stewardship and consecrate his life's effort to the unselfish interests of the brotherhood of man, that Zion may be builded, and Christ, called by Isaiah, Wonderful, Counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace, will be with us to direct our good works.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At half past eight the Bible study hour was conducted by K L D S Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell. Music for this service was a junior chorus under the direction of Mrs. Bertha Burgess. Estella Wight told the children's story.

The eleven o'clock service was broadcast from the Auditorium.

At the hour of the K L D S Radio Church, the service was under the auspices of the Lincoln and Lee University. Music for this hour was furnished by the courtesy of the Horner Institute of Kansas City. Musicians included Mrs. Laura Townsley McCoy, soprano; Kenneth Jarman, baritone; Mary Endicott Drane, violinist; Gayle Giles, accompanist. There was a sermonet by Reverend Roy O. Chaney, of Ivanhoe Christian Church. Following the service there was a short talk on the outcome of the Lincoln and Lee campaign to date.

Music for the vesper hour was furnished by a ladies' quartet composed of Ada Fallon, Alberta Lanpher, Mrs. Earl J. Cox, and Margaret Gard; a male quartet composed of Glauđ Smith, Earl J. Cox, Fred Horn, and Kenneth Morford; Earl J. Cox, cornetist. Sermonet, Evangelist U. W. Greene.

The Walnut Park Orchestra, under the direction of Orlando Nace, presented the musical program for the 9.15 Latter Day Saint studio service. There were also special numbers by a male quartet composed of Douglas Byrne, Erwin Moorman, Milford Nace, and Orlando Nace; a piano solo, Miss Delta Nace; guitar solo, Mr. Clarence Knight. Sermonet, Patriarch Ammon White.

Evening Services

A week ago last Sunday evening, the resignation of Brother Ronald Carmichael as president of the Department of Recreation and Expression in Zion was presented to and accepted by the Religio body of the Stone Church. To fill this vacancy, the First Presidency submitted the nomination of Brother Francis Holm, president of the Stone Church Religio. The nomination was approved, and on Sunday evening Brother Holm's resignation as president was accepted by the Religio. It was then necessary for the Stone Church Religio to select a new leader. Brother Frank Hershey was the choice of the people.

The program for this evening was one of unusual interest, several musical numbers being rendered by the K L D S Mandolin and Guitar Club under the direction of Brother Ralph G. Smith.

At half past seven a song service directed by Brother John F. Sheehy began. "Praise ye the Lord," "America," and "Onward, Christian soldiers" were some of the songs sung. This was family night, and despite the fog a large crowd was out to hear and see. Young and old heartily took part in the singing of "Precious name," Brothers Robert Miller and Paul N. Craig accompanying on the organ and piano respectively. The young people's chorus occupied the center section of the choir loft. Brother Francis Holm offered the invocation, and Elder Sheehy was announced as the speaker.

At the beginning of his discourse, Brother Sheehy "assigned outside reading," Acts 26. He emphasized the need of all for a spiritual experience as the beginning of their spiritual life. On his way to Damascus, Paul had his first spiritual experience, one of a very convincing nature. Latter-day ministers of the gospel have had their experiences, and the speaker related his first missionary experience, when the voice of the Lord spoke in direction to him. He bade the young people keep in mind the statement of Peter that God is no respecter of persons, and to seek and knock at the portals of heaven until this experience comes.

At the close of this short sermon, the lights were extinguished, and songs sung from words flashed on the screen were "Faith of our fathers," and "Brighten the corner." Then the moving pictures, "Sea of Galilee," scenes of Christ's early ministry, were enjoyed. Around the shores and on these waters, Christ taught and performed many of his miracles. Many familiar names came to mean real places in this reel—Capernaum, Bethsaida, the Jordan; the cliff down which the swine ran, driven by the legion of devils; the Mount of the Beautitudes, and Tiberias by the Sea.

In the Departments

The Patroness Society of the Independence Sanitarium met in regular monthly meeting, the fourth Friday, January 28, at the home of Sister E. L. Kelley for the election of officers. Mrs. E. L. Kelley was reelected president, an office she has held since the organization of the society in November, 1913; Mrs. H. L. Loosemore was selected to act as vice president; Mrs. F. O. Thomason, secretary; and Mrs. Joseph Arber, treasurer. This band of sisters is modest and unassuming, but the members are workers. During the year 1926, they took in over two hundred pieces of work for the Sanitarium; of these, eighty-one were handwork, made by the busy fingers of those consecrated to this cause. The Patronesses hope to do much good this year and will appreciate all assistance given them.

For three weeks the Stone Church Choir, its numbers swelled by members of the other choirs of Zion, has been practicing on Mendelssohn's "Elijah," under the direction of Brother Paul N. Craig. This effort will be presented at General Conference. Sunday, February 13, was the last day for the enrollment of new members of the choir until after conference. The choir now numbers two hundred and twenty-five voices. Robert Miller will be organist; and George Miller and Florence Koehler Campbell, pianists.

A large number of guests were present at the Washington-Lincoln celebration and valentine party given at the Campus by the faculty and students of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, Friday evening, February 11. In the early part of the evening a program was presented in the assembly room. The main features of this program were a minuet in quaint old-time costumes, a scene in a slave market, and a scene of the jollification of the slaves at the emancipation. Following the program the guests assembled downstairs, where games were played under the leadership of Brother John Sheehy. Refreshments of cake and punch were served. One of the most interesting events of the evening was a costume drill of the kindergarten children. They marched like real soldiers, and the tiny Uncle Sam evoked comment and praise. These small folk also sold valentines during the evening.

Interesting Personals

President Frederick M. Smith returned from Philadelphia Monday morning. President Elbert A. Smith left Tuesday with Los Angeles as his destination. The remaining member of the Presidency, Floyd M. McDowell, arrived home Monday from a week-end stay with the Wichita Saints.

Bishop Albert Carmichael is in California, but his two counselors are at their homes in Independence. Of the Quorum of Twelve those who have changed their places of work since last week are J. F. Curtis, who is in Port Elgin, Ontario; John F. Garver, who made a flying trip to Independence the first of this week; E. J. Gleazer, now holding meetings in Port Huron, Michigan.

Second Church

The change of Religio to Sunday evening at 6.15 is proving to be quite popular, and the attendance is increasing materially. President Levi Rawlings is again at work; a program of thirty minutes is provided; and the session closes at twenty-five minutes past seven o'clock, just in time for the opening of the church song service at half past seven.

Numbering around fifty continue to meet at eight o'clock Sunday mornings in prayer meeting. This is a good time for prayer meeting, and a good place for the young to be found. Progress is being made.

Elder A. K. Dillee's class of young people in the Sunday school is crowding the choir recess, and since more detailed organization, is showing new life and activity. The new class, composed of members of the priesthood, had about a dozen members Sunday morning. The attendance of the entire school numbered two hundred and sixty-six.

Elder Richard Bullard was the speaker at eleven o'clock service to an attentive congregation. He gave reasons for encouragement and faith, and a splendid exhortation to loyalty to Christ and the church, bringing a beautiful but unostentatious spirit to the people.

The afternoon was occupied by prayer meeting at two o'clock; meeting of the Second Quorum of Deacons at the same hour; and the stewardship class of members of the priesthood under the leadership of Brother Dillee, at half past three.

Immediately following the Religio session congregational singing began, interspersed by a number from the K L D S Ladies' Quartet, and an anthem by the choir under the leadership of Sister Clara Curtis. Elder Fred J. Lewis was the speaker, delivering an encouraging message on the theme of continued and individual revelation, which held the interest to the close. Brother Lewis is to speak upon the care and preservation of health Friday evening at eight o'clock, and has invited all to be present to hear him.

Last night Group 16 ladies held a valentine social in the basement of the church, serving refreshments and giving continuous entertainment. We have not heard the amount of money raised, but the sum is to be used for local church expense.

Walnut Park

Brother J. F. Sheehy's morning sermon on "The hastening time" was a departure from the usual line of thought had on that subject. He made vivid the haste indulged in throughout the world in the wild rush to keep up with the times, and showed the need of Latter Day Saints hastening to accomplish the work given directly to us to do. Are we giving the intense attention we should to our calling, to bring about the conditions that must reign ere Christ shall come?

The Religio program consisted of music and readings previously given over the radio by the little folks, who give a radio program once a month at half past eight Sunday morning. Sisters E. E. Moorman and Delta Nace assist at the piano.

At seven thirty Brother Vance Eastwood showed a reel of pictures preceding the evening sermon, views of Palestine—all very excellent.

Bishop B. J. Scott was the evening speaker, giving earnest counsel on heeding the instruction concerning these last days, with a beautiful picture of the dawning of a better day following the severe tests we have experienced and must presently endure.

A quiet wedding took place Friday evening, the 11th, at the home of Brother and Sister Ellsworth Moorman, when their daughter Florence was married to Ralph J. Ward, Brother B. J. Scott officiating. Their home will be in Independence. Sister Ward is quite widely known because of her accomplishments in musical lines, her musical saw being especially enjoyed at General Conference, over the radio, and in many of the local churches. She has had flattering offers to play on the stage, but her Latter Day Saint principles incline her to a better class of music and environment. The best wishes of many are extended to her and her companion.

Enoch Hill

Elder George Jenkins was the morning and evening speaker at Enoch Hill. At the morning hour his theme was "The purpose of the church," and under this he sought to show that the church is organized for the purpose of helping the individual to reach the level God wishes him to occupy. The all wise Father has set up a standard of excellence after which we are to fashion our lives. If we keep ourselves face to face with our mind's mirror, we will have no time nor inclination to pick out the faults of others but will have the opportunity to live according to the pattern God has given us.

"The work of the church," was the subject Brother Jenkins took in the evening service. He compared the church to a supply house, where we as Saints may receive those things which will aid us in living nobler and richer lives. It is up to each one to avail himself of the opportunities to cultivate his talent. We must seek first the kingdom of heaven, and other things will be added to us according to our need. In seeking the kingdom of heaven, it is necessary to live according to the law of God, and this involves compliance in temporal as well as spiritual requirements.

Liberty Street

During the Sunday school hour, Brother E. Brackenbury took pictures of the junior and intermediate classes.

Brother Walter E. Curtis was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, and his subject was "Loyalty." He took his text from 2 Timothy 2: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." He dwelt on the thoughts that we should be loyal to Christ and the church, to our country, to ourselves, and to our fellow men.

Brother Ivor Davies was the speaker in the evening. He talked of the faith and loyalty of the early Saints. Both sermons of the day were appreciated by all who heard them.

On February 22 a George Washington program will be given at the church under the direction of the Department of Women of Group 30. Ice cream and cherry pie will be served. An admission of twenty-five cents for adults and fifteen for children will be charged. All are invited to come and help.

Spring Branch

Only seventeen availed themselves of the opportunity offered them by the early morning prayer service Sunday. Many Saints do not realize the strength this service gives, or they would make an effort to attend.

An increase of five over the two previous Sundays at Sunday school brought the total up to one hundred and twenty-six. A lively and profitable session was had. It was followed by the installation of officers by Brother Samuel Thiel. Many were surprised at the small army of workers included in our staff of officers and teachers when twenty-five took their places on the platform.

After prayer by Brother Snively, Sister D. D. McClain pleasingly sang "Teach me to pray." This was followed by a vocal duet by two of our younger sisters, Bareeth Gordon and Ruth Smith.

Brother Thiel then made a short talk, his principal thought being along the line of evolution of labor and adjustment of ourselves to changes in conditions. He then introduced Superintendent Alma Tankard, who after a few well-chosen remarks, in turn introduced the other members of his staff.

Bishop G. W. Eastwood was the speaker of the morning, and Brother Terry spoke to a small but appreciative audience in the evening.

Monday night was enjoyed a pleasant and sociable event, when about sixty-five gathered for the valentine party and box social. Twenty-eight beautiful boxes filled with all kinds of good things to tickle the palate, were sold. Sister Arnold Murdock carried off the honor and prize for the prettiest box. If laughter is good for the digestion, surely the entertainment preceding the supper helped all. But we are not sure that the admonition in the Doctrine and Covenants to avoid excessive laughter was well heeded. Fourteen dollars was added to the expense fund.

Baptisms in British Columbia

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

I closed the special series of services here last night with a large crowd for this place. The building was filled to its capacity for the last service. Two are to be baptized tonight. We go to New Westminster for the baptisms, as they have a font in the new church there.

I have preached mostly on the building up of Zion and stewardships. Several of the Saints have signified their intention of filing their inventories, and some of them asked me for blanks so they could do so at once.

I feel encouraged in the work and believe good has been accomplished here. I expect to go to Port Hammond next for a few days. My health is good, and I am anxious to do all I can while I have the strength and opportunity.

MARCUS H. COOK.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA, January 31.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

A cloudy day which resulted in a downpour of rain before the close of the Sunday school service caused a poor attendance Sunday, there being only 288 in attendance, with a collection of $11.29.

We were very much pleased to be favored with a visit from the stake superintendent, Brother Ray Lloyd, who addressed the school at the close of the lesson study, in which he expressed his joy and appreciation in being able to attend with us and to find we were moving steadily forward.

At the eleven o'clock hour Bishop Blair addressed the Saints in the main auditorium, while the teachers and officers held their regular monthly teachers' meeting in the I. X. L. room. These meetings are proving very beneficial, as many good themes and ideas are presented which will aid the teachers quite materially in their work.

A number of the Central Saints gathered at Union Station last Tuesday evening to bid farewell to Brother and Sister Tanner, who departed for California in the interest of church work. We shall miss them very much but are indeed glad for them to be privileged to go, as it will be quite a change and treat for them, of which they are very deserving, as they have been very faithful in their mission to Central.

Brother C. D. Jellings occupied the 7.45 hour and delivered a very interesting and intellectual discourse, which was appreciated greatly by those present.

The regular quarterly conference will convene next Sunday with the business meeting on Monday night, at which session will be chosen the delegates to represent the Kansas City Stake at the General Conference in April. Preparations are being made to serve both the noon and evening meals, and a very good attendance is anticipated.

Fourth Church

The year 1927 has a promising future for Fourth Church. The month of January has been full of enthusiasm and interest. The first Sunday at Sunday school there were 158, the largest ever. They are working for 200 and believe it can be done. At sacramental service there were 116 present, and as they partook of the divine Spirit they concluded that none can afford to be satisfied to do just a little, but will give his all for the building of Zion. Have had excellent speakers, attendance at all services increasing, two baptisms this year. The theme of each speaker has been an urge to press forward in the establishment of Zion through stewardships. Bishop F. B. Blair stated that we made out our inventory to the state, county, and city, for the assessor, and asked if it was not more necessary to make our inventory to the church so we can make it possible that God's work could be accomplished. Other speakers were Elders Cyril E. Wight, and C. Ed. Miller, the latter stating the church needed steady pullers, not loafers, kickers, or jerkers.

The department leaders occupied the eleven o'clock hour, January 23. Sister Pauline Smith, superintendent of the Sunday school, gave a brief history of Sunday schools. Sister Josephine Raveille, Department of Recreation and Expression superintendent, said that was the place to express themselves in many ways as well as for the study of the Book of Mormon. She says the Religio must come to the front. The five departments in the church, one of which is the Religio, must all pull together as an evenly matched team of horses, and if done the top of the hill will be soon reached.

Brother Wolf has charge of the music and has organized a choir with twenty members, which furnishes special numbers at each service. This is the first organized choir Fourth Church has had, and much is expected of them from time to time.

Sister Evelyn Worden, leader of women, says all rests with the mothers. They must not only see that their children are at church, but must also be present themselves. Guard the home influence by watching their language. Stand by the church in its program. The pastor, Elder J. O. Worden, sees in the near future his congregation outgrowing the present building, and asks all to contribute a mile of pennies in 1927 to add to the building fund. The Sunday school secretary tells each Sunday how many feet of pennies have been brought, sixteen pennies to the foot. If each member brings a foot a week, there will be more than a mile of pennies by the end of the year.

We regret that God has called home dear Sister Elizabeth Eltzroth. She will be missed very much by all her associates, as she was a self-sacrificing worker. Her life has been an inspiration to those who knew her.

Heathwood Church

We are glad to tell of the baptism of Marguerite McDonald, aged eleven, who was baptized Sunday, January 30, by Brother John Tucker.

All present were greatly benefited by the sermon preached by Brother J. A. Tanner Sunday evening, January 30.

A cafeteria luncheon was served in the church basement Friday evening, January 28, by the Women's Department, Sister Roy McDonald in charge, in the church basement, after which a miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Sister Clara Decker, whose marriage to Brother Cleo Miller took place Sunday, January 30. Sister Decker has been an active member, assisting in Religio, choir, and Temple Builder work.

Bennington Heights

The first Sunday of February, the 6th, was a mild and pleasant day. Many took advantage of the agreeable weather, one hundred and sixty attending Sunday school and breaking the former record of one hundred and fifty-five. This attendance is not the result of a campaign or any extraordinary effort, but is the result of a natural growth. Each Sunday brings a stranger; and Brother S. S. Armstrong, our Sunday school superintendent, is anticipating an attendance of two hundred by the end of the year.

Brother and Sister Roy Newkirk visited us Sunday morning, Sister Newkirk desiring to organize the girls into Bluebirds, Orioles, and Temple Builders.

Sister Edna Sevcit was able to attend church last Sunday for the first time since her sickness.

Jeff Smith, brother of Sister Sarah Carstensen and Sister Mary Riddle, died Friday, February 4. Funeral services were held at the church immediately after the sacramental service, as the interment was to be Sunday afternoon at Plattsburg, Missouri, the former home of Mr. Smith. Elder H. W. Goold preached the funeral sermon.

Sister Mary McLanahan and Brother Howard Fillipo were married in Independence, Missouri, February 5, by Brother Ammon White.

A week ago last Sunday, Sister L. M. Sandy talked to the children in the junior service. She described the different periods of the life of Jesus.

Our former pastor, Elder H. W. Goold, preached last Sunday evening.

Pastor James E. Cleveland will be in Protection, Kansas, this week, where he was sent by his employer.

Since the Religio time of meeting has been changed to Sunday evening, in place of the prayer meeting, the loss of the Sunday prayer meeting has been keenly felt. Last Sunday it was voted to have Sunday morning prayer meeting at 8.15, and this morning at the first of these meetings there were twenty-four present. This number is expected to increase as the new schedule of meetings becomes generally known.

Although the weather was threatening this morning, there was a good attendance, and eleven new members were enrolled in the Sunday school.

Elder H. O. Smith preached morning and evening. James W. Stobaugh, a priest of Mount Washington, spoke in the junior meeting.

Brother Allen Tannehill, a former member of Bennington, visited us this morning. Brother William A. Helm, who has been home for the past month and a half, has returned to Clifton Hill, Missouri, where he works on a farm.

Malvern Hill Church

The Women's Department of Malvern Hill Group met on Friday, January 28, 1927, at the home of Sister George Sherman, our superintendent. An increasing number of the sisters are attending these meetings. The class in hand-craft becomes more interesting each week; and we had a very interesting discussion in the class on "Woman and stewardship." The sisters in our group are intelligently concerned about the problems of the church, and we feel confident that many here are preparing themselves for effective work. This is what we all wish to do; and when we are called to "account for the way in which we have managed our stewardships" we desire to have the right answer ready. We appreciate these outlines Sister Edwards has prepared for the study of the women of the church. They truly point the way to a better idea of, and a desire to participate in, the stewardship plan of the church. Besides the regular class work, some important business was transacted, at the suggestion of Sister Sherman and Lloyd.

There was a splendid attendance at Sunday school Sunday, January 30. Brother Ray Lloyd preached in the morning and certainly gave some fine food for thought. His subject was "Choice," and we were impressed with the way in which he brought out the lesson of the sermon, that we are always making a choice between truth and self.

In the afternoon a considerable number of this church met at Central Church for the happy purpose of welcoming into our midst four new members, who at that time entered the waters of baptism. The candidates were Brother and Sister Wagner and their son, and Brother Jones. Brother W. O. Hands baptized them, and we rejoiced under the influence of the Spirit which attended this rite. They were confirmed by Elders H. J. Bootman and Hands at the evening service.

Bishop F. B. Blair preached a fine sermon in the evening, and the people appreciated his message.

On Friday evening, January 28, the Department of Recreation and Expression, under the leadership of Sister Harry Ringer, met at the church and provided us with some real wholesome fun. There was a program, the numbers of which were pleasing, and also a "community sing," led by Sister Crinklaw, which all enjoyed. Sister Ringer is planning more of social activities to interest the young people more keenly in the Religio. We can assure Sister Ringer that she has the cooperation and support of the group in the splendid work she is planning.

The pastor and the priesthood at Malvern Hill are actively engaged in trying to build up the work here, and we are certainly proud and happy to think of the number of local men we have who are not only qualified, but willing, to sacrifice in order that the work may go forward.

Second Church

As this is our first letter this year, we wish all the HERALD readers a happy and prosperous new year. The prayer meetings have been very spiritual, the Lord thus graciously manifesting his presence. Sister Bernice Griffiths has been with us of late, and we appreciate her efforts in a musical way.

December 24 the Christmas program was held, under the supervision of Sister P. J. Raw. January 23, Sister Roy Newkirk gave a very interesting talk to the girls and their parents. She organized Temple Builder and Bluebird chapters.

Sister Margaret Cleveland, local reporter for the HERALD, has been very ill since December 24, unable to attend the services, where she is always in attendance if able to be there, so she is missed very much.

Brothers U. W. Greene and Gomer Watson, from Independence, were speakers recently. The heads of departments were installed the first of the year, the following being the incumbents: F. A. Evans, pastor; P. J. Raw, Sunday school superintendent; Eugene Zink, Recreation and Expression superintendent; Department of Women, Sister P. J. Raw.

W. I. Fligg, Brother Minton, and H. R. Higdon were recent speakers.

The pastor's wife, Sister F. A. Evans, is in such poor health that she must miss the meetings. Her wont is to be often there.

A daughter, named Gloria Vaunceil, was born to Brother and Sister F. J. Raw.

Stella May Mansfield, age twenty-three, passed away January 22.

Quindaro

Sunday, January 30, found a full house for Sunday school, also for prayer and testimony meeting. At the close a very pretty wedding took place when Miss Clara Decker and Mr. Cleo Miller were united in marriage. The ceremony was pronounced by Brother A. Wallace Eskridge. Miss Edna Decker, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Charles Miller, brother of the groom, was best man. Charles Miller, jr., was ring bearer, and Kathryn Jane McNurram, flower girl. Preceding the ceremony a program was rendered: Violin solo, "To a wild rose," by Otis Swart; vocal solo, "I love you truly," Miss Jane Hughes; vocal duet, "The sweetest story ever told," by Mrs. Blanch Green and Mrs. Lela Eskridge; violin solo, "Rosary," Otis Swart. Mrs. J. L. Johnson accompanied on the piano. Wedding march by Mendelssohn was played by Miss Lavern Oberlag. The church was prettily decorated with ferns and palms. Brother and Sister Miller are held in high esteem in church circles.

At the eight o'clock hour a well-rendered musical program was given by the choir under the leadership of Emily Foley. It was followed by a sermon by our pastor, A. Wallace Eskridge, using as a basis for his remarks "The crowning sign," bringing the gospel plan clearly before the minds of the people.

Sacrament was observed on Sunday, February 6. Many good prayers were offered and testimonies given of God's goodness. The peaceful influence of God's Spirit was there. After the Religio lesson, Sister Lulu Sandy talked along the line of psychology, with the object of organizing a class. A vote was taken, and about twenty-five raised their hands. Thursday night at half past seven was set for the first lesson. Sister Sandy will be the teacher, and we are hopeful of good results.

Bishop Blair was the speaker for the evening. Using as a foundation the conversion of Alma, he gave the Saints a greater vision of the work. We will be benefited by it.

We now have an organized club which is known as the Quindaro Boys' Club. We rejoice that our boys have a desire to serve. The officers are Richard Beggs, president; Donald Graham, vice president; Richard Whitford, secretary. On February 18 they will give a fathers' and sons' banquet at the church. Bishop Blair will be one of the speakers for the evening. Also Secretary Vaughn of the Y. M. C. A., Kansas City, Missouri, will be present. Brother J. F. Sheehy, of Independence, will be toastmaster. We hope for the progress of the club.

Armourdale Church

At eleven o'clock, January 30, Bishop F. B. Blair was the speaker, using his chart on inventory and tithing, giving opportunity at the close of the service for any to ask questions. A very profitable service.

In the evening, Pastor William Richards broke the bread of life, his subject being "Today." He showed that we are living only "today."

Brother E. P. Sanders held a missionary meeting at the home of J. M. Moore, at which there was an attendance of fifteen. His subject was "What must I do to be saved." Brothers F. B. Blair and F. S. Anderson, of the stake bishopric, were in attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, at which time several of the members filed their inventories.

Brother and Sister Dan Cooper of the Argentine Church, helped February 4 with a very interesting program at Religio, they rendering a vocal duet. Brother Henry Rushfelt is the efficient president and proves a capable leader.

February 6, at 11 o'clock, the sacramental service was very spiritual, hence profitable socially. Brother Charles Strader was present and gave timely counsel and advice. The evening speaker was Henry Rushfelt.

On Tuesday evening, the 8th, a preaching service was held at the home of Brother J. M. Moore, 816 South Valley Street, there being fourteen people present.

The Women's Department is studying stewardships. Sister Fern Lloyd, stake superintendent of the Department of Women, is their teacher.

Argentine Church

Brothers Ralph Goold and Dan Cooper with their wives were in attendance at a meeting at Emporia, Kansas, today, where Brother Goold has recently opened up the work at the home of a member. A month ago he succeeded in locating the members there and called a meeting and administered the sacrament to them. Apparently this is the first time that meetings have been held there by us.

Pastor R. E. Brown has succeeded in getting the young folks to have a prayer meeting all their own. Two sessions have been held with a nice attendance. They meet at 2.30 p. m. Sunday.

Stake President Joseph A. Tanner was the evening speaker, subject, the 13th chapter of 1 Corinthians, an able effort to show "the more excellent way."

Thirty-eight Baptized in Kansas City Stake

(A letter to President Smith.)

Reporting as I do to the Quorum of Twelve each week, it has not been compulsory for me to write to you. I remember, however, that you once requested that I drop a few lines to you whenever possible.

I feel very happy tonight. I have had varied experiences during my missionary work. Some have been sad, others discouraging, but I am glad to say that the greater part of them have been happy indeed. It is this happiness that prompts the writing of these few lines.

Being missionary for the Kansas City Stake, I meet all classes, almost, of individuals. As members of the church, I find that many of them have that deep and abiding devotion necessary for the bringing to pass of our ideals. Not necessarily tractable, but after seeing what our ideals are, ready to follow the right. In the past few weeks I have baptized fifteen and can safely say that among them are men and women who, although accepting the gospel, were in no wise docile, but had to be shown the merits of our presentation.

Brother Smith, I have never been blessed more in the presentation of the word than during the past few months. During the Argentine meeting, just closed, the heavens were opened. Yet some say, "The good old days are gone," and indeed I believe they are for such people, but for those who are affirmative builders, yea, creators, I have no fears of God's blessings being denied them. There is consolation in the fact that optimism is contagious. I hope I may be optimistic.

In all my experience I have not worked with a more consecrated group of people than those in my stake. To know Brother Tanner is to love him, and I am glad to say that I have not heard one word against him during the nine months I have worked among these Saints. Thirty-eight have been baptized during my meetings, and a few minutes ago the good news came to me over the phone that three more desired baptism.

At the request of the Quorum of Twelve I leave tomorrow for Des Moines to hold a series of meetings at the new church. That God will bless you and give you the direction you need, is my prayer.

W. D. TORDOFF.

Barraclough, district president, and C. J. Remington, district secretary.

Addresses

Mrs. H. G. Fisher, a former resident of Underwood, Iowa, now lives at 125 West Fifteenth Street, Hutchinson, Kansas.

Our Departed Ones

MCLEOD.—George McLeod was born July 26, 1874, at Shilton, County of Durham, England. Came to America with his parents at the age of twelve. Married Miss Anna Garbett, at What Cheer, Iowa, July 3, 1900. He was baptized by Charles Harpe, May 5, 1913, at Hiteman, Iowa. Moved to Taylorville, Illinois, in October, 1922, at which place he passed away January 10, 1927, at the age of fifty-two years, five months, and fifteen days. Surviving are his widow, two sons, William T. and George H., and one grandson, five sisters, three brothers, besides many other relatives and friends. Funeral from Saints' Church at Taylorville; sermon by Albert Johnson, assisted by William Shotten. Interment in Oak Hill Cemetery.

HOLMES.—Donna Holmes was born in Green County, Pennsylvania, March 21, 1835. Married Richard Holmes October 16, 1855, and to them twelve children were born, three dying in infancy, and the eldest, Mrs. M. A. Richey, passing away six years ago. She united with the church in 1878 and was firm in the faith to the time of her death. Thirty-seven years ago she with her husband and family came from Rich Hill, Missouri, and settled in Roslyn, Washington. She saw the little town grow from a hamlet to one of the largest coal-mining towns in the State. She was one of Roslyn's oldest residents, and her life ebbed peacefully away on January 20, 1927, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Morgan Owens, with whom she had made her home for the past six years. Surviving her are four daughters: Mrs. Ella Holland, of Roslyn; Mrs. Morgan Owens, of Roslyn; Mrs. Barbara Titter, of O'Fallon, Illinois; Mrs. Donna Hanson, Filer, Idaho; four sons, Thomas S., John W., James R., and Frank E., all of Roslyn; twenty-eight grandchildren; fifty-four great-grandchildren, and five great-great-grandchildren. The funeral was held from the Presbyterian Church Sunday afternoon, Elder A. C. Martin, of Seattle, officiating. The church was filled with friends who had known and loved her for the exemplary life she had led. She was laid to rest in the family plot beside her husband, who died February 19, 1903. It was with regret that the community learned of her demise for in spite of her age she took a deep vital interest in all local affairs.

CARLSON.—Mary Angelene Carlson was born in Beaver Dam, Wisconsin, June 14, 1854. In 1863 she moved with her parents to Fort Dodge, Iowa, and was married to Carl John Carlson, March 30, 1872. She was baptized in 1880 by Brother E. Dobson. Twelve children were born to

Mr. and Mrs. Carlson, and nine are left, four sons and five daughters. Mr. Carlson passed on some five or six years ago, and since that time Mrs. Carlson has made her home most of the time with her children. She was a faithful Saint. Her home was open to the missionaries. Passed away Sunday, January 16, at Barnum, Minnesota. Surviving her are her children: C. J. Carlson, Kansas City, Kansas; Florence R. Eckley, Terrill, Iowa; W. J. Carlson, Miami, Florida; Emma Saxby, Anacortes, Washington; Arthur and William, Three Forks, Montana; Bertha Eckley, Barnum, Minnesota; Mary Snyder, Tacoma, Washington; Lula J. Dathe, Barnum; twenty-four grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, and many friends. Funeral services were conducted by Pastor Ray Whiting, of Minneapolis, in the Presbyterian Church at Barnum. He was assisted by Reverend E. A. Cooke, of the Barnum Methodist Church. Interment in Barnum Cemetery.

WILLIAMS.—Laura J. Williams was born February 28, 1848, at Albany, Illinois. She married Samuel C. Williams, and was the mother of nine children, five of whom are living, four sons and one daughter. She was baptized March 18, 1894, and lived an unassuming and Christlike life, dying in full assurance of the glorious resurrection. She died at the home of her son, Gus H., in Council Bluffs, Iowa, January 25, 1927. She was buried in Walnut Hill Cemetery.

"Autumn Leaves" Makes new Subscription Offer

Believing that most of our members can spare fifty cents to invest in a good cause, the manager of the Herald Publishing House and editors of AUTUMN LEAVES are offering an investment for just that amount of money. Here it is:

AUTUMN LEAVES—5 MONTHS FOR 50 CENTS to new subscribers only during February and March

* This year we should add hundreds of new subscribers to our lists. The Herald, Ensign, and Autumn Leaves each has its definite place. Some can afford all and some perhaps but one. Undoubtedly each family should subscribe for at least one of the three.

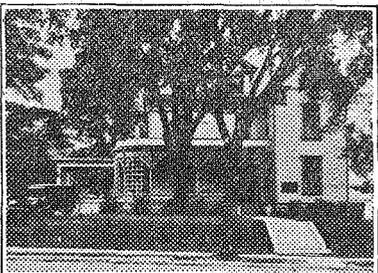

Most branches have a regularly appointed publicity agent. Members should encourage the agents by sending the subscriptions through them. This will do much to strengthen their work during the entire year. Where no agent has been appointed, send subscriptions direct to Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

Wet or Dry?

Dry!

The wet and dry issue seems to be somewhat of the nature of Bancho's ghost, it keeps bobbing up. It is well known that our church has been always on the dry side. When the Eighteenth Amendment to the American Constitution was adopted, it was thought by many that that closed the controversy. But it is up, and is appearing in politics. Organizations are attempting to show by statistics (?) that prohibition has increased liquor consumption and drunkenness, and will have us believe that increased crime and disregard of law are attributable to the Volstead Act and the Eighteenth Amendment. And many people are in danger of being misled by the insidious work of these organizations, backed by liquor interests. In the light of this, I was interested in reading in the New York Herald of January 13 a dispatch from Paris as follows:

PARIS, January 12.—America will remain dry because the good results of prohibition outweigh the bad. The Democratic party is again headed towards a deadlock in its next national convention. President Coolidge's chances of renomination and reelection are excellent.

Arthur T. Eagan, New York investment expert, made these terse observations on arriving at Paris today. He said: "Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale, says the prohibition saves $7,000,000,000 annually, and I agree with him. If America had to do it over, she would ratify the Eighteenth Amendment. It is the wet stand of Al Smith, with the contributing religious issue, which will cause the forthcoming Democratic convention to go on the rocks."

It is my opinion that the United States will continue dry. Law enforcement, so far as the liquor question is concerned will become more nearly synchronous with law enforcement generally, and people will more generally and certainly become convinced of the benefits of prohibition, despite the efforts of Governor "Al" and his allies.

If the outlook of this generation were not different from that of the generation which preceded it, this generation would be hopeless. The fact would demonstrate it to be dumb, deaf, and blind to its environment.—Thomas A. Edison.

Blue Pencil Notes

A friend calls my attention to a rare anomaly. From the United States Department of Agriculture comes a bulletin—no novelty in itself; in fact, this is Bulletin No. 1440, the novelty being in the name of the author in conjunction with his subject: Mordecai Ezekiel, writing on the theme, "Factors affecting the price of hogs."

"Hot air enthusiasm," complained Deacon Good-entart, "is vastly different from cold cash enthusiasm."

"This is the real joy in life: the being used for a purpose recognized by yourself as a mighty one."
—George Bernard Shaw.

Three men were dining together. One was from the Imperial Valley, one from Oregon, one from Arrowhead Lake in the San Bernardino Mountains. A remark was made to the effect that it must get very hot in the Imperial Valley. The Imperial man hastened to assure his friends, "Yes, but it is a dry heat; we do not notice it." Soon it was remarked that it must get quite cold up at Arrowhead Lake, and the Arrowhead man rallied to the defense of his home, "Sure it does; but it is a dry cold, and we don't feel it." The next comment was to the effect that it rains a lot in Oregon. Without a smile the Oregon man countered, "Yes, but it is a dry rain; we don't mind it."

With all the assurance of an unmarried man, Pope Pius asks Catholic men to undertake the reformation of the dress of their wives and daughters.

What is dryer than statistics? What is more romantic than a June wedding? Surely the two shall never meet. But they have met. Cupid is asked to consider figures. Statisticians have applied their charts and graphs to romance in an attempt to find the ages during which marriage may be contracted with most hope of enduring happiness. It seems that marriage has risks. There are divorces and separations without divorce—divorce without remarriage and remarriage without divorce. Cupid is asked to consider these matters. It appears that the ideal age to marry with most assurance of happiness is about twenty-nine for the groom and twenty-four for the bride. Variations of four years on either side of these figures for the groom and two years for the bride make little difference. Marriages in which the bride is under twenty-one and the groom under twenty-four become rapidly more hazardous as the age diminishes. Those unions in which one or both parties are under nineteen are rated as from ten to one hundred times as dangerous as those of the ideal age. Marriages postponed until thirty-eight or later are also extra hazardous. These figures appear in The Journal of Social Hygiene (New York) and are based on a survey conducted in Philadelphia. Ministers, doctors, and teachers are urged to advise young people against too early marriage. Probably there is wisdom in the advice. But those of us who were born of women married before they were eighteen may well feel grateful that the advice was delayed some years.

And as a rare joke, Cupid will probably wait until these statisticians are about seventy years old and tangle them up in some belated experiment in matrimony at a time when their graphs give them no assurance of more than a few days of felicity. Love is said to be blind, and also seems to be slightly deaf in the one ear that is not already preempted by the voice of the beloved.

The High Council Session

Recent years have seen changes in the work of the High Council which have resulted in the council functioning in some of its capacities other than purely judicial. In the earlier years of my ministry, the sittings were largely for hearing of cases, appeal cases mostly. But it is advisory as well as judicial; and many times in recent years has the council been called upon to advise the Presidency; and more recently has it been asked to advise the Presiding Bishopric. The wisdom of the provisions of the law for the functioning of the council in this direction has been made apparent.

Last week the High Council was called together by the Presidency to sit, and it met in the evening of the 15th and again in the morning of the 16th, being in session some six or seven hours altogether. With the council were sitting two members of the Presiding Bishopric, and two members of the Quorum of Twelve acted as substitutes. The time was spent almost entirely discussing problems connected with the work of the Bishopric, in response to requests from them to the Presidency. A wide range of discussion was had.

Among other matters discussed was the question of the work on the Auditorium. After thorough discussion, I am pleased to note that the council reached about the same conclusion that had been reached by a conference of several officers in my office in December: viz, that the work at the Auditorium should be directed chiefly now toward making it possible for the General Conference sessions to be held in the basement.

The Presidency expresses its appreciation of the council and its work in examining our problems and advising, and I am sure, too, that the Bishop and his counselors appreciate the opportunity of coming to the council for advice.

Concerning other items of their last session, further will appear in various ways. F. M. S.

The March "Autumn Leaves"

There is a delightful variety of thought and expression in this issue. There is a new cover design, which has a distinct message for the youth of the church. The cover is painted by Drusilla Messenger, and the interpretation of her inspiration is given by her on the inside of the cover. The exact color scheme of her painting will be reproduced in the fall. The color combinations will be varied in the meantime.

"Living up to his sweetheart" is the title of The Monthly Message, by Elbert. It is opposite a lovely sonnet entitled "Sainthood," by J. E. Vanderwood. The beautiful page decoration is drawn by Fred-eric Fish.

"Results" is a story with a stewardship theme, written by Mrs. J. A. Graves and illustrated by George Bartholomew. "An humble service," by Lydia Wight, is a touching story of the service of Charles F. Church, sr., as a deacon for the Lamoni Saints. It is well illustrated with photographs. Alta Kimber's two-part story, "Keeping up with the Joneses," illustrated by John Charles Thoman, is finished.

"Believe in the young," a radio sermon by Ralph W. Farrell, will be greatly enjoyed by the youth, and should cheer the pessimistic parent.

"A study in antology" is a clever bit by Jack Milner.

There is a section of this number of the Leaves devoted to music and musicians. Mrs. Bertha Burgess contributes a paper, full of beautiful thought on "The power of music." A photograph of the Independence Music Club Board, accompanied by a short sketch of its activities, occupies one page. Opposite it is a page entitled "Our Club Mother," the subject of which proves to be Mrs. Louise I. Robinson. Mrs. Robinson has written a very instructive and interesting article entitled, "Some observations on singing and music in general." No musician who reads her message will fail to gain inspiration for service, wherever he be. "She came to build," by Roy Cheville, is the story of music in the life of Mabel Carlile, and includes something of her successes and ventures in developing the gift of song in Lamoni.

"Spring's arrival," the words and music by Louise Hills Lewis, is a delightful little song suitable for solo and chorus work on your children's programs.

"Tales of the circus" is an amusing account entitled "Odd sleeping places," by C. F. Clarke.

The editorial occupies three pages, which will be of especial interest to old age and youth. The first is entitled, "What our readers say," and consists of quotations from the recent questionnaires; favorable comments. The two following pages are a paneled message signed by "Mac."

"The Catalina race is over," by Carl Ruoff, is accompanied by photographs, and is an account of some of his experiences as a participant.

"Stewardships" is to be a theme regularly considered in Autumn Leaves. The twelve talks on stewardships, by Apostle John F. Garver, were finished last month, but Bishop Carmichael will continue the subject from month to month in question and answer form. His introductory remarks are entitled, "The youth of the church; their task." Following these paragraphs is a letter which two young girls have written him, stating in part: "We have been wondering what would be required of us should we come to you and offer to consecrate our lives." Then follows Bishop Carmichael's reply. Questions must reach him before the first of March, if the replies are given in the April Leaves.

"A program of recreation," by Eugene Closson, occupies one page; F. Henry Edwards has another unique puzzle.

The "Who's who," edited by Anne Friend Roberts, features three workers in far-off California. Irene Layton's account of her visit to Scotland, in "My vacation abroad," is as full of interest as ever. "Our girls," edited by Leta Moriarty, features Temple Builders of Clinton, Iowa; also some more Chinese recipes by our good cook, Elder Prescott Foo. "The gist of it," edited by Charles R. Hield, is apt as ever, full of food for thought.

"The Alpha Nu's" is the story of a little district newspaper edited by a group of our venturesome youth in Minnesota. Their photograph accompanies the account.

"Springtime" is a suggestive article about gardening by Charles F. Church, sr. "A book for your mood," by Albert McCullough, is an interesting page. Elder J. J. Cornish continues his life story. There are a number of good poems; one, especially, is very touching, entitled "Alma, son of Alma," illustrated, written by Elbert A. Smith.

The center section consists of pictures of groups of Saints from four different branches in Germany.

The April "Autumn Leaves"

The editors are planning an extra interesting, instructive, and beautiful number. The Graphic Arts Bureau will be featured, and will furnish a picture story of Kirtland, the Auditorium, and its own activities. This issue will cost twenty-five cents per single copy.

Remember—this number is included in the new offer of five numbers for fifty cents, during February and March.

Help lift "Autumn Leaves" to the top.

K L D S Heard on Train

The following letter will be of interest to radio fans: "It might be of interest to you to know that on the evening of Tuesday, February 1, while testing out different types of radio receivers for reception on moving trains, we picked up your station while standing at the depot at Bowling Green, Kentucky.

"We were using an eight-tube Fada set and loud speaker. The volume had to be reduced. The reception, however, was spoiled by an arc light just outside of the car, causing considerable disturbance to the program. The aerial used for this reception was a closed loop placed on top of a steel passenger coach."—H. W. Burwell, Automatic Telephone Engineer, Louisville, Kentucky.

White-Dill Compromise Bill Passes

The majority of HERALD readers have doubtless read the newspaper reports that the Senate passed the White-Dill Compromise measure, which now only awaits the signature of President Coolidge. The President has already signified he would give it his approval.

It is believed that the President will appoint the commission of five men within the next two or three weeks. Broadcasting stations are given sixty days after the measure becomes law to enter their applications for licenses, which in the case of broadcasting stations will be granted for a period of three years instead of three months, as theretofore. The commission will sit for one year, during which time its business will be to eliminate present radio chaos and restore order in the air. It faces a very difficult task, because either many present stations must lose their broadcasting licenses completely, or new wave length channels must be opened up. The regulations made by the radio commission will be carried out by the Department of Commerce, which has administered radio matters in the past.

Owners of broadcasting stations who are dissatisfied with the edicts of the commission will have redress in the Federal courts. It is probable that considerable time will be required to straighten out the present tangle.

The question of vital interest to our church is, "What will be the status of K L D S?" Inasmuch as ours is a pioneer station, it seems reasonable that it should have due recognition for the assignment of a preferred wave length. The present wave length is entirely satisfactory, and if the division of time arrangements with W O S are not contested by the State Marketing Bureau authorities, it is quite probable there will be no change in our wave length.

Commends Ministerial Conference

(Excerpts from a letter from Birch Whiting, dated Cross Timbers, Missouri, January 31.)

"One good thing, my poor health doesn't bother much about my study, and with the benefits received at the ministerial institute and the notes made and outlines received, it gives me such new and absorbingly interesting lines of study that the time just flies by, and it doesn't seem so much like a waste of time as it does like a blessed privilege.

"I think the institute at Independence was the biggest thing ever done by the church toward unification of feeling and understanding of the priesthood. This alone justifies the calling of the insti-

The Educational Commission of the church is very desirous of communicating with all the public and private school-teachers belonging to the church throughout the world. The redemption of Zion is going to require the services of educators as well as ministers, physicians, artisans, and representatives of all trades and professions. The commission is also desirous of securing the names of teachers who wish assistance in securing a location, as well as those who may be in a position to inform the commission of vacancies in either elementary or high schools. And, too, without doubt, there are school-board members and officials who are in possession of knowledge relative to vacancies that will occur in their schools. It would be a service of inestimable value if such officials would indicate their needs, listing the subjects to be taught.

God and His Church

Sermon of D. T. Williams, at the Walnut Park Church, Independence, Missouri, January 11, 1927. Mrs. A. Morgan, Reporter.

I had thought to speak concerning the progress of the church of Christ, not as a mere matter of historic fact, but as a matter of present and future hope.

If I were to call your attention to one passage of scripture above another in which to find a setting for the theme, I believe we would discover it in the words of Christ himself, wherein he said, "They of old time said unto you, . . . but I say unto you." In this very statement of Christ he makes of himself a champion of progress. In other words, he determined that he was not to be tied up to the traditional past, for by tying himself to that past he might hinder progress in the present, and the possibility of accomplishment in the future. Therefore he certified to those men who came to him, pointing out what Moses and the prophets had said, that to these things he was not to be made fast, but that he must, of necessity, give himself to the unfolding revelation of God; that is, as that revelation came into his soul, he must find within himself the ability to give expression to that God-consciousness unhindered.

If, then, Christ was a progressive figure, we can not but expect that in following him our endeavor must partake of progress, and we must think of that which is to come rather than that which is past, and if for a moment we would stop to dwell upon the past, it must be with the one intent in mind that the experience of the past shall be brought forward to the present and utilized to the fact of further progress.

The Voice of Progress Is the Voice of God

Then again if we are to follow our Lord, it seems self-evident that as a church we must be a progressive church. We must be an ever-changing church. Now, I know immediately what reflex there may be in the minds of some when we say we must be a progressive institution, that we must be an ever-changing church; there is sure to be that reaction which suggests if we are ever-changing, then we are leaving the past, we are leaving that which is good and right and true for that which is not good, not right, and that which, of necessity, must be untrue. In the estimation of your speaker, that conclusion would be false in every part; for if we believe anything of God at all, we must believe that the Spirit that emanates from him is a progressive spirit, and that the voice of progress is the voice of God. What may appear for the moment to be progress and does not partake of the Spirit of the Christ and of the power of his Father in heaven, is determined in the end not to be the voice of progress at all. Therefore, I affirm that this church must be ever looking forward, and, furthermore, must be ever moving forward.

You will discover, before I am through, that I am not ready, either, as some may be, to break all ties with the past, and to say that all there is of good is what we now have and what is yet to come. Every sensible individual knows too much about what has occurred in the experience of humanity to make such an assertion, and yet the individual who knows sufficient about human endeavor, knows that if we are to be what God wants us to be, if we are to accomplish God's purposes in us, there must be that constant forward movement that takes on truth day by day.

The Church Not Perfect

Right here it might be well to analyze for a moment the difference between the church and the gospel. I fear that too often we have these conflicting in our minds. The church is not perfect, and if you think for a moment or two you will concede as much; but if I were to say the gospel is not perfect, you would immediately object. The difference between the church and the gospel is that the gospel is "the perfect law of liberty," while the church is the vehicle which carries that gospel to the world, and gives it definite form in the minds of men. While the gospel is made up of those principles which we so often set forth in our preachments, the church is made up of human beings, you, and me, and others. These are all there are in the church; just we three.

The Apostle Paul says in writing to the Corinthian Saints: "Ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." Who were they? They were Corinthians. They were Greeks; and Jews who lived in Corinth. They were living in the midst of idolatry; the pagan temples reached out their spires toward heaven, and around them was the corruption of the pagan city. They were living in the midst of this, and they were human. They partook of their environment until the Apostle Paul found it necessary to mention the terrible sins in which they were finding themselves enmeshed. And yet, speaking to these Corinthians, to these human beings, to these faulty individuals, he says of them, "Ye are the body of Christ."

They were not the body of Christ because they were faulty. They were the body of Christ by reason of their association with the Spirit of God and with Christ through that Spirit. But they were human; they were weak, as we are human, as we are weak.

The body of Christ in that day was as the body of Christ in this day. I imagine if the Apostle Paul were to write an epistle to the church in Independence today he might use similar language to them, saying, "Ye are the body of Christ"; but he would not say of those people there in Corinth or these in Independence, "Because ye are the body of Christ, ye are therefore perfect."

Self-Analysis Proves the Case

All we need to do is to make a self-analysis. When I discover that I am part of the body of Christ, if I want to discover what the body of Christ is, I begin to analyze myself.

A young man stood up in the Stone Church, in young people's prayer meeting, and said, "I do not expect to find the church of Christ perfect"; and after a moment's pause added, "because I am part of it." He had made self-analysis. He had discovered that he himself was not perfect, and if he was part of the body of Christ, then, since he was not perfect, being part of it, the church could not be perfect. If we each begin to make analysis, we discover that we still have within us the elements of imperfection, and are manifesting that imperfection day by day. We therefore are not perfect. If we are not perfect, the body of Christ is not perfect, and as long as we are imperfect there is room for improvement, and improvement means progress.

This progress I am speaking of does not mean that the organization to which we belong must of necessity change its form. It does not mean that the day will come when we will not need to have in our church apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, teachers, etc. It does mean that under the impetus of the Spirit of the Almighty, if this church is to continue to be the church of Christ, it must partake of the Christ spirit, and move on and ever on. If it ceases to do that, my friends, the church will find itself in a very, very serious predicament—disavowed of God.

The Church Is Progressive

But the church has by its very statement of faith certified to the world and confirmed in itself the fact that it does believe in progress. For the church has said to the world, we believe in continued revelation, and within ourselves we have had the manifestation of this principle operating. Since this is true, there must of necessity be within us the desire to partake of that Spirit of God which leads on and on until the culmination of God's hope and aspiration in his church shall be a realization.

Then we must think of a growing church. I would feel very bad indeed were I to conclude that after years of service, some of which I have put in for the church, and some of which I anticipate putting in, that after a life of service I must look back over the years of my experience and discovery that the church has not grown. If my brethren, like Brother Jenkins who has grown gray in the service of God, were to look over the church of today and discover that no progress had been made, no growth had been realized, how would they feel? They would feel that their lives had been wasted, and perhaps worse than wasted.

Calamity of Stagnation

I have a little girl at home, Ruth by name. She is eight years of age. I am thinking if I were to go away from home on a long and extended journey and should return at the end of ten years and my little girl would meet me at the door, and I should discover that she had not grown; that she looked exactly the same when I met her after ten years' absence as she had looked when I left her, what kind of a heart do you suppose would possess me? A heavy, heavy heart. Can you imagine a greater calamity? Can you imagine a greater catastrophe than that of men and women giving themselves to the service of an institution which they have proclaimed far and wide as the church of God, looking back over that church only to discover that despite all their endeavor, the church to which they have given their life, their all, for which they had sacrificed everything, had remained static?

This church must be a growing church, and to be a growing church it must be a progressive church. The church must grow to meet the needs of the age in which it is having its experience. The ages change with the changing ages. The need of today is different from the need of yesterday, the change is an ever-constant evolution.

Ever-Changing Need

A quarter of a century ago people had needs that today are not recognized or realized. Today has its needs that can not be successfully met by the procedure that was applied to the needs of a quarter of a century ago. Then, if this church is to be the church of God, it will not only be the church that can meet the needs of a people who have lived in a far-distant past when gladiators fought in the Roman arena, when Christians were cast to the wild beasts in the midst of pagan multitude; it must be a church that, having met those needs, can change to meet the needs of the changes that come as the ages roll. It must be a church that meets the needs of the now, and unless this church can so arrange its affairs as to meet the necessities that come to people in this age, it becomes a static institution; and, my friends, we can not have a static church and succeed in redeeming Zion.

A Historic Example

We have one potent example in history, the Chinese Empire, a nation which became static, and it was its religion that made it so. Confucius taught the adoration and reverence of the past, and the minds of the people and the culture of the people were centered upon the things that had happened rather than the possibility of the things that might happen. It became so that the little Chinese boy going to school must hang his books upon the same side and at the same angle as did his great-great-great-grandfather; and the little girl, putting the pin in her hair, must put it in with the same hand, at the same angle, wearing it in the same manner as did her great-great-great-grandmother; and that which entered into the very details of life was no less observed than those that entered into the major matters with which that people dealt, until they were held back from any progress, and the world called China the sleeping nation.

I said our church must not be a static church. It must not hold fast to the past to the detriment of its future. It must utilize the past in the matter of further progress, using it only as the foundation upon which to build or a plane upon which we may take foothold for the forward movements. I have found people who have worried somewhat because things were not today as they once were in the church. That has always been the history of mankind. Progress has constantly and forever claimed its price, and humanity has had to pay. The price of progress is change, letting loose of the old and taking hold on the new. Continuing indeed to lay hold on the past, but only to bring it forward into the present, discarding that which proves useless and bringing to the needs of our task those things which might be utilized to the end of advancement.

The Church of the Future

This church will be a dead church, or at least a dying church, the moment it refuses to accept its past only for what it can mean to its progression. It is fruitless for us to look back to the fact that an angel has flown in the midst of heaven, and has proclaimed to men upon the earth the truth of God unless we take that truth and use it as a moving power that will cause us and those who, with us, are associated in the church of Christ, to labor for the church of the never-dying future.

To do this it is going to be necessary that we reevaluate our religion in the light of present human needs. If we do so reevaluate our religion, it will mean that we must restate that religion in the light of present terminology. If this seems a sacrificing of the past, just remember that it is only to the end that the knowledge of the past shall serve a greater good in the present.

God Does Not Change

I would not for one moment have you think to the contrary—God does not change. He is perfect, and his law is perfect. But we discover as we read the scriptures (whether they be the Bible, Doctrine and Covenants, or Book of Mormon) in the light of the present need of humanity, there comes to us a new light, new inspiration, new hope, and new desire. If such were not the case with me, I would be a very poor minister for Christ. The gospel of Jesus Christ will fit every age and will help us to a greater appreciation of humanity, no matter in what condition we may find it.

There are certain factors, then, we must be mindful of when considering the reevaluation or restatement of our religion in terms of the present. One is the education through which we are passing. Our young people are meeting today the practical issues of life. They go through their grade schools into the high schools and on into the colleges and universities. They are meeting problems that must find solution. If they are to solve them correctly, they must solve them in the light of the help which can be given them by those who are of broader experience.

Our Task

We must be ready when that boy comes home from high school, as he will some day, saying, "Dad, this is the matter I am meeting now. What of it?" We must be prepared to meet the issue, not only out of our experience, but of our rethinking that experience in the light of the present need. Unless there can be given some intelligent interpretation of his experience and the greater experience of life with which he has come in contact, we will have failed him. My friends, this is what mothers and fathers are meeting the land over. Latter Day Saint parents are no exception. It becomes our bounden duty to make ourselves ready to meet intelligently these issues in the lives of our children. We must think, in reevaluating our religion; in fact, we will by force of circumstances be compelled to do so, however distasteful the process may seem. Reevaluating our religion in the light of present educational and social needs is the outstanding task of the present generation.

Interpretation in Light of Socialization

Our religion must be reevaluated in the light of the present tendency toward the socialization of life's endeavors. All over this broad land of ours the determination is taking root in the minds of men that the present system of competitive greed can not and must not continue. There is rising up on every hand a great horde of students interested in these international issues, for we are not the only people who are tackling this tremendous social problem. Ministers the world over, and men of distinction interested in social well-being, are grappling with these living issues. Our religion, the religion of the Restoration, must be reinterpreted so as to meet this social need. That is one thing that this church is—dare I say it—boldly trying to do, and my prayer is that that endeavor shall be successful. My friends, my brethren, my sisters, whether or not that attempt shall succeed does not depend so much upon God's doing, as it does upon our doing, for God has promised and will fulfill, and when the time comes that this church in the light of the strong leadership of Christ Jesus, our Lord, shall reinterpret the message of Christ to the needs of the present day, thus meeting the issues of education, invention, and socialization—until, I say, we do this thing, we can not lift Christ up to the world.

Keeping Faith With the Fathers

In this endeavor to reevaluate or restate our religion, we must be true to the past. This does not necessarily imply that I must do just what my father did, that you must do what your ancestors did. Can you imagine that in the latter day your father would rise up to call you blessed if you did your task just as he did his with the greater light and understanding that is yours? You have not only your experience of the present, but his experience of the past, with the experience of the unnumbered fathers that have gone before, to enable you to perform a better task than they did. Would they rise up to call you blessed, with all this heritage, if you did things today exactly as they did them in the past? I would feel that I was a poor son of my father indeed, a poor progeny of my grandfather, both of whom served this church, if I were to do the same things today, they did, in the same way. I would be a very poor inheritor of the myriads who have preceded me in history if I would not take advantage of their experience, and do things better today than they did them yesterday.

Then, to be true to the past does not mean that I must do my task as my father did it. It means, if it means anything, that to be true to my father and the spirit of my father, I must take advantage of every opportunity to do my task better as the days pass. Can it mean anything more or anything less than that to you? Then I say we must reevaluate our faith under the inspiration of the Restoration. We must be true to the faith of our fathers, and to be true to that faith, determine that we will continue the march of progress, looking backward only that in the testimony of the past I may gain strength for a greater and brighter future. In this manner, only, can we be true to a magnificent past; by using it as a sure foundation upon which to predicate a more magnificent future. And so, the Father's faith will flame with a more effulgent glory.

"Faith of our fathers, living still
In spite of danger, fire, and sword;
Oh, how our hearts beat high with joy
Whene'er we hear that glorious word."

Past, Present, and Future

I heard a young missionary not long since belittle those who were older than himself in the ministry, speaking slightly of them because they had not, as he said, redeemed Zion. You know what I thought in my heart of hearts? When that young man had spoken, I thought to myself: I, too, am a young man, practically, and it does not behoove me to boast in myself, or to belittle another who has given much more of service to this church. Rather I should bring adoration to the names of those who have so labored by continuing the work they so courageously began. That does not mean that I necessarily should reach up only as far as they have reached. It means that these noble men and virtuous women have held me in their arms, have lifted me up in the arms of their experience, that I might attain the greater spiritual altitude, if that be possible. If the young men of this church who are now entering into its ministry accomplish more than their fathers did, it will be because their fathers have accomplished the task of lifting them up. My fathers and your fathers have laid the foundation upon which we are enabled now to build, and if Zion is to be a reality, it will be because they have built a firm foundation upon which we can rear now the superstructure. They have built a highway to our God. It is for us as the army of the Lord to march forward on that highway to the accomplishment of God's purposes, as they will manifest themselves in our continued progress and Jehovah's unfolding revelation. Yes, our fathers have builded, and we will not spurn their work so well done. They have builded us a bridge to span the tide that threatens to separate us from our Zion land. The principles we have been almost vainly trying to state are set forth more clearly and more beautifully in the following lines:

"The Bridge Builder"

"An old man going along the highway,
Came at the evening, old and gray,
To a chasm vast and deep and wide,
Which he must cross without chart or guide.

"The old man crossed in the twilight dim;
The sullen stream held no fear for him,
But he paused when safe on the other side
And builded a bridge to span the tide.

"'Old man,' said a fellow pilgrim near,
'You are wasting your time in building here;
Your journey ends at the close of the day
And you never again will pass this way.
You have crossed the chasm deep and wide.
Why build this bridge at eventide?'"

"The traveler raised his old gray head,
 'My friend, in the path I have come,' he said,
 'There follows after me today
 A youth whose feet must pass this way.

"This chasm which has been as naught to me,
 To that fair-haired youth may a pitfall be.
 He, too, must cross in the twilight dim.
 My friend, I am building this bridge for him.'"

This is just what our fathers have done for us; they have built a bridge. And again I say, I would be a poor son of my father were I to reflect upon his work by determining that I must build another bridge to cross that stream. The bridge has been builded; I can depend upon its workmanship. I can cross over it into the promised land and rear the structures of Zion heavenward until we can sing:

"Then the towers of Zion glittered
 Like the sun in yonder sky,
 And the wicked stood and trembled
 Filled with wonder and surprise."

This can be determined only by progress. We must follow our leader, Christ, and continue our endeavor until we shall realize in the end the great hope of God in the human race.

The Spirit of Our Fathers

The third of a series of seven sermons in the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, in November, 1925, under the general theme, "The faith of our fathers."

May I again speak my appreciation of your enthusiasm? And will you indulge me while I speak of my especial appreciation of the interest of my long-time personal friends? Next to the power of God, there is nothing that has come into my life to bring the power that has come to me from my friends.

We are to speak tonight of the Spirit of our Fathers. We are to speak of that Spirit which comes down from on high. We are to speak of the Gift of the Holy Ghost, the power of heaven to redeem men from earth. And, incidentally, we are to speak of the spirit of the men in whom under the light of God was conceived this great latter-day movement. We are to speak of the spirit of the men who brought forth this work; through whom it was established; and who handed it down to us in all of its divine majesty. For it is only in the coming together of the Spirit of God and the spirits of men that achievement is realized in this work.

With your permission I shall read passages which appear separately, but which taken together serve us very nicely as a lesson. I make my selections from the words of the Apostle Peter and of the Apostle Paul:

Ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, for the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. . . . And the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal, for to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom, to another the word of knowledge, by the same spirit, to another faith by the same spirit, to another the gift of healing by the same spirit; to another the working of miracles, to another prophecy, to another discerning of spirits, to another divers kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh of the one and the selfsame spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will. The fruit of the spirit is love.

The Spirit Would Dwell in Us

As a text we draw on those wonderful words of our Lord when in speaking comfort to his apostles, and through them to the church, as they anticipated the day when he must go away, he said, "The Spirit . . . dwelleth with you; and shall be in you."

This to us is the word of our Lord: The Spirit dwells with you, and it desires to come in to you to move you and lead you and deliver you and send you forth to service.

We understand this text as we understand the association of ourselves with our friends. Our friends live among us. They minister to us in many things. But if our friends are to live in us, then must we open our hearts to them, that the spirits of them may come in and possess us, that we shall become even as our friends are who thus live in us. This is the only way God can really help us. This we understand to be the meaning of this text. Thus may his Spirit be in us.

The Spirit of God walks among us and ministers to us in the many benevolences that a divine providence has extended to the children of light. We all enjoy the Spirit of God in this sense, and many times in a protecting degree of which we are not conscious. But my dear friends, does the Spirit of Jesus Christ our Lord abide in us according to the promise of this text? It did so abide in our fathers of this faith. It seeks so to abide in us. Does it? is the question each devout Saint puts to himself every morning and every night.

If the Spirit of Almighty God is to be in us in this fuller sense, then we must make ourselves into the kind of men and women to make that experience possible. Kind cometh unto kind; like cleaveth unto like. And so as the children of our fathers in this great and moving faith, we endeavor on, that as the Spirit of God was resident in them it may become resident in us, to the finishing of the great work which they were enabled to begin, and to the completion of which we are divinely called.

The Manifestations of the Spirit

We have read here of the manifestations of the Spirit, the signs, the outward evidences of spiritual life, one or more of which may and should be evident in the life of each Saint, not as man will, but as God wills. May I venture my concept of this divine abode in us?

These manifestations of life are not ours to command. They are decrees of God. Not arbitrarily decreed, for they have been decreed to be in us from the very nature of our individual creation. The gifts of the Spirit are not things added to us to make up a deficiency. The gifts of the Spirit are but the quickening of forces in us in the beginning.

I think I can demonstrate what I mean by three questions: Did you ever see a fool manifest the gift of wisdom? Did you ever see a skeptic manifest the gift of faith? Did you ever see a numskull manifest the gift of knowledge? You never did. You never will.

Now, I am not speaking of special dispensations of God's providence, such as were made manifest when he spoke his purposes through Baalam's ass. I am speaking of that continuous fountain, that daily abiding presence, that divine unction made manifest in a man's life from year to year. And I think if we could approach other manifestations of the Spirit of God from the same angle, manifestations other than wisdom, and faith, and knowledge, we would discover the principle working in the same way.

Not all men speak in prophecy. Why? Because it has not been given to all men in their creation to develop in concept, in vision, in power to declare the will of God. And he is the greater prophet among us who from his natural capacity is most capable of knowing and feeling and interpreting and speaking God, and who responds accordingly.

Why do I speak thus to you? It is, my dear friends, that I may move you to that which in my opinion, if you have not already been moved to it, is the only basic rule and divine foundation stone from which spiritual gifts shall be ours to enjoy "to profit withal."

Would you have the gift best for you to exercise? Cultivate yourself, then, and your gift will appear unto all men. It is but hidden away, and needs only that you uncover it, under the power of God's divine grace. Uncover yourself, and your gift will appear. Uncover yourself: study, and pray, and endeavor. And thus shall you show yourself approved unto men and unto God. Your gifts shall flow forth to the good of all.

The Fruit of the Spirit

We speak furthermore of the fruit of the Spirit. Sometimes I have felt that our people have made a mistake in this; they have stopped short of the end in spiritual things. The manifestation of the Spirit, the gifts of the Spirit—we have many who delight to testify of these things. These all down the decades we have held up to the world as indisputable evidences that God is resident in us; when the test, the acid test of Sainthood is not that I shall speak with a new tongue. The acid test of Sainthood is that I shall bear the fruit of that Spirit. And the fruit of that Spirit is love. When the natural result of this divine gift resident in us shall have been made manifest, then will the fruit of love have appeared.

Love is joyous. Love is peaceful. Love is gentle. Love suffers long with the erring and is still kind. Love rejoices only in the truth. Love thinks no evil. Love thinks of no evil thing to do himself, nor does it think of some evil another might do. Love seeketh not her own, but another's good. Love believeth all things; endureth all things for Christ's sake; and achieveth all things in the end. Love never fails.

This kind of life is the fruit of the Spirit.

The pure love of God is the only saving grace. There is no other. Love is the only thing that brings life here, or can bring life hereafter. Love is the first great commandment.

On these two, the love of God, the love I bear toward God, the love I bear toward my brother—on these hang all the law. On these the law hangs in suspense. On these two hang and shall continue to hang in suspense the fulfillment in my life and in yours and in the life of the church all the law of God.

On these two hang in suspense the fulfillment of all the prophecies of the great God which converge and must come to pass and will come to pass in the end of time.

When men love to the full, then will they keep the law. Then will the prophecies be fulfilled.

Love is the greatest thing in this world and in the world to come. And being such, it has been well chosen as the motivation, the dynamic, the power of God in man by which Zion shall be lifted up, and out of her the world warned.

Trying the Spirits

We are commanded to try the spirits. Here is the standard. When a man comes to us and says, "I am of God," we are justified in asking that he manifest that fact in a godly way. We are justified in insisting, first, that he manifest the Spirit's presence. And second, that the manifestations which are set up before us as evidences of the life within him shall be genuine. And when those who come running to us have passed these first two tests, then we are justified in applying the third, in asking, "Do you bear the fruit of the Spirit you profess to carry? Do you love God and man?"

These first two tests as a people we have from the beginning, and you will grant me, quite generously applied to other folk.

Well do I remember those great days of my first experience in this church, when the elders bore testimony to me of the power of God resident in this people as evidenced by these outward gifts. Well do I remember how when as a lad I went out to preach for this church I took especial delight in putting my friends, my neighbors, and the world on trial in the light of this testimony. And I do it yet. But, my dear friends, I do it in a new consciousness, in the divine consciousness that the men and women of the world to whom I make this plea are justified in turning it upon me, and subjecting me to the identical test. And unless and until I am able to make manifest that I do bear the fruits of the Spirit, that I do love God and man, I must hang my head in shame at the bar of justice.

I am but a man, feeble, wavering, yet conscious that just to the extent I fail in love I fail as a witness for my blessed Lord. For until I am able to appear before the world in the light of the most searching investigation, and manifest that the Spirit of Jesus Christ our Lord has possessed my soul in abounding love, I but tinkle as does a bass cymbal; I am as a sound without meaning.

My dear friends, as the custodians of the faith of our fathers, it behooves us to move up the scale of perfection until we can pass the acid test one hundred per cent, bearing in abundance the fruit of love as evidence to the world we do possess the Spirit of God.

Trying Moments in the Church

And shall we not apply the test to each other, so long as we render righteous judgment? I think so. When, then, one comes in unto us in a movement from whatever place in the church to say unto us, Lo, here is the Lord! shall we not be justified in subjecting him to the test and in asking ourselves, if not him, Does this movement manifest wisdom? Does it show sound judgment? Does it appeal to us as coming from the mind of God?

Shall we not be justified in asking ourselves the further question, Does this movement inspire faith, hope, confidence? Does it move men to a righteous activity?

May we not ask ourselves the question, Does this movement disseminate knowledge? Does it enlarge our field of information? Does it bring to us a new thing? A new vision? a new earth? a new heaven?

And finally, does this movement come to us in the love of God? Does it bring joy? Does it bring peace to the minds of men? Does it come in the meekness of a divine humility?

That we shall apply the test is the command of God. We ought, then, as his believing children, to stand where is the light, that in trying the spirits it may be by the mind of God.

The Spirit of Our Fathers

This was the spirit which came to our fathers in their day. This was that most potent unction which made possible through those holy men one hundred years ago the rediscovery of the truth of God. This was that great light from out of the midst of which came the angel of Revelation in the restoration of the glorious gospel. This was that moving and sustaining power which held those men and women fervent in testimony through hell itself. This was the spirit of our fathers when on the cross of death, as Jesus Christ might have done, they radiated the new light bursting again from heaven, which was to continue to the end of time, to the glory of God and the salvation of the people.

It was with our fathers even as pictured in the moving lines of that beautiful hymn which our dear sisters graced us with in the beginning of this service, it was in the Spirit of God, the Spirit of the Christ of Calvary. It was the Spirit of God in our forefathers which made possible the coming forth of this Latter Day Glory.

Understanding the Spirit of Our Fathers

But this was not all; for supplementing it and making it possible and leading to it in all its fullness, was the spirit of these noble men and women themselves, our fathers and mothers in this faith, whose hands reach across the tomb and beckon us on that they shall not have died in vain.

I never understood that spirit until I was privileged to visit the Kirtland Temple. As a young man in the church, and I like to recall those days, because despite the crusty exterior which sometimes I appear to carry, there is in my bosom a sympathizing heart: as a young man in Iowa's winters, at the close of the day's labors, after chopping cordwood all day, when I ought to have been at rest for the work of the morrow, at a flickering coal oil light, I sat up to read, With the Church in an Early Day, and other passages of history which brought to me the breath of those noble men and women who made possible the coming of the glorious gospel into my life. And sometimes when I retired to my couch, it was not to sleep, but to live over again the terrible scenes on the banks of the Missouri River, where their women gave birth to children without protection from the snows of winter. To march with those men and women through those trying scenes, banished from homes. To mourn with them at Haun's Mill. To walk by the side of the weeping wife of the persecuted prophet, helping her to carry her children across the ice of the Mississippi. And I wondered in my soul what it could have been which carried those people forward in that testimony. I know now.

Thirteen years ago last August it was my privilege to visit Kirtland Temple. As I crossed the threshold of that sacred building, there came over me a divine presence, new, and strange, and marvelous. Standing alone in that upper room in the midst of heaven, with a new spirit within me, I discovered something which never had been there before. Oh, I just longed for an opportunity to do for this church all within my power to do.

And when I found myself willing to go anywhere, on any mission, under any circumstances, for any length of time, I asked my God, "What is this spirit? for under its grace I would go anywhere for thee; I would go anywhere for thy children."

I was asked, "Would you go to a certain country? naming a far foreign field."

I said, "Yes, Lord; under this spirit I would go."

"Would you start today?"

"Yes, Lord; with this spirit upon me I would start today."

"Would you start east?"

That was different. To start east would be to start away from home. It meant I would not be permitted to pass by my wife and two babies. To prepare them for the separation. But again and almost immediately came the answer, "Yes, Lord; with this spirit upon me I would start east today."

Then I was asked, "Would you stay a year?"

"Yes."

"Five?"

"Yes."

"Ten?"

"Yes, Lord; under this spirit I would stay ten years."

"And would you if need be for the sake of the people in that far-off country, and for the glory of my name, lay your bones down there away from homeland and people, to bleach in death?"

And I said, "Yes, Lord; under this spirit I would do that."

Then I again asked, "Father, whence is this spirit of devotion I feel toward thee and thy creatures? Whence is this willingness to endure for the world's sake?"

And came the answer, "My son, this is the endowment bestowed upon my people at this place. And which I stand ready to bestow on the Saints of this day, for the work of testimony before them in all the world."

So it was that for the first time in my experience I understood both the Spirit of my God and the spirit of my most holy fathers in this faith, by which combined power they were moved forward in that fervent testimony, under which they indeed poured out all the things they had, and all the things their wives had, and all the things their children had, and all the things their children's children had, that God might be known in the midst of the earth.

A Word of Testimony

My dear friends, to you who will believe it tonight, that spirit of the endowment has since been many times repeated in my experience. And never so fully, never so majestically as in recent months. Nor is that all, for to those of you who will believe the testimony of these feeble lips, that same divine unction, that foretaste of the endowment to come, that power of God is mine now at this moment. And you know it is mine. More, it is yours. And you know it is yours. In every pew before me, you who unreservedly and with sincere desire endeavor to achieve the divine purpose know that possessing your souls and leading you out to the power of moving testimony is the light of God approaching the endowment.

My friends, believe this word of testimony. We as a church are moving forward. We are moving under the light, the intelligence, the power of the coming endowment of God. Under that foretaste of the great day of the full endowment soon to come to us if we will make it possible.

May we be wise servants and harmless as doves, that these privileges may early be ours.

This, my friends, is the faith of our fathers in which we continue. This is the calling of our fathers in which we continue. This is the spirit of our fathers in which we continue.

Let men say what they will say. But let them deny what they will. We veritably know whereof we speak. God does dwell both with us and within us by his power. And it shall continue so until his presence and light and intelligence shall be ours unmeasured in Zion's redemption, and testimony borne to a dying world.

Let us continue in the spirit of our fathers.

The entire message of the Bible is given in these precious words: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life."—John 3:16. Here it is, the whole scheme of redemption stated. God loved the sinful world. He gave his only Son in his divine efforts to redeem it. Those who believe and obey shall live eternally. Those who disbelieve shall die the eternal death. The more familiar we become with the teachings of the Bible, the deeper will be our interest in the plan to save the world. The value of a life will be discovered, and the meaning of the loss of a soul faintly imagined.—Abe F. Bennett.

What of Progress Have We Made?

BY E. G. HAMMOND

We have now occupied about a hundred years endeavoring to redeem a place of safety for such as choose righteousness, and we find ourselves in the midst of hastening incident to the intensifying demand for such a place with much less accomplished than the length of time occupied would entitle us to expect.

It can not be said that great effort has not been put forth, nor that great sacrifices have not been made; but we are forced to admit that the fruit of these labors in real accomplishment has been small.

Just to chop is of no credit to the woodsman, unless he fashions something, a crossbeam, or pillar, or post. And just to work means nothing except as it turns out some product or some instrument that can be used in the building. It is of no avail just to make chips, for notwithstanding we may sweat and puff and blow as much at this as at that sort of labor that finishes parts, you can never build houses of chips.

It takes a restricted and somewhat refined effort at chopping, with a pattern in mind, to fashion a beam or a pillar, and as to the work by which we hope to prepare the shelter of Zion, there are definite lines to work to, suggested by the word of God himself that, "It must needs be done in mine own way."—Doctrine and Covenants 101:2.

If our work is to be effective, then, it must needs be done in a definite way. Not because God is determined to have his own way, but because he knows no other way can be effective. It "must needs be."

Physical laws are strict and invariable. If you put your hand in the fire, it burns; or in the mill, it is crushed. It must needs be so; for these laws are prescribed by the nature of elements about us. But as to laws apparently emanating from individuals, even though from Jehovah himself, it seems to be our unvarying human tendency to give them a more liberal construction, and a loose application that allows us to do just about as we please.

As Saints, we can easily see this tendency in the creeds of the world, as it is manifest particularly in their attitude towards baptism. It is regarded as an ordinance of no actual importance, and supposed to contribute nothing whatever to the candidate. It is merely the outward sign of an inward grace.

Now we as a church observe a law of the laying on of hands for ordination to the ministry; and in view of what has been said, I wish every Latter Day Saint in his own mind would inquire whether this ordinance really amounts to anything of itself, or whether it, too, is to be regarded as an outward sign, merely.

"As You've Lived, So Now Make Answer"

I should like to see every man take a definite position in his own mind as to whether ordination to the priesthood means anything; whether it actually invests one with any new spiritual or intellectual power not formerly enjoyed, or places one in a position to draw on powers he would not otherwise be able to command.

Well, I believe it does, and that the squaring of our forces to a profounder respect of this fact will be necessary before our work can become effective.

The power of the gospel is administered largely through a series of gifts bestowed on men, not as they will entirely, but "as God wills"; and we are admonished to seek the best gifts. This seems to be an admonition to the Saints at large, rather than to the ministry, as it appears to me; but whether so or not, it is to be observed how great store is usually set by anything uttered through the gift of prophecy, or of tongues—it is nourished as the very word of God.

Now we would not detract in the least from the importance of these gifts, nor lessen the respect to be shown them. But we would urge the recognition of another gift, which, although coming from the same source, has been much less respected, we fear, and that notwithstanding it is probably a degree or two more dependable than those mentioned before, as they are commonly manifested among the members, and that is,

The Gift of Preaching

The Nephites attained a high degree of development, "Having . . . many gifts; the gift of speaking with tongues, and the gift of preaching."—Book of Mormon, Alma 7:31.

That the power of this gift was not to be enjoyed by everyone in general is suggested by Paul, saying, "How can they preach except they be sent?"

There is another way to present the word, to which we shall have occasion presently to advert, but as showing the gravity attaching to that which is uttered by this gift:

Behold, and lo this is an ensample unto all those who are ordained unto this priesthood, . . . that they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost; and whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost, shall be scripture; . . . shall be the word of the Lord; shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation.—Doctrine and Covenants 68:1.

Paul doubtless had in mind the results from the application of this power and the fruits of this gift when he spoke of those who were "begotten by the word." And the gift seemed to be of such importance that even ordained men are restrained, thus, "If ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach."

Of course, if there were no other ways to teach but by the gift of the Spirit, that restriction would be unnecessary. But that there are other ways is further and more directly manifested, wherein it is said:

He that is ordained of me and sent forth to preach the word of truth by the Comforter, . . . doth he preach it by the Spirit of truth, or some other way? and if it be some other way, it be not of God.—Doctrine and Covenants 50: 5.

As no prophecy of the scripture is given of any private will of man, so the power to exercise the gift of preaching cometh only by the Holy Ghost, as God wills, and it must have been to some purpose that he said unto his disciples:

I have chosen you and ordained you.

And again, verily I say unto you, and I say it that you may know the truth, that you may chase darkness from among you, for he that is ordained of God and sent forth, the same is appointed to be the greatest, notwithstanding he is least and the servant of all.—Doctrine and Covenants 50: 6.

It seems that the ordained man, then, is to be greatest, in a sense, because through his ordination he may receive a gift, if he lives for it, whereby to dispel darkness and to cause the truth to shine.

Therefore, why is it that ye can not understand and know that he that receiveth the word by the Spirit of truth, receiveth it as it is preached by the Spirit of truth?—Doctrine and Covenants 50: 5.

But what of that other way, or of those other ways of presenting the word?

It is hard to utter in a way to touch the heart of any but the common people, but being, as Shakespeare saith, "a true laborer" whose greatest delight is "to see my ewes graze and my lambs suck," I can think of no illustration to better reflect the difference than a lamb taking his nourishment in the way God ordained he should get it, and another, who by sad misfortune must get it some other way, in the application of which he pushes back with all four feet so that you have to confine him, and there he snorts, and struggles, and strangles, protesting not only the way it is given, but the blueness of skimmed milk, as well.

I am acquainted with an infidel who knows the Scriptures, chapter and verse, and can recite them at length, and he is all the more an infidel. He was taught professionally, and learned mechanically, but was not enriched spiritually. He had the letter that killeth, but lacked the fat of yellow cream that you never get with skimmed milk. This man was as those described by George Fox, founder of the Quaker Society, saying:

All Christendom, so called, had the scriptures, but they wanted the power and spirit that those had who gave forth the scriptures, and that was the reason they were not in fellowship with the Son, nor with the Father, nor with the Scriptures, nor one with the other.

The record of the Scriptures is not enough, even though we have the three books complete. There must be present the rich cream of a living element in their presentation to us, or they can not give us life. That living ingredient can not be committed to books, nor transmitted by records or the power of man. But it is committed to, and transmitted by the living members of the Order of the Son, who may say as he said:

As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father; so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me. . . . The words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit, and they are life.—John 6: 57 and 63.

In his words there was the richness of food, and flavor, and the power of life. And not in his words only, but in the words of those who should be ordained to the same order, the same power.

Wherefore he saith, "He that receiveth you receiveth me."—Matthew 10: 35.

His servants were to speak as he spake, and their words, by the Spirit, were to contain the same living element his contained. As he said: "Whether by mine own voice or the voice of my servants, it is the same."—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 8.

Again:

If they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also.—John 15: 20.

Yea, blessed are they who shall believe on your words . . . for they shall be visited by fire and the Holy Ghost.—Matthew 5: 4.

That living content, then, must be present for the begetting and sustaining of living saints. And we should better understand, it seems to me, that with the purpose to provide the living word, the order of the Son was organized among men so as to enable them to administer it, because that without this arrangement that life-giving power could not be enjoyed. Wherefore,

This greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the . . . knowledge of God. Therefore, in the ordinances thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the power of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 3.

The pressing demand for a Zion that is upon us now, and the feeble showing we are able to make in answer to that demand, may be sufficient to indicate that it must needs be that we shall go forth in His own way, if our work shall become effective, and may assist us to cease chopping chips and turn to the effective shaping of timbers whereby Zion shall rise into form.

"The Child's First School Is the Family."—Froebel.

Injudicious Praise

Mrs. Lee was visiting the studio where her five-year-old daughter, Virginia, was beginning the study of instrumental music. Virginia had been asked to join in some simple little songs and had done very well.

"Oh, what a lovely voice you have, Virginia; you can certainly sing," gushed Mrs. Fields, the owner and conductor of the studio.

"Isn't she fine? She ought to have little lessons in vocal work," raved Faye, Mrs. Fields' grown sister.

Virginia twisted with pleasure and complacency and remarked, "Yes, I think I do sing real well."

"Of course you do," agreed the ladies.

The thoughtful mother took her little daughter out of the studio as soon as possible. On the way home, Virginia asked if she had heard what had been said. To this the mother responded: "Yes, I think it is so nice of them to say such kind things about my little girl. Of course you know, dear, they wanted to make us feel happy, so they were extra generous."

The child was thoughtful for a few minutes and then said, "Well, I do think I can sing better than any of the other children around here. Mother, don't you think I should begin to take vocal and dancing lessons?"

"No, indeed, dear; not for quite a while."

"But, mother, Faye said I was a born dancer, and Mrs. Fields told me I was the most graceful child in her classes, unless it is Dena! and, mother, I can do better than she can, even if she does feel so smart and big."

"Listen, dear, mother will tell you when she wants you to do those extra things, so let us not worry any more about them."

After a short silence: "Mother, Faye thinks I won't ever amount to anything the way you are raising me."

The mother was absolutely nonplussed for a few moments. She felt really more than vexed that a child so young should have been exposed in this way, especially since she had had to help Virginia constantly because of a natural tendency to think too highly of herself and her ability. She was sorry to see the unaccustomed frown of irritation on the young face and wondered how Mrs. Fields, herself a mother, could take such an attitude toward a child or permit her sister to do so. "Does Mrs. Fields carefully consider and weigh all her actions and those of her children as I do?" she questioned. "We were both students of child psychology, yet I can not see that she applies any of her knowledge, either in training her own children or dealing with mine." But she pushed the annoying thoughts quickly and resolutely aside and looking down tenderly at her little daughter, she asked, "And what does Virginia think?"

It was the child's turn to be nonplussed. Then meeting her mother's loving gaze, a new spirit of loyalty was born.

"I'd rather have you for my mother," was her somewhat irrelevant reply.—Lenora Bailey.

Great Britain's New Legitimacy Law

Until the beginning of this year no child born out of wedlock in Great Britain could be later legitimated by the marriage of the parents. On January 1, 1927, an act came into force making this possible, except in cases where either parent was married to a third person at the time the child was born. Legitimation dates only from the time the act came into force, even though the marriage occurred earlier. Legitimated children are to have the same rights of inheritance as children born in wedlock, and they have the right to have their births registered.

A Nursing Mother Needs Sunlight and Green Vegetables

Experiments recently made by physicians seem to prove that if a nursing mother has plenty of direct sunlight or is treated by artificial violet rays, she will be able to give her baby what is needed to prevent rickets and also escape for herself the breaking down of the teeth which so often follows the bearing and nursing of children. Other experiments have shown that the ricket-preventing vitamin A is associated with the green color of the vegetables in which it occurs, so that the ordinary garden variety of lettuce is a far better source of energy than head lettuce.

A New Idea in City Playgrounds

New York is to begin the construction of a special sort of playground adapted to the peculiar conditions of population congestion in that city. This playground, which is to be six stories high, will be built in the form of five terraces, with open-air ramps leading to each level. Altogether there will be over 100,000 square feet of open-air play space and about 127,000 square feet of indoor space. It will

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

Jonesport, Maine

At the close of my last "little journey," I was aboard a Boston & Maine railway train with Bishop M. C. Fisher, bound for Jonesport. It was on January 21, the anniversary of my natal day. For many years past this day had brought me a message of love and loyalty, and I could not but feel its absence this time.

When M. C. and I were astir on the next morning the train was past Washington Junction; and we were in the midst of typical Maine scenes. Maine as one of the first of American commonwealths, her part in American politics, her varied industries, and as the home of typical Yankees, has always had great interest for me, though it has not been my pleasure to visit the State often. Twice before I had been there, once some twenty years or more ago in company with Brother F. M. Sheehy, and again in 1915 when the family on our return west from the year in Worcester we had spent a few days on Deer Island. On neither occasion had I been farther east than Stonington, and then only along the coast, except when crossing the State toward Montreal. So I was looking forward with pleasure to seeing Jonesport, and more of the maritime portions of the State. To reach the coast towns of Maine by rail necessitates a trip quite a distance inland after all, though never far from salt water; for great long arms of the sea penetrate for miles in a northerly direction into the mainland, so the railway passes near the head of these arms, bays, and reaches.

And as we looked out upon the wooded slopes and hills, I recalled that once Maine was a chief source of lumber. But now its great pine forests are practically gone. Shall we say sacrificed to the avarice of man? Yes, to his avarice and shortsightedness. With no efforts towards reforestation the woods of Maine have changed. Lumber is still taken out; but in neither the quantity nor of as good quality as previously. The soil so well fitted by nature to sustain great forests, has produced other woods, and at almost every station ricks and cars of pulpwood could be seen, and everywhere cordwood was in evidence. And vistas of miles and miles of woodlands caused meditation upon what might have been had a great lumber industry been preserved by forethought and curbing of cupidity. But, what with pulpwood (in turn not being protected), barrel staves, woods for tool handles, and some smaller lumber mills, even along the coastwise portions of the State, quite an industry in wood is still carried on. Agriculture has not grown as forestry has declined; and so, except in valleys where special soils encourage vegetable growing, Maine's population has thinned, except where "rustication" and "recreation" pursuits of people from the interior and south have built up the coast towns. Vacant houses and abandoned "farms," bear evidence.

And as I meditated upon the story of ruthless destruction of the great forests of Maine, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Louisiana, and now California, Washington, Oregon, I contain an auditorium, dance hall, swimming pool, gymnasium, and bowling alleys, while the little children will have swings, seesaws, and other playground equipment. Rents from stores on the street level are expected to furnish operating expenses. The first playground of this design will be for the use of the lower East and West Sides of the city. Doctor William J. O'Shea, city superintendent of schools, is chairman of the committee in charge of the project.

not only wondered what the ultimate outcome would be, but I could not but think of the "regions round about" a certain center in which we are deeply interested. And I thought of the former great forests of walnut, oak, elm, and pine, and recalled the hundreds and thousands of acres of southern Missouri lands I had seen which had been cut over, and no steps taken to preserve those great natural resources. And I thought a bit about how this might enter eventually into the problems of Zion. But doubtless, reader, you see it.

And so the robbed forests of Maine stimulated thought. As we passed through them, we couldn't see far, for the distance of vision was restricted by a fog which persistently hung. But what we saw was interesting.

We reached Columbia Falls about nine o'clock, where we were met by Brother W. E. Rogers, president of the branch at Jonesport, and Leon H. Crowley. In Brother Crowley's car, he at the wheel, we were taken over icy roads to Jonesport, the ice being the packed remnants of a heavy snow reduced by a prolonged January thaw. It was about twelve or fourteen miles, as I remember it, to Brother Crowley's home, and quite a portion of that distance was in Jonesport. The fog prevented us from seeing far from the road, and so I might easily have received the impression that Jonesport was quite a city. Later, when I had a chance to view the town from the water on a clear day, the fact was disclosed that it is very narrow and elongated. It stretches along the water front, the main street following the general contour of the shore. A town so stretched along a prairie road would doubtless have been called Stringtown. I remember one such town in Iowa, I believe.

Right here I recall that with all the questions I propounded to Leon and Brother Rogers and Newman Wilson and others, I failed to learn the genesis of the name Jonesport, or just how old it is. From certain aspects of the town it is easy to see it is far from young, and so one is not surprised to hear stories concerning families there now which go back several generations. It is easy to surmise that Jones' wharf grew into "Jonesport." And it is easy to guess Jones was a Welshman.

We, M. C. and I, after being driven to the far end of the town opposite to our entrance, and seeing where Brother Rogers lived and where the store was, and making a purchase at the store (handkerchiefs—cold, you know), we were taken to the home of Brother Crowley, where we were domiciled during our stay. The lunch we were served on our arrival and the quiet greetings of both Brother and Sister Crowley assured us of two things quite positively, first we were not likely to go hungry; and second, we were going to feel at home. Both promises were fulfilled. I think my Maine trip put several pounds of weight, flesh, on my bones, and the task of taking it off isn't going to be easy. Sea food always tempts me, and in some way the word must have passed that I was partial to them; or maybe it was just Maine's usual diet. Anyway, clams, fish, lobsters, were in evidence, and disappeared.

Lunch over, we took in the sights of Jonesport. The principal sights are two "sardine factories." One is said to be one of the largest in the world. (How natural that sounds! Reminds one of California.) It is the Underwood Factory, where the Red Devil brand of clams, sardines, etc., are canned. Only the clam chowder part of the factory was running. "Not much doing," said the superintendent, Mr. Ed Hinckley. But when I saw the boatload of clams being unloaded, and saw the bushels and bushels of them being steamed and sorted and made up into chowder to be canned, I made a mental observation that I should like to see that factory when it was "doing something." It looked to me as if there was machinery enough there to cut and fry and pack all the herring and sardines on the Atlantic coast; but I guess not, for along the coast of Maine alone are many other, though smaller, factories. Under the guidance of Mr. Hinckley, I saw it all, and my many questions found ready answer from him. In the engine room of that factory I found one with whom I have had correspondence dating back several years, Brother Ferd Norton, and as a lover of machinery, particularly steam and electrical, you can guess we soon had something to talk about.

After visiting the Underwood plant, we went to one owned and run by Brother Lou Hinckley, and he showed us how his factory is operated. Only the smoked herring part of this was running, but we saw quite a number of them being smoked and packed. It was interesting to see the large smokehouse with its hundreds of sticks of herring, and later to see those herring by the skillful hands of women operatives have heads and tails snipped off, cut open, cleaned, skinned, and neatly packed. In the boxes they looked almost like candy, and tasted good, but different.

By this time the afternoon was well-nigh gone, so we prepared to go to the church. Here we found preparation had been made to have the priesthood largely of the district eat the evening meal together. The principal item of diet, but not all by any means, was a clam chowder. I learned that the "cook" who had prepared this was Newman Wilson, our missionary in that field. Well, I did not hear Newman preach; but if he can do as good a job at preaching as in making clam chowder, he will pass.

It was a pleasant occasion, and as I ate with this group of earnest men and recognized that most of them were engaged in the occupation of gathering a livelihood from the sea, and arduous seafaring industries, I tried to appreciate adequately the devotion to the cause which will lead them to give additional strength and energy to church work; and I felt a strong desire to be helpful to them. That feeling always comes when I see such devotion and appreciate the handicaps under which so many are compelled to work. But along with it comes the consciousness of my own limitation, and I turn once more to the ultimate source of our help. And I am aware that most of these men are conscious of the necessity of falling back upon that source after we have reached our limits.

I am wondering if seafaring men as a class are more religious than others. What think you? The dangers of following the sea have always been set out in literature, and to landlubbers the toll of life taken by the sea seems large; but all vocations have their dangers. And yet, on the sea, subject to the sudden caprices of air and water currents, seeing the many inexplicable things which happen, seamen like woodsmen, lay their hands near the heart of nature and sense throbbings perhaps not experienced by others. And seamen should be religious—bravely so.

I shall not try to name all the men I met at the "supper." There were not many, perhaps twenty, or thereabouts; but I enjoyed meeting them. And may I hope that our meeting together was mutually helpful.

The Saints gathered in the upper room of the church for an evening service. I had been announced as the speaker. I did not try to sermonize, for I felt we, they and I, should be introduced. Of course Brother Rogers introduced me to the audience; but I felt we should get acquainted. So I tried to tell of my experiences as a servant of the church, my preparation for work, and my ambitions as man and officer.

Just how effectual that introduction was, I am not going to say. Instead I want to say a couple of words about the church building at Jonesport. The branch, I learned on inquiry, numbers near three hundred and fifty members. Of course not all are active. The auditorium will seat near that number. It is neatly finished, well seated, with adequate equipment for the usual services, and tastily decorated. For the lot on which the building stands and for the materials of which it was constructed, money was expended; for labor practically no money was spent. And the work was done by branch members. Nearly all the Maine men who follow the sea are handy with tools. Many are excellent boatbuilders, and some developed skill in carpentering approaching that of cabinetmakers. Working about their "gear" and motors they develop mechanical ability and the fundamentals of engineering. And so the Jonesport Branch was able by donated labor to erect a neat and durable church which would probably have cost fifteen thousand dollars to construct—perhaps more. The location is good, and the building is, I am told, the church home of Jonesport's largest congregation.

That night at Brother Crowley's, M. C. and I slept together. As we retired and lay chatting for a while, before going to sleep, we recalled that only on one occasion before had we bunked together. It was at a conference of the Lamoni Stake, at Allendale, back in 1897. One night we slept in a haymow, for the homes of the Saints were crowded; but the next night we were in a bed. That conference was the one at which a tempest in a teapot had been developed over the district president's recommendation that "Fred B." and I be ordained elders. M. C. and I are both about the same number of years older chronologically than we were then (though in experience I am sure I am twice as much older), our hair is thinner and grayer; and mayhap we have both "learned" to snore a bit. I had been warned that he had become somewhat adept at it, and so was afraid he'd keep me awake unless I could get to sleep first. Well, in the morning, cautious inquiry on the part of each developed the fact that neither one had heard the other. Whether Leon and Sister Crowley heard both of us, I can not say. If they did they were good enough not to mention it.

Sunday, the 23d, was a busy day. M. C. had insisted that I do all the preaching; but I insisted a little more strongly, I guess (for I won out), that he speak in at least one service. We both went to Sunday school, and I guess we both spoke, he to the kiddies downstairs, I upstairs. At a quarter till twelve he was the speaker to a good-sized audience.

Then followed a priesthood meeting in the basement, and for an hour or more I spoke to them. A period of questioning followed. For the midday meal, a bit late, we were in the pleasant home of Brother and Sister W. E. Rogers, and then back to the church for an afternoon preaching service wherein I was the speaker, and again in the evening. At all the services a goodly number was present, and the audiences evidenced an interest in the problems of Zion and Zion's conditions, for such was the theme.

At the close of that busy Sunday, I was a bit weary; but I was happy in the thought that perhaps good had been accomplished for the church, and that the knowledge gained of conditions in Jonesport and the district would be of advantage in future work. I had found pleasure in learning to know the Eastern Maine Saints better; and I was cheered a bit, too, by birthday messages from the daughters and son-in-law, and by one message signed by all the workers at the office. Thanks, fellow "prisoners," for the words of greeting.

The next day, Monday, a bit of a "change" was experienced. Of that in my next. F. M. S.

On Board a U. P. Train, February 17.

Fanning, Kansas

The Department of Women gave a plate supper about the middle of January, and a neat sum was realized. The department always assists in the paying of the janitor.

Sister Betty Twombly has been quite sick the past three weeks. We are glad to say she is much improved. Also Sister M. L. Schmid, of the Troy group, has been confined to her bed for some time, suffering a great deal. She, too, is better at this writing.

Brother James Blanten, of Troy group, passed away February 4. He leaves his wife and three children, besides several brothers and sisters and many other relatives who mourn because of his early departure. For several years he was afflicted with heart trouble. The funeral was at half past two Sunday, the 6th, conducted by Brother Schmid, and sermon by Brother Samuel Twombly.

On February 6, our district conference was held at Atchison, Kansas. This was a peaceful, profitable conference. Apostle D. T. Williams was present and preached Saturday night and Sunday morning. These were very able discourses, and all felt benefited. He left Sunday afternoon for Iowa.

Fred and Dan Marsh have bought farms and will move their families the first of March to this locality. We are growing in numbers, and our attendance is good at all services. Our Wednesday night prayer meetings are drawing attention and increasing in interest.

Brother and Sister F. G. Hedrick, who have been engaged in hotel business at Troy for some months past, have moved out, and we regret to see them go. Sister Hedrick is president of the Department of Women at Troy, and he is president of the Fanning Branch. We want to see them locate not far away.

Our slogan is "On to 1930 and beyond."

New Philadelphia, Ohio

February 7.—It has been some time since we have told the readers of the HERALD of our progress both spiritually and financially. We are moving along. Our Sunday school continues to grow. Our cottage prayer meetings are quite a success. Our social services are well attended, especially the sacramental services, as so many of our young people attend.

At our annual business meeting in January, the officers were each willing to fill their respective offices for another year. Elder William Gondy will act as our pastor; James Carlisle, sr., Sunday school superintendent. Our Department of Women is quite active at this time of the year in quilting. Sister Margaret McMillen as president is working with the cooperation of the Saints. With this staff of officers, there should be, and we feel there will be, a great work accomplished this coming year.

Brother and Sister A. B. Klar gave the Saints quite a surprise by placing a beautiful piece of tapestry art work back of the pulpit in our church. Torcheres were added and also a large light over the pulpit. Old furniture was refinished, and there were a new library table and a stand with beautiful, artificial flowers, new rostrum, railing, and curtains. It was indeed a transformation, and our stairway and basement also were under the carpenters' and painters' hands. Of course, some of the Saints of the branch helped.

We are looking forward to district conference to be held at Barberton, Ohio, February 26. We know a blessing awaits us if we are faithful and meet with so many of our dear brothers and sisters whom we do not have the pleasure of meeting at any other time. We deem it a blessing to sit and listen to those servants of God who come into our midst at this time. We hope the good work continues to grow and that the march might be strong and steady toward Zion, others joining our ranks as we move forward.

R. E. MASON.

Alexander, Kansas

This leaves us with a membership of one hundred and fourteen in our branch. We have the only church building in Northwestern Kansas District, and yet, no night preaching service and no Religio service. We do have Sunday school at ten in the morning and preaching at eleven, except on the first Sunday of each month, when we have our sacramental service. If meetings could be held at night, it is possible that seventy-five members could come out most of the time; and perhaps with the right kind of preaching and entertainment, nonmembers would again come, as of yore. As it is, some Saints attend the United Brethren Church in order to be getting some good, for one certainly receives good from Miss Niswonger's sermons on the ten commandments.

Our young people and children need entertainment and some special services—song services for example. As it is, there is a restlessness among the young folks, and they will and do seek amusement in other churches, communities, and some even attend dances. The older heads should make plans to keep our young, give them a party in their homes—say once a month—a lively good party with no harm attached. It is time to be doing, before it is too late. We have the talent as leaders in singing and entertainment. Why not improve this talent? Let us all say, "Lord, here am I. Send me." Let us start the ball rolling by having a valentine party.

The belfry is to be torn off our dear old church. Some of the hands which helped put it on the church are folded upon their owner's breast in their last rest.

Sister Schadel has been in very poor health all winter. Also Sister Elsie Keatley and Sister John Teeter are among the afflicted, and have been for some time.

Brother and Sister John Teeter entertained our aged Brother and Sister Ebert on the evening of February 7 with a supper, it being the old couple's fifty-second wedding anniversary and Sister Ebert's seventy-first birthday. The Eberts were the first members of the church here, locating nine miles southeast of Bazine, Kansas, some forty years ago. Some of the early missionaries will remember them in their sod house in those days.

Harold Teeter is the recipient of a lovely ring, presented him by his mother for work done in school. He is a junior in high school. He and Vida, both juniors, are very anxious to finish and enter Graceland. This is due to their sister Chrystal's love and boosting for Graceland. May others follow their lead! Quite a few were out Sunday, the 6th, to sacramental services. Come again. May God bless all in our prayer.

When Jesus comes to reward his servants

Whether it be noon or night;

Faithful to him may he find us watching,

With our lamps all trimmed and bright.

Oh, can we say we are ready, brother,

Ready for the soul's bright home?

Say, will he find you and me still watching,

Waiting for the Lord to come.

Then let us each keep his commandments.

Some of them are these:

File your inventory; pay your tithing;

Go to church; and live at peace.

Pueblo, Colorado

February 13.—If any Saints happen to be traveling through our city, don't forget to stop and see us in our little building, which we have bought and converted into a church. It is located at 811 East Second Street. We have Sunday school at 10 a. m.; preaching at 11; Religio at 6.30 p. m.; and preaching at 7.30 on Sundays. The Wednesday prayer meeting also meets at half past seven.

We have started the year well with three baptisms, and there were some little children blessed. Brother Paul Darnell was here and preached for us. We enjoyed his sermons very much.

Branch officers are: Branch president, Brother John Eve, who holds the office of priest; E. B. Johnston, priest, and Brother R. E. Ard holding the office of deacon.

I certainly like these new Book of Mormon quarterlies for senior Religio study, and our new Sunday school quarterlies also make our doctrine very plain. One factor in this is the use of the Inspired Version for reference. Also the SAINTS' HERALD is getting better right along, and I am commencing to realize how much I would miss it if I were not able to get it. Nor would I try to get along without our little missionary paper, Zion's Ensign.

I would like to hear from Elders George Day, of Bemidji, Minnesota, C. A. Kress, formerly of Duluth, and P. S. Schnuckle.

The HERALD as never before, so it seems to the writer, has words of encouragement, good cheer, and that something which tends to bring the membership of the church into closer contact and loyalty to one another. It gives one the opportunity to vision some of the great things that are before this people.

Brother W. E. Haden has just closed a three-week series of meetings, baptizing two, and has left the seed for thought with several whom we believe will in time accept the gospel of the only true and living God. We have learned to love Brother Haden for his untiring efforts in this district and hope those in charge at the coming conference will send him back to complete some of the work he has so nobly started.

When we remember that the return of the Jews to their homeland and the building of Zion are to take place concurrently, we should be inspired to exert every effort to put over the Zion movement in our own country. The church papers let us know that the young people are coming to the front in this work and will soon be carrying the load and burden of their fathers. Let us go forward and build Zion by standing behind the prophet and the program of the church.

Ministerial Conference at Aurora, Illinois

On January 22 and 23 the priesthood from northeastern Illinois, southern Wisconsin, and the Hammond, Indiana, Branch gathered here in Aurora as a result of a request made at our fall conference in Plano. The purpose of the gathering was largely for the reorganizing of elders' quorums, and effecting organizations of the priests, teachers, and deacons. Considerable sacrifice and effort were necessary on the part of the men to attend, but from the expressions of different ones, all were amply repaid.

We held our meetings at 109 Fox Street, in the parlors of the Aurora Chamber of Commerce, these rooms being donated to us free of charge. On Saturday, January 22, at 3 p. m., Bishop Carmichael gave us a real educational talk, "Laying the foundation of Zion." I surely believe a clearer understanding will be had of the why of inventories as a result of Brother Carmichael's talk.

At 5.30 an appetizing banquet prepared by our local Y. W. C. A., and served by the Department of Women of the Aurora Branch, was heartily enjoyed by all. Apostle John F. Garver acted as toastmaster, and truly made us feel brethren in the true sense of the word. He called on Elder J. F. Wildermuth for the welcoming speech representing the Aurora Branch as the host of the conference. Elder E. O. Byrn, pastor of West Pullman Branch, Chicago, replied very graciously, speaking the sentiment of the brethren assembled—they were glad to be there. Bishop Carmichael and Patriarch W. A. McDowell were called on for toasts and replied with some very inspirational and encouraging remarks as to the progress and forward look of this latter-day work. At the conclusion of the meal a short program was given by the Department of Women of Aurora.

Returning at 7.30 to our place of meeting we enjoyed a lecture by Apostle J. F. Garver, "The meaning of priesthood." It can truly be said of some of our priesthood, they just "hold" the priesthood, but after hearing this lecture they should shake themselves into a new life and consider the priesthood with its responsibility, opportunity, and privilege.

Sunday at nine o'clock a social hour was enjoyed, the Spirit of the Master bringing comfort and peace to each one.

At ten o'clock the elders, priests, and deacons met in separate rooms and organized, with the help of Apostle Garver, Bishop A. Carmichael, and Patriarch W. A. McDowell. The elders chose H. T. McCaig, of Chicago, as president, and Earl Rogers, of Manteno, as secretary and treasurer. Brother McCaig is a man we believe to be well fitted for the place, as he has had considerable experience in branch and district work. The priests elected Ray Hurst, of Chicago, president. Brother Hurst is a young man of sterling character and tested ability. The deacons selected a very fine young man, Brother John Walgrew, of Chicago, who places the interest of this work first in his life.

Immediately after the organizations were effected, the ones chosen as presidents of their quorums were set apart by special blessing by Brothers McDowell, Carmichael, and Lenox.

Promptly at two o'clock every member of the priesthood was back from dinner, served at the homes of the Saints, eager for the service to begin. All were anxious to hear more of "Laying the foundation of Zion." Many points of interest were discussed regarding the financial law. Many things heretofore not clear were apparently made plain. We truly believe that organization is necessary to success, especially so when there is a desire for it, such as was manifested by the priesthood.

The conference, we believe, was a great success, with but one thing to mar its completeness, and that was the ill health of Brother David E. Dowker. He was unable to attend the entire service. His greatest joy was in the satisfaction that because of his untiring efforts the conference was made possible. At this writing he is on the gain but not yet able to return to his field.

WATERLOO, IOWA, February 8.—On the evening of January 28, the little stone church of the Waterloo Branch was the scene of a pie social. A large number attended the program and enjoyed the social. Almost twenty dollars was taken in that evening from the sale of pies. The pies were cut and sold by the piece, with the exception of one, a mystery pie, called the K L D S radio pie. This was sold whole and brought four dollars. Next it was sold by the piece, and this brought it up to ten dollars.

The young women of the branch, married and unmarried, have recently organized a chapter of Temple Builders known as the Sigma Chapter, with ten charter members and six more taken in at the next meeting. Brother C. A. Kress, branch president, asked the chapter to put on the program. They had eight days in which to prepare it, having just organized. No one had a uniform. But with much working and planning together, they all had their white middie and skirt. Thirteen took part in the program, and they looked very nice in their white suits with blue ties and nautilus embroidered on the left sleeve.

Sister Jackson, head of the Department of Women, gave the opening prayer; and without announcing, each girl as her turn came performed her part in the program. A Temple Builder exercise, which explained the work and aims of the organization, was nicely rendered, after which a Temple Builder song, written by Sister Mabel Hall was sung. The program was enjoyed by all.

While pies were being cut and served, Brother Kress took charge of the recreation; riddles were given and answered and one or two games played, children and all taking part. The pieces of pie went quickly, as everyone had brought a pie appetite to church. The radio pie brought the most fun and speculation. Dana Beringer was the maker, and it was said to be the first and last of its kind ever to be made. The pieces went quite high. The girls of the Sigma Chapter went together and bought one piece and let it go to be sold over again. One brother bought a piece and let it go to be sold over, saying that if the girls couldn't eat it, neither could he. One or two more pieces sold the second time. The most fun came when the pie was cut, and the bidders were called up to eat their pieces. Each one was afraid the laugh would be on him. But it wasn't half bad, and before it was all gone those in the back were crowding up for a bite. The owners were not a bit stingy, and those who liked lemon filling rather strong, and a little raw lemon, found the pie very much to their liking. It reminded one of the times when the static is fine on the radio. The evening will be long remembered by all present, for through their enjoyment it brought all closer together, and none can ever again think of the Temple Builders without seeing those girls in pure white and recalling the program put on that night by earnest, sincere hearts.

At this writing, the chapter is planning on going to Oelwein, Iowa, to put on a play Friday evening, February 11. The girls are working hard and faithfully for this program.

Plans have been drawn up for a basement for a new church here. Our church is rapidly becoming too small. Sometimes it looks as if we would push the walls out to make room, but some way is always found to make just a little more room; so everyone is cared for. We hope in the near future to see the work started on the basement.

At present Brother Kress is at Oelwein holding services, and reports good attendance and a good spirit.

The writer has been made to feel God's power and goodness to him just recently, as he was taken suddenly ill Sunday evening and had to be taken to the hospital, but by administration was able to be out again in three days. Truly, the signs follow the believers!

The work here is forward, and God is choosing the young to work. Brother Kenneth Wolff was called to occupy as deacon, and he was given the promise that if he were faithful he would be able to do much for God's work. This brother united with the church a little over a year ago.

The sacramental service last Sunday was a feast to the soul. Though there was no gift manifest, each felt the Spirit resting quietly upon him, and of this the testimonies bore witness.

Des Moines District Conference

We are glad to be able to report the conference held February 4, 5, and 6 was splendid both in attendance and spirituality.

Sister Lenore Christy was the principal speaker Friday afternoon, her subject being, "What does the church mean to you?" This direct and searching subject was handled in the plain, characteristic way of Sister Christy. She urged the sisters to study the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, stating that the church is the light of the world in its teaching of doctrine, of tithing, and of stewardship. The Saints were instructed to develop the four-square life: intellectual, social, spiritual, and physical. None of these are to be neglected.

Bishop E. O. Clark conducted a round table discussion at 4.15 on the subject of stewardships. Much of the benefits which might have been enjoyed were lost because the object of the meeting was not understood by some.

Friday evening was occupied by an entertainment planned by the Department of Women. A dialogue, "Citizenship," was put on by two local attorneys, Mr. H. E. McNutt, and George Y. Hammond. The subject of prohibition enforcement was the theme, and many points were made clear from the standpoint of the citizen and law enforcement machinery. It was made quite clear that the reason law was not enforced was because the citizen did not realize his responsibility in many cases. Sister Evleyn Finch sang, "Open my eyes, O Lord," and was accompanied by Vivian Casting. The Des Moines Orioles sang "Ride on, ride on." "Challenge of the cross," a pageant by the C. W. A. W. Class, directed by Bertha Robinson Deskin, was presented in a beautiful manner by a group of girls and young women. The meaning of the cross of Christ was made plain, as members of the class came forward to receive their cross. Some at first refused to bear their crosses, because they were rough, heavy, or their purpose not understood. The climax was reached when one sister started to bear away the heaviest cross of all but became tired and sat down to rest. The angel told her that she must not sit down, but must bear her cross continually. This brought every girl who had refused to bear her cross to the front in a beautiful tableau in which all took up their crosses, showing their willingness to follow their Lord. Apostle J. F. Garver offered the prayer of benediction.

While this program was being carried on, Bishop Clark was stricken with strangulated hernia and was hurried to the Lutheran Hospital, where an operation was performed as soon as possible. This event cast a shadow of sorrow over the Saints, and all went home with instruction from Brother Castings to pray for Brother Clark.

On Saturday morning, promptly at 7.30, Apostle Garver addressed the priesthood on the subject, "Feeding the sheep." His words brought to us the weight of responsibility of the office each held. At the 8.45 prayer service, special prayers were offered for Brother Clark, and a spiritual time was enjoyed by all present. Elders C. E. McDonald and O. L. D'Arcy were in charge.

Sister Christy occupied the ten o'clock hour, her subject being, "How we can add to the church service?" It is impossible for us to tell all of the good thoughts presented. One was that when we go to church, we should take our thoughts with us and center them on the purpose of the meeting.

At 1.30 the business meeting was begun, Brother Garver and the district presidency being asked to preside. Business was disposed of with dispatch, and a spirit of unity prevailed. Delegates to General Conference were nominated from the floor and voted on by ballot. Brother Garver was then asked to take charge of the conference during election of officers. Brother Henry Castings was sustained as district president, and he was asked to resume the chair. He chose Elders C. E. McDonald and E. G. Beye for counselors, his choice being indorsed by the conference. William Robinson was elected superintendent of Sunday schools; Stephen Robinson, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Sister C. T. Kirkwood was elected superintendent of the Department of Women, and is well qualified to take up the work.

Elder D'Arcy had charge of the evening service. Prayer was offered by Apostle Garver, and the sermon was by Apostle F. Henry Edwards. He spoke from the text, "Say unto the children of Israel that they go forward." The application was made to our day, that while the forces that were driving the children of Israel forward were the armies of Pharaoh, the forces moving us are economical pressure and desire for the full expression of Zion's ideals.

Sunday morning found the priesthood assembled at seven o'clock for a lecture by Brother Garver, who emphasized the thought that the membership could not pass the point the leaders set for themselves. The need of pastoral work in the homes of the Saints was brought forcibly to our attention, and consciousness, and higher resolutions were formed by those who heard. The young people met for prayer services at 8.15, in charge of William and Stephen Robinson.

At half past nine the children met in the lower auditorium for classes, while R. J. Cornell, secretary of Polk County Council of Religious Education, addressed the older folks in the upper auditorium. His definition of education was, "The introduction of control into conduct." The function of education is "to cause us to do the thing we ought to do when we ought to do it, whether we want to do it, or not." Mr. Cornell stated that God measures us with a tri-square, and that our reach toward God is determined by our reach toward our brother.

Apostle Garver spoke at the eleven o'clock hour on the theme of climbing upward, taking his text from 2 Timothy 1. F. T. Mussell was in charge, and D. E. Dowker offered the invocation.

The sacramental service at two in the afternoon was a spiritual meeting enjoyed by all. The district presidency were in charge. Elder W. D. Tordoff made the opening remarks, saying that his spiritual experiences of the past year had been the most wonderful of his ministry, and that God had in a marvelous manner poured out his Spirit upon members whom he had baptized.

In his testimony, Brother Garver stated, among other things, that it was not any worse for a man to be in the ministry and worry over his finances than it was for a man who worked in a foundry or any other business to worry over his. He stated that he met a salesman on the train who was going to a foreign country on an eighteen months' business trip, leaving a wife and three children behind at home. He asked, Why won't a minister leave his home and family when necessary to sell food for the soul?

In this meeting Doctor Hull related a vision in which he in company with two other brethren visited the home of a missionary who had spent the best years of his life in the service of the church. They were invited to dine, but found it almost impossible to eat the food that was being served. He went into the kitchen to find what was wrong and was informed that their allowance was three months in arrears, and that the food which was on the table was the last in the house. He immediately reached for his check book and wrote out a generous check and gave it to them. His testimony touched every heart, and appreciation of our brothers' and sisters' needs crept into the consciousness of those who heard.

J. L. Parker stated that the days of his missionary life were the happiest in his experience, and that his family lived better then, on half the income that he is now receiving, with less worry over financial burdens. Brother Castings stated that as the people had chosen him to serve them another year, with the help of God and the Saints he would do more than any previous year.

The testimonies of these brethren show the trend of all minds, and we feasted at the table of the Lord.

Brother J. L. Parker organized his forces for taking subscriptions, giving several prizes, but results had not been announced.

The young people enjoyed a period of recreation Saturday night in charge of district officers, and a royal time was had. Apostles Garver and Edwards staged a peanut-eating contest, the former taking all of the honors and also part of F. Henry's stock of peanuts. A peanut race between four teams consisting of twelve each was next. Other games were enjoyed, and Vern Deskin led the group in song. Brother Deskin was again chosen musical director, and is well qualified for the work. Brother Castings obtained considerable notoriety as "Doc" Quack in a play staged by the young people, Vern being the victim. True to form, the doctor tried all manner of experiments, from amputating a leg with a rusty hand saw to operating for appendicitis with a butcher knife, but found gallstones instead. Vern finally located the trouble "can sir," when he threw a tomato can out on the floor and caused much merriment among the anxious watchers.

Sister Dalbey was in charge of the kitchen, and the food was sumptuous and served in excellent manner by the Des Moines sisters.

This was a conference in which all branches were represented, and most of the groups. The impetus from it will help us to go forward rapidly and climb upward with greater courage and faith in God and his church.

Brother Clark received witness of the Spirit during the Saturday morning prayer service that the Saints were praying for him and that he would recover and be stronger than before.

Interesting Revival at Fort Scott

On January 16 Elder William Bath began a revival meeting here which continued for three weeks. Brother Bath is one of the strongest doctrinal preachers the writer has ever heard. He possesses the ability to preach plain facts, giving, as he says, "chapter and verse" for every opinion presented, and yet he makes friends with most all who meet him.

Even though the ground was covered with ice, and the roads were almost impassable during the first two weeks of the meetings, he preached to a large audience each evening. He has created an interest among those not of the faith at this point, and if this effort is followed up by himself or other capable missionaries, it will be the cause of bringing those into the church that will give strength to both the general church and the local branch.

On Sunday, February 6, before the sacramental service, he baptized two young people. Each evening he addressed almost as many not of the faith as were of the faith. As the meetings proceeded, the interest of the visitors increased, as was evidenced by their bringing their neighbors with them the following evening.

Sunday night, February 6, the closing night of the meetings, the church was filled to its capacity. Brother Bath expressed himself as of the opinion that the meetings should continue for another week, but another appointment called him to Nebraska. We wish him success in all his works.

Invited to Help; Then Expelled

In October, 1913, we moved from Iowa to Washington, having bought some land one and one half miles west of the little town of Amboy. "We" means husband, self, and small son of two years.

The nearest branch of our own church was at Vancouver, the county seat, thirty-nine miles distant by wagon road, almost impassable the greater part of the year. The nearest church of any other denomination was the United Brethren, at Amboy.

In the course of the next twelve years, nine pastors came to the church; with one exception they never came to our home. The one exception came only to the funeral of our little daughter. Three of the neighbor ladies asked us at various times to attend their church, but we did not go.

Then, in October, 1925, one day two men came to our door. They were the pastor, Mr. Everett Hazen, and an evangelist, a Mr. Turley, who was conducting a series of revival services. The lady who had been playing the piano had been called away, and they had no one to play, and they had come to ask me to play for them. I answered that I could come, but first I wanted them to know I was a Latter Day Saint, thinking it might be they would not want one of my belief, if they knew it. They both said that was all right with them. On that understanding I went and played for them until their services ended. Previous to this I had been in the church building but twice, once in attendance at a funeral, once at a lecture. After the revival ended, I stayed away. Some weeks later several of their members, among them the pastor, again urged that I come and help with the music. After several invitations I went one Sunday. They at once appointed me on their Christmas program committee. I served, as asked.

Before the program was given, Mr. Hazen came to me and broached the idea of forming a chorus. They had never had anything, not even an organized choir. I said I would do what I could, though it was nearly like trying to make something from nothing.

I went to work. In a month we perfected a formal organization. I was chosen director. Gradually the work grew until in September last we had eighteen active members, seventeen paid-up subscriptions to the Choir Herald, had bought a piano bench, and had over ten dollars in the bank; had the start of a small Sunday school orchestra, and plans laid and being rapidly worked out for a junior chorus.

In September last they changed pastors. The new man was M. H. Fox, of Tangent, Oregon. On his first Sunday, when he came to thank me for the music, I told him as I had his predecessor, of my belief. He assured me that was all right, that he was glad to have my help. On that assurance I said no more, but went on as before. I may say here that in my year's work with them I had never obtruded my belief. I had never spoken to exceed six sentences about the Latter Day Saint belief.

In a little more than two weeks after Fox's first Sunday, he came to our home one afternoon and stayed the evening. To my surprise he demanded that we never say a word about our religion and, further, that we keep all ministers of our faith from this part of the country. I refused to make any such promise, and offered my resignation as director, which he refused to accept. Things went on until November 10, when this year's revival was due to start. The first evening, their conference superintendent, Reverend George E. McDonald, D. D., 4208 First Avenue, N. E., Seattle, Washington, walked in, came to the back seat where we were, and requested us to come to the entry. There he told us that he was going to hold a special quarterly conference at the parsonage and there have a different director appointed. I told him he did not have to hold any conference over me; I was gone already, just waiting the close of the service to get my music and other things from the church. He replied, "Don't flatter yourself that you are of sufficient importance that I have to hold a conference over you. I have a thousand other things to do." It happened that the other things were to admit the pastor, Fox, and his wife, into membership in the church!

McDonald told me that I was a menace to his church, that, right or wrong, the Latter Day Saint Church was unpopular, and that, right or wrong, I was to go. That right or wrong, or the good of the community, made no difference; he was going to stand by the discipline. I asked was it contrary to United Brethren discipline for a Latter Day Saint to act as chorister. He said, No, it was not in the discipline, but he was going to have it put there. No charges other than my being a Latter Day Saint were made then or since. I told him I had never sought a job in his church; that the former pastor had officially asked me to do all I had done. His reply was that Mr. Hazen was young and inexperienced, or he never would have asked me to come.

The church members, when they learned what had been done, were very indignant; that is, all but a few who believe in blindly obeying.

Reverend McDonald also told me that, while he couldn't shut the church doors on us, they would be a lot happier, and we would, too, if we went to our own church; and when I reminded him that Reverend Hazen had officially asked my help, he asked me if the request had been in writing. When I said no, he said it was of no good; that I had no right to start a chorus, unless the invitation was in writing.

Also one of the members has been circulating copies of The King's Business, published at Los Angeles, which contain some flagrant lies about our church, particularly the December, 1925, number. I was allowed to see but not have this number in my hand. Also Fox is spreading stories as to the dishonesty and shiftlessness of "the Mormons," and says he means our branch of the Latter Day Saint Church. Says he lived among them once.

Respectfully and in gospel bonds,
BERTA H. WILDERMUTH.

Gladstone, Michigan

February 8.—In the past six months we have had several brothers of the priesthood of the district with us. One of these was Elder John Goodman, of Boyne City, who held meetings a week before departing for Manistique; also Brother George W. Burt, who held meetings for a week to encourage the Saints. We noticed some outside interest manifested during his stay. Before long we are expecting Elder Ernest Burt, district missionary, to hold meetings for a time.

Our branch has been having some very good meetings in all the departments. For this we are thankful. Our corps of officers is the same this year as last, except for a few new officers in the places made vacant by the removal of Saints to other places. Under the capable leadership of Brother John Rassmusson, the Religio has been making rapid strides in its work of keeping the young people together. One of the recent programs was quite clever. The branch president was charged with abuse to his Lizzie Ford, it being specified that he had given it drinks of wood alcohol. The jury brought back a verdict of not guilty. The writer acted as attorney for the defendant.

On February 13, our next meeting, we meet with this department with a shower and mock wedding, the unfortunate couple being Brother Roy Denio and Sister Marie Welch. The attendants will be Sister Jessie Welch and Mr. Rex Stowe, the minister, Brother Gordon Boomer. The wedding march will be played by Sister Alma Denio. Our young people are taking good interest and have a greater desire to serve the church and see it advance to Zion.

H. ROY DENIO.

Special Meetings Closed Sunday

Apostle Gleazer's work has been practical and inspiring. Sunday evening closed the annual series of special services at the Brick Church. Each night a large audience, with a good representation of college students, has greeted the speaker. The sermons have been inspirational and practical—what might be called "revival."

Apostle Gleazer narrates some incident from biblical or church history, interprets it according to the theme under consideration, and then applies it to present religious and social life. Perhaps the most discussed among college students were his sermons on Thursday and Friday evenings, when he spoke on "the wrath of man and the purposes of God." Through these he carried out the principle that often man's misunderstanding wrath has compelled men of God to execute for self-protection the purposes for which they otherwise lacked faith.

Elder Gleazer's enthusiastic personality, vital faith, ministerial position, and educational background have made him stimulating to both college and town people, a combination of appeal that is sometimes quite exacting. The sermons, together with the musical programs, have made a splendid midyear addition to Graceland life.

Some very good music has been presented during the series of meetings. The committee succeeded in making the programs attractive and varied. The meetings opened Sunday evening with music presented by the Oratorio Society, assisted by the A Cappella Chorus, a ladies' quartet, and George Anway, soloist. Monday evening the A Cappella Chorus sang a Negro spiritual and the ever-popular hymn, "Jesus, lover of my soul." On the following night the Lamoni-Graceland Orchestra appeared, playing "Orpheus Overture," by Offenbach, and "The Mill," by Jensen. Charles Ballantyne jr., put the finishing touches on this program with his violin solo, "Salut D'Amour." The Vesper Chorus sang two numbers on Wednesday evening, and the S. C. I. C. Religio Class occupied the choir loft Thursday, with Mr. Anway and Miss Lloyd singing a duet as part of the program. A men's chorus, backed by the priesthood in the choir seats, furnished the music for Friday's service.

The regular general Athenian program was given in the church Saturday evening, in place of the preaching service. The program consisted of musical numbers, readings, and a one-act play. The entertainment was enjoyed by those who heard it.

State Health Worker Lectures

Madame Scott Pirie-Beyea, state health worker, gave two lectures to the college students on February 4. Her subjects were "Citizenship" and "Forces for construction and destruction." In the former, Madame Beyea stressed the essentials of a good citizen, bringing out the fact that if the individual citizen keeps up his health physically, mentally, and spiritually, the State has nothing to fear. In the latter lecture, she showed how four forces—agitation, legislation, education, and regeneration—can either build up or destroy. In both lectures Madame Beyea stressed health and character.

Madame Beyea's life is rich in experience. As she puts it, she has "been around the world twice and a half, and lived in eighteen countries." Since the World War she has been carrying the message of good health around the world. Bits of this rich experience creep into her talks and, coupled with her vivid personality, make her lectures most interesting and beneficial.

The History of My College

[Many HERALD readers undoubtedly would like to know more about the founding and history of Graceland College. In this issue we should like to publish a student paper which deals with the subject.]

The idea of building a college for the young people of the church originated at a meeting of a number of persons who were interested in the welfare of the young people of that time. This meeting was held at the Herald Publishing House rooms sometime in the early nineties. Some of the people present at that meeting were, President Joseph Smith and his counselor, W. W. Blair; Robert Winning, D. F. Lambert, Marietta Walker, and Bishop E. L. Kelley. The consensus of opinion was that it would be a very good thing for the church to build and maintain a college for the sake of the prestige it would give the church, as well as for the benefit that would come to the church by having a place to educate its own young people. At that time it was a very difficult thing to find funds to support the families of the few missionaries the church had, so it was decided that the project at the particular time was impracticable. The idea was revived a little later, and the selection of Lamoni for the location of the college was influenced by the fact that the largest offering in the way of a gift of land for the site was made by Marietta Walker. Perhaps another reason for the choice of location was the fact that Lamoni was removed from city environment and the evils that are usually found, more or less, with such environment. The Joint Council of April, 1895, appointed the Board of Directors to provide a faculty, suite of rooms, and all material necessities. A suite of rooms in the second story of the France Block on South Maple Street was secured in which to open the session in September, 1895. A faculty of three members for the academic and commercial work was secured, and a teacher of music was added. The academic faculty were T. J. Fitzpatrick, science and mathematics; J. T. Pence, English and foreign languages; J. A. Gunsolley, accountancy and law, with shorthand and typewriting on the side. Scholarships were sold for thirty dollars a year, and an effort was made to sell scholarships for future use to raise money to meet faculty allowances and running expenses. The salary of the commercial teacher at that time was fifty dollars a month for nine months. The other teachers were to receive a sum slightly more than that amount.

The new college building was first begun in 1895, the corner stone being laid on November 12. The laying of the corner stone was a red-letter day to the Saints of the church of the time. Over a thousand people witnessed the exercises, which consisted of vocal and instrumental music, prayer by H. A. Stebbins, laying of the corner stone by President Joseph Smith, and speeches by W. W. Scott, mayor of Lamoni, Honorable Zenas H. Gurley, Professor D. F. Lambert, and A. H. Smith. The corner stone was furnished and inscription carved gratuitously by Mr. Robbins, of Des Moines. A number of the books of the church, together with the Articles of Incorporation, were placed in the corner stone. At the close of the ceremony the doxology was sung and the assembly disbanded, most of them "going through college" at the invitation of President Smith, the lower preparatory floors having been laid, permitting access to the lower rooms. Although the building was not completed in structure, the Board of Trustees were anxious for the college to open as soon as possible, and the official opening took place in January, 1897. The educational work had been in progress since September 17, 1895. The student body of that time numbered about a dozen, and the faculty five or six. The classrooms comprised the lower floors of the building, the top floors being used as a dormitory.

The general progress of the college has been steady but sure, the reason no doubt being the hard struggle it has continuously passed through. With the advent of the World War, the college became somewhat crowded with a number of students who were anxious to take up radio work in the army. The necessity of more buildings was clearly seen, and this became one of the primary functions of the church. President G. N. Briggs has played a wonderful part in the progress of the college the last ten years. It is entirely due to his efforts that the college became recognized as an accredited three-year school and has progressed to the extent that it has the last few years. The college seems to be becoming larger every year, and no doubt it will become an accredited four-year college before many years have passed.

Graceland College possesses a wonderful and varied group of organizations and societies. One of the most outstanding ones is the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society, which was organized three years ago under the direction and leadership of Miss Carlile. Its purpose was to combine the functions of the college glee club and the church choir, thereby making a closer link between the college and community music circles. Two other organizations are the A Cappella Chorus and the Lamoni-Graceland Orchestral Society, both of which have furnished exceptional programs. The G. G. A. C. was organized two years ago for the purpose of promoting girls' athletics in the school. The Athenian Literary Society is no doubt the oldest society in the college. It was organized by Fred M. Smith on February 12, 1898. This one society was later divided into three societies, "The Spartans," "The Nainehtas," and "The Sophosians." These were later disbanded, and the present societies took their places. The industrial organization is almost as old as the institution, for it was during the second or third year that some of the janitor work was done by the students. From that time additions have been made by taking on more activities calling for additional services from students. The purchasing of the farm, which has been operated at times entirely by students; the erecting of the dormitories and establishing a boarding department, in their turn have made demands for additional help; and finally the laundry was started, making room for still others seeking opportunity to earn their expenses at school.

FRED M. COUSINS.

Spokane, Washington

I believe we have something very interesting to tell. Some time back in the Religio we followed out a plan mentioned in the little pamphlet sent out by the Recreation and Expression Department, by appointing two captains who chose up sides for a six-week contest. The losing team entertained the winners at an oyster and chili supper. Sister Orpha Coleman and Sister Edith Wood were the captains, known as the Reds and Blues. Sister Wood was leader of the Reds and Sister Coleman of the Blues. The Reds won the contest. A good spirit was demonstrated throughout the contest, and the banquet was a success in the extreme.

The superintendent appointed all contests. They consisted of best attendance at an appointed meeting, questions on the Scriptures, riddle guessing, spelling, etc. The contest was ended with a box social; prizes were given; Kirtland Temple was the center of attraction (a very fine duplicate of the original), finished in silver crepe paper, giving it the solidity and sparkling appearance of the original. This took first prize in the scheme. It was presented by Grace Wood. Second prize went to Orpha Coleman, who brought the "Old well curb." This was a neat piece of work built of imitation rock, wheel, rope, buckets, and everything that go to make up that which has quenched the thirst of the way-worn traveler. It was so real that I get thirsty every time I think of it, and homesick when I think of the one back on the farm. The beauty boxes were too numerous to mention in detail; suffice to say that Sister Mary Porter, sr., won first, and Sister Fay Walters second. So ended the contest.

But that is not all the good work that goes on. Brother Jot Bronson, who used to be a missionary in this district, now selling life insurance and who ought to be making out policies for people who now seem as if they will need asbestos suits in the future, has been giving the Saints some real treats in some old-fashioned gospel sermons, that kind which always makes you satisfied with the church and its purposes.

The majority of the young people are interested in the work, yet there are many who are drifting into the ways of the world. We hope by such efforts as we can make to bring them back to us.

W. W. WOOD.

Coffeyville, Kansas

It is with a degree of pleasure and satisfaction that we report the activities of the Coffeyville Branch. We have been very fortunate in having had with us Bishop C. J. Hunt and later District President Amos T. Higdon.

It was, for many of us, the first opportunity to really get acquainted with Brother Hunt. We shall long remember the message he brought to us, for it was one of assurance, optimism, and affirmativeness. We agree with one who labored with Brother Hunt when he said, "Brother Hunt has never known a dark day; if he has, he has never shown it." We hope it will not be three years again before he can meet with us.

Brother Higdon preached to us on the evenings of January 24, 25, and 26 and again on the following Sunday evening. His sermons were full of instruction for all, and we feel to a greater degree the individual responsibility, which is "our response to God's ability," for God will give us the ability if we will respond.

We were pleased recently to have had with us Elder Guy G. Cadwell, of Independence, Kansas. The sermon he gave us was well received.

It seems that the meetings of the past month have been of a high spiritual order, and we feel we have been especially blessed. The time of this writing finds us in the midst of a two-week series of meetings being conducted by Elder Virgil E. Sheppard of the district missionary force. We shall comment more fully upon these meetings at our next writing.

HOWARD P. ANDERSON.

Deloit, Iowa

February 7.—Missionary W. A. Smith, of Independence, has been with us for two weeks holding meetings. His subjects have been very inspiring, and he has left the Saints feeling strengthened and encouraged by his ever hopeful attitude. The attendance has been good, considering the condition of the roads, as many people from the country were unable to attend as regularly as they would have liked. He closed his meetings Sunday night, February 6, and accompanied Brother and Sister Gus Putbrease, of Ulmer, Iowa, home after the services. He expects to go from there to Cherokee, Iowa, to hold a series of meetings in the near future.

Our Sunday school has been progressing, the reports showing that we have been making a gain in attendance over last year. This we hope may continue throughout the year.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is doing its part to forward the cause. The classes are growing to such an extent that they will have to be divided in order that they may be given proper attention. The educational programs have been a great help to increase attendance. The program committee, consisting of Sisters Bessie Myers and Eunice Johnson, is to be commended for its untiring efforts along this line.

On January 28 this department held a social in the city hall, a large number of not only members of the department but those who do not belong to the church being present. After the games were played, refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. Following this a very nice program was rendered, and at the close of all this everyone journeyed homeward, hoping to enjoy many more pleasant evenings in the future. The committee expects to have a social event once a month.

Interest and activity in all the church meetings seem to be increasing, but there is still room for activity.

The local priesthood has been endeavoring to hold the banner of King Immanuel high, in response to the request of the bishop of the church to preach stewardship, tithing, and inventory during the month of January. As a result, many are filing their inventories and paying their tithing. Those contributing to the subject were Mearl O. Myers, branch solicitor; Lacy O. Myers, branch president; Guy R. Johnson, priest, and W. A. Smith.

Mallard, Iowa

February 12.—We have very little church news this month, for we have had no extra meetings or other gatherings, on account of bad weather and roads. So many of the Saints live in the country in this region that it has been impossible for them to come.

We have been blessed in many ways, having no sickness except colds, so our faithful ones have gathered in prayer services, which often are one hundred per cent.

We are striving to do our share to keep God's work before the world in this part of God's vineyard. Our Department of Women sent five dollars to help in making up the Graceland fire loss.

Sarnia, Ontario

February 7.—It has been more than a year since any news from our branch has appeared in the columns of the HERALD. But during this year we have been successful in our undertakings.

The Department of Women held a sale of sewing and homemade baking in a vacant store down town, and the sum of fifty dollars was realized. This was turned over to the building fund.

We also must mention Sister Ella Carrington's Sunday school class, which has about twelve members and was organized shortly after the holidays last year. They made various articles and sold them, put on a concert, and held little parties on Saturday afternoons. During the year they realized sixty-one dollars. Of that amount, forty-five was given to the building fund. We indeed feel proud of these young people.

At our annual business meeting held December 1, Brother W. L. Phillips was elected branch president; superintendent of the Sunday school, Brother J. Clatworthy; president of the Religio, Brother J. Rotz; and president of the Department of Women, Sister L. Swainson.

We have just finished a three-week series of meetings held by Elder B. H. Doty, our district missionary, and we feel that much good was accomplished among the Saints. There were no baptisms, but some, we know, were deeply interested. A number of the Saints and friends met at the church on Tuesday evening, February 1, to spend a social evening, and bid Brother Doty good-by and wish him success in his new field of labor.

The good news of our church papers spurs us on to greater activities and creates a desire within us to be of some assistance in the work of the Lord and his church.

L. M. SWAINSON.

Lamoni Stake

Apostle Gleazer's Reception and Work

The annual series of services of the Lamoni Branch was held this year during the week from January 30 to February 6. For the past few years it has been the custom to hold a week's series leading to the stake conference.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer was the speaker, coming for his first ministry in the Brick Church. On the Saturday night preceding the opening, a reception was tendered him by the local pastorate. The lower auditorium of the church was arranged as a reception room and decorated with potted plants and flowers. In one corner was the orchestra, directed by J. H. Anthony, which furnished a half-hour concert during the arrival of the guests. A program of entertainment, reception, and preparation for the coming services was presented by representative members. There were readings by Mrs. Evaline Burgess and Verna Garver, and a boys' quartet from the high school. Bishop Phillips, who had known Brother Gleazer during his early missionary experiences, presented him, and Elder Gleazer responded in words of appreciation for the reception and the friendly contact it had given with the people whom he hoped to serve. An introduction always has two parties, so W. E. Prall, the pastor of the Lamoni Branch, spoke of the congregation, the loyalty, materially manifested during the recent weeks, and the support that might be expected. George W. Blair responded for the Lamoni people, pledging them to the speaker. Roy Cheville presided and led the congregational singing that interspersed the several numbers. The ladies of the Department of Women, assisted by the Temple Builders, served cocoa and doughnuts to the several hundred present.

The meetings were designed to be inspirational and practical, what might be called "revivalistic." So Apostle Gleazer chose his themes and materials that would have meaning and challenge to the membership. His opening sermons, "Making safe the modern road to Jericho," pictured the old parable in a modern light. Wonderful as is the ministrations of the Samaritan, more wonderful is that of the living church in its program of making unnecessary the Samaritan task of succoring the fallen: its province is that of creating an environment that will allow men to traverse happily the road to Jericho. Particularly significant were his two sermons on "The wrath of man and the purposes of God," in which he described from the biblical and church history how man's misunderstanding anger has often compelled the people of God to carry out the projects for which their faith under ordinary conditions was weak. His enthusiastic personality, vital faith, and ability to translate religious experiences into an immediate appeal have been stimulating to the religious life of the Saints.

The musical programs have been a supporting part of the series, the several musical organizations and representative groups participating on different nights. The Oratorio Society appeared in concert on the opening and closing nights, and on other nights the A Cappella Chorus, the orchestra, and a male chorus. On one night the S. C. I. C. Class, a Religio group of high school age, sat on the platform and backed the congregational singing, and on another night the members of the priesthood sang. Hymns were mimeographed for each night.

The Stake Conference

On Saturday and Sunday, the stake conference convened. The business session was held in the morning; and in the evening a program of readings, music, and a one-act play was presented by the Athenian Literary Federation of Graceland. The Sunday services were a fitting climax and inspiring end to the week's series. A priesthood prayer service at eight o'clock opened the day.

By 10.45 a large congregation had gathered to join in the opening hymn of the sacramental service, "Rejoice, ye Saints of latter days." The meeting centered about the ordination of five young men; Lonzo Jones, to the Lamoni stake high council; Ralph Wicker, now president of Creston Branch, and George Lewis, Australian student at Graceland, to the office of elder; Morris Mortimore, of the college faculty, and Franklyn Weddle, student of the college and son of Brother and Sister E. E. Weddle recently from Fargo, North Dakota, to the office of priest.

It was an inspiring scene to see five young men of such character and ability dedicated to the service of the church. President F. M. McDowell delivered a touching charge to these men, speaking of the urgent need of men and the constant requirement for spiritual lives in order to serve. The congregation joined in singing "Nearer, my God, to thee," following which the men were set apart. In the afternoon President McDowell lectured to a large body of the priesthood on the minister's attitude toward his labor and the church. A capacity house heard Brother Gleazer's concluding sermon in the evening.

Business of the Conference

The business session on February 5 was characterized by harmony and interest. The stake presidency were chosen to preside, assisted by President F. M. McDowell and Apostle E. J. Gleazer. The usual reports were received, and the ordinations mentioned were approved. At the preceding conference a motion had been passed that the officers and department heads prepare a budget for expenses of stake operation, to be presented at this session. The committee submitted a budget, which was approved as a working basis. Delegates were elected to General Conference. In the Lamoni Stake, the policy has been to select as delegates workers from the several departments and parts of the stake. The following were chosen: W. E. Prall, A. B. Phillips, A. J. Yarrington, J. F. Garver, Hubert Case, J. D. Stead, H. H. Gold, Lydia Wight, G. N. Briggs, Mrs. A. L. Keen, Parley P. Batten, Ralph Wicker, W. T. Shakespeare, E. Dewey White, Mrs. Oscar Anderson, G. W. Blair, Mrs. W. H. Blair, Robert Campbell, Charles F. Church, Lyda Elefson, Mrs. C. B. Woodstock, and Florence Thompson.

Only one change was made in the personnel of the officers of the stake. A. R. Gilbert, head of the physical education department of Graceland, was chosen superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, taking the place of Fred Condit, who was released that he might give the needed time to projects with the young people of the local branch. Elder J. A. Gunsolley was released from the stake high council on account of his work as an evangelistic minister in the general field.

Certain items from the reports to the conference are worthy of mention in that they indicate the trend of the stake and furnish cause for hope and progress. Three features may be mentioned.

1. Tithes.—The tithes paid to the bishop indicate an increase of $2,894.07 over the previous year, notwithstanding the fact that over $12,000 was paid during that period on the Graceland Endowment. The bishop reported that to date the stake had paid $20,713.37 on this special fund.

2. Baptisms.—During the year, 99 were baptized into the church, in comparison with 68 during 1925. This increase is reported from several parts of the stake, not from any one locality. The vigor brought by such additions furnished the basis for a continuation during the coming year.

3. Priesthood Activity.—The increased activity of the local ministry is the most encouraging feature of the year's work. With an active, consecrated local ministry, other needs will take care of themselves. A comparison of the two years will be self-explanatory. During the year the local ministry preached 652 sermons in comparison with 391 of the previous year, and made 1,069 priesthood visits in the homes in contrast with 824 during 1925.

The statistical report shows a slight decrease in membership due to a clearing-up of the records and a consequent large number of transfers. But with this clearance completed, the records of the next year will reveal a comparatively small loss. The membership is 2,220.

The closing paragraph from the report of the stake presidency to the conference will best set forth the hopes of the future:

"It is with renewed courage that we approach the new conference year. If we are sustained in our present office, our goal will be

"1st. Greater unity, fraternity, sociability, and spirituality among our members.

"2d. More missionary services, all-day meetings, and stake conventions.

"3d. Every family, wherein we have members, visited at least twice during the year.

"4th. The church papers and periodicals in each home.

"5th. Every member a tithe payer.

"6th. More adequate and beautiful church buildings and grounds.

"May God help us to realize our goal, that the coming year may prove to be the best year in the history of the stake, is our earnest prayer.

"Wilber Prall, for the Stake Presidency."

Older Boys' and Girls' Conference

The Decatur County Sunday School Association conducted their initial older boys' and girls' conference at Leon, the county seat, Tuesday of last week. This movement is sponsored by the State and National Sunday School Association for young people between the ages of fourteen and twenty-four. Delegations of young people are sent from the different Sunday schools, each group of eight being sponsored by a leader. The Lamoni school accepted the invitation of the county association and sent twenty-one delegates and several leaders. W. W. Hield, superintendent of Lamoni public schools, acted on the committee for arrangements and programs, and other workers participated. C. B. Woodstock has been engaged in these conferences in western Iowa and was prominent in working out the arrangements for Lamoni's participation. Roy Cheville conducted the recreational period held in the basement of one of the churches. The election returns announced at the time of the evening banquet reported two Lamoni boys on the executive staff, Richard Anderson, son of Brother and Sister Oscar Anderson, president, and Marion Woodstock, son of Brother and Sister C. B. Woodstock, treasurer. Gertrude Lane acted as toastmaster at the banquet. This is a county organization, and the Lamoni Sunday school considered it a splendid opportunity to get in touch with other church workers and perhaps develop a better understanding of the church. The realization of the fact that young people of other denominations are zealous in religious services is stimulating to our youth.

News From the Lamoni Departments

The Sunday school is superintended by Walter Hayer, assisted by Harry Lorange in the senior department. An interesting feature instituted in the senior service through the chorister, Mrs. Wallace Blair, is the participation in the worship period by the classes. Last Sunday a group of Temple Builders appeared in uniform and sang the song of their organization, and one of the number read an account of their history and aims. On the preceding Sunday the college class of Roy Cheville conducted the devotional exercises—a male quartet, a responsive reading, and a group song by the class in the balcony.

A prominent feature of the Department of Recreation and Expression is a class of high school age organized last fall and sponsored by Mrs. C. B. Woodstock and Fred Condit. It is known as the S. C. I. C. Class. Organized with executive and committees, the class has invited capable workers to discuss themes of importance at their Sunday evening meetings and has supplied a program of recreation. The class is still in the developing stage and promises potentialities for the organization—promotion of the high school age.

The Oratorio Society gave their annual secular concert on January 25, assisted by John Sassman, boy soprano of Paulist Choir, Chicago, and the A Cappella Chorus. It was a benefit concert for the piano fund and was well supported by the townspeople, who were enthusiastic in their reception of the program. Master Sassman possesses a very pleasing tonal quality and was enjoyed by his hearers. Perhaps the chorus has never sung better than in this program. They are now beginning their rehearsals of the "Elijah."

Stake News

Elder Hubert Case is engaged in missionary meetings at Allendale, Missouri. He is now in his fifth week, with increasing interest and good attendance. In fact, he speaks much of the time to a capacity house. Ten have been baptized thus far.

Elder W. E. Haden has been at home for a few days, with his family who moved to Lamoni last summer. He is beginning meetings at the Lone Rock Church.

Last Sunday Hiteman held a Sunday school rally, with C. B. Woodstock of the general department as principal speaker. Hiteman is attentive to her church school and is conducting a junior service monthly.

The Lucas Branch is planning a semicentennial anniversary next Sunday commemorating the organization of the branch. Old residents are invited to return, and an appropriate program is being prepared.

Holden Stake

Atherton

Bishop J. A. Koehler preached for us January 27, both morning and evening. His sermon was to impress the Saints with the importance of filing their inventories and paying tithes. The evening sermon was on stewardship. Both sermons were very instructive.

Brother William Kelley preached the evening sermon on February 6—a very interesting sermon.

Brother David Baughman, who recently moved into our community, preached during the past week; also both sermons on Sunday. He gave us much to think about.

The women of the Women's Department served at a sale this week and cleared a nice sum of money, which will be turned into the building fund.

Warrensburg

Brother W. S. Macrae, our stake president, recently gave us a splendid talk, in which he portrayed very vividly some of the needs of the Old Folks' Home which is located at Holden. The Holden Home is an institution of the general church, and we wish its needs could be made known to the whole church.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is progressing nicely. Two classes are using the quarterlies edited by Brother Cyril Wight. These quarterlies are excellent. The first quarterley of the course answers the question: "Is the Book of Mormon necessary in answering existing doctrinal problems?" It may be made a great help also in assisting us to solve our present problems.

The programs following the lesson period are very good. The solos given by Alberta Kimball, who is here attending the State Teachers' College, were beautiful, and rendered in a manner which showed talent and training. Brother Albert McCullough entertains us with the guitar. Numbers of talks and readings by different ones have been highly appreciated by all present.

The stereopticon pictures shown by Brother Gaud W. Rodger, of Sedalia, were very instructive and entertaining. Brother Rodger explained the pictures, which were of Australia.

Brother G. W. Hancock, our local president, gave an excellent discourse recently on prayer and fasting. Brother Hancock was directed to give this discourse. He proved beyond a doubt the efficacy of both; and showed how Jesus, our Savior, set the example. If Jesus fasted and prayed that he might be able to foil the Tempter's power, how much more do we need to! Of course our loving Savior helps us; but we must bring ourselves into a condition worthy of this assistance through fasting and prayer. These, united with faith and humility, will bring us the blessings in store for us by helping us bring ourselves to the condition worthy of these blessings.

Marshall

Marshall Branch is neither dead nor sleeping; just busy. We have been finishing the basement of our church in order to have more room for our Sunday school and Religious classes.

Sister Lois Spohrer, our Religious superintendent, has been on the sick list but is now improving.

There was a pie social given at Brother Charles Ridge's home Thursday night by the choir.

Brother Rodger and wife and daughter were welcome visitors at our service recently.

Sister Motson, Sister Spohrer's mother, has returned from Independence, where she has been at the Sanitarium for treatment.

Our attendance at all services seems to be on the increase.

Brother Birch Whiting, of Cross Timbers, was another visitor at our services lately. He spoke both morning and evening.

Sister Lilley and children of Slater spent Sunday in Marshall.

Preaching Sunday, January 30, by our pastor, T. L. McCormick, subject, the ten virgins. He spoke again in the evening with good liberty.

Brother Harold Thayer, our former pastor, who has been absent from services so much the past two or three years on account of sickness, is improved and able to meet with the Saints. We appreciate having him present with us.

Brother Ralph Ridge is among the sick at this time. We hope it will be of short duration.

Knobnoster

Knobnoster is moving forward with indications of spiritual activity. The Department of Women, under the direction of Sister John T. Nutt, is meeting each week at the church for work and planning to institute a course of study in the near future.

Rumors of bake sales, socials, and an oyster supper are also heard, all of which indicate the women are determined to do their part in carrying forward the program of the church. This group adopted a budget system at its regular business meeting in December, and we are glad to report it is working splendidly.

Brother Earl Ross, our worthy deacon, reported January 30 that the apportioned money for the month had been over-subscribed.

Sister Don C. Chick received a fall sometime ago which has confined her to her home; she is somewhat improved at this writing.

Grandpa Norman has had a severe attack of the flu, which has kept him at home for some time. He is able to be about again.

Sister Lillian Roberts, daughter of Sister E. E. Petre, was taken to the hospital in Sedalia, where an operation for appendicitis was performed. She is convalescing nicely. Sister John T. Nutt received a telegram calling her to the bedside of her father at Douchet, Oklahoma, some time ago. Though severely injured, he was well on the road to recovery at last report.

Brother Nutt, our pastor, is preaching a series of sermons on the subject of stewardships. His first sermon, which was delivered at 11 o'clock January 30, was well received.

Brother R. E. Burgess occupied the pulpit at the evening hour. Other speakers who have favored us recently are Elder M. R. Shedd, of the local priesthood, and Elder J. A. Bozarth, of Warrensburg, who spoke on the subject, "The prodigal son." The correspondent was not present at this service, but favorable comment was heard.

Holden Loses Its Oldest Saint

A woman who passed through some of the most stirring days of pioneer history passed away in Holden last week when Mrs. Priscilla Hawley Young died at the age of ninety-five years.

Mrs. Young was born in Du Page County, Illinois, November 9, 1831. During the years which intervened between that date and her death, she was in the vanguard of the advance which populated the prairies and the southwest, met hostile Indians, and literally carved out a great inland empire for this Nation.

She was born in the stirring scenes which preceded the Black Hawk War. When she was six months old, her parents, with the neighbors and friends from what is now the northern part of Illinois, took refuge in old Fort Dearborn—Chicago now rises on the spot—for protection from the hostile Indians.

A pioneer herself, Mrs. Young came from pioneer stock. Her paternal ancestors came to America from England in 1632, settling in Connecticut, near the site of Bridgeport. Like most of the other settlers of the period, they fought Indians, gained a living from the virgin soil, ate coarse food, and reared their families in the fear of God.

Between 1780 and 1790—the exact date is not known—Gideon Hawley, son of Major Aaron Hawley, who fought in the Revolutionary War, and grandfather of Mrs. Young, pushed on to the borders of Lake Champlain and established his home at Vergennes, Vermont. The old stone home built by Gideon still stands.

These early Vermonters worked hard to clear the ground of trees and undergrowth, as they eked a living from the reluctant soil. They fought Indians, and later, in the war of 1812, took arms against the British forces which crossed from Canada. "Grandfather Gideon" lost his life in the battle of Plattsburg, his two sons, Pierce and Isaac, fighting by his side.

In 1818, when Illinois was admitted to statehood, the call of her rich soil reached these Vermont farms. The widowed grandmother with her sons and daughters joined many of the neighbors in answering the call of the prairies.

In Illinois they entered the pioneer life with as much zest as the ancestors of two hundred years before had done in Connecticut.

These New Englanders were very strict in their observance of the Sabbath, and their homes were always open to the itinerant preachers of the period. Peter Cartwright, the celebrated "backwoods preacher," was a frequent visitor in the Hawley home.

In 1833 the family came to Ray County, Missouri. There they remained six years, again moving, this time to Lee County, Iowa. There Priscilla Hawley was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Through the balance of her life she was a faithful member of that church.

In 1845 the great State of Texas was calling for settlers. In July of that year a company of one hundred men, women, and children left Davenport, Iowa, with faces turned to the southwest. Pierce Hawley, Mrs. Young's father, and the family were among them.

In Texas Priscilla Hawley married John Young, a native of Tennessee. From this union were born six sons and five daughters, all of whom were reared to maturity.

The hot climate of Texas, the frequent drouths, and the lack of adequate schools caused the family to seek another change in location. After a short time in Cherokee Nation, they turned north again, in 1860.

Accompanied by a few friends and relatives, traveling in ox-drawn carts, and driving some ninety head of cattle, they pushed through Kansas and Nebraska. Crossing the Missouri River at Nebraska City, they followed the Iowa side to Council Bluffs, then traveling east thirty-five miles, where they spent the winter.

That spring they made their home in Gallands Grove,

Shelby County. Here they found a settlement, the settlers having chosen the spot because the forest furnished them fuel and protected them from the severe storms of winter. The land was rich, and the fear of starvation or freezing passed.

In this community the children grew to manhood and womanhood. The mother, with her capable hands, spun and wove, knitted and darned. The father taught school, farmed, and had an interest in a sawmill. Eventually they were joined by other relatives, until four families of cousins were in the neighborhood. This enabled them to enjoy a period of real community life.

They worshiped on Sunday in the old log church. The same building provided a meeting place for the lyceum, the singing school, and, for a time, the day school. It was real pioneering, with this difference—the Indians had ceased to be a menace, and there was food in abundance.

Mr. Young died in October, 1866. In 1901 the widowed mother with several of her children moved to Holden, where she lived until her passing, January 26 of this year.

Mrs. Young's life was one of service to God and humanity. Despite the enormous task of caring for her large family in pioneer style, she always found time for a few minutes' reading every day. She loved learning. The Bible was her best-loved book, and the last message she heard from its sacred pages was the Sermon on the Mount. History and archaeology appealed to her most, because they were replete with the struggle of mankind on his journey to the present state of civilization.

"Seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom," was her favorite maxim.

She leaves five sons and four daughters. Those residing in Holden are Ramala, David, John, Misses Dora and Cora, and Mrs. Sarah Masterson. George is in Houghton, South Dakota; Mrs. Bennet in Sand Point, Idaho; and Gideon in Shelton, Missouri.

The story of Sister Young's life reproduced above is from the pages of the Holden Enterprise of February 4.

Services were held in the Latter Day Saints' Church, Friday afternoon, and were largely attended. Elder C. F. Scarelliff had charge, and the sermon was by Bishop J. A. Koehler. The discourse was very comforting, and many strong and original points were presented, stressing the wisdom of God in the plan of salvation and the restoration of man through the resurrection.

Independence

Stone Church

The Sunday school session on the 20th was one of unusual interest, and disclosed several valuable and interesting bits of information. Twelve hundred and fifty-eight were present, and fifteen classes were perfect. Of these the primaries had seven; the juniors, two; intermediates, four; and seniors, two. Sister O. C. White's class of girls in the intermediate department has established a standard of excellency for their department and the entire Sunday school. They have been perfect for twelve successive sessions, and being perfect not only means that every member is present, but that she has studied her lesson, helps in the song service, bows her head during the prayer, and does not whisper during the opening or closing exercises. This record is indeed commendable. The orchestra directed by Brother R. T. Cooper rendered a beautiful overture from "Bridal Rose."

The hymn, "The Lord Jehovah reigns," prayer by Elder James D. Gault, an organ offertory, and an anthem, "Holy art thou," by Handel, sung by the Stone Church Choir, went out to listeners abroad upon the land over K L D S, precluding the sermon of Sunday morning.

The discourse was delivered by Elder C. E. Wight, of Kansas City, Missouri, who talked on present opportunities of life under the circumstances which confront us in our relationship with our fellow men and with God. He reminded his hearers that God is always near to aid us in the solution of every problem which is ours to meet, asserting that before we can satisfactorily interpret our religion we must feel the kindling influence of God's Holy Spirit; we must experience an exaltation of that which is more than the physical; we must be endowed with the Comforter. God has been very good to us; Jesus came to give us life more abundantly, and our work is to seek that soul-sustaining influence which is given to those who have faith in God and love for their fellow men, that which great writers and thinkers call over and beyond the physical man. The lives of such stalwarts as Washington and Lincoln help us spiritually as well as in other ways. We should revere them for their example. It is our task to reflect the image they and our honored fathers have passed down to us. Are we profiting by their noble examples?

K L D S Sunday Activities

The musical program of the Bible study hour at half past eight Sunday morning was in charge of Mrs. Bertha Burgess. The story was told by Estella Wight, and Elder R. W. Farrell delivered the sermon. The eleven o'clock service also was broadcast.

At three in the afternoon K L D S Radio Church took the air, the service being conducted by Reverend A. G. Hause, of Maywood Baptist Church. Music was furnished by a mixed quartet composed of Mrs. C. A. Belt, Mrs. Robert Lyle, Mr. H. H. Gessley, and Mr. W. C. Shank; a male quartet composed of Mr. A. R. Miller, Mr. Faye Harris, Mr. Bennie Wright, and Mr. L. L. Van Stabern; a ladies' chorus, Mrs. U. V. Squier, accompanist.

The vesper hour was observed with music by a mixed quartet composed of Nina Grenawalt Smith, Lulu Tyrrell, Edward Brackenbury, and Frank Russell; contralto solo, Mrs. Lulu Tyrrell; special numbers by the Mothers' Quartet, and a sermon by Evangelist U. W. Greene.

At a quarter after nine the Latter Day Saint studio service completed the day's radio activities. There was music by a mixed quartet composed of Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock, Mrs. Ross Moore, Mr. Clayton Wolfe, and Mr. Alfred Hitchcock; soprano solo by Mrs. Helen Bootman England; violin solo, Mr. Herman Brodhacker; organ numbers by Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock. Sermon by Pastor C. Ed. Miller, subject, "The organic structure of the church."

Evening Services

At the Religio hour following the lesson period, the newly-elected president, Brother Frank Hershey, brought before the people his choice of associate president, Brother Lyle McFarlane. The choice was approved. The program at this hour consisted of a pleasing little piano solo by Emma Jean Etzenhouser, a reading by Pauline Hood, and a well-executed clarinet solo by Alfred Waters, accompanied by Margaret Chapman. A male quartet of high school boys concluded the entertainment with a good musical selection. Three hundred and fifty students were present at this session. The Religio is growing.

The coming of Sunday evening sees the gathering of a goodly number in the Stone Church auditorium for the evening service. This has been particularly noticeable since "family night" has been initiated. Long before the hour of eight, old and young, big, middle-sized, and small assemble to "sing with Brother Sheehy." And a real sing it is that begins at half past seven. On last Sunday evening the Wa-Dem-Na Glee Club, for the young between the ages of sixteen and twenty-eight, made its first appearance. These young people are being directed by Brother Paul Craig, and showed that they are truly endeavoring to serve. Their assistance is greatly appreciated. The main feature of the evening was an illustrated lecture on Palestine by Evangelist U. W. Greene. This was principally concerned with the regions where Christ was born, lived, preached, performed miracles, taught, was condemned, put to death, and ascended into heaven. Some of the slides were very beautiful, being reproductions of masterpieces of art. A reel of "A pilgrimage to Palestine," also was shown, and while in the darkness the audience watched the pictures, Brother Robert Miller played at the organ some of the old favorites, adding greatly to the enjoyment of all.

Second Church

Friday evening Doctor F. J. Lewis lectured on chiropractic and presented the elements of the philosophy for the contemplation of those gathered. A cold disagreeable night precluded large attendance.

Sunday school is looking up in attendance and interest. More than ever the organized classes are proving their value.

The pastor occupied the pulpit Sunday morning, and was given the best kind of hearing as he talked of the duties and responsibilities of Saints. Sunday evening's service was brightened by a visit from the Mothers' Quartet, often heard from K L D S broadcasting station. Then Elder Frank Veenestra spoke on the subject of the enduring character of the word of the Lord, giving one of his spicy, inimitable presentations of gospel truth.

Liberty Street

On Monday evening, February 14, the L. L. W. Class of the Religio entertained with a valentine party at the home of Brother Lehi Christenson. The evening was spent in music and games, and a good crowd of young people enjoyed a happy time. Later in the evening, light refreshments were served.

At the eleven o'clock hour, the choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "No work to do." Brother John Sheehy talked on "The boy problem of today." He stressed the responsibility which rests upon parents and teachers, telling of the success of the Boy Scout movement and how it helps boys to grow up clean, strong men of real service in the church and world. Interwoven with his sermon, he skillfully brought in some of his own boyhood experiences.

A short picture reel of travels in the Holy Land was shown in the evening. Brother J. M. Terry preached on the theme, "Prophecy in former and latter days." As outstanding prophecies the fulfillment of which we know and see, he gave the birth of Christ, and the gathering of the Jews to Jerusalem, and the building up of their homeland. Both discourses of this Sabbath left many new ideas and thoughts for the consideration of all who attended the preaching services.

A daughter was born to Brother and Sister Walter Curtis, February 9. The baby has been named Gladys Pauline.

The Silver Wing Chapter of Temple Builders held its first meeting since January 21 last Friday evening. This intervening season of inactivity has been due to the illness of their leader, Sister Pearl W. Moriarty. At this meeting steps were taken which will serve to broaden the scope of the chapter's work and assure for it progress, growth, and service.

Walnut Park

The eight o'clock prayer meeting was in charge of Brothers J. Walter Adams and Fred Lanpher. The attendance at this hour—a busy one in most households—is never very large, but those attending are united in saying that the effort to be there is very much worth while.

Among our sick ones at present are Sister Walter Adams and Sister Margaret Gard.

Three hundred forty-six were present at Sunday school.

Sister Ada Fallon and her girls' chorus, of which any girl leader might be proud, sang the opening songs for the eleven o'clock preaching service; then joined the other youngsters in the lower room for junior church. Brother C. Ed. Miller had promised to occupy there with his picture machine, and the juniors were all present. Each must have brought a friend as requested, for there were one hundred seventy all together to enjoy the interesting pictures taken by Brother Miller while he was a missionary in Australia and New Zealand.

In the upper room, there was again a tiny babe brought before the church to receive a blessing—this time little Betty Jo, daughter of Brother and Sister Kenneth Morford. The pastor and Brother C. K. Green were asked to officiate.

Elder C. K. Green preached to the Saints, whom he called the bride who is in process of making herself ready, and he pleaded for a careful, prayerful preparation, that by work and sacrifice we may make ourselves worthy to be claimed by Christ at his coming. The good seed planted in our minds from time to time must be nourished daily by prayer and good works, that we may grow into the perfect body He is waiting for.

In the evening, a veteran in the army of the Lord—an old-time missionary, Brother Francis C. Smith—was the speaker. Reading from Isaiah 29, he chose to speak of "the marvelous work and a wonder," which led him to the subject of the ministering of angels. Not only was he able to recount the work of angels in ancient times and in our early church history, but his testimony was sure on the ministry of angels in his own day—in his own home; such testimonies always being encouraging and helpful.

Enoch Hill

Elder Ralph W. Farrell was the eleven o'clock speaker Sunday morning, and took the theme of his discourse from the parable found in Luke 15 and the parable of the prodigal son.

Elder C. Ed. Miller gave his lecture on astronomy at seven o'clock in the evening. It was accompanied and illustrated by a number of excellent slides. A very good crowd was present to see and hear and learn.

Sister H. E. Winegar, leader of the Temple Builders, entertained at her home Monday evening, the 14th, with a valentine party. Each Temple Builder was asked to bring a boy friend. Games were enjoyed by everyone, and delightful refreshments rounded out a happy evening.

The valentine social sponsored by the primary and beginner departments of the Sunday school was held in the basement of the church on Tuesday evening, February 15. The basement was prettily and appropriately decorated for the occasion, and the program in charge of Sister Charles Warren, superintendent of the primary department, and Sister J. T. Jones, assistant superintendent was excellent. A large crowd attended, and the sisters brought valentine boxes of food which were sold to the gentlemen. The sum cleared will be applied to the purchase of new furniture for the basement.

Englewood

The morning preaching hour of February 13 was well spent in a prayer and testimony meeting. While not so well attended as the Sunday school just preceding, it was a very profitable service.

Our Sunday school continues its encouraging growth, and if this goes on, as it is hoped it will, the upper auditorium of our church will soon have to be added.

Our pastor in his sermon on Sunday morning, February 20, told us plainly that while it is very necessary to gather in those around us, to increase our numbers at every service, build on to our basement, etc., it is more necessary that we build up ourselves spiritually. In fact, all our sermons of late have been along the line of spiritual development.

Evangelist U. W. Greene gave a splendid sermon along this same line February 13.

On Thursday afternoon, in the rain, thirteen women gathered at the home of Sister Taylor, on Sterling Avenue, and listened to one of Sister Cowan's excellent talks. All were well paid for attending. Next meeting will be at the home of Sister Philip Turner on Winner Road.

Our pastor, C. F. Davis, was the speaker again on Sunday evening, February 20. A very good sermon and good attendance is reported.

Conference Notices

Utah District Conference will convene at Provo, Utah, March 5, 6. Delegates for General Conference will be named at this time, and it is the desire of District President Calvin H. Rich to have as good a representation of the district present as possible. Jessie Hewes, district secretary.

Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District will hold a conference at Grand Rapids, Michigan, March 5, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to General Conference and attending to other necessary business. G. E. Harrington, district president.

New York and Philadelphia, at Scranton, Pennsylvania, March 19 and 20. All officers and ordained men are requested to mail reports promptly to the secretary, E. Teal, 7517 Watson Street, Fox Chase, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Far West Stake. Seventeenth annual conference at the First Saint Joseph Church, Seventh and Faraon Street, Saint Joseph, Missouri, commencing Thursday evening, March 10, at 8 o'clock, and continuing over the following Sunday. Delegates to General Conference will be elected at this conference. Apostle John F. Garver and Bishop J. A. Koehler are expected to be present; also the stake missionaries, including Patriarch Samuel Twombly. One evening will be devoted to a program provided by Professor Forrest Roberts, of Graceland College. Members of the church residing in this stake are urged to be present. Visitors cordially welcomed. Visiting Saints and friends will be accommodated by the Saints of Saint Joseph, and meals furnished by the Women's Department in the basement of the church. Elder O. Salisbury, stake president, 2306 Faraon Street, Saint Joseph, Missouri; Walter H. Cryer, secretary, same address.

Requests for Prayers

Sister Ellen Adair, Shawnee, Oklahoma, asks the prayers of the Saints in behalf of her son, Lyman, who is very ill with typhoid fever. He has been sick one month, and the fever is still running very high, with no sign of abatement.

Sister Fred Howe, of Horton, Michigan, writes: "I wish the Saints to remember my companion in prayer, that he may be made to realize there is a God, and that he may be healed of ulcer of the stomach."

Brother Wilbert Wood, of Wyandotte, Michigan, asks the Saints to remember his companion, Sister Annie M. Wood, law. Opportunity for questions was given, and they proved quite interesting.

Pastor Carmichael was the evening speaker and gave his hearers many good thoughts.

On Friday evening a new feature was introduced at Religio. Each one had been asked to write a short story for the program. Nearly all seemed to think there would be too many stories if all should write, so all but four left the story for some one else. Much interest was shown in those four stories, and the work will be continued next Friday evening.

On the 20th, Bishop B. J. Scott spoke to the Saints, giving much comfort and encouragement, and urging each one to stand fast in the faith. The Spirit of God attended the message. In the evening no services were held here, but those who could attended the community sing, held at Fairmount Church on the Holke Road. The different organizations of schools, DeKalb and Spring Branch, and of the churches, Fairmount and East Independence, furnished a number. Several old-time songs were sung by the audience. A good time was enjoyed by all. We are glad to see these community gatherings.

in fasting and prayer, Sunday, March 6, that if it be God's will she may be healed of a severe affliction, which has troubled her for more than two years.

Addresses

Brother E. F. Johnston and family, of 203 Woodlawn Avenue, Pittsfield, Massachusetts, have not been able to locate any Saints in that part of the country. If any members of the church live near Pittsfield, the Johnstons would be glad to receive a call from them.

Notice of Silence

To Whom It May Concern: On account of the past and present actions of Elder W. B. Mullen, he is hereby placed under silence. We are sorry to need to publish this notice, but his address is unknown to us.

AMOS T. HIGDON,
President of Spring River District.

Des Moines Young People's Banquet

The young people of Des Moines District will hold a banquet Saturday evening, March 19, in the lower auditorium of the Des Moines church, 715 East Twelfth Street. Program will include lively music, jokes, peppy stunts, and inspirational talks. One of the leading ministers of the church will be special speaker. Sunday, March 20, will also be of special interest to the young and will be full of inspirational services. A large delegation of young people is expected at the banquet from over the district. All conference appointees and young people outside of the district that may be going to Independence, or are in a position to attend the banquet, are cordially invited. Kindly make your reservation with the undersigned. Stephen Robinson, district Religio superintendent, 1812 East 32 Court, Des Moines, Iowa.

Our Departed Ones

HILL.—Thomas Hill was born in New York State, December 11, 1844. He was baptized February 18, 1894. Died at his home near Durand, Wisconsin, January 28, 1927. Left to mourn are his aged companion, nine children, many other relatives and friends. Brother Hill served his country in the Civil War and at the close of that conflict was honorably discharged. Funeral from his late residence, L. G. Holloway preached the sermon, S. E. Livingston was in charge. Burial in Round Hill Cemetery.

LEWIS.—David O. Lewis was born in Ottumwa, Iowa, August 26, 1901. He was educated in Ottumwa, spending two years in the local high school and later taking up the trade of brick construction. He grew to manhood in Ottumwa and lived there until four years ago. He joined the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints June 4, 1911, and remained a member of the church until his death. He died at the Valley Baptist Hospital, Harlington, Texas, February 3, 1927. He is survived by his parents, five brothers, and three sisters: Catherine and Genevieve, at home, Mrs. A. J. Epperly, of Ottumwa; Thomas H., of Harlington, Texas; John O., of Alpena, South Dakota; Robert E., of Ottumwa; George W., and Charles E., at home. Two sisters preceded him in death. Funeral services were held from the home, conducted by Elder F. C. Bevan, assisted by Apostle D. T. Williams, of Lamoni. The Masonic burial ritual was used at the grave in Ottumwa Cemetery.

HAGER.—Martha Hager was born August 28, 1838. She was a member of the church of long standing, being a charter member of the San Francisco Branch. She died as she had lived, full of faith in the Christ and his power to save. Her death occurred at the home of her daughters in Berkeley, California, January 7, 1927. All that loving children could do for her was freely done, making a peaceful closing to a life of good works. Funeral services were held at Ukiah, California, her former home, in charge of J. B. Carmichael.

STEVENSON.—Alive Verice Hook Stevenson was born December 22, 1902, in Sacramento, California. She was baptized into the church February 25, 1912. Attended State Teachers' College at San Jose, taught school in Yuba County, and was supervisor of music in the public schools of that county two terms. She made many friends, and those who knew her best loved her most. Her death occurred October 12, 1926. She left husband, father, mother, three sisters, grandmother, aunts, uncles, and other relatives and friends to mourn her early departure. Funeral East Lawn Cemetery, Sacramento, California. Funeral sermon by W. H. Dawson.

WHITE.—Elizabeth White was born September 9, 1841, in Indiana. She was baptized October 25, 1868 at Newton, Iowa, by Elder J. X. Davis, and was confirmed by Elder G. E. Duell. With her husband, Alfred White, and their family, she came to Independence about the year 1884, and a few years later moved to Clinton, Missouri, where her companion was engaged in business. A few years later they moved back to Independence, where she resided until her death. Her companion and three daughters have preceded her to the other shore. She died at her home, 1038 West Lexington Street, Independence, Missouri, Monday, February 7, 1927. Surviving her to mourn are three sons, John D. White, of Berkeley,

The Confessional

Considerable stir was recently caused in ecclesiastical and church circles by the expression of a prominent Protestant minister who would restore in some form the discarded confessional. Other ministers of prominence have resented the proposal, some going so far as to say that rather than see it done they would go back to the Catholic Church.

To all ministers the importance of opportunity for conscience-smitten persons to unbosom themselves should have been ever apparent. The tendency to seek fatherly counsel from spirituals is always present with religious people. And the church which does not in some form have rites or ceremonies calculated to bring balm to hearts sickened under the load of sin is scarcely in position to minister to spiritual needs. It has always been pleasurable to me to meditate upon the provision made in our ritual for this very great and often present need. The right to forgive means authority to represent God. This right lightly exercised or abused is prolific of undesirable consequences. Basic for its expression is individual regeneration, spiritual preparation. This touches the principle of repentance, godly sorrow.

As some of the editors of even the secular press have pointed out, reversion by the Protestants to the confessional of the church against which they stand in protest would seem inadvisable. In their floundering (as reflected in the news columns of the dailies), we wonder why they have overlooked the rite or ceremony which continues or keeps alive the covenant of baptism, the sacrament of the Lord's supper. This renewal of the covenant, entered into with proper repentance, is propitiatory. So, with the functioning of pastoral consultation and the confessions thus brought about, together with the operation of the principle of repentance as preparation to enter the sacramental service in its propitiatory aspects, the "saving grace" of the "confessional" is well preserved. Let it function.

In this connection, it may be of interest for our readers to note an editorial I saw in the Boston Transcript of February 8, under the caption, "Reviving the confessional."

Reverend Harry Emerson Fosdick has a good word to say—and characteristically he says it strongly—in favor of the institution of the confessional as a sacred function of the church. He regrets that the confessional was thrown out by the Protestants. "We retreat to discussing themes," he says, "instead of wrestling with human souls for life and death." But he then proceeds to differentiate the confessional which he is talking about from the immemorial function which in the ancient church it has served, by describing the form of confession which he himself practices as a service "for the mentally unbalanced—sick souls who demand ministration." It is to be doubted whether there was ever a real pastor, no matter to what communion he belonged, who did not maintain this sort of "confessional" in some form. Our pastors have not abdicated the function of ministering to sick souls. And it may be questioned whether Doctor Fosdick, in his own ministrations of this kind, applies the searching rules and the formal penalties without which the institution of the confessional in its full traditional and authoritative force could hardly be operated. It is another case of the use of words to suggest wider ideas than are implicit in their direct meaning.

The souls that need a human confessor sometimes find him—or her—and sometimes do not, to their lifelong sorrow. There are other souls that prefer to be without a mediator. In its integrity, the institution of the confessional places these two on the same plane; it holds that equally they need confession—perhaps the latter type even more than the former. It is to be doubted whether Doctor Fosdick embraces this idea. If he does not, his postulate needs further demonstration.

Let us rejoice that in our own organization the spiritual significance and value of "the confessional" are preserved in a form little likely to be abused.

Support and Service of Graphic Arts Bureau

The Graphic Arts Bureau recently received from Mrs. Viola Short, wife of the late M. T. Short, a fine lot of old photographs of many of the missionary force of the years gone by. They will be placed in the vault for safe keeping. We hope many of the Saints will send in to us any photographs which they may have that are of historical interest.

Last week the bureau sent a set of slides to Australia, and the day before a set was sent to Maine.

Seventy-second Annual Conference

Opens Five Weeks From Today

In addition to the legislative functions of the coming General Conference, it promises to be outstanding in its inspirational and educational value. Unusual care and planning have been exercised in making out the program, and the presiding officers of the church are cooperating in their endeavor to make this first conference by which we enter into the Centennial celebrations, culminating in the spring of 1930, one of the best in our history. The Saints are therefore urged to be present so as to add their contribution to the fellowship and progress of the gathering.

Of recent years we have learned to expedite our church business. This leaves time for educational activities. One of the primary features of this and future conferences will therefore be the sharing of inspiration and understanding in worshipful and educational activities, in addition to the significant legislative functions of the past.

This General Conference will be the first held in the new Auditorium. The basement is sufficiently advanced in construction and will be equipped to house this gathering. From 3,000 to 3,500 Saints are expected to be accommodated here for business and other activities.

Opening Address

President Frederick M. Smith will address the conference at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, April 6, 1927. This opening address will be broadcast over K L D S.

Conference Sermons

President Frederick M. Smith will preach the first sermon in the Auditorium the evening of Wednesday, April 6. During the conference twenty other representative sermons by leading men will find their places on the program.

Special Song Service Broadcast

The first evening of conference there will be special community song service broadcast over K L D S. The Saints of California, who have been deprived of K L D S radio programs because of the difference in time between the Central and Western States, will especially appreciate this. The program will consist of community singing of old-time songs intimately connected with the history of the church, and which have become classic among the Saints and the American people. Come if you can, but if you can't, tune in.

Daily Program

Study Classes.—7.30 to 9.00 o'clock in the morning, class work on various subjects. These classes will be taught by our own men and women specially qualified to teach.

Daily Prayer Service.—9.15 to 10.15 each morning will be the daily prayer service. President F. M. Smith will be in charge of each of these services.

Musical Institute.—A musical institute will be held the first Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of conference. Church musicians are especially invited to attend this institute. The program for the coming three years, which are expected to be the most significant in our musical history, will be developed and emphasized. Those in charge of this part of the program are working hard to make it clear-cut and practically beneficial. In addition to the leaders of the Department of Music, Miss Mabel Carlile and Elder Roy Cheville, both of Graceland College faculty, will conduct class work.

Priesthood Institute.—April 11 to 16 inclusive. Special lectures to the priesthood en masse by members of the First Presidency will be delivered each day of the second week of conference. These lectures will be vitally important to the priesthood, upon whom must rest the primary responsibility of the constructive building ahead. Each lecture will be followed by educational quorum activities for the high priests, seventies, elders, and Aaronic priesthood. All ordained men who can make it convenient to attend conference should do so.

Morning Preaching Service.—A daily morning preaching service will be held in the Auditorium or the Stone Church from 10.45 to 12 o'clock.

Daily Organ Recital.—An organ recital from 12.30 to 1.00 o'clock p. m. will take place each day in the Stone Church. Those desiring to attend should be in the Stone Church auditorium promptly at 12.30. During the half hour of the recital, the doors will be locked and no one permitted to enter or leave. There in the quiet and seclusion of this half hour, conference visitors may rest and meditate, and in these few moments of sober thought, under the inspiration of the best in music, evaluate the experiences of life.

Business Session.—At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the conference business session will be held.

Variety in Evening Services.—Services will be held at 8 o'clock each evening. There will be preaching services every evening in the Auditorium or Stone Church. The Oratorio "Elijah" will be rendered the first Sunday and Monday of conference. "David" will be sung the evening of Good Friday. A historical pageant will be given the following night. "The fool," a play by Channing Pollock, will be presented by Independence young people sponsored by the White Masque Dramatic Club of Independence. This play was included in the selection of best plays for 1925 and will bring a significant message to conference visitors.

Easter Sunday

April 17 is Easter Sunday. If the weather permits, a sunrise prayer service will be held on the first floor slab of the Auditorium Building, where there is room to seat approximately five thousand people. This will be one of the most inspirational features of the conference. During the day a member of the First Presidency will preach at each of the three preaching services.

Conference Closes April 18

Conference will continue until Monday, April 18. This day will be long remembered as the last pre-centennial general church gathering of the Saints. Every delegate and visitor should undoubtedly plan to stay for the closing service.

The Conference "Attitude"

Let delegates and visitors attending General Conference come in soberness of purpose. Let them come praying and fasting that the Spirit of Almighty God will direct his church and the men who administer in its priesthood responsibilities. While this year a cordial invitation goes out to the Saints to "come to conference," yet no unwise indebtedness should be incurred by those unable to bear the expense incident to travel and a stay of two weeks at Independence. In this the spirit of wisdom should direct. There are many who by sacrificing some pleasure or some expected vacation trip this year can use their means for this purpose.

It must be borne in mind that this is no holiday festival, but a gathering of serious-minded Saints whose lives are pledged to the great cause of promoting Christ's gospel. In soberness of thought they should count the cost; and then without reservation, consecrate their time, talent, and means to the ideals of this church, that the work intrusted to its care may go forward.

Dress Styles?

In a recent issue of a New York paper I saw a news report on a convention of dry-goods dealers. A banker present as speaker said that Paris had been deposed as style ruler; and he also said "the American girl is now consulting her own inspiration in the matter of the cut of her attire."

Well! we wonder! It is really good to hear that Paris men are no longer designing the styles of the American women; but to say the American girl is now "consulting her own inspiration" in the cut of her dress comes as a bit of a shock in the light of some of the revelations of dress design now seen.

But seriously, is it not worth considering who shall determine the styles of the dress of those who might be standing (or working) with their eyes Zionward?

Population of Palestine

From The Palestine Bulletin for January 21, we excerpt the following:

According to "Davar," government statistics show that on September 1, 1926, the total population of Palestine amounted to 887,000 souls, including: 641,000 Moslems, or 72 per cent; 158,000 Jews, or 18 per cent; 78,000 Christians, or 9 per cent. Druzes and other communities 10,000.

Palestine and the Jews

All peoples interested in the Jews have keenly watched the development and progress of the Zionist movement. Many have believed and many have hoped that the movement of the Jews towards Palestine would eventuate in a national home for a people for hundreds of years without national expression. To those who have visited Palestine since the movement began there have come conflicting emotions; first, a degree of combined admiration and pleasure to note what has been accomplished in Palestine industrially by Jewish money and thrift; and, second, a deep sense of the seriousness of the movement in the ultimate national and racial involved problems. Racially, Palestine has long been predominately Arabic; religiously it is predominately Moslem.

Despite the fact that at one time the governor of Palestine under the British mandate was a Jew, Samuels, and an able one, to the close observer the smooth working of British diplomacy was not holding out as much promise of the speedy conversion of Palestine into a Jewish nation as some had hoped. Perhaps in the minds of the British, self-determination loomed large; and besides, British colonial policy has not gone far in the direction of free states separate from the British Empire. And not many colonies or mandates have gotten away from her.

It is interesting, therefore, to note that The Palestine Bulletin for January 21, 1927, quotes an article from Ul Carmel, which paper under the caption, "Palestine between the English, the Arabs, and the Jews," says:

We believed that the Jews are the most skillful nation in the world, but the experiment made in Palestine proves that they are not. During the war they tried to take Palestine as a national home for themselves or to make a national home for themselves in Palestine. The English issued the Balfour Declaration to the Jews, after having promised independence to the Arab countries extending from Taurus to Sinai (excluding Basra and the territory west of Damascus, Homs, Hama, and Aleppo).

Ten years have elapsed since the Armistice, and during this period the Jews have exerted themselves to the utmost in order to transform Palestine into a Jewish national home, while the Arabs have been striving to preserve its Arab character.

At the end of the first decade, both peoples have discovered that Palestine is now a British colony. The Jews have no national home, and the Arabs have lost the port in the Arab peninsula on the Mediterranean Sea.

It came out after ten years that the clever Jews have been beaten by British diplomacy.

In this connection it is also interesting to note another paragraph in the same issue of The Bulletin, as follows:

Al A'alam Al Arabi in an editorial refers to the recent establishment of a pro-Palestine committee in Germany and comes to the conclusion that the Arabs should do what the Zionists do: conduct intensive propaganda in London, Berlin, Paris, and in America. The paper says that the Zionist propaganda does harm to the Arab cause, and it must be counteracted.

With the Jews panting for a national home, the Arabs demanding the right of self-determination, and British diplomacy holding its own, it may be guessed that much of interest is likely to happen in Palestine.

President Signs Radio Bill

The White-Dill Compromise Bill became a law last week, with the signature of President Coolidge. It is generally believed that the commission of five men, who will practically control the destiny of radio in this country, will be appointed within a few days. According to newspaper reports, the President has received nearly a thousand applications for appointment to the Radio Commission. Each commissioner will receive $10,000 per year for the first two years, during which time the commission will sit, and $30 per day thereafter during the special periods, for Radio Commission meetings.

Pioneer broadcasters have had hopes that either Judge Davis or W. D. Tyrrell, chief radio supervisor, would be appointed as chairman of the commission. It is reported, however, that both men have stated that, if appointed, they would not accept the position. Their decisions, if the report be true, are most unfortunate, because of the unusual qualifications of these two men who have had such close contact with the radio situation for years. Both are Government men in the Department of Commerce, under Secretary Hoover. Another man well qualified to be chairman of the Radio Commission is Paul B. Klugh, executive chairman of the National Association of Broadcasters. Mr. Klugh is doubtless better informed concerning the broadcasting situation, from the broadcaster's standpoint, than any other man in the country. He has given, gratis, much valuable time to the National Association, although he holds the responsible position of vice president and general manager of one of the country's largest radio manufacturing concerns. The type of men appointed to the Radio Commission will control to a great extent the policies of relicensing radio stations and reallocating wave lengths. This is a matter of utmost importance and concern to both broadcasters and the radio public. President Coolidge has a difficult task in selecting men who have the two major requisites for this office: radio technic and legal knowledge.

Mendelssohn Program a Special Radio Feature

During the winter K L D S has broadcast several "Hours with great composers." The next such "hour" will be 8 to 9 o'clock, the evening of Tuesday, March 8, when a Mendelssohn program will be broadcast. The program will be prefaced with a short sketch on the life and works of the great composer, prepared and presented by Brother Arthur H. Mills. Brother Mills has also prepared fitting introduction to the musical selections. Among those appearing on the program will be the K L D S ladies' quartet; K L D S chorus; Florence Koehler Campbell, pianist; Nina Grenawalt Smith, soprano; Edward Brackenbury, tenor; Albert Brackenbury, bass; Robert Miller, organist.

Another Special Program

K L D S will broadcast a somewhat unusual feature next Saturday night, March 5, when, beginning at 8 o'clock, there will be broadcast "A trip to Dixie." This program might be termed a radio musical playlet, and it has been devised by Brother Jack Custead, of Independence. Jack is usually known to radio listeners as "The wee little Scotchman," but Saturday night he will appear as Uncle Ned, a good-natured "Southern" plantation Negro. On the program will also appear the K L D S Ladies' Quartet; a male quartet; Miss Gladys Good, as Aunt Jemima; J. M. Sexton, baritone; Robert Miller, organist; Douglas Bailey, accompanist.

Birth Control and Families

An item of considerable interest is a dispatch from London which I saw recently in the New York Times on the question of birth control. It appeared under the caption "Attack birth control," and is as follows:

London, February 9.—Eight distinguished British physicians have contributed to a volume on birth control in which it is declared that, achieved by any known method, it has damaging effects. It is said to cause neurasthenia.

The statement is made that of the twenty-eight leading members of the eugenics society, twenty-five per cent are childless, as are thirty-nine per cent of the National Birth-rate Commission.

Dean Inge, the "Gloomy dean of Saint Paul's," does not believe that Britain's falling birth rate will result in race suicide.

"If England is now overpopulated—and I think it is—may expect," he writes to a London newspaper today, "that the population will diminish until the optimum number is reached."

By the optimum number, Dean Inge means the number whereat the population equals adequate food supply and accommodation.

"I have no fear," he continues, "that the voluntary limitation of families will go further than this. Men and women are not so selfish as to prefer personal self-indulgence to the sweetest and purest of all pleasures—that of loving and caring for young children.”

The Registrar General announced on January 20 that the birthrate for England and Wales was 17.8 per thousand, which is the lowest on record except that of 1918.

Because of the insidious work of the Neo-Malthusians, some of the Theosophists, and other societies advocating birth control in one form or another, and other movements affecting the general question of marriage and childbearing, it is rather pleasing to me to see the pronounced stand taken by the British physicians.

The church should never fail to appreciate the social and religious significance of marriage and its divine institution. The family is a basic factor in national or social stability. With future racial and national safety and welfare in mind, we must be alert to the factors determining which are the families that are obeying the divine mandate to “multiply and replenish the earth.”

Have You Bought the News?

Less than five weeks will see the church in one of the most important conferences it has held since the Reorganization began its work.

One reading the program outline which is to be found on page 242 will sense the importance of the conference outside the business sessions; those who know say that the business sessions will be far-reaching and engrossing.

The SAINTS' HERALD will publish a daily edition, and plans are being perfected to deliver the best and most complete conference news sheet ever offered to the church.

The publishing house is offering the Conference Daily Herald for fifty cents, and making an effort to get mailing lists complete early so that the best of service can be rendered.

Do not wait until some one comes to Independence to hand in your subscription. It is safer and easier to mail it yourself, or through your publicity agent—right now.

Address Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

Elder Frank Veenstra has word from Holland in a letter from Brother Pyle, that since he left the mission at least three good people have been baptized. The branch meetings in Rotterdam have been of especially high order, many strangers attending, and the room being filled. There are good prospects there for future work. Elder Veenstra has high hopes for the Holland mission, believing that a wise prosecution of the work there will bring many honest in heart to the folds of the church.

OFFICIAL

A New Primary Song Book

An effort is being made to secure the best possible collection of children's songs for Sunday school use and to have it printed and ready for distribution at an early date. Such a book is felt as one of the most imperative needs of our religious education program. Isolated songs have been found in song books here and there, but it has been impossible to find any one collection well suited to our needs.

For a number of years beginner and primary teachers of the Independence Stone Church school have been making a very serviceable collection from various sources, some of them having been written, both words and music, by our own church people. We know that similar collections have been made in many other places. We solicit every teacher and officer of the lower departments of our schools everywhere to send to Mrs. C. R. Smith, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri, a list of the children's songs which should be published in the new book. List title, the name of the collection, and the address of the publisher. If copyrighted, we will endeavor to secure reprinting privilege.

Please send us also copies of words and music of any other good songs you are using. Let us know all you can about the author or composer. We wish only songs having real literary and musical merit, which have been tried out and found valuable.

A definite effort should be made among our people to express the inspiration of the gospel message and our ideals in appropriate words which may be set to effective music. It should be some inducement to be able to assist in this splendid work and to have an accepted contribution for the new Children's Hymnal!

He who writes an enduring hymn echoes an immortal strain and preaches ten thousand sermons. Who will help us?

We shall use the very best of all the material which we may secure. The following is a suggested list of divisions of the book:

Patriotism, New Year, Quiet Music, Response, Birthday, Collection, Cradle Roll, Songs of Thanks, Hymns, Christmas, Thanksgiving, Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter, Closing, Flower, Rain, Easter, Greetings, Nature, Children's Day, Prayer.

The Need of the Hour

BY BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL

We sincerely hope that the members of the church sense the importance of the needs of the church as an organization. The wise men of the world are crowding closely upon our heels in not only demanding a practical solution of the present-day problems, but they are contributing many fine ideas to aid in this solution.

Our church, if it is what it claims to be, must keep in the van. We must be pioneers in demonstrating to the world that the religion of Christ can and does provide a panacea for its ills.

How shall we proceed to do this? The answer is plainly stated. The Lord says:

I give unto you counsel and commandments concerning all the properties which belong to the order which I commanded to be organized and established to be a united order, an everlasting order for the benefit of my church and for the salvation of men until I come.—Doctrine and Covenants 101: 1.

The order here referred to is "the order of the church for the benefit of the poor" (see heading to section 101), and is known among us as the Order of Enoch, composed of members of the church who have become stewards in fact. Local groups organized for economic purposes are but organizations within the Order of Enoch. It is a spiritual organization, and through it we sublimate our temporal activities. The local groups organized for betterment in temporal affairs must be legally organized, as they have to do with property rights.

"It is wisdom in Me; therefore, a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship" (become a member of the order of the church for the benefit of the poor, or in other words sublimate your business activities—spiritualize them). Why do this? "That every man may give an account unto me of the stewardship which is appointed unto him, for it is expedient that I the Lord should make every man accountable as stewards over earthly blessings which I have made and prepared for my creatures." "It is my purpose to provide for my saints." How? "Behold this is the way [every man becoming a steward in full] that I, the Lord, have decreed to provide for my saints: that the poor shall be exalted in that the rich are made low. Nevertheless I have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves." None must be forced—all must obey because they choose to do so.

The Lord's Promise

In Doctrine and Covenants 70: 4 the Lord tells us why he gives this law of stewardship, of which the Lord says, "None are exempt from this law [law of temporalities—the law of stewardships] who belong to the church of the living God." "Now this commandment [to become stewards in fact] I give unto my servants for their benefit while they remain for a manifestation of my blessings upon their heads, and for a reward for their diligence, for their security for food and for raiment, and for an inheritance; for houses, and for lands, in whatsoever circumstances I, the Lord, shall place them; and whithersoever I, the Lord, shall send them."

Here we have the terms clearly stated that will bring us God's protection. We have no promise outside of these terms. We are looking for the judgment of God to be poured out on the world, and as a consequence we sense keenly the great need of preparing a place of safety. This can be done only as God has commanded; by a full obedience to his law, which commands us to become stewards for him. This is why the Lord tells us in Doctrine and Covenants 72: 2, "For according to the law every man that cometh up to Zion must lay all things before the bishop in Zion." Also, why the question asked by the Saints in a stake, "O Lord, show unto thy servants how much thou requirest of the properties of thy people for a tithing?" was answered, telling them just what the Lord required of those who had gathered into the stakes, "Verily, I say unto you [those who had gathered into Far West Stake], it shall come to pass that all those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus [thus have become stewards in deed] properties, and shall [not may] observe this law [the law of stewardships] or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you."

The penalty of not obeying: "And I say unto you, if my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law [law of stewardships—sublimation of labor] sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy, behold, verily I say unto you, it shall not be a land of Zion unto you."

For what kind of an organization is this law of stewardship given? For Zion and her stakes—"and this shall be an ensample unto all the stakes of Zion. Even so."—Doctrine and Covenants 106: 2.

This, then, is the way that we as a church organization must lead the world in the solution of the social problem which is now so sorely vexing the minds of those who see the crying need for something to be done.

The light has come to us. "Of whom much is given much is required." How about it, fellow Saints? Are you ready to go? Specifically and definitely, are you willing to become a real steward for Christ? Are you willing to enter into that holy and sacred relationship with God—sanctifying every activity of your life, making every piece of work you do, no matter whether following the plow or clerking at the counter, pleading a case at the bar or writing a prescription for the sick—just as spiritual and as holy as any act of the so-called spiritual work of the church? Then do as the law directs.

First, Make your financial statement and place it with your bishop, or with the Presiding Bishopric.

Second, Pay the tithe (one tenth) of your increase if not already paid. If you can not pay all of your tithe, pay what you can, and the rest as soon as you can. It is not fair to keep the Lord's share.

Third, Now determine in your own mind how much you have left that you do not need. This is surplus and should be paid to the bishop. As with the tithe, if you can not pay all the surplus, pay what you can, and pay the rest as soon as you can. It is not fair to the Lord that you keep his surplus.

Fourth, If you have no tithe or surplus and still desire to help, then give an offering.

Fifth, Continue to do this, year after year, living frugally and honorably, keeping in favor with God, and you will be practically demonstrating to the world the only solution of its economic problem.

Iron Among Ancient Americans

BY PAUL M. HANSON

In World's Work, January, 1927, is an article on "The Pompeii of Ancient America," by A. Hyatt Verrill, explorer for the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, of New York.

In describing his discovery and investigation last year of ruins left in Panama by a prehistoric race, he says the "remains of this newly discovered culture have already been found over an area approximately fifty miles in length and ten to twelve miles in width, or roughly, about five hundred square miles."

A claim of great importance relating to the use of iron or steel tools by these ancient Americans, is contained in the following:

"It seems almost preposterous to believe that a race which had developed stone sculpture to such a high degree should not have equally developed stone implements if, according to the generally accepted theory, the prehistoric artisans depended upon stone tools. To have cut out and sculptured a huge stone block into the form of a human figure of the character found at the temple site would have required a lifetime. In order to determine what could be done by the use of stone implements, I selected several dozen of the best, and marking a simple design on one of the softer stone columns, instructed three of the native laborers to chip out the pattern with the stone tools. Although they worked industriously for several days, and wore out most of the tools, they made scarcely any impression on the column. When they had finished, no one ignorant of their labor would have dreamed that there had been any attempt made to sculpture the stone.

"I am thoroughly convinced that these people, as well as many other prehistoric races, possessed iron or steel tools, and I do not know of a single argument or fact to disprove this. The fact that no iron or steel tools have ever been found proves nothing. Iron is the most perishable of metals, and, except under most unusual or peculiar conditions, all traces of small iron or steel tools would disappear completely in a few centuries. No doubt archæologists will scoff at this theory, and pooh-pooh the idea, but scientists as well as laymen have a habit of scoffing at every theory until proof is forthcoming to place them in the wrong.

"The discovery of a steel or tempered iron dagger in King Tutankhamen's coffin is a case in point. Despite hundreds, thousands, of ancient Egyptian mummies which have been disinterred, this was the first iron weapon found. We must now admit that the Egyptians of King Tut's time used hardened iron or steel; and yet until definite proof of this was forthcoming, archæologists would not have admitted the possibility. If, in a country like Egypt, where even flowers are perfectly preserved in burials thousands of years old, only one iron implement has been discovered, what chances of finding iron tools would we have in a tropical land, where burials were in the earth?

"Indeed, less than two years ago, I was scoffed at for suggesting that an entirely new and unknown culture of great antiquity had existed in Panama, but we now have undeniable proofs of the fact. Moreover, at a depth of five and one half feet below the surface, at the temple site, among broken pottery and embedded in charcoal, I found a steel or hardened iron implement. The greater portion is almost completely destroyed by corrosion, but the chisel-shaped end is in good condition. It is so hard that it is scarcely touched by a file and will scratch glass, and with such an instrument it would be a simple matter to cut and carve the hardest stone.

"No doubt many will discredit this, or will claim that the implement is modern and found its way beneath the surface via some hole or crevice, or will claim that some junk-collecting snake or centipede carried the object to its resting place in a compact mass of semi-fossilized carbon packed in the midst of broken prehistoric pottery. But how can they explain the evidence of tool marks on much of the stone work? Not the irregular indentations which might, and very likely were, made by pecking with a stone hammer, but clearly cut delicate lines and chisel marks."

The Gospel of Our Fathers

BY JOHN F. GARVER

The fourth of a series of seven sermons in the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, in November, 1925, under the general theme, "The faith of our fathers."

I have been very greatly heartened by the inspiration of the brother's prayer and by the service of song. I come to you weary and somewhat burdened in spirit. My experience heretofore has been, however, that when the opening exercises harmonize with the spirit of the speaker, as a rule we may expect to be blessed.

I am to speak tonight of the gospel of our fathers.

It was not my privilege to meet the men through whom this gospel was restored. It was my privilege, however, to meet their immediate successors in office, and to have from their lips as witnessed by their fervent spirits the glorious gospel of these latter days, restored to the earth, as we testify, at the hand of an angel, carrying with it the authority to speak again for God and act in his stead in holy things in the earth. It is in memory of those wonderful days of my first contact with this gospel and of those noble men who came to me with this gospel, as much as to furnish a lesson, that I turn to the lesson of the evening. A good, old-fashioned, rock-ribbed Latter Day Saint lesson.

The Gospel Preached by Our Fathers

I remember some of the men I heard preach from this lesson—men like James Caffall, John W. Wight, John H. Lake, Alexander H. Smith, and Joseph Smith. And some who, though not as strong as formerly, are still here and yet abide with us for a season; men like Joseph R. Lambert and Bishop E. L. Kelley. And if you please, I would like to so adapt the lesson as to make it brief. These are the words of the Apostle Paul, taken from the second Thessalonian letter and the Roman letter:

Our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance. And to him who believeth, the gospel is indeed the power of God unto salvation.

Our text will be these latter words, "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation."

This was the gospel which came to our fathers, an authoritative religion, surcharged with the power of God, carrying with it the intelligence of heaven, purposeful, moving, and redeeming.

This, testified our fathers, was not a gospel of word only, for it was also a gospel of power. And how they used to ring the charges on that word power, et al. You remember how they used to interpret this scripture: This has not come unto you in word only, for this word of high heaven is declared to you by the power of the authority of the priesthood of the church restored in this age.

And they were right, were our fathers in this faith. For unless the gospel of Jesus Christ is administered by the authority of Jesus Christ vested in a ministry called of God, it is not the gospel in its fullness. So the gospel came to us in word, and also in a ministry of power.

But, said our forbears, that is not all. This is not only a gospel of word administered by men of authority, for it is accompanied by the moving ministration of the Holy Ghost. And to him who believes and who is baptized and receives the holy imposition of hands of the elders, to each one of such is the promise made, "You shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." For did not our fathers tell us when they pledged to us with all the power of heaven that if we would come forward and receive baptism at their hands, receiving this gospel of word administered by power, we would receive the Holy Ghost, which would bring us the assurance of heaven that we were accepted of God as his children? That we would have the witness this is the gospel? Yes; this was the faith of our fathers. And it is ours.

The Gospel of Word

This gospel which our fathers have handed down to us and which we have received, I am come to declare unto you.

And if you will with me give it a bit further consideration, this is the gospel of the word of God as conveyed to us through the Bible. This is the gospel of the word of the Father conveyed to us through the Book of Mormon. "Two witnesses are better than one," one of olden time has said, and "a threefold cord is not easily broken." This then is the gospel conveyed to us through the Doctrine and Covenants. The gospel of word is ours through these three standard books. And he does well who retains the words of God as brought to us by our fathers through the three standard books of the church. These most holy words are as sacred to us tonight as the day we first received them, and all of them are. By these we stand or fall. Others may do as they will, but as for us, upon these and all of these words of the Father of Light we take our stand.

Ours is a gospel of word.

The Gospel of Power

It is also a gospel of power or authority to represent the Father of Light. Yes, and more, infinitely more than that, for a man may have the priestly authority to represent God in this ministry, but have very little of anything else. If one is to occupy in a ministry of appealing power, then must he have not only the legal right to represent God, for he must have also the moral right to represent him, in all that term implies. Unless one has the moral right to represent God, sooner or later, and generally sooner, his people will find him out, so that no more has he the legal right to represent God.

Nor is this all. For there is such a thing as a people living so far beneath their privileges and their high calling as the children of light that they too in large measure may be wanting in moral right to speak for heaven.

If I send a man out to represent me in business, that man must understand me and my business, if he is to represent me properly. The same principle holds true in the business of religion. We as the successors of our fathers in this faith have the right to represent God in a legal sense, and just as far in a moral sense as we are worthy and qualified to do it.

Nor will we achieve more than that. For there is also the power of the authority of an intelligent grasp and comprehension of the gospel in the behalf of which we speak. And only he who knows it can tell it and interpret it. For one speaks only in the terms of his information.

And finally, there is that divine unction from on high, the Holy Ghost, vouchsafed us as ministers in the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord, and which we receive as the power of heaven when we claim it by faithfulness.

Yes, ours is a gospel of power.

The Gospel of Holy Ghost

Ours is also a gospel of Holy Ghost. It is by the revelation of the Holy Ghost that it comes to us, if it comes to us at all. Ministers are but the human instrumentality in the divine process. The ministers who confirmed me did not bestow the Holy Ghost upon me. That came from above. The ministers who confirmed me did not cause me to know that this is the gospel of Christ. That knowledge came down by the Holy Ghost. Ours is a gospel of Holy Ghost. It is by the light of the Holy Ghost that having first received the gospel as babes, growing to manhood's estate we discover all of its meaning, all of its significance, and even the way to attain the divine power and apply it in our lives.

Then it is through the work of the Holy Ghost that those who hear us speak are moved to endeavor with us in this Christian warfare.

Ours is a gospel of Holy Ghost.

The Gospel of Assurance

And finally, ours is a gospel of much assurance. In obedience to its leading, as I have already indicated, through the ministry of the Holy Spirit and its development in our lives, we are assured this is the gospel which we have received, the power of the eternal Father unto our salvation.

And through our unfolding experience in its divine life, and through our unfolding of the Christ character in us are we by and by made doubly sure. And so drawn upon as to be willing, having found the pearl of great price, we go sell all that we may buy it, and when the time comes to require it, we freely give it away.

Ours is a gospel of assurance.

The Gospel in Its Fullness

I have said that we can not carry either for ourselves or for other men the fullness of the gospel, only as we have made place in our lives for that fullness to dwell.

I think I can illustrate this for you. A good many years ago, a quarter of a century ago almost—I had been a priest for a time and had just been ordained an elder—I was asked to go from Lamoni to Andover, six miles, to preach. My father-in-law-to-be took me with his span of fine driving horses. He was a priest in the church, and with pride he introduced me as "The boy preacher of Lamoni!"

I can only suggest how I felt that night. I "rose" to the occasion! I walked out to the front of the platform, toed the mark, put my thumbs in the armholes of my vest, threw out my chest, raised my towering form to its full five feet, five inches, and let out this declaration, "My dear friends, I am come to you with the fullness of the gospel!"

And I declared it. I went back to the beginning, and with the Father of Light made Adam. And having achieved that great work, we made Eve. We established them in the garden. We witnessed the fall. We called men and sent them forth to declare the gospel. We saw these fall away. We called Moses from the burning bush. Saw the Israelites in their bondage in Egypt, and in their trip through their Red Sea. We saw their apostasy. We saw the coming down of our Lord, the preaching of the gospel, the organization of the church. We saw its apostasy. We saw the restoration of the gospel again, the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, the second advent of Christ, the millennial reign, and the coming down of the Father—all in twenty minutes!

Andover got all I had that night. But what I am asking you is, Did the fullness of the gospel come to Andover that night? And I answer for you, It did not!

So, my friends, in like manner it is with us as a people. Until first we have scaled the heights, until in our lives we have lived the gospel, and, as I set out for your consideration last night, until we bear the fruits of the gospel, we can not preach the gospel in its fullness. Preaching the gospel consists of more than telling something about the gospel. It consists also of understanding the gospel in its full provisions, and living the gospel, for only so may we impress the world with the real worth of the gospel.

What Hath Believed in Our Report?

I am convinced it is not altogether the fault of the Gentile world when they do not believe our testimony. Methinks the things we do sometimes speak so loudly people can not hear what we say. Methinks the things we are sometimes come between the people and the testimony we bear. Methinks that sometimes when the Gentile world is invited to look upon us who bear the likeness of God, who represent the authority of heaven, who speak for heaven itself, they wonder, Can it be possible!

We testify that the angels of light have come down from heaven. We testify that the gospel has been restored to us. We testify that the Book of Mormon also has been restored. We testify that the voice of the Father of light has come to us from time to time, as recorded on these sacred pages of the Doctrine and Covenants. We say to the world, "Look upon us; here is God." It is true, but it is not true to the sense it ought to be true. And until it is true in the sense in which it ought to be true, we too must continue that wail of woe, "Who hath believed on our report?"

Taking unto ourselves, however, the fullness of the gospel as the man of our counsel, and fully establishing ourselves in the divine way, the promise of heaven is that there shall come a great abundance of his grace upon each one of us; and under that great power we shall make demonstration of the fact that here is the gospel.

That is the way it was in the apostolic church. At Jerusalem the saints came together with one accord. They were of one heart and one mind. Being of one heart and one mind, they had all things in common. Thus each having an equal opportunity with every other in temporal things, they had opportunity to achieve each equally with the other in spiritual things. And they did, until it came about that great grace fell upon each one of them, and with great power gave them testimony of the risen Lord.

Early one morning in February, 1923, I met a man on the train out of Sioux City, Iowa, bound for Des Moines. We became engaged in conversation.

He was a Methodist of position and influence. By patiently awaiting the end of his tale of the wonders of Methodism, it came my opportunity to speak to him of our beautiful philosophy, of our Zionie hope, of its purpose, of the thing it is expected to do. He was moved in his soul. He was a good Methodist, and under the Spirit of God, with his soul looking out of his eyes into mine, with tears coursing down his cheeks, he asked of me, "My dear brother, where is your Zion?"

That was over two years ago. He is waiting yet for the answer. His tears have dried up. His cheeks have become parched. His warmed heart has turned cold waiting for the living testimony of our achieved Zion which his soul longed for. And which with all my heart I believe would have persuaded him that I spoke the truth. You get what I mean, don't you?

The Sacrifice of Our Fathers

This is the gospel of our fathers. This is the gospel they have handed down to us. This is the gospel that we so joyously received many years ago; and in the receiving of which we took solemn pledge before heaven that we would magnify our calling, so the testimony of its divinity might grow in us.

For this gospel our fathers sold all they had to buy. They sold the prospects of their children in this earth. They left their home country not once, but twice. The third time they established themselves that they might the more powerfully pour forth the witness of this truth. And after a while they gave their life's blood, sealing their testimony by that holy offering, leaving their widows and little children to the mercy of a cold and cruel world.

And after that these same children took up the cross.

We talk of sacrifice in the church today. We know not the thing of which we speak! Our immediate fathers in the Reorganization left wives and children all but destitute, and walked out into this western country when the church had no money with which to buy them transportation or bread. They came forth to gather together again the broken membership of the flock of God. Two sons of Mother Blair, each one not knowing what the other did, have told me with the terrible memory yet fresh as though it were but yesterday, that at times when their father was hundreds of miles from home, and with nothing in the house to eat, their mother under the somber shadow of night, drew around her the family, and upon bended knees, with their little stomachs waiting for that prayer to be answered, prayed God to send them bread. That is what our fathers did that this gospel might be ours, since there was no other way. We have received it gladly. How shall we pass it on to our successors? How shall we pass it on to a dying world?

The Gospel Is the Power Unto Salvation

We know it is the gospel. I know it is the gospel. I know that the gospel of Jesus Christ, this gospel, is the power of God unto salvation, for it has saved me. Oh, not fully, but in a large measure.

This gospel has saved me from the hell of poverty.

Do you know what the fear of poverty is? Do you know what it is for a little boy to lie down at night hungry and cold; and to get up the next morning and go out to hunt for a job with which to help get something for his mother to eat? Do you know how that kind of thing burns itself into the soul of a sensitive child? Do you know the shame of it?

The gospel taught me a better way. It brought to me hope that even though it might not be my privilege to enjoy what I would like to have enjoyed as a little boy, it might some day be my privilege to help to see that other lads did not have to go through what I did.

This gospel saved me from a hell of lack of opportunity.

Do you know what it means for a lad of sixteen years to go into a strange country? Whose soul longs to achieve something, but who can not for the reason there is no one nigh who understands? The gospel saved me from that. It brought me into a heaven of opportunity.

Do you know what it means for a young man in the fresh vigor of his dawning strength, when he ought to be at the hour of his best in preparation for life—do you know what it means for a young man of seventeen years of age to have so despaired of privilege in this world, to have become so embittered, and so tried by the hell of want and the burden of the shame of poverty, with his high spirits broken—do you know what it means for a lad like that, driven to the depths of despair, to sit on the edge of his bed through the long, terrible hours of a whole night, with an implement of death in his hand, debating the problem that racked the soul of Hamlet, "To be or not to be?"

The gospel saved me from that.

I know that the gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation, for it saved me.

Do you know what a contrast, what a new life, what a new heaven, what a new earth comes breaking over a boy's life after such experiences, when the gospel comes to him with its joy, and its love, and its divine blessing of opportunity?

Yes, I know for myself the gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation. For added to the testimony of the Spirit it is true there are these evidences in my life it is true. I know of a surety the gospel is true?

What Shall We Do About It?

This is the gospel our fathers received at the hands of an angel, restored again to earth in these last days. This is the gospel which at the hand of our fathers we have received. This is the gospel wherein we stand. No man can gainsay that. You people know I speak the truth. Does not that same sweet spirit which made for that new heart in those first golden days of your experience in this church come welling up in your souls tonight? You know as well as I know that this is the gospel wherein we stand. You know furthermore by the measure of the development which has been yours since that first sweet day you received it, this gospel is true. And by these things, you know that by and by in the gospel we shall together achieve the full purpose of God in Zion and the world.

What are you going to do about it? What are you going to do about it now? The gospel needs you now. Don't I know what you are going to do about it? You are going to keep right on doing what you have been doing about it. Seventeen thousand dollars to endow Graceland College, from Independence alone. The fruits of the gospel in your lives. The church needs more money for more purposes. You who have seen the sacrifices, who have experienced the good results of your fathers in this church, are going to do well your part that the truth might so possess your souls that as the great white light of heaven it shall roll forth to fill the community and state and nation and world.

May God keep you and help you to this end.

Worth While

By Catherine Nitz

When the cares of each day bring their burdens,
And your heart gets so heavy you groan,
Do you pray to your heavenly Father,
Or sit like a dub and just moan

So the people can hear all your troubles,
When they're already burdened and blue
With maybe a far bigger problem
Than ever just happened to you.

Do you try to be cheerful and help them,
Forgetting yourself in the task?
Is your heart really filled with some sunshine?
Or do you like wearing a mask?

Is the day just too short to do good in
To your friends that you meet every day?
Are the nights just too long to lie sleeping,
And you wish it well out of the way?

If your heart's filled with love for your neighbor,
And you greet every one with a smile,
Well, I reckon in time if you're careful,
You'll really be reckoned worth while.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Resolutions Adopted by Revisionist World Conference

Paris, January 2 (P. T. A.)—A number of important resolutions on the policy which should be pursued by the Zionist movement have been adopted by the Second World Conference of the Zionist Revisionist Organization, which was concluded here last night.

The resolutions fall into three subheadings: political, economic, and cultural.

The political resolutions moved by Mr. Jabotinsky declare that the chief cause of the present economic crisis in Palestine is the political regime of the British mandatory government which makes difficult the development of the country. Demands are made for the allocation of the state and waste lands in Palestine, for large scale Jewish colonization in accordance with the provisions of the Palestine Mandate, for a modification in the system of taxation in Palestine and in the customs system for the purposes of giving protection to the growing trade and industry of the country, for the incorporation of a Jewish unit in the Palestine defense forces, and for the allocation of land for settlement for the ex-members of the Jewish Legion who fought in Palestine during the war.

The economic resolutions include a resolution, moved by Mr. Grossman, declaring that it can not be permitted that the Zionist organization and the Keren Hayesed should be compelled to bear the cost of education and health work in Palestine. These duties, the resolution says, fall in every state upon the country, and not upon any private organization outside the country. That things are otherwise in Palestine is due to the fact that the Zionist organization after the war assumed mistakenly the responsibility for such state duties, thereby releasing the state from its duties in these respects. The conference therefore demands that the Palestine Government should bear out of state revenue the cost of the Jewish educational and Jewish health work in Palestine. Special Jewish departments should be set up within each general department in order to guarantee to the Jewish schools their national character and the employment of the Hebrew language.

"Push Palestine Goods" Slogan

The conference has adopted a resolution proposed by Mr. I. Trivus, calling for the extension of the Jewish Colonial Trust in order that it should obtain its full authorized capital of two million pounds to enable it to engage on a large scale in assisting the development work in Palestine by advancing credit aids and promoting industries and colonization schemes in Palestine according to the purpose for which it was founded.

The conference also adopted a resolution introduced by Mr. Jacobi calling for the promoting of the development of Palestine industry, trade, and colonization by developing insurance activity in Palestine, and mobilizing Jewish capital throughout the world for Palestine upbuilding and starting a widespread campaign throughout the Jewish world for buying Palestine goods.

A resolution was adopted which was moved by Doctor Jacob Kahan, the Hebrew poet, urging the establishment of a world Hebraic Union for the strengthening of the Hebrew language and literature, for spreading the sale of Hebrew literature of which Palestine should become the center, and the inclusion of this activity in the "Push Palestine Goods" campaign.

On the question of the Jewish agency, the conference has adopted a resolution moved by Mr. Robert Lichtheim declaring that the Jewish agency extension plan with regard to which Doctor Weizmann is now conducting negotiations in America is dangerous, not only to the Zionist movement, but also the whole future of the Jewish people, because it will make permanent a division of the ranks of the Jewish people into Zionists and non-Zionists. Furthermore, the resolution states, the Zionist executive has no definite plan at the present moment available for the extension of the Jewish agency, and the negotiations are being conducted entirely in the air.

A further resolution adopted by the conference protests vigorously against the persecution of Zionists and Zionism in Soviet Russia.

Mr. Jabotinsky has been elected president of the Zionist Revisionist Organization, and Mr. Meer Grossman, Mr. Robert Lichtheim, and Mr. Vladimir Tiomkin as vice presidents. A Central Council has been elected, consisting of thirty-eight members, representing the various countries. The office of the Zionist Revisionist Organization will be situated in Berlin. Preparations will be started immediately to secure the election of delegates to put the Revisionist case before the next Zionist Congress. This work will be conducted under the direction of Mr. Lichtheim.—The Palestine Bulletin, January 21, 1927.

There is widespread interest in religion as a likely source of supply for our ideals, for renewals of character, for the reinforcement of man's spirit, to manage his mind and body healthfully, and to make him master, not thrall, of his possessions.—Doctor Henry Sloane Coffin.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The Sunday School Officers' and Teachers' Meeting

We recently visited a Sunday school at their urgent request that we help them to get properly organized and functioning as a first-rate school. The officers were eager to learn progressive plans and methods and to set at once to improve their attendance, interest, collections, and the general attractiveness of their services. How much a little pep may do if it prompts everybody, from the superintendent down, to be present, on time, smiling, and ready for business! Just previous to my visit, a teacher training class had been organized, taught by the president of the branch, an able man, and practically every officer and teacher of both Sunday school and Religio had enrolled in it.

That is the type of spirit that should get results. We may have reason to hope for progress in Zion's redemption when every school wakes up as this one is trying to do.

Lesson for March

Theme: Religious Attitudes to Be Cultivated.

Text: Betts: How to Teach Religion, Chapter V.

Some one has said the perfect Christian character is manifested in a combination of forty-eight specific attitudes. If these can be carefully determined with the age at which each may be most advantageously cultivated, it would seem that skill in instruction, guidance, and nurture should enable us to produce men and women after the Christ pattern.

The life of the child is constantly changing. Especially is there remarkable mental progress. In the first five years, he learns vastly more than he will ever again learn in a similar period. Parallel with his expanding knowledge, interests are taking root, feelings are being developed, attitudes are being formed, ideals are shaping, standards are developing, enthusiasms are kindling, loyalties are being grounded.

The great question is, What motives shall move in the child life? Shall we have part in shaping the motive, or shall we leave the child to blind chance? The teacher of religion is concerned with two distinct groups of attitudes:

(1) There must be an attitude of enjoyment, interest, and mastery in the work of the school; (2) There must be developed a far-reaching group of attitudes, feelings, responses, ideals, ambitions, fine appreciations, and worthy loyalties to carry out into the life of the pupil.

To teach the facts of the lesson is of little consequence after all unless we get hold of the inner life of the child in a way that shall help to develop noble ideals, worthy desires, and the formation of habits of Christian conduct.

It is one thing to secure temporarily, a largely increased attendance at Sunday school through contests or other special devices; it is quite another thing to make our exercises and our class work so vital and gripping that the attendance becomes permanent through the development of interests and satisfactions which center in the activities of the school and find expression in the daily life.

The atmosphere of the school must be one of sympathy, kindness, and good will if we are to expect the child's nature to unfold and his mind to expand normally. Like love for the home, loyalty to the school and its ideals must rest upon experiences which continuously yield satisfaction, enjoyment, and good feeling. Loyalty can not grow where there is dislike, disappointment, or fear.

Interest is the primary consideration in all teaching effort. Thought, attention, enthusiasm must be centered on the matter in hand. There can be no lasting impressions made on a mind while its energies are dispersed through giving attention to other things. We may compel momentary attention by our antics or our demands, but fruitful attention is obtained only through interest.

Subject matter or tasks assigned must always be reasonably within the grasp of the children. The feeling of assurance and confidence that comes from successful achievement increases the amount of power available for further endeavor. A progressive program for youth is one of successive achievements, of mastery gained through an intelligent exercise of personal powers in harmony with noble purposes and high ideals.

The Sunday school is a Bible school in the sense that the Bible is the great source book of religious education. Although its study is but a means unto the development of religious attitudes, the attainment of Christian character, its effectiveness in changing human life will depend much upon the appreciation with which its passages are read, the permanent and continuing interest found in the great life lessons of its teachings. Only as we give the Scripture living meaning may we hope to build the strength and inspiration of the Scripture into growing young lives.

Even more important than intellectual growth is the spiritual response and development of our pupils. Each little soul is a spirit capable of being fed, nurtured, encouraged, trained, until it shall be fully expanded in the image of God, and may partake of His divine nature. Religion finds its reality in the developing ideals and ambitions which become motives for Christian conduct. The things one values most are the things for which he strives, and it is the work of a teacher to help establish a true sense of values.

What one admires is an index to his character. Life is infinitely enriched and refined by responding to the beauty, the goodness, and the gladness to be found about us. Teachers must be able to develop fine appreciations, not only by wise presentation of truth, but by the richness of their own experiences and the winning power of their personalities.

No amount of fine-spun stories, expounded theories, or high-sounding phrases will build character. Children do not respond to ordinary preaching. Our appeal must be very concrete, definite, and immediate. Loyalty and virtue must mean more than something to learn about and admire in others; it must find expression in our own lives each day in loyalty to parents, friends, school, church, self, duty, and above all, to Christ and his ideals.

Topics for Written Papers and Oral Discussions

1. Discuss the relationship between building attitudes and acquiring morals and gaining knowledge.
2. Causes for lack of interest in Sunday school.
3. How may we secure and hold attention?
4. How may we keep the interest of the older children?
5. To what extent is our school developing spirituality in its members?
6. Developing loyalty in our Sunday school.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Burlington, Iowa

The new year finds the Burlington Branch moving onward and upward to the high mark of our great calling, with some new officers and new ideas advancing. One new feature of importance is in the Sunday school, where the primary department, beginners up to and including intermediates, after going to their classes, which are upstairs in various classrooms, meet in their private assembly in the rear part of the main auditorium for their own closing exercises, which vary as organization becomes more complete. We believe this will not only improve order in the house of worship, but interest as well, and it will be educational in the fact that talent can be more easily discovered and developed in this manner.

On January 16 Brother and Sister Ed. Stadlander became the proud parents of a baby girl, Janet Louise. On January 25 Brother and Sister H. F. Bromann also were blessed with a baby girl, Dorothy Eloise.

Apostle D. T. Williams was with us January 16 and 17 and delivered three forceful sermons, encouraging the Saints and making us comprehend more fully our personal responsibilities in regard to the great work which we are so fortunately engaged in, admonishing us to be continually looking ahead, moving forward, reaching out ready to grasp the opportunities as they come, before they pass by and leave us to suffer the consequences.

This branch has been having considerable sickness, but we are glad to note all are improving, and most of the members are able to meet with us again. We will rejoice when others have the same privilege once more.

On February 2 Sister Theodore Kunz underwent an operation for appendicitis, and while it was more serious than was first anticipated, and the nurses marvel at her condition, considering all, Sister Kunz gives most of the credit to the One above, whom we particularly sought in her behalf, before and after the blessing was hers to enjoy.

Sister Duke continues and enjoys reading any church literature anyone is able to lend her.

The Department of Recreation and Expression decided, at the branch's request, to loan three hundred dollars of the motion picture machine fund, without interest, to be used on the building fund. This is to be paid back to this fund some time later. We feel our present debt is too great to keep up a picture machine, if we were to purchase one, and we should lend every effort possible to ridding ourselves of the debt already upon us. The branch as a whole appreciates this action. It is thought this department may later purchase a stereopticon machine, which we feel would prove very beneficial.

The Department of Women, which is one of the mainstays of the church, is busily engaged in trying to raise funds, and as usual presented three hundred dollars to the building fund. The social part of this department is in charge of the friendly visitors, consisting of a committee of two each month. In January Sister Rayer and Sister E. O. Bierman served, and this month Sisters E. F. Kunz and A. H. Kunz compose the committee. We realize to a great extent that the field of this department is a large one.

The Temple Builders also made a nice donation to the building fund, giving fifty dollars. This we feel is wonderful for so small a group of young women.

On January 29 and 30 a district musical institute was to be held in Burlington, conducted by Brother A. H. Mills, but because of lack of interest throughout the district the occasion was postponed until a later date, possibly in the spring. We hope that in the meantime local choristers will keep this before the branches and impress as much as possible the necessity of good music because of the inspiration we receive therefrom. We believe that such an institute would create an interest where it is now lacking, and the beneficial to those who already are musically inclined.

Our February sacramental service was indeed a grand feast for the soul, not by power, nor by might, but by the Spirit of God permeating the heart and soul of each one present, and words of encouragement were given to the Saints assembled. We trust this same Spirit shall guide us at all times, to keep us in tune with the all-righteous Mind and Will.

Brother and Sister Lee, of Nauvoo, Illinois, spent a week in Burlington and partook of the spiritual gifts and blessings with us on sacrament Sunday.

Sister Marjorie Smith, of California, has been visiting her mother, Sister H. N. Snively, and will be leaving us, we regret to say, about the middle of February.

The Department of Women is looking forward to a food sale in the near future, to be held at the telephone office.

The "S" Chapter of Temple Builders is planning a valentine party to be held at the home of Brother and Sister Burt Kunz.

We, as a united band, are moving onward to 1930.

Cherokee, Iowa

We are much encouraged with the good spirit with which the Saints are taking hold of the work since the new year. When all work together for the good of all and of God's work, we can soon see the fruits of our labors. We have been greatly blessed in our services and shall strive to work harder than ever.

Brother E. L. Edwards visited us January 30 and preached for the morning service. He is always a welcome visitor. Sister Hill and husband and Mr. and Mrs. Clover, of Aurelia, were also in attendance the same day. Sister Hill is steadily improving in health by the use of olive oil and administration by the elders.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a dramatization of "Pocahontas" for entertainment the evening of February 6. Their efforts were much enjoyed by those present.

The sacramental service February 6 was well attended, and the good Spirit was present, its gentle influence being in evidence throughout the meeting.

The priesthood held their monthly meeting in the afternoon, and all present handed in their reports for the month. They were read, and indicated that the brethren were busy in accordance with their agreement to make this a banner year for our branch.

Reports given Sunday by the Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression show an increase in both departments, both in attendance and interest. Several new scholars are attending Sunday school.

Sister Silsby, of Pisgah, visited her daughter, Gladys, and attended services January 30.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a valentine party at the home of Brother and Sister Alfred Ballantyne, Saturday evening, February 12. The evening was spent in playing games, and a nice lunch was served by the ladies. About sixty were present, and all reported a fine time.

This department also gave a fine valentine program Sunday evening, the 13th. The little folks furnished most of the numbers and pleased a large audience.

A good attendance greeted us at all services on the 13th, and the presence of the Spirit was manifested in all the day's meetings. The Sunday school is growing in numbers every week, and it has become so crowded in the beginner classes that more chairs have been ordered for their use.

We note with regret that our district president, F. T. Mussell, is being kept at his home in Des Moines on account of illness. He is taking some special treatment, and we trust he will be able to get back in the district again before General Conference.

Missionary W. A. Smith will arrive today and begin a series of special meetings. We trust the wonderful spirit and attendance of yesterday will continue through these services.

Cherokee Branch expects to let its light shine throughout this year. If any Saints happen to travel this way, we shall be glad to welcome them and, if possible, put them to work, as we always have room for workers. If you want a location in a good branch, you are invited to come and see us.

Central Los Angeles Branch

On January 5 the Central Los Angeles Branch held its annual election, at which time Apostle M. A. McConley was unanimously sustained as pastor, A. W. Teel and R. T. Knowlton continuing as assistants. All departmental heads who served last year and who are still in the city retained their places. There is great opportunity for service in this pleasure-seeking city, but success will be determined only by clean living and diligent service.

The young people's convention last November, under the leadership of Brother Wayne Smith, was a great success. Our minds were enlightened and our souls enriched by hearing Brother Floyd M. McDowell at his best. President F. M. Smith gave us an inspirational talk on "The building program of the church," and we regretted that he could not remain with us over Sunday.

Under the competent leadership of Sister Olive Davis, the Girl Scouts recently took a fifteen-mile hike to Mount Wilson, where is located one of the largest and best telescopes in the world. On another trip they camped over night at the Southern California reunion grounds, and later a week-end visit was made to Sunset Canyon, where they were privileged to occupy Brother and Sister Teel's cabin. On each outing the girls gained a good bit of nature lore by their own efforts and the assistance of their leader. The girls also visited the telephone exchange, where they were fascinated in having the dialing system and other details of the telephone system explained to them. These young Saints are not only learning, they are also serving. Mary Heiser is helping in the nursery; Lois Neese is assisting the Sunday school secretary; others are helping at dinners, in plays, and whenever called upon. Sister Madison is aiding them in fitting up their Girl Scout room at the church.

The Boy Scouts, with their scoutmaster, Brother Richard Wagon, recently took a trip to Mount Baldy. They drove the scout car to the foot of the mountain and hiked and snowballed the remainder of the way. The troop is now organized into two patrols, each patrol being graded on attendance, tests passed, etc. The patrol making the best record is to receive a special prize. This plan seems to have created new interest among the boys, and splendid results are apparent. Here's to the winning team!

The Temple Builders, with Sister Hazel Gregg as leader, have almost completely fitted out the kitchen so as to be ready to serve meals to a large crowd during district conference and on other occasions. They have also pledged help on the pipe organ, payment on which will soon be finished. As a young women's organization, the Temple Builders are making many worth-while contributions to the branch.

The Ladies' Aid is our "leading light" in many respects, for they show us how things are, and can be, done. Evidently the ladies in this society have been baptized in the fullest sense of the word. They meet, not monthly, as the priesthood does, but weekly, and not for a mere hour, but all day long. Each Wednesday they begin their sewing, or other work, at ten o'clock in the morning, and many times some of them are found working at sunset. As a result of their diligence, they made $530.16 during 1926, $310 of which was turned over to the local church building fund. Through their committee to see after the sick, many were made happy by visits and flowers; also gifts of food were taken monthly during the year to an orphan's home. They attended two educational lectures. The executive staff of this lively organization consists of Sisters Ball, Mather, and Bedford.

On February 6 the young people's prayer meeting at 8 a. m. was well attended. A prayer service for the young people will be held each sacrament Sunday at eight o'clock.

Sister Myron McConley's Sunday evening Book of Mormon class has been organized into a young people's choir. They will sing at the Sunday evening service, having made their first appearance January 30.

The church building looks almost like new again, since the revarnishing of the doors, and bits of paint and repair here and there. If we can only act as well as our building looks, visiting officers of the church will have only "journeys of joy" to make in our direction.

The attendance, promptness, and order of the congregation has improved wonderfully during the last two months, and Saints individually and Saints collectively are striving to give a friendly smile and a helping hand to those it is our privilege to meet.

BILLIE CARPENDER.

Atchison Entertains Northeastern Kansas District Conference

February 5 and 6 are now a part of past eternity. The result in the future of things said and done in the interest of the accomplishment of the tremendous task that lies before the church in this part of the field depends upon the reaction to the influence of the past on those in attendance.

The initial service of the conference was a prayer meeting in charge of F. G. Hedrick and Apostle D. T. Williams. The central thought in this service is of value in that we must have faith and confidence in Christ if we would accomplish what is incorporated in the revelations to the church, for no man alone has the brain power to do it. Have we as lay members sustained him upon whom rests the greater responsibility and helped to lighten his burden by our faith and prayers? At the close of this service, Brother Williams gave a talk on world conditions and the responsibility that rests upon the church in meeting the needs of the people. We can not live in the past, because we have been obedient to a formula, but we must bring the past to the present and inject something into the future.

In two sermons during the conference on "The sacrifice of Christ" and "The test of sonship," Saints were made to feel something of what it really means to have living apostles in the church as special witnesses of Christ, bringing to us something of his power and influence. Though space forbids mention, we trust the influence that accompanied the preaching will reach out into the lives of all who heard, to quicken, inspire, and encourage others to greater activity.

Brother Williams gave a lecture to the priesthood at 8.30 Sunday morning. The Sunday school was in charge of district officers, Brother and Sister B. F. Deller. Cecil Schmid, a former district superintendent, was present and gave a short talk on religious education.

At the close of the preaching service the infant son of Brother and Sister Gilbert F. Hedrick was blessed under the hands of D. T. Williams and F. G. Hedrick and given the name Myron Duane.

At 1.30 in the afternoon, Gladys E. Lentz was baptized by W. F. Bolinger at the Christian Church font, and confirmed under the hands of W. F. Bolinger and B. F. Deller at the prayer and sacramental service which followed. Sister Lentz is the daughter-in-law of Brother and Sister Lentz, of Atchison.

Dave Donahue was ordained to the office of deacon under the hands of C. E. Harpe and B. F. Jackson. The ordination of administration to the sick was administered to little Jean Morene Beronius. District Missionary C. E. Harpe preached the closing sermon of the conference in the evening to a good audience, and will continue each evening through the week. Several new members were present. Preceding the preaching service, a short program was given by the Department of Recreation and Expression in charge of District Superintendent W. F. Bolinger.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, all locals of this district were represented at the conference. And all want to express thanks to Atchison Saints for their hospitality and entertainment.

Escatawpa, Mississippi

February 4.—It has been some time since Escatawpa Branch has been heard from, but we are still alive, and there seems to be more interest shown of late.

The Christmas program, under the direction of Sisters Elizabeth Rogers, Susie Davis, and Mabel Smith, was a success and enjoyed by all. Sister Edna Sherman had charge of decorating the tree and was assisted by the senior class, of which she was teacher at that time. There were many beautiful and useful presents on the tree for young and old. Many little hearts were made happy when Santa arrived.

During the month of November we had with us for ten days Elders J. W. A. Bailey and T. M. Carr. Brother Bailey gave some very interesting lectures on ancient history, which were very much enjoyed, and we hope to have him with us again.

Elder T. M. Carr, district president, came over from Mobile to be present at the election of officers for the year.

The Department of Women presented a library table to the church last year. This was greatly appreciated.

The home of Brother and Sister A. N. Barnes was brightened by the arrival of a fine baby boy on January 10. He was given the name of Curtis Everett.

Sister Martha Mizell recently visited relatives in Mobile; this sister is in poor health and requests the prayers of the Saints.

Brother and Sister A. G. Miller were with us the second Sunday in January. Brother Miller preached at the eleven o'clock hour.

Brother J. G. Parker and family visited relatives in Mobile Sunday.

Preparations are being made to put electric lights in the church some time in the near future.

Santa Ana, California

Judging from the way the Santa Ana Branch has started, 1927 will be a banner year here. Never before have we been so well equipped with earnest workers and with young men who hold the priesthood.

No effort is being spared to make Santa Ana a one hundred per cent local. The most active work here is done by the young people. Practically every office is held by a young man or woman under thirty.

At the monthly business meeting on January 5, the branch officers were elected as follows: Pastor, David B. Carmichael; clerk, Mildred Calkins; deacon, William Sames; secretary, Sister Mary Parks. The Sunday school officers are as follows: Superintendent, William Sames; assistant, Jim Parks; secretary and treasurer, Ruby Otto. Brother Wilford Burton was sustained as president of the Department of Recreation and Expression, as was the vice president, Mildred Calkins. Carl Harris was elected secretary and treasurer.

The Department of Women held their first meeting of the year at Sister Lula Sherwin's home. The morning was spent quilting. At noon a delicious "pot luck" luncheon was served, after which the new officers were chosen. Sister Fern Burton is the new superintendent. As she is both young and energetic, we are expecting great things from this department.

A party was given Brother Gerald Mitchell on January 7 in the church basement. Brother Gerald left on January 9 for Berkeley, where he is attending school. Gerald expects to complete his university course in June, when he will receive his Master of Arts degree.

The Religio executive committee met at the home of Brother and Sister Hunter for a "pot luck" supper early in January. The new committees have just been chosen. Carl Harris and Jim Parks, who compose the look-out committee, are planning a cooked food sale for the latter part of the month. This will be held down town. The social committee is composed of Mildred Calkins, Dorothy Thurston, and Brother Thomas Hunter, who have promised many good times for the near future. Marie Mitchell, Leona Calkins, and Garnett Sames are the program committee. Their plan is to make the programs educational as well as entertaining, and they are planning on reading a few chapters from various good books each Sunday. Last Sunday the first chapter from Doctor Frank Crane's book, Why I Am a Christian, was read by Sister Harris.

The clean-up committee is sponsoring a box social in the church basement on January 21.

The Santa Ana Branch is moving "Forward to 1930." We hope all the other Saints are as happy in their work as we are.

MARIE MITCHELL.

New Bedford, Massachusetts

February 14.—Occasionally we have good prayer services here. Sunday, February 6, a spirit prevailed from beginning to end that made it a session enjoyable to all.

Of late we have had the help of District Missionary Herman Chelline a number of times, and have been made to rejoice in his visits. Brother John Rogerson, of Fall River, was the speaker January 16; while we expect Brother Alma Coombs, also of Fall River, to be with us next Sunday.

The Department of Women has commenced to function again. Last Saturday night they held a valentine party at the home of Sister Grace Hughes. Twenty-six were present, among whom were Brother and Sister John Rogerson, Sister Florence Sheehy, and Sister Olive Chelline, of Fall River. Everybody enjoyed himself in a good time. Much credit is due the Department of Women for their effort in the occasion.

Foraker, Oklahoma

February 10.—The first of the year the election of branch officers was held. Brother E. E. Workman was sustained as president; Brother Robert Montague, priest; Reuben Workman, deacon; George Swain, teacher. In the Sunday school is almost an entirely different corps of officers and teachers, headed by Superintendent Arthur Slover; assistant, Reuben Workman. Usually we have from thirty-five to forty in attendance, and there seems to be a good interest in all classes. If those in charge of this work will apply themselves to study—since most of them are young in the work—and the Saints will cooperate with them in their work and prayers, we see no reason why this branch should not prosper during the coming year.

During the month of January, Bishop C. J. Hunt visited us and gave some very instructive talks to the Saints. These talks were very much appreciated and are still being discussed by the members. Other visitors have been Brother Ed. Dillon, of Oklahoma City, who is our district president, also Sister Dillon, district supervisor of women, were here at the same time as Brother Hunt. But because Oklahoma was putting on "a bad roads demonstration" at that time, they cut their visit shorter than they would have done otherwise, and departed for parts where more pavements abound. Can any of the bishopric imagine Brother Hunt in company with an ex-cowboy and his wife, riding a real cow horse to and from church? Nevertheless, he can certify to the truthfulness of the statement.

About two weeks ago Brother and Sister Woslum were called to Bryant, Oklahoma, to the bedside of a very sick daughter. Sister Woslum is still there. Brother Lyman Adair, one of our members, is sick at Shawnee, Oklahoma.

He was dressing tools on an oil well in the Seminole Field and was stricken with flu almost four weeks ago. Sister Flossie, his wife, is with him. At this writing Brother Roy Slover is in the Sanitarium at Independence.

Our sacramental service last Sunday was an unusually good service. A good feeling existed among the Saints, which seems to bring unity of mind at such times. Our pastor preached in the evening. May the Lord bless his Saints with wisdom and understanding of their duty.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, February 10.—Another year has passed into history; and as we look back over the past year we feel we have much to be thankful for, and wonder if we are worthy of the many blessings which are daily ours. We are looking into the coming year, and hope for better accomplishments than ever before.

On February 5 our business meeting was held, and some changes were made in the official personnel of our branch. Brother Erwin Pyles, elder, was chosen branch president; secretary, Brother Edgar Bealor; officers sustained are: Brother Erwin Pyles, elder; Walter Culp, priest; Luther Crabtree, teacher; James Crabtree, deacon; James E. Altman, deacon.

We have enjoyed some spiritual prayer services the past few months. We were made glad January 29 when Brother Jacob Halb, one of the seventy, came into our midst. He gave a wonderful talk on our knowing how to control our appetite, that we may be healthy and strong enough to overcome the Evil One, who is trying to destroy mankind. We are always glad to welcome such men as Brother Halb, and we are looking forward to the district conference, which will be at Ironton, Ohio, February 19 and 20. Our delegates chosen to attend are Brother Edgar Bealor, Brother Walter Culp, and Brother Luther Crabtree. Also, many others of our branch are planning to go.

Our aged sister, Joann Crabtree, is improving. Brother Shurdan Crabtree, who took to his bed five weeks ago, is not improving as yet.

We are glad to say that the Saints have made an opening at South Portsmouth, where Brother Jacob Halb commenced preaching February 7 to a small audience of interested listeners. His subject was, "Have life, and have it more abundantly." The subject on Tuesday evening was "An old-time religion in our day." This was heard by a larger audience. On the 9th he spoke on the second coming of Christ with not so many present. But some not of the faith declared he did wonderfully well; he could explain so clearly and make his sermons outstanding in their simplicity.

This place is sixteen miles from a branch where some of our worthy members are living. We have a chance for an opening in Portsmouth, Ohio, as soon as we can get there. We feel much good will be accomplished at these two places.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

February 8.—A splendid young people's convention has just been concluded in our branch. The young people gathered from different parts of Saskatchewan and have now returned to their homes, feeling greatly strengthened and enthused. We feel wonderfully encouraged with regard to our young, realizing that they are consecrated to the service of the Master.

Brother Clyde F. Ellis, who has been among us for the past two weeks, holding services each evening and who also directed the convention, has been a source of inspiration to us all. The Saints feel that his life coincides with his teachings.

The convention opened with a splendid community program of music, readings, pantomimes, and a couple of playlets. A pageant was especially effective. A young girl is choosing her vocation. Knowledge, love, beauty, fame, music, and power are all presented to her in turn, but she rejects them. Finally religion is offered to her. She accepts, and the other gifts come to her as a matter of course.

A splendid spirit prevailed in the prayer meetings held in the early morning hours, many of the young people bearing their testimony for the first time. Some of the subjects dealt with at the various meetings were: Preparation for marriage, ethics, the financial attitude of our young people, stewardships, looking forward to our service in the church, the open door, and character building. This last subject was ably handled by Brother Ellis on Sunday evening, the church being well filled. Some of the young men have filed their inventories, and others have expressed a desire to do so.

Brother and Sister Nels J. Peterson are spending the winter in Missouri and Iowa, and Elder Louis Gendron has recently returned from Independence, having attended the ministerial conference while there. He brought back with him most encouraging reports of conditions in the church, filling our hearts with hope and confidence as he preached to us of Zion.

In prayer meeting recently the thought came that Zion was as an abiding light upon a mountain top. If we would reach it, we must climb. We will never do so by standing still and gazing longingly upward. We must needs be well equipped for the climb, girding ourselves and conserving our strength, for the nearer the goal the steeper the way. What though we stumble over crags and slip backward at times? We will rise and press on, head lifted high. Occasionally there are level stretches, which give us breathing spells, but these take us no higher. The steeper the way, the sooner we reach our goal. And as we climb, we are entranced with the widening outlook, the rarified air, and our nearness to God himself. God grant we may not lose our bearings and stumble over a precipice, or grow discouraged with the steepness of the way and turn back. Let us keep our eyes upon the light ahead.

Owen Sound District

If the news items from the Owen Sound District appearing in the church papers are to be taken as a criterion, one might well infer that its obituary notice would be quite in order. The reports from our district, telling of our activities, are not unlike the proverbial hen's teeth, few and far between. During the summer season the district officers endeavor to cover as much as possible of the extensive territory included in this district. On February 5 District President D. B. Perkins paid a visit to the Port Elgin Branch. On Sunday, the 6th, Elders Benson Bellrose and J. A. Morrison, of Owen Sound, arrived, and together they looked over the grounds offered for the holding of our annual reunion.

At the hour of eleven in the morning, they met with the Saints in their sacramental service, and a real service was enjoyed by all present. The voice of the Spirit spoke in prophecy to District President D. B. Perkins concerning his work in the branches and district, also speaking words of comfort and cheer to the Saints and calling to the ministry Brother Iden Leeder. Speaking to Elder Benson Bellrose, he was reminded that the trials he had passed through had been for the purification of his character, and he was warned of trials to come. Also, the priesthood were expressly admonished that in their intercourse with the men of the world and before the Saints their every act and word should be such that none might take offense. They were warned to let contention cease, that God's work might go forward; but if they would not give heed to his words of counsel and warning, they would be removed from this sphere of action unto another where they would be under obligation to do God's work and his will. But this would be under conditions and amid surroundings which would not be as conducive to their development as those under which they are now being given an opportunity to labor. They were told to seek to learn

God's will and to do it, that through them God's power and glory might shine. All felt cheered and blessed by the power and presence of God's Spirit. During the service Brother Iden Leeder was ordained to the office of teacher.

In the afternoon Elder Benson Bellrose preached a real gospel sermon on the need of getting back to the old paths.

We expect Apostle J. F. Curtis to be in Port Elgin for February 13 and the week following, thence to Wiarton for a week, then on to Owen Sound, where we expect Evangelist J. F. Martin, about the beginning of March, to hold a series of meetings. We are hopeful that much good will result from the sojourn of these brothers, that the fires on the altar of many homes may be rekindled and in the future kept burning; also that the young may be encouraged and their assistance in the work may receive a new impetus.

Sister Farrow, wife of Elder Percy Farrow, missionary to Southern Indiana District, is at present at her mother's home in Port Elgin. She has been suffering from a complication of troubles, which has left her body weakened, and as a result her progress of recovery is slow. Elder Farrow is with her, assisting in caring for her. The prayers of the Saints have been offered in her behalf, that she may recover and be of assistance to her husband in his labors.

D. B. PERKINS, District President.

The Menace of Trashy Literature

A serious problem confronts us; one which has not been discussed, at least not recently—perhaps has not even been recognized by the majority of people. A danger threatens our young people. I refer not to the liquor problem, tobacco, or other dangers so frequently enlarged upon, but to the menace of filthy and trashy literature.

Our land is flooded with this vile stuff—it should not be dignified by the name of "literature." All of you know the type of periodical I speak of—filthy, obscene, suggestive stories and pictures, the cover luridly decorated to catch the eye of Flaming Youth, some of whom are not so young. But it is of youth I am thinking. Men and women of maturity and experience are not so easily influenced. Their characters are formed, the plastic age is past; habits of thought and life are established. If this trash is read by these, the impression it makes is negligible. We are able to sift the chaff from the wheat and take our reading for what it is worth.

But with youngsters the case is entirely different. The mind is in the process of formation; it is wide open to good or bad influences. There is no poise or stability. I refer to children up to the age of maturity, generally speaking twenty-one years of age. Some mature at a younger age than others. But until the child is a well-balanced individual, capable of molding his own life, and forming his own decisions, great care should be exercised in shaping and training his mind. This includes a careful supervision of his reading.

We, as parents, must awake to the menace of yellow journalism and must be leaders in stamping out this evil. It is not sufficient to safeguard our own children by never permitting these magazines to enter our homes. They can not avoid seeing them in the homes of their playmates, and even on the streets. Young folks often collect in groups to read sensational, melodramatic nonsense, without their elders having the least suspicion. So we should make every effort to stamp out this evil for the sake of the future morals of our Nation. Those who have no children are not without obligations. It is up to every one of us who stands for decency to ally himself in this cause.

"What can we do?" do you ask? We can refuse to buy or read such periodicals. We can use our influence with our friends and neighbors to urge them to do the same. We can protest to news dealers and the authorities against their publication and sale. Where there is no demand, the supply soon ceases. We can patronize exclusively those dealers who sell only good and wholesome literature, of which there is an abundance.

Many crimes are committed because of the suggestions or ideas gained from wrong reading. Many lives are ruined. Do not say, "My son, or my daughter is pure minded and would not be influenced by such stories. Such reading does not appeal to my child." Do you really know what your child is reading, thinking, and doing? You'd be surprised!

Don't blame the children! They are not morbid or intentionally bad. But when such foul stuff is constantly before them, flaunting such an attractive garb, what can you expect? Especially are they influenced if they see their parents or other older people reading with apparent enjoyment stuff which they vaguely feel is really "bunk." I have seen these vile magazines in the homes of good Latter Day Saints. I would much rather see the children go to public dances or to questionable shows than to sit by the hour absorbing poison for their minds in their own homes.

Public opinion is the greatest force on earth, the greatest weapon. When public opinion shall demand that this menace to our young be removed, that these things shall be abolished, watch them go! What about it, Saints? Are you with me?

Yours for pure, clean literature,
DELPHINE BOZARTH.

A Northern Branch Looking Forward

I have just read some interesting articles in the HERALD, among them being the editorial on stewardship of priesthood, dedicated to the wives and mothers of the ministry, and in the reading of that article I was filled with the Spirit, and I felt to kneel and ask God's blessing on the ministry of his church. This is a lonely Sunday, and we are isolated from the branch during the winter, the church being nine and a half miles from town. Only when the Ford will run, can we attend. Today Brother Ellis is with the branch, and we trust those who are privileged to attend will feel blessed in their meeting.

Brother E. L. Bowerman is branch president, and in him we find a humble, worthy leader. Besides his work as breadwinner for his family, he can always find time to go where his official duty calls, and no night is too cold if the Saints call for administration. When we see him blessing our children, baptizing those who call for it, speaking comforting words to those who mourn for loved ones, we see that same kindly spirit manifested, and we feel to say, God bless our brother and his household.

On January 13 we laid to rest our dear Sister Land. Her release must have been glorious, as she suffered severely from cancer. How blessed are they who die in the Lord!

We are looking forward this summer to having our church finished, and to this end the W. A. is working, that they might add their mite.

This winter we missed the visit of Brother W. J. Cornish, our district president, for his coming among the Saints always enthuses us with new life. But we wish him success in his labors of love among the Saints throughout this Northern District.

As superintendent of home class for this district, I might say we have enrolled several new members, and I take this privilege of asking any who would care to take up this work to write, and I will supply quarterlies and report envelopes. We hope to see this a banner year for all departments of the church.

Enthusiastic Port Huron Meeting

A telegram was received from Elder Matthew W. Liston, dated February 14, which stated that Elder E. J. Gleazer was at his best in their opening meeting of Sunday evening. It was necessary to provide extra seats to handle the crowd, and keen interest was displayed, all working in harmony, and success of the series of meetings is assured.

Baby Clinic Work in Lamoni, Iowa

During the few short weeks that we have been conducting the baby clinic, we have been able to interest something near seventy-five mothers, and have them coming regularly with their children to be weighed and measured.

We hold our clinic Friday afternoon of each week. Of course if there is a mother who can not come on Friday but can come another day, we are ready always to help her, for I have equipped a room in my own home for the clinic work and stand only too glad to serve when the opportunity presents itself.

At 2.30 on Friday, Sister Lydia Wight teaches a class in "parentcraft," having worked out the outlines for the course from Mary L. Reads manual on Mothercraft; the set of books called Parents and Their Problems, furnished by the National Congress of Mothers; and other good books. Sister Wight has a nice enrollment of interested mothers who are anxious to learn more and more, so that they might be able to help build one hundred per cent homes, the goal of every full-fledged Latter Day Saint parent. The parents coming to the "parentcraft" class bring their babies, and they enjoy the hour in the nursery, which has also been fitted up for an indefinite nursery, to last as long as the clinic and parentcraft class wish to function, which we wish may be the entire time we have planned to live here (and that may be a long time, for we enjoy living here). As soon as the parentcraft class is dismissed, the nurses begin weighing and measuring the babies.

It is soul cheering to see the interest taken in the clinic by the parents of Lamoni. I have noticed, too, that the parents are paying more attention to their physical condition, and this, no doubt, is a common consequence when we begin to awaken to the vital importance of our children being physically fit. Our goal as parents is the highest Christian civilization it is possible for humanity to attain, and we feel that the clinic is one of the helps toward this achievement.

DONA CLARK HADEN, General Superintendent of the Department of Cradle Roll.

San Jose, California

February 1.—The newly elected officers of the San Jose Branch took their places the first of the year and are taking hold of the work with a vim and zeal that is commendable. They are organizing and reorganizing in all departments of the branch work, and if they carry out all the resolutions they have adopted for the coming year, the advancement and improvement in this local will certainly be noticeable. We were not present when these resolutions were made, but they were still being echoed when the writer returned to his post. We will not attempt to give them in their order and perhaps will not mention all of them, but here are some. Echo answers: Our slogan, "Onward to 1930." There must be no idlers in our midst; every officer is to learn his duty and be found acting faithfully and promptly in his office; we want to be loyal to God and his Son, Jesus the Christ, and to those servants whom he has called and ordained to direct in the affairs of his church and kingdom here on earth; we shall endeavor to assist in the establishing of Zion and to conform to the financial law, which we understand to be a very important part of the gospel law. May God help us to keep these resolutions, for if we do keep them we shall surely prosper.

The branch is holding regular meetings in all the departments, and all seem to be enthusiastic and in good spirits. There is something going on nearly every night: prayer meetings, committee meetings, choir practice, operetta rehearsals, socials, organ booster suppers, birthday dinners, hope chest showers, etc.

On Sunday, January 16, Elder J. B. Carmichael, one of the counselors to the district bishop, was with this branch and gave a special sermon on stewardships and tithing. This effort was inspiring and well received. We understand that the bishop is having these special sermons preached throughout the district.

On Wednesday, the 19th, the night was cold and stormy, and not very many came out, but we had a one hundred per cent prayer meeting which was enjoyed by those present.

On the following Friday evening the organ boosters gave one of their social suppers in the basement of the church. A very enjoyable time was had, and about a dozen dollars were realized, to be applied to the organ fund. The club is now rehearsing another operetta, which they hope to present in the near future. Of this you will hear later.

On the night of the 28th, the Department of Recreation and expression gave the branch a "trip around the world," dinner free. Different countries were represented by different homes of the Saints, and automobiles were used as boats. The tourists drank tea and ate wafers in Japan; ate pineapple and bananas in Honolulu; hamburger and rice on cabbage leaves in India; drank wine and ate wafers in France; ate corn beef and cabbage and drank "green lemonade" in Ireland; and ate apple pie in the United States. It was the first time some of them had been around the world, and now they have something new to talk about. All thought it a wonderful trip.

Sunday, the 30th, was a banner day in the branch. Sunday school and church were well attended, and as a fit closing of the Sunday school, a baptismal service was had, at which time two children were inducted into the kingdom. They were Otto Witzke, and Margaret Shippy. Elder L. B. Shippy officiated. In the evening there was an unusually large crowd at Religio, and a good program was put on by the male membership. It was greatly enjoyed.

The Department of Women are always worthy of mention. At the close of the year, they sent in their pledge to the bishop, given at last conference, to help pay the debt on the reunion grounds. It amounted to one hundred dollars, and they have pledged a like sum to the branch budget for branch expenses. They never fail to pay their pledges. To tell the whole truth, if it were not for the women, the church would go on the rocks.

C. W. HAWKINS.

Good Words From Croswell Branch

As I read the many wonderful letters and inspiring sermons in the HERALD from week to week, I am made to realize that it was surely the wisdom of God which inspired our leaders to publish such a paper, wherein we might find instruction and encouragement; so we do not wish to be selfish but hope to make our contribution from time to time.

We can truthfully say that this year has been the best in all our experience, because we find that the heavier our responsibility grows the more we become interested in the development of our efforts (if we have success as our goal); and the more we realize our dependence, the brighter shines the ray of hope in our lives, and our faith is increased in the fact that God is; and as we have endeavored to discharge our duties we have always found him near, to bless. The responsibility of a branch president is no small one when we consider that we have been placed as master mechanics over those who contain power and talent, and it is our responsibility to harness this power and provide for developing these talents in order to be a true shepherd of the flock.

We are just now completing our program for the last half of the year, which we began with the big home-coming which we consider was the biggest and best event ever held in the branch, or possibly the district; and we are sure it produced more direct good to the church locally than any service we ever held, as it raised our position in the community, and that is no small task. We followed this with a visiting campaign; and now, through the courtesy of the Presidency and apostles in charge, we are permitted to enjoy the services of Elder O. J. Hawn, who has been giving some wonderful sermons and has enjoyed a goodly degree of the Spirit.

The church has been filled every night and sometimes to its capacity; several are interested, and one has been baptized. This young man, we consider a valuable asset to the church. Our object is new members, as we wish to strengthen the financial standing of the branch, that we might be able to build a new church on a fine lot we have purchased which is centrally located. It is quite satisfying to note that as I was talking to some nonmembers, four of them promised me one hundred dollars each, and two others said they would help; so with confidence we move on, with victory ahead. I am satisfied if we could keep Brother Hawn in the district new churches would soon be easy to build.

This organized effort has confirmed me more than ever that a job well planned is half done, and if we all would just frame our program for the season and then tactfully carry it out, much more good would be accomplished. We trust the Saints may be blessed everywhere and that the great unfinished task may be speedily accomplished.

CROSWELL, MICHIGAN, February 15. L. E. GRICE.

Wichita Enjoys Visit of President McDowell and Elder A. H. Mills

(Excerpts from letter of E. L. Barraclough, Wichita, Kansas, February 17, to President F. M. Smith.)

The work throughout the district is progressing very satisfactorily. Brother Harvey V. Minton is at this time holding a meeting at Winfield, Kansas. He is receiving excellent support by the membership, and the outlook surpasses any past efforts made in that territory. The young people have especially rallied to his support, and many outsiders are attending the meetings, among them many who have never before heard the message of the gospel; but best of all, the membership are feeling fine, and the results can not help but be good.

In regard to the meetings recently held in Wichita, they were a grand success. The young people's convention opened Friday night, February 11, with a large crowd, and the young people of Wichita, led by Sister Stella Brockway, furnished the entertainment for the evening. Saturday morning President F. M. McDowell and Brother Arthur H. Mills arrived on the Missouri Pacific and were met by Brother Whalley and the undersigned and taken to the pleasant home of P. L. and Kate Brockway, where they were cared for during their stay in our city; thence to the church, where the real meetings began at 8.45 a. m., and from that hour everything was business.

Each of the above-mentioned brethren gave us two sermons and several class periods, all of which were well attended. Brother Mills's work was along the line of music, and never before was the singing of such a high order. Solos were sung by young Sister Annetta Deck and Grace Vickery, of Winfield, Kansas; and by Sister Goodfellow, of Wichita; duets and quartets by the young people of Wichita; and the congregational singing never before was so well enjoyed. Brother Mills seemed to awaken us to new life, and the peaceful influence of God's Spirit was enjoyed by all throughout the meetings.

The two sermons by Brother McDowell and the class periods on the problems of the young people were wonderful, but the climax of it all was the closing sermon Sunday night to a crowded house by Brother McDowell, subject, "Faith of the mountain top." Being in charge of the service, I was in a position so I could observe the congregation, and the Spirit of God surely was working with all present. I have heard more compliments on that sermon than usual. It was too bad that all Wichita did not hear that sermon. All are looking forward to the time when we can have a return visit from these brothers.

East Saint Louis, Illinois

February 19.—The Landsdowne, East Saint Louis, Branch has been going on in its small way since our last report to you.

Recent speakers at services have been Teacher Frank F. O'Bryan, Deacon John Smith, Elders B. S. Lambkin, W. C. Carl, W. D. Millner, and our pastor, Elder George F. Barraclough. Brother Carl's sermon on Sunday morning, February 13, was a great deal about Abraham Lincoln and was intensely interesting.

On Friday night, February 12, the Temple Builders held a valentine party. This was greatly enjoyed by both old and young. We believe much good is accomplished by these social periods among the Saints. The following Friday night a debate was held, the question being, "Resolved, That Lincoln did more for America than Washington." Brothers Joe Meloan and Joe Carl took the affirmative side, and Sister Ruth Brown and Brother Clinton Dickens the negative.

We are sorry to report the death of the infant son of Brother and Sister Wilbur Smith.

Our district conference will be held with the Saint Louis Branch Saturday and Sunday, February 26 and 27.

C. V. DICKENS.

Campus Organization and Doings

The annual mass meeting of those interested in the Campus and its activities for the purpose of selecting ten members for the Committee of Thirty, and hearing reports of the year's work, was held Sunday afternoon in the Institute Building. A considerable number of people were present. The Committee of Thirty is directly in charge of the Campus, ten members being elected each year.

In the absence of President Frederick M. Smith, chairman of the board, Dean F. M. McDowell presided. Reports from the various committees showed that the past year was the best of the four years since the beginning of campus operations, both in point of service to the community and financial returns.

Doctor McDowell reported for the Institute that during the summer a school was conducted for eight weeks with an enrollment of 370. The Institute proper opened the middle of September with an enrollment of 630 students. Of this number, 145 were enrolled in the high school department, which has been fully accredited by the state board. It is expected there will be quite a number of graduates from the high school this spring. More than a thousand people of Independence were beneficiaries. The teaching is all gratis.

Financial reports showed that for the first time since its purchase the Campus was self-supporting during the past year. Total receipts were $12,696.42 with expenditures of $11,509.29, leaving a balance of $1,187.13 with which to run the school for the next four months and get the grounds and equipment in shape for another season's activities. Additions and betterments during the past year were kept at a minimum, the largest items of expense being the new cellar door slide and a new pop corn stand and machine.

During the summer approximately 60,000 cars were parked on the grounds. No serious accidents occurred, and but few minor thefts were reported.

Through an arrangement with the city, a tourist camp was maintained on the grounds and was looked after by the caretaker, wood and water being furnished.

The two largest gatherings last summer were for the Fourth of July and Labor Day celebrations. On these two occasions the grounds were taxed to the fullest capacity. The Independence Chamber of Commerce cooperated with the campus committee on the Fourth and sponsored the race program, furnishing nearly $150 in cash for the prizes.

Moving pictures were shown on the large screen twenty-three times during the summer, and these exhibitions were attended each Saturday evening by from 4,500 to 8,000 people.

The committee felt that much credit was due the owner of the Independence theaters and the present manager for the high grade of films shown last summer.

At election, the following were selected to serve on the Committee of Thirty for the ensuing three years: Mansel T. Williams, George H. Hulmes, Miss Bertha Constance, M. H. Siegfried, John Sheehy, G. S. Trowbridge, F. M. McDowell, Clifford R. Smith, Mrs. George Gould, and L. L. Compton.

After the election, a general discussion ensued, those present offering suggestions and criticisms which might be helpful to the committee in carrying on the work for the coming year.—Independence Examiner, February 21.

Women of Fargo Studying Food Values

FARGO, NORTH DAKOTA, February 15.—The Department of Women has decided to take up the study of scientific eating and health building. The members will meet each week instead of every two weeks, studying the Doctrine and Covenants each alternate week. It seems a part of the mother's stewardship to educate herself in the right kinds of food and their correct combinations. The food we eat not only affects us physically, but also morally and spiritually. The mother holds within the hollow of her hand the health of her loved ones. By having stronger, healthier bodies we will be able to render more efficient service to our Maker, and our spirits will be brighter. God wants us to take good care of the temples in which we live. Much sickness could be avoided by proper diet and sleep. The nourishing foods given us by a kind, heavenly Father, such as vegetables, fruits, and whole wheat; natural sweets, such as honey, raisins, dates maple sugar, are in abundance and can be eaten and enjoyed, and strength and vigor will be the reward. There are so many denatured foods on the market which are not nourishing that it is very interesting to acquaint ourselves with the right kinds of food and profit thereby. The mothers will be more efficient and economical cooks when Zion is redeemed by learning to serve the proper foods in these latter days. God has commanded us to study all good books, and we believe this is one of them. This department is hopeful of accomplishing much good during the year.

Brother Charles Brown, of Georgetown, North Dakota, spent Sunday, February 6, with his family here.

Several of our number have been entertaining a real dose of the flu of late. No enjoyable time has been reported.

Brother Floyd Blakely has gone to Cooperstown, North Dakota, where he anticipates running a vulcanizing shop of his own. The Saints will miss this young brother, for boys and men are rather scarce in our branch. The sisters have things about their own way.

Brother Roy Freeman has gone to Crookstown, Minnesota, where he has employment. His family is still here.

Sister Josephine Bullis, of Leonard, has been visiting her daughter, Sister Iva Wiedling, and attended services while here.

Brother and Sister Layton and family, of Montana, are spending the winter in Fargo.

The Saints are enjoying a Bible study hour on Sunday evening in the place of Religio, which has gone on a vacation for a time. The study is taken from the adult quarterly, namely Doctrinal Course, The Meaning of Our Religion. It is very fine.

Sister Julius Wilson, of Kragnes, Minnesota, is spending a few weeks with her mother, Sister Cora Dehn. Sister Avis Walker has returned from LaMoure, where she has been enjoying a visit with her sister, Mrs. Robert Good. Sister Avis is employed in the Dewey Studio here. Her sister, Irma, works at the Owl Studio. Sister Elsie Brown is a stenographer at the Fairmount Creamery in Moorhead, Minnesota, and Sister Fern Shackow is employed as chief operator of night staff and supervisor of long distance calls, at the Northwestern Telephone Company. We are glad these sisters have secured such good positions.

Sister Blanch Farley went to Ellendale, North Dakota, to attend the funeral of her brother-in-law, L. W. Casterton. She also went with her sister to Canton, Minnesota, where the body was taken for interment.

Brother George Young, of Berlin, North Dakota, attended the preaching service Sunday evening, February 13.

Sister Jane Perchie, who has been spending a few weeks with her sister, Sister Barbara Thompson, of Clifford, has returned to her home in Saskatoon. The last part of her visit was spent in Fargo, where she and Sister Thompson have been enjoying church privileges. Sister Thompson is still here and is taking treatments for her heel.

Brother Courtney Rotzien enjoyed listening to a sermon from K L D S, by Patriarch H. O. Smith the other evening. Brother Smith still holds a prominent place in the hearts of the Fargo Saints.

The Saints were grieved to hear of the death of Brother Jacob Harpster, of Audubon, Minnesota. Elder Marcus Erickson officiated at the funeral service, and the body was taken to Detroit, Minnesota, for burial. He leaves his wife, four sons, and one daughter to mourn. Our pastor, Thomas Leitch, attended the funeral services and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved family.

This branch has had no visits from visiting elders for some time, so our pastor has been breaking the bread of life to us. The subjects he has talked on of late are "Watering the Lord's fruit trees," "The peace of God," text, Philippians 4:7: "The peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus," and, "Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us." In the last sermon he stated that mother love is next to God's love. The sacrifices a true mother makes likens her love unto God's love.

Brother Leitch is planning to give his little flock a sleigh ride party in the near future to soothe their restless spirits. It seems all sheep like to "scamper" about now and then.

Several of the Saints are anxious to make out their inventories; some have already done so. This is surely an important part in preparing to move Zionward.

Our Sunday school is still holding its own and getting along quite well. We hope our numbers will be increased in the near future.

Young People at Wichita

WICHITA, KANSAS.—The outstanding feature of our February program was our young people's convention held here the 12th and 13th. We are deeply grateful to President F. M. McDowell and Brother A. H. Mills as sources of joy, strength, and inspiration from which words of wisdom and loving devotion have come. Altogether our numbers were small compared to like conventions we have read about in other districts, yet this being our first, we feel the district was well represented. We are looking forward to similar experiences in the future. Those who attended were doubly blessed.

We can not find words to express the good done by the visit of these two godly men. Throughout the services the Spirit of God was present to a great degree. Two excellent sermons by President McDowell caused the Spirit to be present to such a degree that nearly everyone was in tears, even nonmembers.

At our prayer meeting on Wednesday night, many testified that those sermons were presented with greater authority than they had ever witnessed before, and the light which radiated from Brother McDowell touched the innermost parts of our hearts, giving us a greater desire and greater determination to go on and do our part, great or small though it may be.

Brother Mills gave an interesting discourse on Sunday morning, portraying to us the value of music and the development of talent. No sermon of words can do more toward bringing souls to Christ than beautiful voices singing to his praise. He also gave some valuable instructions and labored patiently and fervently with our young people, that they might have a greater understanding. His direction of song service added inspiration to the various services held.

Brother McDowell returned home Sunday night, but Brother Mills remained over the following day and met again with our singers to assist them in outlining their work. We can not be grateful enough to those who labored that we might enjoy the blessings which were ours.

We are sorry to lose some of our good workers. Brother Charles Pooler and family are moving to Tonkawa, Oklahoma, where he will be district manager for the Bridgeport Machine Company. Brother Roy Whipple and wife have moved to Falls City, Nebraska, where Brother Whipple will have charge of one of the McClellan Stores.

Our financial committee, led by Brothers L. R. Field and J. J. Wilson, have undertaken to raise funds to pay off our church debt. We are glad to say they have accomplished their undertaking. Much credit is due these brethren because of their untiring efforts to accomplish their plan.

Our midweek prayer services are well attended, the Spirit of the Lord being present to a wonderful degree.

Pastor Whalley is a faithful shepherd, and under his guidance the work here is growing. The Saints are developing spiritually. Sister Whalley is a faithful helper, always willing and ready to do her part. Together we are working with them that the Lord's purposes may be accomplished, that with you we may do our part to establish Zion.

Central Texas District Conference

DALLAS, TEXAS, February 17.—After a protracted absence from the field by reason of my wife's health, I was permitted to return to this city one week ago today. I was just in time to attend the district conference that met here on February 11, 12, and 13. The weather was very bad, and this to some extent militated against the attendance, but the spirit of the work is onward here, as it is in other districts.

The presidency of the district were chosen to preside, and the district secretary was selected to do the work of the secretary. Sister R. L. Wells was placed in charge of the music for the conference. The business was done with dispatch and harmony, and the delegates to the General Conference in April were elected. This delegation consists of the following persons: A. F. Shotwell, J. E. Vanderwood, Mrs. R. L. Wells, and H. H. Davenport.

On Friday night the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a play that was pronounced very good. It showed to the observer that there had been organization and cooperation on the part of those presenting it. It was well rendered and was both entertaining and instructive. The play was entitled, "The beaten path." We have some talented people here, and we hope to see them using the endowment they have even more effectually in the future for the good of the work that must require the very best there is in us if we are to put over the Zion program that is immediately before us.

On Saturday night the writer spoke to an interested audience and felt that the message that is so vital to the church is being more fully understood and hence appreciated by the membership in general. Sunday morning the local officers had charge of the Sunday school, and at eleven o'clock our district president, Brother C. W. Tischer, of Houston, delivered a very masterful sermon. He is surely proving to be the man for the place. His thoughts were high and inspiring, and his counsel was as that of a father to his children. We are glad to see our younger brothers becoming so efficient in the work of the church. In the afternoon a round table was conducted by the writer, at which time much light was given to the membership respecting the law of stewardships and the financial program that is immediately before us. I am sure the effort will bear fruit to the glory of God and the good of the work.

At night the writer again filled the pulpit, and the spirit that accompanied the message bore testimony of the onward march of the church. As an assistant to the district president, I am going to put forth an effort to more fully teach the law of the gospel to the Saints throughout the district. We have a spirit of harmony among the officers and the departments, and I feel sure there is a better day ahead of us for the work in this district.

One feature of the conference that deserves especial mention is the excellent program presented by the Women's Department. This program was rendered just before the preaching hour at night. The program was excellent, and those taking part are to be commended, and Sister J. E. Nicoll, who had charge, is to be congratulated for the good work her department is doing here in Dallas, and also for the fine corps of workers she has among the women, who so ably sustained her in this program.

Surely with the help of the Lord this work will move forward until the sound thereof shall reach the ends of the earth. Personally I am encouraged in the work and want to do all within my power for its advancement. The writer is continuing the meetings here this week, and longer if the interest demands it.

J. E. VANDERWOOD, Press Committee.

Work at an Outpost

Though we enjoy reading the many letters written by others that tell of the onward progress of the latter-day work and the good things the Lord is bestowing on his children, we feel it hardly fair unless we add a word once in a while. We read with pleasure of the work among the young of the church and also the unity prevailing at the priesthood meeting.

Though we do not understand at all times why we have to meet with things that try our faith, after the clouds have passed away we often see the silver lining. We are still trying to do our duty to our fellow man, but many love the pleasures of this life more than the things that pertain to the heavenly life, so we can only leave the matter with the Lord.

Our family is somewhat scattered at present, the two oldest boys attending college at Bozeman, the oldest daughter at Dillon attending normal, and two at Culbertson in high school. And still we have three at the home school and one counting the days when to go to school, while Ralph, the third boy, is helping keep the camp fires burning.

One of the pleasures of my life that I look back upon and hope for the future is that as fast as our children have arrived to the years of accountability they have requested baptism at my hands, eight having now taken the right step.

We have lived here over sixteen years and have witnessed this branch spring from a few to a flourishing branch and again go down to a few, but there is one bright side to this—they are not all dead to the church but are working elsewhere. We get discouraged at times, yet when we think of the number that began their active work while here and now are in other fields working—a few I might mention being Brothers Eli Bronson, Roy Bowerman, C. B. Freeman, Vere Davis, Lester Bronson, William Vail, and Mark Hutchinson—we should not feel that the work done here was all lost.

Last Sunday our family, with two other children, was the crowd, but we hope for more tomorrow. Some of our number are going through the fiery clouds of trial, and we can only pray and wait.

We received an invitation to attend the union Sunday school at Mona tomorrow, but on account of the prospects of some of our members being present that have not met with us for several months on account of cold weather and bad roads, we will hardly accept the invitation, though we would gladly go if we could.

We can see the prospects of some fruit developing from the labors performed by Brothers Bronson, Thorburn, and Bootman in the Mona community, though it has lain dormant for some time.

Well do I remember our second visit to the union Sunday school. It was in the wintertime, and there was quite a lot of snow on the ground, so my daughter Elsie and I decided to go horseback. We mounted two old grays, either one about old enough to vote, and in due time arrived, just as our friends were finishing their dinner. Since I had been invited to speak to them that day, I did not accept the invitation to eat dinner.

I spoke to a full house with the best of liberty, and after a short visit we started on our thirteen-mile homeward journey. We arrived about nine o'clock in the evening, having walked part of the way to keep warm; still we rejoiced in the thought that we had done what we could.

Some day we may see why we have to endure hardships in this life, but if we can only do our little bit without murmuring and complaining, we enjoy our work more, and the reward will be greater.

Today I have been studying some of the duties of the Catholic members, and I find we can often learn our duty by watching what others teach and practice. We go to church often and do not realize that we are there for a purpose, either to gain knowledge from others or to give to others, so in order to do our duty as the Lord wants us, we should go prepared. If not, the prayer that I read in the prayer book is a good one for us to study when we get home from church, so that we will ask the Lord to forgive us our sin of omission and help us to be ready on next occasion.

We look forward to the General Conference for a reunion of the Saints and priesthood and a more determined step toward the raising of the gospel standard where the world can see that we are one.

S. M. ANDES.

ANDES, MONTANA, February 14.

Lachine, Michigan

We are very much pleased to have had Elder S. T. Pendleton, of Beaverton, with us for about ten days. He arrived Wednesday evening, February 2, and began a series of meetings February 3. Brother and Sister James McGuire, of Kilmaster, drove him here, and they stayed until Friday evening, when called home by the illness of their little girl.

On Friday evening Brother Pendleton delivered a most impressive sermon, taking the twenty-third psalm as the lesson: "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want," as his text. A strong appeal was made to the young people and, as many expressed themselves, it was the best they ever heard. Night after night the sermons proved most interesting, until at the close of the series we are unable to tell which did appeal to us most. "The gospel of suffering," "The meek shall inherit the earth," "The church," "The reward of the righteous," "Why I believe in the Book of Mormon," etc., are some of the themes upon which most interesting discourses were based. It was just the same old story told in a little different way.

At Sunday school February 6 Brother Pendleton taught the Bible class and at its close addressed the entire school, giving words of encouragement and admonition. He was also in charge of the sacramental service which followed and at which a good spirit prevailed.

On Thursday afternoon a priesthood meeting was held. It was well attended and lasted for several hours. Judging by the happy look on the faces of the priesthood members, the time was profitably and enjoyably spent.

Friday afternoon Brother Pendleton visited Sister Esther Manning and blessed her wee son, Loyal Wade.

Sunday, February 13, the Saints assembled at half past nine and engaged in singing the sweet songs of Zion until half past ten, the Sunday school hour. Brother Pendleton again taught the Bible class and reviewed the classes. The prayer meeting which followed was active and well attended, a meeting in which a sweet and gentle spirit prevailed. Brother Guy and Brother Pendleton were in charge. At three o'clock Brother Pendleton had charge of a round table service which lasted until nearly seven. At half past seven the regular song service was conducted, and at eight Brother Pendleton addressed a well-filled house.

Brother McGuire and daughters came for Brother Pendleton on Sunday, and we were pleased to hear that their little girl is well again.

Brother Pendleton came into our midst as one who serves, giving unreservedly of his time and talents, assisting in every way possible. He makes a strong appeal to the young people and has left some thinking very soberly concerning the wonderful work of God.

Fresno, California

February 15.—The revival effort of Brother G. P. Levitt in a two-week series of meetings during January not only renewed enthusiasm among the Saints, but created an investigating interest among some of the nonmembers who attended, and from whom we are expecting results. Brother Levitt has a very forceful way of presenting the gospel, bringing out the vital points in a plain and easy-to-understand way. On Sunday morning after his arrival, he conducted a spiritual prayer service, during which he spoke in an unknown tongue, admonishing and encouraging the Saints, and calling one of our young priests, Brother Alma Andrews, to the office of elder. Brother Andrews was ordained at our recent spring conference in Sacramento, California, by Apostle Gillen and Bishop Carmichael.

During the meetings Brother George Miller, of Independence, was with us on Sunday evening, rendering two instrumental selections on the piano for the Religio program. We greatly appreciated having him with us.

Those of the traveling ministry who have visited us during the last year are Apostle J. A. Gillen, who gave us such an encouraging message concerning the rapidly onward course of the church, always urging the Saints to be faithful, and Apostle M. A. McConley, who showed stereopticon views illustrating his lecture of his missionary work in the islands. We estimate these visits as blessings to us and appreciate them more than words can express.

Fresno Branch has been on the upward trend for the past two years under the leadership of our well-loved pastor, Brother A. S. Votaw, who has always been faithful even under very trying circumstances. All departments of the branch are in working order, and our number of attendance has grown until he have not room in our church building for the classes to be comfortable. It might be of interest to know our Temple Builders are called the "Carpe Diem Chapter," Latin words meaning, "Seize the opportunity."

Dayton, Ohio

February 15.—Since the first of the year, the work of the church at Dayton, Ohio, has been moving steadily forward under the guidance of Elder Floyd Rockwell as branch president. January 8 and 9 the branch was favored with a visit from our missionary to this district, Elder Jacob G. Halb. He held the gospel up as our standard and made special emphasis of the fact that it is necessary to carry into practice the principles of the gospel, as well as believe them, if we would enjoy the fruits.

Brother Rockwell has inaugurated a series of sermons on Sunday evening based on the epitome of faith which are proving both instructive and interesting. These sermons are being preached by the various members of the priesthood. January 16 Elder Francis May preached, his subject being, "Why we believe in God! He reviewed some of the popular beliefs and then proceeded to establish our belief in God. Elder Franklin Rieseke occupied on the following Sunday evening, the subject being, "We believe in Jesus Christ." An endeavor was made to show that our belief in Jesus Christ strengthens a belief in God, that Christ came in fulfillment of prophecy, and that to believe in Christ is to obey him.

On Saturday, January 29, Brothers Rockwell and Rieske were called to Quincy to administer to the daughter of Brother and Sister Stanard, who was very sick. That evening they attended the meeting of a Mr. Paul Rowe, of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, who had attended several of their meetings in the summer and had shown some interest. The Fall of Babylon was left with him, and since then he has turned against us and denounces us as Mormons. Returning to Dayton Sunday afternoon, Brother Rockwell preached on the Holy Ghost in the evening, carrying out the theme of the Sunday evening meetings.

Some special interest is being manifested in the Sunday school in a special feature introduced by the superintendent, Brother May, who has pointed out some virtues from time to time to be practiced during the week, such as kindness, promptness, and gentleness.

Modesto, California

February 17.—All things are going along well with the Saints at this place. Elder G. P. Levitt has just finished a two-week series of meetings, and his fine sermons were enjoyed by all attending. The attendance was not what was expected, for the weather was stormy all the time, with only a few pleasant evenings.

On the first Sunday of the month, we had a day of rejoicing, for the Spirit of the Lord was poured out upon the Saints in a marked degree. Brother A. E. Frazier, holding the office of priest, was called to the office of elder; and J. C. Howe, holding the office of teacher, was called to the office of priest. Brother Levitt spoke to us by the Spirit, pronouncing blessings on the Saints is faithful, and condemning them for not being more faithful in the past. He also spoke to a man in the congregation, telling him it was time for him to repent and come into the fold. The Lord had waited on him long. It is needless to say he was baptized before the close of the meetings. All were glad to be numbered with a people to whom God is pleased to speak.

Tomorrow evening there will be a meeting of the teacher training class, with ten names enrolled. The Temple Builders, Oriole Girls, Bluebirds, and a boys' club meet at the church every two weeks for study and recreation. This plan was decided on at a banquet held the last of January. A. E. Frazier will be in charge of the boys; Sister Caroline Pierce, the Temple Builders; Sister Elsie King, the Orioles; and Agnes Thompson, the Bluebirds. Agnes is one of our Grace-land students. The work is moving along, a little improvement at a time.

The farmers should be well satisfied, for there has been an abundance of rain, and everything looks lovely. There are prospects for large crops this year; it looks as if this will be a season of prosperity.

La Junta, Colorado

February 21.—Since the La Junta news letter of last month there has been a great deal of sickness, mostly flu, among the Saints. However, some few cases of chicken pox were also had. Among those who have been quite ill are Sister Oscar Bair, leader of the Department of Women. She suffered a severe attack of flu. Sister Bair is one of our new members and a very active one, being a capable leader of that department.

The publicity agent is endeavoring to get the SAINTS' HERALD and Autumn Leaves into the home of every member of this local. Autumn Leaves is a wonderful magazine now. It seems to be getting better all the time. As for the HERALD, it is now a feast to one's soul to read the good things contained therein. We pray that God will continue to bless our editors, that the church papers will all become even more interesting, and we are with you first, last, and always.

Beaverton, Michigan

Many things of interest have happened in this part of the vineyard since our last writing. As a branch of the church, we have entered into the new year hopefully, with a united decision to learn more and thus be able to render better service to the cause we love.

Our membership apparently is interested in the program of the church. We have had a splendid group of sermons by Elder W. L. Chapman, our district president. He visited our branch for a week preaching every evening. From first to last he taught that if we wish to be safe from the rocks on the shore, we must embark from the harbor of the principles of the gospel out into the sea of stewardships, the only place where the Lord will use the warm trade winds of his Holy Spirit to guide our ship to Zion's port. These sermons proved to be educational and effectual. Many filed their inventories, and others expressed their willingness to do so in the near future.

The attendance was good, considering the winter weather and slippery roads. Some evenings our entire resident membership was present. Come again, Brother Chapman.

We have had a good winter, with very little sickness among the Saints. Snow flurries flying in the air bring to our minds the words of the poet, "God is love," the snowflakes whisper, as they linger in the air; "God is love," the breezes murmur, as they meet us everywhere. . . . All things tell us, "God is love."

We are now looking forward to next Sunday with pleasant anticipation, when Brother O. J. Hawn will arrive and begin a series of meetings in our midst. We shall unite our efforts in preparation for this event, that abundant liberty may be his in presenting the message of truth to us, that he may rejoice in knowing he has our support.

Ottumwa, Iowa

February 22.—The Saints here were made very sad on February 3 when we heard of the death of Brother David O. Lewis, who was a member of this branch. At the time of his death he was working at Harlinger, Texas. He was always the picture of good health, and this made the shock greater. After a few days' illness, he passed away, though all was done for him that loving hands could do. He was the son of Brother and Sister E. H. Lewis, who have for over a quarter of a century been members of this branch and have been members of the church longer than that. Brother Lewis was only twenty-five years old when he died; just like a beautiful flower was he cut from the garden of life. He always carried a smile and was a lover of his home, in which there is a vacant place now that the world can never fill. The body was shipped here for burial. Apostle D. T. Williams was in charge of the service and was assisted by our pastor. The Masons, of which he was a member, had charge at the grave. His was a very large funeral made up of relatives and friends.

The first Sunday of the month our sacramental service was well attended, and we had a spiritual feast.

The Department of Women has been very busy. Its members entertained the first Thursday in the month at the new Y. M. C. A. Refreshments were served, and a pleasant afternoon was spent. The sisters also had a cooking sale and dinner, which were profitable.

The pastor entertained the local priesthood at his home to supper, after which a pleasant time was spent talking over some of the duties of the priesthood. Also the pastor spoke of the benefits he derived from the ministerial institute he recently attended.

The men put on an oyster supper, doing all the work. Brother J. Hunt was cook, assisted by Brother A. Erskine, another good cook, and altogether it made the sisters sit up and take notice.

Sister Scott is still unable to meet with us, owing to ill health, but she is happy in the gospel land, always giving the Saints a real welcome when they call to see her.

We are sorry to know that Brother John Hawkins had to come from Lucas to Ottumwa for an operation, but are glad he is now rapidly improving since its performance.

Sermons of the past month have been accompanied by the Spirit of God. We feel there will be no excuse for our not knowing the will of God when it has been made so plain to us. The attendance at Sunday school is on the increase.

Logan, Iowa

So many of our young people have gone from our branch that our activities are not as many as would otherwise be, were they here to shoulder the responsibilities. We have a few very zealous ones left, however, and many coming on, who, in three or four more years will be ready to take hold of the work and carry it on. Our Sunday school and Religion are progressing nicely, a very satisfactory interest being manifest. We are having some interesting officers' and teachers' meetings, held the last Sunday afternoon of each month. We are also making preparations for the reorganizing of our teachers' training class. Each year we feel a greater need for this study and hope to complete this course, that we, as teachers, may become more efficient in our work. The Lord requires the best that is within us.

The baby daughter of Brother and Sister William Kemmish has not been making the proper gain since birth, and having developed some bronchial trouble, the parents found it necessary to take her to a hospital in Omaha, where she seems to be gaining nicely and will soon be brought home. There has been considerable sickness among our people the last few weeks, but all are convalescent. Sister Lou Dungan is still confined to her bed but is gaining slowly.

We are glad to report the return to our branch of Brother Harrison Peyton; his family will return some time in the near future. We are always glad to welcome our members back.

The fore part of February, Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin and Brother C. J. Smith were with us for ten days. Sister Baldwin entertained the children each evening from 7.30 until eight o'clock, after which Brother Baldwin gave us some splendid sermons. We have just one regret, and that is that they could not stay with us longer. We had some very warm weather at that time, which made the roads almost impassable. Many of our membership are farmers and some distance out, hence were denied these splendid sermons. We are hoping General Conference will send them back to our district, as Brother Baldwin has promised us a longer stay if he is sent back. Some outside of our members were becoming interested, and many more would have, could Brother Baldwin have stayed longer; but we do not wish to be selfish, for the "calls are many and laborers are few." We trust this year will find our tithings greatly increased, so more missionaries can be sent out.

On the evening of February 14, the Oriole Girls and their leader, Sister Leila Gamet, gave a valentine party to some of their friends at the home of an Oriole, Lovina Adams. Sixteen were present. The rooms were very prettily decorated with hearts and cupids. Many games were indulged in, which caused a great deal of merriment. Before late hours had arrived, refreshments were served and each departed to her home to prepare for a jollier time next year. Some of the older ones who were "looking on" felt the words of the poet:

"Backward, turn backward, O time, in thy flight,
Make me a child again just for tonight."

We hope always to keep young at heart, however. We wish we might bring our lives up just twenty-five years. Oh, that we might have had the advantages and opportunities our young people are having today in the church and in the schools. How much more we could do for the church! But we can get behind our army of young people and push them on and encourage them in the warfare before them—for a warfare it will be.

We are ever praying that God will strengthen his people for the conflict.

Independence

Stone Church

The young people's Wednesday night mass prayer meeting in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church is increasing in interest and number in attendance. One of the factors which seems to be promoting this interest is a recent innovation, that of having young men, picked from the group of attendants, making the opening remarks of the service. Each evening one young man is called upon to address his comrades. Two weeks ago tonight Brother Orvar Svenson spoke on the subject "Prayer," and last Wednesday, Richard Krahl, known to all as "Dick," talked on consecration. These talks reveal the serious attitude of our youth toward the church and voice their desire to assist in carrying to the people of the earth God's perfect plan of salvation. They want to so shape their lives that they will demonstrate to the world the happiness which accompanies a life patterned after Christ's noble example. These young patriots of the faith of their fathers are moving on, urging every youth of Zion to meet with them and join in their great purpose.

The Sunday morning young people's services also continue to be held, each one finding solace and comfort, assurance and peace. Youth, you are welcomed at these services.

Attendance at Sunday school fell to eleven hundred and fifty-nine Sunday morning. It is interesting to note what per cent of each department was present and how they rank: intermediates, eighty-seven per cent; primaries, eighty per cent; juniors, seventy-two per cent; beginners, sixty-six per cent; seniors, sixty-four per cent; and adults, fifty-nine per cent.

The program preceding the morning's sermon was one greatly appreciated by lovers of music. It commenced with the hymn, "Great God! attend, while Zion sings." The invocation was by Elder J. W. Metcalf, and an organ offertory, "Contemplation," from "The Holy City," was played by Robert Miller. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth," was the anthem sung by the choir, and a solo, "The Lord is my shepherd," was contributed by Miss Marguerite Johnson, soprano.

Elder John W. Rushton, in charge of the work at Saint Louis, was the morning speaker, and took his scripture lesson from Hebrews 2:1-14. "It is a very old question what is man, and it became the quest of the earliest philosophers," he asserted. In these words does the Apostle Paul give us his definition of the constituent parts of man: "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."—I Thessalonians 5:23. Paul is concerned with the setting apart of the spirit, mind, and body for the use of God. Saint Augustine confessed: "Thou hast made me for thyself, and I am restless until I repose in thee." The speaker clearly distinguished between the purpose of religion and the purpose of science, and showed how it is the revelation of new truth which urges us out of the pathway of the familiar, out of our own Garden of Eden over the precipice of the immediate present. He led his discourse up to this focal point: that our social ideals can not be understood, much less realized, until we know what man is, for our social conditions are direct resultants of what may constitute man, his body, mind, and spirit. He named as the purpose and ideal of the members of the church: preservation of health; an accumulation of a comfortable degree of wealth, and an appreciation of truth, beauty, and goodness, but most of all a desire on the part of each one to enjoy these things with others less fortunate, that together under the influence of God's divine plan we can develop that ideal brotherhood of man and fatherhood of God.

K L D S Sunday Activities

Bible Study hour Sunday morning was conducted by Elder D. O. Cato. There was music by a group of young people under the direction of Mrs. Bertha Burgess. The children's story was told by Miss Ella Jones.

The eleven o'clock auditorium service was broadcast.

K L D S Radio Church at three in the afternoon was conducted by Reverend Hans Dierks, of Church of Our Redeemer, Kansas City. Music was furnished by a choir of the Church of Our Redeemer, assisted by Miss Ruth Genuit, organist.

At four o'clock a special musical program was presented by the Temple Orchestra of the First Methodist Church of Saint Joseph, Missouri, under the direction of Mr. W. C. Maupin; B. P. Johnson, manager; Miss Florence Johnson, accompanist.

At half past six vesper services took the air. Music was by the K L D S Ladies' Quartet, assisted by Mrs. Irene Barnhard, soprano; Miss Ada Griffice, violinist. Sermonet by Elder U. W. Greene.

The Latter Day Saint studio service at fifteen minutes after nine was a musical program arranged by Pauline Becker, organist. Gomer Cool, violinist. Sermonet by Bishop J. A. Koehler.

Evening Services

The Religio program on Sunday evening was in charge of Miss Melva Ward, and consisted of pleasing reading and solo numbers. The Religio recreation night activities will be resumed Friday evening, March 4. All are urged to come out for an evening of wholesome fun.

The evening's song service, beginning at half past seven, was led by Brother Paul Craig, in the absence of Brother Sheehy, and a ready response was given by the audience in the singing of "He leadeth me," and "God will take care of you." Sister Pauline Becker presided at the organ and rendered two beautiful solos. Preceding the evening lecture, Gomer Cool gave a violin solo.

Evangelist U. W. Greene lectured to a large audience on one of the most historic journeys to be taken in the world, following in the footsteps of Joseph and Mary from Nazareth to Bethlehem. By means of stereopticon slides, the audience saw such renowned places as Jacob's well, Bethel, where Jacob had his wonderful vision, tomb of the kings, Absalom's tomb, Tower of David, and the Java gate in Jerusalem. Several scenes of modern Jerusalem also were exhibited, as well as reprints of famous masterpieces of art.

The moving pictures, "A pilgrimage to Palestine," showed Bethany in Judea and scenes of Christ's later ministry. One of the favorite places of Jesus was this little town, where lived Mary and Martha and their brother, Lazarus. The ruins of the house of Simon, the leper, stand on a hill above Bethany. The tomb of Lazarus is still pointed out on a hillside near the village.

After singing "In the garden," the congregation was dismissed by Brother C. Ed. Miller.

Son Born to Brother and Sister F. Henry Edwards

Apostle and Sister F. Henry Edwards announce the birth of their son, Lyman Francis, on the morning of February 26.

Second Church

Elder J. M. Robinson, probably the most aged of our Second Church elders, was the speaker Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. He interested his congregation, and his effort was appreciated. He was supported by a full choir, and four young women sang a beautiful quartet number.

Sunday evening Elder John W. Rushton was the speaker, and the house was filled by friends from many parts of the city who listened attentively to his quiet, restful sermon, which stressed the importance and value of the Saints learning to use the attitude of repose; the relative importance of the practical, the doctrinal, and the cultural or aesthetic viewpoints, and of devotion and consecration.

Next Sunday's service at eleven o'clock will be that of the Lord's supper, accompanied by prayer and testimony. The evening hour will be in the hands of Brother Heman H. Davis, who will do the speaking.

Liberty Street

On Tuesday evening, February 22, a George Washington program was given at the church under the direction of the Department of Women of Group 30. A large attendance was treated to a very entertaining program, and the sum cleared from this effort will be usefully applied by this group of energetic sisters.

Brother G. S. Trowbridge preached at the eleven o'clock hour. He took his text from Matthew 6: 7: "But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking." The speaker made clear to the minds of his hearers how we should first pray for the establishment of God's kingdom here on earth and then pray for those things we need, bringing out the necessity for sincerity of prayer. The sermon was concluded by reading two appealing poems, "If we think," and "I live for those who love me."

The K L D S Guitar and Mandolin Club, under the direction of Brother Ralph G. Smith, gave an enjoyable program at the Religio program hour.

Elder D. O. Cato occupied the pulpit in the evening, his text being taken from Matthew 16: "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." This discourse was outstanding for the constructive and clear instruction contained therein.

A surprise awaited the girls of the Silver Wing Temple Builder chapter on last Friday evening, when they met at the home of their leader. Several guests were invited and attended, and all were privileged to enjoy a set of stereopticon slides on the American Indian, borrowed for the occasion from the Graphic Arts Bureau. Following the slides, games were the order of the evening, and each girl having been advised to bring a pie, refreshments were served, the evening being closed with an enthusiastic service of song.

Walnut Park

The primary and beginner teachers held their second teachers' meeting of the year Sunday at eleven o'clock. Their new superintendent, Mrs. Chester Constance, and her assistant, Ada Fallon, are resourceful and enthusiastic.

Mrs. E. E. Moorman, head of the junior department, is asking her teachers to make a special effort in dramatizing the Sunday school lessons, one class a month to demonstrate its work for the good of the entire department. Last Sunday Mrs. Orlando Nace's class, assisted by Mrs. Fanny Craig's juniors, dramatized "The ten virgins," and we think many of those present will long remember the lesson portrayed where it led to the foolish virgins reaching the door and calling in song, repeatedly, for admittance, the answer always coming back, also in song, "Too late! Too late! You can not enter now." However, a happy ending was given, where a wayward boy heeded the lesson and began a better life that would permit him to "enter in."

The forenoon speaker, as announced, not being available, the pastor had, in the emergency, "borrowed" the Second Church pastor for the hour. Brother R. J. Lambert responded heartily, his sermon dealing with God's revelations in latter days. Reading from Doctrine and Covenants 59, and from 42: 5, where the priesthood is commanded to teach the principles of the gospel in the Bible and Book of Mormon, also the covenants and church articles, he led us to note phases of these articles and covenants in the Doctrine and Covenants and judge as to their comparative worthiness with other scriptures. His faith in the three books is thoroughly grounded through years of teaching and testing them, and he bears a strong testimony to their power to "lift us up to a fullness of joy."

In the evening Pastor Glau Smith preached a sermon to home builders on "bringing up a child in the way he should go," though he did not deal with the corrective measures one usually thinks of along this line. The necessity he sees in bringing up a child is that of example, and his faith is strong in results where the parents watch their own conduct and make it what they would want to see in their children. He especially visualized homes where prayer is such a regular and familiar thing that children grow up with it as a part of their daily lives and never think of permitting a day to go by without going to God with the problems at hand.

The Civil War play given at Walnut Park the evening of February 22 by Spring Branch Church girls, assisted by the Walnut Park Orchestra was enjoyed by a full house. The demure and lovely maidens of the "sixties" made charming scenes that never lasted quite long enough.

Enoch Hill

Elder W. D. Bullard, former pastor of Enoch Hill, was the Sunday morning speaker, taking for his theme "The power of right thinking." He made very clear the fact that if our minds are open to hearsay and faultfinding we can never expect to progress as the Lord would have us do. Right thinking is a power for good. A mind thinks the right kind of thoughts and the will puts them into execution. Brother Bullard emphasized the necessity of preparation for the Lord's work, and expressed hopefulness for the future of the branch.

Patriarch F. A. Smith occupied the hour in the evening with one of his characteristically good sermons. He was given excellent attention by a large crowd, and his effort was appreciated.

The choir, directed by Brother Charles Warren, is now hard at work on an Easter cantata. All choir members are urged to be present at every rehearsal, that the final production may be of high order, one rendered with the spirit.

Spring Branch

Wednesday evening prayer service, February 16, was characterized by five prayers, eight songs, and fifteen testimonies, about thirty persons being present. Brothers Dalton and D. D. McClain were in charge.

Quite a large crowd attended Religio Friday, February 18, to witness the first of a series of competitive programs which are being given by the different classes. This program was put on by Brother Snively's class of about a dozen boys, from nine to twelve years of age. They represented a bunch of typical, jolly darkies, singing plantation songs and "goin' fishin'."

Sunday services a week ago were good all the way through, beginning with a spiritual and wholesome prayer service at 8.15 a. m. in charge of Brothers Soderstadt and Tankard. Attendance at this service and Sunday school immediately following fell off slightly, there being only eighteen present at the former and one hundred and eighteen at the latter. This, however, was made up at the eleven o'clock preaching service. A ladies' quartet from Mount Washington and Englewood provided the special music for this service with two quartet numbers, and a solo sung by Sister Tyrrell. These offerings elicited many favorable comments.

Brother D. R. Snively preached on the work accomplished by Enoch and on the task that lies before us. He gave us much food for thought.

Another forceful and splendid sermon was given in the evening by Brother A. K. Dillee. The basis of his talk was Ecclesiastes 12:13 and Proverbs 16:6-16. He held the attention of his audience to the conclusion of his discourse.

The Department of Women met at the home of Sister Mabbott last Thursday and knotted on an all-silk patchwork quilt, donated by a friend to the cause several weeks ago. This will be offered for sale at a later date.

A characteristic sermon by Brother J. F. Sheehy was one of the leading features of the Sunday service, February 27, in which the contrast of lives of individuals, their impulses, acts, and influence were clearly portrayed. This was preceded by prayer by D. D. McClain and the anthem, "Jesus shall reign," by the choir. In the song service, assistance was rendered by Dorothy Mabbott, who came home for the week-end from her school in Lorimor, Iowa, and by Brother Gibler with his violin. Brother and Sister Gibler have recently returned to make Independence their home again after an absence of about a year.

The evening service was well attended, with Brother Okerlind in the pulpit. His topic was, "Our status regarding fundamentalism and liberalism"; his central thoughts and arguments clustered around the question, "Unto what were ye baptized?" Sister Gault sang pleasingly, "I come to thee," at the evening service. One hundred and twenty-two were in attendance at Sunday school, there being ten perfect classes.

Tuesday evening, February 22, the Temple Builders gave the play, "Rosemary," at Walnut Park, being assisted by the orchestra of that branch. The girls will possibly present this play at one of the other churches in the near future.

Next Friday night Sister Floyd Ballinger's Religio class will furnish the program. This will be the second of the series of competitive programs given by the Religio classes.

The choir from the Second Church will furnish the music at the next Sunday evening service.

The eight o'clock prayer service will be for the young people.

Brother and Sister Lowe were visitors at our Wednesday night prayer service last week. Brothers Snively and Lowe were in charge, and Brothers Tankard and W. D. McClain officiated at the Sunday morning service. Both were uplifting spiritual services.

East Independence

Brother David Spease and family have moved here lately from Lancaster, Wisconsin. They attended services Sunday. They have bought the farm formerly owned by Brother J. J. Teeter. We welcome them in our midst.

Brother J. M. Terry was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, and Elder E. T. Atwell spoke in the evening. The Saints are always glad to have these brothers as speakers. The correspondent was not privileged to attend either service, but we know their sermons were helpful and encouraging.

Gudgell Park

We have heard the question several times lately, "What has become of group 41? We never see anything in the paper about it any more." Hereafter Group 41 will be known in print as Gudgell Park. We have been organized into a separate congregation for some time, with Brother P. A. Sherman as our able pastor.

There was good attendance at Sunday school Sunday morning. The officers and teachers, with the help of the pastor, are striving to create greater interest and come nearer the ideal Sunday school which is being planned for Zion.

Sister Bertha Constance and Brother S. A. Thiel met with us in Sunday school, giving us some very helpful talks and ideas which will help in our Sunday school work.

We regret to hear of the serious accident to one of our young sisters, Margaret Sherman, and hope she will soon be able to meet with us again.

Brother Heman Davis talked to us Sunday at eleven o'clock, his theme being, We must live in the present, not the past, and prepare for the future.

To Saints in or Near Whittier, California

I am sending the address of my daughter, Mrs. Joe F. Ruchaber, Laurel Avenue, R. F. D. 2, Box 413, Whittier, California. She is kept at home with her three babies and poor health. Her husband is a nonmember, and she wants to go to church very much. I also have a cousin in Pasadena, whose husband belongs to the church. They are trying to locate a place of worship. They can be found by inquiring for M. A. Broliar, at 73 South Daisy, Lamanda Park. These are all young people and strangers in California. Please, will not some Saint call on them? A visit from a Saint would be very much appreciated by them.

HUME, MISSOURI, Route 1.

MRS. C. R. LENEVE.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Weather conditions were very favorable for attendance at the various sessions of this, the fortieth quarterly stake conference, which was held at Central Church the 20th and 21st. The attendance was all that could be desired at all eight sessions.

The Sunday school had an attendance of 311, with a collection of $14.54. The 11 o'clock preaching service was opened with hymn 156, and prayer by Elder A. R. White; second hymn 109; an anthem by the choir, "Gloria."

A very able effort was the discourse by President Floyd M. McDowell, whose remarks were an exposition of "God's ongoing program." He said, "A hopeless person is one who has no vision." The need is for faith. Some men have been depriving the youth of the world of their right. The remedy is to furnish a big task to occupy the mind and time of the youth. Every man is betting his life against some project, good or bad. Our safety lies in living in accordance with the ongoing program of the church.

The Elders' Quorum meeting was held at 1.30 p. m., with a good attendance. The general prayer meeting held at 2.30 was in charge of the bishopric, F. B. Blair, John Tucker, and F. S. Anderson, which was virtually a heavenly feast, as every moment of the hour and a half was occupied. There were 6 songs, 7 prayers, 20 testimonies, a tongue and the interpretation, and a prophecy. The tongue and its interpretation was general in character, in commendation of the presence of the many who had gathered for the service, and was encouraging to the Saints. The prophecy was directed to the young mothers and was uplifting in its praise of those who were caring for their children.

At 4.15 the Women's Department, Sister Fern Lloyd, superintendent, put on a program under the direction of Elder W. O. Hands, who is in charge of the Boys' Department of the stake, the activities of which showed the work of the boys and Boy Scouts in rendering first aid, making fire by friction, flag signaling, etc., and was very interesting.

At 4.15 the priesthood meeting was held in the I. X. L. Room and was presided over by C. D. Jellings and Seth S. Sandy. Apostle F. Henry Edwards addressed the men on the "Rights of the ministry." He called attention to the fact that quorum work is neglected. The ministry render a service that is unique and distinctive. All are called according to the gifts and callings of God unto them. God gave the ministry certain authority. The diffusion of spiritual blessings must be continuous. Men who are mediocre are the men who do the biggest work in the church. They talk in the language of the people. The ministry must learn to bring the Spirit of God into our service, must account for every idle word and every idle silence.

The 7.45 meeting was preceded by song service, after which it was opened by singing a song from the young people's pamphlet. A selection was rendered by Central Church Quartet. Prayer was offered by Elder W. I. Fligg. The sermon was by Apostle F. Henry Edwards, who based his remarks on Ephesians 6:10-14. The effort was along "Zionic ideals," and was given close attention by his auditors. The benediction was by Elder Fligg.

The conference was the host of Elder W. I. Fligg, former stake missionary, during Sunday.

Business Meeting

The business session was held at 7.45 p. m., the 21st, with S. S. Sandy and C. D. Jellings of the Stake presidency in charge. Song 179 was sung, and prayer was offered by Elder L. H. Hays.

The minutes of the former conference were read by Secretary W. S. Brown, and approved as read. A report from the stake presidency was presented, showing conditions in the stake to be very satisfactory. They recommended the ordination of Brethren L. C. Connelly and Henry Davis as counselors for the president of the Priests' Quorum, Brother

E. P. Sanders. The recommendations were adopted by the conference and ordination provided for.

The delegates to the General Conference to be held in Independence April 6, 1927, were elected, the list of names of which follows: Sister F. B. Blair, Sister J. Ray Lloyd, Sister Roy E. Newkirk, Sister John Tucker, Sister Seth S. Sandy, Sister Sarah Hawkins, J. A. Tanner, Seth S. Sandy, John Tucker, Sister J. A. Tanner, Sister Jessie Tucker, Ralph Gould, J. W. Gunsolley, Maude Gunsolley, Sister Margaret Cleveland, Edward Baker, W. B. Richards, Sister H. W. Gould, Sister Robert J. Crayne, J. Fred Cleveland, Sister P. J. Brose, Sister J. E. Cleveland, Robert Winning, Sister P. J. Raw, Sister J. H. Paxton, F. V. Elliott, Sister Elizabeth Evans, W. O. Hands, Sister H. A. Gould, Sister G. H. Hidy, Sister A. W. Sears, Joseph Stobaugh, Sister A. V. Trego, Sister Ida Combs.

The resolution introduced in the November conference by Bishop F. B. Blair, that no man be ordained to any office in the priesthood without complying with the financial law of the church, was by motion deferred until the next quarterly conference.

The resolution presented at the November conference, asking for the adoption of a plan to instill a directory of stewards and those in business in the stake, was deferred until the next quarterly conference. A motion to adjourn followed. Doxology was sung; benediction was pronounced by Seth S. Sandy.

The stake Sunday school superintendent, Elder J. R. Lloyd, announces that on the 13th and 14th of March there will be held institute work in the interest of the stake Sunday schools. General Superintendent of the Department of Religious Education, C. B. Woodstock, Sister Eunice Winn Smith, and other prominent Sunday school workers will address the various meetings which are to be held on Sunday afternoon and Monday evening, at Central Church.

Stark Acres Mission

The work at Stark Acres Mission is in splendid condition compared to a year ago. They have Brother and Sister George Willis, of Englewood, with them now, which brings their membership up to twenty-one people. Sister Willis handles the music for them. Brother Willis is genially and physically a big fellow and is well liked by everyone. He has a class of young people and is doing fine work. Sister Willis also has a primary class in Sunday school and is doing splendidly.

Recent speakers have been Elders Ralph W. Farrell, William Bath, George Jenkins, and James Cleveland.

Sister A. V. Trego has been sick for some time but is now back again. She is certainly loved by the little folks, who were glad to have her among them.

Bennington Heights Church

After the interruption of our local meetings by the stake conference, we were glad to get back again to our regular order. There were twenty-six present at the 8.15 prayer meeting last Sunday. It requires an extraordinary effort to get to church in time for the morning prayer meeting when we are inclined to sleep later on Sunday morning; but it is worth it. One brother suggests that if we can't get up in time to eat breakfast and attend the prayer meeting, let the breakfast go.

In the morning last Sunday, Elder Ira G. Clutter, pastor of the Stark Acres Mission, preached; and Elder J. O. Worden, pastor of the Fourth Kansas City Church, was the speaker in the evening.

Sister S. D. Hastings, who is in charge of the music of the Sunday school, is organizing a Sunday school orchestra. The orchestra is now playing for the Sunday school, and when they become better organized they expect to have regular practice and to render special music.

Brother Roy Jones, who went to Chicago, has been sick, but writes that he is feeling quite well now. Brother Jones is superintendent of the Religio there. The branch there is having a series of meetings.

Nauvoo District Advancing

NAUVOO DISTRICT, February 23.—The work in this district is moving forward. The Saints are increasing in faith in God and his church. In the past few weeks the writer has visited some of the branches and a number of the homes of the Saints, and hearing some of their testimonies has been made to exclaim, "My God, how wonderful thou art!" It is good to see a number of the Saints filing their inventories, for this means they want this gospel to be preached to others, that they too may enjoy blessings found in the true church. It also proves they are unselfish and want the Lord to have the part which belongs to him.

We are not baptizing very many but are trying to feed what we have. The Burlington and Nauvoo priesthood has the missionary spirit in keeping local appointments; also two brethren from Montrose have been helping in this line.

It is a pleasing sight to see how the Department of Women is at work in the locals. The sisters are doing their part and doing it well.

F. C. BEVAN, District President.

Nauvoo, Illinois

February 23.—On February 13, following the regular Sunday school session, a Sunday school institute service was held in charge of District Superintendent L. H. Lewis, and the following talks were given: "Methods of teaching adults," Irene Layton; "Value of music in the Sunday school," Mrs. August Lee; "Methods of teaching children," Florence Ada Sanford; "The Stewardship of the Sunday school," L. H. Lewis. The program was inspirational. The great need of preparation was stressed in each talk, and valuable suggestions were given. Many of the methods used to stimulate interest in the week-day school were recommended for use in Sunday school, especially with children. Handwork made up into attractive booklets that the children prize, dramatization, and contests on Bible characters similar to spelling matches. For the contests, the Bible cards published by Elder C. H. Rich have been found especially helpful. All felt a greater determination to do all in their power to "develop, improve, and increase" the Sunday school.

The Sunday school work in Nauvoo is an inspiration to all who attend. Our membership numbers sixty-five. Last Sunday was such a beautiful day that all but five were present, and five perfect classes were reported. Arnold Ourth, assistant superintendent, has charge of the five-minute review at the close of the lesson period and is getting a splendid response from the children. They can name all the books in the New Testament and give the outstanding thought contained in each.

We have several children of nonmembers attending our school, and they seem to be very appreciative of what we are doing for their children. Mrs. Robert Blum, a member of the Zionist Church, sent a gift of five dollars to the Sunday school in appreciation of what we were doing for her little daughter Margaret. Mrs. Charles Hudson, whose three nieces attend, always donates a dollar at Christmas time.

The Department of Women under the leadership of Mrs. Edward Grotts, meet at her home every Thursday afternoon to sew, unless there is quilting to be done, when an all-day meeting is held, each bringing something toward the noonday lunch. A gift of sheets, pillowslips, and towels was recently sent to the Sanitarium. It was voted that once a month a social meeting be held at the various homes in alphabetical order. Mrs. Clyde Fusselman being the first on the list, the women met with her a week ago, and a very pleasant afternoon was spent. A short program was enjoyed, and Sister Fusselman served ice cream and wafers.

All the men of the branch have been meeting at the church every day this week to plaster the walls and paint the ceiling of the rooms in the basement. We shall now have several nice classrooms and a dining hall.

The various books, Timbers for the Temple, Joe Pine, In the Shelter of the Little Brown Cottage, etc., that were purchased by the Religio to be used for missionary work, are being well circulated by the young people.

We are looking forward to a special series of meetings to be held by Patriarch Ammon White, beginning Wednesday evening of this week.

Lincoln, Nebraska

February 20.—On February 2 the Department of Women met at the home of Mrs. Stake. The time was spent in study of the church history. Also a social hour was enjoyed, and Mrs. Stake served a delicious luncheon. Although not a member of the church, she counts herself as one, and is a good worker for the cause.

While in Independence attending the ministerial institute, Brother Robertson arranged with Apostle F. Henry Edwards to come to Lincoln to hold a series of meetings, extending over two Sundays, and upon his return enlisted the enthusiastic assistance of the young people in the work of advertising. Two evenings were spent with several busy typewriters getting out letters of invitation to the people surrounding the church and to the Saints and their friends all over the city and its environs. Beside the letters, Brother Robertson visited many homes in the vicinity of the church and gave them personal invitations to come. Several hundred folders were also distributed.

Brother Edwards delivered the first sermon of the series at eleven o'clock Sunday morning, February 6; a nice audience being present, most of whom remained and partook of the picnic dinner served in the basement and enjoyed the day with us.

At eight in the evening Brother Edwards delivered an inspiring sermon, being assisted in the song service by Missionary W. E. Shakespeare, and others; also supported by our local orchestra and soloists.

While the audience did not at any time overflow the building or tax its capacity, there were some present at every session who had never been in our church before, some of whom appeared so much interested that we hope to see them eventually come into the church.

Our speaker had to leave us at four in the afternoon of the 13th, his last official act being to assist at the baptismal and confirmation service, when Brother Shakespeare baptized five of our Sunday school pupils.

We are sure it is the hope of the Lincoln Saints that Brother Edwards may return as frequently as possible, for we know that his visit among us and his clear, logical sermons have greatly helped us. Since he was called home sooner than was expected, he did not finish his series of sermons. Brother Fred Gatenby, of Neligh, Nebraska, was with us and preached the evening sermon. It was, as usual, a good and inspiring one.

Brother Lawrence Brockway was the morning speaker on February 20, and a brother from Saint Joseph occupied the evening preaching hour with lantern slides of the Auditorium at Independence.

The orchestra meets at the church each Sunday afternoon for practice. All the departments are functioning in their respective ways, and the course is still upward and onward. At the February food sale, the Department of Women earned more than thirteen dollars.

Sister Robidoux has been confined to her home by illness. Her baby boy also has been ill.

Asks Prayers of Saints

Myra D. McKee, of Moosehaven, Orange Park, Florida, advises that through nervous affections she has partially lost the use of her voice and her eyes. She sincerely asks Saints to pray that she may be relieved of this affliction.

MISCELLANEOUS

Appointment of Credentials Committee

This will advise of the appointment of Credentials Committee for the General Conference of 1927 as follows: G. S. Trowbridge, F. A. Russell, and J. F. Sheehy.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By F. M. SMITH.

Reduced Railroad Rates

Important Notice to Conference Delegates and Visitors

A reduction to one and one half for the round trip on the "certificate plan" will apply for delegates and visitors attending the General Conference to be held at Independence, Missouri, April 6, 1927.

The following directions are submitted:

1. Tickets at the normal one-way tariff fare for the going journey may be bought on any of the following dates (but not on any other date).

The arrangement will apply from the following territory: From all points in the United States except as shown below, also points in Eastern Canada, April 2 to 8 inclusive. From Montana and Utah, April 1 to 7, inclusive.

From Arizona, British Columbia, California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, March 31 to April 6, inclusive.

2. Be sure, when purchasing your going ticket, to ask the ticket agent for a certificate. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. If, however, it is impossible to get a certificate from the local ticket agent, a receipt will be satisfactory and should be secured when ticket is purchased. See that the ticket reads to the point where the convention is to be held, and no other. See that your certificate is stamped with the same date as your ticket. Sign your name to the certificate or receipt in ink. Show this to the ticket agent.

3. Call at the railroad station for ticket and certificate at least thirty minutes before departure of train.

4. Certificates are not kept at all stations. Ask your home station whether you can procure certificates and through tickets to the place of meeting. If not, buy a local ticket to nearest point where a certificate and through ticket to place of meeting can be bought.

5. Immediately upon your arrival at the meeting, present your certificate to the indorsing officer, Mr. G. S. Trowbridge, as the reduced fare for the return journey will not apply unless you are properly identified as provided for by the certificate.

6. No refund of fare will be made on account of failure to either obtain a proper certificate, or on account of failure to have the certificate validated.

7. It must be understood that the reduction or the return journey is not guaranteed, but is contingent on an attendance of not less than 250 delegates and visitors at the conference holding regularly issued certificates from ticket agents at starting point showing payment of normal one-way tariff fare of not less than 67 cents on the going trip.

8. A Joint Agent of the carriers has been designated to validate certificates. If you arrive at the meeting and leave for home prior to the turning in of 250 certificates, or if you purchase your ticket later than the dates shown in paragraph one, you can not have your certificate validated, nor secure the benefit of the return reduction.

9. If necessary minimum of 250 regularly issued certificates are presented to the Joint Agent, and your certificate is validated, you will be entitled to a return ticket via the same route as the going journey at one half of the normal one-way tariff fare from place of meeting to point at which your certificate was issued up to and including April 30, 1927.

10. Return tickets issued at the reduced fare will not be good on any limited train on which such reduced fare transportation is not honored.

It is presumed that the attendance at conference this year will be larger than ordinary because of the increased seating capacity which will be available in the basement of the new Auditorium, thus enabling all visitors to obtain seats on the conference floor, and because many will be interested in seeing for themselves the progress made in the construction of the Auditorium, but all should be very careful to see that the above instructions with regard to securing certificates are carefully observed, so that the reduction in rates amounting to several thousand dollars may not be lost to the conference delegates and visitors.

G. S. TROWBRIDGE, Transportation Manager.

Conference Notices

Change of Date for Wheeling District

The Wheeling district conference date is changed to one week later than previously announced, and will convene at Bellaire, Ohio, at 3 p. m. Saturday, March 12, and continue over Sunday. Delegates to next General Conference are to be elected. Apostles Hanson and Budd and Bishop Curry are expected to be in attendance. It will be worth while making a special effort to get the good to be enjoyed at these meetings. Samuel A. Martin, district secretary.

Conference Minutes

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.—District conference assembled at Atchison, February 5 and 6, in charge of District President Dave Little, assisted by Apostle D. T. Williams. Eighteen ministerial and two departmental reports were read. Bishop's agent's report for the quarter showed $288.80 tithing; $87.59 offering; $74.60 Christmas offering; $34 Auditorium pledge; $50.57 College Day collection; $62 Graceland extension fund; total, $597.56. In treasury, $13.64. By action of the conference, all reports beginning with January 1 will end with the calendar quarter. Ministerial reports will be sent to the district president, that he may summarize the work done by the priesthood and report to the conference, thus eliminating the reading of individual reports. The name of Dave Donahue, of Blue Rapids, local, was presented to the conference for approval to be ordained to the office of deacon. He was ordained under the hands of C. E. Harpe and B. F. Jackson in the prayer service Sunday afternoon. Brother M. L. Schmid was authorized to carry a message of sympathy to the family of Brother Blanton, of Troy, Kansas, in the loss of their husband and father. Preaching was done by Apostle D. T. Williams and District Missionary C. E. Harpe. The next conference will be held at Fanning, Kansas, at the call of the district president.

FREMONT.—Conference convened at Shenandoah, Iowa, Saturday, February 12, 1927, at 10 a. m. Opening prayer by T. A. Hougas. By motion the presidency of the district, aided by J. F. Garver, were placed in charge of the conference. Branches reporting were Thurman, 77; Glenwood, 70; Tabor, 70; Shenandoah, 113. Ministerial reports from William I. Fligg, T. A. Hougas, N. L. Mortimore, J. O. Rennie, C. W. Forney, F. B. Knight, Roy J. Dunsdon, S. S. Clark, C. W. Forney reported as Bishop's agent from June 2, 1926, to February 1, 1927. Receipts: Tithing, $161.85; oblations, $44.74; college endowment, $136.50; college offering, $17.27; Christmas offering, $5. Total receipts, $365.36. Remitted to Presiding Bishop, $365.36. Report adopted by motion. The auditing committee reported they had examined the books and accounts of C. W. Forney, bishop's agent, and found them to be correct. This report was adopted. C. W. Forney, district treasurer, reported from June 6, 1926, to February 1, 1927. Received from all sources, $63.51. Paid to district workers, $59.45. Balance, $4.06. Adopted. The following sisters made report of work of district. Luella Topham on Recreation and Expression; Mrs. Hougas on Department of Women; Mrs. Clark, Tabor Ladies' Aid; Sister Tyler, Shenandoah Temple Builders; Sister Joyce Wileox, work of Orioles; Luella Topham, work of Temple Builders. William I. Fligg spoke of needs and conditions of the district, followed by J. F. Garver, H. H. Hand, and N. L. Mortimore. Afternoon session at 2 o'clock. Moved to take up the matter of consolidating the Fremont and Pottawattamie Districts. Carried. The resolution deferred from last conference was read, "Resolved, That it is the sense of this conference that the Fremont District be disorganized, and that the territory be annexed to the Pottawattamie District, and that the Pottawattamie District and General Conference be requested to concur." J. F. Garver was asked to preside at this time. William I. Fligg asked that the procedure in consolidating be explained. Brother Garver answered: "If the resolution before the house be passed, the Fremont District will be dissolved, and the territory will be absorbed by the Pottawattamie District and will be known as Pottawattamie District; but it must be passed upon by General Conference action." A resolution from Pottawattamie district conference, asking that Fremont District join them, was now read. A substitute to the deferred resolution was offered: "Resolved, That we look with favor upon the consolidation of the Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts." T. A. Hougas spoke on lay of territory and geographical situation. N. L. Mortimore spoke in favor of the substitute. The privilege of the floor was given to visiting members. The following was read: "Glenwood, Iowa, December 19, 1926.—To Fremont District Conference: Resolved, That we as a branch are not in favor of dissolving the Fremont District and uniting with the Pottawattamie District. This is a unanimous vote taken at a branch business meeting. Yours respectfully, J. W. Dunegan, president." The vote was now taken on the substitute, which resulted in 27 in favor of the substitute and two against. It was moved to make the vote unanimous. Carried. The following was then read: "At a regular meeting of the Thurman Branch, the name of Charles W. Forney was presented to the branch by N. L. Mortimore, district president, and asked that his ordination to the office of elder be recommended to the next district conference." It was unanimously approved. Upon a motion the chairman appointed Sisters T. A. Hougas, N. L. Mortimore, and Luella Topham, as a committee to select delegates to General Conference, they to report at evening session. It was then announced that the ordination of C. W. Forney would be provided for at the meeting in the Thurman Branch, February 27, 1927. At the evening service the committee recommended the names of W. H. Walling, T. A. Hougas, William I. Fligg, and J. F. Garver to represent Fremont District at General Conference. The recommendation and report were adopted by motion. Moved that the time and place for holding the next conference be left with the district presidency. Carried. The conference business being completed, Brothers Fligg and Garver gave some excellent talks to the congregation. Sunday school was held at 9.45 Sunday morning, and at eleven and at two o'clock J. F. Garver was the speaker, taking at his subject, Tithing, offering, surplus, and stewardships. A collection was taken amounting to $9.87, of which Brother Fligg was given $4.92 and Brother Garver $4.95.

Our Departed Ones

REDFIELD.—Imogene I. Redfield was born April 18, 1845, at Watertown, New York. She was one of the earliest members of the Reorganized Church, being baptized June 25, 1861, at Montrose, Iowa, by John Shippy. She was a pioneer in the church at Manti, Iowa, now a part of Shenandoah. Her later years she spent with her husband, George Z. Redfield, at Bucklin, Kansas, where he was a large ranch owner. In January, 1927, she moved to the home of her son, Roy R. Redfield, in Independence, Missouri, where she passed away February 13, 1927. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Eva Perry, Ashland, Kansas; and Mrs. J. A. Lukens, Independence; two sons, Roy R., of Independence; and Charles, of Bucklin; a brother, U. A. Austin, Independence. Funeral services were at Stahl's chapel, Independence, interment at Bucklin, Kansas.

MARTIN.—Pennell W. Martin was born October 21, 1867, at Wakefield, Massachusetts. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church August 12, 1888. Was married to Sister Kate M. Jepson, January 1, 1910. Died November 26, 1926, at Tulsa, Oklahoma, at the age of fifty-nine years, one month, and five days. His wife and one daughter, two brothers, and two sisters, also a goodly number of friends are left to mourn their loss. Two funeral services were held, one at Tulsa, Elder James A. Thomas officiating, and one at Independence, Missouri, by Elder T. C. Kelley. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence. The church on earth loses, while the church militant adds one more to its happy ranks.

BLANTON.—James Blanton was born at Fanning, Kansas, February 25, 1876. He was baptized April 12, 1900, and on June 12 of the same year married Alice Thomas. Six children were born to them, one daughter, Ethel, and two sons, Elmer and Frank, preceding him in death. He was a loving husband and father, a good citizen of the community, and a faithful church member. Died at Troy, Kansas, February 4, 1927. Surviving him are his companion, one son, Roy; two daughters, Gladys and Dorothy Mae; four brothers: Jess, Grant, and Hiram, of Sparks; and Clinton, of Chanute; two sisters, Mrs. Lizzie Davis and Mrs. Halah Knight, of Troy. The funeral was held at Fanning, Kansas, Elder Samuel Twombly preaching the sermon to a large congregation of friends and relatives.

BARNES.—Elijah Barnes was born in Harrison County, Ohio, near Cadiz, May 26, 1842. Married Miss Sarah Rebecca Hatcher May 26, 1870, and to them were born six children, three girls and three boys. In the year 1878, Brother and Sister Barnes united with the church, being baptized by L. R. Devore, at Lampsville, Ohio. He was ordained an elder forty years ago and was always ready to help to tell the gospel story to his fellow men. His first wife passed away about twenty years ago, and Brother Barnes was again married. For the past two years he made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Charles Wilcox, of Belmont, Ohio, on account of his wife being unable to care for him. He died December 22, 1926, at the age of eighty-four years, six months, and twenty-six days. Surviving him are his aged widow and his children: Mrs. Ida M. Wilcox, Belmont, Ohio; Mrs. Anna B. Gill, Willoughby, Ohio; William F., of Bethesda, Ohio; Henry L., Bethesda; Jesse P., of Norwich, Ohio. One daughter, Mrs. Alice Shepherd, Hendrysburg, Ohio, passed away February 13, 1926. He also leaves twenty-four grandchildren, fourteen great-grandchildren, and many friends and other relatives. No minister of the church was close enough to come, and the funeral services were conducted by Reverend Jay E. Johnson, of the Christian Church of Bethesda, December 24. Interment in Ebenezer Cemetery beside his first wife.

Good Will in Industry

On a number of occasions I have in public addresses said that sooner or later in the settlement of disputes between labor and capital there must be represented the interests of the public; that it is not enough to settle strikes by raising wages with a resultant increase in price of the manufactured commodity concerned, for there is close connection between price and public interest, and price increase must be considered with that connection in view. And, too, I have usually called attention on such occasions to how the doctrine of stewardships would bring about the desideratum of having all interested parties in at any settlement involving wages, prices, hours of labor, etc., etc.

It has been interesting, therefore, to see this idea of public or third party representation at dispute settlements between labor and capital. In another column we reproduce from The Spectator, of London, an article under the caption "Good will in industry," by Sir Robert Hadfield. I am sure our readers will benefit by observing Sir Robert's views, and it will afford food for thought along the line of stewardships.

About the General Conference

Each week until the close of conference, the HERALD will carry detailed information about the many activities on the conference program.

This will be of interest to all members, but especially to conference visitors and delegates who, being thus informed, may select in advance the activities in which they are most interested.

The President's Annual Address

With past history as a background, with present developments in mind, and visioning future progress toward the church's objectives, the President of the church each year gives a comprehensive summary of church affairs—it is the President's address to the annual General Conference. It is important and should be given careful consideration and study by the members of the church and especially the priesthood.

Study Classes

Organized class work will be arranged for each morning, Thursday, April 7, to Saturday, April 17, inclusive, except Sunday. Courses of instruction will be offered on subjects of vital interest to every Latter Day Saint.

The conference committee has selected competent, trained leaders from among our own people to teach these courses. Every member who is carrying responsibility in church work or who has an ambition to prepare for service can find help in some of these classes. "Study to show thyself approved" applies to this generation as well as to former ones, and the opportunities which this conference affords for study makes it possible to comply with this command under most favorable conditions.

The additional room available this year will make it possible to accommodate a larger number for class work. Courses of study and teachers will be announced in the HERALD at a later date.

Daily Prayer Service

For the period from 9 to 10.15 each day, the conference has provided a prayer service. At each of these meetings President Frederick M. Smith will preside. The conference program has been so planned that no other meetings will be held at this time; therefore all may attend. Every conference delegate and visitor should plan to attend the daily prayer service, so that in the quiet of this hour of communion, fellowship, and worship they may make the needed spiritual preparation for the work of the day.

Musical Institute

The Musical Institute will be held the first Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of conference, April 7 to 9, inclusive. The sessions will be held in the morning at the Stone Church. Those in charge of the institute are counting on the musicians of the church to attend this institute so that there may be unity of understanding and harmonious action in promoting the musical interests of the church. The next three years are important periods of preparation for the Centennial music, and with this specially in mind the musicians of the church should attend.

this institute. The following outline will cover in a general way the work of the institute:

Saturday Session

General theme: "Our church and its music."— Problems and Initiative.
The theme of this meeting will be handled through questions, answers, and discussion.

With the coming of the year 1927, the members of this church can be beginning to think in terms of a century of experience. Lessons of the past and opportunities of the present make us keenly aware of the responsibilities in the history-making processes of the great church.

Every year tells its story, but this year marks a great event which shall usher in a period of particular significance. Let it be remembered that September 22, 1927, marks the one hundredth anniversary of one of the most significant events in the history of this church which has made it so felt throughout the world. On this date the plates of the Book of Mormon were finally delivered to Joseph Smith by the angel, Moroni. To us, therefore, is given an opportunity to enter into our centennial celebrations with due soberness of thought in discharging the trust imposed.

When the President of the church addresses the Seventy-second General Conference this year, there is at his disposal the historical experiences of a century. When the study class meet for instruction and discussion of development problems, they can not only draw the best from current thought and judgment, but can survey also a whole century of human endeavor and experiences that can materially help in forming present conclusions.

The daily prayer service is an indispensable feature in helping us to spiritualize the varied experiences through which the church has passed, that through the eyes of faith we may vision further objectives and under the influence of the Spirit of Almighty God help each other toward our ultimate goal.

With these thoughts in mind, the Saints throughout the world may consider the significance of the responsibility intrusted to us when God through his angelic messenger delivered the history of the ancient inhabitants of this country into the safe-keeping of this church.

Conference Activities of Laurel Club

During the coming General Conference the Laurel Club will present the play "Restoration" as a courtesy to visitors. This is a three-act play, portraying the three different eras of church history, from 1820 to the present time.

This play was given two nights in the old Battery Building, during the General Conference of 1920, under the auspices of the Religio. Since that time many calls have come for it from all over the church. There is a wonderful inspiration in this little drama, which appeals to all who see it. Those who are presenting the play feel that it will bear a message of real worth to all.

The play will be given in the Auditorium on the night of April 12. No admission will be charged, but an offering will be taken to assist the Laurels in the equipment of the Auditorium kitchen and dining room.

The Curse of the Race

"There Shall Be No Idlers in Zion"

If all were workers at productive labor, or were conservators of wealth by being engaged at work which was necessary for the preservation, protection, benefit, or pleasure of society, the burdens to be carried by those who are now usually meant when "laborers" are spoken of, would be lessened. But it can not be denied that as society is at present organized, some there are who have more than their due share of goods and leisure time, while others labor longer hours and have less of goods than they should.

One of the purposes to be served by the adoption of stewardships is to remedy this social maladjustment. Stewardship will come by willing compliance with the law of labor and the law of the surplus, a willingness based on religion and a determination to do the will of God.

When the time comes that all are willing to do so, then will disappear the curse spoken of by Lincoln when he said:

"As labor is the common burden of our race, so the effort of some to shift their share of the burden onto the shoulders of others is the great durable curse of the race."

Attendance at Sunday Evening Services

To observers it has been apparent for some time that attendance at many churches was falling off, particularly Sunday evening services and perhaps the midweek prayer services. In some places this may have affected our own services. To what extent it would be interesting to know.

In a recent issue of The Christian Century, the editor commented on this under the heading of "What of Sunday evening service?" I have reproduced that editorial, and call the attention of our readers to the problem as put therein, and the query as to the answer to the problem. I particularly commend this to the attention of our pastors, and should like to hear from some of them as to whether this is one of their problems, and what they think the solution is.

F. M. S.

The Century editor says:

A traveling secretary who speaks regularly in churches of all denominations recently declared that the average Sunday night congregation addressed by him numbered forty-one. It may be that the experiences of a secretary do not give a real indication of the Sunday night situation in the churches, because some of the strongest churches have rules against outside speakers occupying the pulpit during the height of the church season. Nevertheless, it must be confessed that hardly one church out of fifty can boast a large Sunday night attendance. Even those churches which enjoy a spirited and well-attended morning service frequently have evening services so poorly attended that they are a drag upon both minister and congregation. What is the answer to this Sunday evening problem? Have the movies, the radio, and the automobile permanently destroyed the possibility of holding good evening services? For a while the village church was able to maintain a prosperous night service after the city church's evening program was imperiled. But all indications are that village and city are now suffering from a similar fate. What is the answer to this Sunday evening problem? Ought the evening service to be frankly abandoned? Or could it be saved by a change of methods? Even if methods are changed, will it be possible to conserve the religious and ethical values of the service? The churches which are most successful in their evening program are usually those which have changed their methods and gone in for stunt programs. Is there any alternative to such a program? Perhaps it would be wise to sacrifice the crowd on Sunday evening and develop a service of high educational value which would be attended by eager souls not only anxious to hear but to discuss the more difficult moral and religious problems of the day.

KLDS Radio News

President Appoints Radio Commission

President Coolidge is to be commended for his selection of the five men who are to comprise the first United States Radio Commission. Against the wishes of many politicians, he appointed a commission of four men thoroughly acquainted with the technical problems of radio, and one jurist. William H. G. Bullard, appointed for a six-year term, is a retired Rear Admiral of the United States Navy.

He will act as chairman of the commission. He was superintendent of naval radio service from 1912 to 1916. The five-year appointment is O. H. Caldwell, an electrical engineer, who for some time has been editor of the Radio Retailing magazine in New York. Eugene O. Sykes, the four-year appointee, was formerly justice of the Supreme Court of Mississippi. The director of radio station W C C O, Minneapolis, Mr. H. A. Bellows, was appointed by President Coolidge to serve on the Radio Commission for three years. The Senate refused to ratify his appointment, but the President has given him and the other member of the commission, John F. Dillon, recess appointments. Mr. Bellows last year served as Regional Chairman of the National Association of Broadcasters. Colonel Dillon served twenty years in the United States Signal Corps, but since 1912 has spent most of his time as United States radio inspector, more recently serving as radio supervisor at San Francisco. It was Colonel Dillon who recommended the issuance of the first church radio station licenses—9 Y O and 9 Z H, and who gave "A. B. C." his first commercial radio examination, in 1915.

Pioneer radio broadcasters feel that President Coolidge could hardly have appointed a better-qualified commission to take radio out of its present state of near chaos. Secretary of Commerce Hoover is going ahead with his part of the program, so that his department, which will administrate regulations of the new Radio Commission, will be all set for action when the new commissioners are ready to take up their duties. A new and large radio division will be created at the Department of Commerce with W. D. Terrell, chief radio supervisor, in charge. Mr. Terrell refused appointment on the commission. He is one of the first two radio inspectors in the United States, and he is classed with knowing as much about radio, in his part of the field, as anyone in the government service.

Congress adjourned without giving the new Radio Commission an appropriation with which to begin work, but it is understood that Secretary Hoover is making provision for the housing and general expenses of the new commission until the next session of Congress.

The director of our church radio service believes we will receive altogether fair consideration by the new commission. To obtain one of the preferred wave lengths, we are somewhat handicapped, because we are not performing a maximum of public service. Our station is using only a fraction of the time allotted it. All of this time should be used in broadcasting material of interest and value to the general public.

General Conference in the Auditorium

Since 1920 the church has been looking forward to the time when it would hold its first conference sessions in the Auditorium Building. The building is far from complete at the present time, yet arrangements are being perfected to make the basement comfortable for the coming General Conference.

Undoubtedly its massive construction, large capacity, and adaptability will indicate skill and care in planning the numerous details of the structure. Even in the basement assembly room, two thousand or more people can be comfortably seated and both see and hear the proceedings. Another thousand can be seated in other parts of the basement at different vantage points. This will multiply the capacity of the Stone Church, which has housed former conferences, approximately two and one half times.

The Saints may well look forward to the time when, at the completion of the building, 6,900 people can all see the speaker as well as hear the spoken word. Each day's mail brings its customary number of inquiries the progress of the building; expressions of satisfaction that the work has been started and carried this far.

Numerous inquiries regarding unpaid pledges are also being received. The present status of pledge accounts is being determined and verified, and the amount of money sent in payment of these pledges is increasing from month to month.

Seven years ago the need for an adequate building for our annual General Conference gathering was so apparent that the Saints responded with personal interest and enthusiasm to the Auditorium project. When this sentiment was crystallized into pledges,

THE AUDITORIUM BASEMENT ASSEMBLY ROOM

Here is shown the basement assembly room, as it appeared the first week in February, 1927. The picture is taken from a point near the center of the basement floor, looking north. At the back of the picture are shown the two largest supporting piers, which carry the heaviest of the steel beams supporting the main entrance to the building at the street level. Between these piers is the platform, or rostrum, which will seat quite a considerable number, and is at the approximate level of the subway entrance running east and west in front, or on the north side of the building.

The front edge of the platform can be accurately located in the picture by measuring $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches down from the top of the picture.

the church accepted the pledge cards at their face value. The experience of seven years ago will undoubtedly be repeated this year, and the same interest and enthusiasm displayed in paying the pledges, that the building can be completed.

All those who can, without incurring unwise indebtedness, should come to the April conference. The spirit of true fellowship should characterize their coming. It is a time to renew their gospel covenant and to be personally interested in the various activities of the church, that thus they may promote the cause of Christ among men.

The communion of Saints has always been an essential feature of our mutual endeavor to serve the Master's cause. Until the Auditorium project was started, this church had no adequate place to hold its annual gathering. From past experience in the smaller gatherings among the Saints, who is there but can imagine the inspiration and the strength and the fellowship that would be generated through the experience of thousands of Saints together in one company, worshipping one God, and singing the songs of Zion with the spirit and with the understanding.

This year let the Saints come to conference, as before mentioned, that they may get a foretaste of what will be a final reality. The Auditorium is a definite means to this end.

Here is shown at the back of the picture, between the two piers which are at a little to the left of the center, the circular brick partition wall of the orchestra pit. At the right is seen the form work for the broad steps which rise from the floor of the assembly room on the east, west, and south sides, to the level of the main basement floor.

The Budget and Its Use

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

Many people today desire wealth who will never obtain it. Many are seeking afar for the place where it lies hidden, who will fail to find it. One of the great mistakes of men is, that they carelessly pass by the unobserved treasures around them, hoping to find the goal of their desire in the unfamiliar places. But the things of most value are usually near at hand waiting for us to take them and utilize them. One of the most important means of thrift available to the average man or family is this much-neglected thing that he occasionally hears about, but knows little about, the budget.

Yet there seems to be no good reason why this important instrument should be a stranger to us, for our own Government and all of the stable governments of earth have found it most useful and necessary to their successful continuance. Its honorable history stretches back into the bygone centuries, and the most brilliant and successful men of the past and present have gladly availed themselves of its valued service.

Perhaps it is largely because we have more commonly heard of the budget in connection with national, state, and municipal government, or large business concerns, that so little has been done to utilize it in our own affairs. We may have failed to see the connection between it and the successful conduct of these important organizations. Such connection exists and holds much of great interest to us. But this interest will be increased when it becomes plain that the conduct of our own financial affairs, both of business and of the family, may also be safeguarded and piloted to the golden harbor of success by the same means that rewarded them.

What the Budget Is

Of course there may be budgets good and bad, just as all good things may have their opposites. And they may be administered by either good or bad people, which in turn may color one's opinion of them. This no doubt was the reason why a certain French writer expressed his idea of it as follows: "Annual budget, leech aspiring that sucks what the people sweat in acquiring." A clearer definition is given by another French author, however, who states in a work on government finance:

The budget is in the first place a statement forecasting revenues and expenditures during a certain determined period of time. . . . It is also an authorization or an order by competent authorities to make the expenditures and collect the revenues.

This definition particularly applies to budgets of national, state, and various civic governments; but in principle it also applies to the financial management of business concerns, and in a modified extent to individual and family affairs of the purse. The two elements named, those of income and expenditure, are essential to any complete budget. But for convenience budgets are often considered separately under the heading of Income Budgets, or Expense Budgets.

Both income and expense budgets are derived from estimates of the income or the expense to be applied to specified purposes. Except in cases of fixed income the amount to be obtained from applicable sources is carefully estimated, or the estimate may include plans for raising the required amount. The expense budget specifies the items or general headings under which the various kinds of expenditures are to be made, and the amount to be expended under each of these headings, the amount represented by all these headings constituting the total of the expense budget. Quite commonly the amount to be expended under each heading is represented by figures indicating the percentage or ratio it bears to the whole amount, the whole amount being usually represented by 100, though for special reasons other figures may be used as a basis.

The purposes of the budget must be specified clearly, being essentials of the budget itself, and only the purposes determined upon can be included in the application of the funds. The period to be covered by the budget is another essential to be fixed in the budget itself. It is sometimes provided in the budget that the total amount to be expended during the entire period shall be proportional or less at any time before the period ends. A larger stipulated ratio is sometimes authorized during certain subdivisions of the period, but if no restrictions exist the entire amount may be used before the end of the period, provided additional liabilities are not incurred afterward.

The Purpose of the Budget

In general, the purpose of the budget is so to co-ordinate resources and expenditures that they shall be applied to the desired end. It serves to warn of wasteful or extravagant tendencies before the amount reaches the danger point, thus saving the funds to be applied where most needed. It tends to prevent haphazard habits of handling finances, and encourages businesslike methods and thrift. By means of the budget the ratio of savings to income or expense may be more intelligently planned and more surely maintained.

In many respects the purpose of the family budget and the budget for business concerns is the same. Both are intended to preserve a proper ratio of income and expense and a proper distribution of income and expense. Both are useful for detecting the leaks and weak places in the system employed. By budgeting expense one is more likely to see that purchases are economically made. The study of markets, the quality of goods to be purchased, the relative desirability and need of articles, are likely to be considered more carefully by those who use the budget than by those who neglect doing so.

It is not suggested, however, that the budget will automatically manage one's affairs. Neither does it assume to furnish one with business ability. It is rather an instrument or means of using business ability and experience more effectively. In cool judgment you can determine what amount you ought to spend for the various items making your budget, which are the fixed expenditures, which are the more needed, and how much you will apply to the less needed items, such as entertainment, recreation, and the like. Your budget will then enable you to note at any time whether or not you are exceeding the amount you ought to expend for any of these items. The budget will make it easier to adjust your expenditures to your income.

The Budget a Test of Character

Your budget will be essentially what you make it. The real foundation of your budget is therefore yourself. Let me explain this by saying: The amount determined upon for any class of expenditures will vary according to the temperament and preferences of the spenders, even if their incomes are equal. But with resources and other conditions similar, the expenditures of those having similar aims and ideals will not differ largely. The various budget tables that will be shown in this article have been worked out according to the requirements of individuals and families of average conditions, and are very valuable for this reason. An analysis of certain tables will reveal differences in the ideals of those who compiled them. So also in our own budget we may find something of ourselves reflected. It is a means of self-detection.

An ideal distribution of expenditures can be made only by one having an ideal goal. If our goal is conceived by pride or avarice, our expenditures will be for selfish ends. If our goal is humanitarian, so will be our expenditures. A budget based upon selfishness can not aid a wholesome objective. It can lend itself only to unworthy ends, and must therefore bring failure, disappointment, and regret. A wider recognition of this principle in both family and business life is essential to the stability, progress, and well-being of the nation, state, and community where we live. Its opposite brings distress, disorder, and disintegration. Many people who are alert to modern conditions and needs are beginning to stress this principle. In this connection the following extract from the findings of the Omaha Area Regional Councils of the Methodist Episcopal Church, held in Omaha and Des Moines, January 26 to 29, 1926, is commended:

The Christianization of Industry.—It is the first business of the church to reconcile the warring elements in industry. Industry is a wide open field for the application of the principles of Jesus. The church must take its message of social justice to the laboring man in the terms of the prophets and of the Sermon on the Mount.

Not only did these councils affirm their position with respect to the proper relationship of the church and industry, but in the same document the intention to carry out this principle by the acceptance of the doctrine of stewardship in financial affairs is voiced in no uncertain terms, as follows:

We will preach, teach, and practice stewardship without reserve or compromise. This will include the whole-hearted consecration of our money, the acceptance of responsibility for saving individual men and women, the consecration of the whole self, and the cultivation of the personal experience of victorious prayer.

These principles are sound, and to him whose vision is not clouded by selfish seeking, self-complacency, or ignorance, it must be apparent that the great need of the church today is an awakened conscience in industrial, social, and family affairs, that will result in the devotion of all that we have and are to God and his kingdom as the supreme purpose of life. He who distributes his expense budget with this ideal in view will not neglect either family or business needs, but he will measure success by his ability to help onward the divine purposes.

How to Plan the Budget

The Budget Period.—The fixing of the date when the fiscal year shall begin is important, for it determines when the budget shall become operative. The financial transactions, including contracts and various other obligations, are therefore to be reckoned accordingly. A year is usually the most convenient period to be covered. At or near its close income and expenditures should be compared and an estimate be made for the new year. Experiences of the past usually make it easier to estimate for the coming year. The income budget and the expense budget should be given separately, the totals showing whether there is a balance, a surplus, or a deficit.

The budget must classify all income and expenditures that are within the scope of its purpose, and must provide dependable estimates of their nature, amount, and cost, including if necessary the times when they are to be provided for. Each source of revenue and the object of each expense should be clearly stated. When any department of a concern is considered separately and without regard to the others or to the whole budget, such provision is called special funding. Unless particular reasons call for this method, provision for all departments as parts of the whole budget is more generally preferred.

In planning the budget it is necessary to determine the amount of income that is expected during the budget period, the nature of this income, whether in cash or other goods, and the times when it will be received. The manner of obtaining the income is also very important. If it is a fixed salary from a permanent position, it may be handled quite differently than must be done if the amount, time of receiving, form of payment, and sources from whence to be received are uncertain. If the income includes produce or other goods, an estimate of the quantity, quality, and value may be required. It is clear that income of this kind can not be as accurately determined as though it were cash and to be derived from stable sources. In such cases conservative estimates are safest, and may usually be based on the law of average, discounted by probable factors and known variable conditions.

How much of details should be given in the budget depends upon the nature of the budget and the need of details to sufficiently explain it. Expenditures should be sufficiently classified to aid in noting items where economies may be effected, or where insufficient provision for necessary purposes might otherwise result. The action that will be required to produce certain kinds of income should also be noted when not otherwise obvious. In the case of appropriation for educational, benevolent, and similar institutions, the budget determines the net amount to be contributed, though in most cases this sum is based on reports and estimates of the gross receipts and expenditures of the beneficiary whose needs are to be aided.

Methods of Fixing the Budget

From the fact that the budget must forecast both income and expenditures, its value depends upon having accurate data from which to estimate it. Here the sagacity, or the reverse, of the budgeter is likely to be apparent. Systems used for estimating the income include, the Averaging Method, the Estimate of the Trend, and the Direct Estimate. Sometimes a combination of methods is employed, if by such means certain available data may be more readily utilized.

The Averaging Method is, to apply to the coming period the results of the last previous period. This method would serve best when all the conditions affecting both periods are substantially the same. It may be an easy way to determine the budget, but its safety depends quite as much upon being able to determine the probabilities completely and accurately as it does in other methods, though data for the past is of course at hand. This method lends itself to cases where the income is stable, or where the power to fully regulate it is in hand.

The Estimate of the Trend is based on the known conditions that have affected income during the more recent part of the period, the direction in which these conditions are developing, and their probable duration and effect in the coming period. It also notes the increase or decrease in revenue with respect to its probable continuance and rate of change. A chief danger of this method is, that an expense budget based on conditions appearing optimistic may cause a depletion of the treasury through unforeseen changes in the trend. It is generally safer to discount expectations based on prospects seeming to be unusually prosperous.

In determining the trend as a basis of the budget, the trend of business conditions in general is important, as any particular business will usually be affected by it to some extent, depending upon what relationship the business has to others that are most adversely affected. Because of this fact the relative trend of lines of industry concerned with or affecting the source of income and expenditures on which the budget is based must also be ascertained, and a comparison with previous similar conditions should have due weight when fixing the items that may be thus affected. Statistical information, properly analyzed and interpreted, is important in this connection.

The Direct Estimate is based on the elements of the budget anew for each period covered. For certain kinds of budgets this method is sufficient, while in others it would not yield accurate results. The factors with which the budget is concerned will usually lend themselves to one method better than to another in a given instance, and will suggest the one better adapted to the purpose.

Where expenditures are less subject to modification than income, it is often advisable to fix the expenditures first, after which means of revenue are provided to meet the expense. This procedure, though sometimes feasible in departments of large civil and business organizations, would be unsafe in family and other small affairs having but little margin of income above expense. Large concerns usually have certain rules to be observed in making and administering the budget, but they are mostly of too special application to require mention here.

The Foundation of Our Fathers

BY JOHN F. GARVER

The fifth of a series of seven sermons in the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, in November, 1925, under the general theme, "The faith of our fathers."

We have been speaking largely thus far in our efforts of the work of our fathers in this faith. If we are to speak tonight in a way less spectacular, let us remember that we now come to the thing which is really basic in our organization; and if the work of our Lord and Master himself has appealed less to us as a rule, it is only because that work has been removed farther from us in time, and perhaps in our powers to comprehend.

Our fathers in this age did a great work. They ushered in for us the New Dispensation. They gave us a promise of that great and divine purpose which would by and by be realized in this world in a Zion redeemed, and the gospel carried to all people. We are come now to inquire into that great power which made possible their success. What was it that constituted the foundation of our fathers?

I shall read a few verses from Paul first, from the first Corinthian letter, and then from the second chapter of Ephesians:

We are laborers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building. According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise master-builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. . . . And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord; in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit. (1 Corinthians 3: 9-13; Ephesians 2: 20-22.)

We take a slight liberty with the main passage here for a text, in the words, "Ye are built upon the foundation of Christ." This text taken at its face value says to us, Jesus Christ is the foundation of the church. That interpretation is correct; though in my humble opinion there is some further and deeper significance both in the text and in the lesson, which we shall note as we move along.

Christ Is the Foundation

Jesus is the foundation of the church. On him was laid the great task of our redemption, who volunteered to come to the earth in our behalf. He, Christ, had had to do first of all with our creation, and he was divinely concerned in our welfare. So it was that as one of the Godhead he chose to come down from heaven to earth, that through the work of his most holy ministry we might be set free. So he designed to come to earth. He identified himself with us in all things, and as one of us, living among us, he overcame for all. Conquering all of the consequences of evil, he made possible the divine plan for the redemption of all.

And thus he has taught us the way for our individual salvation; and our ministry and labor that every man with us might have the same glory.

And the majesty of it, the divinity of it, the moving grace of it, my dear friends, is this, that in making himself our foundation it was not because Jesus Christ must do it. It was not that there was no other course open to him. For he was a free agent. He volunteered to come. And he was one who had to do in devising this way; not because he had no choice, but because this way was best for us. Jesus Christ first of all had to do with the manner of his own coming, and then chose to come as he did for the simple reason this was the better way for us. So Jesus Christ in this sense in his ministry here becomes the foundation.

The Christ Spirit Is the Footing

Now the foundation for a building is that portion of the building made strong for the superstructure, upon which the superstructure immediately rests, which we see immediately above the surface of the ground. Jesus Christ was that foundation. And he was more—he was also the footing—that portion beneath the foundation, as is laid strong in all large buildings. For as we start digging down to discover what it is upon which the foundation, the earth ministry of our Lord rests, we find there a very great footing, as we may say. And what is that footing? That, friends, is the great spirit of him which first conceived the thought, then brought him down to us that he might become our foundation, himself building as Christ of earth in his holy ministry and work upon that footing, that great spirit of him existing in and throughout all eternity.

We speak of the work of some great man among us. And we know that back of the activity of that man is the thing we can not see, the thing we feel, the thing real, the spirit of the man that makes his work possible. So it is with the Christ. His earth ministry was made possible out of the great spirit of him from the beginning. Upon it rests the foundation which we see above the surface. It was his spirit that sustained him in all of his offering, in all of his ministry, on up to Calvary.

The Substrata Is the Love of God

And as we look upon this great work we are not yet content until, digging down yet farther and coming below the footing, as it were, beneath the spirit of this Jesus, we find out what it is down below, deep in the earth of his divine philosophy, upon which rests his spirit.

What is it? What is it that constitutes that great eternal rock of our salvation? What is it upon which rests the Christ spirit? What is it that constitutes the bed-rock of our eternal salvation? Discovering this, then will our foundation be sure indeed.

It is the love of God. On the expansive bosom of the love of God, Jesus Christ our Lord built first of all the spirit of him. Upon the love of God he built his great earth character. Upon the love of God he built his great earth ministry. In the love of God he planted deeply the cross which bore his body as he died that we might live. Yes, the love of God is the great substrata beneath the Christ spirit and work.

This, my dear friends, is the foundation of our fathers, the Christ ministry, the Christ spirit, the Christ love. This is that foundation of which the apostle speaks when he says, "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid." Any other foundation would not be a foundation. And most certainly no man could lay this foundation.

So Must We Learn to Labor

And, my friends, the day is at hand when we have need to learn anew the words of that man of God, Joseph Smith, when he said, "No one can assist in this work except he be humble and full of love." Only as we labor in the humility of the love of God can we hope to assist our blessed Lord in the establishment of this most holy faith. Just to the extent we identify ourselves with Christ in spirit, and draw from that deep rock, the love of eternity beneath our feet, just to that extent shall we be able in his stead to recover man to him and to the great white throne. Only in this way may we be fitly framed into the temple of God. Only in this way can we be equally yoked with our Master as lively stones in that most holy building, the church, the habitation of God through the Spirit. And out of which he would speak to fill the earth with the call for men to come unto him and live. And only thus may we ourselves be saved.

This I say again was the foundation of our fathers; upon which they built, upon which we take our stand; and upon which we must build as individuals and as a church, giving ourselves as Christ gave himself that we ourselves might first be saved; and having been saved, bear that testimony which will persuade other men to believe, that they, too, may become saved with us. This is becoming a lively stone in the building of God, Jesus Christ himself in his earth ministry being the chief corner stone.

This is the foundation of the apostles and prophets. There is no other, nor can there be.

So in the love of God alone may we build for eternity out of the material in our hands with which to labor.

All Are Called

I used to be very greatly dismayed when I read the scripture serving as the lesson of the evening, because I misinterpreted it. I thought it meant one can not build if he has nothing but stubble, if he has nothing but hay, if he has nothing but wood. I thought it meant one could not build unless he had something to build with that could not be consumed by fire, such as gold, or silver, or precious stones. And having myself nothing to build with save things comparable to wood, and hay, and stubble, I felt there was no contribution I could make to the cause of latter days.

I was mistaken. This scripture says no such thing. What it says is, No matter what kind of material one has to build with, if he lays it in the right spirit, on the right foundation, it will stand the burning. When I came to so understand, I appreciated the significance of that saying in Doctrine and Covenants 119:8, "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them."

All men have not given unto them precious stones, or gold, or silver. Some must be content to build in this world with wood, some with hay, and some with stubble. Yet are all called. As each comes to the time to serve, whether it be to labor in this place, that, or the other place, does not matter. Let him go to, whether he shall be one of the ministry, one of the men of business, or one who does the rough work of the world. Let every man go to and bring forth out of his storehouse, be it large or small, the kind of service he is best able to contribute as an individual. Let him identify himself with the Christ in spirit. Let him lay his material on the foundation of love, and it will come through the burning, and continue a part of the great temple which by and by is to receive our Lord in person.

Now God is like that. And oh! how some of my brothers and sisters need to know God is like that. All over the land I meet women borne down with the cares of family, whose souls long within them to make some contribution to this cause, and who feel they can not, when it is only necessary that their eyes be opened to the fact that from them have come the most precious stones that this world knows—human life. And as we find certain few whose privilege it has not been to thus contribute in children to the kingdom of God, let their consolation be this, it matters not. Whatever God may have laid in the hands of these, let them put it with a prayer of thanksgiving upon the foundation of love, and they will be blessed.

Likewise, we find men anxious to do, but who feel they have not wherewithal to serve. Such need to learn a saintly life is the best gift to the cause of Christ.

So Must We Carry On

And so shall it be in the great day of Zion, that whether we shall stand as the president of the church, or as the digger of ditches, as each makes his contribution in the right spirit, it shall become the temple of our Lord; and he shall have his portion of the divine presence shed alike upon all.

God is like that! His is a foundation so broad and so strong that upon it we may all take our stand, and make our contribution, and have our part here, and our glory hereafter.

This is the foundation on which we work.

In this spirit must we carry on, if we ever justify the great and moving sacrifice of our fathers in this faith. By this kind of ministry and this kind only, shall we justify the sacrifices those early men and women made, our fathers in this faith. The tearing asunder of their families. And their going down from them into death. The remaining of some of them alone and desolate by the departure from them of the church into the depths of hell. Only as God moved among these remaining true, and in his mercy gathered them together, and breathed into them the breath of life that the church might again in organized form have its place upon the earth, only in this spirit, moving among others to a greater church, can we justify the offering of those gone before, and who have made our day possible. In this way only can we justify the offering of Jesus Christ who left all he had and came here among us that we might live.

Christ Gave All

And Christ gave all things as no one of us can ever give all things. He literally and absolutely gave all the things he had.

He gave heaven. Christ in eternity, by whose right hand all things were made, subjected that spirit of him to the little form that lay in Bethlehem's manger, in which humiliation his judgment was taken away. He knew no more as a babe than you knew the night you were born. He gave heaven to come here.

He gave earth. He said once, when the great spirit of him for the time weakened, when it seemed he must have the touch of a friendly hand, The birds of the air have nests to which they may come for understanding. The foxes have holes to which they may creep into the bowels of the earth, and together find consolation. But the Son of Man hath no place to lay his head. For this was his earth offering—there was no one to understand. Christ gave the earth.

Saints, this was literally true. That awful night in the garden when it seemed he must have some human touch of understanding in order to break through the veil, to claim for himself again the will of God, with the hot fountains of anxiety pouring torrents down his cheeks, he besought his most understanding friends, three in number, to watch with him, but they slept. And why? They did not understand.

Failing the first time, he must needs try again. He awakened them, and pleaded with them, "Oh, my brethren, can ye not watch with me one hour? Try again!" And as he prostrated himself for the further effort, how his soul must have longed for the touch of his friends. He prays again, and again fails.

Returning, he finds his friends again asleep. The second time he awakens them. Surely they will watch with him now. So the third time he beseeches them for his sake, for their sake, for the sake of the world, and for the sake of God to watch with him.

He prostrates himself for the third time, but they sleep. So alone, in the midst of the terrors of that awful night, he must needs with his own, unsupported, naked hands break through the veil to lay hold once more upon the will of his Father, that he might keep the faith, for there was none on earth to understand.

Yes, Christ gave the earth.

I am asked frequently in my travels, "Brother Garver, isn't it hard for you to be away from home so much?"

I used to answer, "Yes," and then go off and feel sorry for myself. I don't do it any more. Thinking of what my Master gave, I would be ashamed to say I have yet given anything. I answer now, "Why, my dear sister, I never leave home. Oh, I am not with my wife and children, I grant you, but I am not away from home. I could not leave home. The sympathy and the understanding and the confidence born of love, these things which make my home are with me every day, and every hour of every day. And when I lie down in a strange place to sleep at night, these in my dreams protect me and keep me a clean and wholesome man. And they bear me up in all my work."

Not so with my Lord, for he had no home to understand. Indeed, he gave earth.

Jesus also gave God. In that dark hour when upon Calvary he hung in death, the faces of his friends hidden from his sight, with the pounding of the pain in his ears drowning out their words of sympathy, when all things of earth had gone out of his life and he raised his dying face that he might have the comfort of a Father eternal in that awful hour of passing, he looked up in vain. There was no God. So was there wrung from his torn and bleeding soul, "My God, can it be possible? Hast thou, too, forsaken me?"

Jesus gave God.

Jesus gave all. Yet he gave it in sweetness. And giving all in sweetness, he gained all, both for himself and for all men.

Take Heed How Ye Build

The apostle with every good show of reason says, "Take heed how ye build." Not with what ye build, but how. Ye may build, whatever the material, if ye build aright. He builds not who builds for self. "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God," is the command of our Lord, "and all these things in abundance as ye need shall be added unto you."

There is only one cardinal sin, only one sin running red through the entire fabric of life's experience. Hot, inflammatory, bursting into flame! It is the sin of selfishness.

He who builds for self builds not at all. Already he is damned. And very soon he will die, consumed of that vehement flame with which he has fired himself for himself.

Nor does it make any difference what it is he indulges himself in. It may be in gratification of his appetites or passions of the flesh, or both. He who does it dies. It may be to serve his own purpose, he indulges himself in his own private interpretations of the scripture. It is the same. It may be a desire for place in the church. It is the same. Or it may be he indulges himself in his desire to avenge himself on his brother. It is the same. There is only one end for that man. That man is leading himself and letting himself down into the dark abyss of spiritual death.

Mother's Love

We build on love. There comes to mind here that beautiful poem, "Mother o' mine":

If I were hanged on the highest hill,
 Mother o' mine!
 Oh, mother o' mine!
 I know whose love would follow me still,
 Mother o' mine!
 Oh, mother o' mine!

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
 Mother o' mine!
 Oh, mother o' mine!
 I know whose tears would flow down to me,
 Mother o' mine!
 Oh, mother o' mine!

If I were damned both body and soul,
 Mother o' mine!
 Oh, mother o' mine!
 I know whose prayers would make me whole,
 Mother o' mine!
 Oh, mother o' mine!

Mother builds best, because she loves best.

Don't I know that Don't you know it? Oh, the faith, the tenderness, the effectualness of a mother's love. And may God in his rich mercy make up to such of us as have been denied that divine thing, the care of a mother.

Love Is the Foundation

He who loves is the man who serves. Wisely is love made the great bed rock upon which rests the Christ's spirit, to carry the Christ's ministry. Love is the foundation of our fathers. And it is ours. There can be no other.

I have had one great disappointment in my life. I am not wont to speak of things deep in my experience, but I am going to speak of this. I had a wonderful mother. She didn't know this faith. And when she took sick in the month of June, 1908, it was made known to me that she would die. It had been the desire of my life to speak to her of this gospel, but as yet it had not been my privilege. As was my custom, I attended to the work of my ministry until I had finished certain obligations I had laid myself under, and then went home to mother, but I was too late. She was beyond understanding.

There was, however, one thing in that bitter experience which brought satisfaction to my soul. And that is the thing I am telling you. My sister told me the story as my mother lay a corpse. My mother was a sweet Quaker sister. She believed in God. At the age of twenty-one she married my father. The night of her marriage she went into her closet, and closing the door, fell down upon her face and prayed the Father for light, and this was her prayer—for in the Dunkard Church, as in our church, any mother's son was eligible for the ministry if called—she prayed this prayer: "Father, give me by my husband a male child, that I may dedicate him to thy ministry." That prayer was answered. Mother was asking for nothing for herself, but rather that she might contribute to the Church of Christ as she understood it. Her prayer was answered better than she knew. I had this consolation standing by her side and holding her hand in death. And I have the confidence and consolation that where she is tonight she understands and is satisfied.

Mother served better than she knew, for she loved beyond her understanding.

Let Us Build On

Yes, love is the foundation of service.
 It is the foundation of our fathers, from which we were brought forth for the church. And building upon it we, too, may bring forth our children and contribute them to the church. Oh, I know they may wander for a time, but, brave heart, cease not thy praying. God will bring them back some day, and you will be satisfied.

Building upon this foundation we, too, shall ourselves carry forward this great church of our fathers, until hands now young having come to the strength of their maturity shall take from our faltering ones this great work.

Building on this foundation, then, we carry on in God's divine way, until by and by, having finished our work, we may pass on to our reward, handing down to our posterity after us the church and kingdom of God, unsullied, untarnished, unimpaired, firmly fixed upon the foundation, Christ; beneath which rests the footing, the Christ spirit; and beneath all the substrata of the love of God.

And so shall the church endure unto the coming of our Lord to take her to himself, his bride the Lamb's wife.

Moving on, then, as the Church of Christ, confident of our calling, sure of our foundation, determined in our endeavor to achieve, may we come finally to be the people of his choice in a wondrous Zion, and in fervent testimony to all the world.

This is our foundation, and this is our work. Let us stand fast.

The House Within

I have a house inside of me,
A house which people never see;
It has a door through which none pass,
And windows—but they're not of glass.

I meet my heavenly Father there,
For he stoops down to hear my prayer,
And soothe my brow and cure my care,
And make me brave to do and dare.

"Where do you live?" ask folks I meet,
And then I say, on such a street,
But still I know what's really me
Lives in a house folks never see.

Then when I have been made strong,
And have things righted that were wrong,
I come outside where I belong,
And sing a new and happy song.

'Tis then I hear the people say,
"You're bright and bonny, good and gay";
It's so, because I feel that way,
But they don't know the price I pay.

You have a house inside of you
Where you can fight your battles, too,
And God will tell you what to do
To make your life both good and true.

"The Child's First School Is the Family."—Froebel.

Do You Encourage Your Children?

"You'll never mend that wagon," said a mother to her twelve-year-old son. He was trying to repair his sister's toy wagon.

"Why not?" asked the boy.

"It's too difficult," replied the mother. "Father will do it when he comes home."

"I'll do it myself," answered the boy. "I promised Doris I would and I'm going to do it."

The boy was certainly made of the right stuff. It was not long before he brought the wagon to his little sister, "repaired as well as father could have done it." This showed unusual persistency, in the face of opposition. Many a boy would have given up—not because the task was hard but because his mother had said it was hard.

We mothers have a grave responsibility. If we put doubt into our children's hearts, how can we expect them to succeed?

"You can not do it," says a mother, and generally the child leaves it alone.

"You can do it," says another mother, and straightway renewed ardor comes to the child, and he does it.

We ought to know, by our own feelings, that when a person says we can not do a thing, we do not feel inclined to continue trying. Children are even more sensitive than we are.

Many a man owes his success in life to his mother's early encouragement. A child generally has implicit belief in his mother; therefore when she says he can't he thinks he can't. I believe this is even more true of girls than of boys. Sometimes a boy will stick to his purpose, even when he has to fight for it, but a girl does not rough it so much, and as she is under her mother's influence longer, she is more likely to be swayed by her.

I knew a woman who imagined her child was good for nothing simply because she was a girl. She was always lamenting the fact that she had no boys. Of course, the girl never tried to do anything out of the common, so when she was left alone she could go only as a general helper. I often thought the girl was ambitious, but what chance had she against such a mother? Of course, in years to come she may throw off this unfortunate influence of her mother, but think of the years wasted before she does so!

Good Will in Industry

[Sir Robert Hadfield, like Mr. Ford, has been a lifelong advocate of high wages and high production, and has practiced what he preaches with success. As a scientist and inventor his fame is established: that he is a pioneer of industrial cooperation is not so well known.—Ed. Spectator.]

The imperative need for industry at the present moment is a feeling of security on both sides. This can not be achieved by the expression of sentiments, however laudable, on the part of politicians, trade union leaders, and journalists; we need action rather than any further addition to the mass of economic theory which has been poured out from the presses of the country as the result of the general strike and the terrible coal deadlock.

We shall cease to be an industrial nation, and consequently we shall be unable to support our population at all, if we do not get to work quickly and keep at work through an undistracted period of My little girl tries the most extraordinary things, so it seems to me! She shows talent for painting, whereas I can not draw a straight line! I encourage her in every undertaking. I always tell her that she will succeed if she keeps on trying. At four and a half she received a prize for painting, and since then she has had other prizes, some for writing stories! She is only twelve years of age, and I expect great things from her because she never gives up once she has undertaken something. I encourage her all I can. I consider it a mother's duty to encourage her children.

After all, when you tell a child she can do things, you are only showing your belief in her. It would be a poor mother who would not believe in her own child!—Mrs. Nestor Noel.

Another phase of this subject will be taken up in our next issue. Be sure to read "Curing awkwardness," by Ethel G. Peterson.

Sunbaths for Babies—a Model That Shows How to Give Them

The gospel of plenty of sunshine for everybody, especially for children and most especially for babies, is being preached widely, and the Federal Children's Bureau has built a model which shows at a glance how sunbaths can be given to babies for the prevention and cure of rickets. This model will be loaned for use at child-welfare conference exhibits on application to the United States Children's Bureau, Washington, District of Columbia.

years. But how can we insure continuity and peace? New disputes in industry will inevitably arise; some means of solving them must therefore be found and inaugurated at once. Parliament is not, in my opinion, the place for the settlement of industrial disputes. The issues involved are always too technical for general discussion, and the necessary adjustments can not be made as the result of speeches on the floor of the House. Nor does it appear probable that Committees and Commissions can do more than let loose a flood of talk on the land. We have had too much talk already, too much nonsense about "rights" and too little realization of the duties which employers and employed alike owe to the general public. While the coal owners and miners have been muddling, and the Government shilly-shallying between intervention and inactivity, the economic life of the nation has been coming to a standstill with a rapidly increasing momentum. Almost any remedy for this state of affairs would be better than none at all. But, as a matter of fact, there is, so it seems to me, a practical solution, and one not at all difficult to carry out, of our industrial difficulties; and one, moreover, that is in conformity with our national characteristics. I refer to the formation of a National Industrial Council, elected by the nation, whose duty it would be to foresee and avert these national disputes as far as possible, and to adjust them amicably, or at all events fairly, when they have arisen.

I do not seek to minimize the difficulties in the way of the formation of such a body or bodies, of elected arbiters, but if I were younger I would set my hand to the task in the belief that I could do nothing of greater service to my country.

As long ago as 1894 I was concerned with the summoning of a body calling itself a "Preliminary Industrial Conference," consisting of twenty-one employer members and twenty-one labor members, who met in March of that year at the Royal Statistical Society in London to discuss ways and means to promote peace and prosperity in industry. I said then: "About two and a half years ago we voluntarily reduced our hours of labor from fifty-four to fifty-one, and we hope shortly to make a forty-eight hours' week. . . . I care not so much whether it pays in the ordinary sense of the term, but I do care if it enables my firm to feel at the end of the working year that we have endeavored to do what is right and just and that mere money-making has not been the end and aim of our existence." The fifty-one hour week was profitable to the firm, as a matter of fact. When we introduced the forty-eight hour week that paid also. Other employers in Sheffield told me that I was on the road to ruin with my "Socialistic tendencies"; the results, on the contrary, were simply that we got more work done and the value of our shares increased.

But there is still much suspicion to be combated in the ranks of both capital and labor. When Hadfields, years ago, decided to pay all the insurance benefits of its workers, I remembered that quite a big deputation of men came to see me to learn what we wanted to get out of them for the concession. We wanted nothing but the good will of the workers. Putting the matter on the lowest terms, this good will has a cash value: I should say every man, in works such as ours, can save the firm considerable sums by intelligent cooperation. But, of course, really, the amount of wealth (for all concerned) that a spirit of faith, optimism, and contentment can produce is incalculable. There is no limit to the good about us, or to what the spirit of man may achieve. I have no hesitation in saying that I firmly believe if ten per cent were added to wages all around, England would not suffer, but itself become more prosperous. Naturally, however, the increase would depend on good management, good work, and, more important than all, the good will of the workman himself. That I also firmly believe would be forthcoming if a voluntary addition was made. Naturally, however, this must be one universally adopted; such a change could not be done piecemeal. The trade unions with their powerful federations would have to lend a willing and helpful hand, which I believe would bring about a willing response on behalf of the workers, that is, by their abandonment of what has really become a painful and vicious condition in this country, one which can be termed nothing else than the "strike habit," also by the abandonment on the part of the employer of the equally vicious habit of the "lock-out."

Among the extremists on the Labor side there is not even a vague shadow of the former principles of trade unionism. That is unfortunate, but I believe it to be only a transition stage to the point to which the best minds in the Labor movement arrived long ago (as did wise employers) that cooperation is essential to prosperity.

When something goes wrong with any body of men, the man at the top is nearly always to blame. Some formula, some determinant there always is in every industrial situation, if only management is clever enough to find it. And as in all disputes a "settlement" must come some time, if the industry is not to be ruined, it is obvious that the sooner it comes the better. The acid test of common sense is the first precipitant of prosperity. We can not afford many Pyrrhic victories such as the mine owners have won. In a sense, indeed, it has been a real victory of common sense over ignoble and idiotic theories of communism. Communism and confidence can not live side by side in industrial England. But now that the former has been decisively defeated and I hope extirpated from England (I hate to see the red flag of ruin flaunted in public places, for an emblem means much, and our Union Jack stands for all that has made and will make us a happy people) we must get back to work in a spirit of serenity and strength.

Now is the moment for capital and labor (terms which, of course, are mere labels) to unite in a non-political regional system of adjudicative bodies to whose objects—increased and continuous production—the best minds amongst Socialists, Liberals, Conservatives would readily assent. Cooperation demands organization; there must be a vehicle of expression, specialized and scientific, to state, formulate, consider, and adjust those inevitable divergencies which will arise between the givers of capital, the givers of labor, and the consuming public, which includes the two former classes. In the last resort it is the public that must decide; it is intolerable that England should be starved and crippled as the result of faction between forces which every sensible man admits are interdependent and necessary factors of production.

To bring capital and labor together, with the public as final arbiter in any dispute, is the object of the National Industrial Council which I would see inaugurated by the nation in the manner suggested in this article.

Strikes and lock-outs settle nothing. They are merely a slow form of annihilation (or exhaustion) which should be punishable by law. A conciliatory body coming under the term The National Industrial Council, consisting of a number of employers and employed—and, in my opinion, also representatives of all classes, including that exceedingly important body known as the professional class—duly elected by the nation, and independent of political bias, should be able to reach a settlement in industrial quarrels or misunderstandings, without stoppage of work, and with no hardship on the employed and no damage to the employers. Force and bullying always fail; we in this country who believe in justice and in the value of compromise will surely see that the quiet work of a competent tribunal, such as the writer has suggested, rather than fratricidal strife, must mark out the path of prosperity along which the nation should advance.—Robert A. Hadfield, in The Spectator, December 25, 1926.

If we take the world as a whole and base our conclusions upon fact instead of upon proclaimed theories, we shall find that the morals of young people are better at the present time than they have ever been before.—Thomas A. Edison.

A BOOK REVIEW

The Future of the Churches

Historic and Economic Facts, by Roger W. Babson

In recent years, the gloomy prophecies of the fate of civilization have turned the attention of scholars with increasing interest to the study of the decay of nations. Many theories have been put forward, religious, political, biological, economic, and social. None of these, singly, offers a satisfactory explanation; however, it is quite generally agreed that religion is preeminently that which gives fixity and stability to institutions, and Mr. Babson claims that this religion must be so socialized that service to humanity will be the highest aim of all individuals.

This author states that history shows clearly that churches have prospered when they have given a motive for man to be religious, and bases his theory on the principle of "reward and punishment"; that "all natural actions of man are for the purpose of either avoiding pain or gaining happiness." Any institution has succeeded or fallen as it has or has not utilized this fundamental law of human nature.

Christ did not ignore this law, but sought to teach true happiness and avoidance of pain. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden." Why? "And I will give you rest." "Take my yoke upon you." Why? "For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." Also a punishment of "everlasting death" and a reward of "real life" were given as motives for their conduct.

A study of any of the revivals which have taken place will show every one of them to have been based on this same teaching of reward and punishment: the Israelites sought to do right to avoid being annihilated; Luther liberated the people from spending their earnings for indulgences and gave them a new motive—they could be "saved by faith"; then came the era of "hell fire and brimstone," under Calvin and Knox. The church prospered rapidly until it either outgrew or became calloused to these motives.

In this age the church is not occupying its place in the world's work. It just exists—social clubs for certain respectable families. Why? It offers no motive. The reward and punishment doctrine has been dropped, and there is no substitute. The world stands on the verge of a great revival nevertheless, and we are optimistic as to the outcome and are hoping that before long the churches will break forth with some new message like this: "that the survival of this Republic depends upon the immediate teaching, in the homes and schools, of what is really worth while, and that we must all have the Spirit of Christ in our buying and selling, borrowing and loaning, employing and serving; that is, in all we do, say, and think." Unless we do, the clock of civilization will be set back—again holding up the principle of reward and punishment.

Because of the inconsistent attitude which the churches now take toward economic questions, they have reached a low ebb. Their history has been a series of ups and downs, and corresponds very closely to the great swings in financial, commercial, and social development. When the churches have interested themselves in the equalization of opportunity, they have prospered; but when they have not been so interested, they have declined. Mr. Babson prophesies that the next great revival will be along distinctly economic lines, especially relating to the acquiring, use, and bequeathing of personal property, and he believes that the revived churches, or some new churches springing up, will take hold of the present and great question—the further equalization of opportunity—so that, as far as possible, all shall have an equal chance in starting the race of life.

The author summarizes the evolution of the church into five distinct periods; namely: serfdom has been abolished; feudalism has been broken up; freedom of education and worship have been secured; the right of the people to rule

Australia's Reunion and Conference

Our mission conference and reunion are over, and there remain only a few of us on the grounds. We have had a truly wonderful time. There was a much better attendance than we had thought possible. We had seventy-four tents and two autos used as sleeping quarters, with two hundred thirty-four campers. I suppose we had at least another two hundred visitors who passed a day or more with us.

Heavy rains made things a bit uncomfortable for several days, but there was no complaining; the cheery camp spirit prevailed in rain as well as sunshine. There was a social cloud or two, but adjustments were speedily made and harmony restored. The spirit of the reunion was too good for that kind of thing to live long.

We had with us of the missionary force: Elders J. H. N. Jones, A. C. Barmore, H. I. Velt, H. Peisker, W. J. Vaughan, A. L. Loving, and S. W. Ballard, and these all preached more than once, with the exception of the latter, who was too busy with temporal duties to help much in that way. Bishop Lewis was with us, too, but he did not appear at many meetings on account of the commissary responsibilities.

The spiritual meetings were of a high order, the young people, especially, taking part in a manner that was truly inspiring. We also had young people's programs almost every day, and all of the speeches were of a very high order, revealing the fact that our young people do not come to Tiona for the recreational and social features alone.

We suffer a little from the arrangement of departmental details. Will try to separate the departmental work from the educational work next time. The young people have previously been left out of the scheme of things, the departmental hour being taken by adults who lectured on various educational topics. This time the young people had most of the meetings, and though this was generally acceptable, one of the committee made things a little unpleasant by talking to others and not to us about it, until finally we learned of it and made the adjustment referred to.

The minutes of the conference will be sent by the mission secretary. The conference was a very loyal one, and I inclose resolutions passed in connection with the message of the Presidency. Besides this, the spiritual authorities of the church were sustained. There was some discussion on this motion, and all the speeches were good to listen to—all declared themselves for the church policies, from the missionaries to the pioneers among the local men. It did me good to listen to my father, a veteran of eighty-two declaring that has been established; the last, of which we are on the brink, is our economic life. To bring this about, among some of the essentials mentioned are:

"... the day is coming when a requirement of church membership will demand that each member turn in a list of all his property, the sources of his income together with his expenditures. Such a movement should cement the members together with the loyalty and brotherly interest impossible in any other way."

"... therefore, perhaps the only way that employers in general and labor in general can come together is for each to put its cards on the table and let them be seen by the other."

Back to the theory that Mr. Babson advocates: "The theory underlying the golden rule is sound, but the idea that men should do right 'for right's sake' is unsound. The doctrine of overcoming evil with good has a scientific basis and should be taught; but the churches should frankly state that the only reason for using this method of treatment is because it is more effective."

the church and its policies were the same when he united with it as now.

I was also sustained as missionary in charge, or rather a vote of confidence in me in that position was passed. In view of the contention re supreme directional control, I wished the people to feel that though the position of missionary in charge is not elective, they had the chance of sustaining the one appointed or of refusing to do so. They indorsed my appointment when it was first made, and while it continues I wish them to have such an opportunity.

Zionic Wanderings

Our superannuation did not lessen our desires in and love for the missionary work, as our soul often thrills with a desire to be in the front ranks. But lapse of years has taken from us the physical ability for the more arduous tasks of missionary life. In returning to Zion it was not with the thought of laying the armor down. I clasped the hand of our Hollander missionary recently and heartily commended his purpose to return to his native land and continue his labors for the salvation of precious souls.

Since coming to Zion my companion and I have spent two winters in Oklahoma, at El Reno and vicinity, where we found a precious little flock with which we labored in unity and peace. We found there such good helpers as Brothers H. K. Rowland, W. A. Connell, Louis Dalton, J. F. Gentry, G. C. Lewis, W. A. Millner, H. V. Piatt, W. M. True, and many other good brothers and sisters. We still love the little flock.

By invitation we visited the congregation at Mount Washington, between Independence and Kansas City, where we met a very devoted people under the care of an efficient young shepherd, Elder Bishop. We enjoyed the spirit of good fellowship. The evening of the 13th inst. by invitation we met with the Spring Branch Church, who now meet in their new basement. We were happily surprised to see the nice appointments and stability of their place of meeting, a commodious basement room with necessary accessories. We enjoyed speaking to the attentive congregation under the care of Elder Snively, with the efficient help of Brother Louis Dalton as deacon, who has lately bought a home in that vicinity.

On Sunday night we spoke a short time after the large Liberty Street congregation had viewed some scenes from Palestine in the days of our Savior, which tended to solemnize and center the thoughts on Christ and his great mission. It seemed to be a profitable service. The pictures are being shown in the different churches in Zion. We find here a goodly spirit of sociability.

Our labors extend into Kansas City at times. We enjoyed meetings at Argentine Church, Bennington Heights, and Fourth Church, where there is good fellowship of the Saints. Yes, as the poet has it,

"The friends that most cheer me
On life's rugged road,
Are the friends of my Master,
The children of God."

The work is true, but the enemy is aroused. Nevertheless God has determined his cause shall triumph by the hands of those who are faithful to the covenant. He has purposed, and his purposes can not fail.

As for me and my faithful companion, we desire and purpose remaining with the good ship Zion, that was launched for the last time in 1830, when the Lord began his work, to culminate in the preparation of a people to meet the Bridegroom at his coming. We are here in Zion ready to respond to calls to the extent of our ability.

February 22.—Our last letter we closed at a time when Brother J. A. Gunsolley, a true father in Israel, was bringing to us each evening a clear understanding of the gospel which Christ manifested while here in the flesh. His talks on the individual excellence, physical, intellectual, and spiritual, were such that each of those having the privilege of hearing should see the necessity of making the Word flesh. He showed us clearly the different glories, celestial, terrestrial, and telestial, having an outline on a blackboard of celestial with its obedience to law, testimony of Jesus, Holy Spirit of promise, the church of the First Born, in presence of God and Christ, with Christ when he comes, first resurrection and celestial bodies. (Doctrine and Covenants 76: 5.) Terrestrial, with those that died without law, and converted in prison. Honorable men of earth, presence of Son not fullness of Father, not valiant in testimony, first resurrection. (Doctrine and Covenants 76: 6.) Telestial, those who received not gospel nor testimony, deny not Holy Spirit. Thrust down to hell, last resurrection, ministered to by terrestrials and by angels, heirs of salvation, glory surpasses understanding, of Paul, Apollos, Cephas, Christ, Moses, Elias, Esaias, Isaiah, and Enoch. Liars, sorcerers, adulterers, etc., all shall bow the knee and confess that Jesus is the Christ, to the glory of the Father. They are judged according to works. He gave us a plain and simple understanding of the Lord's supper (Doctrine and Covenants 26) its significance, the need of preparation and its importance, for Christ has said without it we have not life.

The subject, "The next step," with its text in Hebrews 6: 1-3, included these thoughts: We have only partial knowledge; knowledge must proceed from where we are; we must understand where we want to go, learn all steps and take each in turn, having a definite goal in mind, not, "I obeyed the gospel thirty years ago," but did I obey it today? Our task is to lay a foundation of faith toward God, of repentance not only of ceasing to do evil, but learning to do well, being baptized by one in authority, having hands laid on for the reception of the Holy Ghost, believing in the resurrection and eternal judgment. In doing these we are going forward, building upon the foundation already laid, building a superstructure, making our annual statement, paying the tenth of our increase, our surplus if any, making our offering if we so desire, then on toward the goal, Zion and perfection. Our brother showed us clearly the difference between the menu of the Lord's table and what the world has to offer us.

He left us February 3 for Minneapolis. May God bless him and all of the faithful ministry in their work, that all of his people will be moving forward to Zion and perfection, having his Spirit for their guide.

On February 6 we held our sacramental service, with P. G. Schnuckle, pastor, in charge, and Elder Samuel Case assisting. Though attendance was small, a desire on the part of those present to give service was stressed. The pastor spoke in the evening.

The following Sunday Elder Case spoke in the evening, reading Matthew 7. Brother W. C. Stauty spoke in the morning on the theme, "The gospel of love," with John 15: 1-17 as scripture reading, his text being verses 9 and 10: "As the Father hath loved me; so have I loved you: continue ye in my love. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide his love," used in connection with 1 John 3: 1-6, 1 John 4: 6-21, and John 14: 20-22: "At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you. He hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him. Judas saith unto him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?" Answered in following verses 23-31 inclusive.

The Christmas program committee gave a party at the church February 15 to the children who took part in the Christmas program. They played games, lunch was served, and a good time was enjoyed by all, each one taking home a present.

The young people on Valentine Day met at the home of Brother and Sister Samuel Case and had an enjoyable time.

February 25, 26, and 27 the district conference will convene at Duluth with an elaborate program beginning with a social gathering and program Friday evening, the 25th. On Saturday the business session will be at 2.30 p. m., also two lectures, one at 10.15 a. m. by Elder Robert Gunlock, missionary, "The responsibility of the priesthood to the members," and one at 11 a. m. by Elder Lester Whiting, of Clitherrall, Minnesota, "The responsibility of the members to the priesthood," also preaching at eight in the evening by Elder George W. Day, of Bemidji, member of the district presidency, and a prayer service at 10 a. m. to begin the day aright. At 3 p. m. will be round table talks, "Religious education," by Carroll Olson, of Saint Paul, and "Recreation and Expression" by Wesley Elvin, Minneapolis.

Sunday will open with prayer and sacramental service at 8.30 a. m. Sunday school 9.45; preaching 11, by Elder Ray Whiting, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, district president; preaching at 2.30, Elder Carroll Olson, of Saint Paul; preaching at 8 p. m., Elder J. A. Gunsolley, of Lamoni, Iowa. A twenty-minute song service will precede each service.

February 20 Brother Robert Zuelsdorf was the speaker, reading John 14. The discourse was well rendered and one which if heeded will lead Zionward. In the evening Pastor Schnuckle spoke from Colossians 3:1-18. Should we not that are risen with Christ, seek those things which are above and not the things of the world? set our affection on things above, not on things on the earth?

We are striving to reach that unity that will draw from the storehouse of our heavenly Father, more of his divine love, that the life of Christ may radiate from us daily, so that we can more fully prepare for a place in Zion, and on the right hand side of the Father be joint heirs with Christ to the throne of Grace, and that we may enjoy a fuller portion of the endowment which is promised to the obedient. Each department is forging ahead, trying to do its share of the task before us. We look forward to the time when we can have an ingathering of precious souls that will instill in the heart of each Saint more of the missionary spirit. We are looking forward to the conference, and forward to 1930, and the full redemption of Zion in God's own due time. Our hearts ascend to the Giver of all for his divine guidance.

Minneapolis, Minnesota

The last month has been filled with a considerable number of social events of various kinds, as well as several interesting features in the regular services. On Friday, February 4, a meeting of the Alpha Nu Omega Society was held at the home of President Leslie DeLapp. Eight new young people were initiated into the society in a ceremony that was very impressive and interesting.

A valentine party and box social was held in the church basement on the 14th. It was well attended and quite a success. Brother Harvey O'Hara officiated as auctioneer and sold off the ladies' baskets in a very capable manner. The proceeds amounted to fifty dollars. This social was given under the auspices of the Department of Women, of which Sister Lundeen is head.

Washington's Birthday was celebrated by an indoor tournament in the church basement put on by the Alpha Nu's. A large body of young people were present. The entire group was divided into four teams, who competed in baseball, football, horseshoe, tenpins, and shooting-gallery contests. The team that won the most of its games was awarded a prize. A very enjoyable time was had by all, and credit should be given to those who planned the program of events.

A party in honor of Cora Leverson was given by the Temple Builders last Monday night. Cora is moving to Lamoni the last of the month, and the young people desire to express their regret at saying good-by to the Leverson family. A general farewell party for the Leversons is being held at the church on the night of the 24th.

The Department of Recreation and Expression had a very interesting program last Sunday night. Mr. Thompson, who is a professional diver, appeared with his diving suit and explained many interesting things about his work. The audience was allowed to ask questions and was surprised to learn that the helmet weighed one hundred pounds; that his shoes weighed eighteen pounds each and cost thirty-eight dollars per pair; that his whole outfit weighed about two hundred and fifty pounds and cost over eleven hundred dollars; that it took two men pumping steadily to keep him supplied with air that the supply of air in his helmet would last five minutes if anything happened to the hose connections or air pump, and that he had been as deep as seventy feet under water and over five hours at a time.

Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley has been in Minneapolis two or three weeks, and has spent the time with Brother Whiting in visiting among the Saints and others interested in the church. He has preached several sermons and given several blessings.

Preparations are being made for the district conference, which is to be held at Duluth February 26 and 27, and a number of Saints are planning to attend.

San Antonio, Texas

February 21.—There is noticeable improvement in the San Antonio Branch activities. Attendance is increasing, and the spirit of unity is felt more forcefully among the members. The writer felt glad to return and be permitted once more to mingle and work with those we have learned to love. We have been absent several months and find some changes in the executive department of the branch.

Brother R. E. Miller was chosen to succeed Brother T. J. Jett, jr., as pastor of the branch. The latter had served long and well and felt that he needed a rest. He was released at his request. We feel glad that Brother Jett is still with us and will help in every way he can, for we know what a kind leader he has been in the past and the wonderful tact he used while leading the flock. May the Lord bless him in all his undertakings for good is our earnest prayer. The Saints are glad to have such an efficient man as Brother R. E. Miller to succeed him, and we feel confident that with the cooperation of the Saints all will be well.

Our district conference which convened on February 12 and 13 was well attended by San Antonio members, also several members from the Rio Grande Valley, who traveled about three hundred miles by auto. There was one sister from the Medina Valley. Brother and Sister Yingling, of Independence, Missouri, were also with us. The latter gave a splendid talk Sunday morning at the close of the Sunday school. It was enjoyed by all present. The Sunday school was in charge of district Sunday school officers.

Brother Glauk Kuykendall, of Detroit, Michigan, was with us, also his mother. Missionary H. E. Winegar was the speaker at all the preaching services. The business session was held Saturday at 2.30 p. m., President R. E. Miller in charge. The following members were elected delegates to the next General Conference: H. E. Winegar, D. T. Williams, George Engle, R. S. Allnutt, Pauline Allnutt. It was decided that the next reunion be held at Bandera, Texas. The time was not definitely decided upon. However, the reunion committee stated that it would be some time in August.

Our sacramental and prayer service, on the first Sunday was well attended, a splendid spirit being felt throughout the meeting. Our weekly night prayer services have a better attendance than formerly. Religio is revived again, and it seems that the Saints are awake to a sense of duty.

Our church has lately been repaired with new paint and paper, new windows, etc., which add greatly to the appearance of the building.

Last Sunday was a full day, during which a marked degree of the Spirit continued to be felt. A theme of service was carried through all the services of the day. It began with the adult class in Sunday school, of which Sister Flossie Waite is teacher. Each member of this class seemed anxious to contribute his portion of good thoughts toward the lesson which seemed to blend harmoniously together.

Our good Sister Yingling spoke for us at the eleven o'clock hour with that convincing way she has, dovetailing the beautiful ideas she set forth with the lesson theme of our class and showing the importance of sacrifice and service on the part of Latter Day Saints in order that they might be able to establish the Zion condition. The Spirit was felt in power, and each individual seemed to feel that she brought a message to us. We certainly appreciate having this sister in our midst.

Elder H. E. Winegar occupied at the evening hour, using his stereopticon views of the life of our Savior, and explaining each picture as it came upon the screen. The service was very effective and seemed to blend in with the previous services of the day. The house was filled to seating capacity. Brother Winegar leaves tomorrow for General Conference. He expects to stop in Oklahoma and visit members where he labored before coming to Texas. Brother Winegar has done a splendid work for our district and gained many friends, and we hope the appointing powers will see fit to return him to this field for the coming year.

There has been a good deal of sickness among the Saints this winter. Brother W. H. Mannering recently had an accident. The car he was driving ran into a street car, smashing the front of the car. Brother Mannering was fortunate in not having any bones broken. His right shoulder was bruised so that he was not able to use that arm much. His ear was severely cut but is healed now.

Topeka, Kansas

February 22.—On January 28 the morning preaching service was by all the members of the priesthood on the theme, "Suggestions for the good of the branch the coming year." Clayton Crooker spoke on "Judging"; F. O. Kelley, "The body and its members"; J. G. Juergens, "The relative value of music and song in the worship of God"; C. H. Smith, "Christ the master builder"; B. F. Deller, "Unity in the local," in which he used the boards in the platform as an illustration. Each board fits in its own groove, though there are chunks and chips knocked off of some of them. We are not perfect as the boards, but must seek to remove the chunks and chips of imperfections from our daily life. C. C. Graham, the pastor, gave a summary of the suggestive points and urged their application in the work of the branch.

Sacramental service of February 6 was in charge of C. H. Smith. A number of the Saints were in attendance at the district conference at Atchison, but a good spiritual service is reported. The sermon in the evening was by C. C. Graham, "Can I do as I please?" There was food for thought for both member and nonmember, and all were made to consider the truth of the fact that we all reap the harvest of seed sown. By request he repeated this sermon at the evening hour, February 13. The services on this date were in charge of the Booster Class of the Sunday school, and were of a nature appropriately commemorating the natal anniversary of Lincoln. The morning speaker was F. O. Kelley. L. F. Eden, of Central Kansas City Church, was in charge. Solos by Sister C. C. Graham and J. G. Juergens were enjoyed.

A valentine social was held at the home of Sister Helen Hays on February 14 under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression. The attendance was beyond expectation, including almost as many nonmembers as members. We are glad to note that some have been in attendance at the services since then.

February 20 services were in charge of the Senior Senior class of the Sunday school. The service in the morning consisted of numbers contributed by members of the class, assisted by members of other classes wherein they were in need. This creates a spirit of helpfulness and cooperation among the various classes. A special number was by Sister Emma Hoppe, of the Booster Class, Brother Harrington's "Vision of a prayer meeting."

The service in the evening was a patriotic one commemorating the birth of Washington. The sermon was by A. P. Crooker. At its close a chorus of male voices sang these words to the tune of "America":

"God bless our splendid men,
While they the right defend,
God bless our men.
Make them all brave and true,
Faith in thyself renew,
Teach them the best to do—
God bless our men.

"God keep our valiant men
From all the stain of sin,
God keep our men.
When Satan would allure,
When tempted, keep them pure;
Be their protection sure,
God keep our men.

"God lead our glorious men
Against the hosts of sin,
God lead our men.
Do thou the victory send,
And with the battle's end,
Triumphant peace extend—
God lead our men."

The audience then joined in singing "America" as the closing number, and this proved very effective.

Visiting Saints in our worship last month are C. J. Moran, of First Chicago Branch; Sister W. A. Everson and husband, and Brother and Sister L. F. Eden, of Central Kansas City Branch.

In our next letter we will tell something of the activities of Apostle D. T. Williams, as his whereabouts are Topeka, he having just arrived this week.

Southern Wisconsin

The work in Southern Wisconsin is still progressing nicely, and I am sure the faith of the Saints is being strengthened, and as they learn more of the general program of the church they are pledging their support to it.

Recently I held a series of classes in Milwaukee and Madison with excellent results. In Milwaukee I had fine interest, and in spite of the great distances some had to come across the city, our attendance was all that we could expect, and several either filed their inventories or made arrangements to file them as soon as they could go over their figures and also get a report on their tithes paid. One brother who had previously filed his inventory was going to file his annual statement. One of the outstanding efforts being made there is the preparation for efficient teachers, through a class on "How to teach religion," by Brother Norman Field. An effort is also being made to raise a fund for a church building, which is greatly needed. We wish them success and hope to be able to assist them in their endeavor.

At Madison our classes were well attended also, and many of the young people responded faithfully, as well as some of the older Saints, while others would have done so had I been able to visit more of them. Brother Woodstock is the president of the branch and also local solicitor, and during the last year has received many hundred dollars tithing, as well as some other offerings for the church.

Brother Holloway recently put on a series of illustrated lectures there which was very successful, and he is now just closing a two-week series at Beloit.

At this writing the writer is in Bell Center preparatory to a continuation of our effort throughout the district, and Brother Holloway follows on Wednesday.

Graceland Chats

To our many friends of Graceland, in behalf of the young ladies who occupied Patroness Hall, we wish to express our appreciation of the kindness extended to us during the fire and following days and weeks.

As everyone knows, "Patroness" was burned on Sunday morning, January 2, at 11 o'clock. Rescue parties from Lamoni came as soon as possible, inviting all students to dinner and providing quarters for the night or longer if necessary.

The Women's Department of the church came in the afternoon with clothing, bedding, and all articles needed for immediate use. The Mite Society, Booster Ladies, other societies and friends also came with necessary articles, so that no one suffered. Fortunately the day was warm; in fact, the good weather continued until adjustments were made and everybody was comfortable. The next week our needs were broadcast from K L D S. Very soon boxes of clothing, bedding and money came by mail from as far away as California and Washington.

A business meeting of our president, business manager, and some members of the faculty was held at 1.30 p. m., Sunday, in which it was decided to ask the boys occupying Marietta to move to Herald Hall and the Country Club (isolation cottage), which they very cheerfully did early Monday morning. The girls completed moving in before dark.

Having saved our dining room tables and some supplies from the kitchen, through the heroic efforts of George and his kitchen force we were able to have lunch in Zimmermann Hall basement, Monday noon, and began serving meals Tuesday morning.

The spirit of Graceland prevailed. The tasks were never too hard. Everybody helped prepare for the comfort of those made homeless by the fire. It was the bravest group I ever saw. One could see traces of recent tears, but a bright smile was forthcoming most of the time.

Don't you think such young people deserve a new fire-proof dormitory? Fifteen rahs for our many friends! Here's hoping we shall prove worthy of your friendship.

"MOTHER GATES."

Graceland Appreciates Guests

The students of Graceland College are always pleased to have their parents and friends come to visit them. Among the recent visitors were Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Royer, and Mildred and Luella Topham, of Shenandoah, and Mrs. Hammer, from Creston, Iowa.

We extend a cordial invitation to all the parents and friends of the students of Graceland College. If you want to make your sons and daughters happy, come to see them at Graceland.

Chapel Services

The special features of our chapel services this week have been speeches by Graceland students. Last Monday Ammon Wildermuth spoke on Abraham Lincoln, and George Lewis discussed George Washington's life. On Friday Laurene Laughlin discussed the Chinese situation, and Lloyd Stevens, Nicaragua. These speeches were delivered in an interesting manner and were enjoyed by the students and faculty.

Last Friday in chapel, Mr. Morris Mortimore took us, by means of slides, to South America with him, reviewing some most beautiful and amusing scenes seen by him during his excursion to South America.

First we became acquainted with the inhabitants. Some were dark brown, while some were very light. Their peculiar customs and ways interested us for a while, but the wonderful mountains, streams, trees, and birds all blending so beautifully together, made us glad we had had the opportunity to enjoy such a journey. This stationary trip was thoroughly enjoyed by the entire student body.

A Cappella Goes to Creston

The A Cappella Chorus gave its first out-of-town concert last night (Thursday) at Creston, Iowa, in the large high school auditorium of that town. There was a fair attendance of people who enthusiastically received the numbers given by the chorus. Mrs. Esther Roberts accompanied the chorus as reader, giving further enjoyment to the audience with her humorous readings. The Saints of Creston royally entertained the visiting singers, both at their homes and at a reception. At the reception, the members of the A Cappella were given an opportunity to meet several of the people of Creston who were interested in music.

The usual A Cappella weather accompanied the chorus. Rain, wind, and snow made traveling difficult, but the journey in closed cars was enjoyable and rapid.

GEORGE LEWIS.

Our Registrar

Each morning, tall men and short men, fat men and thin men, come hustling across the old beanfield to classes. On wintry days the turned-up collars and low-pulled caps make it rather difficult to recognize them; but there's one about whose identity there is never a bit of doubt. A glance at the long, lean figure taking prodigious steps across the beanfield, and any Graceland would exclaim: "Oh, why, that's Mr. Bergman!"

One can't miss meeting Mr. Bergman. His desk is the first station in the long registration line, and as you watch him swiftly evaluate your high school credits, you decide that being registrar must be a very life-sized job.

But in a day or so you discover that this busy registrar has other duties. One of them is teaching eighty or ninety Americans the mysteries of French or German. No easy task! But Mr. Bergman does it with a thoroughness which makes you feel that he must know all one man could of romance languages. He does not seem to think so, though, for he still studies in the summer. The Phi Beta Kappa key on his watch chain gives us an inkling as to the type of student he is.

Have you pictured now a bookwormish sort of person? That is not Mr. Bergman. He is a quiet man, and rather shy, but has as genial a smile as one may ever hope to see. That smile and his sponsorship of various organizations prove that he is not only an excellent teacher, scholar, and registrar, but the sort of a friend whom you will remember long after every verb and conjugation has faded from your memory.

LAURENE LAUGHLIN.

Will Return to Independence

While sitting here reading the HERALD, I feel that I would like to write a few lines to our beloved and much-perused paper. It does me good to read of the activities going on in Zion, for I left there December 21, 1926, to spend the winter here with my daughter, and I can appreciate the privileges I and others have there. I hope to be back this spring or summer.

I enjoy the church privileges I have here and the association of Saints. There are only a few of God's people here, but they are active in trying to move Zionward. The pastor here is a faithful, conscientious minister. He is going to attend the conference the last of this week to be held at Los Angeles. We hope he will bring back great good to the flock.

The young here are active, and they keep up the activities of the Sunday school and Religio. A class in the Sunday school gave a valentine party last night. This was an evening of lively enjoyment and innocent fun, in which I shared. I am hoping for the progress of Zion.

MARY E. POOLER.

PHOENIX, ARIZONA, February 15.

Woodbine, Iowa

February 18.—A number of the priesthood of our branch attended the ministerial conference held in Council Bluffs January 29 and 30. This was conducted by Bishop Albert Carmichael and Apostle J. F. Garver. The brethren came home brimful of good things they had learned regarding the onward march of the Reorganized Church. We are thankful for the self-sacrificing men who have been called to labor in the vineyard of the Lord in these the closing scenes of the last dispensation, and for the loyalty of their companions who are making fully as great a sacrifice. Had all the Saints the willingness of heart and mind that is manifest by the missionaries and their families, the time would be remarkably short until the ushering in of the millennial reign.

Our last sacramental service was exceptionally good. The Spirit spoke peace, and with expressions of thankfulness the Saints rejoiced under its influence. By way of admonitions, Elder Fred A. Fry spoke to the young people, telling them that responsibilities in church work would come, and stressing the need of preparation on their part, designating one young brother as leader of the young people, and asking the prayers of the Saints in the brother's behalf in performing the duties pertaining to that leadership.

The Temple Builders are doing good work under the direction of Sister Fannie Deal, and at their last meeting, regardless of the ground being covered with several inches of snow, hiked out to the country home of Brother and Sister Dick Young and partook of their hospitality, reporting a very enjoyable evening.

The sudden deaths that have taken place in the community recently bespeak the fulfillment of scripture: "All flesh is as grass, and the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away." One of our prominent business men, W. D. Howorth, left his work about five o'clock, not feeling well, and at 2.30 the same night passed to the beyond. This man began his business career as a clerk in the Kibler Brothers Department Store when a young man. He was esteemed an honest upright man in all his dealings. Only a few hours after Mr. Howorth's death, the driver of a school truck in a neighboring town lost his life when his machine was struck by a passing train. He had taken the children to the end of the school route and was returning to his home when the accident happened. He leaves his wife and four small children to mourn.

Bradner, Ohio

February 18.—The district meeting, held February 13 at this place for the transacting of some business and election of General Conference delegates, was not so well attended, but the few who did meet seemed to enjoy themselves. The regular services convened in the morning with Sunday school, followed by preaching. The necessary business of the district was done in the afternoon session, which was called at two o'clock, after which Elder Grice gave a thirty minute talk, followed by a round table. Questions pertaining to tithing and inventories were answered by Brother Grice who has lately given us much instruction along these lines.

The priesthood has organized and is making regular visits to the homes of the Saints. We are certain that good will result from these efforts.

The Sunday school is progressing nicely. Attendance is on the increase, and interest in the contest is proving a valuable asset; each officer and teacher is alive to his responsibilities, and as a general thing is on the job promptly.

The Department of Women is planning another bazaar. We set aside one meeting of each month for this special work, and at the end of the year we hope to have a fine collection of articles.

A valentine party and oyster supper was held February

14 at the farm home of Brother and Sister Henry Smith. The Saints gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Siye and went from there in machines to the Smith home. The Smiths have a large house, and it is well they have, for old and young were able to enjoy themselves and were not crowded. Mush and milk were served those who did not like oysters. Much amusement occurred when Brother and Sister Smith got their camera and lined us up in the room for a flash light. We expect to see some funny sights when the pictures are finished. We are going to Smith's again sometime.

A parcel post sale will be held at the Ulrich home the 22d. This is given by the Department of Women.

Baptisms in Oklahoma

I want to write just a few lines in regard to the work of the Lord at Mounds and Jenks, Oklahoma. Brother E. T. Fitzwater, of Kearney, Nebraska, closed a three-week meeting at Mounds and a week of meetings at Jenks, baptizing three candidates at the former and two at the latter. Brother Fitzwater is a very spiritual man, and a bright future lies before him. We certainly hope he will return to these two towns this summer or next fall.

Brother S. W. Simmons, a wonderful man of God, has also been with us preaching a few sermons which were very instructive to the Saints.

We have no church home in Mounds, but have arranged for the Presbyterian Church building, as their services have been concluded. We hope to organize Sunday school in the near future, and ask the prayers of the Saints that we may prosper in God's work and help in the redemption of Zion.

MOUNDS, OKLAHOMA, February 28.

R. G. PECK.

Oelwein, Iowa

We feel that the editors have a singularly appropriate quotation for their reporters to follow—Philippians 4:8—and we feel that it is just what is needed in our work, for we desire to be builders, and "whatsoever things are of good report" should be given our careful attention, and we earnestly desire "if there be any praise, [to] think [and write] on these things."

Our little branch is still trying to do the will of God at all times, and our earnest and prayerful leader is at the helm. He is steadily going onward and upward and is an inspiration to young and old.

Weekly prayer meetings grow more interesting, and the Spirit which Christ sent to comfort his disciples seems to draw near. We derive much good from our gathering together. Although few in number, the promise of the Lord is verified, "Where two or three are gathered together, I will be in their midst." Last meeting the subject of "Others" came up. We all think if we are to establish Zion, we must eliminate self. Looking after and thinking only of others can do this, for only by putting self in the background and bringing others forward can we make the Lord's work progress.

Our woman's auxiliary is progressing nicely under the able management of Sister Blanche McFarlane, who is an example of the song, "Earnest workers for the Master." She is untiring in her efforts to help all to come up higher. She read a very interesting article on preparing food, and the proper kinds to use, at our last meeting. Our study class met Thursday with the sixth lesson in story-telling as the subject, and we feel that we are getting to know a good deal about telling a really good story. There are many of the parables of Jesus given, and what could be better than they are, couched in simple and concise language, with no unnecessary words?

The Temple Builders of Waterloo put on a very nice program two weeks ago. It included a playlet, "The missionary band," songs, recitations, and a beautiful whistling solo. They are a talented group of young women, and when they gave the program one was struck by the diversity of talents displayed. Sister Jackson, who helped put on the play, is a woman of education and refinement, and a most efficient worker—one who understands human nature and tries to bring out the latent talents of the young people.

Two weeks ago Sunday Elder Kress preached the morning sermon. It was given in a most forceful manner and carried conviction with every word. His quotations were apt; some were from the pen of our beloved member of the First Presidency and writer, Elbert A. Smith. We always know that there is "a feast of reason and a flow of soul" when Brother Smith's writings are read or quoted. We think every home should possess a copy of Square Blocks.

We feel that our traveling missionary, Elder Kress, has made an earnest effort here, but this place is hard to reach spiritually. The good seed seems to be sown in stony ground, but the Lord has promised the increase if we are faithful. Our leader has had some excellent and prophetic dreams.

Two weeks ago Sunday Elder A. J. Fisher, from Waterloo, was the speaker for the evening meeting. He gave us an excellent sermon on bad habits and our seeking to lay up riches for ourselves instead of treasures in heaven. His vivid illustrations particularly appealed to all the thinking people. We think his sermon was a direct appeal to Saints to follow more closely "The old, old path," and eschew all bad habits and cease to think of self and our own advancement. Our people were most pleased with the sermon and feel that Brother Fisher is earnest and sincere in presenting the gospel, and is surely on the Lord's side.

Last Sunday Elder H. Hinds, of Waterloo, filled the pulpit Sunday morning, and our president, George McFarlane, preached in Waterloo. We think we never heard the subject, "Upon this rock will I build my church," presented in a more concise and clear manner, and the numerous quotations given regarding officers and lively stones in the foundation of the church were most excellent. To most of us, it was a revelation on this subject, and Brother Hinds was master of his subject. He would seemingly tie himself up hand and foot and then by a few skillfully chosen verses would make things clear and plain. The Lord is ever with his people to own and to bless. We are always glad of an opportunity to tell of all the work that is being done. We each believe in the following selected lines:

"If any little love of mine
 May make a life the sweeter,
 If any little care of mine
 May make a friend the fleeter,
 If any lift of mine may ease
 The burden of another,
 God give me love and care and strength
 To help my toiling brother."

Moorhead, Iowa

February 14.—Our average attendance at the Sunday services has been very good considering the weather and road conditions.

Brother Joseph Lane has been among us during the past week, and in company with our pastor, Brother T. O. Strand, has been visiting scattered members as well as those centrally located. On Friday they visited Brother and Sister Ira Wilson, at Ute, both of whom are sorely afflicted but are reported somewhat improved at present.

A splendid social service was held at our sacramental meeting February 6. The time was practically all occupied, and the Spirit was present to a marked degree. Those present felt it good to be in the house of the Lord.

Sister Mary Lewis, of Lamoni, is visiting Moorhead relatives at present, after spending a week with her brother, Ira Wilson, and wife at Ute.

Brother David Outhouse attended the funeral of his sister-in-law, Sister Arema Thompson, of Lamoni.

Several of our church men, assisted by others met a couple of days during the last month and cut and sawed wood for Sister Hattye Crandall and mother. Mr. Park Moorhead kindly donated the use of his buzz saw and furnished a man to assist, which was much appreciated.

Brother and Sister Chester Davis and son Lyle, Brother Ellis Davis, sr., and Sisters Alice and Aleta Jensen attended part of the quarterly conference at Logan.

Several Moorhead Saints attended the funeral of Sister John Shearer of Pisgah. Sister Shearer was the mother of Sister Inez Outhouse of our branch. She leaves many relatives and friends to mourn her departure, not only at Pisgah, but at Moorhead as well.

Sister Jennings Coffman and baby, LaJune, of Omaha, recently spent a week at the home of Sister Coffman's parents, Brother and Sister Fred Pellissier.

First Chicago Branch

With the beginning of the new year, our branch seems to have taken on fresh interest in the progress of the work and is manifesting a determination to go forward.

Brother C. A. Edstrom was sustained in his office as branch president. Brother Frank Almond was elected Sunday school superintendent, and already the school is showing improvement. We are fortunate in having as a superintendent one who has such a broad vision of the possibilities of the church school, and we are sure that under his inspiring leadership our school will develop rapidly.

Two patrols of Boy Scouts have been organized and are doing good work under the efficient leadership of Brother Clarence Newman, scoutmaster. Several of the scouts are from families not associated with the church, so we feel that real possibility for missionary effort is open here. The scouts meet each Friday night at the church and have their hikes on Saturdays. Already the parents can note the good that is being accomplished.

The Department of Women is working, and the young women have again been organized with a view to extending their activities.

Wednesday evening, February 23, a dinner and entertainment took the place of the usual midweek prayer service. The occasion was known as First Chicago's Opportunity, and advantage of the get-together spirit was taken to catalog the resources of the branch. Those present were asked to sign pledge cards classifying themselves as "boosters" or "knockers," "helpers" or "hinderers," and so forth, and to indicate where they could best occupy in pushing forward the program of the branch and the church. The response was very gratifying. The program of the branch is "Forward to 1930," and the first objective is "Forward to April 6."

The Department of Recreation and Expression has sponsored a number of parties during the past few months—the latest being a valentine party, at which a jolly good time was had. The spirit of friendliness and good will manifested, as well as wholesome fun, is good to see.

Brother Sidney Barrows, our musical director, is a member of the Chicago Mendelssohn Club, one of the older and more substantial of Chicago's musical organizations, now in its twenty-third season. Those attending the recent concerts, or recitals, have been convinced that it is, indeed, a wonderful organization and have experienced a reasonable pride in the reflection that our brother is thus connected with such an agency for the fostering of an appreciation of good music.

Sickness has been manifest to a considerable extent during the past few weeks, but the Lord has been kind and generous with his blessings through administration.

Those attending the recent ministerial conference at Aurora report having had a spiritual feast and are convinced that the foundations were laid for better, more constructive, work throughout the district.

Central Chicago Branch

Central Chicago Branch is moving along nicely. The prayer meetings grow better and better.

The afternoon spent by the Department of Women at the home of Sister Bass in a social way was an enjoyable one, twenty-three being present. The Sunday school was discussed, and the Sunday school officers suggested to the Department of Women that they organize a class for any course of study they chose to take up.

This week, also, the regular meeting was well attended and the day pleasantly and profitably spent.

The Sunday school is planning an institute for the evening of Tuesday, March 8. An exhibit of handwork will be made, topics of interest to the Sunday school will be discussed, a program will be rendered, and lunch served. We hope for a large attendance.

Our new superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression is providing various forms of attractions. This week it is a debate on the question, "Resolved, That anticipation is greater than realization."

On the last Sunday in January, four were baptized by Brothers Philemon Pement and Joseph McGuire, of Hammond. Brother Pement preached a splendid sermon in the forenoon, and Brother Westner gave us a real treat in the evening.

The sacramental service was good. The infant son of Brother Albert Turner, Albert Junior, was blessed.

The choir continues to function, having visited Hammond this last month as a whole and in parts, that it might assist in the work elsewhere, as well as at home.

We are happy to state that our missionary, Brother David Dowker, who has been ill, is again with us.

Chicago is a large field. Its needs are endless, and we are striving to push forward and fulfill our mission in supplying at least a small part of these needs.

Kirtland Conference at Barberton

The annual conference of the Kirtland District convened at Barberton, Ohio, at 11 a. m., on the 26th day of February. Appointed to preside, were Apostle Paul M. Hanson, Bishop Charles Fry, and District President T. G. Neville.

From the standpoint of numbers, branch and ministerial representation was all to be desired. Among the ministry present, in addition to those already mentioned, were Evangelists A. R. Manchester and A. E. Stone. High Priest James E. Bishop, and W. C. Neville, seventy.

Saturday's exercises were given entirely to church and departmental work, and the following officers were chosen by the body: District president, T. G. Neville, with his counselors, Elders James Carlisle and F. T. Haynes; Department of Women superintendent, Sister T. G. Neville; Sunday school superintendent and assistant, Brother William Odom and J. H. Tabut; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Brother J. Dildine. The passing of a resolution asking the First Presidency to appoint a high priest under General Conference appointment, in accordance with the resolution, automatically releases the present incumbents in the event of such a General Conference appointee entering the district.

Saturday evening Elder James E. Bishop, president of the Southern Ohio District, delivered a philosophical discourse characteristic of "Jim," to a large and appreciative audience. Following the service, the young people, actuated by social impulses and under their own impromptu guidance and program, spent a very pleasant time at the home of Brother and Sister Harpley until a late hour.

The building was inadequate for the large Sunday school on Sunday morning, and the district superintendents found difficulty in conducting exercises. At 10.45 Elder Hanson delivered an inspirational sermon which was based upon the experience on the Mount of Transfiguration. "Divine experience," said the speaker, "is essential to individual conversion and development and to the successful carrying on of the church work."

At 2.30 the presidency presided over a prayer and testimony meeting which was well attended. Preceding this meeting, at the hour of two, William Backhouse Waters, eighty-four years of age, a member of the G. A. R., of Uhrichsville, Ohio, was baptized by William Patterson. Brother Waters is a fine old gentleman, very active for his years. We welcome him into the fold.

Bishop Fry occupied the pulpit in the evening and delivered a sermon which always bespeaks for him close study and an intense desire for the application of the law of God.

The Barberton Saints are to be commended for the accommodation of their many visitors and the methodical way in which the catering was handled. The conference sessions were brightened by choir and solo numbers under the direction of Myron Kelsey, of Akron. The conference adjourned at the call of the district presidency.

About the Alabama Conference

BAY MINETTE, ALABAMA, February 22.—We, the Saints of Bay Minette, feel it is our duty to tell everyone, especially the Saints, of the wonderful blessings that we enjoyed during the district conference held here the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth of this month.

We were very fortunate to have had with us Evangelist T. C. Kelley, from Independence, Missouri, and Elder J. W. A. Bailey, also from Independence. Elder Miller, Elder Hancock, and our district president, Brother T. M. Carr, were also with us. Each branch of the Mobile District was represented at the conference.

The first sermon was preached by Brother T. C. Kelley on Friday night. His text was, "Christ came that we might have life and have it more abundantly," and Saints and friends, if you had been with us to have heard the wonderful message he gave us, you would have felt, as did we, like rejoicing. It was as though God had spoken to us in prophecy.

The business session of conference convened at ten o'clock Saturday morning. Brother T. M. Carr was elected chairman. All the members seemed to be interested and took part in the business matters as they have not done here for several years. The reports of the ministers and the secretary of the conference, Sister Edna Cochran, were read at this meeting, and we adjourned at twelve and returned at two. Practically all of the elections took place in this meeting: At this time Brother Kelley had to leave us to go to a brother in Florida who was very ill. We very much disliked parting with him then, for we had expected him to stay for all the meetings. A hushed silence pervaded the house as he shook hands with each and bade us good-by. At the door he turned again and said to us, "I leave my peace with you." For at least two or three minutes there was absolute silence, and everyone seemed to be trying to keep tears from filling his eyes. We did not see Brother Kelley again during the conference, but we prayed God to heal the man to whom he went to minister. This business meeting closed at four.

Saturday night Brother J. W. A. Bailey was our speaker. Services began at half past seven. I'm sure that what Brother Bailey said did much good. The members of this branch were sadly in need of some one like him to tell them their weaknesses and how to build up again.

At half past nine we went to our homes, returning the next morning at half past eight with our lunches prepared for the dinner on the ground. We returned through the rain, for it had been raining since early morning. Instead of having a sacramental service, as we had planned, we had a prayer service in which many took part. Even though it did rain unceasingly all day, we had a larger crowd than has been had for many a Sunday.

From ten to eleven Sunday school was the order. From eleven to twelve there was preaching by Brother Carr.

After twelve we spread our dinner on benches in the what a good time we had eating together, all friendly and church. No one who has not had the experience can know equal. After dinner we gathered about the piano and sang for about an hour and a half. Seeing Brother Carr, our chorister, enthused, we were filled with enthusiasm and sang on and on in joyful happiness.

A round table discussion followed this activity. Many difficult questions were asked, and all or nearly all were enlightened by the answers given by Brothers Carr and Bailey.

As there was to be service Sunday night, some of us stayed on, while some went home and came back. We had a good crowd in the evening in spite of the steady downpour of rain. Brother Bailey was our speaker. Most of our visitors went home Sunday evening or Monday morning.

Monday night there was another good service by Brother Bailey, and then we bade him and Brother Carr good-by.

It happened that these two brothers were checked on their way through the country to Pensacola, Florida, by an overflowing river. They had to come back to Bay Minette. We were not glad their purpose was thus thwarted, but we were rejoiced to have Brother Bailey with us again Wednesday night to deliver to us another of his good messages.

Instead of holding our usual prayer meeting, we listened to Brother Bailey. All of his talks were good, but the last one surpassed them all. By this we must believe that it is as he said, the longer he preached at a place the better his sermons got. We hope to have him with us again soon. We also hope that all of the Saints who were here will visit us again, for we enjoyed their association.

I believe I can truthfully say that by having conference here this time we have been greatly benefited, and the Saints are on the road to improvement. We are trying to work together.

REPORTER OF BAY MINETTE CHURCH.

Central Oklahoma Conference

The Central Oklahoma district conference which was summated at Tulsa, Oklahoma, February 13 was said to be a very successful conference and young people's convention. The large crowds were edified in every department of the work, and Tulsa's Department of Women gave a practical demonstration of cooperation in providing food and lodging to visiting Saints, of which there were not a few. Brothers D. T. Williams, of the Twelve, and D. S. Sorden and J. W. Davis, missionaries, spoke at all times to a full house. Apostle Williams concluded the meetings with the subject, "Play up and play the game." In his illustrations he drew many beautiful parallels. Playing the game without knowledge of the rules is disastrous, yet we must practice the game in order that we may have wisdom to properly apply the rules. Is this really so in the church work? It is true that a perfect law perfectly obeyed will produce a perfect creature, and there is provision made for a perfect understanding of the law. The first step after regeneration is a full compliance with the law of temporalities, for if we are not faithful over the few, how can we be made ruler over the many? A warming process is going on as indicated by an increased tithing report. May this process continue until the whole church becomes aglow with it, for a lukewarm condition is undesirable. We as a district are doing well but not what we could do. Are you, dear reader, included in the we? If not, why not? The Lord demands his first, and then we have a promise, and not until then. Did you ever notice that when we do not give the Lord his, the other fellow gets it? Let us go about playing the game according to the rule.

The district officers succeeded themselves with the exception of Sunday school superintendent, Sister A. McGeorge, of Enid, who was succeeded by Sister H. K. Rowland, of Piedmont. Brother Rex Rowland, of Piedmont, was associated with James A. Thomas and F. Ed. Dillon in the district presidency.

There were two ordinations to the Aaronic priesthood, Bernie Bayliss, of Terilton, to the office of priest, and Frederick A. Bowers, of Tulsa, to the office of deacon. Apostle

D. T. Williams declared an emergency at Holdenville, placing Brother R. L. Herring in charge of the work there under the district officers.

We want to thank everyone for his contribution so cheerfully given to the forwarding of the Lord's work.

F. ED. DILLON, District President.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLAHOMA, February 23.

London, Ontario

February 22.—Perhaps a few words from Ontario might be of interest to the Saints elsewhere, and especially to former residents of this region. On the whole, I think the church in the larger branches is progressing, but many of the smaller branches are having a struggle for existence. I am of the opinion that the Saints in these branches should be advised and assisted by official enactments to move to Zion, her stakes, or to the regions round about. Or if their anti-American sentiments will not admit of that, then they might move into or around the larger centers here and greatly benefit both themselves and the others.

Many of the larger branches are advancing in the Zion program and could be of great worth to the starving, struggling Saints in the smaller branches which are disregarded by other churches. In many instances their children are forming acquaintances and alliances with those not of the church, to their detriment. Many of these smaller branches have not grown for years, and there is no reason for them to longer hold the fort against great odds. The price is too great for the small amount of advancement. Missionary efforts in such places have had little backing and small attendance. Could a half dozen of such branches be assembled at a large center, one missionary effort would serve them all, and nonmembers would be more deeply impressed. To begin with, the gathering might just as well apply in districts as elsewhere, and the sooner be prepared to gather to Zion.

The Saints here are much as elsewhere, but they have a much better country than most places. It is the recreational ground of the eastern half of the United States. This winter has been very mild. The summers are cool and refreshing. Sparkling streams abound everywhere, and lake shores or river banks hem in the country on every side. In summer the excellent woods are alive with thousands of tourists' cars.

This summer there will be three reunions on the shores of the three great lakes which more than half surround the province. Chief of these will be at Port Elgin on the east shore of Lake Huron, some hundred and seventy-five miles north and a little east of Detroit, situated on the scenic blue water highway traversing the east shore. One of the finest bathing beaches found anywhere is at Port Elgin. The Saints throughout Ontario and the Eastern States, indeed as far away as Omaha and Kansas City, could well attend here during the hot season, enjoy the beach and the cool, refreshing atmosphere and help to make the reunion a great success. Why run away to Los Angeles and Florida when you can be among your own people and a beach that is morally sound? The people of the town are not prejudiced, and you will be respected. You will not be held up in prices, either. The date has not been set, but will likely be early in August, during the vacation season in the States. Watch for the date, or write D. B. Perkins, at Warton, Ontario.

My health is fairly good. I improved very fast after reaching this wonderful country.

Our young people's convention at London, February 19 and 20, was quite a success, though not largely attended on account of a storm the first of the winter, but soon over. A fine spirit prevailed at all the meetings. Brother Tomlinson, jr., has the interest of both young and old at heart. London has a nice lot of workers, both old and young. I appreciate the choir. One or two voices seemed to touch my soul more than any I ever heard. They seemed to be as greatly blessed in song as were the other workers.

I am to commence a series of meetings at Hamilton today.

Independence

Stone Church

A very pleasing number, "Wayside chapel," was rendered by the Stone Church Orchestra Sunday morning, following the study period, the selection being directed by Brother Leon Snow. The orchestra has recruited some new members and is doing a fine and faithful work. Old members and new are to be commended for the cooperation they are manifesting and service they are rendering. Bishop R. T. Cooper is the director of this musical body.

The March sacramental service of the Stone Church congregation opened with the singing of that grand old hymn, "My faith looks up to thee," and an audience of souls, eager to share in the blessings of this service, listened to the invocation by Elder O. C. White. In his opening remarks Brother J. M. Baker impressed upon the minds of his hearers the necessity of each one's sensing his responsibilities. As Saints of the Most High, we must carry God with us wherever we go at whatever we do. If we all say, "I want Christ to go with me," and mean it, we will be found busy in the works of righteousness, and around the table of the Lord we will mingle in love, equality, and brotherly kindness. During the partaking of the emblems of the Lord's supper, the Holy Spirit was present and manifested itself in peace and purity of thought. Patriarch H. O. Smith was asked to lead in prayer for those who had requested remembrance, that they might be blessed and healed of their sufferings. Pastor C. Ed. Miller than talked concerning the good work of the sisters of the church, their efforts in the Sunday school Department, and fine assistance in their own organization, the Department of Women. Sister Blanche Edwards, head of this department, who arrived last week in Independence after a stay of eight months in her home country, England, was called to the platform. Sister Edwards expressed her happiness in getting back after an enjoyable and busy stay in England. While there she visited nearly all of the branches of the church in that country, and stated it was the love and call of service which brought her back. Vividly describing the financial and social handicaps which exist there, she told her listeners that they, as Americans, can not realize their good fortune and advantages. She brought regards from her home people, and related the interesting fact that there is a difference of time amounting to seven hours between our time and theirs. Her home branch holds sacramental service in the evening in order to have it at the same time as we hold ours. "My faith looks up to thee," is a universal song; all branches, those in England, Scotland, Ireland, and many other places, sing it. Truly, blessed be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love. The meeting was closed with the song, "Guide us, O thou great Jehovah," which fitted in most appropriately with the spirit of the hour:

"God has given us his Spirit,
For we have obeyed his word;
And it whispers, Saints, O hear it,
Own him as your sovereign Lord.
Holy Spirit!
Unto us thy help afford."

The junior department at the Campus gladly made room Sunday for their visitors, the Second Church juniors, who had asked in February if they might come for the regular sacramental service following the lesson period. The guests included about twenty-five boys and girls and their teachers. A good time was enjoyed, there being six prayers and forty-three testimonies and four songs offered in the short time given for social service. It was, as Brother Thiel, one of the presiding officers, said, a wonderful sight to see almost two hundred children between the ages of nine and thirteen assembled in one room at a prayer and testimony meeting—a meeting the like of which was not had anywhere else at that time.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At half past eight the Bible study hour was conducted by the K L D S radio pastor, Ralph W. Farrell. Music for this service was by a junior chorus of the Watson Memorial Church, under the direction of Mrs. C. A. Shoop; a vocal trio by junior boys; a reading by Robert Karr. The children's story was given by Mr. McIllion.

The usual eleven o'clock studio service of the first Sunday of the month consisted of music furnished by a quartet composed of Madge Nesbitt, Elizabeth Okerlind, Fred Friend, and Frank A. Russell; Mary Okerlind, accompanist; Fred Good, baritone; Orrin Fry, violinist. The sermonet was by Brother U. W. Greene.

K L D S radio church at three in the afternoon was conducted by the Reverend C. H. Koehler, pastor of Saint Luke's Evangelical Church. Music was by the Saint Luke choir; baritone solo, Elmer Ehmman; Miss Lizzie Whitthar, pianist.

Music for vesper service was by a quartet composed of Ina Hattey, Edna Daniel, Alma Kearns, and Wingfield Lewis. Special numbers were by Florence Koehler Campbell, pianist; solo by Wingfield Lewis; flute numbers by Mrs. Vena Etzenhouser Tipton, of Tulsa, Oklahoma. Sermonet by Elder U. W. Greene.

The quarter after nine Latter Day Saint studio service broadcast the Stone Church Choir, numbers by Robert Miller, organist; sermonet by Bishop J. A. Koehler.

Evening Services

An attractive program was presented by members of the Stone Church Religio following the class period. There was a violin solo by Marvin Turnbull, accompanied by Ralph Smith, a clever reading by little Miss Lucille Watkins, and a most unique piano duet by Brothers Frank White and Martin Mills. Next Sunday evening at the program period the elimination contest for local male quartets will be held to determine the quartet to represent this district in the inter-district contests to be held this spring.

Preceding the sermon of the evening, "Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning" was sung by the congregation, prayer was offered by Brother Francis Holm, an organ offertory was played by Robert Miller, and "Sing to the Lord," an anthem, was rendered by the choir; "As musing I sat all alone" was sung by the congregation.

Bishop M. H. Siegfried was the speaker and began his brief sermon by relating one incident of personal experience in his relationship with the church. He spoke of Luke 7 as "a day of history filled with wonderful things," and advised the congregation to read it. "It does not make much difference what a man tries to do, there are plenty of people who will criticize and minimize his effort," he asserted. "If you wait for the expression of the confidence of public life, you will never get anything done." "When you find the thing you want to do, there is no time to do it but now, and if you wait for the approval of men and women, you will probably never get your work done," he advised the youth. Relating the miracle of healing performed by Jesus, found in John 5: 1-8, he compared it with the attitude taken by some Saints toward Zion of today. We must not hold back and wait for some one else to do the work, but follow the instructions of the speaker, "the way to get things done is to do them." As examples of what can be done by people who believe in the things that they set out to do, he named Jesus and Joan of Arc.

In the fourth reel of the series of motion pictures entitled "A pilgrimage to Palestine," were seen the Golden Gate in Jerusalem through which Christ made his triumphal entry—it has been walled up by the Mohammedans lest another Messiah come through it—the Mount of Olives, Garden of Gethsemane, and Church of the Virgin's Tomb, the house of Caiaphas, the high priest, and court where Peter thrice denied his Lord, were among the places of historic interest shown.

Interesting Personals

As yet the Presidency, Presiding Bishopric, Quorum of Twelve, seventies, and other conference appointees are scattered abroad on the face of the land, ministering to the spiritual needs of a people groping in darkness. With the gift of the precious angel message, they are obeying the command of the Lord: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." All year have they been feeding the sheep, but soon many of them will come to the center place to seek renewed spiritual strength and determination.

Of the First Presidency, Brother Frederick M. Smith, who has recently been in Colorado, came back to Omaha March 2. He is expected home soon. President Elbert A. Smith is still in California, and Brother Floyd M. McDowell will return from a short trip this week. Bishop Albert Carmichael has been away almost a month, and is at present in Salt Lake City. Bishop J. A. Becker will return this week-end from Dekalb, Illinois, and Brother M. H. Siegfried is in Independence.

Apostles Ellis and Budd have just arrived in the center place, the former from his field in Canada, and the latter from work in Pennsylvania, Virginia, and other Eastern States. F. Henry Edwards also is in Independence. Brothers Gillen and McConley are busy putting the finishing touches on their accomplishments in California. Flint, Michigan, is the favored location for a series of meetings being held at present by Apostle E. J. Gleazer. Apostles Curtis, Garver, Hanson, and Williams, all are at work in their respective fields, and arranging their program in order that they may be present at the joint council session to convene in Independence March 14.

Liberty Street

At the sacramental service Brother Walter Curtis made the opening remarks. He chiefly spoke of the life and crucifixion of Christ. This service was indeed an inspiration to all those who attended. The junior choir under the direction of Sister Anthony Robinson gave the program at the Religio hour. The efforts put forth by these young people show that they are improving the talents God has given them.

At the eight o'clock hour, Brother U. W. Greene gave an illustrated lecture, "From Nazareth to Calvary." Some of the most interesting and familiar scenes were the city of Nazareth, Sea of Galilee, the ancient city of Jericho, and the Jordan River. There were slides which showed the miracles and preaching of Christ until the time of his betrayal and death. The speaker brought to our minds many happenings of Bible times in these historical cities.

Brother Greene is planning to come again very soon to give us another of these lectures.

The Silver Wing Chapter of Temple Builders is starting its fourth year of work. The girls met at the home of their leader last Friday evening to discuss plans for the year.

Walnut Park

The eight o'clock prayer meeting was presided over by Elder Lurett Whiting and Clyde Bullard. Just before closing, little eight-year-old Argene Helen, daughter of Sister Sophia Wenholz, was baptized, in the presence of the congregation, by the pastor. She was confirmed at the eleven o'clock service by B. J. Scott and R. D. Weaver.

Preceding the opening of the sacramental meeting, Sanford Downs directed congregational singing, and a ladies' quartet also sang. This procedure tends to maintain good order and promote a worshipful spirit. Elder F. R. Schafer gave an appropriate exhortation at the opening, and the service was a blessing to those attending, with the gifts of the gospel present to instruct, warn, and encourage.

The evening Religio musical program included a clarinet solo by a visiting artist and musical instructor, Alfred Walters.

The young people's choir, of nearly thirty voices, Sanford Downs director, sang for the half past seven preaching service very acceptably. The sermon was by Apostle F. H. Edwards. He discoursed on the desirability and necessity of a proper balance in the lives of individuals, in the church, and in any successful venture. He gave Jesus as an example of one who balanced his life in a way to make every virtue count. Our weakness and strength must balance. Some men are so strong and determined that it leads to a dominance that hinders them. Courage must be tempered with caution, confidence built up on acquired skill, and discovery always coupled with revelation. Our church can not succeed with only the power and enthusiasm of youth. Neither with only the knowledge and wisdom of the older ones, who have gone through life's experiences but perhaps lack the zeal and strength for new undertakings. But both young and old working together may carry on the work successfully.

The Department of Women of Group 28 meet at the home of Mrs. Lurett Whiting every Thursday at two o'clock. They are studying Scientific Eating and Health Building, a book by Doctor G. W. Remsburg of this city. They find the book harmonizes with the Word of Wisdom, and that its teachings concerning proper food and food combinations, fresh air, exercise, etc., are practical and beneficial. They extend an invitation to others to meet with them for study.

Enoch Hill

Wednesday night, March 2, marked the reviving of the young people's prayer meeting in spirit and interest. Held at the home of Brother Delmar Johnson, in charge of Brothers John F. Sheehy, Joe Martin, and Harold Hattey, it was well attended by the youth of Enoch Hill District, there being almost fifty present. In the score of testimonies interspersed with songs and prayers, an overwhelming desire for service to the church and the world was expressed. Our young people are not only longing to be of service, but are availing themselves of every opportunity to prepare for efficient service. They are developing their latent talents which will one day no doubt be a power in the work of the center place, Zion.

Reverence of mind and peace of spirit marked the Sunday morning sacramental service. A goodly number was present, and the prayers and testimonies voiced were strengthening to all.

At seven o'clock Sunday evening Pastor W. J. Brewer was the speaker, selecting for his subject "The atonement of Christ." He freely quoted references from the Bible, particularly the New Testament, the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, giving not his own opinion, but the word of God concerning the perfect plan for man's salvation through the atonement of our Lord. Through the sacrificial life of Christ was God's personality and love manifest to man, and the way opened up whereby we may be saved. Brother Brewer urged his hearers to take down these references and read and reread them from God's word, that we may know the law and the truth and thereby be informed and free.

East Independence

Friday evening, March 4, the Temple Builders from Spring Branch Church gave a play entitled "Rosemary," in the church. It was enjoyed by all. These girls and their directors are to be congratulated upon the work accomplished. The proceeds are to be divided between the East Independence and Spring Branch building funds, we believe.

Gladys Elaine, the infant daughter of Brother Alma and Sister Gladys Friend, was blessed Sunday morning by Brothers Harry Friend and N. Carmichael.

A peaceful spirit hovered over the large crowd at the sacramental service.

Brother and Sister Ralph Inman and family have lately moved into our midst. They come from Second Church. Sister Inman is ready to be of service in the musical line. We welcome them.

Brother Frank Minton was the evening speaker, giving a good, helpful sermon.

Brother Joseph Stowell, who has been sick for a long time, is now at the Sanitarium. Sister William Stowell has been very sick, but is now improving. We will be glad to see our sick ones attending church services again.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni Branch

The service scheduled for last Sunday evening was directed by the Department of Music and the pastor. During the year those interested in music began creating an interest in the purchase of a grand piano with a view of starting a fund this year. The movement found expression in the branch business session of last January, when it was moved to place the matter of collecting money and purchasing the piano in the hands of the branch presidency. Under the leadership of President W. E. Prall and Mabel Carlile, the chorister, and with the cooperation of the several organizations and membership of the branch, a remarkable response was received, with the majority of the pledges in cash. Accordingly a committee investigated the qualities and terms of purchase of different pianos and contracted for a Mason & Hamlin seven-foot grand piano, to be shipped direct from the Boston factory. Through professional discounts and the good offices of a salesman of the church, the piano has been installed for somewhat less than $1,500, in contrast to the standard purchase price of $2,150. It meets a long-felt need in the Lamoni choral and orchestral circles and will give stimulation to these interests.

The program scheduled for last Sunday night as an installation service was as follows:

Piano Solo, "Rhapsodie," Dohnanyi, Rae Lysinger.

Hymn, "Burst ye emerald gates," Congregation.

Vocal solo, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace," McDermid, Gertrude White.

Vocal duet, "The Lord is my light," D. Buck, Mary Louise Lloyd and George Anway.

Piano solo, "Soirre de Vienne," Schubert-Liszt, Virginia Wary.

Anthem, "Before the heavens were spread abroad," Horatio Parker, Oratorio Society.

Sermonet, Apostle D. T. Williams.

The work of the departments of the Lamoni Branch is taking on new life since the first of the year. Plans are in process for the coordinating of the several activities of the branch into a unified program with definite objectives. A few weeks ago a group of representative workers met for discussion of the local problems, and it was decided to follow the recommendation of the presidency that a council of religious education act in the harmonizing and outlining of plans for the educational work of the branch. The first meeting, consisting of heads of the departments, was held last week and outlined a tentative program until July 1, covering special days, new projects, etc., Easter, Mothers' Day, Mother-Daughter Banquet, and the like. The council is still in its initial stage, but it promises to give unification, initiative, and vigor to the corps of workers.

Lucas Anniversary

On February 20 the Lucas Branch in the northern part of the stake celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the branch. For several months the congregation, under the pastorate of Elder W. B. Farley, had been looking toward this event, receiving stimulation in the anticipation. The history of the Lucas Branch is a repetition of the story of many a congregation that has been established in a mining town, that has declined with exhaustion or abandonment of the mines. So has it been with Lucas. During the prosperous days of the mining industry, the branch enjoyed palmy days and gave some valuable workers to the general church. In later years less favorable conditions have prevailed, but recently new vigor seems to have entered into the group work.

An endeavor was made to invite former Lucas residents as participants in the program. Then, too, there were delegations of visitors from nearby branches. The day opened with a prayer service and the Sunday school session. At eleven o'clock W. E. Prall, president of the stake, preached an inspiring home-coming sermon, reviewing some of the historical aspects of Lucas as they pointed helpfully to the problems and hopes of the Zion gathering. In the afternoon the program consisted of talks by the long-time workers and a song by Elder W. T. Shakespeare, of Lamoni, giving an historical sketch of the experiences of the branch, sung to the tune of "Admonition." In the evening Roy Cheville, of the stake presidency, delivered the closing sermon. Music was furnished by singers from Chariton and a male quartet from Lamoni. Noon and evening meals were served in a lodge hall near the church.

Missionary Activities

Last Sunday evening Elder Hubert Case closed a very successful series of meetings at Allendale, Missouri. This town at one time had a fairly thriving branch and has a rather good church building. To the nucleus of 38 members, 20 have been baptized during the recent series—a remarkable increase in percentage. A significant thing is that the new members are young people, ranging between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five years—with the exception of two children. Apparently Elder Case did some pastoral teaching, for thirteen inventories have been filed. This situation leaves an imperative need to provide pastoral supervision, which will have to be cared for from the office in Lamoni. Elder G. R. Wells will care for the appointment until the convening of General Conference.

During the past week Elder Case has been conducting missionary services at Oland. Elder W. E. Haden, home for a short time from his field in the Clinton District, has been preaching at Davis City.

Concert at Creston

On February 28 the Graceland A Cappella Chorus gave a concert in the auditorium of the Creston High School. The program was sponsored by the Creston Branch as a benefit for their building fund. In the afternoon the chorus appeared before the high school and junior college assembly and before the junior high school. After the concert of the evening, a reception was tendered the chorus by the music workers and officials of the Creston Branch. There were invited some of the more prominent musicians of Creston, among them Professor Haydn, who is president of the organization of music teachers of Iowa. Talks on a cappella singing and musical numbers, piano and vocal, were given by Creston and Lamoni people. Undoubtedly such an evening tends to get the work of the church before the prominent people of the town in a more favorable way. Much credit is due to Miss Thelma Lane, who is director of music in the grade schools.

Lees Summit, Missouri

The Department of Women of the Lees Summit Branch, under the leadership of Sister C. W. Childers, has been very active during the past year. They hold their regular all-day meetings the first and third Thursdays of each month at the homes of the sisters. The first Thursday is their business meeting and study day, while they spend the third Thursday sewing.

Sister Duncason is active as a friendly visitor. Many visits have been made to the homes of the sick. Clothing has also been made by this department for needy ones of the community. The members of this department have a true desire to advance along spiritual lines. Secondly, they desire to pay off the church debt. We have reduced it to $300, paying $184.12 the past year. The department paid $25 to the Graceland endowment fund. They also paid $15 for work done on the church floor, part of the insurance on the building, little chairs for the Sunday school cradle roll class, books for the church library, flowers for the sick, and many other things.

The department had a home-coming day last June and an ice cream social. To raise some money, the sisters held several bake sales and a bazaar, making $272.70 in the last year.

Our prayers are that God will help us do as much and more in the coming year as he has helped us to do in the past.

ELLA MARIE HAAS.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The dawning of a beautiful spring morning with the sun pouring out in all her glory and little blades of grass showing forth in their green carpet over mother earth while the buds of the trees are swelling preparatory to breaking forth into leaves, brought out an attendance of 281 at Sunday school with a collection of $12.68. The Sunday school is full of activity, and each class seems to be moving forward in its onward course endeavoring to reach a higher standard. The Sunday School Orchestra, under the direction of Sister J. L. Johnson, rendered a very beautiful number which was highly appreciated.

A number of cases of illness have been reported in the last few weeks, which has caused a slight decrease in the attendance of the various meetings. Sister Dora Blankenship, who underwent a major operation at the Sanitarium a few weeks ago, is progressing nicely and has been able to return to her home. However, her daughter, Amy Blankenship, is now confined at the Sanitarium, having been operated on for appendicitis, but is doing nicely. Also Sister Hazel Scott has been reported quite ill this past week. Hazel is very active in our Sunday school, playing the pipe organ, and is missed very much.

The Saints are looking eagerly forward to the return of the pastor and his wife, Brother and Sister J. A. Tanner, who have been in California in the interest of the church for the past month. They will probably return sometime during the next week or ten days.

The quarter to eight sermon was delivered by Elder Seth S. Sandy.

Considerable plans have been made for the Sunday school institute to be held next Sunday and Monday at Central Church. All Sunday school workers or those interested in Sunday school are urged to attend these meetings, at which General Superintendent Woodstock, Sister Eunice Winn Smith, Sister Blanche Edwards, and Apostle F. Henry Edwards will address the different departments of the Sunday school, and we are sure something beneficial to all will be derived. The first meeting will be at half past two Sunday afternoon and on Monday evening at half past seven.

Malvern Hill

The past week has been a busy one for all. Much visiting has been done by the pastor and others. The priesthood are busy, and a spirit of unity has been enjoyed.

We are certainly proud of our religious day school. We believe the people of the community appreciate our efforts; in fact, many of the parents of these children have expressly stated that they were thankful for our school. Sister Florine Hands, our superintendent, has received much deserved and well-earned praise of late from the supervisor, who has also complimented our school. We are also fortunate in having two splendid consecrated women who give us the entire day on Wednesday of each week in the interests of music. Sister Luella Wight and Sister Caroline White deserve much credit for the splendid way in which they have developed these young people in this line. It was an inspiration to hear the children sing upon this last Wednesday.

Sister Crinklaw, our chorister, is very busy preparing for the musicale to be given here March 11, to aid the Department of Women in raising their finances for the year. Everyone is invited to come, enjoy a splendid evening, and help us.

On Friday evening, February 25, the Department of Women realized a fine little profit from the health lecture and aluminum demonstration given in the basement of the church. Brother DeTray gave the lecture, and was assisted in the demonstration and serving by his sister, and Sisters Bootman, Lloyd, Post, and Loreen Lloyd. We are all sorry that our superintendent, Sister Sherman, was ill and could not be with us.

We had a good attendance at Sunday school. We were pleased to see a number of new faces. One class had doubled in size since the preceding Sunday.

Our pastor, F. V. Elliott, preached in the morning. He stated that he wished to follow up some of the thoughts expressed in Brother McDowell's sermon at Central and stressed particularly the idea that we were going "onward to 1930 and beyond." He showed that while the principles of the gospel remained the same, methods necessarily change.

In the afternoon of Sunday, February 27, a very enthusiastic meeting of Sunday school officers and teachers was held at the home of the pastor, F. V. Elliott. We are fortunate in having with our group Brother Ray Lloyd, the stake superintendent. He gave us a fine talk on methods of increasing attendance, and we decided to act upon some of these suggestions at once. A definite campaign was planned.

Brother J. W. Gunsolley gave an illustrated lecture in the evening, clearly showing the evil effects of tobacco, stimulants, etc., upon the human system. Many expressions of appreciation were heard.

Armourdale Church

On Sunday, February 20, another soul was born into the kingdom, by baptism.

On Sunday morning, the 13th, Brother Richard Herrick, from Grandview, addressed the Sunday school.

On the 18th, at 8 a. m., Sister Elizabeth J. McNeese, passed on to her reward. Paralysis was the affliction that caused her death. She had been a member of the church for thirty years. Sympathy is extended to the bereaved family by the local congregation. Elder W. I. Fligg preached the sermon. She leaves to mourn her departure a husband, two sons, and three daughters.

On the 27th, Pastor W. B. Richards was the forenoon speaker, and at the evening hour Elder L. W. Hays broke the bread of life.

Argentine Church

On the 27th Elder H. O. Smith was the speaker, his subject being "The unity of the faith," basing his remarks on Ephesians fourth chapter. He said that we agree on more things than we disagree on. Jesus Christ prayed, "Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." "That they [his disciples] may be one as we are one." A tribute to us is that we all preach the same thing.

At night Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell occupied the sacred desk, stating that it was a hard thing to disillusion one in regard to any previous teaching, or for us to be disillusioned. Of himself, he said that it was part of his ministry to disillusion some in regard to their prejudices as to their belief of the teaching of our church. Jesus had to disillusion his disciples as to his mission in the earth. He was not to conquer as a Caesar, Napoleon, or an Alexander but with love. He solved the world's mystery when he said, "I am the resurrection and the life," which was fulfilled in his resurrection and ascension.

Elder W. O. Hands on Friday evening, as part of the Religio program, gave a slide lecture on the progress of the Auditorium, which was very interesting.

Bennington Heights

It was our privilege to enjoy to a great extent that comforting influence of the divine Spirit in the sacramental meeting Sunday morning. There has been desired knowledge of the will of God concerning certain conditions given; and the members of the priesthood came fasting and praying. We were spoken to through prophecy.

Some of the faces which are usually present were missing. Brother William Fahey underwent a minor operation on his nose and throat last Thursday at the Sanitarium. He was brought home and is now feeling quite well but is not yet permitted to go out. Brother S. S. Spangler, assistant superintendent of the Sunday school, is now in California, where he has gone to seek employment. Sister Mary McCarrison, after spending a week with her mother, has returned home.

The Sunday school attendance was 146. Last Sunday was the 100th consecutive Sunday for Brother Orville Helm. There are now four persons who have attended a hundred or more Sundays without a miss. Besides Brother Helm, there are Dorothy Hastings 126, Sister S. D. Hastings 124, and Dorothy Ladd 112.

The girls of the primary department met last Saturday with Sister Mary Spangler and organized a Blue Bird Circle. Officers were elected, and they are now planning for the future.

Elder Joseph W. Stobaugh, of the Mount Washington Church, visited with us and assisted with the meetings.

Sioux City, Iowa

There has been a gradual increase in interest as well as attendance at all of our services. The last sacramental service was of a spiritual character, and the attendance of one hundred twenty-five was gratifying and encouraging.

On Sunday, February 20, our pastor, Brother G. Scott Daniel, conducted a junior church service, adapting it to the needs of the children. The object lesson was illustrated by using two glasses of water; a few drops of ink dropped into one glass showed how evil blackens our lives. The children enjoyed the service, and many of the older folks felt that the service was profitable to them.

The choir has been rehearsing each Wednesday evening after the prayer service, has been supplying special numbers occasionally, and is planning on some special music for Easter.

The Sunday school, under the direction of Superintendent J. E. Keck, is moving along nicely, with an increase in attendance, interest, and offerings.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, with Frederick Vandell in charge, is especially interesting because of the splendid programs given each Sunday evening. They are planning on having a recreational program once each month, on Friday evening.

Once again the Department of Women and Temple Builders have come to the assistance of the financial department, by helping to raise the money for a new carpet and a railing around the platform.

On February 11 the Riverside Group of the Department of Women gave a play at the church. The title of the play was "Sally Lunn." It was very interesting, entertaining, and had a very good moral. They will repeat the program at the Woodman's Hall March 4.

The Temple Builders made a pledge of twenty-five dollars on the carpet fund; and with the results from the "Hustler's Aprons" and the George Washington dinner served in the basement, they have more than reached their goal.

District President Joseph Lane was with us Sunday, February 27, and preached both morning and evening, bringing a message of hope which was encouraging to all. Elder C. J. Smith recently delivered a lecture on the new Auditorium, using the slides that have been made, showing the progress of the work up to the present.

The little five-week-old son of Sister Elva Pace has been critically ill, having undergone an operation at Saint Vincent's Hospital, but recently returned home, and his speedy recovery is hoped for.

The spirit of unity and good will exists among the Saints, and all are enthused with the slogan of "Forward in 1927."

Vinal Haven, Maine

February 6.—The Saints here had a good sacramental service today, and the Spirit of the Lord was present. Priest Eldridge Candage presided over the meeting, as Elder Archie Beggs was away laboring in the district. The Saints expressed their desires to fulfill all parts of the law and become fully acquainted with the church program, the stewardship plan.

It has been a successful winter here in church work, especially the Sabbath school, which is growing and developing, also the Department of Recreation and Expression. Many times at the Religio thirty-five or forty young boys and girls are present.

Our branch president, Archie Beggs, is an active worker. He keeps the good work progressing, and always has plans in mind which will be best for the development of the church work.

Many of the Saints of this local recently went to Stonington to meet Brother Frederick M. Smith, and when they returned they brought glad tidings to the rest of the Saints. They are still talking about him and his ideals for and knowledge of the affairs of the church.

Let us pray and work together for the good of all.

Central Nebraska Conference

One of the largest spring conferences of the Central Nebraska District in many years convened at Norfolk Friday and Saturday, at which time the following district officers were elected:

The presidency, Brethren F. S. Gatenby, Levi Gamet, and J. H. Butler, were sustained; Sister Frank Rost, secretary; Brother T. A. Beck, treasurer; Sister T. A. Beck, chorister; Brother A. D. Oehring, superintendent of Sunday school; Brother J. H. Butler, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression; Sister J. H. Butler, superintendent of the Department of Women. Sister M. A. Rutledge, Sister Pearl Allen, Sister T. A. Beck, Brother A. D. Oehring, and Sister A. D. Oehring were chosen delegates to General Conference.

Saturday evening a program was rendered under the direction of Sister T. A. Beck, district chorister, and Brother E. H. Wells. Apostle Clyde F. Ellis sang, "There's no love to me like the love of Jesus," in the language of the South Sea Islands. Brother Ellis had some pictures with him which were taken in the islands, and we were very much disappointed that we were unable to obtain a picture machine so we could see them and hear about them. He preached two wonderful sermons, and his presence among us was a source of strength and encouragement. He also met with the priesthood and gave them valuable instructions.

There was a young people's prayer service held at the home of Brother F. E. Cochran at 6.30 Sunday morning, and the good Spirit was enjoyed.

Brother T. A. Beck, of Norfolk, was ordained to the office of priest after the order of Aaron, under the hands of Brethren F. S. Gatenby and Levi Gamet at the Sunday afternoon prayer service. This service was well attended, and the interest manifested was remarkable. The spirit of joy and gladness was akin to pain, which caused all to be humbled and melted to tears.

The Saints of this district renewed their desire and determination to back the program of this church—God's program—God's church.

KLDS Radio Flashes

Beatrice, Nebraska.—I want you to know that I greatly appreciated your program on Tuesday morning, and especially the fine talk that was given. You certainly have some very faithful and good musicians broadcasting from your station on these early programs.—F. E. Lenhart.

Columbus, Kansas.—We enjoyed the missionaries' program very much last night. Every number was fine. Would like to add that we appreciate the service that K L D S is giving to the world. It seems there is inspiration in every number of every program.—Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Jones, Route 2.

Dalhart, Texas.—Your program, consisting of sacred songs, was very much enjoyed last night. We hear your programs very distinctly.—Doctor and Mrs. G. E. Eubank.

MISCELLANEOUS

Pastoral

To the Saints of the Kewanee District; Greeting: Our recent district conference at Rock Island passed off very harmoniously, with a splendid spirit of unity and cooperation. Action was had authorizing the holding of the next conference at Savanna, May 28 and 29, also the holding of a reunion at Galva, beginning on the Friday nearest August 15. At the May conference will occur the election of district officers, and the fixing of the district budget for the coming fiscal year.

The district is holding its own in numbers, finances, etc., and in the leading branches there is considerable constructive activity. Many are taking a deeper interest in the financial law, and are filing their inventories and arranging for the payment of tithes.

We hope to stress the missionary work throughout the district during this year, and to have the cooperation of the Saints in this connection. If there are isolated Saints in the district who would like meetings in their localities, or a visit from the district officers, we would be glad to hear from them and to cooperate with them in this connection.

All are urged to begin to plan now for the coming reunion. Our new address is 2406 Seventh Avenue, Moline. Since moving here we have had a telephone connected for the benefit of the local work and of the Saints throughout the district in case of sickness, death, and other reasons why they might wish to get in touch with the district president in case of emergency. Our telephone call is Moline 3852. If the Saints will make a note of this address and phone number, it may be helpful to them.

The church outlook is good. Our slogan is, "Forward to 1930 and beyond." Let us do our best to make this a successful year in church work.

E. R. DAVIS.

MOLINE, ILLINOIS.

Musical Institute

The musical institute of Gallands Grove District will be held at Dow City, Iowa, March 26 and 27. Chorister Arthur H. Mills, of Independence, Missouri, will have charge of the two days, lecturing, demonstrating, and leading the singing of the young people and congregational singing. We urge choristers and their respective pianists, choir members, orchestra players, and leaders in the various branches, Sunday schools, and Religios in the following places, Cherokee, Mallard, Coalville, Denison, Gallands Grove, Auburn, Deloit, and Dow City, to have as large a representation present as possible. Brother Mills is efficient in his work, and the results gained from these institutes are far-reaching; so we ask the cooperation of every branch officer in assisting the project, to the success and benefit of every branch and department in this district.

MRS. GUY R. JOHNSON, District Chorister.

Another Opportunity to Help

Who in Michigan but has heard of the Park of the Pines Reunion? Its ideal location and the splendid support which the Saints of the Northern and Western Michigan District have given to it have spread its fame as an ideal reunion spot throughout the church.

The Michigan young people's convention this year will be held at the Park of the Pines reunion grounds at the same time as the reunion. Combining these two interests will add strength to the program.

Having been appointed to take charge of the choral work for the convention, and after consultation with those chiefly interested, it has been suggested that the Michigan musicians put on the cantata "Daniel."

To do this successfully will require the cooperation of every singer in the State of Michigan. Every local choir leader is asked to give a portion of his time in rehearsals of this cantata. Those who are unable to attend the Park of the Pines reunion will be benefited by the training and practice in these rehearsals.

As it is, the time is all too short for us to make adequate preparation.

Those who are not associated in choirs in the branches may get a copy of the book and practice at home. Thus each one, by working hard and becoming perfectly familiar with the score, will make it easier to combine the parts in the big chorus at the convention.

Those desiring information about the cantata, the price of books, and where they can be purchased, may forward their inquiries, and a prompt reply is promised.

LOUISE EVANS.

Conference Minutes

FLORIDA.—District conference, February 19 and 20 was presided over by district president, A. D. McCall, and Elder J. W. A. Bailey. Statistical reports were in hand from the following branches: Flomaton, Coldwater, Local, Pensacola, Alafloa, and the nonresident group. As this was not a full report of the district, we are unable to give exact number of membership of the district, or gain or loss, but approximate number of membership is 760. Ministerial reports, written or verbal, were had from the following members of the priesthood: Elders T. C. Kelley, A. H. Parsons, S. D. Allen, B. L. Jernigan, J. H. Johnston, A. D. McCall; Priests T. F. Vickery and S. G. Allen. Reunion committee for the coming reunion was elected as follows: W. A. West, E. N. McCall, S. G. Allen, C. T. West, and Bessie Rowe. This committee was directed by action of the conference to investigate prospective sites and conditions for permanent grounds for the Florida District's reunions, and to report to the next district conference. Election of officers for the district resulted as follows: A. D. McCall, president; C. T. West, secretary; E. N. McCall, treasurer; Helen McCall, chorister; S. G. Allen, superintendent of Sunday School Department; Mrs. S. G. Allen, secretary of Sunday School Department; Elmer J. Hawsey, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Mrs. S. G. Allen, superintendent of the Department of Women. Following is list of delegates elected to represent the district at General Conference: T. C. Kelley, S. G. Allen, C. T. West, A. D. McCall, J. W. A. Bailey, Mrs. T. C. Kelley, and Mrs. C. J. Clark. By vote of the conference, those delegates who might be present were empowered to cast the full vote of the district, and in case of division, to cast majority and minority vote. Conference was adjourned to meet at the Alafloa Branch; time to be set by the district president.

LITTLE SIOUX.—District conference held at Logan January 21, 22, 23. A very splendid conference was enjoyed by a goodly number. Attendance was not as large as had been expected, weather and road conditions being unfavorable. Brethren Richard Baldwin, G. Scott Daniel, and Charles J. Smith, of the missionary force, were present, all of whom delivered some splendid discourses. The election of district officers was had, resulting in Brother Joseph Lane being sustained as our district president, he choosing Brethren W. R. Adams, of Logan, and Fred A. Fry, of Woodbine, as his associates in the district. Sister Ruby Adams, district secretary; George M. Vandel, treasurer; Ervin Rosenburger, chorister; Marvin K. Fry, Sunday school superintendent; J. E. Keck, Religio superintendent; Ruth Gunsolley, Sunday school secretary; Myrtle Crabb, Department of Women superintendent. The following delegates were chosen to represent our district at the 1927 General Conference: G. Scott Daniel, Mrs. G. Scott Daniel, Charles J. Smith, Richard Baldwin, Mrs. Richard Baldwin, Joseph Lane, Mrs. W. R. Adams, George Meggers, J. E. Keck, Marvin K. Fry, E. B. Purcell, Mrs. E. B. Purcell, Elsie Stewart, Ervin Rosenburger, Alma Mefferd, Mrs. Marvin Fry, Mrs. George Meggers, Mrs. Ervin Rosenburger, Mrs. J. J. Kilpack. Statistical reports show a membership in the district of 1,901. At the close of the Sunday afternoon session, Brother Richard Baldwin arose and pronounced a blessing upon the Saints assembled, which inspired all with the thoughts, "How kind and good is the Lord toward his erring children," and "How wondrous are thy ways, oh, Lord." We adjourned to meet at Missouri Valley, the district presidency to set the time of meeting.

CLINTON.—District conference was held February 11, 12, and 13, at Rich Hill, Missouri. Several ministers were present from various branches. Delegates elected for General Conference were: R. T. Walters, Birch Whiting, Sister F. C. Keck, Sister Eliza Wedlock, Joseph Curtis, John Dellar, Lee Quick, Sister Caroline Nafus, and J. A. Marsteller. A spiritual feast was enjoyed at these meetings. It was voted and carried that the next conference be June 10, 11, 12, 1927, at Nevada, Missouri.

Our Departed Ones

JOEHNK.—Ida M. Joehnck was born in Farmington, Iowa, May 28, 1858. Her maiden name was Hollowell. She was baptized by Apostle John H. Lake in 1873. Died after a lingering illness at the Holden Home, February 14, 1927, being preceded to the other side by her husband, a one-time missionary, four years ago. Her body was brought to Independence for burial, and the funeral occurred February 16, 1927, the sermon being preached by Elder J. M. Terry. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

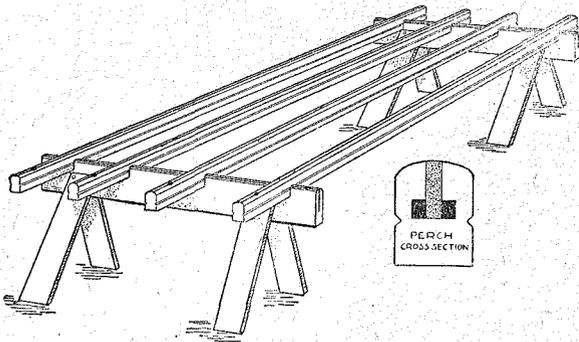

SLUSHER.—Anna Bell Slusher was born in Missouri in 1861. In her maidenhood she was married to Amos Leigh, to which union were born four children, two of whom Sister Mattie Ann Pententler and Brother George Leigh, survive and reside in Independence. She united with the church thirty-three years ago at the hands of Elder Henry Sparling, and remained a devoted Saint ever after, her life being an example of humility and piety. Her husband died in 1899, and in 1912 she married Brother William Slusher in Carthage, Missouri, with whom she lived happily until her death, which occurred at her home in Coffeyville, Kansas, February 22, 1927. Besides her husband, son, and daughter, she leaves twelve grandchildren. Her body was brought to Independence, where the funeral service was held February 24. Prayer by Elder N. Carmichael, sermon by Elder J. M. Terry. Beautiful and appropriate music was rendered by Sisters Thomas and Benson. Interment in Mound Grove.

MCARTHUR.—John Duncan McArthur was born March 9, 1858, in Santa Rosa County, Florida. Baptized September 15, 1872, by Elder Isaac M. Beebe. Married Lorena Calhoun in 1880. He served in county offices, in positions of trust; has served for years as needful in church affairs, being honored and respected not only in church circles, but by his fellow citizens. His home was always a home for the missionaries who came his way, and undoubtedly many remember him for his kindly hospitality and material assistance. He was noted for his honesty, industry, thrift, and sound judgment, a sincere Christian, and true Latter Day Saint. Died February 13, 1927, at his home in the northern part of Santa Rosa County. Surviving are his wife and eight children: George, Leroy, Frank, Mrs. Dan McCurdy, Mrs. A. D. Brown, Mrs. J. S. McCall, Mrs. W. A. Simmons, all of Santa Rosa County, Florida, and Mrs. Earl Johnston, Cleveland, Ohio. Funeral services were held at his home February 14, conducted by Evangelist T. C. Kelley, who has been a close friend of the deceased and his family for thirty years. Interment was in the family plot in Cold Water Cemetery.

Loyalty

In a prayer meeting somewhere in the East recently, I heard a brother remark: "A man is loyal to the things from which he derives the most benefit." That did not have the right sound to me. That puts loyalty on the basis of reward, and that to me seems out of stride.

Loyalty has always connoted to my mind, sacrifice, service, devotion to a cause, rather than clinging to that which pays us. Of course loyalty is in some ways akin to gratitude, return service, and yet the brother's remarks didn't ring right. What's wrong with it? Or is it wrong?

F. M. S.

This picture of the Auditorium shows some of the form work, giving the construction of the ramps by which one may pass from one floor to another without the use of steps. This picture is taken from a point near the center on the east, looking north. A portion of the first floor slab and the supporting piers may be seen at the left. The ramp leading to the level of the first floor is shown at the right of the picture. It is a continuation of the ascent from the basement level. The first turn in this ascent is midway between the first and second floors. This turn is at a point just back of the third steel beam, counting from the foreground of the picture.

Church Decorum

I was present in a meeting recently when the organist was playing a well-selected and well-rendered voluntary. It was a selection I could have enjoyed, but over all the room there was a hum and buzz of conversation. The congregation had not been "called to order" by the elder. Most of the conversing was done aloud. Even the choir members were talking. A few, I was pleased to see, were trying to appreciate the selection and the rendition. But it was spoiled for me by the lack of attention, and so I fell to thinking about church decorum, our church decorum, especially just preceding prayer and sacramental services. What can we say of it? Is it good? I shall not say further than that it should be.

The Saints are good "visitors" and love to chat. And they do. But are not the moments just preceding a service precious for meditation and silent prayer? especially so while the musicians are making their contribution towards the success of the meeting? And should not "visiting" and conversational communion be reserved for the social chambers?

Meditation is a prime factor in the religious life. In meditation, perhaps more than any other time, do we become susceptible to divine influences upon the thought stream, or stream of consciousness. Music, we are told, intensifies the mood we are in—we weep more quickly if sad, laugh more quickly if happy. Our meditation will be deepened by unobtrusive music. The musical part of our services should be received in the silence of meditation.

The attitude of the audience is a large factor in church services. This is particularly true during a ritual or ceremony. I have seen rather insignificant rituals made impressive by solemn and earnest participation by both performer and observer, while on the contrary I have seen the effect of some of our most important rituals ruined by careless observance.

It behooves us, Saints, to observe the proprieties of the house of the Lord.

F. M. S.

Just before us lie some particularly heavy tasks. It looks to me as though every Saint must carry just a little heavier burden than before, and recall what Beecher said: "Pray not that our burdens may be lessened, but that our backs may be stronger."

F. M. S.

"Never say 'Tis little we can do:
That our opportunities are few.'
If we have improved before,
Heaven will intrust us soon with more."

—A Latter Day Saint hymn.

The Work in Kirtland

A letter from Bishop Charles Fry, dated at Wiloughby, Ohio, in February, contains news of the work at Kirtland. As the church is always interested in the status of the work at the location of the building of the Temple and the scene of much history of the early church, we make the following extracts:

The early snow and winter weather checked the Temple visitors, and very few have come, probably not over half a dozen a month. The first spring weather will likely start them coming again.

In the past year there has been a distinct advancement in the work here, and spiritual conditions are much improved. By gradual processes, old feelings of antagonism have gone down, and feelings of friendly brotherhood have grown up. The reunion of last summer brought a spiritual uplift, and the special meeting held by Brother R. S. Budd in November added very much to that uplift. Most of those who held aloof from the meetings for a time after the troubles of 1925 have returned and are taking part in a spirit of good will. The sermons preached by the different brethren have been of a high order, and the prayer meetings held in the homes during the winter months have been generally splendid. . . .

Personally I feel sad at many of the conditions in the world around us by which many of our people are lured into doing things which bring no spiritual profit, and sometimes into actual sin; but in the gospel I have assurance of better things and look forward with brightening faith to the day when our people will be gathered together under vastly better moral and spiritual conditions when the righteousness of God will shine forth in them. It seems that in the gathering is our only hope of temporal salvation, for my vision of world conditions leaves no doubt of the impending result, viz, social and political ruin. Few realize the extent to which iniquity has gone in official as well as social circles, and the foundations of government are already undermined. The mighty hand of God must needs move if the Saints are to be preserved. I have faith in the divine promises and look forward to better and greater things for the children of God.

Interesting if True

I have seen many persons go to sleep in church, and I had presumed that in lack of fresh air or lack of interest, one or both, lay the cause, or both may combine to the end of putting the auditor to sleep. The remedy in such cases is better ventilation and better preaching. Recently, however, in a bulletin issued by some public utilities companies, I saw another reason assigned; and "church napping" was attributed to poor lighting.

Well! I wonder where with those electric lighting companies the greater interest lies; keeping awake at church or increasing the lighting bill.

Like a light that swayed in the winds of the night,
So my faith, from the drafts that came,
At moments bent to the left, or the right—
Then burned with a clearer flame.

The Faith of Our Fathers

BY JOHN F. GARVER

The sixth of a series of seven sermons in the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, in November, 1925, under the general theme, "The faith of our fathers."

In my heart I wish we might have continued under the spell of those beautiful strains of the violin just executed, and which have revived in memory the sweet songs of Israel. It was under the persuasion of these songs as much as anything else that I was converted to this faith. With you, I have lived over again tonight the moving scenes of our past experiences as the children of God. I trust the remaining portion of the hour may be as meaningful to us.

I have chosen to read a lesson from the writings of the Apostle Paul, found in the Hebrew letter, in which he says:

For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul. Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. For by it the elders obtained a good report. Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear. But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.—Hebrews, 10th and 11th chapters.

This is a wonderful lesson. We draw on its fundamental principles for the evening, and from it shall presently take our text.

The Faith of Paul

Paul says here that men achieve good ends by the power of faith. It was by faith, he says, that the elders of olden time, having finished their course, obtained by their works a good report. By faith they obtained unto life, for the just of all time live by faith. They both lived themselves, and through their ministry of hope made possible life unto others who believed on their testimony and accepted their ministry. By faith alone men achieve finally unto God, for he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him, who believe that he is, and have the confidence to follow; though they may need to wait yet for a season, until he visits them and redeems them and takes them to himself. By faith the promise comes true.

But woe be to that man who draws back. To him there is no promise. He draws back but to perdition, and draws in after him the lasting displeasure of his fellows and of his God. But immediately says the apostle, Courage, brethren. We are not of that number who draw back. We carry on in the way of God. We are of that number who purpose to achieve for ourselves and our fellows. And as God lives, we will do it, for he shall reward us, who have been faithful.

The Faith of Our Fathers

This was not only the faith of Paul, for it was the faith of our fathers in this great church. Our forefathers in this church were moved by a great dynamic. They were moved by their confidence in God. They believed that he was, and that he would do to them according to his word of promise. They believed in his great church restored, and his glorious gospel restored to earth again. They believed, furthermore, in his power to achieve in his own right and in his own hand, for they believed in his power to achieve in them and in the Saints of all the earth. These our fathers of olden time believed to the end that they dared to do the thing God commanded them to do, trusting him to see them through to triumph.

Nor is this all, for they had the confidence in us, who were to come on after them, that their great offering would not be in vain. They believed that we, too, in the hands of God, they having begun this work, would see it through to a final and successful consummation.

Our fathers believed in man and in God. And because they had faith there came to them knowledge, and through knowledge power to establish the kingdom of God in the end of time.

My dear friends, I am come to you to say that this same faith may be ours, this same power may be ours; and bye the bye, as God lives, we may achieve the end of his purpose in our day and time. There is no question about that, save it be in the mind of the man who draws back.

We have some instances of the faith of our fathers.

The Faith of the Latter-Day Prophet

Joseph Smith, because he believed in God, lacking wisdom, went to him in prayer. And because he did believe the Father lived, the Father of Light came to him in vision, and presented to him his Son, and said, "This is my beloved Son; hear him."

Oh! what a glorious day! What a breaking through the clouds of a long and a dark and a foreboding apostasy, that men might have once more the vision of Jesus Christ. That they might have Jesus again in person directing in the establishing of his church in the earth, to the carrying on of his divine purposes, that men believing in his name might be saved with a full salvation, both here and yonder.

Because Joseph Smith believed, he became the instrument in the hands of God in restoring the gospel.

Because Joseph Smith believed, through his hand came to us the Nephite Record, a new and additional witness of the truth of Jesus Christ.

Because Joseph Smith believed, it was finally made possible for him and his fellows to reestablish in full, to set up anew, to organize again the church of Christ in the midst of the earth.

Will you let me say this? Let those deny the faith who will, we stand fast in our confidence in that man of God, that he did establish the church, and left it in its organized form, perfect. That he added nothing. That the church through him came forth, and he left it as God had designed. Joseph Smith, because he believed the promise, set up anew in this world the undying hope that the Zion of promise would be realized in our time, the church as fully organized by him.

And because Joseph Smith believed God and his promise to the world through himself, though crowded upon by every adversity, in the towering strength of his confidence in God, said, "Even though you shall take the life from my body, my sons and my grandsons so long as water runs and grass grows will continue to plead the cause of this injured innocence until the world shall know I have spoken the truth." We wonder sometimes if he knew the fate that awaited his name. When men would rise up in our day and from among us to say he was unworthy.

The Faith of the Prophet's Wife

And when that good man died, and dark night came over the church, his stricken widow remained at Nauvoo with her children, months afterward giving birth, a stricken woman, to his last son. And because she believed, she stood fast. Reverently she reared these sons to a noble manhood, and by the bye she was able to give them to the church, in whose veins coursed the blood of succession in the office of the Presidency. And who, we are proud to say, stood as through stress and storm, the three pillars of the temple. And thank God, who stand tonight in honored memory as pillars in our tabernacle of God—Joseph, Alexander, and David.

Yes, beloved Emma believed. And because she believed, she stood fast.

The Faith of the Prophet's Son

And because he believed, Joseph, the son of Joseph, in 1860, moved by a power not his own, went to Amboy to take his father's place as head of the church. And by that one act alone he established his right to preside. In that office he carried on in faith and in hope and in love for all men until his demise in 1914.

And woe be to the influence of that man who stands up now to say he was untrue and recreant to the trust God imposed in him as the keeper of this faith! Woe to the influence of that man who says Joseph was an impostor! Woe be to the influence of that man who says he assumed an office that was not, and gave as God's, words only his own.

Yes, Joseph, the son of Joseph, passed to his reward honored and approved of man and of God, a living monument of the power of faith to ennoble and to redeem.

And before he died, again because he believed the word of our Lord, he chose and called his son to carry on after him. He was our prophet when he did that, and no man dared say him nay!

And I feel to say to you tonight that that new prophet and his fellows, shall they finish the task handed on to their feeble hands of clay, can do it only by the power of faith, even as the work of God has been done before them.

What Is Faith?

So in faith we put our hands to the plow. Nor do we purpose to turn back, whate'er betides. We are not among that number who draw back. We plow on. And by faith shall we achieve the redemption of Zion, and the preaching of the gospel in all the world.

Now, what is faith? If you will permit it, I prefer to use another version which I think simplifies this text. It is like this: Faith is the giving of assurance to things hoped for; the testing of things not seen.

What is faith? Faith is to give assurance to the thing we hope for, that by that giving of assurance, it shall come to pass. James says, "You say you have faith? Let me see your faith. I will measure it by the thing you do." So is our faith measured by the things we do.

The farmer has faith. He does not draw back. He goes out and turns over the field, makes it ready, and sows the seed, and the wheat comes up unto a bountiful harvest. That is faith.

If you will not tell her about it, because she doesn't like her father to talk about her in preaching, I think I can illustrate what I mean by one incident that happened in our family in the experience of our little Bertha. Now, Bertha was a good little girl, but she could not be impressed with the necessity of getting to school on time. She failed to respond, no matter what her mother said or did to her about it. So one day her mother asked me what to do with her. I told her I would do nothing, that I would let her alone, that I would teach her that she had some responsibility herself in the matter. The mother took the advice.

The next morning, as usual, there was no thought on Bertha's mind that the time was nearing nine o'clock. That was the farthest thing from her thoughts. She continued to play about the place until the first bell rang, and still nothing doing. She had thirty minutes yet, so why hurry? Finally the last bell rang. Only three minutes till the tardy bell, and three blocks to go. She jumped up from the floor where she was playing, and without following the custom of womankind to look into the mirror, she fled through the door, left it wide open, rushed down the street to the corner, turned west on the second block, and just before she went out of sight, turned her face to her mother and waving her little hand shouted, "Don't worry, mother, I can make it!" And she did.

Giving Assurance to Things Hoped For

That is faith. He has faith who sets his purpose to make it. No other man has faith. And don't I know that is so? I am going to tell you how I know it. I am not boasting of any great work. God forbid. But I know what faith is.

There once came a grand man into my life. He was known to you Independence people, Henry Kemp, to whose persuasion I yielded and was baptized. This was many years ago. When that good man confirmed me, he spoke to me in the voice of my Father and said to me, "Brother John, if you will believe and move forward in endeavor, the time will come when you shall stand in the ministry of Christ. Unto this end I now dedicate thee and set thee apart."

I believe those to be the words of God. It did not seem possible—a lone country lad, without learning, without people in the church, without opportunity, without hope. Yet I believed that to be the voice of God. I said in my heart, "I do not see how such privilege can be mine, but I will make the endeavor, and trust God to bring it about."

I went to work with all my power to bring it to pass. I chopped wood. I worked with a shovel on the railroad track. I farmed. I clerked in a store. I did all manner of work to gather together six hundred dollars with which to go to Graceland College. The five long years that I worked to gather together that money, every one was with prayer and hope and expectation that God would bring to pass his promise.

I spent that money and eight hundred dollars more to keep myself in school. This eight hundred dollars I earned pounding the dust of carpets, scooping snow off the walks. As a young man twenty-six years of age I cleaned spittoons in the bank. I shined shoes in the barber shop. I set type in the Herald Office, and worked there as mailing clerk. I edited a local paper. I did everything that I could get to do so that I might stay in school. For five weary years I worked day and night to qualify as a minister of this church. Ten years in all I spent to make ready for the promise of God to come true. Before those days of preparation were finished, the God of heaven visited me one night in a dream, and said to me a thing all but unthinkable. He said, "My son, make yourself ready, and the time will come when I will establish you as the president of the Lamoni Stake." That was ten years before it came true. I must first needs come up through nine years of experience as counselor to John Smith in Lamoni stake presidency, to prepare me for the place as president. All through those years I knew that if I made ready the time would come when Brother John Smith, grown too old to serve, would be asked to yield to me. I made humble effort during my service with him to qualify for the place. And that promise came to pass in my experience.

I know what faith is. I know what it will do. Faith is the giving of assurance to things hoped for. Faith brings things to pass, because it works to bring them to pass.

I had another experience. I sat one time in the choir loft of the Lamoni church in General Conference, when the voice of the Father of light, which I know to be true, said to me—and mark you, I was not yet occupying in the first position as president of Lamoni Stake—the Father said to me, "My son, continue to qualify and serve in this place unto which I have called you, and the time will come when I will call you to serve in the Quorum of Twelve."

That seemed a thing impossible. I believed, however, the word of God, my Father. I never turned my face away. While I could not see how that work could ever be done, yet in humility, from day to day, from week to week, from month to month, from year to year, I tried to the best of my feeble ability to make that work possible. And my dear people, that work came to me.

I know whereof I speak when I say faith is the giving of assurance to the thing you hope to have come to pass. That by the giving of assurance on your part, the thing promised of God will come true in your experience.

Faith, furthermore, is the testing of things not seen. There are many things yet ahead in our experience which the Father has promised shall be ours. And they will be ours in that day when we put him to the test. When we believe and continue to believe and to put into things the investment necessary to bring the promise he has made us, they are realized in our experience.

Again, we test that which is still to be by that which has already come to pass. By that experience which has been ours in the past, we know the thing we hope for in the future shall yet be ours.

By this I know Zion will be. I know that that righteous Father of grace and power who has come into my life and worked in me that which has been possible under his hands in the last third of a century—I know that Father can take your sons and daughters and with the opportunity which they have, they under him can redeem Zion. By this eye of faith I test the Zion of the future. By the same test I measure the preaching of the gospel in all the world. All is to him who believes. To him who believes is the promise true.

We need only then to be patient, says the apostle. Be patient yet for a little season, and you shall see God's promises fulfilled. And now in the interim, until the promise can be yours to the full, you shall live by a faith to make possible that great fruition.

The Work of Brother Drawback

Only those who draw back come to grief. I wonder if I might say just a word about this drawing back process.

It was Brother Drawback who said that the social program of the church adopted by the late General Conference was premature.

It was Brother Drawback who said that stewardships as interpreted by the brethren would fail.

It was Brother Drawback who said that the Saints would not come forward in the college endowment. And because he must needs now have a new saying, it is Brother Drawback who says, If you invest that money in land, you will lose it.

Brother Drawback leaves God's tenth in the Jackson County Bank, or maybe the Chrisman-Sawyer Bank.

Brother Drawback grows weary in his ministry; so weary that he must needs abide at home, at the hour of solemn prayer.

The purpose of Brother Drawback in these things is very clear. It is to dry up the coffers of the church. And what would that do? It would send our missionaries home. Turn our sick away from our Sanitarium. Turn our aged over to the county. And turn our homeless children out into the streets.

Friends, Brother Drawback's is a hopeless philosophy.

The Work of Faith

Faith moves forward. Faith plows on. Faith says, "I will endeavor. I will trust that Father of Light. I will trust this people. I have confidence that as good people as they are, God's mercy will overshadow them, and by his grace they shall achieve." Faith moves on to knowledge. Knowledge paves the way to power. Power to sainthood. And sainthood to service. The power of eternity, the presence of Christ is to that people who endeavor and who invest and who carry on.

So ran the faith of our fathers. So runs our faith tonight. As the recipients of this glorious gospel; as the membership and ministry of this great church; as the keepers of the faith restored to earth in these days, we endeavor on. And it is our confidence that, endeavoring on, we shall achieve the purpose of God in us.

We know by the things we have achieved in the past it shall be so. Testing the future by these great tests of the past, and putting our investment into the future as we have put it into the past, we move on in the confidence that the God who called the first prophet to restore the church, who moved in light and intelligence through the second prophet to the forwarding of the latter-day cause, will continue to move it on to victory under the third.

Yes; faith is the giving of assurance to things hoped for, the testing of things not seen.

May God help us to qualify and to magnify our calling.

And know this, when we do, the season of waiting is but a little while until the Lord will come in to us and sup with us and we with him. And bye the bye, when Zion shall have been established, and his name carried to all the people of the earth, he will come back to us, and take up his abode with us, and we shall be with him forevermore.

The Budget and Its Use

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

Income and Expense Estimates

Whatever may be the estimate of income, conditions may arise that either increase or decrease the amount finally received. No attempt is usually made to prevent an increase, and it may be impossible to prevent a decrease. As a rule the amount of expenditures are more closely controlled than the amount of income, it being the purpose of the budget to limit the maximum that may be expended by any department of a concern, or that may be expended for any item of the budget, as the case may be. Sometimes a minimum of expenditures is fixed by the budget to accomplish a special purpose, but this is not usual.

Having ascertained the income for the specified period, the amount of the expenditure should be determined also. Different policies exist concerning the making of liberal budget estimates. Many civil institutions prefer that the maximum amount desired be stated. It may or may not be allowed, but it is at least assurance that the work should not exceed the sum stated, hence that later appropriations will not have to be made to complete it. In the case of an economical budget, the closeness of the estimate depends upon the ability of those preparing it to obtain all essential information and properly evaluate it. Changing conditions may in some instances require a revision of the budget, but the experience of successive periods should help to fix the amount with considerable accuracy.

The practice of making too liberal estimates may be harmful in several ways. It may cause those making the appropriations to unduly discount the estimate, thus hampering or even crippling the department concerned. This may cause further estimates to be exaggerated in expectation of a drastic reduction. Such procedure makes both the estimate and the appropriation unreliable, and should be discouraged. The executive being responsible for both expenditures and the welfare of his department, it is well to discuss with him the details of his estimate before fixing the amount to be allowed.

Appropriations and Deficits

In state and other civil departments, and in important business concerns, those furnishing the budget estimates do not finally determine the amount to be appropriated. But the family budget, and that of an industry operated by its owners, would of course be finally determined by those making the estimate. Some of the procedure involved may be helpful in either case, hence will be briefly noted.

An appropriation is an authorization to do a specified work, usually in a given period, and to expend a designated amount of money for the purpose. If the individual or family will recognize that this principle applies, and that when determined upon the budget represents a fixed authorization for specified purposes only, it will operate more certainly to the desired end.

In order to determine the amount of the appropriation needed, it is usual to secure all information, past and present, that may be obtained concerning the work or department covered by the budget estimate. This includes possible economies, reforms, new ideas, and changes that may affect expenditures. It is often the case that some of this information is submitted with the budget estimate, including a statement of the conditions considered and reasons for the item estimates presented. When certain facts can not be known until a later time within the budget period or at its close, a preliminary, partial, or estimated budget may be authorized, the appropriation in such cases not being strictly limited. This may be necessary when fixing the family budget, in case complete data is not available for certain items, but should then apply only to the undetermined items.

In civil practice the executive responsible for expenditures is not permitted to exceed his expense budget for the period concerned, neither can he contract excess liabilities to be charged to another period. The treasurer is not authorized to pay or acknowledge a debt in such instances, and the executive may be held personally liable for the debt, if no special provision has been made for such an emergency. While funds may be advanced from the treasury in greater proportion than that part of the period covered would average, unless expressly prohibited, the total advancements must not exceed appropriations for the entire period. The fact that by this means the entire appropriation may be exhausted before the period is at its close, which has at times occurred in critical situations, has resulted in several methods to prevent an abuse of the privilege.

In order to safeguard funds for the more necessary purposes, it has sometimes been provided that specified expenditures shall be made before any others for which the budget provides, or that the necessary funds for specified purposes shall be reserved until so applied. Another more common method has been to make additional appropriations sufficient to meet expenses to the close of the period. But knowledge of this resource may result in lessened diligence in effecting economies. To prevent this tendency it has sometimes been provided that demand for additional appropriations shall indicate the means of raising the amount required. But this has not always been practicable or desirable.

Another plan to supply budget deficits has been to transfer some of the appropriations of a less needy department to the one that is destitute. This can be done where there is a common treasury for all departments, if the department executives concerned are in accord with the plan. This would be in effect an annulment of that part of the appropriation transferred, and must be done by authority of the body making the original appropriation, except by virtue of a rule authorizing such transfers.

How the Budget Helps You

Some have inquired whether or not the budget is a real help to the average person or family. This is a practical question, and should be answered in a practical way. Of course it is obvious that the budget does not work in and of itself alone. It is a means to an end; and any means to an end must be utilized in order to make it work. When so utilized, it is a very real benefit in several ways. The fact that it means a proper distribution of expenditures, instead of spendthrift or chance habits, is a sufficient answer to the question. But this is only the beginning of the answer. It causes one to choose more carefully how his money shall be spent, and gives him greater interest in evaluating what he buys. This causes him to avoid haphazard ways, and to develop those which build up his future welfare.

To one who has always endeavored to be reasonable in the use of his funds, the budget is a means of more wisely utilizing them. By spending his income more systematically and in better proportion, he acquires thoroughness and efficiency in financial matters. He thus eliminates both waste of time and poor judgment, and accordingly gains the confidence and esteem of worth-while people in his community. The budget helps him to detect the leaks in his outgo, and by stopping these his resources gradually increase. Thus he is prepared to finance himself more readily when emergencies arise. These are some of the natural results of proper budgeting, results which grow with use and added experience.

The budget enables one to determine more accurately the time when more than the average amount of funds will be needed, and will indicate when financing would be advisable. This may save considerable expense resulting from the hasty sacrifice of property that otherwise might be necessary through unpreparedness. Many persons lose money unnecessarily because they do not plan for their obligations to become due after they shall have had sufficient time to cash in on their resources at reasonable prices. The oft-repeated difference between good and poor prices spells the difference between prosperity and poverty. A budget carefully planned and carefully adhered to is a very potent means of insuring this difference.

A right use of the budget tends to augment resources by conserving them. It aids one to determine any class of expenditures that exceeds the amount available for that purpose. The budget properly kept will automatically warn him of the excess amount. Thus rigid economies may be effected at once in that direction or in some other item that may be less essential, so that financing need not be resorted to. By means of the more carefully made expenditures and the more equitable distribution of expense items, there is made available for productive and remunerative purposes a greater amount of funds than could have been accumulated otherwise.

The foregoing principles and factors are largely applicable to the family and individual budget, as well as to that of the business concern. And the family is a unit of business management, though primarily a social unit. He who is careless in managing this unit of business usually manifests similar tendencies in larger affairs. In view of these facts it is not difficult to understand why bankers grant loans more readily to firms that maintain a well-planned budget system than to those which neglect to do so.

Elements of the Family Budget

The making of the family budget is a comparatively easy matter when all of the necessary factors are at hand. The number and ages of those comprising the family must guide the budgeter largely in determining the cost ratio of the items comprising the budget. The items themselves are not the same for all families in all conditions. In the tables which are to follow are given the items most commonly used, but one may find a more extensive classification better suited to his needs in some cases. The cost ratio of the items also will vary according to the place where one is living, as the price of any particular article or thing is not uniform in all cities.

While it is usually not difficult to determine the proper ratio of expense for each item of the budget, the actual amount of the budget must of course be limited to the amount of the income or less. When this amount is ascertainable with reasonable certainty, that portion of it which is to be devoted to the expense budget should be indicated in the budget estimate. If the indicated expenditures amount to practically as much as the expected income, it is advisable to adopt the policy of making the more necessary expenditures before incurring any obligations that are not essential.

Increase in the size of the family, without a corresponding increase of income, may necessitate a cheaper rent or a reduction of some other expense item. Sickness over an extended period may also require a reduction in expenses for a time, unless the income is more than sufficient for the average of expenditures. One of the easiest ways of exceeding the budget is to make occasional extravagant purchases, perhaps with the intention of economizing somewhat in other items somewhere, somehow, sometime. But one who permits himself to unduly indulge in these little luxuries usually lacks the temperament to endure rigid economy in other things, hence becomes more and more involved in debt, and in the end suffers more privation and distress than the luxuries were worth.

Whereas both the total cost and the ratio of budget items are varied somewhat by the number and ages of those composing the family, the common family unit of five may not always be the proper basis of the desired estimate, though most of the tables to be found include this basis of estimate. The recent tendency is to determine the budget by the exact number and ages of all in the family, taking into consideration the needs of each person. This gives budget costs and item ratios more in accordance with actual experience, using the tables worked out in the past as starting points, which should result in a dependable budget.

The purchasing power of the dollar not only varies from year to year, but often from month to month also. Although the budget may be formed so as to provide for the average of such variations, violent changes may result from unforeseen conditions that could not be provided for in advance. Lack of employment may cause one to move to another place where the scale of prices requires a change in the amount and ratio of expense items, aside from the cost of moving.

The fact that prices vary according to the place of purchase and the quality or brand of the goods, often makes it advisable to determine whether the prices to be paid are higher or lower than the average. The item ratios should then be increased or decreased accordingly.

Standards of Living

Considerable research has been made in the effort to determine, if not to establish, certain standards of living. This question has been considered from various viewpoints and motives, and the figures submitted often reflect this fact quite obviously. One who seeks to ascertain how small an income will suffice to keep the worker in physical condition to perform the maximum of labor, will obtain different results than would be found by the idealist who desires to establish conditions approaching the luxury standard. Others consider the subject from a purely academic viewpoint. Between the poverty standard and the luxury standard should be found one adapted to average and reasonable requirements, or the comfort standard of living.

It can not be lost sight of, however, that with many families the standard of living is founded on the size of the purse and the community conditions that largely result from the status of local industries. The kind of employment obtainable and many other factors bear upon the subject. Inability to pay cash may, and often does, compel families to purchase at increased prices wherever credit is obtainable. In such instances a well-prepared and carefully kept budget is of real benefit, in ways that have already been pointed out.

In the situation just referred to, installment buying has been advocated by some, among whom are business men of high standing. Others are strongly opposed to the practice as tending to produce an unhealthy credit situation. This large number who are unable to complete payments due, and therefore must lose goods partly paid for, besides a considerable amount of money sacrificed, might have spent the funds in other needless ways, but in many instances probably would not have done so. In order to convince the prospective purchaser that installment buying is economical, many firms advertise that their credit prices are as low as those for cash. The individual with cash, however, can almost always buy for less, though a few exceptions have occasionally been found. But one would doubtless be justified in buying on the installment plan certain articles that save much labor in proportion to the cost, if great need or an emergency required. In most other instances the policy of buying for cash only will tend to save the individual money, time, worry, and perhaps humiliation in the removal of goods from his home when he is unable to make the payments due.

In order that the family with very limited means may derive the most benefit from its resources, it is well to note the places where economies may be effected to the best advantage. Allowing for differences in circumstances, it is often possible to use less expensive foods that are equally nourishing and palatable, without diminishing needed variety. In some instances a saving amounting to quite a sum may be made by care exercised in the matter of rent. Similar economies are often possible in the purchase of clothing. But the operating item usually conceals more of the unnecessary expenditures, and many of them are so small in amount that little attention is given them. Concerning them it is well to remember that little sums of money saved regularly in this way grow to thousands of dollars in the course of a lifetime or sooner. On the other hand, he who can not control habits of spending can not form habits of saving.

Of course actual experience is necessary to determine the average of the cost of living in a given family. Obviously an arbitrary rule can not be made to work, because living methods and habits differ materially, both of the individual and the family as a whole. The cost of goods demanded varies in different neighborhoods, and those in hard manual labor demand more food of certain kinds than is required by those using less physical exertion. Family demands also differ as to the quality of certain kinds of food, clothing, housing, furnishings, and other goods. What some term extravagance or luxury is by others considered reasonable or even necessary. By means of various tables of averages the budget of each individual and family may be arrived at in accordance with the standard determined upon and the available income.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

Into the Hearts of a Few Saints

In the recent past there came under my observation three incidents, happening in widely separated localities, but tied by something common which makes them of interest here.

On the coast of Maine there are many men who wrest a living from the sea at a cost of labor sometimes smally requited by monetary returns. One such man told me he had had particularly hard work this winter to gain a living for the family, and yet he spoke to me of having promised to pay to the Auditorium fund an amount which seemed large to me, considering his circumstances. He said he seldom had money to spare, and frequently on returning home from church his pockets were empty. Said he, "Brother Smith, I haven't two dollars to my name now, so I can not pay the balance due on my pledge." So I suggested he write the Bishop and state that he had subscribed more than he could afford and that I felt sure he would cheerfully be released from his promise. His answer surprised and pleased me: "I don't want release from the promise! All I want is time, for I had pleasure in paying what I have done and want the pleasure which will come from paying the balance."

I was surprised because I had thought he wanted to be released; pleased because his answer revealed the spirit becoming so prevalent among the Saints, the spirit of giving for Zion, the spirit which not alone dreams of Zion but is willing to work for it.

In Massachusetts, at the close of a meeting wherein I had been speaking of Zion and our program, a sister came to me with a bit of jewelry she wanted to give to the church. She felt that she didn't need this, however much pleasure she could or might derive from displaying it as an ornament of attire. So she gave it to the church, for its purposes in which money was needed. She had other jewels which had representative or historic value which she felt she would want to keep at least for now. Here again was the apparent willingness to vitalize the belief in Zion by sacrificing for its realization.

The third incident was a bit different, yet out of it I got a keen pleasure, for it held promise of much that might yet be done for Zion and the church. An Englishman recently visiting the country wrote a prominent British journal that of all the countries he had visited the standard of living was far higher in America than in any other country, a standard of living which approximated luxury and extravagance. I think of this in connection with the incident I refer to.

It was in Denver at the close of a meeting wherein I had spoken of Zion, the church, and our ideals, a young man came to me and said he had an unusual request to make. He and his girl friend, he said, had that evening (it was Saturday) started to go to a show; had driven down town, parked the car, and started for the theater. Then they decided to go to church instead. They did so. And he wanted me to accept the money he would have spent at the show, and wondered if I would take it. I did, for I appreciated the spirit of the gift. It's not a large amount; but I don't want to spend it on just ordinary expenses; and I haven't yet decided just what to do with it; but I have an idea at work.

That gift, together with the memory of the Maine and Massachusetts incidents, started a train of thought—of Zion, her big problems, the money needed, and the sacrifices which might be necessary, and I concluded that when the real spirit of sacrifice already in the church becomes operative in the time of need, this people will rank with many of the past in willingness to spend and be spent for the cause of Zion.

Are not these three incidents, my readers, indicative of a fine spirit expanding and growing throughout the church?

Are We Warning Our Neighbors?

We enjoy reading the HERALD, and think the church papers are much better than a few years back. A person who reads the church papers and attends any of the larger gatherings of the Saints can note that the plane our people are treading is higher than in days gone by. However, I do not feel we need to think it is enough, but it should only help us to go on higher and higher till at last the world will be made to know and acknowledge that here are the people of the most high God.

Recently I had the privilege of baptizing a sister of our branch, and it makes me feel the joy there is in showing others the beautiful gospel which has come to us in these latter days. The sister of whom I write has been shown the gospel by reading our church literature, such as The Call at Evening and various tracts I ordered for her. Sometimes, Saints, I wonder if each one of us who has received this glad news is doing all he can to tell others the story. I do not mean in word only, but are we letting our light shine that others will be attracted by the lives we live? People are demanding a more practical religion; and if we are careful in each act and word, we may be magnets in the kingdom of God, which will finally be set up in Zion.

I know the purposes of God, the gathering of his people together into one, will be accomplished, but the big question is, Will I play my part in that great program, and will I be the means of assisting others to see the way for their final march to Zion, the perfected people of God? What is uppermost in our minds as we meet together from time to time in our social meetings, also the preaching services—the saving of ourselves alone? or are we thinking in terms of our brothers and sisters and of the many creatures of God who have not heard nor had the opportunity of understanding the gospel? There is not one of us who can not hand his neighbors and friends a tract, an Ensign, a HERALD, or a good church book to read and thereby be the means of saving some individual from the perils that are sure to come because God has spoken concerning them that they will surely come upon the earth. The thought always comes to me that when we have endeavored to show some one the gospel we have done our duty, and our garments will be clear when we stand before the judgment bar of God.

The work of our branch at Nevada is somewhat at a standstill, due to the removal of so many of the Saints. Those who are left are so scattered that at times some can not attend on account of weather and road conditions. However, when we are privileged to assemble, the good Spirit is always present urging us to carry on, hoping for better things and laboring to that end.

At present the writer is holding meetings in the home of the sister who was recently baptized, and I believe there are others in her community who will accept the gospel. This sister lives about twenty-five miles from the branch, but she says they are going to be at church as much as their means and other conditions will permit. Her husband is not a member of the church, but we believe he will be some day. They are already talking of renting a farm closer to the branch, that they may assist more in the church work. This sister was sorely afflicted before she rendered obedience to the gospel; but now, though a member of only three or four weeks' standing, she can eat anything she wants, where before she lived on bread and a little milk. The people of her community are very much prejudiced against our work and have not attended the meeting at her home as she expected they would, having seemingly been very good friends before her baptism. Some have, however, remarked how much better she looks, and at a farm sale held by the ladies, members of the church of our sister's previous membership, they remarked concerning her ability to partake of the meal. She does not fail to testify of the goodness of God to her and of the joy that has come to her life, that now she can care for her family.

We believe, dear Saints, the remarkable healing that has come to this sister in this community is going to be a testimony to her neighbors that there is a reality in the angel message, and that it will arouse their interest to the extent that they will come out and hear for themselves.

I ask an interest in the prayers of everyone who reads this letter that I may live humbly before God in order that I may have his Spirit to direct me in presenting the gospel to the people.
