Waterloo, Iowa

March 3.—As time rolls on, we are impressed more and more that the Lord's arm is not shortened in these latter days. Truly he has been in our midst in power since our last HERALD letter. We feel glad to have the opportunity to express by service our thankfulness to our heavenly Father. This branch is wide awake, and a steady increase in spiritual blessings is being manifested.

On February 11 the Sigma Chapter of Temple Builders motored to Oelwein, Iowa, and presented a program in the Saints' church. The program was delayed about an hour by reason of one load of our party being delayed by tire trouble. A Ford is quite similar to a mule—you never know when to look for trouble.

The program was opened by song, and prayer was offered by Brother C. A. Kress. The first number on the program was a reading by Sister Esther Purinton, entitled "The hero of the hill." Sister Esther has studied elocution, and her rendition of this piece was fine. Next was the play by the Temple Builders, "Packing the missionary barrel." This barrel was to be packed with clothes, and we surely would have a queer lot of missionaries if they had to depend upon clothing sent to them. Some of the clothing we saw, while it might fit some men, certainly would make people exclaim, "Truly, they are a peculiar people." We would like to see some try to wear those trousers we saw. Perhaps Goliath could have worn them, but certainly no missionary we ever saw. But at that the ladies had a good time, especially when the mouse ran out of the barrel, at which time Dana Beringer proved to be the heroine of the hour, attacking the mouse with a parasol and rescuing the ladies. No, it wasn't raining. The parasol was for the missionary. Each Temple Builder had her part well learned, and it would be difficult to say whether it was the way the ladies disposed of the crackers and jelly, or whether it was Sophie as she fixed them, or whether it was the lady with the galloping consumption that drew the most laughter. Anyway they finally got the barrel packed.

Sister Effie Nichols gave the history of the Sigma Chapter, after which Sister Mabel Hall told us how she learned to whistle, and we will say from her performance, for anyone with weak lungs, learning to whistle ought to be a good developer. Sister Hall's lungs are all right. Next we listened to a reading by Sister Hazel Nichols, "The minister's farewell." We hardly blame the poor man for saying farewell. "The call," which is the chapter song, written by Sister Hall was sung. Sister Hinds gave a reading, "Consecration." A trio composed of Sisters Effie Nichols, Lola Myers, and Flossie Grapes sang for us. Sister Purinton gave another reading, "Sleepy land," and we were favored by a piano solo by Sister Travis. Next the purpose of our chapter was given by seven Temple Builders and followed by a song by the group. An offering was taken which was placed in the building fund of the Waterloo Branch. Everyone enjoyed himself, and compliments were received by the sisters for their work.

Sunday, February 20, was a scene of activity on the banks of the Cedar River at the bathing beach. A hole was cut in the ice, and four young people were baptized into the kingdom, Elders C. A. Kress and O. J. Fisher officiating. We are expecting several more in the near future. So we truly say the Lord has been in our midst.

Some sickness has been among the Saints, but all are now on the road to recovery.

Our Wednesday evening prayer services are an inspiration to all and the source of much strength. The Spirit blesses us when we meet together. Wednesday evening, March 2, was a season of rejoicing for those who were in attendance. Our scripture lesson was Revelation 3: 7-12, and we present just a few of the thoughts expressed in this meeting. We can easily enough see the mistakes in the lives of others, but fail to see those in our own life. Is it possible that we do blind ourselves to our faults? I am going to do my duty whether anyone else does his or not. There is an open door before every one of us; no man can shut it against us, but we can ourselves shut the door by neglecting to listen to the direction of the Spirit. Our lives are like the ore and old iron cast into the furnace to be melted. When it is melted it is poured into molds that have been prepared to receive it. Sometimes there are flaws in the castings, and they have to be thrown back into the furnace to be melted over, or are taken to the scrap pile. To some is given the privilege to see their spirit and know if it is developing. It has been the writer's privilege to see his body go into a furnace and see the process of purification going on. I have seen the suffering and the agony of my body in the flame of the furnace, but out of this I saw arise from the ashes of a body that had been consumed, a purified soul. In this connection we can rejoice in song:

"Through the furnace through the heat,
There beneath the hammer's beat,
Through temptations manifold,
Comes my soul like burnished gold."

London, Ontario

The weekly meeting of the Alert Circle of Oriole Girls was held at the home of the supervisor, Sister Winegarden, 656 Dundas Street. The meeting was opened with song and prayer, then the roll call. During the evening Sister Annie Sheridan gave the girls a very interesting lesson on how to make paper roses. At the close Sister Winegarden served a dainty lunch.

Brother Charles Insell spent the week-end in Toronto. He attended the church services while there.

We are pleased to state that Sister Cake, who went through an operation at the hospital, is improving quite rapidly. She was brought home last week. The Lord remembered her through administration.

On February 19 and 20 the annual young people's convention of the London District was held in our church.

On Saturday afternoon all the young people met at the town hall, in London East, and participated in games of volley ball and basket ball. Everyone entered the games with enthusiasm, and all voted a very enjoyable afternoon. From the town hall the crowd proceeded to the church, where a banquet had been prepared by the sisters. This part of the program was much enjoyed. At eight o'clock Elder Peterson gave a very interesting lecture on "Gleanings of thirty-seven years of missionary life," illustrating it with lantern slides. This lecture proved to be instructive and interesting, as it centered around the Society Islands. On Sunday morning, from nine to eleven, Patriarch John Shields was in charge of the prayer meeting; a marked degree of the Spirit was felt by all present at this meeting. At eleven o'clock Bishop John Dent, of Bothwell, occupied the pulpit, preaching on "The temporal law." At three in the afternoon Elder Peterson spoke on "The vision of 1827"; and following this, Elder G. C. Tomlinson jr., our district president, spoke on "The vision of 1927." Elder William Grice occupied in the evening. The other branches of the district were well represented at our convention, and we felt that it had been a success from beginning to end.

Sister Thomas Timbrell has been suffering from a severe cold. It centered with painful swelling of the side of her face. We are pleased to see Sister Martha at church again. Sister Maker is able to be around after a very severe sickness. Sister Emma is an active worker in the Department of Women. We are pleased that she is on duty again. Grandma Harrison and "Auntie" Likins have been quite ill of late. We are pleased to state that they are able to be around again. Sister Winegarden is improving after quite a siege of illness the past few weeks.

Brother Harry Simpson had the misfortune to cut his hand the other week. Blood poison set in, and he was quite ill for a few days. He was in his place in the Royal Oak Bible Class Sunday.

London Church was the scene of a quiet marriage ceremony on the forenoon of February 26, when Sister Florence Marie Smith, daughter of Elder David Smith and wife, of Stratford, became the bride of Doctor William Henry Wadland, of Iverness, Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia. The bride was attended by Miss Jessie Wadland, sister of the groom; Wilfred Smith, brother of the bride, acted as best man. Evangelist John Shields pronounced the ceremony. The young couple will visit relatives at London, Stratford, Hickson, and elsewhere for about a month, after which they will make their home at Iverness, where the doctor has a good practice. Doctor Wadland is a grandson of Grandma Barnes, of Owen Sound.

Elder Winegarden is home after enjoying a very pleasant trip to Texas with a group of business men.

Elder Shields, Elder Gray, Priest C. Insell, and Priest W. A. Alford, have occupied our pulpit recently with very instructive discourses. The services were materially aided by the choir. Members of this group look very well in their new surplices.

There has been quite a bit of illness among the Saints this month, and our pastor, J. MacGregor, has been kept busy with branch duties.

Brother and Sister Shaw have returned to Toronto. We are sorry to lose them, for they were both active workers in this branch, Brother Shaw being our chorister and Sister Shaw one of the officers of the Department of Women. Our loss is Toronto's gain. Brother and Sister Shaw had won the hearts of many of the Saints while they were with us, and many expressions of regret were made when it was learned they were leaving.

Our Direction

When the Lord took the children of Israel by the hand to lead them out of bondage, he desired them to choose the course that would lead them to the tree of life. They, however, were not willing to go in the way they should go, to walk the pathway mapped out for them, and so they met with dismal failure. At the time they were led out of Egypt, the Lord said unto Moses, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." The course that he desired them to pursue was the forward course, and this is still his desire concerning us—that we go forward. Strange as it may seem, mankind is always determined to take a course different from the one the Lord would have them pursue, for he wants men to continue to go forward in a steady and untiring manner. The reason God would have us go forward is that life, peace, happiness, accomplishment, and worthy achievements lie ahead; they can be reached only by going on in the forward movement. The divine call that is still being sounded to the church is the forward call.

The issue is a grave one, and I am just wondering how fully we have considered it! Surely my success or my failure in life is to be determined by the direction I choose to take. If I would become the possessor of the best, I must move in the direction of the best. I should remember always that if I would lay hold on anything I must pursue it until it is fully apprehended by me. If one in his labors would achieve the highest and the best, he must choose his direction: he must determine the course he is to take. Unless he does this, he can hope to realize nothing but failure and disappointment.

Israel of old desired to kill their God-given leader and to appoint unto themselves a captain who should go before them, that they might return into Egypt. They died in the wilderness of sin as a result of their choice. This backward movement always spells failure; it must always bring disappointment and death to the person or people who choose to pursue it. Only when we choose a forward course will we be able to make progress. Our direction, then, must be constantly forward and not backward, for only in the forward course can we hope to realize the things that are worth while.

Our program must be faith inspiring and not discouraging; it must be constructive and not destructive; it must be sympathetic and not scathing; it must be such as shall lead men toward God, not away from him. Surely we can afford to consider this matter well!

It is encouraging that the slogan of the church is "Forward to 1930," and not "Backward to 1830." There is a wonderful difference between a forward and a backward course; the directions are opposite. May we not carefully weigh the matter, and in the spirit of meekness and of wisdom determine our course! As we move forward we shall come to share more and more the Spirit of the divine One, and under this influence we shall be able to inspire and encourage all with whom we come in contact to move forward with us. The forward course is a pathway of progress; it is a line of advancement; it holds many goals that may be reached and passed by us. May we not have the courage and determination to choose the forward course, the direction that leads to success, and continue to pursue it until we have entered into the highest and best?

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

Pensacola, Florida

February 25.—We feel to say at this time Pensacola Saints are moving forward in each line of work, and the outlook is encouraging at the present writing. We are having good attendance in both Sunday school services and other branch meetings.

Our district conference convened at Milton February 18 and 19, and we indeed feel strengthened because of such good attendance and for having been privileged to have with us such noble speakers as Brother T. C. Kelley, Brother A. H. Parsons, and J. W. A. Bailey, with the officers of the district and our local priesthood.

Many encouraging words were spoken, and a good portion of God's Holy Spirit was enjoyed. We feel the load is not nearly so heavy with so many good things to help us along life's way, and when we can come in such close communion with God, feeling his presence near, as we did there. It indeed makes us rejoice in the glorious work of our Lord and Savior. When we turn to him, he is ever near.

Those attending the conference from Pensacola were the McBrides, Rows, Sister Bonee, and T. F. Morgan, and these were able to persuade Brother Parsons to come to Pensacola for the evening service. Here he preached an encouraging sermon. With Brother Parsons was his faithful wife and daughter, also Mrs. Stockwood and Sister Starks, of New Port Richey, Florida, and Sister Chevalier, of Tampa. After services they spent the night with Brother and Sister Row, leaving at six o'clock Monday morning for home. We were sorry they could not stay longer and visit in our city, but as they were traveling in Sister Stockwood's Studebaker and the roads were not so good, they were compelled to leave. We hope we may have this same party with us again.

Saints of this local enjoyed having for Tuesday and Wednesday of the past week Patriarch T. C. Kelley, who preached both nights to a fair-sized audience. Brother Kelley always comes into our midst as one who inspires the souls of all those who will hear, and supplies the spiritual lives with food divine. Because of our long association with him, we throughout the South have learned to look to him as a spiritual father, and trust he can come back in the near future.

We were also looking for Brothers J. W. A. Bailey and T. M. Carr, but they failed to reach here in time for the meetings. They were motoring through from Bay Minette, Alabama, in Brother Bailey's Ford, but found the bridges overflowed by water, and because the Ford could not swim they did not get here. But Brother Bailey came through Thursday to conference, and some one could have bought a car cheap just then. We hope to have these brothers with us later, and trust Brother Carr will not meet such discouragement next time.

We were made sad on January 16 when Brother McDaniel Dixon and Sister Maud Marquis received news that their mother had been seriously burned at Brewton, Alabama. Aunt Lisa Dixon, as we knew her, had in visiting her children here made many friends. She was beyond her seventieth milestone and had lived for the greater portion of this time in the gospel. We will miss her at reunion this year, for she was always there when able to attend. We extend sympathy to her loved ones who are left to mourn.

Sister Delilah Kelley is improving after a serious illness, and we are hoping she will soon be out to church with us again. Sister Merle Blue is almost recovered after having her tonsils removed, but we are sorry Mr. Blue is shipping over for another term with Uncle Sam. This will take them away from us at this place, and we had hoped they would locate here.

Brother Wilson Railey is missed from his post of duty. He has a three months' vacation on account of his health and is spending this time near his home in Bonifay. We will be glad when his vacation is over.

Sister Hazel Keen and Mr. Keen are rejoicing over a baby boy who has come to make his home with them. This is their first child, and they are wearing a smile which does not easily wear off. He is known as Charles Rupert. Also Sister Trehern and husband are the proud parents of a little girl, born February 7.

We are glad to see our church building standing straight again, it having been left out of plumb by the fall storm.

That this year will be a success, and we may be found looking Zionward and marching onward and steadily toward a perfect day, is our hope and prayer.

Sperry, Oklahoma

The sacrament of February 6 was well attended by the young people as well as the older Saints, and to the writer's mind it was one long to be remembered.

Brother Lonzo Harper started the year off with a church history class. This is something new in our Sunday school, and we hope that Brother Harper, with about fifteen to start, will keep his good work up.

On February 8 our pastor was called to administer to Brother J. W. Resner, who lives near Collinsville, Oklahoma. Our brother has been a member of the church since early life; was also a Civil War veteran, being eighty-nine years old. His church always was first in his mind, and he received that rest that he had asked for. Our brother has gone to meet his God and his companion. His wife preceded him about a year ago. His body was shipped to Neosho, Missouri, for burial.

February 28 was another sad day for us. Sister Barton was laid to rest. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at this place. Our pastor was called to officiate, he being a long-time friend of the family. Brother Rumsey had Brother J. W. Davis to assist him. The Saints' Church was filled to capacity. Sister Barton was a pioneer of her church in this locality. She was Sunday school superintendent in early days, and her life was devoted to her family and to the community at large. The people of this district have lost a faithful friend. The discourse was very comforting, and many hearts were made to feel the strong influence of wanting to obey the gospel.

The young people of Sperry are always active. The senior Religio class gave a reception Thursday night, February 24, in honor of Brother J. W. Davis, who is holding a series of meetings at this place. The reception consisted of a few games, some light refreshments, and several talks from the visiting guest. It is reported that Sister Goldy Anderson, with her charming personality, made the hit of the evening. The function was most entertaining, as well as worth while.

Florida's Most Successful Conference

The conference of the Florida District convened at Milton, Florida, February 18 and 19, with Brother A. D. McCall in charge. It was said of this conference that it was the most successful one ever held in this district.

We were glad to have so many visiting Saints with us this time. Several members, from De Funiak Springs, who in isolation have been very closely associated with some of the Utah Church people, were privileged to be in their own church for the first time and were deeply rejoiced to attend.

Brother Parsons, wife and daughter, Sister Stockwood, Sister Starks, of New Port Richey, and Sister Chevalier, of Tampa, were visitors from south Florida, and were indeed an inspiration to the people of this district.

Saturday evening at 7.45 services were conducted by Brother A. H. Parsons, and this was one of the several sermons so uplifting and helpful. Truly there were many thirsty souls waiting for the water of life so freely given. It seems good to meet one who has been on board the old ship Zion on almost all of her rough voyages and yet is able to say, "Saints, stay on board the one true ship, for she is able to carry you across. She may hit some rough rocks and give us a few jolts, but we must stand by the church, for it is the only true and original one." His soul-inspiring words brought forth tears of rejoicing, and the sweet bonds of unity and love were strengthened.

Prayer meeting at 8.30 Sunday morning was well attended, and the testimonies and prayers are long to be remembered. The Spirit of the Lord was there to bless.

District Sunday school convened at 9.45, with Brother S. G. Allen in charge. This was an instructive period, and Brother Bailey with his extensive knowledge of history helped us to link up many of the periods of God's dealings with his children to the present dispensation of time in such a manner that we could greatly appreciate our opportunity of being Saints in the latter days.

The morning sermon was delivered by Brother T. C. Kelley, who is as a father to the people of this district. One may know how we appreciate this dear brother for his lovable character. As a shepherd watcheth his flock, so he has watched over us. We hope it may be our privilege to have him with us again.

At the noon hour a basket dinner was spread, and we shared our temporal blessings. We greatly enjoyed and appreciated the hospitality of the Milton Group of Saints. The 2.30 service was in charge of Brother Parsons and proved to be as wonderful as the first. He was humbly thanked by our district president, Brother McCall, for the valuable service rendered this conference. And though it seemed we could hardly say good-by to this dear brother, he was bidden God-speed in his good work. Brother Johnson arose to say that God's Spirit had witnessed to him that this was truly a servant of God. So amid thanks and tears, he left us. We hope he will soon return.

Brother Kelley spoke Sunday night, and as usual his talk was most instructive and greatly appreciated.

We are already anticipating the next conference, which will be held at Dixonville, Alabama, and trust everything will be just as inspiring as it was at this one.

The statistical data of this gathering will be reported by Brother C. T. West in the conference minutes.

MRS. L. J. McBRIDE.

BATTLE LAKE, MINNESOTA, February 28.—The long, hard winter is drawing to a close, but it will probably be several weeks yet before regular services can be held. There were about two and a half feet of snow on the level, and in spite of a few unseasonably warm days, most of it is with us yet, making travel very difficult and even dangerous.

There has been considerable sickness during the winter, especially among the older ones. Sister O. Albertson, of Battle Lake, has been confined to the house all winter and is longing for spring to come and an occasional opportunity to attend church. Brother Abner Tucker, who is nearing eighty, has been seriously sick at his home in Deer Creek, and the family and attending physician despaired of his life, but he is now on the road to recovery. The members of the branch feel that their prayers have been answered affirmatively, and that the administrations of the branch president have been effective.

A small Sunday school class has been holding sessions in Frazee during the winter, sponsored by Sister J. W. O'Neil, who returned last fall from Canada, where she and Brother O'Neil have made their home for several years, but who now expect to remain in the States. Religio meetings were held weekly at the homes of the Hornes, in Almora, and at F. P. Tucker's home in Deer Creek, until the illness of Brother Tucker made it necessary to discontinue them. On the whole, the experiences of the winter, many of which have bordered on hardship, have been strengthening to the faith of the Saints.

Special Meetings at Detroit

We have been feasting on good things here in Detroit for three weeks, and feel that we should spread the good news that others may be encouraged.

Brother J. F. Martin has been with us in a series of young people's meetings, starting at the East Side Church, then on to Central, thence to Highland Park, and finally back to Central for Saturday and Sunday, to close in a district young people's convention.

The interest all through was very good, and the talks were of a type which seemed every time to fit the need. The last night at Highland Park was closed by the holding of a social time in the basement after the service. There we had a short program and incidentally helped to remind Brother Koehler of his birthday. Brothers Martin and Koehler were presented a memorandum outfit.

The young people's convention met on Saturday night at Central Church and were entertained by the choir from Windsor, Ontario, and a talk by Elder B. H. Doty. We then went to "regions below" where a good time was had playing games.

On Sunday, at nine in the morning, prayer service was held, and it has been spoken of since how the spirit of real joy seemed to control the whole convention.

Professor Henderson, of Ann Arbor University, talked on "Human nature and the changing order." He is a most interesting and instructive speaker. We also had a Chinese brother, whose name I do not recall, speak to us on the Chinese problem, "What young China expects from young America." This was followed by a talk, "The Chinese problem and our relationship to it," by Brother Tomlinson, of London, Canada.

In the afternoon there was a baptismal service in the basement, and a baby was blessed. The candidates were confirmed in the evening, when Brother Martin preached his farewell to a crowded house. We have learned to love him and pray that he may be blessed in his efforts wherever he goes.

Detroit is busy, more so than for a long time. The priesthood and their wives or sweethearts are to have a banquet, February 28, Monday.

Brother Noble C. Gault was recently ordained to the office of deacon. Others are trying to qualify for service, and while listening to Brother Martin have sensed their duty.

Truly that which we have sung about so long is really coming to pass—God is marshaling his army—some are training for leadership, some to lead in that great orchestra that shall lead us on singing as we go. Can you not almost see them?

May God's servants be blessed with his Spirit, that they may preach with power and much assurance, fearless of the world's criticisms. Let us move on. NETTIE M. GAULT.

Second Columbus Branch

February 28.—At the close of the first month of the new year, another sacramental meeting marked the opening of the second month. Many beautiful testimonies were given, and the Spirit was present to encourage. At the evening service of the day the choir sang an anthem, "Zion the beautiful," and Robert Willison sang a tenor solo, "On life's highway." Bishop H. E. French read for a lesson John 10: 1-13, taking for a text, "I am come that they might have life and have it more abundantly."

The Department of Women met on the 10th at the home of Sister Ferrel, 358 Welch Avenue, and a pleasant hour was spent in study. Everyone enjoyed the lunch and social hour.

February 13, at half past ten, G. H. Kirkendall preached an interesting sermon.

In the evening Elder C. W. Clark took for a theme, "Religious education." This sermon was enjoyed by all and gave us a greater desire to prepare ourselves for future service.

The Temple Builders gave a valentine party on the evening of February 15, and everyone had a good time.

The following Sunday Elder A. H. Nieman occupied the morning hour, taking for a theme, "God calls men into the work." That evening Elder G. H. Kirkendall preached a good discourse.

The Department of Women gave a box social on Washington's Birthday, following it with an interesting program.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson met in prayer meeting with us on the 23d. We enjoyed the instruction given, and hope he will soon come again.

The Temple Builders sang on our Sunday school program. We hope to hear them again.

The basket ball team won last Thursday night, and we are proud of the splendid work they are doing.

On the morning of the 27th, Brother Kirkendall read for a lesson Psalms 124, and followed it up with an instructive discourse. In the evening Bishop H. E. French preached one of his excellent sermons, taking for a text Proverbs 23: 7: "For as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Edmonton, Alberta

February 22.—Having entered well into the new year and come through a steady cold winter, the Edmonton Branch still has some life. At times our attendance was small on account of sickness and weather conditions, but with the spring weather and that feeling which accompanies, we look for a fresh impetus.

At our business meeting the branch president, Elder H. B. Seaman, was retained, together with the personnel of the 1926 corps of officers. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely and gaining in attendance. We hope to double our number and make 1927 a banner year. The adult grade has adopted the study of the doctrinal course and finds in it much food for thought.

We note with pleasure that our Sunday school chorister shows preparedness in the selection of hymns. So far as possible, each of the three classes has a hymn bearing on the lesson topic for the day.

On Sunday morning, February 13, at eleven o'clock a few Saints assembled at the Y. M. C. A. swimming pool to witness the baptism of two of our Sunday school scholars, the children of Brother and Sister A. L. Nuckles, Pauline and Willie. They were led into the watery grave by the branch president, Brother Seaman, and during the Sunday school hour were confirmed under the hands of Brothers Osler and Seaman.

Two of our brethren are in the city hospitals. Brother Reginald Lambert, of Onaway, Alberta, son of Elder F. Lambert, was operated upon for appendicitis, and is progressing nicely. Brother Thomas Muir was threatened with pneumonia, but we are glad to report it has been checked.

Elder William Osler, district president for Alberta, has been visiting his home in the city for the past three weeks. He occupied the pulpit on each of the Sunday evenings. He leaves again for his field of labor this week-end.

Colorado Springs, Colorado

February 24.—Since our last report, several have moved away from our branch. Those whose faces we shall miss are the Roots, Salyardses, and Taylors. Brother and Sister W. B. Root are spending the winter in Houston, Texas. Brother and Sister R. S. Salyards, jr., and family have moved to Denver, Brother Salyards having secured a position with the Denver & Salt Lake Railroad. Brother and Sister Harvey Taylor and family have moved onto a farm near Canton, Missouri. We hope others will move here to help us carry on the church work.

Thursday evening, February 17, nearly every member in the branch gathered in our church basement to partake of a cafeteria supper, served by the Department of Women. After supper a short program and games were enjoyed by all. This was our first supper in the basement since the cement floor has been laid. We feel the need of these gatherings, as well as the need of the proceeds for our church debt.

During January, February, and March, we are holding cottage prayer meetings. In this way we reach many who do not attend prayer meeting at the church. Elder Bruce E. Brown, our pastor, has been absent from us six weeks, laboring among the branches throughout the district. In his absence Elder J. D. Curtis has been preaching some fine sermons. Brother Curtis has moved his family out on his ranch twenty miles east of Colorado Springs. A number from here are planning on attending district conference, which will be held in Denver, February 27 and 28.

Writes of Good Alabama Conference

We are glad of the spirit which prevailed at our district conference which convened at Bay Minette, Alabama, February 12, and are able to look forward to a better year in the district as a whole. Conditions in the branches are cheering.

As speakers at Bay Minette, we had Elders T. C. Kelley and J. W. A. Bailey. Brother Kelley had to leave us to be at the deathbed of an old friend. Brother Bailey, however, was with us till Monday, the 14th. We received good mental and spiritual food and enjoyed a deep spirit of fellowship in our services despite the thunder of rain on the church roof.

There was an all-day meeting Sunday, and basket dinner in the church because of the rain.

Tuesday Brother Bailey and I started for Pensacola, Florida, in his car, but had to retrace the thirty miles made when we encountered a river four times its usual size. We returned to Bay Minette, and as it was then too late to reach Pensacola by train in time for services, I returned to Mobile, hoping Elder Kelley's connections had been better. Brother Kelley had announced our presence there that night; we gave up our attempt, hoping he had been able to fill the engagement.

We often wish we could experience the large gatherings of the center places, and at other times wish those center places could be with us to assist to direct and to fill some of our needs.

Kirtland Celebrates Word of Wisdom Anniversary

Kirtland Temple was recently the scene of special services to honor the coming forth of the revelation contained in Doctrine and Covenants, section 86, more familiarly spoken of among Latter Day Saints as the Word of Wisdom. The service here reported was to have taken place on Sunday, February 27, as it was on that date in 1833 that the revelation was given, but as our district conference convenes on that day, the service was moved to the preceding Sunday, the second of which the sisters of our Patrician Class occupied seats directly before the rostrum and in their dresses of white, symbolizing purity, unity, and simplicity, sang their class songs, "I would be pure," and "Consecration." The class leader, Earnest A. Webbe, delivered the address, a synopsis of which is presented in response to several requests; the scripture reading was from John 14. He said: I want to write on this blackboard, this morning, my text as found in the second verse of the chapter read a while ago, "In my Father's house . . . are many man's sions." You notice I have written that rather oddly. It is for a purpose: that you may follow an analysis you have perhaps not seen before. We may be a bit mystified in thinking of a house full of mansions, but when we think that a "house" in biblical terms most often stood for "household," as "the house of David," "as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord," and other like expressions, I know you will permit me to fill in that space with these four letters "h-o-l-d." Now we will look at the last word of our text and reduce this word mansions to more understandable terms to most of us. As an old-fashioned word, we may think of journeying into some Old World district and inquiring for the chief man of the community. We would in all likelihood be directed to the mansion house, the house of the chief man, the man of most responsibility in that place. It is so in the South today, in places where they have not moved so fast as here in the North. We are also reminded of the famed Mansion House of Nauvoo and of Joseph Smith, are we not?

Now we would call your attention to the fact that in many of the psalms and elsewhere you will note the spelling of the word Sion, that seems to mean all that we mean in Zion; but I want to go further and introduce the word here on this board of scion, using it in the same relation as the above. And what may a scion be? In family pedigree it means one in, whom our hopes are placed to carry on in honor; one who by divine right and worthiness will inherit the honor and renown of his house or family and be jealous of its interests. In the plant world it is a "slip off the old stock"; if from the grape vine, one in which we expect to see develop all the sweetness and lusciousness that made the parent desirable and profitable; if from the rose bush, then we shall look for all that beauty and fragrance that made its parent a joy to possess.

I hope you see that I am not only calling your attention to inherent possibilities, but to inherent responsibilities. What is expected of us as children of the Most High? These thoughts should search our beings more often and lead us to question just why we are not recipients of these blessings and powers we have read about this morning—or are these empty words of the Master when he says, "Greater works than these shall ye do"? If we wonder at that, we may find a clue—a means of understanding—in this 17th verse, for the ministrations of the spirit of truth may be enjoyed by us to the extent we are willing to receive, and that is something that the world can not receive! Our trouble is that we are trying largely to walk with one foot in the world and one in the kingdom of God. It can't be done, for as much as we are of the world, just so much we can not receive of the spirit of truth, who is to teach us all things and is to give us comfort by the way.

Jesus shows us that we prove our faith in him as a Savior by remembrance of his counsel and by doing the things commanded us. Protestations of love alone mean little. How many of you here this morning but can call to mind readily some son (or daughter) that vows love for mother or father—aye, would fight, if needs be, any who would insult their good name—yet at the same time are themselves breaking their parent's heart! It is a common thing. Love is expressed best in sacrifice of selfish ends; in losing all, in that respect, we gain everything worth while.

Our real faith in Christ is shown in honoring his counsel, and the spirit of truth he sends us will bring to our remembrance the things really necessary for salvation. We confess a personal Savior and Redeemer, but do we as often recognize the reality of a latter-day destroyer? And how much do we lend ourselves to his activities? We would not be so lethargic in the matter of associating health with our religious program if we gave this more thought, and I call your attention this morning again to the reason given for the Word of Wisdom coming to us: "In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you and forewarn you." That is something we can not lightly pass by; and much as we may construe the following counsel to come within any interpretation that will most favor us, there is a biologic and scientific basis for that counsel which the most intelligent minds of this age are recognizing. But we must be open-minded to the pleadings of that Spirit that will lead us into all truth if we would enjoy the promise, "And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel, and marrow in their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint; and I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen." It seems to me that here is a very tangible key to wisdom, something we can all do in greater measure; I have emphasized those hidden treasures of knowledge, because they are surely of the kind the world can not receive, because only under the power of the spirit of truth to give, and are not given but to those receptive through worthiness. Let me illustrate: I read the other day from some great educator that it takes four years to properly instill an idea in the average college student's brain; but once in, it takes twenty-five years to eradicate that idea—if a wrong one. This may account for much "science, falsely so-called," that has to be corrected at a later date, but I want you to consider those four years of study and realize that time is but a relative expression—a thousand years is but a day with Divinity—and the person placing himself in the place of blessing may receive in a few moments under the teaching of the Spirit more than can be acquired in months of mental toil. This we call revelation, and it is the solid rock foundation of our church. Understand there must exist both the reason for the knowledge being given and the worthiness and conformity to principle on the part of the recipient. There is a great amount of "knowledge" in the world which of itself may be good or bad. Some one has said, "There is knowledge divine and knowledge diabolical." Wisdom is the ability to apply true knowledge for good.

We are warned in this day about conspiring men who, for gain of course, make capital out of our dependency upon systems of food supply evolved out of our complex civilization. It is a sad fact that we take into our beings all manner of concoctions that we have been taught, by advertising, etc., are "the thing" for us. This is a thralldom we must free ourselves from, and I will turn to the blackboard again and show if possible the case of a theoretical John Brown whom I have persuaded the gospel is right, but he can see little difference between us and other good folks, in church and out. John Brown is somewhat pessimistic, because he has a hard row to hoe for a good-sized family, and times are always more or less "hard" for him. You see, he is just an average family man, just such as make up the great body of our own church. What can I do for him to help solve his problem? I determine to show him the utility of something more than new hymns, and a changed church service; for do we not claim direct revelation from the Master of Life? Here we have some help, "showing forth the order and will of God in the temporal salvation of all saints in the last days." This John Brown is open-minded and will listen. He can save say five cents a day on tobacco; another five cents a day on coffee; and five cents a day on condiments—those things people with strong tastes have to coddle their palates with! Then we cut down the butcher bill ten cents a day, and because of these common-sense economies we can safely say another saving of five cents a day for medicines, etc. So that our example looks like this:

Cut out tobacco	and save	5c a day or	$ 18.25 yearly
Cut out coffee	and save	5c a day or	18.25 yearly
Cut out condiments	and save	5c a day or	18.25 yearly
Cut down meat	and save	10c a day or	36.50 yearly
Cut down medicines	and save	5c a day or	18.25 yearly
			$109.50

Which in 20 years is	$2,190.00
Plus interest	120.00
	$2,310.00

"Why!" says Honest John Brown, "that's the very amount of the mortgage I've been worrying about, that I don't seem to be making any headway on reducing." "Yes," we can answer, "if you remember to keep and do these sayings, they will prove your temporal salvation."

We have helped John Brown to come in, and he will have something to present when undertaking the responsibility of stewardship. Look at it as we may, we all have our stewardships, or responsibilities. It is only lately we have rediscovered that great principle given so early in our church history. It is not alone among the early distinguishing marks of the church that we have so long neglected. Some day the Word of Wisdom will be duly heeded. Will that be before the long-promised endowment of the Spirit? or will that endowment come because we have remembered to keep and do the things that will bring it? Here in this place, Kirtland, where it was first heard, we shall try to see that it becomes better known and of help to the church itself. Of old they questioned, "How shall they hear without a teacher, and how shall they teach except they be sent?" Today we should ask, "How can we teach that which we have not made ourselves acquainted with?"

May many be constrained to put themselves in the place where the Spirit will qualify them to bring more abundant life, health, and happiness to our people, for in our Father's household this, surely, is not the least of its many responsibilities.

KLDS Radio Flashes

Guelph, Ontario.—I am listening to your station, which is coming in good and plain. I am enjoying Apostle Williams's discourse and also the other talent. With the prayer of Brother Smith comes the good old spirit of the gospel. I believe it is doing a good work.—J. R. Hockaday, 81 Arthur Street.

Denison, Kansas.—We have just listened to the graded Sunday school lessons being broadcast. We want to say we appreciate very much these helpful talks. There is so much jazz on the air, it is a real pleasure to run across something so good and helpful. I know there must be many people who do not go to church or study God's word, who will hear some of these talks and be helped by them.—B. E. Daniel and family.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

All the departments of the church are manifesting a deep interest in finding their places, and to occupy in the most efficient way, to work together so as to bring about greater unity and spirituality. Deep and prayerful interest is evidenced on the part of officials and members of the branch in the work of the coming General Conference and in the literary work of the church.

The Department of Women has contributed in every way for the promotion of the church work, socially, spiritually, and financially. They have assisted the branch during the immediate past, as is shown by the report of the financial clerk for the last three months, December, January, and February, to the amount of $376.02. The aid society of this department is meeting with interest in its work, and every part of the department is demonstrating real interest. There are seven chapters of Temple Builders, three circles of the Orioles, and one of Bluebirds. Those in charge of the boys' work are showing deeper interest.

The musical department gave a rendition of the cantata "Daniel" at the evening service of March 6, which is spoken of very highly. They have shown their interest in their work by many nights of rehearsal.

The city daily paper gave an excellent notice of the rendering of "Daniel," and have shown great kindness in the space given for notices of our services, for which we are very grateful.

The district, sponsored by the Sunday School Department, held an institute for three days, consisting of two sermons, and seven special sessions, conducted by General Superintendent Charles B. Woodstock and Sister R. Baldwin, all of which were very beneficial, both to the teachers and those taught, if we can believe what we have heard, and what we have heard is not rumor. A unanimous expression favorable to another institute in the district in the near future was expressed.

Many changes are being made in the records of the branch of late, many being transferred to other places, some being transferred to the branch, and several baptisms recorded, six in the last month.

The mission work of Elder W. I. Fligg both privately and publicly is highly spoken of, and many have been turned toward a higher ideal of life. His work, preceded by the evangelistic work of Brother R. Baldwin, has resulted, we think, in much good and a deeper conception of what the church means to us. Brother E. Y. Hunker was with us the 6th and gave assistance. He gave a talk to the priesthood, emphasizing the fact that the priesthood of the church should all be teachers, although all might not be given the gift of the ministry or preaching. Every member of the church should be taught and thus become a teacher to others.

There have been many sick of late, some of the cases very serious, and some are still lingering, seeking the Lord to increase their faith that they might give God all the glory for their relief. All have received relief, some of which has been marvelous. God has been very near his Saints, and with power over disease has blessed his servants in their ministrations. We are rejoicing in this, and those who have ever known the work of God can not help but rejoice with us. God has done many wonderful things in the past, he is doing many wonderful things now.

Some of those who were stumbling in their way as members of the church, have seen, and are correcting their lack of faith, and are rejoicing in divine grace and mercy that God and his people have extended to them, and in the active service of the church are showing the joy they feel, and the faithful Saints are rejoicing in their joy. God and his servants are reaching out after the wandering ones, and so far as they are willing to accept the interest shown both by God and his people we feel the church has not lost its love for all her children.

It is apparent from what is evidenced publicly by both the press and pulpit, that too much of a favorable interest is shown in that which had its origin in and was sponsored by apostasy from primitive truth. Such things have no place in either the Reformation or Restoration, and to favor them is to favor the outgrowth of apostasy. The Restoration has sufficient in the three authoritatively accepted books of the church, the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants, to save, and to occupy all the time, talents, and developed ability we possess. The changed sentiment in reference to the sacredness of the marriage covenant by some of the divines and jurists shows a definite downward tendency—a tendency to accept of what the people are doing as a basis of what is right to do.

We have just learned of the accident which has happened to Mother Elizabeth Currie, with whom many in the church and specially in the district are acquainted. She is now nearing her eighty-eighth birthday, and yet God has much blessed her, and while lame and sore, she is recovering from an injury to her back received in a fall.

Brother Martin Writes of the Work at Detroit

I arrived here Tuesday from Detroit, where I just finished a most interesting three weeks' series of meetings. At the urgent request of Brother T. S. Williams, I went to Detroit and began a series of young people's meetings February 6. I held forth at the East Side Church, the Central Church, and the Highland Park Church, a week in each place, and concluded the effort with a young people's convention, February 26 and 27, at Central Church. I am pleased to say that this was one of the most successful campaigns it has ever been my privilege to take part in. It would have stirred your soul to see the splendid response the Saints gave to our efforts, and if you could have been present last Sunday evening at the closing service of the campaign and witnessed the Central Church packed to the doors, surely you would have said the work is onward in Detroit.

I have been visiting Detroit at intervals for the last four or five years, and I have never seen a better interest, a stronger spirit of cooperation, and a greater determination to move forward in the Lord's work than I witnessed there on this last visit. This improved condition speaks well for the untiring efforts of Brother Williams. He, in his quiet, unassuming, but persistent way has been able to break down many of the barriers that have impeded the progress of the Detroit Branch and is gradually putting into operation a program that bids fair to make the Detroit Branch one of the best organized and most progressive in the church. In my opinion he surely has proved to be the right man for the place.

I was urged to remain in Detroit for the priesthood banquet Monday night, February 28, and it thrilled my soul to see about seventy-five members of the priesthood of the Detroit Branch together with their wives or sweethearts (about one hundred and fifty altogether) assembled under the most pleasant circumstances and sweetest influence it has been my privilege to experience at a priesthood gathering. At this time the pastor outlined the program for the future, and representatives of the various branches of the priesthood responded enthusiastically with pledges of support. The women's work was represented by a speaker. Altogether it was one of the biggest things that has happened in Detroit in a long time to strengthen the tie of fellowship and bring about a stronger feeling of unity.

I arrived in Owen Sound Tuesday night and found Brother J. F. Curtis on the job. He and I have taken turns at preaching thus far. Tomorrow he goes to other points, and I will continue here until the 13th and then proceed to other points in the district or possibly to London as regulated by Brother Tomlinson, jr., president of the London District.

JOHN F. MARTIN.

OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO, March 3.

Runnells, Iowa

A junior choir has been organized under the leadership of Sisters Nora Park and Mabel Miller. The attendance varies from twenty to twenty-five boys and girls, and they meet each Friday night. The choir is composed of members of three Sunday schools. Progress is manifested. One public appearance at the Christian church is all that has been made to date. We are hoping they will decide to sing at some of our services soon.

On the night of February 25 Brother Verne Deskin came down to help them, and "Steve" Robinson came, too, to put them through some games after practice. A fine time was enjoyed, as the church was filled with youthful voices in song, and later with sounds of merriment as Steve put them through their stunts in the basement. Pop corn balls and candy were served before dismissal. Thamer Warren came up from Graceland to visit home folks and was present on this occasion. We enjoyed meeting him again, but his visit was too short.

Cupid reports the marriage of Sister Lola White and Brother Bert Harvey on New Year's Day, and that of Sister Lois Heiny and Mr. William Bowers on February 16.

Sisters Mabel Freel and Grace Tingle have joined their husbands in Saint Louis, Missouri.

Another baptism took place in the Des Moines church Sunday, February 27, a daughter of Maxwell Smith, of Vandalia, being the new member. Velma is fifteen years old.

Ralph and Anna Wicker stopped for a brief visit Friday evening on their way to Pleasantville to see his father, who is very ill with dropsy. Reminiscences were enjoyed, of days not so long ago, when they were active members of the branch. Another branch has claimed them, and they are very busy at Creston, Iowa. They are advancing with the church, for which we are grateful.

The Ladies' Guild of the Christian church served a supper in our church basement the evening of March 5. This was a rainy evening, but they had a good crowd and enjoyed using the equipment of the Saints.

The funeral of Doctor Joshua H. Kern was held from the church on Washington's Birthday. He was one of the old-fashioned country doctors and a friend of the poor people. Doctor Kern always liked to attend the Saints in their illness, because he realized the value of administration even though he was not a member of the church. Reverend Cole, pastor of Capitol Hill Church of Christ in Des Moines, preached the sermon, being assisted by C. E. McDonald. A large crowd of sympathizing friends filled every seat in the building, and many stood reverently outside during the service. His was a useful life, spent largely in the service of his fellows.

Moline, Illinois

March 4.—We are much pleased to report to the HERALD that the Moline Branch is progressing under the supervision of Elder E. R. Davis, district president, who, with his family, has moved here from Victoria, Illinois. Brother Harry Eckright is our assistant pastor, he and his family moving here from Clinton, Iowa, last fall. Brother Harland Cady and family moved here from Millersburg, Illinois, and Brother Cady has charge of the Sunday school. We are trying to make it a one hundred per cent school. Sister Elizabeth Dewrose, one of our own girls, has charge of the Department of Recreation and Expression, and is doing fine in interesting the young.

Mrs. Charles Ginhardt has charge of the Department of Women, and the sisters are trying to help pay the indebtedness on our church, which was incurred when we sold our church in East Moline about two years ago and purchased one at Forty-Sixth Street and Fourth Avenue, Moline. We have decided to read some of our church books, and as we read them place them in our church library for the young people to read and enjoy. This month we are going to read Timbers for the Temple, by Elbert A. Smith.

We have had an addition of about twenty-five in our membership since last fall. Saints from different parts of the district have moved here, and Sister Wendt, from the Des Moines Branch, is also with us. We have had no baptisms lately, but think the admonition "Feed my sheep" will be very practical in this day of unrest, when it is hard to keep the sheep in the fold. It is hard for us to mingle with the world and attend to church duties. The Moline Saints are noted for sociability and are glad to welcome any newcomer into our midst.

Our young brother, "Fritz" Steigel, was ordained to the office of teacher last sacrament Sunday. He is an earnest worker, and we hope he will be blessed in this office.

We all enjoy reading the SAINTS' HERALD, and get much enjoyment from "Little journeys with the editor in chief." So few of us have been permitted to personally know the editor, and "little journeys" give us a better insight and acquaintance with the real personality. The articles and letters are very encouraging.

Successful Meetings at Owen Sound

OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO.—Special services commenced in our branch upon the arrival of Apostle J. F. Curtis Sunday, February 27. Preaching every night except Saturday, with a half hour prayer meeting prior to each service, he has brought encouragement and rejoicing to the Saints here. Brother Curtis had to leave us on March 3, but Evangelist J. F. Martin arrived during the week and is continuing the meetings. All were truly glad to renew acquaintance with Apostle Curtis and equally glad to have the privilege of meeting Brother Martin, this being his first visit to our branch.

Two baptisms were consummated before the departure of Brother Curtis, one being very largely the result of his sermons. Several others are investigating, and the outlook of the work appears bright. Among these are a number of young people who seem to be quite interested in the work. At present we are enjoying Brother Martin's sermons greatly. His winning and appealing manner has touched the Saints, and he has grown to be a general favorite. We will write later concerning the results of these services.

We regret to report that Brother David Jackman and Sister Hattie Belrose are at present in the hospital. We trust that God may stretch forth his healing hand and restore them to health.

It might be of interest to some, especially Saints in the north, to learn of the marriage of Brother William J. Vance and Sister Violet Campbell. Brother Vance came here a few years ago from Spanish, Ontario, he being one of two brothers who united with the church in that place. They are the only members of quite a large family to become members of the Reorganized Church. Brother and Sister Vance are considered valuable members in our branch, and we are but voicing the sentiment of Saints and friends when we extend to them the hope that they may enjoy a very happy wedded life and that the blessings of the Master might accompany them.

Fairview, Montana

March 2.—Fairview Branch is enjoying a series of gospel services, to continue as long as interest warrants, conducted by Elders George W. Thorburn and Joseph L. Sandidge, missionaries for Montana. Attendance and attention are much better than was anticipated. The crowd gathers early and seems loath to disperse.

Many Bibles are in evidence and questions are coming in. Community singing precedes the service, and is led by Brother Thorburn. It is proving a real help. Of course the local officers are busy, too.

Detroit District Young People's Convention

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, February 27.—The eighth annual young people's convention of the Detroit District has just passed into history, and was of a kind that is most gratifying to review.

The opening gun was fired early Saturday evening, February 26, in the form of a "peppy" fifteen-minute song service conducted by Elder H. A. Koehler, which started the program off with a real "BANG." Those who know Brother Koehler, however, will hardly find anything remarkable about this.

An inspiring anthem rendered by the choir from Windsor, Ontario, contributed much to the formal opening of the program, and an address by Brother B. H. Doty on the subject, "A new vision," proved to be a very appropriate offering and was keenly appreciated.

The remainder of the Saturday evening program was devoted to social activity, with stress on both words. It is difficult to say whether the degree of sociability manifested, or the intensity of the activities should be expressed in the stronger terms. A number of games played under the direction of Brother Koehler added much zest to the occasion. Considering the large attendance at this meeting and the spontaneous enthusiasm which characterized it, truly it can be said to have been a notable success.

The next event on the convention calendar was the prayer service starting this morning at nine o'clock in charge of Elder T. S. Williams, city pastor of Detroit, Patriarch John F. Martin, and Elder B. H. Doty. The beautiful experiences related by Brother John F. Martin in the opening remarks seemed to touch a responsive chord in the heart of each one present, and the accompanying spirit which pervaded the assembly seemed to intensify the realizations of the profound realities of spiritual experiences and concepts, as they crowded the mind. It was gratifying and inspiring to hear the testimonies and prayers of these young people, as they were prompted through the influence of this spirit to voice their thoughts and sentiments. An innovation at this service, having to do with the offering of prayers, seemed to work out very satisfactorily. Several of the young people, both girls and boys, were designated from the stand to offer prayers at the beginning of the service, and all responded in a very capable and inspiring manner.

The prayer service was followed by an address from Professor W. D. Henderson, Ph. D., director of literary extension service of the University of Michigan, who took for his subject, "Human nature and the changing order," which he handled in a masterful manner. As we interpreted his message, human nature does not change, but the conditions under which man exists are constantly changing, and we are faced with the necessity of properly evaluating the new order and making wise adjustments, if we would prevent the changing conditions from overcoming us. He called attention to the marvelous changes wrought through the inventions of modern machinery and the tremendous problems that are now confronting humanity as a result, and he asked what we are going to do to make the adjustments calculated to save ourselves morally and economically from the threatened destruction.

Professor Henderson's splendid address was much appreciated by the young people, and certainly a great deal of credit is due to Brother Carlisle Whitehead, the leader of the young people, for his successful efforts in securing the services of one so eminently qualified to speak on such a subject. In fact, we wonder many times when thinking of the many other successful occasions such as this, whether those who enjoy these treats really appreciate the initiative and resourcefulness of the diminutive and retiring young man who has contributed so largely to their success. Surely the young people of the district, and of the State, too, owe much to the genius of Brother Whitehead for these enjoyable and inspiring events.

After an excellent dinner served in the basement of the church by the Department of Women of Highland Park and East Side Groups, the program was continued at 2.30 with several fine selections by the Windsor Orchestra, a solo by Sister Marion Link, of Port Huron, a scriptural reading by Brother Richard Gault, a duet by Sisters Henrietta Davis and Mina Townsend, of Detroit, and selections on the guitar by Brother Earl Hill, of Windsor.

The convention was addressed at this service by a Chinese student on the subject: "What young China expects of young America." His talk was very interesting and educational, and we feel that his appeal found a ready response in the hearts of those who are willing to call all men "brother."

Brother George Tomlinson, of Saint Mary's, Ontario, district president of the London District, then made a reply to the young man from China, using as his subject, "Our young people's contribution to China," in which he very ably voiced the sentiments of our young people.

The convention was well attended both on Saturday night and Sunday, and there were visitors from five other districts in Canada, Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan.

The closing event was a preaching service in the evening, at which Patriarch John Martin was the speaker. His subject was "Thou art come to the kingdom for such as this," and was delivered with his characteristic eloquence and sparkling illustrations. This was Brother Martin's farewell address of a three weeks' intensive campaign in the Detroit churches, and the Saints are reluctant to have him go after such a splendid opportunity to know him. We hear nothing but praise on every hand in testimony of the excellent work he has done here, and surely the profound impressions he has left in the hearts of these people can result in nothing but good. Let us pray that God may bring into his vineyard many more workers as talented and consecrated as this young man, that through them the army of the Lord may be inspired to buckle on its armor and press on to the great conquest.

EDGAR H. MONTROSS.

Good Convention at Deer Lodge

The convention held at Deer Lodge, Montana, February 19 and 20, opened with a meeting of prayer at half past nine Saturday morning. This service was well attended and preceded a study class led by Brother E. Y. Hunker on the subject, "Society and marriage in the home."

At two in the afternoon Brother Esty Smelser, our bishop's agent, gave an inspiring address on stewardships. Following this Mrs. R. M. Esgar, superintendent of the Department of Women, gave a talk on the topic, "Interior decoration of the home," putting stress on making the home cheerful and attractive by a right use of colors, artistic blendings, and correct arrangement of furnishings.

A pleasing program was presented at half past seven in the evening. It consisted of Mother Goose rhymes and characters, impersonated by small children, interspersed with solos and readings; the entertainment being arranged by Sister B. C. Johnson.

Beginning with the social hour at half past nine Sunday morning, a busy day was enjoyed. At ten Sunday school began, and eleven o'clock found the congregation awaiting a sermon by Brother E. Y. Hunker, of Independence, Missouri. Luncheon was served both days in the dining room, cafeteria style. At two, Sister G. W. Thorburn, district superintendent of Sunday schools, gave an intellectual talk in the interest of the Sunday school. Brother Harvey Eliason, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, occupied for a time; his talk concerned the recreation and play of the church. Some of the good things he said are: In play are found relaxation and rejuvenation; friendships are created. If we play together, we can work together. Play involves teamwork and cooperation.

Special music followed this service.

At eight in the evening Brother G. W. Thorburn occupied, and an hour of profit was enjoyed by all.

Two-Day Meeting at South Bend

The Saints of South Bend, Mishawaka, and surrounding territory met in a two-day meeting on February 12 and 13, and organized a branch known as the South Bend, Mishawaka, Branch. The first meeting was at half past three, in charge of Sister Hazel Dexter, of Lansing, Michigan. She gave a talk on the work of the sisters and its benefit to the church. The ladies reported a very good crowd and interest.

At half past seven in the evening Brother Harrington, district president, in charge, Brother Coonfare was ordained to the office of priest, Brother Forest Myers to the office of deacon. Following this, the organization of the branch was worked out with the following elected officers: Branch president, Carl Freeman; secretary, Myrtle Perry; treasurer, Forest Myers; solicitor, Charles A. Ferry; chorister, Lydia Myers; pianist, Lillian Freeman; priesthood members, Brothers Ferry, Coonfare, and Myers.

An hour later Sister Louise Evans, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, gave one of her talks on music which was very much appreciated. We are in need of musical training.

At half past eight the next morning prayer meeting was in charge of Brother Blett, of Grand Rapids, Michigan; and a good attendance and the Spirit was manifested. The Sunday school in charge of Brother Denny Smith, of Hammond, Indiana, our district superintendent, convened at ten o'clock. By eleven the house was well filled, and preaching service was in charge of Brother Blett. Enjoyment of the twelve o'clock dinner in the church was shared by a large group of hungry Saints.

Brother Blett had to return home two hours later, and his presence and good words were missed. Sister Hazel Dexter had charge of the afternoon women's meeting, which was well attended. At three the recreational and expressional meeting was in charge of Brother James Best, of Dowagiac, Michigan. He gave us a good talk in regard to his work with the Boy Scout work and the great benefit of the work to the boys.

At seven Sister Louise Evans instructed the orchestra in regard to its work; also the singers. Sister Evans is a great help to the church in the musical line.

At eight o'clock a preaching service commenced, Brother Harrington being the speaker. We certainly appreciate having Brother Harrington with us. This service closed two days of very instructive and profitable services.

Lansing, Michigan

In November, 1926, there was a Sunday school started in the north part of Lansing, sessions being held in a schoolhouse in that district. In January, 1927, there was a membership of sixty-three—mostly children. When other churches saw the work that was being done by us, they began collecting the children by auto loads and taking them to their Sunday schools. The storm did not last long, however, and last Sunday's report showing a total attendance of eighty-three members tells us that not much harm was done. Two weeks ago Brother Barss began preaching services in the little schoolhouse.

I wish to mention the contest in process in our Sunday school on Saint Joseph Street. The Reds and the Blues are starting a race across country by automobile—a one-thousand-mile dash. Mile points are determined by membership, attendance, and punctuality. The Blues are far in the lead at present, but of course the Reds are hopeful of reaching the goal first.

Brother Alva Dexter has recently been ordained to the office of elder, his call coming two weeks ago and the ordination taking place in Grand Rapids, Michigan, last Sunday. Brother Dexter is a very young man to be placed in such a responsibility, but he is capable and is an earnest worker in the gospel. He has the confidence and good wishes of all the Saints in Lansing.

Kewanee District Conference at Rock Island

The first conference of the year, held February 26, 27, and 28, at Rock Island, was exceedingly enjoyable, though not so largely attended as we would have liked. The services were varied and interesting, with a spirit of peace and cooperation prevailing throughout, and a sincere feeling of congenial fellowship expressed everywhere. The Saints of Rock Island made us welcome and served us with delicious meals in cafeteria style. To Sister Lindley we express our appreciation for the exquisite floral decorations, which so enhanced the beauty of the church.

We were very glad to have Bishop Eastwood, from the Presiding Bishopric's office in Independence, with us Saturday and Sunday, and to learn from him more of the details of the stewardship plan. Though of quiet manners, he presented his message so logically and so plainly that it will not soon be forgotten.

Most of our district officers were present, including our president, E. R. Davis; counselors, Edw. Jones and B. E. Sartwell, Brother Jones being also treasurer and bishop's agent; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Harry Jones, and district secretary.

On Friday evening the local Religio entertained with a mixed program of several enjoyable numbers. Sister White's primary class sang so sweetly the song they love, "When I ope my eyes at morning," and Louise Gunlock told us where her mother got her blue eyes. Sister Jennie Gunlock gave us a short talk on the activities of the young people in Zion, which caused us all to thrill with the hope of sometime joining them there. Sister Jennie is in training at the Sanitarium there, but was called home for a short time. We also immensely enjoyed two violin selections by Gerald Davis, recently from Lamoni, but whom we are now proud to claim as ours. Sister T. R. Willets gave a vocal solo, "By a waterfall," accompanied by Sister Lindley. We might also mention that two members of the program exchanged exquisite bouquets in token of extreme appreciation, although each pretended to be unaware of the other's intention to return the compliment. It is hard to believe that Brother Davis is of a jealous disposition, but in his remarks he severely pointed out that no bouquets had been given to him. In order to relieve the tense situation, Brother Cecil Willets attempted to give honor where honor was due, and also some where it was not due, but at any rate his critical paper restored good humor and conciliation.

On both Saturday and Sunday mornings we were blessed with a sweet spirit of peace and consecration in our prayer services. Brother Eastwood, being in charge, gave us splendid words of encouraging testimony, and we felt again to renew our covenant with God.

The business session was held Saturday afternoon, the chief matters decided being the setting of the place for May conference, at Savanna, Illinois, and reunion at Galva, Illinois, beginning the Friday nearest the 15th of August. We also elected delegates to General Conference, eight in number as our statistics showed a total membership of 817, a net gain for the year of 3. The delegates elected are: Ammon White, E. R. Davis, Sister E. R. Davis, Edw. Jones, B. E. Sartwell, Leonard Houghton, George Sackfield, J. F. Garver. It was also decided to add a small fee to the price of the tents at reunion for those who want them set up, hoping by this means to secure more cooperation with the general reunion committee, upon whose shoulders most of this work has fallen.

In the evening Brother Eastwood gave us a few inside incidents in the bishop's office, and explained the various situations which they are compelled to meet. He also impressed us with the need of counseling with the bishop and honoring his advice to avoid the unpleasantness of a hasty and unprepared arrival in Zion. We surely appreciate his timely message and realize the responsibility of cooperation with those who are striving so hard to prepare all things for us.

Sunday found a large attendance representing nearly every branch, and several from our neighboring district, Eastern Iowa. We are exceedingly proud of a remark that was made by one of the visitors, "Why, your congregation is more than half young people!" for we feel that in our youth lies the possibility of tomorrow, and in their early consecration rests the hope of a speedy redemption of Zion.

Brother Harlan Cady, our Sunday school superintendent, gave a short but impressive talk on the importance of the work of the Sunday School Department, and expressed the hope that in the near future it may be more fully developed. Brother E. R. Davis continued with a discussion on the factors of a successful Sunday school. Interest, adaptability, suitable material, thorough knowledge of pupils, and various other worthy items were discussed, to which there was an enthusiastic response.

Brother Eastwood again occupied Sunday morning and further clarified our minds on the subject of tithing and inventories. He explained the use of both forms and mentioned that a third form was being prepared for special use of farmers. Even children are given a part, for the inventory is so simple and so reasonable when we understand it that it becomes a natural and systematic means of rendering our account before God.

At the afternoon service Brother Davis again occupied, bringing home to our souls the need of more active and trained service in the accomplishment of our aim and goal. Our district missionary, Leonard Houghton, spoke in the evening, with a live message to the young, a challenge to their manhood and womanhood, and the talents that lie within. Surely to all came the call for greater purity and usefulness in our endeavor to bear the torch of truth aloft. With this spirit we shall surely carry on till we meet again in conference work in May. May the work of the redemption of Zion be hastened, and may we all have a part therein.

WINIFRED DOUGLAS.

Taylorville Mission Growing

TAYLORVILLE, ILLINOIS, March 2.—No doubt an account of the progress of the work in this place will be of interest to HERALD readers. Since our last letter to the HERALD, we have finished paying the debt on the church, have finished the basement, and installed a furnace, owing yet only thirty-five dollars on the last mentioned. We have an excellent Sunday school with an enrollment of ninety-five, directed and supervised by Brother Charles Sloan, superintendent; Brother W. Brooks, assistant superintendent. W. J. Richard acts as chorister. Brother M. M. Vanhoosier is our pastor again this year. Brother and Sister Vanhoosier surely will be rewarded for the work they have done in this part of the Lord's great orchard. Also a few new members have been recently added.

On February 10 the Department of Women celebrated the second year of their work by giving a potluck supper in the basement of the church and inviting all members of the church and Sunday school to partake. The evening's entertainment included a short program. About one hundred were present, many of these being nonmembers. At that time District President J. O. Dutton and Brother Fred Pritchard were with us, and the former remained to hold meetings the rest of the week. He certainly made the word clear to his hearers. All are looking forward to a better year for the church, and hope the Lord will bless us, that we may be able to do more for the church in the future than we have in the past.

Elder A. H. Christensen, 1122 North Adams Street, Enid, Oklahoma, requests any Saint who may live in or near Enid, or who is contemplating moving there, or who has relatives or friends near there, to communicate with him.

Seashore Reflections

A few lines to our splendid paper, the HERALD, to say that in coming across the mountains for a few weeks on the coast, we arrived just in time to hear Brother Cook, the district president, lecture on the stewardship plan, which was very fine. Following that, Brother A. C. Martin, missionary in charge, came in very nicely with those of Brother Cook's services. And we are pleased to say we found them both to be men of God, having a real message, and further that we found some fine groups of Saints out here. Puyallup, Washington, also has a band with whom we met. They are busy working for the Master. Here in Vancouver we found an energetic band of Saints, as also we did at New Westminster, and their officers Brethren Robins, Pope, Johnson, and others who are workers indeed.

Coming on down to the seashore, we stood in meditation, thinking of the greatness of God. To see the waves come in fills one with a sense of awe at their magnitude and majesty. They come in regular succession, as battalions of an enemy, hurling their forces against the bulwarks, only to break and recede, then to be hurled back again.

Still in further meditation, while looking out over those proud waters, the waves of which have taken many souls across the unknown tide, there seemed to come the echo from the ocean, Hark! "And the sea gave up the dead which were in it, and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged, every man according to his works."

Then our vision turned Zionward, and we note the standard lifted up, an ensign, a beacon light, which reaches out into the dark recesses of the continents of the world. My attention was then focused upon the leaders whom God has chosen to guide the destiny of the church of latter days, and the only conclusion we can come to is that they have tried to be loyal to their great commission. If you and I can fully catch the vision and attune ourselves to him who stilled the waves, Zion will be a reality. My prayer is for the leaders, workers, and work in general.

W. J. CORNISH.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA, 6372 Saint Catherine Street, March 7.

Valley Center, Michigan

March 4.—We desire the church in general to know that the Valley Center Saints are still engaged in the Lord's work, working together in peace and unity. The membership of this branch is made up of farmers, with the exception of Brothers George W. Muir and H. E. C. Muir. The former is station agent and operator at Melvin, working for the Pere Marquette Railway Company. The membership is quite scattered, living in all directions from the church, some ten miles, some seven, the others from three to one and a half, but on Sundays all who can meet together and enjoy the prayer service and Sunday school. Elder H. E. C. Muir, the branch president, gives some very inspiring sermons to the membership. He is always at his post of duty, ready and willing to discharge his work.

The Sunday school, with Brother Thomas Isles as superintendent, is moving along nicely. He is endeavoring to impress on the minds of the young that they have a work to perform in the church and must begin now to qualify. We believe all enjoy the Sunday school work and receive much benefit.

Our Department of Women, under the leadership of Sister Bernadine Muir, has accomplished much in the last year. During the year 1925-1926 the department made over two hundred dollars, and this money was spent in decorating the interior of the church, varnishing, purchasing runners for the aisles, curtains, and a piano. Some Colman lights also were installed. Brothers E. D. Finken and T. L. Clark decorated walls and ceilings, generously donating their time and labor. The Saints here appreciated it. The sisters hold a bazaar once a year, making close to one hundred dollars each time. Sister Elizabeth Isles and Sister Mary Muir worked very zealously, making ready for the December bazaar. The other sisters fell in line and cooperated, lending willing hands in needlework. They also enjoy a study class, and in their last meeting they took up the study of milk, which proved to be very interesting.

At present the Sunday school is busy working on the Easter program, a very pretty one being planned, one which we expect to be a great success.

As a branch we have not suffered with much illness, but when there is any sickness the law of administration is observed, and God hears and answers his children. Sister William Isles, sr., has been afflicted for about six weeks, the doctors not being able to bring her relief. Though she has not received a complete healing, she has been blessed by God and his Spirit, and has received relief. We hope she will soon be in perfect health.

In the past six months babies have entered the homes of Brother Carver Isles, Brother Thomas Isles, Brother Bert Barr, Brother Neil Muir, and Brother Jay Winters, and all are doing fine.

Our aged sisters are well and strong in the faith and give much encouragement to the younger ones. They are Sister Matilda Muir, aged eighty-four, Sister Mary Gilpin, aged eighty-three, and Sister Elizabeth Winters, aged seventy-three. Their lives will ever be monuments of righteousness.

Members of this branch are keeping their faces Zionward.
MELVIN, MICHIGAN. BERNADINE BENBOW MUIR.

Ironton, Ohio

March 6.—The Saints in Ironton have one certain goal in view: that is to liquidate the debt on the church property and have the building dedicated. In January three hundred dollars was paid on the mortgage, leaving an indebtedness of six hundred dollars. This may not seem a large amount for some branches to pay, but the number of our faithful workers is small. It seems that the amount already paid has been raised in almost every way possible; by having bake sales, rummage sales, taking up Larkin orders, and by special offerings. A special collection is taken up every second Sunday which goes toward a payment on the church debt. The intermediate class in Sunday school is now seeking subscribers for McCall's Magazine. The church receives one half the amount of the subscription.

On February 19 and 20 the branch entertained the Southern Ohio district conference. Elder James E. Bishop, Steubenville, Ohio, Bishop H. E. French, Columbus, Ohio, and Apostle Paul M. Hanson, of Independence, Missouri, presided over the conference and were the principal speakers. Perhaps an account of this conference will be sent in by the district secretary, but here are a few notes taken from Brother Hanson's sermon on Sunday morning: "We all have access to sources which will make us great." "Use our gifts that the glory of God may shine out to all the world." "Moses gave a law concerning disease—that it should be isolated." "The Lord ordained night for that purpose—sleep." "Moses spent forty years in the sheep pasture after being in the king's palace. He graduated with a D. H. K.—Degree of Hard Knocks." "Conversion is a change from an unsocial life to a social one." "None of us are as much converted as we ought to be." "Conversion calls for courage. We must stand as Moses stood, if one stands alone." "What does education amount to if God is left out of the interpretation?" "Be influenced by the majesty of a superior vision."

Bishop French, in his address to the conference, explained the value and need of filing an inventory. Brother French has the art of making folks feel happy even if he does have to talk about finance. A number received inventory sheets, and it is hoped they are now filed in Bishop Carmichael's office.

Sunday, March 6, our number was quite small, there being much illness in the branch. However, our branch president, Brother Chambers, gave such an earnest, sincere exhortation to the Saints at the opening of the sacramental service that people really felt it was good to be in the house of the Lord.

The young people are planning an April fool party, the Department of Women is talking about "getting busy and doing something," and the Sunday school pupils are thinking of Easter, all of which will have to be told in the next news letter.

Amarillo, Texas

Amarillo Saints are rejoicing that the smallpox ban is now removed. It was lifted February 13, and that day was observed by the Saints in a sacramental meeting of thanksgiving, that we as a people have so fortunately escaped this dread disease. There has been no serious sickness in our church family this winter, for which we are truly grateful.

On account of our being so scattered it is hard for all to attend prayer meeting in the homes, so it has been thought best to have a prayer and study hour at our regular meeting place, 219 East Fifth Street, each Wednesday night at eight o'clock. Anyone passing through may be assured of a welcome at any and all of our services.

Sunday, February 27, we had a basket lunch at our meeting place, and this was followed by Sunday school and preaching. A fine, sociable time was had by all, so much so that several suggested we have our lunch together every Sunday instead of once a month. The priesthood is making a special effort to do the visiting in the homes, for this is in accordance with the law and is needful to strengthen God's people.

Our elder, Brother Aldridge, is giving us some wonderful sermons, real spiritual food which will indeed strengthen the Saints as well as bring to nonmembers the beauties of the angel message.

Quite a bit of personal work and tracting is being done, looking forward to a special series of services when the "powers that be" deem it advisable.

At this time we remember the General Conference so soon to be in session and earnestly petition our heavenly Father in behalf of those who bear the burden of this great work, that the fine spirit which has permeated the whole of his church during this past year shall continue. May our faces be set steadfastly toward Zion, with each member seeking first to build up the kingdom of God and establish his righteousness.

San Jose, California

March 1.—Under its quota of new officers the San Jose Branch is moving peacefully and harmoniously along, and a spirit of commendable enthusiasm seems to pervade the entire group; cooperation appears to be emphasized. The officers of all departments seem to be working very hard to increase the attendance of the membership as well as of nonmembers, and their efforts are being rewarded. We note especially the increase of the Sunday school attendance, many of whom are children of nonmembers. On February 27 this department had eighty-one present, the largest attendance for years, which evidences the fact that ours is a corps of workers who are not idle. The executive board is figuring that it will soon be necessary to erect another building to care for the Sunday school and Religio.

About a dozen of the branch members attended the district conference of Northern California, held at Sacramento February 12 and 13 in the Saints' chapel there. This building at times was crowded beyond its capacity. The Saints of that branch are also planning to enlarge their borders and build a new chapel. Delegates returning from this conference reported a very splendid and uplifting meeting, throughout which unity and peace prevailed. This was encouraging to the Saints. Some expressed the opinion that it was the largest and most profitable spring conference ever held in this district. The words of instruction and admonition given by inspiration and voiced through the president of the Twelve Apostles and the Presiding Bishop sank deep into the hearers' hearts and minds and will not soon be forgotten. We thank God for such men.

Apostle J. A. Gillen visited the San Jose Branch the latter part of last week, arriving here on Thursday and remaining until the afternoon of Sunday, the 27th, preaching Thursday and Friday evenings, and Sunday morning. Between times he visited the Saints and attended to his correspondence. He gave us some very uplifting sermons, which were enjoyed by the Saints and nonmembers. Attendance on Sunday to hear Brother Gillen was about seventy.

On Sunday, the 20th, another of the Sunday school scholars was added to the church by baptism. He is Brother Conroy Jones, son of Sister Shores, who with her husband, Brother Shores, has been in charge of the Irvington reunion camp grounds for the past two or three years.

Brother and Sister Hawkins, who have been visiting in the Sacramento Valley for some time past, have returned to their home in San Jose, where they are welcomed by the Saints of this branch. Sister Hawkins is at present helping to nurse Sister Juanita Hallin and a fine baby boy who arrived February 17, very nearly being a valentine.

There has been quite a lot of sickness here this winter, and this resulted in a lack of attendance at church. However, most of the afflicted ones are now on the road to recovery. The most serious case was Brother Roy Harris, one of the branch priests, who met with an accident and had to go to the hospital and have an operation performed, but he too seems to be in a fair way to recover. Sister Harvey, mother of Sister L. B. Shipley, was ill with the flu but is able to be up again. We noticed her smiling face at church yesterday. Also we saw the face of our lovely Sister Minnie Bates, who has just returned from a visit among relatives in Sacramento. She also has poor health.

By invitation of a kindly next-door neighbor, your correspondent, though hard of hearing, was able to plainly hear every word of President Coolidge's speech over the radio on Washington's Birthday. The radio is certainly a marvelous invention.

Secular Press Mentions Case of Healing

Brother J. A. Morrison, of Owen Sound District writes: "The inclosed clipping is from Owen Sound Sun-Times. The two elders called to administer to Brother Prescott were D. B. Perkins, district president, and his son, Elder N. J. Perkins."

Wiaraton Claims Case of Divine Healing

Eastnor Farmer Cured of Attack of Appendicitis

WIARTON, February 22.—A case in which a man suffering from what physicians diagnosed as acute appendicitis claimed to have been completely cured through divine healing is attracting much attention here. James Prescott, a prosperous farmer of Eastnor Township, is the man involved.

Mr. Prescott was taken suddenly ill, and two physicians diagnosed his ailment as acute appendicitis. The patient was removed to Wiaraton, and an Owen Sound specialist was sent for for a consultation. Mr. Prescott asked, in the interval, that two elders of the Latter Day Saints' Church be summoned, he being a member of that denomination.

When the two elders arrived, Mr. Prescott was in terrible agony, in spite of the administration of hypodermics. The elders anointed the patient with oil in accordance with their belief, and prayed over him, with result according to the accounts of the case, that his pain was eased shortly afterwards, and by the time the specialist arrived that night not a trace of the disease could be found, and he was able to return to his home, near Mar, in his usual health.—Owen Sound Sun-Times, February 22, 1927.

Independence

Stone Church

Announcement was made by Superintendent C. B. Harts-horn of the Sunday school Sunday morning that the work on enlarging the nursery under the dining hall is progressing. The work is being contributed by brethren of the Stone Church congregation and minimizes the cost of the improvements. This is just a bit of missionary work at home in order that the babies may be efficiently cared for while the mothers attend services in the main auditorium.

Following the Sunday school study session, duet numbers of "The bird with a broken pinion," and "Admonition," were rendered by Brothers Steward Tandberg and Harry Robinson on the cello and saxophone respectively.

"With thankful hearts we meet, O Lord," was sung by the congregation as the opening song of the eleven o'clock hour, and Elder J. E. Kelsey offered prayer. Following the organ offertory, the Stone Church Choir, directed by Brother Paul N. Craig, sang "O come to my heart, Lord Jesus," and a pleasing soprano solo, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Lord most high," was sung by Sister John Watkins.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards, of Independence, was the morning speaker and based his discourse upon three quotations from the gospel of John: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock"; "I am come that ye might have life and that ye might have it more abundantly"; "This is life eternal, that ye might know the only true God and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent." "Real progress must be made, not merely by exchanging one good for another good, but by adding one good to another," the speaker asserted. "We can not afford to forget the things that have been brought out and written in blood concerning the will of God among men, by our predecessors." We have been commanded: "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity"; and in carrying out this command, we should seek that which is worth while and cast aside that which is unworthy, hold that which is permanent and eliminate the merely transient. In Christianity there are two or three essentially fundamental truths, and these are what we seek to sense and understand. Christianity is not merely service for our fellow men; Christ commanded us to love the Lord our God with all the force and strength of our being, and to love our neighbor as ourselves. All attempted Utopias which did not embrace the love of God the Father have failed. If we seek first civilization, we fail in our quest; if we seek first God, we can cause the world to be recreated, worthy to be the footstool of God. After Christ's brief earthly life was ended, his followers, firm in the knowledge of his divine Sonship, greeted each other with "Christ is risen." They knew. We have not yet risen to that high plane of realization of the work, the sacrifice, and the divinity of the Christ. This realization is the vital fundamental of Christianity. It will bring us a knowledge of the love of God, who gave his only begotten Son, that the world might have eternal life. The way is open; it is for the children of God to move upward, availing themselves of the opportunities which will bring to them a thorough realization of the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of Christ.

Brother R. O. Flanders was the speaker to the juniors at the Campus Sunday morning. His story of how coal was formed was very interesting and was much enjoyed by the children. They will welcome his return.

K L D S Sunday Radio Activities

Bible study hour, conducted by Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell, had a pleasing musical program arranged by Mrs. Ethel Moorman. It included a piano solo by Margaret James Davis; cornet solo, Carlos Smith; quartet numbers by the Moorman girls; chorus numbers by members of the junior department of the Walnut Park Sunday school; readings by Opal Colebank and Frances Bullard. The children's story was by Mrs. Moorman. The regular eleven o'clock service in the auditorium was broadcast.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, K L D S radio church was conducted by the Reverend O. L. Hull, pastor Central Christian Church, Kansas City. Musicians appearing on this program, also from the Central Christian Church, include: Norma Troje Miller, violinist; Mr. Young, bass; Mrs. D. E. Brownson, soprano; Miss Lillian Evans, contralto; Miss Birscaak, accompanist.

Radio vesper service music was furnished by the Walnut Park Quartet, consisting of Alberta Lanpher, Margaret Gard, Glaud Smith, Kenneth Morford; Minnie Scott Dobson, accompanist. Special numbers were by Pauline Blaine, soprano, of the Kansas City Conservatory of Music; Vernon Snodgrass, accompanist. Sermonet, Elder U. W. Greene.

Music at the Latter Day Saints studio service at fifteen minutes after nine was by Robert Miller, organist, assisted by George Miller, pianist; Gomer Cool, violinist; Thelma Vincent, soprano; a mixed quartet. Sermonet by Bishop J. A. Koehler.

Evening Services

The Religio program consisted of a piano solo by Alice Tucker, a and b reading numbers by Lyda Budd Robertson. This was the evening set apart for the elimination contest for the male quartet. Only one quartet was present, it being composed of Gordon Kress, Orville Martin, Roderick May, and Ronald Smith. This quartet sang very pleasingly a classical number and a number for harmony, and won by default of the other quartet. They will represent the Stone Church in the coming contests.

At half past seven the song service commenced under the leadership of Brother John F. Sheehy. "Abide with me," "Day is dying in the west," "Holy, holy, holy," "How gentle God's command," and "Book of Mormon," were the songs sung by the large congregation. At eight o'clock "Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning," was sung, and Brother Zeno Booker offered the invocation. "Berceuse," was the offertory played by Robert Miller. A much appreciated number was a solo, "The day is ended," sung by Miss Thelma Vincent, a violin obligato by Gomer Cool, and organ accompaniment by Robert Miller.

Pastor C. Ed. Miller was the evening speaker, calling the attention of his hearers to Doctrine and Covenants 59: 2 and 5. He talked on faith and thankfulness, speaking plainly in order that all the children, of whom there were many, might understand. He emphasized the necessity of family prayer as something that can not be improved upon in the way of bringing to bear on the child in early life an influence of gratitude to the heavenly Father and faith in his promises. Several experiences of great interest to all were also related. "With none is God displeased except those who do not confess his mind and will in all things," Brother Miller stated.

The reel of moving pictures "Via Dolorosa," was then shown, the street in Jerusalem over which Jesus went from the hall of judgment to face the people's scorn. Places and points of sacred association on this way were shown, including the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, a tomb outside the city believed by many to be the place where Christ rose from the dead, and the Church of the Ascension near Bethany. Songs, "What was witnessed in the heavens?" and "Admonition," were sung before the congregation was dismissed.

In the Departments

The monthly meeting of the Department of Women occurred Friday afternoon, March 11, at half past two, following the meeting of the W. C. T. U. Superintendent Alice Cowan was in charge. A large number of the sisters were present to hear the general superintendent of the Department of Women, Sister Blanche Edwards, lately returned from England. Relating incidents of her own experiences on her return trip, Sister Edwards talked on the theme, "On the road to Zion." She called to mind that in order to arrive at Zion each Saint must have courage, devotion, brotherly love, appreciation, fellowship, a love for service, and consecration. Her talk was seasoned with accounts of English customs and habits with which the average American is unacquainted.

Interesting Personals

Sister Inez Rhine and family, of Des Moines, Iowa, Branch, arrived here three weeks ago to make Independence their home. They have bought and will operate the Boyd Greenhouse.

Second Church

The young people's prayer service was led by Elder A. K. Dillee and proved to be a very enjoyable session, about thirty-five being present.

Elder R. S. Salyards was the speaker Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, and his sermon was valuable to Saints, in that it gave to them an insight into the life and character of Jesus Christ, his scriptural lesson being from the Sermon on the Mount.

Elder William H. Kelley was the speaker at eight o'clock in the evening, giving the people one of those contemplative sermons upon the subject, "And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among men." He was supported by the choir and a quartet of young women in special musical numbers.

Thursday evening the primary and junior teachers are giving a Saint Patrick's Day party in the basement of the church and an entertainment in the auditorium, for the purpose of raising funds to provide equipment and to redecorate their rooms. They believe they have sufficient provided to justify them in asking a very liberal patronage. Purchase your tickets of these teachers.

Brother J. W. Westwood, priest, died on Thursday afternoon, March 10, as a result of a stroke of paralysis a week ago Sunday. The funeral was held at Second Church, Saturday afternoon, Brother H. W. Gould preaching the sermon. This was one of the largest funerals ever held at Second Church, many relatives and sympathizing friends being present. Brother Westwood leaves his wife and ten children. All of his children attended the funeral service except two, one being in California, and the other, a daughter in Independence, being ill. Brother Westwood was seventy-two years of age, and has been a helpful member of the church for many years.

Liberty Street

On Thursday afternoon, March 10, the women of Group 30 met at the home of Mrs. Fred Koehler, to enjoy a social time and renew interest in the work in the group.

Group 13 enjoyed a get-together and get-acquainted party at the Institute Building on the Campus Friday evening, March 11. The evening's entertainment was in charge of Sister J. E. Kelsey, and grown-ups and children alike enjoyed a merry time playing games. About ten o'clock light refreshments were served, and the little family groups departed, having spent a happy evening.

At the Sunday morning hour, we were privileged to have as our speaker Brother Albert Carmichael. He made the statement that a great effort is being made by men of scholastic attainment to discredit the Bible. It was his desire to know how firm a basis for belief the Bible was. Why had the priesthood never understood the height, depth, and fullness of Christ's statements found in John 10? In answer to this question, he was shown a vision in which a personage told him the time would come when the priesthood should comprehend. He also told of some other visions that he has had concerning the work in which he has been engaged.

Brother H. O. Smith occupied the pulpit at the evening service. He took his text from Doctrine and Covenants 85: 8: "And again, verily I say unto you, That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same." Doctrine is a law that governs our life. The speaker made clear to the minds of his listeners the meaning of doctrine in its fullest sense.

Both of the day's speakers conveyed many new thoughts to the minds of their hearers.

Walnut Park

A long-time member of the church and well-known resident of this city, Brother Seth W. Farrow, died at the Sanitarium on the evening of March 9 after several years of ill health. He was seventy-five years old; was baptized forty-nine years ago and ordained a priest three years later. Served faithfully in the church until impaired health prevented. He leaves a wife and two daughters, Mrs. Agnes Daniel and Mrs. Anna Lee Major, all of Independence. Funeral the 11th at the Walnut Park Church, with sermon by an old acquaintance and friend, Bishop B. J. Scott. A large crowd of friends attended and expressed kindly sympathy for the bereaved wife.

Brother S. A. Thiel, superintendent of Sunday schools in Zion, was a Sunday school visitor on the 13th and gave some suggestions that are to be tried out in the near future.

At the eleven o'clock hour Elder Lyman Smith was in charge. The regular choir, directed by Sister Minnie Scott Dobson, sang "God is love," and the anthem, "The King of Love my shepherd is," not a new anthem but a favorite one with many.

Bishop B. J. Scott was the speaker on the subject, "The experiences of today in contrast with the yesterdays." Brother Scott had no difficulty in finding a parallel in the experiences of God's children in this day to equal each miraculous experience cited from the Scriptures. And with these evidences all again brought to our mind that the God of the past is the same today, the congregation joined gladly in the closing hymn, "'Tis a glorious thing to be, in the light, in the light, which the saints of old did see."

Elder D. O. Cato, from the Stone Church, was present at Religio and taught our large class of young people.

Religio was followed by a fifteen-minute series of pictures from Palestine, accompanied by appropriate hymns played softly by the pianist, Mrs. John Reynolds.

The speaker of the evening, to an unusually large congregation, was Elder R. J. Lambert, who by request talked on the subject, "Some boyhood recollections of my neighbor Joseph Smith." Brother Lambert having known him from babyhood, being named and blessed by Brother Joseph, and having spent his play hours as a boy with Brother Joseph's boys, speaks advisedly of this great man's helpful understanding of boys and his loving interest in everyone he knew. After the service the little folks and older ones as well expressed the pleasure they had had in listening to the variety of incidents related.

Enoch Hill

Enoch Hill was favored with two bishops as Sunday speakers. Bishop J. A. Becker preached in the morning on the theme, "Love," reading 1 Corinthians 13. He analyzed and defended love as portrayed in the life of Christ. He asserted that love is greater than faith, because it is the essence of all things, and named and discussed the nine ingredients of love given in the Scripture reading.

In the evening Bishop B. J. Scott spoke from Psalms 24, urging the people to greater preparation and asking the scriptural question, Who shall ascend the hill of the Lord, or Zion? He admonished the congregation to be steadfast in their faith, not laboring for reward but for love of service.

Thursday night, March 17, members of the choir will meet at the home of Brother E. H. McKean, president of the choir, for election of officers and a social evening. All choir members are requested to be there promptly at fifteen minutes after seven.

Gudgell Park

Prayer meeting was held at the church Wednesday evening, March 2. A good attendance was reported with fair interest.

The sisters of this congregation have decided to give a penny each day toward the church expenses, and, not wishing to seem selfish, they have very kindly extended the invitation to the brethren to do likewise.

Sacramental service March 6 was well attended, and an enjoyable meeting was experienced by all.

Spring Branch

The Crescent Chapter of Temple Builders reproduced the play, "Rosemary" at East Independence Friday night, March 4, to a full house. That made the third time they have presented it, and it has grown in popularity with each performance. Of course that took away several members from our Religio that evening, but there were nearly seventy out to witness Sister Ballinger's class program. This consisted of readings and pantomime features with appropriate songs accompanying.

The Sunday services, March 6, were all well attended, the weather being ideal. An especially fine spirit prevailed at the sacramental service, at which time the Spirit moved Brother Snively, our pastor, to admonish several individual members of this group to prepare for future work.

Nearly a houseful attended the evening service, at which time the picture, "A pilgrimage to Palestine," was seen on the screen, after which the Second Church Choir entertained for about three quarters of an hour with a splendid and varied program. On account of the lateness of the hour, Brother Terry made a short but splendid talk. One was heard to remark that "More was said in those few minutes than is usually said in a lengthy discourse." Taken all in all, it was a day to be long remembered by the Saints of Spring Branch District.

Davenport, Iowa

February 15.—The Tri-City Ri-Mo-Da Club held a valentine party on February 12 at the home of Mrs. James Hough-ton, 2628 Scott Street, Davenport, Iowa.

We young people of the Tri-Cities organized into a club a year ago just to have some fun; and we have it, too. Our valentine party was not an exception. We invited the Eastern Iowa and the Kewanee Districts young people and had them stay over Sunday. Clinton, Muscatine, Iowa City, Cedar Rapids, Rock Island, Moline, and Davenport were represented. After everyone had arrived, our president, Fritz Stiegel, held an auction sale, consisting of the sale of the valentines each was requested to bring. Everyone seemed to be pretty well satisfied with his purchases. Later each one guessed the number of warts on a dill pickle, and the fortunate guesser received a prize. Hearts and various trick games were played.

And after all was said and done we ate sandwiches, pickles, cake, and Addison Brown's ice cream. We might add that Addison Brown surely knows how to freeze cream, even though he did get out-of-town visitors slightly ahead of time. The party was also a farewell for him. He finishes his chiropractic course this month and intends to leave Davenport in a few weeks. A Book of Mormon was presented him as a Ri-Mo-Da fellowship remembrance gift. We Ri-Mo-das wish him a bright, successful future.

The party broke up after singing a little while, and everyone was glad of a chance to get a little sleep. Sunday morning found us at Sunday school, and shall we say on time? From eleven to twelve o'clock, Brother Beil, of Clinton, Iowa, spoke to the young people. After dinner out-of-town guests were shown "A little bit of heaven." It was indeed a pleasure to be able to take them through anything so rare as "heaven." Brother Palmer, of the Palmer School of Chiropractic, has made a beautiful "Garden of Eden" in his private conservatory. He has a waterfall, birds of every description, ferns, and the statue of Venus. It is a place well worth seeing.

Sunday evening service was held at the home of Mrs. Grace Webber. Brother William Stiegel, otherwise known as Fritz, preached his first sermon that night to a group of young people. He talked of "The challenge of youth" and the preparation that the youth of the church must make in order to carry on the Zion program.

Soon after the evening service, out-of-town visitors left for trains with many good-byes and promises for future get-togethers.

The following is a sketch of Brother Stiegel's sermon:

The Challenge of Youth

The older folks have been teaching us all along about the need of consecrated young people in our church. Being young in years and new in experience, I believe I can represent youth's attitude towards the church.

Youth has a surplus energy, new in the experience of life, with new problems to be met each day. Youth must be guided by those older in the service, that they may profit by the progress they have made. Youth must carry on the gospel plan as laid down by their fathers. The older ones realize this and are taking into consideration the importance of our problems. The church is advocating the necessity of preparing youth for future work.

Ecclesiastes, 12th chapter, tells us to "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." This was written almost a thousand years before Christ. Even at that early stage of religious history, the people were concerned over the problems of youth.

After people get older and realize the great problems to be met in this world, many times it causes the shunning of responsibilities after years of trials and service as a Latter Day Saint. They realize then the necessity of remembering their Creator in the days of their youth.

I am tempted to relate an experience I had at lunch last week. As I was eating my noonday meal at the restaurant, a woman about seventy years of age was arrested because she couldn't pay for her meal. She said she didn't have any home, she was roaming the streets, begging for food. The officer gave her twenty-four hours to leave town.

To me that was a sad thing—a woman seventy years old begging for food. It caused me to sense more keenly the need of our social program. It also made me realize that youth must remember old age. Just think what stewardships mean to the people who have no place to go! We seem to hear Apostle Paul's challenge ringing in our ears: "Prove ye the Christ!" Yes, the young people can be depended upon. They are going to prove Christ by the establishment of Zion.

Trials are given to us to wake us up and to make us see things as they really are. We all want to do good, but often we don't know how to go about it. Many people think that if they are not doing any apparent crime they are doing good; but the fact is that they are doing nothing; they are just being idle. To do good is a continuous, progressive growth, evolutionizing our lives to the character of Christ. Prayer alone will not do it. We have learned through experience that being good must go with doing good.

Many millions of people have lived their lives in this world, had ambitions realized and lost, and have had the expression of their lives written in the great book. All have gone with a prayer on their lips for the young, hoping that we may do better than they have done.

As young people, we are learning to adjust ourselves to our environment and to properly evaluate it in such a way that we can live our religion among people, letting our light shine pure and bright, showing to the world that Latter Day Saints are real Christians.

We must work, work, work! seasoning that work with our prayer of devotion; making our lives a harmonious melody, in tune with God. It is good to know that we have a Creator who remembers youth. And he is instilling in our hearts faith, courage, and determination that is going to lead us on to achievement.

Youth thinks of Christ, not only as the Babe that was born in the manger, for we have learned all that and built our foundation on it, but now we think of Christ as the Savior who is coming with glory and power to our Zion, to meet those who have successfully carried on his banner. Youth has a prophetic, forward-looking, optimistic viewpoint, thinking of the Christ of the future as well as the Christ of the past.

I sometimes like to picture our church in terms of an army, the older folks the generals, and the youth the soldiers, having this thought in mind when I wrote the words of this poem:

Soldiers of the Cross

Some say we're creatures of the dust,
"You're but a grain of sand";
But Christ has come, and lives for us,
And he was the Son of Man.

We are but soldiers of the cross,
And have a soldier's job.
We must fight to win our cause
Because we love our God.

There are deeds that we must do,
The battle now is on.
The Lord needs me, and the Lord needs you
To fight against the throng.

"Move to the fore!" our Prophet cried;
Have faith in God and his power.
Put temptations and trials aside,
And serve him every hour.

We all have trials and temptations to fight,
But let us be sure-footed and true;
For if we want eternal life
We must be "the faithful few."

Pittsburgh District Conference

The annual conference of the Pittsburgh District was held Saturday and Sunday, March 5 and 6, in our church at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. In spite of inclement weather, the attendance was excellent. The usual spirit of friendship and good will was very characteristically displayed. Hearts were cheered and spirits revived by the kindly greetings, and to each and all was made more significant the poet's words: "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

We were very highly favored by having with us Apostle Paul M. Hanson, Bishop Charles Fry, Patriarch G. T. Griffiths, and High Priest O. J. Tary, besides many local ministers from this and out-lying districts.

The conference was very ably presided over by District President J. A. Jaques, associated with Apostle Hanson.

The physical welfare of those in attendance was provided for by the Pittsburgh Saints in a most commendable way. Meals that both created and satisfied an appetite were served by them in the lower auditorium of the church, and comfortable sleeping quarters were provided for all at the homes of the Saints.

The opening session of the conference was held Saturday at 3 p. m., at which time the business part of the conference was handled. It was disposed of expeditiously and we believe wisely. Action was taken to incorporate into the Pittsburgh District a portion of the Youngstown-Sharon District, which has recently been disorganized.

Elder J. A. Jaques, who has served as district president for several years, has accepted a position which makes necessary his moving to Boston, which change he expects to make some time in July. This means, of course, that we shall soon lose him and his service from the district. However, he was reelected district president, with hopes of the general church furnishing a man to fill the unexpired term of office upon his removal. With the departure of Elder Jaques, the district feels it is losing the service of one of its most capable workers; but believing our loss will result in gain to some one else, we bid him Godspeed and success in his new undertaking.

The Sunday school business session immediately followed the district business, and at this session Brother J. W. Winters, of Fayette City, Pennsylvania, was elected district superintendent, with Brother Clarence Winship, of Lock No. 4, Pennsylvania, his assistant.

At 7.45 Saturday evening, Apostle Hanson gave a lecture telling his experiences in the Holy Land, which was enjoyed by all present.

Sunday morning at 9.15, a mass priesthood meeting was held in the lower auditorium, in charge of Bishop Charles Fry and G. T. Griffiths.

At 10.45 a. m., a sort of institute session was held by the Sunday school, with the newly elected superintendent in charge. At this session a very masterly address was given by Bishop L. F. P. Curry upon methods of teaching. He caused all to sense the great need of qualified teachers, in order that our educational program may be carried out.

From 10.45 until noon, a fellowship service was held, in charge of the conference presidency. Opening remarks were offered by Apostle Hanson, wherein he expressed joy in the privilege of once more meeting with the Saints of these parts, it having been twenty years since he had been in the Pittsburgh District. The prayers and testimonies offered at this service evidenced old-time fervor, together with great faith in God and in the final triumph of his righteous cause.

At 3 p. m. Apostle Hanson delivered a most interesting sermon upon "Little things," impressing his audience with the fact that it is very often the little things in our life: words, actions, and thoughts, which count for much in bringing to us either weal or woe. This service was in charge of J. A. Jaques, O. J. Tary, and G. T. Griffiths. By the former two, two babies were blessed at the beginning of the service.

At 7.30 p. m., the closing hour of the conference, Bishop Charles Fry occupied the pulpit. His message treated upon the coming of Christ and the preparation which must be made by the church for this great event.

We believe we can truthfully say that the Saints of this district maintain a positive attitude toward the present church program, and that their faces are set Zionward. May God speed the right!

Springfield, Missouri

Patriarch Richard Bullard has been visiting the Springfield Branch since March 5, and all have enjoyed his visit. Much good has been accomplished, as Brother Bullard presents the gospel in an affirmative manner. His past years of experience give a wonderful resource to draw from, and it is of such a nature as to increase one's faith in this great work. Brother Bullard has given a number of patriarchal blessings while here, also has been speaker at every service. So we feel to thank Brother F. A. Smith for his kind remembrance of us in sending Brother Bullard, and we hope Brother Bullard and Brother Smith will both find time to visit us again at some future date.

All services at the church have been up to the usual standard in attendance and we have had several occasions for special prayer service in behalf of the sick among us and those whom we hold dear by former ties, and we can report our heavenly Father still hears and answers the prayers of his people. A nice baby girl has arrived at the home of Brother and Sister Herman Plumb. Sister Plumb lately underwent a serious operation, but we are glad to say she is on the road to recovery and we expect to see her in our midst again. In Brother Herman's testimony last Sunday at sacrament service, he spoke of the wonderful blessing they had received in their trying hours.

March 7, the Mizpah Chapter of Temple Builders met at the home of Sister Lindemuth and spent a social evening. Sister Lindemuth has been confined to her home lately, and she enjoyed the visit very much.

A birthday dinner was held at the home of Brother and Sister Henry Sparling Sunday, March 6, in honor of Brother Sparling's birthday. About twenty-five were present. A junior church has been organized here, and services are being held in the basement at eleven o'clock following Sunday school. Brother F. M. Reynolds is pastor of the junior church.

The Fruits of Worship

By J. E. Vanderwood

Let the light of love adorn you
As you go about your work;
Trust the hand of God above you,
Do your best, and never shirk.

Hearken to the words of wisdom,
Train your heart and mind each day;
Help to usher in His kingdom;
Learn to work as well as play.

Speak the word with gentle kindness,
Let the Spirit have full sway,
That you may lead men from blindness
To the realms of changeless day.

For if this we do in meekness,
We each day shall stronger grow.
Rising thus above our weakness,
We the truth shall come to know.

Only as we serve with patience
Can we hope to rise and grow
Into that most sacred station,
Where His truth we all may know.

We must then subdue our passions,
Make them serve the nobler cause;
And in gentleness should fashion
Souls who magnify God's laws.

Let us then be strong in spirit,
Filled with purity and love;
That in life we all may merit
Light and pow'r from Him above.

Given by the Spirit during the priesthood meeting on the morning of January 10, 1927.

His Purpose

By Harriet Nichols

Not willingly the Lord afflicts, nor grieves the sons of men.
'Tis but to wean our souls from earth and break the power of sin;
He saw us wandering from his path and sent the chastening rod
To turn our feet from error's ways and bring us home to God.

Shall we defeat His wise design, and waste our days in tears?
Let faith and hope be cherished still, and brighter days shall dawn;
And plants of peace shall spring anew from seed in sorrow sown.

A Short List of Easter Plays

The following have been selected from an excellent list of Easter plays furnished us by Ruth V. Fisher. On account of the short time before Easter and also because of limited space, we have selected only those that we have felt would most likely be used by our people. We appreciate very much the excellent contribution of Sister Fisher and only wish that it might have been given attention at an earlier date.—EDITORS.

1. On the Road to Jerusalem, a Palm Sunday service, by Isabel Kimball Whiting, in her book, Dramatic Services for the Church School, The Beacon Press, Boston, Massachusetts, 1925. Four women, eleven men, and at least two boys. The scene is laid on the road to Jerusalem, and in the second scene Jerusalem is nearer, so that its outlines may be seen. The children of the church school rise in their places, and one after another say certain verses responsively. The service contains hymns and a prayer for the congregation and minister, so that a sense is given of a universal participation in the service by all who are present at it.

2. Leamon, Dorothy: Barabbas. The Century Company, New York. Available about March 20, but being a one-act play, with frequent rehearsals it could be put on at two weeks' notice. Five men and one woman are required. This is very dramatic, and unusual in situation. The scene is the roadway not far from Jerusalem. The play will also be included in Volume II of Religious Drama, published by the Century Company, as well as being printed separately.

3. Wallace, Avis: The Shadow of the Cross. An effective and dramatic presentation of the story of the Passion Week, the remorse of Judas, the dawning of comprehension of Nicodemus, and the glory of the Easter morning. Throughout the play, the shadow of the cross falls upon the background with dramatic symbolism, and at the end a cross full of light appears. Especially beautiful is the triumphant angelic chant with which the play ends. Interesting and worth while and within the resources of the average church. Typewritten copies may be obtained from Miss Elizabeth Sherman, 20 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

4. Bates, Esther Willard: The Two Thieves, a play in one act which requires only the simplest background. Two men, and a chorus of women's voices unseen make up the cast. The play shows the gradual change in the two male-factors who were crucified, when, in the next world, they meet each other and set out together to find the light. The Walter H. Baker Company, 41 Winter Street, Boston, Massachusetts. Royalty $5.

5. Burns, Mary Modena: Easter Flowers. This is a dramatic service for children, so arranged as to incorporate the bringing of flowers to the altar by the children of the Sunday school, which are later to be sent to some hospital. It is preceded by hymns and responses, which can be assigned to different parts of the Sunday school, and then the flower-bringing service follows. Simple, but filling a need. To be found in Good Things for Sunday Schools, The Walter H. Baker Company, 41 Winter Street, Boston.

6. Harvey, Della Shaw: An Easter Miracle. The awakening of the flowers, the emerging of the butterfly from the chrysalis, and the story of the Easter Lily, all ending on the note of faith and immortality. This is suitable for parish house and is best suited to little girls from ten to twelve years old. Ten players are required. Simple and pretty. To be found in Plays in Pinafors, by the Walter H. Baker Company, Boston, Massachusetts.

7. Marquis, Don: The Dark Hours, a play based on the betrayal, the trial, and Calvary in the life of Jesus of Nazareth. Doubleday, Page, and Company, 1924. Five scenes. Eight men and two women. This is, in the estimation of some people, the finest passion play yet written—both because of the remarkable characterization and its closeness to the actual series of events. Christ's voice is heard—his presence is felt, but at no time is he seen.

8. Rockwell, Ethel H.: Magda. A one-act play in seven scenes. While the time of the play is Passion Week and the following days, it is suited to general as well as Easter presentation. Through the experiences of the crucifixion and the resurrection, doubting Thomas, betrothed to Magda, comes at last to her realization that Christ's kingdom is and should be, one of love and the spirit, rather than the earthly kingdom expected by so many of Christ's followers. Two women, seven men. Royalty, $5. Walter H. Baker Company, 41 Winter Street, Boston.

About the General Conference Program

The ordained men of the church attending General Conference this year will have unusual opportunities. Beginning Monday morning, April 11, at 10.30, and lasting until 11.15, a mass meeting of the priesthood will be held daily in the Stone Church Auditorium. These meetings will be addressed by some member of the First Presidency. Subjects of vital interest will be presented and discussed.

Taking into consideration the fact that the church now faces one of the greatest opportunities in its almost a century of existence, the importance of the priesthood leadership can be realized.

Ordination carries with it both responsibility and opportunity. Both of these aspects will be emphasized in the matter presented. All ordained men of the church who can make it possible to attend this General Conference should plan to do so and avail themselves of the opportunities which these educational and inspirational gatherings provide.

The priesthood should come in a thoughtful and prayerful frame of mind. The church is entering upon a period of aggressive and intensive work. The church calls every member of its priesthood into active service, to forward the gospel of Christ.

Beginning at 11.15 and continuing until 12 o'clock noon, daily quorum meetings will be held. This will include the Aaronic priesthood, the elders, seventies, and high priests.

Department of Women

An institute for women of the church will be sponsored by the Department of Women, Blanche Edwards, superintendent; themes, "Parental education," and "Home building."

From announcements already made in recent issues of the HERALD, it will be seen that the needs of our various groups are being considered. Nor are the major interests of our sisters being forgotten. The Department of Women has for its slogan, "Better homes," and from time to time various phases of home making and home building have been studied by our groups. On this occasion, special attention will be given to home building and education for parenthood.

A session of from thirty to forty minutes daily will be devoted to an address dealing with a particular phase of women's activities. This will be followed by divisional meetings providing for the discussion of specific problems. Each group will be in charge of and under the supervision of an expert in that field. This leader will bring a broad experience, and many practical suggestions having direct bearing upon specific problems. In addition, during this period it is hoped that mutual contributions, the frank discussion of the real problems confronting our workers, the exchange of experiences and suggestions will enrich the gatherings and make them inestimably valuable. Gather up your questions, think over solutions that in your locality have proved successful, and by all giving of their best, make these meetings of real worth.

"The Elijah"

The oratorio "Elijah" will be sung two nights; Sunday night, April 10, and Monday night, April 11. At previous conference times when this oratorio has been sung, many have been denied the pleasure of hearing it because of the lack of adequate seating capacity at the Stone Church. This year, with the Auditorium basement providing for other meetings, it permits the oratorio to be sung two nights. In this way those most interested will be able to hear it.

"The Restoration"

Tuesday night, April 12, has been given over to the presentation of a pageant entitled "The Restoration." This pageant is being rewritten and is repeated by request. The first performance was given several years ago during General Conference. Here will be shown the important epochs in our church history, and in the picturization of these important events those who witness it will be impressed, as perhaps in no other way, by the significance of these historical events. Conference visitors should plan to witness the pageant. No other meeting or event is scheduled for the same night.

"International Program"

Last year the international program given one evening during conference met with such approval that it was decided to repeat it this year. Thursday evening, 8 o'clock, at the Stone Church, has been given over to this program, and it will also be broadcast over K L D S. Program numbers will be announced later.

Adjustment at DeKalb

The Saints have been acquainted more or less generally with the situation at DeKalb, Illinois, where a majority of our church membership for some time gave active support to what has come to be known among us as the protest movement, composed of Saints opposed to and actively engaged in resisting action of the General Conference of 1925, adopting the document on church government. Hence it is,

Our Departed Ones

HARPSTER.—Jacob Harpster was born June 3, 1844, in Allen County, Ohio. He enlisted in the Union Army in the second year of the Civil War and served to the end under General Sherman, being honorably discharged at the cessation of hostilities. He was married August 30, 1865, and to this union two children were born: Mrs. Leila S. Snider, of California, and Mrs. Nettie F. Miller. This marriage was disrupted by divorce. He married Ann Forsythe on June 24, 1881, at Crookston, Minnesota. They moved to Audubon, Minnesota, thirty-three years ago, where he heard the gospel preached by Brother Swen Swenson. He was baptized July 15, 1894, and ordained a teacher about two years later. He lived a consistent Christian life till his death, which occurred February 3, 1927, at his home in Audubon. He leaves his wife, Ann; one brother, Reuben Harpster, of Cairo, Ohio; seven children: Nettie F. Miller, Gladstone, Oregon; Leila S. Snider, California; Anthony D. and Otilia D., Hampden, North Dakota; Oscar R., Devil's Lake, North Dakota; William W., Audubon, and Dora A. Harpster, Audubon, also fifteen grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. The funeral discourse was preached by Elder Marcus O. Erickson to loving neighbors and friends. Interment at Oak Grove Cemetery, at Detroit Lake, under the auspices of the Sons of Veterans of that place.

TERRY.—Joseph L. Terry was born at West Grove, Pennsylvania, January 27, 1841; came to Millersburg, Illinois, when he was a small boy, where he made his home until the day of his death. He enlisted in the Forty-fifth Regiment of the Illinois Infantry Volunteers, September 17, 1861. He was mustered out from Chicago, having taken part in the following engagements: Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, and Shiloh, in 1862. After four weeks in the hospital at Saint Louis he was discharged for disability, May 15, 1862. He reenlisted in August of the following year, and took part in the following engagements: Kenesaw Mountain, Georgia; Savannah, Pocomaligo, South Carolina; Combalee River; Orangeburg; Cheraw; Fayetteville, North Carolina, and Bentonville. He also took part in Sherman's march to the sea, and the grand review at Washington, all will be pleased to learn that conditions at DeKalb have so shaped themselves as to lead to an amicable adjustment, reuniting our forces for the forward progress of the work at that place.

It was in the midst of litigation before the city court of record for possession of the church building at DeKalb that this much desired agreement was effected and executed, and which results of course in the dismissal of the case, the Saints involved denying any and all allegiance to any other church and declaring their allegiance to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and their recognition of its constituted authorities.

May 24, 1865, and was honorably discharged from the Army July 12, 1865. Married Sarah E. Duncan September 14, 1873. He was baptized into the church November 21, 1876, and remained a faithful member to the day of his death. Occupied as a local elder in the Millersburg Branch for many years, and held a number of responsible positions in the branch and in the community. He died at Millersburg, Illinois, February 20, 1927, at the age of eighty-six years and twenty-three days. In the passing of Joseph Terry the community loses a faithful and respected citizen and the church loses a true, stalwart member of sterling character. Surviving are his wife, Sarah, three daughters: Mrs. Rily Duncan, of New Boston, Illinois; Mrs. John Alderson, of Sutherland, Nebraska; and Mrs. Earl Knox, of Aledo, Illinois; four sons: Louis and Joseph F., at home; John H., of Rock Island, Illinois; and Grover C., of Millersburg, Illinois; also one brother, J. M. Terry, of Independence, Missouri; one sister, Margaret E. Duncan, of Eatenville, Washington; fifteen grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren. Funeral sermon by Elder E. R. Davis, at Millersburg, February 23, 1927, assisted by Elder J. N. Bean. Interment in Millersburg Cemetery.

DIXON.—Edward Alfred Dixon was born in Newton County, Missouri, October 24, 1892, and married Sister Georgia Green, August 6, 1922. They removed to Albuquerque, New Mexico, in September, 1926. From there they went to Phoenix, Arizona in November of the same year, and here his death occurred February 5, 1927, he being thirty-four years, three months, and eleven days old. He was reared in a Christian home and under Christian environment and was an upright man, a true companion and friend. Surviving him are his wife, mother, four brothers, and four sisters, all of Oklahoma except one sister who lives in Texas; also a host of friends. Funeral was held at Lealand Church in Graham County, Kansas, Friday, February 11, being conducted by C. E. Stoober; sermon by Elder M. L. Shoemaker.

TEETERS.—Susan McElhenie Teeters was born in Medina County, Ohio, February 28, 1842. At twelve years of age located in Steuben County, Indiana. Was en route to Missouri in a covered wagon and stopped to visit Uncle James McElhenie; remained in the vicinity of Clear Lake. On February 28, she married David Benton Teeters, who had located in Clear Lake, Indiana, when he was twelve years. They settled on the farm in Clear Lake Township, known as the "homestead." Nine children were born to them, all of whom are living. They are Nettie, Cetta, Orpha, Addie, Edith, Mattie, Vina, Pearl, and Damon. She and her husband were communicants of the United Brethren Church. On June 25 1876, both were baptized into the Reorganized Church by Elder Columbus Scott, of Lamoni, Iowa. They marched along the highway of life with no deviation, and their cup of domestic bliss was pure and loving "even down to old age." Sister Teeters maintained a very youthful and alert exuberance in her latter years. Her eyesight and hearing were impaired and she was confined to her bed for about three weeks. She said she had suffered neither ache nor pain. Passed up the "shining way" from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Addie Seely, February 19, 1927. Funeral services were conducted from the Saints' Church at Clear Lake, Monday morning, February 21. Elder S. W. L. Scott preached the sermon. She leaves nine children, two brothers, two sisters, twenty-nine grandchildren, fifteen great-grandchildren, a long line of relatives, and a large circle of friends. Interment in Teeters' Cemetery.

EVANS.—Urania Horton Evans was born December 5, 1839, at Stafford, the county seat of Staffordshire, England. When a girl of fourteen she came to the United States, landing at New Orleans and traveling up the Mississippi River to Saint Louis, where she settled, and in 1861 married James L. Evans. To them ten children were born, five of whom have preceded their mother in death. She united with the church June 19, 1867, and was a faithful member all her years. Though of late she has been unable to associate in church life, older members know the loyal and faithful service she and her family rendered to the cause of their mutual affection. About ten years ago Brother Evans, an invalid for four years, passed away. About three years ago her health failed, and on February 23, 1927, she quietly fell asleep. Surviving her are her children: George H. Evans, of Maplewood; Elnor W. Evans, of Wellston; Mrs. Bertha J. Love, of Miles City, Montana; Mary Ada Evans and Mabel B. Evans who have resided with their mother on the home place. There also mourns a sister, Lavinia, whose age and infirmity confine her to her home.

SMITH.—Louisa Vanzant Smith was born at Uxbridge, Ontario. She married W. R. Smith, October 28, 1868, and to them were born four sons and five daughters. With her husband, she was baptized on October 13, 1901, near Manitowaning, Ontario, by Elder G. C. Tomlinson and confirmed on the same day by W. S. and G. C. Tomlinson. She lived faithful to her covenant for twenty-six years, when the Lord saw fit to take her to himself. She always took great interest in the church, providing a home for all missionaries and elders who came to Manitoulin Island to labor. When the district conference was held there in 1895, she accommodated more than sixty people at her home. She passed away very suddenly with a partial stroke on Friday morning, December 29, 1926. Left to mourn are her husband, four sons, five daughters, thirteen grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends. M. R. Brown preached the funeral sermon, which was heard by a goodly number of her friends, and interment was in Hilley Grove Cemetery.

WILDING.—Lucinda Potter Wilding was born in Nauvoo, Illinois, October 20, 1845. She was baptized into the church October 20, 1861, and married David Wilding October 20, 1861. To them ten children were born, all of whom have passed on except two, Mrs. A. S. Long and Mrs. George Hoyt, both of Loveland, Iowa. Sister Wilding was a resident of near Loveland for thirty-four years, a true and faithful Saint all her life. Left to mourn are two daughters, five grandchildren, eleven great-grandchildren. She died March 2, 1927. Elder David Chambers, of Magnolia, Iowa, officiated at the funeral service. Interment in Lagrange Cemetery. Her husband, also a faithful Saint, preceded her to the other shore twenty-five years ago.

GOODMAN.—J. C. Goodman was born November 28, 1852, in New York City. He married Miss Cora E. Lyke, of New Fane, New York, November 13, 1878, and to them were born four children, Stanley, Edna, Ira, and Hiff. Ira died in infancy and Stanley was killed in an accident five years ago. The family moved to Boyne City, Michigan, thirty-eight years ago, and Brother Goodman united with the church December 3, 1893. Was ordained into the priesthood November 15, 1903. He was a pastor of the Boyne City Church three and one half years, was bishop's agent of Northern Michigan ten years, president of the district five years, and also acted as a missionary of the church. For some time he has been in poor health and passed away February 12, 1927, at the age of seventy-four years. Left to miss him are his wife, two children, Edna Cotter and Iliff Goodman; three brothers, Herman and Dan, of East Jordan, and Ben, of Oregon; two sisters, Louise Fox, of Oregon, and Anna Riley, of Ishpeming; six grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. Funeral was held Monday, February 14, from the Latter Day Saint Church, Elder Ernest Burt, of Onaway, officiating, assisted by Elder Allen Schreur, of Gaylord.

FORNEY.—Mary Ann Study Forney, youngest child of John and Barbara Study, was born January 3, 1835, in Richland County, Ohio. Her six brothers and two sisters all preceded her beyond. The Study family left Ohio in 1835 and went to Missouri, where they lived a few years, then moved to Illinois. In 1846 they left Illinois after the trouble there in the church and came to Kaneshville, now Council Bluffs, and from there to Fremont County, where they took up their future home near Thurman. Mary Ann married Henry Forney September 4, 1856, and to them were born eight sons and one daughter. Two sons, John and Loren, died while small lads. David at the age of thirty-three and Riley at forty-seven. Her husband died in 1910. Sister Forney united with the church September 23, 1866, being baptized by Elder John Leeka, near Thurman, and to this covenant she was faithful to the end. Hers was a good, long, useful life, and she has been a comfort and blessing to the community. She passed from this life February 26, 1927. Surviving her are her children: Franklin, of Hopkins, Missouri; Leonard, Albert, and Barbara, of Thurman, and Hiram, of Fay, Oklahoma; twenty-seven grandchildren, thirty great-grandchildren, and a large number of other relatives and friends. The funeral service was conducted by Elder H. N. Pierce, of Bartlett, at the Saints' Church two miles east of Thurman, Monday afternoon, February 28. Interment in Thurman Cemetery.

ASMUSSEN.—Amos Peter Asmusen, son of Jeff and Katherine Asmusen, was born in Denmark, July 25, 1863, and came with his parents to America when eight years of age. He spent nearly all his life in Missouri and Kansas. Married Anna Beetta Shannon February 17, 1887, to whom were born eleven children. Was baptized into the Reorganized Church June 28, 1896, and was a faithful member throughout the remaining years of his life. Passed away at his home three miles southwest of Cherryvale, Kansas, February 28, 1927. Surviving him are his companion, five children, thirteen grandchildren, four brothers, one sister, and many friends. Funeral services were held in the Methodist Church at Cherryvale. Sermon by Elder Guy G. Cadwell.

SMITH.—Samuel Smith was born February 20, 1868. He was baptized June 1, 1899. Was a resident of Taylorville, Illinois, formerly of Higbee, Missouri, and husband of the late Mrs. Eliza Smith, who died two years ago. Brother Smith died February 18, 1927. Surviving are nine children, Alma, Vernon, William, Delbert, Mary, Helen, and David, all of Taylorville; and Mrs. Elsie Kelso, of Colorado; Mrs. Myrtle Warford, of Alton, Illinois; also three brothers, Paul Smith, of Taylorville; David and Jack, of Gillespie, Illinois; and three sisters, Minnie Slater, of Kansas; Myrtle Tudhope and Lucille Harmon, of California.

BROAD.—Alice Broad was born at Newton, Illinois, daughter of Morris and America Maloan, August 14, 1850. Baptized March 29, 1891. She has been a resident of Taylorville, Illinois, for twenty-four years when death claimed her January 31, 1927. Her husband, Thomas Broad, preceded her to the beyond. Surviving her are two sons by a former marriage, R. O. Burnham and C. A. Burnham; two stepdaughters, Mrs. C. A. Burnham, and Miss Mabel Broad, all of Taylorville; also three stepsons, William, John, and David Broad; a sister, Mrs. Olive M. Laux, of Oklahoma City; a brother, Frank Maloan, of Springfield, Illinois.

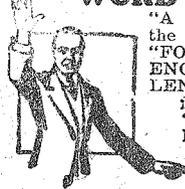

STANDARD.—Delia M. Standard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Standard, was born at Fort Madison, Iowa, in March, 1915. Her parents moved to Ohio in 1916. She died at Quincy, Ohio, February 16, 1927, of heart trouble. Left behind are her parents, three brothers, and three sisters. Funeral at Quincy, Ohio, in Methodist Church. Sermon by Jesse M. Harden.

ROBINS.—Edgar D. Robins was born at Little Deer Isle, Maine, September 13, 1845. He was baptized January 10, 1913, by Elder H. J. Ebeling, and ordained to the office of elder November 16, 1913, by H. J. Ebeling, G. H. Knowlton, and Henry Robins. He was made president of the Sargentville Branch December 22, 1913, which was organized at that time, and held this office with the respect of all its members until ill health required him to resign November 14, 1921. His son, Arthur, took his place. Died January 16, 1927, and leaves his wife, one son, six grandchildren, and eleven great-grandchildren. The funeral was from his home near Sargentville, Maine, and the sermon was by Elder Amos Berve.

HOAGUE.—Warren Langley Hoague was born June 16, 1849, in Canaan, New Hampshire. In 1874 he was united in marriage to Miss Abbie Murwin, and to them ten children were born, two preceding their father in death. He was baptized August 29, 1926, by J. F. Curtis, while attending the Madison, Wisconsin, reunion. Brother Hoague was a good man, loved and respected by all who knew him. He passed away at the home of his son, Charles, in Beloit, Wisconsin, February 16, 1927, strong in the faith of the latter-day work. Funeral and burial took place in Janesville, Wisconsin, many friends and neighbors being present. Left

Conference Minutes

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.—District conference held at Sacramento February 12 and 13, had in attendance the following general church men: Apostles J. A. Gillen and M. A. McConley, Bishop A. Carmichael, J. A. Tanner, Virgil Etzenhouser, and Guy P. Levitt. Various items of important business were transacted. The organization of a branch in the Park-Residio District of San Francisco was provided for. Reinstitution of the regular spring conferences in the Northern California District was made. The adoption of Auditor A. Knowlton's report of the financial transactions of the former district president pertaining to the district reunion business of the years 1923, 1924, 1925, and 1926 was effected. The recommendation of Auditor Knowlton that all district accounts be handled through the district bishop's office was adopted. A committee was appointed to draft a set of rules or by-laws for district guidance, to be presented to the summer conference for its consideration. Brother Guy P. Levitt was elected to the office of district president, with the continuance of W. H. Dawson and A. J. Damron as associates. The following ordinations were made: J. B. Carmichael to the office of counselor to Bishop Ingham; Roy Weldon, Oakland Branch, priest; John Howe, Modesto Branch, priest; Alma Andrews, Fresno Branch, elder. The matter of the ordination of A. E. Frazier, of Stockton, to the office of elder was referred to the members of the Twelve present for their action.

MOBILE.—District conference convened at Bay Minette, Alabama, February 12, at 10 a. m., with District President T. M. Carr presiding. Branches reporting were: Bay Minette, 79; Vancleave, 104; Escatawpa, 129; Mobile, 199; nonresident, 250. District officers reporting: District president, T. M. Carr; secretary and treasurer, Edna Cochran; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Franklin Steiner; superintendent of Sunday schools, Edna Cochran. Priesthood reports: Elders J. W. Hancock, A. G. Miller, James Cooper, W. M. Hawkins, D. W. Sherman, Simeon Cochran, W. C. Yocom, H. M. Aebli, G. W. Bankester; priests, J. C. Yocom, E. E. Miller; teachers N. J. Wiggins, J. G. Parker. Ministerial reports show 284 sermons preached; 1,597 meetings attended; 14 baptisms; 7 children blessed; 93 administrations to sick; 5 marriages solemnized. Evangelist, T. C. Kelley and Missionary J. W. A. Bailey reported on their work and impressions of work yet to be accomplished. The following officers were elected: Sunday school: Superintendent, Edna Cochran; secretary, Franklin Steiner. Department of Recreation and Expression: Superintendent, Franklin Steiner; secretary, Clyda Rogers. Department of Women: Superintendent, Edith Hancock, Sister Edna Cochran is treasurer of all departments. Delegates to General Conference: T. M. Carr, M. A. Carr, J. W. Hancock, Elizabeth Hefflin, Edith Hancock, J. W. A. Bailey, Anna Mae Hough. Provision was made for the 1927 reunion to be held in Mobile, where we have the fair grounds promised. A budget of $30 was approved for district work during the coming six months. The next conference will be held at Vancleave, Mississippi, in June, 1927, the exact date being left to the decision of the district presidency.

About the General Conference

As the coming conference marks the year when the church enters into the first of its centennial celebrations, it is important that as many of the Saints as can, attend. The signs of the times call the church to more intensive work in spreading the gospel of Christ. Efficient ways and means to do this must be devised. Those attending the coming conference will be enabled to hear from those qualified by training and experience to advise and counsel, as to how we may best serve the "cause" which God has intrusted to our care.

The gathering of many Saints in one place for worship and instruction is unequaled as an opportunity to catch the vision of the church, the inspiration to give our best, and the consecration to give our all for the task to which we have pledged our lives.

Perhaps many have planned vacation trips this summer. Those whose interests are centered in the church and its progress may wish to sacrifice these pleasures and use the money in paying their expenses to the General Conference. Many have intimated they would do this.

"Come to conference" is an invitation which the church sends to all its members this year. The conference program has been prepared, that the needs of all may be supplied, as far as possible. There will be the class work every morning followed by the mass prayer meeting in charge of President F. M. Smith. Then will follow institute work for the priesthood, after which quorum sessions will be held. At the same period in the Auditorium there will be an institute of methods and home building conducted by and for the women of the church.

On the first Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of the conference, from 10.30 to noon, will be held a musical institute, to which the musicians of the church are cordially invited.

In the afternoon at 2.30, daily business sessions will be held, followed by preaching at night and other interesting special programs.

Organ Recital

In the midst of a full day of conference work, the daily organ recital from 12.30 to 1 o'clock will afford a pleasant half hour of relaxation and enjoyment. Promptly at 12.30 the doors will be closed and remain so until 1 o'clock, the ushers permitting no one to enter or leave. Qualified musicians in the church have been secured for this half hour recital, and the best in music will be given conference visitors.

Pen and Ink Club

On Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Institute Building the Pen and Ink Club, a literary organization of Independence, will hold a special meeting, to which those interested in literary work are invited.

It is proposed that this meeting will provide the opportunity where those who have made contributions to church literature may gather and renew acquaintance. Also that those who have ambitions to become proficient in this line of work may become known and be given an opportunity to qualify for a service that is in great demand. Many have latent literary talent which, when developed through proper guidance and opportunity, can be perfected to the point where it can be of incalculable worth to the "cause." Therefore, all particularly interested in literary work should not hesitate to make themselves known at this meeting.

Young People's Social

On Thursday, April 7, at 9.15 p. m., the young people will meet in the Auditorium for a "get acquainted" social time. Let's get acquainted with each other at the beginning of the conference this year. The twelve days of session work will be far more enjoyable when we know each other.

Lambda Delta Sigma

On Friday, April 8, at 4 p. m., at the Stone Church lower auditorium, the Lambda Delta Sigma, the scholarship society of Graceland College, will meet informally for a special meeting. Members of this society attending conference are especially urged to attend, that the aim and purpose of the society might be more definitely carried out.

Graceland College Program

The Graceland College program will be given Friday, April 8, at 8 p. m., in the Stone Church. The A Cappella Chorus will give several numbers on this program, under the direction of Miss Mabel Carlile, which will be broadcast by K L D S. Miss Carlile has been untiring in her efforts to make this small chorus as perfect as it is possible to be. She has succeeded well. Conference visitors and especially former Graceland students are invited.

"The Fool"

On April 9, in the Auditorium at 8 p. m., the White Masque Players will give "The Fool," written by Channing Pollock. It is one of the strongest plays of its kind that has been written in recent years. Several months have been spent in casting the parts and in rehearsal, that conference visitors might get the benefit of the great moral lesson told by the play. Commenting on "The Fool" during its engagement in Kansas City, Rabbi Mayer said: "The Fool" is a drama which brings in, during the course of the plot, every important question in which modern men and women are most interested. This play touches upon sincerity in the pulpit, the relation of capital and labor, and problems of marriage and divorce, and of faith healing."

Exacting demands are made of any cast that attempts to play it. Our young people are giving their best to it.

"Elijah"

Mendelssohn's Oratorio "Elijah" will be sung two nights, Sunday and Monday, April 10 and 11, in the Stone Church Auditorium. It will also be broadcast over K L D S. The passing of years has only served to classify this great musical masterpiece as a classic. One need not necessarily be a lover of music to enjoy this oratorio. The very bigness and majesty of its choruses, together with its solo parts, appeal to the deepest emotions in human nature and stir the soul of the hearer as the old Jewish laments, supplications, and hopes for deliverance are voiced out of the tragic history of the Hebrew race.

"The Restoration"

This historic pageant was first given several years ago at General Conference in what was then the old Armory Building, now occupied by the Herald Publishing House. By request it is to be repeated this year. Thirty-five people take part in this play and are cast to represent characters in the history of the church. It is written in four acts, and the speaking parts, the acting, and the pantomime all dramatically portray events of historic importance in the life of the church. Seeing this pageant is one way in which the Saints may evaluate the progress which the church has made. In no other way can one be so indelibly impressed as when seeing the important scenes in church history effectively dramatized.

"David"

The Independence Music Club is giving constant thought, preparation, and rehearsal in getting this cantata ready for its conference presentation. The story of David, Saul, and Jonathan is told in music. The hearer is made to experience and appreciate in his own soul all the tender solitudes and loyalties that go to make up the fabric of life. All the depths and heights of human emotion are sounded, and the listener is unconsciously carried through the romance and tragedies in human experience, sensing the joys of friendship and the sorrows of death. Here is a piece of classic music that deservedly has found its way into the hearts of many peoples.

Easter Sunday

Weather permitting, Easter Sunday worship will begin by an outdoor sunrise prayer meeting on the first floor slab of the Auditorium. Temporary arrangements can be made to seat many hundreds at this service. It will be the first meeting of its kind ever held at a General Conference; the first service ever held on the main floor of the Auditorium. It is altogether fitting that the services on Easter Day should begin with this hour of worship.

Probably the largest attendance will be on the closing Sunday of the conference. Many Saints from many lands will join in singing the songs of Zion, and under the spirit of worship, fellowship, and communion, it is possible to gain those contacts with the Divine that will send the Saints forward into the coming years with a portion of the promised endowment.

President F. M. McDowell will preach in the Auditorium at 11 o'clock. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the speaker will be President F. M. Smith, and in the evening at 8 o'clock President E. A. Smith will preach the final sermon of the conference.

The Last Day

Every conference visitor is urged to make definite plans to remain until the closing session of conference on Monday, April 18. It may be eighteen months until another General Conference is held. The work before the church in the immediate years ahead is important. The ministry occupy the key position in church affairs, which implies both opportunity and responsibility. For these and other reasons important proceedings are planned for the final day's sessions.

It is hoped that the conference will sense and appreciate the tremendous tasks ahead, to which we must set our hand. God has provided no place for the idler in Zion, or in any branch or congregation of his church. There is work for all. May we not, therefore, look forward to the closing sessions of the last day, feeling that by participating in them we definitely and without reservation dedicate ourselves and our all to accomplish more and better work for Christ and for his church than we have ever done before.

The Saints in Independence are making extensive preparations to take care of conference visitors, and it is only fair to them that the visitors forward their requests for reservations at once. There will be room for all, but by no means should you wait until you arrive in Independence to find out where you can stay.

Ain Farah Water for Jerusalem

Northeast of Jerusalem about seven miles, and some twelve hundred feet below it, in a deep and rocky gorge, lie, or rather bubble, the Ain Farah or Mouse Springs. I remember visiting them once, in company with Brother and Sister Harry Passman, and with us were Job Negeim, his brother, Heleim, and Alexander Klein. In one of the pools below the springs, Brother Passman baptized Job.

At the time I wondered how long it would be before the enterprising and resourceful British engineers would be using the rather bountiful and long-existing source of good water for Jerusalem needs; for even at that time, 1920, water was scarce at certain times of the year, and I knew the steady growth of population would enlarge the problem of water supply. Despite the cleaning and repairing of large numbers of cisterns for water storage in the city from the early and latter rains, and despite the repairs of Solomon's Pools to the south of Bethlehem, and the improvement of the equipment of the Virgin's Fountain, just outside of the city, improved in dependability by sinking wells, and the repair of the Birkett Arroul Reservoir (said to have been built by Pontius Pilate), and still other sources from which water has been brought to the city by the British engineers, yet water scarcity occurs at times in each year. It is probable that in addition to the population of Jerusalem having increased till now it is about seventy thousand, the average per capita consumption of water has been increased by the sanitary habits inculcated by the British, and hence the increase in water supplied the city has not kept pace with the increased demands. Besides this in recent years the problem is augmented by abnormally small rainfalls. To meet the acute water shortage last summer, water was hauled into Jerusalem by railway trains.

So Ain Farah is being harnessed by the engineers, and soon it is expected that its waters will be at the use of the citizens of Jerusalem, for it is expected that the pumps in the gorge will force water into the city at the rate of 200,000 gallons per day, though there will be left enough to flow through the valley to water the flocks which still come there for water. For since time immemorial the shepherds of Palestine have used the delightful gorge of Ain Farah as a gathering place. It is said that David spent his shepherd days near there, tending sheep, and that from the experience gained there he was led to write the beautiful passage beginning, "The Lord is my shepherd."

No one who has ever visited the beautiful spot, and enjoyed its refreshing coolness because of the much water there, can fail to be interested in the work now being done to carry those refreshing waters into the Holy City.

My visit to Ain Farah is now one of the outstanding memories of the trip to Palestine. A ride over the route, or a combined ride (donkey) and walk, such as I took, will convince one that there are some interesting engineering problems to solve before the water will be flowing regularly from Ain Farah into Jerusalem. But that those British engineers will turn the trick, I have no doubt.

Blue Pencil Notes

It used to be thought that if a man had a powerful desire to do that which he knew to be very wrong, and gratified the desire, he would have serious trouble. He might go to hell.

Now we are told that if a man has a very great desire to do something that he feels to be wrong, and represses the desire, he will develop a "complex." Hell will come to him.

Of the two theories the first seems most hopeful for society. The modern philosophy, "Let yourself go"; seek "self-expression" for every wayward and lawless impulse, prognosticates hell for everybody.

The poet has treated the theme rather brusquely and in somewhat shocking terms:

"I saw a brazen thing
With carned cheek . . .
Yapping about self-expression.
Bah!
The wild asses of the desert
And the chattering hyenas
Have self-expression
In full measure,

And they remain
Asses and hyenas,
While man, through self-denial,
Has attained some semblance
Of the divine."—Doan Robinson.

Joseph was tempted by Potiphar's wife. He resisted the temptation. He came out of prison and found self-expression in ruling Egypt. If he had a complex, he died happily ignorant of it, as of his appendix.

David yearned for Bath-Sheba and gratified his desire, even at the cost of murder. Finding self-expression along such channels, he was denied self-expression on higher levels. He who wrote the twenty-third psalm came under the condemnation of heaven and died an unhappy man with a very serious complex.

Of course, sober-minded men realize that neither repression nor license is the best course. Direction in right channels is the divine plan. The waters of Niagara can not be dammed up; they can be directed upon the turbines. The waters of the Colorado determined to inundate Imperial Valley could not be stopped; but they were directed into safer channels. Paul had the right theory when he said, "This one thing I do." Every power of his nature, emotional, intellectual, physical, he directed and spent toward a goal so admirable that it held his unflinching devotion. He found such full expression for all his powers that there was really no repression anywhere (hence no Pauline complexes), and at the same time no letting of himself go in shameful self-indulgences. On that same principle Christ himself moved forward, his powers consecrated and directed, in the path of safety, from the very day when in the temple at twelve years of age he visioned his life's work and declared, "I must be about my Father's business."

Self-indulgence is dangerous to the man and to society. The world is vexed with it today. Self-repression is negative. It only forbids one to enter the forbidden paths, and leaves him standing dejected and unhappy. Self-direction, under the divine Spirit, carries one forward in the way of life so consistently and triumphantly that the bypaths are safely passed, scarcely noted.

E. A. S.

Prayer is the desire of the soul expressed in words of thought. My prayer is what my soul yearns for, and cries out for, and it must be offered to something superior to an individual. . . . It is to have our attitude so brought about that we are better able to discover God. . . . Prayer is the gateway by which we may discover God.—R. S. Budd.

Tendencies of Mind Indicated by Association

If a man is to be known by the company he keeps, let us try to evaluate him not alone by the companionship he seeks and finds among human beings, but also by the type of beauty and utility he chooses in the homes he builds; by the places he frequents when away from human companionship; by the books, magazines, and newspapers to be found upon his reading tables, on the shelves of libraries and living rooms, and in portfolios; and by other contacts chosen.

Not long since a splendid man for one's companion on a day's journey left his handbag with me while he visited another town on business. It happened that this man found himself in need of certain information contained in papers inside the handbag, and he called me by phone and asked that I hunt up this information for him. I was compelled to make a thorough search of this bag before I secured what he desired. I have forgotten what that information was, except that it was figures of rather ordinary dimension, but I have not been able to forget that I saw within that bag a magazine of the very highest literary and mechanical merit; a volume of poems of what might be termed the heart side of life, a dainty, hand-tinted photograph of a three-year-old daughter. What more evidence need I have to convince me of the worthy timber to be found in his character?

I was traveling with a bishop who had a reputation of rather decided and determined flavor—some questioned his adaptability to the office of bishop because of a supposed lack of human sympathy, yet in a few minutes of respite and preparation for his bed he drew from his bag a worn volume of Eugene Field's poems of child life; and the next day he purchased a copy of a magazine noted for the beautiful pictures from nature which it contained. These occurrences augmented the desire to study his character, and the study convinced me that his company of books and magazines was a sure indication of his true character. The rather harsh exterior which many had noted was likely an endeavor to cover up what he may have regretted were the predominating traits of his disposition, sympathy and gentleness.

The son of a minister was boarding with a family I visited. He was attending high school. He had a good fiction magazine on his table, a novel by Zane Gray in his room. While these are not without their significance, and his parents unduly enlarged on this indication, the really indicative thing I found in this young man was that he was worried because he had misplaced and possibly lost some extracts from sermons of Henry Ward Beecher in which the noted divine was examining the speeches of Robert G. Ingersoll, the great skeptic. His choice of a magazine was possibly casual, but he had copied Beecher because Beecher had answered some queries rising in his own breast.

A young man, not yet of legal age, destined to occupy a leading position in the official family of the church, was attending university classes and spending his spare time with a brass band and in the library of the school. Imagine the type of mind which would select and copy the following, which has fallen into my hands recently. I will reproduce it as far as possible, exactly as it appears in this pen-written page from his tablet:

I copied the following from The Work of Sir William Jones, published in 1799:

"Ignorance is to the mind what darkness is to the nerves; both cause an unsteady sensation; and we naturally love knowledge, as we love light, even when we have no design of applying either to a purpose essentially useful."—Volume 2, page 9.

"Human knowledge has been elegantly analyzed according to the three great faculties of the mind, memory, reason, and imagination, which we constantly find employed in arranging and retaining, comparing and distinguishing, combining and diversifying, the ideas which we receive through our senses or acquire by reflection; hence the three main branches of learning are history, science, and art; the first comprehends either an account of natural productions, or the genuine records of empires and states, the second embrace the whole circle of pure and mixed mathematics, together with ethics and law, as far as they depend on the reasoning faculty, and the third includes all the beauties of imagery and the charms of invention displayed in modulated language, or represented by color, figure, or sound."—Volume 1, page 4.

Some men thought this boy was not serious enough, because as he passed along the street he was likely to yell loudly at man or boy, or play some mischievous prank. But when away from home, and free from a possible conviction that he must disabuse the minds of men of any thought that he was ever serious, he would delve into volumes of philosophy and copy portions which indicate the trend of his life for more than thirty years.

Yes, a man, woman, or child may be known by the company he keeps. It is well, however, that we be sure of what that company consists before we render judgment. Confidence has been misplaced because one carried a Testament in his coat pocket. Confidence has been unjustly removed because another has been seen with a notably frivolous character. It is a dangerous habit to decide a case before the evidence is all in, but it is a habit easily acquired, and often indulged.

Commencement; Home-Coming; Institute of Methods

June 1 will mark the opening of a series of interesting events at Graceland College in which many of the church will be particularly interested.

The Commencement Banquet occurs June 1.

Lambda Delta Sigma Banquet and the Commencement Concert will be held June 2.

On June 3 Honors Chapel and Class Day exercises of the thirty-first annual commencement of Graceland College will occur.

June 4 at ten o'clock there will be an alumni organization meeting; class luncheons and basket dinners at 12.30; volley ball and playground ball matches, alumni versus college students at 2.30; Shakespeare's Hamlet by Graceland College players at 8 o'clock.

Zimmermann Hall, the New Gymnasium Building, will be dedicated on June 5. President Frederick M. Smith making the address, at 2.30 o'clock.

Opening June 4 and continuing for nine days, there will be held an institute of methods in religious education. The assembly lectures and demonstration class work of this institute will be conducted by Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, Dean of Chicago Training School.

Sunday, June 12, the closing exercises will occur at 10 o'clock, President Floyd M. McDowell making the address. He will also present certificates of work completed by students at the institute.

Some further details of these activities may be obtained by addressing, The Departments, Lamoni, Iowa.

Paragraphs From a Chaplain's Prayer

Glenn Frank, the youthful president of the University of Wisconsin, is also chaplain of the Senate of that State. Immediately following are a few sentences from his prayer at the opening of the 1927 session of the Senate. We believe them to be worthy the contemplation of HERALD readers:

Almighty God, Lord of all Governments, help us, in the opening hours of this legislative session, to realize the sanctity of politics.... Give us the insight and grant us the power to lift this business of government into an adventure that we may with reverence call the politics of God, because by it we shall seek to fashion the life of this commonwealth in the likeness of that City of God which has been the dream of saints and seers for unnumbered centuries.

Save us from the sins to which we shall be subtly tempted as the calls of parties and the cries of interests beat upon this seat of government.

Save us from thinking about the next election when we should be thinking about the next generation.

Save us from dealing in personalities when we should be dealing in principles.

OFFICIAL

Program for Convention of Music Workers

In the SAINTS' HERALD for January 26, there was issued a "Call for a Convention of Music," over the signatures of the First Presidency and the Department of Music. The promise was made that later the exact time and place of this convention, together with the program, would be given.

First, let us again explain that the object of this convention is to acquaint the music workers of the church with the great place and function of music in the church, the work of the Department of Music, and the wonderful ideals and objectives to which we should aspire and strive. In other words, this convention desires to impart the vision of music as a part of our church's great plans.

Again, let us state that this convention will attempt no legislation. It will report to the General Conference, and it is privileged to offer to the conference recommendations of things it deems most important. Out of the experiences of this convention and the vision gained, it is hoped that a new impetus may be gained for our church and its music.

The Time: Thursday, Friday, and Saturday mornings, April 7, 8, and 9, from half past ten o'clock until noon.

The Place: The upper auditorium of the Stone Church.

The program: "Our church and music."

Save us from thinking too much about the vote of majorities when we should be thinking about the virtue of measures.

Save us, in crucial hours of debate, from saying the things that will take when we should be saying the things that are true.

Save us from indulging in catchwords when we should be searching for facts.

Save us from making party an end in itself when we should be making it a means to an end. . . .

May we have greater reverence for the truth than for the past. Help us to make party our servant rather than our master.

May we know that it profits us nothing to win elections if we lose our courage.

May we be worthy of the high calling of government. Amen.

How clearly Chaplain Frank sees the iniquity of present-day wire-pulling politics, may easily be conjectured! How he longs to see men lift themselves above the devices of politics as they are, and take hold of the reins of government with clean hands and pure and altruistic and courageous conceptions and powers, is also disclosed.

Thursday, April 7

"The work of the Department of Music." Arthur H. Mills.

Saturday, April 9

"Problems"; "Initiative."

At this session opportunity will be given for:

(1) The presentation of general questions (in writing) concerning problems pertaining to the music of the church, as may have been suggested during the sessions of the convention.

(2) The initiation and presentation of recommendations or movements to the General Conference, of things pertaining to the present needs or future welfare of the music of the church.

It is hoped that music workers everywhere will be moved to attend this important convention and labor with us for the "good of the work intrusted to all."

O My Brother, Be Not Weary!

By J. E. Vanderwood

Tune: Let the Lower Lights Be Burning

What a peaceful, gentle Spirit
Rests upon us day by day,
As we try to help another,
Find the higher, better way!

O my brother, be not weary,
In your labor with the Lord!
For he will protect and bless you,
Give you, too, a good reward!

When we serve and bless the needy,
God is near our work to bless;
And our tasks are made quite easy,
When his Spirit we possess.

Trust the power of God, and ever
Do your best for man today;
Learn to serve, be ever ready
Love and kindness to display!

For you then shall share the presence
Of the gentle dove of Peace;
And your life will grow the richer,
And your joys shall never cease.

The Vision of Our Fathers

BY JOHN F. GARVER

The seventh of a series of seven sermons in the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, in November, 1925, under the general theme, "The faith of our fathers."

Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby. Wherefore, lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed. Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord: looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled. For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest. But ye are come unto mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels. To the general assembly and church of the Firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel. See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven: whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, Yet once more, significeth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which can not be shaken may remain. Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which can not be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear.—Hebrews 12: 11-28.

In connection with this moving scripture, I call your attention to another most wondrous passage, a portion of the 8th verse of the 64th section of the Doctrine and Covenants. This is what our fathers saw:

Behold, I say unto you that Zion shall flourish, and the glory of the Lord shall be upon her, and she shall be an ensign unto the people, and there shall come unto her out of every nation under heaven. And the day shall come, when the nations of the earth shall tremble because of her, and shall fear because of her terrible ones. The Lord hath spoken it.

The Vision of Our Fathers

Our fathers in this age saw in vision a great church. They saw a great church in the form of Zion, in which every man with every other man had equal opportunity in the things of earth and in the things of heaven. A great church lifted up as on a high hill, revealing to all the world the beauty of the gospel and its power to redeem.

Nor was this all, for where the church is there is the love of God. So it was our fathers through this eye of vision saw a great restored church in this age, sending out its emissaries unto every country, unto every people, that the honest in heart might by their sacrifice of love be gathered out of the nations of the earth and called up to join the children of God in Zion redeemed.

And in this vision the work of the ministry was easy, for here was Zion, the great ensign. Behold, the people of God! the ensign unto which all nations shall be glad to come, was to be the call of the missionaries. And to them were to come men from every nation, drawn by the power of the Saints' great goodness, and their salvation.

My dear friends, it is not the Book of Mormon that is to be the ensign. It is not the church with its organization, principles of doctrine, its spiritual gifts. God himself here says Zion is the ensign.

When Zion is redeemed, then will the world have a practical demonstration of the power of God to save from this world. Then will men believe we are the people of God, because we have become godlike.

This was the vision of our fathers. And because they had a great vision, they loved greatly, they achieved much, they died in the faith, and handed down to us a most magnificent heritage.

Nor is that all, for in handing it down to us they imposed upon us the most gigantic task ever assumed by men in this world, the redemption of Zion in the end of time, and the saving from the world of those who fear God and are willing to follow him in righteousness. And, my dear friends, if that work is ever done by anybody, it will be done by men and women of like vision; of like mighty love and achievement, who honor God and their fathers in the heritage received, by rising up to their calling and becoming the redeemed of earth, the moving witnesses of God to those who will hear.

This, then, must be our vision. For we, too, must live on in the vision of our fathers, and so minister as to make that vision in fruition possible. We must bring to pass the things they saw, the things they believed, the things for which they died, for which they gave their lives and their all. We, too, must see a great vision, live a great life, and go on to a great achievement.

Three Steps in Perfected Vision

Methinks it will help us to keep ever in mind that there are three steps in this process:

First, there is the consciousness of the divine presence, but that is not all of it. Let me illustrate this for you. I had been away from Lamoni over Sunday, and stepping off the train the next morning,

I met a good brother who said to me, "Why, Brother John, where you been? Where you been, Brother John?"

"I have been up the line over Sunday."

"You ought to have been here," he said. "It was one of the big meetings, the sacrament meeting yesterday. We had two prophecies and a tongue and an interpretation. Great meeting! You ought to have been there."

I was interested at once, so I said, "Well, my dear brother, I am happy to know it. What was it that the Lord said?"

"Oh, I don't remember what he said; but you ought to have been there."

That was not vision. That man just heard something. The sound waves set up a sensation in his ear and carried something to his brain. That was all. That wasn't vision. He knew that God was there; but he didn't have the first thought of trying to discover what God wanted in coming there. He had but taken the first step in vision. He was but become conscious of God's presence.

The second step in vision is the realization of the divine purpose. But that isn't all. The rich young man in the days of our Lord had a vision. That is, he saw his Matser. He went to him and asked, "Good Master, what must I do that I, too, with you, may inherit eternal life?" Jesus told him, but he went away sorrowful. It was not enough to see the Lord, and to learn what the Lord wanted him to do. There remained the third step.

The third step in vision is the doing of the divine will. This completes the cycle. This alone brings satisfaction to men and satisfaction to God.

That is the kind of vision Paul had. When Jesus appeared to Paul, he became conscious that one from above had come down to him. It was the first step. And immediately he took the second, when he asked, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Jesus told him what to do, and he went and did it. So Paul could say before men and in the face of God, "I have not been disobedient unto the heavenly vision. I have gone forth as a minister; and having been a minister, indeed, I have testified powerfully. I have kept the faith."

By the way, we must not overlook the text. It is an old-time Latter Day Saint text, which says, "Where there is no vision the people perish; but he that keepeth the law, happy is he." The interpretation of this text is in its latter clause. He who finds it, and takes to himself the significance of it, he who keeps the law, that man has a completed vision. Hence he is happy, he makes the world happy, and makes God happy.

This is the perfect vision—to keep the law.

We First See the Thing to Be Achieved

It is the same principle by which we work in all the experiences of life. The sculptor must first see in the stone the figure he would bring forth. The artist must first see on the canvas the face he would paint. The architect must first see on the site the edifice he would build. The mother must first see on the form of her daughter the gown she would adorn her with. So the Saint must first see in himself that great life which is to be. So must the church see in itself that great Zion which is to be. And when she sees it and moves forward to that end, Zion will be true to that vision. There is no question about that. It will be even as it is in our every other experience of life.

To achieve this Zion, then, the Saints must carry on in the things our fathers have seen, must carry on in the things they themselves shall see; for unless they see it, Zion can not be.

It was indeed with the eye of faith that our fathers saw Zion marching on, first in themselves, and then in us, in the full measure of the grace of God to bring it to pass. For they labored not alone, did our fathers. These men of towering faith laid claim to all the powers of earth and all the powers of heaven. And these two meeting together, the powers of men and the powers of God, became the church established in the end of time, revealing the purposes of heaven, opening up the channels for further revelation, and carrying on to the realization of all the divine will in this closing age of earth time.

It is, too, by the power of God in us. We work not alone. By the intelligence of that divine one who has called this great work into existence, shall it become some day clear in purpose, sure in effort, powerful in testimony; for God and all eternity are pledged to bring it to pass in us.

We Labor Not Alone

Let us notice the lesson from Paul. We are not come, he says, to Mount Horeb, a mountain which we dare not touch. No, we are coming to Mount Zion. And Zion is to be, not a mountain of earth, for she shall be the mountain of the Lord's house of the latter day. And we shall come nigh unto her. And touch her. And be of her.

Nor are you coming there alone, for standing ready to take us by the hand and lead us into light are an innumerable company of angels, ministering spirits to those who yet work in the earth.

There is, furthermore, going on before us unto Zion the general assembly of the church of the First-born. And, my dear friends, are not these who have gone on before us conscious of our efforts? Are not they concerned? Do not they labor with us? I believe it. I know it. We labor not alone. The great company of the church of the Firstborn, gone into heaven, they yet labor with us, and shall labor on to the end.

And not content with this, the apostle would remind us that there labors with us also to the end that Zion shall be, Jesus himself, the divine mediator of this new covenant. He who left heaven and sacrificed earth, and gave all things that Zion might be, he labors on with the people of God that Zion may be.

And finally Paul says, Look and believe, and behold you shall find God, the judge of all the earth, in all his majesty, in all his light, in all his power, laboring with you that Zion may be in you.

And know this, that that people who align themselves with the angels of light, with the church of the Firstborn gone on before, with Jesus Christ the mediator of the new covenant, and with God the Father of all, that people will achieve all the divine purpose in this age.

The Time of Shaking

So in Zion will be the demonstration of the power of God to save. Men will believe when they see us saved. We do not expect them to believe before.

I here lay down a principle. I trust no one will misunderstand me. I am not personal. I only lay down a principle. I lay it down with the absolute certainty that that people who would know God in a Zion redeemed must build on that same principle. I do not say who is now building thereupon. I do not say who is not. I do not say who of the church will succeed. I only deal frankly with a principle. Here it is:

Those who in fulfillment of this vision of our fathers of this faith answer the call of God in a Zion redeemed, will first have come through the test of a great trial of faith. Paul suggests it in the shaking of the earth at Mount Horeb. This time, in this age, he says God by his power will shake not only the earth, but heaven also. And if the earth is not today going through a period of shaking, what would we call it? In the same breath the apostle says, This time, "God will shake heaven, also." I interpret it to mean the church shall be shaken. And the apostle further testifies that that shaking process in the earth and in the church shall be so moving in its power that all things which may be moved will be moved; that only the immovable will remain.

I believe with all my heart the people of God are right now passing through this shaking process. And I feel it behooves all and each of us to take care, not only where we stand, but also how we stand. For even though one stand where is the right, he may do it in a spirit wrong and destructive both of himself and others. And most assuredly must one stand where is the right if he is to endure through the shaking.

So Paul says, Wherefore, we receiving a kingdom which can not be moved, which stands fast as eternity and as sure as God, let us claim the grace of God, that we being also immovable, may remain with the eternal kingdom of God and serve to its final and complete triumph.

How gently Paul pleads with us! He says as our friend and brother of experience, Let us have grace. Let us claim for ourselves the favor of God; and in doing it we shall claim also through ourselves the favor of God for others. Let us manifest grace as God manifested it. Let us manifest it toward our brethren. Let us beware lest some root of bitterness spring up in us. Let us see to it that no bitterness springing up either in us or in others shall be allowed to root itself in us. Be not embittered, either in your own action, or from the act of another. For from whatever stimulus, the effect is the same. Bitterness blasts. Grace alone saves.

The Ministry of Love

And Paul pleads with us, Stay sweet and clean and wholesome and divine. So when you find a man overcome, weary and worn and disheartened, and whose hands hang down, you can go to him and lift him up. Or if he stumbles uncertainly in the way, be a strength to his feeble knees. And if he go yet lame, then go on before him in the way and cast carefully aside the stumblingstones, that he fall not. Better yet, let your ministry in his behalf be so divine that he shall be healed through your virtue, and become strong like unto you.

Would you remove from your brother's eye the mote that you think is leading him to the ditch? Mark well the words of your Master to go first to your closet, and there, with your good right hand guided by the unerring hand of God, lay hold firmly on the beam which is in your own eye, and by the power of eternity draw it out. And when you have done it, then you may see clearly; then with that sure right hand, by the aid of the hand of the Lord with it, you may reach forth and draw as if by a soothing, silken cord, the mote from your brother's eye.

Those who would correct us, if they be of God, and we have gone out of the way, will thus move in the consideration of love. And we being of God, if we will be moved as God moves, will labor in like manner to correct others.

This is the Spirit of God. It is the ministry of love.

We Stand on the Revelations

And after all has been said and done, Paul says, Refuse not him that speaketh. Turn not away from God, for if those of olden time to whom he spake out of Mount Horeb, whose mission it was as a people to make themselves ready to receive at his first coming and go forth with him to fill the earth with the gospel—if they escaped not, how much less can we escape, who in the end of time are intrusted with that great work of receiving Jesus at his second advent, having first made ourselves ready, and having saved the world unto him against the day of his coming? With much reason Paul says to us, Refuse not him that speaketh.

Will you permit me to say something more? And I pray God I may do it in the spirit of love. I speak under what I feel to be the charge of eternity. Let me say to you that to discredit, to fail to appreciate the philosophy, the inspiration, the revelation of God through the prophets of the latter days is to fail to appreciate God. To fail to honor the revelations of light which have come to us as a people is to refuse God who speaks to us. To fail to claim the power which comes with these divine utterances, and which through them is to be transmitted to the people of God, is to fail indeed. To discard in large part the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, as is the way of some, is to open the floodgates to infidelity. We might just as well go back to sectarianism and be done with it.

Borrowing again the phraseology of Paul, Let us beware of that man who draws back; who sets aside the word of God; who would make our latter-day prophets a thing of naught. Heeding the admonition of the Apostle Paul, refusing not the God who speaks to us, we will refuse to draw back to 1830. We will refuse to draw back to 1831. We will not be among that number who draw back to 1835. Neither will we join those who draw back to 1852; nor be found among those who draw back to 1914.

The drawing back process brings us no pleasure, Paul said. Pleasure of man and pleasure of God is found in that people who move forward according as God's word may have been.

Nor, my dear friends, do we need to draw back to rationalize this religion. For any man who can rationalize the Christian religion at all can rationalize this latter-day glory, if he waits upon God to move him in his counsel, and trusts him in time to reveal his purpose. God was true to those who planted this work in the latter day, and to their children he will be true.

We seek, then, the vision, revelation of our fathers, the truth, the power, the grace, the full light of this age, under which we purpose to carry on until Zion shall have been redeemed and the world warned, and Christ shall come. And, my friends, all this latter-day revelation is necessary. It is to judge the world, and it is to judge the church. We believe it.

We trust it. We move in under it. We know it is true. And we know through it and its principles in our lives shall the full vision of our fathers be accomplished and brought to pass through us by the power of the Master.

Zion Shall Be Redeemed.

We do know that it is to be so. I know it. By the measure of the redemptive grace of Christ in my life I know that Zion by the bye shall be redeemed. And you know it by the same assurance in your lives. If I could know it in no other way, I would know it by the great change in the lives of the many men and women of my acquaintance during the lifetime of my ministry in the church. If I had not this assurance to rest upon, I could know by the force of the devotion and the readiness and the preparation of the young people of this church to bring it to pass, that Zion will be redeemed.

Zion will be. The world will be warned. And Christ will come. Believe it, my dear people. Believe in God. Believe in yourselves. Believe in your fellows. Discover the divinity in yourselves as well as the divinity in the revelations of God in this age. Learn what is the divine purpose in all things. Go forth in faith. And as God lives, Zion shall be redeemed.

We Take Anew the Covenant

I haven't much to offer, but such as I have it is yours. You can not know what this gospel means to me. No man can. I can say of a truth, and every word of it truth, all I have, all I am, all I may ever have, all I may be in this world has been made possible unto me in this gospel and in this church. This church is my meat and my drink. All I can do is but feeble in comparison to what this church and people have done for me. I give it freely.

Standing in this divine presence as you stand in it, I want in conclusion tonight to renew with you the covenant I made with Jesus Christ in baptism in western Iowa many years ago. I want to renew the covenant I have made with Jesus Christ every time I have received ordination at the hands of the eldership. I want that together we shall pledge our honor and our all that through us and by us this vision of our fathers shall come to pass, that in our day Zion shall be redeemed. And as we keep the faith it shall be so.

And especially to you young men and women, and thank God there are so many of you here, let me say to you that in every place the youth of the church is at the head of the van. You will do well to go on in all diligence, that you may have full part with them in days to come when the work will be yours as it is ours today.

Let us then in parting renew again our most holy covenant. Let us for each others' sake, for the sake of the church, for the sake of the world, let us here determine to stand fast, that Zion may be redeemed, even as our fathers have visioned it.

To live, men must vision; and he who keepeth the law, happy is he.

May God keep us for the happiness of many.

The Budget and Its Use

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

Budget Items and Cost Ratios

After obtaining data from many sources, a budget estimate of the cost of family living was presented in 1925 by The National Industrial Conference Board. The per cent cost of the five items given in the estimate totals 100, each item being as follows:

Items	Food	Shelter	Clothing	Fuel-Light	Sundries	Total %
Cost ratios:	43.1	17.7	13.2	5.6	20.4	100

From many thousands of families data have been compiled by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics from nearly every State, showing the cost of living for the small wage earners, and how they spend it. The studies extend over many years and form the basis of various budget estimates that have been suggested. A standard in harmony with proper living has been attempted. The following table derived from the bureau shows the average cost ratio of each of the five items named in various places and years, including the weighted average of all items. This table is valuable to the budgeter as a means of showing probable variations in item ratios in different years and places.

Year and Place	Food	Shelter	Clothing	Fuel-Light	Sundries
1901: United States	43.13	18.12	12.95	5.69	20.11
1915: United States	38.00	20.00	15.00	6.00	21.00
1907: New York City	44.7	18.1	15.5	4.5	17.2
1917: New York City	45.01	12.91	14.84	4.61	22.63
1917: Philadelphia	43.31	12.04	15.97	4.95	23.74
1917: Dallas, Texas	45.01	14.51	12.57	*9.11	18.80
Weighted average	43.13	17.65	13.21	5.63	20.38

* Includes ice, telephone, water, and laundry.

Both the cost of living and the ratio cost of items differ materially in the various places where studies have been made, but differences in the purchasing power of the dollar are often nearly or quite compensated by differences in wages or salary, and in constancy of employment. The following table compares the cost of living in different years and in various cities. It is derived from data issued by the bureau.

City	Cost in Dec., 1918	June, 1920	Dec. 1924
Baltimore	$1,260.86	$1,462.60	$1,193.48
Boston	1,438.13	1,776.09	1,410.22
Buffalo	1,460.00	1,787.04	1,434.99

Chicago	1,461.42	1,820.93	1,487.70
Cincinnati	1,168.82	1,465.70	1,171.09

* U. S. average	1,434.37	1,780.05	1,418.70

* Based on 92 cities.

Of the foregoing cities the cost of living in 1918 was highest in Seattle and lowest in Cincinnati, Seattle being over 32 per cent higher than Cincinnati. Cleveland, New York, and Detroit were next highest, in the order named. In 1920 these four cities were still the highest, with Detroit leading; also in 1924, with Cleveland leading. In all three years Cincinnati and Baltimore remained the lowest in the cost of living. It has been suggested that good times increase the cost of living, but a study of these figures will show that other factors must also have a decided influence.

The Cleveland Society for Savings estimates the monthly expense for families of two, three, four, and five, based on an income of $150 per month, as follows:

Items	2		3		4		5
	Cost	%	Cost	%	Cost	%	Cost	%
Food	$30	20.	$36	24.	$45	30.	$50	33.3
Shelter	38	25.3	38	25.3	38	25.3	38	25.3
Clothing	22	14.6	24	16.	25	16.6	26	17.3
Operating	12	8.	12	8.	13	8.6	13	8.6
Advancement	23	15.3	20	13.3	14	9.3	12	8.
*Savings	25	16.6	20	13.3	15	10.	11	7.3

*Includes insurance.

From the fact that the above estimate issues from a savings institution, it will be of interest to compare the figures with the following estimate of the First National Bank of Detroit, based on the same number of persons and the same amount of income. It will be noted that the item of savings must be added to that of insurance in order to make the comparison.

Items	2		3		4		5
	Cost	%	Cost	%	Cost	%	Cost	%
Food	$35	23.3	$45	30.	$50	33.3	$52	34.6
Shelter	38	25.3	38	25.3	38	25.3	38	25.3

Advancement	15	10.	10	6.6	8	5.3	5	3.3
Insurance	8	5.3	7	4.6	4	2.6	3	2
Savings	9	6.	5	3.3	3	2.	2	1.3

With the foregoing estimates should be compared the following one submitted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs, though the table is somewhat different in all but one of the columns of cost figures. It covers the cost of living for two and five persons having incomes of from $100 to $200 per month.

Size of family:	2	5	5	5	5	5
Monthly Income	$100.00	$100.00	$125.00	$150.00	$175.00	$200.00
Food	$35.00	$40.00	$45.00	$50.00	$50.00	$55.00
House & rent	16.00	19.00	28.00	35.00	40.00	45.00
Clothing	13.00	13.00	16.00	20.00	22.00	25.00
Home upkeep	10.00	12.00	13.50	14.00	19.00	20.00
Advancement	16.00	11.00	14.75	20.00	25.25	30.50
Savings	10.00	5.00	7.75	11.00	18.75	24.50

Of necessity these budgets could not be ideal where scanty incomes must serve large families. In such instances comfort must give place to necessity in some measure. But a careful study of these tables will be decidedly helpful in making budget estimates, consideration being given to the circumstances of each case and to past experience. To aid in making an estimate of the cost ratio of different items, another table is given here as taken from figures of the National Industrial Conference Board. It shows the variations in the cost ratio of expense items in July of each year from 1919 to 1924 inclusive. It shows that the cost ratio of each item, and the ratio of any item to the others, may vary considerably in different years.

Food	47.6	46.2	39.1	39.3	39.1	38.1
Clothing	15.3	17.2	13.3	13.0	13.9	14.0
Housing	13.2	13.7	18.3	18.8	19.1	20.3
Fuel & light	4.6	4.5	6.2	6.3	6.1	5.8
Miscellaneous	19.3	18.4	23.1	22.6	21.8	21.8

The miscellaneous expenditures include car fare, church and charity, insurance, medical and other services, and a variety of goods not in other items. Certain of these are budgeted as separate items by some, to facilitate a more complete analysis and to determine the ratio of certain expenditures. Some individuals have arranged their budgets with fifty or more items. But while this yields the ratio of many kinds of small expenditures, it is doubtful if it tends to a saving of enough more to pay for the extra bother involved in keeping the separate accounts.

The foregoing table shows a steady increase in the cost of housing in every year since 1919, while food has shown an even greater decrease, though not in the same degrees of uniformity. As housing has since then been more adequately provided, there is reason to believe that a gradual decrease in this expenditure will be brought about. Some clear indications of this are already at hand.

Administering the Expense Budget

After selecting the standard budget outline that seems best suited to your own needs, it should be modified if necessary to meet any particular individual requirements. In doing this it is usually advisable to make a tentative arrangement of expense items and ratios, under which actual expenditures are recorded for a time. This preliminary budget will furnish the data for a permanent budget estimate to be adhered to during the year.

So far as possible all bills should be paid by check, thus insuring a record of the expenditure. Some systematic method should be employed to account for all cash paid out for incidentals, as it is easy to forget and thus necessitate a misleading budget. As the primary object of the budget is financial progress, some advise the setting aside of the amount for savings before making any expenditures. Whether or not this should be done may depend somewhat upon how limited is the income and whether or not it is received at regular intervals in unvarying amounts. Emergency may at times play an important part.

Aside from factors of the foregoing nature, it is doubtless advisable to invest the savings as the first consideration, provide for the essential items next, and let the remainder do for all other expenditures. If in any month there is more than enough to pay all budget requirements, the additional amount should be kept as an emergency fund for times of stress in any item. By systematically adhering to such a method, the chances are ten to one that you will save by it—how much, depends upon yourself. Properly administered, the budget not only saves now, but also serves to preview your future financial condition in a great measure.

The Budgeting of Time

To those who have always considered the budget solely as a system for administering the income, the idea of a time budget may seem somewhat strange. It will doubtless be admitted, however, that our ability to earn money depends upon the use we make of our time. The use of time for constructive purposes and in proper proportion to the importance of such purposes must unquestionably yield more profitable results than would be possible if it were wasted or spent aimlessly. The importance of this outstanding fact will become even more apparent as the subject is considered in detail.

The Bureau of Home Economics, Washington, District of Columbia, which is under the United States Department of Agriculture, has prepared an abundance of literature on the budgeting of time. It includes daily time records for the homemaker, and charts for individual use, together with information and suggestions for putting the budget into effect. This prepared literature has been sent gratis to applicants, and is worthy of careful study. Others have also prepared material on the same subject that will doubtless be helpful in connection with the forming of time budgets. Some interesting and important factors of the subject are submitted here, the value of which will doubtless be recognized.

Time is often one of the most essential features of budgeting. The amount of time that is liable to be wasted in the average family life is almost unbelievable. In such cases a properly administered time budget should yield particularly profitable results, but in practically any instance it will prove of very real benefit to anyone who will utilize it. It encourages a purposeful life, which therefore becomes useful and prosperous—a successful life. It discourages aimlessness, which is the forerunner of shiftlessness, slothfulness, and degeneracy, and develops increased capability and accomplishment. These at least are undeniable facts.

Budgeting to Build Character

The purpose of a time budget is determined by the character of the budgeter. In approaching the ideal purpose one should possess a broad view of life and its meaning, in order that time may be devoted to worth-while objectives. It is well to remember that some part of time must be given to each of several aims, otherwise life becomes narrow and lacking in proper development. For instance, our aims must include the spiritual, the physical, the intellectual, and the social welfare, for they are all related to and interwoven with each other. The active use of time at any period must necessarily be concerned with one or more of them.

How much time should be devoted to each class of activities in which the individual desires to be engaged depends upon his vocation and various circumstances that may be in some measure beyond his control. The time budget should cover daily schedules, and also provide weekly periods when needed to cover activities not performed daily. Individual activities are so varied that a standard schedule for all would not be practicable, but some important aspects of these activities may well be noted.

The amount of time to be budgeted for spiritual ends depends somewhat upon the nature of one's vocation. The minister needs more time for this purpose than would be used by members of his congregation, it being in particular his vocation. Yet some of the same spiritual functions are necessary to them, such as religious reading, prayer, attendance at church services, and various other devotional activities. All these develop principles which actuate one in the doing of many other things, and can not well be omitted from the time budget of one who will make the most of his life.

Physical welfare requires diversified activities, such as work, recreation, rest, and sleep. The amount of time to be devoted to each of these is likewise dependent upon the nature of one's vocation, state of health, and other factors with which he is concerned. In any event they require a large part of his time. Recreation is a broad term that pertains to various activities for one's refreshment, including eating, amusement, and other kinds of diversion. After determining the activities to be included under this term, the time to be spent in each of them should be indicated in the time budget.

Some of the activities under physical welfare, such as recreational, are also of importance in the social realm, hence could be classified under either term, according to the viewpoint and purpose of the budgeter. The amount of time to be spent in activities of this kind would depend upon this viewpoint largely, the relative importance of other matters having due weight to form a well-balanced complete budget. Certain social demands would be almost imperative, while others would be comparatively unimportant. The time for each should be determined accordingly.

In intellectual development is found much that concerns the moral aspects of life and is also important to social welfare. It includes a broad program of reading, the study of many things in art, science, and nature, conversations, reflection, and the cultivation of refinement. Several suggestions for a reading program have been offered. The one which is here submitted provides for a moderate amount of time at disposal aside from regular hours of business, as follows:

Purpose of reading	Reading Time, %
Occupational development	35%
Ethical and general culture	15%
Current topics and events	15%
Religion and higher thought	20%
Entertainment and diversion	15%

The proportions shown in the table may be varied somewhat according to previous educational studies, and in accordance with particular requirements of the individual. One may correct deficiency in any respect by noting the accomplishments of those skilled in the requirement desired, if proper time and methods are then devoted to overcoming the defect. A faithful adherence to the budget plan is of course essential to success.

How Success May Be Assured

The two outstanding qualifications for perseverance and systematic habits, when added to common sense, are the guiding hands of ultimate achievement. They are both wonderful savers of time and temper, and anyone can well afford to learn the wisdom of their ways. They suggest the right amount of energy consistent with physical powers and endurance, so that activities may be maintained at a proper rate without exhaustion. They call for devotion to each task in the period to which it is assigned, except when emergency intervenes. They invite to greater efficiency, thus making it possible to shorten the time budgeted for the purpose concerned, and giving more time for other tasks.

The budget is a means of eliminating disorder and carelessness in managing one's affairs, and both of these faults are dangerous instruments that produce failure to one who persists in their use. No doubt observation alone sufficiently proves the truth of this statement, but with many experience has already demonstrated its accuracy. One reason why many never achieve success is this: They do not act with determination to avoid the errors which caused the failure of others. They fail because they do not move forward in accordance with the laws of success, but follow ruts of failure.

God does not want his people to fail. We can not think of Zion as the place of failure, disorder, aimlessness, inefficiency, slothfulness, poverty, and stupidity. Our ideals oppose this presumption, and we sing and pray and talk of a very different Zion. But if Zion ever arises, it will be the people composing Zion who will arise and put on the beautiful garments of which we sing. Each step we take to produce the conditions of Zion will aid the fulfillment of our hope. The budget is but one of the steps to this end—only one step—but let us take the step.

The Song of the Snake

One of our young people became interested in animal life, and strange to say, though a girl, became particularly interested in the reptilian family. One day recently she handed me a bit of verse, and said, "How's this?"

How would you have answered? Here is what she handed me:

"sss-iss-hisss-ss!

Hear the song of the snake;
He's singing of life and of love—
sss-iss-hiss.

siss—
Listen! He tells of adventure,
Of life that creeps on the ground,
Of insects that dance in the sun,
Of men who go hunting his kind
And find only death in his place;
Of beauty that never is seen,
Of gold and treasures that lie
In the burrows of poisonous ones,
Of the glory of being a snake.

sss-iss-hiss
Hear the song of the snake!"

An Archbishop's Alarm

To the Editor of "The Globe": Few more striking words have fallen on Canadian ears of late than those of the Roman Catholic archbishop at the tragic funeral in Montreal a few days ago. "It was painful," said his Grace, "to reflect that over one hundred children were there that day in defiance of the law, and the majority even without the permission of their parents." And then the archbishop, recalling that the catastrophe took place on a Sunday, added these significant words: "I believe that at present the trend of the people is not precisely for the sanctification of the Sabbath. Public opinion should impose respect for the Lord's Day.

It is true that the Sunday movie has not yet invaded Ontario and Toronto. But it is appalling to think that in the United States, according to a recent authority, 22,000,000 people attend the moving picture theaters every Sunday, and we all know that in Quebec they are open to the public and largely attended. May God awaken our public men to this serious danger, and preserve us from what would be the last invasion of the Lord's Day.

But there is a matter that it seems to me Christian parents should very seriously consider, and that is the whole question of children's attendance at these shows, and especially on Saturday evenings, when the very atmosphere as well as the lateness of the hour tends to destroy all sort of preparation for the sacred day which is to follow, with its uplift and worship. Anything and everything that can be done to safeguard Sunday as God's Day should be a matter of concern for Canadian Christians today. Not only eternal vigilance, but continuous self-sacrifice is the price that we have to pay for having and holding these great national assets, the home and the Sunday. The tendency is more and more to forget that the day is not ours at all. It is God's Day; God-blessed, God-sanctified, and God-given to man that its hours of worship, its divine appeals, its holy communion, its victories of faith may sweep into our lives as a breath of new life, with their mental and moral reinforcements, the only counteractive to the loose thinking and general irreverence of the times.

"So long as the Christian Sabbath is acknowledged and kept by men as a sacred day," said Voltaire, "there is no hope of destroying Christian religion." Then, by God's help, let Christians say: "We will keep it. For our good and God's glory we will keep it holy, and keep it wholly for God."—Toronto Globe, January 20.

Good Results of Missionary Meetings

WINFIELD, KANSAS, March 8.—Last spring, after General Conference, our missionary, Brother H. V. Minton, moved his family here, and we can surely say their stay the past year has been a pleasure and great help to us. Brother Minton organized a class which meets each Thursday afternoon with the Department of Women. The study is, The Mind in the Making, and some very vital points have been brought out. Each student feels she has been benefited by it. When he is here Brother Minton has charge of the class, and when he is away Sister Minton takes his place.

The record of the Department of Women shows a gain over the past year, especially in the financial part. This helps greatly, and we are glad we can do it, although it has looked discouraging at times. We have stayed together, if only a few, and have been benefited by it.

Our young people have been growing till we have a real live group of them as well as a large class. A family or two have moved away, but others have come to add to their number.

About Christmas time a series of meetings was planned for first part of February. We did some advertising, and the date was set for January 23 to February 13. From the first, unusual interest was manifested. The crowd grew, and everyone seemed concerned. Brother Minton talked, enlarging his theme of growth and development. He talked only two nights on the organization of the church. On February 7 and 8 Brother J. W. Davis, of Oklahoma, gave two very fine talks. The first evening he talked to the young people, advising and admonishing. He told them to have a good time while they are young, but also mentioned how that good time should be governed. It was inspiring. On the second evening, he showed pictures of the Hawaiian Islands to a packed house. Each Sunday evening of the meetings found all the seats taken so that chairs had to be brought in. At the close of the third week, three were baptized, two promising young men from families who do not belong to the church, and a lad of eight years. The interest was so great that many expressed a desire to continue the meetings another week, which seemed wisdom to do. At the close of that week, once more we were called to the water's edge just as the sun was setting. A sister whom we had long looked for and hoped would enter the fold was baptized. We feel there are others.

No doubt it is the thought of each that this meeting was the most successful ever held at this branch. We also feel that the feeling of prejudice which has held sway has to a degree vanished and that the time has come when we can branch out and grow.

On the closing night Brother Minton showed pictures on the life of Christ. The house was full to the doors. It certainly makes the Saints rejoice to see such a crowd, when for so long there has been only a handful.

My Church

My church is where the pure word of God is preached, where the power of God is felt, where the Spirit of God is manifested, where the love of God is revealed, and the unity of God is perceived. It is the home of my soul, the altar of my devotion, the hearth of my faith, the center of my affection, and the insight of heaven. I have united with it in solemn covenant, pledging myself to attend its services, to pray for its members, to give to its support, and to obey its laws. It claims the first place in my heart, the best of my activities; and its unity and progress concern my life in this world and for the life to come. I owe to it my prayers and my zeal; and when I neglect its services, I tend to injure its good name, I set a bad example to my brothers and sisters, I discourage others, and chill my own soul. Thus I have solemnly promised to advance its interests by encouraging my brothers and sisters, and others, by speaking kindly in return for wrathful words, and endeavoring to return good for evil and love for persecution, and to meet with my fellow members in prayer when and where possible to commune with God for the advancement of the gospel and the betterment of the entire world.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, West Lexington.

Departmental Notes

Miss Blanche Edwards, after nine months' absence in England, is again at her desk in the general departments office. She was able to do a good work in her homeland and enjoyed the stay with home folks, but she returns with enthusiasm to the larger tasks awaiting her here. While in Independence recently, she attended the National Child Welfare Conference in Kansas City.

Mrs. Lydia Wight and Mrs. Dona Haden, of the Department of Women, attended the first National Homes Conference in Des Moines, March 8 to 11. They report a very fine meeting in which various means for raising home standards were discussed by experienced authorities. They were impressed with the wonderful opportunity for improving home conditions and felt that surely in our Zionie plans the Saints must be alert, informed, and in earnest. Zion shall not be redeemed faster than our homes and our home life are made to approximate ideal conditions.

Several of the Des Moines Saints also attended the conference, and on Saturday evening a reception was held for the visiting Women's Department workers in the parlors of the new Des Moines church. At this time reports were given of the conference, and much of value applied directly to our own home problems. On Sunday morning Mrs. Haden, general cradle roll superintendent, addressed the Saints at the eleven o'clock hour.

C. B. Woodstock and Mrs. Richard Baldwin conducted a three-day convention at Council Bluffs, February 28 to March 2. Mrs. Baldwin has an unusually interesting and attractive exhibit of Sunday school handwork. Attendance was fine, several driving in from distant branches. During the week, Brother Woodstock spoke one evening each at Moorhead, Missouri Valley, and Woodbine, in the Little Sioux District, and was the "all-day" speaker at Omaha the Sunday following.

Mrs. C. B. Woodstock attended a three-day conference of the Far West Stake at Saint Joseph, Missouri, speaking especially in the interest of the girls' and young women's movement. Miss Edwards and C. B. Woodstock assisted the local forces of the Kansas City Stake in a convention on March 13 and 14.

Long Beach, California, has adopted a "missionary plan." Their aim is to make every member of the church a member of the school, and every member of the school a missionary. No wonder it is reported as the most active school of the district.

Sister Vida Phillips, Kennett, Missouri, graduating from a normal training high school course in June, is the newly chosen district Sunday school superintendent in southern Missouri. She reports being anxious to enroll in our special training courses in religious education, that she may be ready for real work. That is the type of spirit that should get results. Districts should try to search out officers who have had some training, as well as experience.

Mrs. G. E. Hemstock, efficient librarian of the Northern Wisconsin District, reports a library of seventy books with the purchase of eight splendid books this year. These are divided into groups and exchanged once each year. An excellent idea, especially where Sunday schools do not have the advantages of a public library.

From the Spokane District, Brother B. E. Hart reports a successful scheme for the improving of primary work. A committee of experienced primary teachers is associated with the district officers in an effort to give a knowledge of hand-work, the use of pictures and primary methods in every school of the district.

Mrs. Miriam Woodward, 816 Yeoman Place, Waukegan, Illinois, is very anxious to locate any Saints living near them with whom they can meet in Sunday school.

Mrs. G. W. Thorburn, Deer Lodge, Montana, writes of an unusually pleasant eight-day convention held at that place, in which Elder E. Y. Hunker assisted the missionaries.

Omaha, Nebraska

March 9.—Our Sunday school teachers' and officers' meeting, February 3, was well attended, and we felt repaid listening to two thirty-minute lectures on the signs of the times by Brother C. T. Self, using the Bible as reference, and Brother W. T. Wellman, the Doctrine and Covenants.

Four young speakers handled our subject, loyalty, this month. Brother Richard Wren, assistant superintendent, presented the subject, "Loyalty to our resolutions," telling us that resolutions are easily made, but loyalty to them takes courage. Minard Keairnes spoke on "Loyalty to home;" Harold Kirkpatrick, "Loyalty to country;" and Fremming Self, "Loyalty to the church." We feel proud of these young men, who proved themselves interesting speakers.

On February 20 Patriarch Baldwin spoke to us on our talents, and made it quite clear that we are to account for every moment of our time, our strength, and our means.

The district conference, the business session of which was held at the South Side Branch passed off without a ripple. There was a good attendance at the afternoon sessions, President F. M. McDowell presiding. He was assisted by District President H. A. Merchant and counselor. The services on Sunday which were held at Omaha Branch were inspirational all through. Patriarch Baldwin's address at the 8.30 a. m. priesthood meeting was profound and elevating. Brother and Sister Baldwin are always welcome guests and coworkers in our branch.

Our district officers elected are: President, H. A. Merchant; counselor, J. L. Cooper; secretary, Jess Steel; superintendent of Sunday school, Mary Grace Larson; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Vera Gamet; superintendent of Department of Women, Audentia Anderson; music, R. W. Scott; historian, C. T. Self, sustained; bishop's agent, B. M. Anderson, sustained; the following comprise our committee for district reunion, Brothers Merchant, Lewis, of Decatur; B. M. Anderson, Butts, and Clayburn.

The sermon by President Floyd M. McDowell on Friday, the 25th, "Why halt ye between two opinions?" stressing, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve," was straight to the point, as usual. The service was not as well attended by our young people as it should have been. However a full house with many young heard his discourse Sunday morning, February 27, setting forth the philosophy that will bring us to God.

The round table in the afternoon at half past two brought forth so much excellent instruction that we make only one selection. "Most people find it easier to look and feel than to read and think."

We count President McDowell's visit to us as one of the choice blessings of life, and are sure many of us have renewed determinations to show forth the spiritual aspects of the gospel, mutual love, intelligent service, consecration and dedication, purity and righteousness.

Death invaded our ranks on February 27, taking Brother Thomas A. Edwards. He was first stricken with influenza early in December, going into pneumonia, and quickly developing tuberculosis. He was patiently and lovingly cared for in the home of his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Edmunds, 5516

Leavenworth Street, who together with another brother and sister mourn their loss.

Girls of the intermediate department were entertained at a valentine party at the home of Wilma Greenway, February 19. Miss Wilma proved herself a charming hostess. Seventeen were present to enjoy the games and fun. A buffet supper was served.

Miss Irene Cooper, of Chicago, is visiting her parents, Brother and Sister J. L. Cooper, and is getting a much-needed rest.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kemmish, of Logan, Iowa, have been with us lately. Their baby was ill in the Methodist Hospital.

A mimeograph letter sent us by Brother Cooper stated our objective and problem was to build up the kingdom of God, and outlined a working plan to that end. I am sure the Saints appreciate his efforts in our behalf.

Excerpts from "Nosey News," Edited by Our Pastor

The district valentine party held February 6 at the home of C. A. Anderson was a real success. Just another point emphasizing the value of leadership, Sister Vera Gamet was on the job, and they say Brother and Sister Hall are prize winners when it comes to being dressed in costume.

We were glad to see the smiling faces of Brother and Sister James Kelley at the Sunday services. They have just returned from a several weeks' stay in California. We welcome them home.

Brother and Sister Merrick's new house is progressing very nicely. We will be glad when we can give them a housewarming in their new home.

Sister Mabel Stoff and boys, Junior and Duane, have been besieged with scarlet fever, scarletina, and the German measles for the past few weeks. With the help of God they have withstood all, and today we learn the quarantine has been lifted.

After a three-week stay in the Methodist Hospital, Sister Cloe Fleming has been permitted to return to her home and loved ones. Sister Fleming says, "Don't talk hospital to me any more." We wonder why!

Sister Anna Kinney says had it not been for the splendid help of Uncle Tom and his winning ways when he was about the housework that she would not have been able to stand being shut in. We are thankful to learn that they have been released from quarantine.

Cherokee, Iowa

March 13.—The Saints were much disappointed when Missionary W. A. Smith was called home by the illness of his daughter, after holding meetings here only one week. The Spirit was working with him, and a nice crowd awarded him careful attention each evening. Some interest was manifested by outsiders, and the Saints were much encouraged by the good sermons. We are expecting Brother Smith back again after General Conference.

A pleasant surprise party was given Brother and Sister Alfred Ballantyne, February 26, to celebrate their eleventh wedding anniversary. A fine time was reported by those who attended.

A number of Saints here expect to attend the musical institute at Dow City, March 26 and 27.

Our sacramental service this month was indeed a feast for the Saints. A goodly number were present, and a fine spirit of love and friendship was manifested. The gift of prophecy was given to the Saints; some were admonished to be more faithful, others encouraged along spiritual lines, and some were told of special duties they are to fulfill in the work. All were encouraged to move out and work harder for the building of Zion. Some of the members of the priesthood were told to prepare and seek new openings for labor. Surely God will bless us if we do as he has told us, and we should feel encouraged when he sends his Spirit to guide and comfort his people.

The midweek prayer services, which have during the winter been held in the homes of the Saints, will from now on be held in the church. The meeting last week was held at the home of Brother and Sister W. W. Leonard. Sister Leonard has been ill a long time and had asked for administration by the elders. Special prayers were offered, and the Spirit spoke words of comfort and encouragement to Brother and Sister Leonard. The elders administered to Sister Leonard and Sister Tina Crippen, and by the Spirit the sisters were promised if they continued faithful many blessings would be theirs to enjoy. We enjoy many evidences of God's kindness and feel we should always be willing to work for him and his cause.

District President F. T. Mussell will arrive Wednesday and hold services over Sunday. This will be his last visit before General Conference. We are hoping that he will again be returned to our district.

Our priesthood meeting was not held the first Sunday of the month, but has been called for eight o'clock next Sunday, March 20, and Brother Mussell will be in charge.

The Department of Women is having some good meetings with fine interest. The sisters have a program and serve lunch once each month and also meet for study every month.

The Sunday school is doing very good work, and great interest is taken in the study of the lessons. Some new chairs have been furnished for the beginner classes.

The Christmas offering is being encouraged in the children's classes. Pennies, nickels, and dimes are represented by different colored balloons painted on cardboard, and hung on the wall with the scholar's name attached. We notice some of the children have quite a collection of balloons to their credit.

Sister Gladys Silsbee is teaching the young people in both Sunday school and Religio; she also renders valuable assistance with the music in all our services. We surely appreciate her services, which are given willingly and cheerfully. Sister Silsbee is director of music in our public schools.

There has been much sickness for some time, and bad roads and weather have kept some way from services; but we trust with spring about to arrive conditions will improve, and all will be able to come and worship God with us.

Fall River, Massachusetts

March 11.—The March sacramental service was well attended and a good spirit enjoyed. Visitors were present from Providence, Rhode Island, and New London, Connecticut. After the service several asked for administration. As usual the sick were visited in the afternoon. Priesthood meeting was at six o'clock. Elder John E. Rogerson preached in the evening.

The Department of Women now meets twice a month in the homes of the members. The sewing committee has cut and distributed material for aprons to be sold later on. Some of the members are bringing in their favorite recipes. Sister Baldwin not only brought her recipe for fruit cake, but also a loaf of the same. These sisters held a cake sale in the leading department store of the city, Saturday, March 5. Sister Olive Chelline, with two assistants, sold the cakes, and over forty dollars was gained. A beautiful basket of flowers from John Cross & Sons, florists, decorated the table, and later the flowers were taken to Sister Myra Cockcroft and Sister Nellie Nickerson. Nellie is ill with the grippe at her sister Myra's home. Sister Chelline was very happy over the success of the cake sale. Nearly every family helped, but most of the cakes were sold to strangers. Cakes were collected from the homes by Walter McGuire and Wallace Chesworth. Some brought in their own. The priesthood was glad to see the Latter Day Saint sign at the door of the store, and also the notice in the newspaper.

In a few weeks the Department of Women will give a play and conduct a sale of candy, aprons, etc.

The officers and teachers of the primary department held a party for the children March 4, at the Rogerson home.

February 19, a salad and cold meat supper was held by Doctor Gilbert's class of ladies in the Sunday school. This was for the benefit of the Christmas offering.

February 20, Elder Herman Chelline was the speaker at both services. Brother Alma Coombs and son Robert went to New Bedford this Sunday, but there was a strong wind accompanied by snow, and the evening service was not held. Brother Coombs came back and assisted Brother Chelline in the evening.

Brother James W. Heap has visited Attleboro and John E. Rogerson, New Bedford. We have had no visiting speakers. Brother John Jackson, of Providence, sang once again for us.

Sister Margaret Chesworth is busy rehearsing the minstrels.

Conference will be held in Boston March 12 and 13, but as only a few intend to go, regular services will be held here.

Mallard, Iowa

We are encouraged to go on in the work of God by the spiritual blessings granted to us at all times.

Brother E. L. Edwards and son, Lorne, worshiped with us February 13. Brother Edwards spoke at the morning service.

February 23 we had a very good meeting, although only nine were present. It was a hundred per cent service. God has promised that where two or more be gathered in his name he will be there and that to bless, and we know that he does this many times.

The Department of Recreation and Expression spent a social evening February 25 at the home of Sister Hahn and husband. All present report a good time.

On the last Sunday of the month, Brother and Sister Edwards and children were again with us. Brother Edwards spoke to us at eleven o'clock, after which their little babe was blessed by Elder Robert Fish.

We are glad to report that Brother F. T. Mussell is with us for a few days. He will hold services over Sunday. Last night his subject was "The four-square city," and he left us many points on which to ponder.

Santa Ana, California

Early in the new year, the Santa Ana Saints set up a standard to attain which included among other things a higher percentage of attendance at Sunday school and Religio. We are very glad to announce that although the new year is barely two months old, we will have to put our stakes forward to a new goal for the future. Both our Sunday school and our Department of Recreation and Expression have shown a marked improvement in attendance in the last month.

An orchestra was recently organized under the leadership of Marie Mitchell, with the following members: Alta Carter, Dorothy Thurston, Lelia Lacy, Theresa Koontz, Bob Lacy, and Dale Bose. They meet every Friday night to practice and are consecrated workers in this effort. We are hoping that some of our other young people who are talented along this line will join this organization in the near future, as they are a welcome addition to our music department.

At the district conference recently held in Los Angeles, Brother Wilfred J. Burton was ordained to the office of priest. Brother Wilfred has proved himself a very willing and able worker in our branch for the last year, having moved here from the Long Beach Branch. Brother Wilfred has also been elected the district president of the Department of Recreation and Expression; and as he has been our local president for some time and has demonstrated his qualifications so well, we are expecting a great deal from him in the near future.

One of Santa Ana's younger girls, Evelyn Parks, won the oratorical contest held on Saturday night, February 19, at the Central Church in Los Angeles. Her subject was "The plea of youth," and Santa Ana was very proud of its representative.

A new Temple Builder chapter has been organized among the younger girls with Marguerite Parks as leader. Sister Marguerite has had several years' experience as head of Camp Fire circles, and we feel sure she is well qualified for this work.

Brother Elbert A. Smith and Doctor Teel have been welcome visitors in our midst recently.

An Autumn Leaves campaign was held during the month of February by the Santa Ana Autumn Leaves Booster Club, which has for its slogan, "The Autumn Leaves in every home in the branch." About twenty-five subscriptions were obtained, which makes this magazine accessible to practically every member of our branch.

We have had quite a number of our members sick during the last few months and have been having special prayer meetings in their behalf. These meetings have strengthened our faith and have drawn us closer together.

Coffeyville, Kansas

March 10.—Sunday, February 27, marked the close of a successful three-week meeting held here in the Coffeyville Branch by Brother V. E. Sheppard. We can report no baptisms, but through these meetings many have become interested and are investigating the gospel. On Sunday, February 20, a basket dinner was enjoyed, the nearby branches being invited. From here Brother Sheppard went to Wimer, Oklahoma, to conduct a series of meetings.

We were made to feel the Spirit to a marked degree in the sacramental service of last Sunday. Sunday evening Brother G. G. Cadwell, of Independence, Kansas, was the speaker. We enjoyed the message he brought to us and hope he can be with us again soon.

In the recent items from here, we failed to report the departure of Brother C. R. Walton and family from our branch. We were sorry to see them go, but our best wishes go with them to their new home.

Brother and Sister C. E. Beale and family have moved to Enid, Oklahoma. They are greatly missed by their many friends made during their short stay with us.

A vacancy is left in our membership by the death of Sister William Slusher.

Saint Clair, Michigan

We expect Elder John Grice to open a series of meetings for two weeks, beginning Sunday, the 13th, to which we are looking forward with great interest. Elder Grice has been home for some time, taking care of Sister Grice, who contracted scarlet fever from her little girl who was ill with it. All are well again now and released from quarantine.

Apostle Gleazer has been holding forth in Port Huron, which is near Saint Clair, and while he was there we closed our evening services to enable the Saints to attend his meetings. All have been helped and encouraged by the wonderful sermons they heard.

In preparation for the series of meetings, the church has been redecorated, all furniture revarnished, and new draperies and carpet are being put in so that it seems we are meeting in a new home.

A joint meeting of all ladies of the various churches in the city was held recently, with the central theme that of prayer. Sister Marie Dollinger presented a paper on the subject, which was well received.

Far West Stake Conference

One of the most successful conferences held in connection with the Far West Stake has just passed into history.

Held at the First Saint Joseph Church, Saint Joseph, Missouri, the conference opened on Thursday evening, March 10, at eight o'clock, with a preaching service in charge of Bishop Milo Burnett. The speaker for the evening, Bishop J. A. Koehler, contributed much to the success of the conference and left a very favorable impression with the Saints, who listened eagerly to his surveys of the constructive program now in operation in the Holden Stake. Other visitors to the conference were W. S. Macrae, president of the Holden Stake, and Brother and Sister C. B. Woodstock, of Lamoni, Iowa.

A continuous and heavy rain materially affected the attendance on Friday, but notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the meetings were very spiritual. At 7.45 a. m. various members of the priesthood attended a lecture delivered for their edification by Bishop J. A. Koehler. At nine o'clock the first conference prayer service was held in charge of Elders H. L. Barto and Hans Anderson. This meeting was fairly well attended and proved to be a source of inspiration to those present. A round table to consider problems affecting the welfare of music in the stake was held at 10.45 in charge of Bishop J. A. Koehler, who was later assisted by the stake chorister, Elder Elias O. Hinderks. At this meeting the bishop gave some excellent suggestions, urging the young people in particular to cultivate the gift of music and of song through consistent training.

At 2 p. m. the conference met in business session, at which time much of a routine nature was considered. One item of interest to the Saints in general would be the changing of the name of the Alma Branch, Richmond, Missouri, to Richmond, by vote of the conference. Delegate nominations submitted to the conference were deferred until the next business meeting. The names of the following brethren were recommended by the stake high council for ordination to the priesthood and approved by action of the conference: J. C. Harrington, of the Oakdale Branch, to the office of elder; Guy Hawley, of the Oakdale Branch, to the office of priest; Cecil Hawley, of the Oakdale Branch, to the office of deacon; Preston Spencer Hinderks, of the Maple Grove Branch, to the office of priest; E. A. Armstrong, of the Stewartsville Branch to the office of priest; Gordon Hidy, Stewartsville Branch, to the office of teacher; J. L. Hidy, of the Stewartsville Branch, to the office of priest; and C. C. Hinderks, of the Stewartsville Branch, to the office of deacon. By unanimous vote the various department heads of the stake were sustained for the current year, namely, superintendent of Sunday school, Clifford B. Constance, Cameron, Missouri; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Archie B. Constance, Stewartsville, Missouri; superintendent of the Department of Women, Sister C. R. Liggett, Saint Joseph, Missouri; stake chorister, Elias O. Hinderks, Stewartsville, Missouri.

At four o'clock, or shortly thereafter, the Department of Women met to receive an address by Sister C. B. Woodstock, of Lamoni, Iowa, who rendered a valuable service.

In the evening at eight o'clock a special musical program provided by the various branches of the stake proved to be an inspirational entertainment. The service opened by a large congregation singing hymn number 64 in the Hymnal, followed by prayer by Elder H. L. Barto. The order of the program was as follows: Two renditions by the Stewartsville Quartet, "The Admiral," and "Pazorka." Vocal duet, "I will give thanks," by Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Macrae, of Cameron. Vocal solo, "Teach me to pray," by Miss Lorene O. Whitlow, of Saint Joseph. Anthem by the stake choir, "How beautiful upon the mountains." At this juncture Elder C. B. Woodstock, general superintendent of the Department of Sunday School, gave an impromptu and very fitting address touching the place of music in the church. This was followed by two renditions by the Cameron male quartet, "Love's old sweet song," and "I come to thee." Piano solo by Miss Alberta Phillips, Saint Joseph. Violin duet, "The dream of the shepherd," by Violet Hinderks and Vernetia Lyon. Anthem by stake chorus, "More love to thee, O Christ." The service was brought to a close by the congregation singing number 212 in the Hymnal. Benediction by Elder H. L. Barto.

Saturday's services were opened by a lecture to the priesthood at 7.45 a. m. by Bishop J. A. Koehler. At nine o'clock prayer meeting in charge of Patriarchs Samuel Twombly and J. E. Matthews. Brother Twombly has been doing missionary work in the stake since the last General Conference, and Brother Matthews, who has been in the city in the interests of business for several months, has rendered valuable assistance to the churches in Saint Joseph. This meeting was quite well attended and active. One of the most interesting testimonies heard was by Sister Hinds, of Stewartsville, eighty-one years of age, who imparted some excellent advice, urging the Saints to be up and doing while they have the opportunity. It is an inspiration in itself to see one so feeble with the cares of age putting forth an extra effort to do the Lord's will. Many other strengthening testimonies were borne during the service, which was an improvement over the previous one.

At two o'clock the conference assembled once more in business session. At this meeting delegates to General Conference were elected as follows: Richmond Branch, Brother Lloyd Graybill; Bedison Branch, Elder Ras Lorensen; Cameron Branch, George Hinderks; Edgerton Junction Branch, Elder George W. Mauzey; Far West Branch, George Peterson; Kingston Branch, Charles E. Wood; Guilford Branch, William T. Ross; Maple Grove Branch, Henry Hamann; Oakdale Branch, O. C. Dunlap; Pleasant Grove Branch, Archie Constance; Ross Grove Branch, Sister R. K. Ross; Saint Joseph Branch, H. L. Barto; Stewartsville, Sister Madge Head; Sweet Home Branch, Frank Powell; Trenton Branch, Sister John R. Lentell; O. Salisbury, E. O. Hinderks, Sister C. R. Liggett, Milo Burnett, John L. Bear, J. Charles May, Benjamin R. Constance, Samuel Twombly, and Sister Milo Burnett.

The following ordinations were sanctioned by the conference: Howard C. Timm to the office of elder; Richard Mason, priest; Roy Edwards, deacon, all of Saint Joseph. Earl Craven, priest, and Fred Cook, deacon, both of Kingston.

A recommendation from the high council that a branch be organized at Fortescue, Missouri, was unanimously approved by the conference. Stake presidency, bishopric, members of the high council, and the stake secretary were sustained by vote of the conference. Overseers within the stake were assigned as follows: Elder Alec Jensen to care for Sweet Home, Bedison, Guilford, and Ross Grove Branches; Elders Sam Simmons and Benjamin R. Constance to oversee Kingston, Oakdale, and Far West Branches; Elders Thomas Fiddick and F. L. Hinderks to oversee Siloam group, Trenton Branch, Jamesport, Spickard, and Hickory Creek Groups. Elder J. L. Bear to oversee Fortescue and Edgerton Junction Branches and Trimble Group; Elder W. G. Hamann to oversee Richmond Branch, Excelsior Springs, Wakenda, Hardin, and surrounding territory; Elder Z. J. Lewis to oversee Stewartsville, Maple Grove, and Pleasant Grove Branches.

Professor Forest Roberts, director of public speaking at Graceland College, provided the entertainment for the evening by giving several miscellaneous readings. A capacity house turned out to attend the efforts of Brother Roberts and went away feeling that they had enjoyed a delightful evening. The way in which Brother Roberts impersonated the several characters he depicted was realistic and the result of much diligent training.

Sunday afternoon a very impressive ordination service was held, at which time twelve young men were set apart to function in the priesthood. Elder O. Salisbury delivered a very earnest charge touching the seriousness of the responsibilities of priesthood. The consecration prayer was offered by Patriarch Samuel Twombly, after which the following brethren were ordained by Elders O. Salisbury and W. S. Macrae, and Bishops Milo Burnett and J. A. Koehler. J. C. Harrington, elder; H. C. Timm, elder; Richard Mason, priest;

C. R. Edwards, deacon; Earl Craven, priest; Fred Cook, deacon; Guy Hawley, priest; Cecil Hawley, deacon; Preston Spencer Hinderks, priest; Elmer Armstrong, priest; Gordon Hidy, teacher; J. L. Hidy, priest.

The setting aside of such young men to labor in the ministry is but one indication that the work of the Lord is going forward, and at times a little faster than we are prone to think.

Summing everything up, the conference was a success in that it proved to be a source of strength through renewed association and fellowship, and considering the work of the past year with future prospects.

Central Illinois District

Our district conference convened at Taylorville, February 5 and 6, with a very good attendance Saturday afternoon and Sunday. All were pleased to have Bishop J. A. Becker present, and he gave us three good sermons on the financial law. He made the subject of stewardships very easy for all to understand. In fact he "boiled it down" so the people could take it home with them. The delegates to General Conference were chosen from the priesthood and are: J. J. Jenkins, E. L. Ulrich, J. O. Dutton, F. O. Pritchett, William Vanhoosier, and Charles Sloan.

On the following Monday, Brother Becker went with the writer to Springfield, Illinois, to meet the Saints there Monday night for preaching service and a business meeting following, relative to the building of a church at this place. The Saints have long planned on a church but have been hindered in several ways, so Brother Becker came to canvass the matter. I am glad to report that the Presiding Bishopric has given its consent for the Saints to move forward with their church. They have a Sunday school of about seventy and a branch of sixty-six members, and are meeting in a third-story hall without elevators. I assure you the older members will greatly appreciate a church home. From there Brother Becker returned to Independence, and the writer preached Tuesday and Wednesday nights in a private home, since the hall can be had only Sunday forenoons, making impossible a series of meetings there, at least in their usual gathering place.

I returned to Taylorville, and on Thursday night attended a free supper in the basement of the new church of the City Park group, which is presided over by Elder William Vanhoosier, the supper being the anniversary of the organization of the Department of Women two years ago. One ought to see those hungry coal miners eat! They go at it just the way they mine coal. Those good housewives had plenty there for all who came. They did as Christ said; they did not call their rich neighbors in, but everyone that was hungry was filled. I remained there over Sunday, preaching Friday and Saturday nights; and by the way, Saturday night is a good night there. They also turn out to church just as they mine coal! And children? The place is full of them. It is a fine location for a Sunday school. On the Monday following, we began meetings at the main church, where Elder J. J. Jenkins is presiding. We continued over the following Sunday, with some degree of success, but not with the zeal and push of the new group. Why is it that people, Saints, sometimes lose their first love? But we have some good, faithful Saints at the main branch, though others are among the number of sleeping virgins.

On Monday, February 21, we began a series of meetings at the new branch and new church at Decatur, where Elder O. C. Johnson is in charge. Here, too, is a live lot of new Saints, always busy and cheerful about their work. For Thursday night they had planned a chili supper, to be held from six to seven. So at eight all were on hand for a preaching service, and they seemed to listen as well as they ate chili. I remained there over Sunday, and this week we are holding meetings at Quincy, Illinois, with Elder H. H. Martins presiding, where we have a small branch of Saints with no church and no hall. Meetings are at the home of our loyal Sister Herrick, who is always ready to advance the interests of the church. There is some prospect of getting the use of the mission house here, where some other churches are meeting at certain hours.

We hope all the members of the Central Illinois District are keeping in mind the date of our reunion at Edinburg, Sheldon Park, July 29 to August 7. Those who have not attended come and see. The grounds and buildings are good, with plenty of shade and room for games of all sorts. They are also equipped with electric lights.

Next Monday we hope to begin a week's meetings at New Canton, in the Union Church which our people are using there. New Canton suffered greatly in a flood the past season. Our members are scattered, some in the country, some in the town, so it is some effort to get out to church, but as a rule they are good in attending. Elder Tilphard Phillips is in care of the flock there. Elder M. R. Shoemaker is now president at Beardstown, another city which suffered in the flood. And at Pana we have another small branch in charge of Elder Walter Rudow. Elder E. L. Ulrich was busy at Casey the last I heard, at which place he had a good interest.

We believe the district has advanced in most ways during the last conference year. Quite a few inventories have been filed, and more are to follow.

JASPER O. DUTTON.

Detroit, Michigan

Evangelist John F. Martin surely gave the work in Detroit a real boost through his young people's meetings here during the month of February.

Sunday, February 6, he started a series of meetings at our East Side Church, Crane and Louis, continuing for one week. Good attendance was had at these services. The following Sunday, February 13, he began a week's meetings at the Central Church, 5858 Fourth Avenue. Large audiences listened to his preaching during these meetings. The week of February 20 to 25 he held forth at the Highland Park Church, Louise and Joslyn. We recently purchased this church from a Methodist congregation, so Brother Martin decided to preach a series of doctrinal sermons. These were enjoyed by all. A goodly number of nonmembers were present.

Saturday and Sunday, February 26 and 27, a Detroit district young people's convention was held at Central Church. Saturday evening music was furnished by the Windsor Choir, and Elder Byron H. Doty, missionary of the Chatham District delivered a short sermon, "A new vision." This was followed by games in the basement of the church.

Sunday morning at nine o'clock, prayer service was in session. A goodly degree of the Spirit was present. At eleven, Doctor W. D. Henderson, of the University of Michigan, lectured on "Human nature and the changing order." This was a wonderful talk. His thought was interesting to all those awake to the condition of the world and our doctrine of stewardship.

In the afternoon, a young Chinaman, whose name I have forgotten, talked on the subject, "What Young China expects of Young America." This was followed by a response from Brother G. C. Tomlinson, of London, Ontario: "What Young America can do for China." Brother Tomlinson very forcefully presented our social obligation as a church to foreign missions and nations through the practical demonstration of stewardship.

In the evening Brother Martin delivered the concluding sermon of his stay in the city. The church was filled to capacity and more; many had to stand during the service. These services leave the people of Detroit spiritually uplifted.

Monday evening, February 28, the priesthood of the Detroit Branch met around the banquet table. Our theme was, "Laborers together with God." The wives and sweethearts of the men met with them. The spread was prepared by the ladies of the church.

Elder J. Charles Mottashed was the toastmaster of the evening, and H. A. Koehler song leader. The folks all joined in singing, "God is marshaling his army," followed by invocation by Elder Thomas Miller, one of the oldest members of our branch, he being here at its organization. Sister Lena Coats sang a solo, accompanied by Sister Verlin Janrow.

Evangelist Martin then talked on the "Dardanelles of the priesthood." The group sang, "Soldiers of Christ, arise," followed by a duet rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bartlett. Pastor T. S. Williams delivered a short talk on the subject, "Our program," in which he outlined the program of the branch. Responses to this were given by Kenneth H. Green, pastor of Central Church, for the pastors; George H. Booth for the elders of the branch; Edgar H. Montross for the priests; Floyd Moore for the teachers; Lloyd Heaviland for the deacons; Sister W. L. Bennett for the wives of the priesthood; and District President Arthur H. DuRose, for the district. This was a very enjoyable event and will be long remembered by those present.

The Religio of the Central Church held a father and son banquet Friday evening, the 18th, following the meeting of Brother Martin. It is reported that about one hundred and fifteen fathers and sons were present, not counting the mothers, sisters, and sweethearts present. This was directed by Brother B. H. Thomas, who is now very capably guiding the affairs of the Central Religio. Under the leadership of Brother Thomas, the Religio is going fine.

The Highland Parkers have had new seats installed, using them for the first time last Sunday, March 6. Work is now under way to build a new church in River Rouge. This should help the work in the city. The work in the city has taken on new impetus, and we are hopeful for the future.

Eastern Colorado Conference

On February 25, 26, and 27 district conference was held in Denver and was one of the best spring conferences we have ever had. Not only was there a good attendance, but the fellowship and unity of purpose was very marked.

At 2 p. m. Friday, a prayer service was held in charge of District President Bruce E. Brown, after which a very profitable afternoon was given over to the work of the departments. "A message to women," by Sister Hildebrandt; a talk on adolescence, by Sister Louisa Fishburn; and a message from A. E. Bullard on "The aims of the Religio," deserve especial mention.

Saturday morning, from 9 to 10, a prayer meeting was held; and conference was called to order at 10.15 a. m. by District President Bruce E. Brown. President F. M. Smith, with the district presidency, presided over the conference; business was disposed of with dispatch, and a noticeable spirit of unity prevailed. Seventeen delegates to General Conference were elected as follows: Josephine Pople, Mary Brown, Bruce E. Brown, Charles A. Zion, Grace Bullard, Ward A. Hougas, Sister Ward A. Hougas, E. P. Darnell, Wesley Spillman, Sister Bertha Black, Edward P. Anderson, J. D. Curtis, Ray Sales, Sister Goddard, Sister Ella Thompson, Sister Cordelia McCormick, Sister J. C. Anthony. The following district officers were elected: superintendent Sunday school department, Louisa Fishburn, with Bruce E. Brown as assistant superintendent; Sunday school secretary, Gladys Gidley; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, A. E. Bullard, with R. H. Auld as assistant superintendent; superintendent Department of Women, Letha M. Tilton, Sister Mary Brown assistant superintendent; district chorister, Inez Schrank.

A firm stand against nullification or amendment of the Volstead Act was taken by this conference, and it recommended that the Department of Women of the district work with the W. C. T. U. in their efforts to combat legislation against the prohibition law.

At 4 p. m. a round table discussion was held, in charge of Sister Louisa Fishburn, which was very helpful to those in Sunday school work, and especially those who have the privilege and responsibility of rearing children. This was indeed one of the best round table discussions the writer has had the privilege of attending.

Brother E. A. Davis had charge of the evening service, and the sermon was by President F. M. Smith; an overflowing crowd was receptive to the splendid thoughts brought to them on the subject of "Stewardship."

Brother Ward A. Hougas gave a splendid sermon at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday morning, his subject being, "The slothful hunter," which was a fine continuation of the thought given us by President F. M. Smith the previous evening. A goodly degree of God's Spirit was present, causing a deep appreciation of the words spoken.

A young people's prayer service was held at 8 a. m., in charge of A. E. Bullard and Glen Holmes; also a priesthood meeting in charge of District President Bruce E. Brown.

Denver Branch has a Sunday school to be proud of and a corps of efficient workers. This was held from 9.30 to 11 a. m., and was appreciated by the delegates in attendance at conference.

At 2 p. m. was held a sacramental service that was indeed a spiritual feast. The Holy Spirit was present in abundance, speaking words of encouragement and commendation to President Smith through Elder J. H. Rudd; and also to the Saints present for the Spirit of unity which prevailed.

During Religio hour a one-act play was given by the Denver Branch Dramatic Club, which was greatly enjoyed by all.

President F. M. Smith spoke at the evening service, bringing to us a better understanding of stewardship and the ideals of Zion the beautiful. He spoke very forcefully about his hopes and ambitions for the church for which he has given his all, and for which we must each and every one be ready to sacrifice, if she shall reach her goal.

We of the Eastern Colorado District feel that the work is onward as never before and are rejoicing for the unity and fellowship that exist in our district. While minor differences may exist from time to time, yet with the great goal of Zion before us we shall forget them and march onward under the banner of Christ. We as a church have a gigantic task before us; let us be awake, up and doing, and God's blessing will be upon our efforts.

RALPH E. VINCENT, District Secretary.

Northeastern Nebraska Conference

Northeastern Nebraska district conference convened at Omaha, South Side Branch, on February 26 and 27. The regular conference session was preceded by a program given by the Department of Recreation and Expression, where some splendid talent was displayed, and the young of the district were greatly blessed by having our "big brother," Floyd McDowell, with us to give us some very good counsel.

The Saturday morning prayer meeting was not so largely attended, as most of us in the city have to work on Saturday morning. The business session was well attended. President Floyd McDowell was appointed chairman, assisted by our worthy district president, Doctor H. A. Merchant.

The following officers were sustained: Doctor H. A. Merchant, president; J. E. Steele, secretary; B. M. Anderson, treasurer; Vera L. Gamet, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression; C. T. Self, historian. Mrs. Ed. Larson was elected district Sunday school superintendent; and Mrs. B. M. Anderson was elected superintendent of the Department of Women.

Delegates to General Conference were appointed, and such other business as pertained to the welfare of the district was transacted.

Preceding the evening service, Elder J. E. Steele baptized Johnnie, the eight-year-old son of Brother and Sister George Daniel, of Omaha. A very spiritual feast was then given by Brother McDowell.

Knowing we could not accommodate the crowd on Sunday with Brother McDowell as the speaker, we disbanded, to meet the following morning in the Omaha Branch, where we had larger quarters.

Sunday was ushered in cold and threatening snow, but it soon cleared away. We of the priesthood were privileged to meet with Brother Richard Baldwin at 8.30 a. m. A very spiritual time was had, and we received much encouragement. Sunday school was well attended, being ably superintended by the local superintendent, Sister Rose Adams. The morning speaker was Brother McDowell, and once more did he raise his voice to young Israel of the latter days to heed the call of the Master. At 2.30 p. m. Brother McDowell made a target of himself in a round table discussion, where many problems of the church were discussed.

At 8.00 p. m. most of the district visitors had returned home, and those remaining were again permitted to hear Brother McDowell. Following this session, conference was declared adjourned, to meet again with the Omaha Saints subject to the call of the president.

J. E. STEELE, District Secretary.

Holden Stake Conference

The Lees Summit Journal of two weeks ago printed the following account of the Holden stake conference, held at Lees Summit Branch, March 4, 5, and 6:

Met in Lees Summit

The conference of Holden Stake of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was held in Lees Summit on March 4, 5, and 6. Holden Stake is a district, or territory, which includes the following counties in the State of Missouri, to-wit, Jackson (except cities of Independence and Kansas City), Cass, Lafayette, Johnson, Saline, Pettis, Cooper, Moniteau, and Cole, and the following counties in the State of Kansas, to-wit, Wyandotte (except Kansas City, Kansas), Miami, and Johnson. Headquarters at Holden, Missouri.

There was a large attendance at this conference, including Apostle C. F. Ellis, of the Quorum of Twelve of the general church, and Bishop Becker of the Presiding Bishopric of the general church, both of Independence; W. S. Macrae and F. A. McWethy of Holden, Missouri, who constitute the stake presidency; Bishop J. A. Koehler, the stake bishop; Elder C. F. Scarcliff, of Holden, Missouri, the stake Sunday school superintendent; Elder E. A. Curtis, of Bates City, Missouri, stake president of the Religio Department; and Mrs. D. J. Krahl, of Independence, stake superintendent of the Women's Department.

Through the kindness of the good people of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Lees Summit, their magnificent church basement, kitchen and facilities, tables, chairs, and equipment, were offered and given over for the serving of meals to the conference delegates. This was indeed a great favor to the local L. D. S. people, who have no facilities for taking care of this important function, and they are deeply grateful therefor. Deep appreciation of this friendly and helpful act was also felt and expressed by all the conference delegates, for such courtesy has never been extended to the conference at any other place in all the stake territory.

The hospitality of members of all the churches in Lees Summit in taking conference visitors into their homes to sleep and have breakfast was also greatly appreciated, not only by the delegates, but by the L. D. S. people here, who are few in number and were unable to care for the great number of delegates who came.

The opening session on Friday evening, March 4, was at first given over to instruction on stewardship by Bishops Becker and Koehler. Then the meeting was taken over by the Religio Department, the department for recreation and expression especially of the young people, and an enjoyable program was presented.

On Saturday a prayer service was held at 8.30 a. m. At 10.00 a. m. the business session was begun, and this lasted until late in the afternoon. At 7.30 p. m. a Women's Department program was given, which consisted principally of a playlet called "Every Youth," presented by the young people of Lees Summit.

On Sunday there was another prayer service at 8 a. m., followed by Sunday school at 9.30. At 10.45 Apostle Ellis preached to an overflowing audience. At 1.15 p. m. the priesthood of the stake had a short meeting, and at 2.30 p. m. the Walnut Park Orchestra, of Independence, Missouri, played for the conference, and a male quartet composed of members of this orchestra rendered two very fine numbers. Most of the visitors from a distance went home after this meeting, but there was a goodly attendance remaining to the regular Religio session at 7 p. m. and to hear the sermon from Apostle Ellis at the eight o'clock hour.

Altogether the conference was an inspiring and successful affair, and the enjoyment of all was marred only at the last moment by the fact that C. W. Childers' Buick sedan was stolen from in front of the church during the preaching service Sunday night, by some unknown person.

Wagner, South Dakota

March 16.—We were made happy and full of joy with the presence of Brother C. J. Smith, of Sioux City, Iowa, on Sunday, March 13, at which time he filled our souls with renewed vigor, reminding us that the good Master is mindful of his children and still cares for us. He did on this day pour out much power through his servant in presenting to us the plans and ideals leading toward the redemption of Zion, giving us much food for thought and reflection. At the evening hour he took for his text Matthew 11:28-30, and again the Lord's Spirit was manifested in power and much assurance, giving to us the knowledge that the Redeemer of Israel has and does and will care for those who labor and are heavy laden and will give them rest.

Here I must confess that words can not express our appreciation for services rendered us by this assistance from our brother of the priesthood. Many times local priesthood members can not minister to the spiritual needs of hungry souls which are many in this part of God's spiritual and moral vineyard.

May the blessings of God be poured on all his servants, and may they be permitted and assisted by his Spirit to bring forth the pearl of great price to those who are righteous at heart and seeking the light and truth, which is the Lord Jesus and his sound doctrine.

Pleasantview Branch

TRYON, NEBRASKA, March 17.—The Sunday school work here has been somewhat neglected of late, but it is hoped the Saints will rally and have a better record in the near future.

The rally day on March 6 was well attended, and a good crowd was present from North Platte. The Saints surely appreciated having them here and will welcome all who came to come again. A goodly number of nonmembers were present. The Saints from the west were missed at this meeting.

Local members and visitors and friends mutually enjoyed every meeting of the day. At Sunday school the young people's class was taught by Sister Jessie Morant, by request, this being a special treat for them. Other good workers from North Platte also taught classes. The testimony meeting was strengthening; good testimonies were given, and the Saints felt repaid for their effort to be present. The social family dinner was enjoyed by all, and after the meal the young people had a little suitable recreation. A little after two, the branch teacher announced a few songs. Half an hour later the house was called to order, and W. L. Sivits was announced as speaker. A good sermon was delivered, many helpful ideas being given the Saints, which will aid and prompt them to live closer to God.

Our rally day meetings are looked forward to, not only by Saints, but by some nonmembers, and the branch president desires them to be continued.

Sister J. P. Johnson and son Kenneth are making their home at W. A. Stoddard's since their husband and father passed away. Brother Johnson was seventy-seven years of age, and was ill only a few months before his death. He is missed by all. He resided in McPherson County a good many years, then went to Independence, Missouri, returning in a few years to the sand hills. He was taken to North Platte to be treated by a doctor and for better care. Passed away there and was laid in the Ellis Cemetery.

The rally day, April 6, will be held at North Platte, Nebraska, on Tenth Street, two or three blocks west of Locust Street, in the Adventist Church. It is hoped the isolated Saints will try to be present.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, March 15.—At this writing we are much encouraged because of the good news from our district conference session, held at Ironton, Ohio, February 19 and 20. A number of our Saints attended this conference and report a wonderful and profitable time. This brings happiness to those who were unable to be present, and all rejoice in the knowledge that the good Spirit was present to direct in the affairs of our business meeting.

We are enjoying some good prayer services and seem to be abundantly blessed with the Master's Spirit.

The hours of our church services are as follows: Sunday school at 9.30 a. m., prayer service at 11. We have a fair attendance at these services. On account of bad roads we have no midweek services, but hope to start them when the roads are better. We are planning to make some much-needed repairs on our church building, such as building flues and painting the roof.

The meeting at West Portsmouth proved not very good in interest. Some, however, manifested a desire to read the Book of Mormon. We hope the missionaries will bring the tent there next summer.

Brother Shirdan E. Crabtree, who has been sick for ten weeks, is not improving as yet. Forest Crabtree, son of Brother and Sister May Crabtree, who has been ill for some time, is recovering. We think he will enter the church when he gets well.

Brockton, Massachusetts

The work in Brockton is still progressing, slowly but surely. Brother Herman Chelline has been laboring here about a month and a half, and we feel interest has again been revived in the membership. Elder Chelline has preached some powerful sermons thus far, and many have been strengthened by his ministrations.

One night in February a number of Saints journeyed down to Brother and Sister Benjamin Chase's home, in Duxberry, and spent a most enjoyable evening. Brother Chelline preached an interesting sermon, and our good brother and sister felt strengthened and encouraged. After partaking of a buffet lunch, served by Sister Ada Chase and Sister Elizabeth Thayer, the Saints journeyed home. We have cause to remember this trip for the spiritual blessings enjoyed together.

On Sunday afternoon, March 6, we motored down to the home of Brother and Sister S. A. Rudd, of Cohasset. Here Elder Herman preached a very touching sermon on "The pattern." Here, too, we received a blessing, and Brother and Sister Rudd were deeply touched. There is found, no matter where we go, that same spirit which is always encouraging and opening the way for better things.

During the past year, Brockton has lost quite a few members by transfer and death, and each one is missed a great deal.

The Sunday morning service is very well attended, and during this service the junior church is held in the basement of the church under the leadership of Sister Alice Crowell and Sister Linda Matson.

Brother Donald E. Crowell and Frank Kitchill constitute the superintendency of the Sunday school. Teachers are active; and the general feeling is one of optimism and a steady growth.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has its study class Sunday evening prior to the preaching service. Brother Harold Garfield is the teacher. The young people have had several social occasions. The children have also had several parties and seemed to enjoy themselves.

All in all, the Saints here feel that God has blessed them over and above their needs. May he help us to become so wrapped up in our work that all can say as did the prophet of old, "Here am I. Send me."

Nursery Work in Lamoni, Iowa

When the suggestion first came to me to start the work in Lamoni, among the pre-school aged children, I felt a hopeful feeling and the sweet assurance that God would be near always to enable me to be of the most service possible to these little people whose faces sometimes look up into mine, and I am forced to think they look like flowers with human souls. They are such a blessed delight to work for; and to try to understand their behavior is not an unpleasant task. They are so godlike—we know that only a few months ago they lived with him and that their pure, tender hearts are eager to find those who will try to give them the most heavenly environment. Many times I think I feel myself almost trembling under the weight of the responsibility that rests upon those who choose to teach the small child.

Doctor Bird T. Baldwin, of the University of Iowa, in his lecture before the great meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, held in Des Moines, last week, urged the mothers who had developed to more mature life, to seize the opportunity to study and qualify for this all-important field of service, and promised us that he would soon have a course ready to offer those who were unable to take the actual school work there in the university, but could study at home. It is the first university we have learned about which has a correspondence course to offer to those who want to qualify for service for the child under five.

In September of the present school year, Lamoni offered an excellent opportunity for nursery work, and periods were used during the morning hours on Sunday. The first period began at 9.30 and included the child up to four years; the second period, 11 to 12, included the child up to eight years. This proved quite successful, and so the president of the Department of Recreation and Expression asked for a nursery for the children of this society; and since it is held from 6.30 to 7.30 in the evening, we established one for this hour. Then the mothers who wished to take up class work for the school year, but were unable to attend the college, decided they would like to meet in some convenient place during the week. Hence they chose the study of parentcraft and brought their babies on Friday afternoon, that while they were interesting themselves in the study of parentcraft their babies could be made most happy in the nursery room. So at this time there have been established four nurseries. And the parents as well as the babies are very happy. There is prospect of the fifth nursery being established soon, for the women are thinking some of taking up the study of household management.

I feel glad to tell you we are busy and happy, and I know you will want to hear about our progress. I promise to write again.

DONA CLARK HADEN.

Detroit District

The work is progressing very nicely throughout the district, with a very definite trend toward a practical application of the Christian religion to the practical things of life.

On February 13 was held at the Detroit Central Church what has been said to be the best one-day conference ever seen in the district. The occasion was the choosing of delegates to the General Conference, which of course occupied but a very short time. The rest of the day was devoted entirely to music, orchestral, vocal, instrumental. Each branch in the district was represented and assigned a period for its work, and it must be said that better music is very seldom heard, not alone from the technical standard, but from the spirit of consecration which was felt by all present.

The day was opened by a program of eight selections by the Flint Orchestra under the direction of Charles A. Everhart. The contribution of the Pontiac Branch was given by a family of colored Saints and by District Missionary H. A. Koehler, who played and sang several numbers. The Orion Entertainers, under the direction of Sister Mona Schaar, made the contribution of the Orion Branch and added materially to the sum total of the success of the day. Some very fine choir work was enjoyed, which was the contribution of the Detroit Branch under the able direction of Sister Henrietta Davis. We should not fail to mention that the credit for the accumulation of the wonderful array of talent for the day is due our district musical director, Sister N. C. Holden. Many expressed the hope that this is just the first of many such musical feasts.

A young people's convention was held at Detroit on February 26 and 27, the program for which was prepared by Carlisle Whitehead and was a source of inspiration to our young folks. During the convention Professor Henderson, of the University of Michigan, spoke on the topic, Human nature and the changing order."

On February 28 a banquet was held for the priesthood and their wives of the Detroit Branch, of which you will probably hear more detail from Detroit.

Plans are under way for the Detroit District and the Eastern Michigan District to unite with the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District in a joint reunion. Further developments of this will no doubt be published when plans have crystallized.

In this connection it would be well to state that having received the resignation of Brother D. S. McNamara, who held the office of superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, and as member of the reunion committee, we have appointed Brother Carlisle Whitehead as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression and Elder J. Charles Mottashed as member of the reunion committee. Brother McNamara has for the time being located in Independence.

Flint recently had the pleasure of a week's series of services conducted by Apostle E. J. Gleazer. Brother Gleazer's sermons stirred up considerable enthusiasm as he discussed from various angles, "Raising the ensign."

On March 13 Apostle Gleazer and the writer met the teachers of the district at Pontiac and reorganized them into two quorums, having territories in the northern and in the southern parts of the district, respectively.

Elder Clyde Gault has been conducting missionary services at one of the outlying points of the district, and there are possibilities of a Sunday school being organized at Ann Arbor. Arrangements have been made whereby Elder Albert T. Leighton, of Clio, Michigan, will make at least one trip a month to our smallest branch, located at Otter Lake, presided over by William McTaggart.

We can not help but remark that we are receiving the finest cooperation from all points in the district, and with this spirit prevailing we can not help but make progress.

ARTHUR DUROSE, District President.

The Reading Problem

Intense interest in an article published in the SAINTS' HERALD of March 2 on "The menace of trashy literature," by Delphine Bozarth, has prompted me to add my contribution. Sister Bozarth thinks this so-called literature is as serious a menace to the welfare of our homes as any of the other vices, and I heartily agree with her.

The results of the liquor- and tobacco-using habits are apt to show in such a striking manner as to compel our notice and to stir us to remedial action. In the habit of reading trashy literature, it is different. The poison sucked in through the brain works on the soul, on the character-forming processes, in so insidious a manner as to pass unnoticed, often, even to the victim himself.

This word insidious is used, sometimes, in connection with tuberculosis; it means, operating secretly. The person affected may appear to be in such good health as to deceive even the physician, and yet the dread disease may at the moment be sapping the life of the victim. By the time the doctor and all concerned are convinced of the presence and damaging influence of the disease, it is often too late to do much.

In this manner, poisoned and perverted views clothed in gay apparel, masquerading in attractive magazines, may work so secretly on youth in the character-forming period as to pass unnoticed. Let us not permit trashy literature to get in its innings on us. Let us wake up! Just being a Latter Day Saint will not save our boys and girls from the taint of this vile literature. We will have to unite against it.

Sister Bozarth may be right when she says that this serious problem "perhaps has not even been recognized by the majority of people." Can it be that our own people are "sleeping on their rights" again?

But I do know that in my own experience, almost everywhere I go, and in almost every organization outside the church with which I am affiliated, there is very much concern about unclean literature and even a definite and constructive program work against it.

In our homes, when we protest against the reading of bad literature, we are often called upon to answer this retort: "But Mrs. Prouty, they are true"; or, "Well, mother; they are true stories"; and I confess that I was "dumb," as they say. At last what I consider good material came to me. Some months ago I heard at a W. C. T. U. county institute a very good paper by a minister not of our church. His arguments, to me, were convincing, and I want you to have them.

"Yes," said he, "the garbage can is true, and even necessary, but you would not think of eating the things it contains or of feeding your family out of it." Also rain and mud are true and real, but no sensible person, dressed in pure white, or Sunday best, would think of rolling himself in a mud puddle. So, it seems to me, it is with the brain. One can not drag the mind through literary filth and expect it to come out just as it was, unharmed. Here is work that each one of us can do, right in our own home.

I will relate a personal incident which happened last summer: A mother, not of this church, my very good helper, came to me in great distress about her boy. He was reading magazines which her mother-heart told her were not good for him. These books had been left by a former tenant of the house, and she had failed to destroy them. It was a hot day, and we didn't need the fire, but we put them all in the furnace. Then I gave her an abundance of wholesome magazines and books, among which was the Youth's Companion. He had simply been gorging on the sensational, but if he missed it he did not mention it, and turned to the substitute with equal interest and even decided to subscribe for the Youth's Companion. Often we look over the fence or into some far-distant pasture and for some grander work when our real task is by our side.

I believe that in all our church organizations for the young, the program makers should include definite, constructive, educational suggestions, to be carried out along the lines of selection and recognition of proper books and magazines. The women's organizations could help a lot by making it a part of their program work to look out for their own homes and the homes of their neighbors.

Why can not we hear from some more of you? Give us some real helps, arguments, or plans.

GRACE M. PROUTY.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, 1281 East Pierce Street.

New Branch in Indiana

MISHAWAKA, INDIANA, March 15.—About one year ago a Sunday school was organized by a few Saints resident in South Bend and Mishawaka. This followed a series of meetings conducted by Elders Farrow and McKnight. February 12, 1927, a branch was organized, with a large crowd in attendance interested in its organization. The crowd was not large when it is compared with what it might be, but it was almost treble our Sunday school number when first organized. It was a thankful, happy people that witnessed this organization, and we trust with consecrated effort the good work will go on. At least the gospel is being preached as a witness in the large cities.

The district officers helped wonderfully at the time of our organization by being present and presenting the work of each department. Their assistance was truly appreciated. We want to especially mention the work of District President George E. Harrington. He is a tireless worker and visits in all homes, rich and poor. This has a drawing influence which can not be exerted more strongly any other way. "If the church has any more of these faithful veterans in the gospel work, we hope they will send them to Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District." This was spoken in reference to the work of Brother Harrington and Brother C. J. Hunt. The work of our young brother, Percy Farrow, also has been appreciated, and we trust that Sister Farrow may soon be restored to health that he may again be able to be in the vineyard. The labor of all is needed, and we felt proud of our district workers as we witnessed their efforts while here.

We believe the work is onward. All meetings are well attended. The Sunday evening service has not been as well attended as others. This, we think, is due to the distance to church, many having to drive five or six miles; and as all the Saints are working people and small children are in many homes, they do not always make the effort to be present at the Sunday evening service.

There has been quite a little sickness in the branch. Flu and colds have been prevalent, and this also has affected the attendance to a large extent. Even now the attendance in the evening is about two thirds of the membership, while at Sunday school and morning service it exceeds the membership by quite a percentage.

The evening of March 4, a box social was given at the country home of Brother and Sister Coonfare. A large crowd was present, and about thirty-two dollars was realized toward a piano fund.

Two young brothers were ordained at the organization of the branch. Brother Lee Coonfare was called to the office of priest, and Brother Forest Myers, deacon.

We feel we can see evidence of the hand of the Lord moving in behalf of his Saints in many ways. Brother Freeman had been working thirteen-hour nights every night of the week. The week following the organization of the branch, he was given a transfer and changed to day work, with Saturday afternoons and Sundays free, as a rule. This makes it possible for him to attend nearly all of the branch meetings. We are satisfied with a prayerful people and God's power manifested that nothing will hinder the onward progress of the work.

MRS. C. B. FREEMAN.

Independence

Stone Church

The young people's prayer meeting at half past eight Sunday morning was attended by a goodly number of representatives of the present generation. In charge of Brothers Robert Hampton and D. O. Cato, a meeting of peace and mutual profit was enjoyed. The Wednesday evening prayer services are proving more and more interesting. All young people are invited to come and take part.

Sunday morning was cold and misty, and Sunday school was begun by singing "Sunshine and rain." Associate Superintendent G. S. Trowbridge in the opening remarks touched upon the necessity of order and concentration in meeting and study, that each may receive instruction from the still small voice, heard by the Prophet Elijah.

The nursery having twice as much space as before, though not entirely finished was open for service Sunday morning.

In the cradle roll room a mothers' class will be started next Sunday, taught by Sister Alice Burgess. Each mother may bring her baby to the nursery for care during the lesson hour.

The intermediate department is to be commended for its record of the last three Sundays. It has stood highest in the Sunday school in percentage of total enrollment present and number of perfect classes.

With the singing of "Where wilt thou put thy trust?" the eleven o'clock service began for the audience visible as well as invisible. Elder J. W. Paxton offered prayer, and the organ offertory, played by Robert Miller, was "The prize song." The anthem rendered by the choir was "God is love," and Mr. Albert Brackenbury took the bass solos.

The morning's discourse was by Apostle Myron A. McConley, pastor of Los Angeles Central Branch, who took for his text 1 Corinthians 3:9: "For we are laborers together with God." Beginning his sermon with the object lesson of the great reclamation program which is being carried out throughout the West to harness the vast forces of nature to be utilized for man's needs, he showed how much greater is our task to reclaim humanity to greater spiritual possibilities. In a few years the deserts of Arizona will bloom with the flowers and fruit for which southern California is famous, as a result of reclamation, but to us is given the task of making mankind the partakers of the love and wisdom of God, lovers of truth, honor, and justice, and developing each individual to higher and truer manhood, modeled after the divine Pattern. Gospel reclamation is our work. As laborers together with God, it behooves us to remember what attributes are required of God's helpers: "And no one can assist in this work, except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity, being temperate in all things whatsoever shall be intrusted to his care."—Doctrine and Covenants 11:4. As workers for Christ, we must have faith, hope, and charity, tolerance for the belief of others, enthusiasm in our work, and brotherly love. Rising above our difficulties and disappointments, we must go unto perfection, helping mankind by giving to him the angel message, the message of international love and agreement. Then Zion shall be a reality.

K L D S Sunday Activities

Bible study hour was conducted by K L D S Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell; music furnished by members of the junior department of the church under the direction of Mrs. Bertha Burgess. Story by Miss Ella Jones.

The three o'clock radio church was conducted by Reverend Silas P. Bittner, of Saint Peter's Evangelical Church, Kansas City. Music for the hour was presented by the Saint Peter's choir.

K L D S radio vesper service had music arranged by Mrs. Luella Wight, of Kansas City, and was presented by a group of children from the Central Latter Day Saints Sunday school, Kansas City. Sermonet was by Elder U. W. Greene.

At a quarter after nine the Latter Day Saint studio service was broadcast. Music was by a ladies' quartet composed of Thelma Vincent, Mrs. Paul Craig, Hazel Moler, and Elizabeth

Evening Services

Following the Religio lesson period Sunday evening was the elimination contest between Spring Branch and the Stone Church in the humorous reading. Brother Francis Holm, superintendent of the Religios in Zion, was in charge. Miss Rilla Leeka, Stone Church contestant, read "Ten minutes on a street car," and Mr. Oscar Winslow, from Spring Branch, read "Do married men make the best husbands?" The judges Cyril E. Wight, George Bartholomew, and John F. Sheehy rendered a unanimous decision in favor of Miss Leeka, who will represent these two districts in the contest to be held during conference.

At twenty minutes after seven song service began, directed by Elder John Sheehy. A special feature of this service was a number rendered by the junior choir of Central Kansas City Branch, directed by Sister Luella Wight. The choir had come over especially to sing over K L D S. These children are the champions of a recent contest for junior choirs held in Kansas City, and their song was highly appreciated by the Stone Church congregation.

Preceding the lecture of the evening were the hymn, "Glorious things are sung of Zion," prayer by Elder C. Ed. Miller, and an organ offertory. Then a letter written by Brother Joseph September 21, 1894, to Brother Hubert Case concerning his mission to the Society Islands, was read by Brother Miller. A bass solo, "The holy city," was sung by Brother Albert Brackenbury, and illustrated on the screen.

Brother Hubert Case was the evening speaker, giving an illustrated lecture of the work in the Society Islands. Pictures of Glaud Rodger, Thomas W. Smith, and L. R. Devore, and other early missionaries were shown, and sketches of the work each accomplished were given by Brother Case. The audience enjoyed seeing a picture of the Evanelia and hearing the account of the voyage of this small boat from San Francisco to the Society Islands' mission in 1894. On board were seven souls, including Brother and Sister Hubert Case and Brother Joseph and Sister Emma Burton. The trip took thirty-five days. Groups of natives at work, worship, and at their feasts were shown, as well as some of the beautiful tropical scenery and vegetation. Elder Case will continue his lecture next Sunday evening, bringing in some personal spiritual experiences.

Elder and Sister Robert J. Farthing, missionaries just returned from the Society Islands, were at this service, and Sister Farthing sang, "Give me thy heart," in the Tahitian language. Three years and four months ago Brother and Sister Farthing left Toronto, their home, on their first mission. The Saints of Independence were glad to make their acquaintance and welcome them back to America.

"The Temple Hill" was the moving picture of the series, "A pilgrimage to Palestine," shown to conclude the service, and proved to be edifying and interesting.

During the course of last week members of the First Presidency, Presiding Bishopric, and Quorum of Twelve arrived in Independence to be on time for the opening session of the Joint Council. They are all here now, and many members of the seventies as well as other conference appointees are to be seen on the streets and in the places of worship.

"The Fool," a four-act play written by Channing Pollock, will be presented by the White Masque Dramatic Club to the people of Independence at Memorial Hall, April 1. The White Masque Dramatic Club is composed of young Saints interested in dramatic art, and their effort deserves the patronage of Saints and friends. Admittance fifty cents.

Second Church

The young people's prayer meeting has been changed to 8.15 Sunday morning. The attendance March 20 was light, but the intense interest and splendid spirit were good to see and sense.

Brother Glenn Davis was present at Sunday school and made a short but interesting address. Second Church claims Glenn as one of its own, yet is glad to see him actively engaged wherever he is found.

The eleven o'clock hour was taken by the pastor, whose subject was the importance of little things and common virtues and talents.

Sunday evening Bishop Albert Carmichael was the speaker, and his work was well received.

Liberty Street

Apostle J. F. Curtis was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning. In his discourse he propounded and analyzed the great need for preparation and qualification, fitting ourselves for our work in life. Clearly and logically, he brought out the necessity of knowing the law of God, the doctrine of the church, and practicing it. The differences in teachings and practices of the Reorganized Church and the Utah Church were presented to his hearers, woven in with the narration of several personal missionary experiences.

At the evening hour, following the Religio, Apostle Myron A. McConley occupied the pulpit, using as a subject, "Unity and brotherhood." Calling to mind the statement, "If you are not one, you are not mine," he related the incident when Jesus was asked what was the greatest commandment, and answered, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy might, mind, and strength, and thy neighbor as thyself." His entire discourse led to the emphasis of unity and brotherhood among the people of God before the great program which lies immediately before us can be carried out in its beauty and perfection.

Liberty Street was especially favored on this Lord's Day in having two of the apostles as speakers. Each left with the members of this district many ideas and issues for consideration and reflection.

The Silver Wing Temple Builders were entertained at a Saint Patrick's buffet luncheon by their leader, her mother, and daughter, Friday evening, March 18. Guests of honor were Sister Alice Cowan, superintendent of women in Zion, Miss Nellie Sampson, supervisor of girls in Zion, Miss Blanche Sampson, and Miss Estella Wight. A happy time was enjoyed by all.

Walnut Park

Bishop Carmichael was our forenoon speaker Sunday on "The fundamentalist and modernist"; on the need of planting our feet on fundamental or solid ground; on stewardships as a profoundly fundamental principle; on the fact that the human mind has not yet been able to grasp the wonderfully fundamental nature of God's work; that the things of God are understood only by the Spirit of God. We were directed to study the Bible as a truly scientific standard—scientific in that it is assuredly a collection of genuine facts and truths.

The regular choir sang for this service, "How beautiful upon the mountain," with solo parts taken by Mrs. R. D. Weaver and Fred Horn. Brothers Marshall Martin and Roy Roberts were in charge of the meeting.

In the evening Pastor Glaud Smith and John A. Taylor were in charge, and another excellent sermon was delivered by Apostle E. J. Gleazer, from Isaiah 29. He explains the marvelous work and a wonder as being, not only the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon and establishing a church teaching the fullness of the gospel, but the marvel still continues; a voice is still speaking from the dust in every archaeological discovery made—every relic found in the earth. Moreover, the application of the whole gospel law to our lives will bring about Zion conditions which will be a marvelous accomplishment in the eyes of the world. And those who fight the Zion plan—stewardships—will be as "the dream of a night vision"; they will awake to find they are still hungry and have accomplished nothing.

East Independence

On Sunday, March 13, Brother Albert Thatcher, jr., was the morning speaker, talking along the line of gospel love and the necessity of obedience in order to progress and be truly happy. The evening discourse was delivered by Brother Harry J. Friend.

Last Sunday Elder F. A. Cool, of the Stone Church District, preached in the morning, his effort being supplemented by that of Brother E. T. Atwell, the evening's speaker. Both devoted their attention and consideration to the organization of the church and the necessity of a leader to oversee and supervise the activities of the great group of Saints.

The Spring Branch circle of Parent Teachers' Association gave the Religio program last Friday night. It consisted of an interesting dialogue and several songs and readings. The program was good, but the crowd was smaller than usual, due to disagreeable weather.

Spring Branch

The theme for the 8.15 prayer service Sunday morning, March 13, was "What has the gospel done for me?" After several prayers and songs, this theme won a response of sixteen testimonies. A good spirit prevailed throughout the service. Twenty-four were present. Brethren Badder and Mabbott were in charge.

At Sunday school, with one hundred and thirteen in attendance, a profitable hour was spent. Brother Tankard reported thirty-two perfect classes during the month of February.

Sister George Gould, representing the superintendents of Sunday schools in Zion, distributed questionnaires to the teachers for their views as to what should be the religious, social, and physical qualities of teachers, also their classroom management. The consensus of opinion, together with those of all other teachers in Zion, is to be used as a basis of standard for teachers. Brother George Sutterfield played a saxophone solo at the close of the study hour.

Introductory to the preaching service, Sister Rosamond Filson played one of Chopin's preludes. Invocation was by Brother George A. Gould. Then followed a vocal duet, "The Lord is my shepherd," by Sister Frank Goode and Mary Fields. As a scripture reading, Doctrine and Covenants 108:1-6 was read. Sister Goode sang, "Enough to know," by Francis S. Clare, and the anthem by the choir, "O Lord, I will praise thee," closed the special musical features.

Brother Ammon White preached a splendid sermon, using as a basis the theme of the above mentioned duet, "The Lord is my shepherd."

Ninety-three attended Religio Friday night, March 11. The program was given by Sister Nord's Class. Next Friday's program will be given by the young people's class, and they are working hard to capture the prize.

At the evening service of Sunday, March 13, a rather small crowd greeted Brother Hartshorn to hear his able discourse on "He saved others." Brother E. C. Harrington and wife and Sister Parsons furnished special vocal numbers.

Considering the inclement weather on Sunday, March 20, a goodly number were out to the quarter after eight prayer meeting. Every minute of the hour was taken up in song, prayer, and testimony. Elders W. F. Smith and John Soderstadt were in charge.

One hundred and twelve were reported at Sunday school. On account of oversize of some of the classes, the question of organizing a class for the young married people was brought up. This matter soon will be decided. The superintendent stated that some of the unmarried young people might be eligible if they would "make a declaration."

Nearly a full house greeted Brother E. J. Gleazer at the eleven o'clock hour. His text was taken from Matthew 26:58: "Peter followed him afar off." He suggested that it is better to follow afar off than not at all, but that Peter suffered much more by following afar off than he would had he manfully taken his place by the side of the Master and even had to share the revilings and insults that Jesus had to bear, which in the fulfillment of duty would have been sweet compared to the stricken consciousness of having failed the Master in his hour of trial.

As a prelude to this service, Rosamond Filson played "Simple confession," after which Brother Ernest Smith offerred the invocation and the choir sang, "My great Redeemer's praise."

Thursday night, March 17, the choir members with their families and a few invited friends gathered at the church for a social evening. A thirty-two foot table down the center aisle was improvised for the occasion and a bountiful lunch was provided by the sisters. An enjoyable evening was spent. To help meet the expenses incurred in the choir work, after the repast each one's feet—not girth, luckily—were measured and a charge of a cent an inch was made, netting about five dollars and twenty-five cents.

Sunday evening Brother James Gault preached on the subject, "Is the church safe?" using as material for his talk the compiled answers of the ministerial conference held in January to the questionnaire that was submitted to each member at that time. His conclusion was that with the attitude of our young people as a whole and with the church in the hands of its present body of men, it is undoubtedly safe.

Added to our equipment during the past week was a fine, new oak pulpit, built and presented by our skilled brethren, D. D. McClain and Henry Badder. Also a new music stand was presented by Brother Ernest Smith, and a beautiful tablecloth and cover for sacrament table by Sister Thomas Reese. These are all greatly appreciated by the members of the district.

Englewood

A splendid sermon was delivered to us on the morning of March 13, by President McDowell. His subject being, "Keeping the faith," he showed very plainly how the young people can not go on without the older ones, nor can the older progress without the younger generation. He spoke beautifully of the work of the older members of the church, especially mentioning Brother Turpen and Brother Terry, not leaving out his own father and mother.

The evening speaker of March 13 was Elder E. A. Thomas. On March 6 Elder Lyman Fike was the speaker at the evening hour. On the Sunday previous Elder Fike spoke in the morning and Elder Earl Moore in the evening.

The midweek prayer meetings have been discontinued at the church and are to be held in the homes of the Saints instead. On Wednesday evening, March 9, a number of Saints met at the home of Brother and Sister Hamilton. All enjoyed a great amount of the Spirit of God.

Sister Hamilton has been chosen as the young women's supervisor.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Sunday was somewhat cooler than the previous one, but the activities of the day were in charge of the Sunday school stake officers, it being stake Sunday school institute day, and there was a goodly attendance at all meetings. All fourteen local churches were represented.

Sunday school was in charge of local officers, and after a splendid lesson study in all departments, a male quartet, comprised of Roscoe Hampton (our Sunday school chorister), Henry Hampton, Bill Blankenship, and Paul Clark, very ably rendered "Just for today." We were very much pleased to welcome the return of Sister Blanche Edwards, after a visit of some eight months to her home in England. She gave a very interesting talk to the Sunday school, giving a brief sketch of her journey, of her visit with the Saints there, and of her joy in the privilege to return to the United States and the hopes that lie before her in her work for the church.

The eleven o'clock service was in charge of Brother Seth S. Sandy. The congregation joined in that wonderful hymn written by the poet, David, "The Lord is my shepherd," after which prayer was offered by Brother Alma R. White. The choir rendered the anthem, "Hast thou not known!" to a listening and appreciative audience.

Brother Cyril E. Wight then delivered a most excellent discourse in his clear, precise way, stressing particularly the point that we build higher, bringing to mind some of the wonderful accomplishments of those that have given their lives over to science and service to mankind.

At 2.30 the service was in charge of the stake Sunday school superintendent, J. Ray Lloyd. Brother Roland Blair rendered a very beautiful organ prelude, after which General Superintendent Charles B. Woodstock gave a very fine address to the Sunday school workers present, which we feel will prove very beneficial to everyone. It has been the aim of the officers to produce efficient and skilled workers in the various departments of the Sunday schools, and these institute sessions are proving a wonderful assistance in all departments.

The 7.45 service was in charge of Local Superintendent Burdette Root. The congregation very feelingly sang, "We're marching to Zion," after which Brother Cyril Wight offered the invocation. The choir rendered "Recessional," by Kipling, and the remainder of the service was occupied by Sister Blanche Edwards. She took as her theme of the evening, "Study," and very capably delivered a discourse in which she made everyone present realize how both individually and collectively we have failed to adhere to the request of the Lord. Away back in 1833 he asked us to "study" that we might become the light of the world! She pointed out that if we would but pull ourselves together and study we would be able to reach out and push back the horizon and understand and comprehend the glory before us; that if we would study, our hearts would be wide instead of narrow, and our souls would become deep. She stated that forty per cent of our time should be spent in occupation, twenty per cent relaxation, fifteen per cent general culture, fifteen per cent current events, and ten per cent in higher thought. With these thoughts burning deep in the soul of each one, we are sure new resolutions have been made, and more of our people will be found occupying their time in study that they might attain a knowledge of history of the kingdom, a knowledge of the laws of God and man, and become acquainted with all good books, that we may prepare the next generation to build better and higher, that Zion might be redeemed.

The young people of Central are enjoying splendid prayer meetings, holding their regular monthly prayer service on the second Sunday evening of each month. The I. X. L. room has been well filled, and a goodly interest is manifested. The meetings have been full of enthusiasm, and the Spirit.

The junior and intermediate departments, under the direction of Sister Cyril Wight and Sister Maude Gunsolley, are preparing a radio program to be broadcast at the vesper service next Sunday evening. These young people are heeding the counsel given by the Lord, that they cultivate the gift of song, and are rendering a very able service to the church. Their leaders have been untiring in their efforts to bring out the very best possible in them, and have been rewarded for their work in being able to see them competently render the songs of Zion.

Malvern Hill Church

We were much pleased with the increase in the attendance at Sunday school on March 6. We were especially pleased with the new pupils in the junior department who have been enrolled in the religious day school, as this shows that our work with the religious day school is gradually bearing fruit.

The sacramental meeting was in charge of Elder George Sherman, and was good, the Spirit of the Master being present.

Brother Sanders preached in the evening, and though some were prevented from attending because of sickness, the service was reported well worth while and was enjoyed by those privileged to hear.

The work at the religious day school is increasing in interest, and the community interest in this project seems to grow steadily.

Midweek prayer services were held at the homes of Brother and Sister Harry Ringer and Brother and Sister Marks.

The Women's Department met on Friday, March 11, at the home of Mrs. Rose. The previous week the following people had attended the mid-west conference for pre-parental education held by the Children's Bureau of Kansas City, Missouri, and the Child Research Bureau of Kansas: Sister Allen, Sister White, Sister H. J. Bootman, Sister George Sherman, and Brother and Sister J. Ray Lloyd. At the morning class period, they were given a very edifying and interesting report of some of these meetings by Sister Fern Lloyd. They are made glad when they see so many of our people identifying themselves with the many progressive movements, such as this. In the afternoon the women, co-operating with the Sunday school, made some bags for sacrifice money.

The community program on Friday night was enjoyed. One outstanding feature was a series of pantomimes by three young ladies not of the church membership. Their contribution was surely appreciated. They are now introducing more recreation into the community programs, and next Friday evening the entire time will be given over to games and supervised play.

They were pleased to have Elder C. B. Woodstock, general Sunday school superintendent, visit them during a part of the Sunday school hour. His words of encouragement and counsel were appreciated. Some new pupils came out for the junior department. The program for the Sunday school was given by Elder George Sherman's class, and consisted of an excellent reading by Elder W. O. Hands.

Brother Sherman preached for them in the morning. He presented some splendid ideas on the subject of his choice, Faith; and the thoughts expressed should stay with them to their benefit.

The Religio meets each Sunday evening at half past six. The Book of Mormon is the principal subject of study for these sessions. Sister Mary Ringer is the superintendent.

Sister White gives us a special musical number each Sunday evening. This is a splendid contribution. Sister Crinklaw was ill last Sunday, and was greatly missed by all. Elder F. V. Elliott preached in the evening on the subject: "Why I am a Latter Day Saint." Although the Sunday school institute was on in the Central Church and they had encouraged all who could to attend, some nonmembers were present and made up a good audience.

The religious day school met as usual on Wednesday. We can not tell all the interesting things about this school each week, but this week we would like to mention the fine work that Elder Ralph W. Farrell, of Independence, is doing with the seventh grade boys. He has gained their confidence and is helping them, as only one man in a thousand could do, to get the proper ideals in life.

Armourdale Church

On the 11th inst., Brother W. S. Zink, of the Second Church, addressed the Religio. His talk was very interesting.

On the 13th Elder J. Ray Lloyd, stake superintendent, and Elder C. B. Woodstock, general superintendent of the Department of Religious Education, visited the Sunday school, and at the 11 o'clock hour Brother Woodstock discoursed on the theme of education very forcefully. These brothers are invited to pay a call whenever convenient. At 7.45 Brother J. W. Gunsolley gave an illustrated lecture on the evil effects of narcotics, tobacco, drugs, etc., to a full and appreciative house.

Argentine Church

The speaker at 11, March 13, was Bishop F. B. Blair. At 7.45 the occupant at the sacred desk was Patriarch Ammon White, who made an entertaining talk on the subject of prayer.

The speaker at the morning hour March 20 was Elder B. J. Scott, of Independence, who made a sixty-minute talk which was only too short, making comparisons between ancient miraculous instances and those of the present day, especially those occurring in our church. His audience was agreeably surprised at the astonishing things recounted.

At 7.45 Brother Ralph Gould occupied the sacred desk.

Saturday evening a social gathering was had at the home of Sister Earl Foster's out at the Kanview Addition, when about fifty, including some of their friends not of our faith, made merry with a tacky party. The grotesque attire of many was the subject of much comment.

Bennington Heights Church

Last Friday evening we held our March birthday party. Because of the rain, there were some who were unable to attend. However, there were enough who braved the weather to make the social gathering a pleasant one.

Among those who celebrated birthday anniversaries in March is Brother George Walker. Brother Walker is a Civil War veteran and says he voted for President Lincoln. Although he is past four score years of age, he refuses to admit that he is an old man, but insists he is still a boy. He attends church regularly, and in the last twelve months he was absent from Sunday school only nine times. He is always glad to see the Saints and is always cheerful.

The elders were called last Sunday to administer to the infant son of Brother and Sister Alvin Edwards. He is very sick. Sister Pearl Ladd and Sister Mary McCarrison were unable to attend church.

Joseph Ladd, one of our young brethren, has been advised by his doctor to go to Arizona for his health. As he is not acquainted in that State, he would like to hear from the Saints in Arizona so that he will not be entirely among strangers there.

Sister Glenn Beaman and her children are here from Chicago to visit her husband's parents. She expects to remain here until after General Conference.

Elder H. W. Gould preached last Sunday morning, and in the evening Elder Ross Higdon of Second Kansas City was the speaker.

Of Stake Interest

The Priests Quorum, Brother E. P. Sanders, president, has secured the services of Elder F. V. Elliott as teacher, the present subject being public speaking. The next meeting is the 29th of March at Central Church. Brother Elliott proves a very efficient instructor.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

The calendar of evening services at the Brick Church for this month has been attracting good-sized congregations. On the first Sunday of the month was held the program for the installation of the new grand piano with the Oratorio Society appearing in concert and Apostle D. T. Williams speaking upon "The power of music." On the second Sunday, the Lamoni-Graceland Orchestra, directed by J. H. Anthony, appeared, assisted by Florence Thompson, reader, and George Anway, tenor. On last week was scheduled an illustrated lecture on Palestine by Apostle Paul M. Hanson.

The concert by the orchestra was given as a home talent number of the Lyceum Course. In previous years this annual program has been held during the week, but this year the committee decided that the community nature and the religious potentialities would suggest its being given as a Sunday evening service. A few remarks relative to the religious mission of music furnished a setting for the concert and led to the invocation that was offered by Elder E. Dewey White. The program was considered one of the best of the orchestra's offerings with respect to selections, balance, and general rendition. The appreciation of the congregation was well expressed in the quiet decorum and attention.

Miss Thompson read "The neighbor," an adaptation of the biblical story of Dorcas. It is a simple narrative of an unpretentious life whose influence blessed the several types of persons in a community. It is an idealistic exaltation of the good neighbor. This reading, a favorite with Lamoni people, was given by request. George Anway, a general favorite, sang with the sympathetic quality and spiritual fervor that marks his work.

After such a program, one leaves the house uplifted in spirit, with his soul cleared of many of the sordidities of life's routine. The administration of the Brick Church have felt that there is a close relationship between the musical air of the branch and its spiritual life and have attempted to foster the ministry of music.

On Thursday evening a special program was held at the church under the auspices of the Women's Department—a benefit for certain materials for refurbishing the church. This department of the Lamoni Branch has been doing some excellent work under the leadership of Mrs. Lydia Wight and a corps of assistants. Class work, lectures, clinics, etc., have added to home betterment, health, general culture, etc. Yet they have also served in the field of current necessities. The program of this week will serve the branch in financial returns, but it has also served another purpose—in the provision of an entertainment of general participation, where children and adults combine to assist in their church upkeep. A flower costume song; a one-act play, "Overtones"; a male octet; a Spanish song in costume, by a group of grade girls; and Greek posing by girls from the college, combined in an effective program.

The union prayer meeting at the church on last Wednesday evening was well attended. It was noticeable that at the announcement of the opening hymn the church was well filled. There were few late comers. President W. E. Prall presided and gave the introductory remarks. He spoke of the purpose of the church in its missionary aspect of converting men and women, and the part the members play in our community in attracting or repelling others. Even in Lamoni this operates in the influence exerted upon those who sojourn here for a time or upon those who come in contact with Lamoni citizens, who represent the town in other communities, since Lamoni is known as being a home of Latter Day Saints. The theme was caught up by several, who narrated personal experiences of working in conditions where they alone must represent the church, or where they would reap the benefits of others' representation, either good or undesirable.

Consolidation of Homes

A consolidation of Liberty and Saints' Home has been effected during the past week. Six inmates have been transferred to the Holden Home, and the remaining inmates of Liberty Home are now in the Saints' Home, the home now being full. This plan will make a substantial saving in running expenses.

Sister Alice P. Dancer, who has been matron at the Saints Home for many years, because of increasing age has been relieved of the burden, resulting from the consolidation of the two homes. In honor of the splendid work of Sister Dancer at the Home, an appreciation meeting was held there Friday night, being attended by about a hundred Saints and friends. The program included short talks by A. J. Yarrington, Wilber Prall, and A. B. Phillips. There were also three vocal solos by George Anway, a mandolin solo by Joseph Anthony, and a reading by Florence Thompson. At the close Sister Dancer was presented with a beautiful pin morocco hand bag in appreciation of her great service to the church, which has been cheerfully rendered without charge. Sister Elizabeth Williams, who has been in charge of Liberty Home for some time, is to be the matron under the consolidation plan.

From the Hoosier Capital

Interest in the angel's message is increasing in our midst as attendance at all services and the activities of our membership demonstrate. Since our last letter Mrs. Edna Hooper, a daughter of Sister Walker, was baptized by Pastor Robinson and confirmed by Elders Fish, Gage, and Robinson. This is the first addition to our number by baptism this year, and was a beautiful service of baptism and confirmation. We believe the sister will make a faithful worker in our ranks.

The Department of Women is busy studying the Book of Mormon, serving suppers, and having a baked goods sale, all manifesting an earnest desire to help along financial lines as well as to develop spiritually.

The Sunday School Department fittingly observed Lincoln's and Washington's birthday anniversaries, and the morning sermon on each occasion dealt with the part played by these leading patriots in the founding and maintaining of our civic and religious freedom. This department is also busy in the preparation of an appropriate program for Easter.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is full of interest, as is evidenced by its continued increasing attendance. The illustrated lectures by our pastor, together with occasional social features, are making this a place for the expression of the desires and ambitions for useful service by the youth of the branch.

The missionaries of the Utah Church have been laboring in the vicinity of our church home, and rumor has it they claim we are one and the same. They own the church property where Pratt crosses Chester. This has given us a splendid opportunity to visit among our neighbors and friends and explain the difference and correct the misstatement. We are hoping for good to result from the same.

We are anticipating a short visit from Patriarch Frederick A. Smith this week and will report results of this visit in our next letter.

Attendance and interest at our Sunday evening services are increasing, which is very encouraging to all, especially to our pastor.

Several of our members have "their eyes fixed Zionward," expecting to be in attendance at General Conference, to give what they are able and absorb all they can, hoping thereby to be able to render better service the coming conference year.

Excerpts From Recent Missionary Reports to K L D S

Centralia, Washington.—I understand that K L D S has been heard a time or two even in this far-off district. I think if the broadcasting power was increased, we could get the regular programs without any difficulty. That would be a wonderful feature in itself—aside from the recognition K L D S would get from the Government Radio Commission, which we will not get if the power isn't increased.—Carl F. Crum, Box 241.

Lamoni, Iowa.—While in Madison, Wisconsin, a short time ago, I met a man who tunes in at every opportunity when K L D S is on the air. He is not a member of the church, but expects to unite soon. I consider his interest is largely the result of K L D S. Of course there were other factors which caused him to become interested, but in a very large measure is his interest traceable to the broadcasting by our station.—L. G. Holloway.

Chetek, Wisconsin.—I have heard many good reports of K L D S. Have heard missionaries say that K L D S has opened many closed doors for them, and many times prejudice has been broken down. I think K L D S should be made many times stronger, and that as soon as possible.—F. A. Atwood.

Eldorado Springs, Missouri.—What little I have heard over K L D S has been fine, and I think our station is doing a world of good. One of our bankers here told me that he accidentally tuned in on the 6.30 a. m. devotional service and said it was the best thing he ever heard and watches for these services each Tuesday and Friday morning.—R. T. Walters.

Independence, Missouri.—(What do you think should be done to increase the value of church broadcasting to its membership?) Increase our power; use the air more; spend more money on our programs; increase our earnings; sell time.—M. H. Seigfried.

MISCELLANEOUS

Second Quorum of Seventy

Second Seventy quorum reports from March 1 to February 28 should be sent to headquarters to the quorum secretary. Please remember the twenty-five cents dues and that a failure to report for two successive years may result in being dropped from the quorum.

Operetta, "The Quest of the Pink Parasol"

The Junior Choir of Des Moines, consisting of thirty-five boys and girls, will present an interesting operetta in three acts, Thursday evening, March 31, in the lower auditorium of their church. The operetta has a very good plot. The humor is furnished by the boys' chorus and poor henpecked Farmer Brown. A brief synopsis of the story is as follows: The Queen of the Fairies allows a discontented little poppy and a discontented little girl to change places. The Poppy Maid goes in search of a pink parasol, and Ruth shares the poppy's fun and later misfortunes. Each finds the new life a disappointment; and the queen, convinced that they have learned the evil effects of Vanity and Discontent, restores to all the poppies their original places in Fairyland. Ruth, again mortal, receives the Pink Parasol, "for remembrance." A delightful addition to the program will be East High's Male Quartet, which will sing between acts. Also the Drum Corps of Webster School will furnish numbers for the entertainment. We most cordially invite all members of the Des Moines District to attend. Write to Bertha Robinson Deskin, 3019 John Patterson Road, for tickets. Admission 35 cents for adults, 20 cents for children. The proceeds from this entertainment will go to the building fund.

Marriage Notices

GREENE—BAUER.—Miss E. Ruth Greene, of Independence, Missouri, and Mr. Leon Bauer, of Burlington, Iowa, were married by Frederick A. Smith at his home, February 26, 1927. Mr. and Mrs. Bauer will make their home in Independence for a time.

Our Departed Ones

FARROW.—Seth Washington Farrow was born January 14, 1852, at Marion, Illinois. Married Mary Ann Scott, October 5, 1877, at Sidney, Iowa. To this union four children were born, two sons and two daughters. He was baptized February 28, 1878, at Black Wolf, Kansas, by Elder, S. J. Madden. Was ordained a priest October 5, 1881, at Independence, Missouri, under the hands of Elders J. W. Sykes and J. R. Badham, and was a member of the Second Quorum of Priests in Independence. For years Brother Farrow was in poor health and suffered much. The end of earthly life came March 9, 1927, at 5:30 in the evening at the Independence Sanitarium. Surviving are his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Agnes Daniel and Mrs. Anna Lee Major, both of Independence; three grandchildren, one great-grandson, two brothers, three sisters, and many friends. Funeral at Walnut Park Church, March 11, Bishop B. J. Scott officiating.

OTT.—Donald Ott, son of Mr. Harlan and Sister Nellie Stevens Ott, was born at Charles City, Iowa, April 29, 1910; baptized August 4, 1919. He passed away Saturday evening, March 5, 1927, from injuries received Friday morning when the car in which he was riding with his father was struck by an interurban car. The funeral was held from the Saints' church at Madison, Wisconsin, with Elder L. Houghton, of Madison, and Elder J. A. Dair, of Rockford, officiating. The father is still in the hospital with little hope held out for his recovery.

CROUCHMAN.—Lillian Haskel Crouchman was born at Charing Cross, Ontario, November 4, 1871. Married Harry Crouchman December 31, 1890. Two sons and three daughters were born to them. Baptized at Erie Beach August 5, 1917, by John Shields. Killed by a recklessly driven automobile turning over on her near her home, Walkerville, March 4, 1927. Funeral service was in the Saints' Church, Windsor, March 7, in charge of J. L. Brown. Sermon by John Shields. Interment in Walkerville, Ontario. Surviving are her husband, two sons, Gordon and Robert, and two daughters, Mrs. Jess Cherry, of Vancouver; and Marion, at home; and other relatives and friends.

TRAVIS.—Emma Travis was born March 4, 1838, at Shepherdsville, Kentucky. She married Charles J. Travis, and to them were born five sons and three daughters. Baptized April 14, 1911, at Enders, Chase County, Nebraska, by C. W. Prettyman. After a faithful and active earthly sojourn of eighty-nine years and six days, she passed peacefully to her reward March 10, 1927, at the home of her son, James, Independence, Missouri. Surviving her are her children: James and Harris B., of Independence; Edward and Everett, Champion, Nebraska; William, Yoder, Wyoming; Sarah Hornbeck, Bremerton, Washington; Jennie McGown, Milton Junction, Wisconsin; and Ella Moore, Comanche, Oklahoma. Also twenty-six grandchildren, and fifteen great-grandchildren. The funeral occurred March 12, and the sermon was by Elder J. M. Terry. Interment Mound Grove Cemetery.

BARRETT.—Alice Barrett was born Alice Leather July 13, 1852, at Manchester, England. She was first married to Edward Turner; long after his death succeeding only a few years of married life, she married Elder Job Dalley, of Leeds, England, with whom she lived at Leeds for thirteen or fourteen years, when he died. She came to America and to Independence, Missouri, going to Lamoni, and to Liberty Home later. In Lamoni she married Colonel George Barrett March 15, 1908. Brother Barrett passed this life April 5, 1919. Sister Barrett was baptized January 25, 1889, and retained a firm faith to the end of life. Died March 14, 1927. Funeral service at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, March 16, 1927; sermon by R. J. Lambert. Interred at Mound Grove.

WOOD.—Cyrus W. Wood was born at Cohasset, Massachusetts, November 6, 1859. He was baptized by Nehemiah Nickerson at Plymouth June 10, 1900. Ordained to the office of teacher February 7, 1907, under the hands of John W. Rushton, Richard Bullard, and F. M. Sheehy. In 1911 he was ordained as first counselor to the president of the Nineteenth Quorum of teachers. He was an active worker in this quorum until his ordination as an elder August 1, 1915, to which office he was ordained by Gomer T. Griffiths and Horatio W. Howlett. Brother Wood passed away December 26, 1926. The funeral was from his home in Cohasset, Elder H. A. Chelline officiating. His gentle earnestness secured for him the love and esteem of all who knew him. For twenty-five years he was identified with the Brockton Branch, and although he lived many miles from the church, he was faithful in his attendance until he was no longer able to attend. A realization of his inability to meet with the Saints and labor in his calling caused him to feel sad, but his testimony of the work, written about a year before his death, contains these words, "The work will move onward. The work is of God; that is sure." Brother Wood is survived by one daughter, Miss Gladys, of Brockton.

HAWLEY.—Elizabeth Hawley was born December 28, 1834, at Cardington, Ohio. Was baptized at Locust Point, Ohio, May 25, 1898, by S. C. Smith, and enrolled with the Oak Harbor, Ohio, Branch. She lived the life of a noble, consistent Saint. Died February 26, 1927. Surviving her to mourn are one son, two daughters, twenty-one grandchildren, fifty-three great-grandchildren, and fifteen great-great-grandchildren. Sermon was by J. C. McConaughy, of Barberton, Ohio.

Conference Minutes

SOUTHERN OHIO.—District conference convened at Ironton, Ohio, February 19 and 20, with good attendance, though the worst snowstorm of the season came at that time. A splendid spirit prevailed throughout the conference. James Bishop continues to be district president; and Sister Margery Williams, district Sunday school superintendent. The song services, in charge of District Chorister Hazel Gribben, were inspiring. Sister Thelma Hershey presided at the organ. Sermons were by Apostle Paul M. Hanson, and Brothers French, Rockwell, and Bishop. This conference was a great success. All feel encouraged, eager to press onward, and render greater service to the Master, and help to make Zion a reality. May love and humility increase among the Saints of God.

NORTHWESTERN KANSAS.—District met in conference near Osborne, Kansas, February 12 and 13, 1927, with District President A. C. Silvers in charge. Usual business was transacted and delegates selected for coming General Conference. Those chosen were: Brother A. C. Silvers; A. H. Reed, Bozine, Kansas; A. L. Parsons, Ruleton; Harold Ratcliffe, Osborne; and Mark Williams, Selden. Sunday school and preaching on Sunday were followed by basket dinner and preaching in the afternoon by Brother Silvers. Not many visiting Saints were present, as the branches in the district are so scattered and the Saints in most of the branches are in such a scattered condition that it is difficult to meet together. Brother Silvers has worked throughout the district untiringly in an effort to bring the Saints closer together in association that they may be strengthened and inspired; he visited among us and by his uplifting sermons and efforts strengthened us in this work. Thus has he accomplished a great good throughout the branches, also among the many scattered members of the district. Due to the almost total failure of crops the past year in most of our branches it has made it more difficult for him to accomplish all that he wished to do in bringing us closer together in reunion and conferences.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.—District triannual conference was held with the Kennett Saints on February 19 and 20, 1927, district President A. M. Baker presiding. Elder J. A. Phillips, secretary. Others of the ministry who attended were J. E. Cleveland, W. G. Plain, W. A. Hawkins, H. J. Malone, and Benjamin Pearson. Additional ministerial reports were received from G. A. Davis, J. W. Gibbs, and J. F. Cunningham. Bishop's Agent G. A. Davis reported for December and January: Receipts, $143.80; forwarded to bishop, 143.25; balance on hand, $57. District treasurer reported for the year 1926: balance and receipts, $16.25; expenses, $21.36; due treasurer, $6.11. These reports were referred to the auditing committee, which reported same correct. District treasurer for Sunday school reported balance on hand, $13.36. A motion that the district treasurer draw from the Sunday school funds to cover balance due on district treasury prevailed. The action was taken on a suggestion from Springfield Branch because this money had lain unused for several years. District officers were elected as follows: President, A. M. Baker; associate, H. Sparling; secretary-treasurer, Benjamin Pearson; superintendent of Sunday School Department, Sister Vida Phillips, of Kennett; superintendent of Department of Women, Sister Chloe Miller, of Thayer. Delegates to General Conference: Pearl Ogden, Lulu E. Rawley, A. M. Baker, H. Sparling, Benjamin Pearson, G. A. Davis, Francis Bishop, and Hattie Bishop. Time and place of next conference left to district presidency.

ARKANSAS.—At Fisher, February 26 and 27, with the district presidency in charge. Business consisted of election of district officers for year 1927, and selection of General Conference delegates. The district presidency was sustained by motion. Barbara Ziegenhorn was chosen secretary; Brother R. A. Ziegenhorn, chorister; other district officers were sustained. Delegates for General Conference are: Brother and Sister R. A. Ziegenhorn, Brother and Sister F. O. White, Sister G. W. Clements. Plans were discussed looking to an intensive missionary effort to be made in the vicinity of the various branches and groups in the district. Those efforts possibly will take the form of camp meetings, as we will have no reunion. The time and place of convening of next conference were left in the hands of the district president.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.—Conference convened with the Nebraska City Branch March 5 and 6, district presidency presiding. John F. Sheehy, of Independence, Missouri, and H. A. Higgins, of Des Moines, Iowa, were present and contributed materially to the success of the conference. The attendance throughout was better than at any conference in the district in recent years. E. F. Robertson was sustained as district president, with C. H. Porter and Samuel Brolliar as counselors. Mrs. E. F. Robertson was sustained as secretary-treasurer. Lawrence Brockway was chosen as district superintendent of Sunday school; Ezra Oehring as leader of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Carrie Hale was recommended for district historian; and William E. Poague for district chorister. Mrs. E. F. Robertson was sustained as superintendent of the Department of Women. All day meetings were provided for in each of the branches and groups during the summer. Lawrence Brockway was ordained to the office of elder. The following delegates were elected to represent us in General Conference: E. F. Robertson, Mrs. E. F. Robertson, T. J. Chapple, Mrs. T. J. Chapple, Charles White, and Ira C. Wolfe. The sermons, lectures, songs, and other musical features of the conference were all of a high order, and the general feeling seemed to be that progress is being made in the work of the church in our district.

General Conference Not Affected by Smallpox Scare

About March 1 a case of smallpox was reported at Bryant School in the northwest corner of the city of Independence. It was in so mild form as to have been taken for chicken pox, and for this reason it was feared exposure of many children and adults had resulted. This fear was found to be only partially justified.

The school was closed at once, and the entire school plant was most thoroughly fumigated, "Boss" Phelps as he is affectionately called saying to me that he had burned lots of candles at that school, but the doctor had instructed him to make it a sure shot. He believed he had followed orders.

Since that time the disease has increased to some degree, but hardly to the extent of having become epidemic, yet as many as thirty premises having been under quarantine at one time.

Last Saturday and Sunday seems to have reached the time of "going over the hill," since which time the number of cases has steadily decreased. There are now not more than half the number of cases than at the peak of the infection.

Yesterday I called on Doctor H. A. Schroeder, president of the Board of Health of the city, and asked him what was his opinion as to the advisability of holding a convention of the probable dimensions of our General Conference which opens April 5.

The doctor answered: "If you had asked me that question ten days back, I should have been a little hesitant to give you an answer, for I was not then sure of where we were going to land. But now I have no hesitancy in saying that the disease should not deter your holding your conference, nor should it keep any away. It is under control; it is going down the hill steadily, and there has not been a death within the city. I understand there was a child in the country to whom it proved fatal. I have no personal knowledge of that case.

"Of course I believe it would be well for any parties coming here or traveling elsewhere to insure themselves against smallpox by proper vaccination. That is only ordinary precaution.

"We are fumigating more cases than the new ones being reported. There is no need for alarm, or even nervousness."

The fact that the form of the disease has been light would seem to indicate a necessity among those who entertain visitors to be very careful that all of the household is in good health before doors are opened to guests. We believe that under the strict observance of church authorities and the instructions they have issued, we can assure the Saints that there is very little danger of contracting the disease in Independence.

Very great activity in vaccination and by the city government and the board of health has made the situation quite satisfactory.

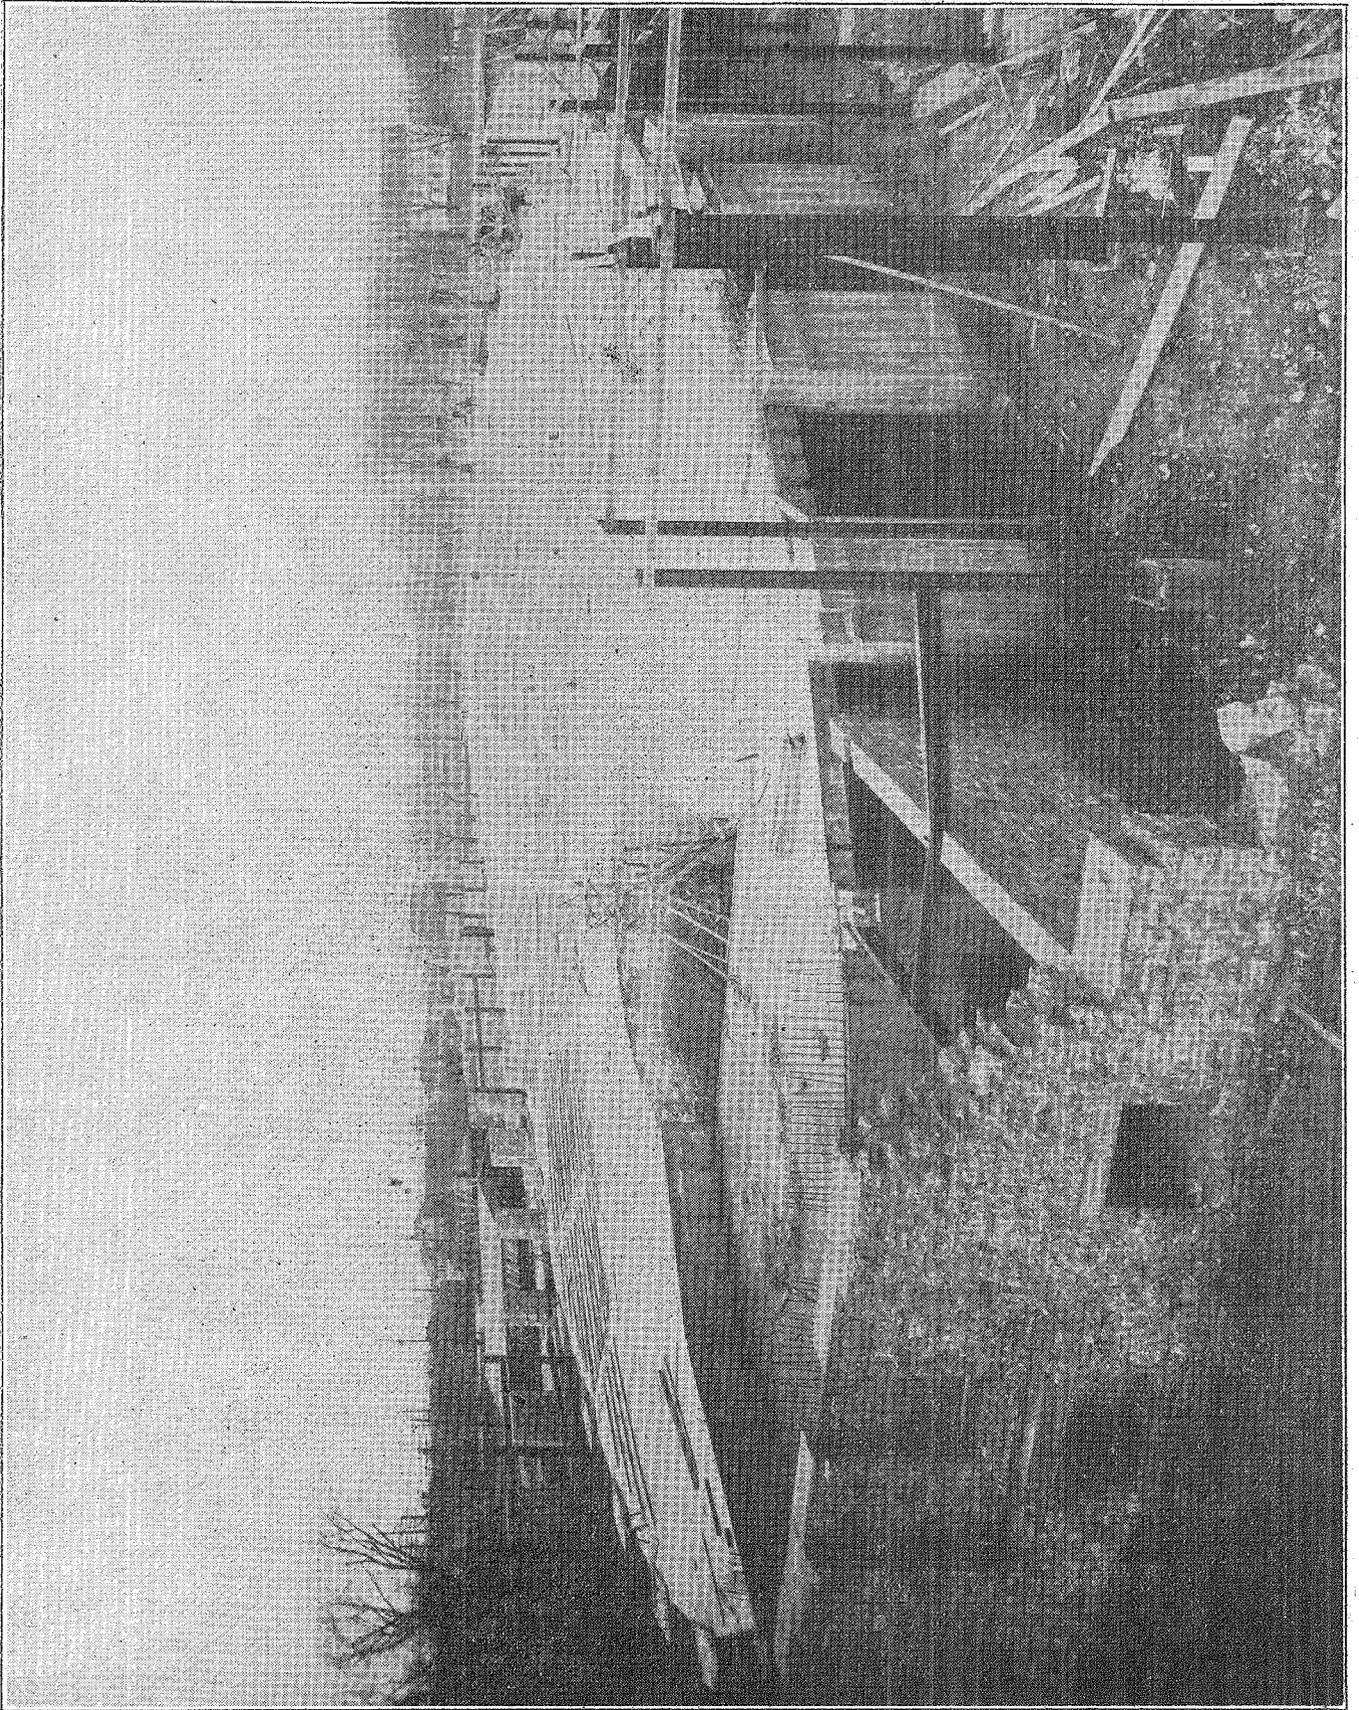

Mayor Roger T. Sermon, a conservative official, gives it as his opinion that it is not desirable to discourage the convening of the General Conference.

The church council composed of the First Presidency, the Quorum of Twelve, and the Presiding Bishopric have given the matter consideration at their meeting no later than yesterday afternoon, and think there is not reason for postponing the convening of the conference.

It is understood that should the situation become threatening, measures will be taken to inform the church at large.

R. J. LAMBERT.

There never has been a time which affords such rich possibility of acquaintance with inspiring personalities as today. We have only to stretch out a hand toward the library table and they are about us, the great ones of the world. The problem of our homes is not one of opportunity, but one of emphasis. Definite progress toward its solution has been made when we begin to offer hospitality to the best. In Hawthorne's story of the boy who went about his work lifting his eyes to the great stone face in the cliff, there came a time when the whisper ran through the valley that the face of the lad had become as the face on the mountain top. It is not all parable.—Carl H. Elmore.

The philosophy of the World: What do you desire to do today? That do. The philosophy of the Church: What have you decided to do with life? That do today.

Bishop Freeman, of Washington, is reported to have said: "The world is going nowhere at sixty miles an hour." He may be right regarding the rate of speed.

Simultaneously a southern preacher announces that hell is twenty-five thousand miles in circumference. That reminds us vaguely of our first geography lessons about the size of the earth.

"The man who finds fault," remarked Deacon Goodentart, "generally accumulates a lot of what he finds."

We are accustomed to think of money as a creator. Money can build anything, we are told. Can it? Cold cash piled ever so high in vaults creates nothing. Mind must set it at work. Out of the soul of man, as Babson says, came all our railroads, factories, steamships, airplanes. What sort of thing is it from which emerged the Woolworth Building, transcontinental railroads, the Leviathan?

Doctor Charles Mayo, the celebrated surgeon, says "Modern surgeons are as much in the dark about man's soul as ever, although they have explored every nook and corner of the body and know to the last detail its composition and functions."

Body and brains have been ransacked, but the mysterious tenant has never been found. Unseen he has watched intruders with bungling, gloved fingers groping in the dark to find him, but he remains undiscovered, the great mystery, even to himself—unable to come at and understand himself.

Commenting on Mayo's statement, Francis Trevelyan Miller says:

"Did surgical science ever find a thought in the brain of a human being? Did it ever locate an idea in the mind of man? Did it ever find a railroad engine, a radio instrument, a steel foundry, an automobile, a fifty-story building, or a Brooklyn Bridge in the head of man?

"And yet we all know that these all emanated from and grew out of an idea, an intangible, undiscovered thought in the mind of man.

"Everything that exists, every mechanism, every structure that man has created is but the materialization of one of these unmeasurable thoughts or invisible ideas. Yet no surgeon has ever been able to dissect one, perform an operation on one, or remove one from the human brain.

"No scientist ever saw a thought, felt or heard a thought until it manifested itself in words or objects, in actual deeds. Yet we all admit that a thought exists and that it is the most powerful thing in the world.

"Did anyone ever find love or hate in the heart of man, or seated anywhere in his anatomy? Did anyone ever locate courage or fear, joy or sorrow, good or bad in the organism of man? Did a surgeon ever locate a conscience or such tangible things as individuality, personality, or genius? Or any one of the really great characteristics of man—or even character itself? Did anyone ever discover poetry, or music, or art, or science in the anatomy of man?"

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Where the General Conference Will Meet

The picture on the opposite page is the latest one taken of the Auditorium structure as it appeared on March 17. This is the main floor of the Auditorium, looking north. The seating arrangement is shown in the circular formation indicated in the picture. There is a rise of twelve feet from the level of the main floor to the front or north side which is the main entrance to the building. This rise makes possible the uninterrupted line of vision from any seat in the building looking south to the pulpit and choir loft.

If the weather permits, the outdoor sunrise prayer meeting will be held on top of this main floor slab at six o'clock Easter morning.

The last two days of General Conference, Sunday, April 17, and Monday, April 18, will be two of the most important days of the entire session, and conference visitors and delegates should by all means make definite plans that their stay include these last days.

When one knows the powerful effect of mental attitude upon digestion, we can guess the healthful condition of the people when as a result of the teachings and work of the apostles the people "ate their meat with gladness."

The General Conference

It is the highest legislative body in the church, and as such has been held in respect by the hundreds of congregations and thousands of members which make up the church.

It is the seventy-second General Conference held in the seventy-five years which compose the life and history of the Reorganization. It brings the church to within three years of the century mark which will round out its first one hundred years of history.

It is representative. Each branch and district throughout the church elects its delegates, which, together with the Melchisedec priesthood, compose the voting strength of the General Conference body. General Conference enactments, known on our records as "General Conference Resolutions," reflect the consensus of opinion of the majority participating in our General Conferences. Such enactments become binding on the church.

It is inspiring when many Saints of one mind are gathered for one purpose. Such singleness of purpose can not fail to result in unity of understanding. Through an extension of unified understanding, we may each year more nearly approximate that "unity of the faith" so often enjoined upon us by direct command from God.

It is educational. It is the annual clearing house for exchange of experience, developed plans and methods, and new ideas in teaching the gospel of Christ. Many have blazed the trails and pioneered the way, and each year at conference time they come to offer their contributions in information and experience.

It is a time for fellowship—a time for renewing old acquaintances and making new ones from the ever-changing and increasing ranks of church workers. It is the time for the revival of old friendships begun years ago when the "common cause" called many to the front lines of Christian warfare.

The church this year cordially invites the Saints to attend this General Conference which opens the immediate years ahead. Unparalleled opportunities now open before the church. Come and get acquainted with the men and women who are spending themselves for Christ and the church, whom perhaps you have never met but of whose work and sacrifice you have read much. Come to the conference this year with hearts and minds attuned to catch the great vision of the work, that you may intelligently share the tasks which must be completed.

The experience in holding church conferences makes it necessary to repeat a word of counsel. Do not fail to inform the reception committee, Box 255, Independence, Missouri, of your intention to attend the conference. It is absolutely necessary that this be done in order to provide for your stay in Independence. In past years many have neglected to do this. There is room for all. Independence homes are being opened to the Saints this year, but it is only fair to them that they be informed in advance of the reservations desired. Do not fail to note the instruction of Elder G. S. Trowbridge regarding the securing of rates for railroad traffic. If you should neglect this important matter, which may mean but a paltry sum to you, it might mean the loss of several thousands of dollars by those who attend the conference. Look up your HERALD notices about reduced railroad fares to the General Conference.

Immanuel

One of the most beautiful names given to the Messiah is that of Immanuel. Deeply significant, it comes down to us through the ages with its meaning enriched by the experiences of saintly men and women who have unhesitatingly taken for their inspiration, "Immanuel—God with us."

Our own history is particularly rich in testimonies of the presence of God among his people. When we have been particularly desirous that he might abide with us, when we have listened for, have heard, and have heeded the urge of his presence, then have we gone forward in power and much assurance. This spirit of "Immanuel—God with us," has been written again and again into our undertakings; it shines through the lives of our noblest people; it has been the incentive and the sustenance of our most hazardous and most splendid adventurings. Throughout our history its realization has been our strength and our courage; the comfort of its assurance has been our stay: "God with us" in eighteen hundred and thirty; "God with us" in the building of the Temple; in the school of the prophets; in the dedication of our Stone Church; in the establishing of Graceland; in our missions.

Today our need of his near presence, advising, encouraging, urging us on, is vital. Without it, our work is in vain.

Therefore, we urge that throughout the entire church, the theme for the sacrament meeting on April 3 shall be "Immanuel—God with us." That those remaining at home shall be more conscious than ever before of his presence; that those assembling to participate in General Conference may bring an abundance of his Spirit. So, through the earnest prayers of all God's people, may we experience the glory of his presence in our preaching services, our prayer meetings, particularly in our

Offers Its First Bond Issue

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Independence, Missouri, offers $350,000 Ten-Year Gold Bonds bearing 5% interest.

The $25 Baby Bond

A part of the above issue of bonds has been printed in $25 denominations. This makes a church bond easily available to the boys and girls throughout the church. They can in a short time earn and save enough to become the owner of a $25 church bond.

A bond can be purchased by making installment payments. The payments can be made to the branch solicitor, being careful to have the receipt marked, "Part payment on church bond." By this method the money is sent to the Presiding Bishop's office through the regular channels provided to receive money for church purposes.

When payments amount to $25, a bond will be issued and 4% interest allowed on the payments from the time the first dollar was deposited up to the time of issuing the bond.

The $25 baby bond offers a splendid investment through which the boys and girls of the church can save for the future. Many are contemplating college and university work. In no better way can they lay by from time to time than by investing in church bonds bearing 5% interest, which is paid annually.

The $50 Thrift Bond

There are many young people in the church whose earning capacity is larger than the younger boys and girls, and who are planning their future. Thrift and frugality are enjoined upon all. After the experience of having saved enough to purchase a thrift bond, many will find it is just as much fun to save as it is to spend, and in addition they have the consciousness of ownership as the result of their own effort. Self-respect is immeasurably increased in this way.

Young people of the church either attending high school or engaged in industry are looking forward to the "home-making" time. By regularly saving a business sessions, and in power in our class work, that, "seeking learning by study and also by faith," we may find "Immanuel—God with us" always.

part of their earnings and buying church bonds, they eliminate the lure of speculation and substitute the recognized values of sound investment.

The $50 thrift bond can be bought by installment payments. The same rate of interest applies on the payments as outlined above for the baby bond, and payments may likewise be made to the branch solicitor. This bond bears 5% interest payable semi-annually.

$100, $200, and $1,000 Church Bonds

These are the denominations of bonds first printed for the main issue. Many thousands of dollars in church bonds have already been sold. The recent financial statement of the church testifies of the ample security which safeguards the investment. The rate of interest is 5% and is payable semi-annually.

Many branches have building funds which they are accumulating for the purpose of building a house of worship or making anticipated repairs and enlargements. These funds can be with safety invested in church bonds, and in the future can be negotiated when money is required for the purposes named.

Many brethren in the church operating their own businesses are regularly laying away a part of their profits as a reserve fund for future emergencies or expansion. The church bonds offer a safe investment for such reserves.

Many individuals have saving accounts drawing 3% and 4% interest. For those who are thus saving a part of their earnings, the church bonds offer a sound investment at 5% interest when saving banks are offering 3% and 4%.

These larger denominations of church bonds can be bought by making installment payments. The payments may be made to the branch solicitor. The same rate of interest (4%) applying on the installment payments from the time the first payment is made to the time when sufficient has been paid in to purchase a bond.

The Presiding Bishopric will give personal attention to all inquiries regarding any of these bonds, and the Saints are invited to write for any information desired.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC.

There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conviction that envy is ignorance; that imitation is suicide; that he must take himself for better for worse as his portion; that though the wide universe is full of good, no kernel of nourishing corn can come to him but through his toil bestowed on that plot of ground which is given to him to till.—
Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Thoroughness in the Study of Medicine

BY A. W. TEEL, M. D., CHURCH PHYSICIAN

The student of the profession of medicine will learn much that will avail him or her in after life. As without health all activities become difficult or impossible, it is clear that all citizenship and parenthood must be profoundly affected by any system of education which places in its highest rank a knowledge of how to live rationally; how to take care of our bodies and of our minds. The past twenty-five years of this century have brought vast additions to our stores of knowledge about health and how to maintain it, and of disease and methods of preventing it. The whole trend of medicine is in the direction of the prevention of disease. In laboratories in every civilized country, men are toiling with microscope and scalpel and chemicals to discover ways of eliminating cancer and other dread diseases that have shortened so many lives.

It is a familiar story of brilliant discovery of germ diseases, whereby typhoid fever, tuberculosis, diphtheria, scarlet fever, malaria, and other scourges were traced and cured, or prevented. The nature of these diseases once known, it was easy to provide the cures and develop methods of prevention.

You will learn that few diseases are inherited. Environment counts very much. Life and health are given us as a trust, and we must use every available means to prevent ourselves from being useless or burdensome. It takes all the professional skill brothers and sisters know how to muster so to encompass sickly lives as to bring them back even to moderate health. Surely one should be proud to be a member of a profession which is so nearly allied to the work of religion, and which renders such a distinct service to society.

Medicine involves the acquirement of two things: knowledge and technical skill. The cause of disease, the symptoms which they present, the complications and difficulties which may arise, and the reasons why one thing should be done rather than another, form in a general way the proper knowledge of the physician.

The profession of medicine goes back to pre-Biblical days and into remote lands and historical peoples. For instance, the Greeks had Æsculapius, the father of medicine, who established some of the laws of health and treatment of disease. The Evangelist Luke was a physician, receiving his education in Tarsus, where there were masters of the profession, and near which stood the Temple of Æsculapius, the first hospital ever established. Luke was thoroughly acquainted with the diseases he describes, which he does in medical language of the times. We find Luke mentioning five cases, one the son of the widow of Nain, the ten lepers, the woman bent with a spirit of infirmity, the man with the dropsy. There are other cases recorded by him or the other apostles. Indeed, the Good Samaritan's wounded patient is treated, according to Luke, by pouring oil and wine into his wounds. Indeed, Luke received a classical education, and he shows the mentality and characteristics of the cultivated Greek. We find him a learned and cultured doctor of his day, who typifies the right relation of the medical man to society. We find in him a supremely great man, and we of this day owe him a great debt.

Progress in medicine, since Luke's time, in which standards of preliminary as well as purely medical education have advanced so wonderfully, had its origin from within the medical profession. Neither lawyers nor civil engineers nor ministers advanced this idea, though possibly an occasional member of each or all these learned bodies may have thought higher education necessary for physicians. It is doubtful if any personal or local influence can turn the tide of the wide-sweeping movement for the finest standards of proficiency and skill, which will finally wipe out of existence the schools of the fake and the graft type which justly come under criticism.

This is an age of specialists, when broad general knowledge is cultural and specialized knowledge is professional. In this period of culture, the majority have more time to read and to become informed on many things as broad as cyclopedia. However, in order to benefit humanity and incidentally to make a good living, it is essential that the student learn and practice in a definite field, recognized as useful.

Now, the healing art could hardly be more serviceable to mankind, and it is sanctioned by ages of tradition and habit. As time goes on, the science and art of healing is becoming more accurate. Instead of guesswork and leaving it to chance and nature, a wise physician will in most instances let nature do the work but will also help out wonderfully, through the medicaments and methods of our best laboratories and hospitals.

Confronted with many possible professions, as a student graduates from a school or institute, he must study his bent or tastes before choosing a vocation, especially that of medicine. There must be aptitude in the first instance, and a native sympathy for the ills that human flesh is heir to. Just as a man or woman before taking up religious work must have aptitude and a calling as from God, even so must the student of medicine feel that he, in his make-up, is a healer, and is not using the profession to extract fees from sick folk. Neither does a minister preach because of the living that is in it, for it is far easier to be a drawer of water and hewer of wood, so far as mental ease and rest are concerned, and in these days, salaries also. If a man, or woman, wants to take up law, then he must possess a strong instinct for defending the righteous cause and for sound argument, as well as a liking for the atmosphere of courts, juries, and law libraries.

Specialism then counts heavily—a wonderfully deep knowledge of a limited portion of useful knowledge that is professional. Along with specialism must come a distinct liking for the branch selected.

In these days there are many practitioners belonging to schools that have arisen in the last twenty-five years or less. They admit to the healing art, with special degrees, many a candidate who has no groundings in the proper sciences of medicine and physical making. In a famous English case, Judge Parker said: "I call it acting wickedly when a man is grossly ignorant and yet affects to cure people, or who is grossly inattentive to their safety." There are people who administer no drugs, but rely on a sort of Coueism, or faith cure, or a profession of creed. A person who so takes a leap in the dark is guilty of gross negligence. Then there are others who are rash and negligent, the product of schools of quackery, diploma mills, who use medicine beyond their knowledge and meddle with things beyond their reach. Negligence might consist in using medicine in the use of which care is required and of the properties of which the person using them is ignorant. This is to say that quacks, empirics, and ignoramus ought to be run out of this learned profession.

There are many practitioners who rely on theories of healing that are not substantiated by results. These schools graduate professors of healing, who are supposed to be competent with their formula of treatment, to take over every ill and ailment that flesh and blood and bone are heir to, by a sort of magic touch. In the words of an old judicial commentator, "it is exceedingly to be lamented that the people are so easily persuaded to put confidence in these itinerant quacks and to intrust their lives to strangers without experience." People have an astonishing infatuation and yield to the impudent pretensions of empiricism. There seems no adequate remedy but a criminal prosecuting, or by adequate action by the legislature, even as the quack, though honest in intention, prescribes with the expectation of curing his patient. Some profess to cure every ill with this or that get-well-quick method, and some profess to achieve the same result without any treatment whatever, but both are in the same class. Intelligence is a divine attribute, and the day will soon come when any fictitious healer ("science" falsely so-called) who allows his child to die of diphtheria without medical treatment, or to have a crooked leg or arm for life because a fracture has not been set, will not only be prosecuted but convicted.

Sound and even rigid educational requirements are in force in the States, and state medical examining boards exclude from the profession the densely ignorant aspirants for medical or surgical honors.

I recall one medical college which agreed to graduate as a complete physician and surgeon within five months, provided a student paid his tuition fees. His diploma was simply a receipt for so much money. The country became flooded with physicians of that character, especially where the requirements of States were lax, and this tended to bring the profession into disrepute in certain quarters and encourage unscientific treatments.

The student of medicine or nursing, when graduating, should maintain a high ethical and moral standard, and thus never become involved in either civil or criminal liability. Do not develop the itching palm or consider that success is measured by the amount earned. The dollar standard is no criterion in any calling, in view of the Biblical statement, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

As long ago as 1848, the Supreme Court of Iowa said in a damage suit against a certain healer: "It is to be lamented that so many of our citizens are disposed to intrust health and life to novices and empirics, to new nostrums and new methods of treatment. But these are evils which the courts of justice possess no adequate power to remedy. Enlightened public opinion and judicious legislation may do much to discountenance quackery and advance medical science." And these words are as significant today as they were eighty years ago when spoken.

Not so historically long ago, the barber and medical man were classed together in England, and the barber did much of the surgery before that period.

By education and organization, the medical profession has come to be what it is today. It is a great body of self-governed men and women who regulate through state boards the education of their members, and control the laws by which the practice of medicine is conducted. From the social status of the barber, they have risen to respect which is given to culture and knowledge. We are ever pressing on to a higher standard. In the past, it is education which has helped elevate the profession, and fifty years from now the standards will be more difficult, so that public faith in them will be even more sustained.

It is not easy to secure men and women thoroughly equipped by nature and education to practice medicine, broad minded enough to grasp the duty imposed on them, and competent to manage the nurses and others under their charge. Professional training has been described as the very last stage of education, and though true education is always incomplete in every good system of teaching, new knowledge to be of value must be based upon that which preceded it. Certainly no worthy superstructure can be built on weak foundations. One thing we must realize is, the ideals which inspire the growth of educational work in medicine, as in other professions, must change from year to year. The standards can not remain fixed and unalterable, but must grow, and we must grow with them if we wish to be worthy of our responsibilities and really great opportunities to serve the health of the public.

The liability of physicians in this country was for many years a vanishing quantity. Anybody who tacked an M. D. or other D. after his name, was allowed to kill and maim without let or hindrance. The people at large looked up to the medical profession with a kind of pious veneration, which even so much abuse and quackery of certain ill-founded schools has been unable to shake. Surely no earnest and sincere student will do anything but what will justify the highest public confidence in his skill or integrity.

It is a startling fact that many of our young people are being persuaded by advertising and sensational circulars into taking up many of the new-fangled methods or pathies, which are usually founded on some half truth, and exploited without reference to the many other branches of science on which health depends. If they desire to enter a profession, they should be careful in choosing a school that is qualified to teach medicine in all its branches. Many young men, who are turned out by the thousands yearly, are hardly so thoroughly equipped in practical medical matters as they should be. The curriculum is often decided by the examination, and a student will not trouble himself about any subjects outside the scope of the examinations. Therefore, when he becomes the proud possessor of a license to practice, he may and probably will be completely ignorant of many diseases. The fact is notorious that many men newly qualified by these doubtful schools, who should be conversant with the latest developments and improvements in medical science, display a total lack of this knowledge.

In this short paper it is impossible to go into details and explain the vast benefits that have accrued to the human race since organized medicine began its scientific labors. About two hundred years ago, of every thousand of the population of England, fifty to eighty died each year, and the duration of life of each person born averaged fifteen to eighteen years. How different is the present death rate of fifteen per thousand. For example, sanitary science, in the hands of medical men with a knowledge of bacteriology, is wholly neglected by the quack schools. Yet because of bacteriology, yellow fever, diphtheria, typhoid, malaria, and a number of other plagues have been wiped out; all of which proves the necessity of attending a school that does not neglect any of the branches of medicine in favor of some speculative attitude towards human ailment as a form of human error, etc., neglecting the advances that surgery has made, for instance, the past twenty years.

Thoroughness, then, is the rule in professional life, if you mean to attain. There is a goal to reach, and this requires striving, which means study and patient practice. How better the rewards of honest study, in eventual satisfaction for the professional worker! There is no need for superficial, hasty getting of degrees for the sake of letters after one's name, because they will mean little unless there is a well-intentioned, thorough worker in the science in back of it. Strive, therefore, to excel.

K L D S Radio Flashes

Lincoln, Nebraska.—Your morning services are wonderful and the kind I love. I didn't know you were on the air in the morning until I just happened to run onto you last Tuesday morning, and here I am listening to you again today. Your singing was beautiful this morning and brought many happy thoughts to my mind.—Mrs. Nettie Moore, 2137 U Street.

Cadillac, Michigan.—(Would you like to see the power of K L D S materially increased?) Yes. I would like to see the church have one of the best broadcasting stations in the world; also I think more people could be reached.—Sidney Price.

Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania.—(What suggestions have you to increase the effectiveness of K L D S as a missionary agent?) My suggestion would be, if we are going to use radio as a missionary agent, that we build a station big enough and powerful enough that every city and hamlet in this United States of America would have no difficulty in receiving K L D S.—Earl Brennan, 240 W. Mahoning Street.

Mulberry, Kansas.—Have called on nearly all Saints having radios in our branch and find them most enthused over the morning devotional services. Also have neighbors, non-members, who do not like to miss the Tuesday and Friday morning services.—Charles A. Dooley.

The Calls of the Church

BY J. A. GARDNER

A covenant with God is important. To keep that covenant inviolate brings a sense of security which perhaps no other act in life can bring. Working together with God means sharing in both benefits and responsibilities in promoting the principles of righteousness.

Folks become members of this church because they believe it interprets the gospel of Christ in belief and practice. By subscribing to its pronouncements and enlisting in its cause, they become the church. When speaking of our support of the church as spiritual, moral, financial, we mean that these are all interdependent terms, closely coordinated as productive activities.

A rapidly developing civilization makes constantly increasing demands on the church. Fast-maturing plans within the institution evolve insistent calls for support within its own ranks. The biggest tasks—the seemingly insurmountable emergencies—have actually been the church's salvation; for such tasks force everyone to work. This church has successfully answered every challenge. It has survived every crisis. It has more than met every emergency.

Many times in the history of the church a call has been sent out for support of the missionary work, and the Saints responded. Each year the call is made for the Christmas offering, that more missionaries might be sent, and again the Saints respond. Time and again the call has been made for fasting and prayer, that the church might receive light and direction, and thousands of Saints prayed and fasted. The Lord heard and answered. Perhaps more than any other, is the call being made for prayer in behalf of the sick, and Saints at home and abroad respond. In recent months a call was made to the Saints to prepare for their stewardship by complying with the law of inventory and tithing. The Saints have answered.

A few weeks ago some of the girls at Graceland College lost everything in the fire that burned Patroness Hall. A call was made to just a few Saints that those of the girls, unable to finance themselves, might be reimbursed for their loss and remain in school. One hundred and thirty-one Saints sent $2,250 in cash in ten days. In this, likewise, the membership did not fail. Scarcely a congregation of this church but once a month, or perhaps oftener, sends out a call to its own local membership in behalf of some one who is sick, homeless, made dependent by accident, or bereaved by death, and what congregation is there but has responded?

Calls will be made to the membership of this church at home and abroad; for consecrated men to enter the ministry and give their best while the prime of life is theirs to give; for consecrated and trained teachers that the word of God may be taught properly; for men and women who have been successful in industrial enterprises who are ready, willing and qualified to gather to Zion and share in the responsibilities of establishing stewardships. The call is to those who have qualified as musicians, that under their leadership the songs of Zion might be sung with the spirit and with the understanding; to farmers whose experience and qualifications will entitle them to come first, and develop opportunities that those less fortunate, less skillful, less experienced might be gathered in due time.

It is well that calls are made to the church, that heavy and insistent demands for consecrated workers are constantly made. When this church accepts a program and passes it on to its membership with a full schedule of big tasks, this church is going forward in a substantial way. A church without a program is purposeless and without excuse for existence. A membership without great tasks is idle and useless. Such can not be contemplated in the forward-looking, constructive, building program of Christ. Will you spend and be spent for "the cause"?

The Brother of Jared

About the first man to note, when beginning the study of the Book of Mormon, is one whose name is not mentioned in that history. He is simply called "The brother of Jared." However, he was a vastly important figure in those thrilling events that occurred in connection with the coming of the first colony to America.

At the time of the confusion of tongues, when God was so displeased with those people who built the tower of Babel, Jared pleaded with his brother to cry unto the Lord that he would not confound the language of them and their families, or of their friends. And the brother of Jared did cry again and again unto God for mercy, and it was granted that their tongues were not confounded.

The wrath of God threatened to scatter those wicked ones to the ends of the earth, and the brother of Jared again prayed that God would lead him and Jared with their families (twenty-two families all together) out of the accursed land. God heard and answered that he would not only lead them out in safety, but if they were faithful he would carry them forth to a land choice above all other lands, which land we know is our own beautiful America. Then, according to God's commands, they gathered their flocks, both male and female of every kind, also seeds of every kind, and the brother of Jared led the way by the power of God to the waters of the great sea. Here they dwelt in tents for four years, and here the brother of Jared became careless in regard to prayer. At the end of this period God came again to him and stood in a cloud for three hours exhorting him and chastening him because of his neglect in this matter. The brother of Jared repented and was forgiven of the Lord, but was warned not to sin any more in this respect.

Later he was given very definite instruction by which they were to build eight barges, or ships, that were to carry them to this choice and promised land. These were to be self-bailing and tight "like a dish," so that they would be safe from storms at sea.

Then the matter of providing light inside these boats brought out perhaps the outstanding event in the life of this great man, this brother of Jared: "He did moulten out of the rock sixteen small stones, and they were white and clear even as transparent glass." And he carried these to the Lord and in great humility asked the Lord to bless them that they might give forth light—two for each boat. And so great was his faith that when God stretched forth his hand to touch the stones, one by one, with his finger, the "vail was taken off the eyes of the brother of Jared, and he saw the finger of the Lord, and it was as the finger of a man, like unto flesh and blood," and he was struck with fear and fell to the earth. The Lord commanded him to arise, and he said unto the Lord, "I knew not that the Lord had flesh and blood." And the Lord said, "Because of thy faith thou hast seen that I shall take upon me flesh and blood." And later, because of his great faith, the Lord further revealed himself to him, saying that never before had man come before him with such exceeding faith.

Right here is a piercing shaft of light on the subject of God's personality and man's creation in God's own image, for God further said to the brother of Jared:

Behold, I am he who was prepared from the foundation of the world to redeem my people. Behold, I am Jesus Christ. I am the Father and the Son. In me shall all mankind have life, and that eternally, even they who shall believe on my name; and they shall become my sons and my daughters. And never have I showed myself unto man whom I have created, for never has man believed in me as thou hast. Seest thou that ye are created after mine own image? Yea, even all men were created in the beginning, after mine own image? Behold this body, which ye now behold, is the body of my spirit; and man have I created after the body of my spirit; and even as I appear unto thee to be in the spirit, will I appear unto my people in the flesh.

And now, as I, Moroni, said I could not make a full account of these things which are written, therefore it sufficeth me to say, that Jesus showed himself unto this man in the Spirit, even after the manner and in the likeness of the same body, even as he showed himself unto the Nephites; and he ministered unto him, even as he ministered unto the Nephites; and all this, that this man knew that he was God, because of the many great works which the Lord had showed unto him. And because of the knowledge of this man, he could not be kept from beholding within the vail; and he saw the finger of Jesus, which, when he saw, he fell with fear; for he knew that it was the finger of the Lord; and he had faith no longer, for he knew, nothing doubting; wherefore, having this perfect knowledge of God, he could not be kept from within the vail; therefore he saw Jesus and he did minister unto him.

And it came to pass that the Lord said unto the brother of Jared, Behold, thou shalt not suffer these things which ye have seen and heard, to go forth unto the world, until the time cometh that I shall glorify my name in the flesh; wherefore, ye shall treasure up the things which ye have seen and heard, and show it to no man. And behold, when he shall come unto me, ye shall write them and shall seal them up, that no one can interpret them; for ye shall write them in a language that they can not be read. And behold, these two stones will I give unto thee, and ye shall seal them up also, with the things which ye shall write. For behold, the language which ye shall write, I have confounded, wherefore I will cause in mine own due time that these stones shall magnify to the eyes of men, these things which ye shall write. And when the Lord had said these words, he showed unto the brother of Jared all the inhabitants of the earth which had been, and also all that would be; and the Lord withheld them not from his sight, even unto the ends of the earth; for the Lord had said unto him in times before, that if he would believe in him, that he could show unto him all things—it should be shown unto him; therefore the Lord could not withhold anything from him; for he knew that the Lord could show him all things. And the Lord said unto him, Write these things and seal them up, and I will show them in mine own due time unto the children of men.

And it came to pass that the Lord commanded him that he should seal up the two stones which he had received, and show them not, until the Lord should show them unto the children of men. And the Lord commanded the brother of Jared to go down out of the mount from the presence of the Lord, and write the things which he had seen; and they were forbidden to come unto the children of men, until after that he should be lifted up upon the cross; and for this cause did King Benjamin (Mosiah?) keep them, that they should not come unto the world until after Christ should show himself unto his people. And after Christ truly had showed himself unto his people, he commanded that they should be made manifest. And now, after that, they have all dwindled in unbelief, and there is none, save it be the Lamanites, and they have rejected the gospel of Christ; therefore I am commanded that I should hide them up again in the earth. Behold, I have written upon these plates the very things which the brother of Jared saw; and there never was greater things made manifest, than that which was made manifest unto the brother of Jared; wherefore, the Lord hath commanded me to write them; and I have written them. And he commanded me that I should seal them up; and he also hath commanded that I should seal up the interpretation thereof; wherefore I have sealed up the interpreters, according to the commandment of the Lord. For the Lord said unto me, they shall not go forth unto the Gentiles until the day that they shall repent of their iniquity, and become clean before the Lord; and in that day they shall exercise faith in me, saith the Lord, even as the brother of Jared did, that they may become sanctified in me, then will I manifest unto them the things which the brother of Jared saw, even to the unfolding unto them all my revelations, saith Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of the heavens and of the earth, and all things that in them are.

He with Jared did all things as commanded of God and embarked as directed, and these eight barges were upon the sea three hundred and forty-four days, the wind never ceasing to blow toward the promised land; and whether above or below the waves, they were lighted constantly by these stones prepared by the Lord—one at either end of each boat. And at last they reached the eastern coast of Central America. When they landed, they bowed themselves down and did humble themselves before the Lord and did shed tears of joy for all his tender mercies over them.

It is not difficult to picture the scene—so like the landing of Columbus some thirty-six hundred years later—the gratitude and happiness of landing after the long, difficult voyage in uncharted waters to unknown lands.

In this connection we have been told that among some of the Indian tribes is yet found the legend of the coming of the Jaredites—the long and dangerous crossing in eight boats, tight like a dish and lighted by the Great Spirit.

The prophecies concerning this choice land are very interesting and should concern every Latter Day Saint deeply. Many have already come true, while others are yet to be fulfilled. One pertinent prediction is found in the fourth verse of Ether 1. Speaking of this choice land, the Lord said, "It is a land of promise, and whatsoever nation shall possess it shall serve God or they shall be swept off when the fullness of his wrath shall come upon them . . . when they come to a fullness of iniquity," etc. Is our great nation a God-serving one, or is it indeed ripening in iniquity, making ready to be swept off?

In our study of the great men of each age, we may well pause to consider this wonderful prophet, seer, revelator—the first man to lead an expedition to America, the greatest among his people, because he served them all—the humble, righteous brother of Jared.

The April "Autumn Leaves"

This number of the Leaves is one the whole Herald Office force has enjoyed watching take form. It has a sixteen-page brown picture section, and many other cuts with articles of great interest to old and young.

Because of extra time and expense necessary to make this number of especial value, it will be necessary to charge twenty-five cents per single copy. This charge will not change the advertised rate of five copies for fifty cents to all those subscribing before March 31.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Massachusetts Slipping as a College Center

WASHINGTON, January 15.—Massachusetts has ground for reflection regarding its standing as a center of higher education. While it still ranks high in this field, its young people are not showing the same interest in securing a college education that the young folks of the Western States are exhibiting today. A quarter of a century ago, Massachusetts, in common with all the New England States, excepting only New Hampshire, was one of the twelve leading States in the proportion of their resident college university students in their total population; today Massachusetts and the other Northeastern States have been relegated to second or third position, the first twelve States being west of the Mississippi River.

The foregoing facts are contained in a report made public today by the Bureau of Education, based on a survey conducted for it by George F. Zook, president of the Municipal University of Akron, Ohio. According to Doctor Zook, the average for the entire country is one college student to every 212 persons in population. Taking the twelve present leaders, Utah, which heads the list, has one student to each ninety-nine of population, while Minnesota, the last of the twelve, has one student for each 159 of population. Massachusetts has one student for each 195 of population, so still is above the average, even though it is in the second group.

"There are, of course, several factors which give the well-developed States of the Middle West certain advantages over the Southern and Eastern States," said Doctor Zook. "In the first place, several of them, including Utah, Oregon, Iowa, and Nevada, either have no separate normal schools, or only one such institution—a situation which probably tends to increase the number of persons attending the regular colleges and universities. In the next place, most of these States have only a small Negro and foreign population.

"Notwithstanding all these modifying influences, the residents of the Western States may take pride in the fact that they lead the older States in the proportion of their population which is obtaining a college education. On the other hand, as may be expected because of the large colored population, the Southern States nearly all stand low in the proportion of their population enrolled in colleges and universities."

Another point of interest developed by Doctor Zook was that while a quarter of a century ago North Carolina, California, Massachusetts, and Tennessee led in the proportion of their resident students enrolled in their own colleges and universities, the leaders in this respect today are California, Texas, Oregon, Utah, Nebraska, and Minnesota. In New Jersey, only 21 per cent of its resident students attend colleges and universities within the State. New Jersey ranks last in this group, and next to last is Connecticut. Yale draws most of its students from outside Connecticut. New Hampshire, with 49 per cent, is also low in the list.

"Notwithstanding the tendency for students from all sections of the country to flock to colleges and universities in Massachusetts," explained Mr. Zook, "29.5 per cent of the students resident in that State go elsewhere to college. In this instance, short distances to institutions in other States and the fact that a State university has not been developed, probably account in considerable part for the migration.

Reasons for Migrating

"Several years ago, in connection with a survey of higher education in that State, Massachusetts students attending colleges and universities outside the State assigned the following reasons for migrating: Opportunity to secure the course of study desired in order to attend college away from home, expense of college education at Massachusetts colleges, desire to attend a small college, entrance examination requirements at Massachusetts colleges, know other students, college life, outdoor life, military training, failure to pass entrance examinations at Massachusetts colleges, the faculty, opportunities to obtain scholarship or employment, religious reasons, coeducational institutions.

"College and university students are much more likely to leave the State of their residence for their education than are students who attend normal schools and teachers' colleges. Figures obtained for the eleven teacher training institutions in Massachusetts showed that in the total attendance, ninety-seven per cent resided in Massachusetts." Nevertheless Massachusetts still stands recognized as a center of higher learning.

"There are a number of States," continues Mr. Zook, "which enroll in their colleges and universities more students than there are residents of the State attending colleges and universities in and out of the State. These States are the commonly recognized centers of high education, such as Massachusetts, New York, and Illinois. For example, in Massachusetts there were 20,641 residents of the State enrolled in college, whereas the number of students attending colleges and universities located in the State was 29,656."—Theodore G. Joslin, in Boston Transcript, January 15.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

A Day in the Islands and Inner Water Courses of Maine

In one of my last "Little journeys" I told of a Sunday spent with the Saints of Jonesport. The following morning, Monday, January 24, was bright and clear, and it was decided that we should spend part of "blue Monday" seeing a portion of that interesting Maine coast from or in a small boat. I had heard Brother and Sister Crowley tell of their island camp, and Brother Fisher and I wanted to see it, so Sister Crowley put up some food for lunch, Brethren Newman and Leon got Brother Leon's boat ready, and we were soon on the water in a typical Jonesport boat, such as are used by the lobstermen and fishermen. These Jonesport boats have the lines of racers, and sit in the water with an easy grace. This boat of Brother Crowley's is about twenty feet long, and had proved her seaworthiness many times. In fact, he had sailed to Florida and back. The open cockpit, with its four-cylinder gasoline motor and gear for "hauling pots," had its fore part covered with a canvas canopy to at least partially shelter the machinery and operator. In the bow was fitted up a neat but closely arranged two-man cabin, with stove, lockers, etc. Equipped as she was with four-cylinder motor, about such as is found in a Ford automobile, the boat would do about eight knots per hour.

When we went down to the shore, the boat lay at anchor in Jonesport harbor, not far from the sardine and herring factory of Brother Lou Kinkley. Jonesport harbor once thronged with sailing craft, merchantmen and fishing craft, varying from a small twenty- to thirty-foot sloop to the majestic five-masted schooner. But now only an occasional sailing vessel is seen, and in their places are found the small gasoline boats, lobster boats, clambers, fish smackers, the larger power yachts, and the steamers which occasionally touch.

Newman and Leon had preceded Myron and myself to the shore, and they had shoveled the snow out of the boat, warmed up the motor, etc. They came ashore in the small boat and took us aboard. And soon we were off to "the camp," which lies some miles south and east of Jonesport.

The Maine coast in summer is without doubt one of the most beautiful in the world. And it is far from being without beauty in the winter. There was not a foot of the trip we made that day that was not replete with pretty vistas. Snow had fallen a couple of days previously, and the islands and mainland were covered with the mantle of white, against which the dark green of firs and pines contrasted strikingly. Up to high tide mark, the snow had been melted by the sea, hence the shoreline everywhere was black except at high water. This black shoreline set out the islands strikingly. Mingled with the green of the firs and pines on the wooded lands was the brown of the bare hardwoods and the whites of the spruces and birches. Above the blue of the waters in reach, bay, and inlet, those wooded islands made many pretty pictures as they lay bathed in the bright sunlight of the clear day. And as the boat, impelled by the steadily whirling screw, cut its way gracefully through the waters of the reach and narrow passageways between islands, on every hand could be seen gray and brown rocks of various sizes raising their heads just above the surface of the sea, or lying just at the surface, their presence indicated by the surf that broke lazily over them. And as I contemplated how many others there might be with their jagged sharp heads just below the surface, lying in wait for the craft of the unwary or careless, I was thankful somebody was along who had speaking acquaintance with them all. And Newman and Leon both seemed to carry in their heads a chart of the whole coast. "There's a big rock," "There's a small one," etc., they would say, pointing to what seemed to me an imaginary spot on the water. Well, anyway, we (or they) steered clear of them all.

Leaving the reach running east past Jonesport, turning to the southward past several small islands, past Hall's Island itself, in and out of a weir (a skillful bit of boat maneuvering by Brother Leon), one owned by Brother Crowley, then on to Mistake Island we went, seeing hundreds of waterfowl of various kinds. Mooring the launch in a sheltered bay at Mistake Island, in the small boat we landed at the foot of a stairway, mounted its slippery steps cautiously, and following a narrow board walk across the snow-covered island, we finally came to the buildings of the Moosapoc Light. The genial captain, who seemed to be an old acquaintance of Leon and Newman, though not expecting company, received us cordially and showed us the lighthouse and explained its equipment. He even started the machinery in the "whistle house," to show us how the fog horn is blown. So, even though the sky was quite cloudless, we heard the deep-voiced horn send its warning note out across the water. I had heard these dismal signals from great distances, and so had expected that one standing near would be fairly deafened by the great noise; but standing outside the building just below the horn, I was surprised by its softness. It was more like a deep sighing moan than a shriek. But the notes from those horns have great carrying power, and serve a fine purpose when the gray blanket of fog shuts out from the view of fishermen and marines the landmarks of the coast. The tone and quality of each horn is known to the keen Maine sailormen, and hence they learn their locations even in thick weather.

Thanking the captain for his courtesy and the information gleaned, and going back to the launch, we were soon under way and headed again for Hall's Island. Entering a sheltered cove on the south side, at this time a lee of the island, we landed. Leon threw me the line, after I was ashore, and asked me to "tie her up." Throwing the line around a boulder, I did so. "Better see, Leon, what kind of a knot that landlubber tied," said Bishop Fisher, "or you may be minus a boat on coming back here." Well "Skipper" Crowley went to the boulder to examine the knot. I was listening with some curiosity. "Why!" exclaimed he, "it's a bowlin'!" And I imagined hearing him say to himself, "Where did that 'lubber' learn a bowline?" Well, even a prairie-raised farmer, especially when he has had experience with the ropes, tackle, and gear in raising telephone poles, may learn to throw a double hitch, sling a becket, or even tie a bowline.

Hall's Island, where we landed, is owned by Brother Crowley and his business partner, and in the summer is the center of activity for a firm that "fishes," "lobsters," and deals in fish as merchantmen. Besides the wharf, warehouse, and storeroom for the "fishing gear," storage vats, etc., the small island, four or five acres in extent, has two cottages, the "summer camps" of the two partners and their families. To one of these we went and took possession. Into it we carried our basket of provisions, our guns, and other paraphernalia. By "common consent," Newman was appointed cook; no election; he just knew we wanted him to do the cooking and was willing to do so, and we were willing to let him. The cookstove was fired up, vegetables put on to boil, etc. Then Leon and I got busy with the guns. No, not shooting animals—just targets. I found Leon a pretty good shot, better than I by a little, I guess, though it may be he was accustomed to the guns. Well, we shot away all our ammunition, then quit, calling it about even. He was generous enough to call it so.

Newman, with Myron's help, had dinner ready. And such a meal! Was it the appetite sharpened by a forenoon on the salt water, or was it the cooking? Both, I guess; for Newman is a bit famous for cooking sea foods; and the chief item that day was scallops, the biggest and best I've ever eaten. And as we ate, a steady flow of chatter kept up. Yes, chatter, and there wasn't a woman in the crowd. And what a restful, delightful meal it was.

Lunch over, the dishes washed, the cottage restored to order, the cookstove greased, and we were prepared to leave. Leon had gone around the other side of the island and had brought the boat around to the wharf, while Myron and Newman were washing the dishes, etc., and repacking the basket.

And while Leon was away for the boat, I was interestedly examining the cottage, reading the mottoes, signs, etc., on the wall. Among other things I saw a sheet of note paper pinned to the wall. On it were some verses, and I so wanted to give them to my readers that I made bold to take the paper with me. The verses were penned by a sister, the wife of Brother Crowley's partner. I thought I had a memo of the name, but as I write this I can not find the memo. Guess I depended upon memory, and it failed me again. Anyway here are the verses:

"Just a rugged mass of rock
Rising 'bove the surface of the sea,
Garbed in dark brown dress of mink dirt,
Adorned with grass, and vine, and tree;
Just a child of Mother Nature,
Living aloof and apart,
On the breast of Father Neptune
Close to his ever-beating heart;
Lulled to quiet, peaceful slumber
By the ocean's steady roar,
As the salt spray breaks and tumbles
On the distant, rocky shore.
Fanned by freshly blowing breezes
From all points along the sky;
Warmed by Old Sol's glowing sunbeams
As each day he passes by;
Cooled and bathed by fog and rainstorm,
From black clouds that form o'erhead;
This child is called 'Hall's Island,'
Happy we, her paths to tread."

Rather neatly done, sister. And the sentiment of the verses expresses a feeling far from ennui. Brother Crowley said to me that he had investigated what it would cost him to install a telephone on the island. The price was quite prohibitive—something like five thousand dollars. And when he gave me cordial invitation to spend some time in the summer on the island, the thought that there is not a telephone connection with it, and not likely to be, made me want to accept. And I may, too.

On returning to Jonesport, the sun behind us, the favorable light shining upon the well-known fishing town made it stand out a pretty picture. And as we approached it from the sea, I could well understand the attachment formed for it by those who in "following the sea" for livelihood come and go across the pretty reaches separating it from the sea.

It had been a day of recreation for us; and as we (M. C. and I) were landed at a point near the east end of the village, to resume church work while Leon and Newman took the boat to her home mooring, we were both refreshed for our tasks. Calls on two shut-ins (temporary, from flu) preceded meeting. An hour or so spent in speaking to the Saints gathered at the church, and later a visit at Newman's, visiting over a fine clam chowder and equally fine boiled lobster, in chatting about church work and experiences finished the day, the last spent in Jonesport; for the next morning we were to leave for another point.

Growth of Work at Killmaster, Michigan

Work began here in the Killmaster, Michigan, group in June, 1925, and at that time only four Saints were in this place. Now there are thirty-two members, with a priest to lead us. Brother S. T. Pendleton, of Beaverton, is the missionary who started the work here. Since then we have been visited by different elders of the church. Among these are Brothers M. A. Summerfield, E. S. White, and W. L. Chapman. G. W. Burt, of Beaverton, has just closed a week's visit with us, preaching every night. These meetings were attended with good interest, and a good spirit was manifested. An encouraging number of nonmembers attended. Two young ladies were led into the waters of regeneration on Sunday, March 20. Several members received their patriarchal blessings. We are earnestly praying for another elder to come here in the near future, for we feel there is a great work to do at this place.

JAMES MCGUIRE.

Activities of Superintendent Woodstock

The early months of 1927 have given occasion for us to spend several weeks in Independence. Rather copious news items from Zion are appearing from week to week in the HERALD columns, but we doubt if the membership of the church can appreciate the developments that are really being made in the central gathering place. Others may observe and report at length upon progress in financial, industrial, and building lines, and upon the evidence of spiritual advancement. Our own attention has been upon the increased interest in Sunday school, and related departmental work, and in preparation for effectual leadership in varied phases of religious education. We appreciate the privilege of looking in occasionally upon this work in Zion, and feel happy when we can lend a hand in its progress.

The coming of President McDowell to Independence some two years ago to take active direction of religious educational activities in Zion was most opportune. Other leaders before him had done a good work, but it has been possible for him, with his clear vision, his strength of character, his force of will, his undaunted courage, his knowledge of human nature, his experience in dealing with young people, his deep sympathy and untiring devotion, to arouse the enthusiasm of an army of workers with a desire to consecrate their talents and to train for service. In this he has been nobly supported by stake and local officers, by men of the leading quorums, departmental heads, etc. In a word, he has been able to successfully organize the available forces for effective departmental work. We may call attention to some of the phenomenal work as follows: The Independence Institute, with its 992 enrolled members during the year, with the patient and untiring Sister Constance as its mainspring; Sister Gould and her large number of teacher training groups, having an enrollment of 75 members during the year; Brother C. B. Hartshorn, general superintendent of the Stone Church Sunday school, who marshals a force of 159 officers and teachers, with a school of over twelve hundred regular attendants; the unique organization by President McDowell of the young people of Zion, represented in the Council of Thirteen, one from each branch, and in the Council of Forty-four, one from each sub-group. The councils are advisory to the Presidency in providing for the interests and needs of the youth of Zion in many fields of activity. Their functioning seems very happy and full of promise of good.

We recently attended a banquet of the officers and teachers of this school, when over two hundred and fifty sat at the tables. A pleasant part of the festivities was the presentation of awards valued at seventy dollars, to forty-three individuals who had earned "goal points" through special effort and study to qualify for more efficient service. These were generously distributed throughout the school, seven being officers of the school, and sixteen being teachers in the intermediate department. It was worthy of note that Brother Hartshorn, the energetic and efficient superintendent, set a splendid example, himself leading in the total number of "points" won. In each case the awards were religious educational books which should still further enhance the value of the training received. A roll call in terms of years of teaching service revealed many who had taught continuously for twenty-five, thirty, and even thirty-five years. Sister G. H. Hilliard won highest honors, with thirty-seven years to her credit. Surely the reward of such is glorious.

The Ministerial Institute at Independence was a joy to one who loves the spirit of study and growth in common understanding. It was pleasant to listen to inspiring addresses and to clear elucidation of principles involved in the accomplishment of the purposes of the gospel in human life made beautiful and divine by obedience to divine law. We think we can see an approach to the School of the Prophets in such gatherings when the Spirit of the Master is present.

On February 8 we joined five auto loads of young people of the Lamoni Branch in attendance at Leon, the county seat, at an Older Boys' and Girls' Conference. This was held under the direction of the Iowa Council of Religious Education, the speakers being state workers. While having a characteristic "other church" atmosphere, the appeal to worthy motives in life and to wholesome Christian conduct was altogether worth while and pleasing. The Lamoni delegation, made up of Methodists and Latter Day Saints, constituted over one third of the gathering. They won much favor when they sang, as a special stunt, "Let us all be brothers," under the leadership of Elder Roy Cheville, of our stake presidency. Two Latter Day Saint boys were elected to office for the coming year.

We think our people should participate more freely in gatherings and movements of this kind where we can gain much from friendly contact with other Christian young people, broaden our appreciation of the religious effort of other churches, and help in a forward movement for purity of life and righteous citizenship. At the same time we must learn to keep our bearings, to cherish and strengthen our own idealism, and to maintain the integrity of our own faith. We should be loyal to our calling and covenant as Saints of God and yet be ready to assist in every good work and work where it may be done without undue sacrifice of our own church enterprise or compromise of our ideals.

The following weeks were spent busily at the office desk, either in Lamoni or in Independence. An important session was held on the evening of February 20, when we met with all the superintendents of Sunday schools in Zion. Some fifty were present, a splendid group of earnest, efficient workers. Plans were discussed to greatly increase the success of our educational effort. Steps were taken to develop a standard score card for the self-rating of teachers and officers.

One Sunday each was spent with the Saints at Hiteman, Iowa, and Lees Summit, Missouri. We found a pleasant welcome and earnest workers at each place, but a pronounced need for trained as well as willing workers. How shall the blind successfully lead the blind!

Of course, not all are blind, but when we contemplate the beauty and strength of the gospel and realize what it is designed to accomplish in our lives in the process of Zion's redemption and in the promised endowment, we feel keenly the need of growth in knowledge and of development in Christian character. Very much credit is due today to the faithful ones who are willing to try to fulfill their mission.

We were joined at Council Bluffs on February 28 by Brother and Sister Baldwin in a three-day convention. A splendid spirit prevailed, and the attendance was good. Sister Baldwin has gathered an interesting exhibit of handwork which she used effectively in her talks on primary and junior teaching. We continued through the week in Little Sioux District, occupying at Moorhead, Missouri Valley, and Woodbine. It was most pleasant to meet with Saints and friends of former years and to try to bring a constructive message of cheer and help. Many are developing into efficient leaders through training and experience. When one ceases to make effort, it is impossible to grow, and if one is not vigorous and growing he loses his own interest and cannot help others.

Sunday, March 6, was spent with the good Saints of Omaha. Set in the midst of a great city, this band of workers is called to a great task. And there are many who measure up well to their responsibility. The day was filled from early morning with interesting service. Though handicapped by lack of room, the Sunday school has an efficient superintendent in Sister Rose Adams and a loyal group of officers and teachers. We taught a splendid gathering of three young people's classes, keen-eyed, clear-thinking young folks who are earnestly looking out into life and anxious to see life's problems in the light of the Spirit of God. We again addressed them at the Religio hour.

In a little talk at the close of Sunday school, it was our pleasure to present certificates from the training course in Religious Education to a class of nine—all officers and teachers in the school. Other training classes are formed to continue their work.

The week-end following was spent with the Kansas City Stake. With Ray Lloyd, stake superintendent, we visited the schools at Malvern Hill and at Grandview, offering a few words of greeting and encouragement. We think there is great hope for a branch where one finds large, live adult and senior classes with lower departments well organized. Grandview has also a fine orchestra.

We drove to Armourdale for the preaching hour and met with a humble band of worshipers in a rented hall. Though lacking some of the accommodations one might desire, a consecrated effort on the part of faithful workers has provided comfortable Sunday school rooms fairly well equipped.

We occupied the morning hour, happy to be able to minister among them, and trust the Lord may bless our effort.

The remainder of the day and Monday were spent in sessions at the commodious and well-appointed Central Church. A goodly number were present for the afternoon lecture, and the auditorium was filled to hear Sister Blanche Edwards at the evening hour. At six o'clock, we met with the young people in a regular monthly prayer meeting.

Monday evening was arranged with two class hours and four instructors covering the range of Sunday school effort. President McDowell was present and, aside from serving as "chauffeur" for the speakers, made the closing address of the convention.

After two days of intensive work in the Independence office, we are again at the home desk, busy with back correspondence, our annual report, new quarterly copy, plans for the General Conference courses, and for the June Institute, and for the reunions following.

CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK,

General Sunday School Superintendent.

Ontario, California

March 7.—We greet the Saints in every land in the name of our Master, even Jesus Christ, and God our Father, and pray that his love and grace might abide in you to comfort, to strengthen, to instruct to the intent that we might all come to a unity of the faith, of one heart and mind, to the glory of him whose name we bear and for the benefit of our fellow men.

We see more clearly every day the efforts of Satan to destroy God's work, knowing well it is the strength of his despairing. We also feel more strongly God's power working with those who strive to do his will and keep his commandments.

We feel keenly at times the test to which we are put, but rejoice in tribulation for his name's sake, knowing well that God has said he will have a tried and proved people, and none will be tried beyond that which he can bear. Also all have their cross to bear.

Truly we can rejoice in tribulation, knowing as we do the wonderful purpose it is for. We rejoice in the glorious work and thank our heavenly Father for his goodness and mercy in giving to his creatures here below a plan whereby, if they will, they may save themselves from this untoward generation and the calamities that are coming upon the earth.

But this implies that we must do something. God has given the plan, but we must work it out. God told Noah he was going to destroy the inhabitants of the earth in his day, all those who would not believe and accept the temporal salvation he was providing, by a flood; and he gave him a plan for an ark, and a command to build the same. This ark was that temporal salvation. I would that the import of these few words which follow might burn home in every heart in letters of fire. (God did not build the ark. Noah had to do it, and thereby he and all that believed were saved.)

So in our day God has predicted great destructions upon the earth, and, always being mindful of his creatures and ready to help them when they will be helped, and ready to save them when they will be saved, has given a plan and asked all those who desire to take advantage of the opportunity to prepare a way of escape, a place of refuge; but it must be done according to his plan in obedience to his word.

By carrying out his divine will in our day, he has not only promised salvation from the things coming upon the earth, but also eternal life in the world to come. He also has said, If ye do the things I say, I am bound, but if not ye have no promise. Consequently his promise hinges on our performing the task he has given us, the redemption of Zion and all it implies. May we go to with our mights in fasting and prayer and make every sacrifice necessary to accomplish the task assigned to us.

And let us not forget him whom God has chosen to direct the affairs of this great work, and through whom he has promised to give us directions how to proceed from time to time, in so far as we will support him and hold him up before God with our prayers and give heed to the instructions received through him to do them. Also know this, that Zion will be redeemed; God has so stated. Whether by us or by others, that is up to us.

We know God is making himself known and felt in no uncertain manner, as our last communion service testified, for we enjoyed almost a pentecostal shower, and the congregation was melted to tears of joy under the power of the Spirit of God. Our last district conference just past was the best in years, for unity and peace pervaded all the assemblies, and God's Spirit was ever present in benediction.

The work here is onward. The command has been given to go forward. All evidence points to the fact that God is with us. Let us unitedly go forward, shoulder to shoulder, with prayers of faith on our lips, ever trusting in God, and keep his commandments and accomplish the task placed before us.

W. H. KEMPLE, Publicity Agent.

Artland, Saskatchewan

February 27.—With the ending of the old year and the beginning of the new came various changes to our branch. Brother W. J. Cornish, who had been pastor of our branch since its organization in 1912, asked to be released on account of district duties, and was succeeded by Elder E. Leslie Mogg. Brother Thomas Bates was sustained as branch clerk, and was also appointed solicitor. Brother Noble Harper was sustained treasurer; Sister Bertha Cornish was elected branch historian; Sister Clara Mogg, branch correspondent; Sister Bessie Cornish was sustained chorister; and Sister Margaret Allison was elected organist.

Some of our most faithful members have sold their farms and moved to other parts, hoping to better their financial condition. There is a growing unrest among those remaining, and all are hoping that in the near future we may be able to sell and move where social as well as financial conditions are better. Brother and Sister J. J. Cornish, having sold their property, have been spending the winter in Vancouver and various other places along the coast. They have been accompanied by their son, W. J., and daughter, Bertha.

Brother William Osler, who held a series of meetings in the Michigan Branch, eight and one half miles southwest, came over and preached for us two Sunday evenings. This was quite a treat, as we do not often hear one not of our local number.

We truly appreciated having Apostle Clyde F. Ellis with us for a week this winter. He gave us several noteworthy sermons, his general theme being the building of character. He left here to attend the young people's convention held in Saskatoon, February 4, 5, and 6, and was accompanied by Sister Luella Cornish, Brother Noble Harper, and Brother Edward Bates, of our branch. Priest Howard Allison also was in attendance at part of the convention, as he was in Saskatoon at the time, taking a short course of instruction on threshing machinery. This was the first effort of its kind in our district, but we are planning on having a convention yearly, and hope that each one may be better than its predecessor.

Of late some of our members have been, and others still are, nursing the mumps. This has very materially decreased our attendance at Sunday school, as well as day school. We were fortunate in getting Sister Millie Cunningham, of Saskatoon, for our teacher this year. She is a welcome member in our branch and Sunday school, for she seems willing to be of help wherever needed.

Elder E. Leslie Mogg returned from Moose Jaw last Tuesday, where he had been attending the annual convention of the Saskatchewan School Trustees' Association, held there February 16, 17, and 18. He spent Sunday with the Saskatoon Saints.

Friday evening, February 25, a skating party was held on the lake just north of E. L. Mogg's house. After the young people tired of skating, they came to the house and spent the remainder of the evening playing games. The ladies present furnished a lunch, a small sum being charged the men, and the proceeds, six dollars and eighty cents, were given to the Christmas offering fund.

Brother Elgin Clark, of Grand Valley, Ontario, is visiting at the home of A. J. Cornish.

Stockton, California

A large part of our branch was in attendance at the district conference held in Sacramento, February 12 and 13. This was one of the best conferences ever held in our district. We learned much from the splendid talks given by the men who had been sent out to teach us, and all returned home feeling happier and better able to carry on the work.

On February 24 the Department of Women served a cafeteria supper in the church basement. It was well patronized, and about twenty-three dollars was the sum cleared. It will be used toward talked of improvements.

Little Delores Bolton is fast recovering from her recent operation. Her appendix had burst four days before it was removed, and it was said by those attending that recovery was impossible. The parents declare it was God who healed her through faith and prayer, and they are giving him the glory. Our branch held special fasting and prayer for her.

Sister Orr, who has been quite ill, is much improved, and we hope soon to have her at services again. She is one of our most faithful members.

On February 23 the Religio gave a valentine social at the home of Sister Kaiser.

The attendance at all services is good and at prayer service an increase is noticed.

Joseph Luff Reports Preaching in Florida

(From a report to the Presidency and Twelve.)

I have just returned from Florida and have tried to sound the gospel trump while there. A report of labor may be due you.

I located for vacation sake at New Port Richey, and soon discovered that as a body of worshipers we were unknown there. After considerable search we found a hall, had bills printed, and footed the country for miles in distributing them in houses and automobiles. Got one kindly newspaper notice. Our audience was small at first, but increased, and we preached nineteen times there and four times at Sulphur Springs, thirty miles away. Assembled the few Saints (perhaps twenty in all—scattered over forty miles) for sacrament once; and Brother Starks, having arrived meantime, held similar service a month later and preached also.

I baptized one, blessed one child, and administered to three or four sick persons. Quite deep interest was manifested in my preaching, and strong desire expressed for continuance. One man visited me before leaving to thank me for the message I had conveyed to him. Said he had severed his connection with the Methodist Church as a result and is moving north intending to find the Reorganized Church and learn more of its good news of salvation, with a view to entering it if its message rang along as true as it so far had sounded.

Somebody ought to follow up the start made there. I never felt better in preaching in my life. To God be the praise.

I was under no appointment but, seeing the condition of affairs, could not remain idle or silent regarding the divine treasure I possessed; so started to put it on exhibition, and the Amen of God sounded in my ears and charmed my soul at every effort.

Paid all my own expenses and incidentals to meetings. Took no collections. Paid full fare on railroads. I was presented with $10 in all, which I refused as a minister or missionary, but finally accepted as a present from friends, rather than offend those offering it. Had a fullness of compensation for my efforts in the bliss accompanying them. He who would see a world starve for lack of our gospel while he has it in his power to hand out a few crumbs of it, at least, is a Christless ingrate, and he who is ashamed of its name when abroad ought to drop his hold upon it at home.

In hope of its final triumph,

JOSEPH LUFF.

Lansdowne Branch

EAST SAINT LOUIS, ILLINOIS, March 21.—Our sacramental service on March 6 was fairly well attended, and a good spiritual hour was enjoyed by those attending. Preaching that night was by Elder H. W. Brunkhorst.

On Sunday morning, March 13, Brother Brunkhorst was again the speaker, with our branch president, Elder George F. Barraclough, preaching in the evening. The Sunday morning hour of March 20 was again occupied by Brother Brunkhorst. His sermon was about the life of Christ and was very interesting. Brother W. C. Carl preached in the evening. His subject was "Sin and salvation."

Our Department of Women is decorating the inside of the church building, and the branch is going to hold a special business meeting soon to consider enlarging and painting the church building.

The choir is practicing on a cantata for Easter.

We have been glad to welcome Brother and Sister Henry Hays back to our midst recently, they having been gone for about a year.

Several of our members are looking forward to their trip to General Conference.

Hibbard, Indiana

March 22.—The Saints of Hibbard Branch are pleased to report to readers of the HERALD that the good work is progressing here.

Brother S. W. L. Scott was called here to officiate at the funeral of Mr. Bradley, a nonmember, but a good, moral man in sympathy with the latter-day work. We asked the Evangelical pastor for the use of their church for the funeral, but were told we could have it only upon agreement that our sermon would be limited to thirty minutes and that we would not preach any of the "Mormon" doctrine. He also stated that he did not want their young people to hear too much of our teaching, that it was hard to hold them as it is.

Well, the funeral was taken to the Saints' chapel, a very small and inadequate building, which accommodated only half the crowd, but we gave the family the best service we could in sermon, song, flowers, and accommodation. We now see our need for a more commodious building, that God's work may be respected, that we may have a suitable place for funerals, preaching, holiday entertainments, and social affairs. We have been the footstool of our neighbors long enough, coming up through many trials and mean persecutions to a membership of seventy-five.

Our petition for a new church has been approved by the bishopric and district conference, for which we are thankful, and we are working hard to get it completed this summer. We extend an invitation to God's people everywhere to help us, and any contribution to us, large or small, will be very much appreciated.

Brother Scott tarried for several days, preaching to very attentive audiences. He has an excellent vocabulary and makes the gospel so plain that no one need be in doubt. Characteristic of him, his sermons last about one hour and fifteen minutes. A very good spirit prevailed, and attention was so good that at any time one could hear a pin drop. Surely we appreciate having an able man like Brother Scott with us.

District officers G. E. Harrington and Sister Myrtle Perry have met with us of late.

Hibbard Saints are endeavoring to do their bit in putting this end of our district on the map, also seeing that the gospel is presented to every creature. We are sure there will be several baptisms to report ere long. We are ever praying for the success of the work and hoping and trusting that General Conference will be the best ever.

H. C. LISTENBERGER.

West Pullman Branch

Our little branch here has gained considerable notice the past week, due to our troop of Boy Scouts. We are indeed proud of the showing made by our boys in the Greater Calumet District First Aid Championship. This was the greatest and biggest first aid meet in the city, with the exception of the City Championship. Our boys were called the "dark horse" of the competition, as they entered the meet unknown and unheralded, except for the few Saints who had gathered to watch the boys perform, and "root" for them.

In the preliminaries of their section, they took second place by an average of ninety-three, and then entered the "finals," a favorite with a goodly portion of the crowd. In the finals they were forced to meet the very best teams in the district, as well as older teams who have worked together for the past year or so, and in this they were successful in tying for fourth place.

To qualify in such a meet is considered quite an honor, as only nine teams can enter the finals to determine the championship. The remarkable showing of the boys is due to the work of Herbert Cotton, the assistant scoutmaster, who has trained the boys faithfully and well, as the returns show, and much credit is due him.

Over seven hundred people attended the meet, which was the greatest ever held in the annals of scouting in the Greater Calumet District of Chicago. Our troop is under the direction of Charles Scribner, scoutmaster, and Herbert Cotton as assistant. The Saints feel justly proud of their troop, and have reason to believe next year the team will do better, as they were organized only about six weeks ago.

Trying to Become a Branch

Having come from another State, I feel it a great privilege to be living in Amarillo and having the opportunity of working with such a fine group of Saints as I find here. Elder Aldridge is truly a man of God. His sermons are very beneficial and interesting. Many nonmembers are becoming interested through his splendid discourses. Surely Brother Aldridge will be the shepherd by whom many will be led into the fold here.

The Sunday school, under the excellent supervision of Sister A. M. Hogan is doing nicely. Two classes were organized at the first of the year, and the need has been great enough to cause the organization of another since then. An Easter program is already in progress.

The Wednesday night prayer and study hour is proving very helpful. We are studying now, "What we believe concerning the Holy Ghost." We learned last Wednesday that we gain wisdom and knowledge through the Holy Spirit. We were greatly rejoiced when a nonmember asked to read a church history. It is the desire of the Saints in Amarillo to become more acquainted with God's word.

Many other departments will be organized in the event we are recognized at the General Conference. It is to that end we are praying. We are only a small group, but we feel that God will so shape our destiny that in time Amarillo will be a great stronghold. God has always been with us in our strivings forward, and he will not leave us alone now.

Many Saints are moving in who have been workers elsewhere, and so we feel the work in Amarillo will go onward.

RUTH MEEHAN-SELZER.

AMARILLO, TEXAS, March 11.

Persia, Iowa

March 22.—Persia is a quiet place; there is not much going on at present. We are keeping up the meetings, and have a standing notice of the services in the papers of the town. Our church is the largest and first built and has the best location; and our preachers are as good as the best and present the truth from a right-handed standpoint.

I remember some years ago that a traveling man was telling that the last time he was in Persia he went to that church, pointing to the Saints' church across the way. Some one asked how he liked it, and he said all right. I thought that was a good admission.

On our regular sacramental day in March, the emblems of the Lord's supper were administered, the time being well occupied in the usual way, speaking, praying, and singing. We all felt strengthened and decided to continue on the narrow road that leads to life eternal.

We have a Book of Mormon class for our study hour that we think a great deal of; we meet Sunday evenings and devote the time to the Book of Mormon and answer such questions as the lesson may call for. We have had the Book of Mormon study class before, but it is doing better now. Starting last fall our attendance has increased, all taking quite an interest, and I hope as the warmer weather is coming on that we will study more. This book is a wonderful work, containing information about this country and its origin as well as the origin of the Indians and their races.

We have quite a Sunday school. It has been going on for years, having started many years ago. It is still doing well.

Thankful to God for Healing Power Manifested

WOODBINE, IOWA, March 20.—Since last report God's power to heal has come very prominently before the eyes of the people of this community. Our young brother, Archie Deal, underwent a very serious operation eighteen days ago. When the incision was made, a pus case in the worst form was disclosed, the appendix and bowels being gangrened. The surgeon was heard to say before he left the home where the operation took place, that had the appendix not been so easily accessible, he would not have removed it, as conditions were so discouraging for recovery. And the nurse, when the operation was over and she pulled off her rubber gloves, asked the physician, "I'm done, am I not?" But he thought by her staying and doing what she could the parents might be encouraged. "I had no idea he could live but a few hours," she added.

So it is with thankfulness to our heavenly Father that through the uniting of the faith and prayers of his children our brother is so far on the way to recovery that the nurse is leaving today. He has suffered no pain, save slight gas pains, since he was administered to before the operation was performed. We hope we shall not soon forget this wonderful manifestation of God's power, but through service show our appreciation of his blessings.

Sister Julia Fry is also under the hand of affliction, and our hearts go out in supplication to the wise and loving Parent in her behalf, for she is a worthy child.

Brother C. B. Woodstock was with us for one meeting, March 4, and gave us some very good instruction along departmental lines. Our regrets were that he could stay no longer.

A number of our branch are planning on attending General Conference, and others are yearning to do so. But wherever we may be, our prayers can ascend to Him who is at the helm, that his Spirit may rest in power upon the assembled Saints.

Graceland Chats

Women's Intersociety Basketball

The women's basketball season closed last Wednesday, when the Kappa Delta girls won over the Alpha Pi's, 48 to 16, and the Niketes over the Victorians, 25 to 19. The Kappa girls did some fine playing. This gave them first place in women's basket ball. They have been winners in every game in the contest.

The standing of the teams is as follows: Kappa Delta, first, 70 points; Niketes, second, 50 points; Victorian, third, 30 points; Alpha Pi, fourth, 10 points. The present standing of the societies in intramural contests is as follows: Kappa Delta, 279 points; Alpha Pi, 231 points; Niketes, 143 points; Victorian, 131 points.

Annual Freshman "Kid" Fete

The annual kid party for the college freshmen was held March 4. At seven o'clock the little boys, dressed in knee pants or rompers, and wearing bow ties, and the little girls, dressed in aprons, with curls and pigtailed tied up with huge ribbon bows, went to the Coliseum. There they were ushered into the children's section to see the movie, "His people."

After the show they went to Briggs Hall for the party proper. Kid games, such as "Here we go gathering nuts in May," were played enthusiastically. At eleven-thirty lunch was served—sandwiches, nut bread, ice cream cones, all-day suckers, and gingerbread boys. If children really have the fun the freshmen had imitating them, they are to be envied.

Chapel Interest Kept High by Alabam's Talks

Faith McCall and Lucille Garrett, two students from Alabama, spoke on their part of the country at Monday chapel.

Lucille Garrett spoke of the schools of Alabama. She said that the negroes and whites have separate schools and are never put together. She also said that instead of the eight years in the grades, four in high school, and four in college, they have six in the grades, three in junior high, and three in senior high, then three years in college and three for specialization. The schools of the South have improved greatly in the last few years.

Faith McCall told of the resources and crops of Alabama. In the northern part of Alabama, mining is important; in the central part, agriculture; and in the southern part, lumbering. Since cotton is important, she spoke especially of it and told of the damage the boll weevil is doing. She ended with a joke, bringing out the fact that Alabama has improved and is "gettin' thar."

The student body feels better acquainted with Alabama than it did before these splendid talks.

Friday Chapel

Miss Eva Lewers, who is the supervisor of the academy, spoke Friday in chapel on the teaching profession. She said that there is much truth to the statement "Good teachers are born and not made," but that one can develop into a good teacher with constant effort. She asked the students to think of the best teacher they had ever had, and then to think of the poorest, and contrast the two. The difference between these two, she emphasized, is just the presence or lack of certain personality traits. Good judgment, she maintained, is one of the most important; wisdom, or knowledge, is indispensable; and altruism, tact, reliability, and neatness are very essential.

In her profession, Miss Lewers helps place students who wish to teach, and so is in a position to know just what traits are sought in an efficient teacher. Her lecture contained much good advice and knowledge for all prospective teachers.

Yellow Jackets Win Last Game

The Yellow Jackets defeated Trenton 43 to 16 here in the last game of the 1927 season.

They took an early lead and were never in danger. At the end of the first half they were leading 24 to 8. Walden hooked 9 field goals and a free toss and was high-point man for the locals.

The game was poorly played on the part of Trenton. Evidently they came down expecting to play football. Our players can be complimented upon the sportsmanship they displayed in the game.

The players bade good-by to their suits for this season and some of them have worn them for the last time. Captain Braby, Walden, and Briggs will not return next season. This has been a very successful year as far as attendance and interest are concerned. It has been one of the most successful years Graceland has had for a long time, winning ten games and losing seven. Following is the results of the season as they were played:

Athletics Important but Not a Fad at Graceland

For better or for worse, the modern student prefers the college of athletic fame to the college of scholastic renown. It can not be ascertained whether this will prove a stumbling-block to the progress of civilization or a boon to the world. But it is a problem to be solved. It is all too true that some colleges have made a fad out of athletics, while other colleges have remained institutions of higher learning with athletics a secondary factor.

In this respect, Graceland College is the happy medium, where, without harm to scholastic attainments, athletics form a very important part of the campus life. It is a college which excels in athletics and at the same time keeps athletics secondary to scholarship.

Last year Graceland was successful in track and tennis, winning three out of four track meets and three out of six tennis matches. Three records were broken: Weldon threw the javelin 175 feet, 8 inches; Winegar threw the discus 123 feet, 7 inches; he also ran 440 yards in 54 seconds.

This year the football was exceptionally good. Graceland played eight games and lost only one of them, and that one by a close score. Likewise, the basketball season just finished has been successful, with ten victories against seven defeats to the team's credit. The prospect for track this spring is even better than last year.

Besides the intercollegiate, there is an intramural program which makes possible the participation in the different sports of all those who care to engage in them. Also, the various gym classes, with gymnasium open to all, give everyone a chance to keep in physical trim at all times.

Graceland stands for competitive sports in which not only the chosen few on the varsity squads, but everyone, on account of intersociety athletics, can feel the excitement of rivalry, the comradeship of cooperative endeavor, the abandon of effort, the glow of achievement. It is here that sportsmanship, self-control, and moral stamina are inculcated into each participant. Surely, Graceland athletics prepares each individual student to make a greater success of the business of living.

Conference of Utah District

The Utah District Conference was held in Provo, Utah, March 5 and 6. The event was a wonderful surprise, as the opening day had not been looked forward to with very much anticipation of its being more than just an ordinary gathering to elect delegates to General Conference. But to our enjoyment and surprise, President Frederick M. Smith and Bishop Albert Carmichael were present. One can hardly imagine the joy and satisfaction that all felt in hearing and meeting these men. The whole affair was a total surprise and offered a treat that will be long remembered by all who had the privilege of being present.

During the seven sessions of the conference, these men occupied the pulpit most of the time. They gave much food for thought, which was eagerly consumed by the hungry souls that were present. We feel to rejoice for this privilege of hearing these men. We feel that God is looking after this part of his vineyard and recognizes our feeble efforts. The recent conference has renewed our hope and removed some of the clouds of doubt, and in general has revived the work in this district.

We read of the many conferences in the HERALD which seem to be fine, but we believe that our conference rivals them all, if it does not surpass them. Although we are small in numbers, with the help of the Master we hope to do a big work.

NORMAN T. CARTER.

The district conference at Provo was one of the best conferences we have had here. We were a greatly favored people for we had President Frederick M. Smith and Presiding Bishop Albert Carmichael with us, and we heard and learned things from them that will long remain with us, pertaining to the social program of the church, which all the faithful ones know is the most important of the gospel economy.

The service on Sunday, the 6th, of this month was one of the most spiritual we ever attended. In the sacramental service, tears of joy were shed by the priesthood and lay members. We must not forget to mention the dear sisters who worked so hard, yet with so much love, to serve all with the many good things to eat. After the evening service, a collection was taken to defray the expenses of the conference, and all the Saints had a chance to do their part. They did it well.

W. P. Creviston was ordained to the office of elder, Brother F. M. Smith being spokesman. An infant was blessed. It was voted that our next conference be held at Ogden sometime this fall.

The Salt Lake Branch has a very bright future before it, with Brother W. P. Creviston as its local elder. He says he is completely sold to the social program of the church. He is not only teaching this most holy order, but is himself putting it into practice. Oh, would to God that we had many more Crevistons in the church, and we would very soon see the stewardship plan surmount all obstacles! All the Saints are going to be visited in their homes and the social program taught them.

Last night the writer and Brother Creviston visited a family of Saints who needed light on this subject, and we talked to them till a few minutes before the hour of midnight; we greatly enjoyed and profited by this visit, leaving them with their hearts filled with saintly love, felt only when the Spirit of God is with us in power, for the Spirit was there. How much the priesthood accomplish when they visit the Saints in their homes! It requires a sacrifice on the part of the members of the priesthood to do their duties, but, dear brethren, is it not worth it? All must sacrifice in the Master's cause if we would see it succeed.

We hope that Brother C. H. Rich will return after General Conference, for he is the man for this field.

The tithing in this branch has doubled during the last year. This is a good sign that the Saints are coming up higher in spirituality, which fact is also proved by the spiritual prayer services we enjoy most every Wednesday evening. Most of our young people are attending these services and are energetic workers in Religion and other church services. May God bless them in their noble efforts to help in the great work of the Lord.

We now have a baptismal font in our church building, and we have several who are ready for the watery grave, both adults and children. This branch is far from standing still. Yes, our prospects are very bright.

C. O. PETERSON.

Madison, Wisconsin

March 4.—The young people of the branch gathered at the home of Brother and Sister H. W. Woodstock to surprise their son Willard, and to remind him that he was entering in on his twenty-first year of life. Games were played, refreshments served, and before they departed for their homes they presented Willard with a token of remembrance.

Sacramental service was very well attended. Brother Lester Wildermuth, who drove into the city on Saturday, worshiped with us. In the evening he preached, using for a text, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." (Doctrine and Covenants 65.) Some of the thoughts expressed were: The radio is a means of spreading the gospel. We are to prepare the supper of the Lamb. The early church did try to gather, but the scattering was a means of spreading the gospel. We are living in the day of gathering. Many men of learning are working for the gathering of the people. Means of transportation and communication are all in operation to assist in the gathering. The promise of the Lord is to bless us here; perhaps not as we think we should have, but as we need. The young are admonished to remember the Lord and observe the requirements of the gospel, that they may receive blessings. As illustrative of his subject, he used 1 Kings 17, where we read of the woman who had only a little bit of oil and meal, and yet having faith baked first the cake for the prophet of the Lord, and by so doing was blessed with enough oil and meal to last several days.

His topic led up to a discussion of stewardships, and he stated that the church is now ready for stewardships. It took Enoch three hundred and sixty-five years to get a people ready for Zion, but the church today has been at it less than one hundred years, and wonderful progress has been made. The Lord wishes to provide for his children, but we all have to do our part. We must make the start by laying our account before the bishop of the church. He put much stress upon the filing of inventories and paying tithing.

Teachers' and officers' meeting of the Sunday school was held Wednesday evening before the prayer service, February 13.

Brother Charles Clark and family, with Sister Leonard Houghton, attended the all-day meeting at Beloit. Brother Clark preached in the afternoon. Brother Henry Woodstock was the speaker here both morning and evening. In the morning his subject was "Our need of God"; in the evening, "Lord, what wilt thou have me do." We must heed the instructions of God, and he will lead us on and open the way for service. This you must do: accept my law and go on to perfection.

On Monday District President E. J. Lenox came to instruct us more fully on the financial law. He illustrated with drawings on the blackboard. For three nights he held classes. We were sorry he had to leave so soon. The first night was, "Foundation upon which the gospel is builded, and Zion"; second night, "Bring treasures up to Zion," which included a discussion of purchasing lands and laying all things before the bishop in Zion, the gathering. On the third night we learned of the organization necessary, how we shall gather, who is to come up to Zion; tithing, how to pay it; the how and why of filing inventories. He passed inventory blanks to his audience and on the blackboard showed how to fill them out. His closing remarks were, Christ lived the gospel law, and set an example for his priesthood to live it until the Word is made flesh through them and the Christ life demonstrated in their lives. During the day he visited at the homes and helped the young as well as the old make out their inventories. His classes created a greater enthusiasm among the Saints to comply with the financial law. Many filed their inventories while he was here. Especially was this so among the young.

As I sit here writing, I received my March number of Autumn Leaves, and looking through it notice another goal has been reached: one thousand young people between the ages of eight and twenty-five have complied with the request of the bishop and filed their inventories. It causes my heart to beat with joy when I think of it; another step Zionward.

On Thursday night Alethia Clark was rushed to the hospital, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis. She called for the elders to administer to her before she let them operate, and she received a wonderful blessing and got along remarkably well. On the evening of the tenth day she was at church.

Brother Woodstock was the speaker on Sunday morning, his text being, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we may be called the sons of God." Some thoughts gleaned were: God has given us use of all things he created; we can use what he puts into our hands in such a way that we can be rich or that we can be beggars in the world to come. If we wisely use those things intrusted to our care, we will develop a spirit of usefulness. Until we begin to show some of the love for others which God shows for us, we will not be reflecting God in us.

In the evening Brother Clark was the speaker. He told of the persecutions the church had undergone in different ages, also people's prejudices. Many times people are prejudiced because their sins are brought to light. It is too hard to change; they would rather remain in their sins. The saying is, It takes all classes of men to make a world. Brother Clark says this is not true; God wants one class of people, a religious class. The church wants candid men, humble men, those who desire to know and do, those who forgive one another and are seekers of truth. If men practice what they do know, God will teach them what they do not know.

On February 22 the women's meeting was held at the home of Brother and Sister Carl Wirth, with Sister Brigham as president; Leah Miller, secretary; Leda Colbert, financial secretary. The Department of Women is desirous of reaching a higher standard of cooperation along with the program of the church, recognizing that the Department of Women is a part of the branch, and the members have resolved that they shall recognize the financial agent of the branch as the proper officer to handle their funds. So, instead of having a treasurer, they have only a financial secretary. Sister Carl Wirth was elected superintendent of the young women's department. At this meeting the sisters decided to proceed with the study of Doctrine and Covenants, with Leda Colbert as teacher. A food sale was arranged for, to be held March 2 at Wingra Park Cleaners, owned and operated by Brother and Sister Wirth. This sale was held as arranged, and proceeds amounted to more than twenty-six dollars.

On the evening of February 27 a musical program given by the Department of Recreation and Expression was enjoyed by all. The opening song was sung by a chorus of those who were taking part and was entitled "Building, daily building."

This entertainment consisted of vocal solos, duets, trios, quartets, violin solos with organ accompaniment; violin and flute duet, organ accompanying; also orchestral music. It was very good, and a large crowd was present to hear it. We have much musical talent in the branch, particularly among the young.

Ohio Saints in Successful Rally

Brother A. E. Barstow, publicity agent for Painesville, Ohio, writes to the HERALD, March 21: "I am sending a bit of news of which we are proud. This group is not quite a year old, and in starting we are progressing. Unity is doing it all. We are like one large family. 'Love for one another' is our motto, and God is our helper. Inclosed is a clipping from our city paper":

Church Rally Day a Success; Excellent Program Is Given

March 13.—Rally Day of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was a splendid success when observed Sunday at the Madison Avenue Schoolhouse. Visitors from Euclid, Willoughby, Kirtland, Geneva, and Painesville filled the school building. The following program was given:

Regular Sunday school services with Superintendent Robert Flack and Assistant Superintendent Thomas Freeman in charge.

A short talk on teaching by Mrs. A. E. Barstow.

Prayer by Brother Bishop.

Church services at 11.15 a. m. were conducted by Brother Albert Wouters.

Prayer by Brother Thomas.

Duet by the Misses Davies and Wilson accompanied by Mrs. Mable Freeman.

Sermon by Brother Stone; text, "Whatever ye do, do it well."

A bounteous dinner was served by the ladies of the Painesville group to over one hundred persons.

Following the dinner, a few musical selections were rendered by the Kirtland Temple Orchestra. A solo was given by Mrs. Thomas, accompanied by Mrs. Flack; a talk by Brother Fry.

Piano duet by Mesdames Metcalf and Ebeling.

The program closed with a round table talk and a prayer by Brother A. Wouters.

The Latter Day Saints extend their hearty thanks and appreciation to all who helped to make this event a success.

The Spirit of Infidelity

Those who are critical observers of conditions today will not fail to note the rapid spread of materialism. Professors in our high schools, colleges, and theological seminaries are teaching infidelity, agnosticism, and even atheism. In conversation lately with a young man who is a professor and teaches in a high school, we asked how he could harmonize the statement, "God made man in his own image and in his own likeness" with the minute one-cell organism theory. He asked abruptly, How do you know that one cell organism is not God? We call that a plain case of infidelity. Think of a God of such magnitude being the creator of mankind! Surely that would be evolution of some magnitude!

Fathers and mothers, do you think of these conditions when you send your son or daughter to college or high school? Have you neglected to give them the necessary education about God, his being and attributes? Have you taught them that there is a God in heaven that does hear and answer prayer? that he has and does reveal himself to those who humbly, faithfully, and diligently seek him? Do we as Saints realize Satan is appearing among men today in many new disguises? He has appeared before the ministry, right in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in some instances with a bribe in his hand to buy the preacher, so that he could the more easily catch the members. We were present at a Campbellite or Christian Church where one of those deceiving stunts was enacted, and we were given to discern it to be an evil power that possessed those men.

Dear Saints, let us seek earnestly to keep ourselves free from the evil that abounds on every side. May we Come up higher, come up higher,

If ye would my will obey;
Rise above the worldly mire
That surrounds you day by day.
Thus you may obtain my Spirit
To be with you, on your way
From this life to that eternal
At the dawn of endless day.

I ever pray for the welfare and unity and faithfulness of God's children, and that those who are feeders of the flock may be led by the Spirit of the heavenly Father.

C. C. RANDALL.

COLUMBUS, KANSAS.

Alliance, Ohio

March 20.—We are glad to report that to the best of our knowledge peace and harmony prevail among all our members. The winter has been very hard on some of the brothers because of the lack of employment, and of course the branch is made to feel this condition also, which makes us see all the more clearly the need for the establishment of Zion.

The departments are more active, we believe, than ever before in our history. The Sunday school is perhaps the best attended. Some of the children have been heard to say "that Sunday school was not half long enough," which we think speaks well of our school. Brother Alba Smith is our superintendent, with Brother Robert Dawson as assistant. Brother Alba has started an orchestra which makes itself heard every Sunday morning and at Religio in the evening. There are three violins, a slide trombone, and a piano. A small beginning perhaps, but all things have to have their beginning, and some have seemingly been very insignificant, this church for instance, but we never doubt its final glory and triumph. So with faith and enthusiasm we hope to accomplish our goal—a full-fledged orchestra.

The Department of Relief and Service meets every two weeks under the leadership of Sister Celia Smith with Sister McClincy as her assistant. Our efforts have been directed mainly towards raising funds to assist the branch, although we have tried to be of service wherever our services are needed. In the past year we have raised about one hundred dollars in bake sales and selling jello. Besides this, we have enjoyed our social times together, believing good has been accomplished.

We have a child welfare department, which meets once every month. Sister Harry Green, of Canton, is head of this department, and Sister Marie Smith assists her. At our last meeting, Sister Smith had charge and gave a splendid talk on "Teaching the child to pray." She was greatly blessed, and we rejoice at the material God is raising in our own branch.

From all reports, the Ahmo Circle of the Oriole girls is busy and happy. In the way of work they are working blocks for a Colonial history quilt. They meet every two weeks at the homes of the members. We hear they serve some very appetizing luncheons, trying out the things some of them are learning in their domestic science classes at high school. They have a membership of nine and are a fine group of girls. The branch is proud of them.

We had no services February 28. Our pastor with others attended the district conference at Barberton. They reported a fine attendance and a good time.

Saturday, March 12, several of the Saints from here went to Kirtland to attend the funeral of Brother Robert Miller, of Cleveland. We were saddened by his death, for we had learned to know and love him by our association together at the reunions, where it seemed he was always busy serving others, yet cheerful at all times. We shall miss him greatly.

Brother J. C. McConnaughy, of Barberton, was a visitor here March 17. The only fault we could find was that he did not stay long enough. We expect him to do better next time.

Sister Pearl Shank and children, of Freedom, Pennsylvania, paid us a visit Sunday, March 13. Here is where Sister Shank first heard the gospel, so her testimony and steadfastness to the truth are always a source of encouragement to us.

Evangelist Bullard at Springfield and Nevada

NEVADA, MISSOURI, March 22.—I came here from Springfield Thursday last, the 17th, and will occupy here till after Sunday next, the 27th, nothing preventing.

I found in Springfield a warm-hearted and appreciative body of Saints, and was received with kindness and manifest interest throughout my stay of three weeks less two days.

Their pastor, Brother Ansley, gave me the right hand of fellowship at the start, and it was no less extended when he came to the depot to see me off for this town or city. I can not easily forget the saintly way in which I was introduced to his flock, as it was my initial visit. In presenting me to them, he asked the audience to rise and engage in a few moments of silent prayer that my work among them might be blessed of the Lord, he following with an earnest appeal for blessing. It fell as a benediction upon my heart, as I have not been used to that kind of introduction everywhere I have labored of late. But the prayer was heard, and we all were blessed throughout my meetings, and I received a pressing invitation to return as soon as possible.

The Department of Women kindly presented me with money to purchase a new Bible, as mine shows evidence of rough usage. This also was part of the kindness extended to me.

There was to be a Saint Patrick social the night I left, given by the young people of the church (no comment here on this Saint Patrick affair), but perhaps the most pleasing feature of my visit was when one of the young ladies came to me and said, "Brother Bullard, if you will stay and preach for us tonight, we will not have our social." That surely found a soft place in my heart, and gladly would I have stayed with them longer, but not for the purpose of depriving them of a social time of an innocent character. I had made arrangements to occupy here on that night, so left with a light heart because of the good that the Lord had done through this weak instrument.

My mail this morning was not of the kind to bring the sunshine to the heart, as a letter from my niece living in the garden city at Letchworth, England, informed me my younger brother, Tom, has passed away, leaving a widow and family to mourn. Also that the son of another brother, a fine young business man, was taken with flu and died in two days, causing quite a shock to the family. He had served in the air corps all through the World War and suffered the terrible hardships incident to that struggle. Still another item, my widowed sister and her daughter were taken down with the same disease and lie prostrate. Then followed the news that my eldest son's family were quarantined with smallpox, his little girl being taken with it; and there being a family of six children, it has caused that feeling of fear that usually accompanies that dread disease. May the Lord reach out his mighty arm and stay any further spread of the affliction in the family.

The servant of God can not dwell long beneath the cypress, but trust in His almighty power and rise to duty and exercise the faith that will win in the end. May we all be equal to the test now upon us and show by kindness and love the brotherhood of man, and thus prove our worthiness to share the blessing of the companionship of the Holy Spirit and the fatherhood of God.

RICHARD BULLARD.

Fall River, Massachusetts

March 21.—Something of interest took place here March 14. Sister Hattie Howlett and Brother Thomas McGuire were quietly married by the pastor, Elder James W. Heap. Sister Beatrice and Brother Everett York, of Boston, were the attendants. Brother and Sister McGuire have the best wishes of all for a long and happy life together.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Henderson, of Washington, District of Columbia, on their honeymoon, were recently entertained by Brother and Sister William Baldwin. Mrs. Henderson was formerly Lillian Wilkinson, eldest daughter of Sister Bertha and Brother Thomas Wilkinson. They moved from Fall River about ten years ago. The bride is Sister Baldwin's niece.

Pastor James W. Heap and the Rogerson family attended the conference at Boston, March 13. In the absence of the pastor, Alma M. Coombs, priest, preached at both services, assisted in the morning by William Baldwin, teacher, and in the evening by John Henderson, deacon.

March 20 the morning speaker was the pastor, and in the evening Elder John E. Rogerson occupied the pulpit. Both sermons were encouraging and instructive. Elder Rogerson especially urged the young men to study and be desirous of helping the church to come up higher. A number of young men attend church regularly. But many come to Sunday school and not to church.

Raymond Bradshaw, of Attleboro, is expected here March 27.

The New Bedford Saints held a Saint Patrick's Day party March 17, at the home of Sister Lottie Burdett. About ten went over from Fall River. Until recently Sister Burdett was a Fall River member, a Sunday-school teacher, and head of the Department of Women. We also miss her son-in-law, Joseph Cliff, in his solo work. We trust they are now active in New Bedford.

Sister Jeannette Heap, wife of the pastor, is ill. Brother Rogerson administered to her again yesterday. She is under the care of Brother Milton Gilbert, M. D., and Doctor Ryder, an ear and nose specialist. Many pray for her quick and complete recovery.

The new church envelopes are here, and Treasurer John C. Henderson urges all to do their duty and secure a pack.

The date for the minstrels has been set for the end of April.

In reading Brother F. M. Smith's article on church decorum, the writer is reminded that other branches may find Fall River's way helpful. Fifteen minutes before the appointed hour, Margaret Chesworth, chorister, commences the song service. As fast as the members arrive they join in the singing. They are given an opportunity to choose their favorite selections.

Central Los Angeles Branch

The Southern California Saints who met in Los Angeles February 18, 19, and 20 enjoyed a peaceful and profitable conference. The attendance of the conference was good, and a friendly interest was shown by all present. The district president, N. T. Chapman, and Apostles James A. Gillen and Myron A. McConley were asked to preside over the conference. The ladies were not asked, but voluntarily presided over the church kitchen, which kindness we feel certain contributed largely to the good humor of the Saints.

On Friday evening the priesthood met at a banquet, where Brother Elbert A. Smith gave a most meaningful address. The young people's oratorical contest showed notable achievement and worth-while effort. Most of the branches in the Southern California District were represented in the contest, and when time for another conference rolls round we hope each branch will be prepared to participate. The subjects chosen pertained chiefly to proper development and service in the church. Sister Evelyn Parks, of Santa Ana, won first place in the contest.

The chief issues of the business meeting pertained to the reunion grounds at Hermosa Beach and ordinations. Arrangements were made to take care of the debt of the reunion grounds, and the question of holding a reunion was left to the reunion committee. The ordinations were provided for and took place Sunday afternoon, at which time Brother Elbert A. Smith made a very impressive talk just preceding the ordinations proper. He spoke very clearly and forcefully of the privileges, responsibilities, and trust of all ordained men. Those ordained were George Givens, of Ontario, to the office of elder; Frank Anthony, San Bernardino, priest; Wilfred Burton, Santa Ana, priest; Harry Sacry, Long Beach, teacher; and Brother Thorson, East Los Angeles, priest.

The prayer services on both Saturday and Sunday were well attended, as was the priesthood meeting which met Sunday morning, where Bishop Carmichael gave a rousing talk.

Following the conference Brother Elbert A. Smith remained with us, and each evening gave us an instructive and uplifting sermon. With the aid of slides and mimeographed outlines of the sermons, the lessons were unusually clear.

On Tuesday, March 8, Doctor Ray Hastings, organist at the Philharmonic, gave a recital, assisted by Mildred Collinge, pianist, and Cornelia Glover, soloist. The program was a treat to lovers of music, and the Saints feel both grateful and honored to have so noted an organist favor us with a recital.

Sunday, March 13, a number of the Saints went to the opening of the new building of the East Los Angeles Branch. A free-for-all basket dinner was served, and a splendid program was rendered. Hospitality, good fellowship, and service were the keynotes of a successful day.

Alexander, Kansas

Those in attendance at our services the past two Sundays listened to Brother John Teeters on stewardships. He proved, under this subject, beyond a doubt that God requires us to pay our debt to him, tithes, surplus, etc.

Brother Charles Womeldorf, of Lincoln, Nebraska, is among us again happy in the church work. We are glad to know that although he stands alone in this work, in regard to relatives, he has not gone back into the world.

Our church building has had some new paint, applied by Brother Pete Boese, which adds very much to the appearance on the outside.

Sister Madge Kueffer, of Independence, Missouri, is here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Newcomer. Yesterday, the 22d of March, the city of Alexander and other friends helped to celebrate the golden wedding of this good couple. About two hundred friends and relatives called and congratulated them. Light refreshments were served, and everyone had a fine time. Their nine living children were in attendance. Sister Madge will leave in a few days for her home in Independence. Brother and Sister John Teeters attended the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Newcomer.

We close with a prayer to God to bless our coming General Conference. We still have faith in the dear old organization that came forth in 1830, and in her strong men, with the Presidency at the head. May God bless and comfort all is our prayer.

The Eros, Louisiana, Branch is still on the map, with all meetings held according to schedule. We have Sunday school and preaching each Sunday, also midweek prayer services. Attendance at the services is good, and the work is being carried on by the two priests and a teacher. Brother J. T. Riley has just closed a week's meetings here, baptizing two people March 20, both adults. We are sure they will be an aid to the church at this place. This is a good place to live, and the land is cheap, considering its quality. If any scattered Saints wish to locate in a branch in this part, please write J. E. Phillips, Eros, Louisiana, Route 3.

Holden Stake

Holden

Elder Amos E. Allen and W. K. Gard were with us recently, Brother Allen occupying the morning hour in a very interesting talk to the children. Elder R. D. Weaver stopped over en route to other points in the stake and spoke in the Home Chapel to the pleasure and edification of the Home family.

The Theodosias, an organization of the young people, are quite busy now. With the relief and service department, they served meals at a sale, netting $30. They are now completing a play which will be given at two or three nearby points, proceeds to apply on development work in the group. They were delightfully entertained recently at the home of Brother and Sister Albert Ament.

The Saints here are pleased to have as residents the family of Elder W. S. Macrae, who moved recently from Warrensburg. They were guests at a reception tendered them at the church on the evening of the 8th of March. A goodly number of Saints and other citizens were present, including three pastors and the editor of the Holden Enterprise. Short talks were made, interspersed with musical selections, following which refreshments were served. The church was appropriately decorated.

Brother Osie Clark and family, of Lees Summit; Brother Groenemer and family of Hartsburg, Missouri, Holgar Schwenson, of Chilhowee; Brother and Sister James A. Daugherty, of Post Oak, Missouri; Floyd Owens, of Salisbury; and Brother Edward Curtis, of Richmond, Missouri, have located at Holden.

The following have come to take up their abode in the Holden Home family: Sisters Augusta Otto, Marie Winter, Catherine Johnson, Cynthia Savage, Mary D. Christensen; Brethren Philip Rogers, William Williams, Frederick Edworthy.

The stake conference held at Lees Summit, in point of interest and attendance, was one of the best in the Holden Stake. A meeting of the priesthood Friday evening was addressed by Bishop Koehler, on the development of stewardships in the stake.

At 7.30 p. m. a round table on the same topic was conducted by J. A. Koehler and J. A. Becker. Activity in this service indicated a growing interest in this important field. At 8.30 p. m. E. A. Curtis, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, took charge, and a very instructive program was presented. Those contributing were Amos E. Allen, Freelin Hampton, Eva Scarcliff, Dixie and Lois Spohrer, the girls' quartet, of Lexington, of Holden, and a male quartet from Holden. Saturday was devoted to business, with C. F. Ellis and the stake presidency in charge. The evening program was under the auspices of the Department of Women and was much appreciated. The prayer and preaching services were spiritual and uplifting. Elder C. F. Ellis occupied as speaker at both services Sunday.

The Walnut Park Orchestra gave a concert Sunday at 3 p. m., which was well received. At the afternoon service Saturday, Lloyd Harding and Charles Mengel were ordained priests and James Oliver deacon.

Conference adjourned to meet at Holden, Missouri, the last Saturday and Sunday of the reunion. Arrangements were also made for a young people's convention at Holden June 17 to 19. The Methodist Church gave the use of their commodious kitchen and dining room, where splendid meals were served.

Buckner

We are glad to report that those of our members who have been absent from services on account of sickness are able to be out again, and we feel that things are moving along nicely again.

Brother F. A. Smith was with us recently and gave us some good instruction and advice. Considering all factors in our community, we are making some progress.

Marshall

Several of our branch attended the stake conference at Lees Summit, and those who were privileged to attend returned much encouraged in the work and strengthened spiritually.

Brother and Sister House and son, of Houstonia, were very welcome at our social service Sunday, March 13. Brother House spoke for us Sunday evening, which was encouraging to Saints and nonmembers.

Sister Lillian Thayer McDounny visited her parents here Sunday and attended church at night.

Our Religio, under the leadership of Sister Lois Spohrer, is growing and causing a deeper interest among the young people.

Brother Ralph Ridge left for his work in Moniteau County Friday evening.

Donald Whiting, son of our former pastor, Brother Birch Whiting, has come to be one of our number. We gladly welcome him in our group.

Brother E. A. Curtis, of Odessa, paid us a visit which was very much appreciated. Our young Saints here are much pleased to have Brother Curtis visit us.

There was a pie supper in the basement of the church Valentine's night, which was a very happy occasion. It was sponsored by the members of the senior choir.

We are very glad to announce that we now have an organization of the Department of Women.

The group enjoyed a pie social at the home of Pastor T. L. McCormick Thursday evening, March 17. Each guest wore an emblem of Saint Patrick. There were about fifty guests. The social was given by the Department of Women, and a nice sum was realized.

Brother J. A. Koehler was with us Sunday, March 20, his theme being stewardship. He was the speaker at both services. He is to be commended for his work in our stake. We love him, for he is earnestly seeking the good of mankind. We must be laborers together to accomplish the things God has said must be done.

Bates City

Bates City group enjoyed a good sermon by Brother Roberts, of Independence, today. Our services are so few and far between that it is quite a treat to have some one to talk to us. We are planning on fixing our church building. The stake conference gave us a nice sum to help. We have nearly $200 promised from our own group, so think we can depend on at least $500, which will make quite a different-looking place in which to hold our meetings, and it may help inspire us to want to do more and better work, and maybe we can hold some meetings sometime this summer.

Warrensburg

Brother J. A. Koehler gave us a good talk on stewardships recently. The five principal steps in order to become a steward are to pay tithing, make offerings, give consecrations and surplus, and file our inventories. If all were complying with these things, it would not be long until Zion's conditions would begin to be realized. Each one would begin to cease to work for his own aggrandizement and have the welfare of the group at heart. There would soon be no poor among us, and joy would be our lot.

Brother John T. Nutt, of Knobnoster, gave us a splendid discourse at the eleven o'clock service on March 13. Brother Nutt is doing what he can to promote the program outlined for the church's advancement.

Several from Warrensburg attended the stake conference at Lees Summit. This was, indeed, a spiritual feast; and all went away feeling much encouraged and strengthened.

This was the largest conference that has ever been held in the stake.

The church was full by time to open the eight o'clock prayer service, which is an indication of the interest the Saints are manifesting in the work of the church.

The next stake conference will be held at Holden on the last Saturday and Sunday of the reunion in July.

Probably before more items from this place are written, the General Conference will be a matter of history. We are now looking forward to a wonderful outpouring of God's Spirit there, and feel that the following conference year will see rapid strides forward. May we all humbly pray; yes, and fast, that God's work may move forward very rapidly.

Knobnoster

Elder R. D. Weaver paid us a visit recently and delivered seven splendid discourses during his short stay with us. His simplicity of expression, coupled with his humility and the force and logic which characterized his sermons, brought conviction to the honest in heart, and as a result considerable encouragement and strength were imparted.

Since last report one of our workers, Sister Hattie Enfield, with her family, has moved to Kansas City. Sister Daisy Brewster, of Jefferson City, is visiting the home of her father, Brother Allen Bugbee.

Sunday, the 13th, our pastor, John T. Nutt, occupied the pulpit at Warrensburg at the 11 o'clock hour. On the 20th the Warrensburg pastor, Elder G. W. Hancock, returned the visit and preached an interesting discourse on fasting.

A vacancy in the office of Sunday school superintendent, occasioned by the removal of Brother M. R. Shedd, was filled at a recent business meeting, Brother Burgess being unanimously elected. We are glad to report the return to our branch of Brother and Sister Ellsworth Moorman, who have spent the past year at Independence. Sister Moorman has been chosen assistant superintendent of Religio.

Atherton

The Atherton Branch is growing. Three new families have moved in, Hansen's Baughman's, and Pierson's.

We are pleased with our young people's prayer meetings held each Sunday morning. Brother Lloyd Bogue is faithfully working with them.

Our Religio has grown until it is nearing our Sunday school attendance. The superintendent of Religio is Brother J. A. Thompson, with Ira Curtis as assistant. Religio services are held on Sunday evening at 6.15.

March 6 Brother Rausmussen was the speaker, and all enjoyed his sermon. March 13 Brother William Ware was the speaker at the morning hour and Brother Joshua Fay in the evening.

March 20 Bishop J. A. Becker was the morning speaker. He preached on the foundation of stewardships, that of a life characterized with love. In the evening Brother J. A. Holsworth was the speaker with the usual interest.

Grandview

February 13 Bishop J. A. Koehler and wife were with us. Brother Koehler occupied both morning and evening. He also contributed two beautiful solos, which were enjoyed by the audience. At the noon hour, lunch was served in the basement, followed by a few hours of visiting while Brother Koehler assisted a number of the Saints in filing their inventories.

At three o'clock Sister Koehler addressed the sisters concerning the problems of the Department of Women. At 6.30 p. m. Sister Koehler conducted a junior church service for the young people. Enough can not be said in praise of this service. The interest aroused and expressed shows that Sister Koehler is well qualified for this line of work.

A number of the Saints attended the Holden stake conference at Lees Summit. This was the largest and one of the best conferences ever held in the stake. The petition voiced by Brother Amos Allen in the closing prayer of conference, that the spirit which had characterized the services might be carried home by the Saints present, and in telling those who had remained at home of the good things they had heard they might also receive of that spirit, was truly answered. On Sunday evening of the conference, when those who had attended gave their report, many testified they did receive of that good Spirit spoken of.

Sunday morning, March 13, we enjoyed an unusually good sacramental service, with a comforting, peaceful influence present.

In the evening, at 6.30, Sister George Gould, of Independence, conducted a junior church service. This meeting was profitable for both the old and young.

Work in Western Kansas

DODGE CITY, KANSAS, March 19.—We have never written your valuable columns about the Lord's work in this western part of the district; so thought a few lines might be of interest.

In September, about the 6th, we arrived in Dodge City, and at the same time came our district missionary, Elder H. V. Minton, looking around to arrange for some meetings. We found several families of Saints; a building was rented, and Brother Minton started preaching. On September 12 he organized a Sunday school, with Elder J. N. Madden in charge of the group, and Sister J. N. Madden Sunday school superintendent; there was an enrollment of nineteen in the school. Brother Minton continued preaching for two weeks and baptized seven, three of them being heads of families who are making good helpers in the work, and four young people. The preaching and prayer meeting were a great feast to hungry souls. The first prayer and confirmation meeting, having the Spirit present in great power, was long to be remembered as a season of the administration of God's goodness to his children. This was the first meeting here in some time. Elder J. N. Madden is out on the road traveling most of the time, but meets with us about twice a month and preaches. We enjoy hearing him and would be glad if he could be here more frequently.

On January 22 and 23 we had a sub-conference. With us were District President E. L. Barraclough, Elder Charles T. Pooler, and Bishop J. A. Becker, from Independence. Brother Becker's sermons and talks on stewardship were greatly helpful and proved to be just what we needed, for we now better understand the law of God and have a deeper appreciation of the work and of God's love for his erring children. Elder Barraclough's and Brother Pooler's sermons also were appreciated by all. At that time we had with us isolated Saints from Copeland, Plains, Ford, and Fort Dodge. Some of these had not heard a sermon nor attended a sacramental service in years, but it was encouraging to hear them stand and bear their testimony to the goodness of God to them in these lonely years, and of their deep and abiding faith in the Lord and his work. The Lord wonderfully blessed us with an outpouring of his Holy Spirit and humility of heart, and all were made to rejoice.

Elder H. V. Minton was here again and has just closed a short series of meetings and lectures on his stereopticon views which were very interesting to all who could attend. Brother Minton's sermons were excellent, and the Good Spirit was with him throughout the meeting, and while the congregation was small due to much sickness, we feel his efforts were a blessing to all who were there. Brother Minton is a humble servant of the Lord, one loved and respected by all who know him.

On March 14 the Saints gave him a farewell party at the home of Brother and Sister J. C. Golden. A short program was rendered by several members of the local, and delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. Then we listened to a very encouraging and comforting talk and farewell address by Brother Minton. His words were full of good counsel and wisdom. We felt loath to part with him, but duty called him to other parts of the district, and from thence he goes to General Conference. All are hoping and praying that it may be the will of the Lord to send him back to this district, for we know he has done a great and good work here, and although we are few in number we feel we are slowly and surely gaining ground.

Independence

Stone Church

Following the opening song of the Sunday school session, Elder J. E. Kelsey briefly called the attention of the students assembled in the main auditorium to the immensity of the universe, the millions of stars in the Milky Way, which scientists have discovered are suns, each with its own solar system. But he assured his hearers God is not only a God of the big things, but also of the little things. With infinite wisdom he has created the universe and everything in it, and is Ruler over all. Should we not approach his presence with reverence and gratitude?

A selection from Il Trovatore was rendered as a trombone solo by Brother Leon Snow, a new member of the Stone Church Orchestra. He was accompanied by Mrs. Stewart Tandberg.

Brothers Walter Betts, Harry Barto, and Ralph Luttrell, with their Sunday school classes of young men, attended a lecture given at the Christian Church, Sunday morning during the Sunday school hour. The lecture was of such a nature as to encourage and profit them much, being given by J. R. Batchelor, field secretary of the National Playground and Recreational Association, of "Teamwork of the Nation."

Sung by the congregation, the hymn, "Thine holy day's returning," opened the eleven o'clock service. Prayer was offered by Missionary Evan A. Davis, and the offertory was an adagio movement from "The moonlight sonata," by Beethoven. In memory of one of the world's greatest composers, Beethoven, who died one hundred years ago March 26, the Stone Church Choir, under the direction of Paul N. Craig, sang the "Hallelujah chorus." Accompanists were Robert Miller at the organ, and George Miller at the piano.

"Son, go to work today in the vineyard of the Lord," was the text upon which Bishop J. A. Koehler based his discourse of the hour. With the assertion that in order to do the work God has given us to perform a certain amount of talking is necessary, but beyond that the earnest Saint and worth-while man sets about his task with a determination to serve and sacrifice. "A man has to be a worker to qualify for membership in the church of Christ," he declared, and plunged into an energetic discussion of the necessity of all Saints' being actively engaged in the work of the Lord. In the game of life and work of Christ, there is no room for the lukewarm person; it is essential that all be humble, full of love, faithful, cheerful, prayerful, not given to fussing and faultfinding. If we possess the Christian attributes, God will use us. In 1833 the Lord spoke these words to Joseph Smith: "If Zion will not purify herself so as to be approved in all things, I will seek another people to do this work." Some of the influences active in keeping people from doing what God would have them do are: Ambition for private gain; personal influence of those who have spent the best part of their lives forwarding the cause of the church, but who, because of some circumstances, have had their ardor dampened; the tendency to talk when we should be at work. The work of the church may not move as rapidly toward perfection as we think it should, but like our fathers and many who have gone before, we must show that we too are made of kingdom of heaven stuff, and work to bring about the fulfillment of God's law, Zion, and stewardships. The task is great. Are we ready? How many are hearing the command, "Son, go to work today in the vineyard of the Lord."

Brother H. O. Smith was the speaker to the juniors at the Campus Sunday morning. His audience thoroughly enjoyed his review of the story of "The other wise man," and the lesson it contains. The attention given to the message was all that could be desired, as the children seem eager to receive the talks from these veterans of the gospel.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At half past eight Sunday morning, the Bible study hour was conducted by Elder Ralph W. Farrell, and music was arranged by Miss Vera Redfield. The children's story was told by Mr. Troy Rowlett. The eleven o'clock preaching service also was broadcast.

K L D S radio church service at three in the afternoon was conducted by Reverend George D. Witthaus, of the Methodist Church of Pleasant Hill, Missouri. Music was by Pleasant Hill artists.

At half past six, the vesper hour, music was by the K L D S Ladies' Quartet, composed of Mary Fields, Mrs. Clara Curtis, Mrs. Frank Goode, and Gladys Goode; Bishop J. A. Koehler, tenor; Mrs. Clara Curtis, pianist. Sermonet was by Elder U. W. Greene.

The Latter Day Saints studio service at fifteen minutes past nine closed the day's radio activity. Music was by Robert Miller, organist; Mrs. John Watkins, soprano; Miss Elizabeth Okerlind, contralto. There was also a double quartet, and the K L D S Ladies' Quartet sang two numbers. Sermonet was by Apostle E. J. Gleazer.

Evening Services

Sunday evening there was no regular Religio study period. Instead, the contest between the ladies' quartets of Enoch Hill and the Stone Church was held. Those representing Enoch Hill were Miss Margie Thomas, Miss Louise McDonald, Miss Vera Cox, and Miss Veria Alexander. They were accompanied by Miss Lula Whitsitt. Miss Thelma Vincent, Mrs. Jeanette Kelly Craig, Mrs. Hazel Koehler Moler, and Miss Elizabeth Okerlind represented the Stone Church, and sang unaccompanied. The decision of the judges, though a close one, was given to the Stone Church. Mrs. Corrinne Haines French, Mrs. George Hulmes, and Mr. D. D. Plum acted as judges. Next Sunday night the contest between the male quartets of these two districts will be held.

During the hour it was decided by vote that the Religio sessions after next Sunday night and during conference will be dispensed with. Also the Friday evening recreational meetings in the dining hall will be canceled during conference.

As a special treat, members of the Religio were entertained by students of the William Chrisman High School, of Independence. Under the direction of Miss Jessie Smith, who has charge of the musical department in the high school, the high school orchestra contributed two excellent numbers. Selections also were given by the boys' high school quartet, the girls' high school quartet, a mixed quartet, and mixed chorus. The musical program was of very high order, and was greatly enjoyed and appreciated by everyone who heard it.

Preceding the hour of eight, a splendid song fest was enjoyed under the direction of Elder John F. Sheehy. "Joy to the world," "Earnest workers for the Master," and "Precious name," were numbered among the songs sung, and the congregation, which filled the church, entered whole-heartedly into the singing of "Redeemer of Israel." The invocation was offered by Missionary W. D. Tordoff.

Elder Hubert Case was the lecturer, and continuing his discourse of last Sunday evening he related numerous incidents of spiritual manifestation during his mission in the Society Islands, marvelous cases of healing, answers to prayers, and personal experiences of God's watchcare and protection. A number of beautifully tinted picture slides were exhibited, showing the natives of the islands at work, their houses, villages, occupations, customs. Native church workers were made known to the congregation, and all were convinced that where there are such earnest workers for the Master the church will go forward in might and power.

The reel, "Samaria," of the series, "A pilgrimage to Palestine," was shown on the screen following the lecture of Brother Case. And among the interesting and much-heard-of places of Palestine were the ruins of the cities in the land of the Gentiles between Judea and Galilee, old columns and steps marking the site of the city built by Herod; Ahab's ivory temple; Mount Gerizim, where the Samaritans held the Passover; and the well, said to be the one at which Christ talked to the Samaritan woman.

Interesting Personals

Sister Phoebe Smith, wife of Henry C. Smith, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Crank, 2310 East Twenty-fourth, Kansas City, Friday morning, March 25. Mrs. Smith was eighty-four years of age, and a Saint of long standing, having been baptized June 30, 1867. Funeral service was conducted from the Stone Church at half past one Sunday afternoon, March 27, Prseident Elbert A. Smith preaching the sermon. She leaves her husband and one daughter, Mrs. Crank. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

A daughter, Fern Donaldson, was born to Brother and Sister Lyle W. Weeks at the Independence Sanitarium, Saturday, March 26.

Second Church

The prayer meeting at fifteen minutes past eight Sunday morning was of more than usual interest, and a number of testimonies were offered which were of a high order, breathing a beautiful spirit of faith, and advancing safe philosophy.

Sunday school attendance was far below the average without any apparent reason. No class seemed to be up to its average in attendance except possibly the class of A. K. Dillee.

Elder Dillee was called upon by the congregation to speak for them at the eleven o'clock service, and he was bountifully blessed in the undertaking. The Saints and friends sat in deep interest while he spoke of the thing which satisfied, showing conclusively that neither houses nor lands, earthly possessions of any nature, or development of anything less than an eternal character would fill the longing of the soul.

Sunday evening at eight o'clock Bishop C. J. Hunt came to the Saints with a treatise of the latter-day glory and the condition of advancement which he found it had attained. Brother Hunt had a good hearing and was appreciated.

A movement has been inaugurated to advance the comeliness of south side homes, to be known as the South Side Lawn Improvement Contest. Home keepers and property owners are invited to participate, and in order to enter they must register with Sister E. E. Weir before April 15. We should be able to make considerable improvement and get a great deal of joy from the participation in this contest.

Walnut Park

Sister Ada Fallon and her Girls' Chorus—twenty soprano and five alto—sang for the forenoon preaching meeting Sunday, with Sister Delta Nace, pianist. The speaker, Apostle Myron A. McConley, seemed pleased with their songs of Zion, which fitted in nicely with his chosen subject. His discourse began with early church days when the revelation was given concerning the place where Zion should be built—a decision which, under the circumstances, would have seemed absurd if given by man. But the faith of the Saints was sure in those early revelations, and they continued to work toward their fulfillment until now, with as much accomplished as there is, the speaker feared many at the center place might be resting too confidently in the belief that things will work out all right, forgetting that those living here who will not learn and observe the law will have no part finally in the redeemed Zion. His warning was that we should be wrestling and praying constantly for a greater development of spiritual power; that the priesthood should be willing to leave Zion when need be to carry the greater power wherever their work is needed.

At the 7.30 service, the Walnut Park mixed quartet sang; then pictures from Palestine were shown for fifteen minutes while Sister Minnie Scott Dobson played appropriate hymns—"I will tell the wondrous story of the Christ who died for me," and many others.

This was followed by a sermon by Apostle J. F. Curtis, who only a few years ago was over the grounds we had just viewed, and had drunk from Jacob's well, shown in one of the pictures. His sermon was on the Holy Spirit. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." After quoting various promises concerning the value of this gift, and exhorting his hearers to cultivate the habit of heeding the Spirit's promptings, he suggested the awfulness of a Saint having a knowledge of the truth and living beneath the privilege of enjoying the Spirit and being guided by it. He spoke knowingly and very interestingly of the results of recognizing and obeying the voice of the Holy Spirit.

Elder W. T. Gard and twenty-two of his young men students attended a meeting at the Christian Church Sunday morning to hear a talk by J. R. Batchelor, a national worker among boys and young men. It proved to be very good; and Brother Gard felt just a little more pride than ever (if possible) in his boys after hearing the splendid opinion given of them by this observing nonmember.

After April 3, all regular services at Walnut Park, except Sunday school, will be discontinued until after the close of General Conference.

Liberty Street

We were pleased to have as our speaker for the eleven o'clock hour Brother A. M. Baker, who brought to mind the beautiful old story of Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, who sat at the feet of the Lord desiring to know the plan of salvation. He dwelt principally upon the answer which Jesus made: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God."

At the Religio hour, a group of children from Second Church gave an attractive program.

Patriarch T. C. Kelley preached at the evening hour, his text being taken from the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew where the kingdom of heaven is likened unto ten virgins. Comparing the lives of the Saints of today with the actions of the virgins, he brought out very clearly the necessity of preparing for the coming of Christ, calling to the remembrance of his hearers the time when Christ looked upon Jerusalem and wept, saying, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!"

Both sermons of the day were highly appreciated by members and visitors of the congregation.

Enoch Hill

On Sunday, March 20, Elder Hubert Case was the eleven o'clock speaker, using love as a theme. His text was, "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." "Love is the link which connects heaven and earth," he declared. It is the privilege of God's Saints to live so that each may enjoy the Spirit of God on earth, and God is love. He dwelt at length upon the necessity of true repentance, and assured his hearers that no man can assist in this work unless he is humble and full of love. We should each in our lives try to exemplify the message of Christ, which is the message of brotherly kindness.

At seven o'clock on the same day Brother Amos Allen occupied the pulpit, reading Hebrews 10 and 11, and delivering a discourse of profit and benefit to a house of attentive listeners.

Last Sunday Elder J. W. Paxton spoke at the eleven o'clock hour and again at seven in the evening. In the morning he read Matthew 22: 34-40, also 1 Corinthians 13, taking the theme of love. One of his outstanding points was that in order to please God we must have charity. In the evening he spoke from a chart, but due to the short time did not attempt to cover the entire chart, confining his attention to a discourse on the two roads of life, the narrow way which brings to its travelers the fruits of the Spirit; and the broad way, which imparts to his followers the fruits of evil. "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."—Proverbs 14: 12. Many members of the congregation expressed the hope that Brother Paxton may be permitted to return and give a complete explanation and discussion of his chart.

Next Sunday sacramental service preceding conference will be conducted at eleven o'clock. All are urged to be present and participate, that each may share in the blessings of the Spirit. The evening service will be the last until after General Conference.

On Monday night, March 21, the Temple Builders had their regular weekly meeting at the home of Sister H. E. Winegar, their leader. As guest and speaker, they had Sister Estella Wight, editor of Stepping Stones and Zion's Hope, who talked to the girls concerning the work of these papers. Several of our girls are manifesting considerable literary ability and may prove helpful to the church in this line. Sister Wight's talk was very much appreciated by the girls, and they hope she will visit the hill more frequently than she has heretofore.

Enoch Hill Sunday school is progressing and growing in interest and numbers to an encouraging degree. Officers have decided to procure a banner to be awarded each quarter to the class of the Sunday school having the highest standard of attendance, and interest.

Spring Branch

Indifference or inclement weather, we know not which, resulted in only seven in attendance at the Wednesday night prayer service. Nevertheless the full time was occupied, and a splendid spirit prevailed. We hope this small attendance just "so happened" and that more of the Saints will avail themselves of these opportunities for spiritual revival.

Sunday morning prayer service saw a goodly number out, and another good service was enjoyed. There was about the usual attendance at Sunday school, with spirited discussions in some of the classes which added zest and interest to this particular service.

Sister Rosamond Filson played a prelude to the eleven o'clock service, Brother Weston offered the invocation, two congregational songs were sung, and Brother Hubert Case read for a scriptural reading, Malachi 3:16-18. The choir under the direction of Sister French sang, "Daily mercies," Sister Leonard Roberts taking the solo.

Brother Case preached a splendid sermon from the text, "I came that ye might have life and have it more abundantly."

A really fine service in the evening closed the day's program. As special musical features, Sister Haden played a trumpet solo, "One fleeting hour," and Sister Grace Edwards sang, "The Lord is my strength." These two numbers were greatly appreciated by all.

The problems of Zion were clearly portrayed in a masterful sermon by Brother Ralph W. Farrell, using as a text "Workers together with God," and "Follow me." We would not attempt to comment further on his effort for fear we might cheapen it rather than add to it.

Dorothy Mabbott accompanied by one of her teacher co-workers in the Lorimor, Iowa, high school spent the week-end with her parents.

East Independence

Bishop B. J. Scott was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, his sermon inspiring us with hope and courage. He made several points so clear that the children could grasp them. So great a degree of the Spirit of God attended his words that we were made to rejoice under the influence of the same.

Brother and Sister Immer and family attended services. They have moved about ten miles east on the Spring Branch Road, but expect to attend church here. We welcome them.

In the evening Elder William I. Fligg began a series of lectures. He uses a chart. These services will continue all week except Saturday evening, closing next Sunday night. A good crowd was present for the first service, and we hope the interest may increase.

Quite a number of visitors from town were present at both services of the day.

Brother N. Ray Carmichael, of Lamoni, attended the evening service. He is here visiting his parents, our pastor and wife.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

We were very glad to welcome the return of our pastor and his wife, Brother and Sister J. A. Tanner, who have been in California the past month in the interest of church work, and when they entered their home from the station they were very much surprised to find a six-tube Atwater Kent radio set installed and ready for service, a gift from the people of Central as a token of their love and esteem for them. Brother Tanner has been at the helm of the ship at Central for the past fifteen years and has won the love and good will of not only the Central congregation, but the entire Kansas City Stake as well.

The Central people are indebted to Independence musicians, who responded so generously in rendering a radio concert at Central Church, the proceeds from which was purchased the radio. It was a wonderfully and cleverly arranged program, each number being rendered through a "loud speaker" which had been arranged in the decorations of green tissue paper, and each number was announced in the usual manner as that broadcast from K L D S. We were somewhat disappointed in not having the auditorium filled to capacity, but this was probably due to inclement weather conditions.

Brother Tanner occupied the pulpit at the morning hour on the 20th of March; Brother A. R. White, the 7.45 hour. A number were disappointed, as it was assumed that Brother Tanner would relate some of his experiences on his trip, but this he reserved for the women's meeting on the following Tuesday, which was very well attended, all classes having a larger attendance recorded than at any previous meeting. Those present enjoyed having Brother and Sister Tanner relate the wonders of the Golden West, and those not fortunate in hearing this missed quite a treat.

Bishop F. B. Blair occupied the morning hour yesterday, using for his text, "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name," etc., giving a very inspiring discourse and an earnest appeal to the Saints for a closer relationship between the Saints, that we might indeed become "our brother's keeper."

The infant daughter of Sister Belle Dunn was blessed at this service, being given the name of Ethel May.

Apostle Myron McConley occupied at the 7.45 hour, taking the listening and attentive audience on a journey to Australia, showing a number of scenes on the screen and acquainting us with our Australian brethren and sisters, giving us an idea of their mode of living, their country, industries, etc., which was very educational and brought to mind the necessity of our people responding to the financial law, that the gospel in its fullness might be given to hungering nations, as well as furthering the work where it has already been established.

Fourth Church

We are looking forward to General Conference, and in preparation for same every Sunday morning at 8.15 a special prayer service is held. Attendance has been good, with the presence of the Spirit felt.

Wednesday evening prayer services are well attended, with an average of forty-five. It is an inspiration to hear the young express their desire to help in the latter-day work.

Two group socials, in honor of those having birthdays during the month, were given February 14 and March 21, the young people giving a very interesting program, after which games were played by local young and old people, followed by refreshments.

Sister Fern Lloyd, superintendent of the Women's Department, and Sister Roy Newkirk, in charge of the girls of the stake, occupied the morning hour February 27. Sister Lloyd's message to the women was preparation and to try to keep our young from associating with those not of the church, emphasizing that they were weak in the faith if they marry outside the church, quoting Doctrine and Covenants 111: 1. Sister Newkirk pleaded in behalf of our girls of all ages. The Spirit was present with her as she tried to make others get the vision of the work as it had been given her, and the magnitude of the work before us in behalf of the girls, for they will eventually be the home makers of the church.

Sunday, March 20, Patriarch Ammon White occupied at 11 o'clock, admonishing them not to leave undone things needful to be done, as the sin of omission was as great as it was to do wrong, stating all had blessings, but fail to recognize them as such.

In the afternoon Sherman Brady was baptized, and we were glad to welcome him into the church, as he had considered the step a long time.

A number have been sick, some seriously, during the past month, but we are glad that all are on the road to recovery.

At 7.45 Elder W. O. Hands showed progress on the Auditorium by stereopticon slides, making us feel we should do more to help finish the structure.

An interesting feature of the Religio is the program furnished each meeting by different families, each member rendering part, the plan working out very nicely.

The attendance at Women's Department meetings is increasing, sixteen being present last Friday. Quilting and sewing were done from 10.30 to 2 o'clock, followed by study class on New Testament, Sister Tyra Lucking teaching.

Special mention is made of the work being done by Brother Wolf, director of music. Each service is benefited by his efforts, besides the special numbers given at regular services. He is ever on the alert for those having talent. One of the young ladies, Sister Margaret Johnson, won first prize in a recent musical contest with other singers from four States, and will leave soon for Chicago for the national contest. We wish her success.

Argentine Church

The evening speaker was Patriarch U. W. Greene, who used as a basis for his remarks the words of the Savior, "Except your righteousness exceeds the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, you can in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven." The Beatitudes, the Christian's paradox, were taken up verse by verse and discussed in the light of their application to God's people now, illustrating plainly, drawing from his fund of personal experiences of many years' standing as a minister of the church.

West Pullman Branch, Chicago

We are glad to state that West Pullman is active in all departments of the work, but this letter is especially written to call attention to the work of the Department of Women.

While nearly the entire time of our eleven years of service has been spent quilting, it has been done cheerfully, and the results have been beneficial both socially and financially. One of our number, Sister Nancy Bower, is past eighty-one years of age and has attended every meeting this year, ready and willing to do as much as the younger workers. March 6 is her natal day, and each year this day has been remembered in some way. This year the table, decorated in pink and white, was spread for seventeen. Four generations were represented. Helen Smith, great-granddaughter felt honored to be present. A beautiful white hyacinth, representing the love and esteem of one whose life has been pure, was presented to her with the reading of the following poem, composed for the occasion:

God in his infinite wisdom and love
 Looked down through the vista of years,
 And placed a wee babe in a fond mother's arms
 To be nurtured and bathed with her tears.
 For sad was the lot of this mother so dear,
 Although always so patient they say,
 But fate spun a web that was hard to withstand,
 For it took the dear father away.

While sad was the lot of this family so brave,
 That years alone only could soften,
 They lived the life taught by the Savior divine,
 That love was the gate into heaven.
 And all through the life of this soul that was born
 Has God's Spirit been pleased to abide near,
 For often in sickness has he heard her request
 And commissioned his angels to heal her.

To be closely allied with a life so replete
 Is a blessing far reaching the test,
 For it leaves an impression that will live till we meet
 In the place that's prepared for the blest.
 For by word and by deed have her blessings extended
 Encouragement and cheer for the weary,
 Or on one who was tired and discouraged with life
 And could see only darkness so dreary.

But because of her nature, she never complained,
 Burdening others with her disappointments,
 But was cheerful and brave through trials and strains
 And willingly served some one other.
 God has been mindful because of her faith
 And added the years to her life,
 And given her health to enjoy many days
 With the ones who have entered the strife.

And the years spent together have caused us to long,
 That the already years that are borrowed
 May lengthen until they are one hundred strong,
 And smooth out the brow that is furrowed
 Because of the unselfish service to others,
 With pain and grave sorrows enduring.
 There is nothing but faith and the love of a mother
 That could bring peace of mind so assuring.

Again God in his infinite wisdom and love
 Looked down through the vista of years
 And placed in our midst this one we hold dear
 Who has taught us to smile through our tears.
 May these counsels remain in the loneliest hour
 And strengthen the weary because they have striven
 To fashion their lives like our own Sister Bower
 And live a life worthy to meet her in heaven.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

March 23.—This branch is alive and the departments busy, each in its own line. The Sunday school is doing quite well under the able superintendency of Brother J. M. McCarter, while the Department of Recreation and Expression is progressing with Brother Albert Wilson at the head. The Department of Women is holding meetings every Wednesday and sometimes holds rummage sales or food sales. Various classes of the Sunday school hold food sales, also. The sisters cook the food at their homes; then some serve it at public places, such as the courthouse, or office buildings. However, the largest enterprise of the kind that is carried on here is the large dining hall every year at the fair, where all can work.

The Saints were privileged to hear a good sermon on prayer last Sunday evening by Brother Sorden, our former missionary to Jerusalem, Palestine.

The Saints here have Sunday school every Sunday at 9.45 a. m., followed by preaching at 11. Also the Department of Recreation and Expression meets at 6 p. m., and preaching is again had at 7.30. Every second Sunday the young people hold prayer meeting at 8 a. m.; also the teachers' training class meets at 5 p. m. We have prayer meetings on Wednesday nights.

Some of the Saints here are intending to attend General Conference.

Moorhead, Iowa

March 21.—Again the grim reaper has entered our ranks and taken two of our number from our midst. Sister Pearl Wilson passed away at the home of her daughter, Sister Dale Wilson, of Ute, on Tuesday, March 15, after an illness of several months. She leaves her husband, Brother Ira Wilson, six children by a former marriage, several grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends. Sister Pearl had believed the gospel for some time and united with the church last autumn, being baptized by Brother Richard Baldwin during his series of meetings held at our place of worship. Her faith remained strong and steadfast till the end, and we feel that her reward is sure. Brother T. O. Strand preached a splendid funeral sermon at the Moorhead church at 2.30 p. m. March 17. Services were in charge of Brother Mark Jensen. Interment was in Spring Valley Cemetery. Brother Andrew Jackson, of Dunlap, a cousin of Brother Ira Wilson, did the undertaking work, and all was carried on nicely. Much sympathy is extended to Brother Ira in the loss of his companion, especially as he too has been so sorely afflicted for some time. At present he is in Sioux City, where he has been taking treatment for several days each week. We are pleased to be able to report that his condition appears to be improving recently.

Brother Curtis Outhouse, of Onawa, a young man of twenty-two years, met an untimely death in an auto accident during the past week near Le Mars, Iowa, and was brought to Moorhead for burial by the side of his father, Brother Edward C. Outhouse, who passed away last year. Funeral service was conducted and preached by Brother Mark Jensen at two o'clock, March 18, at the church. Brother Curtis was baptized when a child. He leaves his mother, brother, and sister, besides many other relatives and friends.

Both funerals were well attended, and loving friends did all in their power to assist the bereaved ones.

Brother Ole Amundson and son, Darrel, recently visited relatives in Chicago.

Sister Ella Jennings is teaching a country school this spring.

A little daughter came to gladden the home of Brother and Sister Arnold Admans on February 25, and is known by the name of Arladine Bess.

Sister Hulda Henrickson, who has spent the last fifteen months visiting among her three children and their families in Canada, has reported to Moorhead relatives that she is on her way home.

Subscriptions to the Conference Daily Herald have been unusually numerous this year, which speaks of a goodly interest among Moorhead Saints in keeping pace with the church program.

Sister Fred Pellissier made a short visit last week at the home of her daughter, Sister Jennings Coffman, of Omaha.

We understand that our public school ranks among the first in percentage of those taking the diphtheria vaccination in the State.

This Breathes Faith and Loyalty

The HERALD is our only means of getting gospel sermons. I can not afford to miss it, for I certainly do enjoy reading its pages. The sermons are fine. Also I enjoy the news column. I take the Autumn Leaves. The various departments are all best to me.

I was baptized by Gordon Deuel and confirmed by him and I. N. White. I have been a reader of the church literature ever since, and am a believer in our present tithe system. I have defended the Reorganization and our prophet, F. M. Smith. I have heard Joseph preach, and words can not express how I treasure the memory of it. I have tried to live the life of a true Saint, paying my tithing when able to do so. I paid it to Bishops Kelley and McGuire and would continue to do so were I able.

FANNIE COINER.

YALE, OKLAHOMA, Box 81.

Parkersburg, West Virginia

March 24.—We are still very much in the good fight and determined to continue the race to the end, where rest and the reward are found.

We have seventy-one members enrolled now. Some are scattered, many not much interested, and our attendance is not what we would like to have. The hall we have been using for about ten years has been papered and painted and looks much more inviting to us.

The first of the year our branch went on the cooperative basis, with our branch president, Brother Baronet Beall, having general supervision over all the departments of the work. The department heads act as his cabinet and advisers. They have immediate management of their departments of work. We feel that is a step forward for us, and look for good results to follow.

Sister May Griffin is secretary and treasurer of our branch now, and records all business, since it is all done in one meeting. Other department superintendents are: Harry Smith, Sunday school; May Griffin, Recreation and Expression; May Reese, Department of Women; C. W. Germon, music.

Our branch adopted a budget to care for all the financial needs the coming year, as well as we could anticipate them in advance. We hope this will be an improvement over our old way, which found our branch in a bankrupt condition much of the time.

The high water of February 21 to 29 caused some hardship to a few of our members who live in the low section of the town near the rivers.

Our branch solicitor reported our branch doing well in contributions for the six months ending February 1. Tithing paid was $238.41, which puts our branch second in the district in amount paid. Total contributions amounted to $276.84.

Missionary J. E. Wildermuth was with us from February 22 to 28 and preached some good sermons for us. Brother Thomas Newton was with us on two different occasions in February.

Brother C. W. Germon has been holding some missionary meetings at the home of Sister Wherry the past month, on Thursday nights.

Elk Mills, Maryland

March 22.—During the past few months we have been very fortunate in having with us Apostle Roy S. Budd and Elder George Robley, who preached some very inspiring sermons. Our hearts were made to burn within us when we heard these men of God tell of God's goodness to them and to his people; and we hope to have them visit us again in the near future.

Our pastor, Elder Henry Carr, and Brother H. B. Mann met with the Scranton Saints in district conference March 19 and 20, reporting a spiritual conference.

The Sunday school, through the untiring efforts of Superintendent Harry Mann, is steadily increasing in attendance, which fact is very encouraging and has had a tendency to enthuse all workers. On February 12 the primary and beginner departments held an enjoyable valentine party in the basement of the church. On February 20 the junior boys gave a short play, "The prodigal son," which was enjoyed by all, and much credit is due the boys for their effort.

The Department of Women is still active, meeting every Wednesday afternoon to study Doctrine and Covenants. On March 2 an apron social was held, clearing a neat sum to be used for our missionary's home. While our number is small, we enjoy the Spirit of God in our work. We have been able to help care for the sick, taking flowers, fruit, and words of cheer. At Christmas two large baskets of vegetables, fruit, and candy were given to those in need. We still have a desire to go on and help where we can.

Sister Mary Carter met with a painful accident when she fell and hurt her hip. She has been unable to walk for the past six weeks. She needs the prayers of the Saints.

New Zealand Activities

December 4 I baptized Mr. Lister and Mrs. King in the surf on Kilbirnie Beach. We had a fine baptismal service, about a dozen people attending.

Sunday morning, the 5th, we were glad to have Elders Hall and Bradley from the South Island visit us, to partake of the sacrament and assist in the confirmation and ordination of Brother Hall's eldest son, Ralph, to the office of priest. The was a very fine meeting, and I was pleased to have the two brethren from the south assisting me. Assisted by Brothers Hall and Bradley I ordained R. Hall, jr., to the office of priest, and am sure this young man has the ability and will to accomplish much good in the world. The two people baptized were then confirmed by Brothers Hall and Bradley, and we blessed four children before serving the sacrament. All took part in prayer and testimony, and we rejoiced to see the beginning of the growth of the church in Wellington.

At 7 p. m. Brother Hall, sr., was the preacher, and we heard one of those good old-time stirring Latter Day Saint sermons.

Again on the 4th of February we were at the water and baptized Miss D. Cox, a young woman of culture and ability. Confirmation service was held in conjunction with the sacramental service on the following Sunday.

We meet for services and Sunday school in the Orange Hall, Daniel Street, Newton. Our Sunday school at present numbers about one dozen. I find the senior class exceedingly interested in the study of the lessons.

On Tuesday, February 8, a number of members and friends met in our house to bid farewell to our young brother, R. Hall, who left for Honolulu on the 11th. All were sorry to have him go. I particularly feel the loss of his friendship and assistance in the work.

My brother, Cyrus, who lives and works up on the Hauraki Plains reports good progress in the work at Kerepeehi. On December 4 he ordained Brother W. Herkt to the office of priest and on Christmas Day he also baptized Mr. and Mrs. Rawlins, who are but recent arrivals from the old country. He and Brother Herkt keep the Sunday school and Religio, as well as regular preaching appointments, filled. There is material now in this place suitable for the organization of a branch.

Altogether I see a decided move forward in the work here in New Zealand, and from various places news comes of blessings received. To me one noticeable feature among our people here is the way in which they are being blessed in material things. This must mean increased opportunity in time to further the interests of the church. We trust all will remember the laws of God relative to temporal things. For the Lord has repeatedly said, "Inasmuch as ye keep my commandments ye shall prosper in the land."

At present the Dominion is preparing to welcome the Duke and Duchess of York to her shores.

There is a larger number of unemployed listed in New Zealand than I have seen for some time, and this becomes more disturbing because of its being the summer, which is the best time for employment.

The housing problem here is acute, and it is distressing to find several families obliged to live in one house. I understand that the situation is not so bad in Auckland.

We send our best wishes to the workers in Zion and trust that every obstacle will be removed which may stand in the way of the accomplishment of this mighty work.

NEWTON, WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND. ALBERT LOVING.

Elder S. A. Barss, Lansing, Michigan, writes the First Presidency: "Here is an encouraging feature in our extended Sunday school efforts. In early winter we started a school in District Number 5 Schoolhouse. Yesterday the enrollment was eighty. The school board demanded a statement of the difference between us and the Utah people, which we gave Sunday afternoon, I think to their satisfaction. Some there are investigating our work. The Saints are doing fine."

Conference Notices

Little Sioux district conference will convene at Missouri Valley, Iowa, April 22, 23, and 24. We hope to have some of the missionaries with us at that time. Also reports from General Conference by the delegates who were in attendance. We urge the Saints of the district to be present. Ruby Adams, district secretary.

Conference Minutes

SOUTHERN OHIO.—District conference convened at Ironton, Ohio, February 19, at ten o'clock in the morning. It was presided over by District President James E. Bishop and Apostle Paul M. Hanson. Statistical reports were read from fourteen of the sixteen branches in the district. The district president's report showed he had been active in the work of the district, visiting each of the branches once and most of them more than once during the conference year. He pointed us to the need of a more consecrated effort, which will bring us to a higher plane. The district Sunday school superintendent reported that she had visited nine branches during the year and some twice in the interest of the Sunday school work. Also the district chorister visited several branches in the interest of music. Missionaries in the district reporting were Jacob G. Halb and E. D. Finken. Officers chosen for the following year were: President, James E. Bishop; A. E. Anderton, assistant; secretary, Sarah E. Batchelder; superintendent of Sunday schools, Margery Williams; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Leonard Barker; superintendent of Department of Women, Edna Zieshang; chorister, Hazel Gribben; treasurer, H. E. French; auditor, H. P. Zieshang. The following delegates were chosen to represent the district at General Conference: Paul M. Hanson, James E. Bishop, J. G. Halb, E. D. Finken, Hazel Gribben, Sister C. W. Clark, C. W. Clark, Verna Miller, G. T. Griffiths, John Martin, H. E. French, Roy S. Budd, Edith Woods, U. W. Greene, C. B. Woodstock. The conference voted to carry out the schedule suggested by our district president, providing for four meetings to be held during the year as follows: Ministerial conference, at Nelsonville, Ohio, May 21 and 22; young people's convention, at Middletown, June 25 and 26; fall conference, at Highland Branch, September 24 and 25; musical institute at Columbus, October 21 and 22. Attendance at this conference was very good considering the inclement weather, which made it impossible for some who had planned to come, to get here. Some instructive and inspirational sermons were delivered by Bishop H. E. French, Apostle Paul M. Hanson, and James E. Bishop. A peaceable conference was enjoyed by all, and we were loath to depart, feeling we had received a blessing.

Our Departed Ones

MILLER.—Robert Miller, third son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Miller, was born in London, England, August 13, 1872. At the age of six, he accompanied his parents to the United States and for many years resided in the southern part of Ohio. On October 13, 1894, he married Rhoda J. Blangett, and the following year went to Cleveland, Ohio, where, save for a brief stay in Kirtland, Ohio, he permanently resided. To this union were born four sons and two daughters, Clyde Allen and Ruth Elizabeth having preceded him in death. On the evening of Thanksgiving Day, 1895, he became a member of the church, and served as a minister and member of honor, faithfulness, charity, and dependability. Elder Miller was connected with the East Cleveland Branch for a number of years until he was instrumental in the establishment of the Lakewood, Ohio, Branch, over which he presided until a couple of weeks before his death. He died suddenly at his home in Cleveland, March 9, 1927. To the Kirtland Reunion Association, his loss is greatly felt as an indefatigable committee man and worker, and the loss of his presence and labor at the annual reunion will be keenly felt. Left to mourn are his wife, Rhoda J., his four children, Robert E., Roland E., Rhoda E., Richard E.; four brothers, James T., of Garfield, Utah; Ebenezer, of Independence, Missouri; John, Cleveland, Ohio; William, Gloucester, Ohio; and other relatives and friends. The main funeral service was held in the Kirtland Temple March 12, being presided over by Elders G. T. Griffiths and John McNeil. The address was by Elder William Patterson. Interment in the Kirtland Cemetery. A relative, a friend, a brother tried and true has gone before.

LOVEJOY.—Della Mae Lovejoy was born March 13, 1909, at Bellaire, Ohio, daughter of Brother and Sister William Yocum. She united with the church at Morgantown, West Virginia, five years ago. Married Walter Lovejoy August 20, 1924. Died March 15, 1927, at the age of eighteen years. Surviving are her husband, one child, Leona Mae, father, mother, six sisters, and three brothers. Services in charge of Elder James Givens. Sermon by Elder Louis A. Serig. Interment at Rose Hill Cemetery, Bellaire, Ohio.

WHITE.—Anna Delphine Brewer White, second daughter of Matthew and Margaret Brewer, was born February 14, 1860, at Edenville, now known as Rhodes, Iowa. Her early years were spent at Rhodes, where she grew to womanhood, and on April 15, 1876, was married to David Curtis White, Elder I. N. White, brother of the groom, officiating. In 1884 they moved to Clinton, Missouri, where they remained ten years, going from there to Blairstown, Missouri. After five years at this place, they moved to Lamoni in 1899. To them twelve children were born: A. Otis, Charles H., Oliver C., Elmer Willis, Aletha May, Eliza Etta, Margaret B., Jennie V., Francis A., Blossom Z., E. Dewey, and Lucy D., two of whom preceded their mother in death: Elmer Willis, who died in infancy, and Aletha May, Mrs. C. A. Skinner, who died in 1924. On July 10, 1876, she was baptized at Rhodes, by Elder I. N. White, and remained faithful to her covenant to the end. Her greatest satisfaction was in the fact that all her children united with the church in early childhood. Mrs. White was a devoted companion and mother, one who had many friends. Passed to her reward at her home in Lamoni, March 1, 1927. Besides her ten children, she leaves her companion, one sister, Mrs. Mollie Johnson, of Rhodes, one brother, Willis P. Brewer, of Bakersfield, California, thirty-nine grandchildren, three great-grandchildren, and many friends. Funeral services at the Brick Church in Lamoni, March 4.

General Conference in Prospect

Sunday, April 3, brought to Independence the usual preconference crowd of delegates and visitors. Between services, at the Stone Church and other congregations, the main point of interest centered about the Auditorium. A constant stream of visitors passed through the entrances from morning till night, each with his own questions and suggestions, but the universal comment expressed satisfaction with the progress of the building.

The K L D S staff was at the Auditorium, testing out the new wires which were carried to the building last week free of charge by the local telephone company. This arrangement permits broadcasting from the Auditorium basement as well as the Stone Church auditorium and radio studio.

Twenty conference sermons are scheduled from April 6-18 inclusive. The members of the Quorum of Twelve are occupying at various times, each using some definite aspect of the general theme, "The Restoration and its outstanding contributions."

The High Priests' Quorum will meet Wednesday morning at 9 a. m. in the Y. K. T. Room for organization, and definite assignments of program work will be outlined then. The Quorum of Seventies met for organization and quorum work Monday morning, April 4.

Particular interest is taken in the priesthood institute, which is to be held the second week of conference by those who have followed the outline in previous HERALDS. It is of special importance to the ministry, and ordained ministers in the church who can reasonably afford to attend this General Conference should do so. The First Presidency have charge of the priesthood institute, and one member of the First Presidency will address the mass meeting each morning, which will mean two addresses from each member during the week.

The institute being held under the auspices of the Department of Women on parentcraft and home building is attracting much attention and will doubtless receive well-deserved support. A glance at the program previously announced in the HERALD will indicate the care that has been exercised in arranging a program that has every indication of providing instruction in definite fields of work. For many years institutes and classes of instruction have generalized instead of concentrating on certain aspects in definite fields of endeavor. The class work on the subjects assigned should prove valuable to every Latter Day Saint attending conference.

The class work which begins the conference day will test the conference visitors and delegates as to just how earnestly they desire to get this instruction. The class work beginning at 7.30 means that many will have to rise early in the day to be on time to start the day with the class work program. J. A. Koehler, C. B. Woodstock, F. Henry Edwards, M. A. Etzenhouser, and Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser have their subjects well in hand and are ready to give their best to this work. Their information and instruction have been accumulated through years of research, experience, and practice work. Everyone at the conference should not fail to attend at least one of these morning classes every day.

The conference music this year has been planned with more than ordinary care. Congregational singing will be featured and made a definite part of every mass gathering. The Messiah Choir will sing "The Elijah" two nights, the first Sunday and Monday of the conference. The Independence Music Club will sing "David," and special lighting and costuming will make this cantata greatly effective. The daily organ recital will provide an opportunity each day from 12:45 to 1:15 for a thirty-minute rest period for conference folks to recuperate and relax from the strenuous work which the conference program provides.

The pageant "The Restoration" will be given Tuesday, April 12. A theme is here presented covering practically one hundred years of church history, divided into its sequential epochs of time and written in the spirit of the gospel of Christ as this church has interpreted it to the world. You can not witness this pageant without being deeply impressed with the importance of the work intrusted to Latter Day Saints. The pageant is historically true and dramatically effective.

The first Saturday night of conference the White Masque Players of Independence will give "The Fool," which, when presented at the Memorial Hall in Independence the evening of April 1, drew a crowd of eight hundred people at an admission charge of fifty cents. The effective way in which this play was presented by the White Masque Players brought universal commendation from our members and from nonmembers. But in few other plays has there been crowded so much of the great moral lesson of service and high idealism as there has been in this play called "The Fool," written by Channing Pollock. The name may have been misleading to some. It is not a comedy—far from it. It enacts some of the most intimate tragedies of life, and is so humanly true that it is bound to appeal to those who value honor and truth and integrity of purpose.

Sunday school sessions will be held in charge of local officers on the Sunday morning of April 10 and 17. Many visitors will desire to see the kindergarten and primary departments in action, and visitors will be welcome to these departments. Large classes have been arranged for and competent teachers provided. It is hoped that visitors will feel perfectly at home in the Sunday school sessions.

On the afternoon of the first Sunday, April 10, the young people of Independence have mobilized their transportation resources and are planning to take conference visitors to one of the stewardship farms, about six miles east of Independence, at which place those present will be addressed by President F. M. Smith, President Elbert A. Smith, President F. M. McDowell, Bishop J. A. Koehler, and short speeches will be made by others of the ministry in attendance.

As this copy is written Monday afternoon, just before the HERALD goes to press, each hour witnesses the arrival of many of the ministry from their distant fields of labor. Conference delegates and visitors are likewise arriving, and the conference spirit is on. These are busy days for administrative and departmental officers completing their plans for the annual gathering, and withal there is a feeling of good cheer, fellowship, and enthusiasm. With plenty of work ahead, definite church projects to accomplish, the future presents a worth-while perspective which will not permit the petty things of life any place in the larger schedule of work. In the march forward to 1930 and beyond, each day's work, well done, brings its own reward.

K L D S Represented at Government Hearings

Upon investigation of the new Federal Radio Commission, representatives of all phases of the radio industry assembled at Washington March 29 to April 1 inclusive, and had opportunity to give suggestions and advice to the new board, which virtually has all regulatory control over radio in the United States. Brother A. B. Church, director of the church radio, represented K L D S and was one of about five religious organizations represented at the hearings.

As stated before, the purpose of the hearings was to enable the radio industry to give its views and suggestions to the new radio commission before that body issues any new licenses. Therefore, no regulatory action of any kind was taken. It is felt, however, that the commission will act upon suggestion of the radio men where unanimity prevailed. Practically everyone in attendance at the hearings felt that no change should be made in the present broadcasting wave band of 200 to 545 meters. All conceded the necessity of reducing the number of stations on preferred wave lengths.

The Radio Commission is expected to create two classes of stations. First, national. These would be given wave lengths above 240 meters, on such a basis that no two stations would be broadcasting on the same wave length at any given time. Another class of stations would be termed "locals," and these would occupy the wave band from 200 to 240 meters. They would be required to broadcast on low powers and would be designed especially to cover small areas, such as metropolitan centers. These wave lengths could therefore be duplicated in various parts of the country, not less than six hundred miles apart, and would accommodate a great number of low-powered local stations.

A third class of stations was suggested by the K L D S director, to be termed regional stations. Such stations would include those owned by educational institutions, state owned stations, etc., which are particularly interested in covering a limited area. Three of such stations could operate on a single wave length at the same time in three sections of the country—Atlantic, Middle West, and Pacific. It is felt that K L D S will be able to retain a favorable wave length, although a two- or three-way division of time may be necessary. In such event, distant listeners who are now unable to hear K L D S on account of interference conditions, will be able to pick up the church station more frequently.

You can not do wrong without suffering wrong.
—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The General Conference Spirit

For many years I have lived at a location in Iowa or Missouri where the General Conferences of the church have been held. A few times they have been taken to Kirtland, Ohio, and once to Saint Joseph, Missouri, and at these I have not been in attendance; the remainder of these general meetings of the church since 1895 I have attended.

It is not entirely possible to describe in few words the atmosphere which surrounds a conference of the Reorganized Church, as it is not possible to briefly describe the feelings of a Saint when a message comes from the Lord through one of his prophets. However, one who has been in attendance at several General Conferences has a feeling which must be akin to the instinct which takes the birds north in the season of the year when conference convenes.

There is often a clash of interests in the life of a Saint—his æsthetic or spiritual sense impelling him in the direction of the assembly of God's people, while his economic or commercial sense clamors loudly that he should make the most of what seasonal trade is opening, or take advantage of every hour of weather which would permit the preparation of the soil for the reception of the seed.

Ten years ago today America entered the arena of war, and many remember the clash of feelings experienced as delegates and visitors gathered to transact the business of the church and labored under the load of the message that world conditions had become so hazardous and unendurable as to force God's chosen nation to take up arms to achieve if possible the setting aside of such hazard and making the world safe for self-governing peoples.

Not since then has there been noticeable so much of the finer, higher, spiritual hope and trust, combined with godly determination, which in a paltry way describes the General Conference spirit, as comes now with the entrance to Independence of the delegates, ex officio members, and the visitors hourly arriving.

Warm friendship and close fellowship are always to be admired and enjoyed—they are an essential part of the religion of Jesus Christ; they are of the spirit of our Leader and Commander. If these continue to make themselves manifest, the General Conference of 1927 will prove of great profit to the church.

RICHARD J. LAMBERT.

Conference Reports by Radio

Condensed conference reports will be broadcast by radio each afternoon at 5.30, following the business session. This schedule is in addition to the other program schedules already announced.

A Necessary Courtesy Requested

Many of our prominent local workers are quite active in local business or professional circles at their locations, and this fact becomes known among church members who are interested in the individuals. Some good work may be accomplished by one of these local men, and it calls for commendation from those who read of it in the columns of the HERALD or of the secular press, or some favor may be much needed. If you are one of those wishing to commend, or criticize, or possibly correct, where would you address your missive? Would you send it to the brother's place of business, where friendly or unfriendly hands may open and eyes may scan what you have written? Or would you send your communication to his home address, where it would most likely fall unopened into the hands of the one to whom it is directed?

Very few business or professional men of the present day open the mail addressed to them, it being considered work of a character more advantageously done by clerks and stenographers. The mail of course is examined by the clerk in order to determine if it will need the time and consideration of the highly prized and high priced man to whom it is addressed. Some of our men thus addressed have been embarrassed to find that communications of a strictly personal nature or of purely church significance have fallen into wholly unsympathetic hands. You may have taken the precaution to indicate in the address that it was of purely personal character, but to some clerks this might mean a chance to get close to the "boss" or "chief," and to others it might indicate a possibility of getting something which might humiliate or militate against him. In what is likely a majority of cases, mail clerks have been instructed to open mail so marked, for the reason that much of the party's mail comes addressed in that way, evidently because the writer desires the man at the head to be in touch with the writer's problem.

A young man in charge of a small branch in a Kansas town was also manager of a chain store. His church friends loved him, and not knowing his personal or home address but wishing to write him, they would address him after this manner: "Elder — — —, —, Kansas, care of — Department Store." It was not long before he was made a butt of ridicule, which was a needless occurrence.

A bishop who is a civil officer says that he is constantly embarrassed by mail pertaining to church matters going to him at his business address, his personal and church affairs thus becoming the property of those who are possibly inimical to his church affiliation and activity. He desires that all such mail be addressed to him at his home address. If you do not know what that address is, take steps to ascertain; it is likely the editor of the HERALD or the office of the First Presidency may aid you. Don't do the lazy thing—address it to the place where you feel sure he will finally get it—for he wants it before any other person gets it.

Saints should observe the courtesy of addressing their brothers and sisters with care and forethought, lest they unwittingly burden the objects of their affection in the brotherhood of Christ. R. J. L.

An Example of Devotion to Service

The Presiding Bishop recently received the following letter from an aged and often invalid brother who has steadfastly consecrated what he possessed to the service of God. Is there any necessary or even desirable work which could not be accomplished by the church if the membership were universally of this same devoted spirit? Read carefully Brother Spurlock's short letter.

Dear Brother in Christ: Seeing as I do that there has been another call for funds to complete the Auditorium Building, I hereby request you to transfer ten dollars from the amount I have in the church treasury to the Auditorium Fund. Although I gave up the place on which I lived that the Auditorium might be built thereon, I am not sorry, as I came to the Holden Home for the aged where I am now working

Waiting for the Master

By Mrs. George Floro

There's a bond which can't be broken,
And when friendly words are spoken,
Well we know they are a token
For God's people everywhere.

When a hand is clasped, and shaken
When we feel the Spirit waken,
Then we know God's not forsaken
His dear people anywhere.

With our lamps all trimmed and burning,
We will wait for Christ's returning,
For we know God's heart is yearning
For his people everywhere.

We are waiting for our Master
On this dark and dreary shore,
We are waiting for his coming,
When death shall be no more.

We are waiting for the summons
Of the trumpet's tuneful blast,
When Christ in all his glory
Shall welcome us, at last.

We are waiting in the twilight
Of the Lord's appointed time,
When the Saints in all their pureness
Shall inherit life divine.

We are waiting at the fountain
Of the Spirit's gushing flow,
Which leads us ever upward
In our struggles here below.

Honor to a Worthy Generation

Synopsis of funeral sermon of Sister Henry C. Smith, preached by President E. A. Smith, from the Stone Church, March 27, 1927.

Obituary

Phebe Elliot was born February 7, 1844, at Wakeman, Erie County, Ohio. She was married to Henry C. Smith February 7, 1858, to whom were born two girls, Hattie I. (now dead) and Fannie L., the latter now living in Kansas City, Missouri.

Phebe Smith was baptized by Apostle E. C. Briggs, June 3, 1867. She was a consistent and loyal member of the church to the day of her death. She did much to advance interest of the church in caring for the membership and missionaries, in particular for their personal comfort for the first forty years of her membership. There was no task too great for her to undertake.

She had many, many friends, and never had an enemy.

She passed peacefully away at half past six on the morning of March 25, 1927, after sixty-nine years of married life.

In connection with the obituary just read, Brother Henry Smith has written a report of a comforting manifestation given to his wife during 1894, as follows:

In 1894 I was doing missionary work for the Master in an eastern mission. My wife at that time was staying at a Lamoni, Iowa, hotel, and occupying a room by herself. She was somewhat distressed in mind and very lonely. In the night she was awakened by three distinct voices in the room. They were singing that beautiful hymn entitled, "God will take care of you." (Page 58, Zion's Praises.) She arose at once and listened to the sweetest music she had ever heard. They sang the entire hymn in three parts. She was greatly comforted by this manifestation, and from that day to the present she has realized the sentiment expressed in the hymn; and now, being in a very low state of health, she says she wishes that same hymn to be sung at her funeral.

She wishes to express her gratitude to the authorities of the church for their kindly administrations.

I feel that we are doing more than rendering honor to an individual. In a sense we meet to pay our respects to a generation. Some of us now living knew President Joseph Smith quite intimately during the later years of his ministry, and after his greatest work had been done, but there was a noble band of men and women, courageous and faithful, who stood with him during his earlier ministry. Brother and Sister Henry Smith were of that number. There are comparatively few of them left. They stood with him at the time when he was making his great fight in opposition to polygamy and other heresies, when he was making the struggle to rebuild the church, when he was making the great fight to make the name of Latter Day Saint honorable and remove the imputations of dishonor that had been flung upon the escutcheon of the church. Early in his ministry the Saints were promised through him that if faithful and humble and wise God would give them favor in the eyes of the people. That prediction was fulfilled so that you and I have lived to reap some of the benefits of their sacrifices and labors.

I think it is well for us to honor the generation that precedes us to the extent that honor may be given; and to trust the generation that comes after us so far as we may find trust justified. There is a disposition for one generation to think the one that preceded it was somewhat benighted, not having the enlightenment that we have; and on the other hand to look with suspicious eyes on the generation coming after and feel that they will dissipate and betray that which we have sought to conserve. As a matter of fact, it is somewhat difficult to draw hard and fast lines between generations. The old and young live side by side. The stream of life flows on, and it would be folly for us to presume that we stand head and shoulders above it. I believe we may trust our sons and daughters of the coming generation, that from among them God will raise up wise and faithful and devoted men and women to carry on the work. We know he did that in the generation that is past. They were indeed the salt of the earth. They were indeed a city set on a hill. They were in very truth the light of the world. Why were they the salt of the earth and the light of the world? Because they gave implicit adherence to the fundamentals that go to build character and make worthy citizens of both church and state.

They believed in work. They did not ask the world to give them something for nothing. The generation to which our sister belonged witnessed the conversion of the wilderness into a garden.

They believed in virtue. They entertained no foolish philosophy that there is no difference between right and wrong. They did not essay to confuse the line between the two, but they believed positively that virtue was lovely and vice hateful, and sought to incorporate virtue into their lives and eliminate vice.

They were hospitable. Brother Henry Smith attached a note to the obituary in which he said, "Brother Elbert, Sister Smith has served many meals to your father both before and after his marriage." So I am indebted to her, and I perhaps feel the debt more than I would had the favor been conferred upon me personally. I am reminded that when my father was a young and inexperienced and perhaps homesick missionary, even before I was born, he found a place of rest in the home of Aunt Phebe Smith.

They were frugal. They believed in marriage and the home. This sister lived to celebrate sixty-nine years of married life. They were home builders and community builders. In other words they made their faith known by their works. James challenges the world, "Show me your faith by your works." Too many make pleasure the end and object of life. They do so today and have done so in all ages of the world. The generation of which we speak and to which we give honor made duty their watchword. They often turned their backs upon pleasure and the allurements of the world and pursued the path of duty even at the cost of personal comfort and sustenance. Usually that path proved to be the path of pleasure, or if not pleasure, something higher—it became the path of joy. And Sister Smith was permitted to hear the angels sing, "God will take care of you."

Too many people feel the keen impulse to take care of themselves at any cost to their neighbors or the rest of humanity. They feel they must accumulate the substance with which to assure themselves that they will be cared for during old age. Here was one who believed God would take care of her.

In other words, these people obeyed the gospel. That expression, obeyed the gospel, is not to be taken in a limited sense. Sometimes when people are baptized we say they have obeyed the gospel, but they have only begun to obey the gospel.

There was one evidence of the divinity of his work to which Christ appeared to take great pleasure in pointing. There are many evidences of its truth. He referred often to the scriptures, "It is written." He said, "If ye had believed Moses and the prophets, ye would have believed me." His miracles were an evidence; and at one time he said, "Believe me for the very work's sake." But the thing most convincing as evidence of his work was the development of the characters of those who accepted his message. It was at one time said that the people took knowledge of his disciples that they had been with Him. We are admonished also that we shall be living epistles. People may or may not read their Bibles, but where a man or woman in the community is living the gospel of Jesus Christ, there is an epistle that people are bound to see, observe, and read. And where there is a community of such people, there is indeed a city set on a hill, one that can not be hid. So Jesus said to his followers, "Ye are the light of the world." "Ye are the salt of the earth." Or as the Inspired Version renders it, "It is given unto you to be the salt of the earth"; "It is given unto you to be the light of the world."

On an occasion like this the conviction seems to come home to our hearts that it now devolves upon the generation that remains to carry forward. Every time one of our veteran defenders of the faith, one of our old-time missionaries, or a mother in Israel departs this life and goes beyond the vale, it seems to me there rests upon me personally an added responsibility to be true to this work. I feel a new obligation to so live that those gone on who gave all they had to this work shall not be disappointed and shall not feel they have lived in vain or died in vain.

Think of the hundreds and thousands of faithful Latter Day Saints in years gone by who gave all they had to this work. They passed over, serene in their confidence that those who came after them would carry forward their work and see that it did not meet defeat. Think of those still among us who when they were strong and able gave all they had to carry the work forward. They now have reached the stage where even with difficulty they may at times bear their testimony, yet with confidence they submit the work to the hands of those who are yet strong and capable, believing that they in their turn will give all they have and do all they can in the day when they are permitted to work, that our fathers and mothers gone on before or who are now disabled for active work may never feel that their work was in vain.

In other words, while we may today pay some honor to the generation that is past, the generation that was faithful and courageous in its day, the greatest honor we can give them is to carry on under the same spirit, that the work they loved may go forward.

"Laborare est Orare"

BY EDWARD INGHAM

Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder.—Isaiah 29: 14.

My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.—John 5: 17.

Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ.—Galatians 6: 2.

For we are laborers together with God.—1 Corinthians 3: 9.

The age in which we live is one of competition and struggle. There is so much rush and hurry that very few devote any time to the serious and careful consideration of life's important duties, while many rush thoughtlessly into actions which very frequently result, not only in retarding their progress, but in their downfall. The very fact that human life, even when lived on the most exalted stage and enriched by favoring circumstances, is so transient and frail and limited, should inspire us to take it more seriously, to use it more diligently, to extract from it whatever it is capable of yielding, not of enjoyment, but of service.

It requires time to fit oneself for service, and it will be found upon investigation that there is probably nothing more essential to permanent success than continuity of effort. To be uniformly in earnest and attentive to duty in all its annoying details is what is required. All work is hard work, and good work is the hardest of all.

Carlyle says:

Blessed is he who has found his work; let him ask no other blessings. He has a work; a life purpose; he has found it and will follow it. The only happiness a brave man ever troubled himself with asking much about was happiness enough to get his work done.

It is readily seen what is contemplated when the several scriptural quotations at the head of this article are read in connection with each other. It means work; it means energy deliberately, and often painfully, applied to the task in hand. But because it is work performed in cooperation with others and together with God, it is occasionally touched by inspiration. Scriptural authority for this is found in Exodus 35: 30-35, as follows:

And Moses said unto the children of Israel, See, the Lord hath called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Har of the tribe of Judah; and he hath filled him with the Spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship; and to devise curious works, to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in the cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of wood, to make any manner of cunning work. And he hath put in his heart that he may teach both he, and Aholiab, the son of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan. Then hath he filled with wisdom of heart, to work all manner of work, of the engraver, and of the cunning workman, and of the embroiderer, in blue, and in purple, in scarlet, and in fine linen, and of the weaver, even of them that do any work, and of those that devise cunning work.

It is work after an ideal plan, which, with wise selection and appropriate means, when performed by each individual to the full measure of his powers, gives him his place and rank in the vast workshop wherein the eternal thoughts of God, revealed to men as their several ideals, are wrought out into actuality: the external and visible counterpart and measure of the invisible and internal energy which is the eternal, tireless, patient emphasis of God. This principle of division of labor or service according to talent, when fully introduced, will become a great source of concentration of power, increase of total activity, and of boundless progress.

Man is by nature a social being. All his thoughts and actions, therefore, have a social reference. While it is quite true that Jesus taught individual regeneration as a means to salvation, he likewise stressed the fact that every regenerate soul is born into a society and can not be saved apart from his social relations. The gospel is as fundamentally social as it is individual. No man lives unto himself—peculiar to himself—unrelated to the thought or interest of anyone else. Human society is such a closely woven fabric that no individual can suffer without involving me in his suffering.

Jesus announced that all men are brethren and the children of one heavenly Father, and that therefore the normal and rational condition of man is one of mutual helpfulness and universal friendship. He taught that mankind in the common struggle for existence should cooperate; that among themselves they should not struggle, but stand together upon a basis of reciprocal help. This principle of cooperative activity, while it does not in itself end the great struggle, nevertheless changes the form of it. Inequalities of endowment and acquired capacity remain. Fitness for the various functions of society continue as diverse as ever; for brotherhood does not imply that all men shall serve in the same way, but it does imply that all men shall serve. The man who refuses to serve denies his brotherhood and puts himself outside the pale of the church. There is no place for such a man in the kingdom of God. He is a true outlaw, and by his own act. This is the plain teaching of Jesus.

In this great community of brothers, some have five talents and some but one, but all are under the deepest obligation to improve and increase what has been committed to them and thus promote a richer and vaster life for the social whole. Jesus taught men in his teaching regarding stewardship that they do not own, but owe; that their rights are far less important than their duties. Power, wealth, learning, are not means of ministering to one's selfishness but are opportunities for the service of one's fellows. Those who have most must serve most. Stewardship is the exact opposite of exploitation, the selfish using of our fellow men for the advancement of our own interests and the increase of our own wealth.

The two things required of stewards are that they be faithful and wise—that they study to employ God's gifts with fidelity and sagacity—fidelity so that God's intruments be not perverted to self-indulgence; sagacity, so that they be made to yield as large returns as possible in blessing others. When our labor or service is devoted to a cause that has divine sanction, it is ennobled and exalted by such association to the dignity of worship. This is what is indicated by the caption of this article and very clearly stated in Doctrine and Covenants 119:8:

All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.

Compliance with this instruction will enable us to look forward in the invincible hope that in the coming years some one may be better or happier or wiser because we were true to our time and to its demands. At least, let us not sit deedless, thinking the common toil not good enough for us; but rather let us work with the present means at our disposal, trying to get our workshop ready against tomorrow's daylight.

Strong with the strength of earth beneath their tread,
 Slow as the marching stars they gaze upon,
 Squadrons of living men and living dead,
 The legions of democracy press on;
 As one they come; and who in yonder van
 Illumines all the path that man may see?
 I think it is a fellow workingman—
 A carpenter, they say, from Galilee.

Thoughts on the Word of Wisdom

BY MABEL L. FRITSCHLE

The idea that we should not lean too heavily on science to prove the Word of Wisdom appeals to me, and I think it will to all thinking Saints. So far as food is concerned, science is still in its infancy. It has made a good start, it is true, but it still leaves much to be desired in the way of correct information. Anyway, there is always some room for doubt when man speaks, and this doubt becomes a certainty when he speaks contrary to the written word. No faithful Latter Day Saint will think of taking the evidence offered by scientific men when it conflicts with any part of the gospel.

We tell our good friends in other churches that they must not twist the Bible, leave out or add to, to fit their creeds; and of course we can not consistently be guilty of an offense of like nature ourselves concerning the Doctrine and Covenants and the Word of Wisdom. We will take it all, just as it reads, without any private interpretation to suit our acquired appetites or our intemperance.

I think we will all find that is not as easy as it sounds. There is no urge of human nature so hard to control as the appetite for food, and few things so essential as this control in the building of character, as well as the building of the body.

It is said that more than ninety-five per cent of all disease in the human body originates in the stomach. Not that there is anything wrong with the stomach itself, but because of overeating and of eating the wrong kinds of food. We all know that this has become a great menace to the welfare of the American people.

Nearly every food specialist has his own ideas as to what is the right sort of food, and often these ideas are absolutely opposed to each other, to say nothing of being opposed to the Word of Wisdom. Much of this is propaganda for commercial purposes. No doubt God knew in 1833 that this condition would arise in the world and the Saints would not be spared. It seems to me God has one aim, so far as the faithful are concerned, and that is to protect them, physically and spiritually, from all the machinations of the evil power, so that they may make their way back to him, from whence they strayed by transgression in the beginning.

The Word of Wisdom certainly sets forth the idea of protection. "In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you and forewarn you by giving unto you this Word of Wisdom by revelation." God did not leave anything to chance or doubt in this "Word." It is both simple and plain. The only way we can make a mistake in it or misunderstand it, is in our anxiety to justify our desire to gratify and indulge our appetites.

A great many food specialists have found that meat in the large quantities in which it is consumed in both hot and cold seasons is poisonous to the human body. But they did not have God to direct them to the truth of the matter, and so they naturally jumped to the conclusion that all flesh, at all times, is injurious. Section 49:3 of Doctrine and Covenants says that this extreme view is not of God: "And whoso forbiddeth to abstain from meats, that man should not eat the same, is not ordained of God; for behold the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, and that which cometh of the earth, is ordained for the use of man, for food and for raiment."

The extreme of no meat at any time, is, no doubt, preferable to that of indulgence, but God has given us the truth, so we need go to neither extreme: "Yea, flesh also, of beasts and of the fowls of the air, I, the Lord, hath ordained for the use of man, with thanksgiving. Nevertheless; they are to be used sparingly; and it is pleasing to me that they should not be used only in times of winter or cold or famine. . . . And these [wild animals, not domesticated animals] hath God made for the use of man only in times of famine and excess of hunger."

I often wonder when I see Latter Day Saints, and especially those holding the priesthood, joining hunting parties for sport (and we see a lot of that out in this western country), killing for pleasure, just what condemnation they are laying up for themselves. Christ said, "Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments and shall teach men so to do, he shall in no wise be saved in the kingdom of heaven."—Matthew 5:21, Inspired Translation.

These men teach by example, if not by precept. I have heard the excuse offered that section 86 is "not a command." Of all excuses one hears for the violation of this advice of God, that is the weakest. Is a man who will deliberately ignore the ex- pressed will of God fit to represent him in the priesthood? Anyway, not to kill for sport is a command, Genesis 9:11, Inspired Translation: "And surely blood shall not be shed, only for meat, to save your lives; and the blood of every beast will I require at your hands."

Just as experience has taught men that meat, as it is commonly consumed, is not good for the body, it is also teaching them that fruit and vegetables eaten in the raw state, and fresh from the bosom of Mother Nature, is far superior to cooked or canned ones.

When I was in training in one of the largest nature cure institutions in the country, I saw men and women paying from fifty to one hundred and fifty dollars a week to learn to let cooked and canned goods alone, and to eat raw carrots and beets! Yes, many Latter Day Saints do it, too. If their pastor should try to teach them, free of charge, to observe the Word of Wisdom literally, as it reads, they would probably be offended, and yet they will pay a fancy price to some "scientific" man or woman of the world to teach what is in their own book! Just what peculiar quirk in human nature makes this condition possible among the Saints?

I often wonder, knowing doctors and surgeons, drugs and operations as I do, why these methods, that for so many years have proved failures so far as conquering disease is concerned (but highly successful for the practitioner's bank account), are so popular in the church; and why nature cure methods, which have proved so successful (and why not, since it is God's own way), and which are free to all, should be ignored by our church, as a church.

Of course, I know that individuals are getting tired of the tyranny of the American Medical Association, but as a body we are more doctor ridden than people of the world.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The Officer and Teacher Meetings

Our correspondence indicates that more and more these monthly meetings are looked forward to by the working forces of the school as a time for mutual conference over perplexing problems, for unifying plans, and initiating new ideas, to make the work of the school more happy and successful. The meeting should be at once a clearing house for problems, a forum for discussion, and a school of methods. We do not see how any great degree of success may be expected without such an effort.

We are all coming to realize, too, that but a minor part of our teaching is concerned with the imparting of information. Facts and truths are important tools, especially those found in the recognized word of God or discovered in his handiwork, but the children will soon forget most of the facts we have taught them—but they never will lose the effect of the thinking, feeling, and acting which results from their contact with the school, our class, and with us as teachers and companions.

But this is the real theme of our lesson for April.

Theme: How shall we connect our religious instruction with life and conduct?

Text: Betts, How to Teach Religion, Chapter VI.

The three outstanding aims of religious education are (1) fruitful religious knowledges, (2) right religious attitudes, and (3) skills in right living. The first two are essential means, the last, the desired result.

The only knowledge of great value to one is the knowledge which can be and is put into active service, guiding thought, furnishing motives, prompting action from day to day.

The interest, ideals, and emotions aroused must be afforded a natural outlet in expression in deeds and conduct or they soon fade away and lose their value.

Vital religious teaching, then, not only seeks to impart knowledge of fact and truth, but it seeks to develop religious interests, desires, ideals, and emotions, and to provide avenues and means of expression in which the teaching shall actually help the student to live more broadly, sympathetically, usefully, happily, in harmony with the gospel plan.

There are many things about a child's religion which should become fixed in habit, as the matter of attending church, personal devotions, resisting temptations, being helpful, etc. If such habits become fairly fixed, they relieve the struggle of decision each time an occasion arises.

While the child is unable to understand or grasp the broader and deeper meanings of religion, the plastic period of childhood is preeminently the time for the starting of religious habits.

Habits grow from a chain of actions, often repeated. Hence the secret of our educational effort is to afford opportunity for our teaching to be carried as soon as possible over into deeds.

The lessons should be so direct, simple, and clear that the child interprets them immediately in terms of the daily life going on about him.

The teacher should use every power to help the child meet the challenge of his daily life with the finest acts, and the noblest conduct possible for him to command.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

To Corea, Maine, From Jonesport

On the morning of January 25, Brother M. C. Fisher and I left Jonesport, Maine, after having spent a few days there in the interests of church work.

Maine has more coast line than any other State on the eastern side of the United States, perhaps as much as several of them together. In a former "journey" I mentioned the far inland-reaching arms of the sea, which make land journeys up and down the coast long.

The weather was so remarkably mild, for January, that Brother Crowley said he would take us to Corea by boat if Brother Newman Wilson would go along. Newman, "sea dog" that he is, consented. So bidding farewell to our genial hostesses, about 10 a. m. we four were once more in the boat which the day before had taken us to Hall's Island. Casting off the mooring fastenings, the motor started a steady "pop-pop-pop," which never stopped till it was "shut off" at Corea.

A mild day for January, yet the air was keen, and the warmth of the little cabin was sought occasionally, by the "lubbers" particularly. But there was too much to see along the beautiful coast to remain inside. And so we enjoyed the many pretty views of rock, reach, island, lighthouses, foaming ledges, swimming and flying waterfowl, passing craft, and fleeting cloud.

Again I could not but note the almost uncanny instinct or something by which our host, Brother Leon Crowley, and Newman knew the location of sunken ledge and low-setting rock, close contact with which might despoil our craft of its seaworthiness. Those Maine men surely "know their rocks"—have to, in order to keep afloat.

I'm not trying to tell, either, all that happened on that run, nor speak of all that passed through my mind. But as I ran back in memory over the past few days and attempted an appreciation of the Saints I had met and the conditions in which they are, and thought of what must yet be, so far as Zion is concerned, there came thoughts of what are the vocations and callings of our Saints in Maine, particularly on the coast, and what they would do in Zion when the time comes (soon, methinks,) for them to go to Zion. Closely connected with that is the thought of preparation for their going, as well as that for their coming to Zion, and the close connection between industry, agriculture, and Zion. And I thought of the Saints in Australia, in the Tuamotuas, Hawaii, Europe, elsewhere, and what the preparation is which is necessary to make Zion ready for their coming, while they are preparing to come.

Such thoughts fill me with a great and deep concern, together with a longing to see a finer, richer working unity among us, that the work of preparation might go forward with dispatch and wisdom. But so far as concerns those Maine Saints and Zion, I am not worrying much; for men and women who can wrest a living from the sea and rocks of that rugged coast have developed a resourcefulness and an adaptability which will enable them to find their niches—ones of usefulness—in Zion or almost anywhere else, other than a desert.

Corea, the home of a citizenry which follows the sea, lies by the open sea, on as pretty a little harbor as one could wish to see. The town is not large, so the small harbor meets its needs. And as one comes into the harbor, through the narrow, rockbound entrance, and sees the row of trim lobstering and fishing craft riding gracefully at their moorings, their prows in a line pointing into the wind or against the tide, and makes a hasty estimate of the number of houses around the bay, it is easy to guess that the entire population could "put to sea" at one time in their own shipping. In Kansas they tell me there is an automobile to every five persons, so the Doctor Betts suggests a code of action which a child should be led to adopt and follow. This is similar to the Boy Scout Law. Some of these are as follows:

- I will respect and care for my body.
- I will keep good-natured, cheerful, and obedient.
- I will take pride in work and thrift.
- I will be courteous and kind.
- I will each day turn to my heavenly Father for health, strength, direction, and forgiveness.

To make such high ideals one's habit of life and action, they must be made desirable and attainable. At last they may govern his conduct and become an inseparable part of his character.

The child's experience in attendance upon church and Sunday school and in membership in his class should be so interesting and satisfying that his attendance does not have to be compelled; his loyalty, affection, and pride naturally lead him to them.

Class organization, in which members carry responsibility as officers or committeemen, the planning of class or group projects for out-of-class work, helps to develop habits of responsibility for others.

The wise teacher will seize upon every opportunity to find worth-while things for his pupils to do. His teaching is not complete until it is carried out in doing. He will make his class a laboratory course in religion.

The sense of personal responsibility of each child for the happy success of every undertaking will lead to the preparation of lessons, participation in singing, offering prayer and in the conduct of class exercises, in giving, and in other forms of social service.

It is in the home that the intimate relations of children with each other and with their parents find most frequent and vital opportunity for moral and religious lessons of forbearance, faith, kindness, and mutual service.

Pride in the appearance and attractiveness of the home should cause children to be careful in their own habits of neatness, cleanliness, and order about the home.

The final test of the success of our teaching is the amount of carry-over we are able to produce in the habits and conduct of our pupils.

Suggested Topics for Written or Oral Discussion.

1. Which of the three aims of religious education do you consider of most importance?
2. How may we maintain a reasonable balance in our emphasis in teaching?
3. Discuss youth as the age of habit forming.
4. Suggest various ways in which the daily life of the child may be directly affected by our Sunday school effort.

Word comes from Brother Robert H. Evans, of the Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan District, of a series of meetings consisting of eighteen sermons which has just been closed at Battle Creek, Michigan. Elder J. W. McKnight was the speaker. Brother Evans says: "Attendance was good throughout, and much interest was manifested, many outsiders coming to hear the word of truth from our able speaker. We feel that much good has been done, and the good seed sown will grow. Brother Harrington, district president, also was present at different times during the meetings."

population can "go on wheels" all at once. I doubt not Corea can "go to sea" all at once in its own boats.

Into the picturesque harbor of Corea we put, about 1 p. m., after having had a remarkably smooth run for the time of the year, and having enjoyed the scenery, the ride, and the seamanship of Brothers Leon and Newman.

Part of the harbor was covered by a coating of ice; but Leon found a careful way to a wharf, and soon we were "landed," bag and baggage.

At the home of Brother and Sister Guy Francis we found a welcome awaited us, and there M. C. and I stayed for the night, while Leon and Newman went to Brother Young's.

That night we all went to the church building, where Brother Clark had called his flock together, and where I spoke to them about Zion and our duties toward it. Once more I found the Saints responsive to the ideals of the gathering and its allied topics.

Back to Brother Francis's, a time was spent around the fire in the kitchen stove and a plentiful table, and as we retired for the night and Leon and Newman left to go to Brother Young's, the plans were for them to meet at Brother Francis's home early next morning, get an early start, and go by boat to Stonington, if the weather would permit.

Weather on the Maine coast seems to be at once a large and yet an uncertain factor in the doings of the people. So it proved this time; for by the morning of the 26th a sharp fall in temperature and gale of wind caused a distinct change of mind about going to Stonington by boat. In zero weather or near it, a sea trip in a partially open boat is quite unattractive. So bidding a reluctant farewell to Leon and Newman, and to the Francis family, M. C. and I were in a Ford landcraft taken by Brothers Guy Francis and Leo Young, to a railway station on the Maine Central, called Wauberg, where we entrained for a short run to Ellsworth. There we were met by an automobile sent up from East Lemoine, and about 2 p. m. were at the home of Brother and Sister Henry Gerrish, on the upper reach of Frenchman's Bay. There we found a hearty welcome from the fine old couple who have been standbys in the work thereabouts for many years. We reached there about 2 p. m., and after lunch I went to work at mail, etc., and kept at it the next day; for that night the thermometer went down below zero some degrees, and a strong wind increased our desire to stay in. But who could be cold around Uncle Henry's great woodpile or go hungry when "Aunt Cad" is about? Between writing, reading, and visiting, the time passed quickly; and the weather moderating on the 27th, we decided to "move on" on the 28th. But before leaving, after breakfast, Uncle Henry took us about the place, telling of his experiences as farmer, sawyer, and fisher, etc., and we saw the improvements of the one hundred acre Maine farm. It was greatly interesting to me.

About 10.30 a. m. we bade our lovable host and hostess good-by, and in a Ford car owned and driven by a neighbor of the Gerrishes, Mr. McClellan, M. C., and I began the journey to Stonington. We went via Ellsworth, thence to Sargentville, where, calling the ferryman by telephone, we were ferried across to Deer Isle. There Captain Sheppard in his Essex met us and carried us the twelve or so miles to Stonington. At the home of Henry Eaton we found a warm welcome, and there M. C. and I domiciled.

Here memories were awakened; for when in 1915 the family and I were returning west from Worcester, Massachusetts, we had gone via Stonington and Montreal and Toronto. And I recalled the kindly courtesies extended the family, particularly the departed one, by the Deer Island Saints. So I looked forward to seeing them again. On the former visit, Sister Eaton, well and strong, had been good to us. Now, though courteous and anxious to do, we found her powers curtailed by disease; but with a warm heart and her faith alive. What a blessing it is in times of sickness to have a devoted family and faithful children.

Saturday night, and twice on Sunday I spoke at the church, also to priesthood meeting in the afternoon of Sunday. Good audiences attended, and interest was good. It is needless to say that Zion was the principal theme.

Stonington, formerly Green's Landing, has a more varied industry than does Jonesport. Large granite quarries give it its name. Fishing, lobstering, and scalloping are carried on, while many families are supported by their heads and sons "following the sea" on steamers, merchantmen, yachts, etc. Some of the best sailors on the eastern coast of the United States come from Deer Island (Little and Big), while many vessels plying coastwise trade are registered from Stonington.

On Monday, the 31st, M. C. left early, to spend a day with the Saints at Vinal Haven. I stayed to visit the quarry on Goss Island, the quarry where Brother Eaton acts as superintendent. Brother Berve was with me, and we spent what to me was a very interesting and pleasant half day seeing the equipment and operation of a great quarry.

After two days spent rather closely with the papers of my portfolio, together with some calls and visits made with Brother Berve and meeting in prayer meeting Wednesday night with the Stonington Branch, I was called quite early on the morning of the 3d of February and told that Captain Knowlton had sent word that he was soon to leave Stonington for Rochland, in the tug boat of which he is captain, and if I wanted to go with him, to hurry to the dock. Dressing hurriedly I found Sister Eaton and Leona had arranged for me to be taken to the dock by car, and I was soon there and aboard the Eugene Spofford.

Of the trip, in my next.

Notable Figure Passes

By William Patterson

The sudden death of Robert Miller, of Cleveland, Ohio, caused a gloom to fall upon his many friends in and out of the church, and will, I am sure, cause a heartfelt response from his many friends in the traveling ministry.

Robert was the third son of the late Brother and Sister Miller, pioneers of Salt Lake City. In 1865 they were baptized into the Mormon Church, at Seaham Harbor, England, and the following year went to Utah, where they spent a checkered career which caused their disillusionment. (A glowing account of this appears in the Journal of History for October, 1914.) In the month of April, the Millers made their escape from Utah, and four months later Robert was born to them in London, England. Six years later they returned to the United States of America and later learned of, and united with, the Reorganized Church.

Not until his twenty-third year, did Robert unite with the church, but since that time he has been an honest, energetic, and faithful member and minister. He will be much missed in the Lakewood Branch, which he was instrumental in establishing and over which he presided, and at the Kirtland reunion, where he was an active official.

Death occurred on Wednesday, March 9, and the interment took place at Kirtland, Saturday, March 12. The temple was nearly filled with relatives and friends from many and distant places.

To the many who attended the Kirtland reunion, this death will be a shock. "Bob" was a "fixture" at the reunion, and his absence will be keenly felt. Kirtland was a sacred shrine to him, and the annual reunion a pilgrimage. It is very fitting that his mortal pilgrimage should end at Kirtland.

Elders G. T. Griffiths and John McNeil were in charge of the funeral. Elder William Patterson delivered the address.

Synopsis of Sermon

It is a mutually shared sorrow that brings relatives and friends together to pay the last respect and tribute to one who has endeared himself to us and for whom we had the highest esteem. The presence of so many friends attests the heartfelt loss we have sustained and the sympathy which is extended the bereft. Well might the wise man say, "A good name is better than ointment, and the day of one's death than the day of one's birth."

When a child is born into the world, it is merely prospective. With hope and faith we look upon the little form and attempt the prediction of its future. The prediction of the cradle is less certain than that of the coffin. The coffin holds the actual, the finished, the accomplished life—the determiner of destiny.

As we look upon the mortal remains of the revered Robert Miller, we are assured the life he lived must reap a rich destiny. He gave the best he had, therefore the best must come back to him. The divine decree, "What a man sows that shall he also reap," is universal and exacting. There is no escaping this inevitable law. The farmer that sows the seed of wheat with faith looks forward to a harvest of its kind; the man that plants the tender tree awaits the laws of growth to produce its fruit—"By their fruits shall ye know them." This fitting analogy was used by the Author of Life that there should be no mistaking human kind. By this test we determine the honorable from the dishonorable, the righteous from the unrighteous, the hypocrite from the man of integrity, the saint from the sinner.

Mere church affiliation is no guarantee of future reward or punishment. The church is no cloak behind which to hide, nor an institution from which to shrink in justification. It is not one's profession that determines his destiny, but the crystallization of those professions in human conduct, human relations. "Not all that say unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven." Emerson said: "What you are speaks so loudly I can not hear what you say." We therefore should judge an individual, an institution, not by profession but by expression. A number of you people here today are not acquainted with the church with which Mr. Miller was connected; but knowing the man, you have a greater respect for his belief.

Christ built his church—not that membership in it would insure salvation and serve an institution, but that that membership would increase our service and make possible the working out of our salvation. To paraphrase the words of the Master, Man was not made for the church, but the church was made for man.

Not all who belong to the church will be saved, nor will all who do not belong to it be lost. Of course the man who belongs to the church should have a better concept of life, and, therefore, living up to the ideals of the Christ should be more enriched and better able to serve than the man who does not belong to the church and whose ideals are not those of Christ. Christianity makes provision for universal salvation: "I came to save that which was lost." "I will draw all men unto me." However, Apostle Paul says, "but every man in his order." As there are degrees of perfection in human conduct, there must of necessity be gradation of reward in the eternal life.

It is the belief of this church that the life that has been touched by the message of Christ is capable of greater good and therefore is rewarded in the highest glory, termed by us celestial glory. Those whose faith is centered in Christ and whose hopes are resting upon the Christian philosophy of life's continuity, and who knew Robert Miller in life, are not hesitant to predict his destiny. In him was Christ vindicated; in him was religion attested. Ever since that Thanksgiving Day of 1894 when, with his wife, he merged in Christ, has he been consistently religious. Religion came first in his life. And when I say religion, I do not want it understood that I refer to the church and its ministrations. All life to him was sacred; hence he became a better husband, a better father, a better employee, a better citizen, a better friend. His was a daily religion, and with him was the statement practical, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy might, mind, and strength, and thy neighbor as thyself."

It would not be inappropriate were I to mention that the deceased combined insurance agent and minister very successfully. In a twofold way did he desire to insure against death, and was concerned with endowments both material and spiritual. To him the human side had its constant appeal. To him a friend in need was a friend indeed. If every kindness that that silent heart and those still hands administered were rewarded with a wreath of flowers, he would this day sleep beneath a monument of bloom. Methinks I see him hustling from group to group at reunion time asking, "Everybody happy?"

In his desire to make others happy he forgot himself until his health was undermined and his heart depressed. To him life meant, Give thyself; and when he felt he could not give himself to his work and family, life had ceased for him. He could not see himself an object of pity or a burden to others. To the people who knew him not, Robert Miller died Wednesday morning, but to us he ceased to exist some time ago—the optimistic, consistent, honest "Bob" was supplanted by a sick, sad, and disappointed man. It is the former I wish you to envision, for it is that man who has left us an enviable record, a rich heritage. It is that man who made his presence felt, who was loved by relative and friend, by old and young.

Progress of the Work at Richmond, Missouri

Since the first of the year I have labored one month here at Richmond, one month at Saint Joseph, and one week at Fortescue. The interest in all places has been quite above the average, and the attendance very good.

Our largest attendance of nonmembers was at Fortescue, Missouri, where we have a nice little band of Saints, numbering thirty-five or forty. This faithful group of Saints will soon be organized into a branch, by order of the late stake conference held at Saint Joseph. At Fortescue we have had as high as one hundred and thirty nonmembers present at our meetings. The prospects for the work at that place are as good as at any of the small branches in the stake where I have had the privilege of laboring this year. They have a fine, neat little church, which will comfortably seat about one hundred and fifty. A piano has been installed recently, and a social held the last night I was with them last week netted them over thirty-eight dollars, which was more than enough to cover their last payment. A program was given in addition to the box supper, which was enjoyed by the one hundred and sixty who were present. A good spirit prevailed, and it was with reluctance that the writer left them the next day. Elder Okerlind was to be with them over the following Sunday.

I was told by several who were in attendance at our recent stake conference at Saint Joseph that it was one of the best conferences held in the stake for years. The spirit of consecration was with the large assembly that witnessed the ordination of twelve young men at the afternoon prayer service. The visit and sermons of Elders Koehler and Macrae, of the Holden Stake, were much enjoyed. One of the ushers said that at one time during the Sunday meetings there were over five hundred people in the building.

We are especially pleased with the way things are moving forward with the band of Saints in the city of Richmond. It is very necessary that the Saints at this place soon have a church building upon the two lots which have been purchased for that purpose. Their present place of meeting in the building now standing upon these lots is inadequate to accommodate the number now attending services.

It is a pleasure to see so many here now taking such an interest in the building up of the work. Richmond is a city with an historical setting, known to the Saints as the home of the Whitmers. It was here almost ninety years ago that Joseph and Hyrum Smith and Sidney Rigdon and fifty-three others of the early day Saints were brought from Jackson County and placed under charge of Colonel Price, of Confederate fame, being charged with all manner of crime. It was not prosecution but persecution.

Concerning this matter, Joseph the Martyr wrote as follows: "Sunday, 11th. While at Richmond we were under the charge of Colonel Price from Chariton County, who suffered all manner of abuse to be heaped upon us. During this time my afflictions were great and our situation was very painful." They were later taken to the jail at Liberty, Missouri, where they were to be tried. General Doniphan, who was the lawyer selected by this persecuted band of Saints, told them not to summon any more witnesses in their behalf, as said witnesses would be abused and driven from the country. Joseph reports General Doniphan as having said that if a cohort of angels were to come down from heaven and declare we were clear, it would be all the same, for the judge had determined from the beginning to cast us into prison.

General Doniphan, who so many times befriended the early Saints, is held in great esteem by the citizens of this city, county, and State. The monument in front of the county courthouse here, built to the memory of this great and good man, evidences the great esteem in which he was held. In his interview with the Kansas City Journal in 1881, upon being asked about our people in the early days, said that "they were a peaceable, sober, industrious and law-abiding people while they resided in Clay County, and during their stay with us not one of them was accused of a crime in any way." (SAINTS' HERALD, August 1, 1881.)

General Doniphan died in Richmond in 1887. His monument stands in the courthouse square immediately west of the courthouse and facing the west, in which direction a few blocks distant is the cemetery on the hill, where the remains of David Whitmer were laid to rest and upon whose humble tombstone may be seen the inscription of some of his last words as follows: "The Record of the Jews and the Record of the Nephites are one. Truth is Eternal." His last thoughts were upon that to which he was a special witness. Oliver Cowdery, another of the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon, died in Richmond and was buried here.

We are glad to see the work prospering in this place. There is very little prejudice here, if any at all, at the present time. It is a pleasure to talk to the old-timers here and to hear their words of praise for such men as General Doniphan, and the Whitmers who moved here in later years. We believe the Lord is blessing the Saints here and moving upon others to locate here, and surely this, together with the interest being shown by many of the nonmembers residing here, indicates Richmond as a coming stronghold of the Saints.

Elder W. G. Hamann, who is in charge of the work here, has informed me that the Sunday school has doubled its attendance during the past year. This shows what a band of Saints can accomplish by being faithful, though but few in number.

Any visiting Saints or elders will be welcomed by Brother Hamann and told of the places of interest in the city. He will be found at Hamann's Cash Grocery, northwest corner of the square.

Glad Tidings From San Diego

The above caption will doubtless interest those who read and responded to our "S O S from San Diego," more than a year ago. Moreover, I will write a personal letter to everyone who has kept in mind and observed the provisions of our request throughout the year. I have something to interest you. Please send me your address, stating that you have remembered us during the year.

Since we reported the election of Elder A. T. Gray as president of this branch the first of the year, it has taken on new life, due to his wise management and tireless labors. Both interest and attendance have increased, and as Brother Gray has the happy faculty of discovering the talents of others and of putting them to work, nearly everyone has something to do, and is busy doing it.

At a business meeting held March 9, the branch either elected, or authorized the appointment of, the following: A flower committee headed by our efficient Sunday school superintendent, Sister Melvin; a relief committee, with Brother E. C. Aylor as chairman, to assist the deacon, Brother F. P. Melvin; Brethren J. N. Munroe and E. C. Aylor as assistant pastors; Brethren George Sherman and Ray Wetherbee to serve as city missionaries; Sister Edna Jones to have charge of the music; C. A. Gurwell, publicity agent, librarian, and corresponding secretary.

Our church building was bought from another organization which had made provision in it for the residence of the pastor. As Brother Gray lives at 1534 Third Street, and the living rooms are furnished but vacant at present, Brother and Sister Gurwell were invited to occupy them and act as caretakers of the place. So now we are living here and shall be glad to welcome all visiting Saints and provide such entertainment and information as we can. When in San Diego, come here; or, if you want us to look up friends, write to either Brother A. T. Gray, or myself, at 4328 Alabama Street, San Diego, California. C. A. GURWELL.

Student Recital at Chapel Friday

It is the aim of the studio department to give several student recitals each year. This is a great help, not only for the performers but also in affording a very high class entertainment for the rest of the student body and visitors. The last recital consisted of vocal and piano numbers of a very excellent standard.

Graceland offers a great deal more than most colleges of her size do offer in the studio department. The instructors are exceptionally well qualified in their respective fields. Miss Mabel Carlile is the head of the department, and Miss Wary (piano) and Miss Lloyd (voice) are her assistants. Mr. Anthony is the instrumental instructor.

The Friday Chapel Recital program was as follows:

Polish Dance	Sharwenka
	Alta Royer
Gethsemane	Mary Tumer Salter
	Doris, Waterman, Contralto
Consolation	Liszt
	Charlene Hensel
Fluttering Bird	Mana-Zucca
	Berniece Gamet
Gypsy Dance	Concone
	Darlene Schneider
Bells of the Sea	Alfred Sommers
	Clifford Green, Baritone
Liebestraume No. 3	Liszt
	Byron Neville
A Birthday	Huntington
	Grace Lane, Soprano
Concert Waltz	Friml
	Rae Lysinger
Prelude, Dawn in Forest from "Cycle of Life"	Ronald Gertrude White, Soprano
	FRANKLYN WEDDLE.

Geology Class Enjoy Field Trip

From all signs observed about the campus, spring is here. Even some of the instructors are finding excuses to take their classes outdoors. Tuesday, Mr. Mortimore took his geology classes on a field trip. The chief object of the hike was that of studying rocks. The morning class found it an interesting experience to observe the gneiss and clay banks found on this trip. They brought back some new specimens—among them, Chinese porcelain. Most of the members of the class decided they knew their rocks very well.

A Trip to California

The student body and faculty at Graceland College spent a few moments last Monday morning taking an imaginary trip to California. The sun was shining bright, and there were many other signs of spring on the campus. With this ideal day and the vivid description that was given, it was not hard for anyone to imagine himself in a garden spot of California.

L. D. Weldon very ably took us in his little old Ford from Graceland to this State. Along the way we stopped at many very interesting places. One of which we Graceland people were curious about was Salt Lake City.

When we reached California, Bill Collins escorted us through the State, telling us about the climate, schools, and natural resources. He was able to make us understand many wonderful things about his native State.

LUCILLE GARRETT.

The Sons' and Daughters' Club

The eighteen sons and daughters of Graceland alumni have organized a sons' and daughters' club. The officers elected were:

Margaret Harrington, president
Marjorie Gamet, vice-president
Verna Garver, secretary-treasurer
Raymond Smith, corresponding secretary

The charter members of the club are:

Katherine Skinner	Carol Smith
Gertrude White	Margaret Harrington
Grace Lane	Sammye Bailey
Ruth Hansen	Berniece Gamet
Lorenzo Kelley	Ruth Briggs
Rae Lysinger	Verna Garver
Helen Mills	Marjorie Gamet
Delphine Skinner	Raymond Smith
Helen Anthony	Elizabeth Briggs

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Mortimore, former Graceland students, are sponsoring the organization. Meetings are held once a month.

The club intends to cooperate with the school officials and the Alumni Association in getting in touch with prospective students of alumni parentage and encourage their attendance at Graceland.

Patroness Girls' Banquet

The Patroness colleens gave their annual Saint Patrick's banquet Friday evening in Briggs Hall. Even though old Patroness burned, the girls could not think of giving up this old tradition. The laddies arrived at six o'clock and with the brightly dressed colleens made a charming scene. After greetings a short program in charge of Floy Roberson was presented. Alma Edwards gave a reading "Jimmie Butler and the owl," after which two Irish songs, "Where the River Shannon flows" and "My wild Irish rose," were sung by Ruby Sandage, Louise Lewis, and Floy and Fern Roberson.

Edith Woods called the couples, and the banqueters marched to their places, led by George Mesley and Blanche Edwards. At a signal from Toastmistress Blanche Edwards, grace was sung.

Miss Edwards expressed her happiness in being back to Graceland for the function of the evening, and then called on Byron Jennings to give a toast to "Old Patroness." The girls sang a song composed by one of their number in honor of their old home. Edith Woods gave a toast to the "Patroness Girls."

A delightful three-course dinner was served, the Saint Patrick scheme being cleverly carried out in decorations of green, white, and pink. Wild Irish roses were used for nut cups.

Roy Cheville gave a toast, "May the hinges of friendship never grow rusty." He also paid a tribute to Patroness in his toast.—Graceland Record.

Music Contest

While the intersociety music contest is one of the most recent contests to be installed as an intersociety event, it is already acknowledged to be one of the most interesting and profitable of all contests. The contest of this year, which took place last Saturday evening at the Brick Church, gave evidence that the four societies are musically awake and making noticeable improvement in both orchestral and vocal ensembles.

One of the noticeable features of the contest was that each society succeeded in winning a first place, thereby keeping the honors quite evenly divided and indicating the close competition in all classes. Regardless of this fact, however, the spirit of true sportsmanship prevailed, and though each society held hope of winning the banner, the losers should take a justifiable pride in the showing made by their organizations, which if used as a stepping-stone for the future and carried on with the enthusiasm demonstrated this year, assures the success of music in Graceland. The contest this year was judged by Thelma Lane, Florence Thompson, and J. H. Anthony.—Graceland Record.

Sacramento, California

Our March sacramental services brought to a close our three weeks of missionary services at the church, conducted by Elder Guy P. Levitt. Our membership, choir, and orchestra gave their devoted attendance and were much built up by the sermons. Two weeks of stormy weather was a serious hindrance, although a few nonmembers were often present.

An eight o'clock prayer service on the Sunday morning previous to the sacramental Sunday was a never-to-be-forgotten spiritual feast for the fifty or more present. They came fasting, and Elders Levitt and W. H. Dawson, pastor, presided. After the opening, Brother Levitt exhorted the Saints to occupy promptly and they would be blessed. This was done, and a wonderful spirit of prayer and testimony was enjoyed. The gift of prophecy was given through Brother Levitt, in which the Saints as a whole were commended and blessed and also forewarned to be often in prayer, that they might remain faithful and protect their homes. Our orchestra leader, Brother Edwin C. Burdick, was spoken to directly, being told that the Lord was pleased with his efforts with the orchestra and that often when he had thought the music was not so good, the angels of heaven had sung in the musical numbers given. He was also told that because of a resolution made in his heart some time previous, he was now called to the office of deacon, and if faithful would be called higher and higher until he sat in the councils of the church. A sister was then spoken to and exhorted not to quench the Spirit given to her, that she might be a blessing to the Saints.

Our sacramental service the following Sunday found one hundred and twenty present, and a spiritual time was enjoyed with an unusual number of testimonies. Brother Burdick has since been ordained to the office of deacon, Brother Levitt officiating.

Our aged sister, Anna S. Milgate, passed on to her reward on February 26 and was laid to rest, Brother Levitt officiating, in beautiful Odd Fellows Lawn Cemetery, near where our beloved Sister Christina Blair was laid about one year ago. These two sisters were close friends in the pioneer days of this branch and continued so through all the days of their active years. Many a former traveling elder will recall the home of Sister Milgate.

At our sacramental service it was noted that but two of our pioneer sisters were present, Sisters Hannah Brown and Susan Harlow. By special request each spoke, and Sister Brown spoke very feelingly of the early days of this branch and mentioned many beloved names of missionaries and elders who labored here, and who to the present generation are but the names we find recorded in the church history, yet the Spirit that "quickeneth" and creates the "love of the brethren" makes us feel that we know them.

In our last letter we omitted chronicling the death last fall of one of our lovely young sisters, Mrs. Alice Hook Stevenson, daughter of Brother Henry Hook, of Roseville. Her brief illness and sudden passing brought sorrow to her many loved ones and friends here.

Our resume of last year's activities also omitted some pleasant items. Two of the many baptized here last fall included Sister Elizabeth Dixon, a staunch Catholic for years, and later her husband, T. K. Dixon. This brought rejoicing to many prayerful hearts. Because of the saintly life of their grandmother, Sister Harvey Green, Sister Dixon had her two children, Evelyn and Jack Green, baptized here some years ago, and they are now numbered with our young people.

At our last district reunion, Elder Roy Barmore, of Newcastle, promised the boys helping with the task of dishwashing, a watermelon feed at his farm home near Newcastle. His invitation was enlarged until nearly our whole branch went by auto, winding up among the fruit-tree covered foothills, to enjoy the watermelons purchased by the brother, as well as grapes and peaches from his own "ranch." He also led us for a merry hike up and down and around over his place. The pleasant memory of that day makes us glad that spring is here again.

Elder C. W. Earle, of Rocklin, occupied our pulpit to our edification one Sunday morning recently. He and Sister Earle and Sister Mabel Longstreth drove down expecting to hear Brother Levitt, but the latter was suddenly called away that morning. Brother and Sister Roy Barmore and others, of the Lincoln Branch, were also our visitors during Brother Levitt's stay with us.

The district conference, which convened here February 12 and 13, brought a large attendance, and we were privileged to hear from Apostles M. A. McConley and J. A. Gillen, Bishop Albert Carmichael, High Priest J. A. Tanner, and Missionaries V. Etzenhouser and G. P. Levitt. The district choir, with Sister Birdie Clark, chorister, directing, gave the cantata for women's voices, "The angel and the star," by Wilson, on the Sunday morning program. The orchestra, augmented by a number of district musicians, gave a splendid program Sunday afternoon and assisted in all other services. They were in charge of our Brother Burdick. Our local building proved too small twice during the conference.

Our building and finance committees appointed to handle the problem of our new church building met and organized last week. Assemblyman and brother, Will Badham, of Los Angeles, here for the legislature meeting, met with us and spoke of their new building and its incidental problems.

During the Sunday school hour last Sunday, Sister Laura Packard, superintendent of the Long Beach Sunday school, gave us an interesting talk of her present church work, as well as that of two years spent as Southern California District Sunday school superintendent. We were pleased to be numbered among the three schools she chose to visit on her note-taking trip.

Spokane, Washington

In the recent past, A. E. Rowell, secretary of the White Cross, gave us a very timely and interesting lecture on the narcotic conditions of this country. We feel that every effort should be taken to safeguard our young people against the cunning devices the peddlers and addicts take in spreading this most gripping and deadly modern menace. It is apparent that the young are the ones that are in the most danger, owing to the fact that we are living in a day when most young people are looking for a thrill and in some cases will sacrifice honor, virtue, and friends to get a thrill. And a few shots of dope or a snow party will produce a thrill that can be appeased only in an agonizing death.

Sunday, February 13, Elder J. J. Cornish came among us, and for a few nights we had the pleasure of hearing once more a veteran for the cause of Christ. It was good to see the old fire flare as he stood "master of the situation," knowing by past experiences that the truths against error are just as deadly knock-out blows now as they were when Cain said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" When we think about the efforts of such men and realize that their faith is as firm as the rocks, we are clothed in a shadow of remorse when we think of our feeble excuses for the burial of our talents. I often wonder when I take their hand and show them hospitality in my home, "Am I worthy to have them say, 'May the blessings of God rest upon this home?'"

February 20 Pastor Oscar Case was the speaker, taking the subject, "The two lepers," in which he made an example of our frequent unappreciativeness.

Elder John Turnball occupied the evening hour, making a splendid talk on "Love," showing by many everyday acts that the word has not lost all its love.

Sunday, the 27th, Brother Cornish was with us again and spoke at the 11 a. m. and the 7.30 p. m. services. In his morning service he spoke on the subject, "Topics of the true church."

Evening was "Experiences in the gospel," showing how the power of God has been made manifest to his people.

I want to mention the Sunday school. February 27, out of a membership of 115, 103 were present. Ten out of fourteen classes were perfect, $5.37 offering. We have some successful workers in the Sunday school. Brother Reuben H. Porter, the superintendent, is a faithful worker.

Flint, Michigan

March 26.—During the series of meetings recently conducted by Apostle E. J. Gleazer in Flint, many were strengthened; some consecrated their lives anew; to some these meetings added fuel to the fire of zeal and determination for service. The knowledge gained will help us all to live more saintly lives, which is necessary that we may demonstrate the theme of the series, "Raising the ensign." Brother Gleazer's precept and example point to the ensign with such a surety there is no chance to mistake him. There were to have been seven sermons in the series, but since the teachers of the district met in Pontiac and Brother Gleazer went to organize the quorum Sunday afternoon, and the Michigan mud was at its best, the main road being closed, he missed the final sermon, which was to have been different, he said. And it was so. Elder Oliver McDowell, branch president, filled the appointment very capably. Brother Gleazer with others, who went, got back at eleven in the night, and all were hungry and disappointed.

Monday evening was business meeting of the branch, also a reception in honor of Brother Gleazer, during the course of which he was presented with a beautiful mantel clock, which will be a reminder of the time he got delayed in Michigan mud, only a few miles from the greatest and best highway in America. We hope Brother Gleazer will be re-appointed to this field.

Flint Branch as a whole is enjoying prosperity; many are starting Zionward, heeding those in charge of the branch, who are: Branch President Oliver McDowell; Pastors G. E. Burt, G. A. Yager, L. E. Welch, A. H. Cheney; Allen Pohly, head of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Lulu Hulchins, superintendent of Department of Women; Leo C. Riegle, publicity agent; orchestra members, William Tuttle, F. G. Smith, Eva DeCaire, Robert Luce, and Charles Everhart. We hope our president will be appointed here again, for he has many things started which he should have the pleasure of seeing completed.

At our last business meeting, the question of more room for better development of the people came up; a committee was appointed to get bids and develop plans for one big church, where we can unite our efforts and save much expense and needless work in records, publicity work, library, etc. This committee is to see about selling our three churches, and its report is to be had at the next special or regular business meeting.

The priesthood institute, started some weeks ago, is coming along fine. This institute is for all; many are taking active part, and good results are coming from it. Four classes, two at a time, each Sunday afternoon are had, beginning at three o'clock. Our teachers are O. A. McDowell, G. E. Burt, Allen Pohly, and L. G. Sager.

Our Sunday schools are our largest services. Easter Sunday will be a day specially observed by this department. Baptisms, confirmations, and blessings will be outstanding features.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is in a healthy condition and is growing. The lyceum course of this department started with a chalk lecture by Mr. Durham of the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening, and the next number is to be the Groves Octet in the first part of April. A Department of Recreation and Expression is assured for Mount Morris Mission, a newly decorated hall, with improvements consisting of repaired chairs and attractive sign.

The Department of Women is active, the three groups all working to the advancement of the branch. Chicken has thus far this year been the main menu, there having been three suppers; one of these was a George Washington supper. This department is having a year book printed with names of officers, committees, etc.

The Orioles and Temple Builders are taking care of the work the Department of Women is unable to do, also doing work of their own.

The orchestra of Flint certainly honored this city at the special conference at Detroit, also during the series of meetings.

The publicity department is active, publishing a monthly four-page paper of interest to the branch. It is called The Capsule, meaning a seed pod, or a container of health. Programs are printed each week for the Newell Street Church, carrying the time of meetings, announcements, and other notices such as special Autumn Leaves offer for March, Daily Herald, etc.

From our records of twenty years ago of the Religio: "Number present at roll call, 15; visitors, 8; total attendance, 23. Sister Hattie Benedict taught the seniors, as Sister Tree is sick. Hattie Burns, secretary."

Wichita, Kansas

Bishop C. J. Hunt, of Independence, has been one of our visitors the past month. He spent one evening entertaining us, giving his experiences, which were greatly enjoyed by all. He preached twice, explaining the law of tithing and stewardship, which was well received. In fact his entire visit among us did much to encourage and strengthen the Saints.

On the evening of March 23 the ladies served dinner in the church basement, after which our regular branch business meeting was held.

Mrs. Doctor Barraclough has been giving a series of lectures on health to the members of the Department of Women each week just before our regular lesson study. We all feel greatly benefited by this and indebted to Doctor Barraclough for her willingness to give out so much free knowledge.

Sunday night we were favored with a musical program. A young man of our city, a genius on the guitar, provided entertainment for the hour.

On Wednesday night when we meet at our little church for prayer meeting, the Lord is there to meet with us. We believe that our pastor lives close to his Maker, as we can feel the Spirit radiate from him. No better place could we be on Wednesday night than at our prayer service. Brother Whalley is a faithful shepherd, and under his leadership we can see we are developing.

The Temple Builders, under the direction of Sister Whalley, put on a "circus" in the church basement. They provided entertainment for the evening, sold ice cream, lemonade, etc., as is the usual custom at a circus. Everyone enjoyed it and appreciated the efforts the girls made for its success. They netted a neat little sum. The Temple Builders give a liberal donation to the branch each month for local expenses, so they put on these entertainments to help raise their funds.

We believe we are united in our efforts for the accomplishment of good.

Fargo, North Dakota

March 24.—Fargo Saints have been enjoying a feast of spiritual things the past week, for Evangelist J. A. Gunsolley has been making a visit here, preaching each evening and on Sunday from March 13 to March 20.

Some of the texts used were "Responsibility of members to the priesthood," "Laying the foundation," "The gospel contract," "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" and "The more abundant life." Some of the principal points brought out are: We should always consider what the Lord would have us do above what others would wish us to do. What we do will bring us a crown. Serving God is not an easy or convenient thing. Jesus says we must suffer with him. Angels can do no better than to do the best they can. Things we let our minds dwell upon will sooner or later be enacted; therefore good thoughts are essential to good deeds. Life is made up of beginnings and endings. If we fail, let us begin over again. Those who hold offices are not to be dictators; all things should be done by common consent. Suggestions should be welcomed by members in all departments. We have no legal claim of forgiveness from God unless we forgive our brother. Ministers are called to preach; members are called to listen to deacons as well as seventies. We can not have confidence in people just because we want to; confidence grows legitimately in response to certain laws and rules. When confidence in priesthood is shaken, it comes like a thunderbolt. Christ is our greatest leader. He never asked anyone to do anything he himself would not do.

Two evenings were spent in round table discussions, and a great amount of fine information was obtained.

Brother Gunsolley left on the evening of March 21, for Lamoni, Iowa, en route to General Conference, where he will be accompanied by Sister Gunsolley. His return for the coming year is hoped for.

A shower was recently given Sister Julius Wilson at the home of her mother, Mrs. Cora Dehn, by the Department of Women. A pleasant evening was spent. Ice cream and cake were served for refreshments.

At a recent prayer meeting, one young sister said, "I am going to do whatever I am asked to do in this work, regardless of what others may say." Isn't this an inspiring thought?

Sister Iva Wiedling is visiting her mother, Sister Josephine Bullis, of Leonard. Brother Frank Anderson, of Dunn Center, called on the Saints here a short time ago. Sister Irma Walker has returned from La Moure much improved in health. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Robert Good.

Pastor Thomas Leitch is out on a missionary tour in the western part of North Dakota and expects to attend the General Conference. He visited Alamo Sunday, March 20, and administered to Sister H. W. Stockman, who has been bedfast with inflammatory rheumatism. She is reported to be greatly improved.

On February 20 Brother Leitch preached both morning and evening on the subject, "What kind of a ladder will man have to climb to gain eternal life, spoken of in John 17 in the wonderful prayer by Jesus in the garden?"

The Department of Women held its open meeting at the Bungalow Church Thursday evening, March 17. It being Saint Patrick's Day, the church decorations were of green and white. An instrumental piece was given by Sisters Elsie and Bernice Brown, followed by a fine lecture by Elder J. A. Gunsolley on parental responsibility, a reading by Sister Roy Freeman; then "God be with you till we meet again" was sung. This was followed by the serving of refreshments.

This department plans to have a food and fancywork sale April 2, and the rummage sale has been postponed until a later date, when we hope to get in more "long-tailed coats" and "merry widow hats" to put on display. A social meeting is also planned for April 6. Refreshments will consist of brown rice, bran muffins, a glass of water, and a tooth-pick. In accordance with our course on diet, a raw carrot would not come in amiss! We plan to give pennies in number equal to our age as a birthday offering to our church, it being its anniversary date. "The organization of the church" will be the subject for discussion.

Sister Cora Dehn has been appointed friendly visitor, and Sister Roy Freeman chairman of the social committee. This department will surely appreciate all donations received from Saints in the district and elsewhere for our anticipated sales.

Sister Ina Freeman, who has undergone operation for abscess, is getting along nicely and is now home from the hospital. Her brother, Woodburn, is having quite severe trouble with a running ear. Another of our sufferers is Brother Layton, who had the misfortune to break his thumb and is not yet able to resume his work.

Elder Robert Gunlock writes that he expects to visit Fargo soon for a short stay.

Sister Minnie Peterson is reported much improved from her illness.

The prayers of the Saints are for the success of the General Conference; all have a desire to be present, and hope those who can attend will feel greatly blessed.

Nauvoo, Illinois

March 28.—On Wednesday, February 23, Patriarch Ammon White met with us and held a series of meetings until the following Sunday. The Saints were blessed and strengthened. A prayer and testimony meeting was held at 8.30 Sunday morning, and a goodly degree of the Spirit was present.

After bidding Brother White good-by on Monday morning, J. W. Layton went up in the woods to work on a barn, and while there fell from the roof, his face striking a log. His mouth was badly cut, both wrists sprained, and his side injured. He was unable to move and lay just as he had fallen for about twenty minutes. Finally, by sheer grit, he managed to drag himself to his wagon and got the horse started toward home. On reaching the home of Wilfred Wood, he and August Blum assisted him home. He was confined to the home for three weeks and is still unable to use his hands. Those knowing Brother Layton will understand what a severe trial it has been to have to sit helpless, especially during this fine weather when so many things are calling from outdoors.

During Brother Layton's absence, L. H. Lewis occupied two evenings, relating the wonderful spiritual experiences he has enjoyed since coming into the work. We note that at the center place, the Sunday evening services are receiving special attention, and spiritual experiences are being related in an effort to interest the young. Sunday is a strenuous day for Latter Day Saints if they attend all the services, and it is not to be wondered at if they nod a bit during a long evening discourse. When spiritual experiences are being related, however, we note that this does not occur.

The Girls' Reserves of the high school, which is a national organization, held their mother and daughter banquet in the high school auditorium. Two of our girls have had the honor of being president of his organization. Florence Ada Sanford was made president when the movement was first organized in Nauvoo, and Eleonore Snively is the president at the present time. The organization requires that the president be a Christian girl, a regular attendant at church, and one whose moral standing in the community is high. Mrs. August Lee is president of the Advisory Board and was toastmistress at the banquet.

A farewell party was held at the home of T. J. Henderson for Brother Howlett, who was returning to Millersburg. A pleasant evening was spent, and ice cream and cake were served.

A reception was held at the home of L. H. Lewis for Brother Kenneth Pendergraft and wife, who have lately come among us. Brother Pendergraft is working for T. J. Henderson in the bakery.

Sister Blanche Grotts Booze, who has been spending the winter with her mother, has returned to the farm. At the meeting of the Department of Women she was presented with a jar of fruit from each member as a token of remembrance. Sister T. J. Henderson served ice cream and cake.

At the quarterly business meeting, Arnold Ourth was recommended by J. W. Layton to the office of priest.

Elder B. H. Doty and father, C. B. Doty, H. A. Doty, jr., and R. E. Jones, visited Nauvoo on their way to General Conference and were present at our business meeting. At the close of the business session, B. H. Doty addressed the Saints, which was much appreciated.

Our district president, H. C. Bevan, met with us Sunday, March 20, and occupied morning and evening.

Stockton, California

While we can not report an increased attendance at our sacramental and prayer services, there is still a good attendance, and a peaceful and uplifting spirit prevails at these meetings.

Since his return to this place, Brother Caryl Holden has organized an orchestra of about eight or nine pieces. It promises to fill a long-felt need and will greatly aid our services.

On Sunday, March 13, Brother A. E. Frazier and family, of Modesto, were visitors at Stockton, Brother Frazier occupying the pulpit at the eleven o'clock hour and giving one of his helpful, inspiring talks.

The Religio gave a Saint Patrick's Day social at the home of Brother and Sister Caryl Holden Friday evening, March 18. A jolly time was had by all.

The Department of Women is especially busy with the needle these days, making things to sell in contemplation of proposed church improvements.

We have had a good deal of sickness the past few months, but all are able to be out again and help in the services. The desire to labor together is felt by all.

Fall River, Massachusetts

March 29.—The district missionary, Herman A. Chelline, was the speaker at the prayer service, March 23. He expects to be at this week's prayer service. Last week about fifteen came. A friend of Elder Rogerson was present and took part in the meeting. At the close of the service Elder Chelline went to the home of the pastor to administer to Sister Heap. The physicians have now diagnosed her sickness as sugar diabetes, and she is very ill. She was taken to Truesdale's Hospital last Saturday.

Elder Raymond Bradshaw, of Attleboro, was the speaker at both services on March 27. His wife and daughter, Doris, accompanied him. They were entertained in the Rogerson home. His two sermons will long be remembered by old and young. In the morning he spoke about the "ten virgins," and in the evening "The power of example" formed the basis of his discourse. One thought that he expressed particularly lingers: "What kind of a church would this church be, if every member were just like me?"

Sister Alice Rogerson, publicity agent, took subscriptions to the Daily Herald and Autumn Leaves.

Arthur and Mabel Daniel have just returned from a trip to Asheville, North Carolina. They drove all the way in their automobile. They had pleasant experiences along the way, although their visit was not for pleasure. Arthur's younger brother is very ill from injuries received during the war. He fought with the British Black Watch Regiment. He is a very talented young man, an artist and a singer.

Independence

Stone Church

At the young people's half past eight morning prayer service, Sunday, an encouraging number was present. The meeting, in the lower auditorium, was in charge of our faithful leader, D. O. Cato; and Elder J. E. Vanderwood, missionary to Texas, gave the opening remarks. On the blackboard these words were written: "He who would meet God must go forward. Our slogan; 'Forward to 1930 and beyond.'" Assuring his youthful audience that nothing but disappointment, failure, and death can await him who takes the backward course, Brother Vanderwood exhorted his hearers to take the onward course. "Everyone," he said, "with the Spirit of God and the spirit of this work realizes that our accomplishments, our happiness, our tasks, lie in the onward course." Elder John F. Sheehy spoke briefly, emphasizing the thought that now is the time for complete and unreserved consecration of the young. At this hour some of the old hymns, "I need thee every hour," "Consecration," and "Jesus, I my cross have taken," seemed as they were sung to assume new meaning to the young who are hopefully striving to prepare for service.

Upstairs the older people assembled for prayer at the same hour, and a good meeting was enjoyed.

Closely following the prayer meetings, came Sunday school hour, opened with the singing of "Praise him, praise him." It was a perfect April morning with soft sunshine, the song of birds, the sight of beautiful growing things, a morning which lured many out to Sabbath school. There were a dozen hundred and eighty-six souls present, of whom two hundred and thirty-nine were visitors from the States of Washington, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Kansas, Illinois, and Idaho. Opening comments on prayer were made by Superintendent C. B. Hartshorn. The necessity of prayer, what may be accomplished by it, and the appreciation we should have of this privilege of communing with the Lord were impressed upon the assembled school. After the closing of the lesson period, Miss Vivian Latta sang "The prayer perfect," being accompanied on the piano by Robert Miller.

Next Sunday the adult and senior departments will meet in Sunday school session in the Auditorium basement.

Ten minutes preceding the opening of the sacramental service, almost every seat in the house was occupied, and all joined in the opening song, "Blest be the tie that binds." Apostle J. F. Curtis offered the invocation. In the stand were President Elbert A. Smith, who was in charge of the meeting; Apostles J. F. Curtis, E. J. Gleazer, and D. T. Williams; Bishops J. A. Becker and R. T. Cooper; Patriarch G. T. Griffiths; and Brother Paul Craig who led the singing. In his remarks preceding the serving of the emblems of the Lord's supper, Apostle Gleazer brought out the significance of the covenant each took at the water's edge, and the privilege we enjoy in surrounding the Lord's table. Brother Griffiths was asked to pray for those sick in body and mind who requested remembrance in the petitions of the Saints. Then President Elbert A. Smith gave the theme of the meeting, "God with us," "And you shall call his name Immanuel, which being interpreted means 'God with us.'" Recalling God's promises to be with his people, Brother Smith showed how blessed are those who constantly seek his counsel in prayer.

Due to the limit of time a few of the missionaries, conference appointees, and officers and workers of neighboring districts were called upon by President Smith. First of these was Apostle J. F. Curtis, who fervently stated, "This is a wonderful, wonderful work. It is second to nothing. It is first of all." He reminded the congregation of the commandment of Christ, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." He asserted his desire to spend his life, strength, and best effort for this "first thing," giving to the world the gospel. Elder John Robinson, pastor at Indianapolis, Indiana, W. A. Smith, Charles Fry, B. H. Doty, and William Patterson were called to speak, and each one responded enthusiastically concerning the progress of the work in his district. Elder

A. M. Chase, who for the past two years has been working in the Hawaiian Mission, mainly at Hilo, was present and talked on the responsibility of the church in preparing workers for the islands of the sea. Patriarch G. T. Griffiths, this month rounding out half a century of missionary service, stanchly declared. "It is good to be a Saint. This is the Lord's work." Well does he know the truth of these assertions after sixty-one years' membership in the church. Zeal and undying devotion to the cause he espoused so many years ago were written on his face, and people leaned forward to catch every word he uttered. Apostle D. T. Williams also affirmed his belief in the gospel and expressed willingness to help in supplying the needs of the church, for God is with us, calling us to higher and nobler things. At half past twelve the meeting was dismissed with prayer by Pastor C. Ed. Miller.

Downstairs a junior sacramental service for young people between the ages of eight and twenty was held, Elders James L. Gray, J. E. Kelsey, F. A. Cool, O. C. White, Hubert Case, and John Robinson presiding. The children were pleased to have these brother workers with them, and gave Missionary Hubert Case and Brother Robinson especial attention. A number of brief but fervent testimonies were heard, and the song service was of pleasingly high order. Yes, the young folks, too, can say, "God with us."

For a theme for the sacramental service at the junior meeting at the Campus, General Conference was given. It seemed to impress the children, as one small sister said she had always thought General Conference was just for the grown people until this service. There were three prayers and forty-nine testimonies offered, and a profitable time was had.

Evening Services

The Religio program Sunday evening was rendered by children from the age of five years to thirteen. A piano solo by Emma Jean Etzenhouser, a dialogue by Lucille and Lorraine Watkins, and vocal solo by Helen Kress, accompanied by Miss Melva Ward were much appreciated. There was also a piano solo by five-year-old Billy McPherson, a reading by little Lois Jean Williams, and a trio—piano, violin, and cello—by the McPherson brothers.

"In thy name, O Lord, assembling," was the hymn which followed the song service, under Brother John F. Sheehy, and opened the evening meeting. Prayer by Brother Roland Flanders was succeeded by an organ offertory by Brother Robert Miller, an anthem "Send out thy light," by the Stone Church Choir, and a soprano solo by Miss Pauline James, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. O. L. James.

Apostle Myron A. McConley was the evening speaker, his subject being, "Some ministerial experiences in foreign lands." "Our gospel certainly is not for our nation alone," he commenced. "The angel message was to be for all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people." This work of promulgating the gospel—the mission of the church—is barely begun. Brother McConley related in an interesting manner some of the ways of living and customs of speech wherein the people of Australia differ from us. He spoke concerning his work in Australia, New Zealand, and some of the islands, telling of the responsiveness of people who live in regions where the gospel is newly introduced or where they are spiritually hungry. Yes, assuredly our gospel message is for the whole world, every nation, kindred, tongue, and people.

The moving pictures, "Zion, David's city," of the Palestine series, closed the exercises of the busy day.

Interesting Personals

Miss Ethel Johnson, daughter of Mrs. Anna Johnson, of Independence, was married to Mr. Charles D. Hess, Saturday afternoon, April 2, at half past three at the home of Apostle J. A. Gillen, who pronounced the ceremony. Miss Mable Bills was bridesmaid, and Mr. Arnold Brady attended the groom. Mrs. Hess has for the past two years been an employee in the Herald Office, and Mr. Hess is employed in Kansas City, where they are making their home. Their friends and fellow workers wish them happiness and success.

White Masque Gives "The Fool"

"The fool," a play in four acts by Channing Pollock, was presented by White Masque players at Memorial Hall in Independence on Friday evening, April 1. A large crowd was present to witness this display of home talent, and commendation was general on the part of the appreciative audience. The interpretation of each part was well given, and the action was brought to a gripping climax in the third scene.

For weeks these young people of the White Masque Club have held three or four rehearsals a week, and the effort has been a personal sacrifice for each one. This annual production was directed by Miss Gladys Newton and will be given for the benefit of the visitors some time during conference.

When it was known the club had chosen "The Fool" to present this year, some dubiously shook their heads. It was a big undertaking. But cooperation, perseverance, and real work have scored, and the club members can say, We did it.

The cast of characters in the order of their appearance: Mrs. Gilliam, Louise Hagler; "Dilly" Gilliam, Aileen Bullard; Mrs. Thurnbury, Dorothy Cargyle; Mr. Barnaby, Henry Moriarty; Mrs. Tice, Agnes Adams; "Jerry" Goodkind, George Gates; Reverend Wadham, Maynard Hunt; Clare Jewett, Carol Gillen; George Goodkind, Doctor J. A. Harper; "Charlie" Benfield, Doctor F. H. Criley; Daniel Gilchrist, "The fool," Kenneth Fligg; a poor man, William Fligg; servant, Maynard Hunt; Max Stedman, W. H. Bartholomew; Joe Hennig, Virgil Julian; Umanski, Clifford Kelley; "Grubby," Henry Moriarty; Mack, Gomer Watson; Mary Margaret, Helen Brackenbury; Pearl Hennig, Esther Bartholomew; Miss Levinson, Ferne Gould; Mr. Henchley, J. G. Fairbanks; Mrs. Henchley, Cora Fligg; Mrs. Mulligan, Ethel Russell; Jimmy, Frank Jennings; Tony, John Sheehy; other members of the mob: Jo Zelma Taylor, Bert Taylor, Louise Jennings, Allegra Luff, Maynard Hunt, Virginia Budd, Reginald Julian, Roland Flanders.

Liberty Street

Bishop J. A. Koehler made the opening remarks at the sacramental service Sunday morning, talking concerning the crucifixion of Christ and his sacrifice for mankind. The sweet influence of the Spirit rested upon the congregation, hallowing this meeting, and familiar songs and inspiring testimonies and prayers were offered.

At the evening eight o'clock hour, we were privileged to hear Apostle D. T. Williams. His text and theme was "Temptation." He spoke chiefly of the trials and temptations we must meet out in the world. Each one of us has his besetting sins, but that which may be a temptation to others may not tempt us. It was Socrates who said, "If we knew ourselves, we would be less hasty to judge others." To be able to escape from the temptations of the world, we must know ourselves and God. If we are to overcome evil we must overcome it by doing good. This discourse was an inspiration to old and young.

Walnut Park

The eight o'clock prayer meeting on Sunday morning was in charge of Elder W. W. Scott and Marion Schafer, both of whom gave very helpful talks, and the meeting was a busy one.

Sunday school attendance was 347. The junior department enjoyed another lesson dramatization—this time by Sister W. K. Gard's class. They dramatized very nicely the lesson of Paul and Silas on a missionary journey, including their imprisonment and the conversion of the jailer.

While the audience reassembled for sacramental service, a mixed quartet sang. Among the returned missionaries we welcomed at this service were Apostle Clyde F. Ellis and Elders J. W. Peterson and R. D. Weaver, all of whom helped decidedly to make our meeting a good one. Brother Peterson's testimony of wonderful physical and spiritual blessings during the months since his long illness last summer, when doctors were helpless to aid him, was a blessing to his many friends who rejoice to know he is now enjoying better health than for several years.

Our pastors, Glau Smith and B. J. Scott, were once more called to officiate in the blessing of a tiny babe—Lillian La Von, daughter of Brother and Sister Lawrence Wolfe.

In the evening a short series of pictures of Zion, David's City, were shown, and the sermon following was by Patriarch Ammon White, who gave a very complete word picture of the Zion to be in the future. A quartet gave a special number, Alberta Lanpher sang a solo, and Margaret Gard directed the congregational singing.

Enoch Hill

A special union prayer service was held in the church Wednesday evening, March 30. Though the weather was unfavorable, there being a steady downpour of rain throughout the evening, and the attendance small, a good spirit was present and felt by all who took part. Many prayers were offered for the success of the General Conference, and a desire to do what God would have him do was expressed by each one. The accompanying song service was especially good, and many were made to sense the sacredness of the occasion.

A goodly number attended the sacramental service Sunday morning. Pastor W. J. Brewer was in charge and made the opening remarks. Many prayers were offered for the peace, success, and good of the General Conference, and more than a score of testimonies followed without intermission, in which a desire was expressed to walk humbly before the Lord and to appreciate the gospel and its truthfulness.

In the evening Elder Roscoe Davey spoke to the congregation, reading John 17:13-33, and basing his discourse upon the theme, "Rendering service." Vividly he brought out the fact that service to our fellow men is the only doorway through which we may enter the divine kingdom. Christ sanctified himself by service to the needy, sick, and afflicted, and he is our Lord—our great Pattern. We must all work; those who labor in Zion must labor for Zion.

Spring Branch

The play, "The Fool," and other meetings reduced the crowd attending our Religio last Friday night to about sixty. This evening concluded the series of competitive programs rendered by the various classes of the Religio. Sister Curtis's class of juniors provided the entertainment.

Twenty-eight young people assembled for the 8.15 prayer service Sunday morning. A good time was reported, there being several prayers and about twenty testimonies.

At the Sunday school twenty-three perfect classes for the month were reported. A young people's Bible class will be organized just after conference closes to accommodate those desiring to take up that study.

A splendid spirit prevailed at the sacramental service, at which time the local priesthood was admonished to be diligent in their various offices, that their calling might be magnified and blessings enjoyed.

Brother J. E. Vanderwood preached an excellent sermon in the evening from John 12:24: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." His analogy was that we must die to the smaller, less important things of life if we would grow into the larger, more important things. Preliminary to this service, hymns from the Saints' Hymnal were sung, and there was a vocal duet, "Rock of ages," sung by Sisters Winnogene Smith and Katherine De Long.

About fifty from this branch stormed Brother Snively's home last Tuesday night to remind him to gather thirty-nine pennies to drop into the birthday box. He remembered. Ice cream and cake were served.

Spring Branch workers will again serve meals at the dining hall during conference. All arrangements are about completed to take care of the big job, and no pains will be spared to give the best of service possible. The proceeds will go to help on the church debt. Eat at the dining hall.

No services except Sunday school will be held in the local church during conference.

Lamoni Stake

Chariton Branch

Elder W. E. Prall, president of the Lamoni Stake, drove to Chariton Saturday afternoon with speakers enough to provide Chariton, Lucas, and Hiteman with help for the Sunday services. Institute work was conducted at Chariton by A. R. Gilbert and Mrs. L. S. Wight in the interest of the Department of Recreation and Expression and the Department of Women.

Saturday evening a large group of people gathered in the basement of the church while Mr. Gilbert conducted games for all. Refreshments were served, and a very sociable time was had by young and old.

On Sunday both the eleven o'clock and the half past two hours were given over to talks by Mrs. Wight and Mr. Gilbert. Round table discussion of the problems to be met in developing departmental work closed the afternoon.

Mrs. Wight urged the need of bending every energy to the developing of Zionie homes where balanced lives are lived. To meet the problems of the day it is necessary to provide parentcraft classes, where both men and women may discuss the actual problems with which they have to deal. It is our task also that our young people may be imbued with a desire to have pre-marriage preparation for home making and that such education may be provided is also the task of the parents of today.

Mr. Gilbert stressed the importance of recognizing the unity of the individuals and the need to consider every activity of the child in that light. The popular notion that spiritual development is one thing and physical something entirely different needs to be corrected, for the child takes his body to church, and does not leave his spirit in the chair when he goes out to play ball. Every act has a spiritual significance, hence it is the business of the church to provide for the right kind of expressional activities and recreation.

In the evening Brother Prall concluded the day with an effective sermon, in which he outlined objectives for the year 1927 for the branches of the stake. Dependability he stressed as being a cardinal virtue. At the close Brother Batten, president of the Chariton Branch, spoke very earnestly of the desire of the Saints of the Chariton Branch to push forward in the actual work outlined by the speakers of the day.

De Kalb, Illinois

April 1.—March 27 was a red letter day for the De Kalb Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the reorganizing of the branch being made necessary by the resignation of the pastors, Brothers C. D. Carter and George Jenkins, on March 9.

Through the kindly ministrations of Apostle Paul M. Hanson, this was made possible at a business meeting of the members at 2.30 p. m. Doctor C. D. Carter was unanimously chosen branch president and pastor; Sister Eva Carter was elected secretary and treasurer and branch solicitor; Sister Mildred Wright, pianist and chorister; Brother Thomas Knudtson, member of the library board; Brother Edmund Middleton, janitor.

District President of Northeastern Illinois, David E. Dower, on his way home from Chicago to Des Moines, Iowa, was a Sunday visitor in De Kalb, leaving on the 7 p. m. bus, thence on the Great Western for home.

Church services had hardly begun Sunday morning, when the audience was agreeably surprised by the entrance of Brother and Sister F. G. Pitt, of Joliet. Apostle Paul M. Hanson was the speaker at the 11 o'clock service. Brother F. G. Pitt spoke in the evening. Sister F. M. Cooper, of Plano, worshipped with the Saints Sunday, March 27.

Kansas City Stake

Second Kansas City

They are pleased to report everything in good condition. Some of their members who were seriously ill are very much improved; all meetings are well attended; peace and harmony prevail. Prayer meetings have been spiritual, comforting, and uplifting; the sermons edifying and instructive.

Early in the year Brother H. R. Higdon finished a series of sermons on the Restoration, which covered a period of several months, in which much valuable information was given.

They were visited last month by Brother Clyde Graham, who preached on the necessity of having an object in life, the value of a good example, and that all should each day take an inventory of their lives and try to make the next day a better one.

For several Sundays Brother Fred Cleveland has been lecturing on church history, illustrated by stereopticon lantern and slides. The attendance has been good, and several non-members have expressed themselves as pleased with what they heard and desire to hear more.

Brother Zink, assisted by his wife and others, is trying to make the Religio interesting to both young and old; the older ones study the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants; the children under the direction of Sister Payne furnish most of the programs, which are very interesting. Several weeks ago a social was given by the Religio for the purpose of raising money to help the church. Sister P. J. Raw and her Sunday school class later gave a social for the same purpose, and considerable work was done on the inside of their meeting place.

They are fasting and praying for the success of the conference and that God's blessings will rest upon it and our beloved Prophet and President.

Bennington Heights Church

Last Sunday morning Sister Willey, of Linneous, Missouri, visited with them. Sister Willey is the mother of Sister Mary Spangler and a former member of Bennington.

In the evening Brother W. O. Hands showed them some picture slides of the Auditorium and made a very interesting talk about its construction and those who are doing the work.

Brother and Sister E. C. Harrington and Mrs. Pearl Crick, of Independence, Missouri, favored them with some special music.

We are planning for our home-coming, which is to be April 24. We will spend the whole day at the church, beginning with a prayer meeting at 8.15 a. m. Dinner will be served by local members after morning preaching service, and in the afternoon there will be programs furnished by various departments. They want all former members who can to meet with them all day.

Quindaro Church

On Friday night, March 25, the junior Temple Builders and the Orioles gave a mother and daughter banquet in the church basement, which was a very pleasing event. Sixty persons were present. The program for the evening was as follows: Introduction, Marie Hartman; community singing, led by Sister Emily Foley. Toastmistress, Sister Fern Lloyd; invocation by Sister Scrivener; orchestra, Miss Luther from Northwest Junior High School. Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, of Independence, made a very interesting talk on the attitude of mother to daughter. Sister Roy Newkirk spoke of the work of the girls, which was much appreciated by all, and Dorothy Guy Altson, only a young girl, gave an excellent talk on the attitude of daughter to mother. There was a piano duet by Aileen Pemberton and Lua Murah. Reading, Alberta Hartman; cornet solo, Edith Burgoon; vocal solo, Aileen Pemberton.

Sunday night, March 27, at half past seven, was initiation for Temple Builders, twenty-four being initiated by Sister Newkirk. We are glad to see our young women pledging themselves for greater service and feel that much help in many ways will be accomplished by them in the future.

After this service, Brother H. O. Hands occupied, showing progress on the Auditorium by means of stereopticon slides in which all were interested. All feel like helping in this work.

A men's Bible class was organized Sunday morning, with Elder E. U. Palmer as teacher.

Sunday at eleven o'clock, sacrament was served, one hundred and ten being present. The peaceful influence of God's Spirit was felt.

At the eight o'clock hour Brother Daniel Hough occupied, speaking on the prophecies, to an attentive audience.

Malvern Hill Church

On Friday evening, March 25, they met in the basement of the church for recreation. Games, songs, contests filled the hour. Several Religious Day School pupils attended. Everyone entered into the spirit of the occasion with zest.

They made a new record Sunday morning, having an attendance of one more in the Sunday school than for some time. The superintendent, Sister Florine Hands, and the teachers are to be congratulated on the quality of the work being done.

At eleven o'clock Elder F. V. Elliott preached on, "What must I do to be saved?" A lady who had recently moved into the neighborhood said she came out to have that very question answered for her. She said she had received a satisfactory answer. God is working with the people here. She and her husband are coming out to Elder George Sherman's missionary class in the Sunday school, beginning next Sunday, we are told.

At two o'clock we met at Central Church, when Elder George Sherman baptized a promising young couple, Brother and Sister Haig. At the evening service they were confirmed by Elders H. J. Bootman and F. V. Elliott. We welcome our new brother and sister.

At three o'clock the Sunday school teachers and officers met at the home of Brother and Sister Elliott. An attendance contest, among other things, was planned.

The Religio met in the evening in the upper and lower auditoriums of the church. The class of young people recently begun by Brother Marks has continually increased in interest. Brother Marks is doing an excellent work here, as elsewhere. Sister Mary Ringer, the superintendent, led an interesting and profitable discussion in the adult class. Sister Ringer has a vast fund of information.

At eight o'clock Elder H. J. Bootman preached an inspiring sermon full of sound advice. He warned them of the dangers of the friendly dance and card party. He read General Conference resolutions that touched on this. Sister Blanche Hott effectively led the music at this service. Zion is steadily rising and putting on her beautiful garments.

There was a good attendance at the Wednesday prayer meetings in spite of the steady rain. The Saints are optimistic and have a missionary zeal that is producing results.

Mount Washington Church

Members of this branch also are finding joy in the Master's service. His Spirit has blessed their humble efforts, and they are looking forward with confidence to the final triumph of the church.

Since the first of the year they have been holding cottage preaching services. The preaching being done by local members of the priesthood. They have also held the Wednesday evening services in the homes of the Saints, with encouraging results.

The interest of the young people has done much to inspire them to greater efforts. All of the work in which they are interested is making good progress. The Boy Scouts furnished a splendid program Sunday evening, March 20. They have active groups of Temple Builders, junior Temple Builders, Orioles, and Blue Birds. All of the Sunday school classes are active in promoting social development. Special credit in their local standard of excellence is given for this activity.

The Department of Women has been meeting in the homes of the various members. This has a tendency to promote a wider social contact. They have a combined program of pleasant work and study.

Recently they have been blessed with abundant evidence that our heavenly Father's arm is not shortened. The pastor's little daughter was restored to health from the very brink of the grave. Also the little grandson of one of the Saints was blessed in a remarkable manner. In the same home the grandmother received a marvelous blessing. God is indeed in the work.

Their number is not large; however, they have a large and splendid church building with a large basement and classrooms. The local church is beautifully situated in one of the finest little communities near both Kansas City and Independence. They have many modern improvements and no city taxes to pay. Yet they have fine modern schools, are within a fifteen-minute ride of Independence, and it is only a half-hour's ride to Kansas City by way of the electric lines. They are confident that in due course of time their number will be increased and are preparing for the increase.

Argentine Church

They were favored by a splendid sermon by Elder Charles Fry, recently in charge of the work in and surrounding Kirtland, Ohio. His text was found in John 15:26, and with a latter-day historical and church organization setting made plain that there was a multitude who had through God's truth testified of the Christ.

Des Moines District Young People

One hundred and fifty-six young people, representing seven branches in Des Moines District, attended the banquet in the basement of the new Des Moines church, Saturday night, March 19. It was not a good night, either. Snow, rain, and sleet fell fast, representing March at her worst. You ask how they all came to be there. They came in cars for miles and miles. Doctor Slocum, wife, and baby came from Webster City, over eighty miles; George Orr, from Pershing, over mud roads, sixty miles; V. G. Lents, from Rhodes, fifty miles; and C. E. McDonald, from Runnells, twenty miles; all with cars loaded to capacity to meet with the jolly crowd for an evening of feasting and fun that had been planned for weeks ahead.

District President Castings was toastmaster for the evening, and started the program by telling a good story. Pastor H. A. Higgins offered the invocation, and the sisters began serving the excellent three-course dinner, prepared by the Department of Women of Des Moines Branch.

Brilliant repartee and stories were freely indulged by the speakers, making fun for everyone present. Misses Eva Cook and Gladys Barr entertained the crowd with a vocal duet that called forth an encore to which the sisters graciously responded. Lee Mussell talked on the subject of habits, and his toast was in accord with the slogan for the evening, "Live so it will be easy for others to do right." Marguerite Hartman gave an excellent reading in which she impersonated a family of children, left at home by their mother. It was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. Nora Park responded to the toast, "Spirituality." She related a spiritual dream that was given to her about one month previous, which was fitted to her subject. In the dream she beheld the elements in commotion, a terrible storm was sweeping everything before it and destruction seemed imminent when she beheld a rod of iron going up from where she stood and reaching into heaven. To this she clung desperately until her strength was exhausted; then she let go her hold and upon alighting found herself in a company of Saints with Brother Castings in charge. Her question to him was, "How does it come that the Saints are all so happy and peaceful here while the storm rages outside?" He replied, "The Lord looks after his Saints."

A stunt was put on by the Des Moines Orioles under the direction of Bertha Robinson Deskin. The joke was on Brothers Garver, Deskin, Orr, and William Robinson. It was a good joke, too. V. G. Lents and Ruth Richeson put on a stunt for Rhodes that produced much merriment.

Leon H. Smith, secretary of Des Moines Y. M. C. A., responded to the toast, "Impressions," in a very creditable manner, talking to the young people about how much influence impressions have in directing our lives. Vern Deskin was song leader for several songs that kept everybody happy. Vivian Castings was pianist. Mildred Turner responded to the toast, "Dependability" in an excellent way, showing that the dependable person makes it easier for others to do right. Sister Turner told about their Sunday school at Woodward, where a few Saints gather each Sunday in her home regardless of conditions and "carry on." She paid a compliment to Stephen Robinson, stating that whenever "Steve," sent word that he was coming to preach for them, he always came.

Lucy Logan entertained the audience with a solo on the piano, which instrument was out of tune, but she overcame the handicap by her skill and responded to the encore smilingly. Beside being an accomplished teacher of music, she is always smiling, a whole-hearted Latter Day Saint, who has recently united with the church, and one who has won the hearts of the Saints.

Apostle John F. Garver answered the toast, "Companions," in a very touching manner, showing that upon the choosing of proper playmates, sweethearts, and helpmeets, depends our happiness and well-being. Brother John applied the slogan of the evening to his subject which was ably given and well received. The song, "Consecration," was sung by the assembly, and Brother V. G. Lents pronounced the benediction.

Oh, yes, we were eating all of the time, beginning with soup while Henry read a message from President Coolidge, although there were those present who did not believe that he sent it; then while we were eating the second course a telegram was read about Leon Smith in which we were warned of his fondness for pie. The worst of all was a telegram from Mrs. Garver giving instructions to John about his table manners. Now most everyone doubted the genuineness of these telegrams, but they were handed to our toastmaster, and he felt it his duty to read them.

At the close of the evening, Brother Castings announced an early morning prayer meeting, next morning, stating that appreciation for the banquet could best be shown by all of the young people being present and taking part in that service of prayer. A good attendance is reported at that meeting, considering the weather.

Apostle Garver preached at eleven o'clock on the subject, "The stewardship of youth." Apostle F. Henry Edwards addressed the Religio at 6.30, and President F. M. McDowell preached at eight o'clock. The reporter for the district was not present on Sunday. He ventures the assertion that the power from on high was present in all of these services, to the blessing of the Saints as God revealed his Son to the assembly through those who are among his highest representatives on earth.

The banquet was held by the Department of Recreation and Expression, and its wonderful success was due to the wise planning of Superintendent Stephen Robinson, his assistant, V. G. Lents, and the hearty cooperation and support of all who had a part in the gathering. Brother and Sister Higgins looked after the printing of the programs which were got out in splendid style. Brother and Sister Slocum's baby was the youngest member at the banquet, and Sister Elizabeth Robinson was the oldest young person there.

Lees Summit, Missouri

The Saints of the Lees Summit Branch assembled February 23 for their first quarterly business meeting. In our annual business meeting in December we voted to hold a meeting of this nature at least every three months. Reports from various officers and committees were read and approved. The resignation of Lloyd Harding as branch reporter was accepted. Ella Marie Haas was elected to act in this capacity. Charles R. Mengel was nominated and elected chorister for Sunday school. The resignation of Leona Diehl, Sunday school secretary, was accepted, and Charles Sperry was elected.

We have a Give Day every third Sunday in each month. This keeps us from having to take collections at nearly every meeting. We like this method very much, and so far it has proved successful. We have adopted the budget system for this year. This is the first time we have used it in this branch.

During the week of January 31, Brother F. A. Smith, of Independence, preached each evening at the church. His sermons were enjoyed very much. We had a good attendance each night. While here Brother Smith gave about a dozen patriarchal blessings to the Saints of this branch.

At the first of the year, we started a cradle roll class. We have an average attendance of about four each Sunday. This is a very interesting and important work of the Sunday school.

During the Holden stake conference held here, Brother Lloyd Harding was ordained to the office of priest; Brother J. F. Oliver to the office of deacon, and Brother Charles R. Mengel, priest. These brothers are members of our branch.

Each Tuesday night the Saints meet at the church. We are taking a normal course, a study about the Bible. Brother Harding, our pastor, is teacher. We have just completed in our last lesson the Old Testament history.

Fairview, Montana

March 22.—The past four weeks have been happy ones for Fairview Branch. On February 24 Elder J. L. Sandidge arrived and went into action immediately. Elder George W. Thorburn came along two days later, and the two worked together till March 14, when Brother Thorburn had to leave, but Brother Sandidge continued until the 21st. The attendance was good from the start. A fine spirit prevailed. The crowds came early and stayed late, being very sociable and brotherly. We feel much good of a missionary and evangelical nature has been done. Of course opposition was present at times. No recognition of our effort was accorded us by the popular ministers of the town, though the Saints have attended their meetings and assisted in various ways.

An interesting feature of the series came about by the necessity of sharing the meeting place with the Nazarenes. We both desired a Sunday evening hour. The Nazarene minister explained that he could not stop on a scheduled time because of having to pray folks through at the altar, so we took the early hour, from seven to a quarter after eight, and they followed indefinitely.

Our meeting was fine on each occasion, with good music, good preaching, and a fine spirit. Then the Nazarene minister took charge. Their altar, a ladder-like looking thing about sixteen feet long, was brought forward through the crowd and placed in front of the pulpit. Then the minister proceeded in a most pronounced and vociferous manner of music and preaching, the main idea being to relate tales of horrible screeching deaths, etc., though he assured the congregation he did not wish to frighten them. Oddly enough, some people prefer frantic gesticulations and improbable stories which prove nothing even if true. Read 2 Timothy 4:3, 4. The contrast was great and much in the Saints' favor. We are all hoping for a return of the good missionaries before many moons.

Good Health Is Your Greatest Asset

A few minutes' reflection will reveal to us the fact that of all the temporal blessings bestowed upon mankind by the bountiful Hand of an All Wise Father, that of a well-developed body and good health, is the most appreciated.

He who possesses these is capable of clear thinking, energetic activities, and heroic achievements. Yet, we find men and women who are not informed or for lack of forethought are robbing themselves of the health and happiness derived from the possession of these priceless gifts.

Doctor G. W. Remsburg's wonderful health book, "SCIENTIFIC EATING AND HEALTH BUILDING" is a scientific treatise by this noted doctor, written in language that is simple and easy to understand, touching upon the ills and afflictions of mankind and their remedies in a very comprehensive manner. A few minutes spent each day in reading and following its directions will help to restore the roses to your cheeks, the sparkle to your eyes, and energy to your whole system without the use of drugs.

That you may be enabled to enjoy the benefits derived from this book, we are offering it at the remarkably low price of $1.75.

The General Conference

Seventy-second Conference the Largest in History

Brotherly Love Has Prominent Place in Associations

When the Seventy-second General Conference opened its sessions at ten o'clock the morning of April 6, there were gathered together more than two thousand ex officio members, delegates, and visitors, a larger conference than the Reorganized Church had ever experienced.

The basement room of the new Auditorium Building had been finished to a point where it could be used temporarily, and some of the Saints whose contributions had made possible the erection of this truly wonderful building were assembled in representation of the interests of the body of the church. Many have contributed to the erection of this building to the point of sacrifice—they had done what they could, and were denied the privilege of being present at the opening because the funds were lacking to carry them over the miles between their homes and the little thriving city of Independence where the building is located. Others were so anxious to be present at this meeting that they had denied themselves in other ways, had hoarded a few dollars, and now presented themselves in the spirit of brotherly love, happy, and largely contented.

Of course there was no glass placed to inclose the building; the doors were just rough boards salvaged from form work; the large openings were closed with nothing but canvas; the heating plant was made up of four Independence furnaces, placed in four widely separated quarters of the room, a box of soft coal in close proximity to each furnace; the tables were rough boards covered with plaster board; the rough cement floor was covered with shavings from the planing mill; but the Saints who wished to get together in one room at a General Conference were all there, and what were these trifles to men and women who wanted to be present at the opening meeting!

It was difficult to go from one point of the room to another in any reasonable length of time—friends would hold forth a greeting hand, or ask after some other friend they had not yet seen—but at the hour of ten the gavel in the hands of President Frederick M. Smith rose and fell, and he raised his voice to ask, "Who will you have to preside over this conference?"

Apostle James A. Gillen and Elder Joseph A. Tanner made and seconded the motion choosing the First Presidency to preside, and authorizing them to determine the character of the services, to complete the organization of the conference, and otherwise act as executives of the conference.

Two songs had been sung; one before the President had opened the meeting, "Glorious things are sung of Zion," and the other immediately at opening, "Redeemer of Israel."

Then President Elbert A. Smith offered the opening prayer:

O God, our heavenly Father; it is with reverent and thankful hearts that we meet together for the first time in this room in conference capacity, that we might do business for thy church. We feel, first of all, that we should offer thee our thanksgiving. We are reminded that upon this day many years ago our fathers met together to organize the church, and we thank thee that we are numbered among the heirs of the Restoration; that the restored gospel sustained by the ancient order of things has come down to us. We thank thee that we are permitted to meet together under the bonds of fellowship and peace. We thank thee that it is made possible for us now to meet in a place that is adequate, and in which we may rejoice before thee. We thank thee for the beautiful day, for the auspicious opening of the conference, and we would commend ourselves and our fellows unto thy divine care and blessing. May the spirit of unity and peace prevail from the beginning until the closing of the conference.

Wherein there may be any troubles or misunderstanding, may thy Spirit guide and direct. Wilt thou remove the obstacles and banish the fogs or mists that might divide us. Wilt thou strengthen and sustain those who occupy in responsible positions. Bless the quorums of the church as they shall meet from day to day in council. May they enjoy the Spirit of divine direction, and under its illumination may they move forward undivided in a way that shall eventually justify itself as having been the path of wisdom, and as we shall meet here in business session, may the entire body of thy people feel the illumination of thy Spirit, that they may be led to realize that God is yet with us, and as from day to day there shall be preaching and prayer services, bless all those who shall take part, that it may be indeed a year of rejoicing and one to which we may look back; and as we shall move out in this work, that it may be with renewed strength and with revived spirituality.

O Lord, bless thy people thus assembled. Give them health of body and peace of mind, and the influence of the Spirit above, we pray, in Jesus' name. Amen.

President Smith announced the following special committees:

Credentials Committee: G. S. Trowbridge, F. A. Russell, John Sheehy.

Reception and Location Committee: C. Ed. Miller, Bishop G. W. Eastwood.

Transportation Agent: G. S. Trowbridge, Room 24, Battery Block. Also at information booth at the Auditorium.

Press Committee: Richard J. Lambert, J. A. Gardner.

Administration Committee: G. E. Harrington, T. C. Kelley, J. A. Gunsolley.

Telegrams of good wishes and full of hope were read from Frank W. Briggs, San Francisco, California, and Albert Livingston, Portland, Oregon.

President Frederick M. Smith addressed the conference at length as follows:

I suspect that most of you can guess this morning that I have considerable feeling as we thus meet in the Auditorium for the first time; and I will venture the guess that most of those who are here, and are interested in the development of the latter-day work, feel the same movements of the heart, of joy, of pride, and I trust of determination to not cease in our devotions to the church until this building is completed.

Some seven years ago the need of an adequate building for General Conference, and suitable for the many other needs of a gathering people, became so acute and apparent that a fund was created, which was generously contributed to by the Latter Day Saints and friends. Too long was work on that building delayed—the delay working deleteriously in several directions not here necessary to mention—and all those who appreciated the need for such a building, and who sensed the importance of a progressive people marking their progress by successive goals in a comprehensive building program were made happy a little over a year ago by observing the start made on the erection of the Auditorium by breaking ground in the initial steps for excavating for the basement and foundation; and except for pauses made necessary occasionally by inclement weather, work on the building has progressed steadily though perhaps not with the rapidity some would like to see.

Meeting as we do today here in the basement of this building, holds promise that in due time we shall assemble in the main auditorium, to find space, appointment, and equipment all that might reasonably be desired.

Perhaps there are not a few in this audience who remember meeting with the delegates and ex officio officers of the conference in 1888, in the basement of the Stone Church across the street to the north, and mayhaps those persons will recall expressions then made not unlike some being made now by persons either shortsighted or pessimistic, "It is too large." "It is unnecessary." "It will not be finished." But I submit, my fellow Latter Day Saints, that our record of achievement and our experiences of the past justify us in looking forward with confidence to seeing the Auditorium well and duly finished, and that its capacity, large as it may look now, ultimately taxed to its limit.

The Auditorium must be finished! It is needed! It is opportune, and it will be finished! To believe otherwise is to overlook the spirit and the determination of a people with a record of eventually accomplishing its tasks.

There is much to cause us to rejoice as we begin the conference work of 1927. The fine and deeply religious spirit essential for the successful introduction and operation of stewardships is surely and steadily developing. The eyes of the Saints are turning upward and forward. It is well; for people who stand looking into the past progress not. To have or make progress means to have goals fixed, or elevated by ideals.

People who look into the past either have lost their goals or have forgotten them, and are living among the images of memory. Peoples like persons become senescent, lose their zeal, and live in the past. So we can rejoice today that as a people we find our eyes fixed upon goals lying up and ahead of us, even if to achieve these goals means work, sacrifice, burdens, and even agony. Our load is heavy, our responsibilities onerous. Our backs grow weary, but let us not pray that our burdens may be less, but only that our backs may be stronger, our courage warmer; for then our hearts will be lighter, because we are making towards our objective.

It is scarcely necessary for me to say here that a great objective, for which we strive and look ahead, is socio-religious reformation, having to do with better human relationships, every day, all-time, associations which will bring God and his Christ into man's affairs other than aloofly; and it is no more necessary for me to repeat that the modus operandi of such reformation is institution and universal application of stewardship, or by every Saint going fully and unreservedly upon the basis of living and working with the common weal in view rather than for the purpose of safeguarding personal interests. "He who loses his life shall find it," can be understood when we comprehend that one who forgets himself in serving his brothers will awaken to an abundance of life he never knew before; for then he can see the kingdom of God, for he is born again.

For the introduction of stewardship, that condition under which every man will be doing his best for all, working his hardest, and taking that which he and his family need and justly want, we have been preparing and waiting for many years. The doctrine was promoted early in the history of our church, but it is only in recent years that a distinct movement has been had towards its general application throughout the church.

It should not be expected that the transition will be made without delays, disappointments, friction, or errors. These are bound to come; but even with them present, we can still rejoice that progress is being made. This observation seems advisable because there are apparently those who thought stewardships might spring suddenly into complete operation, like Minerva full-panoplied from the brain of Jove, and these persons are disturbed because delays occur and wrong starts are made. But if we waited till there were no unpropitious conditions whatever, we might well expect that we will not soon accomplish even the initial movements, but we must advance steadily, profiting by our experiences in failure as well as in success, thus expanding our comprehension and increasing our security by finding the safe anchorages.

Considering everything, however, I cannot but feel that we have made substantial progress in advancing the cause of stewardships, and some of the things begun are bound to be far-reaching in effect. It will be well for our delegates and others interested, to study carefully the Bishop's report and inform themselves further as opportunity may permit.

In addressing the conference last year, I spoke of the previous year as being one of readjustments, a work which was of necessity carried into the past one; and I think it can safely be said that distinct progress has been made therein, as well as in the constructive work which was well started last conference, and which, may we hope, will be continued and augmented. In the efforts to rehabilitate the special funds which have been the subject of much discussion in the past, while carrying on the work of the usual activities, we have taxed our resources in a way to augment some of the problems already before us; and careful work and planning will be necessary to tide over the period of special stress. I refer of course to our financial problems. Carrying on the work of building the Auditorium means putting into the form of permanent and fixed assets a considerably larger sum of money than we have been wont to do in years that are past. Had the special fund remained intact, this would have worked no hardship. The difficulty of the task has been aggravated by the long delay in building. But I am sure that if we with resolute hearts tackle this task along with our others, we will meet it successfully.

In this connection I want to call your attention to my words at last conference relative to our finances, when I spoke of the difficulty of frozen or slow-moving assets. A tightening up in general financial conditions has been quickly felt in our own, and our problems are enlarged, and there is new emphasis laid upon the necessity of carefully budgeting our finances. This applies to the church and the individual members of it. It is not, I think, mistating facts to say that at large confidence has been weakened and hence deleteriously affected industry. And this general disturbance of confidence has in our own case been intensified by internal conflict now rapidly waning but still having some influence. The sudden return of deficit of income over expenses should concern but not frighten us. It reemphasizes the necessity of carefully scrutinizing our budgets to find where the cuts shall be made, and maybe even to the extent of determining what activities shall cease. The development of a fine, forward-looking spirit among the Saints indicates that the decrease of income is perforce of circumstances rather than disaffection. Of course, unrest may exist in some quarters, due to causes not wise to mention here; but these causes are receiving the attention of the authorities of the church and, I feel sure, will be removed gradually.

The refunding of general church indebtedness should receive continued attention. This refunding has been retarded by some restrictions upon the financial department which I hope to see removed. And in this connection I want to urge upon the men of the church who are engaged in business the necessity and wisdom of individually and in groups lending themselves and their capacities to the Bishopric in organizing and handling the increasing business problems. The Bishop is earnestly endeavoring to free himself for the larger aspects of his work by calling to his aid those business men who are willing and able to assume responsibility for the church.

All the problems which are confronting the church are closely connected with, or, I might say, are part of, the greater task of the gathering. This lies before us as part of the great unfinished work of the church begun early but frustrated by events now quite well known as history. This long delay of the work of gathering puts upon us a double burden, that of carrying the work of yesterday while doing ours of today and preparing for the morrow. Had the preparation for Zion been carried on in its due time, our own tasks now would be easier, or at least not so complex. Preparation on the part of the Saints, now in distant fields, to come should have been preceded by careful preparation for their reception in Zion. This latter work must be expedited now, to gather up lost time and motion while the work of hastening the gathering goes on in outlying fields. As I see the task, there must be a unification of effort more concentrated than ever in the past. Strategic points, strategic from the standpoint of our own developments and movements, must be determined and entrenched, while other points must be evacuated in the interests of the concentrated movement in Zion. This is to say, as I see it the problem now becomes one of branch or congregational development or movement. (This is group thinking in terms of the gathering in Zion.) In some cases more firmly securing the work in places as curtains or supports, in others moving branches as a whole into Zion or the regions round about. Contemplation of such work opens up a whole range of problems which will call for the best effort of a consecrated, prayerful, spiritual people, with a devotion to the cause which tolerates none of the farces making for disaffection. It means thinking in terms of present group and community interests and of future community and racial welfare. Envisaged from a purely human viewpoint, or in terms of present industrial and economic parlance, our task seems hopelessly great; and even conditions existing among us after nearly one hundred years of teaching the message, the task appears one to discourage and dishearten. Self-serving interests are strongly entrenched in the world, and selfishness among us is yielding slowly, if at all. False ideas of democracy, wrong conceptions of equality, find their roots in the soil of selfishness and thus become foreign growths in a philosophy looking to a social order in which differing capacities and ranges of capability must be recognized and on which greater responsibility must be laid. How warped becomes our understanding of the parable of talents when we try to approach it in the atmosphere of self!

In this conference we are attempting again the approach to the remodeling of our conferences towards institutions of spiritual and mental uplift and away from the forensic and combative. How much valuable time, faith, patience, energy, we have wasted in contentions, only deity can tell. But may the hope be expressed that so active will we become in the things which build and construct that we shall have less and less time for destructive tactics and wasteful forensics.

The carping critic in the ministry must give place to the one who can build upon the institutions of society and reform, where necessary, the deformities which wrong forces have produced.

No longer "I can tear your house down" but, "I'll show you something better."

Here I must speak in appreciation of the younger men associated with me, in their willingness to take upon them the details of the growing work.

This conference program is largely the result of the collaboration of the junior member of the Presidency and the Secretary of the Quorum of Twelve, so far as the details are concerned, though they have had the cheerful assistance of all the officers.

Last year we spoke of the unification of teaching on the part of the ministry, brought about by the adoption of a program of activities in the field of human affairs. This unification has not progressed as far as is desirable. The mere adoption of the program does not guarantee its comprehension by the ministry. Its adoption by so emphatic a vote ought to stimulate every member of the church to its careful study. More particularly so should the ministry feel the need of close application to study along the lines suggested by the program. Indifference to it, or failure to include it in ministerial effort and propaganda, is not only contrary to the action of the conference in adopting the program, but might even be considered a disqualification of ministerial representation. And a full and hearty support and adequate, comprehensive, and comprehending presentation of the program of the church by our ministers should spring rather from ready willingness to comply with the conference action than from administrative pressure. Were the program in any way a controversion of the gospel, or the early teachings of the church, there might be some excuse for the indifference of some towards the program; but its complete harmony with the proper church traditions and the gospel should make it not only easy for every minister to support and teach it, but should make him zealous in its support. In fact, I do not see how the fullness of the gospel can be preached without including the human relations included in the program outlined and adopted.

Let me therefore urge again that all representatives of the church compass this program in their work of leading the Saints unto perfection. This can be done without foregoing the preaching of the gospel. It fact, it is preaching the gospel, for the program to be properly understood must be envisaged from the gospel viewpoint, and based on the gospel of Jesus the Christ.

Health Department

The present church physician has not yet freed himself from his work as a practitioner to the extent that he can give much of his time to the Health Department; but it is expected that he will soon be able to do so. And when he does so, it is hoped that a work of health education can be developed which will eventually reach every member in the church, in efforts towards disease prevention. There is great necessity for such teaching of health, in harmony with our own ideas of diet and medicine.

I am wondering if in this connection we can look forward to the institution of a school of medicine wherein our youth can be educated in the art of healing, with our own needs and ideas or beliefs in view always? Such a school is needed.

I have here spoken of the "art of healing" as a part of the science of medicine, and I earnestly hope that our students of medicine might take their studies seriously enough to avoid the entanglements of quackery. There is much to learn of medicine. Many schools have sprung into existence, and between some of them there is bitter antagonism. There is doubtless much of good in each of these schools, and mayhaps some of wrong, and the good should be gathered up for the sake of human welfare. The sum of knowledge in medicine is small enough, and we should be assiduous in expanding that knowledge. Full comprehension of the Word of Wisdom will not come without it. And let me suggest that Word of Wisdom supporters and advocates need not become either obnoxious or cranky.

And what is said here applies in its way to the work of the Sanitarium. We need to do the best we can for our sick while learning to keep well. As not all have faith, let us practice medicine—rightly, is the advice of the Word of Wisdom. Our Sanitarium is doing a splendid work, despite the severe criticism of some extremists of restricted vision. I am always glad to receive suggestions and proper criticisms concerning any of our institutions, and even enjoy the radical and severe criticisms of cranks if they are honest and sincere; but before our people condemn the Sanitarium and its work, they should at least endeavor to find the facts as a starting point. I am not and have not been satisfied with the work of the Sanitarium and the Health Department; but we must grow to our right proportions and into our right place among the institutions of healing. I am not blind to our shortcomings, but shall try to keep my eyes on the goal to be achieved by our Health Department. I make no attempt to defend the American Medical Association against the attacks being made upon it, but I can say that in my contact with medical men, I have found some splendid men actuated by high ideals and devotion to service; and I long to see the medical men of the church caught up into an organization designed to promote health on the basis of the Word of Wisdom, bringing to their aid all that science can afford, consecrating their efforts by a religious devotion to the church and God. The health of the church should be the stewardship of our real students of medicine.

I want to raise the slogan that has been upon our literature in recent months:

FORWARD TO 1930
A MARKING GOAL
NOT A RESTING PLACE

Some of the things we should accomplish by that time, I have tried to catch up in a few short sentences:

The Auditorium completed to the point where it can be put into continuous use in local and general activities. This does not necessarily mean completely finishing and decorating it, for that doubtless will consume many years; but the great audience chamber, being the central feature, should be put into use, and the equipment and appointment placed necessary to support it. To do this by 1930 means continuous work, and some action should be had looking towards financing the building with this in view. The methods should be worked out by the proper councils and authorities, and I can not but believe that the conference delegates and Saints will support and approve such a move.

Is it too much to hope that by 1930 one fourth of the Saints will be functioning on the basis of stewardships? We have, I trust, earnestly entered upon that work, and it appears to me that much preliminary work has been done; and if ministers and members cooperate in the spirit of true Latter Day

Saintism I have no doubt that the conference of 1930 will find twenty-five per cent of the members working as stewards. We should give opportunity for the hastening forces to work, to let our religion have its perfect work.

By then, if not before, Graceland College should have been placed upon the basis of a fully accredited, standard, four-year college. Without question, the importance of the work of that institution in the development of church work justifies amply such a move. The task of making the college such, is not small, but surely we are equal to it. The religious education department of the college should be broadened, and utilized more as a training place for consecrated young men and women who choose to prepare for the ministry and the work of the church. In my opinion we have been unfair to many men in the past in sending them into work without the benefit of some preparation. We should not delay rectifying that error.

And while Graceland is thus expanding into an institution of larger activity and usefulness, it is to be hoped that the Institute at Independence will steadily advance towards a Junior College with a concomitant of special courses and departments to meet the apparent demands and needs of the educational work here at Independence. We should look to the Institute in connection with the Sanitarium and its clustered activities for our school of medicine ultimately.

The Sanitarium by 1930 should have greatly enlarged its borders and the scope of its work. Under the present effective administration of Superintendent Copeland, it has made a steady and fine growth. But she has been laboring under restrictions and limitations which should be removed. We might well face the fact, that of new buildings eventually for that institution, adequately spaced and appointed for better and higher work.

By 1930 we should have consolidated our ground, with the movement of gathering always in sight, with some branches moved bodily into the regions round about, properly and safely erected colonies anchored in places where they can indeed become curtains of Zion, and agricultural and industrial supports adequately provided.

Is it too much to hope that by 1930 we can see the indebtedness of the church substantially reduced if not liquidated, or the remaining portion so funded that it is not pressing upon our resources and distressing our operations. Towards this end every energy should be bent, and the Saints individually and collectively assiduously work and consecrate.

Nineteen hundred and thirty should find our system of religious education so broadened and deepened that every youth and youngster is feeling its steadying and uplifting effect, that it may become one of the means of stabilizing the lives and activities of our youth and safeguarding their morals, their virtues, their devotion, and their energies.

And may we not look forward to that time demonstrating that the ministry of the church, under the leadership of the Spirit of God, and in a bond of fraternal mutual helpfulness, and with a unity born of a conscious cooperation with God in one of the mighty and glorious labors of the ages, are standing on higher grounds of exemplary morality, mental excellence, educational proficiency, freed from all discontent other than consciousness of limitations, actively efficient as workers, tireless in energy, frugal of time, helpful in brotherly aid, unitedly teaching the things pertaining to the kingdom of God to a people surely and steadily being led on to the perfection of beauty and godliness—Zion.

At the close of the address the meeting adjourned to convene again at two o'clock in the afternoon.

First Business Session

President Frederick M. Smith announced after opening the afternoon meeting that preceding business he would call upon several representative Saints for short addresses. He then called upon the following: Apostles James A. Gillen and J. F. Curtis, Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths, Bishop Albert Carmichael, Sister Blanche Edwards, Elder Leonard Hoisington, Brother George Lewis, and each made a short address. These addresses are contained in the issues of the Daily Herald.

President Smith presented the preconference reports to the body, calling attention to special features contained in them.

The session was adjourned just before four o'clock.

Business of April 7

The committee on boundary lines reported on three separate matters affecting district boundary lines, and they were each considered and adopted.

Southeastern and Central Illinois District Lines

We your committee on boundary lines, having under consideration the proposal to transfer Cumberland and Clark Counties, in Illinois, from Southeastern Illinois District to Central Illinois District, find that the proposal has been approved by the two districts involved, also the apostles in charge of the territory. We see no objection to the transfer suggested and respectfully recommend that it be approved.

This will make the descriptions of these two districts read:

Southeastern Illinois District:

Northern Boundary, north line of Montgomery, Fayette, Effingham, Jasper, and Crawford Counties; Eastern Boundary, east line of the State; Southern Boundary, south line of State and south line of Montgomery County; Western Boundary, west line of Pulaski, Johnson, Williamson, Franklin, Jefferson, Marion, Fayette, and Montgomery, Counties.

Central Illinois District:

Northern Boundary, north line of Adams, Schuyler, Mason, Logan, Dewitt, Piatt, Champaign, and Vermilion Counties; Eastern Boundary, east line of the State; Southern Boundary, south line of Edgar, Coles, Shelby, Christian, Sangamon, Morgan, Scott, and Pike Counties; Western Boundary, west line of the State.

Combination of Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts

We, the committee on boundary lines, have considered the request of the Fremont and Pottawattamie Districts that these districts be combined under the name of the Southwestern Iowa District, and respectfully recommend that the proposal be approved.

This will make the description of the new district as follows:

Southwestern Iowa District: Comprised of Pottawattamie, Cass, Adair, Mills, Montgomery, Adams, Fremont, Page, and Taylor Counties in Iowa.

We, your committee on boundary lines, having under consideration the proposal to divide the Youngstown-Sharon District between the Pittsburgh and Kirtland Districts by allocating Lawrence County, Pennsylvania, to the Pittsburgh District and the remainder of the district to the Kirtland District, find that the proposed action has had the approval of the three districts involved through their district conferences, also of the apostles in charge of the territory, and the First Presidency. We see no objection to the proposal and recommend that it be approved.

This would make the descriptions of the districts read as follows:

Pittsburgh District:

All of the State of Pennsylvania west of the 77th Meridian except Mercer, Venango, Forest, Warren, Crawford, and Erie Counties.

Kirtland District:

Northern Boundary, Lake Erie; Eastern Boundary, east line of Erie, Warren, Forest, and Venango Counties, in Pennsylvania, and Mahoning, Stark, Carroll, Harrison, and Guernsey Counties, in Ohio; Southern Boundary, south line of Forest, Venango, and Mercer Counties, in Pennsylvania, and of Mahoning, Harrison, Guernsey, and Licking Counties, in Ohio; also the 40th parallel across Muskingum County, Ohio; Western Boundary, west line of Licking, Knox, Richland, Huron, and Erie Counties in Ohio.

A motion was made that the General Conference adopt the recommendation of the College Board of Trustees "that on authorization of General Conference, the college authorities should proceed to erect a dormitory, it being understood that until further authorization only the basement for this building be constructed, the same to be used for kitchen and dining-room purposes, the insurance money secured from the loss of Patroness Hall being the fund from which this basement should be constructed."

This matter was referred to the Appropriations Committee for recommendation.

The recommendations from the Department of Recreation and Expression, which are:

Our plan is to continue the administration of the departments along the lines indicated in the reports of the three superintendents to this conference. We pledge the cooperation of this department in all its phases and activities with other departments, as well as with the general church program as a whole. We have not had, neither do we have, any other thought or motive than the successful triumph of the cause of Christ and the establishment of Zion.

We do come now with one definite recommendation, viz, that a well-trained and qualified individual be appointed as superintendent of this department with the understanding that he is to give his full time and attention to this work.

The reasons for this recommendation are obvious to anyone who has been observing of the needs of the church and society at the present day. Surely there are few if any tasks more vital than the proper supervision of the leisure-time activities of our youth today. We beg the careful consideration of the conference to this recommendation were referred to the Joint Council of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, for report to this conference.

The report of the Herald Publishing House presented in the preconference reports, published elsewhere in this issue, was considered and adopted.

A motion to adopt the report of the Presiding Bishop was made and prevailed. Readers of the Herald have had this complete report. This action does not embody the adoption of the recommendations which are as follows:

We recommend:

That the effort started to make the church membership 100 per cent stewards continue to be stressed.

That the membership may have that confidence in their leaders, the priesthood, and as a result comply with the law governing stewards, the priesthood should be urgently solicited to comply with the law. Especially is this true with all General Conference appointees and all presiding officers in Zion, in stakes, in districts, and in branches.

That great care be taken in the selection of church representatives. The financial department of the church is the first to suffer from those who fail to uphold our Zionie program.

It was moved that we adopt the recommendations contained in the report of the Presiding Bishopric, and a lively debate ensued.

There was consensus of opinion by all speakers as to the virtue of the doctrine of stewardship, and also that the doctrine should be earnestly presented by the priesthood of the church. There were matters outside the Bishopric paper which crept into the discussion and caused considerable earnest debate, but no real attack was made upon the recommendation. The motion to adopt was carried by a very large majority.

Business of April 8

The following document from the Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric was read:

To the General Conference; Greeting: The Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric at its session held in the Battery Block this morning unanimously passed the following resolution, and, by motion and vote, referred it to the General Conference for action:

Whereas, there is entailed in the present method of determination of dates and locations of district conferences, conventions, reunions, etc., considerable waste of time and money, and also of opportunity for members of the presiding quorums to be present in the larger gatherings of the Saints, and;

Whereas, much of the overlapping and duplication can be eliminated by the con-joint arrangement of dates and locations of such gatherings by the presiding officers of the districts concerned and the presiding officers of the church;

Therefore, Be it Resolved, that district executives be requested to consult the First Presidency and the members of the Quorum of Twelve concerned about the dates and locations of district conferences, conventions, reunions, etc, before these are finally determined, and that district conferences be requested to provide for such consultations when these matters come before them for action.

(Signed) H. W. HARDER, Secretary.

The adoption of the document was moved and seconded.

An amendment, adding the words stake and, just preceding the words, district executives, at the opening of the last paragraph, was offered.

The amendment was presented and adopted.

The motion was adopted as amended by an almost unanimous vote.

Business of April 9

President Frederick M. Smith was in the chair. He presented a report from the Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, in which they stated their approval of the request of the Department of Recreation and Expression for a full-time representative in the field.

A motion was made to adopt the report, which motion was approved without discussion, and with no dissenting voice.

A further report was read from the same joint council, placing in nomination Eugene Closson to fill the position of representative of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

The recommendation was adopted and without a contrary voice or vote.

The chair recommended that a time limit be set for the introduction of new business, suggesting that the time be three o'clock of Monday, April 11.

A motion was made that the time limit for new business be set as April 11, at three o'clock.

An amendment was moved, making the time limit for the introduction of new business, Wednesday, April 13, at three o'clock.

The amendment was lost. The motion as originally made was adopted.

A motion was made that the time for the convening of the next General Conference be set as October 1, 1928.

Substitute and amendment were offered that looked in the direction of leaving the date in the hands of the First Presidency.

The substitute and amendment were lost; the original motion was adopted, which leaves the date for the convening of the next General Conference as October 1, 1928.

Several of the standing committees and boards were presented for indorsement, necessary filling of vacancies, and sustaining as follows:

The Board of Publication was sustained as at present constituted: Frederick M. Smith, Roy S. Budd, Mark H. Siegfried, Fred B. Blair, and R. R. Redfield.

Graceland College Trustees were named as they now exist, and it was noted that the terms of office of F. M. McDowell and J. F. Garver expired at this conference.

A motion prevailed that F. M. McDowell and J. F. Garver be chosen to succeed themselves on the Board of Trustees.

The committee on General Conference Resolutions was presented for the sustaining vote of the conference. The name of G. S. Trowbridge was substituted for that of R. S. Salyards, and the committee was then sustained.

Committee on Rules of Representation as at present constituted was presented, and it was moved that the name of G. S. Trowbridge be substituted for the name of R. S. Salyards.

A substitute was made that the committee be sustained as it is at present constituted.

It developed that this is not an ex officio committee, and the substitute prevailed.

The Committee on Appropriations was presented and sustained, as at present constituted.

Sunday's Meetings

On Sunday meetings began with prayer meeting at eight o'clock in the morning at which there was a large number of Saints.

Sunday school in each of the churches in Zion held regular sessions. The many visitors divided and were present in delegations at the various schools. The larger number of visitors, however, presented themselves at the Stone Church and Auditorium, swelling the attendance to over twenty-two hundred, the largest Sunday school assemblage for the church and for the city of Independence.

Sermons were delivered by Bishop Albert Carmichael, Evangelist G. T. Griffiths, Apostle J. F. Curtis, and President F. M. McDowell. The Oratorio, "Elijah" was beautifully rendered at the Stone Church.

It was a wonderful day, full of satisfaction and activity.

Business of April 11

Elder R. S. Salyards presented the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, the published report of the Presiding Bishopric covers a period ending June 30, 1926, nine months ago; and

Whereas, full information concerning financial conditions is necessary to intelligent and prudent action by the General Conference;

Resolved, That the Presiding Bishopric be instructed to report to this conference the status of the finances to December 31, 1926, and also to report or to give an approximate statement of the finances to date of March 31, 1927; or if impossible to that date, up to as late date as possible.

That such report include total of amounts invested in or loaned to projects, associations, companies, or individuals.

Also open accounts, naming such, with amounts where the amounts reach the sum of $1,000.

Further, That a statement be reported in amounts borrowed, transferred, or used from special funds, and for what purposes so used.

That consideration of all matters involving the expenditure of large amounts be deferred until such report is in hand.

A motion to refer this resolution to the Order of Bishops for their report to this conference was made and seconded, put upon its passage, and adopted.

Elder R. S. Salyards presented another paper and moved its adoption, which motion was seconded.

Whereas, the amount of money required to build the Auditorium to a condition where it will be suitable for temporary occupation, also to complete and equip the building in its entirety, together with cost of annual maintenance is not known by the General Conference; and

Whereas, this information should be available to the people and their representatives before further work upon the building is undertaken;

Resolved, That the Order of Bishops and the Appropriations Committee be instructed to make necessary investigation and make report to this conference of the amounts or approximate amounts necessary to cover the items above named.

Moved this matter be laid on the table. Carried.

Elder R. S. Salyards obtained the floor and offered the following paper, and moved its adoption:

Whereas, it has been urged that the church should erect and provide for a medical school, and for the equipment of Graceland College as a four-year or university institution; also for the development of their building projects which would involve expenditure; and

Whereas, the church is involved heavily in debt and the number and resources of our people are limited, with much of unemployment and financial uncertainty among the peoples of the world, which is causing suffering and distress of many, and

Whereas, the Savior has admonished his people not to build without first counting the cost, and has also commanded the church through President Joseph Smith to the effect that debt should not be contracted, nor too large nor expensive buildings built at the outset (Doctrine and Covenants 127: 4);

"The Spirit saith further unto the church assembled: In order that the temporal affairs of the church may be successfully carried on, and the accumulated debt of the church in its respective departments where debts have accumulated may be properly made and in due time discharged, the church is instructed, both as members and as the body at large, to avoid the unnecessary building of houses of worship or places of entertainment or otherwise expending the tithes and offerings of the church in that which may not be essential unto the continued onward progress of the general work; and both in private and in public expenditure carry into active exercise the principle of sacrifice and the repression of unnecessary wants; and thus permit the accumulation of tithes and offerings in such amounts as may be adequate to properly discharge the existing indebtedness of the church as a body. And the Spirit counseleth the church in this regard.—Doctrine and Covenants 130: 7.

Resolved, That we obey the voice of the Lord in these matters, and that hereafter any building program be indorsed by the church with the statement of definite specifications as to size, cost, equipment, maintenance, and other information necessary for intelligent and considerate action by the General Conference.

Resolved further, That the church adopt the policy of getting out of debt, and in keeping from debt by its securing means before entering upon extensive building projects.

It was moved to adopt this resolution.

A motion was made that the resolution be placed upon the table, which motion carried.

A set of resolutions was offered by Elder George E. Harrington relating to the enforcement of the dry law known as the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, as follows:

Resolved, That inasmuch as there is need of cooperation with the Government for the enforcement of the prohibition amendment to the Constitution by reason of the strenuous efforts being put forth by those seeking its modification and nullification who are issuing propaganda declaring the amendment to be a failure, and since the Anti-saloon League is making vigorous efforts to counteract its effects,

Be it resolved, That we the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in conference assembled express our willingness to associate with them to maintain the value and benefit of the said amendment, and will assist them in their efforts for the enforcement of said law.

Bishop J. A. Becker at this moment was permitted by the choir to make a statement that the information asked for by the Salyards resolutions, and

Thoughts on Healing.—No. I

BY FRED GREGORY

GOD, THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

Healing has its place in the work of redemption. The practice of our Lord in the healing of "all manner of diseases" while he was upon earth teaching us the way of life and ministering to every human need, is sufficient sanction to give the divine method of healing a permanent place in the church militant. Having righteousness as its one unalterable base, faith healing takes its place among the loftiest and noblest doctrines of the church, but like other exalted teachings of our great Leader, the theory is retained in our belief, but almost, if not entirely, forgotten in practice.

Healing is not a freak, nor yet a miracle in the light of the Master's teaching. It is the result of a well-defined spiritual process that few have ever attained. It seems too difficult a problem for the masses because of their indifference, hence spiritual even more, has been and is being compiled, and will be furnished the General Conference.

A motion of reference was presented and adopted, that the President of the conference be asked to appoint a committee to draft resolutions upon this question and report the same to this body. The motion of reference was adopted, and the chairman appointed as the committee, R. S. Salyards, Stephen Robinson, and George E. Harrington.

The following resolution was presented, coming from the Joint Council of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Order of Bishops, as their action, and asking that the same be acted upon by the General Conference:

Resolved, That we look with favor upon a policy of partially commercializing our radio station if found necessary and approve the placing of K L D S on a stewardship basis, the details of said stewardship to be worked out by the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric together with such others as they may need to complete such stewardship organization, keeping in mind the prime purposes of the church in building and operating the station.

It was moved that we adopt the report of the Joint Council.

General discussion of the matter was indulged.

It was moved to refer to the Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric. This motion prevailed.

healing has little prospect of ever becoming popular.

Disease (dis-ease), as the word implies, is inimical to health. Unquestionably it has its root in sin, and being destructive can not be of God. If disease had its origin in God, Christ would have encouraged its presence; but as is well known, he rebuked it and moreover removed it, remarking as he did so to the impotent man, "Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more lest a worse thing come upon thee."

Such action forbids a belief that God ever afflicted anyone; therefore, we justly conclude that any text of scripture so interpreted as to make God sponsor sickness, disease, or affliction, is incorrect and misleading. Such uses of scripture are on a par with texts erroneously interpreted and used by soul sleepers in denying consciousness after death; or similar to the practice of pedo-Baptists in their application of scripture as they endeavor to maintain infant sprinkling. We know of no instance where Jesus ever approved of disease, but we do see healing offered as a proof of his divinity, which logically makes disease its opposite. The approval of disease would necessitate the approval of sin, a concession we think no loyal follower of Christ would be willing to allow.

Not only did the Master spend much time in healing all manner of diseases, but in a very deliberate and positive manner he sent his ministry out among the people to "preach the gospel and heal the sick." In this he would have his procedure duplicated and perpetuated; and no doubt the apostles first chosen and sent out so understood, as the four gospels record their successes along both lines, i. e., preaching and healing. Broadening out in their work, we note the commission as found in Mark 16, where it is said they should go and preach the gospel to every creature. Accompanying this preaching, Jesus enumerated several signs which he declared should follow the believer. We note, "They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Here again we have the idea that the practice of healing the sick should be continued indefinitely; hence it soon became a recognized procedure and an easy matter to establish the laying on of hands as a doctrine for the healing of the sick. Evidently there was to be no separation of preaching the gospel and the recovery of the sick, as at first demonstrated by Christ and duplicated to a lesser extent, perhaps, by the first apostles. Faith was the determining factor; great faith, great healing; little faith, little healing; no faith, no healing; and if little or no healing, what then? What could a lack of demonstration mean? Most certainly it would imply a dearth of spiritual power, if nothing worse.

In James 5: 13-15 we read: "Is any among you af-

NEWS AND LETTERS

Marion, Illinois

The work in Marion is still progressing fairly well under existing conditions. We have had much inclement weather this winter and some serious illness in our branch. One little brother underwent a serious operation. But he is slowly improving through earnest prayers and the mighty hand of God, and we believe he will be healed.

On January 2 our former missionary, Elder J. W. Paxton, gave the Saints at Marion a very welcome assistance by coming to the church one night, not being expected by anyone there, and preaching to us. Brother Paxton stayed with us about a month, and everyone enjoyed his visit and the good sermons he preached from time to time while here.

On the night of March 14, Evangelist T. C. Kelley preached to us, taking for his text Matthew 23:37, beginning, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem," and which is fair warning to the Saints of today that if we fail to adhere to the great plan of salvation laid down for us, we shall indeed have sorrow.

On the 16th our district missionary, R. L. Fulk, came down from Mount Vernon, Illinois, where he is making his headquarters, and stayed over Sunday, the 20th, preaching each night. His wise counsel to us was like unto that of Peter of old. We humbly trust in prayer if it be God's will that Brother and Sister Fulk will be returned to our district for the coming conference year, for we know the work of the Lord has prospered under his stay in this district. There have been a greater number of inventories filed and tithes paid than ever before in this branch, and we believe more in the entire district. We do not want to be greedy, but would be very thankful if we could be permitted two missionaries in this district, for it is large, and there are many country roads to travel which are poor highways, almost impassable at times.

The departmental work is doing nicely. Sunday school convenes each Sunday with good attendance, and the Religio and Department of Women meet each week. We have preaching Sunday at eleven in the morning and also in the evening; our prayer meeting Wednesday night is good.

On Saturday, March 19, the Department of Women gave a food sale up town, one of our worthy merchants, Mr. Charles Hay, donating a large window for our display, and the use of space and telephone service, which were very much appreciated. Our net proceeds amounted to twenty-seven dollars and fifty cents. This will be added to our fund for the benefit of the church. At the last meeting of this department, the sisters sent three dollars to Bishop A. Carmichael to be placed in the general fund of the Department of Women.

We pray for success, and that the Lord will bless all of his people in the various parts of the world, and we ask the prayers in faith that we may ever be humble and prayerful, always found doing the things pleasing to our heavenly Father; that when we are weighed in the balance, we will not be found wanting. Onward to the redemption of Zion. Let us all work together in our prayer.

Chatham, Ontario

March 28.—The meetings in our branch during the past month have been well attended, especially the Sunday school, which seems to draw the largest attendance of any of the meetings.

During the month Patriarch John Shields paid us a visit and remained with us over two Sundays. Elder J. W. Peterson also paid us a visit and preached one evening to us. Their visits were greatly enjoyed.

Miss Muriel Jones, eldest daughter of Branch President R. H. Jones, underwent an operation for appendicitis, and is now able to be out again at the services.

Miss Emily Babcock and Mr. William Bell were united in the bonds of matrimony by our branch president on Saturday, March 5. Brother and Sister Bell are making their home in this city.

A baby son, Jack Edward, was born to Brother and Sister Ivan N. Pritchard on Thursday, March 10. Mother and baby are both doing fine.

A Saint Patrick's concert, sponsored by the Department of Women, was held March 17, and a good crowd was present. Sister Alex Shaw, the superintendent, presided over a varied program of vocal and musical numbers, with an appropriate talk on Saint Patrick included.

On Tuesday, March 22, a father and son banquet was held under the auspices of the Sunday school, and over seventy fathers and sons were present. The mayor of our city, Mr. A. L. Thompson, was present and delivered a fine address. A prize for the youngest son present was given, which went to Gordon Pritchard, the two-year-old son of Brother and Sister Vernard E. Pritchard. The prize for the oldest father went to Patriarch Arthur Leverton, of Bothwell, over eighty years of age, who was present with his son, Elder William Leverton. Patriarch Arthur Leverton has not devoted all his time to church work, being an ex-warden of the Kent County Council. His sons are following in their fathers footsteps, as William Leverton is reeve of Zone Township while another son is reeve of Orford Township. Among the guests at the banquet was Brother George Walker, an old pioneer Saint of this branch, who is a Crimean War veteran and over ninety years of age.

Plans are being made by the Sunday school to fittingly observe Easter and Mother's Day by special services.

Columbus, Ohio

March 29.—On March 6, sacrament was in charge of Bishop H. E. French and Elder G. H. Kirkendall. A beautiful spirit was present, and all felt edified.

The Oriole Girls were organized with Sister Leah Turvey as monitor, and the Blue Birds were organized with Mrs. Letha McMillin as guardian. They expect to have a good time this summer.

Tuesday evening, March 8, the priesthood held its monthly meeting, and all members of the priesthood were requested to be present.

Second Columbus Branch had its first death since 1923 when our aged sister, Mrs. Mary Williams, was called to her reward on March 7. She was seventy-eight years old and died in Saint Anthony's Hospital after several months' illness. She was a faithful member and will be missed by her many friends.

Thursday afternoon, March 10, the Department of Women met at the home of Sister French, 1000 Linwood Avenue, and a profitable time was had by all. We were glad to have with us Sister Edna Zieschang, of the First Branch.

Sister Ethel Shebonda, of Akron, spent the week-end with us.

Sister Hazel Gribben, branch chorister, was taken to White Cross Hospital for an operation for inward goiter. At this writing she is critically ill, but we are hopeful of her recovery.

On Tuesday evening, March 22, our branch put across a stunt which turned out to be perhaps one of the most colorful events in the history of the branch. For the past three years we have had a basketball team in the South Church Basketball League of this city, and each year, though not winning the championship, we have made a creditable showing, and have established a reputation for being clean, hard fighters. The fighting spirit of the boys has been helped during each season by a fine "turn out" of rooters from the church and good yelling led by the Temple Builders.

At the close of the present season, we extended an invitation to a complimentary chicken dinner to each of the teams against whom our boys had played, and as stated before, March 22 was the date of the dinner. The Washington Park Shelter House was selected as the place, and the time was set for 6.30 p. m. Our Women's Department prepared the meal, and the Temple Builders decorated the tables, each table being decorated with the colors of the team that was to sit at that table. By 6.30 all was in readiness; and after thanks were returned by Brother Gard Kirkendall, the dinner was served by the Temple Builders, who were all in their uniforms—this adding quite a bit of color to the event. After serving, the Temple Builders sang two beautiful songs and received a "big hand."

The total number present was 82. This included 67 players from 13 churches (counting our own as one), 7 brethren of our branch, and 8 City Recreation Department men. After the dinner was over, several short speeches were given. Among the speakers were Brother French, Reverend Mr. Knipping, president of the Basket Ball League, two ex-presidents of the league, and several of the team captains. All those present were highly pleased, and we believe nothing but good can come from such an entertainment.

The speakers for this month were Bishop H. E. French, Elder G. H. Kirkendall, and Elder C. W. Clark. We had some very interesting and instructive sermons.

Fifty-two Years in the Church

By C. G. Gould

I have been reading the HERALD for the last forty years, and after enjoying so many testimonies from different ones, I thought I would write a few words concerning my experience in the church.

In 1875, while I was living at Clitherall, Minnesota, Apostle T. W. Smith came there and preached the gospel of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I was a member of the Cutlerite Church, and a goodly number of the Cutlerites came into the Reorganized Church.

My wife was the first to give in her name for baptism at that place, and I was the next one. My father said, "You children may go ahead and be baptized if you want to. I have been baptized twice, and that's enough for me. I said, "Father, you mustn't set any stakes. T. W. Smith claims to be an apostle of Jesus Christ, and his church has all the officers, the same as Christ's church had." So when we went forth and were baptized, and had started home, father said, "Hold on, I am going with the children."

A short time after that he was ordained an elder in the church and was selected president of the branch when it was organized and was president as long as he lived, nearly twenty years. He was known all around as Father Gould. He always said he never gave up any truth he had learned in other churches, but he found still more truth in this church and found it more as the Bible teaches.

Many of the young married people were baptized, and the gifts of the gospel were poured out upon us. A few nights before Brother Smith left, a prayer meeting was held at our house. It lasted until ten o'clock. Sister T. W. Smith spoke in tongues and gave the interpretation to those present, and then turned and spoke to my brother Winfield. She told him his prayers had been answered, and many other things concerning his life. He arose and asked to be baptized that night. Brother Smith said he would attend to it right away. My brother's wife was prejudiced, and she left the house and went home alone. The rest of us went to the lake, and the baptism took place about half past ten at night.

Brother Smith said, "In the morning, about half past nine, come over to Father Gould's for the confirmation." We met at that time and persuaded Winfield's wife to come downstairs while he was confirmed. During the confirmation Brother Smith spoke in prophecy to him, saying his wife would come into the church.

It was eight and a half long years before she was willing to obey the gospel. Then she came to prayer meeting and said if we would forgive her and God would forgive her, she wanted to be baptized. And she was baptized and is still strong in the faith.

Other missionaries to Minnesota were Thomas Nutt, J. R. Lambert, I. N. Roberts, Swen Swenson, E. L. Kelley, Hiram L. Holt, Warren E. Peak, and J. C. Foss.

T. W. Smith talked to us about Zion, and some were anxious to go. My companion and I decided in 1878 to move to Missouri. We drove through with a yoke of oxen.

I will speak of one circumstance that happened on the road: In Shenandoah, Iowa, we stopped to visit my wife's cousin, Lyman Fisher. There we joined a company with a number of wagons, ox teams, and a drove of cattle. One day we came to a big marsh to cross. I was in the lead and inquired of a man about crossing. He told us to go right across, that there was no other way to go. Before we started, I looked across the prairie and saw a man coming on horseback, waving his hand. As I was ahead, he came to me and said, "You don't want to try to cross that marsh. If you do try, you'll never get out." He asked where I was going. I said, "To Stewartville, Missouri." He said, "I know a couple there—a preacher, T. W. Smith, and his wife." I said, "Why, I know him. He baptized me and my wife." He said, "He baptized me, too," and he jumped from his horse and came to shake hands with me. We were both so glad to talk about the church that we visited for half an hour and kept the whole caravan waiting, while they kept trying to keep the cattle from straying off. Some of the company asked me later if I was acquainted with that man. I said, "No, we never saw each other before, but we are both Latter Day Saints and we enjoyed visiting."

This man told us there was a good hard road around the marsh and it was only a half or three quarters of a mile farther than the road across, which was very dangerous. We felt sure the Lord had directed that man to come in time to help us.

When we reached Stewartville, I sold the yoke of steers and bought a team of horses. We lived there two years, but were in doubt about what was best to do, so as there was no bishop in Zion to write to for advice, I wrote to President Joseph Smith and told him my circumstances and asked his advice.

He wrote back that he was willing to advise me as best he could. He said that as I owned a farm in Minnesota, he would advise me to go back there and accumulate as much as I could honestly. Then, when I had enough to buy a home, it would be all right to turn my face Zionward.

We did just as he told us to, and it proved to be good counsel. When we left Stewartville and started north, one of my horses became sick and acted fairly wild with pain. He would rear up on his hind feet and paw the air. I unhitched and started back to find a veterinary. The sick horse reared again and finally dropped to the ground. I didn't know what to do. I had no money to buy another horse if this one died, and I didn't know what would become of us. Then I remembered we were commanded to pray over our flocks and herds, and this gave me faith to pray for my sick horse. I laid my hand on his head and asked the Lord to heal him, that we might continue our journey. And my prayer was answered. The horse got up and soon acted perfectly all right, and we went on our way rejoicing.

We went to Minnesota and lived eight years. I rented a big farm and saved enough for a home in Zion. Then we moved to Independence and bought a home near the Chicago and Alton depot. Land around the present location of the Stone Church was $20 a front foot. Twelve years later we built on West Walnut Street, and later on Grand Avenue. We have had a home all the time and never have paid a cent of rent. We still think Brother Joseph gave good advice.

When I was ordained an elder I was told that I should have the gift of healing, and this promise has been fulfilled. I will tell of one circumstance where I was called to administer. A boy came to our door one night and said his mother wanted me to get another elder and come to administer to her, as she had been bitten on the arm by a rattlesnake. J. D. White and I went with the boy and found his mother, Mrs. John Inman, sr., with her arm swollen clear to her shoulder and all purple. We administered and then went out and looked at the rattlesnake, which they had killed. It had six rattles. Before we left, we administered again. Sister Inman had refused to have a doctor and had faith the Lord would save her. The swelling went down gradually, and a few days later she came to see us, her arm still purple, but not swollen so much. The skin lay in wrinkles, and we could easily see where the snake had bitten into her arm. She got all right without a doctor's care.

In regard to the church papers, I advise everybody who can to take them. In the Autumn Leaves there are three pieces by J. J. Cornish that are worth the subscription price of Autumn Leaves.

Another thing all Saints should have to read is Joseph Smith's prophecy concerning the war. It is printed on sheets to be pasted in the Doctrine and Covenants. My wife's mother was present when that prophecy was given. She said Brother Joseph preached for five hours, and his face looked like marble. Mothers took their children out to feed them and returned for the meeting.

Two good books for Saints to read and give to their friends outside the church are The Little Brown Cottage and The Call at Evening.

Concerning the Auditorium, I go there two or three times a week and watch the workmen.

Apostle Budd held a series of meetings this winter for a week and preached to ten or twelve hundred, young and old. When John Sheehy raised his right hand and said "Sing! all sing!" it would have done you good to hear the music from those young people.

When we lived in Minnesota, all the recreation we had was preaching meetings and prayer meetings. I still think secret prayer and family prayer should be remembered every day in our homes.

And now that General Conference is coming, all should come praying that we may be able to perform the work before us. All should look forward to 1930.

Duluth, Minnesota

March 27.—We closed our last letter just before the district conference convened in Duluth. Conference opened with a social gathering in the evening of February 25. A short program was rendered, and an enjoyable time spent in the basement playing games. Ice cream was served.

In the absence of Elder Lester Whiting, Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley spoke on Saturday, February 26, at eleven in the morning on the subject, "The responsibility of members to priesthood," using a blackboard outline. First, organization necessary; second, no leadership without following; third, Christ the leader and commander; fourth, leadership through priesthood; fifth, mutual confidences; sixth, cooperation; seventh, responsibility of members, subdivided into: One, Toward branch officers. A, honor and respect (Doctrine and Covenants 125:14); B, hearken to counsel (Doctrine and Covenants 17:18, 117:11); C, attend services (Doctrine and Covenants 59:2); D, Sunday observance (Doctrine and Covenants 68:4); E, financial support; F, support in administration. Two, toward district officers: A, honor and respect (Doctrine and Covenants 125:14); B, authority of Melchisedec priesthood (104:4-7); Three, toward traveling ministry: A, honor and respect (Doctrine and Covenants 125:14); B, seek counsel (Doctrine and Covenants 120:4, 5); C, financial support (Doctrine and Covenants 83:16).

The conference business session was held at two, Saturday afternoon. Carroll Olson, of Saint Paul, was recommended to the office of elder through the district officers and Minneapolis Branch. The following delegates were chosen for General Conference: Wesley Elvin, Minneapolis, Minnesota; J. A. Gunsolley, Minneapolis; P. G. Schnuckle, Duluth; Robert Gunlock, missionary to Minnesota and North Dakota; Sister Leslie DeLapp, and Sister Charles Johnson, of Minneapolis. The district organization was more fully perfected with Elder Robert Gunlock as assistant superintendent of Sunday school; Sister Carroll Olson, district librarian; Sister Ruth Walters, secretary and treasurer of Sunday school.

Elder George W. Day, of Bemidji, spoke in the evening of the 26th, using as a reading Joel 2:1-19.

While there was no special manifestation of the gifts of the gospel at the sacramental service at half past eight Sunday morning, the spirit of unity was present. Carroll Olson was ordained an elder under the hands of J. A. Gunsolley, patriarch, and Elder Ray Whiting, district president. Brother Olson comes to the church qualified for service, having studied for the task that lies before him, making preparation not only in learning, but by being obedient to the teaching of Christ.

Elder Olson spoke at eleven o'clock Sunday, reading Matthew 17:1-13. He likened the conference to a mount where we enjoy the blessings of God, but must again descend to the valley of human experience and face the great task that lies before us, strengthened by the experiences upon the mount.

District President Ray Whiting spoke at half past two in the afternoon, selecting as a scripture reading 1 Corinthians 3:8-23. His text was, "We are laborers together with God." He emphasized three distinct points labor, together, God. There is a great need of progress, as individuals, as groups, and as a church, for the voice of progress is the voice of God; and to the extent that we progress, to that extent we are of God. The need of giving all diligence was urged, and we were advised to "add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity, for if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."—2 Peter 1:5-8. We dedicate our church edifices to the service of God, and should also dedicate ourselves, not only the heart but our feet, hands, our possessions, our talents, our all.

On Sunday evening at eight o'clock, J. A. Gunsolley was the speaker, delivering an old-time gospel sermon as asked by a brother, the subject being "The Lord's table in contrast with man's table." Again he used a blackboard outline. He discoursed upon the things not accepted by the Christian world today, showing what man's table has to offer in comparison to the table of the Lord.

The conference being over, we came down off the mount to the valley below, and are striving to progress through the lessons learned. I would have liked to report sermons and table talks of all, but not always being in attendance I could not receive their outline or thoughts expressed.

A junior church has been established in the basement of the church each Sunday except sacrament Sunday at eleven o'clock. This is in charge of Brother Robert Zuelsdorf, priest, who is striving to bring to the young those things which will help them to a right conception of their duties to God.

A missionary service is held each week at the home of Saints, with some nonmembers attending. While we are not reaching great heights, we are happy that we are working in the service of the Lord, doing the work that comes to us, knowing that God's cause will prosper if we do our part.

On March 6, sacramental service was held under the influence of a unified spirit, and there was a general expression of desires to continue rendering service to God. P. G. Schnuckle spoke in the evening, using 1 John 3. Text, John 3:16, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

W. C. Stauty was the speaker at eleven o'clock March 13, "Blessing men through men," being the theme. God has worked through all ages through the instrumentality of man to bless mankind, through the establishment of governments to free from bondage, bringing knowledge and light and truth to all who would stoop to listen even to the direction of man, to peopling the whole earth and carrying out the full redemption of mankind. A. C. Bundy was the evening speaker.

Elders Samuel Case and Robert Gunlock spent a few days at the home of Sister William Dennis, of Ashland, Wisconsin, counseling and giving the manna from on high. Brother Robert Gunlock stopped over the week-end and spoke both morning and evening on March 20 to an attentive audience. On the 21st Brother Robert Gunlock and Sister Ruth Walters were surprised when upon entering the church they found a party had been planned for their benefit. A purse was presented to Brother Gunlock. Before this letter comes to print Brother Robert and Sister Ruth will be married. The ceremony is to be on April 4 at the home of Ruth's parents, Carlton, Minnesota. Caroline Bradden, daughter of Sister Julia Braddon, was married to Ole Moen, on March 26, P. G. Schnuckle, pastor, officiating.

On March 27, Elder Samuel Case occupied the pulpit at eleven o'clock, reading 1 John 4, and discussing the theme, "The gospel of love," showing plainly the need of loving our fellow men if we expect the outpouring of the love of God upon us. Pastor Schnuckle spoke in the evening, using John 10, and clearly showing that religion is life. He quoted James 1:27: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the vices of the world."

Our prayers go out to the church in conference assembly, praying that his divine Spirit may enlighten the minds of each of his believing children, that they may assemble in unity, in love, and in bonds of peace, that God may see fit to speak to them his will. Our faces are still Zionward, and we are hoping and praying that we can eradicate from our lives those things that may hinder progress, that Zion when it is fully established will be Zion to everyone.

Pontiac, Michigan

March 23.—Who hasn't heard the merry old chief announcing, "This is W. J. R., Pontiac, Michigan"? In fact, it would seem that Pontiac should be a household word throughout this great Nation, and other countries as well, especially among those who own a radio or drive an automobile. Pontiac is the home of the General Motors Truck Co., Wilson Foundry and Machine Company, makers of Willys-Overland and Willys-Knight motors, Pontiac unit of the Fisher Body Corporation, and the Oakland Motor Car Company, makers of the Oakland and the new Chief Pontiac Six, which during the year 1926 broke all existing records for first-year automobile production by over 100 per cent. Sixty thousand proud citizens of Pontiac pay homage to Big Chief Glancy and the Oakland Motor Car Company in recognition of this stupendous achievement. The General Motors Corporation is spending twelve million dollars in the new Pontiac plant and foundry and other equipment necessary to increase production and meet the demand of their sales organization. This incidentally means growth for Pontiac and employment for her citizens. The population has increased from 34,000 to 60,000 in the past seven years, and all things point to a continued increase.

With the growth of the city itself, the work of the church has been steadily progressive, and 1926 witnessed another stupendous achievement in Pontiac, which perhaps hasn't broken any record but maybe a few backs and pocketbooks, in the completion of the upper auditorium of our church building. The lot was purchased and the basement opened for services about the year 1917. This task was started by Big Chief Walter Bennett, assisted by such warriors as Otto Berndt, and wife, the Kenyon family, Wallace Winger, George McCaughan and wife, James Meade and wife, George McLeod and wife, the Davis boys, sons of Patriarch James Davis, the Whitehead brothers, Ellis and Carlyle, Edward Schell, Charles Bowen and family, and Richard Ragatz, and others unknown to the writer. During these nine years of physical and financial struggle, the Department of Women was unceasingly active, and it shares in the honor of this splendid accomplishment.

The writer, with many others who have come to the city in recent years though not here to help bear the early sacrifice and effort, were happy to assist in the completion of the upper auditorium, and are happy now in the hope of making this new building a center from which shall go out an influence for good in this city and a place where God shall be ever present to guide his people Zionward. The building is centrally located at 19 Front Street, between Orchard Lake Avenue and Pike Street, and only two blocks west of the Main Street. This choice of location was made in obedience to the voice of the Spirit in revelation, instead of one in an out-of-the-way place, as was first contemplated. May God always give us the vision to see ahead that we may always be prepared to meet the demands of tomorrow. The building is of brick structure and one of which we may be justly proud. And often, as we worship there, we think of the sacrifice that has made it all possible, and there is impressed that great truth that back of everything that is beautiful, good, and worth while lie noble sacrifice and generous service.

Elder M. J. Crowley, counselor to the district president, and formerly of Toronto, Ontario, is president of the branch, assisted by Ellis Whitehead, superintendent of the Sunday school; Noble H. Kelly, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Missionary H. A. Koehler, in charge of Music; and Sister J. J. Jewell, in charge of the Department of Women. The branch presidency and superintendents of departments form a program committee and arrange for each month's program in advance. Then we have our financial and visiting committees and other officers, all of which make for organized effort. Our district missionary, H. A. Koehler, and Mrs. Koehler make their home here and have spent considerable of their time endeavoring to help the work onward. The Sunday School Department is well organized under the able leadership of Elder Ellis Whitehead. Four of the teachers in this department have life teacher's certificates. The Department of Recreation and Expression, assisted by the women of the branch, puts on a "big feed" and program once each month. In January we had an oyster stew; in February, a Valentine supper; and in March, a Saint Patrick's supper. In our program work, we have been ably assisted by Brother George McCaughan and family, who have delighted us with their quartet numbers, and especially Sister Pauline McCaughan, who generously gives of her musical talent to the church. The Schaar sisters, daughters of Brother V. D. Schaar, of Orion, our district superintendent of the Sunday School Department, assisted us with our program in January. We were very glad to have them with us and to listen to their splendid entertainment.

Among the new arrivals in the city, we are glad to welcome Sister Hattie Schreur, a daughter of Bishop Schreur of Northern Michigan. She is teaching in one of our city schools.

With another General Conference drawing near, our thoughts turn towards Zion with the hope that this conference will mark another year of progress throughout the church. In Pontiac we hope to hold the torch of truth high and make our contribution to the realization of God's kingdom on earth.

NOBLE H. KELLY.

Decatur, Illinois

March 29.—You will notice from the record I send that we have not been idle in our small branch, but this report does not include all our activities.

Just one year ago this branch was organized, with only ten or twelve members. Since that time we have built a nice little church, and with the help of some of our good missionaries we have increased our little flock to about four or five times that number.

I know everyone is up and doing.

Our Sunday school has an enrollment of about sixty, and we are hoping to keep this growing.

We are proud to let the Saints know that Decatur is on the map now, and we are glad to notice the interest taken in all the branches.

We have just fairly begun our Religio work, but there is a fine interest. The Ladies' Aid is doing some wonderful work. Then there is the fine work of our young people and juniors on Sunday evening.

Many of our books are being bought by the new members. They seem to want to know more and more of the good things in store for them.

We do not want to forget our branch president, Brother O. C. Johnson; he is a very faithful worker indeed.

We will be glad to see some one of God's servants come among us again and take some of our good brethren down into the water for the cleansing.

I love to share the associations of the Saints. We meet three or four times a week, and all our services are very helpful.

We want and we need the prayers of the entire church in order that we might help pay the price of building Zion.

Topeka, Kansas

March 28.—On the evening of February 21 Apostle D. T. Williams stopped off and remained with us until Thursday. And if my pen can express the sentiment of Saints and friends, it was that out of the experiences of the sacred word delivered behind the desk, and visits among the Saints, there was mutual benefit. And for our encouragement on Monday evening he used Paul as an example, "I press toward the mark of the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus." He was a man with a name, a man with a goal; he was not going in a haphazard way; so must we make our response to God with efficiency, giving of our strength and talent without reservations, unreservedly, unlimitedly.

The Department of Women rendered an appropriate anniversary program in honor of George Washington's Birthday, on Tuesday, February 22. The amount collected from the small charge on the pie and ice cream served was turned over to their building fund. Much credit was due the committee for program, and decoration in the national colors. They were especially favored with several numbers by Brother Williams. Then on Wednesday evening we heard another excellent sermon, after which the audience lingered and reluctantly said good-by.

On February 27 the services of the day were in charge of the young people's class of the Sunday school. Elder James Baillie, of Scranton, Kansas, was secured as speaker for the day. The Scripture character used was Daniel, and his faithfulness in keeping the commandments at the morning and evening hour was stressed. As a father to the branch, he spoke to the young people, and they are to be congratulated in their thoughtfulness and reverence toward their aged brother. Elder C. H. Smith is in charge of this class.

Sacramental service on March 6 was in charge of B. F. Deller. District President Dave Little was present and assisted. District Missionary C. E. Harpe came in just after the commencement of the service and rendered assistance. And in the language of the poet there came "... to soul and sense

The feeling which is evidence
That very near about us lies,
The veil of spiritual mysteries—
The sphere of supernatural powers
Infringes on this world of ours."

And it may be truly said that the soul touched by the Spirit's presence on this occasion was evidence that God does recognize his children with his Spirit.

Brother Harpe preached in the evening to a good-sized audience. During the week he preached at the homes of the Saints in North Topeka, some nonmembers attending, and the meetings were continued another two weeks. At the beginning he asked that religious tradition be laid aside, and that we find the law by which we are to be judged in the day of judgment. If our work is in harmony with the teachings of Christ, well and good. The unchangeability of God's law was stressed, and his love for his children in all ages. For God hath created all nations of one blood and hath determined the time and bounds of their habitation. Have men in the past lived in vain? If so, what is the use of service? But we read that men have found him in the past. Brother Harpe spoke of the time when Christ was born, and while he was on earth people walked and talked with him. If there is no means by which we may know him, why then does he ask us to serve him? Man must know that God still reigns on high; that he has created man with the eternal element. We do not have to take the divine message on faith alone, for we have evidence of God in the past and present. We assure our readers that the truths concerning God and his revelation through the gospel were portrayed in such a way that they were easily understood by all, and that Brother Harpe never makes any apologies for preaching the gospel.

The assistance rendered by F. O. Kelley in the way of transportation to different points and homes of the Saints was much appreciated.

Then Sister Kelley, out of the thoughtfulness of her heart, arranged a little surprise at their home on March 12. Each guest brought a handkerchief, tie, socks, or some little thing that a missionary needs. Light refreshments were served. Then on the 21st, a social was held at the church, where all could get better acquainted. A short program was rendered and was in charge of Leonard Pitsenberger, chairman of the social committee. Just before refreshments of ice cream and cake were served, a cake, baked by Sister Emma Happe, and decorated with a harp design on the top, was presented to Brother Harpe by Leonard as a token of appreciation for his efforts while in Topeka. This social was under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression, which we are glad to report is growing under Brother Clayton Crooker's leadership.

On March 20 James Welch, of Henryetta, Oklahoma, and Irma Hyde, daughter of Brother and Sister Hyde, of North Topeka, were baptized at the Y. M. C. A. by Brother Harpe. They were confirmed at the evening preaching service, Brother Welch by C. E. Harpe and B. F. Deller; Sister Irma, by A. P. Crooker and C. H. Smith.

Mrs. William F. Sergeant, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, has been a regular attendant at our meetings the last week, her husband having undergone an operation at the S. B. A. Hospital of Topeka.

Brother A. P. Crooker occupied the stand and preached on post mortem repentance (repentance after death) March 28. The theme was supported by scriptural texts and section 76 of the Doctrine and Covenants. In the evening the sermon was by C. E. Harpe, who spoke to a large audience. He occupied the pulpit at Scranton, Kansas, in the forenoon.

We appreciate the help that has been given us in the music by Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hooper and their hospitality in opening their home for a preaching service during the missionary meetings; also that of Mr. and Mrs. U. V. Robbins, of North Topeka.

News From the Branch at Miami, Oklahoma

COMMERCE, OKLAHOMA, March 22.—I do not believe I have ever seen a letter in the church papers from the Miami (Oklahoma) Branch. Perhaps a few lines from this place might be welcomed by some who are acquainted here. We are moving forward, not by leaps and bounds, but gradually, watching our step as we go.

Brother Higdon, district president, just closed a successful meeting here March 20. He was here one week, and his subject for the week was Zion. The Spirit was with him, and there were some nonmembers out to hear him. Since Brother Higdon's departure, we have heard comments from these nonmembers which lead us to believe they enjoyed his sermons.

The Religio is moving forward, with Brother Ben Bassett at the head of that department, and he is a faithful and zealous worker. Brother B. F. Keyser is Sunday school superintendent and has some willing workers to assist him. They are moving along quite well. Sister Herrell is at the head of the Department of Women, and I must say she is a patient and faithful worker.

We have a membership of sixty-seven and an average attendance of about forty, so I think we are doing pretty well. But we hope to improve and make a better showing by the next time you hear from us.

ALVIN SMITH.

The Saints of Oelwein

OELWEIN, IOWA.—Things have been well with us in our small city and especially in the Latter Day Saint Branch here.

We have had no outside visitors this month, but we try to keep informed about the activities in our neighboring branches.

Elder Guy Haynes, of Waterloo, deserves especial mention, for he is a most spiritual man, and in spite of poor health has ever let his light shine. At one time, early in the winter, his life was almost despaired of, but through faith and administration and prayers he seems on the road to recovery. I have heard him preach very spiritual sermons, and it seemed as if his frail body could hardly contain his soul. He wields a strong influence, although very unassuming.

Patriarch Ammon White was an influence for good in all communities. He did not need to be self-assertive, but one always felt and knew the Spirit was with him.

We wish also to speak of a gifted woman in Waterloo, Sister Ivy Fisher, who writes, or conducts, the natural history page of Stepping Stones. We read with interest her latest stories under the heading, "Rodents of Iowa."

There are some of our own members I would especially like to remember. Our pastor's wife, Sister Ruby McFarlane, is a most earnest worker, and in spite of illness among the children in her home has attended our church meetings with great regularity and always takes an active part in prayer and sacramental meeting.

Sister Nellie Weston, a homekeeper, famed for neatness, as her home is always spick and span, is a regular attendant at church and an excellent hand in sickness. She is greatly loved, and reminds me of Nathaniel, of whom the Master said, "One in whom there is no guile." Nellie has a good word for everybody, even those that use her ill. A number of us say, "If I am ill, I would as soon have Nellie as a trained nurse."

We still have the Spirit with us in our Wednesday evening prayer meeting. Two weeks ago our pastor spoke of something he had learned in his reading, about the garden of our lives; how we have to cultivate the good seeds and keep down the weeds.

Brother Hodges is our oldest, or next oldest, member, and in spite of his advanced age and living a good way from the church, attends every meeting and takes an active part. He is past seventy, but walks to and from meetings, although he is somewhat afflicted and carries a cane. He is our best Bible scholar, also knows the Book of Mormon better than any younger member. His prayers are earnest and seem to come from the depth of his soul.

We feel that there is a real feast for our minds when the HERALD and Ensign arrive, and they are read from cover to cover, and all the good and spiritual things are greatly enjoyed. In the HERALD the sketches from the pen of our noble President, Fred M. Smith, are an insight into the character of the mind that helps to control our wonderful church, with its many gifts and blessings, and our prayers rise daily that he may have health and strength to carry on this great work, this marvelous work and a wonder, as one writer has called it. We hope we may receive prophecies from our noble leader for many years to come. We have also been especially entertained reading those letters written from Maine, having heard that the scenery along the coast was wild and rugged. But his description makes them wonderful views and causes one to wish to visit there.

Our study class of the Doctrine and Covenants was started by two or three members who wished to know more about church government. The teacher has given this study her careful attention, praying for help and guidance that she may have the Spirit to assist her; and the lessons seem to be a success.

We also notice in the latest issue of the HERALD of another branch having a Doctrine and Covenants class. We notice mention made of a member in the West Pullman Branch who has reached eighty-one years of age and even through trials and troubles has always lived a good and blameless life. The branch honored her with especial attention, flowers, and a poem, a few lines of which describe her disposition:

"But because of her nature, she never complained,
Burdening others with her disappointments,
But was cheerful and brave through trials and strains
And willingly served some one other."

Our attention was drawn to the long and interesting letter written by Superintendent Woodstock. We know that people are especially favored who can hear his wonderful talks. We heard him at Maquoketa two years ago, and every talk held his listeners spellbound.

Long Beach, California

It has been several months since we have written the HERALD, but we are glad to report that during the interim the branch has progressed. All services are well attended. We are reminded here of a clipping that we saw in our pastor's scrapbook not long since, which read something like this: "The attendance at the Sunday morning service designates the popularity of the church in the community; the evening service, the popularity of the minister; and the Wednesday evening prayer service, the popularity of Jesus Christ." If that be true, then Jesus Christ is very popular in our little branch. Last quarter we had an average attendance of thirty-five, and we hope to do better this quarter.

We have recently lost some faithful workers, the John Scannell and Earl Slick families having transferred their membership to the Watts Mission. We regret to lose these Saints from our ranks, but we know they are doing a good work in Watts.

In response to the call of President Smith to rally our musical forces, the choir under the leadership of Sister Arthur Haus, has organized, purchased new books, and is meeting each week for practice. By cooperating with the Sunday school superintendent they have succeeded in eliminating the noise which is so prevalent in small branches, during the intermission between the two services. At the close of the Sunday school, the choir and those in charge quietly take their places as the Sunday school scholars march out, all others remaining seated. Our accomplished pianist, Sister Marjorie Lacey, is always at her post; and as the last scholar passes out, the sweet strains of the prelude serve to get our hearts and minds in tune with the service. We do not discourage visiting at the proper time, and at the close of the service all are urged by the pastor to welcome any stranger who may be within our gates.

The interest of the entire branch is centered upon our orchestra. As President Smith has had visions of the Auditorium Orchestra, so has our little branch dreamed of the time when we could talk of "our" orchestra. This group is being directed by Brother and Sister Robert Lacey, both of whom are talented violinists. This young couple have recently moved to Santa Ana, but they are meeting with the orchestra once a week for rehearsal.

As usual our Department of Women is very active. The members recently held a noon luncheon, having as their guests Brother and Sister Roy Burton. Sister Burton is district superintendent of the Department of Women, and both she and Brother Burton gave instructive talks along the line of the women's work.

We have been very fortunate of late in having a number of the brethren from Zion with us. We greatly appreciate the sermons of these brethren. Among those who have occupied our pulpit of late are President Elbert A. Smith, Apostle J. A. Gillen, J. A. Tanner, and R. V. Hopkins.

Doctor A. W. Teel, church physician, recently addressed the women of the branch on the sex question. Again, on March 27, he gave the Saints much valuable information on the narcotic question.

Combining business with pleasure, the Temple Builders held a box social and valentine party at the home of their leader, Sister Enid Moran, on February 12. There was a goodly number present in spite of the downpour of rain. The men were obliged to buy their supper, resulting in a neat sum for the mortgage fund.

We welcome the Liebold family, of Montana, into our branch. This young couple is entering into the different activities with a zeal that is worthy of commendation. Brother and Sister Jesse Johnson have recently moved back to Long Beach from Burbank, and we are hoping we will keep them this time, as they are very efficient workers.

The Twin Cities

The month of March has been eventful in several lines of activity. Cottage missionary meetings, which have been held quite regularly during the winter, bore fruit in eleven baptisms on Sunday, the 20th. A special baptismal and confirmation service was held in the afternoon, and all rejoiced because of this addition to God's kingdom. These meetings in North-east Minneapolis are to be continued, as considerable interest is being shown on the part of the new Saints and their friends.

Group prayer meetings on Wednesday evening have been again started in the southern part of the city, and they are being well supported, even though the number of families in this section is small. During the General Conference, however, since so many of the priesthood will be away, union prayer meetings will be held at the church.

The Alpha Nu Omega Society put on a hard times party on Saint Patrick's Day, and a very good crowd of young people attended. The prize for the most disreputable and "hard-time-looking" outfit went to Everett Taylor. Everyone had a most enjoyable time.

The Taylor brothers, Everett and Floyd, who have been in the city since November in attendance at Dunwoody Institute, have left again and gone back to the farm to work during the summer and save enough for another year of study and training. The Minneapolis Branch misses them very much, for they were very faithful in attending the meetings and were liked by all.

The quarterly business meeting was held Monday evening, the 28th, and several items of important business were transacted. One of these was the discussion and approval of the branch budget for the year, 1927. Brother Ray Whiting's appointment of Elder Carroll Olson as associate pastor was also approved by the branch. Sister Violet Conway was elected to the office of historian and authorized to write up the history of the Minneapolis Branch from the beginning of the work in the city. Reports from various members of the priesthood showed that more home visiting had been done in the first three months of this year than in six months last year.

April 3 was set aside as a preconference rally day, and several Saints on their way to General Conference from North Dakota and outlying parts of Minnesota were present, as well as other visitors. The sacramental service in the morning was characterized by a good attendance and participation by a large number. In half an hour, about twenty fervent testimonies were given, expressing the gratefulness of the Saints for being privileged to be in the church, and relating many experiences that were comforting and helpful to all. In the afternoon, a so-called "experience" meeting was held, in which eight or ten were asked to give short talks on the theme, "Why I am a Latter Day Saint." A goodly number was present, and the service was much enjoyed. In the evening, Elder William Sparling, formerly pastor in Minneapolis, preached, giving an excellent discourse; those who were members of his congregation, as well as others, were glad to hear his words of wise counsel and to know he is still enthusiastically upholding this latter-day work.

On April 4 Brother Whiting was absent from the branch on a short trip to Carlton, Minnesota, where he joined in wedlock two young people well known to the church, Ruth Walters, a graduate of Independence Sanitarium, and Robert Gunlock, missionary for Minnesota and North Dakota. They passed through the Twin Cities the next day on their way to General Conference. The Saints here wish them the greatest possible happiness.

Another bride and groom are spending their honeymoon in Independence also, and Brother Whiting was the responsible authority in joining them together. The ceremony took place in Minneapolis on March 30. The bride was formerly Sister Lois Harris, instructor in the Department of Women and leader of the Temple Builders, and the groom is Mr. Fred A. Olson of Saint Paul. A shower was given in honor of the bride at the home of Sister Conway on the night of the 26th.

Several other important workers from the Minneapolis Branch will be in attendance at General Conference, so things will seem quite lonesome here. Those planning to go include: Brother and Sister Ray Whiting and daughter, Brother and Sister Leslie DeLapp, Brother and Sister Charles Johnson and family, Brother and Sister Hollingsworth and son Lloyd, Brother Charles Newton, and Brother Wesley Elvin.

San Jose Branch

The Saints of the San Jose Branch are still on the up grade and moving forward, and a friendly working spirit seems to pervade the whole branch; attendance and interest seem to be on the increase. The sick and afflicted ones are improving, though some are still confined to their beds.

On March 6 the Saints enjoyed another good sacramental service. There was a goodly number at the meeting, including some nonmembers who have never attended any of our meetings before. Their children, however, are attending the Sunday school. They said they enjoyed the meeting.

Brother Roy Weldon, a young priest of the Oakland Branch, was the speaker here on Sunday, March 13, and gave us a very good sermon. We notice that the most of our young preachers have caught the "vision" and seem to be deeply imbued with the spirit of stewardship. And why not? The times are propitious for this part of the gospel work.

Sunday, March 20, was rally day, and a very enjoyable day was spent by all in attendance. Elder G. P. Levitt, our district president, was with us, encouraging us all with his cheerful countenance. The services of the day began with a session of the Sunday school, with its song service, class work, and program entertainment.

There were one hundred four in attendance at this service, which gave encouragement to those in charge of the Sunday school work.

Elder G. P. Levitt was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, and gave a sermon that was uplifting and inspiring, and much appreciated by the congregation. There were about thirty visitors from different branches, and scattered members.

Provision was made for a free lunch in the basement of the church, where between seventy-five and one hundred people ate to the full.

At 2.30 p. m. a symposium was held in which Elders Guy P. Levitt, J. P. Carmichael, L. B. Shippy, and Doctor A. R. Lawn were the speakers; and much timely and profitable instruction was given.

At six o'clock in the evening, a session of the Department of Recreation and Expression was held, after which Brother

Levitt preached the closing discourse. Brother Levitt remained over Monday and, with Brother C. W. Hawkins, visited the reunion grounds at Irvington and then returned to San Jose and held a priesthood meeting in the evening, at which time he gave some very good and timely instruction to the priesthood.

On Sunday, March 27, the pastor, Robert Cowden, was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, and the branch deacon, Hale F. Hawkins, was the speaker in the evening.

Brother Cowden believes that stewardships is a part of the everlasting gospel, and he is everlastingly telling the people so, too; Brother Hale, the deacon, is everlastingly backing him up in it.

On Wednesday evening, March 30, Elder B. R. Gilbert and Priest H. V. Bates were in charge of the prayer meeting. The theme for thought and discussion was: "What evidence have I that the church I am in is the church of God?" This proved to be an uplifting and cheering theme. The spirit of testimony was present, and the time allotted for the meeting was too short.

Madison, Wisconsin

April 2.—The March sacramental service was very well attended, and a good spirit prevailed. Many beautiful testimonies were given.

Brother Leonard Houghton has spent the month at home, not feeling well and also resting up for conference.

On Friday evening, March 4, twenty-one young people gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Floyd Carpenter to help their daughter Cleo celebrate her twenty-first birthday. Bunco was the game of the evening by popular vote, so tables were prepared, and the game progressed nicely from all viewpoints. After this had become rather dull, other games were quickly supplied. At eleven o'clock lunch was served. A beautiful birthday cake was prepared by Cleo's mother and Sister Clark. After lunch, "quest" was played, and many humorous situations arose. At twelve the party broke up, and laughter and merrymaking ceased. The evening was a success in every way. Association such as this brings the youth closer together and into a more brotherly atmosphere.

On March 8 the funeral of Brother Donald Ott, of Racine, formerly of Madison, was held. He was the grandson of Brother and Sister Stevens, of Madison. His death was caused by an automobile accident. It was sad to think of a young man not quite eighteen years of age, plucked from this earthly life. He was a promising young man, one loved by all who knew him. There are many things we can not understand in this life, but we must submit to the will of God. "The Lord knows why, and that's enough." Brother L. Houghton preached the funeral sermon, his text being "There is no night there." Brother J. A. Dare, of Rockford, offered the prayer. There was a beautiful display of flowers. Sisters Sylvia Dennis and Walker sang, "Jesus my shepherd," and "Land immortal."

On March 13 Brother W. L. Hartnell, pastor of the Beloit Branch, visited Madison Saints and preached at the eleven o'clock hour to a full house. He enjoyed good liberty, and his sermon was greatly appreciated. The central theme concerned the endeavor of man to separate the physical from the spiritual, thereby causing unrest and dissatisfaction. In living the gospel, there comes the joy which nothing else can give. God should be a partner with us in our activities of life. An invitation was extended to Brother Hartnell to come again.

Brother Houghton was the speaker in the evening, using for the basis of his discourse, "We are all laborers together with God."

The Department of Women recently purchased a new carpet for the rostrum of the church, also runners for the aisles and across the front of the church.

On March 20 Brother Houghton preached a very forceful sermon on "Building Zion," putting stress on the fact that all are Zion builders in whichever department of church work they may labor. There is something for all of us to do. It is not by size or position that we win; it is by being the best of whatever we are.

On Sunday morning preceding the preaching service, Brother Woodstock read the article on meditation at the beginning of services, by Brother F. M. Smith, published in the HERALD, and while the organ was playing the voluntary, asked the Saints to heed the instruction of our President.

Brother Houghton occupied the pulpit most of the Sundays while he was at home, delivering some very good, practical sermons on Christian character, building Zion, financial law, and the blessings that come from obedience to the law.

One Sunday of the month Brother Clark was at Janesville, where the Saints of Janesville and Evansville held an all-day service. Brother Clark preached morning and afternoon. Another Sunday he was at Evansville, where another all-day meeting was held, and preached there.

On the night of April 1 a humorous program was given by the Department of Recreation and Expression, which consisted of performances by Brothers Charles Clark senior and junior, solos, quartets, humorous readings, and an April fool quartet. A mock Irish wedding was had, the cast of characters being: clergyman, Leda Colbert; ring-bearer, Hazel Richardson; bride, Sylvia Dennis; groom, Nora Root; bride's father, Minnie Carpenter; bride's mother, Ethel Richardson; sob sister, Sister Houghton; bride's married daughter with baby, Minnie Rounds; the doctor, Sister Duncan. After the wedding, a supper was served, which consisted of Mulligan stew, buns, and wedding cake. A merry good time was had, and the program was a scream all the way through.

The members of the Department of Recreation and Expression who put on the musical program last month are going to Beloit April 10 and put on the program there in the evening.

As General Conference convenes, our prayer is that the Spirit of Christ may direct and aid in every way, that much may be accomplished, and that it may be one of the best conferences ever had because of the humility of the members. Our prayers are that the church will go forward under the influence of the Spirit of God.

Central Chicago Branch

Sixty-Sixth and Honore Streets

The union sacramental service held at Central Chicago Branch on last Sunday was indeed a wonderful service, strengthening those present and reaching out its influence to those not privileged to be there. The spirit of prophecy was present in power, admonishing the Saints to be faithful in all things, including tithes and offerings, and calling Brother Cochran to the office of elder.

The Sunday school institute was a success socially and otherwise. Notebooks and handwork of the various classes were on display. Talks were made by the teachers, a substitute for each class being chosen and introduced. A pleasing program was rendered and an enjoyable lunch served.

Twenty-four of our members will next Sunday receive a gold button for being present on time the past year, ending last Sunday. Illness was a legitimate excuse for absence, and two Sundays were allowed for vacation trips. Our energetic superintendent has now started a contest of classes, attendance and new pupils being the points of consideration.

A new home has been established in our midst by the marriage of Brother Richard Keir and Sister Faye Bell. Brother Richard is president of the Department of Recreation and Expression, and Sister Faye has been pianist of the branch for a long period of time. We wish for them success and feel that we may count on them as active workers.

Among the many recent visitors of our branch was Bishop Berger, of Canada, who preached a splendid sermon for us.

So many good things come to Central Chicago Branch that we can not mention them all, but we are indeed thankful for the increasing spiritual blessings which are ours.

Independence

The Auditorium

Since the opening of General Conference, on the morning of April 6, the Auditorium has been the scene of much activity. Each morning at nine o'clock a prayer service is held in charge of the First Presidency, at eleven there is preaching, and conference business session convenes at two in the afternoon. Again in the evening there are one or two meetings. At every hour there is the hurry of feet as people come and go, but the peak of interest thus far was reached in the Sunday services.

Sunday at the Auditorium was begun with a meeting of prayer at eight o'clock. This meeting was general; everyone was made to feel welcome, and a good attendance was had. Those who came at this hour braved a threatening sky, but half way through the service, the sun came out, the clouds cleared away, and the day was well commenced. Presiding over this meeting were Presidents F. M. and E. A. Smith. This gathering was a joy to the souls of many, and not a moment of time was wasted. Prayers for the sick were heard, and each Saint was eager to occupy. The officers in charge encouraged brevity of testimony, and in twenty-five minutes more than thirty testimonies were had.

For Sunday school, the senior and adult departments of the Stone Church found their way to the Auditorium and were helped in finding their usual classes by means of placards bearing the number of the class and the name of its teacher. These placards were made and generously donated by Brother Paul May, son of J. Charles May. Conference visitors were given the opportunity to choose between special classes taught by Cyril E. Wight, of Kansas City; James A. Thomas, of Tulsa; O. A. McDowell, of Flint, Michigan; Mrs. Lydia Wight, of Lamoni; Thomas S. Williams, of Detroit, and James E. Bishop, of Steubenville, Ohio.

The combined Stone Church and Walnut Park Orchestras, led by Bishop R. T. Cooper, furnished music for this meeting, playing several much-appreciated selections.

General Sunday School Superintendent C. B. Woodstock, C. B. Hartshorn, superintendent of the Stone Church Sunday school, and Mary Curtis Cochrane, associate superintendent of the Stone Church Sunday school conducted the meeting.

The opening song, sung by the mighty chorus of those assembled, was "Onward, Christian soldiers," led by Miss Marcine Smith, and it was an awe-inspiring occasion to hear the multitude join with Brother Woodstock in saying the Lord's prayer.

Closely following the dismissal prayer of the Sunday school, came the opening of the eleven o'clock service. By that hour every chair in the building was occupied, and many were standing. "Great and marvelous are thy works," was sung by the congregation, the orchestra accompanying; and Bishop M. H. Siegfried offered the invocation. Bishop J. A. Becker was in charge of the meeting, and announced the anthem "Send out thy light," sung by the Messiah Choir, directed by Brother Paul N. Craig. Then Mrs. Blanche Allen Needham, of Canada, sang a beautiful soprano solo.

At this juncture all were given the opportunity to contribute to the extra expense of temporary equipment in the Auditorium for the accommodation of General Conference.

As the speaker of the hour, Bishop Albert Carmichael took for his text, "And Peter followed afar off," asking the question: Is latter-day Israel following afar off? "We have come here from every point of the compass for the weal of humanity," he stated. "Are we following the Master afar off? No matter what success we have made in the past hundred years, in the past decade, in the past year, relatively speaking we are following Christ afar off." There is a long, long trail we must travel before we can do more than follow afar off, but that fact should not keep us from starting on this trail with the conviction, born of the assurance of God's Spirit, that we shall win.

God has commanded his people to come out from and be not of the world, for he knows that as long as we are of the world we will feel, think, and do as the world. Today the world is racked between modernism and fundamentalism. In the church we have men who lean to one belief or the other, but there is safety in the golden mean. Foreseeing our needs, God has given us certain fundamentals upon which to stand, but on this rock of ages, our fundamentals, we have the province to progress, to climb back to God. In order to progress, we must know where we are; we must have a definite idea of the thing we wish to attain, and a clear-cut idea of how we are going to do it.

"And Peter followed afar off." Is latter-day Israel still hesitating? Have we caught a glimpse of the glorious things God has in store for us? Are we ready to use the best of our manhood to build?

Then, clearly and briefly, the speaker proceeded to refute the claim often made that the Bible is unscientific, showing that it is the most, the only scientific thing, in the universe. In it God gives the solution of our modern economic, political, social, and religious problems in the terse commandments: "By the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread" and "subdue the earth." It is our great task to assemble the fragmentary truths of the earth and, with divine aid, make out of them the whole truth, which will make us free. We must subdue the earth and, though now we follow afar off, come out of the wilderness of misunderstanding, the desert of fear, onto higher ground, to establish Zion.

As had been requested, when the service was over the congregation climbed up the inclines to the Auditorium slab, or main floor. There they were joined by those who had attended the service at the Stone Church, and all had their picture taken by Brother C. Ed. Miller and Vance Eastwood of the Graphic Arts Bureau. It was an inspiring sight to see this magnificent assemblage of Saints, and all will be anxious to see their pictures at the picture program presented by the Graphic Arts Bureau next Saturday evening.

Apostle J. F. Curtis preached in the Auditorium at three o'clock in the afternoon, and a large crowd is reported to have been present.

An attractive feature of entertainment at the Auditorium Sunday evening, beginning at half past seven, was the exercise by five hundred representatives of the Temple Builder, Oriole, and Blue Bird organizations in Independence and Kansas City. The girls, all in dainty white uniforms, marched in from both entrances to the back of the auditorium, and down the center aisle. The Temple Builders, with President F. M. McDowell, General Superintendent of the Department of Women Blanche Edwards, Mrs. C. B. Woodstock, supervisor of young women, and Elder T. S. Williams, were seated on the rostrum. The Orioles occupied two sections of the elevated seats on the west side, and the Blue Birds two sections on the east. Each girl organization sang its song, Miss Ada Fallon, of Walnut Park, directing, and Miss Delta Nace, also of Walnut Park, at the piano. The opening song was "Zion's girls," accompanied by combined orchestras, and prayer was by Elder Williams. Together the girls and the congregation sang "Zion builders, carry on," and Miss Edwards expressed appreciation to the girls and those who had assisted them in presenting this program, before introducing Brother McDowell, the evening speaker.

Taking his texts from scripture quoted in the Oriole manual: "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things," and from the first verse of the song, "I would be true," Brother McDowell talked to the girls, urging them to be true, pure, brave. Without mincing words, he told the girls what is expected of Zion's girls, how much the future of the church depends upon them, how they shall have to sacrifice and dare for Zion. These girls will indeed be required to look up and laugh and love and lift. As a fitting close to his appeal, he requested the girls to sing, "Youth's prayer," written by Miss Bertha Constance.

Stone Church

Young missionaries, pastors, conference delegates, and visitors, and the young people of the center place, perhaps five hundred in number, met in prayer at the hour of eight, Sunday morning, in the main auditorium of the Stone Church. The service was presided over by Elder John F. Sheehy, assisted by Elders Floyd M. McDowell, D. O. Cato, and John F. Martin. Elder Cato offered the opening prayer, and Brother Martin, for a scripture reading, read the admonition of Alma to one of his sons.

In the opening remarks, President McDowell urged the necessity of three things: First, a closer contact of the Saints with God and his guiding Spirit; second, a realization of the real nature of the struggle which is ours to help mankind keep alive the ideals that will cause him to live a clean, constructive life; and third, the need of preparation and willing consecration to accept the burden which is now coming to the young of the church.

A special prayer for Miss Elvina Richmond, a young native of the Tahitian Islands and graduate of the Independence Sanitarium, was had at this hour. Sister Richmond has for the past three or four weeks been seriously ill at the Sanitarium, but was reported Sunday afternoon to be resting better.

The score or more of testimonies of this service rang true to the age-old spirit of consecration, the spirit which causes us to sing:

"I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
Over mountain, or plain, or sea;
I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
I'll be what you want me to be."

One could not sit in that service, under the influence of the divine Spirit, without being assured that the youth are preparing for work under the Lord's plan; already many stand at the call of the church. They are desirous, anxious to join hands with those who are older and more experienced in the work, and though the task be great that lies before them, with the aid of the heavenly Father, they hope to do their part, that the church may ultimately triumph.

According to the arrangements of conference workers, that all might be served with the greatest convenience to the body, the senior and adult classes of the Stone Church Sunday school met in the Auditorium, leaving their classroom space to the primary department whose customary quarters, the lower auditorium, has been converted into a rest room by the Department of Women. The primaries were seated in the gallery of the main auditorium. Associate Sunday school superintendent G. S. Trowbridge, and Elder J. E. Kelsey, superintendent of the intermediate department, were in charge of the school.

Following the class period, special numbers were presented by members of the intermediate department. There was a piano solo by Anita May and a vocal duet by Gladys and Margaret Givens.

The many visitors who attended the Sunday school and junior service at the Campus expressed themselves as being well pleased with the activities of the department. The following program was given at the junior service. An operetta entitled "Our wrongs" given by the junior chorus, a piano duet by two junior girls—the Cato sisters, a violin duet by Brothers Cross and Luttrell from the Stone Church Orchestra, and a bottle doll story, "Peter and John at the Beautiful Gate," rewritten and told by Vera Sheehy one of our junior girls.

Preceding the morning sermon, the congregation at the Stone Church greatly appreciated an anthem, "O Holy Lord," by R. N. Dett, rendered by the A Cappella Chorus of Graceland College, directed by Miss Mabel Carlile. Prayer was offered by Elder G. S. Trowbridge.

Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths, honored and loved by this people, declared it a privilege and pleasure, freighted with grave responsibility, to stand between God and his people.

"We sing 'I'll go, I'll say, and I'll do what you want me to do, dear Lord,'" began Brother Griffiths, "without a single thought of understanding. To prove this I'll take a text. In that wonderful sermon preached by the Savior we find these words, 'Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. And everyone that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house and it fell: and great was the fall of it!—Matthew 7: 24-27. Recall what the prophet of God, Samuel, said to Saul, 'To obey is better than sacrifice'; surely that is true in our own day, as I have seen proved many times. Why we turn aside from commands of one who gave his precious blood to purchase us is beyond understanding. Here is a little poem which expresses more cleverly than I can do the way our people accept and obey commands.

"Can and Will are cousins
Who never trust to Luck.
Can is the son of Energy;
Will is the son of Pluck.

"Can't and Won't are cousins, too;
But they're always out of work.
Can't is the son of Never Try;
Won't is the son of Shirik."

"Our church is full of Cans, Wills, and also, unfortunately, Can'ts and Won'ts—people who hear the commands and admonitions of the Lord and who set about doing them with a will, and those who hear the same commands and admonitions and do them not.

"The Lord can never bring about the redemption of Zion with this latter class of people. Since the days of Adam, man has talked Zion; generations have striven until now, and Zion is not redeemed. We sing, 'We're marching to Zion,' but what are we doing to have a tangible Zion to march to? Do you appreciate that God is trying to bring this about through his people who are supposed to carry on the work given into their hands? Are we pure in heart, and are we all working together?

"Nearly a hundred years ago, God brought a people here who polluted the land through disobedience. Are we comparable to them? We are not obeying God's laws. We are not keeping his commandments. Why shut our eyes to these facts? How can we have the courage to ask God to bless us?

"As a parting word let me repeat my text, 'He that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man who built his house upon a rock.'"

K L D S Sunday Activities

At half past eight in the morning, Bible study hour was conducted by K L D S Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell. The program was arranged by Mrs. E. E. Moorman and included the following: Reading, Frances Bryant; piano, Delta Nace; musical reading, Margaret Jane Davis; duet, Ernestine and Helen Moorman; a junior orchestra; story, Paula Ballantyne.

At eleven o'clock the auditorium service took the air. There was music by the Messiah Choir, and a solo by Blanche Allen Needham, soprano. Robert Miller was at the piano. Sermon was by Bishop Albert Carmichael.

A two o'clock program was presented by the piano and voice departments of the Graceland College Conservatory of Music, under the direction of Miss Virginia Wary, head of the piano department; and Mary Louise Lloyd, head of the voice department. The following student artists assisted: Rae Lysinger, Byron Neville, Charlene Hensel, and Eunice Butts, pianists; Grace Lane, Clifford Greene, and Gertrude White, vocalists.

Preaching by Apostle Frank Curtis in the Auditorium was broadcast at three.

K L D S radio vesper service took the air at half past six. The music was arranged by Minnie Scott Dobson and presented by a quartet composed of Alberta Lanpher, Margaret Gard, Glaud Smith, and Kenneth Morford, with special numbers by Earl J. Cox, cornetist, and Margaret Gard, contralto, and by the following Saint Joseph artists: Mrs. Ruth Haden and Mrs. Jennie Haden, sopranos; Mr. Evan Ehlers, baritone. Sermonet was by Elder U. W. Greene.

At eight o'clock "The Elijah" by the Messiah Choir of two hundred voices, under the direction of Mr. Paul N. Craig, entertained radio listeners. Robert Miller was at the organ, George Miller and Florence Koehler Campbell, pianists.

Evening Service

At eight o'clock a large congregation was seated in the Stone Church auditorium ready to hear the presentation of Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Elijah," by the Messiah Choir, composed of two hundred voices, the combined choirs of Independence with visiting soloists.

Two performances of the "Elijah" were necessary to accommodate all who wished to hear it. Sunday evening the performance was especially for visitors and delegates to conference, and Monday evening townspeople were the favored audience.

Enoch Hill to Render Cantata

Following the regular Sunday school hour Sunday morning, April 10, the Enoch Hill Choir held a rehearsal of the Easter cantata, "The thorn-crowned king," which will be presented next Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour. This cantata will be given under the direction of Brother Charles Warren. The final rehearsal will be held Friday evening, April 15.

Sister John Jones, who lives on South Liberty Street, was severely scalded one day last week. At present she is unable to leave her home and, being an active worker in our district, is sorely missed.

Sister Mamie A. White, wife of Brother B. D. White, passed away the latter part of last week, and the funeral was conducted at the church Sunday afternoon, April 10, Bishop B. J. Scott preaching the sermon. Sister White was born March 11, 1858, and leaves to mourn her departure many relatives and friends.

Progress Reported From Spring River

Dear Brother Carmichael: Perhaps you would be interested in hearing about the good condition of the Spring River District.

During the past year we have baptized upward of one hundred. At least seventy-five per cent of the ministry of the district have filed their inventories, and the following branches can report one hundred per cent of the ministry doing so: Nowata, Parsons, Arma, Webb City, and Miami. It is just possible that Carthage and Coffeyville can make as good a report, but I do not know.

During eight months of the present fiscal year, two hundred ten dollars more tithing has been paid than there was all last fiscal year, and I know of several who are going to contribute quite liberally between now and July 1.

I am ever working and praying for the advancement of the cause.

AMOS T. HIGDON.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, March 30.

Dow City, Iowa

This branch is moving slowly but with an increased desire of all to go on.

The young senior choir gave a musical program in February, which was very much enjoyed by all present.

District President F. T. Mussell held a series of meetings here, beginning March 6 and continuing throughout the week. His subject Sunday morning was stewardships. For the week the following texts were used: "The purpose of the church," "The meaning of religious education," "Teachers of religion," "Organizing for youth," "Our heritage." The blackboard outline used in presenting these subjects made them very plain and interesting. There was a fair attendance at these meetings.

Brothers C. E. and J. L. Butterworth are the regular speakers.

An institute for musical workers of Gallands Grove District was held at Dow City, March 26 and 27, being conducted under the auspices of the general Department of Music. Brother A. H. Mills, of Independence, Missouri, was in charge of this institute. A very profitable and interesting time was had. Brother F. T. Mussell also was present and assisted in his usual pleasant way. There was a representative attendance from several other branches in the district.

The April sacramental service was not very well attended, but the time was profitably occupied, and a good influence prevailed.

Our Sunday school has appointed a committee to have charge of the Easter program.

Attendance at Sunday school is fair, but that at Religio is not good. We hope our number will increase.

The Department of Women is very busy. We will see the result of their work at a later date.

Brother J. L. Butterworth occupied the pulpit Sunday evening, April 3.

Sisters Vida Spence and Vida Butterworth, who are taking a course in nurse training at the Independence Sanitarium, are spending a vacation at home in Dow City, also recuperating from operations which they recently underwent at the Sanitarium.

The Saints here are praying for success of the General Conference now in session in Independence. May God be with his Saints.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

All the departments are working to eliminate duplication of efforts in the work of the church and minimize unnecessary expense.

The report of the financial clerk for the year ending December 6 indicates progress in reducing indebtedness and properly providing for each department of the church as each had need.

The death of Mother Currie caused joy to be mingled with sorrow, to know that for nearly eighty-seven years she has preserved her integrity and developed a life of faithfulness in the church for nearly fifty-seven years that stands out as an example to womanhood and motherhood. Such an example is very helpful in controlling the impulses of society and especially helpful to the Saints.

There has been much sickness in the city and several serious cases among the members of the church. God has in a marvelous way expressed his love and mercy to the afflicted, and caused the men of science to wonder because of a power manifested in the recovery of the sick beyond what medical skill could do.

Of late we note an increased interest in the midweek prayer meetings. To this interest, Brother Richard Baldwin and his wife have contributed much.

The last sacrament day was associated with much of the work of the Spirit of God, to the encouragement of the priesthood and the joy of all Saints. It was with regret that the closing work of the conference year for Brother and Sister

Baldwin had come. Two noble boys were baptized by Brother Baldwin on the last Sunday of his stay with us.

The choir gave a rendition of the cantata "Daniel," both at Central and Riverside Churches. It is spoken of very highly by those present.

The reading recently given by Forest A. Roberts, one of the instructors at Graceland College, at Central Church was pronounced very good.

An excursion was arranged by Brother O. A. Currie with the C. B. and Q. R. R. to send to the General Conference, a special car on the 9th and 10th. The car was cheerfully provided, the extra expense for the round trip being only four dollars. Many of the Saints took advantage of this excellent opportunity to see Independence, and attend a part of the conference.

The Pottawattamie District and especially Council Bluffs Branch were looking forward with some anxiety in regard to the possibility of that district's becoming a part of a district, in which they were to be associated with the Fremont District. The new district has been formed by action of the General Conference on the 7th, and the new district is known as the Southwestern Iowa District. We are hopeful that the purposes of the church may be more efficiently served, and for this the Saints here are willing to labor.

Arma, Kansas

March 24.—The Saints at Arma are trying to keep the good work going. There are two elders and two priests here in this branch. Sunday school is doing well. We have junior church after Sunday school, and at night Religio in which the young people take active part. Following Religio comes preaching service. We are thinking of changing our Religio to some week night. Also our midweek prayer meeting is very well attended.

Some time ago members of the Department of Women gave a surprise program for their husbands and families, it being the anniversary of the date of the organization of this department. Sixty-five persons were present, old and young. After the program was over we assembled in the town hall and ate ice cream and cake. A happy time was spent. The women have through their efforts accomplished some important things for this branch. They have taken up a class study each Thursday night, after quilting all day. By this you see they are busy.

The branch is growing. All appear anxious to be busy. All are glad conference is near, and eager for the good things it will bring to our minds. J. L. C.

San Antonio, Texas

April 7.—Since our last writing, the Pale Reaper has again visited our branch, calling away two bright buds of promise, little Melba Gene, infant daughter of Brother and Sister Norman Barber, and the infant son of Sister Florence Parker. After having suffered with whooping cough for about seven weeks, complications set in and resulted in an operation for Melba Gene. She lived only a few hours after the operation. Funeral services were from the home of her grandparents, Brother and Sister John Barber. The sermon was by Brother T. J. Jett, jr., prayer by Brother Mannering, vocal duet by Flossie and Ella Waite. Interment was in Rose Lawn Cemetery. A few days later Sister Parker's little son was brought to San Antonio for burial. The funeral was held April 7 at the home of its grandfather, Brother Fred Smith. Funeral services were conducted by Brother T. J. Jett, jr., and interment was in the Mission Burial Park.

Although Brother Jett has been released as pastor of the branch, he is still in great demand. He has served the branch so long that it seems natural to call on him for everything the Saints want done.

Brother George Hiles, of Beeville, Texas, was with us on the first Sunday of the month, and spoke at the evening service.

Our pastor, Brother R. E. Miller, was with us on the last Sunday in March and gave us two splendid discourses. At the morning service the subject was along the financial law and stewardships, and the evening subject was "The purpose of the church."

Sister Emma Jackson is helping the intermediate girls develop their musical talent. She has been training them for some time and expects to give a concert in the near future. This, we feel, will be worth hearing, for we have already had the pleasure of listening to some beautifully rendered duets by members of her class.

The Zeta Jett Circle of the Department of Women expects to give a rummage sale next Saturday. The Willing Worker Circle of the same department has been making bonnets. They have sold ten at a very good profit.

Under the leadership of Sister Willie Barber, the Religio has been furnishing some entertaining programs, and the attendance is excellent.

At prayer service Wednesday evening, April 6, only eight were present, but there were five prayers and eight testimonies, so we felt that we had a profitable time.

Cupid has been pointing his dart at one of our brothers, Henry Dorow, and he has decided to take unto himself a wife.

KLDS Radio Flashes

Independence, Missouri.—We were deeply disappointed last evening when we heard your announcement suggesting that the Sunday school lessons over K L D S might be discontinued because of the fact that it seemed apparent that the interest and appreciation were not sufficient to justify the expenditure of effort and expense. We hasten to assure you that we esteem this program as equal, if not superior, to any sent out over your station, and this does not imply that the other programs are not appreciated duly. The devotional services and these lessons are the nature of programs that justify our call as a church before the world, and if we were to discontinue such effort it would be to surrender to the less important effort to build the kingdom of God.—Mr. and Mrs. Roy M. Young, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Gore.

Topeka, Kansas.—We particularly enjoyed the pipe organ recital by Mr. Utz. Also have enjoyed many Sunday morning services, especially the children.—Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Oliver, 124 Elmwood.

Mineral Wells, Texas.—Again I want to express my heartfelt appreciation for your Tuesday and Friday morning devotional services. I enjoy them very much. So many good thoughts to ponder over through the day.—Mrs. William T. Loveless, 315 South East Sixth Avenue.

Bay City, Michigan.—The program last evening was certainly fine, and you are to be congratulated on the class of entertainment you send out.—Mrs. L. K. Buchanan, 1615 Columbus Avenue.

Brownington, Missouri.—I enjoy your programs over the radio very much. Thank you for them. It seems as though we are getting more than we deserve. The radio is wonderful.—Mrs. S. W. Whitaker.

Nelson, Missouri.—The program you broadcast this evening was wonderful. Everybody in the land would listen in, if all your programs were on the same order.—The Wrights.

Garden City, Missouri.—We certainly enjoy your station. We always know when we tune in on your station we will be sure to get something good.—Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Morrow, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Ebersol.

Bullard, Texas.—Heard your service this morning at seven o'clock, for the first time. Very fine—came in clear.—O. L. Ferrell.

Pleasanton, Kansas.—Just a line to let you know I have enjoyed your services this afternoon and was especially impressed by the talk. Will say that I feel, after listening to your services, that you people are very much misrepresented by some people of other churches.—Howard Stark, Route 3.

Independence, Missouri.—I want to let you know how much we have enjoyed your programs since we got our three-tube radio just a week ago. My husband is so hard of hearing that he doesn't enjoy going to church, but Sunday we tuned in on K L D S, and he could hear you fine. We are only beginning to appreciate the great good that may be done by radio.—Mrs. G. L. Cook, Route 4, Box 12a.

Cosby, Missouri.—We want to express our appreciation for the splendid programs we have been listening to all winter. We have enjoyed the talks as well as the musical part, and thank you very much for same.—Mr. and Mrs. C. Wild.

Clark, Missouri.—I had the pleasure of listening in this morning on your valentine program and enjoyed it very much. I am a little girl twelve years old.—Genelle Morton.

Kidder, Missouri.—I want to thank you for the very fine matinee program which came from your station February 2. I was especially pleased with the piano and violin numbers. I hope we may hear these young ladies from your station again. K L D S is one of my favorite stations.—Mrs. J. E. Petre.

A Blessed Story

By Minnie Eugenia Warnock

"And angels rolled the stone away,"
Those blessed beings, strong and fair,
High favored 'mong the heavenly hosts
To fill a mission marvelous, rare.

Oh, think how thrilled their tender hearts!
As fair hands tugged the heavy weight
To liberate their darling Prince.
Oh, was it not a privilege great

To open this kind door of hope?
To cheer a world so broken, sad,
To show that Death's hard sting was o'er—
A thing to make all ages glad?

How proud they must have felt to see
The cold, pierced form arise anew!
How tender their solicitude
To help him the great doorway through!

The Lord of life, how calm he moved!
No ostentation, vain display.
Oh, how could any soul forget
The thing accomplished on that day?

The demonstration which he gave
Of resurrection's vital truth,
That mortals all who trusted him
Could have the gift, eternal youth.

Oh, blessed tale that spread abroad
When angels rolled that stone away!
A message to a downcast world
To make them ready 'gainst the day

When this loved Prince should come again
In all his royal robes arrayed,
To smile on those who've kept his word—
To die for it, were not afraid.

Marriage Notices

SPARGO-STANBRIDGE.—On Wednesday, March 2, at the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, New Westminster, British Columbia, a pretty wedding took place when Sister Janey Spargo, daughter of Brother and Sister J. Spargo, 6990 Victoria Road, Vancouver, became the bride of Brother Hartley Stanbridge, eldest son of Brother and Sister Stanbridge, 312 Clinton Avenue, Vancouver. The ceremony was pronounced by Elder Samuel Pope, of New Westminster, assisted by Elder A. C. Martin. Bridal music was provided by Mrs. F. McGregor. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Copp sang "Because." The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by Sister Winifred Spargo and Sister Hazel Stanbridge. Miss Gwendolyn Spargo, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. The groom was supported by Brother Edwin Sparto and Brother Stanley Spargo, Brother E. Millar and Mr. Thomas Carter acting as ushers. This was the first wedding to take place in the new church at Westminster, and Elder A. C. Martin presented to the bride and groom in behalf of the branch a beautiful, leather-bound Bible as a token of good wishes. A reception was held in the Vancouver Saints' hall, 1035 Broadway East, about one hundred and fifty Saints and friends spending an enjoyable evening. Brother and Sister Stanbridge will reside at 1730 Forty-fourth Avenue, East Vancouver, British Columbia.

Our Departed Ones

BALDWIN.—Daniel R. Baldwin was born October 7, 1847, at McDonough, New York; was baptized February 13, 1871, at Sherman, Michigan, by Henry C. Smith. Ordained an elder September 14, 1892, by James Caffall. He died March 12, 1927, as a result of flu, together with deficient heart action. Left to mourn are E. L. Baldwin, of Elaine, Arkansas; J. N. Baldwin, of Calahoo, Alberta, Canada; Mrs. J. W. Decker, of Pocatontas, Arkansas; R. R. Baldwin Kaycee, Wyoming; G. B. Baldwin, Roberts, Montana; and H. D. Baldwin, Blue Lake, California. He was laid to rest at Blue Lake, California, March 17.

BUCHANAN.—Criss T. Buchanan was born in Indiana February 27, 1870. He lived from boyhood until a few years ago in Johnson County, Arkansas. Was baptized November 8, 1914, by E. A. Erwin. Far and wide, in the region in which he spent the greater part of his life, he was considered one among the best men of the country. His name was respected by friends, neighbors, and business men. He lived and died a faithful Saint. Death came to him in Henryetta, Oklahoma, February 15, 1927. He leaves a wife, several children, and many friends to mourn his departure.

HAMMOND.—Eliza Hammond was born in Clinton County, New York, November 19, 1865. She was united in marriage to Willard Shattuck in 1881. To them nine children were born, six of whom are now living. Mr. Shattuck died in March, 1907. Sister Shattuck was baptized March 16, 1907. In 1916 she married David Hammond, who preceded her in death July 20, 1925. She leaves to mourn six children, eleven grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. Funeral services were held at West Branch Michigan, by Elder T. S. Williams.

THOMPSON.—Nancy M. Cobb Thompson was born December 14, 1864, near Jay, Florida. She was married January 6, 1887, to James Claiborne Thompson, and walked with him along life's highway till his death, which occurred not quite three years previous to her own. During the month of August, 1912, she was baptized by Elder F. M. Slover and was a faithful member of the church until the end, which came almost without warning, February 20, 1927, at Elba, Alabama. The body was carried to the old community cemetery at Stump Springs Church, a few miles from Munson, Florida, where, after funeral services conducted by Elder T. C. Kelley, she was laid to rest beside her husband. Her reputation was un tarnished, and her life was one of spotless virtue and unselfish service to her friends and neighbors. She rests in hope of a glorious resurrection with the just.

WINSHIP.—Louise Reta, infant daughter of Brother George and Sister Maud Winship, of Wheeling, West Virginia, was born June 14, 1925, and died February 25, 1927, aged one year, eight months, eleven days. Services in charge of Elder O. J. Tary. Sermon by Elder Louis A. Serig. Interment, at McMechen, West Virginia.

THOUGHTS ON HEALING

flicted? let him pray. . . . Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church." At this period the church had been a going concern for probably twenty-five years, and the question of healing had become a fixture reduced to an ordinance requiring a set procedure.

We have no desire to be hypercritical, but we can not help noticing the distinction James makes between the "afflicted" and the "sick." Why separate the two and adopt different procedure? However, in both cases prayer is the medium of recovery. Is the distinction we draw attention to justified by the Savior's practice or the practice of the apostles during the first ten or fifteen years of their ministry? In the opinion of the writer, the language of James, which speaks for the church as a whole, is not as strong and positive as the language of Jesus in Mark 16, and to a degree indicates a slight shifting of the position. Our main point, however, is to show that affliction, sickness, or disease, and the power of God, are not on friendly terms. The church bearing his name was organized to carry on the work as instituted by Christ; and as he healed by the power of God, the church should do likewise. His words were, "The works that I do shall ye do also." Is there any alternate conclusion?

There is no intention to unduly stress the subject of faith healing. It has its rightful place in the church of God, and no man can put it asunder under any pretext whatsoever, without loss to himself; while the church itself would be minus the power of God without it. We are asking for nothing more than that it should be given the recognition it merits. On the other hand, for humanity's sake we should not rest, content with anything less. Substitution would infer rejection.

Civilization, with all its startling announcements and dazzling achievements, can not compare with the offering of the humble Nazarene. These add nothing to the gospel, "the power of God." We therefore conclude the Christ method of healing has no equal. God is the great Physician. No university degrees are attached to his name other than that of Creator. He feels no pulse, takes no temperature, and administers no drug. Verily the ways of man are not the ways of God. "They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." "Thy faith hath made thee whole." The "prayer of faith shall save the sick." No man's "faith shall stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God," and the speech of the church should not be in doctrine and dogma alone, "but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." So may it be.

Earth Personified

The New York Times comments concerning the tendency of geologists to fall into a trick of writing about the earth as if it were a person. This the layman long has done, but in modern centuries recognizing his own speech as figurative and perhaps a survival from superstitious barbarism. That modern geologists write in the same spirit is indicative of their enthusiasm over new theories about the origin and development of the planet and suggestive of the potency of the new ideas that make indistinct the lines beyond animal and plant life, even between organic and inorganic matter.

When a modern scientist depicts the earth much as a novelist depicts one of his characters, as a personality before a mirror, there is more than passing interest in it. Earth discovers a lack of perfect symmetry, and endeavors by earthquakes to shake herself into perfect shape much as any woman would shrug, and pat the folds of her dress into place. Again, earth adjusts itself to changing conditions just as the human mechanism cools the blood on hot days or retards radiation when it is cold.

There is more than a poetic concept in the term "Mother Earth." Man is indeed a creature of earth, governed by the same laws and processes. It is not strange that the Hindu botanist proclaims plant life to be characterized by the same nervous and circulatory processes as mark animals, man himself.

New ideas about matter are turning new interest to an old statement on the subject made three centuries ago by Francis Bacon:

"It is certain that all bodies whatsoever, though they have no sense, yet they have perceptions; for when one body is applied to another, there is a kind of election to embrace that which is agreeable, and to expel that which is ingrate; and whether the body be alterant or altered, evermore a perception precedeth operation; for else all bodies would be like one to another. And sometimes this perception, in some kind of bodies, is far more subtle than sense, so that sense is but a dull thing in comparison with it: we see a weatherglass will find the least difference of the weather in heat or cold, when we find it not."

In some of his further examples Bacon showed lack of more definite knowledge that would be available today. Yet his general thought that all bodies have perception lingers to haunt and allure modern science. Here is an explanation of all order, all law, expressed in terms of personification just as we regard man as a personification of natural law. Why

At two o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the 12th, conference delegates, ex officios, and visitors were seated on the conference floor, members of higher quorums of the church in their places on the platform, and press workers at the tables, when the gavel fell, and General Conference business was again resumed.

Thomas G. Whipple and John E. Whipple moved the adoption of the following paper:

Whereas, In the Bible and latter-day revelation, God has admonished his people to come out from the world so that they might become a more righteous people; and

Whereas, Many of the Saints have for many years longed for a literal gathering so that greater spiritual and temporal prosperity and security may be enjoyed; and

Whereas, Many of the Saints desire to associate themselves into a colony or colonies to be organized according to the celestial law which requires temporal equality that spiritual perfection may be attained; and

Whereas, In order to establish such colonies it will be necessary to secure a site where natural resources are at hand for economic development; therefore

Be It Resolved, That this conference requests the Presidency to appoint a committee to search out such a location, and when such has been found a notice be issued to the Saints, so that those who desire may indicate their resources and fitness for the work, in order that when sufficient available resources are assured to make the plan practicable, such colonies may be established.

It was moved that this paper be referred to the Order of Bishops, with power to act. The motion was seconded, discussed, and carried, and it now rests with the Order of Bishops.

A special report of the Quorum of High Priests recommending the ordination of several brothers to the office of high priest was read, and the recommendations were presented for action of the General Conference singly:

James A. Wilson, Toronto, Canada, was approved for ordination.

C. B. Hartshorn, Independence, Missouri, was approved for ordination.

O. A. McDowell, of Illinois, was approved for ordination.

Calvin H. Rich, of Salt Lake City, Utah, was approved for ordination.

The Church Auditor, Brother Amos Allen, presented a report which was read by Bishop J. A. Becker:

Tentative Report of General Church Auditor

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
OFFICE.
Dear Brethren:

April 12, 1927.

I have compiled from the records of the Presiding Bishopric a balance sheet as at March 31, 1927, also a statement of income and expenses for the nine months ending on that date. These statements are tentative and are subject to the comments hereinafter made.

Balance Sheet

Balance sheets of June 30, 1925, June 30, 1926, and March 31, 1927, are presented in comparative form in order that the trend of church finances may be noted. The figures shown under the first two dates are taken from published reports of the former General Church Auditor and have not been verified by me, but several items have been re-classified to facilitate comparison.

In the tentative statement of March 31, 1927, a number of the items have as yet been audited by me only to the extent of transactions subsequent to June 30, 1926, and are subject to such adjustments, if any, as may be found necessary upon re-verification of the balances carried forward at the beginning of the current year.

A summary of the changes in the year and nine months intervening between June 30, 1925, and March 31, 1927, is as follows:

Increase in assets	$370,999.09
Increase in Liabilities		$ 81,487.28
Increase in contributions to Graceland Endowment Fund to be invested and held by the church for the benefit of Graceland College with respect to the income thereof—Bonds issued therefor		229,800.00
Increase in net worth and special fund reserves		59,711.81

In considering the item of Bonds Payable to Graceland College, the fact that the books of the Presiding Bishopric do not record the investment of the church in such of its institutions as are separately incorporated should be kept in mind. The books of Graceland College carry as an asset "Investment in Church Bonds" in amount corresponding to the amount shown on the books of the Presiding Bishopric as issued and in a Consolidated Balance Sheet (which it is impracticable to compile except at the close of fiscal periods) the two items would be eliminated as offsets. In other words, funds contributed for the Graceland Endowment are to be permanently retained by the church, its only obligation be-

The constituent items on the balance sheet of March 31, 1927, are carried under such captions as to be largely self-explanatory. On the notes and accounts receivable, however, I submit the following comments: I have not yet made a complete analysis of these items, but have made sufficient investigation to disclose the fact that there are included therein a number of accounts of several years' standing, upon which nothing will be realized. The Presiding Bishopric are aware of this condition and have asked my cooperation in determining the exact status of each account, preparatory to writing worthless items off the books. Because of the time element, no attempt has been made at this time to show the nature of the accounts and notes comprising the total.

Income and Expenses

In compiling this tentative statement, income and expenses for March for several districts from which reports have not yet been received, have been conservatively estimated and included in the figures submitted.

In considering income and expenses for less than a full year period it is necessary to keep in mind that the membership of the church is scattered over a wide territory, and that the income of the church is therefore dependent on those engaged in various industrial pursuits with varying "peak" seasons, and comparisons based upon less than a full year's cycle are sometimes misleading. For example: Comparisons for several years reveal the fact that during the first six months of the fiscal year approximately 40 per cent of the year's contributions are received, while during the same period 50 per cent of the expenses are incurred.

The total general contributions for the nine months of the current year are approximately $24,000 less than contributions for the corresponding period of the previous year. Comparisons of the income and expenses on March 31 of several prior years have been almost invariably less favorable than the results at the close of the respective fiscal years.

I shall be glad to submit any additional information desired.

Yours faithfully,
 AMOS E. ALLEN,
 General Church Auditor.

Succeeding this, Bishop J. A. Becker was asked for a statement giving a general idea of the investment of church funds in properties and businesses, etc., which the bishop complied with as best he could, stating that the information was as complete as he could make it unless he be given more time for consulting books and accounts.

The chairman was evidently in humor to give all the latitude asked, and the questioners and speakers surely asked a great deal. It is gratifying to know that through a discussion of such a touchy subject as finances and from so many angles there was preserved a fine feeling of fellowship. It bodes much for the final accomplishment of this conference.

Business April 13

Elder William Hamann, of Richmond, Missouri, was recommended by the Quorum of High Priests for ordination to the office of high priest. He stated that he was willing to attempt the work if the church wished him to do so, and the vote was unanimous that he be ordained.

The joint council of the First Presidency, the Quorum of Twelve, and the Order of Bishops offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the investment of general church funds in business enterprises be prohibited until adequate financial reserves are accumulated, but that nothing in this resolution shall prevent the investment of such reserves as accumulate in securities of generally recognized stability and value, or through the business orders of the church as authorized by revelation and conference approval.

President Elbert A. Smith spoke in favor of the document from the Joint Council being adopted by the conference. His main conclusion was that at the present the church should invest its funds in men to preach the gospel and to care for the Saints.

The question was put upon its passage and was adopted by unanimous vote.

The following was presented as coming from the joint council of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and the Order of Bishops:

Whereas, publication of lists of names of tithe payers, together with the amount of their contributions, has supplied information which has been misunderstood and misused; and

Whereas, some of our regular tithe payers have urged that such particulars be not published; therefore

Be It Resolved, That the printing of the itemized list of tithe payers be discontinued, and that instead the Presiding Bishopric be directed to send an annual statement to each contributor showing his payments on tithing, offering, and special funds, for each fiscal year, provided always that the foregoing shall not in any way affect the present policy of publishing the annual statements of income and expenditure and assets and liabilities of the church.

It was moved that the document be adopted.

An amendment was moved, that we strike out the words Presiding Bishopric, and insert General Church Auditor.

It was moved as a substitute that the original motion and the amendment be combined, the statement being sent out by the office of the Presiding Bishopric and the General Church Auditor.

The substitute was put to vote and adopted by a very large majority.

Elder Orman Salisbury presented a resolution reading:

Resolved, That at the close of each fiscal year the Church Auditor furnish a statement of elders' expenses and family allowances to each member of the Joint Council, including the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve Apostles, Order of Bishops, and members of the General Standing High Council, and that we discontinue the publication of this report in the SAINTS' HERALD.

A motion was made that this matter lie upon the table. The motion to lie upon the table carried.

Business of April 14

A report was read from the Presidents of Seventy, recommending Elders W. J. Vaughn and Leonard Hoisington for ordination to the office of seventy.

The names of these two brothers were separately taken up by the conference, and after members of the church quorums who have been associated with them in their work had spoken, recommending them to the conference, the motions that they be ordained were approved.

President Smith stated that at the request of several, the Presidency of the church would set aside next Sunday as a day of fasting and prayer.

The chairman also presented the report of the work of the First Presidency for the conference year 1926-1927, which reads as follows:

The work of the Presidency the past conference year has been carried on much as usual, with office routine and field work being carried on as best we could, under the conditions prevailing. We do not here attempt to state the number of reunions, district conferences, conventions, institutes, and special meetings we have attended, but we can say we have been busy. In doing the field work, we have done it largely individually, though on a few occasions our paths have met in traveling. Of the details of our work away from office and headquarters, the Saints have been quite well informed through the columns of the church papers, as they have of some of the official activities of the Presidency at headquarters, in the way of councils, special meetings, etc. Of the routine of office work, such as correspondence and conferences, it may be unnecessary to speak other than to say we have found much to do.

We have kept in touch more or less closely, and we trust helpfully, with the activities of all departments of the church, and have been pleased to note the steady growth of those activities, missionary and others, which look to the betterment of the Saints and minister to their spiritual needs, though there is in places a dearth of persons to carry the burden of responsibilities.

The reports already submitted to the conference indicate quite clearly the departmental activities.

With perhaps minor exceptions, the working relations with all departments have been pleasant, and we have to report a closer touch and working understanding with most, to the advantage and benefit of the cause. We find a cheerful willingness quite prevalent among the general officers to work to the limits of endurance; in fact, in some cases even a disposition to pass the limits of safety to health.

The members of the Apostolic Quorum have been assiduous in the tasks assigned them, both generally and specifically, and our relations pleasant. Of their work they have kept us informed by letter, special report, personal conference, councils, and by report for the year. These reports indicate they have been happy in helping the cause and in the support and cooperation received from local and general workers, and are grateful for the measure of divine direction and help accorded them, and all manifest and express a desire and determination to serve to the extent of their capacity. As in the case of the Presidency, the demands upon them for labor caused them largely to travel by ones rather than twos, in order to cover more ground. Cognizance by these men of the great opportunities before us with a concomitant forward-looking spirit characterizes their reports.

Some changes in assignment of work of the Twelve were made necessary by conditions, in one instance it being necessary to ask one of them to assume temporarily the responsibility of pastoral work.

Report of Church Secretary

In accordance with recommendation of the Joint Council and approval of the General Conference of 1926 that the work of the church secretary, the maintenance of necessary records, and the securing of railroad courtesies and concessions be unified under the direction of a secretarial assistant to the Presidency, Brother R. S. Salyards, who has rendered long and faithful service in the office of Church Secretary was relieved on December 31, 1926, and Brother G. S. Trowbridge was secured to fill the position provided for by action of the conference. Brother Trowbridge reported for duty January 3, and has since been looking after the work of Church Secretary, Transportation Manager, and the office work of the Presidency, owing to the continued illness of Brother O. W. Newton.

The Music Department

This department, while active, has been so neither to the extent all would like to see, nor in so orderly a way. Local musical activities have perhaps been more pronounced than the general.

However, conditions have been somewhat unusual, and it is now hoped that the department will soon show a more rapid movement forward. Under the leadership of Brother P. N. Craig and A. H. Mills, secretary, the Musical Institute at this conference has developed a wider unity of purpose, and this was crystallized into definite suggestions to the Presidency, and we are glad to do what we can to carry into effect the suggestions. With the appreciation of the importance of music in the work of the church, there seems to run through those of the department of music a strongly forward-looking spirit, one big, near-lying objective being the 1930 anniversary; and in preparation therefor these workers have suggested further division of responsibility by increasing the number of subdepartments in the department. These suggestions we concur in to the effect that the department be sub-departmentized by dividing into congregational singing, adult choir, junior choir, band and orchestra, missionary and song leadership, each subdivision to receive the attention of one assigned to the task.

Acting in harmony with suggestions from the musicians formally expressed, we appoint, subject to the approval of the conference, Sister Louise Robinson as associate superintendent of the department. On conferring with her, we have gained her consent so to act; and she has in turn recommended, also on the suggestion of the institute, the following sub-department heads: Paul N. Craig for congregational singing and missionary song leadership; Mabel Carlile for adult choir work; Luella Wight for junior choir work; Joseph H. Anthony for band and orchestra.

These musicians have further expressed to us the opinion that an appropriation of $2,000 be made for the work of the Department of Music this conference year. We so recommend.

They also have suggested that a course of musical leadership be included in our ministerial conferences, institutes, and conventions. This we also approve.

One other thing presented in the report of the institute to us is that a motion was passed favoring uniforms for our choirs, and passing this matter on to the conference for consideration.

In a number of instances, local choirs have adopted vestments. If this is at all likely to become general (and we favor it in cases of substantially organized choirs), it is wise to have these uniform, so that in combinations of choirs into a larger chorus there may be uniformity attained.

The report indicates a successful and profitable institute has been held at this conference, and the musicians encouraged and helped forward.

Report for Radio Department Broadcasting Station K L D S

Progress in church radio during the past year has been made chiefly in utilizing more broadcasting time and in adding new features. K L D S is broadcasting almost twice as many weekly features as it did a year ago, and is furnishing its listeners four times as many services and programs as it did two years ago.

Amount of Broadcasting for Period March 15, 1926, to March 15, 1927

Following is a table showing the approximate number of regular features broadcast by K L D S during the twelve months' period:

Church Services (Stone Church)	38
Studio Services	295
Educational lectures	53
Musical programs	191
Children's features	53
Miscellaneous features	14
	644
Total religious services	333
Total other features	311

Attention is called to the increase in religious services, 123 more services being broadcast than during the preceding year. Many special programs and features are not included in the above regular schedules.

Present Weekly Schedule

Sunday:

- 8.30 a. m. Children's Sacred Program.
- 9 a. m. Bible Study.
- 11 a. m. Stone Church Service.
- 3 p. m. K L D S Radio Church.
- 6.30 p. m. Vesper Service.
- 9.15 p. m. L. D. S. Studio Service.

Tuesday:

- 6.30 a. m. Morning Devotional Service.
- 7 a. m. English Study.
- 2.30 p. m. Matinee Program.
- 7 p. m. Children's Feature and Stories.
- 7.20 p. m. Special Feature (Walt Filkin).
- 7.40 p. m. Lecture.
- 8 p. m. Musical Program.

Thursday:

- 2.30 p. m. Matinee Program.
- 7 p. m. Children's Feature and Stories.
- 7.20 p. m. Special Feature (Health Talk).
- 7.40 p. m. Lecture.
- 8 p. m. Musical Program.

Friday:

- 6.30 a. m. Morning Devotional Service.
- 7 a. m. Children's Feature—Uncle John.

Saturday:

- 7 p. m. Sunday School Lessons.
- 8 p. m. Musical Program.

It will be noted that each week has twenty-two regular features, or schedules, as compared with twelve a year ago, and five schedules two years ago.

Although the utility of K L D S has been increased approximately 400 per cent during the past two years, there has been very little increase in operating costs. In this time, however, to meet government requirements and to assure dependable, efficient broadcasting, certain changes and improvements have been made. The costs for these changes and for legal assistance in protecting our wave length rights were of course not anticipated, and the budget allowances were not sufficient to cover these contingencies. An additional financial problem for the radio department has resulted from the failure of plans for the Journal-Post to broadcast, the Appropriations Committee having approved the 1926-27 budget on the basis of anticipating almost equal revenue from the Kansas City newspaper.

Despite the rather serious and unlooked-for problems that have been encountered, it is felt that K L D S has greatly increased its service to the general public and to the church membership.

Reelection of our radio manager to the directorate of the National Association of Broadcasters, and his committee appointments at the last Hoover Radio Conference, have undoubtedly tended to increase the solidarity of the church station, and to maintain its prestige as a pioneer broadcaster.

The passage by Congress of the new radio legislation should shortly result in the elimination of much of the confusion that now exists. This will redound both to the benefit of listeners who have so frequently been unable to hear desired stations because of interference and to the broadcasters allowed to remain on the air, who will be licensed for sufficiently long periods of time to justify them in expending money and effort to efficiently serve their listeners.

It was moved by President Elbert A. Smith that in view of the long and faithful service of former Secretary R. S. Salyards, this conference extends to him a vote of thanks. The motion was carried by a large vote without dissent.

A motion was made that we approve of the organization, and nominations suggested for the Department of Music, and that the matter of the appropriation for that department be referred to the Appropriations Committee for its consideration. The motion carried without debate.

A resolution coming from a joint council of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Order of Bishops, was read. An amendment was made transposing the order of terms referring to the contributions to church funds, which motion was adopted, placing the terms in the order: "Tithes, surplus, and offerings."

A motion to adopt the resolution was discussed. The resolution reads:

To the General Conference; Greeting: The Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Order of Bishops at their session this morning unanimously approved the following resolution:

Whereas, it is essential to the stability of our general church endeavor that financial reserves shall be created and maintained; and,

Whereas, the maintenance of our essential function and the building of these reserves will necessitate economies both individual and collective, local and general, as provided in Doctrine and Covenants, section 130, paragraph 7, as follows:

"In order that the temporal affairs of the church may be successfully carried on and the accumulative debt of the church in its respective departments where debts have accumulated may be properly met and in due time discharged, the church is instructed, both as members and as the body at large, to avoid the unnecessary building of houses of worship or places of entertainment or otherwise expending the tithes and offerings of the church in that which may not be essential unto the continued onward progress of the general work; and both in private and in public expenditure carry into active exercise the principle of sacrifice and repression of unnecessary wants; and thus permit the accumulation of tithes and offerings in such amounts as may be needful to properly discharge the existing indebtedness of the church as a body." Therefore,

Be It Resolved: That the policy of the church respecting finances for the interconference period 1927-28 shall be

To provide funds for the care and expenses of General Conference appointees and their families, together with the general administrative expense;

To provide for the care of the poor and needy and expenses incident to the operation of the homes for the aged;

To supply the budget adopted by General Conference for Graceland College;

To provide for the building of a basement of a dormitory for Graceland College as fast as funds are available;

To provide for the continuance of the building of the Auditorium as fast as the observance of the foregoing shall release funds that were subscribed for that purpose which were utilized to supply past financial needs of the general church, or as may be provided otherwise by General Conference, or Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Order of Bishops.

And Be It Further Resolved That We Recommend: That the Christmas offering be used in support of the general missionary work of the church;

That stakes, districts, local congregations, and reunion associations be requested to make no local expenditures in any considerable sum or incur any local indebtedness except such as shall be approved by the First Presidency, and Presiding Bishopric or their representatives, and the member of the Twelve in charge of the respective field;

That the church through the Presiding Bishopric and the entire ministry of the church shall make special efforts to increase the church income through the divinely appointed channels of tithing, surplus, and offering.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, April 14, 1927.

Business April 15

After opening exercises and preliminaries of the business meeting Friday, Apostle Gleazer offered a motion to defer further consideration of the question before us yesterday when we adjourned until we come to consider the report of the Appropriations Committee.

The Appropriations Committee presented its report, which reads:

To the First Presidency and General Conference; Greeting: The Appropriations Committee has given careful consideration to the budget requests for the year 1927-28. Several of the department heads were called in council with the committee while considering the request from their respective departments.

The budget requests for operating expense total $520,440.68; in addition, Graceland College requests $12,000 to invest in the building of the basement of a dormitory.

After very serious deliberation, the committee is presenting a budget in the amount of $513,740. This is in excess of the estimated income of the present year of at least $100,-

000. To reduce the budgets of the various departments below the amounts stated and maintain the efficiency thereof seems to be impossible. The members of the church must realize if the budget is adopted, the necessity of increasing the income.

APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE,

By J. A. BECKER, Secretary.

April 15, 1927.

President McDowell spoke to the motion which had been made, that the report of the Committee on Appropriations be adopted. He stated that the committee had been working hard on the problem of making an income of something more than $400,000 cover activities that should have a great deal more. They had been able to report recommending expenditure according to budgets submitted, about $513,700. Now it was up to the conference to cut the budget and share this responsibility with the committee, or, on the other hand, to go out and help raise the amount not guaranteed by past experiences, more especially the past year.

Much discussion of the budget was had from members of the Twelve, the order of patriarchs, order of bishops, the seventy, and business men of the church. Then the motion to adopt the report of the Committee on Appropriations was put to vote and carried by a very large majority.

A motion was made that we take up the question of the adoption of the document under discussion at adjournment—the one coming from the Joint Council in reference to the use of funds. The motion carried.

The vote on the document coming from the Joint Council resulted in an overwhelming majority for its adoption.

Auditor Amos E. Allen was permitted to make a statement, and he gave a quite full delineation of the finances of the church, correcting several statements which had been made derogatory to the financial condition of the church.

Business April 16

Quorum report was read from the Second Seventy, containing details of their work during the conference year, among which was the mention of success recently attained in getting help from publishers of local papers, and the large amount of literature distributed.

First Quorum of Seventy reported activities of the conference and of the conference year. They reported loss of three members during the year. Four of their members are laboring in foreign fields.

Order of Evangelists made their report of activities to the conference.

A document coming from the presidents and bishops of the stakes in the church was read to the conference, and it was moved that the same be referred to the First Presidency, the Presiding Bishopric, and the presidencies and bishoprics of the stakes.

A substitute was moved that the document be referred to the First Presidency and the Order of Bishops, with power to act.

The paper expressed some convictions as to the conducting of stake finances, the gathering, holding, and distributing of funds gathered in the stakes, the loaning of funds, officers having to do with the control of these funds, in direct and in advisory manner.

Apostle J. F. Garver made a motion to amend the substitute, referring the matter to the First Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric.

The amendment to the substitute was adopted, as was the substitute as amended.

The chairman announced that the table was clear of business, and suggested that we do now adjourn, and that the committees and quorums having matters in hand for action of the conference please expedite such work and get their matter into the hands of the presiding officers of the conference.

The Last Day of Conference

At ten o'clock the conference was called to order for the dedication service, President Elbert A. Smith presiding, who offered the opening prayer.

The chairman called for prayers by Evangelists W. A. McDowell, F. G. Pitt, and Gomer T. Griffiths, and these prayers from fathers to the church were of comfort and strength to the people.

O. A. McDowell, William Hamann, C. H. Rich, C. B. Hartshorn, were ordained to the office of high priest, under the direction of the president of the Quorum of Twelve, as was Leonard Hoisington to the office of seventy.

A full account of this dedication and ordination service is contained in the number of the DAILY HERALD for Monday, April 18.

Business of April 18

President Smith read the following report from a committee appointed to draft resolutions regarding the Eighteenth Amendment and kindred matters:

1. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in General Conference of its membership, convened in Independence, Missouri, on April 6 and succeeding days of the year 1927, records its belief in the observance of the constitutional laws of the land, believing that therein lie the safety and freedom which God has designed for mankind.

2. The church believes in the laws adopted by the United States for the purpose of regulating and prohibiting the manufacture, sale, and individual use of alcoholic beverages, and regrets to see these laws broken, believing that the man who consumes these prohibited beverages forms the excuse, creates the demand, and compromises himself to support the illicit dealer and the defiant and illicit manufacturer engaged in liquor traffic; therefore that no one is above reproach who in any manner violates the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, or the enforcement statutes supporting said amendment.

3. Our religious organization believes in the virtue of the principle of prohibition such as is contained in the Eighteenth Amendment and will work with any forces or organizations which are righteously endeavoring to see that such laws are enacted and administered. We do not believe that these laws should be repealed or modified—they should be rigidly enforced, at the hands of officers who believe in their virtue and efficacy.

4. The responsibility of each Latter Day Saint is to exert his mind and strength to the end that good and wise men be selected for office in local, state, and national capacities. Each must therefore seek to exercise the franchise extended to him, permitting no trivial or ordinarily difficult circumstance to keep him from the polls. He should also make insistent demand upon officers selected that they exert themselves to enforce the dry laws. We pledge ourselves to support men who make strong and consistent records for upholding and enforcing the prohibition laws, and to exert ourselves for the removal of any officer who is tardy or weak in these matters.

The report of the committee was adopted as the mind of the body, by unanimous vote.

The Presidents of Seventy reported the following:

The Council of Presidents of Seventy beg to submit the following report:

During the General Conference we have met in council capacity 13 times; held 3 joint sessions with the Quorum of Twelve, and met with the Joint Quorums of Seventy 15 times.

We are very happy to report a most splendid spirit of unity and cooperation in all of these sessions. We can say with no degree of hesitation that the Quorums of Seventy are moving forward in intellectual and spiritual development.

We are deeply concerned, however, because of our very limited numbers. May we ask the Saints of God to pray the Lord of the harvest to send more laborers into the vineyard, and when your prayers are answered may you sustain those laborers in the way our Lord has said his disciples would do.

Two vacancies occurred in our ranks this year by the ordination of Brother C. H. Rich to the office of high priest and the resignation of Brother W. P. Bootman. And two additions have been made by the selection of Brothers Leonard Hoisington and W. J. Vaughn to occupy in the Quorums of Seventy.

During our program this year the following brethren have lectured: J. F. Curtis, Paul M. Hanson, E. J. Gleazer, F. M. McDowell, M. A. Etzenhouser, Doctor A. W. Teel, M. A. McConley, F. Henry Edwards, John F. Garver, J. W. Peterson, J. A. Gardner, and James W. Davis.

These lectures have all been of a very high order and have improved to a marked degree the character of our quorum meetings.

During the year the Presidents of Seventy have been actively engaged in the Master's service, three laboring as district presidents and others as missionaries.

We leave this conference consecrated anew in the service of the Lord, and with renewed determination to press forward with clean hands and pure hearts to assist our brethren in the accomplishment of the wonderful work intrusted to the missionary arm of God's church.

Second Quorum of Seventy made a supplementary report.

The Joint Council of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric presented a resolution authorizing the Committee on Appropriations to make out the budget for the years 1928 and 1929. The resolution was adopted by a strong vote.

The following resolution was presented, coming from the Order of Bishops:

Committee appointed to work out the Christmas offering resolution presented the following:

Whereas, the Sunday schools have in the past made a splendid contribution to the church in the Christmas offering; and

Whereas, in the past year the Christmas offering has fallen below its former excellent record, and

Whereas, action has already been taken by the General Conference providing that these offerings be used with the general funds of the church for the extension of missionary work and the administrative needs of the church; therefore,

Be It Resolved by the Order of Bishops that special efforts be made to increase the Christmas offering in order that missionary work may be presented more effectually, and we suggest to each Sunday school that a minimum of two dollars per capita be fixed as the goal and that we invite the cooperation of the Sunday school officers with the General church authorities in reaching this goal; and

Be It Further Resolved, That we fix the goal for the Christmas offering of entire church at $100,000 for the current year; and

Be It Further Resolved, That all Sunday schools be requested to transfer the Christmas offering collection to the local solicitor, bishop's agent, or district bishop not later than the 25th of each month.

It was moved to adopt, and the motion was adopted.

The Joint Council of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Order of Bishops reported recommendations as to the further prosecution of work on the construction of the Auditorium Building:

Whereas, the General Conference on April 10, 1920, authorized the erection without undue delay of a conference building, and

Whereas, the membership of the church in response to such legislation pledged some $800,000 for the erection of such a building, and

Whereas, the payments made on said pledges plus the accrued interest amount to $494,018.58, and

Whereas, the sum of $193,041.25 has been invested in said building leaving a balance due said fund of $300,977.35, and

Whereas, the General Conference on April 13, 1923, directed the Presiding Bishopric to dispose of properties as designated by the High Council for the purpose of rehabilitating the Auditorium fund, and

Whereas, the present conference on April 14, adopted a resolution providing for the continuing of the building of the Auditorium as fast as the funds subscribed therefor are made available, or as may be provided for otherwise by General Conference or the Joint Council of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Order of Bishops, and

Whereas, it is necessary to make additional investment of some $40,000 to fully protect the work already done in the Auditorium building in addition to the payment of the bill for structural steel already contracted and estimated at $75,000, and

Whereas, the amount still due said fund plus the payments on unpaid pledges as they are made if invested will construct the building to the point to make the main auditorium available for use; therefore

Be It Resolved: That we look with favor upon the floating of a loan to be secured by the Auditorium property itself in an amount not to exceed $300,000 as may be needed for the purpose of continuing the work on the Auditorium building.

The Committee on Administration to the sick reported considerable activity.

The Joint Council of the appointing quorums reported recommending placing the following missionaries on the superannuated list:

G. W. Burt, J. C. Chrestensen, J. W. Metcalf, R. C. Russell, I. M. Smith, J. D. Stead.

The motion was adopted.

The sustaining of church officers was entered into and the following were by motion sustained:

The First Presidency.

The Quorum of Twelve.

Council of Presidents of Seventy.

First and Second Quorums of Seventy:

The Presiding Bishop.

The Order of Bishops.

The Order of Evangelists.

The Standing High Council.

The Quorum of High Priests.

The Weightier Matters of the Law

BY BISHOP J. A. KOEHLER

(A radio address.)

Which do you think is the weightier matter to a person who is trying hard to get somewhere by auto: Is it to have a Chevrolet car rather than a Ford? or is it to have oil in the crank case and gas in the tank and water in the radiator? Which is the weightier matter to a dairyman: Is it to be able to prove to his neighbor that his cattle are not pedigreed stock? or is it to have his own cattle well housed, watered, and fed? Which is the weightier matter to a man in San Francisco who has an acute case of appendicitis: Is it to have Doctor Mayo, of Rochester, as the surgeon? or is it to have anyone (be he whomsoever he may and from wheresoever he may come) to get the appendix out of his body in such a manner that he will be relieved of his disease?

In every kind of undertaking, certain things are weightier matters than certain other things. It is more important for a farmer to till his soil than it is to trim his lawn. It is more important to have wholesome food on the table than it is to have a pickle fork and a soup spoon by the side of your plate.

This is precisely what Jesus and other authorities on religious questions said about a religious experience: It is more important to dispense "judgment," to extend "mercy," and to have "faith," (faith in our fellow men as well as in God) than it is to "pay tithes of mint and anise and cummin."

Those people to whom Jesus talked when he stated that important truths were past masters at quibbling about some relatively insignificant thing and at the same time side-stepping the vital questions (the weightier matters) of a religious experience.

We have the same situation today in the Latter Day Saints Church. Some of our members quibble about whether a man ought to consecrate a surplus before he pays a tithe and side-step the important matter of giving to the work of God according to his ability. It is more important to some people to have all the members of a congregation take wine at a communion service from a common cup than it is to go to that service with a heart free from contention.

I wish I had all the money that has been spent to prove that Saturday is a better day than Sunday to worship God. I could buy every poor person in Kansas City a little home of his own. I have seen ministers get as mad as hornets because they couldn't agree to worship God on the same day of the week. I suppose that is because it is more important to have our calendar dates printed in the correct columns than it is for men to live together in peace.

Those of you who tuned in last Sunday evening and recollect what I said about the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints Church will see that this sermon is intended to amplify the one of last Sunday. I said then that I liked the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints Church because it insists that a man who would have worth-while things in the world to come must do worth-while things here. What I want to say tonight is that the high points in Latter Day Saint doctrine are what Jesus called the weightier matters of the law.

There is a feeling among many churchgoing people that about the most important thing in a Christian experience is to have God do something for them. I suppose that is because you can always tell how good a son is by the things his mother does for him to try to wean him away from pool halls and cigars? I suppose every orchardist judges the worth-whileness of the different trees in his orchard by the number of showers God sends upon the land?

While it is true that God sends showers of blessings upon the church in the form of gifts of prophecy and healing and the like, it is also true that a given "plant" in the vineyard of the Lord may be altogether unworthy of the blessings that God lets fall upon him. I think that is what Jesus meant when he said: "Many will say to me in that day [i. e., in the day of judgment], Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name cast out devils? . . . And then will I say unto them, Ye never knew me. Depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

If we will compare this little circumstance to the one depicted in the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew, we will get a line on the weightier matters of the law. In the first case, Jesus said to men who had exercised the power of the priesthood to cast out devils, "Depart from me, ye that work iniquity." But in the second case he said to men who didn't seem to know much of anything about the priesthood, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." And why? because: "I was hungry, and you gave me meat. I was thirsty, and you gave me drink. I was a stranger, and you took me in; naked and you clothed me. I was in prison, and you came unto me." That's all. Yes; that's all. That is the only kind of thing for which Christianity offers rewards. That is the kind of thing that is important in Christian religion. Those are the weightier matters of the law.

It doesn't make any difference to which of the scriptural authorities you may make your appeal, they all say that "justice" and "judgment" and "mercy" and "faith" are weightier matters than anything else in a Christian experience. You should read the first chapter of Isaiah. In this chapter God told his people that their solemn meetings were iniquity, and that their prayers were unfit to be heard. And the reason he gave was that they did not "seek judgment," nor "relieve the oppressed," nor "plead for the widow," and the like.

No, sir, the old gospel machine just won't do its work if it is not lubricated with the oil of brotherly love. It doesn't make any difference how true to the Scriptures a church organization may be, it isn't worth a bean unless it is doing the kind of thing that satisfies human wants: unless it is a source of blessing to mankind.

And that is the weightier matter in Latter Day Saintism. Our church has a scriptural organization. I think our mode of baptism is a scriptural mode. But, my dear fellow Latter Day Saints, those matters are secondary to the matter of establishing and maintaining relations between ourselves in industrial life that insure equality of opportunity and equitable rewards for labor performed, and the like.

To the Latter Day Saints the term the kingdom of God and the kingdom of Zion are synonymous. They mean the same thing. And God's instruction to this church is "to act honestly and honorably in the sight of all men, and to use the things of this world (i. e., our possessions of whatsoever sort) in the manner designed of God, so that the places where they live (their communal lives) may shine as Zion, the redeemed of the Lord."

There can be no mistake about it. It is more important for this church to build a social order that dispenses justice and extends mercy, and the like, than it is to meet every Sunday and get two dollars worth of preaching for a two and a half cent offering.

"This people must needs be organized according to my laws" for industrial purposes (Doctrine and Covenants 51), "otherwise they shall be cut off." There isn't anything else quite so important as that. "If any man [no odds what office he holds in the church, nor how many people have been healed under his administration] shall take of the abundance which I have made and impart not his portion according to the law of my gospel unto the poor and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment." And let me tell you this: that no member of this church can make enough excuses about what other fellows did or didn't do to keep him out of hell if he will not endeavor to fulfill his financial obligation to God through the church. God demands of us a service to the poor and the cause of righteousness, and there isn't a single thing about this church work that is more important than that.

There is no secret about it. Latter Day Saints have been fussing with each other somewhat during the past few years about such questions as, Which one of the officers has the most right to spend the money of the church for the purposes for which they were collected? And the work of solving the problem of the poor and the oppressed has languished. Yes, the important task of the church, the weighty matter of the Christian religion, has been side-stepped by some in order to settle some secondary question of right of administration.

It may be that there is a little wrinkle in our church machinery. But suppose there is; is that any excuse for a man refusing to do the only kind of thing for which he can hope to get a Christian reward? It is more important for me to spend myself to advance the interests of mankind than it is to have a church without any mechanical defects. It is more important for me to be "sweet," to be on friendly terms with my fellow church members, than it is to straighten out any sort of mechanical crook. This church was made to serve mankind; and to illustrate the importance of making it render that service, I want to tell just one little incident, and I shall have finished this talk.

My mother is one of the most solicitous persons for the welfare of other people that I know. One day last summer, just after I had gotten my summer suit cleaned and pressed, I visited at her house. I was tired. I had another job to do that evening that was important. I needed a little rest, so I reclined in a chair, and put my feet up on the porch bannister. Mother observed my position and said: "Oh, look out, Gus, you are wrinkling your pants." I said to mother: "I should worry about wrinkling those pants. Those pants were made for me; I was not made for those pants. And if my purpose can best be achieved by wrinkling the pants, let the wrinkles come."

God made the Sabbath and the church for man. Man was not made for either the church or the Sabbath. And when it was necessary to do so, Jesus put a wrinkle in the observance of the Sabbath. I think he will not be displeased with us, if under the pressure of some human need, if in our effort to attend to the weightier matters of the law, we should get some slight wrinkles in our church machinery. These will be ironed out in time if we work at our task. The important thing about the Latter Day Saints Church is not the location of church headquarters and the like, but the dispensation of justice and mercy, and the exercise of faith. And if we will attend to those matters, we will be a blessing to mankind and will merit the favor of God.

The Angel (Minister) of Clear Vision

BY N. T. CHAPMAN

And he sighed deeply in his spirit, and said, Why doth this generation seek after a sign? Verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation, save the sign of the prophet Jonah; for as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so likewise shall the Son of Man be buried in the bowels of the earth. And he left them, and entering into the ship again, he departed to the other side. Now the multitude had forgotten to take bread; neither had they, in the ship with them, more than one loaf. And he charged them, saying, Take heed, and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and the leaven of Herod. And they reasoned among themselves, saying, He hath said this, because we have no bread. And when they said this among themselves, Jesus knew it, and he said unto them, Why reason ye because ye have no bread? Perceive ye not yet, neither understand ye? Are your hearts yet hardened? Having eyes, see ye not? And having ears, hear ye not? And do ye not remember? When I brake the five loaves among the five thousand, how many basketsful of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, Twelve. And when the seven loaves among four thousand, how many basketsful of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven. And he said unto them, How is it that ye do not understand?

And he cometh to Bethsaida; and they bring a blind man unto him, and he besought him to touch him. And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town; and when he had spit upon his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw aught? And he looked up and said, I see men as trees walking. After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up; and he was restored and saw every man clearly. And he sent him away to his house, saying, Neither go into the town, nor tell what is done to any in the town.

And Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Cæsarea Philippi; and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am? And they answered, John the Baptist; but some say, Elias; and others, One of the prophets. And he said unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Peter answered and said unto him, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God. And he charged them that they should tell no man of him. And he began to teach them, that the Son of Man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again. And he spoke that saying openly. And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him. But when he had turned about and looked upon his disciples, he rebuked Peter, saying, Get thee behind me, Satan; for thou savorest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men. And when he had called the people, with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me. For whosoever will save his life, shall lose it; or whosoever will save his life, shall be willing to lay it down for my sake; and if he is not willing to lay it down for my sake, he shall lose it. But whosoever shall be willing to lose his life for my sake, and the gospel's, the same shall save it. For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? Therefore deny yourselves of these, and be not ashamed of me. Whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels. And they shall not have part in that resurrection when he cometh. For verily I say unto you, That he shall come; and he that layeth down his life for my sake and the gospel's, shall come with him, and shall be clothed with his glory in the cloud, on the right hand of the Son of Man. And he said unto them again, Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power.—Mark 8:11-44, Inspired Version.

And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams; and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy.—Acts 2:17, 18.

For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall.—2 Peter 1:8-10.

My text is Proverbs 29:18: "Where there is no vision, the people perish; but he that keepeth the law, happy is he."

The eye is the physical instrument of vision. What a blessing, and how wonderful is perfect vision! How necessary to our well-being and happiness!

How we are handicapped by defective vision when the eye, the instrument of vision, is not dependable. If we are color blind, near or far sighted, we can be very honest and serious, and be very conscientious, and be mistaken—not because we want to be wrong, but because we are deceived by the instrument we depended upon for information: our vision is faulty. We are just as certain in our decisions with faulty vision as we are with true or clear vision. No amount of argument can change our minds; if a thing looks black, to concede it is red, white, or blue until we discover the defect, is beyond us. To quarrel with the other fellow, who has perfect vision, will not clear ours. The man in our lesson whose eyes were partly opened could see things, but not perfectly: "I see men as trees walking." He had need of another touch of the divine hand to perfect his sight. No amount of argument on his part, nor internal joy for the degree of light that he had, could have perfected that vision. It had to have more divine help. The light and life of the world had to touch it again. Then he saw "every man clearly."

Is it not wonderful that this historical account of the healing of this blind man is recited in connection with two other experiences of the Christ with men! Jesus fed the four thousand with the seven loaves and a few small fishes, and the seven baskets of fragments had but recently been gathered. His disciples had witnessed the Creator of the universe produce the prepared food in its perfection. He had fed the hungry crowd, who could not see how it was done, and were even now clamoring for a sign from him, tempting him to prove his claim as the Messiah. Another touch of divine power was yet in store for them, and they may fail to behold that sign (verse 12), as well as the one that just happened. They could not even see men as trees walking. "Blind guides" leading men into the ditch they themselves were falling into. Religious? Yes; but with no vision. Their mental and spiritual vision was defective; they could not see the kingdom of God "though it was among them," and they for generations had prayed that the Messiah would come in fulfillment of the words of the prophets. It was there, right at hand, "among them," and yet their eyes failed to "behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world." Their ears failed to hear the voice declare, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." No wonder that when he asked his disciples, "Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" they answered, "John the Baptist," "Elias," and others "One of the prophets." Jesus could well have wept over them. He knew what they would finally do. When people "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel," they will soon "fill ye up then the measure of your fathers." He knew their vision was defective; that because of their own spiritual condition they could build tombs to the prophets, "and garnish the sepulchers of the righteous," but very soon they would cry, "Away with him; away with him. Crucify him."

Well could he say unto them, "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace, but now they are hid from thine eyes." He then tells them what will befall them "because thou knowest not the time of thy visitation." "Blindness in part is happened to Israel." Defective vision caused them to reject their Redeemer, their long-looked-for and prayed-for Messiah.

They were not the only ones affected by defective vision (part blindness). Our lesson recites that some of those who had beheld wonders and viewed in vision angels, had seen the sick healed, the eyes of the blind opened, the lepers cleansed, and the dead raised to life, failed to have clear vision. Some things the apostles did not know and did not see the reason for, and because of impatience and defective sight they acted unwisely; and when confronted with what they failed to understand, they became an offense to the one they had followed; and when he told them, "the Son of Man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders and the chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again," Peter took him and began to rebuke him; and this earnest, conscientious, fearless apostle, without clear vision, acted in a way unbecoming his office, and he became an offense, and had to be put to shame by his beloved Lord, and silenced by what may be considered an abrupt expression: "Get thee behind me, Satan; for thou savorest [seest] not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men." Peter, your failure to see clearly has caused you suffering. No man could have been censured thus without feeling humiliated, and perhaps a feeling of rebellion was in his mind. Perhaps his Lord told him what blindness, defective vision, would cause him to do. He may have told him, It will cause you to curse and swear; it will cause you to "deny me." He may have turned to the rest of the apostles and informed them they need not feel elated: You had better sympathize with this, your brother: "One of you will sell me for a few pieces of silver"; and others of you will become despondent and go back to your "fishing nets." More than one of you will say when this takes place, "We trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel." "O ye of little faith, slow of heart to believe [see clearly] all that the prophets have spoken." And he said unto them, "How is it that ye do not understand?"

Some of them may have said as they did upon a certain occasion, "This is an hard saying; who can hear it [stand it]." Perhaps some of them "walked no more with him." Many may have said, "Lord, to whom shall we go?" They may have asked him again to "show us the Father and it sufficeth us"; and we can hear him say, "Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me?" "I am the way, the truth, and the light; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." "I am the true vine." My "body" is the true church; there is but one true body; in that church is my spirit. It is that Spirit that will help you to see; that will open your eyes and quicken your understanding." It will take the things of the Father and show them unto you." It will make you one "as I and the Father are one"; that you will all "speak the same thing; and that there be no divisions among you." It will clear your vision, and you can "walk in the light" "as I am in the light." You can then have "fellowship one with another," "and my blood will cleanse you from all sin." "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness; but shall have the light of life." "For he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth." He stumbleth "because there is no light in him."

The apostles of the New Testament well understood they could enjoy clear vision, for the Lord had said to them, "If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when the shining of a candle doth give the light in all the room."

Peter declares he understood that the children of God were "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood," "that they should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light."

Paul confirms this statement when he declares to the Ephesian saints, "Be ye not unwise, but understanding that the will of the Lord is. For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord; walk as the children of light"; and John, the Beloved, gives us his opinion that "He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him; but he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness and knoweth not where he goeth because that darkness hath blinded eyes."

And the Saints of latter days, be they ordained or unordained members, enjoy the angel of clear vision and understand "all things that pertain to life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue," and enjoy the vision of "the exceeding great and precious promises" when they "give all diligence"; "add to faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity; for if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins."

Saints, when we don't understand, and we feel to criticize the work of others, when all men look like "trees walking," not as they should look, when "the vision of all has become unto us as the words of a book that is sealed"; "when the work says of him that made it, He made me not; nor shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, He hath no understanding"; and we feel like "laying a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just thing for a thing of naught," read Doctrine and Covenants 1: 7, 8.

May we, no matter what station we occupy, "look diligently lest we fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble us, and thereby many be defiled; lest we become a fornicator or profane person; who for one morsel of meat "sold his birthright." Better we hear the advice of the Apostle Paul when he said, "We dare not make ourselves of the number or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves; but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise." May we heed the advice of Doctor Spurgeon, who said, "Beware of no man more than yourself; we carry our worst enemy within us." Doctor Samuel Knox says, "Remember that the thing men know least about is themselves"; nay more than ignorant, for ignorance means only failure of knowledge. We go beyond that, for we are many of us not only ignorant of a great part of our own characters, but we often imagine ourselves to be quite different from what we are."

Let us take heed unto ourselves, when we can not see men "clearly"; when we can not catch the vision of a risen Lord, or a redeemed Zion; when we don't see the reason why we had better be patient, keep the law, and try to be happy; deny yourselves; "be not ashamed of me, nor of my words," in this adulterous and sinful generation, and wait and understand more truth, for another touch of the divine hand. Be sure our vision is clear before we act. We then will be nearer to the time when we shall "see as we are seen and know as we are known."

May the angel of clear vision help us on to 1930 and beyond.

Thoughts on Healing.—No. II

BY FRED GREGORY

DO WE REQUIRE DRUGS?

Sin and disease go hand in hand. The one creates the other. The more sin the more disease, and only as sin lessons can we hope for disease to lessen. All our physical ills have their beginning in wrongdoing, and continued wrongdoing only multiplies them. Greatly distressed, we pray for deliverance, and earnestly turn our tearful eyes heavenward, looking for divine assistance. Ordinarily our prayers are not answered, and we are disappointed as the bold intruder occupies in defiance. What we have called faith has failed us. We then turn from our praying to more material ways and means of cure, which brings us to the point now to be considered.

Do these so-called failures justify us in dismissing the Lord as our physician, so we no longer trust or follow his method, but turn to our fellow creatures, equally faithless, and as fully diseased and helpless as ourselves, expecting to find in them a more successful means of cure? What sane person could imagine such a desertion to be acceptable to the Master who labored so diligently to teach us to fix our trust in God? A few moments of sober reflection convince us that the cause of failure is in ourselves and not in our Lord's treatment of disease. Instead of turning away from the Master's lofty teaching to some inferior practice, would it not be more reasonable and commendable for man to turn all the more decisively toward his Lord and, humbly sitting at the feet of the Great Teacher, learn from his superior mind the divine processes of spiritual diagnosis and cure? God is unchangeable. The wisdom of the world is still "foolish" in his sight. His power and readiness to heal in answer to the prayer of faith is no less now than when Jesus was on earth demonstrating the power of faith. Faith is still potent, and more potent than any drug or number of drugs; but it requires more than the wisdom of the world to discern it.

The fact is, to be successful in the practice of the divine art of healing, as Jesus presented it, requires great spiritual qualifications, and few persons have succeeded in qualifying. When in the New Testament writings we read of Christ, Peter, John, or Paul healing the sick and otherwise calling into manifestation visible evidences of the power of God, we read also that they were men full of wisdom and of the Holy Ghost. They qualified according to the divine order. Being "full of the Holy Ghost" was the great secret of their success. Failure to qualify in this regard meets with a corresponding failure to heal.

Again we remark, the failure to heal is in the man, and not in the Savior's teaching; and there is no justifiable reason to substitute the drug method for the Christ method. To do so, man simply but very plainly deserts his leader in this respect. But this lack of confidence in the certainty of the Savior's position in no sense invalidates the claim, nor should the practice be abandoned for something inferior. Since there can be no dispute as to its superiority, it should be strenuously upheld by all means, and the creature upon whom the reflection rests, taught and encouraged to rely upon the superior system inasmuch as it is yet the Lord's way.

God is no convert to the ways of men. To trust God though he slay me is undoubtedly the right attitude. But modern science objects. It does not indorse faith healing. The majority of medical men are brazen enough to openly denounce faith healing. To them it is a fake. Others, not quite so bold, think it a fake but do not publically declare it. In either case the intent of the profession is to set aside faith healing as useless, even foolish, and to establish the use of drugs and manipulations per their knowledge gained through study of medicine and many years of experiment. The unlettered teaching of the Nazarene is regarded as folly, and any who hold to his method of cure as mentally deficient. They even go as far as to prosecute those who presume to believe that God is more able to heal than they.

In this maelstrom of doubt and vain conceit which would and actually does separate us from the real source of health, and forcibly thrusts us upon the wisdom of men, who because they have chosen to study anatomy and medicine from a scientific(?) human point of view claim to have discovered sure cures for every ill, the church of God is attacked, and we wonder sometimes under whose care the body of Christ really is. The so-called cure for every disease is a farce, and the medical fraternity well know it. It needs no argument. Hundreds are dying every hour, and the doctors stand by, hopelessly looking on. Occasionally candor compels them to say, "We can do no more," but more often they are silent, or have hied themselves away, leaving the patient to die, thus confessing their inability to cope with disease. What did they do to connect the patient with the real source of health? Nothing; absolutely nothing, except to separate him from the Great Physician. There are two sides to the question, and to die trusting in God is certainly much less a crime than to pass away trusting in man no stronger than ourselves.

Why not both the doctor and the doctored appeal earnestly to nature's God, as Christ taught, and develop this method of healing to the point of efficiency? Why do materialistic findings prevail? Why is spirituality discounted so heavily? The latter is the key to understanding of both body and soul. Why separate the two? "What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." Mark 5: 25-34 relates a pointed case—a woman had had an issue of blood for twelve years, and sought relief from the physicians of the day. She "suffered many things of many physicians and had spent all that she had and was nothing better, but rather worse." The statement sounds quite modern indeed—"suffering"—"spent all"—"worse." One simple touch of the Master's garment was enough. "Thy faith hath made thee whole."

Judge ye as to the better way.

If society is to progress it can do so only upon a somewhat consistent and even basis. Physical development is necessary to mental development; otherwise a degenerate will result. Moral development is essential to mental and physical development, or we shall have the same result; and spiritual development is necessary as well. Develop your spirituality to the neglect of the mental, physical, and moral training; and religious mania results."—The Houghton Line.

When Was Jesus Born?

BY HERMAN PEISKER

It was with interest that I read an article in the SAINTS' HERALD of January 19, 1927, in which it was affirmed that Jesus was born on April 6, eighteen hundred thirty years prior to the organization of the church.

While in agreement with the claim as to the date—or to a date very close to it—the premises upon which the case is built and argued are not only questionable, but incorrect.

It may be as well to call attention to the fact that Jesus was born in a year corresponding to 5 to 4 B. C. A study of Bible chronology—I have Holman's—reveals the fact that the Herod who ordered the massacre of the innocents died in the month of April of B. C. 4. If Jesus was born before the death of Herod, then from the birth of Jesus to our year 1830 A. D. is at least 1834 years.

There is another way in which the date of our Savior's birth may be determined. It is by the periodical census taking—not taxing (Luke 2:1-3) which was done for the first time when Quirinius—Cyrenius—was governor of Syria (B. C. 4-1). Copies of these enrollment papers have been found, showing that a census was taken periodically—if my memory does not fail me, every fourteen years.

This was first done during the reign of Augustus Cæsar, B. C. 27 to A. D. 14. The statement that "Cyrenius was governor of Syria" at the time, settles the date, because he was governor in B. C. 4 to 1 and again A. D. 6 to 11. The latter date is far too late.

It seems that Jesus was born early in B. C. 4, in the twenty-third year of the reign of Augustus Cæsar, during the last months of the reign of Herod and the first months of the governorship of Quirinius.

The "sixth month," referred to in Luke 1:26, has nothing to do with the date of the conception of Jesus, nor with the month of the year. A reference to verses 24 to 36 shows clearly that it means "the sixth month" since the conception of John. Elizabeth had hidden herself from the time she knew the promise of the angel would be fulfilled, for five months, "and in the sixth month the Angel Gabriel was sent from God unto . . . Mary." (Luke 1:24-26.) This is exactly what the angel told Mary: "This is the sixth month with her, who was called barren." (Luke 1:36.) John was exactly six months older than his second cousin, Jesus.

The argument that it was spring, and not winter, when the shepherds were out with the flocks, is reasonable; so also is the suggestion that it was the Passover, as well as an enrollment, that Mary and Joseph were away from home to attend. Bethlehem, Joseph's home town, was close to Jerusalem. It was handy both to the Passover feast, Joseph's relatives, and Mary's relatives in Hebron; also for her visit to the temple with the babe after its birth.

Springtime in Palestine would be from about the middle of March to the middle or end of April.

A More Exact Way

The Book of Mormon provides us with better premises from which to reason.

The Nephites "began to reckon their time from this period when the sign was given, or from the coming of Christ." (Nephi 1:45.) We are not told whether they began an entirely new system from the date of his birth, or whether they retained the old calendar and began a new count of the years.

It does not matter, however, which was intended. The results are almost the same. It says that "thirty and three years had passed away" from the time of the sign of our Savior's birth. (Nephi 4:3.) On the "fourth day" of the "first month" in the "thirty and fourth year," the sign of his death was given, verse 6.

If Jesus had been more than four days over thirty-three years of age, Nephi would have been forced to write the "thirty and fifth year." Thus, according to the Book of Mormon, Jesus was either thirty-three years and four days old, or between thirty-three years and thirty-three years and four days. Whether the Nephites reckoned from the day or the year of our Lord's birth, there is only a period of four days that there can be any dispute over. This means that Jesus was crucified within four days after his thirty-third birthday.

The year Jesus was crucified (A. D. 30), the Passover was eaten after sunset on Thursday, April 6, and he was crucified before the following sunset on Friday, April 7.

It is evident from the foregoing that Jesus was born some time between April 3 and 7 in B. C. 4. The fact that the Hebrew calendar contains uneven months and years does not alter this conclusion by one day.

We are hardly in a position to dogmatize on the date of our Savior's birth; but all evidence points to April—the early part—as his birthday.

A man hath a body, and that body is confined to a place; but where friendship is, all offices of life are as it were granted to him and his deputy.—Sir Francis Bacon.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Race Intolerance

Hatred toward the Jew is one of the strongest of all hatreds. It causes so much pain that it is almost safe to say no Jew ever escapes some direct contact with it. There is almost no Jewish parent who does not wince when he thinks of the inevitable experience his child must have with anti-Semitism. Many reasons are given for this hatred of the Jew. The only valid one is "dislike for the unlike." No other reasons hold water. You may hate all Jews and shun them because some Jews are dirty. But so are many Christians. You may hate all Jews because some Jews are showy. Do you hate Christians who are showy? You are prejudiced against the Negro, perhaps, because you think he is naturally lazy and unintelligent. But the Japanese are notoriously thrifty and shrewd: so the Californians hate them.

Hatred toward the Jew exists everywhere, because the Jews live everywhere, and because everywhere they live they are just a little different from the other people near them. They are white but they can usually be distinguished from non-Jews. Their religion is distinct and their traditions seem peculiar. For centuries they have suffered terrible persecution at the hands of Christians for no other reason than the intolerance of everything different on the part of groups with whom the Jews came in contact.

Intolerance is not based on facts, reason, or reasons. Prejudice means pre-judgment: judging before the facts. Every group thinks and feels that it is the one proper group. The foreigner, the alien is queer, not because he is wrong, but because he is different; and his language is gibberish, not because it isn't language, but because it is unintelligible. Intolerance is an attribute of the group, of one group against another, and it is rooted in every individual because he is a member of a group and has all the prejudice typical of it. The Jewish group has been driven into intolerance, too, but this intolerance does not express itself in terms of pillage and massacre and discrimination, as does the Christian intolerance of the Jew. Instead it has become a defensive self-pride in race, religion, and glory of tradition.

There is a way to tolerance, and it lies in enlightenment. The only thing which can tear down the intolerance and instinctive suspicion which dominates the human pack is the triumph of the free intelligence. The purpose of education should be the enlargement, the enrichment of the individual to take intelligent charge of his own life; the broadening of the human sympathies; and the potential ability of each man to think for himself and to turn his face against the pack instead of acting under group control. In the advance toward tolerance are men and women so educated as to be able to examine facts in the appraisal of people who are different from themselves in race or in religious attachments and to exclude prejudice.

Who is to educate children toward larger loyalties, toward regarding each different group as part of a brotherhood of man, toward the ultimate destruction of prejudice, if not the home and the school together? These should be the very strongholds of fairness, of inquiry, and of good-will. They can encourage children to regard the foreigner or person of different religious belief impartially. They can lead the child to seek acquaintance with and knowledge of members of other racial and religious groups. Friendly interest in the unlike and an appreciation of the different one should be fostered in the name of understanding and also even for the very fact of difference. This in itself has educative value. Every wholesome, new kind of human being means another door on life; a step away from some narrow rut; added color.

Naturally, prejudiced, narrow-minded parents are not the best leaders of children toward tolerance, nor the most willing. They themselves need education, but they can learn along with their children, just as they have learned to use toothbrushes and to open the windows at night. By her unchristian behavior, the Christian mother who orders her children away from play with Jewish children merely because they are Jewish is doing nothing better than training a brood of bigots. Such a mother passes on to her own cherished little ones the poison of ignorant pride which ends in deep and ineradicable hatred. One approach to make to this prejudiced parent is this: Assume that intrinsically the Jewish child is as good as yours; assume that all things are equal, aside from the fact of his Jewishness; then association with the Jewish child will not hurt your child. But to forbid association with the Jewish or Catholic or alien child will hurt your own, positively. For there are two sharp edges to the sharp sword of prejudice. Naturally, the person prejudiced against is hurt and filled with the hatred which hatred normally begets. But, unfortunately, the workings of prejudice do not stop there, and the prejudiced person is filled with a cumulative bigotry, hatred, and a bitter malice, possessed of which no man is free.

If a parent allows a child to grow up in blind bias and a belief in his own superiority over all different kinds of people and a willingness to perse-

NEWS AND LETTERS

Independence

The Auditorium

The six o'clock Easter morn prayer service Sunday proved to be a great success. Though the sky was somewhat overcast with high, fleecy clouds, the weather favored such a meeting, and a cool south breeze swept the Auditorium slab where the multitude assembled. "As it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came" the Saints together in memory of the risen Prince of Righteousness. Having gathered in the basement room, the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and choir composed of Independence singers and visiting musicians marched up, singing as they came. For the opening song, the congregation joined in singing, "Lift your glad voices." President F. M. Smith then gave the invocation, and all sang "Yes, the Redeemer rose." Elder Ralph W. Farrell read two scripture readings; the ladies' chorus rendered a number, and the choir sang the "Hallelujah chorus." Apostle J. A. Gillen offered the benediction.

Following the sunrise prayer service on the main floor of the Auditorium, the congregation found its way down the inclines to the auditorium, where all joined in an hour's song service preceding the general eight o'clock service of prayer. Elder John F. Sheehy was in charge of the music, and special numbers were rendered by soloists, duets, and quartets. Every Saint enjoyed this time, and a proper setting and atmosphere was created by the spirit of consecration, voiced in song, for the beneficial prayer service, which followed.

President Frederick M. Smith presided over the prayer meeting and was assisted by Patriarch F. A. Smith, John R. Grice directing the singing.

At this hour Brother Joseph Crum was confirmed by Brothers Hopkins and Grice, the former being the mouth-piece. And a touching and appealing ceremony, the blessing of two infants in Israel, then took place. Lyman Francis Edwards, son of Apostle F. Henry and Sister Alice Smith Edwards, was blessed by President F. M. Smith, assisted by Brother F. B. Blair. Mary Marcella Aber was given a blessing under the hands of President F. M. Smith and Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith, the latter being spokesman.

Besides these observances, time was left for two dozen testimonies voicing a strong desire for consecration and a stirring zeal, born of a new insight into the work, brought about by the instruction and association of this conference.

The session of Sunday school of the 17th began at 9.30 a. m. at the Stone Church for beginners, primaries, and intermediates; at the Institute Building at the Campus for the junior department, and at the Auditorium for adult and senior departments of the Stone Church Sunday school and visitors to conference.

The Auditorium service was conducted by General Sunday School Superintendent C. B. Woodstock, who announced cute on the ground of difference, then that parent has done more harm to his own child than the child can do to anyone else in the name of intolerance. Luckily, tolerance begets tolerance and strength as it goes along, and consideration retaliates with consideration. Each child deserves a part to play in starting the ball of peace and friendly relations. Give it to him, and the next generation will get a taste of tolerance, welcome however slight.—Florence Freedlander Cohen, in The Canadian Child for January.

"Earnest workers" as the opening hymn. The congregation was accompanied by the Walnut Park and Stone Church orchestras, which have faithfully helped in the services during conference. Opening remarks and prayer were by Brother Ray Lloyd, superintendent of Kansas City Stake Sunday schools.

Three local florists loaned the Sunday school an abundance of ferns and Easter lilies, which went far in beautifying the platform. These florists, Ackerson, Floris, and Rhine floral companies, also contributed flowers for the decoration of the Stone Church. The contributions were greatly appreciated by officers and students of the Sunday school.

It was announced that the annual Easter egg shower of the Stone Church Sunday school is postponed until next Sunday. Anyone wishing to help in this may bring any number of eggs he desires. The Sanitarium is an appreciative institution and will be grateful for assistance of this character.

Following the lesson session, officers of local and district Sunday school departments present were invited to sit on the platform.

A total attendance of 2,161 was reported by the secretary, and of this number 1,154 were visitors. There were seven perfect classes.

During the intermission between Sunday school and the church service, the orchestra played several numbers. The Saints moved about a little, some leaving to attend the Stone Church services. Others from local Sunday schools came in, and a short time was spent in visiting. A large number crowded the Auditorium, and conference visitors had the opportunity to meet some of the brethren who, engaged in the business world, have found it impossible to mingle with the conference crowd save on Sunday.

The morning speaker, President Elbert A. Smith, is a much-loved one not only to Independence people but to those who have heard him elsewhere. He read from Matthew 28 and 2 Timothy 1: 10: "Our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." Brother Smith brought out the appeal the story of the resurrection has upon humanity, classifying it as emotional and intellectual or spiritual appeal. The emotional appeal, which is first, is due to the fact that death is the ancient enemy of man. It has ruled all nations, a tyrant king. Every person has sensed the terribleness of death, the awful emptiness after a dear one has departed, the separation. The story of the resurrection of our Savior gives to humanity the hope that mortal life is not the end of all things.

The angels sang "We bring you glad tidings of great joy," on the night Jesus was born, and through him the world has been saved. Christ rose from the tomb; life triumphed over death. But there are things worse than death. Jesus did not come to snatch us from the grasp of death in consequence of our sins, but to save us from our sins. No man can ever be saved from the consequences of his sin until he is saved from the sin itself. We can be saved by the power of the gospel, for it shows us a new way to live, and by the personal help of the Lord. Many people know what they ought to do and only need some powerful friend to help them. Christ's vision broadens our own. It is an incentive. It teaches man to hope, to believe in immortality, and gives him a desire to live well. It brings to all the knowledge that immortality is the basis for soul building. Easter is the witness of the immortality of the human soul. It brings life and immortality to life. It makes life attractive and worth living well.

Preluding the sermon the congregation sang "Lift your glad voices," and Patriarch Richard Baldwin offered prayer. Elder Guy P. Levitt was in charge and announced to the audience and microphone the anthem, "Unfold ye portals," sung by the Messiah Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, Robert Miller presiding at the piano. Mrs. I. A. Smith rendered a much appreciated solo, "In the end of the sabbath." An offertory, "Wayside chapel," was played by the combined orchestra under the direction of Brother Leon Snow.

Between the forenoon meetings and the service of the afternoon several hours elapsed, the opening not coming until the hour of three, when President Frederick M. Smith was to be the speaker. The room was filled an hour before the opening.

President Smith spoke directly but deliberately under the inspiration of a conference which had held much to give him increased hope and confidence, an assembly of people which had been in fasting and prayer since Saturday evening, and a love for his work and the work of the church which is deep and abiding.

At eight o'clock in the evening the dramatic cantata, "David," was presented by members and friends of the Independence Music Club. A large audience was early seated for the performance, and sat in appreciative silence as each new scene was disclosed in all its beauty of colorful lights, pleasing arrangement of stage settings, beautiful costumes. The dignity of the entire performance was impressive, and each soloist gave an able interpretation of his part. Those making up the cast were: David, Elbert Dempsey; Saul, Albert Brackenbury; Samuel, Clarence Resch; Jesse, John Sheehy; Abigail, Mrs. Israel A. Smith; Michal, Mrs. S. A. Burgess; Jonathan, Edward Brackenbury; three men of war, Roy Cato, Gordon Kress, Fred Goode; four shepherds, Roderick May, Gomer Cool, Gordon Kress, and Orvy Martin; two sentinels, Fred Goode and Fred Friend; servant, Donald Pierson; the sons, E. R. Redfield, David Stewart, Raymond Gerber, Joseph Smith, Ronald Smith, J. E. Warren, Gerald Johnston, Albert Phillips, Richard Day; the maidens, Thelma Vincent, Lillian Williams, Aileen Bullard, Nida Vincent, Hazel Moler, Grace Edwards, Melva Ward; attendants, Helen Louise Hulmes, Carol Smith, Lois Cool, Pauline Siegfried, Bertha Gunsolley; messenger, J. G. Fairbanks; elder, David Stewart. Members of the Stone Church Choir and the Independence Music Club and children's chorus, made up the chorus. Musical directors of the production were Mrs. Harold C. Burgess, Paul N. Craig, Mrs. George H. Hulmes; and Louise Newton Jennings was dramatic director.

Stone Church

A large number of visitors were present at the Stone Church Sunday school hour to watch the classes of the intermediate, primary, and beginner departments at work. They observed the methods of the teachers and the response of the pupils. It is hoped that many profited by this session of Sunday school. Following the class period, the primary department took its turn in presenting the program.

Elder Matthew Liston was in charge of the eleven o'clock service, and under his direction the congregation enjoyed singing several hymns. Patriarch John F. Martin, of Ohio, was the speaker. Brother Martin is the favorite speaker of many, particularly among the young people. "I just love to hear Brother Martin preach," a seventeen-year-old girl was heard to exclaim at the Auditorium, and with her several others left to attend the service at the Stone Church. The sermon was upon the appropriate topic of the resurrection, and was well received by a large audience.

Brother Virgil Sheppard, of Joplin, Missouri, was the speaker at the Campus at the junior service, and told the old, old Easter Story which never grows old. The program in commemoration of the day, given by the children, was enjoyed by the many visitors present.

In the Departments

The officers, teachers, and members of the Department of Women feel that much has been accomplished this conference in the institute of parentcraft and home building. Beginning at 10.30 Monday morning, April 11, the institute lasted throughout the week, and though nearly every morning the rain fell heavily the attendance increased in all of the classes. From 10.30 to 11 each morning there was a talk by some worker. Among these speakers were President Elbert A. Smith, Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Blanche Edwards, Mrs. Mollie Davis, and Mrs. W. L. Christy. At eleven o'clock the women gathered in sectional study groups to study "The child under eight," taught by Mrs. Dona Haden; "Parents of tomorrow," Mrs. C. B. Woodstock; "Parents of today and their problems," Mrs. Lydia Wight; "Suggestive programs for local group meetings," Blanche Edwards. These meetings have been regularly reported to the DAILY HERALD as a source of instruction and inspiration.

One of the outstanding matters of business transacted by the department during this week was the establishment of The Ruth Lyman Memorial Library in memory of our beloved Ruth Lyman Smith, who worked so untiringly in the interest of home building, child welfare, and parentcraft. The library on these three subjects is to be continuously modern and located at the center place, Independence.

The following recommendation was submitted by the committee in charge of the memorial:

To the Women of the Church; Dear Sisters: As an appreciation of the work of our late Sister Ruth Lyman Smith in her untiring interest in home building, child welfare, and parentcraft, we earnestly recommend that this department sponsor the development of a continuously modern library on these subjects, so dear to her heart, to be known as The Ruth Lyman Smith Memorial Library, located in our center place, the city of Zion.

Respectfully submitted,
IDA ETZENHOUSER, Chairman.
MOLLIE DAVIS.
MRS. R. E. NEWKIRK.
MRS. FRED KOEHLER.
BLANCHE EDWARDS.

This recommendation was unanimously accepted.

Second Performance of "The Restoration"

The second performance of the church play, "The Restoration," given by friends and members of the Laurel Club, on Monday evening, April 18, was enjoyed by more than a thousand spectators. The presentation of the play had been scheduled to be repeated Friday evening, the 15th, but was postponed until Monday evening, the 18th. Despite the fact that conference was officially adjourned Monday afternoon at four o'clock and by the opening hour of the evening program many delegates and visitors were already speeding their way homeward, and that a veritable cloudburst of rain poured all during the evening, people who had heard much of "The Restoration," came from all over the city to see it. Some who were present at the first performance came again and felt well repaid for their effort. Again the production was marked in all its beauty and harmony. The Laurels are grateful to the people of Independence for their support and cooperation. The collection taken on this evening netted the club a goodly sum, which will go to the Auditorium kitchen and dining room equipment fund.

Due to the fact that the weather was unfavorable Monday evening, the crowd was not as large as was expected, and the Laurel Club has a small supply of the souvenir programs on hand. Anyone desiring one of these programs can obtain it by mailing four cents postage to Mrs. J. L. Latta, advertising manager, 214 North Spring, or calling Independence 470.

East Independence

Elder William I. Fligg closed his series of meetings at this branch April 5. Due to stormy weather, the meetings were not so well attended as they would have been otherwise. Those who were able to attend received much good from the discourses, which were especially helpful and instructive to the young. We trust Brother Fligg may come again when he has more time to tell the gospel story.

Apostle Myron McConley worshiped with us at the April sacramental service.

Brother and Sister Harvey Minton and Brother and Sister Ward L. Christy were visitors here during the last week.

Brother William Davis, of Michigan, preached here for us Sunday morning, being assisted by his son, Brother J. W. Davis. He related many of his experiences in this work, which were helpful.

James Melvin, the infant son of Brother Floyd and Sister Olivia Thomas, was blessed at the morning service, April 17, by Brother N. Carmichael and Brother J. W. Davis.

At the morning hour Brother Davis was the speaker, being assisted by Brother Fred W. Cadow, of Michigan. These two were engaged in the church work together when young men, but this is the first time they had ever been in the pulpit together. Brother Davis preached an excellent Easter sermon. As the three important events of the world, he named the birth, death, and resurrection of Christ. His discourse was an inspiration, bringing clearly before us the mission that Christ had in the world and how he accomplished it. Brother Cadow then spoke a few minutes, urging the Saints to heed the voice of the Good Shepherd and not to follow the call of another.

Kansas City Stake

Following the lesson study Sunday morning, we were favored with Easter exercises by the primary, junior, and intermediate departments. The altar was very prettily decorated in ferns and Easter lilies, with a huge white cross in the center, and as the children marched to the altar, each carrying an Easter lily, three of the junior girls attached them to the cross, and when finished it was a sight beautiful to behold. The children of the primary department in their sweet way rendered the song, "On Easter morn."

The eleven o'clock service was occupied by "The workers of the day," a class of young girls, who rendered "The resurrection," a beautiful lesson portrayed in dramatic form, a portrayal which brought home to every individual present the significance of the day, the anniversary of the resurrection of our Savior. These young girls are to be commended for their splendid effort, and their teacher, Sister Katherine Swanson, has been untiring in her efforts to perfect this portrayal and surely was well rewarded in her work.

The evening service was occupied by the choir, who rendered the cantata "From Olivet to Calvary" under the direction of Brother Tom Dunn. While the attendance was not as good as expected, a number having attended the Independence service, those present listened very attentively to the story told in song of Jesus' trip to Jerusalem, of his sojourn there in the temple, his final arrest and trial before Pilate, the march to Calvary, and the final crucifixion, and thus ended another wonderful Easter day, a day that had been full of activities for all of us.

Brother and Sister Clayton Wolfe announce the birth of a daughter, Shirley Ann, born April 11.

Also Brother and Sister Fred Furness are the proud parents of a baby girl, born April 16.

Sister Maude McCabe, Sister Massy, and Sister Vera Faler have all been confined to hospitals the last several weeks, and we have missed them very much, as they are active members, and we are praying for their speedy recovery and return to us.

Stark Acres

The work at Stark Acres continues to grow. The pastor, Elder Ira G. Clutter, has baptized three more people, two uniting last Sunday and one the Sunday before, thus bringing the number of baptisms up to twelve since November. The congregation now numbers twenty-four.

Brother Clutter could do much more but for the lack of time to meet the demands for labor. He has splendid help in Brother and Sister Willis, Sister Willis being good help with the music and efficient in class work.

Brother Beaman is doing excellent work in the Sunday school and is a faithful worker.

Recent speakers have been J. O. Worden, R. L. Bishop, U. W. Greene with a slide lecture on the life of Christ and the Holy Land, and W. O. Hands with the Auditorium pictures. Each speaker has a distinctive message, yet they so blend that they form a complete chain in presenting the gospel to the people of that community.

A very sad thing happened March 8 when Mrs. Freeman, the wife of the man they rent the meeting place from, was fatally burned as she was lighting a fire in the stove with coal oil. She lived only a few hours. It was her intention to be baptized soon. Her husband and four small children are left to mourn. She was a regular attendant at the services and was the Religio chorister. The funeral service was held at the meeting place, Patriarch Ammon White offering the words of consolation to an assembly of about 250 people in and out of the building, he speaking from the doorway. The crowd was much affected by the discourse, many saying they had never before heard anything so wonderful. Since that day, many inquiries have come to the pastor, with invitations to visit the homes and explain the gospel.

The protesting group are doing what they can to hinder the work.

Bennington Heights Church

On account of the number of Bennington Heights Saints who have been attending the General Conference meetings, their local attendance has been less than usual, and it was voted to call off the evening meetings of last Sunday. However, there were eighteen present at the 8.15 a. m. prayer meeting, which was very spiritual.

The Bennington Heights Saints are planning a big day next Sunday, when they will have their home-coming day. They are anxious to meet as many former members of Bennington Heights Church as will be able to come. Visitors are invited to come for the 8.15 a. m. prayer meeting and stay all day.

Sister William Beeman has been very sick and was unable to attend church the last two Sundays.

Brother Leonard G. Holloway, a seventy, preached last Sunday morning.

Sioux City, Iowa

In writing of the incidents of importance that are happening in the Sioux City Branch, we think the readers of the HERALD will be interested in hearing of some of the activities of the Religio. With the attendance of this service increasing and the interest of those attending growing, the officers of the Religio feel encouraged and are spurred to greater efforts in providing programs and lesson studies of greater interest and worth.

In keeping with this policy, the program committee produced Doctor Bellaire, an X-ray and radium specialist of this city, who gave us an intensely interesting and at the same time educational lecture on X ray and radium, dealing with their history and use by mankind.

The theme of this talk was enlarged upon a few weeks later when the doctor gave us an illustrated lecture from X-ray photographs of diseases which he has treated. We were given the privilege of interrupting him and asking questions. These he willingly answered. Both talks were heard by a large and interested crowd. Other prominent business and professional men of this city have promised us talks in the future.

On March 20 the Saints again enjoyed a junior church service. The story of David was used and held the interest of all. Immediately following the service, baptizing was held, and Harry Severy entered the waters, Brother G. Scott Daniel officiating.

The senior chapter of Temple Builders has taken up physical culture under the direction of Sister Dora Haycox.

On March 24 we organized the junior chapter of Temple Builders, with seven present. The girls are anxious to get new members and help build up the organization. The evenings will be spent in learning to cook and sew, with a short study period following.

Elder G. M. Vandel is taking charge of the pastoral work in the absence of Brother G. Scott Daniel, who with his wife, is attending General Conference. Brother J. E. Keck and Sister Alice Keck are also at conference. The prayers of the Saints are for that body of Saints.

Moved and seconded that we approve the list of appointments as read. Carried.

Minutes of the last session of the conference were read and approved.

Moved that we authorize the Presidency to express our thanks and appreciation to all who have contributed to the comfort and the convenience of the conference.

A motion was made that we do now adjourn according to previous specifications as to time and place of the convening of the next General Conference.

The motion prevailed, and the President declared the conference adjourned. He then addressed the conference as follows:

In the first place, in spite of the fact that we are meeting in the basement of an unfinished building, I think I can say without any danger of successful contradiction that we have been more comfortably housed, been taken care of as a general conference better than at any previous general conference. Personally I am looking forward with the utmost confidence to meeting in the upper auditorium at our next conference. (Applause) This conference has been pleasing to me because it is stepping in the direction of having our conferences organized more nearly as I would like to see them, or if you like it better, and object to the word organized, working more nearly as I would like to see the conferences work. In other words, I hope to see the time come when our conference will be characteristically, helpfully educative, not forgetting the fact, of course, that we all come with the idea of being spiritually strengthened; and the splendid classwork that has been done this year, and the improved quality of the quorum work holds a very definite promise that we can realize something more nearly ideal in the future conferences than we have in the past.

Our conferences, in my opinion, should become more legislatively brief. Let me iterate that. I hope we will have less time given to legislation in the future than we have in the past, and I feel disposed to rather congratulate ourselves on this conference, because if you look back over your minutes, you will find, after all, we have not spent much time there in either discussing legislation or making it. We have spent a great deal of time in listening to reports, and that is right that we should, and in seeking information, and I hope that the future conferences will broaden their scope in carrying to the membership through the delegates and ex officios the information they should have in regard to the general activities of the church. And this, if it means anything, means that so far as the legislation of general conferences is concerned, it must become more departmental. That is to say, our legislation should be brought together, and I am only expressing the hope that the time will come that we will be so up to date that our work—I mean caught up with it—that we can enter into the opening session of conference, and assign to each department certain time during which legislation will be discussed, on what might be needed, for that particular department, and when we do we can listen to the reports from the heads of those departments. And I hope these reports will precede the legislation, so that every ex officio and delegate will be thoroughly informed as to what the proposed legislation is and what its bearings will be. I have quite distinctly sympathized with the delegates in the past, and some of the ex officios, who came upon the floor of the conference and were expected to pass on questions they knew nothing about until it was projected upon the floor of conference, and we should have some way of bringing this to the attention of the delegates and ex officios so they will have time to discuss it in their groups or meetings.

I therefore look forward to the time when our quorum work will be arranged even better than now and that we therefore will save very much of the time that has been wasted in the past, and that will give us much more time for instruction in regard to the various departments, departmental workers, and quorums themselves, and also enable us to round out and develop a much more definite work for the coming year.

If I were to attempt to characterize the spirit of this conference, I would say that it was distinctly the spirit of service, for I do not believe there is an individual who has attended the class work, the quorum meetings, and the special general conference and prayer meetings but what has felt a distinct impetus in their desire to spend and be spent in the service of their fellow men, and particularly the church; and I would by all means leave this message with you, as we close our conference, Let us go from this conference, each ex officio and delegate, department worker, determining that he will carry back to the Saints at home, and to the citizenry and those who are looking to him for service, the good things of conference, and forget the unpleasantness that might have occurred. And while we are carrying back the good things, we will find ourselves lifted up as we are lifting the Saints on to a higher plane of good feeling. And good feeling is essential for progress. May the Lord bless us as ex officios and delegates, and make us strongly determined to carry the good things home and forget the others which we have received at this conference, is my earnest prayer.

The entire conference joined in singing, "God be with you till we meet again," and the dismissal prayer of the conference was offered by President Elbert A. Smith. He said:

We are grateful to thee, our heavenly Father, for the peace and benediction of thy Holy Spirit that has been with us. We thank thee for the increase of fellowship and brotherly love, and though we may have differed in sentiment and opinion we go from the conference more united than before, and we pray that the spirit of service may be in our hearts during the year.

We would remember before thee those who labor as missionaries, some of them in foreign fields, some of them in the home field. Wilt thou bless them in their labors, bless their families in the hours of loneliness and separation, that there may be rendered this year by those who go out to preach the gospel a service of light and power greater than hitherto.

Be with those who shall guide as pastors, that they may gather up those who have been brought into the fold by the missionary arm of the church, and lead them forward, and feed them, educate them, and develop them in the character of Christ. Be with the members in the departments of the church, those who work together with the ministry, in the affairs of business, and labor, in the raising of the funds or finances that shall carry thy work forward.

We are grateful that we have been privileged to meet in such a large assembly, and pray that when we meet again it may be with an increase of numbers and under even better conditions. Help us to carry forward we pray; clear away from before our path the obstacles that would turn us aside. As we have already been led to pray, may the church not decrease our burdens, but give us an increase of strength to bear them.

If there are any in the assembly who for any reason feel depressed, or hurt, in any way, wilt thou pour into their hearts the balm of healing, that no one shall go from here at all in sadness, and wilt thou lead them forward so if they do not see the wisdom of thy providences now, they may become comforted with this knowledge; and those who rejoice may they direct and guide their rejoicing in the channels of service.

We have been stirred to the depths of our hearts at times, and realize that this emotion would not help us unless it shall find expression in deeds, and may these deeds be in harmony with thy will, and for the upbuilding of thy cause.

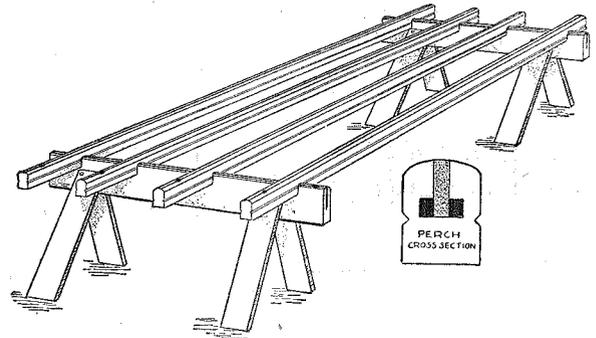

We are human, prone to err; wilt thou help us to do the greatest possible amount of good, and the least amount of injury to thy work. Guide and direct us, and be with us through this interconference period, and when we shall meet again, may thy sweet Spirit again attend us. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Institute in Des Moines District

The Des Moines District Sunday School Department will hold an institute on April 30 and May 1 at the new church in Des Moines, 712 East Twelfth. Brother F. M. McDowell will give the opening address on Friday evening at 8 o'clock, after which we will enjoy a social hour. Brother Charles B. Woodstock and Mrs. Woodstock will conduct classes and lectures. An expert in primary and beginner methods will meet with us. Class work starts at 8.30 Saturday morning and continues until Sunday evening. Come so that you may be helped in the task of developing the character of our boys and girls. William Robinson, district Sunday school superintendent.

Our Departed Ones

STEWART.—William T. Stewart was born November 6, 1859, at Mayfield, Ohio; baptized thirty-nine years ago by Elder Robert Davis, and was one of the oldest members of the Detroit Branch. Died at his home in Detroit, Michigan, March 13 after a short illness. Surviving are his wife, Rachel, three sons, three daughters, and one sister. Services were conducted by T. S. Williams.

REDCLIFF.—Thomas R. Redcliff was born May 26, 1838. He was baptized July 16, 1890, at Wenona Beach, Ontario, by J. J. Cornish. Died at Detroit, Michigan, March 15, 1874. Sister Ode passed away about two years ago. For five months Brother Ode has been in ill health. His death occurred February 19, 1927, at his home near Notus, Idaho. He passed to the beyond firm in the faith and full of the assurance of the glorious resurrection. Surviving him are five children, four sons, John, Henry, William, and Walter, and one daughter, Mrs. Mary Davis.

ODE.—Frederick Ode was born June 16, 1838, in Germany. He married Mary Quandt in 1865, and to them eight children were born. Was baptized by Elder John Lee, at North Freedom, Wisconsin, March 1, 1872. Ordained a teacher January 30, 1874. Sister Ode passed away about two years ago. For five months Brother Ode has been in ill health. His death occurred February 19, 1927, at his home near Notus, Idaho. He passed to the beyond firm in the faith and full of the assurance of the glorious resurrection. Surviving him are five children, four sons, John, Henry, William, and Walter, and one daughter, Mrs. Mary Davis.

Post Conference Comments

A building that has been abandoned is a desolate sight; its mission ended. A building that has not yet sheltered life holds promise. A building that is serving man acquires a meaning according to its functions: dance hall, library, market, cathedral, or railway station where trains come and go.

The Auditorium has taken on new meaning to thousands because through it flowed the spiritual life of the church in the biggest and one of the best conferences held during the history of the Reorganized Church.

It took some imagination three or four months ago to vision a general conference meeting in the basement of the Auditorium. 'Twas then but a forest of supporting props and pillars holding aloft the main floor. It could hardly be pictured as an assembly room, teeming with thousands of happy people. Later the smallpox epidemic put faith to a further test. Would people come only in dribbles, a "small passel" of them, in Missouri dialect, to look ridiculous in the great spaces provided and seated? Imagination, even when most optimistic, fell short of reality.

The conference was more adequately cared for than at any time since the church grew to present proportions; and yet there were times when numbers were turned away for lack of room. Evidently it will be quite possible to fill the upper auditorium when completed; indeed we may hope that the time will come when no building could be erected to accommodate the gathered Saints.

Whatever private opinion men may have held as to the wisdom of starting the building, or the time of its erection, it is now well under construction, and all will admit that it must be finished. Nor is it evidently too large, as judged by the conference just closed, which was not presumed to be an unusually large gathering. Special events like the centennial of 1930, if all goes well, may be expected to double and treble the late gathering of Saints, and at such times, given proper publicity, the outside world (nonmembers) may be expected to join us in great numbers to hear the spoken word. One thing is outstanding; namely the unanimity of the vote of the three General Conferences that ordered the building erected before work was started at all, and the vote of this later conference which ordered its construction continued. The people are committed, and few if any at any time voted in the negative.

Our conferences are becoming exceedingly varied in their activities and interests. From early morning until late at night the program was filled with well-arranged and well-executed enterprises. At the morning prayer meetings, under the direction of President F. M. Smith and Evangelist F. A. Smith, the church prayed together. At the study classes, which were numerous and well taught, covering a variety of studies, the church studied together. At the mass priesthood meetings, the ministry together prepared for service. In the immense gatherings to hear the spoken word, the church worshiped together. In council and quorum meetings and business sessions, the church transacted business together. At the Campus of a late afternoon, many played together. Together the church sang at the "Songfest" and the other periods of community singing so ably led by John Sheehy and others of our song leaders.

Certain features of the conference will be remembered because they were unique. The splendid rendition of "The Fool" gave the Saints an opportunity to see dramatized the experiences of a man who tried to apply literally to modern problems the teachings of Christ. It gave them objectively the benefits of a keen study of such problems. Closer home, perhaps, came the story of "The Restoration." This wonderful pageant caused to live again the great events of the Restoration and early church history. Under its spell we passed through all the sorrow of the "dark and cloudy day" and emerged with rejoicing into the light of the Reorganization. At the close, it drove home powerfully the lesson of the gospel of brotherly love and kindness.

But perhaps most unique among the services were the Easter morning services in the open air on the first floor of the Auditorium and the consecration service Monday forenoon preceding adjournment.

The Easter morning service we may hope was the beginning of an annual observance of like nature. It is estimated that nearly three thousand people met in the early morning "as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week." The main floor of the Auditorium bore aloft the greatest burden of humanity that it has yet borne, and reminded us again of the wisdom that all its foundations and pillars should go down to solid rock. Not only did it bear aloft the physical weight of so many persons, it upheld also those thousands of souls who believed in a risen Lord and whose moral foundations therefore went down to bedrock. The service was simple yet impressive, song, prayer, and the reading of the story of the resurrection.

The service of dedication and consecration of the people held Monday forenoon of the day of adjournment was one to treasure in memory. Out of the confusion of the closing scenes of a long and busy session of conference and joint council, and when many were fatigued, with nerves overwrought, and humanity seemed to have nothing more to offer, God came in and took the service in hand and smiled upon it from the very start. Those men chosen to positions of trust in the priesthood were set apart in ordination, four high priests and one seventy. The whole body of ministry stood to receive the prayer of blessing for the year's work, as uttered by President Frederick M. Smith. The great body of delegates and visiting members then stood in pledge of their intent to support the ministry in their prayers and with their substance, and were blessed to that work. President McDowell then exhorted all to move "forward to 1930 and beyond."

Unity and fellowship characterized the conference from the hour of meeting to the hour of adjournment. "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."—Psalms 133: 1.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

It is a fruitful joy. When men and women who are weak, sick, broken, bewildered, scourged, and crucified in heart and mind, can still set their wills firmly in an effort to quell the inward rebellion, and cooperate with heaven, then the angels can not leave them unblest. Then they can make the common cloth of their lives into good garments for the marriage supper of the Lamb. Then their eyes learn a glowing tenderness, their hands learn a sure way of healing, their lips learn to pronounce benedictions.—Marguerite Wilkinson.

Twenty-five Years of Progress

Two days after the close of General Conference brought an anniversary in the life of President Frederick M. Smith which it is likely many members of the Reorganized Church will be glad to remember. Church Historian S. A. Burgess on April 20 wrote the President a letter, from which I am going to extract the opening sentence and a few further words: "The calendar reminds us that twenty-five years ago today, April 20, 1902, you were ordained as one of the Presidency of the church, a counselor to your father, Joseph Smith. It is rather striking to remember the changes that have taken place in that time."

From this point Historian Burgess starts a review of the progress of the church which would be a matter of surprise to many. He begins with a glance at Graceland College, which he says at that time had assets amounting to thirty-eight thousand dollars, with an indebtedness of eighteen thousand dollars. It consisted of one building and a few acres of land adjoining. Since then it has added Marietta Hall, Patroness Hall (burned recently), the Farm, the central heating plant, Briggs Hall, Zimmermann Hall, Herald Hall, the Coliseum, a splendid farm known as the Banta farm, an endowment fund of $237,000 paid up, and other smaller assets which would make the assets of Graceland something like one half million dollars, or about twenty-five times as great in material wealth as it was in 1902.

One might go further into the progress of the cause of education in the church and say that while in 1902 there were very few members of the leading quorums and the ministry of the church who had received college training, now they are numerous, and there are at the present many who hold degrees of advanced scholarship. Brother Burgess says: "Twenty-five years ago but few in the church had a college education, but now there are doubtless hundreds who have taken their bachelor's degree, and there are probably more Ph. D.'s in the church now than there were college graduates twenty-five years ago."

The Herald Publishing House, another institution of church-wide interest, has manifold increased its activity and usefulness since 1902. In that year its net assets were $26,000; in 1927 they will show in excess of $160,000. The seat of operation has been changed from Lamoni, Iowa, the beautiful little southern Iowa country town which had sheltered and nurtured the business since 1881, to the center place, Independence, Missouri, within ten miles of the great Government post office building of Kansas City, Missouri. The combined subscription lists of the SAINTS' HERALD, Zion's Ensign, Autumn Leaves, Stepping Stones, and Zion's Hope are in excess of thirty-five thousand in number, about one third as many subscriptions as there are members of the church, which is something more than one hundred thousand, as compared with about forty-seven thousand members in 1902.

Material progress should also be noted in the church by calling attention to the change in value, capacity, and method which has come to the Independence Sanitarium since its establishment twenty years ago; to the progress in homes for the aged, for children, houses of worship, which have been very great; in general finances, which in 1902 showed assets of about $80,000, and at the present of $1,268,000, neither figures including college, homes, church edifices, or the like.

The building up of the organization by establishing stakes, and the further organization of the city of Zion, may be noted as both material and spiritual progress of far-reaching portent.

The past few years have seen the development of the idea of a building for the housing of the main activities of the general church organization, and 1926 saw the breaking of ground for its construction, with a fund of more than three fourths million dollars pledged, and of more than $480,000 collected for the purpose. The Auditorium overshadows our former building activities and is creating nationwide interest. The church's publicity man, John A. Gardner, says of this building: "Records at Kirtland Temple show that 10,000 tourists annually go twenty miles out of their way from Cleveland, Ohio, the nearest large city, to visit Kirtland Temple, one of the historic buildings of the early church. The Auditorium is built in Independence, ten miles from Kansas City, and located geographically at the very heart of America, and in Independence which city in itself has been the scene of many stirring and tragic events in the life of this church. One may only estimate how many added thousands will visit the Auditorium structure when completed and in this way know of the church, its purpose, teachings, belief, and practice. Time will tell and will, we believe, vindicate the assertion that in the course of time its annual register list of visitors will be ten times that of Kirtland Temple—time will tell."

Church membership has been casually mentioned. It is only fair to give this subject a little closer scrutiny. In 1902 the records of the church showed almost 47,000 names. Since then there has been an average of 3,360 baptisms a year, or a total of 84,000 baptisms in the quarter century. But this does not tell the whole story, for of recent years the aim of the Department of Statistics has been to cull from the records any names whose bearers had been lost to the contact of the church organization. Many names of Saints are taken from the record of communicants who have failed to keep the church informed as to their whereabouts, the authorities counting these as lost to the number of live and useful members. This makes the more than 100,000 of 1927 a more dependable list than the smaller, less closely scrutinized list of 1902.

But there are other matters of a more spiritual nature which are paramount in the progress of the church for the past quarter century, and we should consider them carefully. Since 1831 the church has been in charge of a commission of tremendous social and material and spiritual significance, the commission to institute stewardships among its people. The church has read of stewardships, has talked stewardships, has dreamed of stewardship, has made some feeble efforts to practically institute stewardships, but in the past few years special emphasis has been brought to bear upon the instruction of former revelations of God's will, and an amount of progress has been made in the education for and the establishment of stewardships which bids fair to eclipse all other lines of progress.

Thousands of acres of land in some of the finest agricultural districts have been purchased and as fast as can be are being put under operation of men who recognize and are keeping the law of consecrated stewardship to God. President Smith used these words in his address to the recent General Conference: "Nineteen hundred and thirty must be to this people a marking goal, not a resting place," and we believe that his dominating thought now and for some years past has been, that the law of stewardship shall be made operative, in order that God's will "may be done on earth as it is in heaven"; the message of light and salvation going thus from this people to the world by precept and by example.

Surely, though sometimes with halting step, the church has advanced during the quarter of a century just closed; more rapid has been the movement of recent months; and it is surely not a wrong application of a term when we say that the "hastening time" has already begun.

RICHARD J. LAMBERT.

Paul spent his whole life exploring the life of Jesus, and he said that however far he might go, there were heights and depths that he could not reach. Your business and mine, my brothers, is to explore the meaning of the life of Jesus, to see it deepen and grow, to understand it in our own situation, and day by day to follow it.—James Reid.

Death of Elder W. R. Pickering

On the morning of April 1, High Priest W. R. Pickering met the call to the other side, he being at that time confined, as he had been for sometime, at his home, Fifty-ninth and State Line, Kansas City, Missouri.

Brother Pickering was born December 31, 1849, at Herman, Missouri, being the son of an English father. He became a member of the Christian Church in early life, and on February 20, 1881, joined the Reorganized Church, being baptized by Elder Morris T. Short at Joplin, Missouri.

He was ordained a teacher by Elder J. D. Erwin March 4, 1893; an elder by Elder J. C. Chrestensen October 4, 1896; a high priest by President R. C. Evans May 6, 1900. He occupied for several years succeeding this as a member of the Standing High Council of the church, being respected by his colleagues for ability and integrity in all of his church activities, and having demonstrated his courage, energy, and faith through a long series of years of membership and occupancy as an official of the church.

The funeral service was conducted at the home on April 4, at two o'clock in the afternoon, Elder John W. Rushton, of Saint Louis, Missouri, being the officiating minister, many of the officers of the church being in attendance.

There is probably no one more intimately acquainted with the life of our departed brother than Bishop Ellis Short, who, in response to our solicitation has written:

Having been intimately acquainted with Brother William Russell Pickering during the last forty-five years of his splendid life, I feel that a brief synopsis of his life would be of interest to his many friends in the church.

It was during the year 1878 that Brother Pickering and myself formed a business partnership in Joplin, Missouri, in the mercantile business. At that time Brother Pickering was a member of the Christian Church, and I was a member of the Latter Day Saints Church. Consequently we had many interviews on the subject of religion, and I finally urged him to read the Book of Mormon, which I had presented to him. After a critical examination of it, he expressed complete confidence in its contents one day, to my surprise. About this time my brother, Morris T. Short, commenced a series of sermons in the city, and Brother Pickering seemed greatly interested. He made a request for baptism, and at this time his good wife was not altogether satisfied with the religious change that he had made, but being a man of quiet disposition, and of a persuasive nature, he soon convinced her of the divinity of our work. She was likewise baptized, and they both seemed to take great enjoyment in their new religious relationship.

Brother Pickering was a great investigator of what appeared to him to be the truth, and he was always ready to defend the principles of our work. He took great interest in reading history, both ancient and modern, qualifying himself to converse on almost any subject that was presented to him. He made friends of those with whom he came in contact.

It was during the early part of 1881 that we closed out our business and removed our headquarters to Seligman, Missouri. The Saint Louis and Sante Fe Railroad had just been completed in that country, which made a fine opening for the handling of forest production, so we dealt largely in railway construction material, fence posts, and telegraph poles. Brother Pickering moved his family to Eureka Springs, where he interested quite a number of people in our gospel work, his home being the headquarters of Heman C. Smith and I. N. Roberts, who were missionaries in that country at that time. They baptized quite a number of people in and around Eureka Springs.

About the year 1886, Brother and Sister Pickering moved to Springfield, Missouri, and at that time there was but one family of Saints living in the city. His great love for our work, and his zeal in propagation, led him to begin a well-directed and untiring effort to establish the church there.

The work moved slowly, but with an untiring zeal and without discouragement he built up and established the work permanently in Springfield, where there is a good congregation of Saints to this day. Brother Pickering's home was always open to care for the representatives of the church.

In 1890 our general business headquarters were established at Stanley, Choctaw Nation, where we did an extensive lumber and mercantile business, being licensed traders in that country, employing directly or indirectly four or five hundred men, but the gospel interest was not overlooked nor neglected, for we had good men, such as George Montague, J. D. Erwin, and Hiram Robinson, who labored diligently in that wild and almost unsettled country for the building up of a good cause which still lives, and in the space of seven or eight years two or three hundred people were baptized. E. D. Bailey, W. B. Toney, and I. N. White also did splendid work, and at one time seventy people were baptized within three months.

Later Brother Pickering moved his family to Kansas City, and business headquarters were established. The vast business of the Pickering Lumber Company was handled from the general offices at Kansas City, and Mr. Pickering's only son, W. A. Pickering, ably took charge of the entire business, never neglecting to lean heartily upon his father for direction and counsel, which he considered of very great value.

W. R. Pickering was a staunch supporter of the general church work, paying in thousands and tens of thousands for its support. He took great interest in the activities of the church in Kansas City and was always found at his post until his health failed him to the extent that he was deprived of this privilege.

In addition to the work outlined by Bishop Short, W. R. Pickering has been a liberal financial supporter of the work of the church, coming to the aid of some of its enterprises at opportune moments, and regularly supporting the missionary program during a long series of years. The church has lost by the death of W. R. Pickering, one whose love for truth was constant, and one who was held in high esteem wherever he moved.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

There are three marks of old age: First, the inability to get a new idea; second, the loss of play-instinct; third, the recoil at the notion of adventure. Men and women do not grow old who have creative brains, who love to play with children and youth, and who greet the future with a cheer.—John Ray Ewers.

Fiftieth Anniversary Maple Grove Branch

Sunday last the Maple Grove Branch observed its fiftieth anniversary at the Maple Grove Church four miles north of Stewartsville, Missouri. It was a busy day, with services all day long. President Elbert A. Smith preached at eleven o'clock and a service of "reminiscence" was held in the afternoon, the place of honor being given to Brother Temme Hinderks. A basket dinner was served in the open, and the sisters, particularly the German sisters of that neighborhood, upheld their traditional fame as splendid cooks. It was estimated that two hundred and fifty persons were in attendance, despite the cold and cloudy weather.

The branch was organized fifty years ago, with Temme Hinderks, then a young priest, as pastor. He served it as pastor in all some thirty-five years, his nephew, Mose Hinderks, now serving in that capacity. It was first known as the German DeKalb Branch, later as the German Stewartsville Branch, and still later by its present name, The Maple Grove Branch.

Brother Hinderks and other German brethren located near Stewartsville under the personal advice of President Joseph Smith, who advised them to locate there and build permanent homes, and by humble and godly lives to win the respect of the people and build up the work. The charge has been well kept. Against great odds they have won. The church is honored in all that country. Hundreds have been converted. The large percentage of clean, bright, devoted young people in the Sunday service promised well for the future. Further details of this interesting celebration will be furnished later for the news columns of the HERALD by the local correspondent.

Institute of Methods in Religious Education

We again call the attention of HERALD readers to the Institute of Methods in Religious Education which is to be held at Lamoni, Iowa, June 2 to 12.

The first days will be devoted to a combined program, most of the factors being connected with the commencement exercises and home-coming at Graceland. Of special interest will be the commencement program itself on Friday, June 3, President F. M. McDowell acting as speaker. The presentation of Shakespeare's Hamlet by College Players on Saturday, June 4, the dedication of Zimmermann Hall, with President F. M. Smith as speaker on Sunday, June 5, and the opening address of the Institute of Methods by Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, of Chicago, on the evening of June 5, are events in the program.

The institute proper will cover the period of June 6 to June 11 inclusive. During these days about fifteen courses of study will be offered, all of them dealing very definitely with methods in religious education and leadership. Among these courses are the following: Dramatization, storytelling, junior worship, leadership of boys, leadership of girls, parentcraft, methods in recreation, junior methods, administrative problems of the departments.

During the week of the institute, the evenings will be devoted to interesting and profitable entertainments and demonstrations, including a pageant illustrating the girls' organizations of the church. A play and a presentation of the play, "The servant in the house," by Lamoni Department of Women, and a banquet for the institute faculty and students.

The closing sessions of the institute will be held Sunday, June 12, at 10 a. m. At this time certificates will be presented to those who are enrolled in the institute.

There is almost universal feeling among departmental workers that the time has come for intensified preparation. We all feel that inspiration and enthusiasm are not sufficient. We must learn how to perform our tasks efficiently. We must have technically trained teachers and leaders. This is the definite purpose of the Institute of Methods.

The enrollment fee will be $3 for the entire period. Board and room can be secured at the college for $1 per day. Further information can be secured from F. M. McDowell, Box 255, Independence, Missouri, or C. B. Woodstock, Lamoni, Iowa.

K L D S Broadcasting Under New Temporary Permit

The Federal Radio Commission has issued K L D S a temporary permit, enabling the station to continue the use of the wave length of 440.9 meters (680 Kilo-Cycles), with a power output of 1500 watts. Of the seven hundred stations on the air, until a few days ago, about five hundred have received temporary permits. Many stations have been required to change their wave length and decrease power. Among the stations that have been required to use low waves are several that have been interfering with K L D S. A Kansas station, which has been occupying the lower adjacent wave to 440.9 meters, must now use 216 meters.

K L D S listeners should experience less interference in receiving K L D S than heretofore. All are invited to write the K L D S office as to the results obtained under the present classification.

The Story of the Resurrection

I. THE EMOTIONAL APPEAL

In the end of the sabbath as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulcher. And behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it. His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow: And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men. And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you. And they departed quickly from the sepulcher with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word. And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him.—Saint Matthew, 28: 1-9.

In the first chapter of the Second Epistle of Paul to Timothy, we read that our Savior Jesus Christ "hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

Almost inevitably the story of the resurrection of our Lord comes to our attention at this hour. That story carries with it an appeal that is both emotional and intellectual. Quite naturally we react, first of all, and usually most deeply, to the emotional appeal. Indeed, there may be some who never do see the intellectual appeal; but it does come to those who will see it—a deep intellectual appeal that will shape and color their whole lives if they will permit it to do so.

This morning I would like to consider first the appeal made to the emotions, or the emotional appeal, because that is first; and that procedure will permit me to consider the intellectual appeal last, and I trust it will remain with us to shape our lives.

Death is the ancient enemy of man. In fact, he has been referred to as the King of Terrors. He has shadowed all men in all times and in every country. At the outskirts of every little village, there is the City of the Dead constantly to remind us of that which lies before us all. It may be that sometimes in our thoughtless moments we jest about death and laugh about it; but when death really draws near to us, it is no jesting matter; and when death comes to those whom we love more than we do ourselves, then we realize why he is called the King of Terrors. When we witness the long and slow decline, when we see the suffering, the struggle for breath, the cold sweat, when there comes the last dreadful moment and the spirit is rent from the body and the inanimate clay falls back into its long repose and we realize that never, never, never in this world will those beloved lips ever speak to us another word, and that never again in this world will those eyes look into ours, those hands that have served us so well will never, never again caress us; and when we are compelled by our sense of loyalty, as well as custom, to follow that form to the grave and we see it covered with earth; we return to the empty house, desolate, then it is that we begin to ask in the agony of our souls, "Is there any power anywhere that will roll the stone from the tomb?" We begin to look about us to see if there is anywhere a star of hope.

Even Ingersoll, avowed infidel, said, "In the hour of death, hope sees a shining star." The only star in the firmament in that hour is the Bright and Morning Star. When Jesus came, the angels sang, "We bring you glad tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people."

Hence it is that Easter comes to us with an emotional appeal. And perhaps we can realize the emotional appeal that came to the disciples on that first Sunday morning. Jesus came down and took upon himself flesh, and it was known when he did so that he must die; and in the end he died a death so awful and so spectacular that it has attracted the attention of all the world. His suffering was cut short only by the fact that he had already suffered so much that he had been brought to the breaking point of his endurance. For three long years he had served strenuously, being night and day in danger of his enemies, and thronged about by the multitude so that he could obtain respite only by going up onto the mountain or out upon the sea. He was not sustained with proper food. On occasion he went into the fields and shelled the corn or barley and ate it raw. He had not adequate place to rest, and on one occasion, wearied probably to the point of exhaustion, he seemed almost to envy the foxes and the birds, safe in their primitive shelter, and by contrast declared the Son of Man had no place to lay his head.

Finally there came the last week, the week of passion, with its terrible emotional strain, ending in the garden of Gethsemane, where he must have been torn to the very depths of his soul. Immediately following that experience, without rest and without refreshment, he was carried away and hurried from court to court, three times put on trial for his life, then scourged with the terrible leathern whip weighted with iron or leaden weights that tore into his flesh, a punishment that frequently of itself caused death; finally he came to Calvary too broken to carry his cross, and they stretched him out on the recumbent cross, and, holding forcibly his hands in place, put the point of the great iron spike into his palm, and drove it through into the wood. And then a spike was driven through each foot. After which they heaved aloft the cross and dropped it into the hole that had been prepared for it. So the Son of Man was lifted up.

It is terrible to picture the hours of agony, hours of thirst and of fever, and of unceasing pain, with no possibility of getting into any position that would relieve the strain upon the torn and inflamed and poisoned wounds that held him aloft. That was the spectacle the disciples saw on that occasion. Farrar describes the tragedy of crucifixion as follows:

Death by crucifixion seems to include all that pain and death can have of horrible and ghastly—dizziness, cramp, thirst, starvation, sleeplessness, traumatic fever, tetanus, publicity of shame, long continuance of torment, horror of anticipation, mortification of untended wounds—all intensified just up to the point at which they can be endured at all, but all stopping just short of the point which would give to the sufferer the relief of unconsciousness. The unnatural position made every movement painful; the lacerated veins and crushed tendons throbbed with incessant anguish; the wounds, inflamed by exposure, gradually gangrened; the arteries—especially of the head and stomach—become swollen and oppressed with surcharged blood; and while each variety of misery went on gradually increasing, there was added to them the intollerable pang of burning and raging thirst; and all these physical complications caused an internal excitement and anxiety, which made the prospect of death itself—of death, the awful unknown enemy, at whose approach man usually shudders most—bear the aspect of a delicious and exquisite release.

Such was the death to which Christ was doomed; and though for him it was happily shortened by all that he had previously endured, yet he hung from soon after noon until nearly sunset, before "he gave up his soul to death."—The Life of Christ, by Farrar, vol. 2, p. 499.

And finally when, as a merciful relief, death came to him, the authority of Rome, represented by the Roman soldiers, thrust a spear into his side and up into his heart, so all knew he was dead. And then he was carried away and laid in the solid rock tomb, and a great boulder was rolled against the door, and by the authority of Rome a seal was set upon it; and the Roman guards, who dared not betray their trust for their lives, sat there day and night to see that the body could not come forth.

But a power greater than Rome came and rolled the rock away; and when those women on that early Sunday morning came and found it rolled away, and heard the message, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is risen. Go and tell the disciples," we can realize with what joy they ran to tell them, and with what a delirium of joy Peter and John ran that they might see that empty tomb.

That is why the story of Easter comes to us with a powerful emotional appeal. We realize how joyous they were. Hope had absolutely died in their hearts; and in that darkest hour on the third day, when they still wept and mourned, there came the message, "Fear not, for he lives!" and the message that comes to us is, "We bring you glad tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people." We share in that realization. That is why there is joy on earth today.

Thoughts on Healing.—No. III

BY FRED GREGORY

DRUG HEALING

That the faith-healing system is regarded as unsatisfactory and unworthy of indorsement in the eyes of the public is proved by the number of systems now in vogue. These systems vary in popularity. All do not use drugs. Indeed the later systems are very much opposed to the use of drugs. Consequently there is a great difference of opinion and, considering the number and semi-popularity of non-drug using systems which are now operating, one is led to think that the drug system is rapidly losing its grip. However, at present the drug doctor is still going strong.

There are two systems of drugging. The allopathic physician (one most commonly employed) has the largest practice. Homeopathic physicians are not as numerous. They contend that by the wholesale use of injurious drugs and empirical practice the allopath practitioner has sent a goodly number of his trusting patients into "kingdom come." In reply the allopath declares the homeopath to be a humbug, and his practice a sham, while his highly potentized globules are nothing but childish fancy. They are directly opposite in theory and practice, hence the antagonism.

Another likely reason the allopath has for detesting the homeopath is the fact that homeopathy is an attempt to correct the multitudinous errors of allopathy. Doctor Samuel Hahneman is credited with originating the homeopathic theory. He practiced as an allopathic physician for years. His experience and observations caused him to become dissatisfied with the system. He saw inconsistency and error written everywhere, from the beginning to the end of allopathic practice. To him the whole theory was a mistake, and thus homeopathy was born. Both schools use drugs, but not in the same way nor do they use the same drugs for a like purpose. The old time allopath mixed his drugs freely, without regard to combinations. The first homeopaths invariably used their drugs separately. The modern allopath has cut down largely on the mixture, while the modern homeopath tends to allow a mixture. In this respect the two are approaching each other, but otherwise they are very far apart. Both claim remarkable cures and those reputed cures spur them on in their practice. There is no doubt one would utterly destroy the other if the opportunity presented itself.

After all, we wonder how much drug enters into the cure in either system. In a stated case each would treat the patient from an opposite point of view. In prescribing a remedy the allopath selects a medicine contrary in its action to that of the disease, whereas the homeopath selects a drug similar in action to that of the symptom. The first logically starts a fight in the body between the drug action and the disease action, and the drug action must necessarily be stronger than the disease action in order to win or cure. "She suffered many things of many physicians" tells the story of the struggle. The homeopaths with pride point to the fact that per their method no such an upheaval in the body takes place. The drug action being similar to the disease action, the two blend without loss of vitality, and the drug action in passing off carries with it more or less of the disease action, thus effecting a cure. With the allopath the drug is strong and the dose is large. With the homeopath the drug is reduced to practically nothing and the dose is exceedingly small. In fact, each condemns the other's practice, yet each in treating an identical case would claim a cure.

The query is, What part does the drug play in the cure under such opposite uses? Is it the drug or is it the faith of the patient in the physician regardless of the drug? Evidently the latter, as the following shows: Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, the founder of Christian Science was at one time a regular medical practitioner of the homeopathic school. She speaks of her experiences as such in the following words: "The author's medical researches and experiments had prepared her thought for the metaphysics of Christian Science. Every material dependence had failed her in the search for truth; and she can now understand why, and can see the means by which mortals are divinely driven to a spiritual source for health and happiness. . . . A case of dropsy given up by the faculty fell into my hands. It was a terrible case. Tapping had been employed, and yet as she lay in her bed the patient looked like a barrel. I prescribed the fourth attenuation of argentum nitratum with occasional doses of a high attention of sulphuris. She improved perceptibly. Believing then in the ordinary theories of medical practice and learning that her former physician had prescribed these remedies, I began to fear an aggravation of symptoms from their prolonged use, and told the patient so; but she was unwilling to give up the medicine while she was recovering. It then occurred to me to give her unmedicated pellets and watch the result. I did so, and she continued to gain. Finally she said she would give up her medicine for one day and risk the effects. After trying this, she informed me that she could get along two days without globules, but on the third day she again suffered and was relieved by taking them. She went on in this way, taking the unmedicated pellets—and receiving occasional visits from me—but employing no other means, and she was cured."—Science and Health, pages 152-156.

Hahneman, the founder of homeopathy, and his stanch followers, claim the higher the attenuation of the drug the greater its power, and deny point blank the idea of homeopathy is in any sense a faith cure. The experiment of Doctor Mary Baker Eddy, however, proves to the contrary. It is said good doctors allow that a cure is about one part medicine, one part nature, and one part faith, but the experience of Mrs. Eddy shows the "one part medicine" can be left out altogether, providing the patient doesn't know it, and the cure is effected just the same. Even Doctor Hahneman admits of genuine healing outside of drugs. Hear him: "A prophetic dream, a superstition, or the solemn prophecy that death would assuredly occur on a certain day, or at a certain hour, has not infrequently caused the appearance of every sign of approaching and increasing fatal disease, or of death itself at the designated time—a result which would have been impossible without the occurrence of an internal change corresponding with the externally visible condition. In the same way, all morbid signs of approaching death were frequently dispelled, and health suddenly restored, by an artful deception or convincing denial." Hahneman likewise omits the "one part medicine," when he allows a something in the mentality which "not infrequently" produces "fatal disease," even "death itself"; also when that same something dispels all signs of "approaching death" as well as restoring "health suddenly." Such an admission confirms Doctor Eddy's "artful deception" and supports the argument of Christian Scientists in claiming cures through "convincing denial."

A recent article states, "Any psychologist can tell you that an expensive medicine with a venerable name will prove more potent than it could hope to be if it had a simple name and were sold for a nickel."

Once again, we see the result of "artful deception." A "venerable name" and an "expensive" drug baits the credulous mind, and from thence the drug derives its potency. No wonder physicians and nurses make the least satisfactory patients. They know too much. And since it is admitted this Great Within can produce disease and heal disease of itself, why not appeal directly thereto, as the great Teacher urges, and learn to give this force proper direction? Drugs are acknowledged superfluous. They detract from God and nature. We are ever depending upon God. Why forsake him in the hour of sickness, trying to imagine that his presence is couched in some mysterious drug. As Frappart said, so we opine, "Medicine poor science! Doctors poor philosophers! Patients poor victims!"

Personal Service

BY ELDER EDMUND M. BROWN

Sermon at Providence Branch, Rhode Island.

Scripture Reading, Matthew 25: 34-45

Two Texts

For one text I have selected verse 40 of our scripture reading: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." And for the other text I've selected something that is not in the Bible, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants; but your speaker thinks so much of this text he has it in his home, framed. They are the words of Edward Courtney, Earl of Devonshire: "I shall pass through this world but once. Any good thing that I can do, or any kindness that I can show any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again." Both of these texts imply personal service.

Personal Service

One of our ministers with many misgivings asked a rich and honored man if he had ever desired baptism. Courteously the man said "Yes," and allowed the conversation to be continued. At the close of the conversation our minister said, "I hope you will not consider me impertinent in speaking so abruptly on this subject." Grasping both hands, with tears in his eyes, he answered: "Don't ever hesitate to speak to any man about his soul's salvation. I've been longing for twenty years to have some one speak to me as you have just now, and I believe there are thousands of others in this city just like me, carrying a great burden on their souls, not courageous or humble enough to seek instruction, yet would willingly receive the gospel if shown the true way." It is only by just such personal service as this brother gave, that we individually will be able to win souls to the true way.

How to Win Souls to the True Way

Jesus tells us in John 9: 4: "Work while it is yet day. The night cometh, when no man can work." Many men were imprisoned in a coal mine, as the result of an accident. Great crowds started to work before night came to try to save the men. An old gray-haired man came running, and seizing a shovel began to work with the strength of ten men. Some one offered to relieve the old man. "Get out of my way!" he shouted; "I have two boys down there!" Nothing but that kind of love for others will ever help in saving them.

Five Things Needed by Each Personal Worker

First, a converted heart; Second, A love for souls; Third, A prayerful life; Fourth, A scripture-stored mind; and Fifth (last, but most important), The Spirit of God. These five attributes, especially the last (the greatest) and the second, will eliminate all selfishness on our part and cause us to realize that we

Can Not Be Saved Alone

One of our priests had this spiritual dream: He had climbed the ladder that reached from earth to heaven. Expectantly he knocked upon the door. Some one asked, "Who is there?" Proudly he gave his name. "Who is with you?" came the voice. "No one," answered our priest; "I am alone." "Sorry," said the angel, "but we are instructed never to open these gates for a single individual." And, crestfallen and disappointed, he descended to earth. There used to be an idea in the world that to be religious, one must get away from the crowd, get away from society, go into seclusion, and crucify the flesh. Simeon, the founder of the "Pillar Saints," for a long time lived in a monastery; but finally he built a tower seventy-five feet high and four feet in diameter. He went on top of this pillar and spent thirty years, praying and singing, and singing and praying, until his teeth rattled out; his hearing left him, and finally his eyesight. That was his idea of personal service in serving God—crucifying the flesh to be spiritually developed. The result was that he died a miserable death, having done no good in the world, either for others or for himself.

Practical Personal Service

Did you ever stop to think that service to others will interest others in your religion—especially in your church, which is our church? A member of our church found a family in her neighborhood in destitute circumstances. There were several children in the family. The father was addicted to drink. The burden of the home fell upon the shoulders of the mother. This good sister, observing these conditions, went to the home one day with a cheerful countenance and a basket of vegetables upon her arm. She won the friendship and love of those people.

One day, when she thought it an opportune time, she asked one of the girls if she would go to Sunday school with her. She consented and liked it very much; but when she went home she began to cry. Her mother asked her what was the matter, and she said, "I wish we were Christians. Those people are so happy and seem to have something we haven't." That made the mother very sad. The next time the sister came she asked her all about the church, so she had an opportunity to tell the gospel story to that family. The mother and the other children went to Sunday school and to church. In time it made such a change in the home that the father felt it, and became ashamed of his life; and in time he, too, after overcoming the drink habit, came into the church with his whole family. That was the result of doing some personal service in the neighborhood. That is a duty and a pleasure that devolves upon all of us. If, then, we are going to answer the call of our church, the church wants us to do that kind of personal service.

Personal Touch

That is the kind of service that has what is sometimes called the personal touch. Providence, Rhode Island, is noted for its jewelry. A friend of a member of a Providence firm was being shown some beautiful and valuable precious stones. Among them he noticed one that was dull, and pointing to it said: "That stone has no beauty at all." But the owner put it in the hollow of his hand, and shut his hand tight. In a few moments he opened his hand—and what a surprise! The stone gleamed with all the splendor of the rainbow. "What happened?" asked the astonished man. His friend answered: "This is an opal. It is what we term the sympathetic jewel. It only needs to be gripped with the human hand to bring out its wonderful beauty." And so it is with many of us; many of us need the friendly grip of a human hand, and especially is this true with some of our boys and girls. Many make the mistake of saying they are bad boys or girls, when in reality they are only active, energetic, and perhaps mischievous, with misdirected effort or energy.

Some have said that such boys and girls are incorrigible; and that reminds me of a boy that was in my first Sunday school class, who they said was incorrigible. I'll admit I was rather reluctant about accepting the class when I thought of that boy being in it, and I only taught the class twice when I realized that if I were going to make a success it would be necessary to win that particular boy. After class I called him to one side, and placing my arm about his shoulder I said, calling him by name, "I've been praying for you this past week, and I'm going to ask you to pray with me this week, that God will help you to be a good boy." Tears started in his eyes; he didn't think I loved him enough to pray for him, for he told me that no one had ever talked kindly like that to him before. He said everybody had told him he was a bad boy, so he thought he must live up to his reputation. It is very gratifying to state that this boy from then on not only gave me no more trouble in the class, but, to the contrary, he really was the best boy in the class. He was won by the personal touch. And I'm thankful to God that he helped me to save that boy, for now he is serving God very faithfully in another branch of our church.

Saved to Serve

In nearly every large city there are places that I call "automobile graveyards." You've all seen those parts of old autos piled together in heaps. Now there are many parts of autos in those piles that have been saved, but I believe many will never be used, or made to serve any useful purpose again. Some people's idea is to see how many persons they can get to join the church, whether they are truly converted or not; but any church where this idea prevails will be practically nothing more than a heap of wheels, nuts, and bolts, that are of no use, because they were not saved to serve. "Saved to serve!" should be our motto, but it implies more than some are disposed to take into consideration. It means we must train people as well as save them. It is not enough that we induce our men, women, boys, and girls to be good; we must see that they are put in the way of becoming good for something.

Remember: "We shall pass through this world but once. Any good that we can do, or any kindness that we can show to any human being, let us do it now. Let us not defer or neglect it, for we shall not pass this way again."

A Proper Question

While riding on a train, a young lady told her dad that she was very indignant with our minister because he had taken her to task for dancing. "Why! he even asked me if I was sure I was in the 'straight and narrow' path," she said. "He had no right to talk like that to me—it made me feel dreadful." "No," said her dad, "what did I hear the brakeman ask you when he saw you hesitate as you were about to board this train?" "Why, he only asked me where I was going." "You didn't mind that at all, did you? You knew that he asked to save you from a possible mistake. Our minister had the same motive, only the case is a great deal more serious." This young lady is only one of many who consider it an intrusion when some one is concerned about their lack of concern. But there is one thing worth noting, whenever questions like this disturb us; it is conclusive proof that we are shutting our eyes to danger, and we may be on the wrong road. Although we are sincere, we may be mistaken at times. We must be sure we are not on

The Wrong Road

Out west two engines tugged a train in a wild blizzard. On that train was a woman with a small baby. She was very anxious to get off at a flag station where they only stop the train by request. The brakeman called the station as the train neared the place. The woman said, "Don't forget me," and he replied, "All right." A passenger said, "Lady, I'll see that the brakeman doesn't forget you. Don't worry." And a little later he said: "Here's your station." She stepped off the train into that howling storm. . . . The train had gone on about three fourths of a mile when the brakeman came in and asked, "Where is that woman with the baby?" The traveler said, "She got out." "My God! My God! Then she's gone to her death; we only stopped back yonder because of engine trouble." They called for volunteers, went back to look for her, and after searching hours finally found her—dead—covered with snow, with the little babe also dead, that she had lovingly folded to her breast. She had followed the man's direction, but he was wrong. How great that man's responsibility! Greater still that of the preacher who, instead of encouraging us to keep in God's way of salvation, obscures the way and directs us to another way that is wrong, and will result in eternal darkness! As Paul admonished the Roman saints: "Every one of us shall give account of himself to God. Let us not judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that ye put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in your brother's way." And as the same beloved apostle wrote to the Galatian saints: "But let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. Therefore as we have opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

Thou Art the Finger

One of our members was praying for a certain member of the household of faith, who he felt was going on the wrong road. After this manner he prayed: "O Lord, touch him with thy finger!" The petition was repeated frequently, with great earnestness, when he seemed to hear a voice say to say to him: "Thou art the finger. Hast thou ever touched thy brother? Hast thou spoken a single word to him on this question? Go thou, and touch thy brother, and thy prayer shall be answered." It was a voice from above, and God's servant arose from his knees self-condemned. He had known for a long time his brother was slipping, yet he had not uttered a word of warning. Hundreds of opportunities had come and gone, but the vital issue had been set aside for such topics as the weather, the latest news, etc. His first duty in personal service, as a brother in Christ, had been left undone. Let me repeat, please: "Let us do good unto all, especially unto the household of faith."

Doing Good

One of our church physicians visited one of our good Latter Day Saint members, who, like others I've heard of, was frequently troubled with imaginary diseases. The doctor was frequently called in, until at last he said, "Sister, I'll give you a prescription which I am certain will make a healthy woman of you if you will follow it. She replied, "I shall be so glad to have good health, I'll promise faithfully to follow it." "Then," said the doctor, "I'll send you the prescription this evening." When it arrived, it consisted of these words: "Do good to somebody each day." That very night she roused herself to relieve a poor neighbor, and then daily sought others who needed her help; and this sister, who had been so constantly desponding and nervous, became a healthy, cheerful woman; for she had an object to live for, and found joy in rendering personal service to others. What does James 1: 27 say? "Pure religion and undefiled before God is to visit the widow and the orphan," etc. And this same thought has been beautifully expressed by our dearly beloved present-day poet, Edgar Guest, in this poem, entitled:

Personal Service

If you put yourself aside,
And for the moment just forget
The profit or the touch of pride,
Or e'en the added weight of debt,
And for another smooth the way,
You will have lived a glorious day.

If you can give what you may need,
Because another needs it more;
And never your advantage heed,
Or count the cost of giving o'er:
That personal service shall ever be
Your greatest earthly victory.

If you can learn to think in terms
Of service rather than of gain;

Can grasp Christ's teachings, which affirm
That worldly pomp and pride are vain,
Then you shall find beyond all doubt
Peace lies within and not without.

If to your neighbors you can be
All you would have them be to you;
Can shut your eyes to self, yet see
How much for them your life can do,
You'll find in many a grateful smile
Proof that your personal service has been worth while.

This will result in spiritual activity on our part. In southern lands the fireflies are most brilliant, but they have this peculiarity; they never shine at all except when rapidly flying; then their brilliancy can be seen afar. So it is with us. When we are active; doing some good act, especially for others, we are advancing. Going forward in the gospel and toward God, our light shines out, and all men see it; but when we stand still, it dies.

Something to Do

But speaking of doing something reminds me of a humorous incident that occurred recently in our church. Our church officers asked the wife of a man who had left the church and joined a lodge, why he had left the church. She replied: "Well, they never gave my husband anything to do at church, but when he joined the lodge they put a helmet on his head, a sword in his hand, and made him keeper of the Royal and Ancient Arch, and now he's there every night." While this is a humorous incident, yet there is a good point in it for some of us, especially those of us who are leaders in the different departments of our several church activities. Some people must have something to do to hold their interest.

Busy or Idle

1 Chronicles 28:10: "Take heed now: for the Lord hath chosen thee to build his house: be strong and do it." And God has told us in Doctrine and Covenants we are not only to build his house, but it is our privilege to help in the building up of Zion. But he also tells us in latter-day revelation that there is no place for the idler in Zion. It is a trite saying, "An idle mind is the Devil's workshop." It is Satan that meets with us when we are idle. The angels appeared to the shepherds while they were keeping watch over their flocks. Matthew was called at the receipt of custom. Peter and Andrew his brother were fishing. James, the son of Zebedee, and John, his brother, were mending their nets when called by Jesus. Each was doing, not evading his duty.

Evading His Duty

Two great missionaries were discussing the rapid spread of Mohammedanism in Western Africa, as compared with Christianity. "It's just this," said one; "every Mohammedan regards himself as a missionary, but the majority of Christians, trying to evade their duty, think and say it is the other man's work." What we need is more personal workers like Samuel of old, who was willing to render personal service, as we find recorded in Samuel 3:4: "The Lord called Samuel: and he answered, Here am I."

I'll Send a Hand

One of our evangelists urged a brother out west, who was a farmer, to come out and help him in a special series of meetings. He consented, but when leaving said (in farm-land parlance): "If I don't come, I'll send a hand." Ah! this suits many. Here is a brother, who has plenty of money, but is disposed to take life easy. He says, "You do the work; I'll give money—I'll send a hand." Here is a sister, with plenty of time at her command, but when urged to visit the poor and sick, she says, "Oh, I do not exactly like to go myself; I'll subscribe—I'll send a hand." Many parents turn over to the Sunday-school teachers the work of teaching their children to learn to pray, saying, "It's a trial to me; a cross, but you do it—I'll send a hand." Then there is the brother, whose son God has called to be a missionary, but fatherly pride choosing for that son a lucrative position says, "I can't give up my son, but I'll give money to educate some others for the ministry. I'll pray for God's work to grow; I'll help in this way—I'll send a hand." And so the excuses go on, and on, forgetful of the fact that God never yet delegated any man or woman to do another's work; but everywhere and in every way God calls for personal service. God calls, and only asks us to give as recorded in 2 Corinthians 9:7. God calls: "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." Usually when this text is used, the preacher is asking for a financial contribution; but God asks not only our gold and silver, he asks for the gold and silver of our intelligence, our social position, our intellectual ability, our refined character; he asks for the gold and silver of our individual personal service, and we should be willing to give it cheerfully.

Individual Effort

As that man that God said was perfect: "Did not I weep for him that was in trouble? was not my soul grieved for him?" We must not forget individual souls. There is a great rage nowadays for large congregations, prominent work, and big undertakings. But let us not forget individual souls. With the assistance of your imaginations, I'd like these bottles before me to represent the different kinds of personal workers we have in our church. You'll notice some are fat, thin, small, short, thick, and medium. This one is blue; sometimes we get "blue," don't we? This one is green. Did you ever get "green" with envy or rage? Now this red bottle—some of us get "red" with anger. And sometimes we even are "yellow" and quit on the job when things don't go just our way. Now listen, please: If I dash water over these "personal-worker bottles," a drop might get into one, and a drop into another. But if I take one and pour into it, you see I fill it up to the brim. And so it is with personal souls (and there is a personality in the application of this illustration that can not be overestimated), if we throw out hints and "knocks" like these drops of water, one might get in, or it might not; but if we speak face to face with an individual—in an honest, manly way—is it not the best way to try to reclaim the disinterested, and encourage the luke warm and indifferent?

God's Kingdom

"Man loses his capacity to serve God and his kingdom when he can no longer serve his fellow men." A minister visited a school and was called upon to speak. At the close of his speech, desiring to test the brilliancy of the pupils he held up an orange and asked: "To what kingdom does this belong?" A little girl replied, "To the vegetable kingdom." He then held up a coin and asked: "And to what kingdom does this belong?" "To the mineral kingdom, sir," said the same little girl. "Fine! Now to what kingdom do I belong, then?" he asked. The girl blushed deeply; she did not like to say, "The animal kingdom," for she thought that would offend a minister. Just then it flashed into her mind that "God made man in his own image," and looking up courageously she said, "To God's kingdom, sir."

Our elder was deeply moved by that unexpected answer. A tear rolled down his cheek. He placed his hand on the child's head and said very devoutly: "God grant that by my personal service to you, God, and others, I may be accounted worthy of that kingdom!"

So we must ever remember, it is by our personal service to each other that we will be accounted worthy of an abundant entrance into the kingdom of God; for Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Therefore, let us always remember: "We shall pass through this world but once. Any good thing therefore that we can do, or any kindness that we can show any human being, let us do it now. Let us not defer it or neglect it, for we shall not pass this way again."

OF GENERAL INTEREST

The Mortgage Blanket on the United States

BY AARON HARDY ULM

Everyone is familiar with the plot, one that rarely fails the writer of the story or play. The villain holds the mortgage; the owner of the home, farm, or business can not meet the interest or principal when due. The villain stands on his legal rights and gets what he wants—be it the hand of the girl, the crushing of a competitor, mere revenge, or only the property—unless the hero, with cash in hand, arrives in the nick of time and saves the situation.

Thus is reflected traditional Anglo-Saxon fear of mortgages. It runs through the literature of the race, from Chaucer to Saint John Ervine.

Yet the theme no doubt is exaggerated in stories and plays. For a mortgage is sometimes a means to a happy end, as when it aids in buying a home or financing a business that succeeds. And mortgage holders—though rated, not without warrant, as the most hard-hearted of creditors, who throw poor widows into the street or boot sick men off farms or out of stores—are exceptions in real life.

Moreover, the "villain" may be on the other side. That is, the one who takes advantage of the poor widow or the man in distress can be an "owner" instead of only the owner of a mortgage. This is particularly true now.

There seems to be under way a change in the entire setting of the instrument which imaginative writers have ranked—as a device for picturing callous cupidity—with the ancient symbol of the ubiquitous pawnbroker.

"He owns a lot of mortgages," used to be the highest assurance as to one's financial security. Conversely, "Everything he owns is mortgaged to the limit" was the extreme expression of doubt and sometimes pity.

Now, owners of mortgages may be as deserving of solicitude as owners. The number of persons who owe mortgages has increased tremendously, but the number of those who hold them has grown much more remarkably.

These changes have run along with the phenomenal growth and expansion of the mortgaging practice and of new methods by which this is made possible. The sum of all is among the forefront phenomena of the times.

The development has been so rapid that any figures relating to it which can be presented are far from complete. Some, however, are illustrative. A concern that carries on a nation-wide traffic in "mortgage paper" says in a recent advertisement that "in 1925 city real estate bonds purchased by investors was close to one billion dollars." A more authoritative estimate is seven hundred million dollars.

Real estate bond is one of many new, or newly popularized, synonyms for mortgage. It is stated authentically that in 1919 only $50,000,000 worth of real estate bonds were sold in this country, and in 1921 the aggregate was even smaller.

Only a small proportion of the "close to one billion dollars" worth of mortgages floated last year are held by persons in any way resembling the mortgage holder of traditional type. The holders are more like the poor widows and men in distress whom tradition puts on the other side; for the greater proportion of these mortgages were taken by multitudes of small investors scattered over the country—in truth, over the world. One concern claims to have sold them in thirty-three foreign countries as well as in every State in the Union. The operations of probably a dozen others are equally extensive, and there are scores of lesser ones.

They, together with big operations who deal in the industrial type of mortgage, have created a new setting for the bond for debt on property. Its traditional setting gives to mortgages the attribute of acute necessity; that is, it used to be taken for granted that mortgages were assumed as last resorts only, and with fixed intent to extinguish them as quickly as possible. They were accepted only on iron-clad terms that precluded all anticipative risks of loss.

Now mortgages are being treated more or less generally as fixtures, like the machinery in a manufacturing plant or the furnace in the cellar of a home. No longer does the average mortgager think of how little of that form of indebtedness he can get along with. Rather he assumes as much as he can, and with little thought of extinguishment.

The result is a tendency toward mortgaging to the limit everything that is pledgeable for the purpose. And this last is no longer only what is tangible and enduring, but frequently partakes of gambling on future expectation.

"All kinds of private businesses are being bought up . . . and new corporations are being substituted for the old, in order that the purchase price (and more) may be recovered by sale of shares to the general public," says Professor W. Z. Ripley, of Harvard University, who recently brought the new tendency prominently to public attention. "They (the shares) are really bonds. And, instead, as formerly, of being limited to two thirds of the tangible assets, no limit is now set, except the powers of absorption of the investment public."

Like practice undoubtedly is being employed in the field of pure real estate. The practice in all fields is made possible by exquisite machinery perfected largely in recent years for massing a growing proportion of the savings of the country for investment in mortgages.

These developments have run along with the rise in the general well-being of the Nation; they are among the consequences of prosperity. What their further consequences may be is yet to be demonstrated, as all the practices marking the change are virtually new ones and the past throws but little light upon them.

One thing these new practices presage is a national mortgage indebtedness beyond what anyone would have dared forecast ten years ago.

Unencumbered property of the tangible kind already has become the exception. A mortgage blanket now covers virtually the entire country. In terms of money value, it probably amounts to around one half of all the national wealth.

The blanket continues to grow in size, thickness, and spread. The growth is promoted by what is substantially a new but already a vast industry—one having to do with originating, placing, and selling new types of mortgages on a national scale.

The old types have not been displaced. They are more in evidence than before. Local mortgage brokers are more numerous than they were ten years ago, as the advertising pages of newspapers and magazines testify. Individuals who lend on mortgages directly also are more numerous. Insurance companies and savings banks are putting increasing volumes of trust funds into mortgage loans. The insurance companies now have about $4,500,000,000 so invested. On January 1, 1926, the savings banks of New York State were carrying mortgage loans in the amount of $2,339,400,578, the total having increased 112 per cent since the war.

Hence the funds that have been coming from sources developed by the new mortgage industry are outright additions to mounting supplies of funds yielded by the old sources for this purpose.

It is probable that in 1925 several times the volume of funds that was so invested in 1915 went into mortgages of the various kinds now set up. It is also probable that the total mortgage indebtedness of the country has trebled or more during the last ten years—the most prosperous period of that length in the history of the country.

The last inclusive figures on the subject were collected by the United States Census Bureau in 1920. These relate to mortgages on homes and farms only. The first statistics of that kind were collected in 1890. Comparisons show that during the intervening period of thirty years there was steady increase in mortgages.

This increase, undoubtedly at a much less rate than that of the last six years, was general. It was evident even throughout the South, where Anglo-Saxon antipathy toward mortgages holds on as it does nowhere else in this country; it is evident as well in localities like that of which New York City is the center, where that antipathy has ceased altogether to function.

In the South as a whole, 26.8 per cent of owned homes were mortgaged in 1920, compared with 44 per cent in the North and 36 per cent in the West. Yet in the South the percentage more than trebled during the preceding thirty years. In New York City 78.7 per cent of owned homes were encumbered when the last census was taken. Of the 24,351,676 homes in the country in 1920, only 6,522,119 unencumbered ones were occupied by owners. That is to say, nearly three fourths of the houses owned outright or in part on mortgages held by others than their occupants. The figures do not include multi-family living abodes, such as apartment houses and hotels.

Increasing mortgages on homes represent no doubt in some measure advancing ownership. But the statistics indicate that the urge to borrow has outrun the inclination to buy.

Between 1890 and 1920 the proportion of homes not on farms that were owned by occupants increased four per cent, while the proportion of owned homes that were encumbered increased twelve per cent.

Following are the figures for the last four census years:

1920	40.9	39.7
1910	38.4	33.1
1900	36.8	31.7
1890	36.9	27.7

The percentage of rural homes—about 50 per cent—owned by occupants was larger and underwent little change for the country as a whole during the period of thirty years. The proportion of owned rural homes that were mortgaged, though growing, was smaller than of urban homes. It was 37.2 per cent in 1920.—Dearborn Independent, June 12, 1926.

The Motion Pictures as a New Church Art

An attempt to solve the problem of waning church attendance in America has brought about the organization of a Foundation, the initial support of which was provided by William E. Harmon, of New York. This is the Religious Motion Picture Foundation, which has made a study of the possibilities of the cinema as a part of the service of worship.

Four religious films have been produced expressly for use in the church. Since their purpose is a non-theatrical one, a special effort has been made to keep them as exquisitely simple and clear as possible without sacrificing any of the richness and pictorial beauty of the Bible story itself.

They have already had more than one hundred showings in churches in the vicinity of New York, Boston, and Chicago. Their appeal was tested through a printed questionnaire, distributed at services in which they appeared, and, according to the Foundation's report they have been received with commendation by both clergymen and congregations. Until it could be determined whether or not there was a desire for this new adjunct to worship, the films were available to churches only in a limited area. The Foundation, which has offices at 140 Nassau Street, now announces that churches throughout the country may secure them.

These first four pictures, which have been used by such members of the clergy as Doctor S. Parkes Cadman, of the Central Congregational Church in Brooklyn; Doctor Daniel Russell, of Rutgers Pres-

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The Officer and Teacher Meetings

In preceding outlines we have described the aims of religious education and have suggested the knowledge required, the attitudes demanded, and the practical application of religious instruction which should be made in everyday life. The next problem is, What materials shall we use as the means of realizing these aims?

Theme: The Subject Matter of Religious Education.

Text: Betts, How to Teach Religion, Chapter VII.

We must think of the scriptures as the matchless source of religious education material. We have the rich fields of information contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants as source books through whom God especially sought to reveal himself and his will to man.

Yet these three, rich as they are, do not contain all the revelation of God who deals with man in every age and in every land. The story of the creation of the world of nature is wonderful, but not more so than the revelation of the power and wisdom of God in the continuous recreation of Nature's works and in the marvels of science as discovered by man.

Since the field of source material is so wide and varied, it is not all of equal value to meet our specific needs. Undoubtedly the scriptures should be the center and foundation of our religious curriculum, being supplemented judiciously by other material from nature, history, biography, literature, and story; from science, and the great world of objects about us; also from music and song and pictures.

But at no moment shall we become so absorbed in teaching science, or story, or art that we neglect our primary purpose, the growth of religious concepts, the development of religious attitudes, loves, loyalties, ambitions, satisfactions which center in a consciousness of God and a love of his service in harmony with the gospel plan.

All proper educational growth is religious, but the Sunday school lesson should have a distinctive tone and purpose and should awaken a new and deeper spiritual response than is usually possible in the day school.

In selecting material from the Bible, Doctor Betts's rule seems very sound: "Know what the child is ready for in his grasp and understanding; know what he needs to stimulate his religious imagination and feeling and to further his moral and religious development; know your source material and choose accordingly." This is the assumed basis on which our quarterly editors work, though they have in mind certain ages of pupils rather than cerbyterian Church, New York; and Dean Howard C. Robbins, of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine in New York, are: "Christ confounds his critics" (John 8: 1-12); "The unwelcome guest" (Luke 7: 36-50); "Forgive us our debts" (Matthew 18: 23-35); and "The rich young ruler" (Matthew 19: 16).

The Religious Motion Picture Foundation is to carry on its work in the field without profit making, but it hopes to be self-supporting. Mr. Harmon's appropriation of $50,000 made the beginning possible; and in order to continue, it is distributing its films to churches at cost.

tain specific pupils. Resourceful teachers will use the quarterly only as a suggestive guide.

In early childhood we shall attempt to give an idea of God as Creator, Father, and Friend, and of Jesus as our Brother and Helper. We shall teach of obedience, repentance, and forgiveness; of kindness, truthfulness, honesty, and courage; and of prayer. The Bible material taught will center upon those things and our lesson will be built up to meet these ends. The children should become familiar with the childhood of Moses, Joseph, Samuel, David, and Jesus. The primary meaning of baptism and church membership should be taught and the children led to desire baptism at eight years of age.

In later childhood we shall stress heroes and heroism, and especially of the great religious heroes that children may be influenced by the ideals found in those who are loved and admired. We must develop the sense of personal responsibility for conduct and the meaning of wrongdoing and sin. Bible lessons will show the results of sin and disobedience to God and the necessity for repentance and of prayer for forgiveness. The narrow selfishness of early childhood must give way to a more generous and social attitude, and a sense of responsibility for the happiness and welfare of others. Hence our lessons should contain suggestions and inspiration of high examples of self-forgetfulness, sacrifice, and service as found in the life of Jesus, Paul, Alma, and others.

In adolescence the broader, deeper, and more permanent interests are forming, and character is taking its permanent trend. If the scriptures have been taught as a beautiful revelation of God and his will, they should now furnish a vast fund of inspiration and guidance. There should come also a sense of the deeper meaning of sin, of repentance, of forgiveness, of the restoration, and of Zion's redemption.

As a guiding principle we shall always select such materials as shall appeal to the pupil's interest, stir his imagination, and quicken his sense of moral values, leading him step by step into a full realization of noble Christian character. Since we desire to influence the learner's deeds and shape his conduct, we shall present to him those lessons which most naturally and inevitably are translated into daily living in thought, ideal, and purpose.

Stories from the Bible and other sources are so vital and effective in developing a sense of right and a desire for righteous action that a detailed study of stories and storytelling is essential to the successful teacher. The little book, Story Telling, by Cather, is inexpensive and direct in its help.

Naturally we value highly Bible stories which can be understood and appreciated by the children, though other human interest stories may be used if charged with religious and moral value. The story must be adapted to the age of the learner and told entertainingly. If well told it is not necessary to explain the moral.

The beauty and marvels of Nature reveal the power and love of God if taught appreciatively to supplement a Bible lesson.

God is further revealed in the beauty and strength of great lives found in history and biography, and he is again manifest in the success and happiness of nations who "fear God and keep his law."

In pictures and in music may we find expression and appeal that stir the deepest emotions of the soul and bring to one experiences of great value in the cultivation of the finer appreciations and sentiments.

NEWS AND LETTERS

To Faithful Ministers

By Frank Veenstra

"Thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee, thou shalt speak. Be not afraid of their faces: for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord."—Jeremiah 1: 7, 8.

If, like Paul, you are constrained to say, "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!" and from a sense of your insufficiency, you cry out with Jeremiah, "I am a child," you will not be offended at anyone offering to instruct you. Admitting he be a child, both in years and experience, Eli listened attentively to a message delivered by the child Samuel. Moses made many excuses, but God was not pleased with them; Jeremiah made many modest objections, but God removed them and graciously encouraged him. "Thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee," is the Lord's declaration to the one whom he commissions. If you are fully convinced of its being your duty to bear the tidings of salvation to a lost and ruined world, you have great cause to be humble and may well exclaim, "Who is sufficient for these things?" (2 Corinthians 2: 16.) But be not discouraged; go cheerfully wheresoever and to whomsoever God shall send you; and remember that you have no choice in this matter, neither as it regards where you are to go nor what you are to say. Read Ezekiel 33: 7. He who gave you your mission will also give you your message, so that you need never be at a loss what to say.

"And whatsoever I command thee, thou shalt speak." Whether men receive your message or are offended at it, is not your responsibility; for what God says, that you must say without adding to or taking from it. And though you may, yea, will, have many to oppose you who do not love the truth, be not afraid of their faces, though they may appear big, bold, and daring, and would look you out of countenance, "For I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord." Declaring the truth faithfully may bring you into trouble, but the God of truth will bring you out of trouble. By preaching what the Lord commands, you may offend some of your pretended friends and cause enemies to rise up against you, but that should give you little concern. Deliver it faithfully and live what you preach, for the world will watch you.

"Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."—1 Timothy 4: 16.

Men of learning and character have confirmed the impression that the office of the ministry, which was formerly a sacrifice, has now become a trade. Take heed to thyself; and what thou teachest to others, be careful to practice thyself. Give attendance to reading and meditation; neglect not the gift that is in thee; and never suffer that plant to wither for the want of proper care. It is a painful calling thou art engaged in: but be not slothful in it; spare no pains; think no trial too great nor any cross too heavy in order to become a good workman in thy business. Be not afraid of wearing out, for that would be far better than rusting out. "Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine."—2 Timothy 4: 2. And whilst thou preachest against worldly mindedness, take heed unto thyself. (Read 1 Peter 5: 2.) Be not encumbered with anything belonging to this world, that you can possibly do without, but let the salvation of precious souls be your chief concern. "But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness."—1 Timothy 6: 11. Take heed unto thyself and to the doctrine; see to it that what you preach is pure, and uncorrupted, as it came from God without being adulterated with the inventions of men. Read Matthew 18: 19. And having received the true doctrine or truths of the gospel, continue in them. Read 1 Timothy 6: 3-5. For in doing this according to that ability which God hath given thee, thou shalt save thyself from all the baneful consequences of handling the word of God deceitfully, and them that hear thee from that condemnation that rest upon all unbelievers. Read John 3: 18 and 36.

The work thou art engaged in is a saving work; and by taking heed to thyself, knowing the truth thyself and faithfully and plainly preaching and living the truth thyself, them that hear thee will be led to live and obey the truth; and be saved. "And he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he who soweth and he who reapeth may rejoice together."—John 4: 36.

The truth must be heard before it can be obeyed. Go and preach. "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."—1 Peter 5: 4.

Bisbee Saints Are Active

BISBEE, ARIZONA, April 12.—The many friends and former members of this branch no doubt will be interested in the following item appearing in the Bisbee Ore of April 12:

"At 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, April 10, Miss Hazel Esther, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Dearborn of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. Forrest Golding, of Douglas, Arizona. Elder S. D. Condit, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Douglas, performed the ceremony.

"Miss Dorothy Dearborn, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Ted Golding, brother of the groom, acted as best man, while the Misses Dorothy Blinman and Alma Mary Dearborn were the flower girls. The bride was becomingly dressed in blue, and carried a bouquet of beautiful bridal roses.

"The prelude was played by Mr. T. R. Davis and Mr. Fred Nicholas, violinists, accompanied on the piano by Miss Mona Nicholas. The wedding march was played by the above violinists, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Raymond Ratterree. After the ceremony, a wedding song was beautifully rendered by Mrs. D. L. Evans, accompanied on the piano by Miss Rosina Reynolds.

"After the wedding, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, School Hill, where a delightful buffet luncheon was served to the guests, among whom were relatives and friends from Douglas and El Paso. Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Golding will be at home in Douglas to their many friends after May 1.

"Mr. Golding has been in the employ of the Phelps Dodge Corporation's mechanical department at Douglas for the past several years."

In addition to the above article, it might be interesting to note that this ceremony was performed at the Women's Club Building, which our branch rents for its regular church services. It was prettily decorated with an arch and background of ivy and freshly cut lilacs. To an audience of nearly a hundred people, Elder Condit briefly but pointedly stressed the fact that our church marriage ceremony provides for a man having but one wife, and we feel that the publicity resulting will do much to remove prejudice and show the difference between our belief and that of Mormonism. Brother Forrest Golding is superintendent of Douglas Sunday school.

Sister Charles F. Rehwal, who was seriously hurt some weeks ago, was able to attend the wedding.

Under the able direction of Brother T. R. Davis, the Religio Department has increased in interest and numbers and is proving a valuable means of getting an understanding of the Book of Mormon before our young people.

The Department of Women is active and holding regular bimonthly meetings. At present they are busily engaged in preparations for our Easter program. Sister John Dingle, superintendent, has also been placed in charge of getting up a program for the Sunday school Easter program.

Under the direction of Brothers F. M. Dearborn, superintendent, and Raymond Ratterree, assistant superintendent, the Sunday school is also gradually increasing in interest and attendance.

Brother F. M. Dearborn has been appointed branch solicitor, as Brother Henry Goldie, who has faithfully served in this capacity for a number of years, has resigned and gone to Los Angeles, where he has been visiting with the Farleys, former members of Bisbee Branch. Brother Goldie is now drawing a pension from the Phelps Dodge Corporation as a result of having worked with them for twenty-two years in their mining department.

We are pleased to learn that Brothers D. L. Evans and June Taylor, presidents of Bisbee and Douglas Branches, who left March 31 for General Conference via Chevrolet, arrived safely on April 5. In their absence, Brothers T. R. Davis and S. D. Condit are looking after the interests of the Bisbee and Douglas Branches respectively.

We are pleased to report an increasing interest and attendance at all branch services, and the gift of prophecy has been manifest at sacramental and prayer services to the encouragement of the Saints.

Alexander, Kansas

April 13.—We are sorry to report that not one of this branch went to General Conference. Some had all preparations made to start on the morning of the 8th, but sickness prevented their going. Let us all look forward to October 1, 1928.

Last Sunday, April 10, Brother John Teeter preached a sermon that touched the hearts of some who listened. Instruction along the line of living pure lives was given the young. He impressed the fact that sin leaves its mark, a scar of shame.

An Easter program is being prepared by the children and young folks, and there will be a basket dinner at noon on Easter Sunday. But owing to an epidemic of measles, some thirty-five cases being reported here all at once, the program has been postponed for a later date. Sister John Teeter has charge of the program department for one year.

We are hopeful of an increase in attendance at Sunday school when warm weather comes. This is the 13th, and a nice rain is falling. The wheat and alfalfa are fine. Gardens are planted, fruit in the blossom. So, Saints of this branch, when May 1 comes let us turn out to church one hundred per cent. We will find it easy to have seventy-five or a hundred present any fair day. Let us make up our absence before Gabriel blows his trumpet, or we may not all be able to answer his call.

Sister Teeter's primary class, about twelve in number, is taking an interest in drawing the lesson to imprint it upon their minds. They are pleased with the result.

Brother and Sister E. H. Ebert have moved out on the farm with their son, Eugene.

Several families are taking the Conference Daily, thus getting something out of the conference.

Dear brothers and sisters, let us move onward to 1930, when the gospel will have been on the earth a hundred years in these latter days. Is everyone busy? Is everyone working for the church? Let us start now and help the gospel wheel roll on.

Haverhill, Massachusetts

April 9.—We are still in the service of the Lord, working for the ultimate success of his cause.

I suppose we have the honor at this time of holding a record for the church in presenting the gospel in a foreign tongue. We have as one of our members a very fine Greek brother, Stilianos Pouloupoulos. He has held some meetings in our hall entirely for his own countrymen, in their native tongue. The writer was in attendance at one of these meetings, and the attention of the congregation was fine. At the close, our brother gave opportunity for questions, and there were one or two who availed themselves of this privilege.

Recently we had with us Brother Herman Chelline, and his talks were well received.

We are only a small band here but are trying in our weak and humble way to further the cause of the Master.

One of our elderly sisters who was lately removed from our midst by death was Sister Elvira Steele, one who had been a member of the church a great number of years and who until the last maintained her faith and integrity in the Lord, whom she served. She was stricken down with shock and was unable to do for herself, but in answer to the prayer of our pastor, Brother L. E. Jordon, in his administration to her, it was as he prayed, that her spirit might depart in peace from this life. When the end came, her spirit left its house of clay as sweetly as a babe going to sleep in its mother's arms.

We are trusting that the work may prosper and progress throughout all the earth.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

April 10.—The annual business meeting of the Saskatoon Branch was held March 19. The following officers were sustained: Branch president, Elder C. E. Diggle; counselors, Elders Beckman and Gendron; secretary-treasurer, Sister Laurel Whiting; priest, Brother William Brant; librarian, Sister Elva Beckman; musical director, Brother Paul Schmidt; Sunday school superintendent, Brother Brant; publicity agent, Sister C. E. Diggle. Officers elected were: teacher, Brother Arthur Gendron; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Sister Ruth Peterson; janitor, Brother Brant; leader of Department of Women, Sister Laurel Whiting.

After much discussion, it was decided to conduct the business of the branch on the budget system. Envelopes will be distributed by the treasurer, and members asked to contribute monthly toward the general expense.

On Easter Sunday we will begin the day with a sunrise prayer service, Sunday school will be at ten, as usual, preaching at eleven, and the regular evening service at 7.30. Special music has been prepared by Brother Schmidt.

We have heard several of the Saints commenting on the April number of Autumn Leaves, especially mentioning the brown picture section and the article on the Temple at Kirtland. We think all publications are improving every month, and it fills our souls with joy to note the forward movement in all departments of the church this last two years. It required all our faith in past years, but now we know that Zion will be redeemed and that our church is the church of the Living God.

Sister Kirkwood, who was operated upon recently, is recovering and will return to her home in Zealandia in the near future. Sister Kirkwood, whose home was in Independence before her marriage last spring, pines for the balmy climate of the South. One must be born on our bleak, wind-swept prairies to appreciate them.

Owen Sound, Ontario

Wednesday, March 16, found the Saints in our branch reluctantly bidding adieu to Evangelist J. F. Martin, for the present at least. At the close of the evening's service, he left for Wiarton, where he had been announced to speak Thursday and Friday nights, thence on to London. Despite the fact that the roads in this country are in very bad condition during the spring season, a couple of loads of Saints motored to Wiarton on these nights. The experience of being mired a time or two en route faded into insignificance when we were able to hear Brother Martin and meet the Wiarton Saints.

At the close of the service here Tuesday night, March 15, a social hour was spent in Brother Martin's honor. It was a real treat to hear several selections provided by him. He proved himself not only an able propounder of the truth but a talented entertainer. His labors here demonstrated what really can be accomplished if one but develops the latent talents within him. Brother Martin won a place in the hearts of the Saints in this place, and he will be welcomed in our branch whenever he finds it convenient to return.

Our church building looks fine in a new dress of paint, the sisters having recently provided funds to have the walls re-decorated. During the past week we were successful in purchasing seats for the upper auditorium. When these are installed, much will be added to the appearance of the building.

All are anxiously awaiting General Conference news. Our prayers are that additional strength and courage may permeate the whole church until finally Zion shall be established.

Cherokee, Iowa

Cherokee Branch is still trying to let its light shine, and all departments are working in harmony for the good of the work.

Brother F. T. Mussell spent a week with us in March and gave us several good sermons, leaving with the members of the branch some excellent thoughts and ideas which he gleaned during the missionary meeting at Independence in January.

Our priesthood had a fine meeting March 20 with Brother Mussell in charge. Some new lines of study were discussed, and it was decided to study according to suggestions made by Brother Mussell.

Our sacramental service was well attended, and those present enjoyed the Spirit which was manifested to a great degree. Prayers were requested by several afflicted ones, and all were remembered. We trust they received help from the heavenly Father.

Sister Mary Yarrington and Raymond Smith were married April 14, at the home of Sister Yarrington's grandmother, Sister Juliette Yarrington, by Pastor A. R. Crippen. They will make their home in Cherokee, where the groom is an employee of the local gas company. The Saints wish them much happiness and prosperity.

Easter Sunday the Saints met at ten o'clock for prayer service, and at eleven the Sunday school gave a fitting program.

Bad weather and roads have interfered with the attendance at all services, and it seems at times have also dampened the spirits of those who are able to attend. However, Easter Sunday was fine, and we feel all will be well with us soon. On account of bad weather April 10, a small crowd was present for our quarterly conference of the branch. The priesthood and all departments reported, and the reports indicate that considerable work is being done by those who report. We hope next time all will report and that a much better showing will be apparent.

Brother E. L. Edwards has been with us two Sundays during the month and preached for us once. Other speakers during the month have been J. T. Spence, A. R. Crippen, W. W. Reeder, and Albert Haynes.

Brother A. R. Crippen was called to Mallard to conduct funeral services for Grandma Fish, who has been a faithful member of the church for many years.

We have been reading the reports from General Conference with much satisfaction. The wonderful spirit and the good services throughout should be an inspiration to all the Saints. We are patiently waiting to hear who our new missionaries will be, and hope that when they come the Saints will help them to keep busy, that much work may be done; for we know it is badly needed.

May God bless our President and his counselors and the members of the various other quorums of the church, is our prayer.

Mallard, Iowa

We are busy at present preparing for our Easter program. Brother Benjamin Fish and Sister Ethel Fish have been to Iowa City for medical examination, and we are glad to report that no serious trouble was found. Grandma Fish is in very poor health at present. We trust she may soon be relieved of her affliction and be able to be about again.

Brother and Sister M. B. Barrows, of Bradgate, were visitors March 27. They also attended church April 10. Brother Barrows, who is a graduate of Graceland, is superintendent of schools at Bradgate. We are very glad to have them where they can attend services with us.

Sister Violet Hahn and her roommate, Pauline Calkins, spent their spring vacation from Graceland with her parents and friends. Although their visit was short, it was much enjoyed, and we were pleased that four Graceland students attended services the morning of April 10.

Sister Abbott and husband expect soon to leave for California to make their home. We are always sorry to lose one from our branch, but since they feel it is best we trust the Lord will bless them in their new home and that they will find a branch of God's people with which to worship.

Our prayers have been for the General Conference and its success, and we hope it will be one to be long remembered by all who were in attendance. We pray that our missionaries and delegates will bring tidings of great good to our small branches.

Deeply Interested in General Conference

MOORHEAD, IOWA.—This is a banner year for Moorhead Saints in subscribing to the Conference Daily, which shows they are interested in getting the news at the earliest date. While the train connections are poor and mail service has been greatly hindered by the bad roads, and the Saints here have not been able to receive their papers as soon as many, they have been very patient and have appreciated the news when it has reached them. Many would have enjoyed the privilege of attending the conference, but as our branch is largely composed of farmers, they can not arrange to be away from their work at this time of the year. However, our hearts and prayers have been there.

Brother C. R. Hield took advantage of the week-end vacation and attended conference a short period, returning to his school work Monday. Several have said that they would have taken advantage of the excursion from Council Bluffs and attended a couple of days had they known it in time.

Our hearts rejoice in the good news that reaches us, and we feel to rejoice with thankfulness for the good spirit that seems to prevail in the conference.

We hope when the conference closes, when the ministers go to their different fields of labor and the delegates return to the various branches, they will carry that good spirit of fellowship with them to work among and unite the Saints more firmly in the work. May the slogan of every district and branch be, "Onward to 1930 and beyond."

In our former items we overlooked mentioning the nice program which was put on at the Religio service in honor of Washington's Birthday. A clever little play entitled, "Washington's first defeat," was conducted by Sister Charles R. Hield. The characters in the play were Sister Beulah Outhouse, Aleta Jensen, and Brother Loren Millard.

During the last month Sister Hulda Hendrickson has returned home, after spending more than a year visiting her children in Canada. Sister Mary Lewis returned to her home at Lamoni after visiting among relatives and friends here since the month of January.

Runnells, Iowa

April 19.—We are happy to report a change for the better in our branch since the first of the year. We had a very spiritual sacramental service this month, which is an indication of deeper spirituality among the Saints.

An experience meeting was held at the beginning of the evening service of April 10, which lasted for half an hour. During this time several related their spiritual experiences in the church. Evidence of divine guidance was manifested in all of these experiences. A happy time was enjoyed by all present.

Tuesday night, the 12th, the young people met in the church basement for an evening of fun, under the direction of Sisters Grace Tingle and Lola Harvey. This was an enjoyable event in which about thirty did their best to have a good time.

Brother Everett Tingle and wife returned from Saint Louis because of poor health of Brother Tingle, who has an affliction that will not permit his working indoors. He had a good position there, but had to resign and return to outdoor work. They were immediately put to work in the branch, both being willing workers. We are glad to have their assistance.

The junior glee club sang at the Congregational church Easter morning and at the Saints' church at night. This organization consists of a group of children from all the churches and is under the direction of Sisters Nora Park and Mabel Miller.

The Sunday school is gaining in attendance and interest, and officers and teachers are giving the work more attention.

One of the reasons we are gaining is that some of our workers are giving less of their time to worldly pleasures and more to the church and its departments. For this we are thankful, and hope that we may continue to advance with the church until Zion is established.

Several of the Saints subscribed to the Daily Herald and kept themselves posted on the affairs of the conference.

Sister Fred Pellissier had the misfortune to fall on the ice several weeks ago, injuring her knees so seriously that she has since been unable to attend services. Her daughter, Sister Jennings Coffman, of Omaha, spent several weeks at the parental home, helping with the work.

Sister Emma Lewis is helping care for her friend, Mrs. Ralph Woods, who has been sorely afflicted for many months.

Brother Cecil Burton, formerly of Pisgah, but we understand recently of Omaha, attended services here Sunday evening, April 17.

Easter was very appropriately observed. Brother Mark Jensen occupied the pulpit in the morning, and Brother Chester Davis in the evening. Sister John Boswell had labored diligently as branch chorister, which resulted in appropriate songs being had at all four services.

Brother and Sister Fields Jones, of Orson, were present and assisted with the singing at eleven in the morning. Especially did all enjoy the vocal solo rendered by Brother Fields, accompanied by his wife. We always appreciate visiting helpers. Brother and Sister Jones were dinner guests at the Arnold Adams home.

We appreciate having Sister Bollinger with us again. Grandma spends the winters with a daughter in Nebraska, as it is unwise that she stay alone in cold weather, but she returns to her own home in Moorhead each spring and is a constant attendant at the services, in which she greatly rejoices.

Sister Etta Jennings recently enjoyed a visit from her son, Herbert, and wife, of Boone. We were pleased to welcome them at the services Sunday, April 10. Herbert formerly was one of our Sunday school boys. He is now serving as brakeman for a railroad company.

While attending the teachers' association at Sioux City last week, Brother Harold Mann had the misfortune to have his Ford roadster stolen, but later recovered the car minus a new tire.

Lansing, Michigan

April 18.—We have renewed our young people's early Sunday morning prayer meetings after a lapse of nearly two years, and we find they are really quite beneficial. Although few have attended as yet, there is a good spirit shown in our meetings, and our number is increasing. We are wondering how we ever got along without them for so long a time.

Brother George Rueff has recently been ordained to the office of priest. Brother Rueff's fireside talks with our people in this place have been a source of great help, even before his ordination. He is held in high esteem by all who know him.

We were pleased to have Brother and Sister Glenn Sager, of Flint, Michigan, with us on Sunday a week ago. Brother Sager's sermon on "Tithing re-analyzed" brought more clearly to us the brotherhood of Christ and his mission to earth; also our responsibilities as children of God through adoption.

Interest is increasing in Lansing, as we hope it is everywhere.

In Regard to the General Conference

How was I affected by attending General Conference? Has my faith been made stronger, or has it waned a little, and has it been dulled and former hopes and aspirations blurred?

After spending several days attending various services, from the prayer meetings to the sessions of business, with their discussions, when certain economic queries reigned, I reluctantly boarded a homeward bound C. & A. train. I asked myself, Are you still in the faith? Most unhesitatingly, if I am to judge, will I answer in the affirmative, and my love for God and his church is intensified. The lingering memory of clasping hands with so many of the good men and women of the Lord's anointed gives a joy which is akin to bliss. Many of the older ones, tried and true, left such a lasting impression, that I feel it would be but justice if time afforded to invade the HERALD'S space with the best that my vocabulary could supply in eulogy, but at present a hint will suffice.

I gave some time listening to protestations and arguments with their conclusions. I heard with interest the very conservative make their economic observations even to the session of Tuesday, the 12th, and asked myself this question, What would you have said had you made a speech on the conference floor?

In view of the fact that upon that undeniable premise that our whole structure does and must faithfully depend upon that Father and Custodian of limitless resources who has power to forgive all things, including an economic mistake, by all means let us go on and up to the promised victory of Zion redeemed and crowned with glory. I would have said, like Apostle J. F. Curtis, "All I have is tied up in this church," or at least it must not be otherwise. And had I the tongue of an angel and the ability of a philosopher to gather thousands to my hearing, I would certainly continue to preach this gospel with all that goes with it.

Tithing by all means would not be neglected, and I would urge the people to carry to a victorious conclusion the work of finishing the Auditorium, though that is only an incident of our great program. Our program is so great, so comprehensive that it does not stop where we sometimes think it will stop.

Then I would have asked, Where is our faith that we stagger at so small a thing as our financial liabilities? If we are on God's side, he will help us, and just now we had better dismantle all our knocking machines, remodeling them into real, constructively operating machines. I would have conceded the fact that some mistakes have been made, adding that our mistakes were ours, and not trying to fasten them on the leading men of the church. However, I would not have called everything a mistake that some have so named. I would have advised that we atone by paying our tithing and carrying our message to the millions who have never heard it. We need an army of great men and women to help, so let us heed the Savior and work and pray for their coming.

It is no more fair to say, "We're going mad over material things" because we are building a house for our conference visitors and trying to provide homes for the homeless, than it would be to have used like charges when just three men set to work to build in their neighborhood a church, also laboring to support their families.

Therefore, dear brothers and sisters, let us thunder this appeal wherever we go or write, that humility and love pervade and be the dynamic force moving us onward and upward. As I now and then get near our leading men, I learn to love and respect them as men of God, and pray that they may be upheld at the throne of divine grace.

Easter Echoes

Pessimism was vanquished last Sunday morning, and as on the first Easter day long ago, out of sorrow came joy. Somber skies and showers retired Saturday night, and a perfect Easter Day dawned.

Coldwater and Clear Lake congregations of the church were at high tide in appreciation of both the day and the programs rendered. Under the direction of Sisters S. W. L. Scott, Martha Fish, and Ethel Gallagher, the children conducted their Easter tasks with an astonishing ability and sweet spirit. Singly or in class formation, young or old, they gave evidence of an energy and disposition to do, and they did it. The readings and musical renderings were uplifting.

The program was followed by an Easter sermon by the writer, whose subject was, "The divine significance of Easter." The text was the words of the poet-prophet, written three thousand years ago: "Seek him that made the seven stars and Orion, and turneth the shadow of death into the morning. . . . The Lord is his name." Also, "He is not here: for he is risen as he said. . . . Go quickly and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead. These words span like an arch of light the great festival of resurrection day. They unseal the lips of song and hearts of worship. The pageantry of an oriental morning prefigures the splendor of the great sunrise that comes forth from the shadows. The daybreak in the east finds its historical analogue in the dawn of eternal life out of the night of death on that first Easter morn. The resurrection of Jesus from the grave and the consequent encompassing of humanity with the light of life are held before us like the panels of a spring dawn. The infinite Artist carries the art of life up into the matchless glory of the morning. "He hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

Sisters Fish and Gallagher rendered a delightful Easter duet for this service, and while it was impressive, be it remembered our sisters made it expressive.

A Mrs. Howe, formerly of Coldwater, but now of Ann Arbor, with her son, Joseph, and his wife, attended these services.

At the conclusion of the service, a car from Clear Lake was at the door, and accompanied by Sister Scott, Dorothea, and "our queens," the twins, Brothers Rossie Worthington and Clyde Smith drove us to the Clear Lake Church, where we arrived in time to sit down at the table with a wonderful band of Saints and friends from far and near. The spread was in the basement, and oh, did not the tables tempt the epicure? "Enough of the grub to feed an army." Clear Lake Saints never did do things by halves. They had turned the Sunday school and program for the day over to the organization, direction, and management of the young people, and nothing but praise was heard for them.

The Reorganized Church has talent at that point, and yesterday's service and spirit gave ample proof of a high plane on which the branch has pitched its tent. Brother Cassell, Brother Worthington, and Brother H. L. Smith are the official leaders, and broad-minded and strong leaders they are.

At half past two the writer occupied the pulpit with the themes of "The resurrection of Jesus," "The passover," and "The restoration of all men from the grave to organic existence."

Saints and friends from Fort Wayne, Elkhart, Fremont, Hudson, and Angola were present, and the spirit was fine throughout the day.

We spent four days at Hibbard last week, and nonmembers were interested. Baptism was requested, but a telegram announcing the death of Brother Lorenzo Fay, at Quincy, called us. Brother Fay was a veteran in the local work in branch and county, but he passed along to associate with other aged Coldwater soldiers and rest under the evergreens on the other side.

The district work is taking on a healthy tone and color, so to speak. I look for a bright progress in the near future. The vision is more concentratedly on Zion's weel.

COLDWATER, MICHIGAN, April 18.

Brentwood, Missouri

With the coming of spring, new campaigns to better our departmental work are springing into action. The Sabbath school is working with a view to doubling attendance in the new quarter and developing a more complete organism in the courses of study. The Department of Women is busy again with needles, and from the outlook will have a busy season. The Department of Recreation and Expression is not functioning.

Our prayer services have shown a marked increase in attendance and interest. A good degree of the Spirit is present and builds up those waiting on the Lord. Our preaching services have been well attended, with a goodly degree of interest. Our pastor, C. J. Remington, has had as assistants in the pulpit recently, Elders F. F. Struebing, John Edwards, and Roy Remington. Priest Ira S. Day has also occupied in the pulpit recently to good effect.

The communion service of April 3 was marked with a goodly number of ardent testimonies and by very humble prayers. Near the close of the meeting, one of the elders spoke under the direction of the Spirit, giving us a message of exhortation to our duties and admonishing us to uphold the officers of the church, both local and general, that their works might be acceptable to God.

Brother Roy Remington was the speaker Easter morning. He used as his text, "And the Lord, even Jesus Christ, shall dwell among you, and shall reign over all flesh," from Doctrine and Covenants 108, appendix. His discourse brought to us the Easter story in a new form, yet radiant with the witness of the Spirit that the word spoken was true.

Our evening service on the 17th was devoted to the Easter exercises by the Sabbath school. Scholars three years old and up took active part, there being several class numbers and little songs and recitations by the juvenile members of the school. The Temple Builders were the main attraction for the evening, favoring us with a rendition of the Easter play, "The gate ajar," by Sister E. Barraclough. Their work and settings were of the best, and the thought of the writer of this playlet was truly enacted and conveyed to the audience by these able sisters. Their leader, Sister Blanche Cooke, informs us that they have an active program arranged for the summer months, and no doubt we shall hear from them later on.

Elder Russell Archibald, of the Saint Louis Branch, was present, with his family, and very kindly assisted with the services.

We are striving to learn the full law of Christ and to apply it to our group life, and hope that when the time for migration to Zion shall arrive, we may have been so qualified that we can move in a body and take our place as shall be designated by the powers that be.

The Conference Daily has reached almost every home in the branch this time, and we have lots of things to chat about when we get together.

Brooklyn, New York

This branch has enjoyed a number of special events the past winter, the last being the Easter exercises on April 17. Our local choir and orchestra presented an exceptional program on this day, under the direction of Brother E. LeRoy Squire. The morning message was given by Elder J. A. Jacques, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Vocal solos were by Mrs. Anna F. Warnky, Mrs. Adeline M. Harris, Miss Dorothy E. Potts, and Mr. Forest O. Redfield; Mrs. Ella L. Squire at the organ and Mrs. Gladys E. Harris at the piano. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, which greeted the worshippers in their silent but pleasing way, representing a true resurrection.

Musical programs are always appreciated and usually are big drawing cards. Brooklyn has had two special musical Sundays the past winter. The programs on these days were musical throughout. Pastor E. B. Hull gave short talks on the history of the coming forth of our Christian hymns and their tunes. If space would permit, much praise could be given to the musical director and his artists and the appreciation by the people of the fine work done on these occasions.

The attendance at our preaching services has been on the increase, and the two prayer services held every week in two different sections of the city have been a source of great spiritual strength to all that have availed themselves of this opportunity. Apostle Budd gave forth a true axiom when he said, "Prayer is the gateway by which we discover God." We wish many more could see the necessity of attending these midweek services. By so doing they might rediscover their God.

Last January we had with us President F. M. Smith and Bishop Albert Carmichael. They met with us in the church and gave a heart-to-heart talk on the general program of the church, emphasizing the stewardship plan. These talks were listened to with much interest.

The Department of Women has been busy all winter. In their semimonthly meetings they have a study period, besides their other work. Their annual bazaar and food sale last December was a big success, likewise a musical concert in April, given under their auspices. Both affairs were a success financially, as well as socially. Many features of the branch work are in the hands of this department; they can always be counted on to render valuable service at all times.

Our Sunday school is steadily developing numerically and in interest under the superintendency of Brother Lee A. Hartshorn. A new incentive has been established; namely, a reward pin for a year's perfect attendance. The pin is a replica of our church seal.

New York City being a point where many people come for a long or short visit, we find a number of Saints among the multitude. Sometimes we are privileged to meet them, and sometimes we do not know they have been here until they are gone. We are always glad to greet these visiting Saints at our Brooklyn Church. Those that have come here lately are as follows: Elder Paul N. Belleisle and wife, from Detroit, Michigan; Miss Blanche R. Farrar and Miss Mildred Roberts, from the West, (they are attending Columbia College, although Sister Mildred spends a greater part of the week at Yale College in Connecticut); Miss Camilla Hewitt and Miss Esther Montgomery, from Sherrill, New York, who are doing nursing in the city; Mrs. G. F. Ahlrep, from Denver, Colorado; and Mrs. Una Andrews, from the West, are here for a time. Brother Oscar Moorman has returned to New York, and we hope to make him a permanent factor this time. He rendered valuable assistance with his cornet in the orchestra when he was here before; he has already shown us his ability to produce music from a rip-saw since his return. Elder J. A. Jacques, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, has been living in the city for some weeks. He reports that his family will soon join him. We welcome them to our city and church. Elder Frank C. Mesle, of Sherrill, New York, gave us a call; also Captain George and Garfield Billings, of the State of Maine.

We invite Saints coming to New York to hunt up our church and give us a chance to make their acquaintance. If you call our business phone, Virginia 8527, (in the name of Lee A. Hartshorn in the phone book, Brooklyn,) you will be given directions how you can best reach the Brooklyn Church. The Interboro Subway from New York, New Lots sign, will bring you to Utica Avenue Station, which is a short distance from our church.

Institute at Montrose, Colorado

The Delta and Olathe Saints had been invited to attend the local institute held at Montrose, Colorado, at Moose Hall, March 20, but weather conditions were bad and very few came. The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m., Brother Arthur Rose in charge and offering the opening prayer.

Brother H. E. Merryman gave a talk on punctuality, and there was some wide-awake singing. A poem touching on punctuality was read by Brother R. E. Davey. A paper on the need of teacher training was read by Sister Inez Rose, in which an untrained teacher was likened to one trying to make a dress who is untrained in the art of sewing. A discussion was started by Brother Davey, the point being emphasized that our Sunday-school teachers need the highest training of all teachers.

Brother Clarence Wallace sang two pleasing solos, "Where the silvery Colorado wends its way," and "Colorado." He was accompanied by Sister Lois Woodruff.

Brother D. B. Woodruff gave a talk on "What is Sunday school and what is its purpose?" The fact was brought out that we can see the good results from a Sunday school all around us. Those who are the most efficient in carrying on the church work are those who have had Sunday school training. Sunday school training alone is not sufficient, but it is a wonderful help.

Following a short intermission, preaching service commenced at eleven o'clock in charge of Brother William E. Boyd. A special song was sung by Sisters Inez Rose and Hazel Rusho, accompanied by Sister Edra Vest.

Brother Davey, the speaker, read a scripture lesson, Philippians 3:8-21, and we had the pleasure of listening to a powerful sermon on the topic, "Happiness," such as Brother Davey is always ready to give.

With the arrival of the noon hour, a delightful basket dinner was enjoyed by all present, and a good social time resulted.

Meeting of the Religio Department was called to order at 2 p. m., with Brother Davey in charge. The first song in Zion's Praises was sung by the congregation, and Brother Davey offered prayer. There was at this time a talk by E. H. Perkins on "Play and social activities of the young." The congregation was favored with a duet, "While the years are rolling on," sung by Lorena and Claude Isard, with Inez Rose at the piano. A talk by Lois Woodruff on "Recreation and Expression and the talents of the young" was followed by discussion. Then Sister Edra Vest rendered a piano solo. In Brother Davey's speech on "Recreation and expression in relation to the church," the point was brought out that this department is especially for the young people, and the old must bear this in mind and not be dominating.

At 3.30 opened a meeting of the Department of Women, in charge of Sister Inez Rose. There was singing by the congregation and prayer by Brother Boyd. A paper written by Sister Morse on the work of the Department of Women was read by Sister Davey, who commented on it, bringing out some of its good points. Then Sister B. Mae Boyd talked on the theme, "Organizations for the young," explaining how with these we can work to better advantage. Sister Grace Austin talked on the work of the cradle roll. A request was made that we send our papers on the different lines of work to a sister branch at Paonia. After remarks by Brother Davey, and a song, Sister Anna Perkins dismissed the meeting with prayer. Preaching service was held in the evening.

Good interest was shown among the Saints, but only a few nonmembers were in attendance at this institute.

Our Easter Morning

The day was a beautiful one; clear and warm, with a fresh breeze blowing. Very early the students out on the hill were astir, and by half past six young people from down town were coming across the bean field and filing into the Ad Building. Upstairs the sunlight streamed warmly in through the long chapel windows, but around the platform the heavy blue and gold curtains had been drawn, making a soft dusky background for lighted candles. Flowers were everywhere.

As Roy Cheville and George Lewis took their places on the platform, the Kappa Delta string quartet played Handel's "Largo," and from above and back of the congregation a hidden quartet sang, "O Sacred Head now wounded." The pianist, Rae Lysinger, played her prelude, and the chorus entered, singing their processional hymn, in which the congregation joined. Uncle Roy read Matthew's story of the resurrection, and then came another hymn, followed by the prayer, ending with the Lord's prayer repeated in unison, and the softly sung response of the choir.

Doris Waterman sang "Gethsemane," her rich contralto voice lending new beauty to the well-known words, and then Georgette stepped forward and read, "Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulcher," and on through the beautiful Easter story, the congregation responding. At the close we stood and sang the hymn without which Easter Day would not be complete: "Angels roll the rock away."

With perfect understanding of the spirit of the hour, Uncle Roy spoke of the changing viewpoint of the college student; how he outgrows some things and takes a different attitude toward others; and how one story, of the Man of Galilee, never grows old, because it has a new significance in every period of life. In our childhood Jesus is the Man who loved little children and blessed them; in adolescence he is a doer—one who accomplished things. In college, when our minds are waking up and we are striving to think out for ourselves the problems of the ages, he becomes the leader of religious thought in his time. Then in maturity, when cares and responsibilities teach us to seek help from a divine source, he becomes to us a comforter and a friend.

The choir sang a new setting of the ever-beautiful "Coronation," and the service closed with a hymn beloved in Graceland; "Jesus calls us." Georgette gave the benediction, and the choir sang softly the answering amens. Then they took up the strains of "Sweetly may the blessed spirit" as they marched out of the chapel, the music growing fainter and fainter until it ceased. The pianist began her postlude, and the Easter service was over.

Happy groups of young people gathered about the campus for luncheon afterward. There was laughter and talking, but nothing was loud or boisterous, for we remembered that this was a time peculiarly sacred, and as we separated each felt that this morning had been a beautiful beginning for a perfect Easter Day.

President Briggs Lectures on Philippines

Probably one of the most interesting lectures we have had was given by President Briggs in the chapel lately. In his opening remarks he gave us a brief sketch of the location of the islands, pointing them out on the map. He next showed several slides of the natives, depicting their occupations, homes, and also some of the wonderful embroidery work of the women.

Tobacco is probably the chief industry of the Philippines. Their tobacco is much purer than the Turkish and American tobaccos.

Mr. Briggs spent several years in the islands in the educational institutions and has a splendid understanding of the conditions of the people.

The pictures were enjoyed by all the student body and we have a better conception of what the Philippines are like.

Gracelanders Make an Acquaintance With England

Blanche Edwards gave a lecture on England, her native land, in Friday chapel.

She began by saying that England is very conservative, and that she is glad of it, because England has thus preserved so many of its old customs. She warned the audience not to think of Englishmen as wearing monocles and carrying canes, for that is not the rule.

She spoke of the three classes of English schools: Elementary, secondary, and university. In connection with the secondary schools she brought up the subject of private schools and described Eton as an example of this class. Eton is a very exclusive school for nobility, and children of nobles are put on the waiting list at the time of birth. The students at Eton have very distinctive dress. As an illustration of colleges, she chose Oxford. Oxford University is situated in a sleepy little town about like Lamoni, where there is little industry carried on. The university is made up of a number of colleges.

Miss Edwards also described London and told of her visit there when she visited England a short time ago. She corrected the popular idea that London is always dull, dismal, and foggy. She closed her very interesting lecture by reading "London," by Francis Thompson, and Wordsworth's sonnet to London composed on Westminster bridge.—Graceland Record.

"G" Club Holds Carnival Friday

The annual athletic carnival of Graceland was staged under the auspices of the "G" club at the gymnasium Friday night. The entertainment consisted of a typical gala scene on the main floor—booths, side shows, confetti, and balloons, and a program of vaudeville numbers. The carnival was a success, although the crowd which attended was not very large.

From available figures, about $150 was cleared. This money will be used, as is the custom, by the "G" Club for financing awards for athletics.

The program was in charge of Evan Walden and contained a variety of numbers, ranging from quartets to boxing matches, and including two short plays along with other features.—Graceland Record.

Scholarship Takes Precedence at Graceland

We hear much about the high type of athletics at Graceland, of the social life, the extra-curricular activities, the democratic spirit, and the like, but not so much is said about the regular classroom curricular. That, however, does not mean that this phase of the college life is held to be of less importance. On the contrary, it is regarded as the chief function of the college, to which all other activities are subsidiary. It is probably because of the fact that it is more of a routine nature and is generally regarded as being compulsory and not quite so interesting in performance that causes it to be taken more or less for granted with little said upon the subject. Therefore it is expedient that we should give at this time some consideration as to how Graceland stands in scholarship.

Because Graceland is an undergraduate school, many of her alumni go on to higher institutions of learning, and it is at these places that the high scholastic foundation which they have acquired at Graceland shows itself by the fact that the average grade standing of her students is distinctly above the average; so much so in fact that Graceland has won for herself unusual recognition in such institutions as the Universities of Iowa, Kansas, and other places of high caliber. Moreover, from time to time we hear of former Graceland students who are making outstanding records in some chosen field of life work, the training for which was begun at this college.

Of course we do not mean to say we are the only college which turns out students who achieve a notable degree of success; but we do maintain that we turn out more in proportion who not only reach enviable scholastic attainments, but also use their knowledge unselfishly and constructively for the good of society at large as well as for the attaining of their own ends.

Therefore, while it is important that we keep all other activities on a high plane, yet it is even more important that we maintain and ever seek to improve our high scholastic standing, for it is almost wholly this that will determine whether we as individuals shall add to or detract from Graceland's present high standard, and whether we as a group shall be the cause of her ultimate rise or decline.—Graceland Record.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

Easter morning dawned clear and bright after days of clouds and rain. So it was with appreciation and the air of springtime that the Easter services were approached.

At 6.45 over 250 young people from the town and college assembled in the college chapel for an early devotional service. The rich blue curtains were dropped, forming an alcove around the platform that served as rostrum for the morning. An improvised altar was constructed at the back, covered with white, surmounted by a golden cross, and banked with lilies and other flowers. Across the front were arranged potted plants in tiers forming a railing. On either side stood candelabra. It had been announced that ushers would admit no one after the beginning of the program, so by the opening hour the chapel was well filled.

At the opening of the service a string quartet played softly, Handel's Largo. Then a mixed quartet from the balcony sang unaccompanied the old hymn, "O Sacred Head now wounded." Then from a distant room came the strains of "Holy, Holy, Holy," as the chorus of selected college students began their processional hymn. Then nearer they came, down the central aisle to their place on the platform. The story of the resurrection was narrated in individual and in responsive scripture readings and in the program of music. The theme of the morning was presented by Roy Chevill in his short address on the appeal of Jesus to the several ages of life. In childhood he is the Protector. To the growing boy, the stories of activity appeal—the episode of cleansing the temple attracts. In youth, when the new and the unusual appeals, when the ways of the old are questioned, Jesus becomes the great Reformer and Crusader attacking the established ways of the Pharisees and scribes. When life and thinking become settled and the problems of mature life arise, Jesus comes as the Helper, who can guide and understand. Even in the sunset glow of old age, when the adventurous is gone, Jesus lives as the Companion and Comforter. Thus the Son of Man holds an unusual place—the breadth of his nature can and does appeal and hold all types of persons and experiences. Many a youth, when believing that no longer Christ has appeal to him, finds anew some attracting meaning.

After the benediction, the choir sang as their recessional hymn "Sweetly may the blessed Spirit," and a solemn quietude prevailed as it died away in the distance.

After the service, the young people remained on the campus for Easter breakfast. The menu was prepared by Mrs. N. Ray Carmichael's class, with Verna Garver as chairman. Tables were arranged on the lawn and presided over by Mrs. Esther Gates and Miss Edith Woods, deans at the college, and Miss Opal Roark, principal of the local high school. Sandwiches, colored eggs, cocoa, and fruit were served.

Easter at the Brick Church

At 10.45 at the Brick Church the adult department gave a program, consisting of orchestral, and vocal selections, a reading, and a talk on the origin of Easter by Mrs. Evaline Burgess. In the evening the service consisted of the Easter story in song and sermon as follows:

The Trial

Tenor Solo from Maunder's "Olivet to Calvary," George Anway.

The Crucifixion

"Droop, Sacred Head," MaunderA Capella Chorus.

The Resurrection

"I know that my Redeemer liveth," Handel's Messiah, Mary Louise Lloyd.

Pensacola, Florida

April 19.—Easter Sunday was a very busy day with Pensacola Saints, who met as usual at ten o'clock for Sunday school, the preaching at eleven being by E. C. Shelley. After this service the Saints, having come prepared, motored out about twelve miles to a place known as Wellhurst Lodge, a very pretty spot. Here lunch was spread, and all seemed to be very happy. After the luncheon was cleared away, the kiddies were gathered together and ushered down the road while a great number of eggs of every imaginable color were hidden. When the signal was given a great foot race was witnessed! And before all the eggs were found, the whole force was called out. Those who did the hiding did a thorough piece of work.

After the hunt the gathering dispersed, to meet again at the church at 6.30, when a very interesting service and special songs and music were enjoyed. It created a proper atmosphere and spirit for the complete enjoyment of the following service, which was in charge of Brother E. C. Shelley, who preached an inspiring sermon on the resurrection.

A good spirit prevailed throughout the entire day, and many such remarks as, "Don't you wish we were at General Conference today?" were heard. Though we were not permitted to be there, we are glad the same sweet spirit could come to us as if by radio. For this we should be grateful, that wherever we are we can have the Spirit of God with us if we are striving to live aright and keep his commandments.

We welcome Brother W. L. Raley among us again. We were very glad to have him as our speaker at the morning hour, Sunday, the 10th, at which time he gave us an instructive talk on how we should live to let our lives shine out to others and prove to the world that we are what we profess to be and not counterfeit. He stressed the point that we must some time stand before God and be judged, and asked if we will stand the test or be found wanting. This was our first opportunity to hear this brother speak, and we certainly enjoyed the talk he gave us.

Brother and Sister D. T. Parker and son, Marvin, and his wife were visitors among us Saturday and Sunday, April 2 and 3. They were visiting Brother and Sister E. C. Shelley.

Brother Parker was a great help to us in our song service in the afternoon. They were shown some of the views of our city, which included a trip to Fort Barancas, through the old forts, and on down to the beautiful gulf beach, where everyone seems to enjoy going. We hope they will come again soon.

The monthly Religio social was held at the home of Sister Daisy Bovee with a jolly group of young people and older ones as well, all of whom spent a pleasant evening.

We regret to report the serious illness of Sister Hazel Keen's baby, and hope for a speedy recovery for little Charles Rupert. Willie, daughter of Sister Pallie Harris, is out again after having a real case of measles.

We are glad to count among our number Brother J. W. Adams and family, of Eustis, Florida.

Brother and Sister Wiley Cobb are very happy because of the arrival of Wiley Junior.

Sister Merle Blue is leaving us Wednesday for New York, where she will join Mr. Blue. They will come back on a steamer to Norfolk, Virginia, where they expect to be stationed for the summer. We regret Sister Blue's departure.

The first Sunday in April, being sacrament day for us, was very peaceful, and a marked degree of the Spirit was present. Our work here seems to be on the upward trend, for we are slowly but steadily increasing in attendance. We have four services each Sunday, with a fair attendance at each one. Our aim and anticipation is to go on to a higher plane and merit the joy of this gospel.

Independence

Stone Church

Sunday dawned upon a cloud covered earth, and for a time it seemed there would be no young people's early morning prayer meeting; however, with the approach of the opening hour, half past eight, a goodly number were gathered together in the lower auditorium. Elder D. O. Cato was in charge, and in the opening remarks commented upon the good we have all received from the session of General Conference. Before the young he opened a new vision of the immense field of labor in which all are called to work, giving Nehemiah's plan for rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem; each man rebuilding that part of the wall next to his home, joining it with the parts reconstructed by his neighbors. Are we ready to seize the opportunities for service that come to us which will make us Zion builders in deed and in truth? The testimonies brought encouragement and strength to all present, and the spirit of song seemed to be present to hallow the occasion.

In the main auditorium the older people were gathered at the same hour for prayer, and a good meeting was reported.

Elder F. A. Cool, superintendent of the senior department, opened the Sunday school study hour with a brief talk on the merits of prayer, telling of a team of football players which before going into a game was called aside for prayer by the quarterback captain. The prayer was not that they would win, but that they could play the game fair and square. Brother Cool's talk was impressive and will be remembered especially by the younger members of the Sunday school.

At the close of the class period, the orchestra, directed by Brother Leon Snow, played a pleasing number. The secretary reported eleven hundred and thirty four present, of which number one hundred and seventy were visitors. We learned that all our conference visitors have not yet returned to their homes, some being detained on account of high water and for other reasons. There were those present at this session of the school from Arizona, Illinois, Indiana, and other points in Missouri. Nine classes were perfect.

It was announced that this was the last Sunday Brother C. B. Hartshorn, our Sunday school superintendent, would be with us. He is leaving soon to take up the pastorate at Des Moines, Iowa. However, he was not given opportunity at this time to tell the congregation good-by, for a special farewell function will be held in the dining hall Friday evening, April 29, for that purpose. We shall miss him greatly, for he has been a faithful worker and teacher in Independence for the past seven years, but we know that the Saints of Des Moines will profit by his presence and assistance and so we gratefully bid him Godspeed.

Preceding the morning's sermon, the invocation was offered by Elder John A. Robinson, of Indianapolis, Indiana, an offertory, "The coming of the magi," was played on the organ by Robert Miller, and an anthem, "Be not afraid," from "The Messiah," was sung by the Stone Church Choir, directed by Professor Paul N. Craig, Robert and George Miller accompanying on the organ and piano.

As speaker of the morning, Apostle J. F. Curtis read for a scripture lesson Acts 26:1-23, taking verse 19: "Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision," for his text. Vividly Brother Curtis sketched the story of Paul's trip from Jerusalem to Damascus, his encounter with the heavenly messenger on the road, his blindness, his conversion. Other incidents in his life helped to remind the congregation that Paul was a zealous worker, a staunch and fearless character, one chosen of God for a great work. He who had persecuted the Christians was persecuted for being one of them, but when surrounded by foes he had so conducted his life that he could turn to God for help and receive it. He was obedient to his heavenly vision, and through him many were made obedient to this vision. In latter days God has sent men out with the heavenly vision given to Paul, that the children of the earth might know the truth and learn of the gospel. Many have been faithful in this duty; some have failed, but the vital issue today is: Are we living true to our heavenly vision? This is a question which we must solve many times, for the tempter is seeking to lead us from the paths of righteousness. He wants us to shirk our responsibility. We must lift up our eyes to our heavenly vision, take up our work, and be true.

The junior orchestra from Walnut Park, under the direction of Sister Ethel Moorman, visited the junior department at the Campus. Their program of music, solos, and readings was very much enjoyed. As it was the birthday Sunday for April, Sister Estella Wight told the birthday story.

K L D S Sunday Activities

Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell conducted the Bible study hour at half past eight Sunday morning. Music for this hour was arranged by Miss Vera Redfield, and was presented by Dorothy Peeke, vocal soloist; Jamie McPherson, violinist; Lucille Street, pianist. The story was told by Miss Lillie Hanson. The usual eleven o'clock service in the main auditorium was broadcast.

At two in the afternoon K L D S studio program was presented by a string trio directed by Orrin K. Fry, senior. This feature included the following selections: "Mignonette overture," by Baumann; "Polish national dance," Scharwenka; "Celebrated minuet," Boccherini; "Humoresque," Dvorak; "Berceuse," from "Jocelyn," by Godard; "Spring song," Mendelssohn; "Traumerei," Schumann.

K L D S radio church took the air at three o'clock. This service was presented by the Westminster Presbyterian Gospel Team, of Mount Washington; music by the Presbyterian Church Choir; sermonet, P. C. Ness.

At the vesper hour, music was arranged by Nina Grenawalt Smith and presented by a quartet consisting of Mrs. Smith, Lulu Tyrrell, Edward Brackenbury, and Frank Russell, assisted by a ladies' quartet. Sermonet by Elder U. W. Greene.

The last service of a busy day began at fifteen minutes after nine. At this Latter Day Saint studio service Robert Miller was organist and with a mixed quartet furnished the music. Sermonet was by Apostle Myron McConley.

Evening Services

After missing two sessions, the Religio met in the Stone Church auditorium at its regular meeting hour, six o'clock. More than two hundred students were present, and all seemed glad to meet again. "Yes, I enjoyed conference," one sister agreed, "but it does seem so comfortable to get back into our regular classes." This feeling was mutual. At seven the program was presented and consisted of a very pleasing musical reading, one of the psalms of David, by little Miss Helen Ritch, a piano duet by Misses Melva Ward and Nida Vincent, and a reading, "A half hour on the beach," by Mrs. Dewey McNamara.

Elder John F. Sheehy was in charge of the song service, which is a part of the family program of the evening. "Praise ye the Lord," "O Jesus, the giver," and "Speak gently," were sung by the congregation. A feature of particular interest at this service was the singing of "Memories of Galilee," Miss Thelma Vincent singing the verses and the congregation assisting her on the chorus.

An appropriate song, "Lift your glad voices," was the opening song of the evening hour, and prayer was by Brother Zeno Booker.

Apostle Myron A. McConley, the evening's speaker, took two texts for his short discourse: "Have faith in God," and "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matthew 24:14.) "It seems quite evident if the gospel is to be preached as a witness to the world it must be witnessed with the Spirit accompanying it. Those who take the message must themselves have a testimony, and the Spirit must accompany them," he began. Then he launched out into an interesting story of how his assurance of the truth of the three standard books of the church, particularly the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, has been confirmed by the faith and words of the Hawaiian Saints. He assured his hearers that on this mission he was made to realize that God is no respecter of persons, telling of the faith and works of native elders of the islands, and relating how God blessed his missionaries temporarily as well as spiritually. One of the vital conclusions drawn from his experiences in this mission is: "It makes all the difference in the world the cause for which we are working."

Following the short sermon, the lights were extinguished and the congregation sang from a song slide or two, and the moving pictures, "Abraham, the patriarch," of the Palestine series, were shown, after which in quiet and order the assemblage was dismissed by Elder C. Ed. Miller.

Liberty Street

Under the direction of Sister Leona Robinson, the junior choir furnished the music for the morning preaching service.

Brother George Jenkins was the speaker, his text being taken from Matthew 6: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." In his discourse he presented many new thoughts, the results of study and investigation, to his listeners.

At the Religio hour a group of young people gave an attractive play, "In the palace of the king," the presentation of which was enjoyed and appreciated by all present.

The senior choir supplied the music at the evening service, at which time Elder William I. Fligg was the speaker. His subject was "The value of prayer," and he stated that great things are expected of the Saints and the ministry, much greater than they alone can do; these things can be accomplished only by divine assistance and guidance brought about through prayer. Brother Fligg read from Luke 18: "And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray, and not to faint," stressing the necessity of praying without ceasing, that we may not enter into temptation. The people of Liberty Street have had the privilege of hearing Brother Fligg preach before. All were glad to welcome him again and receive the inspiration of his sermon.

Walnut Park

The two weeks of conference passed without services here except Sunday school, which Superintendent R. Barnhardt maintained in every department with fair attendance, considering the temptation to many to be at the Auditorium.

On Sunday, the 24th, regular meetings were resumed, beginning at eight o'clock with a very active prayer meeting, many expressing renewed determination to be more thoroughly engaged in good works. Brother W. H. Taylor was called for the opening talk, he with his wife being here from Thamesville, Ontario, for conference and to visit their son, John A. Taylor, and family. Brother W. H. Taylor is a cousin to J. J. Cornish and was the first to influence Brother Cornish to think favorably of our church.

At eleven o'clock we listened to a sermon by Elder Hubert Case, which glowed with anticipation of the possibilities of work to be accomplished by Latter Day Saints who work whole-heartedly. It was a sermon to cause indifferent ones to realize what they are losing.

In the evening the junior orchestra played at Religio, and a few members of the regular orchestra played while pictures from Palestine, bringing memories of Abraham's experiences, were being shone.

Elder R. D. Weaver was the speaker following the pictures, encouraging his hearers to cast their burdens on the Lord and live so close to him as to learn all he may mean to us. After reminding us what the name Jesus may come to mean to his followers, he led to self-examination of what our own name may mean in our community—now and when recalled by our acquaintances in later years. It was a thought not easily forgotten after the service closed.

General Conference appointments revealed the decision that our pastor, Elder Glau Smith, is to be transferred to another pastorate in a few weeks. This caused general dismay in the district, and it is a common expression that the authorities will have difficulty in supplying a successor that can actually fill Brother Smith's place, as he has served well in so many ways. However, we trust our loyalty to the whole church will enable us to yield gracefully to a change, and that Brother Smith and his companion will be abundantly blessed in extending their services to others.

Enoch Hill

Attendance at the union prayer service held at the church last Wednesday evening was depleted by the rain which continued throughout the evening.

The Enoch Hill Choir sang "The thorn-crowned king," an Easter cantata, Sunday morning to an appreciative audience. Considerable time was taken in the preparation of this musical effort, but the chorister and members of the choir felt they were amply repaid for their work.

At the request of Brother Joe Martin, in charge of our work at Woods' Chapel, Missouri, the choir presented the cantata at that place at eight o'clock Sunday evening. A fair crowd composed of Saints and nonmembers was present. A number of Enoch Hill Saints attended in order that they might hear the cantata a second time.

Elder H. E. Winegar was the speaker at seven o'clock.

Spring Branch

With renewed zeal the people of this branch entered into the Sunday services after their two weeks' vacation during conference. Many expressions such as "How good it seems to be home again!" were heard.

Elder E. Y. Hunker preached a fine sermon on "Counting the cost" at the eleven o'clock hour. A prelude "To the moon," by Rosamond Filson and vocal solo, "Blessings," by Mrs. Corinne Haines French, were special musical features of this service, as was "Melody in F," by Misses Gibler, Mabbott, and Winnogene Smith, at the close of the Sunday school hour.

The choir is sponsoring a series of plays to be given in the near future by a group of players from Kansas City. Season tickets will be sold at one dollar for six evenings' entertainment. We will have more complete details of this movement next week.

Sister N. A. Nichols and daughter, of Flint, Michigan, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. McClain, during and since the conference session.

A large audience greeted Brother Hubert Case at the evening service. His illustrated lecture on the American Indian was interesting and instructive. This was a sort of Oklahoma service. Brother J. M. Terry was in charge, and Brother H. K. Roland, of Oklahoma, assisted.

Next Sunday evening moving pictures of "A Pilgrimage to Palestine" series will be shown. All are welcome.

Englewood

Sunday, April 24, was a record Sunday in attendance at Sunday school, one hundred forty-five being present. If our numbers keep on growing, as we hope they will, we shall soon have to add the upper story of our church building.

Elder A. M. Chase was our morning speaker. He also gave us an illustrated lecture on Hawaii in the evening, both of which were very much enjoyed by all. Brother Chase, with the real missionary spirit, tried to show his hearers the necessity of missionary work. His daughter, Sister S. A. Burgess, sang a beautiful solo at the evening service.

The choir will occupy the evening hour next Sunday with an Easter cantata under the direction of Sister Hougas.

Spokane, Washington

During the past few weeks we have been made to feel more and more that the Lord is truly working with his church. Not only have many of our sick been greatly blessed, but our young people's prayer services have been a source of inspiration to everyone who attended. Nearly every Sunday morning when our young people meet in the little back room of the church, the Lord's Spirit is poured out in great abundance. We have been told many times that the Lord is pleased with our efforts and that many of our number shall be prepared for Zion if we only remain faithful. The number of attendants grows from Sunday to Sunday.

The Sunday school is growing, slowly but steadily, and every effort is being put forth to teach our young the doctrines and principles of the church. We have a large department of intermediates, who are all studying the Young People's Church History. We feel especially proud of our primary department, which is the largest department in the school. All the schools of the district have entered into a contest instituted by District Sunday School Superintendent B. E. Hart. This contest lasts for one quarter, at the end of which time the winning school is presented with a pennant which it keeps until the end of the next quarter, when it is again presented to the winner. Sandpoint is the winner this quarter, with one hundred twenty points out of a possible two hundred. They will be presented with a large purple and gold pennant. We feel that this contest has been very beneficial, for much interest has been created in Sunday school work by means of it. The Spokane local has added one more requirement that must be filled in order to have a class reported perfect. Each member of the class must have stood with bowed head during the opening prayer.

The Department of Women is doing splendid work under the able leadership of Sister Elba Crum. During the past few weeks they have been studying the family budget, time budget in the home, kitchen, bedroom, etc., and have now decided to take up a course in citizenship, so, as well as good Latter Day Saints, we shall have some good American citizens.

The Religio is hard at work, with Brother W. W. Wood as president. Old as well as young are surely afforded an excellent opportunity to improve their talents. Besides the period of class work, which is devoted to the study of the Book of Mormon and Bible history, a very interesting program is presented each Friday evening. Plans are being made to enter a baseball team in the City Church League this year.

For the last four months, we have been publishing a little district Good News bulletin, which we feel is doing a wonderful lot of good. Each issue contains an article by the district president and bishop's agent, besides other articles and branch news. The scattered Saints, especially, anxiously await each issue.

Brother Robert McDole, of Sagle, Idaho, who has been critically ill for several months, is now greatly improved. In a letter to Good News, his wife states, "We feel that we owe the present measure of Brother McDole's recovery to the faith and prayers of God's people. He is able to sit up some each day now, and we trust as the weather warms he will improve more rapidly. We know that through his terrible seige of sickness there has come to us a blessing, and we have learned many things and have been drawn closer to our heavenly Parent, as well as to our brothers and sisters. Our hearts have been made to rejoice many times during the past three months because of letters of encouragement and messages of love that have come to us from far and near. It seems we have to suffer sometimes to find out just how wonderful our friends are and how loving and kind God's children can be in times of trouble."

Plans are well under way for the district reunion to be held at Upper Twin Lakes, thirty-seven miles from Spokane, June 17 to 27. We all anxiously await the reunion, for it seems to give us added strength to strive on toward our goal.

Woodbine, Iowa

April 20.—Like our neighbor States, we are having plenty of rain; very little farming has been done as yet. So whenever Sol shows his face, everybody smiles back approvingly.

Conference delegates have returned, expressing themselves as being stronger in the faith than ever before, and delighted with the bright outlook of the church. They are also cheered by the satisfaction of having held the conference in the Auditorium.

On April 10 Brother Howard A. Reynolds and Sister Marjorie Davis were united in marriage by Elder George Young. We wish for these efficient young people a long life of happiness and willing service to the church.

A touching baptismal service was witnessed last Sunday, when two little girls, Evelyns McKee and Dorothy Baughman, were baptized by the latter's father, Brother Elvin Baughman. "My times are in thy hands," the choice of eight-year-old Dorothy, was sung.

We are hoping and praying for a spiritual conference when our district convenes at Missouri Valley April 23 and 24.

Fresno, California

April 21.—Saints of Fresno Branch have cause for much rejoicing. The attendance at sacramental services has increased until we were compelled to buy another communion service and bread tray. Also the attendance at our weekly prayer services has grown, nearly all seats being filled last Wednesday evening. At that meeting all were united in thought and purpose, and we felt the Spirit of the Master prevailing.

The branch being badly in need of more seating capacity, Brother W. F. Crane stated if the branch would subscribe fifty dollars towards starting a building fund, he would provide seats free of charge. His offer was accepted and the fund created, even nonmembers subscribing. One young sister, who is compelled to earn her own living, subscribed another fifty dollars. The amount is climbing, giving us hope that in the near future we may have our much-needed new church.

April 10 was set aside as "Humane Sunday." Sister Inez Crane had charge of the program in the Religio and called for volunteers. Several responded with stories or narratives of experiences which were very interesting and inspiring.

Easter Sunday was a wonderful day for this branch. A splendid program was rendered by the Sunday school, numbers being featured by the Temple Builders, Oriole Girls, and various classes. All these are worthy of mention, especially the primary class, under the leadership of Sister J. R. Buchanan.

At three o'clock occurred two baptisms, one a lady from Dinuba, the other a promising young lady in our own midst. All were glad to welcome them. The sermons of the day were "An Easter message," by Elder Alma Andrews, in the morning, and "Bearing the cross," by Brother L. W. Roberts, in the evening, both being thoroughly enjoyed.

In the article, "The function of music in the church," written by Mabel Carlile, and printed in the DAILY HERALD of April 16, Sister Carlile is wondering if "the plan of having a general music director in charge of all musical activities in the branch" has been used and with what success. We are glad to report that the Fresno Branch has put that plan into effect, and it is proving very satisfactory under the supervision of Brother L. W. Roberts.

There has been very little sickness among our people, and for this we are truly thankful.

Fargo, North Dakota

Under the Spirit of Exhortation

April 19.—The beautiful springtime is here, and soon nature will be at her best. We often sing, "Look for the beautiful." If we only stop to look for the beautiful in life, we will be surprised how much there is; not only in nature, but elsewhere. We should cease to complain and be cheerful in our warfare. As we "catch" the "spring fever" when the sun's rays shine down in glorious warmth and the lovely green grass is forming a soft carpet over the earth, so we ought to partake of newness of spirit and fresh courage of heart, with a stronger faith in this the church of the living God, after such a glorious, peaceful, and happy conference. Our hearts should be made to rejoice that God so blessed his people and the beloved leader of this church, Frederick M. Smith. "Awake, Saints, awake; No time now for reposing; The Lord is near breaks on the ear; Oh, come, come away."

Let us give our best service, not half-way, but wholehearted service. It is through service we develop. We do not know what powers may be within us unless we put our energy into action. Service means doing for our fellow men. We can never become heirs of his kingdom by living on in a selfish way. Our prayers must be unselfish. Jesus' prayers showed his thoughts were for others. Prayer meant much to Jesus; it should mean much to us. Especially should we render prayers of appreciation. As President F. M. Smith says, We have been wandering in the wilderness long enough, we should now put forth the best within us to prepare for the gathering in the way God has commanded. By following in the footsteps of Jesus, we will really show the meaning of our religion.

It is necessary to repent daily and to pay heed to the preached word, to take time to study, be prompt to services, forgive our fellow men; as our home over there is built on the material we send over. Let us be careful; let us think, not hurry on in life and neglect the things of God. Are we a Mary or a Martha? We should not spend too much time and strength on material things and neglect the spiritual; much wisdom is needed to know how to properly spend our time in this age of civilization.

News of the Branch

The Department of Women gave a food sale on April 2. Through the kindness of one of the merchants of the city, the sisters were given free space and tables in his store and an invitation to come back at any time. The net proceeds amounted to twenty-one dollars and eighty cents. A few pieces of fancywork were also sold. This fund will be used for the benefit of the church here. The sisters all responded liberally with food donations, and we hope to have more sales in the future.

On March 28 a baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Julius Wilson, at Saint Luke's Hospital. Mrs. Wilson was formerly Pearl Dehn. The proud parents are rejoicing over the arrival.

Brother Floyd Blakely has returned from Valley City and plans to spend the summer here if he can obtain employment.

Those of our little folks who have been having a very "measley" time are Kenneth, Deanie, and Marvin Konietzka and Baby Earl Lurett Rotzien. All are recovering nicely. Fargo is having a real epidemic of measles.

Elder Robert Gunlock made a flying trip to Fargo on Monday, March 28, preached an interesting sermon Monday evening, after which the Saints were invited to the home of Sister John Konietzka to enjoy a treat of homemade candy. Brother Gunlock left the next morning for Frazee, Minnesota.

Brother John Rotzien is able to work again after being laid up with the flu for three weeks.

Sister Cora Dehn has gone to Kragness, Minnesota, to spend an indefinite time with her daughter, Mrs. Julius Wilson.

Brother Roy Freeman has moved his family on to a farm ten miles south of town.

Sister Iva Wiedling has returned home from Leonard, North Dakota. Her husband has also returned from his trip to California. They anticipate moving west in the fall.

The prayer service Easter morning was very much enjoyed. One sister said, "Let us be more saving, spend less for clothes, etc., and help to send more missionaries into the field." Another was heard to say that she did not wear her new Easter bonnet, as she felt this was a day to hold sacred the memory of the sacrifice of our Savior and not for a showing of nice clothes. Thousands of dollars are spent each year by people of the world for fine attire with little thought of what the day really means.

The weather is ideal here now, yards are being made beautiful by a thorough "clean-up," and gardens are being planted. The Saints especially should aim to have their lawns and property in neat and attractive condition. And this should be observed by them wherever they are.

Our pastor, Elder Thomas Leitch, and Sisters Ferne Shackow and Elsie Brown have just returned from General Conference. They come bringing good news and feeling blessed spiritually.

The Saints here join with the Saints all over the world and say, "Forward to 1930."

Mishawaka, Indiana

April 23.—Eagerly we have read the DAILY HERALD, bringing news of the late peaceful conference. How much many of the Saints would have liked to be in attendance! But as a branch we feel we were given just a taste of the feast that was enjoyed there. On the evening of April 6 we sang the same songs that were sung at the opening of General Conference, and Easter Sunday we observed with fasting and prayer until after the morning service. We did not know until we received the DAILY HERALD that General Conference was observing the day in this way. We were given a sweet portion of the divine Spirit and feel strengthened for the year that is before us. When we can worship in unity, though in different places, we feel we are one, and the promise is, "If ye are one, ye are mine."

Our attendance has been very good at all services held during the past month. The greatest attendance at our weekly prayer meeting was thirty-five. Several nonmembers have been meeting with us, and we trust arrangements can be made for a missionary effort in the future. The Sunday evening service has made a decided gain, which we hope will continue. The Saints here are a busy band, and the field is wide, giving opportunity for intensive labor. Our solicitor made the statement that thus far in this year he had written receipts for more tithes and offerings than were written during the entire year of 1926.

The advice of the district chorister was heeded, and a fine piano was purchased. Owing to the splendid support given the pie social the first of the month, the debt has been nearly lifted.

The Department of Women held a bazaar on April 16, and though it rained nearly the entire day, their receipts were such that they feel repaid for their effort.

We feel that we can say with the church, "Onward to 1930."

Some have difficulty in finding our meeting place here. Located in Mishawaka, the meeting place is to be found one block west of Logan Street, on Milburn Boulevard. This is convenient for all, since the Saints are located in and around both cities (Mishawaka and South Bend). We trust missionaries or Saints passing through South Bend will stop with us. The correspondent's home address is 817 Dale Avenue, Mishawaka. A South Side car from either city will reach Dale Avenue.

We are expecting Elder S. W. L. Scott for Sunday, the 24th, and looking forward to some good meetings.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, April 10.—Our branch is doing nicely. Though there are not so many out to services, the Spirit has been ours to enjoy, and many times has the power of the Lord been with us, pleading with some to come up higher and give their services to the Savior.

On Sunday, April 3, we voted on our Sunday school hour, for our time has changed. This resulted in the decision to meet at the usual hour, half past nine. Our number was not so large the following Sunday, but we had a good service. The Lord has said where two or three are met together in his name there he will be in their midst. And he was with us at this meeting.

We are glad to report that Forrest Crabtree, the son of Brother and Sister Luther Crabtree, who underwent an operation Wednesday, April 6, is recovering rapidly, and is now at the home of his parents, 1004 Eighth Street, Portsmouth, Ohio.

On Sunday evening, April 3, the Lord claimed Brother Sheridan E. Crabtree, one of our number who was baptized last fall, and for some months has been ill. Elder Wigget, of McDermott, preached the funeral sermon to a large audience. The body was laid to rest in the Pleasant Valley Cemetery.

We are planning for a Children's Day program, Sunday, June 12, and an all-day meeting. A good time is anticipated. Come and bring your baskets.

Gladstone, Michigan

April 18.—On March 20 we held our quarterly branch business meeting. The president of the branch was in charge. Reports came from the priesthood, superintendents of the Religio, Sunday school, Department of Women, home class department, and from the treasurer of the branch. The branch president made mention of the good work of all the departments, especially the home class department, which has never been worked to any great extent. For all the work done, the branch has been and is very thankful.

Since our last report, our Department of Recreation and Expression has been very active. On April 1 we had a debate which proved very interesting. It was on the question, "Resolved that good neighbors are of more benefit than good literature," and the affirmative team won by a big majority.

The first Sunday of April we had our sacramental service. It was in charge of the branch president, Milo Boomer, Priest Bert Welch, and our branch teacher. The spirit was truly with us, each one shedding tears of joy. The gifts of the gospel were manifested in prophecy and admonition to the young Saints to be faithful.

In the evening, preaching service was in charge of Brothers

MISCELLANEOUS

Requests for Prayers

Sister T. N. Smith, of Independence, Missouri, asks the prayers of all the Saints in her behalf, that if it be the Lord's will she may be relieved of severe noises which have troubled her for years, in the head and ears.

Conference Notices

The Kansas City Stake will meet in quarterly conference May 15 and 16. Sunday, May 15, services will be as follows: 11 a. m., preaching service; 2:30 p. m., social service; 4:15, stake priesthood meeting; at the same hour the Department of Women will hold a meeting. All boys and girls of adolescent age will be expected to attend this meeting. Brother Floyd McDowell will talk to these young people. At 7:15 p. m. there will be a song service, and at 7:45, preaching. Monday night, 7:45 will occur the business session. Two resolutions which were deferred from last conference will be given consideration at this time. Other important business will come before the conference, and it is desired that as many of the members as can will attend. Luncheon will be served all day Sunday, and we hope to have excellent speakers, which will be announced later. J. A. Tanner, stake president.

Conference Minutes

SOUTHERN NEW ENGLAND.—The annual conference of the Southern New England District met with the Boston Branch, at Somerville, Massachusetts, March 12 and 13. District officers were chosen officers for the conference. Reports were read from district president, district missionary, and pastors of eight of the eleven branches of the district. Statistical reports showed a gain of twenty-two in the district. The present membership is 1,187. Reports from quorum of priests and eastern quorum of elders were had. The appointment of Beatrice York as district chorister, was ratified. There was a discussion concerning the buying of a projecting machine for use in the district; it was finally referred to the district budget committee. George D. Sinclair, Frank S. Dobbins, and E. H. Fisher compose the advertising committee appointed to advertise district affairs throughout the district. The treasurer reported a balance of $311.59 on hand. Election of officers for the year resulted as follows: President, W. A. Sinclair; first vice president, E. L. Traver; second vice president, T. J. Elliott; secretary, Frank S. Dobbins; treasurer, M. C. Fisher; auditors, Everett York, Nina Davison. Historian, E. M. Brown, was ratified. Delegates to General Conference are: T. J. Elliott, Thomas Whipple, Florence Fisher, M. C. Fisher, E. L. Traver, Leah Traver, Herman Chelline, D. F. Joy, E. H. Fisher, John Whipple, Louise Fox. These delegates are to cast full vote of district and, in case of division, majority and minority vote. It was decided that the district presidency arrange a get-together outdoor Sunday meeting somewhere in the country between Boston and Providence during the spring or early summer. A committee consisting of Sanford Fisher, Ralph Hardy, Bertram Lewis, Edward Joy, Dorothy Elliott, and Florence Leland was appointed to provide and arrange for a young people's convention. Next annual district conference will be at Boston March 10 and 11, 1928. A priesthood meeting was held Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. At the prayer service, at 9 o'clock, forty-five testimonies were heard, and the hour and a half was well filled with good thoughts, and a good spirit was manifested. At 10:45 a problems service was held. Many questions were propounded and answered quickly by the president and bishop. Dinner was served in the lower auditorium by the Department of Women of Boston Branch at 12 o'clock. At 2:30 the sermon was by Elder T. J. Elliott, of Providence, and there was special music by Mrs. Louise Fox and Mr. John Jackson, of Providence, and by the Attleboro Trio, composed of Earl, Raymond, and Albert Bradshaw. Before the close of this service, the following resolution was offered and a rising vote called for, which received a unanimous response: Whereas, the district has long been blessed by the efficient service of Sister Susie Sinclair as secretary, who has given the keeping of its records and all phases of the work connected with it the most painstaking care and made of it a consecrated service, and Whereas,

Boomer and Denio, the subject being "The Lord's supper."

The Religio met on April 7 and went to the home of Brother Rassmuson, where we had a wiener roast.

On May 1 the young people of the Upper Peninsula will meet at this place for a one-day meeting. The committee in charge consists of Brother M. Boomer, John Rassmuson, and H. Roy Denio.

The Lord has blessed us by being in our midst and bringing us to a closer unity of the faith. May God still continue to bless his children everywhere.

H. ROY DENIO.

we would express to Sister Sinclair at this time the appreciation of the district for her services and thank her for the efficient labor which has made our records a matter of reliable historical data for the years to come and which will serve as inspiration for others who shall follow in this office, we move that the district recognize her labor by a vote of thanks. Sister Sinclair has served the district as assistant secretary and secretary for nearly twenty-five years. At the evening service the district missionary, Herman Chelline, was the speaker, with special solos by Philip Lewis and Beatrice York, of Boston.

Our Departed Ones

CHENEY.—Mrs. Nevada Cheney was born Nevada Iowa Stewart, at Louisa, Iowa, in 1871. She united with the church in her early years, and her eyes have been turned Zionward all the years of her life. In young womanhood, she married G. I. Cheney and raised eight children, teaching them the principles of the gospel and stressing the financial law. On February 18, 1927, she passed from this life at Dover, Oklahoma, admonishing her children gathered at her bedside to continue in the path of righteousness. Funeral services were held in the Christian Church, at Dover, Elder Lemuel Dyke officiating. Interment in the Kingfisher Cemetery.

McLAUGHLIN.—Elizabeth Perry McLaughlin was born in 1878 and was a member of the church twenty-six years. In young womanhood she married Marion McLaughlin, jr. Died at her home near Vales Mills, Ohio, Saturday, March 19, 1927, following a lingering illness due to a complication of diseases. She is survived by her husband, three daughters, and two sons. Funeral services were held Thursday, March 24, at Vales Mills. Sermon by Elder D. V. Cummings. Burial in Mace Cemetery.

DOOLEY.—Charles A. Dooley was born December 5, 1871, near Seneca, Missouri. Married Mayme Thorp September 22, 1894, at Cherokee, Kansas, and to them seven children were born, all of whom are living, with the exception of Leslie, who passed away during the influenza epidemic of 1918. Brother Dooley united with the church in 1905 and was ordained an elder in 1917. He was a consistent church worker, and his services will long be remembered. Passed on April 7, 1927, at his home in Mulberry, Kansas, and leaves to mourn his departure, his wife, three sons, Dick, Rolla, John; three daughters, Mrs. Alma Dixon, Mrs. Fern Myers, Mrs. Opal Curless; twelve grandsons and one granddaughter; three brothers, W. O., Walter, and Alve; four sisters, Mrs. C. D. Foster, Mrs. Elsie Fisher, Mrs. Dora Anglen, and Mrs. Esther Evans, and many friends. Funeral services were conducted from the Methodist Church. Sermon by Amos T. Higdon. Interment in Mulberry Cemetery.

CURRIE.—Elizabeth Jones Currie was born in Wales September 7, 1839, and when a child came to America with her parents, first settling in Utah, then coming to Iowa in 1874, where she spent her life. She married a Mr. Wilkins, by whom she had one son. After his decease, she married Robert Currie March 24, 1861, who died December 15, 1922. By her late husband she had nine children, eight of whom are still living. She was baptized when a child but was rebaptized January 2, 1870, into the Reorganized Church, remaining a faithful Saint for more than fifty-six years. Died April 3, 1927. She leaves besides the children already mentioned, thirty-five grandchildren, eighteen great-grandchildren, and a host of friends who have been made better by her saintly life. Funeral services were held April 5, at Council Bluffs, conducted by Elders J. F. Mintun and George R. Beaty, the former delivering the sermon. Interment was at Crescent, Iowa.

CRYER.—Dorothy Vivian, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Cryer, Saint Joseph, Missouri. Born on Monday evening, April 18, the little one passed from this life the following night. Though her stay was short, it was a sweet blessing to the parents, who will ever look forward to meeting their little daughter in a happier realm. The service was held at Fleeman-Faris Funeral Home, Saint Joseph, Missouri, by Bishop Milo Burnett, and Elder O. Salisbury. Interment at Ashland Cemetery.

BILLINGS.—Myrtle E. Billings was born December 7, 1888, at Castine, Maine, and was baptized July 1, 1906, at Little Deer Isle, by Elder W. E. LaRue. Married Arthur Billings August 12, 1906, and passed away April 6, 1927. She was a kind, devoted wife and mother and will be sadly missed in the home circle, as well as in the church. She was chorister in the home branch and teacher in the Sunday school. Surviving her are her husband, eight children, and many other relatives and friends. The floral offerings gave evidence of the love and esteem with which the Saints regarded her. Funeral services were held April 8, Elder Henry R. Eaton officiating.

BURKE.—Isabell Phillips Burke, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Phillips, was born at Farmington, Iowa, December 1, 1860. She was united in marriage to C. E. Burke, January 16, 1883, and five children were born to them. United with the church May 2, 1886, at Lucas, Iowa, and unto death upheld the truthfulness of the gospel. Passed away at Danville, Illinois, March 9, 1927, her parents, three sisters, and one brother having preceded her in death. Left to mourn her departure are her husband, three daughters: Gertie Stokes, of Hiteman, Iowa; Ethel Thomas, of Chariton, Iowa; Faye McDonald, Chicago; two sons: John, of Danville, Illinois, and Ed., of Hiteman, Iowa; three brothers, I. J. Phillips, of Hiteman; B. F. Phillips, of Lucas, Iowa; J. D. Phillips, Des Moines; one sister, Mrs. J. A. Evans, Chariton, Iowa; nine grandchildren, and other relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted at the Saints' Church, Hiteman, Iowa, Sunday, March 13, by Elder William Wilson, assisted by Elder Edward Rowley. Interment at Oak View Cemetery, Albia.

DUMBAULD.—Mrs. Phoebe Dumbauld, was born June 1, 1840, in Fayette County, Pennsylvania. She married John W. Dumbauld December 24, 1860, and they made their home in Pennsylvania, Iowa, and Missouri. Two children were born to them, Mrs. Margaret Berg, of the home address, and Mrs. Frances White, of Berkeley, California. Sister Dumbauld was baptized by Elder D. C. White in the year 1879, in Iowa. Her husband passed away several years ago. She passed away at Independence, Missouri, March 10, 1927, as the result of a stroke of paralysis. Sermon by Elder Ammon White at Carson's chapel, Independence. Interment in Woodlawn Cemetery.

MITCHELL.—Wallace Mitchell was born in Saint Claire, Michigan, July 14, 1869. He married Lucy E. Chapman in the year 1900. To this union six children were born, three boys and three girls. He was baptized into the true faith at Alma, Michigan, June 2, 1918, and was a faithful member. His death was due to painful conditions which set in after the freezing of his feet a number of years ago, and after a long illness, which he bore with fortitude, he departed this life on April 10, 1927. He is survived by his widow and three daughters: Mrs. Roy Hatchfield, of California; Hazel and Grace, of Alma; and three sons, William, Vernon, and Lyman, also of Alma. The funeral was held Wednesday, April 13, in the Saints' church at Alma, Michigan, the service being in charge of Elder Earl G. Falconer, of Midland, Michigan. Interment was in Riverside Cemetery at Alma.

MOEN.—Luella Mathilda Moen was born March 3, 1890, at Lindstrom, Minnesota. She married Ivor Moen, and to them five children were born, two of whom have passed on. Sister Moen was baptized by Elder W. E. Shakespeare a few years ago and lived the life of a faithful Saint. She passed peacefully to rest March 27, 1927, at Pine River, Minnesota. Funeral sermon was by Elder George W. Day.

BLACKBOURN.—John Blackbourn was born in England, January 14, 1839. At the age of four he accompanied his parents to the United States, where he made his home in Wisconsin excepting a few years he lived in Iowa. He enlisted in the Union Army, Company F, Seventh Regiment, Wisconsin Volunteers, serving three years and being wounded twice. In 1866 he married Miss Alice Jane Houghton. To them were born nine children, three sons dying in infancy and Martha Ellen at thirty-six years of age. The living are: Edith Prideaux, Louella Bowen, Myrtle Dutton, Ethel Richardson, and Irving Blackbourn. He united with the Reorganized Church August 7, 1890, being baptized by Elder J. W. Peterson and confirmed by Elder W. S. Pender. For a number of years he was active as a local elder. He loved to tell of the fullness of the restored gospel and was known as a man of faith. He died at his home in Lancaster, Wisconsin, after a short sickness, April 5, 1927, at the age of eighty-eight years. He had three brothers and six sisters, all of whom preceded him in death. Beside his faithful wife, Alice Jane, and his five children, he leaves several grandchildren and many relatives and friends. Funeral was from the Baptist Church at Lancaster, April 7, 1927, at 2 p. m., in charge of Elder G. E. Noble. Sermon by J. O. Dutton. Interment in Hillside Cemetery at Lancaster. A father, a brother, a relative, a friend, tried and true, has gone before.

CAMPBELL.—Harriet A. Hardy Campbell was born May 7, 1854, at Watertown, New York, moving when a small child with her parents to Tweed, Ontario. At the age of fifteen years she married Robert Campbell, and to them two children were born, Adelaide and Willie. At twenty she was left a widow, and in 1875, she was united in marriage to William Campbell, a brother of Robert. To them were born seven children, six of whom are living. She joined the church at Coleman, Michigan, in 1897. With her family she removed to Leduc, Alberta, thence to Sweetgrass, Montana, then to Coram, where she remained during the rest of her life. On February 9, 1927, she underwent an operation, and on the 14th passed away, being seventy-two years, nine months, and seven days old. Left to mourn are her husband at Millet, Alberta, and her children: Mrs. Albert Emens, at Puritan, New York; Mrs. Edward Pogue, Millet, Alberta; Roy Campbell, at Edmonton, Canada; Sidney, Frank, and Willie, and Mrs. Ambat Arneson, of Coram. Two children, Willie and Rossilla, died in early childhood. The funeral was conducted under the auspices of the Order of Moose, and held at the Methodist Church in Kalispell, February 18, Reverend Chester officiating. Sister Campbell was a loving and self-sacrificing mother, a Christian character in the community, and a helpful neighbor. The flowers at her funeral were symbolic of the esteem with which she was regarded by all who knew her.

Investment Versus Speculation

§ THERE is a difference between speculation and investment. Speculation may waste the principal, whereas an investment protects it.

Speculation Is a Lure Investment Has a Purpose

§ THE practice of thrift and frugality has produced many savings accounts which, through wise investment, have made the saver secure against the uncertainties of life.

§ WHILE many have saved and thus protected themselves, equally as many, or perhaps more, have attempted the short cut to a larger income through speculation and have lost.

§ PERHAPS one out of a hundred may gain in this way, but the lure of speculation grows into a habit, and scarcely one out of a thousand retains what "chance" may have brought.

§ THE administrative officers of this church warn against speculation, the lure of which has lost the savings of a lifetime to thousands. They advise careful investment of savings, whether it be one dollar or a thousand. If your heart is in your church, there will your treasure be also.

Church Bonds offer safety with incentive to save, and in addition a guaranteed income on the investment.

Increasing Bounds of Usefulness

§ Making many new friends and meeting old friends during the late General Conference makes this bank feel that its large sphere of usefulness is growing steadily larger.

We can serve you in any banking capacity.

A Methodist Friend Comments on "Busy Man's Tracts"

(From a letter to President Elbert A. Smith.)

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, March 23, 1927.

My Dear Brother and Saint: I want to tell you about what I think of your little sermons called The Busy Man's Tracts. They are wonderful and true, and no one can deny their meaning. All are filled with food for thought, and they make me see Jesus in such an easy way that it just makes one know after all it is easy to be a saint; and with the help of Jesus with our faith it is easy, very easy to take him at his word. Such tracts should be put around in public places. Your church members should give them out. They are words that burn deep into a soul. They would be the means of converting thousands of sinners. Why not take them to the jails and have them passed out at places where they will do the most good. You do not know how many people there are who just hunger for this kind of teaching; and I now can uphold your church, as I know it now, and never did know of it before, outside of the Salt Lake Church. Every minister should praise God for your teachings. I am a Methodist, but I think I will go deeper into the study of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and see if it has not been what I have been seeking for the past forty years of my life. Your tracts should have little racks at the waiting room at the railroads, steamboat lines, and public places, and every member of the church should carry them in his pocket to hand to some stranger. I am sure they would do so much good to mankind.

Such a church is worthy a place in everybody's heart; and every heart, I am sure, would be real in every way for the support of the giving out of these tracts.

God bless and keep you in his work of doing good always, and may you and the elders pray for me that I may be for Him and with Him in every way he would wish me to be. I never saw myself the sinner I have been all these years until tonight, and it all came about through the little tracts which I asked for.

Yours with God's love, I am
HOWARD N. NEFF.

This letter of a Methodist friend who asked for church reading matter and was supplied some "Busy Man's Tracts" bears several lessons for Latter Day Saints. We are going to call attention to some of these.

First: Some of us have adopted the idea that we will be looked upon as undignified if we go about handing out gospel reading matter to those who will accept it. The truth is, there are many who "hunger for this kind of teaching," and who will respect highly the Saint who fills the demand of the soul for the truth as it is found in Christ Jesus. Such as these should not be compelled to ask for the tracts.

Second: There is a place for the literature rack in the public building or the waiting room, and occasionally people watch these racks for fresh literature. When we permit our literature placed in these places to become soiled, or replace the soiled pieces with fresh copies of the same kind, we are making failure out of opportunity for success. Fresh gospel literature should be placed regularly in dignified and attractive containers, that those who wait, or those who pass by, may secure and read some phase of the work of the church.

Third: Our Methodist friend unwittingly or knowingly condemns many Saints when he says, "Every member of the church should carry them [Busy Man's Tracts] in his pockets to hand to some stranger."

Lessons such as our friend has imparted in his letter to the author of the Busy Man's Tracts, President Elbert A. Smith, should not need repeating to a people who have the commission to preach the gospel in all the world.

Changes in K L D S Educational Hour

The William Jewell lecture course series for this season will be concluded Thursday, May 5. Beginning the following Tuesday night, at 7.40, Ralph W. Farrell will enlarge on his Shakespeare feature, which has been broadcast the past few weeks on Thursday evenings at 7.20. The Shakespeare feature will be broadcast each Tuesday and Thursday evening from 7.40 until 8 o'clock. On the 7.20 Thursday evening schedule, Doctor Ball, of Excelsior Springs, will begin a series of health talks. The health talk period has not been broadcast since Doctor Crandall resigned from the Jackson County Health Department. The new series will doubtless continue throughout the summer.

Legislation Re Investments of Church Money in Business

There are several legislative enactments of the late General Conference worthy of further mention. One of these had to do with the investment of church funds in business enterprises.

Over a considerable period of years from time to time, general church funds have been invested in certain business enterprises. Sometimes these investments were made deliberately in the sincere belief that benefits would result to the church in the way of furnishing employment in Zion, or that material service of some sort would be rendered more than justifying the investment. At other times loans were made to help some business tide over an emergency; further loans became necessary to protect the first; and in time the loan became an investment entailing u n w e l c o m e liabilities. These experiences run back through the various administrations of the church: both of the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric.

Numbers of these investments resulted in the end in a net loss. These several successive losses following one upon another over a long period of time created a certain dissatisfaction and were the occasion for adverse criticisms and discontent.

On the other hand, it is to be remembered that at least one such undertaking, The Lamoni Electric Light Plant, begun first to furnish light and power for the Herald Publishing House, and later enlarged to serve Lamoni and several adjacent towns, netted the church a handsome profit. Probably the profits on this one business venture more than balance all the direct losses of general church funds in all other business enterprises in the history of the Reorganization to date (not mentioning the financial gains made in the printing business, in which there has been built up a valuable property with growing assets, all from a negligible investment in the days when the SAINTS' HERALD was printed on a hand press). Ignoring the printing business, in which the church has been engaged almost from its beginning, and which is a legitimate enterprise growing out of the program of declaring the word to all the world, and considering only the profits made by the Lamoni Electric Light Plant, it is probably true that we have gained rather than lost in our business investments, so far as general church funds are directly concerned.

But people generally do not consider the one brilliant success; they are more prone to observe, remember, talk about, and criticize the smaller but recurrent failures and losses. Hence there has been a loss in prestige: a certain disaffection. Some minds have been disturbed. No doubt as a result some have withheld financial support. Moreover, aside from the direct loss of general church funds, there has been a loss of valuable time on the part of general church officials, of quorums, councils, and even General Conference when these matters with their vexatious details have demanded attention and received prolonged discussion from year to year. It would be exceedingly difficult to estimate that loss in dollars and cents.

For these, and other reasons, the following resolution, first unanimously approved by the Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, was subsequently approved by the late General Conference by unanimous vote:

Resolved, That the investment of general church funds in business enterprises be prohibited until adequate financial reserves are accumulated, but that nothing in this resolution shall prevent the investment of such reserves as accumulate in securities of generally recognized stability and value, or through the business orders of the church as authorized by revelation and conference approval.

The resolution speaks for itself. In the event that presently there shall be created a substantial reserve fund adequate to protect the needs of the church in her primary enterprises, it is conceivable that appropriations may be made for investment in selected enterprises under efficient management. That would be a matter to determine later, when and if such a contingency arises. Until that time comes there is to be no further investment of general church funds in business enterprises. The resolution is so worded that it does not prevent the investment of accumulating reserves in securities of stable value.

The spirit of the resolution seemed to be to guarantee to the Saints that their tithes and offering will not be tied up in business ventures, which if not clearly speculative, and hence of the class against which we were warned in the revelation which cautioned us to beware of "the spirit of speculation" (Doctrine and Covenants 127:7), are obviously un-

Forget Me Not

There blooms a tiny flower,
Upon a meadow green;
And in the glowing flower-face
The blue of heaven is seen.

And there ever comes a message
From this little beauty spot;
For always what it whispers is:
"I pray, Forget me not."

certain in their outcome; and to guarantee that the tithes and offerings should be expended in the work commonly considered to be the primary work of the church. The order in which such legitimate needs of the church in her primary work should be considered was indicated by a later resolution, preference being given therein to missionary and pastoral arms of church service.

To invest money in worth-while men is very essential. We must sustain and increase our missionary force, that the gospel may go abroad to all people. We must increase and sustain our pastoral force, that the gains made by proselyting and by natural growth may be consolidated. That was the first work considered by the Master and by him committed to the church under the commission to preach the gospel in all the world to feed the sheep. This we must recognize, and in so doing we need not lose sight of the fact that material Zion must also be built up and developed as wisdom shall direct and opportunity permit.

One Result of the Graceland Endowment

When President George N. Briggs came to the councils of the church and told them that unless Graceland College were endowed with a reasonably large sum of money or income property, it would be impossible for him to keep the church school on the list of accredited institutions for any considerable time, it was unwelcome news to the men composing those councils. They knew what it would mean if two hundred thousand dollars had to be raised to endow Graceland. They knew that unless a large percentage of the friends of the school would partake of the spirit of devoted sacrifice, that such a considerable sum could not be raised within the comparatively short time limit. They knew that if the college were not endowed, a large amount of work and expenditure for a term of years of the recent past would be lost. And they were anxious.

Under these circumstances, prolonged consideration was given the problem, and this unforeseen emergency was not permitted to weaken our standing or impair our usefulness. The campaign to raise $200,000 was launched in November of 1925, and was vigorously pursued until the church at large had an opportunity to render its verdict. The church's answer was satisfactory to the leading men of the church; satisfactory to the North Central Association of Schools and Colleges; satisfactory to the friends and workers of the college. The church had pledged $286,000 for an endowment fund. Of this sum more than $237,000 have been paid in, or almost nineteen per cent above what was the minimum requirement to conserve the church's previous effort and to secure future recognition.

The raising of the college endowment fund has been a matter for congratulation ever since its achievement, or for more than a year, but at the appearance in various newspapers of the country on March 18 of a dispatch which tells of what has happened to those schools not able to reach the requirement, the church should again take comfort.

Eight colleges have been dropped from the accredited list of the North Central Association, and others are likely to be dropped, will be unless they make the grade Graceland College was compelled to climb. It should be a source of satisfaction to all who contributed in any way to the endowment fund that the name of our fair college is not found in the press dispatch which we produce herewith:

Chicago, March 18.—Eight midwestern colleges were dropped from the accredited list of the North Central Association of Colleges and secondary schools yesterday by the committee on higher education. Those failing to measure up to the specifications were:

Lombard College, Galesburg, Illinois; Ripon College, Ripon, Wisconsin; Tarkio College, Tarkio, Missouri; Friends University, Wichita, Kansas; Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio; McPherson College, McPherson, Kansas; Upper Iowa University, Fayette, Iowa; and Hardin College, Mexico, Missouri.

The cause of suspension in each case was the inability of the institutions to meet the endowment requirements which the association maintains are necessary to carry on the educational work on a sound basis.

No action was taken in the case of Drake University at Des Moines, Iowa, pending a second survey by the commission. It was said that certain factors had been brought out since the first inquiry which may change the status of the Iowa institution.

Passing of Community Singing Loss to World

"What has happened to community singing, which did its part in winning the war and afterward made life merrier for age as well as youth?" asks the Independent, Boston. There is a dearth of it now; and even when one finds it, the old gusto is gone and the listless choruses drag through to a drooping end. This ought not to be. There is much more than a social heart warming in popular song, important as that may be in our conglomerate country. The individual's own stimulus is most important of all, for he ought to "go forth to life" with spirit and power.

One can not listen in church, which ought to be the greatest place for community song, without wondering why the gift has fallen into disuse. People mechanically go through the form of opening their hymn books and rising, and then seem abashed into silence by the sound of their own voices.—Exchange.

K L D S to Broadcast Special Features Mothers' Day

For Sunday, May 8, K L D S has prepared a number of programs to celebrate Mothers' Day. The headliner of this series of programs is the vesper program by the K L D S Mothers' Quartet. This program will be broadcast at 6.30, instead of the Walnut Park program, scheduled in last week's HERALD. The Mothers' Quartet is comprised of Mrs. John Watkins, Mrs. Blanche Gault, Mrs. Madge Siegfried, and Mrs. Madge Kueffer.

On the 8.30 Bible study hour program, young people under the direction of Mrs. Bertha Burgess will sing special Mothers' Day numbers, and at eleven o'clock "Mother" will be the subject of the speaker at the Stone Church, and appropriate music will be selected for the hour.

In the afternoon at two o'clock, Clarence Brown, tenor, who recently moved to Kansas City from Omaha where he frequently sang from the W O W station, will assist the K L D S String Trio in its instrumental program and will sing several Mothers' Day numbers.

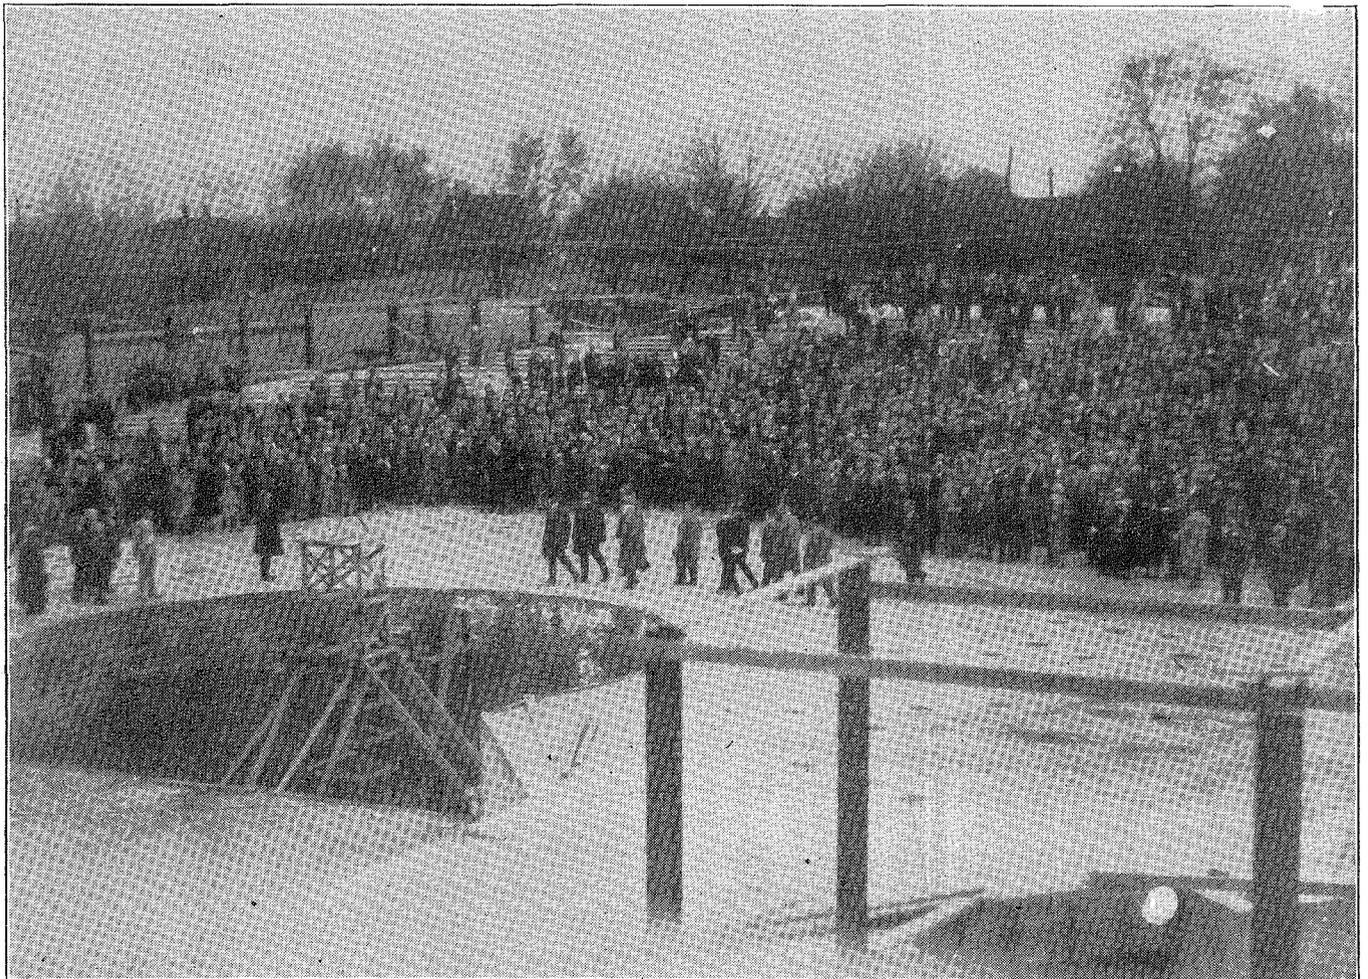

At three o'clock the K L D S Radio pulpit will be occupied by the First Presbyterian Church of Excelsior Springs, Missouri; Reverend C. A. Keicher, pastor.

At 9.15, instead of the regular L. D. S. Studio Service, K L D S will broadcast the oratorio "Olivet to Calvary," sung by the Central Church Choir of Kansas City, under the direction of Thomas Dunn.

Two Interesting Pictures

In these pages we are presenting reproductions of two pictures taken by the Graphic Arts Bureau on Sunday morning, April 17, when for the first time the main floor of the Auditorium Building was used by the Saints. A full report of this meeting was given in DAILY HERALD for April 18.

Leading officers of the Presidency and Twelve may be seen as they were taking their places to lead the meeting, and it is likely this was the most impressive meeting ever held on the site of the Auditorium, which is a part of the original Temple Lot plot of ground.

SAINTS GATHER ON THE GREAT AUDITORIUM SLAB

A VIEW OF THE EASTER SUNRISE MEETING

Which Are You Doing?

Are you guiding the steps of your boy in the direction of destruction; the unnecessary taking of any or of many forms of life? Or, are you trying to furnish him with means to engross his attention and direct his effort which will make of him a builder, a constructive force in the world's man power?

The American Humane Education Society, through its Press Bureau, box 144, Copley Square, Boston, Massachusetts, recently mailed a card to its list which presents a pretty lesson along this line, and we will reproduce it, that our readers may help in the good work.

A Plea for the Boy

Here is a fine plea and good suggestion quoted from Douglas Malloch in the American Lumberman:

"Don't buy him a sword and a gun
Whose purpose on earth is to kill;
Don't teach him that murder is fun

Or something the bosom to thrill;
Don't send him to valley or hill
To slaughter the dove or the daw,
A lesson in youth to instill,
Just give him a hammer and saw."

The camera and radio are also fine substitutes for the gun, as possessions of men in the making. Kindness is the one tongue that all humankind can understand and that all creatures may be made to feel. It is the language that holds the balance of power in settling difficulties between individuals and nations; for, after all, a heart made kind means a mind above crime.—J. R. Nichols.

Standing High Council Meets

On Friday morning, April 29, at 10.30, the Standing High Council convened at the Council Room in the Battery Block, being presided over by President Floyd M. McDowell, who without assistance for the first time presided over the sessions of the council, so continuing until it finished its work on the evening of April 30. Further meetings of the Standing High Council are to occur in the near future, during the month of May.

The Story of the Resurrection

Easter Sermon by President Elbert A. Smith, at the Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, April 17, 1927.

II. THE INTELLECTUAL APPEAL

The story of Christ's resurrection comes to us, as I have already said, with a powerful intellectual as well as emotional appeal. The emotional appeal we have considered. Let us now turn to the other.

Probably the common thought on this occasion is of the victory of life over death. Christ is risen, and we shall live again—our loved ones shall live again. Yet we are reminded occasionally that though death is called the King of Terrors there are things that are worse than death. Long and hopeless suffering is worse than death; shame and dishonor and betrayal of trust are much worse than death. How often is it that we would weep for one yet living and wish that he had died honorably. The angel said to Joseph, "You shall call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins."

He does not come alone to save us from the grasp of death. He does not come alone to save us from the consequences of our sin; he comes to save us from sin. That means a great deal more than periodical forgiveness. That means that he will save his people from the grasp and the power and the influence of evil. He made the statement, "I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, and have the keys of hell and of death." It is to be conceived that hell might yield up one who had suffered his sentence and had paid the penalty; but there would never be safety for him until he had been saved from his desires to do wrong. No man can ever be saved permanently from the consequences of sin until he is saved from sin itself.

How will he save his people from their sins? First of all, through the power of the gospel. The gospel is "the power of God unto salvation," not that through the ordinances of the gospel, such as repentance and baptism, we are automatically and mysteriously in some way transformed and saved instantly from the power of sin; but because, as some one recently testified, "When the gospel came to me it showed me a new way to live." Not only through the power of the gospel; but also through the personal help of our Lord and Savior. There is no system of ethics and there is no system of philosophy or moral teachings that is adequate to save humanity, for the reason that many men, perhaps millions of them, already know what they ought to do, and to a great extent they know what they ought not to do; but they find themselves bound with the chains of habit so they can not or do not help themselves.

I recall a conversation I had some years ago in the city of San Bernardino in company with Brother George Wixom, with a young and wealthy and educated man who had traveled all around the world. When we were about through with our conversation, he said, "Mr. Smith, the trouble with me is, I know what I ought to do and I can not do it, and I know what I ought not to do and I can not keep from doing it." I said to him, "My friend, do you mean to tell me that you, a young man, strong, educated, and in the prime of manhood, know what you should do and can not do it and can not refuse to do what you know you should not do—you are not free?" He looked at me with surprise. He lived in the land of the free and the home of the brave. The army and the navy protected him in his freedom. The Star Spangled Banner floated over his head as a guaranty of his liberty. But he was not free. He needed some powerful friend to stoop down and take him by the hand and lift him up and help him to stand. Jesus is that friend.

Jesus said, "If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." His is the perfect law of liberty. And in the same breath, he said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Particularly, I think, truth about our own selves. His message brings to us a new vision of life, for, as the Apostle Paul said, Jesus Christ "brought life and immortality to light." He opens up a whole new vision of what life is and what it means, and those who catch that vision have an intellectual appeal come to them; they have something on which to build their program of life.

I think it is Fosdick who tells the little story that illustrates my point. He tells about a young business man who had an opportunity such as comes occasionally to business men to make a vast fortune in a short time by dishonest methods. He walked back and forth, and the sweat stood on his brow while he struggled with that great temptation; and finally he said, "If I could only be sure of the immortality of the human soul, it would all be very simple." Fosdick adds, "Why sew diamonds on tissue paper?" or, in other words, if that man had no soul, if he was a creature who in a few short days or months or years would forever disappear from existence, why go to all the toil and the sacrifice incident to the accumulation of the costly adornments of the human spirit, virtue, and charity, and integrity, priceless jewels to sew them on a piece of tissue paper that would soon be burned up for ever?

I think the average man will react in about that way concerning the problems of life; and if he really feels he has an immortal soul he has something to build on. If he does not believe it, he has no foundation on which to place his feet. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Christ Jesus." He brings immortality and life to light.

I think I can bring another rather striking illustration from modern life. Clarence Darrow, the great criminal lawyer, is an atheist and a materialist. Not long ago in a public debate he said that man is altogether a machine, just a machine and nothing more. No spirit, no soul; just a machine. And that machine naturally to his mind is purely material. He says that science has analyzed the human body and knows all that is in it, every element and the quantity of each, and that you can buy all of those elements at the corner drug store for ninety cents. "But probably," he adds, "they are not worth it." It may be true, too, that there are men who are not worth ninety cents. There is many a bum and profligate who to society is not worth ninety cents; yet from Clarence Darrow's viewpoint there may be everything in him physically that was in Abraham Lincoln, whose worth to humanity no man could ever estimate in money. What was the difference between Abraham Lincoln and that bum who is not worth ninety cents? Let Clarence Darrow answer. He can not. For the difference is not in the body of Lincoln, but in the man who lived in that body. And that man never was analyzed or evaluated by science.

Can a machine have hope? Can a machine have aspirations? Can a machine do either right or wrong? I should say that a man who feels as does Darrow has no foundation on which to build a worthwhile life.

What is his natural reaction, his viewpoint of life? In Kansas City something over a year ago in a debate with Doctor Durant on the question of "Is life worth living?" Darrow answered, "No!" He said in substance: "I take life as I find it because I find myself here, and I do not like to do such a messy thing as to take a revolver and blow my brains out." He spoke for all atheists and all materialists of all time: they are all pessimists. They have no message but the message of despair, no incentive, no program of life. If they would find a thing to build on, they must borrow it from the gospel of Jesus Christ.

One of the outstanding figures of a generation ago was Ernest Haeckel, a disciple of Darwin, a much more able man than Clarence Darrow, a scientist of repute, who set his hand to overthrow religion, and people at that time thought that he might succeed.

In one of his later lectures, delivered at the University of Berlin as late as the year 1905, he declared that science had positively disproved the three great fundamental ideas of Christianity, the immortality of the human soul, the personality of God, and man's free agency. But, having made that statement, he immediately went on to make this astounding proposition: that, though these ideas are not true, they ought to be preserved in literature because of their great value to young people and in the organization of society. That was the baldest confession of the poverty of atheism I have ever heard. The very man who claimed that these three great principles had been annihilated immediately proposed to borrow them and use them because he knew young people could not develop their characters and society could not be organized excepting on the basis of those great truths.

It reminded me of the old story our fathers used to tell about the man with the "soupstone." A certain man, a vagrant, presented himself at the door of a farmhouse one day and said to the farmer's wife, "I have here a wonderful soupstone. From it, if you will permit me, I will manufacture a nutritious soup that will feed us all." That was a wonderful promise, so the farmer's wife admitted the vagrant, and put the pot on the fire. When the water boiled, he put in his soupstone, and said to her, "Now you may, if you have it, put in a piece of meat, for it will greatly add to the flavor of the soup." Then a little later, on looking into the pot, he said, "Now, if you have a cabbage and some carrots they will still further improve the flavor of the soup." So when humanity asks for bread, atheism gives a stone, and says, "If you will just add the bread and meat from the religion of Jesus Christ we will all dine together!"

Easter is a witness of the immortality of the human soul. It comes to us, therefore, as I have tried to point out to you, with an intellectual as well as an emotional appeal. It brings life and immortality to light. The man who does not believe in immortality and hence feels that life is worth living, will never think it is worth living well. Jesus Christ opens up to us a new vision; we have a new understanding of life because we do have a new vision of immortality. Life not only becomes worth living; it becomes worth living well. In that way he saves his people from their sins. They have a vision of something so splendid, so eternal, not limited at all to this brief existence, that they have no time for the lure of sin in any of its forms. The stone is rolled away from the tomb of their better selves, and they rise to newness of life.

There is a little statement concerning those two apostles who walked together on the road: "And Jesus himself drew near and went with them." I know that today Christ has drawn near to this people. I know that his Spirit was with us when we met at the sunrise service in the open air today. I know that his Spirit is with us at this hour. I am sure it will be with you this afternoon, and my prayer is that Jesus, having drawn near to this people, will continue to walk with them during the conference year just before us.

May His peace be with you. May the joy of the resurrection be in your hearts. May the clear light of knowledge be in your minds, that he may indeed save his people from their sins and redeem them in Zion, is my prayer.

The Gift of Speech: Its Use and Abuse

BY JAMES E. BISHOP

A Sermon.

Scripture lesson: James, third chapter:

My brethren, strive not for the mastery, knowing that in so doing we shall receive the greater condemnation. For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body. Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body. Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth. Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth! And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity; so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell. For every kind of beast, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of mankind: but the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison. Therewith bless we God, even the Father; and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God. Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be. Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter? Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine, figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh. Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him show out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom. But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth. This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace.

Texts: Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ.—Philippians 1:27. A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver.—Proverbs 25:11. But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil.—Jesus (Matthew 5:37).

In many other places than these which we have read do we find admonitions coming to us as the wisdom of God, giving us direction about the proper use of conversation. Man is judged in various ways, but in no way can he be judged more completely than by his speech. Probably this is what Jesus meant when he said, "By your words are ye justified and by your words are ye condemned." Not only is a man's morals, religion, and philosophy revealed in his speech, but also the provincial and cultural influences that played upon his childhood and youth. While much of a faulty character may be overcome, much remains to tell the tale of life. However, none need have regrets for the marks of provincial or national influences on their speech.

Speech, with the huge vocabulary that may be acquired, is one of the marks of the highest form of behavior. Animals (other than humanity) have means of communication; but they have no alphabet or dictionaries. Language is the most expressive of all forms of expression. It preserves the records of the past, disassociated from which a new generation would suffer intolerable loss, a loss that would challenge the imagination to describe. Through access to the truths that language preserves, one has access to the highest ideals that our forefathers achieved and believed in. In the soul of man, when he is tried, there are conflicting emotions. Happy is he if he comes across some poem, some written thought, or some spoken advice that will accentuate the right feeling that should be encouraged to dwell in his breast at that time. In this way language preserves the right ideas that help one to express the unexpressible and make articulate in one's personality those feelings and ideals that help one in the right direction. The psalms and hymnology are invaluable in this direction.

The relation of speech to thought is a problem that belongs to philosophy. At least it may be said that speech is a trellis over which thought is interwoven. The nervous system of a child is so delicate, yet so powerful, that the child is enabled to learn Chinese just as readily as English.

Probably there is no form of expression that has been so widely abused as speech, and probably there is no organ of the body so difficult of control as the tongue. James assures us that he that can control the tongue can control the whole body.

The lowest form of abuse of conversation is lying. The liar destroys the fabric of social life. He is more dangerous than the thief; for protection can be had against thieves. The liar may thrive for a long time. The length of time depends on his prestige. It is said that Napoleon was the most consummate liar that ever lived in Europe. But sooner or later the liar is banished from society. Conan Doyle described one who had committed the unpardonable sin as journeying through the wastes of eternity bereft of friends! Nothing destroys friendships quicker than lies. "Thou shalt not lie; he that lieth and will not repent, shall be cast out."—Doctrine and Covenants 42:7.

Doctor Lyman Abbott was once asked if there was any harm in "white lies." He answered in effect: "White lies" are convenient when one is pressed with unpleasant questions. They help to adroitly side-step the issue and put some folks off the scent. But folks that indulge in white lies will soon find their morale breaking and find themselves lying with the intent to deliberately deceive. One can not play with the powers of the mind. "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

Closely associated with lying are backbiting and evil speaking, which are roundly condemned in the law of God.

Perhaps the next lowest form of the abuse of speech is cursing and swearing. This is rather widespread in practice. One can not help swearing if he was raised on it. Only a great struggle will break such habit. Men boast of their power of swearing. One man told his friend that he could speak three languages. His friend knew he could speak English and Welsh, and inquired what the third might be. He was told that the third language was bad language. Some men boast quite a vocabulary in that language.

The psychological reason for swearing is found in the emotions. One comes to a novel situation which requires readjustment. His present stock of habits are inadequate to meet the new issue. The pleasurable forward movement of consciousness is arrested. The emotions are stirred, indicating the need of new habits to meet the present issue. Feelings reach a high pitch. The man becomes neurotic. He comes down from his high emotional tone without grace, and we might say in disgrace, for he "flies off the handle" and "rips out an oath," perhaps several of them. He weakened before a crisis. He lost self-control. Men who swore were not hired as policemen in Germany, as is stated in one of Doctor White's lectures. A man who swears continually can not control himself, and others lose confidence in him. He can not be trusted in a crisis.

Another reason for avoiding swearing and cursing is this: It has been found that between sixty and eighty per cent of the words used in this habit are words associated with the highest ideals known to humanity. Words like God, angel, Jesus, heaven, Christ, etc. Surely lying and swearing are a conversational scourge from which men should flee. When speech is used to drag down into the gutter and the mire the highest ideals that we know anything about, the users of such speech are unworthy of the power of speech.

Another form of abuse of speech is slang. This afflicts all if they are not careful. This is where I wish I practiced what I preach. After saying, in the paragraph before the last, that the swearer could not "be trusted in a crisis," I was about to say, "for he will surely spill the beans."

The use of slang tends to destroy one's descriptive powers. One says, "Gee whiz; didn't we have a good time!" instead of describing a little of the novel situation and thus increasing one's vocabulary. A marked distinction between the primitive and civilized man is that the former uses few words and the latter many. It is also a mark of intellectual wealth. Our knowledge is built up by the increase of our concepts. Each concept has a name, and in some case names. A concept is organized of precepts, which are named. So language is inseparable from the growth of intelligence—both grow together.

Philip Cook, so it is reported, was once asked, during one of the conferences in which there was considerable conflict, what he would do if President Smith left the Presidency. His reply was: "Him big chief; him go, me go too." This, perhaps, illustrates the primitive nature, but it also tells another story, and that is, the need of simplicity in speech. It has been said that language conceals rather than reveals thought. Simplicity of speech is suggested by the Master when he said, "Let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay." One who has a large vocabulary can more easily deceive, if he is so minded, than one who has a very limited vocabulary.

Slang, like slogans and labels, tend to control our thinking. And the slogan is accepted without critical thought. There are slogans in all the affairs of life. Many have gone into disuse. Much depends upon the name of patent medicine, and with a good selling name they endure only about three years. Lloyd George said, If you want a thing to be a success, give it a label. But honest people will be careful that the label is representative of the goods.

Turning to our lesson, we find that James warns us about striving for the mastery. The problem of leadership is not a problem of quantity. It never has been and never will be. It has always been and always will be a problem of quality. Many seek the thrill of leadership; few make the adequate preparation, and few face responsibility. The advice of James is that we should be conservative on this matter, for he that steps into the focus of a group will be judged frequently and often condemned (see marginal rendition of word condemnation). He will give offense also, more frequently, in the focus of a group than in the margin. If he does not offend in word, he is a perfect man and able to bridle the whole body. This is good physiology. Muscular movements are controlled by the flow of nervous energy. This energy is at the command of the mind and has its seat in the central nervous system. If I am angered and think of hitting, my fist clenches and arm draws back. But the time it takes the nervous energy to flow allows a "second thought," and I tone down. But if it has been my habit to "flay with the tongue" under such circumstances, the vile words are out and injury is done. It takes less time for the energy to flow to the tongue than to the fist. Some people have so habituated themselves to abuse of speech that the "pathways" of the nervous system are well worn so that inhibition is lost. But if one has sufficient mastery to control his speech, and does not say what he feels tempted to say, his self-control is so great, according to James, that he can control every organ of the body (subject to control). I think that his position is physiologically sound. But, as we shall see later, he goes deeper.

A story is told about a rich Greek who ordered his chief slave to prepare a feast. To this festive occasion he was going to invite some noted people, and he advised his slave to secure the finest kinds of meats. When the guests had assembled and prepared for the feast, all were surprised to find boiled tongues, roasted tongues, and all kinds of tongues. This puzzled the master, and he asked his slave by what process of thinking he made tongues to be the finest meat. The slave answered that the tongue was the finest meat, since with the tongue men praised the gods, spoke in rhyme and rhythm, told of their endearments and friendships, and whispered their love. All thought that the slave scored. Several days passed away, and the master told the slave that he was going to give another feast and wanted him to prepare the worst kind of meats. When they assembled this time, they were astonished beyond measure to find tongues as they found in the former feast. The master said, "Sir, how on one occasion can you represent tongues to be the finest kind of meat and on this occasion the same to be the worst kind of meat?" The slave answered and said, "With the tongue deny we the gods, swear, tell lies and deceits, and breathe our hatreds."

How like the thought of James, "Therewith bless we God, even the Father; and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God."

The dualism that is indicated in that scripture is deadly. It is more widespread than we are willing to believe. If we have no semblance of it in our hearts, we are indeed fortunate; but that is a doubtful matter. Sure it is that it ought not be in our hearts, but sure it is that it may be in our hearts. I once heard a man say, "I have nothing against the — people, for if I did I would soon tell them." Nonsense! It is not a question of that nature for a follower of Christ. The problem is, What have I for them (in their favor)? How much do I hold in their favor? How much sympathy have I for them?

It not only applies to other nations than mine, but also to my associates. Can I pray for my enemies? Can I defer to some one whom I think can not do the job as well as I? Am I stirred in my attitude toward my brother, by an unconscious ambition to have and hold his office? Do I think of church work solely in terms of pulpiting? Can I work out of the "limelight"?

These considerations lead to the deeper aspect of the lesson in this chapter of James. He urges us to search our hearts and tells us that if we have bitter envying to glory not and lie not against the truth.

There is an instinct of rectitude in all. My consciousness of a straight line is immediate and innate. No one taught me that a line is straight, neither was it learned. This leads to desire the well-wishing of our fellows and a desire to be right. When we make a slip, we are inclined to justify self. If not; make excuses. If pressed in our justification, we may argue in our favor and begin to lie against the truth. If we don't halt and repent, we may glory in our perverted powers. If we do we are in fellowship with the Devil, and such wisdom "descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, and devilish." The effect of such attitude is declared by James to be envying, strife, confusion, and every evil work.

The feeling and sentiments that are in our hearts determine our speech qualities, and James says that the wisdom that is from above is,

First, Pure.

Second, Peaceable.

Third, Gentle.

Fourth, Easy to be entreated.

Fifth, Full of mercy and good fruits.

Sixth, Without partiality.

Seventh, Without hypocrisy.

The effects of such wisdom in the possession of man or woman, is described as sown in peace of them that make peace. Such are the social effects, but those qualities only work in that way with the lovers of purity, peacefulness, gentleness, etc. Incidentally it would be well for us to observe that there are passive virtues and active virtues. One must be "actively engaged in a good work," one must be aggressive for righteousness.

James teaches us a lesson that is vital in the work of Zion and in the discharge of every duty. The "beauty of perfection," which is the Zion out of which God will shine, will be reflected as much in the speech of the people as in other activities.

The teaching of James is in line with physiology and with the psychologies (of which there are some eight or ten) that have anything positive to say on the matter of self-control.

If we would control our tongue, James bids us seek for a unified personality, centered deep on God the Father, through the grace of Christ, and obedience to his word; which brings the promise of the possession of the Spirit of God, which refreshes the mind and body, sweetens the spirit of man and helps to purify the heart, burns out the drops and helps one to have an "eye single to the glory of God," which "fills his body with light." Emanation of speech from such a source is the conversation that is unabused; it is rightfully used, and has all the fine qualities enumerated by James with all of the positive and right social effects.

Dreams—What Are They?

BY W. A. SINCLAIR

Man is but the agent of influences, and his behavior is controlled by his susceptibility to that particular influence to which his nature responds. All human beings exert an influence on each other, likes and dislikes measuring the responses in either case. Leadership is but the impressing of one's convictions on the mental mechanism of his fellows. If I can generate enough excitement in the mental vision of my fellows, there will be a response to my urgings, and the policies I have conceived or formulated will become the working basis of the group.

Man is a social being by nature. He craves association and companionship of his fellows, and that sociability he entertains will largely mold his mental vision and suggest avenues compatible with the interests of the associates he chooses. He may be strong mentally; but no matter how strong he is, he will partake to a greater or less degree of that influence manifested by the group. It is this tendency and our responses thereto which make us adherents to any specified organization, group, or association.

Man can not think independent of environment. Thinking is the result of experience. Our thoughts may reach to deeper or higher levels than our experience, but the bud of development has had its germination in the incidents of life, however remote the seed may appear from the fruitage. The son and daughter generally follow the bent of the parents. That has been their experience; their future vision clusters around the impressions laid in their daily early life, while formative habits were being developed.

Most of us adhere to the faith of Christ as represented in the doctrines taught by this church because we have been brought up to believe that it is true. The children of our organizations are following that particular organization for the same reason.

My environment warps my mind to conform thereto, and if I am satisfied to be controlled entirely by it I may drift to extreme limits outside of the perfect law. That would depend entirely on those who inaugurated the formulæ of action. If their vision was correct and their teachings the perfect code, we might be justified in following blindly, but while it is human to err and error is everlastingly getting into our pathway, it becomes necessary for us to calmly consider and earnestly compare the acts of life by the blue print of instruction, that a proper balance might be secured.

This church evidently opens many channels for the influencing or swaying of groups or associations one way or another by the operation of so called spiritual manifestations, and we may add that superstition, of which every person has a portion, plays a large part among our membership. The Apostle Paul has said: "And without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness"; and many of us have failed to penetrate the veil which hides the real from the spurious, and the mysterious is capitalized to the detriment of our own advancement.

There is a mystery associated with religion. There are spiritual influences which sway one from determined purposes. There is a power which operates through the organization and reveals the proper use of gospel principles.

We each of us individually occupy a position peculiar to our mental concept, but how many of us have ever analyzed our thoughts to see if we are superstitious, normal, or visionary? Every individual has mental experiences peculiar to himself, and every mental experience is governed by the interpretation arrived at in conscious observation and meditation. Every human soul is to a greater or less degree superstitious. We also have what is denoted normal, and all are more or less visionary.

No two individuals think along the same channel of thought for any length of time. They may arrive at the same conclusion from different angles, but the trend of thought is governed by the concept of the one engaged in the solution of the problem presented. Mind is unfettered so far as limitation is concerned. Its center and circumference are as wide as the universe; but while it is unfettered it is influenced by the physical acts and appetites which demonstrate themselves in the fleshy cravings of the human soul. These unfettered minds are capable of wandering far off from the controlling influence of physical guidance and are destined to produce many abnormal and grotesque ideas, governed entirely by the training or education received by the individual. If the individual be superstitious, or visionary, he may present a line of thought extremely abnormal to the laws governing the community, and thereby institute revolutionary actions which will destroy the very liberty he himself is enjoying.

The brain which registers the impressions of the senses contributes immensely to the secret rampages of the uncontrolled will or mind, and those impressions are multiplied daily, both constructively and destructively, according to our environment and receptivity of multiplied influences. A man can be almost anywhere and in the fraction of a moment his mind can travel the scope of his experiences. No place, however remote, is beyond its penetration, providing he has the consciousness of its existence. All the experiences of life are registered on the sensitive gray matter of his brain. He may not be conscious of its registration, but it is there nevertheless, and sometime, somewhere, it will manifest itself in conscious presentation and cause an awakening within his soul which may partake of the supernatural.

Our brains have registered a great many things that we have been entirely ignorant of. There are so many sensations in sight and sound, in odors and millions of other agencies which contribute to the daily record of mental markings, that they are unfathomable. The subconscious mind takes in the details of all phenomena and pushes them down into the unconscious stratum, where they remain as pigeonholed records.

Meditation is the searching into the secret archives of our mental storehouse and bringing to conscious observation the solution of many problems unrecognized in our scholastic evolution up to that time.

Imagination is to a certain extent visionary. It is the abnormal development of undefinable ideas. The idea is begotten from some tangible object, but the object becomes altered and expanded in our trend of thought until it partakes of different shapes and figures and loses its identity in hallucinations.

The mind, unchecked by the physical department of the human (sleep rampages), is apt to soar into spheres of unreality and in turn convert the human to a belief in unnatural if not impossible practices.

The abyss of infinitude is penetrated only by fancy. The mind is incapable of penetrating its secret recesses. It has no comparison by which to determine its place or nature, and unless some divine intervention unfolds its mysteries to the human mind, we are left to conjecture as to its realisms.

Dreams as a rule are unchecked migratory ideas. The will is never at rest; nevertheless its conscious acts are circumscribed according to one's ability to occupy. Dreams are the result of the will or ego of man, uncontrolled and unfettered by human parts. It is the spirit or influence of the unseen essence of man migrating out from limited human control.

There are so many departments of the registering mechanism of the human brain into which these conscious and unconscious impressions are stored, that in their reproduction, minus the presidency of conscious direction, they are presented wrong side to, ends reversed, records mixed, and a general hotchpotch of the whole matter. These have many phases of demonstration: Some the abnormal, unreasonable fancy of unbalanced mental control. Others, the result of overcharged nervous energy which relieves itself by explosions of mixed thoughts which demonstrate themselves in phantasies of most unusual proportions. These dreams have a great many characters in them and generally are somewhat unrelated to each other. There is nothing definite in their presentation, and they are most often the result of uncomfortable position or some agent which during sleep interferes with the normal function of the body.

There are many things which contribute to the agency of dreams, and all dreams are governed by the agency which gave them birth. A tired mind will produce a certain kind of dream. An abnormal experience another: fright, excitement, anger, disappointment, joy, or any other unusual thing. Over-indulgence in food or late suppers may produce many varieties. Drugs are replete with multiform characteristics which may be heavenly or diabolical, according to the demeanor of the one indulging.

Dreams are not always the result of spiritual visitation; in fact, this kind of dream is the exception, for most all dreams are more often the result of some human indiscretion. Even dreams which come true are not always the result of supernatural guidance. It is the ignorance of any phenomena that creates an awe or superstition in its operation, where true knowledge of its manifestation simply demonstrates the wide field of functional activity in the human organism. If we keep in mind the fact that many acts and scenes in life are unconsciously registered on our mental receptive organs, and that, like the photographic plate, remains a part of the great field of experience, though unrecognized by us, then we have a starting point from which to trace the strange phenomena that enters into the mythical world of dreamland.

Let us understand, to begin with, that the conscious mind is only one division of the receptive department of our physical being. The conscious is that department which recognizes the intake of sensations that go to form our reproductive selves. The eye may be taken as an illustration of this intake. The conscious recognition is but the main objects on which the mind is centered, but that is not the only intake of sensations. The outer retina is taking minute photographic recognition of all the outer field surrounding the objects of interest. These remain as permanent impressions as well as the sought-for objects, though their registration is in a different conscious strata. The main objects are in what is known as the conscious strata, the others in the subconscious strata, and both are pushed down into what is known as the unconscious strata.

This last is the reservoir where we put things we wish to forget. Though there is no such thing as forgetting, we have only pushed them down into the unconscious, where they rest from activity, but have a practice of bobbing up again when we least expect them, and sometimes disturbing our peace of mind by their persistent reminder of our misdeeds.

Below this is the preconscious, which registers the early impressions of infancy and include the pre-natal and pre-ancestral impressions which may or may never push themselves into recognition during life.

Besides these, we have the most disturbing of all, because they never reproduce a single incident of life as they really have been transacted, but are prolific with distortions and false representations; and sad as it may appear, these are probably the richest source of dreams that disturb one's nightly repose. The name of these probably represents them as they really are: Pseudoconscious and multiplexconscious stratas.

Many stories are told of finding articles by reason of a dream directing the person to the place it occupies. The individual following the directions manifested in the dream and not understanding the phenomena attributes the directing spirit or dream to some supernatural influence, when nothing of the supernatural existed. What happened? The problem is simple. The conscious mind at the time the article was lost was occupied with some central or particular concentration. Its full attention was centered on the object of interest. Not so the outer field of the retina, so it took in all the details of its surrounding and in these details was the dropping of the object which caused considerable concern later. Sleep lulled the conscious mind into repose, and the subconscious had its inning. Reviewing the incidents leading up to the disturbed personality in which it resides, it pushes the impressions up into the conscious strata and makes its impressions as a conscious intake. It is a dream; but it is only the natural agencies of the natural field of vision that are working. It is communicating to its associate the details over which it has been disturbed. Consequences: the whole field of review has been transferred to the conscious mind, and the individual goes out to the place recognized in his dream and recovers the lost article, and the whole transaction has been absolutely natural and in harmony with the functions of the eye and brain.

It has struck me peculiarly at times when people arise in prayer meeting to relate dreams which they tell with all the solemnity of their souls, as of divine direction and supernatural interference, to find that it has been nothing more than a disturbed mind which has called up from its repose some mental reflections of past experiences.

A desire, a wish, a longing, no matter what direction it may take or what substance it may comprehend, will bring forth a dream, and that dream will inculcate the very thing you wish or desire. The pseudoconscious will accommodate your longing, but, as the word signifies, it will be a false representation.

The fact that most dreams are the result of individual eccentricities and daily experiences received by the will and acted on in our unconscious hours of slumber, must not rule out the possibility of spiritual or supernatural visitations occasionally, as specific conditions warrant or necessity calls for divine direction. But there are so many natural things we do not know about, we should be very careful in our presentation of dreams, intuitions, and promptings of which we have not made a complete examination.

Dreams which condemn a person who is out of harmony with me, I should be very slow to repeat; for the very fact of my animosity will produce a dream to my liking, for what I can not do in my conscious hours, because of the law, my mind sees to when I am asleep, and it is uncontrolled by any law. To say that I have had a spiritual dream and it condemns my adversary, is as far from the truth as it is possible to be. My desire that he should be condemned has manufactured the dream, and I would be worse than a fool to place credence in it.

We all have dreams, some of them ridiculous, others funny, and some impressionable. Sometimes we indulge in half-conscious meditation and think out some very good lines of determination, but these are not dreams. Again, we have such abnormal outbursts of uncontrollable mental agitation that our whole beings tremble from the excitement. That is not dreaming; it is nightmare. And all mental sensations that disturb the slumber of the nerve filaments are the result of some experience either indulged in or responded to, consciously or unconsciously, during our waking span of activity.

Happy is the man who retires at night and sinks into undisturbed repose, whose nerves curl themselves up and forget human indulgences. He is healthy. He is happy. He is fortunate.

Most of us will dream, but let us keep our dreams to ourselves, for no matter how ridiculous the matter presented, some one will be influenced by it, and it will hinder rather than add to the intelligent promulgation of righteousness.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

The Right Way to Reduce Your Weight

Many people use wrong methods to reduce their weight. Perhaps the following, if published in the SAINTS' HERALD, will help solve their difficulty. Later I will send a recipe for gaining, which many other people of just the opposite make-up may be glad to read.

Both take perseverance, but will accomplish wonders. Some of our friends are vouchers for both.

Wrong Method: Starvation, which is painful and harmful. The body, like an engine or an automobile, needs nourishment: water and oil for the engine or auto, and water and food to keep the body in health. Water internally and externally; at least one quart of water a day internally, pure and cool (not cold), and a bath once a day externally to keep the thousands of pores which are for eliminating poisons free from dead matter.

The starvation procedure defeats the building-up process necessary to sustain life.

Drugs and acids taken to reduce, ruin the health and make one feel as if life is not worth living.

Intelligent diet is the thing needed, and also intelligent exercise. The elements and foods consumed by a physical worker who can keep down flesh by his work, are turned into excess flesh in the mental worker.

The right food for the mental worker sometimes might seem insufficient for the physical worker; therefore each individual should study his own physical temple and determine by experimenting which foods make him look and feel the best. A beautiful soul or spirit should have a clean, well-kept temple in which to reside. People who get so absorbed in spiritual or material affairs, to the exclusion of the welfare of the body, break the Word of Wisdom, and show lack of wisdom. But one must remember what is meat for one person is poison for another.

Right procedure: On arising in the morning, and after cleansing one's teeth, throat, and eyes with a solution of salt and water (boil one teaspoon of salt and one pint of water and rinse eyes out every day to strengthen them, and exercise them to keep the fat from accumulating back of the eyeballs, which ages them faster than anything else), turn eyes up and down, diagonally from side to side, round one way, round the other way. Do this exercising every morning before getting up, and it is surprising how strong the eyes become. In time one can do without glasses. Start exercise a few times the first day and gradually increase. Then drink two glasses of cool water (not ice water), and take the "daily dozen." You take part of these lying in bed. Kick out one foot strongly, then the other; alternate. Turn over on hands and knees; kick each foot back; then alternate. These exercises reduce the abdomen. Be sure to do each exercise only four or five times the first day, or one will feel stiff; gradually lead up to more, until at the end of the week one is doing twenty-five at a time.

Touching the floor with the finger tips while the knees are stiff reduces hips and abdomen; also the scythe movement as one would move in cutting hay, stirs up the liver and reduces the waistline. Walking around on tiptoe is exhilarating and makes the posture erect, makes one breathe deeply, which aids digestion, and keeps one young and ambitious by bringing plenty of oxygen into the lower part of the diaphragm.

Bringing the elbows around to the back in rotary movements, swinging the whole arm back, will gradually take excessive fat off the shoulders and back of the neck. The head movement, back and forth and round and round, also reduces the neck. To learn the particular exercises described above, cost the teacher of the writer several hundred dollars.

Menu to Reduce

Breakfast

The rule is to eat all you wish of the right food for the purpose you wish to accomplish.

Orangeade to drink (no sugar).

A piece or two of whole wheat or bran bread toast—no butter.

Postum, sugar of milk or saccharin to sweeten, skim milk to dilute.

An egg or two.

Fresh fruit, or fruit cooked in a small portion of water is sweet without any sugar.

Lunch

A vegetable soup—exclude potatoes.

Carrots, spinach, parsnips, celery, cress, tomatoes.

Salads—not too much dressing—fish, chicken.

Dessert: fruit jello, fresh fruit, baked apples.

Drink: postum, buttermilk, or skimmed milk.

Dinner

If one wishes, he may eat eight ounces of boiled or baked meat a day in cold weather, or in case of famine.

To eat: tomatoes or vegetable soup.

Vegetable meat balls, tomato sauce.

Fish—no oysters.

Leafy vegetables without starch or sugar: lettuce, cabbage, spinach, cauliflower.

Fresh fruits: pineapple, apples, oranges.

Small portion of cheese.

Apple and celery salad, fruit salad, pineapple salad.

Fruit dressing (five eggs, one cup pineapple juice, juice of one lemon, juice of one orange; stir: cook in a double boiler; thin with orange juice and pour over salad when needed.)

No fried food.

To drink: postum sweetened with saccharin and diluted with skim milk.

Buttermilk, skim milk (no cream), fresh orange-ade.

Only two slices of bread or toast a day.

Many people get thin on a milk diet alone, poor quality milk. Milk, of course, has all the food value that is necessary to sustain life for long periods, but is of more value if two or three oranges a day are eaten.

Eat plenty of the right foods to sustain life.

No potatoes, butter, starches (which digest into sugar), no sugar (use saccharin or sugar of milk), no cream for stout people.

What does it matter what one eats so long as one has the strength to do one's daily tasks? Jesus lived on milk and honey and most of the time had no place to lay his head.

One is more humble when slightly hungry, but with the above there is no need to go hungry, even for the stout people.

The writer had a friend weighing 298 pounds, who reduced to 200 pounds in six months by the above method. His brother, the same weight, took drugs to reduce, looks haggard, old, and thin, while the former looks contented, not a line on his face, and happy.

The Critic

By Katharine Shippy

The critic has come with his message so bold,
He has said all the sharp things ever were told;
He has wounded the old, disheartened the young,
By the use of his busy, virulent tongue.

But ask working members of every live bunch,
Who is this smart fellow that has such a hunch?
Does he head the real workers who every day strive
To keep their branch running and all things alive?

Oh! no, you will find him and all of his clan,
With himself and his home work, an overworked man;
He has no time for others, his principal care
Is for me, I, myself, and how we all fare.

Dear Saints, are you critics or workers this day?
Are your thoughts most for others as you work and play?
'Tis God gives the blessings for things so well done.
Be sure of this number he counts you as one.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

Review for Intermediate Department

By Sister Wellman, Omaha, Nebraska

Teacher: We will give a review of the lessons of our last quarterly, which contains some of the greatest lessons we can learn; those of love and service as taught by Jesus Christ. All through the quarterly we found that he taught that "loving" is "giving," and that "service" is "doing."

The first lesson was on baptism. Class, tell us what baptism symbolizes?

Class: The death, burial, and resurrection of Christ.

Teacher: With what did Jesus say we should be baptized?

Class: With water and the Spirit.

Teacher: Yes, we receive the Spirit by the laying on of hands of those ordained of God, and thus we become members of God's kingdom, and closely associated with him. He has promised that he will help us in all our needs if we but seek him in meekness and humility, and he gave us an example of prayer in which we may commune with him. Class, let us analyze this prayer and see if it does really cover all our needs. As I repeat portions of the prayer, tell me just what we are seeking when we pray, "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name"——

Class: God's honor.

Teacher: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven"——

Class: God's kingdom.

Teacher: "Give us this day our daily bread,"——

Class: Supply for our physical needs.

Teacher: "and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us"——

Class: Our spiritual needs.

Teacher: "for thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory, for ever." Did Jesus overlook any of our needs in that prayer?

Class: No, he provided for all of them.

Teacher: In Judea, where he was teaching these great lessons, he came in contact with two sects which were prominent at that time. Marjorie, tell me what ones they were.

Marjorie: The Sadducees and the Pharisees.

Teacher: Class, in what did the Pharisees believe?

Class: The law of Moses and the prophets.

Teacher: Did they keep the law?

Class: In form only, but pretended to be very righteous.

Teacher: This made it necessary for Jesus to teach them lessons of personal responsibility. Lillian, what did he tell them about believing in a God and neglecting to do the things that God would have them do?

Lillian: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

Teacher: Class, what was it that Christ wanted?

Class: Action.

Teacher: Yes; get busy! Get busy and put into action the things Jesus wanted them to do. There are many reasons why we should want to do the things he commands. Give us one.

Class: "Without faith it is impossible to please God; and he who cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him."

Teacher: Yes; he will reward us even unto eternal life; but we must earn it. We all want that reward, I'm sure. Wilma, what will be God's standard for rewarding us?

Wilma: He will reward equally our unequal abilities if equally well used.

Teacher: Class, could we be rewarded more justly?

Class: We could not.

Teacher: Another interesting lesson Jesus taught was

NEWS AND LETTERS

Cayman Island Mission

It may be that there are Saints in the various fields where we have labored in the years gone by who sometimes think of us and wonder where we are and if we are still loyal and true to the faith, "the one faith," as Brother A. H. Parsons emphasized it a few months ago in a letter to one of the church papers. We can most unreservedly say that we are still trying to give the very best service of which we are capable to the church, and believe that because of the experiences that have come to us we are more loyal and devoted, more determined to continue on in our mission to establish the cause of righteousness in the hearts of those among whom we are laboring and shall in the future labor. Like many others, we have been pained to hear of those who have departed from the faith, and of others who have become ensnared in the meshes of evil, yet our faith is not shaken, and we can still say that our faces and our hearts are turned Zionward.

We came to this mission eighteen months ago and have been very busy since that time. We have not been able to accomplish all we hoped for, yet we feel that some progress has been made. For the first six months we had great opposition from the ministers of the other churches, and we had to spend most of our time fighting just to be able to stay and stand our ground. We are happy to say that most of the prejudice against us has been overcome and those who were most hostile against us are now almost without exception very friendly toward us. We hope we shall eventually be able to interest these same people in the gospel. At least we feel that we are now in a position to do more constructive work than we were last year.

We have four missions on the island, and each month we try to spend one Sunday (occasionally a whole week, or longer) in each mission. Our entire membership is something less than one hundred, but in addition to these we have a goodly number of earnest and loyal friends who are a wonderful help to us. We are handicapped in having so few men—we have but three who are members of the church, and but one of these holds the priesthood. This is Brother Leighton Bush, of Georgetown, who was ordained an elder by Brother Booker sometime last year. His faithfulness is a source of inspiration to us. He is never too tired to walk, if he can not get a horse to ride, to Boddentown, twelve miles away, or Savanna, seven miles away, in order to assist the little bands of women workers at those places one Sunday in each month.

Seemingly we have not been able to accomplish anything worth while in the West Bay Mission, and sometimes we almost feel that there must inevitably be a "sifting out" of some before harmony and peace can be restored, which is necessary to bring about a more hopeful condition there. Apparently the trouble there is all caused by old grudges judge, Jesus Christ, is ready to pronounce upon all those who fulfill all the requirements of the gospel.

Ann: When he judges us, he will say to those who have loved and served, "Come, ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me. I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Teacher: Yes; and what is it we all want to hear our Savior say to us in that great day?

Class: We all want to hear him say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter into the joy of thy Lord."

about being stewards. Alma, tell us what we mean by stewardship?

Alma: Stewardship means that nothing in this world is really ours, but that God has intrusted them to us for righteous uses.

Teacher: What are some of the most valuable things which have been intrusted to us by God?

Class: Talents, money, property, time, and even our lives.

Teacher: Yes; God intends us to use all good things, which he gave not only for our own use but for the use and benefit of others. Who are the ones whom we can help, and thus share with them the blessings we receive?

Class: The poor, needy, sick, down-hearted, and our church.

Teacher: In what way can we help our church?

Class: By paying tithes and offerings, and by giving service.

Teacher: In fact, we find on every hand those whom we can help in some way, if only by loving-kindness, and our church and fellow men are ever ready to receive the benefits of our time, labor, and consecrations. Anna May, tell us what our Lord said about love, his greatest commandment?

Anna May: "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thyself."

Teacher: Did he mean to love only those who lived next door, or those with whom we are closely associated?

Class: Not them alone.

Teacher: Who, then, is this neighbor of ours that plays such an important part in our keeping Christ's greatest commandment? Ann, tell us.

Ann: Everybody, the world over, is our neighbor, whether rich or poor, regardless of creed or color; because Christ came into the world with the plan of salvation, which is to save all, and he expects us to help him save one as well as another.

Teacher: It is hard to always bear that in mind, but if we do remember it, and act accordingly, we will be laying up true riches, the kind of riches that will make us become spiritual millionaires. Marjorie, tell us some of the virtues that go to make true riches.

Marjorie: Faith, mercy, patience, meekness, wisdom, and brotherly love.

Teacher: Yes, and we develop those virtues by simply loving those about us as ourselves. When we have obtained these attributes, then we are rich indeed. Material wealth must be parted with, sooner or later, but true riches will follow us through eternity. Allegiance, loyalty—I always think of boys when I think of loyalty. Boys, tell us what Jesus taught about being loyal to him and to the principles of right-living?

Boys: He taught that we must be willing to give up anything or anybody, even our own lives if necessary, in order to be loyal to him and to the righteousness he came to plant in the earth.

Teacher: Yes; Jesus said, "Whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after me, can not be my disciple." The most precious things in life require the most sacrifice and labor to gain, and whatever is of real value can be obtained only by the payment of a price. Class, tell us what is the most precious thing in our lives, and why?

Class: The gospel of Jesus Christ, for in it is the plan of salvation, and the promise of eternal life to those who are faithful to its teachings.

Teacher: It has cost many, in the past, all they held dear in this life to be loyal to this gospel. The last lesson in our quarterly dealt with the reward which is given for this loyalty and this service. It reminded us that all our thoughts, our desires, and deeds are known to God, and the reward we shall secure shall be measured out according to the purity and righteousness of those thoughts and deeds, and the service in which we have expressed our love for God—service to his creatures. Ann, give us the verdict that great, impartial and ill feelings which are of many years' standing and which were not forgotten nor forgiven at the time these people entered into baptism.

When we came to this island, we found that the Saints in Georgetown were paying ten pounds a year rental for the lot upon which the church building was standing. They had been paying this sum for four years, and being few in number and not wealthy it was very hard on them. We immediately began looking for a plot that we might buy and thus relieve the situation. We were fortunate in securing a very desirable location at a reasonable figure, right on the sea front. In the latter part of the summer, the building was torn down and rebuilt on this lot. A basement constructed of stone and cement, the full size of the building, was added, thus giving us a splendid room for Sunday school and social purposes.

The month of October was the fifth anniversary of the coming of the gospel to this little island, Brother W. D. Tordoff being the first missionary to come here. We decided to celebrate the event by holding a convention—the first attempt of anything of that nature. Accordingly we invited the members and friends from the other missions to meet with us in Georgetown the first Friday, Saturday, and Sunday in October. We had quite a number of visitors from each mission.

On Thursday night we really opened up with an illustrated lecture, as we had just a few days previously received a stereopticon which we had purchased through Brother C. Ed. Miller. This proved to be quite an attraction, as these were about the first pictures ever shown here. Friday night we again had an illustrated lecture. Saturday forenoon we had a short prayer service, which was followed by a service in which "health" was the topic of discussion, Brother Booker and I each occupying a part of the time. Again at three o'clock in the afternoon we continued on the same subject. The attendance at these two services was not large; however, the interest was good, and we were glad to have even a few, just to prove that it could be done, for the verdict of everyone whom we had consulted was, "You needn't try to have service on Saturday, for you won't get a soul out."

Saturday night we had a miscellaneous program, consisting mostly of songs, recitations, and tableaux. At this service the church was packed, with many standing outside. Sunday at ten o'clock our school convened, with a good attendance. At eleven o'clock communion service was held, which was a very peaceful and encouraging meeting. At noon quite a number of families gathered in the basement and partook of a bounteous and satisfying dinner. Those who did not stay decided that next time they, too, would bring their baskets and join the happy family in the basement rather than walk home under the tropical sun and rush back again for the afternoon service, or miss it altogether, as some did.

At three o'clock the service was in the interest of the Sunday school work, Brother Booker and I again occupying the time. We had expected to have a history of the church work here by one of the young ladies who was among the first number of candidates for baptism by Brother Tordoff, but she failed to prepare it. We hope she will have it ready next time.

The church was again filled for the Sunday night service, and those present listened very attentively to a splendid sermon by Brother Booker. This closed our first convention, which we believe to have been a success in every way, and we expect there shall be many others even better than this one. We hope and expect that there are some of our local workers who will take part on the programs. We like occasionally to do some listening ourselves.

Since the time of this convention, I have been teaching a class each Friday night on "Food and the body," which has been well attended, and much interest has been manifested. I have used the Word of Wisdom as a basis for this study. One evening a few months ago Doctor Overton lectured for us, his subject being "Food and its relation to health." This lecture served to verify the things I had been trying to teach, and also to increase the attendance and interest in the class.

A few weeks after his first lecture, Doctor Overton again appeared in our church, this time to lecture on "Heredity." This lecture was both interesting and instructive and certainly very much needed. He is in Washington now, but expects to return within a few weeks and has promised to give us a series of lectures. Through the kindness of Brother C. Ed. Miller, we now have a Brayco Projector, and the doctor is very enthusiastic about getting some health films to use with his lectures.

Doctor Overton's coming to our church to give these lectures has proved to be of benefit to us in more ways than one. It has helped to break down some of the prejudice against us. Many who thought us so insignificant said he would never come, but he did, and so did quite a number of them, though they had never been inside the church before. Some, too, seemed inclined to think that because Doctor Overton is the only physician on the island he wanted to keep the people in ignorance, but in this they were entirely mistaken, as we found him very desirous of an opportunity to appear before the people publicly to teach them how to keep well. Seemingly he has not been called on for this kind of work before, so, as he put it, "we can be of mutual help to each other."

Here in Georgetown we have a group of fine young ladies—Temple Builders, who are now studying Read's Mothercraft Manual. We expect to organize the Orioles.

Brother Booker, Aarona, and I have recently had a four weeks' cruise to Jamaica, the "Isle of Springs," but as I fear I have already written too much I shall not tell of our trip at this time.

General Conference is now in session and is constantly on our minds, and we are praying that it may be harmonious and the spirit of the heavenly Father may overrule. We shall anxiously await reports which we may get by the middle of May.

Stewartsville, Missouri

April 22.—Stewartsville Branch has watched with interest the reports of the wonderful conference just held. Today we are rejoicing with all of our fellow Saints because of the divine direction received there and for unity and harmony which prevailed.

The past few months have brought renewed interest and attendance at all our sessions.

On the evening of April 3, Brother Frank Hinderks, of Cameron, Missouri, preached for us. His discourse on "Taking life seriously," was enjoyed by young and old. His practical application of truths brought the lesson home to all of us and has left its lasting impression.

On the morning of March 10, Brother T. T. Hinderks, one of our faithful pioneer brothers, spoke to us. His words are always welcome, comforting, and instructive, and his life has been spent in loyal and devoted service to the latter-day work.

At eight o'clock on Easter Sunday evening, the young people of the Religio Department, under the direction of Superintendent Elmer Armstrong, gave the cantata, "The gates ajar." The program was well attended and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

An interesting contest called "A trip to Jerusalem," is causing a marked increase in punctuality and attendance. We hope to see much good come as a result.

This is the first appearance of Stewartsville news in the HERALD in some time. We enjoy reading the accounts of activities of other branches, as they appear from week to week, and are encouraged by them. Henceforth we hope to add our little part each month, that our fellow Saints may know that we with them are laboring for the consummation of God's purposes.

DELLA G. AULT.

Independence

Stone Church

The blue sky, bright sunshine, and fresh spring air of a typical May day called many out of doors Sunday morning and directed their steps churchward. More than twelve hundred and four score were present to join in the opening song of the Sunday school session, "Anywhere with Jesus." Brother S. A. Thiel, superintendent of Sunday schools in the center place, spoke a few words of encouragement at the opening of the meeting, summarizing his remarks with this statement: "Ours is a task that is uncompleted; we need faith, courage, and determination to carry it forward."

The special musical feature of the morning was a violin solo, a Spanish air, by Miss Mildred Hill, with violin accompaniment by Mr. Gomer Watson.

The report of the secretary disclosed the fact that this was a very good session of the Sunday school, there being more than two hundred visitors present and twelve classes perfect. The department of highest ranking this Sunday was the primary with eighty-two per cent of its enrollment present.

In the stand and presiding at the sacramental service were President Elbert A. Smith, Apostle Paul M. Hanson, Patriarch Ammon White, Pastor C. Ed. Miller, Bishop R. T. Cooper, and Elders J. E. Vanderwood and D. O. Cato. Brother Paul Craig was in charge of the music.

"Lord, we come before thee now," the opening song, was followed by prayer offered by President Elbert A. Smith; then the congregation joined in singing "How gentle God's command."

Apostle Hanson, who is to leave soon on his European Mission, made the opening remarks. Reading a scripture lesson from Romans 6, he reminded his hearers how fortunate are the Saints of God who are privileged to come to the table of the Lord and partake of the emblems which call to remembrance the great sacrifice of Christ. In well-chosen words he sketched the field of opportunity before us, dwelling upon the enormity of this field and the great blessings which await those who persevere and are faithful.

At this service a number of the general church officers were present, including the three members of the First Presidency, several members of the Twelve and Presiding Bishopric, General Superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression Eugene Closson, Elder R. V. Hopkins, and others.

President Elbert A. Smith took charge of the meeting following the serving of the emblems, recalling to the minds of the congregation that a month ago at the sacramental meeting the Saints were praying for the success of the General Conference and that now all are looking toward a period of service before another conference shall convene. In the past conference, many were made to realize that God is willing to meet us if we are ready to meet him. The vital question is, What are we going to do for the church, That which we shall accomplish depends upon the faith we have and the willingness with which we accept responsibility. The people of the center place have a grave responsibility. To us the Saints all over the world are looking for a demonstration of our faith.

Earnest and illuminating testimonies were borne to the goodness of God and the truthfulness by the aged and those who are younger, by workers in the field and workers in Independence. The gifts of the gospel were given to the Saints, and those who are soon to go out to fields of labor will treasure the memory of this service.

Brothers F. G. Pitt, J. C. Strachan, M. T. Williams, and J. L. Gray were in charge of the young people's sacramental service in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church, Sunday morning, May 1. One hundred and fifty young people between the ages of eight and twenty were present at this meeting, and the time was well occupied, there being seven prayers and ten testimonies in fifteen minutes. Officers and children welcomed Brother Pitt, and good attendance was accorded him in his talk.

Three prayers and sixty-two testimonies were offered at the junior sacramental service at the Campus. The theme, "Thankfulness," especially for mother, was the one taken by the children. In attendance at the meeting were some juniors from Second Church who have met at the Campus in sacramental service since visiting the department a few months ago. All who wish to worship are welcome.

K L D S Sunday Activities

K L D S Sunday broadcasting began in the morning at 8.30 with a children's program, arranged by Mrs. C. A. Shoop, of the Watson Memorial Methodist Church. Accompanying this program the K L D S Radio Pastor, Elder Ralph W. Farrell presented the regular Sunday morning Bible study lesson.

Miss Elizabeth Okerlind arranged the eleven o'clock radio studio service, which for many months has been under the direction of Miss Madge Nesbitt.

At two o'clock a new feature was added to the K L D S string trio program. Hereafter a vocal soloist will assist the instrumental trio on these two o'clock programs. Mr. Albert Brackenbury, baritone, was the first singer of this new series.

At three o'clock the Mount Washington Methodist Church went on the air at the K L D S radio church hour, Reverend J. Russell Brown, pastor, occupying the pulpit.

Vesper music was under the direction of Miss Lilly Belle Allen, and Elder U. W. Greene delivered the sermon.

As a feature of the 9.15 program Brother and Sister F. G. Pitt sang. Apostle Gleazer gave the sermon at this service.

Evening Services

Sister Ida Etzenhouser has completed a series of lectures, which for the past several months she has been giving to the young people's Religio class. These lectures have proved very beneficial to each member of the class who studied the outline form of the course. On Sunday evening, April 24, Brother M. A. Etzenhouser gave the young people a most helpful lecture on "Right marriages." Last Sunday a long-planned debate was held, in which members of the class participated. Before conference the teacher of the Y. P. R. Class, Brother S. A. Thiel, because of his many other duties was forced to tender his resignation. Elder John F. Sheehy was unanimously chosen by the class to succeed Brother Thiel. Teacher and class have many plans to work out within the next year, and all are hopeful of doing much for the church.

An audience composed of several hundred people enjoyed the Religio program given Sunday evening. Gwen Bronson rendered a piano solo, which was very good. Miss Ina McCord gave a pleasing reading, and Miss Grace Edwards contributed a vocal solo.

Next Sunday evening all Religio students are invited to be present. There will be a general discussion of plans for the Religio for the summer, and the date of the change of meeting from the Stone Church to the Campus will be decided.

Every Sunday evening Brother John F. Sheehy has some new method of conducting the song service. He obtains from the hymns personal messages. To illustrate: Before singing the words, "With joy we remember the dawn of that day, when, led by the Spirit, the truth to obey," he asked those in the audience who were baptized in the coldest months of the year to arise; then those baptized on the Atlantic coast; those baptized on the Pacific coast, etc.

It is good to see the splendid attendance and attention at these "family services."

Pastor C. Ed. Miller was the speaker. He drew a lesson from Daniel's experience while held captive in Babylon under King Darius. Daniel was elevated to the highest honor, but he was not spoiled by position and prestige. Through his veins flowed the blood of ancestors who had been in touch with Jehovah. He was not awed by the cheap tinsel of a kingly court. "He prayed three times a day," so in prayer he saw into the courts of glory, and was loyal to the God of his fathers. He was a praying young man in touch with the heavens.

Brother Miller said we should not pray only when we want the Lord to do something for us. Prayer will lift us into divine presence. We will be purer, more refined, and more spiritual if frequently our minds are lifted up in song and in prayerful meditation. He then related some striking personal experiences of answer to prayer in his ministry, which clearly revealed the Lord's willingness to extend help in the hour of need.

Brother Miller then made a stirring appeal to the young to form the habit of prayer, of meditation on godly things.

The service was concluded with a reel of the "Pilgrimage to Palestine" series, showing the route taken by the children of Israel to Sinai, the "mountain of God."

Since this was the first Sunday of the month, the choir was present at the evening service, and gave a beautiful anthem, being directed by Brother Paul Craig.

Farewell Social for Superintendent Hartshorn

A goodly number of friends, fellow officers, and teachers assembled at the Stone Church dining hall Friday evening, April 29, to spend a social evening and bid Brother C. B. Hartshorn, several years superintendent of the Stone Church Sunday school, good-by. Brother Hartshorn is leaving immediately to take up the pastorate at Des Moines, given him under conference appointment. The program of the evening was of pleasing variety. There were farewell sermons and addresses, music by the Stone Church Orchestra, solo numbers, and presentation speeches. In behalf of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school, Associate Sunday School Superintendent G. S. Trowbridge presented Brother Hartshorn a purse of money, and the president of the I. X. L. Class made a short address, presenting a billfold. Misses Thelma Vincent and Elizabeth Okerlind, representing the Y. K. T. Class, sang a duet. A number of song slides were enjoyed by all present. Among these songs was one written for the occasion by Sister Warnock. Everyone present was given the opportunity to shake hands with our brother who is going to new fields, and wish him Godspeed. The members of the Sunday school will miss his willing assistance, his wise suggestions, his words of cheer, but they are grateful for the service he has given and send him forth with their best wishes. "God be with you till we meet again," was the closing song of the evening.

Interesting Personals

Miss Afton Kelley, daughter of Brother and Sister W. A. Kelley, of Independence, and Charles E. Hattey were married Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Elder R. D. Weaver pronouncing the ceremony. A reception followed the marriage service. The young couple received many beautiful and useful gifts. Mrs. Hattey is a senior in the William Chrisman High School of Independence, and a member of the Stone Church Sunday school. Mr. Hattey is employed in Kansas City by the National Cloak and Suit Company. They will make their home in Independence. The best wishes of Saints and friends are extended them.

Meeting of Department of Women

The Department of Women will hold its regular monthly open meeting in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church Friday, May 6, at 2.30 p. m. Sister D. J. Krahl will speak on the subject, "Some of our modern problems." Following this discourse, there will be a discussion in which all are invited to take part. We urge that all the women of Independence come out to assist in this meeting and learn how they may be of greater service to the church.

Preceding this meeting, the Frances Willard Union of the W. C. T. U. will convene in its usual business meeting at 1.30.

Second Church

Services at Second Church Sunday were spiritual and interesting, beginning with the Sunday school session and continuing until the close of the evening sermon service. Four Saints were on their feet at one time during the testimony period following the service of the Lord's supper.

Melvin Willoughby was baptized, and preceding the evening sermon he was confirmed by Elder Floyd Mortimore.

Betty Ruth Carroll, infant daughter of Brother and Sister Gleason Carroll, was blessed at the morning service.

Elder Frank Veenstra preached for the Saints Sunday evening, using as subject matter the exhortation to control the tongue and to examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith. Brother Veenstra expects to leave for Holland just as soon as Sister Veenstra's health is recovered sufficiently so that she can be left with safety. He was given a good hearing.

Walnut Park

The sacramental service Sunday was, as usual, well attended, a mixed quartet singing while the crowd quietly assembled. Associate Pastor B. J. Scott had charge, Elder James P. Sappenfield offering the opening prayer, and Elder F. R. Schafer leading the congregational singing.

It is not uncommon to have an infant offered for blessing on sacramental Sunday, but it was an unusual privilege Sunday to see five lovely little ones brought by their parents to the altar and put into the Father's keeping through the ordinance of blessing. In every instance the parents requested the pastor to take part. The babies were: Edna Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Sister Kenneth Paschall, with R. D. Weaver assisting; Robert LeRoy, son of Brother and Sister Floyd Smith, blessed by his grandfather, F. C. Smith; Leona Winifred, daughter of Brother and Sister Lewis Mauzey, blessed by B. J. Scott; Raymond Lee, son of Brother and Sister Floyd Lesch, blessed by W. T. Gard; and Ruby Fay, Raymond Lee's twin, with Brother Gard assisting.

The afflicted among us, Sister B. J. Scott and Sister Will Herbst, were especially remembered in prayer.

This being the pastor's last sacramental service with us before leaving for the West, he expressed his continued interest in and love for the Walnut Park Saints, while at the same time his desire to be a willing servant to the church leads him to be equally interested in any field in which he may be called to labor. The Saints were made to feel they could continue to work on with Brother Smith, as they have learned his ideals and can work to carry them out here as well as in his new environment.

Following Religio, with its good, varied program, came the pictures of the lands over which the Israelites wandered; and with the experiences of the Israelites, the evening speaker, B. J. Scott, linked the experiences of latter-day Israel, showing how we, also, by failing to come up to the high mark individually will not be able to inhabit the promised land. With so much plain teaching as we hear in Zion, and so many opportunities, what excuse can we have for failure?

On Thursday evening, the 5th, a business meeting will be held at the church to listen to nominations for our new pastor. The church Presidency will be present.

Enoch Hill

Our pastor, W. J. Brewer, was in charge of the sacramental meeting Sunday morning, which was attended by a large number of the members of the district, and a few visitors. From the beginning of the service a good spirit prevailed, and its peaceful influence was felt by everyone present. After a short talk by Brother Brewer and a few prayers, the meeting became one for testimony. In a short time there were a number of testimonies offered expressing gratitude for the many blessings which God's people are enjoying today. Sympathy was expressed for those who are being driven from their homes by the floods and for all afflicted ones.

At this hour two infants were blessed by Pastor Brewer and Brother Sarratt. They were George Frederick, son of Brother and Sister C. H. McElwayne, and Betty Jean, daughter of Brother and Sister E. H. McKean.

The seven o'clock sermon was by Bishop Charles A. Fry to a good-sized audience. His sermon was a convincing and strengthening one from texts from Saint John, who quotes Christ as saying, "The spirit of truth . . . shall testify of me" and "shall glorify me." His subject matter dealt with the work of Joseph Smith in establishing the church, showing in a conclusive way how his work was truly done by the spirit of truth and how abundantly, in many ways, it testifies of and glorifies Christ.

Spring Branch

About two dozen young people attended the 8.15 prayer service Sunday morning, and the time was well taken up with prayers, songs, and testimonies. It has been said that the prayer services are the pulse of the church. According to that statement, there have been a few services which would indicate rather slow heart action. We hope that bad weather and roads were the contributing causes. Sickness among the members has prevented quite a number from attending services lately, but as all are on the mend we hope soon to have a normal attendance again at all services.

Eleven perfect classes for the two weeks of Sunday school in April were reported, with ninety-eight out for Sunday school May 1.

The choir resumed work last Thursday night after several weeks' vacation.

The "Royal Players," a group of young people from Kansas City, will stage the first of a series of six plays Monday night, May 9, and each Monday night thereafter. These plays are sponsored by the choir, and season tickets may be secured from any of the choir members. The price is only one dollar. Proceeds are to go to choir and building funds. Already the arrangement for additional season tickets has been made, that all may be supplied. Better hurry.

Brother J. M. Terry preached a good missionary sermon to a rather small but an appreciative audience in the evening.

Gudgell Park

Sunday school on April 24 was well attended, everyone seeming glad to be back in our own Sunday school session after an absence of two weeks.

Brother Willard Atwell talked to us at the eleven o'clock hour, and everyone enjoyed his talk, he having recently been ordained. We would be pleased to hear him again.

Our pastor urges the Saints to come out to prayer meeting at the church on Wednesday evening.

The ladies of this group served an ice cream and pie supper in the church Friday evening, April 29. All were welcome and enjoyed a pleasant time.

East Independence

On April 24 Bishop B. J. Scott was the speaker at the morning service. We are always glad to have Brother Scott come, for he makes us feel that although the trials of life may be hard to bear we can still have faith in God and his promises.

In the evening Apostle J. A. Gillen continued the thought of the morning speaker in regard to faith. It seemed as if the very atmosphere breathed these words: We must have faith in God. For a lesson he read John 21 and vividly described to the minds of his hearers the experience of the disciples when they had fished all night and caught nothing, and by obeying the words of the Savior, "Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find," their nets were filled with fish. The lesson brought home to each one was that we must cease to follow our own inclinations, but heed the Master's command, and we shall receive a fulfillment of the promises he has given us. Brother Gillen brought out the thought in an impressive manner that God is the creator, the Evil One the destroyer; one builds, the other tears down. God gives his children love, joy, peace, faith, truth; the other brings discontent, discouragement, hatred, malice, envy, to his followers. Under which influence are we living?

Friday evening, April 29, the Religio held its first session for the month. No meetings were held during the two weeks of conference; and Friday, the 22d, marked the commencement exercises for Spring Branch School. These exercises were held in the Fairmount Church. On the evening of the 29th, about thirty students were in attendance at Religio, and enjoyed getting back to the regular session.

A large crowd was present at the sacramental service Sunday morning, and an excellent meeting was enjoyed. In the evening Pastor Carmichael was the speaker, talking along the line of the duties of the officers of the branch. He stated that he had intended to talk to the young concerning music but had been led to follow an entirely different line of thought.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Tuesday was a beautiful day, the sun shone forth in all her glory, the flowers bloomed in their gorgeous array of colors, the air was filled with their fragrance, and everywhere the handwork of God could be seen in all its splendor. Such a wonderful day brought out an attendance of ninety women at the regular meeting of the Women's Department held at the church, the study hour being from 1 to 2 o'clock, after which a delightful luncheon of orange ice and marble cake was served.

The meeting that followed was in the nature of a shower in honor of Sister Blanche Edwards, general superintendent of the Department of Women. The various groups of the stake had been invited to attend this fete, and each group responded very heartily, sending a representative; and many beautiful and useful presents that are so dear to the heart of every woman in a home were presented to Sister Edwards.

Sister Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock and Sister Luella Wight rendered several beautiful vocal numbers, assisted by Sister Mildred Connelly at the piano. Sister C. E. Forties gave a very interesting reading. Sister Blanche Edwards then addressed the women, expressing her thanks for their wonderful kindness, and telling of her ambitions and hopes for the coming year and of her joy in seeing the activity and accomplishment of the Department of Women of the Kansas City Stake.

The concert given by the stake orchestra, under the direction of Sister J. L. Johnson, of Heathwood, Tuesday evening was well attended and was very much enjoyed by all present. These young people are doing a good work and are striving hard to render a service to the church through the gift of music, which will stimulate and invigorate the soul of man to press on to higher ground.

Sunday, 290 were present at Sunday school, with a collection of $12.56. The sacramental service was also well attended, and a number of earnest and energetic testimonies were offered.

Elder A. R. White was the speaker at the 7.45 hour during the absence of Pastor J. A. Tanner, who spoke to the Liberty Street Saints at Independence.

We regret to write of the serious illness of Mr. Fred Wamsley, who at the present is confined at the Trinity Lutheran Hospital, fighting pneumonia. While Mr. Wamsley is not a member of the church, he is an active member of the I. X. L. Class and is always ready to be of service to the church in any way possible, and we miss him at our services very much.

Regular quarterly conference will be held at Central, May 15 and 16. Luncheon will be served on Sunday, and on Monday will be the business meeting, at which there are several important matters to be considered.

Bennington Heights

Last Sunday morning, May 1, the Saints at Bennington Heights enjoyed a service of the sacrament, followed by one of those prayer and testimony meetings in which we are always glad to be. Brother J. D. Jackson, who has been in Chicago for some time, has returned and was present at the Sunday services. Also Brother Ellis Jones has returned from Chicago and was present.

While it brings joy to note the return of those who have been away, it is much regretted that Sister Mary Spangler is leaving. She has gone to join her husband, Brother S. S. Spangler, who has been in California for several weeks. Sister Spangler has been an active worker among the children for a number of years, and a few weeks ago she organized the Blue Birds. Her leaving means a big loss to the primary department of the Sunday school.

Sunday, April 24, was Home-coming Day. Because of the "tie that binds our hearts," the Bennington Heights Saints desired to meet again those who were formerly members at Bennington. Friendship to a great extent consists in liking the same thing. Former members were invited to spend the day at Bennington.

There was a record attendance at the Sunday school, and many stayed all day. The eleven o'clock hour was occupied by former pastors, Elders C. A. Selby, R. L. Bishop, and H. W. Goold, who made short talks. Brother D. F. Winn, a pioneer in the latter-day work in this part of the country, was the first pastor of Bennington but was not able to be present.

After the dinner there was general visiting. In the afternoon a prayer and testimony meeting was held, and on account of the good interest the time was extended for a short half hour. Two testimonies which were especially interesting were those of Brother William Crum and Sister D. F. Winn, the only persons present, except Brother Selby, who were present at the organization of the branch.

Brother Crum is living with his son-in-law and daughter, Brother and Sister Walter Carpenter. Brother and Sister Winn have lived in the vicinity of the Bennington Heights Church since its organization, except for a short time when they lived in Independence, Missouri. While they lived in Independence, they enjoyed going to church; but they were not contented away from their "home church," so they moved back to Bennington. They have acquired a home one block from the church. Brother Winn operates a tin shop in this neighborhood.

In the evening Brother Ammon White, patriarch, preached. Brother Wilfrid D. Tordoff, stake missionary, was present all day.

Special music was furnished during the day by the Enoch Hill Orchestra, under the direction of Brother Alfred Waters.

Argentine

The speaker on Sunday morning of the 25th, was Elder Henry Fields, Independence, Missouri, his remarks radiating from the scriptural injunction, "This is life eternal, to know thee." At 7.45 Elder Amos Allen, also of Independence, using the marriage covenant as found in Doctrine and Covenants, section 3, drew a splendid comparison in illustration of the auspicious occasion of the complete uniting of the church with Christ.

The evening of May 1 they prevailed on stake missionary W. D. Tordoff to break the bread of life, and though his health was not the best, yet he was blessed in the effort, making it plain that self-praise is without merit; that we must work for every achievement without expecting laudation.

Nauvoo, Illinois

April 26, J. W. Layton and wife, L. H. Lewis, Wilfred Wood, and A. L. Sanford returned from the General Conference with a broader vision and a determination "to go forward to 1930 and beyond." J. W. Layton and A. L. Sanford occupied at the morning hour last Sunday in an effort to impart some of the inspiration they received while in attendance at the conference.

H. C. Snively was in charge of the branch during the absence of Brother Layton, and the regular services were carried on with the assistance of the local priesthood.

Patriarch A. E. Stone was a guest at the Lewis home on his way home from conference. It was his first visit to historic Nauvoo. The young people were called together at the Lewis home, and he addressed them on the need of consecrating themselves unreservedly to the work. He also left his patriarchal blessing with the group. Brother Stone was present at the regular Wednesday night meeting and was in charge, strengthening the faith of the Saints by relating some of the wonderful experiences that have been his.

A birthday surprise was held for Sister Grotts at the regular meeting of the Women's Department, and she was presented with a gift in appreciation of her untiring efforts to make this department of the work a success. Ice cream and cake were served and a pleasant time spent.

Brother R. P. Fairclough and wife, parents of Sister A. L. Sanford, have come to Nauvoo to make their home. They have redeemed four more acres of the waste places of Nauvoo by purchasing a home.

Our publicity agent, Sister L. H. Lewis, made a house to house canvass in an endeavor to place the church publications in the home of every Latter Day Saint. The commission allowed on subscriptions she turns into hymn books for the church, so the members are doing a double service for their branch by subscribing through her.

Death Claims a Precious Sister

The Saints of Soldiers Grove Branch, Wisconsin, were saddened on the morning of April 17 when a telephone call to the home of Elder Arthur Davenport requested him to come to Patch Grove to preach the funeral sermon of Sister Esther Harwood, who passed away that morning at 2 o'clock. The funeral was held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Andrew Cardy, April 19, following which the body was taken to Prairie du Chien for interment in Evergreen Cemetery by the side of her husband, William Harwood, who passed away eleven years ago this May.

Many of the old-time elders of twenty-eight years ago will remember Sister Harwood and the sacrifices she made for the work, that the people of this community might hear the gospel preached. Men like Elders Leonard Houghton, W. A. McDowell, Frank Soley, W. P. Robinson, J. B. Wildermuth, J. O. Dutton, and many others whose names fail to come to my mind at present will remember how Sister Harwood's home was open to them for holding services. Sometimes services were conducted there every night for four or five weeks at a time; sometimes it was in harvest time, but never a murmur was heard from her lips. Then finally the ground on which our first church building here was built was donated by this sister and her husband, and much help was given in the erection of the building by her husband, while she labored at cooking, feeding many during the time the church was being builded. Such works are not soon forgotten. The Scripture says, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Sister Harwood lived faithful to the end, always forgetting self to help others, and on her death bed shortly before passing she spoke, admonishing and praying for her children. Now while her spirit has gone to paradise to await the resurrection of the just, her works will not soon be forgotten by many of God's servants who made her home their home while preaching in this branch. MISCELLANEOUS

Changes in Appointment

Change in the appointment of Elder James E. Bishop has necessitated his resigning as president of the Southern Ohio District, and Elder William Grice is hereby appointed to succeed him, subject to the approval of the next district conference.

Change in the mission appointment of G. R. Wells has necessitated his resigning as president of the Northeast Missouri District. Elder B. S. Tanner is hereby appointed to succeed him, subject to the approval of the next district conference.

The appointment of A. E. Stone, Evangelist, was changed from Maine to Southern Indiana, Central Illinois, and South-east Illinois by the Presidency and members of the Twelve in charge of that field. THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

Notice to Publicity Agents and Branch Presidents

All publicity agents are required to report their work to the branch in which they are working and to the Department of Publicity at Independence, Missouri. The dates for these reports are the same as in past years, namely, March 31, June 30, September 30, and December 31.

The appointment of publicity agents does not hold good for an indefinite length of time. At each election of officers the appointment should come up for confirmation of the incumbent, or recommendation to the general publicity department of a new agent, as circumstances justify.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLICITY,

By J. A. GARDNER, General Publicity Agent.

Attention, Saints of Saint Louis

Mrs. Minnie O'Neil, of Carthage, Missouri, writes on April 25: "Our little sister, Catherine Potts, of the Carthage Branch, is in the school for the blind in Saint Louis, Missouri. She is to be operated upon this week; she asks that the Saints of Saint Louis will visit her while she is there, which will be some time. She is a very faithful, little sister, and deserves attention and remembrance."

Conference Notices

The Spring River district conference will be held at Joplin, Missouri, May 20 to 22, corner Twenty-first and Annabaxter, First service Friday evening 7.45 for organization, to be followed with program under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression, district superintendent in charge. Election of district and departmental officers. President Elbert A. Smith and Patriarch T. C. Kelley expect to be with us. Branch and ministerial reports should be sent at once to district secretary, Mrs. C. A. Dooley, Box 384, Mulberry, Kansas. Amos T. Higdon, district president.

Ministerial Conference

The ministerial conference of the Southern New England District will convene at Providence, Rhode Island, in our new church at Bellvue Avenue, May 14 and 15. We open at 7.30 p. m. and anticipate a fine stereopticon lecture containing scenes of the Auditorium at Independence and the late General Conference. Don't miss it. All aboard! Frank S. Dobbins, district secretary.

Two-Day Meetings

A two-day meeting will be held at Cross Timbers Branch, near Cross Timbers, Missouri, Saturday and Sunday, May 14 and 15. There will be a basket dinner both days. Saints from other branches are invited to attend. R. T. Walters, for the Clinton District presidency.

Our Departed Ones

SMITH.—Margaret A. Smith was born September 5, 1870, in Wallace Township, Perth County, Ontario. She married Moses Smith at Wroxeter, Ontario, October 4, 1892, was baptized May 20, 1899, and came west to Spy Hill, Saskatchewan, in 1900. She was an ardent church worker and taught a Bible class in her home for a number of years. Died at the farm home in the Bavelaw School District, seven miles from Spy Hill, on February 15, 1927. Surviving her beside her husband, are her children: Ruth (Mrs. James Richardson), Stanley Earl, Mary, and Evelyn at home. Her aged father, Mr. Barnett, three sisters and two brothers, all live in and near Listowel, Ontario. Funeral services were conducted by Reverend J. P. Haryett. Interment in Spy Hill Cemetery, February 18.

ELIASON.—Richard Charles Eliason was born March 4, 1925. He died of scarlet fever March 16, 1927, at Deer Lodge, Montana. Funeral services were conducted by D. L. Allen.

CHRISTOFFERSEN.—Katie Hansen Christoffersen was born in Denmark, December 12, 1846, and came with her parents to America when twelve years old. She was one of those who made the weary journey across the plains to what they supposed would be Zion, only to be bitterly disappointed. She refused to be a plural wife of Heber C. Kimball, and with her parents she was with that unfortunate band under Joseph Morris at Weber Canyon, Leaving Utah under the protection of Captain O'Connor, she married Andrew Christoffersen, at Camp Floyd July 26, 1862. To them twelve children were born. She came to Montana in 1865, stopping first at Alder Gulch, then at Butte, and finally making her home at Deer Lodge. She joined the Reorganization in 1868, and her home was ever a haven of rest for the missionary. Died February 23, 1927. Funeral service was in charge of D. L. Allen.

WHALEY.—Edward S. Whaley, the ninth child of Peter and Sarah Whaley, was born at Avon, Ontario, October 24, 1842. He was a student in the schools, and with an elementary education passed his boyhood days in the Dominion as a farmer. He married Miss Charlotte M. Whitaker, August 23, 1865, at Ingersol, Ontario, and to them three children were born: Peter, Eva, and Jessie. After Peter was born, the family came to Quincy Township, Branch County, Michigan. He was baptized June 29, 1873, by one of the pioneer ministers of the Reorganization. Nineteen years ago he located in Coldwater, Michigan, where he has since resided. His home was a wayside station for the ministry, and he loved the latter-day cause. He came of a religious family, and received his strong impressions when the Bible was read in the public schools under the reign of Queen Victoria. He passed peacefully away April 20, 1927, leaving his son and daughters: Peter, Mrs. Eva Belote, both of Coldwater, and Mrs. Earl Thurber, of Detroit; one sister, Mrs. Clarissa Hagler, of Brant, Michigan; fourteen grandchildren, six great-grandchildren, and a wide circle of friends. Funeral was conducted from Saints' chapel, April 22, 1927. S. W. L. Scott preached the sermon. Interment in Quincy Cemetery.

NUNN.—Hannah Elizabeth Nichol was born March 5, 1843, at Burlington Beach, Ontario, Canada. Married September 12, 1861, to William Nunn at Beverly, Ontario. Moved to Minnesota in 1880. To this union were born eleven children, seven boys and four girls. Four boys and one daughter preceded her to the other shore. Three sons and three daughters, twenty-seven grandchildren, eleven great-grandchildren, besides other relatives and many friends, mourn the loss of a loving mother and devoted friend. She was baptized into the church in 1888 by A. H. Smith, in Minnesota. Has been a faithful and consistent member until her death, which occurred at Independence, Missouri, April 6, 1927, at the age of 84 years, one month, and one day. Funeral services were held at Stahl's Funeral Home in Independence; burial beside her husband in Detroit, Minnesota.

PROTHERO.—Eliza A. Prothero, daughter of Alonzo and Susan Jones, sr., pioneer settlers of San Bernardino, and sister of Alonzo Jones, jr., of that city, was born in Ogden, Utah, in 1852. In 1854 her parents moved to California and settled in San Bernardino on part of the Old San Bernardino Rancho. There she grew up, and her Christian acts and loving disposition endeared her to all who came within her circle of association. She was baptized into the church July 31, 1864. Married James Prothero September 28, 1869, and from this union four children are living to mourn her departure. They are J. N. Prothero, Mrs. C. W. Sears, Mrs. J. D. Kasta, of Modesto; and Mrs. J. J. Sparr, of Berkeley. Throughout the forty-nine years of their married life, their faith in the church and their love for each other was strong and beautiful. Since Brother Prothero's death, eight years ago, she has looked forward to the time they would be reunited and enter the "undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns." She passed away at her home in Berkeley April 16, 1927, at the age of seventy-four years and eight months. Besides her children, she leaves six grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, and many friends.

HARWOOD.—Esther Dodge Harwood was born in Erie County, New York, in 1843. She was united in marriage to William Harwood in 1866, at La Crosse, Wisconsin. In 1882 they moved to Elmdale, Wisconsin, and in 1898 they moved to Soldiers Grove, where she was baptized by Elder Leonard Houghton October 8, 1899. In 1912 they moved to Prairie du Chien, where they lived until the death of her husband in 1916. Since then she lived with her children until death claimed her April 17, 1927. Sister Harwood has lived the life of a faithful Saint and consecrated helper. She leaves five children: Myrtle Cardy, of Patch Grove; Elton Harwood, Platteville; Steven Harwood, Grand Rapids, Michigan; Daniel Harwood, Prairie du Chien; Fred Harwood, Blue River; two brothers: Daniel Dodge, of Dubuque, Iowa; Frank Dodge, Waterloo, Wisconsin; and other relatives and friends. Funeral sermon was by Arthur Davenport.

FAY.—Lorenzo Fay, the third child of Jonathan and Fannie Swoop Fay, was born October 10, 1842, in New Boston, Wayne County, Michigan. He lived for a time in Schofield, Michigan, and located in Quincy Township, Branch County, Michigan, where his residence has been for more than forty years. On February 4, 1871, he married Miss Elma J. Mead, of Newark, Wayne County, New York. Two children came to bless the home, Mrs. Eleanor Fay Johnson, of Batavia, Michigan, and Clarence L., who sleeps in the National Cemetery at San Francisco, a soldier of the United States Regulars and veteran of the Spanish American War. For years Brother Fay was a public educator in the schools of Michigan. He was also a blacksmith and continued his profession to the close of life. He held offices of public trust in the localities where he resided, among them being appointments from three different governors of the State. Was baptized into the church April 18, 1873, at Plano, Illinois, the certificate being issued by President Joseph Smith. As a stenographer, his work is manifested in the reports of conferences, conventions, sermons, debates, etc., for the church. His companion preceded him in death in 1892. He died April 10, 1927, leaving one daughter, four grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, one sister, and a wide circle of friends. He was honest, faithful, humble, and competent. Elder S. W. L. Scott preached the funeral sermon to a sympathizing and respectful audience. Interment in Lake View Cemetery, Quincy, Michigan.

SPRAGUE.—Helen Lovina Hilmer Sprague was born at Hanover, Wisconsin, July 3, 1847. Was married to William Henry Sprague November 12, 1871, and to them one son was born. She was baptized September 16, 1900, by W. A. Smith. To her the gospel has been a comfort and stay for many years, and her hope and consolation during her long illness. Died April 4 at the age of seventy-nine years, eight months, and one day, leaving to mourn her husband and son, George Sprague, one grandchild and one great-grandchild, as well as a host of friends. Funeral services were conducted by Levi Gamet.

An interesting bit of legislation regarding district and stake conferences and reunions was adopted by the conference by a vote very nearly unanimous. We refer to the following:

To the General Conference; Greeting: The Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishop at its session held in the Battery Block this morning unanimously passed the following resolution, and, by motion and vote, referred it to the General Conference for action:

Whereas, there is entailed in the present method of determination of dates and locations of district conferences, conventions, reunions, etc., considerable waste of time and money, and also of opportunity for members of the presiding quorums to be present in the larger gatherings of the Saints; and,

Whereas, much of the overlapping and duplication can be eliminated by the con-joint arrangement of dates and locations of such gatherings by the presiding officers of the districts concerned and the presiding officers of the church;

Therefore, Be It Resolved, that stake and district executives be requested to consult the First Presidency and the members of the Quorum of Twelve concerned about the dates and locations of district conferences, conventions, reunions, etc., before these are finally determined, and that district conferences be requested to provide for such consultations when these matters come before them for action.

It might be asked why general church authorities should be consulted concerning local conferences and reunions. The answer is similar to that given to the query, Why consult general church officers about incurring large local debts? In the very nature of our work the primary enterprises of the church carry forward under the general church organization. It is well always to remember that membership is held in the church, not in the branch or district or stake. Men and women are baptized into the church. For convenience their names are enrolled with names of other Saints resident in or near a given branch. Priesthood is held in the church, and a man officiates by virtue of his ordination to represent the whole church and not a particular branch or district. He may be ordained in Des Moines and yet have the right to preach in Maine.

In fact, under the law, branches and districts seem designed to facilitate the work of the ministry in caring for the pastoral needs of the Saints:

In the meantime, branches and their officers, and districts and their officers are to be considered as provided for by my law to carry on the work of the ministry in caring for the membership of the church, and to relieve the twelve and seventy from the vexation and anxiety of looking after local organizations when effected.

Branches and districts are but groups of Saints organized for the reason set forth above, and holding their membership in the whole church and having their interests gathered up in the whole church and centered in the program of the whole church. That is one reason why they should cooperate with general church officials.

Another reason appears as forcefully in actual practice. With very few exceptions district and stake officials frequently write urgently requesting the presence and assistance at their conferences of general church officials—a member of the Presidency, or an apostle, or a bishop. These requests are exceedingly numerous; they come constantly. Even more urgent are the invitations to send representative men to the reunions.

A moment's thought will convince one that if these requests are to be handled efficiently and in an orderly manner there must be cooperation. The men available to answer the demands from a given section are few. If four or five districts contiguous one to the other hold their conferences at the same date, perhaps one or two of them can be served. If at dates conveniently arranged it may be possible to serve all.

The reunion situation is even more complex, because the reunions come but once a year and during a short season. Formerly each reunion fended for itself. Each reunion committee broadcast its requests to members of the Twelve, Presidency, Seventies, Evangelists, directly. The fortunate reunion drew an embarrassment of responses; the unfortunate reunion received only expressions of regret. Absolute equality has by no means come in that regard, but more and more reunion committees now write to headquarters, and a general reunion committee endeavors to distribute speakers equitably.

There has been an improvement in that regard, and there is room for much more improvement.*

For two years past President Floyd McDowell and the secretary of the Quorum of Twelve, F. Henry Edwards, have served as a general reunion committee to do the preliminary work for the Presidency. They now handle requests from reunions. They have done a fine work of bringing order into the reunion field, which is now divided into circuits. Of course they can not please all—some reunions are disappointed—some speakers do not like their assignments; but their work, we believe, has met with general appreciation.

One phase of their work is not easy and is becoming even more difficult, and that is the very tendency of reunions to "pile up" on the same dates, making it physically impossible to serve them all. There seems to be more rather than less of a tendency to choose the same dates, usually in August. This can be corrected by cooperation—and in no other way.

Our reunions are becoming more and more important. They are great spiritual revivals, and now carry with them also a definite program covering various activities, social, educational, musical, recreational. A little more system in their management and in their schedule of dates will make them even more effectual by bringing to the greatest number of people the help and service of the greatest number of servants of the church.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Is Church Unity Probable?

Much has appeared in church and secular literature in recent months on the question of church union, and the Canadian experiment therein is being watched with keen interest by all church men. In another column we reproduce from The Spectator (London) an article entitled "The union of Christendom." "This article," says the editor of The Spectator, "must appeal to all who hope for a united Christendom one day, and who are determined to work therefor."

I do not, of course, know how closely our ministry are following this movement, but as there seems to be distinct but mayhap slow progress in the direction of merging some of the various Christian sects, it is well to be informed. The possibility of a united Christendom appears to me to be remote, yet it can not be gainsaid that there is a steady expansion of the idea of the universality of the brotherhood of man. But even "brothers" (?) differ, sometimes bitterly, on questions religious.

Mr. Dunkley's article merits thoughtful perusal.

The Spirit of Polygamy Again

It seems that no great length of time can intervene between outbreaks such as the one we are herewith quoting from the Toronto Evening Telegram, of April 25. Professional men, doctors, furnish some of the number who would rather see physical tendencies and carnal desires pandered to, the doctrine of expediency promulgated, in preference to enforcement of the progressive doctrine of discipline and the subjugation of the physical to rules and systems which tend in the opposite direction from indulgence.

We acknowledge inability to locate exactly the viewpoint of Doctor Haire, as he asks the question, "Is monogamous marriage in accordance with the natural instincts of man and woman, or does it impose restrictions on them which are insupportable?" Is it possible that the learned and highly esteemed doctor discards as an evidence of what is natural and best for mankind, the almost if not entirely unbroken history of nations which are traveling in the direction of higher civilization? Does mankind progress by adopting customs which are unnatural and which contradict biological truths? If these questions are answered in the affirmative, where are we going to find the truth? Is it indicated by the incontinent desire of mankind? And if so, Doctor Haire, just where is the barrier to further incontinence to be erected? Where does biology indicate the barrier exists? or is there any barrier?

We are surely relieved, however, when we peruse the first clause of the last paragraph of the quotation, "The perfect union must remain our ideal." Certainly here the doctor's reason, his knowledge of history, his detail experience unite to dictate the natural and highest path of humankind. There is no warrant for the question as to unnaturalness of the monogamous marriage. Expediency and indulgence must pass with savagery and ignorance.

R. J. L.

"If we agree that many persons are still at such a stage as to be incapable of true monogamy—as distinct from formal monogamy—it becomes necessary to consider the questions of polygamy and free unions." Thus does Doctor Norman Haire, well known in Toronto medical circles, express his doubts as to whether the one-man-one-wife law is in accordance with nature's idea. He has become so convinced, he says, of the effect of married unhappiness in producing such illnesses as insomnia, indigestion, loss of appetite, and the manifold forms of "nerves" and debility, that the question, "Is your marriage a happy one?" is now as much a part of his routine as, "Do you eat well?"

"The conventional picture of marriage is by no means a true one. Divorce and remarriage are becoming ever more frequent, and unfaithfulness on the part of husband or wife occurs in at least a large minority of cases.

"The first question to be considered is: Is monogamous marriage in accordance with the natural instincts of man and woman, or does it impose restrictions on them which are insupportable? I can find no evidence that either man or woman is biologically monogamous.

"The perfect union must remain our ideal, but it would be idle to pretend that this ideal is at present realized in more than a minority of marriages," declares Doctor Haire.

Spirit of War Not Dead

The Owen Sound Sun-Times for April 6 presents a dismal picture of the world's condition as to peace. Its estimate of conditions would involve in war or as objects of what appear to be threatened political upheaval, more than two thirds of the earth's population.

What influences are at work to mar the world's peace to such extent? Is it the spirit of war which enters into the commercial life of mankind carried forward into national and international life? If it is, surely this is the hour for promulgating a system which will make of advantage to every man the friendship and cooperation of his neighbor. The time is ripe for the spirit of stewardship to make itself felt in the life of nations, that there may be relief from a condition where every man's hand is raised in threat to the peace and life of his fellow man.

Here is the Sun-Times estimate of world conditions:

Billion Already Engaged in War, or Drawing Close to It

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Wars and rumors of wars today hold the stage from one end of the earth to the other.

Two thirds of the total population of the globe are at this moment engaged in killing one another or are on the verge of it.

The other third are on the side lines, fearful of what may happen.

At least a billion of the earth's billion and a half people are either spilling one another's blood or making demands or announcing programs of action which promise bloodshed.

Such is the appalling situation nine years after the Great War that was to end war. The whole world is tossing in a fever of unrest, the outcome of which no man can tell, but whose possibilities are unthinkably dreadful.

China's 400,000,000 people are involved in a civil struggle which might at any moment turn into an international conflict involving the United States, Britain, Japan, France, Russia, and other countries.

India's 300,000,000 are chafing at the bit. The undercurrent of revolt is daily running stronger.

Russia with her 150,000,000 inhabitants faces the world, sullen and defiant, chip on shoulder, while Poland, Rumania, Britain, Italy, and Japan-in-Asia are Russian danger spots, any one of which might at any time break into open conflict.

Italy and Jugoslavia are glaring at each other across the Adriatic; and Italy, with 40,000,000 people behind her, stands ready to invade Albania.

France, with a population approximately equal to Italy's, sides with Jugoslavia and looks with alarm upon Italy's program of expansion in North Africa, the Balkans, and the Near East.

An ominous rumble of dissatisfaction is heard throughout the Balkans, and Hungary and Austria are waiting only until Europe starts something so they can kick in.

Rumania has no idea of what will happen when her ill King Ferdinand dies and the several warring factions begin their fight for power.

Kemal Pasha, dictator of Turkey, and Dictator Mussolini, of Italy, are watching each other like hawks, as Mussolini lays plans for a new Roman empire and the Pasha dares him to touch Turkey.

Poland has just arrested five members of the Sejm, despite their parliamentary immunity, on the charge of participating in a plot to overthrow the present regime.

Greece is trying to discipline her army to prevent further interference with the administration.

Egypt and Britain are not on good terms; France is still at war with the Syrians of the Druse Mountains; Holland is having her troubles in the East Indies; Portugal is emerging from another revolution; Spain is still uneasy; Lithuania has just shot four communists for attempting to organize an uprising; and so all along the line.

The Western Hemisphere

In Mexico not one, but several, revolutions are brewing as the enemies of President Calles seek his overthrow. In Nicaragua the revolution continues despite United States intervention. In Panama there is a bitter anti-American sentiment.

A revolution is on in Brazil, and Chili continues in a state of unrest.

The Philippines are demanding immediate independence. And so the story goes.

Dates and Locations for 1927 Reunions

On another page of this issue of the HERALD will be found the complete list of 1927 reunions, together with place and date of meeting.

We are suggesting that district presidents, reunion chairmen, or others directly interested check over this list carefully in order to catch any errors. Should such be found, corrections should be sent immediately to the office of Presidency, Box 255, Independence, Missouri.

Easter Lilies

(The following poem was written by Doctor S. W. Downing, of Fayette, Missouri, inspired by beholding a bunch of beautiful Easter lilies given to his daughter Lucille.)

Those fragrant Easter lilies,
Unmarred by spot or stain,
Recall that day on Calvary,
When the veil was rent in twain,
And darkness covered the mountain,
And darkness covered the sea;
The Son of Man died on the Cross,
For sinners like you and me.

'Twas not that he was guilty;
He endured the awful pain
Of riven side and wounded hands
That we might live again;
The third day rose triumphant
O'er death and lonely grave,
And gave the world its Easter,
And proved that God can save.

The Work of the Year Ahead

Sermon by President Frederick M. Smith, at General Conference April 17, 1927, in the Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

This has been a day when from early morning until the present time we have been reminded of the risen Lord. I presume that it might be expected on the part of some of you that I would speak an Easter sermon. But I shall not attempt to deliver one of the usual Easter sermons, and yet I hope that which I shall try to present will not be inapropos for an Easter Day to those who are trying to serve the Lord.

As a text which I hope will at least express the spirit of what I want to say to you, I have combined two passages of Scripture, neither one long, and both highly significant from the standpoint of the Christian. One is the expression of Paul, which was thrown in parenthetically, it is true, and yet expresses a fact of which every Christian should be conscious, and never lost to view: "We walk by faith and not by sight." And coupled with that I want to use the words, "Faith without works is dead." This, I believe, is from James.

The faith that I should like to see manifested by this congregation of people and the larger number of people that you represent, is a faith in God which is unswerving; a faith which does not cool amid the storms of adversity; a faith which will grow warm under opposition; and a faith which is uplifting and expanding in the presence of foes; a faith in a resurrected Lord, and a resurrected Lord not alone who came that we might have life and have it more abundantly, but who presented to us his philosophy and placed his gospel in our hands as the tool by the use of which we can work out our own salvation, and which causes us to know or gives us the assurance, or builds up the great essential hope which should be ever dominant in the breast of a Christian, that he will come again and that between now and his coming there is a great work of preparation for his people.

This means, then, that we not only shall have a faith in God, but a faith in his cause; and let it be stated as an open secret to those who might be without the pales of this church, that this body of people believe they are working in and represent the cause of God. But I hope this afternoon that I might leave with you a few simple thoughts, perhaps some of which you can take home with you that will cause you to be a much more active believer in God and in his cause, and to recognize that you must become a worker, and thereby demonstrate your faith.

A few mornings ago, in this room, in one of those quiet prayer meetings which seem to have characterized this conference, there were a number of people who gave response to the query, "Why do you feel under obligation to give yourself without reservation to the service of God?" And there were a number of very fine testimonies borne as a result of this topic functioning in the thoughts of those people; and I believe those who expressed themselves, comparatively few as compared to the large number present, represented the feeling that was universally in this audience, and that is, that every man and woman present felt under a deep and lasting obligation to give the best they had to the service of God and his people. And then, later on, in a following prayer meeting, responses were given in reply to the question, "What are at least two ways in which I can serve God this coming year?"

Fellow Latter Day Saints, this afternoon I want to impress you with this thought: It is easy when we are under the influence of the splendid spirit of fraternity which should characterize all gatherings of the Saints in prayer, and it usually does characterize those meetings—it is easy for us to search through the recesses of our minds and go back over our lives and find many, even scores, of reasons why we are under obligation to serve God and serve his people unreservedly. It is easy for us in these prayer meetings to give expression to the thought, and a number of ways in which we can give this service. It is easy to find these obligations and give our expression of determination to give this service when we are in communion with our own souls. But, my fellow Latter Day Saints, when out from the influences of fraternity in a prayer meeting, when out from the supporting and sustaining influence that comes from the brotherly feeling we have when we recognize that there are scores of people of like faith by our elbow, it is just as easy to find excuses as to why we should put off the discharge of this obligation of service to God. And as we go out into the markets of the world and the activities of the business world, it becomes easy to lose sight of our determination, and it becomes easy to fall by the wayside, and our faith grows cold because it is not accompanied by works.

This is to say, in other words, that when we go without these sacred walls and leave the room in which we have come to commune with God and sense the presence of his Spirit, we are faced by temptations, and constantly there are forces which would turn us away from God and influence us to lose sight of his great love for humanity in sending to us the one who demonstrated that he had the power of becoming the risen Lord.

Without mentioning names, I want to speak today to this congregation on one or two or perhaps more instances in which I have seen earnest people, after years of preparation for service to God and his church, become gradually weaned away from those expressed obligations and from their expressed determination to give their life unreservedly to God and the service of his church, until they are finally giving their talents and time to the world and to causes outside of our own.

I have in mind one this afternoon who, after years of preparation as a departmental worker from a boy up, having given service and having been actuated by a sense of obligation to this church that he had a duty to perform, after he had given that splendidly for a few years, yielded up gradually, perhaps under the stress of extraneous forces, giving that service to other people, until he has been so weaned away that today when the call is renewed for him to give his services once more to this people he finds the same old battle on his hands, but intensified and augmented by reason of the fact that he had given away to the temptation to give his talent to other people. I am watching with a deep concern to see whether or not he will be able to win his battle, and once more in response to the call of duty say, "Here I am; use me!"

I have in mind another man, who, having caught the spirit of consecration some years ago, as a young man left his chosen occupation or line of endeavor to go into active preparation for usefulness in the church; who gave that service of usefulness in a department of the church, and finally was called to represent the financial department of the church, or department of temporalities, and just as a great field of endeavor and opportunity was opened up to him, and is still open to him today, to give that service to the church, there comes to him the temptation to give that service to other people. And I find that there are two excuses dominant in his mind. First, that he has opportunity to expand his powers; and, second, he is rewarded for his services among other people with a larger degree of gratitude and a greater return of monetary compensation than he is with us; and so again I am watching with a great deal of concern as to which one of the paths lying before him, as lies before every Latter Day Saint today, whether he will walk once more in the path of duty or respond to the temptations and honors to give his services to other than his own people.

And I recall still another man, who from boyhood was dominated and actuated with an intense desire some day to give his services in building up the people of Zion and give his services in the redemption of Zion. I have seen that service given over a period of years, and have seen his ardor wane because of the influences that were being brought to bear on him until finally he, too, gives his services to another people, forgetting the call that has been in his mind and heart from his youth until the present day. That still small voice is still calling, and he is smothering that voice by the excuses we can all find to yield to the temptation to give our services where we can get a larger personal or selfish return.

And so I might go on and name still others who, knowing that the call of duty has been heard, procrastinate the day of giving their devotion unreservedly to the church.

I have in mind today an aged man, who, from the time of my earliest acquaintance with him was very much alive in the spirit of this work and determined that some day all of the talents that he had acquired in the way of his long experience in the business world would eventually be given to this people in building up in this place a place of refuge for the people to come to in the time of danger; and I have seen that man through one excuse or another say, "The time is not yet!" until today he is too old to give his services and will go down to his grave a disappointed man because he has not responded to the call of duty. For when we yield to the temptation to answer the call of the world and resist that small voice that calls to higher duty, the duty to fellow men, you can mark it down we will go to our graves in disappointment because we have not given service irrespective of the selfish reward.

I recall in my own case, and I might be pardoned for the time being in speaking of my own experiences because when I speak of myself I can say some things that I might not say about somebody else—I recall that in my early boyhood I became conscious of the fact that I had a duty to this people, and I, too, have experienced the call that comes and the temptation that comes when I have been asked to give my services to other people. And so my heart is filled with sympathy and pity for the man who has to go through that temptation; and my heart bleeds for the people when there are those who fail to respond to that sense of duty, for I know that some other people must carry on, pick up the burden that they have failed to carry.

I have tried at different times, as a boy and man, to justify myself in laying down the responsibility that this people have asked me to assume and go and serve a people where gratitude might be more readily expressed and where my own interests might be more readily conserved in the way of monetary return. But I haven't been able to bring myself to do that as yet.

Here I recall an incident of my young manhood when, as an associate of the man who occupied in the office before me, a man whom I know to be a man of God in every sense of the word, after one of those times when the people, as they sometimes do in that peculiar, inexplicable wave that passes over them, had turned and smitten him who had tried to serve them, and while he was still suffering over the smart, he said to me as a young man, "Son, if you feel that you can not go through what you have seen me pass through, now is the time for you to make your choice." I remember that I replied like this, "Well, dad, I have started along with you, and I am going to the end, so far as that is concerned." But I want to say to you this afternoon, and I say it respectfully, that had I then known what was in that great heart of his, and had I known what the years then ahead of me would bring, I do not know whether I could have responded then to the call of duty. Perhaps it is well that we do not know what lies before us.

My experiences at times have been such that I have said to myself, "Well, so far as I am concerned I hope that none of my loved ones will ever have to pass through what I have." And yet the spirit of this work is such, it gets hold of a man's very soul and his whole being to such an extent, that this morning I found myself presenting a youngster of the family and holding him up to the Lord and saying, "Yours for service."

We as a people, or we as leaders at least, have for years been calling to our young people for preparation, and in response to that continuous call that we have been raising for some thirty years we have seen grow up a splendid corps of young manhood and young womanhood who are giving to the church a magnificent service. We have seen them preparing in such a way that we know they are becoming outstanding in their work. I have but to refer to the excellent records made by Graceland young men and young women. I have come to the conclusion that the more excellent the preparation, the more extensive and far-reaching and deep-lying that preparation is, the greater will be the temptation to resist the call of duty and go where selfish interests point the way. And I can say to you that if you attain to a degree of excellence, it is only a question of time until you will have presented to you the temptation to leave your chosen work among this people and go in response to calls from people elsewhere. In fact, I would not have it otherwise, for it is a testimony to us of the effectiveness of having a goal constantly before young people, that whenever we get a man prepared for special work in this church we find a dozen other organizations reaching out to him.

So I would issue that warning to you as you go back to your respective places and branches, as your intensified preparation shall be carried on you may expect that temptation will come to you as it came to us, as it came to my predecessor, and to other men, some of whom, thank God, are giving their services unstintingly to the church and the people of their choice. If time would permit, I could this afternoon call your attention to a number of magnificent examples, many of whom are in our midst today, of where men have gone out and because of the excellence of their preparation have been asked to assume responsibilities that would bring them large returns of monetary reward and of honor that would be attached to their work accomplished; but quietly, and waving aside those temptations, they have come back to the people of their choice and are giving most magnificent service, and God be praised that they are.

Without reservation is the service that God is calling for in this church today. The Lord is calling for service. Not to the ministry, alone, my fellow Latter Day Saints, but to all the Saints; and this conference, it seems to me, has emphasized the fact, more outstanding than any conference that we have yet had, that the call to service is not to the ministry alone, but that it is to the entire membership.

Among the expressions that were used in the prayer meeting the other morning, in response to the theme, "Two ways in which you can this year give service to the Lord and discharge your great responsibility," one man used an expression that I want you to have and take home with you. He said, "The second of my determinations is that I am going to work where I am hitched!" And as a boy who was raised on the farm, I understood that, and I hoped, I longed, I prayed that the people might understand and appreciate the significance of that statement. There isn't a single individual of you who is not occupying some place, harnessed to some job, some position that has to do with the advancement of this people; and one of the finest resolves that you can make is that while you are preparing for greater usefulness you will be leaning into the collar where you are hitched, and the time will come when you will demonstrate that you are capable of carrying other responsibilities, and then those forces directed by God will see to it that you are hitched again to some job that is big enough for you; for every person should be found hitched to the job where he is best qualified to work.

The call, therefore, is to service here and service now, while we are getting ready for something bigger.

I would to God that every single member of the church today would be able from the bottom of his heart to say, as did one of old, "Here am I; send me." But you should not make the mistake of thinking that the call of service comes only when the call comes for you to go somewhere else. The work should first be done here and now.

How shall we work? I would suggest by all means that you should attempt to work, first, as a Saint. And if I this afternoon would be asked to give you a new slogan for the year, this is the slogan I would like to have you carry away with you: Be carefully prayerful, and prayerfully careful. I would have you prayerful at all times, for a people who are not on speaking terms with God are not progressing as Christians. And if I could suggest some of the ways in which you would be carefully prayerful and prayerfully careful, these are a few of my suggestions:

I would have you careful in study, study of yourself, study of your job, study of your character, study of your environment, study of your attitude. I would have you careful in work, in the work you have selected in a business way; I would have you full of care about the work you are doing in the church. I would have you careful about your recreation, or your play, that in seeking surcease from work and relief from toil and from tired muscles you would not seek to do those things that would bring disgrace to you and discredit to your fellows. Careful in study, careful in work, careful in play—for God.

I would have you careful in conduct, in those things that you do, for our actions sometimes speak so loud that people can not hear the things we say. I would have you careful in word, for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. I would have you careful in attitude, in the positions that you assume, as a man, as a neighbor, as a citizen. I would have you careful in conduct.

I would have you careful in business, that you might make the best of your opportunity, that your business, like your life, may become a testimony to your religion, to your work as a Christian. I would have you careful in your office, that you might make your office become a sermon in your hands for serving God. I would have you careful in your home, so that your attitude as a parent will not be a stumblingblock to your child. I would have you careful in your home as a child, that your conduct will not become a stumblingblock to the neighbor who looks into your window.

I would have you careful in society, in all your relations with your fellow men, for you are measured as a church man or church woman by what you are.

I would have you industrious, that you might earn and become a contributor to the Cause, and thus help God in his work, for God has chosen humanity as the instrument through which he will accomplish his work in the earth. I would have you frugal, that you might save; I would have you industrious, that you might increase your earnings; I would have you frugal, that you might take care of what you earn. I would have you generous to God and to his cause.

My dear fellow Latter Day Saints, our tasks loom large, sometimes so large that we are staggered at the responsibilities we are asked to assume. Do we not today, as the result of the splendid spirit which has been in the conference, find our souls expanding until they include activities such as you have not contemplated before? Do we not find our souls expanding until we chafe under our limitations and chafe at our weaknesses, wishing that God would cast off some of the things that tie us down until we can function to the capacity of half a dozen men or women? If we do, then we find we are getting ready for the endowment that God has promised us we would have.

Do you find your courage becoming greater? Do you find your determination to work becoming stronger? Then you have caught the spirit of this onward-looking conference that is now so nearly brought to a close. And if I could leave a message in a few words with you this afternoon, my fellow Latter Day Saints, it would be, Let us carry the fine spirit of this conference into effective work for God, for his church, for humanity.

I WILL for Christians

1. Get an average of eight hours' rest at night with windows open.
2. Learn and practice daily three or four setting-up exercises and deep breathing.
3. Clean my teeth at least morning and evening.
4. Drink at least one glass of water before breakfast.
5. Read, fifteen minutes a day, current events from newspaper or magazine.
6. Read or study at least one half hour daily.
7. Devote at least fifteen minutes a day to prayer and Bible study.
8. Keep a daily account of all personal expenditures.
9. Attend public worship at least once a Sunday.
10. Attend each week Sunday school Bible class.
11. Attend the regular midweek session of my group.
12. Give a definite proportion of my income, allowance, or earnings, for religious purposes.
13. Be on time for meals, school, work, and church.
14. Air and make my bed and keep my room tidy, and take responsibility for doing each day at least one other home task.
15. Think over earnestly each evening this question, Have I, as a follower of Christ, today tried to be thoughtful, courteous, and unselfish in my treatment of others?

OF GENERAL INTEREST

The Union of Christendom

(This suggestive article must appeal to all who hope for a united Christendom one day, and who are determined to work for that great ideal.—Editor Spectator.)

Looking at it from one aspect, the Church of England is a preliminary experiment in Christian unity. It embraces within one organic body Catholic, Liberal, and Evangelical. These "colleges of religion," if we may call them so, make up the "university" of the English Church; and though the disintegrating forces are strong, the sense of corporate life is stronger, and the larger unity is maintained.

What the Church of England is thus attempting with difficulty but with success to do, the whole Catholic Church will some day have to attempt on a world-wide scale. The great Communions, Greek, Roman, Anglican, and Evangelical, will be "colleges" within the greater "university" of the Catholic Church. Though enjoying a measure of independence, these Communions will share in the organic life of the whole, and when the whole is realized as greater and more vital than the parts, the unity of the Body of Christ on earth will be within sight.

This may seem mere paper-theorizing; but if we visualize Reunion in this way, one practical result should follow. By the Papal claims, the Roman Church excludes Evangelical Christianity, and thus achieves an easy but narrow unity. The Church of England, by reconciling within one spiritual house Catholic and Evangelical, is achieving a unity more difficult to maintain but very much more worth while. To assent to this, Catholics (in a narrower sense), whether Roman or Anglican, must recognize that Evangelical Christianity has become a permanent type of Christian life within the whole church. It has now a tradition of four hundred years, and those four centuries since Luther can no more be ignored than the four hundred years culminating in the Council of Chalcedon.

As the "Church of sound learning," to use Creighton's phrase, the Church of England tries to recognize the significance of all the centuries of Christian history. Though she attaches special importance to the early centuries as the period of the Councils and the Fathers, she believes that the post-Reformation centuries have also their lessons to convey. If the patristic age was the formative period, the Lutheran age was reformatory. And one of the lessons of the modern period is that Evangelical Christianity has become a permanent force within the whole church. To try to exclude the evangelical type from the Church of England would be to impoverish her, as the Roman Church has been impoverished by the loss of the evangelical bodies. There are probably not a few Roman Catholic laymen who wish that their church possessed the simplicity, the elasticity, and the scripturalness of the Church of England at its best; indeed, the present writer has met more than one Roman Catholic layman who has admitted as much.

The practical result of visualizing Reunion in the way suggested is that it enables us to conceive of Evangelical Christianity as a valuable and permanent constituent in the Christian whole. But Evangelicals will also have to realize the value and permanence of Catholicism.

Evangelicals appeal to the Bible as interpreted by the individual conscience; Catholics appeal to it as illuminated by the history of mankind and the church. To the one the Bible is a thing apart; to the other it is the church's classic. Both views are helpful, but the Catholic view contains the greater truth. Further, if Evangelicals use the weapon of history in their appeal to the tradition of the four centuries since Luther, they must recognize how much stronger is that weapon in the hands of those who can appeal to the older and longer tradition of the thousand years before Luther.

It has long been recognized that there is such a thing as scriptural, or non-papal, Catholicism. That is not the discovery of the Anglo-Catholics of today, nor was it the invention of the great men of the Oxford Movement. Non-papal Catholicism lay behind the famous "King's Book" of 1543. Doctor Muller, in his work, Stephen Gardiner and the Tudor Reaction, says of the "King's Book" that "it represents the most successful attempt in the Reformation age—perhaps in any age—to set forth a doctrinal exposition of anti-papal Catholicism." Perhaps if Bishop Gardiner, who may have been personally responsible for some of the views in that book, had become primate on the death of Warham, instead of Cranmer, the Church of England under his guidance might have sooner embodied this scriptural Catholicism and have ante-dated the Oxford Movement by three centuries.

Undoubtedly there has been since the Reformation a view of Christianity which we may contrast both with Eastern and Western Catholicism and with Evangelical Christianity; we might call it Northern Catholicism. It is represented by great names in English Church history, Hooker, Andrewes, Laud, Cosin. John III attempted, though without success, to make it prevail in Sweden. Old Catholics in Holland and Germany have continued the tradition. But its great and indisputable success has been the gradual but sure revival of Catholic belief and practice in the Church of England since the Oxford Movement. Such a Northern Catholicism, scriptural in belief, austere in ceremonial, uniting liberty with discipline and authority with learning, is no longer a theory but a fact. "Northern" may be a misnomer, since the great Christian communions have now no geographical limits. Eastern Orthodox are found in the West; and Westerns are found in the Far East. But the term may serve to point its distinction from the Catholicism of Rome and Constantinople, and to reconcile Evangelicals to a Catholicism which finds its premier seat in Canterbury.

The words which Canon Lacey uses in his book, Unity and Schism (p. 158), probably express what more and more people are feeling to be true: "The Christian Church is one family, and Christians are brothers. It is a fact, not an aspiration. All Christians are brothers. Orthodox and heretic, Catholic and schismatic, all are brothers." The Church of England is endeavoring to embody this family spirit. Though comprising within it people differing as widely as the Anglo-Catholic and the Protestant Evangelical, it yet maintains its organic unity, as is shown by the vitality of the Church Assembly. And in thus keeping under one roof children of different character but of one blood, the English Church is setting forth an example to the Church Catholic of the way in which it, too, will some day set its house in order.—E. H. Dunkley, in The Spectator, April 16, 1927.

We Who Are Deaf

[I recently saw an article in the London Spectator concerning some of the trials of those who are deaf, which I feel sure it would be well for our readers to see; so it is reproduced in another column. Written in a fine spirit of frankness by one who is deaf, it gives us a glimpse into the hearts of the deaf which can not but increase understanding sympathy in a keener appreciation of the isolation of the deaf. And let us hope that it will increase our kindness and patience.—F. M. S.]

The deaf man is very lonely. He moves in a silent world which is silent only to him. About him there is speech, there is laughter, the quick give and take of discussion, the intimacy of fireside talk, but not for him. He has things to say, but no one to whom he can say them.

No one laughs at the blind, but deafness is recognized as affording good material for comedy. It is true that the victim of the jest is more often the shy young man unsuccessfully trying to talk into a trumpet than his irritable and ruthless listener. But the blunders of a deaf person have also a mirth-provoking tendency; if he has a fine sense of humor, of course he laughs at them himself, but if not, he does not find them very amusing.

Deafness is an infirmity which many people find exasperating. One has known kindly persons who are goaded into a furious impatience by the strain of endeavoring to make themselves audible, and it is generally just these loud, impatient tones that miss the mark. The speaker sometimes sounds more annoyed than he is, but there is no doubt as to the nervous irritation which the effort frequently produces. It is not quite easy to analyze this result. One element in it is probably a suspicion that the listener is not quite as impervious to sound as he appears to be; if he exerted himself a little more, he could surely catch the word. This suspicion may occasionally be warranted, but as a rule the deaf are only too eager to hear what is said; the anxious attention, the yearning in the eyes of those to whom audible words are as rain on a thirsty soil, might exonerate them from the charge.

It is sometimes said that the deaf are often melancholy or even morose, while the blind cheerfully acquiesce in a harder lot. If there is any truth in the observation, it is probably owing to a combination of the circumstances mentioned—above all, to the profound and painful sense of isolation which of all mortal pangs is one of the hardest to face victoriously. If in no arrogant spirit, but out of considerable experience, one may offer a suggestion or two to the deaf, one would say first: Do not allow yourself to grow touchy or suspicious. If people look in your direction and laugh, they are not necessarily laughing at you. Our fellow creatures are for the most part kind, and life is full of coincidences. And secondly: Make as few demands as possible upon the good will of those about you. The less you ask, the more you will probably receive. Above all, when you perceive that some one at table has made a good joke, don't ask your neighbor what everyone is laughing at. The joke may possibly not bear repeating; it will certainly not bear repeating in a loud shout. Thirdly: Learn to like gardening, if that invaluable gift has been hitherto denied you and if circumstances permit. The company of growing things is the most healing in the world.

And to those who have the use of all their senses, one might say: Do not shout at the deaf. Deaf people can often hear a voice carefully pitched to meet the occasion; a little practice, a little attention will teach this not too difficult art, unless your voice has that woolly quality which muffles its passage. By faith we are saved; if the listener can be convinced he is going to hear and the speaker is confident he will be heard, the battle is almost won. A counsel of perfection may be added. Let the hearing man wear a thick wad of cotton wool in his ears for a week; he will never be impatient with the deaf again.—H. H., in The Spectator for January 15, 1927.

On Hating America

National antipathies are curious things. The affection of yesterday may in a few years turn to hate. The question how national prejudices are formed and subsequently develop is outside the scope of this article, which is devoted to British-American relations. Let us confine ourselves to the change which has taken place in British feeling towards America in the past twenty years.

After the American Civil War and until 1914, apart from special occasions such as the Venezuela crisis, the feeling of the average Englishman towards America was friendly, much more friendly than the feeling of the average American and of America towards Great Britain. Till recently the sport of "twisting the Lion's tail" was indulged in by every Fourth of July orator in America. There were various causes for this, and they have been dealt with by many American writers, including Mr. Owen Wister in The Ancient Grudge. Among them were the teaching of American school textbooks and the revolutionary tradition handed down from father to son, the attitude of the British governing classes to the North in the Civil War—an attitude not adopted by The Spectator—and the Irish question. In the last twenty years a great change has taken place in American feeling. There are still many Americans who are so immersed in their own concerns that they have little time for external matters, but thinking America is undoubtedly much more friendly to us than it was twenty years ago.

Let us turn to the British attitude towards America. Among those who are not personally acquainted with America it is generally critical. America may be respected or feared today, but she was never less popular. An inversion has taken place in the relations of the two peoples; yesterday it was the American who withheld his friendship, today it is the Englishman who is beginning to do so. What are the reasons for this anti-American complex? Some of them are as follows: the average Englishman has never fully understood the difficulties of America in coming into the war; nor America's attitude towards debt repayment; nor America's prosperity while Great Britain has been suffering from unemployment and other ills; nor prohibition, which has been a good deal misrepresented by the British press. Other causes are our loss of the undisputed commercial leadership of the world, the predominance of the American film, and the natural feelings of a debtor towards his creditor.

Recently Mr. Hoover, the American Secretary of Commerce, attacked the control by foreign governments of raw materials, as for instance in the Stevenson Scheme, which was adopted when the rubber industry was in extremis three years ago; and he deplored the fact that the United States had to pay more for her rubber supplies. Mr. Hoover's remarks failed to arouse his countrymen, however, because, for the most part, they felt that America had no more grievance than Great Britain had had on former occasions, when the prices of American tobacco, wheat, and cotton were raised.

This episode, so full of friction-making possibilities, has had no effect on British-American relations, but we may learn a lesson from it. America is the greatest purchaser of raw materials in the world, and year by year as her population grows her powers of consumption increase. The British Empire within its vast undeveloped territories can produce practically all the raw materials she requires. The British Empire requires large sums of money for development. It is, therefore, obviously, to our advantage that American capital should help to develop our latent resources instead of being diverted to our rivals.

There is no doubt that, on a long view, Anglo-American economic cooperation is to the benefit of both sides. Yet, just because a certain number of Englishmen have an anti-American complex, is this a reason for saying to America, "We propose to bang, bolt, and bar the door" as far as American commercial cooperation in developing the British Empire is concerned? Are "Ourselves alone" and "No American need apply" to be our mottoes? Fortunately, the Dominions will not wait on the pleasure of Lombard Street. There is already much American money in the British Empire. It has flowed freely into Canada; Australia has raised a loan in Wall Street. All we mean is that in the interests of both nations the process ought to be accelerated, not checked. American money would be better applied in the British Empire than in Brazil, or the Argentine, or Liberia.

In recent years the axletree of our diplomacy has been cooperation with the United States. Our statesmen have recognized that without British-American friendship the outlook for the world would be a dark one. The lessons of the Washington Naval Conference should not be lost upon us; they showed us what the British and American Commonwealths, acting in unison, could achieve. In recent years a great expansion in British-American commerce has taken place, and unless some unforeseen catastrophe occurs, its growth during the next fifty years will

News of the Departments

President F. M. McDowell and Superintendent C. B. Woodstock were in attendance at the International Convention of the Religious Education Association held in Chicago April 26 to 29. The theme of the convention was the scope of religious education and its relation to the moral education of the public school. Both have as their objective the improvement of social conditions through the development of character and personality. It seemed to be the consensus of opinion, however, that religious education, having certain church sanctions, built around a consciousness of a personal God and having an appeal to the loyalty and love of individuals, offers the strongest inducement to high moral and spiritual life.

Character building seems to depend largely upon the motives which impel one to action. The whole program of religious education must function in bringing powerful motives for kindly, courageous, helpful activity to each of us as members of the human family, and to so organize life's activities that noble purposes shall be crystallized in conduct. In the final analysis, that religion is best which most nearly represents God or reveals him and his will in human life, opening the way for the bestowal of his Spirit to supplement man's endeavor.

The convention included in its program many Christian denominations, including Catholics; also several Jews. Some splendid addresses were made by leading public school men of the country. Although a variety of opinion was expressed, one was convinced of the sincerity of the speakers. The broad discussions enabled one to view the situation from many angles. We were happy to be able to test the arguments in the light of the restored gospel and to compare our own program as a church with the efforts being made by other denominations.

We were convinced that the latter-day message with its practical stewardship program and its Zionistic goal offers the supreme motive for the development of noble moral life, a be stupendous, for the two greatest trading nations must inevitably do more and more business together. If, then, American capitalists are willing to invest their money in Great or Greater Britain, let us welcome them, for their dollars will provide more employment and an improved standard of living for our people.

To sum up: Englishmen who have personal acquaintance with America do not hate America; they come back from their visits enthusiastic for the cause of English-speaking cooperation. Unfortunately the majority of our people can never visit America. To them we would say, "Let us forget our grievances, fancied or real, and let us explore the possibilities of British-American cooperation in every field. The more business we do together the better we shall get to know each other, the more prosperous we shall both become, and the sooner will come the day when all the mists of misunderstanding between the subjects of King Shakespeare, to borrow Carlyle's phrase, will be dispelled."—The Spectator, January 30, 1926.

Christlike personality. The apparent task of the ministry and of the departments is to so comprehend, live, and teach that message that it may accomplish its purpose in the world.

There is great advantage in our keeping in touch with what other thinkers and leaders are doing in the field in which we, also, are trying to lead. We should gain a clearer vision of our own goal, and we may gather many suggestions helpful in the progress of our own work. Incidentally we make personal contacts with outstanding men and women of all denominations, which help us to appreciate them and their views and to win some recognition for our own faith.

April 30 and May 1 were spent in a departmental institute in the Des Moines District, the days being filled with lectures and class work. We were ably assisted by Sisters Brackenbury and Elefson, primary teachers in the Des Moines schools, who conducted class work in primary methods. We were unusually happy in the installation at this time of Elder Chris Hartshorn as pastor of the Des Moines Branch. The new church building has a splendid arrangement of classrooms, and the local school has almost unlimited possibilities of growth. An excellent foundation has been laid by the retiring pastor and his wife, Brother and Sister Higgins. Together with the enthusiastic and fairly well-trained local workers, the new pastor and his wife should do a happy and successful work. Our effort was strengthened by the presence and help of Apostle J. F. Garver.

Sister Earlita Smith Inslee, local superintendent of the Oakland school and assistant superintendent of the Northern California District, reports a most interesting rally day held on the last Sunday in March. The neighboring schools of East Oakland and San Jose were guests. In addition to the regular school lessons, institute sessions were held at 11 and 2.30. The relation of the priesthood to the Sunday school, also the relation of fathers and mothers to the school, and methods of interesting young people, were some of the topics discussed.

Sister Inslee reports that every one from the local school was busy, from the beginners who made posters, to the mothers who served the dinner. Special assignments were undertaken by each class. Doubtless this is one secret of their success.

During the day an organization of the Bay Cities Sunday School Institute was effected, the plan being to continue similar efforts throughout the year. We wish them success and commend the plan to others.

Institutes or conventions are scheduled early in the summer at the following places: Holden, Missouri; Indianapolis, Indiana; Middletown, Ohio; and Windsor, Ontario. One or more general department representatives are to be in attendance at each.

With the three heads of departments working full time in the interests of the general church, we are anxious to keep in touch with the needs and desires of each department in every district and stake in the church. Reunions should organize regular institute classes for the further qualification of local workers. The early hours of the forenoon are best adapted to study purposes. Definite and concrete training should be given in representative lines of Sunday school, Religio, and Women's Department endeavor.

A fairly large force of trained and experienced workers is being assigned to the various reunions throughout the church. Most, if not all, of these will have had definite training at the Lamoni Institute of Methods.

Further, it is hoped that one or more of the general department officers shall direct institute work in every district and stake at a convenient time and location during the year, in addition to the summer reunion. This will not be unduly expensive if several institutes are planned for consecutive week-ends in conveniently contiguous districts. The intervening week days and nights should be organized in a departmental missionary campaign in outlying points in the district.

So far as possible, competent local workers and conference appointees in a district should be encouraged to assist in institute class work. We must organize our forces and enter with consecration and determination into the work to which we have been called.

Districts should begin planning their programs for the year and let us know their wishes. Our schedule will be made with the sanction of the general administrative authorities of the church, and in harmony with other activities under their direction. District department superintendents will consult together and with the district presidency in making their plans. In unity of purpose and harmony of action we should be able to make progress.

Echoes of the General Conference at Topeka

TOPEKA, KANSAS, April 25.—Only two services were held here while the General Conference was in session at Independence. The majority of the Saints were in attendance there each Sunday, and some were present full time.

At the close of the Sunday school session on April 24, opportunity was given those in attendance to state that which appealed to them most, and the following is a condensed report:

"Harmony existed throughout the conference."—A. P. Crooker.

"Everyone seemed to want to cooperate with the Presidency."—Sister A. P. Crooker.

"The diversity of subjects discussed was attractive: Brother McDowell's talk to the girls on the first Sunday night and Brother Gillen's talk to the priesthood."—Sister Sarah Williams.

"Most attractive to me was the unity in Monday prayer service where priesthood and audience were blessed as a whole."—Clayton Crooker.

"The unity that prevailed was blessed. It was fine to be in the Auditorium, but I fear it will not be large enough for future conference needs."—Sister C. J. Sheets.

"Most appealing to me was the enormous crowd at the Easter morning service on the Auditorium slab."—Cecil Crooker.

"The part taken by the women in the church work was encouraging."—Sister Cora Killen.

"There were so many good things showing progress of the church."—Sister Emma Happe.

"The continued sweet influence of the Spirit was a blessing."—Sister Gale Hays.

"What especially impressed me was the unity and harmony existing throughout the conference."—Sister Helen Hays.

"I was surprised at the class of people we found there. The church does not consist of second grade people, but a better type, all being very friendly. The sermons were every one good. Dinner by Spring Branch Saints was the best in the country."—C. J. Sheets.

"To me the gathering of such a large crowd of Saints in early morning service, everyone (even before Presidency and other officials came) coming in silence and reverence, was very impressive."—Sister Alice Weedwork.

"If the building could be completed in three months, it would be found that the Saints had outgrown it as they have the Stone Church."—Dee Williams, a nonmember.

"A stranger who has attended many gatherings of other churches found none so intelligent as the conference at Independence. He may be our brother by next conference."—Sister Crooker.

"Something unusual was the starting and closing of meetings on time. There is need for that everywhere."—Brother Sheets.

"I particularly noticed the progress and loyalty to the Presidency and different quorums of the church on the part of the membership. The stewardship plan appealed to me."—Sister Mildred Goodfellow.

"The charts gave me inspiration and new ideas."—Sister Anna Alfrey.

"The blessing of the babies was very sweet."—Gertrude Smith.

"The splendid spirit of unity was strengthening."—C. H. Smith.

"The lesson of putting first things first, brought out in O. A. McDowell's Sunday school class, will remain with me."—D. G. Francis.

Brother and Sister Grim "enjoyed the spirit of the conference which accompanied the reading of the DAILY HERALD."

And last of all, the experience of the writer is summed up in the first word of the song at the beginning of the conference (the first song sung in the Auditorium)—Glorious. And glorious it was to be there.

The Yagers at Papeete

We had a delightful trip across the States and aboard the steamship Tahiti. We like the mission and our work. We are keeping well. The change of climate seemed to be just what the baby needed, as she has improved wonderfully since we left Ontario. She makes a great missionary. We are slowly progressing in acquiring the use of the language. Caring for the baby and necessary mission work take the greater part of our time. We anxiously await the news of General Conference and pray that all will be well.—J. H. Yager, Papeete, Tahiti, Box 41, via San Francisco, April 2.

Duluth, Minnesota

April 27.—Sacramental service was held April 3, and many earnest prayers were offered. Missionary Robert Gunlock was the speaker in the evening, at which time he showed us the many agencies of man which have designed to help mankind to a higher sphere of activity. He made impressive the need of the gospel of Jesus Christ, that man may be elevated to life's higher walks; it is the remedy for the ills of the world.

On April 4 Miss Ruth Walters and Robert Gunlock were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Walters, of Carlton, Minnesota, Elder Ray Whiting, pastor of the Minneapolis Branch, officiating. After the ceremony Brother and Sister Gunlock left for Minneapolis to join others on the way to General Conference. Miss Walters was born in Carlton and resided here all her life except the three years she spent in training at the Independence Sanitarium. Brother Gunlock's home is at Rock Island, Illinois. Since the conference of 1926, he has been engaged as missionary of North Dakota and Minnesota under conference appointment, being reappointed to this field at the conference of 1927. These young people will be assets to the church, one a missionary of the gospel, the other having a knowledge of nursing and music. The field is ripe unto harvest, and the laborers are few. May the Lord prosper them abundantly with heavenly blessings and strengthen them for the task that lies before them!

The Department of Women is composed of active church members who demonstrate, not in words only but in precepts, what can be accomplished by an active faith and working together in unity. A committee was chosen to give a chicken supper in the basement of the church at fifty cents a plate, and tickets were sold around the city. On the night of the 5th, the people gathered to partake of the bountiful repast. It was voiced on every side that the supper was fine. The department was able to clear the sum of eighty dollars and eighty-five cents, which was given to the treasurer of the branch. The people then assembled in the main auditorium, where a radio program was given, each player performing behind the curtains, an announcer calling each number from the station on the air. There was a radio audience of four sitting in front of the curtain with the radio. The Department of Recreation and Expression sponsored this part of the evening's entertainment.

Many members of the Department of Women journeyed from Duluth to Two Harbors on the 15th and held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. J. A. Hastings. Sister Mollie Feathers, head of this department, read from the book, Old Jerusalem Gospel, by Joseph Luff, of Christ wounded in the house of his friends. Sister S. E. Silverthorn read Luke 23. A collection was taken which amounted to more than fifteen dollars. They also held a parcel post sale, bake sale, and fancywork sale, along with a candy sale which netted them more than eighteen dollars, there being in attendance sixteen members and thirteen visitors. The Department of Women is always dependable when the work demands active service. One not only finds them at their twice-a-month meetings, but also they are seen seeking spiritual food at the midweek prayer service and sacramental service.

On Sunday, April 10, which was Palm Sunday, Brother W. C. Stauty was the speaker. He drew a mental picture of the last six days of Christ's ministry here on earth from the peaceful waiting before Mary, Martha, and Lazarus, the triumphant march into Jerusalem, the eating of the Passover feast, the Lord's supper, the agony in the garden of Gethsemane, the betrayal, Peter's denial, the trial, and the crucifixion of Christ, the Redeemer of mankind, the Savior of the world.

In the evening Brother A. C. Bundy was the speaker, reading the lesson found in Ephesians 3 and taking his text from James 1:5. The subject of his discourse was revelations, and he particularly emphasized the need of them today to guide and direct God's work. The church is built upon truth revealed from heaven, and each one needs a revelation of truth from on high that he may properly function.

On the following Sunday, Elder Samuel Case occupied the morning hour, and read John 20, selecting for his text 2 Samuel 2:6: "The Lord killeth and maketh alive, he bringeth down to the grave and bringeth up."

In the evening the junior church, under the leadership of Brother Robert Zuelsdorf and committee, rendered a short Easter program, Brother A. C. Bundy reading 1 Corinthians 15, and giving a short sermon on the resurrection.

The quarterly business meeting was held on the 18th; reports were read, and many matters for the betterment of the work commented upon. Officers were authorized to make arrangements for painting the basement floor. Among the subjects discussed were the need of better decorum, the desirability of unity for the furthering of the work, the necessity of each one's finding his place and walking therein, thereby inviting more of the Spirit of the Master, enjoying a greater endowment eminent in the church today where unity and love abound.

Brother W. C. Stauty spoke again on the 24th, in the morning treating the subject, "What lack I yet?" He read the first portion of the Sermon on the Mount.

Elder George W. Day, of the district presidency, has again assumed his labors for the D. M. & N. Railroad on their docks. Brother Day was the speaker in the evening of the 24th, bringing a portion of divine manna from God's storehouse.

The theme at the last two prayer meetings has been, "What does the gospel, or church, mean to me? and what are my desires for it?" We should be true to our trust, for there are those who trust us. When we sense our responsibility to our Creator, we realize it is a great honor to be even called a Saint of God. He who has called us into the work remembers his promises, but obedience is better than sacrifice, for Christ has said, He that loveth me, keepeth my commandments and walketh not in the way of the ungodly.

The meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression has been changed from Friday to Sunday evening at 6.30 p. m. A better attendance is anticipated.

Junior church is held each Sunday except the first Sunday of the month, in the basement of the church at 11 a. m.

The Sunday school with our young brother, Wesley Blake, is going ahead with good attendance. Our goal is 1930 and beyond; it not being a stopping place but a relay in our climb to perfection, Zion the pure in heart.

Fall River, Massachusetts

April 24.—The April sacramental service was well attended, and a beautiful spirit prevailed. Several prophecies were given. Sister Myra Cockcroft attended this service. She is improving, but the effort to sit for so long was painful to her. Sacrament was carried by Pastor James W. Heap and Brother Alma M. Coombs to Sister Hargraves and Sister Halstead, and the pastor's wife, at Truesdale's Hospital.

Sister Heap has now returned from the hospital, where she has been very ill. It was spoken at the sacramental service that she would recover. She is much better, but still needs the prayers of the Saints. At present two of her sisters from New Jersey are visiting her.

For Easter the church was beautifully decorated by Ralph Baldwin, superintendent, and his assistants. Later the plants were carried to the sick. In the morning there was a sermon by the pastor, assisted by Ralph Baldwin. In the evening there was a concert by the Sunday school, with a sermonet by the pastor. The church was well filled, and the concert was appreciated. Many nonmembers were present. The children marched and dropped their offerings in the cross. Eunice Henderson will receive a present for giving the largest offering.

Easter Sunday Alma M. Coombs was the speaker at the concert in New Bedford. He went especially to sing in a quartet at the funeral of Sister Law, mother of Abram Law, the pastor at New Bedford. Brother Heap went over in the afternoon to preach the funeral sermon.

Visiting speakers for the month have been Elder Benjamin Leland, of Plymouth, and Elder Earl Bradshaw, of Attleboro. Those who came were privileged to hear excellent sermons, but the attendance should have been better.

Alma M. Coombs, priest, was the speaker at Brockton April 24.

Elder Herman A. Chelline has returned from General Conference, and was the speaker at the evening service April 24.

William Baldwin, jr., and family, from Florida, are visiting Brother Baldwin's parents.

Joplin, Missouri

April 16.—The old year was closed and new year begun in this branch with a watch party and pie and chili social. There was a large number present. One family was here from Nevada, and a sister came over from Neosho. Everyone enjoyed the party. After refreshments were eaten, we played games and sang old-time songs along with our beautiful hymns in the Praises and Hymnal. There were also some interesting and encouraging talks by members of the priesthood.

Sister M. J. Rafferty, of Neosho, fell during the icy weather and broke a limb. She was confined to her bed for some time. This accident was reported at the women's auxiliary business meeting, and the sisters voted to remember her through the mail. Fourteen were present that day and in order to avoid sending too many letters or cards at the same time the sisters numbered. Number 1 was to send a card or letter the first day, Number 2, the second day, etc.

On Saint Valentine's Day the sisters gave a box supper. A committee was appointed to take charge, and a very interesting program was given. The ladies' boxes sold for fifty cents and the small girls' for twenty-five. An angel food cake was furnished by a sister for the most popular girl, and the best-looking man received a devil food cake from another sister. The cakes were won by Miss Eva English and Chester Carter. Quite a number were out that night and enjoyed the supper.

Brother Amos T. Higdon was with us the first week in March. His talks were inspiring, and he encouraged all to file their inventories and pay their tithing. He said, "Zion will be a reality. God has said it will, and his people must bring it about."

Our young people are serving well and trying hard to assist in the different parts of the work. We could not get far without them. It is inspiring to come into the Sunday school or church and see the little children up in the orchestra keeping up their parts with the older ones. Sister Holthausen was chosen as a leader to effect the organization of an orchestra. Her assistant, Miss Marguerite Sheppard, is chorister at present. These sisters have been a great encouragement to the younger members because of their interest and ability along musical lines.

Brother Arthur H. Mills held a musical institute here March 12 and 13. Many of the Saints from other places in the district were here. Brother Mills certainly made us feel that we must come to the front in a musical way and develop our talent.

Our leaders are striving hard, working faithfully, and living consecrated lives to build up the work here.

Sister J. A. Graves reports very interesting and well attended meetings in the Department of Women. The department has invited the Webbe City sisters to meet with them in a business session the first Tuesday in May.

We are looking forward to the district conference to convene here May 20. We always enjoy the association with other Saints at our conferences as well as the wonderful sermons and talks from our able leaders.

RAYMOND TROYER.

Columbus, Ohio

Rinehard and Twenty-Second Street

Saints and friends passing through Columbus may find our church home by taking a Whittier street car, getting off at Twenty-second Street, and walking half square south.

April 18.—Sacrament was in charge of Bishop H. E. French and Elder G. H. Kirkendall. A peaceful spirit was present throughout the meeting, and all felt edified. Brother and Sister Graham, of Middleport, Ohio, met with us on sacrament Sunday, and we hope they will come again.

Our chorister, Sister Hazel Gribben, is much improved, and we are grateful to God for the wonderful blessing bestowed in her behalf. We realize that had not God intervened she would not be living today. Truly man's extremity is God's opportunity. We hope it will not be long until she will be able to meet with us again.

The Department of Women met Tuesday evening, April 12, at the home of Sister Vera M. Hunter, 1202 Whittier Street. A very profitable hour was spent in study. All enjoyed the refreshments and social time.

The priesthood also met on Tuesday evening for study, to better prepare themselves for more efficient service.

Sister Morris is on the sick list now, but we hope it will not be long until she can again meet with us.

We are glad to report that a Department of Recreation and Expression was organized with E. C. J. Swanson as superintendent; Lena Wemlinger, secretary; Chester Carey, treasurer. We hope to see this department grow and develop the talents of our young.

The Sunday school gave a very nice Easter program, which all enjoyed. The choir gave us some beautiful music Easter Sunday, and we appreciate the splendid work they are doing. Bishop French and Elder G. H. Kirkendall were the speakers on Easter, and all enjoyed their beautiful sermons.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Madden was blessed Easter Sunday by H. E. French and G. H. Kirkendall, Brother French being mouthpiece.

We were pleased to have Sister Ethel Shebondy and Sister Papp, of Akron, Ohio, with us on Easter Sunday.

The Recreation Ball Team began the season on April 20. We have nine young men on this team, and we hope to see them win each game.

Other speakers for the month were A. E. Anderton, Doctor W. B. Reeves, and Brother Goshen Myers. The sermons were edifying and encouraging to the Saints.

April 25 the Department of Women gave a birthday surprise on our oldest member, Sister Elizabeth Eichhorn. Sister Nieman baked a birthday cake on which seventy-seven candles were placed. We wish her many more happy birthdays. Sister Eichhorn was one of the first members in Columbus and has been a faithful worker ever since the work was organized here.

Dowagiac, Michigan

April 25.—The Saints of this branch are enjoying fairly good health, and this writing leaves all on the gain. There has been much sickness here this winter. Sister John Marx and family have been confined to their home the greater part of the spring with scarlet fever, but are able to be out again. Sister Roakley, of Bridgman, Michigan, who has been seriously ill at her home, is able to be about the house once more, and has enjoyed the power of healing through administration. She says she is not going to give up. We are all hoping for a speedy recovery for Sister Roakley.

The Saints of this community are striving to serve the Master the best they can. They are so scattered about the country that it makes it hard to regularly attend meetings. Some drive as far as twenty miles every Sunday to attend services at Buchanan, and many others regularly come ten and fifteen miles. This shows they are interested in the gospel work.

The work at Buchanan is progressing nicely at the present time. We have a fine Sunday school with an average attendance of forty, and each Sunday brings more new scholars. We are in hopes that we can fill the little church to its capacity in the near future. The work was just resumed last winter after a year or so of inactivity due to the sickness and death of Brother Keefer, who was in charge at that place. We shall always miss his kind ways and helpful attitude in the branch.

The Easter services were very impressive this year, and were well attended. The junior members put on the entire program, which was very commendable.

The ladies of the church held two bake sales, from which they realized nearly enough to finish paying for the piano, bought for the church and Sunday school. The sales netted nearly twenty-five dollars each. Much is to be accomplished yet to realize all we need to carry on the work here.

The boys in the Sunday school are responding with their musical instruments to help sound the hymns and praises of God both in Sunday school and church.

Brother John C. Parker, of Dowagiac, will soon be displaying an Eagle Scout badge, as he passed the required tests and enough others to make the total of twenty-one merit badges to his credit. John says it is great to be a scout. We are hoping that we shall soon be able to organize a troop at the church in Buchanan.

We were privileged to listen to Elder J. W. McKnight at our morning and evening services last Sunday, and he has promised to be with us next Sunday, May 1. His sermons are enjoyed by old and young, and we hope he will find it convenient to be with us more frequently.

Among those visiting our branch were Brothers B. H. Doty, R. E. Jones, B. H.'s father, and Homer Doty, of Travis City, who stopped on their way to General Conference. Brother B. H. occupied the pulpit in the evening, and Brother R. E. spoke at the morning meeting. We were glad to see them and hear their encouraging words.

Sisters Bertha Bell and Roxie Rollings, of Berrien Springs,

Michigan, were with us at the last Sunday's meeting. We hope to see them more at Buchanan. We are always glad to have anyone passing through our town make us a visit, and you will find the Saints worshipping in the little Seventh Day Adventist Church at Buchanan. Inquiries will be gladly answered by the writer, who is branch president.

That we may all strive onward to 1930 is our prayer, and we hope to demonstrate this by actual service.

JAMES O. BEST.

Escatawpa, Mississippi

April 27.—We were very much surprised at the appearance of Jack Frost the 23d of this month, and he did slight damage to young crops.

After several weeks spent with her parents, Brother and Sister D. W. Sherman, Sister Lola McQueen has returned to her home at Cedar Lake, Mississippi, much improved in health.

We were very glad to welcome Sister Susie Davis back to Sunday school after several weeks of absence due to illness.

Easter was enjoyed by all. The beginner grades furnished a short program at the close of Sunday school. In the afternoon about seventy-five children and adults met at the home of Brother and Sister D. W. Sherman, where the time was spent in an egg hunt.

Tuesday preceding Easter a group of sisters met at the church for the purpose of giving it a general spring clean-up.

A surprise party was given at the home of Brother and Sister John Sherman Tuesday night, April 19, in honor of Sister Martha Mizell's sixty-second birthday. She received several useful presents. Refreshments were served by the hostess. All departed at a late hour, wishing Sister Mizell many more happy birthdays.

The children of Brother and Sister John Gill are glad to be out again after having been confined at home several weeks with measles.

After a successful term, the public school will close here Friday, April 29.

Sister Martha Mizell left Friday, the 22d, for Lansing, Michigan, to spend the summer with her daughter and son-in-law, Brother and Sister Charles Fiscus. We wish for her a very pleasant visit and hope she will be much improved in health when she returns.

Sunday was a busy day for Escatawpa Saints. The district Sunday school was held here, and the entire day was devoted to Sunday school work, there being four sessions held. The Mobile and Vancleave Saints did their best to help make the convention a success. Dinner was served under the pines in front of the church.

Good Friday at New Philadelphia, Ohio

April 15, 1927, will truly be remembered as a Good Friday.

While in earnest prayer and meditation on the great sacrifice that our heavenly Father and our loving Savior had made on this memorable occasion on the morning of the above date, the Spirit of the Lord came over me, and I was directed to gather what Saints I could in solemn assembly between the hours of two and three in the afternoon, that we might show our appreciation and pray and testify of his wonderful goodness.

This was about nine in the forenoon, and I immediately consulted the good wife and had her hearty indorsement. We at once agreed that we would partake of no food, missing morning and noon meals. As we live in Dover, it was necessary to drive nearly four miles to reach the Saints, and while on this very sudden mission, perhaps halfway, the spirit of doubt came over me, making the following suggestions: The Saints are busy working and will not come; this is very foolish of you to make this effort, etc. I was just about to turn and come home when I thought, Why not be subject to God's Holy Spirit and do as directed? I went on, and doubt soon left me. I proceeded to the home of our worthy pastor and was greeted by the smiles of the brother and his good wife. Brother Goudy was busy cleaning house and so was Sister Goudy. In a few moments I explained my mission of love, and Brother Goudy in a manly way remarked, "You have my hearty indorsement, and I am only sorry that I can not be with you." But before leaving I felt they would be with us, and so it happened.

I hurriedly visited as many of the homes of the Saints as I could, and all spoke very favorably, remarking that though they were busy cleaning house they could surely make a little sacrifice as the Lord had made such a great one. By the time two o'clock had struck, the Saints who could come had nearly all gathered. Brother Goudy and I were the only brothers, for nearly all were working. Meeting was opened, and when the first song was partly under way, the Spirit of God came with great power and was so strong that we could scarcely finish the song. Prayer with the Spirit was offered by Brother Goudy, and the writer read a portion of the fourth chapter of the Book of Nephi, telling of the terrible destruction and the great darkness that came upon the people of this land; and then I read the account of the Savior's death as recorded by Matthew. The Saints were greeted, encouraged, and tenderly admonished, and the balance of the hour was spent in testimony. All were rejoiced that God recognized us and that we were pleasing in his sight and our meeting met with his approval. Before leaving the Saints' chapel, we agreed to have a sunrise service at the chapel on Easter morning, at which time we had another very spiritual meeting.

The branch has decided to hold similar meetings each year, and we have agreed to take the sacrament the next Good Friday between the hours of two and three, as this is the time the Savior is supposed to have given his life for the children of men. We hope every branch will make a similar effort in 1928.

Portland, Oregon

April 25, 1927.—Our little church was attractively decorated in lilies and green when we assembled for the services Easter morning. The children presented a pleasing program at the eleven o'clock hour under the direction of the junior Sunday school superintendent, Sister Caroline Larson, assisted by Sister Sylvia Root. Following the program, Elder Walter H. Barker delivered an appropriate sermon, which inculcated in the minds of the audience the cause for Easter joy and gladness.

In the evening the choir of fifteen mixed voices, directed by Sister Fay Buchanan, rendered a cantata before a large assemblage. The anthems were intermingled with numbers by the following soloists: soprano, Blanche Brady, Hattie Young, Fay Buchanan; contralto, Lila Livingston; baritone, Percy Quance; tenor, Walter Williams. Sister Veve Moore is the accompanist. A beautiful tenor solo was sung by Mr. Walter Williams. We hope that he will favor us again soon. Brother Henry Livingston played a violin solo in his usual meritorious style. Perry Hunt was at the piano. The opening prelude was played by Sister Esther Dudley. This was the finest piece of finished work they have ever produced, and indeed it may be declared magnum opus.

Under the leadership of Sister Chloe Shaue, the Religion is growing. The programs have been especially good.

Another branch of the work is also growing—the Sunday school—under efficient officers with Sister Lila Livingston at the head.

For the last few weeks our church has been topsy-turvy—spring house cleaning. The whole interior is being remodeled and rewired. As Latter Day Saints always need a great deal of "light," we were forced to hold the necessary meetings at the home of Brother Justin Verhei for a time while new light fixtures were installed. On account of the inadequate room for the junior Sunday school, the lower auditorium is being repaired and refinished. The children will be happier and much more comfortable after the work is completed.

Encouraging reports come from Brother Albert Livingston, who is in charge of the young people's prayer services. He states that large numbers attend regularly and that the spirit of service and love abounds.

Sister Margaret Meyer was baptized on Easter. Although she is a stranger to most of us, we are very glad to receive her. We wish to extend to her our most hearty welcome.

The Department of Women has sponsored several food sales lately which have added large amounts to its treasury—from whence many good things come.

Brother Eli Bronson has returned from General Conference. We are very happy that Brother Bronson, his wife, and daughters have been permitted to remain in this district for the coming year.

Central Los Angeles Branch

The last few weeks have been very busy ones for Los Angeles Saints. With our pastor, Apostle Myron A. McConley, away attending General Conference, many earnest workers have taken added responsibility in order to keep the work moving, and it could not fail to move forward with the shoulders of so many faithful ones at the wheel. No one has done double duty to a greater extent than Sister Myron A. McConley. How invaluable is the dependable, faithful wife of the pastor! Do we appreciate their services—their worth? There are many to whom much credit is due that seldom receive the slightest recognition, to say nothing of the praise they deserve and the encouragement they often need.

Our last prayer meeting was a rousing good one. It continued an hour after the usual closing time because of the spirit of testimony and good fellowship that prevailed. If all could sense the value of prayer service, there would be fewer empty seats. One regret regarding the service is the fact that it is attended largely by women. You men come, and let us make our response in this work fifty-fifty. Brother Raymond Knowlton was in charge of the above service, assisted by Brother Earl Root. The young people here have come to look forward with great anticipation to their eight o'clock prayer service held each sacrament Sunday. The Sunday school of which Brother Sutherland is superintendent, is adding some new features and making a few changes. Recently the Sunday morning programs, in charge of Sister Lorena Bedford, have been both instructive and inspirational. The programs are given after study and occupy about twenty minutes.

During the Sunday school hour Easter the junior and intermediate departments, under the direction of Sister Laura Freie, gave a spiritual play entitled, "The glory in the garden." The impressiveness of this play made many realize, as they never had before, the value of dramatics in helping show and make clear the beauties of the gospel. The primary department, in charge of Sister L. Bedford, gave several pretty numbers. The young people's orchestra furnished the music, which added much to the program. Under the leadership of Sister Margaret Jones, this orchestra is coming to be a great asset to the branch.

At eleven o'clock the choir, under the direction of Sister Hodges, rendered the Easter cantata, "From sepulcher to throne." It was very beautifully given. Sisters Jones and Collinge were at the piano and organ, and Brother and Sister R. C. Smith, soloists. In the evening a pageant, "The ten virgins," was given. No sermon on the subject could be more impressive. Sister McConley and Sister Nell Crum were responsible for our having this beautiful lesson. The decorations Easter were no small part of the occasion. The setting created by the flowers, the cross of lilies, and the garden, added much to the Easter story. Sister Lois Crawford and Sister Maude Masten spent hours in arranging the decorations and are to be commended for their successful efforts.

On the first Tuesday of the month the Good Time Club, which has been so efficiently sponsored by Brother Dana Crum for many months, had a jolly good time. Some folks who were not there certainly missed some good stunts and exciting games and contests.

The church school, recently organized, is going full sway. Sister Mae Lewis is its very capable director and is assisted by well-qualified instructors in special lines. Some of these sisters have given up evening pay positions that they might consecrate their services to the church, which truly is the Zionic spirit. The school offers classes in dramatics, public speaking, voice, and piano, and there are junior and senior classes in each. Some elderly people have joined the public speaking class in the hope that they can better express themselves in prayer and testimony service. Great interest is being taken in the school, as is evidenced by the enrollment.

The piano fund has been swelled in a very novel way. On Brother and Sister Newland's wedding anniversary, they invited the choir to come to their home provided with wares from Kresge's or Woolworth's. These were sold to the highest bidder, and every one had some useful article to take home, in addition to the memory of a great deal of fun. The choir had the fun, the piano dealer got the fund, and the branch keeps the piano.

On April 14 Sister Olive Davis took the Girl Scouts on a nature study hike, wild flowers being the subject. They hiked to Observation Point, ten miles distant, in Hollywood Hills.

Bradner, Ohio

April 26.—We are glad at this time to add a word of testimony of God's goodness to us as a branch. We have much to encourage us. At this writing, we do not know of any sick one.

Brother Denny, aged seventy-one years, has gone to his reward since our last letter to you. We feel that while he will be missed, for he was one who was willing to help wherever he could and he and Sister Denny were always kind especially to our missionaries, many of them finding a hearty welcome at their home, it was for the best. Though his experience in the church was of but a few short years' duration, Brother Denny's testimony of the truth of the gospel was sure, and many times we have heard him express the regret that he could not have heard and accepted it in his younger days. His funeral was held in the church, and Elder J. M. Harden, of Uniopolis, preached the sermon. How thankful we who have found this gospel in our youth ought to be, for if faithful, when we come to the end we can look back over our lives, not on wasted years, but years full of service to others. It is as the song expresses it:

"I would be friend of all, the foe and the friendless,
I would be giving and forget the gift;
I would be humble for I know my weakness,
I would look up, and laugh, and love, and lift."

Easter night a fine program was given, including the pageant, "Easter pilgrims." This program was the result of much hard work and patience, but work and patience are two necessary ingredients in the production of anything worth while. We trust that we shall never grow weary in well doing.

Not long ago on Friday night we had a very interesting debate on the subject, Resolved, The world is growing better. Sister Sheplar and Sister Ulrich took the affirmative and Brother Will Smith and Sister Oria Smith, the negative.

Much splendid data was brought forth by each speaker, and we hope to have more of these debates.

Sunday, April 24, the morning session was turned into a business session. This meeting was held at this time because many of our people live at a distance and can not attend the meetings on week nights. Matters pertaining to the re-decorating of our church building were discussed. It was decided that we need to do some spring cleaning. We are going to paint the exterior and paper the interior of the church. One hundred and fifty dollars were pledged for this purpose at this meeting. In the evening Brother Ulrich preached.

This year we want to be carefully prayerful and prayerfully careful.

Stockton, California

On March 29, Brother and Sister Hardy left to take up the duties of caretakers of the reunion grounds at Irvington. They are among our most faithful members, and we greatly miss them. To show our esteem for them, the whole branch quietly stole into their house while they were absent, bringing refreshments and a token of remembrance. A jolly evening was spent, and all left wishing them success in their new undertaking.

The sacramental services had about the usual attendance, and the prayers were for General Conference, that God's Spirit might be with those upon whom the greatest burdens and responsibilities rest, that peace and harmony might prevail.

This month the women served two cafeteria suppers, in view of the fact that during the summer months they do not serve them with any success, and money must be raised to make some much-needed church improvements. These suppers are becoming popular. A large number always patronize them, about twenty-five dollars being cleared from each one.

One Easter Sunday the Sunday school gave a program merging into the eleven o'clock service. The choir then rendered a cantata, one of the best ever given in the branch. A profusion of spring flowers made a beautiful setting, and although there was no sermon it was a most inspiring service. In the evening the Temple Builders presented the tableau, "Glorifying the cross," which effort made an effective closing for our Easter Day.

Brother Dagen, our Religio superintendent, has gone out of town for a few weeks on account of ill health. We hope very soon to report some activities from this department.

Clitherall, Minnesota

May 1.—The church work of the season seems to have made a good start this first Sunday in May. There was a good attendance, one family coming eighty miles and starting at 5:30 in the morning. Another family came forty-two miles. And others came distances ranging from twenty-five to five or six miles. The Sunday school, preaching, and prayer services were all of a high order, and those who attended were well repaid for their efforts.

There have been a few services held earlier in the spring, but during the conference so many were gone that several services were missed. It is confidently expected that much of the good of General Conference will be felt in this branch. One change has already resulted—the attempt to carry on a junior church, in charge of Lillian Horne. Those who were not privileged to attend the conference received much good from the *Daily Herald*s.

Early in April, our missionary, Robert Gunlock, spent a few days in the branch and preached a very good sermon in the church on Sunday, with several nonmembers present.

There is a general desire to do more for the cause than ever before.

Items Found in Presidency's Correspondence

From Midland, England

The small book on Duties of District and Branch Officers I consider is a very fine work, and I very much appreciate the opportunity to have one. I am trying to induce all the ministry in the Midland District to secure a copy. Some have done so and have got light and knowledge by reading same. It is going to help the ministry and laity to build up and have better understandings. The leaven has started to work. It has given me joy. I hope to get the ministry to meet for study more often now in the branches and if possible special district meetings. JOHN E. MEREDITH.

Advancement at Salt Lake City

Everything going fine here as usual. Had fine crowds out yesterday. I baptized five yesterday including Mrs. Jenkins, our "Mormon" friend.

There is a very good spirit here now. Brother Creviston also baptized his boy. With the church building in such fine shape and the branch in good order, with Sunday school and Religio and the Women's Department all functioning, the next year's work should show some good results. Am leaving this week for conference. CALVIN H. RICH.

Tithing Increase in Colorado

I returned on March 24 from a trip in the southern and eastern part of the district. I stopped in Pueblo, La Junta, Las Animas, Wiley, Lamar, and Uteville. I had a good time while on the trip and feel that good was accomplished in each place that I visited. It gives me much pleasure to report that the work is in good condition, and seems to be on the upward trend throughout the entire district. There was an increase of $3,900 in tithing over that of last year, to say nothing of the $4,500 paid in Graceland pledges.

There was a good attendance at each of the services here yesterday, and they were attended by a very goodly degree of the Holy Spirit. I was the speaker at both of the preaching hours and enjoyed excellent liberty in the presentation of my subjects. The branch here is in very good condition; everybody seems to be trying to cooperate for its good.

Idaho Saints Enjoy President Smith's Visit

I received your letter some time ago and was really glad to hear from you, and we surely did appreciate your visit to Malad. The Saints have taken on new life and seem to push out with a greater determination than ever before. Our meetings are well attended. The ladies had more out at their last meeting than they have had for some time.

We have taken hold of that building proposition with a determination and will have it completed right away. Brother Hill, our branch solicitor, has taken hold of his work and is pushing the stewardship plan with great zeal. But while it seems we are getting at our work pretty well, you must not think we do not need a visit from you again, just as soon as you can possibly make arrangements.

I hope that at the coming conference it will be possible for us to get a little more assistance than we have had in the past few years in this district.

Hawaiian Missionary Gives Encouraging Report

We are still trying to keep the wheel of Zion at this place moving toward its goal. At the present time it is moving slowly, but the outlook is good. Some of the young people are reviving their interest in the work, which thing brings some degree of pleasure to the Saints.

Yesterday (April 3) was our joint sacramental service, which is a quarterly meeting of the Hawaiian, Chinese, and Japanese Branches. Though some of the Japanese members could not be present, the attendance was about one hundred and five. Two new faces were seen in the audience, but as they bore testimony of the truth there was evidence of the unchanging spirit of brotherhood and sisterhood which is always found among Saints. These were Brother Ralph Hall, a priest, who has recently come from New Zealand to make his home in Honolulu, and Sister Emma Bromann, whose faithful efforts in church work will be missed at Burlington, Iowa. Sister Bromann will not make this her permanent home, but we are sure that while here her influence will be for good among the young people.

The hour of the evening preaching service found an audience of over fifty waiting to hear the message. A goodly degree of the Spirit was present as in the preceding services of the day. As we retired to rest, the writer found that a spirit of peace had taken the place of one of anxiety which was present in the morning hours. Though the day was a busy one, we found pleasure in meditation at its close.

Reports from Hilo indicate that the work is in fair condition. Shall keep in touch with them and give any assistance possible.

We are praying for the success of the 1927 General Conference and trusting the Lord will bless his servants with wisdom in their decision.

Minnesota Missionary Finds Work

We left Independence last Tuesday and arrived here the following day. Everything here was in fine shape and appears to have been well cared for by those left in charge.

The Saints were glad to have us return and were anxious to hear about the conference, and we were as glad to return and tell them about it. In my sermon yesterday I tried to briefly outline the work to be done and the progress that must be made by 1930, and the response I received gives promise that the Minneapolis Saints will do their part in this great program.

The spirit of consecration and of sacrifice which was so evident among the Saints at conference is also resting upon the Saints in this district, as will be seen by increased tithing and offerings during this conference year.

I am making a new opening for missionary work this evening. A young man and wife have opened their home for services, and a number of their friends have agreed to attend. Of course it is impossible to tell the results, but the prospects are very encouraging now. This opening is in a very fine residential part of the city, made up of the best class of working people. Those with whom I have talked seem to be highly intellectual and refined and very desirous of finding a religion that will satisfy. They are members of other denominations but feel dissatisfied with them.

The pastor of the Cleveland Methodist Church of Saint Paul asked me to preach in his church last evening, and I did so with good liberty.

We still feel optimistic and more determined than ever to make good and to prove worthy of the trust this church has placed in me. I expect to "lose" myself more completely this conference year than ever before.

The Engineers and Zion Building

This letter is an epistle of enthusiasm, hope, and congratulation from one of your fellow laborers who was not able to attend General Conference; but who is watching carefully the happenings and noting every event with all faculties alert and with spirit a very "tiptoes," ready to go into any work for the Master.

As I read of the activities of Graceland College, my heart leaps with joy and aspiration, looking forward to the time when our church college shall be the educational center of the world.

And it is my hope to some day teach applied sciences in an engineering department of this college, and see eager Latter Day Saint boys and girls prepare themselves most efficiently for the most useful activities in life. I hope to see such an engineering department in the near future; and it will be a joy to me to see the work done, even if I may not have the privilege of participating.

My dream of Zion includes a people who are practically all well educated; at least all well fitted for the doing of some service that shall mean much to their fellow men. And along with this liberal education will come the most sanitary and most artistic housing and house groupings that can be imagined by the artistic enthusiasm of man moved upon by the spirit of love and truth.

It is another dream of mine to some day be able to build such beautiful cottages and homes and sell them to those who have need upon the easiest terms imaginable.

I believe I am an engineer in the truest sense of the term, for when I think of waterworks and sewer systems and pavements and housing (both private and industrial), my heart bubbles over with enthusiasm to plan and to build. And when I think of such activities built and operated under the stewardship plan, it gives me such an urge and joy that I can hardly hold my pencil to write.

The civil engineer and in fact all engineers are builders and conservators. They have heartache when aught is wasted, but they rejoice in rendering service that shall bless their fellow men.

If there is any one profession above another that the Zionic ideals appeal to it is the civil engineering group. Their professional ideals and ethics are leaning that way. The civil engineer's idealism makes of him a potential resident in Zion, and he is enough of a materialist to know that "sticks and stones" will play a very important part in the redemption of Zion if they are used in the right way.

So I bid you Godspeed, and say to you, Despair not over the weaknesses of men. We are all weak. We all need the strengthening which comes from him who failed not.

Ready to Work

I had the pleasure of hearing your discourse Sunday afternoon, and enjoyed it very much. Hope to be one whose work shall prove my faith. I very much favor the slogan you said you would present if you were to present one to the church. I hope to be carefully prayerful and prayerfully careful.

I am ready to do what the church would have me do. I love the work and wish I could devote all my time to it, and if the church should want me and my services, here I am; use me.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.

O. A. CURRIE.

Groton, Connecticut

April 29.—Bishop M. C. Fisher was a recent visitor at the sacramental service. Sister Fisher accompanied him. The Saints were pleased to see them, and enjoyed the part they took in the service.

In the evening of Easter Sunday, an interesting program was rendered by the Sunday school and church. Sisters Margaret Slater, Florence F. Whipple (Simmons), and Brother H. I. Simmons were in charge. Among the selections of especial interest were violin solos by Ruth Antis, a little Jewish girl.

Brothers Thomas G. and John E. Whipple recently returned from a tour of the southeastern and midwestern States. They attended General Conference and visited many places of interest. Fortunately for them (for they were among the last to pass through the Mississippi Valley) they escaped the flood.

Brother John E. Blastow and family just returned from a trip through the Blue Ridge Mountains.

A special musical program is planned for Mothers' Day.

Oelwein, Iowa

April 30.—Things are progressing encouragingly in our city. Although we do not have a large band of Saints, we have some very faithful ones who are ever on the alert to carry the good work on here in our church and to reach as many nonmembers as they can.

The Easter program was quite good, although the children did not have all the practice we would have liked. Our most patient child instructor had her hands pretty full with home work, but the children did remarkably well for the time spent in practicing. There was an Easter dialogue by four intermediate girls and four boys, which was creditably given. Then several drills with letters were given, and the children sang songs very sweetly. The choir rendered two Easter songs, and Brother Charles Shippy gave a short opening address. We that tried to help thought things passed off very smoothly, but the critic who never did anything found the usual amount of fault. However, everyone knows the critic. We feel that much credit is due to our ever-ready and persevering helper, Sister Blanche McFarlane. The children love Sister McFarlane. One little girl said to her grandmother, "I just love Sister Blanche."

The head of the Northeastern Iowa District Department of Women, Miss Esther Vickerstaff, of Clinton, spent the week-end before Easter in our community, and with her usual vim and ability helped out in the Religio with a musical number; also she assisted with the Easter decorations and sang in the choir Sunday. We would like to have called an extra meeting of the Department of Women, but so many were absent at General Conference that our number was small. We would have enjoyed a talk from Sister Vickerstaff, whose mother, now dead, was head of the department two years ago and who made a most excellent leader. Sister Vickerstaff has done much to put Northeastern Iowa on the map, and we feel encouraged to carry on after one of her talks. We are glad to have such workers as she and Sister Mollie Davis, whose visit to us was long remembered. She not only is right, but can prove it, and is ready with all argument for a good cause. When we have such leaders as these in the department, we feel that success must crown the efforts made to go onward and upward.

Some eight or more members of our branch attended the conference, nearly all of them young people. They came back full of enthusiasm and pride in the good and noble men who are at the head of our church, men who are every inch of them worthy to stand in high places. To some it was most wonderful to meet our worthy president, Frederick M. Smith, and clasp his hand in greeting and find him not as a high and exalted leader above the people, but a genial, social gentleman with kindly greetings for the humblest Saints. One lively little miss from here had a camera and asked nearly all the prominent elders to pose for her, which they obligingly did. The young people carried notebooks and came back with them well filled with notes on all subjects, sermons, classes, song services, plays, and cantatas.

Professor Martin Heyde, of Waterloo, who has a class in voice instruction here and who took a leading part in "The Elijah," thinks he never was better treated in America than he was in Independence. He said Mr. Smith (meaning President Frederick M.) even talked to him in German, which pleased him greatly. He has received letters from prominent people in Independence since coming back. He thanks Elder Claude Kress for making him acquainted with so many musical people. We feel it would be such a good thing for him and for the church as well to have him unite with us. He has been a stranger in a strange land, and the geniality of our people causes him to be especially favorable to us.

We know that no true Saint came away from this most wonderful conference without feeling it was good to be there. All-I have heard speak of the conference say the Spirit was noticeable in prayer meetings, and one felt that the great and all-wise Creator was well pleased with his people. Our pastor, Brother McFarlane, and wife came home filled with the spirit of the wonderful meetings they had attended. Sister Cora McKusker, our member who has a talent for describing scenes, gave us some very vivid word pictures of places, people, plays, and meetings. One could fairly fancy himself right on the scene of action, meeting people and seeing the sights. And when I think on this wonderful gathering, I know in the words of the good old hymn:

"God is marshaling his army,
For the rescue of his truth;
He is calling now to battle,
Both the aged and the youth."

Minneapolis, Minnesota

Fifth and Queen Avenues, North

With the return of General Conference delegates and visitors, things in the Twin Cities Branch are showing their old life and enthusiasm. The attendance fell during their absence and with the coming of warm spring weather, but it is hoped that this will not be permanent.

On the Sunday following his return, Elder Ray Whiting, pastor, talked about some phases of the conference with special applications to the Saints of Minneapolis and Saint Paul. In the evening Bishop Leslie DeLapp spoke on stewardship and the work before us as a people. On the same evening Pastor Whiting delivered a sermon in Cleveland Avenue Methodist Church of Saint Paul, in response to invitation, and made a very good impression on the members of that church.

Last Sunday the monthly sacramental service was held, and it proved a very active and spiritual meeting. Patriarch Gunsolley was present and gave the opening remarks. The Saints were glad to welcome him back with them again, and especially enjoyed his evening talk on "The gospel contract." His informal method of presentation made quite a hit, as he used the blackboard and gave the audience the opportunity to ask questions and give suggestions.

As a special feature of the Religio service, which was interchanged with the preaching service hour in order to have it dark enough, a series of slides showing the work of construction and progress of the Auditorium was shown on the screen. Bishop DeLapp explained the several pictures in a very interesting and educational manner.

During the first half of April the affairs in the branch were under the general oversight of Elder Carroll Olson, one of the associate pastors. He was ably assisted in the conduct of the various meetings by other members of the priesthood.

On Sunday morning, April 10, Brother Hans Olson delivered an instructive discourse, and in the evening the pulpit was filled by Brother W. W. Tutty.

On Easter Sunday, a special program during the Sunday school hour was presented by members of the Sunday school, under the direction of Sister Winnifred Lynch. The Easter sermon was by Elder Olson, with special music furnished by Ruth Calhoun and Bessie Johnson. In the evening Brother Wesley Elvin gave his personal impressions of the General Conference, as he received them during the four or five days of his visit there.

Sister L. L. DeLapp, who has been severely ill with pneumonia, is now recovered, and the Saints are glad to see her up and around and as faithful in attending meetings as before.

Brother Boxwell underwent an operation for cataract two weeks ago, which proved successful, but other complications arose later which retarded his progress. However, he was able to attend last Saturday's service, and his eyesight is greatly improved.

Any Saints passing through Minneapolis or Saint Paul are invited to worship with the Twin Cities Saints. The address can be found in the Minneapolis City Directory, but is given at the opening of this letter for convenience. If possible it would be wise to notify the pastor, by mail or telephone, beforehand. His address and telephone number are as follows:

Ray Whiting, 2308 Western Avenue, North, Minneapolis, Minnesota, Hyland 3876.

Santa Ana, California

The past month has been a very active one in the Santa Ana Branch, as all of the departments are functioning, and a good attendance has been noted at all the services.

The young people of Santa Ana entertained the officers of the Departments of Recreation and Expression from the various branches of the Southern California District, at an all-day meeting, the third Sunday in March. Beginning with the eight o'clock young people's prayer service in the morning and continuing throughout the services of the day was manifested a spirit of consecration and willingness to cooperate that speaks well for the future of this district. In the afternoon a round table discussion was held, dealing with the problems in this work. It was planned to hold these district meetings quarterly, the next one to be held on May 22, at San Bernardino. There were representatives from Los Angeles, Ontario, San Bernardino, and Long Beach, beside the local young people.

The Department of Women in this branch has been very busy during the last few months. The ladies meet once a week for an all-day meeting. They are having a series of cooked food sales on Saturdays, the proceeds going to the clean-up fund. The birthday dinners that have been held once a month in the church basement in honor of the ones who have had birthdays during that month have proved very popular.

Sister Theresa Koonce has organized a very interesting class meeting on Sunday nights, among the junior high and high school students. At present they are studying the Book of Mormon and are working on a play taken from their lessons which they are planning to present within the next few weeks.

Foraker, Oklahoma

Heavy rains during the spring have caused a smaller attendance at all church services than we have had heretofore. But we are hoping the worst of this weather is past, for all farm work has been greatly retarded.

About a month ago Brother Tom and Sister Gertie Williams, formerly of Nowata, met with us one Sunday. We were glad to have them and hope they may come again. Sister Marjorie Montague has closed her school and gone to join her parents, Brother and Sister J. E. Montague, who have moved to a farm near Fairfax, Oklahoma. Brothers John and Reuben Workman and families have moved to a place four miles south and west of Fairfax. The vacancy left by these three families will be quite noticeable when we meet together hereafter.

The Saints of Foraker are always willing to submit to the dictates of those whose duty it is to supervise. We have a very kindly regard for our missionary, Brother James W. Davis, who labored among us last year. This branch is mostly composed of Saints young in the gospel, and to his credit it is said among the members here that he never knocked on those above him in official standing or the brethren of like standing. We feel he taught us many precious truths. It is as one lady remarked, "He taught the truth so purely and simply that even I could understand." One brother who has been in the church for twenty years, when speaking of how our brother's preaching was attended by the outpouring of the Spirit, said, "Upon one or two occa-sins I have never witnessed anything equal to it." May he find Saints who appreciate his labors where he goes this year.

Sister Grace Shufeldt and husband, Charley Shufeldt, are the proud parents of a daughter born April 21.

Since our last report Sister Margaret Storm was married to Mr. Clarence Watson, of Webb City.

The first Sunday night of April, Brother J. E. Montague preached a discourse very interesting to the Saints, who hope he may come often and favor us with more instructions. Brother Arthur Slover preaches at the evening hour on fourth Sundays. The local brothers also are doing some preaching. Brother Robert Montague preached on the second Sunday of the month, Brother E. E. Workman, the third.

There seems to be a feeling of unity among the Saints at this place that is pleasant to see exist among the children of God.

Brother Homer and Sister Lennie Wells have moved to Foraker. And now when traveling elders come to that place if they inquire for Brother and Sister Wells, it may save some difficulty in trying to locate the Saints' place of worship, which is four miles out. Through the efforts of Sister Ellen Adair, we now have our Sunday school and church directory in the Shidler paper, The Oil Field Press. They also promised space for our elders to write short articles when here holding services if they so wished.

It will seem quite natural to have Brother Hubert Case back in Oklahoma again. Many regard him as a father in the gospel in Oklahoma.

San Antonio, Texas

May 3.—Easter Sunday was observed in our branch with a splendid program at the eleven o'clock hour, in charge of Sister Emma Jackson. As an introductory number an appropriate chapter of the Bible was read by Mrs. R. E. Miller. At the close of the program, there was a splendid talk by R. E. Miller on "The resurrection." Brother Miller again occupied in the evening with a continuation of the same subject.

On the last Sunday in April, Brother Miller was the speaker both morning and evening, using as a text at the morning service, "The purpose of creation." It was a masterly effort, and we are sure everyone who was privileged to hear it was benefited. At the evening hour he spoke on charity.

At the Sunday school hour of this day, we had with us Mrs. W. M. Baines, of Houston, Texas, who gave a talk at the close of the lesson study. She is the state vice president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and her subject was temperance. This talk was appreciated by all.

The Religio has taken up the study of "Teacher training lessons" by Hurlbut, and as a result the attendance is rapidly increasing.

Sister Elma Neal, whom many will remember as an excellent Sunday school worker, has recently undergone an operation for appendicitis, and we are glad to report she is on the road to recovery. In recent years Sister Elma has not been able to continue her church work owing to the great demand for her time in public school work. She taught for a number of years in the public schools in the city and rose from teacher to supervisor and from supervisor to the office of primary superintendent of the city schools of San Antonio. And aside from the many duties imposed upon her by that office she has worked hard, and is now the author of school textbooks of the primary grades which simplify the task for children who do not speak the English language, helping them to grasp it more readily. Her main aim now is to get the schools to accept her work, which some have done. We feel that this is a noble work she has undertaken for the advancement of mankind, and wish her Godspeed and a speedy recovery.

On the first Sunday of this month the prayer and sacrament service was well attended, and a splendid spirit prevailed. At 3.30 in the afternoon Marshall Richardson was baptized by Pastor R. E. Miller and confirmed at the water's edge by Elders W. H. Mannering and R. E. Miller. It was good to behold one so young in years walk alone so bravely into the liquid waves. At the evening service we were again favored with a sermon by our pastor, who used as a text, "The fruits of your doings." It was a splendid effort and the attendance was good.

Gifford Edwards, who is a member of the Breckenridge High School Orchestra, was appointed along with nineteen others to go to Baylor College to compete with other orchestras of the State. They came back with the satisfaction of having again won the loving cup.

The Saints are glad to note that Brother H. E. Winegar is returned to our district, and we hope and pray that every member will lend support to make this the banner year in the harvest of the Lord.

April has brought many blessings from the Master to the Saints in our little branch. The sacramental service on April 3 will be long remembered by those present, for the Spirit of the Master was poured out in such abundance and power that all rejoiced, and we were loath to leave his sanctuary. We were privileged to have with us in this service, Brothers John R. Grice, of Saint Clair, Michigan; Jacob Halb, of Middleton, Ohio; and John McKnight, of Galien, Michigan, all of these brothers being in the missionary field of the church and passing through Chicago on their way to General Conference. Brother John McKnight, having just completed a very successful series of meetings in our branch, remained over the Sabbath to worship with us, much to our joy. The service was typical of the Lord's presence as manifested later at General Conference, where some of our members were enabled to attend, bringing us the glad tidings of great joy.

On Saturday evening, the 3d, the men's club of the branch met at the home of Brother and Sister John Wahlgren in their regular session, Elders John R. Grice and George Harrington being the speakers, and they surely brought us food for thought. Brother Grice pointed out very forcibly how the club could assist in the missionary work of the church, and Brother Harrington gave us some pertinent points in the preparation for service for the Master.

Following this meeting, the troop committee met in its regular session. Almost every man in the branch has now become a member of this committee, and each week brings one or more members of the troop committee to the meeting of our scouts. Our troop is rapidly growing under the able leadership of Brother Charles Scribner, scoutmaster, nobly assisted by Brother Herbert Cotton, assistant scoutmaster. We hope by reunion time to take a full troop to camp for the period.

On Sunday evening, the 3d, Elder Jacob Halb gave us a masterful sermon on perfection, basing his discussion on the fifth chapter of Saint Matthew. We were surely glad to have Brother Halb with us and hope he as well as the other brethren will stop and visit us again while passing through Chicago.

On the 10th of the month, our local brethren broke unto us the bread of life, Brother Charles Cotton occupying in the morning and Brother Frank Phillips in the evening. We are indeed glad to welcome Brother Phillips again, and hope he can remain with us this time, for he is of great assistance in the work here.

On Easter Sunday we joined the Central Chicago Church in the early morning prayer service held at six o'clock, at the same hour the Saints in Zion were meeting, and we were blessed abundantly for our efforts. We returned to our little chapel for the regular services of the morning. At ten o'clock the Sunday school under the able leadership of our industrious deacon, Brother John Wahlgren, presented a beautiful Easter program, which was enjoyed by a large attendance. Following this service Brother Robert Coats, of Detroit, Michigan, delivered the Easter sermon, taking his lesson from the twenty-eighth chapter of Saint Matthew, the Lord blessing both the speaker and the congregation. The message of the hour sank deeply into our hearts and souls. We are indeed glad to have Elder Coats sojourning with us for several weeks.

On the 24th we were pleased to welcome Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin again, and at the morning service Brother Baldwin spoke to us from Doctrine and Covenants 100:3, showing us very clearly the striking similarity between the church of Moses' time and conditions today. He likened our present leader to Moses, who brought his people out of bondage. So will our present leader bring us out if we are faithful to our covenant. In the evening Brother Roy Healy spoke to us on love, using as his text 1 John 4:7-9.

The evening service was dismissed to permit the Saints to attend the Easter program at the Central Chicago Branch.

On the 26th, we held a special service to allow Brother Baldwin to address us again from Matthew 25. We all feel now that we can make better use of our talents than we have in the past.

The night of the 30th again saw the men's club in session with Brother G. T. Richards as the speaker of the evening, and he brought us a remarkable message in "What can I do for the church?" Brother Richards being on his way home, stopped over the week-end with us. We surely rejoice when these brothers stop over to worship with us. We have a motto long since established, "Only once a stranger," and we strive earnestly and prayerfully to apply its meaning. We are glad to welcome any of the Saints or friends passing through the city to stop and worship with us.

Our chapel is located at 11926 Parnell Avenue, one half block from one of the through street car lines of the city and only five minutes' walk from the Stewart Ridge station of the Illinois Central Suburban Service. We are only a few blocks from the main auto routes into the city from the south. Come and worship with us. Our pastor is Elder Edgar O. Byrn, residing at 12011 Stewart Avenue, telephone Pullman 7418; and our publicity agent is Roy F. Healy, 7436 South Michigan Avenue, telephone Vincennes 0999. Either of these or others will be glad to render any assistance possible, as well as bid you welcome to our little branch of earnest workers.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is under the direction of Sister Irene Cooper; the Sunday school under John Wahlgren; and the Department of Women under Sister Robert Burwell. All are thriving and will also bid you welcome. Our regular Sunday services are: Sunday school, 10 a. m.; preaching, 11:15; Religio, 6:45 p. m.; and preaching at 8. Regular midweek prayer services on Wednesday at 8 p. m. and the Department of Women on Tuesday at 10 a. m.

Central Chicago Branch

Sixty-Sixth and Honore Streets

We have enjoyed the company of visiting elders who have stopped over on their way to and from conference.

At the April sacramental service, we had with us Brethren George E. Harrington, W. C. Carl, and J. B. Hidie. The evening service had for its speaker Brother H. A. Chelline.

On the 10th Brother H. P. W. Keir preached in the morning and Brother Hidie in the evening. On Easter Sunday morning, Brother Keir gave us another of his splendid sermons.

At the close of Sunday school, little Violet Ellen Larson was baptized by Brother W. I. Cochran. She was confirmed by Brother J. J. Oliver.

In the evening the story of the resurrection was given in pantomime, the scenes being elucidated by solos, duets, and quartets, sung by various members of the choir, under the direction of Sister Belle Simmons. The pantomime was directed by Sisters Hattie Bell and Jessie Wainwright.

On the morning of the 24th, we listened to Elder R. H. Coats, of Detroit, and in the evening Brother Richard Baldwin preached. On Monday evening Brother and Sister Baldwin were again with us, Brother Baldwin preaching. And the visit though short was thoroughly enjoyed by Chicago Saints.

Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths' visit to us was at the time of the midweek prayer meeting, which gave way to a preaching service. Once again he roused us to a realization of the necessity of obedience in all things. Eighty people were present at this service.

The sacramental service on the first day of May was indeed a splendid one. The thirty testimonies and prayers were prompt and to the point.

The Religio is keeping up its reputation for attractions, one during the past month being a mock trial, a breach-of-promise suit. Brother H. P. W. Keir was judge; Brother William Bell, clerk; Brethren William Keir and J. E. Thoman, lawyers; Brother Arthur Sherman, the defendant; and Sister Marie Keir, the plaintiff. Various other members of the department composed the jury and witnesses.

Next Friday evening a pageant will be given by the Hammond Department of Recreation and Expression, and on Sunday morning our Mothers' Day sermon will be preached by our missionary, Brother David Dowker.

Our own conference visitors have come home, filled with a new desire for service, and we look forward to a profitable year.

Musical Conventions, Spring River District

The Spring River District was very much favored last month from two visits from the secretary of the Music Department of the church, Brother Arthur H. Mills. The first visit was to Joplin, March 12 and 13, at which place was held a musical convention for the southern part of the district. This was well attended by the workers of most of the branches, and a number of special parts were rendered by members of the branches having particular musical talent.

To us was brought a wealth of instruction and encouragement by Brother Mills in his forceful and timely instruction in his two sermons, his lectures, and round table discussions of the various phases of the musical work of the church.

On Saturday evening was held our meeting of congregational singing and the outlining of the work of the convention. This hour also was a time to get acquainted.

At 8.15 Sunday morning, prayer meeting was held for those who could attend. Sunday school began at 9.30 with a special class on the musical needs of the Sunday school, in charge of Brother Mills. At eleven some special music was enjoyed, and there was a sermon by Brother Mills on the topic, "The work of music in the church." Noon found a community dinner being served at the church.

At 2.30 in the afternoon the congregational song service began. Some special musical selections were had; and a paper on "The problems of junior choir work," written by Sister Deaver, of Webb City, was read, and one on "Problems of the choir," by Sister C. E. Wilson, of Joplin. Brother Mills's talk was followed by a round table meeting.

Evening services commenced at 7.30 with a congregational sing. The sermon by Brother Mills was on the theme, "The place of congregational singing in the church."

The next week-end, March 19 and 20, we had a similar meeting at Pittsburg, Kansas, for the northern and western parts of the district. This also was well attended, although the weather was very disagreeable, it being rainy most of the day.

Withal, we think the time was well spent and feel there was some very good instruction given. We trust we may profit by this instruction to the extent that we may sometime in the future be privileged to enjoy other meetings of like nature.

Lamoni Stake

Priesthood Banquet

The annual banquet of the priesthood of the Lamoni Stake was held in the Lamoni Coliseum last Thursday evening. Over one hundred and fifty attended, including the resident priesthood and their wives, and general church officers who were guests of the evening. Assembling in the upper auditorium, they were stationed by roll call in line of march according to the placement at tables.

It was an inspiring sight to enter the dining room. A color scheme of rose pink gave a pleasing effect, especially the light coming through flower-shaped covers on the lamps. Over the table at the front of the room in an arched effect hung in large letters the slogan of the program of the evening, "Forward to 1930." Bowls of apple blossoms and festoons of crepe paper decorated the tables. The three course dinner was served by the local Department of Women.

At the speakers' table sat President F. M. McDowell, Bishop A. Carmichael, Apostle J. F. Garver, C. B. Woodstock, general superintendent of the Sunday School Department, W. E. Prall and Roy Cheville of the stake presidency, A. B. Phillips and A. J. Yarrington of the stake bishopric, and Sisters J. F. Garver, C. B. Woodstock, W. E. Prall, Mabel Carlile, A. B. Phillips, and A. J. Yarrington. Stake President W. E. Prall, as toastmaster, presided over the program, woven about the theme "Forward to 1930 and beyond." He addressed a group of men who have been loyal to his leadership and anxious in this gathering to catch a bit of instruction for their work. The program was as follows:

Male Quartet.

Toast, "Visioning the goal," Bishop Albert Carmichael.

Toast, "Strengthening the stake," Apostle J. F. Garver.

Solo, "Come, Sweet Comforter," George Anway.

Toast, "Sounding the watchword," Superintendent C. B. Woodstock.

Male Quartet.

Toast, "Leading the van," President F. M. McDowell.

Songs appropriate to the occasion were printed in the program, and general singing led by Roy Cheville brought an enthusiastic response. Hymns such as "Onward to Zion," "I would be true," and "A charge to keep I have," filled the auditorium. The male quartet, composed of young members of the priesthood, George Anway, Roy Cheville, Franklyn Weddle, and George Lewis, sang the rousing type of songs of missionary appeal, such as "Speed away," "Spread the sails," and "Speed the vessel."

The speakers described in general the church's task of the next few years. Bishop Carmichael, in speaking of "Visioning the goal," described it as beyond the comprehension of man save as it was clarified through the enlargement of spiritual vision. Apostle Garver, for several years president of the stake, held forth its mission as that of a permanent and integral part of Zion, whose development would condition the progress of the entire scheme. He also paid a fitting tribute to the wives of the priesthood, whose loyal support added to their ministerial possibilities. Elder C. B. Woodstock, speaking on the subject, "Sounding the watchword," set forth the function of the departments as being that of spreading and teaching the goals of the church to the entire body. In an effective way, he pictured their possible watchword as "Growing," and the means of attainment as mutual cooperation through joining hands. President McDowell charged the ministry with the responsibility of leadership, a leadership that will require courage, constant development, and purity of life. Lamoni Stake, he urged, must continue to furnish to the general church capable and consecrated men who can lead—such is the function of the stakes. He appealed for men who would rise above petty jealousies and trivial interests into ministerial manhood that would inspire the membership to follow. In the spirit of this challenge, the assembly sang feelingly as if in response, "Rise up, O men of God."

"Rise up, O men of God,

Have done with lesser things;

Give heart and soul and mind and strength
To serve the King of kings."

The banquet was one of those occasions that blend into an inspiring unity—the refinement of social life, the fraternity of a community, and the instruction of the general ministry and the inspiration of the priestly offices. It has given vision and stimulus to the local ministry.

Musical Contest

One of the southern Iowa district contests of the High School Music Association was held in the Brick Church at Lamoni, Saturday, April 23. Eight high schools from the following towns: Bedford, Kellerton, Lamoni, Leon, Lineville, Van Wert, Weldon, and Mount Ayr were entered in the contest. Some exceptional musical talent for students of high school age was shown. Professor Glen Case, of Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa, was secured to judge the contest, and in announcing his decision spoke very highly of talent and ability displayed by the contestants and the directors, making exceptional mention of four groups—Lamoni's girl sextet, Lamoni's orchestra, Lamoni's boy quartet, and Leon's mixed chorus.

When the final decision was made, it was found that Lamoni had won six firsts and five seconds out of thirteen entries, and four of the seven silver cups awarded in the group classes, and two of the seven ribbons in the solo classes.

Lamoni winners were as follows: 1st place, clarinet solo, Emily Anthony; tenor solo, Henry Muceus; boys' quartet, Mark Anway, Tom Maley, Palmer Phillips, and Marion Woodstock; girls' sextet, Emily Anthony, Lois Deal, Dorothy Gunsolley, Juanita Nixon, Dorothy Prall, and Mavis Wells; boys' glee club, and the orchestra.

Second place: violin solo, Juanita Nixon; piano solo, Max White; soprano solo, Lois Deal; baritone solo, Mark Anway and a mixed chorus.

The winning contestants entered the state musical contest at Iowa City on May 6 and 7, where more than three thousand high school musicians competed for honors. The Lamoni Orchestra won third place; Henry Muceus, fourth place in tenor solo; boys' quartet, fourth place; girls' sextet, fourth place.

Lamoni's success in these contests is due to the efficient directing of Mr. J. H. Anthony and Miss Victoria Love, who have charge of the music in our public school.

Decatur County Contest

The seventh and eighth grades of Decatur County met in Leon, Saturday, May 7, to compete for honors in the following subjects: arithmetic, spelling, silent reading, and declamatory. Lois Prall won first place in arithmetic; Margaret Johnson, first place in silent reading; Richard Stafford, second place in spelling. This ended a very busy week in Lamoni.

Easter at Pleasant Hill Branch

MCKENZIE, ALABAMA.—The Sunday school of the Pleasant Hill Branch enjoyed a pleasant outing on Easter. Meeting at half past nine, a half hour earlier than the usual Sunday school hour, the Saints enjoyed a session of Sabbath school. Here in songs and a short talk by the superintendent the Easter spirit was manifested and enjoyed.

Following this hour, all went to the bluffs, which has become the regular Easter grounds for the Saints, being the place of their gathering for the last two or three years. Arriving at the grounds, the gathering divided into three groups. The little folks went off over a small hill to have their egg hunt; the young people went in another direction for their prayer meeting; while the older people remained at the gathering place for their service of prayer and testimony. I do not know who had the most enjoyable time. I'm sure the little people had a nice time from the shouts of glee that came to us from over the hill. The songs of the young people sounded very sweet coming from the distance, and being in the older people's prayer service, I know they enjoyed a portion of God's Spirit which comes when his people meet together and earnestly seek him.

After the egg hunt and prayer services, we gathered together again. The mothers and daughters began to unpack lunches, while the men and boys filled all the buckets and pails with water. This was an enjoyable part of the day, for everyone ate heartily from the dinner spread down on the ground under the beautiful trees.

After dinner a few games were played by the young people while the older ones sat around and visited.

In the afternoon we wended our way home, having enjoyed another pleasant Easter and looking forward to the coming of one another year.

EDITH ODOM.

Waterloo, Iowa

May 4.—It has been some little time since our last news from Waterloo, so we will try to make up for lost time. Much of interest has transpired since our last letter—of interest to us because we were participants in it.

On March 17 the Sigma Chapter of the Temple Builders gave a Saint Patrick's banquet at the home of Brother and Sister Talley. The husbands of the members were the guests. They kept the pig on the table, hitched to a wagon that must have come from Old Erin, for even the wheels were Irish (potatoes). Paddy Flynn and family were enjoying themselves in taking an outing with a monkey for a driver. Shamrocks were liberally strewn over the tablecloth. And the chapter girls told the world they were Irish. Each girl was dressed in uniform, with a large green necktie. Even the ice cream tried to be Irish; at least it had green in it; and the cake was not to be cheated; so altogether this was a jolly supper. Games were played and stories told; then everyone went home feeling it was an evening of joy to be together.

Two have been baptized into the kingdom since our last letter. A young sister took the step and made her covenant with the Master; also a talented young man, Ben Gerdis, was made a member of the family of Saints. We feel God has a work for this young man to do, and whatever it is we feel satisfied he can do it.

Our services were not so well attended in March and April as we would like to have seen them, but this was due to the fact that there has been considerable sickness among us of late. At present, however, all are well and about their regular duties.

Missionary services are being held twice a week in the homes of the Saints, Brothers A. J. Fisher and Guy Haynes being in charge of this work. Although our attendance has been small, we feel we are really doing good, for we are getting in touch with those who do not get out to church often, and we already have begun to see the results of our work.

Four from this place were in attendance at General Conference. They were Elder C. E. Kress, Elder William Wood, Sister Dana Beringer, and Sister Rhyan. All report a fine conference, and are more than ever determined to do their part in this great work of latter days.

Our Easter program was well attended and enjoyed by all present. The morning was devoted to the program, which was begun about 10.30 by song 229 in the Zion's Praises. After the invocation, song 103 was sung. This was followed by scripture reading, Matthew 28, by Brother Rhyan, and a recitation, "He is risen," by Allen Hall. There were some well-executed exercises by the junior class, and a recitation, "How to find Easter," by Joe Nichols. Forest Hinds played a violin solo, and a ladies' quartet from the Alan Chapter of Temple Builders sang very pleasingly. The Oriole Girls gave a drill, which was pretty, preceding two recitations, "Where the Easter eggs grow," by Raymond Miller, and a contribution by Kenneth Woods. The Sigma chapter of Tem-

PRESIDENT F. M. MCDOWELL

PRESIDENT F. M. MCDOWELL, in general charge of departmental work in the church, is director of the Institute. Always popular as an instructor and leader, President McDowell will conduct two classes daily. Psychological foundations, for those who have not had an elementary course; and a popular early morning course in general methods in religious education. He will also deliver the assembly address on Saturday.

MRS. NELLIE BLACKMORE, joint author, with her husband, of a new intermediate quarterly, and an experienced reunion worker with children, will conduct junior tent work for children in a tent on the campus. They will demonstrate typical activities suited to reunion conditions.

MISS VESTA TOWNER, dean of the Kansas City School of Religious Education. Lecturer, Independence Institute, 1926-1927. Specialist in story-telling. Miss Towner will be with us from Wednesday to Sunday. She will deliver the assembly address Friday and present methods in story-telling in six class hours. Miss Towner's work in Independence has been popular and most helpful.

E. E. CLOSSON, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, will lead a discussion group in the church's program for boys, including Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and a further provision for boys in later adolescence. He will also conduct a lecture and demonstration course in methods in recreation. This was one of the most popular and successful courses of the Institute in 1926.

CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK, General Superintendent of the Department of Sunday Schools, is treasurer and registrar of the Institute. His laboratory course in administrative problems, will deal with methods of solving actual problems of general efficiency in the Sunday school. He will also conduct a practical course in junior worship programs.

MRS. LENOIR WOODSTOCK, an experienced leader of girls, teacher of handcraft, and in charge of the Young Women's Bureau, will discuss in a laboratory course, the church's program for girls. This will include practical considerations of organization, activity programs, purpose and ideals of the Blue Birds, Orioles, and Temple Builders as factors in our program of religious education.

MRS. EUNICE SMITH, a trained and experienced kindergarten and student of religious education, will conduct two courses. In primary methods, she will discuss the whole field of beginner and primary work, illustrating means of vitalizing our teaching of the Sunday school lesson. In junior methods, she will treat of the principles to be observed in dealing with the junior child and methods of developing religious habits, attitudes, and skills. She will also treat in a brief way of the junior church movement.

BLANCHE EDWARDS

MISS BLANCHE EDWARDS, General Superintendent of the Department of Women; she is recently returned from England and will give the assembly address on Thursday morning and conduct two regular classes. In the Women's Department Program will be presented a comprehensive but concrete program of women's activities in the church. Laboratory work in dramatization will follow closely the lectures by Mrs. Overton, and will be devoted to an actual working out of type dramatizations by the class.

MISS MABEL CARLILE, instructor of public school music and art, and conductor of Lamoni-Graceland choir. She will have a class in leadership in music, in which will be given the rudiments of music, with constant emphasis laid on actual practice in conducting.

MRS. GRACE SLOAN OVERTON

MRS. GRACE SLOAN OVERTON, dean of the Training School in Religious Education at the University of Chicago. Author, teacher, and popular lecturer. Lecturer at the Independence Institute in December, 1926. Specialist in dramatization. Mrs. Overton will address the assembly on three days, and discuss dramatization in religious education in six class hours. Mrs. Overton made a splendid contribution to our work in Independence, and we shall be happy to welcome her in Lamoni.

MRS. RICHARD BALDWIN, an experienced reunion and convention worker, will have an interesting and instructive collection of handwork done by Sunday school children in many parts of the world, and an exhibit of handwork supplies.

A Real Opportunity

"Study to show thyself approved" is the command from God which has more and more significance to all church workers.

That this command is becoming effective in the lives of men and women who seriously propose to make their contribution count, is evidenced by both the increased numbers who attend organized class work and the enthusiasm with which they are sustaining every move to bring such opportunities to others who desire to become proficient.

Much time, extending over a period of months, has been given to the Institute of Methods in Religious Education to be held in Lamoni, Iowa, June 2 to 12. As the result of this careful planning, those who attend the institute are assured of a short course in "methods" that is of the highest order.

While the essential features in religious education will be emphasized, yet the course is not stripped and cut down to the bare essentials, to the extent that it appears but a series of isolated pronouncements saying "Thou shalt" and "Thou shalt not."

Rather, the course will be found to contain essential elements as adjudged from the experience of many who blazed pioneer trails in seeking out this information; and round these essentials will be grouped the human interest viewpoint and incidents which make the recitation hour of fascinating interest.

In the class hours of this institute, the student will get definite information, skilled advice, and enthusiastic interest that undoubtedly will send him home to his immediate task fired with a holy ambition to serve the church with that complete consecration which leads one into that feeling of abandonment of self-interest which comes with a consciousness that every human soul is of importance to God.

Everyone who possibly can will do well to plan his vacation to cover this ten-day period of intensive work at Lamoni. Here they will meet instructors who, from years of experience, will bring to this institute the very best in approved resultful methods in teaching and working.

You do not take your watch to a blacksmith for adjustment, nor your sick child to a carpenter to be made well; instead, you see an expert watchmaker about your watch and a skilled physician for your child.

Of how much greater importance is it that you have a consecrated and trained teacher to whom you may send the children in your home for religious instruction? Not only in this church, but in other churches, and practically throughout the land, there is crystallizing a sentiment which is demanding a more skilled teaching force in the various departments of religious activity.

Again this year the administrative authorities of this church have provided an institute where instruction may be had under favorable conditions.

Those who find it at all possible to attend, are urged to use this opportunity.

ple Builders had exercises in which each member advanced to the cross to lay her burden and take away a lily given by the hand of an angel. In this we were made to realize what Jesus meant when he said, Come unto me all ye who are heavy laden and I will give you rest; take my yoke upon you, for my yoke is easy and my burden light. And we sensed the fact that truly these young women are striving to do their part in the building of the characters of those who will be subjects in the kingdom of God.

Our prayer services have been a source of inspiration, and are becoming of greater spiritual benefit every time we meet.

Sacramental service on May 2 was a feast to us. It was announced that Saturday would be spent in fasting and prayer for an afflicted brother. This brother has been an invalid for several years and has to be lifted around, being unable to use his limbs. He was brought to the service Sunday morning and administered to. We feel that in time he will be able to walk. It was a season of rejoicing for him, as he has not been to a service for years. The Lord spoke to us and told us our fastings were pleasing in his sight and were accepted by him. We felt the Spirit in power resting on us; and the faces of those who had fasted as requested shone with a radiance that was bright and beautiful. We shall remember this service for a long time.

The young people held a prayer service at eight o'clock Sunday morning, and the Spirit also rested on them with power.

Sunday evening Brother Kress, our pastor, gave us a stirring message from the word of God.

Friday evening is recreation evening here. Two teams have been organized, and volley ball is being played. We are trying to have all the members, both old and young, gather at the church and play on these evenings. Brother Kress knows his work, and we are trying to help him in his endeavor.

Waterloo is a thriving branch, and many things are being planned for the future.

Let Us Finish the Auditorium

(From a letter to the First Presidency.)

I have been slow to heed the impressions that have come to me in regard to the Auditorium. There are those that have helped in this drive and are willing to now. The thought that impressed most was that we should finish this building, not delay. I would like to see it done. But it must have something besides wishes and likes. A brother stepped into my place as he was going by. I was telling him how I had been impressed. I told him that I had helped but I was willing to put $10 in it again. He said, I will put $10 on top of that. So I know the Saints have got confidence in the men at the head of this work. Let us all keep at the feet of Jesus. This will give us confidence to go on helping to do the thing we all want to see, and that is Zion, in working a real Zion. We have read about it; we have talked about it; we have thought about it. But it is going to take more than this. First God, then men of vision, full of faith; then the men who are sent out from General Conference to preach to the Saints, preach faith in those that are at the head of this great work. I will say then it will take means, and keep right at it, for we have thought too long now.

Oh, can we see the time in which we live. But, my dear brother, I can not but help mentioning faith. I only hope that you may have God's rich blessings in this time. I don't know your big load, but if you keep humble God is back of you with a big bunch of Saints. My prayer is that you may lead the church on to victory. I hope to be a helper. I want to see Zion in operation. This has been my hope for the last fifteen years. But we must have more means to get the desired aim. The Saints must get faith in the vision before us. I hope that I have not tired you, but will say, May God give us all wisdom.

Yours,

LUDINGTON, MICHIGAN, May 2.

Central Church

On Saturday evening at 8.30 p. m., April 30, Brother J. A. Tanner was called to the home of Brother and Sister O. L. James, 809 West Waldo, Independence, to perform the marriage ceremony of their daughter, Pauline, and Mr. Shankland S. Arnson, of Saint Louis, Missouri. About one hundred and fifty guests were present, consisting of a number of out-of-town people. Before the ceremony, Sister Louise Robinson rendered a vocal number. After a honeymoon trip in the East, Mr. and Mrs. Arnson will make their home in Saint Louis.

One of the outstanding social features of the Sunday school for the year was climaxed Friday evening when approximately one hundred and fifty mothers and daughters assembled around a banquet table spread with a rich repast of the bounties of life and pledged anew their loyalty, companionship, and devotion to each other. The tables were laden with flowers and lighted in such a manner as to give the effect of a magic garden wherein could be heard the laughter of children; and the sweet, soft strains of the violin served to bring a heavenly influence, and those that entered therein basked in the sunlight of happiness and peace and indeed realized that motherhood was a gift from God and that mother indeed was queen.

A number of the junior members of the Sunday school furnished pleasing numbers on the program, while several of our young women gave talks on "my ideal of a mother," and gave some wonderful thoughts, which tended to show to the mothers that their labor had not been in vain, that the young of this church desire to be of assistance wherever possible and to attain the standard that they, too, may prove worthy in latter-day Israel.

Nothing was lacking on the part of the superintendency to make this banquet a wonderful success, and the songs that were composed by Sister Mae Liddle were very inspiring and were sung with the spirit of fellowship and love to such a degree that the angels of heaven would have been glad to join in the refrain.

The services which followed on Sunday were a continuation of this tribute to "Mother." There were a few exercises at Sunday school, followed by the eleven o'clock service in charge of Brother J. A. Tanner. At the Sunday school service, Brothers Roscoe and Henry Hampton rendered a vocal duet, "Tell mother I'll be there," which was very touching to all present.

Brother Frederick Anderson, one of the promising young men of Central Church and one of whom we are all very proud, represented the youth and paid a very high tribute to Mother. Sister Bleil represented the mothers and offered the invocation.

Pastor J. A. Tanner then presented a very beautiful picture, outlining the sacrifices, hopes, and desires of a mother, and of the hours of inward pain the thoughtless children cause her; and after listening to such a discourse and seeing such a picture, a desire to pledge themselves to be more thoughtful, more considerate, and more observing of mother touched the hearts of the older children as well as the younger ones present.

The evening service was occupied by Brother Tanner, and the attendance was not so good, as a number went to Independence in the choir to broadcast the cantata "From Olivet to Calvary" over radio K L D S.

Fourth Church

The special preparation made to make ready for General Conference was not in vain, the groups enjoying God's Spirit to a greater degree on account of sacrifices thus made. Interest is good at all services, which are well attended, an average of forty-five being present at the Wednesday night prayer meetings. No time is wasted, as each is eager to tell of God's goodness. Sisters Brady and Ferguson, who have been so seriously sick, have recovered and are back again.

An interesting feature of the Sunday school has been the instruction on the principles of the gospel at the close of each lesson period. A rope ladder was arranged and a step placed therein, mounting up as, at each lesson, faith, baptism, etc., was explained by one of the young folks, in simple story. New tables and movable screens for the junior department have been made, which accommodate each class in a room to itself. The tables are round, with a recess cut in one side for the teacher; thus the class formation is circular. Ten pupils can work nicely at one table.

During the past month, speakers have been sent for the various preaching services, and it was a treat to hear of the experiences of those in the mission fields. The themes "Progress," "Onward to 1930," and "Stewardships" were the outstanding points of some of the sermons. Apostle McConley, in looking back for twenty years, when the congregations met in rented halls or schoolhouses, was pleased that they are now housed in comfortable buildings. The members realize now we must have an everyday religion if the church means anything to them.

The groups enjoy the monthly social given at the church, honoring those who have birthdays during the months. Program furnished last month was by the adult Bible class, with games following.

Elder J. O. Worden, the pastor, was divinely directed to change the routine of the Sunday morning sacrament service. Beginning with the 8 o'clock prayer meeting, which continues till 9.15, then the Sunday school at 9.30, with sacrament and testimony at 11 o'clock till 12.30, thus making a continuous service without intermission. The last two sacrament meetings prove that it can be successfully done. The gift of prophecy was exercised to the edification of those present, stating that angels were in their midst, but not discerned by all. The warning was also given to beware of worldly things, to keep themselves pure, and to guard against things not pleasing to our heavenly Father in the social functions, as some things that were thought to be all right were not pleasing to him, thus depriving them of the full degree of his Spirit to which they were entitled. The divinity of the prophecy was confirmed by several. Continuing, Brother Worden asked, "How much longer will my people be begged and pleaded with to come up higher? There is no time to waste. My people must keep themselves apart from the world."

May 1, boys' day was observed, David Worden in charge. Marion Sneed offered prayer; and Eugene Bevins, one of the young men yet in his teens, made the talk on "Zion's boys." He exhorted with the boys and young men to keep their lives pure, with clean thoughts and speech, as Zion's boys must prepare to work in Zion and be ready for whatever service is required of them; study church books every spare minute; not to sow wild oats, but to prepare now to help redeem Zion. He urged parents to have family altars. He had been benefited much thereby and knew other boys would be.

It is regretted very much that Sister Tyra Luking and family have found it necessary to move away from the city. She was one of the most efficient and willing workers. The Saints at Nevada, Missouri, will find her ever ready to help in God's work.

Quindaro

The sacramental service Sunday, the 1st, was well attended. Brother Thomas Newton, missionary to West Virginia, was in charge, assisted by Brother Earnest Hawkins. Congregational singing was led by Brother Charles Scrivener. We are always glad to have Brother Newton with us, for he makes us feel that although the trials of life may be hard to bear, through prayer to God they may be lightened. Brother Newton has passed through many trials and is still strong in the faith.

Brother Newton occupied at the eight o'clock hour also, using as a text, "Enter ye in at the strait gate"; also John 15: 5: "I am the vine; ye are the branches." The lesson brought to us was stewardship. When we all have complied with God's law, happiness will ensue, for out of love come joy and contentment.

A song, "The old rugged cross," was rendered by Charles Scrivener and Frank Murrain.

Sunday, the 8th, being Mothers' Day, a very appropriate program was given at the 11 o'clock hour.

Half past six found a goodly number at Religio. The program, given by the Blue Bird Chapter, under the leadership of Sister Marie Muir, was well worthy of commendation.

Bishop F. B. Blair occupied at the 7 o'clock hour, continuing the theme of the morning, that of Mother. Brother Blair paid many beautiful tributes to motherhood.

A beautiful solo, "Mother of pearl," was given by Ileen Pemberton.

Independence

Stone Church

Twelve hundred souls, minus six, were present at the session of Sunday school Sunday morning, and heard the opening remarks on the theme, "Mother," delivered by Brother G. S. Trowbridge. This being Mothers' Day every meeting of the busy Sabbath was centered about the theme of "Mother, her love, her faith, her sacrifice." The orchestra contributed an appreciated offering in the selection, "That wonderful mother of mine," and the audience was asked to join in singing the chorus, so dearly familiar to everyone.

At this time a dozen classes were perfect, five in the intermediate department, one in the junior, and six in the primary.

Preceding the address of the eleven o'clock hour, the congregation, led by Mrs. George Hulmes, sang, "My God, how wonderful thou art," and prayer was offered by Pastor C. Ed. Miller. The organ offertory, played by Robert Miller, was one of Mendelssohn's compositions, "Consolation." The choir, constant in its assistance in the morning services, sang "O love divine," by Arthur Thayer, being directed by Mrs. Hulmes. A contribution of particular interest was a baritone solo, "I'll wear a white flower for you, mother dear," sung by Gordon Kress, accompanied by Robert Miller at the piano.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson was the speaker of the morning, probably preaching his last sermon to an Independence congregation before his departure for his European mission. In part he said:

"Among the most beautiful and impressive words of our vocabulary are home, mother, love, God. The home, an institution of divine origin, was intended to be a haven for each individual; a place of abode marked by affection and peace, a congenial and holy abiding place. When rightly conducted, it is a place from which reluctant good-byes are spoken and to which with joyful hearts one's feet are turned and one's way is wended. The greatest factors perhaps entering into the molding of the life of men are the home, the church, and the school. Often the statement of these few lines finds response in our heart, 'How dear to my heart, wherever I roam, are the scenes of my childhood, and home, sweet home.' In the home are expressed qualities that are akin to the divine character. In it we learn as nowhere else the meaning of sincerity, the value of thrift, tenderness, forgiveness, honesty, love, sacrifice, and faithfulness. What chance has a young man or young woman going out from the home where these qualities are not exemplified in precept and example, facing the world as it is today? I believe that a large part of the world's crime can be traced to poorly equipped homes, for from these the young go out not fitted to fight the battle of life. They go out from the bad environment with vacant countenances, with no true evaluation of things that are eternal. There is a lack of acquaintance with things that are essential and fundamental.

"The problems of crime and social disintegration, those things that perplex us perhaps more than anything else, can not be settled, can not be prevented, by public authority through laws and courts and policemen. The mother is acquainted with the life of her child as no one else is; no one can ever be so close to the child as its mother. From her he hears the lullabies and those things which bring him gradually into a conscious contact with the external world. The harmony in the notes that go from the mother's voice into the child's soul gives to it a similar harmony and rhythm. At our mother's knee we learned our first prayer. How we prayed those simple words with hands clasped! First they were repeated by her, then line by line we learned them. The habit of prayer was formed.

"Noble sons are born of good mothers. Among the most distinguished of men stands Moses, and it is interesting to learn his history. In Hebrews 11, we learn of his manhood and later years. He was the man who saw, as his life unfolded, the kingdom of God in all its completeness. Because the people of Israel did not follow him, he was able only to bring them to a partial stage of development, but he gave them a shadow of things to come. He chose to suffer the afflictions of his people rather than enjoy the pomp of princes; he developed from day to day so that finally he was able to bring them out of Egypt. In Exodus 2 is a record of his childhood. His life did not begin with auspicious promises. Pharaoh had made a decree that every male child should be thrown into the river and every daughter should be saved. The child was born into the tribe of Levi, and the record says that he was a 'goodly' child. In her heart the mother resolved not to cast him into the river. She hid him, and when he was three months old made for him an ark of bulrushes and daubed it with slime and pitch. In this she left him in the edge of the river. His sister stood afar off to see what might happen. Then one day Pharaoh's daughter came down to the river to bathe; she saw the ark and commanded her maid to fetch it. The sister, standing afar off, drew near and asked the daughter of Pharaoh if she would have a nurse for the child from the Hebrew women. Pharaoh's daughter bade her secure one, and the girl went right to her mother. Thus God protected Moses in early life for the task he had for him to do."

K L D S Sunday Activities

A children's Mothers' Day program, arranged by Mrs. Bertha Burgess, took the air at 8.30 a. m., the program being presented by the Stone Church Junior Chorus. There was a reading by Mrs. Floyd M. McDowell and a children's story by Miss Ella Jones. At 9 a. m. Bible Study was conducted by the K L D S radio pastor. Two hours later the main auditorium service was broadcast.

The activities of the afternoon, commenced at 2 o'clock with a program by K L D S String Trio, assisted by Clarence Brown, tenor, of Kansas City. Mr. Brown was formerly of Omaha, Nebraska. At 3 p. m. K L D S Radio Church service began, being presented by members of the First Presbyterian Church, of Excelsior Springs, Missouri. The musical program included vocal solos, quartet, sextet, and chorus numbers. The sermonet was by Reverend C. A. Kircher, pastor.

A special feature of K L D S vesper service was the K L D S Mothers' Quartet program. The quartet is composed of Mrs. Jessie Torrence Watkins, Mrs. Blanche Thompson Gault, Mrs. Madge Craig Siegfried, and Mrs. Madge Newcomer Kueffer. The sermonet was by Elder U. W. Greene.

At 9.15, instead of the usual Latter Day Saint studio service, K L D S broadcast "Olivet to Calvary," sung by the Central Church Choir of Kansas City, directed by Thomas Dunn.

Evening Services

The decision of the council of the presidents of the Religios in Independence to take the Religio to the Campus for the summer was approved by the body of Religio members following the lesson study on Sunday evening. Officials of this department plan to hold the Religio at the Campus for about fourteen weeks this summer, four meetings to be given entirely to the presentation of attractive programs, the other evenings to be devoted to recreational activities. The congregation concurred in this plan, and it was decided to make the last meeting held at the Stone Church that of June 5. The first meeting at the Campus will be held on June 7, Tuesday. Many plans are under way for the summer. All are invited to participate, and much good is expected as a result of the activities.

The program rendered by members of this department consisted of a trio of readings. Two were given by the small Sheldon sisters, Betty Jean and Norma Dean. Miss Allegra Luff favored the congregation with an appropriate Mothers' Day reading.

At twenty-five minutes till eight, Brother John F. Sheehy, baton in hand, made his way to the platform, and began what proved to be a most interesting song service. The Mothers' Quartet was present and favored the audience with a song, "That wonderful mother of mine." They were accompanied at the organ by Robert Miller, who furnished all the organ music for the evening. During the course of this service Brother Sheehy asked the oldest mother in the house to stand. Sister Sarah Faler, eighty years old, responded, and was invited to the front of the auditorium while the audience sang a verse of "Be pure in heart." Sister Faler was presented a beautiful potted lily. Then Brother Sheehy called for the mother of the largest family, Sister Joseph Lewis held this title, and she also was presented a lily and stood in front while all sang another verse of "Be pure in heart."

Elder D. O. Cato was in charge of the evening service. Prayer was offered by Brother Alma Thomas, and another much appreciated selection by the Mothers' Quartet, "Nobody knows like mother," was heard.

President Elbert A. Smith was on hand to speak at this hour, and began his evening's lecture by quoting the old proverb, "God could not be everywhere, and so he made mothers." As a more fitting proverb, he quoted these words, "Motherhood is partnership with God." "The place where this partnership is carried on most intimately is in the home," he declared.

Then he requested that the lights be extinguished, and the words of "Home, sweet home," were thrown on the screen, that all might sing. Following the song, pictures were shown, illustrating the mothers of the Scriptures, their love, their spiritual influence, their wisdom, their sacrifices. Reproductions of famous paintings of the finding of Moses in the ark of bulrushes on the Nile, of Naomi and Ruth, of Mary the mother of Christ, and of the Madonna and Child. Little incidents were related in the lives of these characters to show that in many instances God has worked with a mother to accomplish his purposes. Then came modern pictures, those of Emma Smith, into whose keeping three of God's servants, Joseph, Alexander, David, were intrusted: Also there were pictures of the speaker's mother, Clara Hartshorn Smith, in girlhood and age, and Brother Smith interestingly related some bits of personal experience of how mothers carry out God's plans by instilling in the minds of their children the principles of brotherly love, truthfulness, faith, honesty. Faces of other mothers in Israel, familiar to people of Independence, were seen on the screen, among these being Sister J. C. Budd, mother of Apostle R. S. Budd; Sister W. A. McDowell, for many years wife of a missionary, and mother of Brothers O. A. and Floyd McDowell; and Sister E. L. Kelley.

"Give, give, give," said the speaker, "is the spirit of motherhood, and shows the partnership with God; for that is the spirit of God who gave his Son. Motherhood did not fail on the Nile; it did not fail in Bethlehem; it did not fail in Nauvoo; nor do I think it will fail in Independence," he concluded.

Sister John Schwab Addresses Women's Meeting

General meeting of the Department of Women convened in the lower auditorium Friday afternoon, May 6.

After a song by the congregation and prayer by Sister George Gould, Mrs. Glenn Fairbanks sang two very pretty solos.

Sister D. J. Krahl was to have been the speaker, but she was quite ill, so Sister Cowan had called on one of our minute women, Sister John Schwab, superintendent of child welfare department of the W. C. T. U. of the Frances E. Willard Chapter. Sister Schwab stated that she was not giving her remarks as a superintendent but as a mother and a Latter Day Saint. She began by reviewing very briefly the far-reaching influence of one frail little mother, Sister B. C. Smith, who went to her reward a number of years ago. From that influence her talk guided us through our joys, our hopes, sorrows, disappointments, which are the same as hers, for we are mothers. Under present environments problems are coming thicker and faster, and fearlessly she discussed the causes underlying these problems. Are the women protecting their home circle? Are they facing the task given them as coworkers with God? She gave considerable data concerning homes of nations and how nations reflect that home life, and then quoted a great statesman: "Show me a nation whose homes are decaying, and I will show you a nation that is tottering." Can it be that we, the mothers of America, are failing in responsibility to our God and our nation?

Sister Schwab compared the child mind to the blank record of the phonograph. Do we sense our responsibility, or have we accepted the task of motherhood without a thought of the account we shall have to render to the Judge of the universe. Moral standards of the home have been shattered in dress, language, and customs. Moral laxity is everywhere; God's plan of pure life is daily thwarted, and Satan's counterpart is apparent on every hand. And most appalling of all is the breaking up of homes and the wrecking of childish lives by that insidious thing—divorce. This exists in our own ranks. What are we, the wives and mothers in Zion, doing to overcome this condition? Somewhere some one has sorrowfully failed in home training, or this condition would not exist. The mothers can be on the defensive only through fasting and prayer, exercising patience, love, sympathy, and forbearance, keeping in mind always, "He that controlleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city."

Following the address, there was to have been a round table discussion, but time denied this privilege.

Sister William Bath, cradle roll supervisor, spoke a few words, relating how the women of other churches are waking to the fact that something must be done for the pre-school age children and youth and the plans they are adopting. Sister George Gould, superintendent of normal study, also spoke briefly.

So great was the interest in the subject of this afternoon's talk that Sister Cowan has been asked to continue this meeting.

Apostles Leave for Missions

On Monday evening a few friends gathered at the home of Pastor and Sister C. Ed. Miller to bid Apostle Paul M. Hanson farewell before he leaves for his overseas mission. A short but interesting program was enjoyed, and moving pictures of the General Conference, taken by Harold Edwards, were shown. In these some of those present were surprised to see themselves as they came to or left the Auditorium. Several of the brethren spoke their appreciation of Brother Hanson's work in the church, and he feelingly responded to their wishes of Godspeed. He assured them that he was going on this mission with confidence that it was the divine will. Sister Hanson will not accompany him, for he will travel around quite continually and extensively. Those present were Brother and Sister Hanson, and Brother Hanson's father, Fred Hanson, Israel A. Smith and wife, Apostle J. A. Gillen and wife, Bishop J. A. Becker and wife, President Elbert A. Smith and wife, G. S. Trowbridge and wife, and Pastor and Sister C. Ed. Miller.

Brother Hanson sails May 19, on the Steamship United States on the Scandinavian American line. He is bound for Aalborg, Denmark, but will first stop at Aslo, Norway. On his many ocean trips, Brother Hanson has been the victim of seasickness, and cheerfully agrees that he will probably be so afflicted on this trip. The best wishes of the Saints go with him to foreign shores, and our prayers are for him.

Others of the Twelve who have gone to their fields are Myron McConley, who left two weeks ago for California, and Apostles D. T. Williams and J. F. Garver, who are busy in Iowa. Others are planning to leave in the immediate future to preach the gospel with renewed courage and zeal.

Second Church

Every service at the Second Church Sunday was flavored by the thoughts of Mothers' Day. The young people's prayer meeting was the opening service, meeting at 8.15; the service was not well attended.

Sunday school was rather light in attendance also, but a very interesting session was held, and almost a half hour of songs and readings on the theme of "Mother" was thoroughly enjoyed.

The forenoon preaching service brought out a good attendance, Elder R. D. Weaver being the preacher, delivering one of his word-picture-story sermons which have proved so popular at Enoch Hill and Second Church. His sermon was preceded by a reading rendered by Lora Weir, a beautiful anthem by the choir, and a number by the K L D S Ladies' Quartet, which was highly complimented by the preacher of the hour. He assured attendants at Second Church that theirs is a rare privilege—to hear this quartet of perfectly blended ladies' voices.

Sunday evening the women of the Second Church gave to mothers in attendance three prizes in potted plants: one to the oldest mother which went to Sister Willis, of Delaware Street; one to the mother having the largest number of children in attendance at Sunday school, awarded to Sister J. S. Andes; and the third to the mother of the largest family of children, also awarded to Sister Willis, eighty-two years of age. The evening preaching service followed, Pastor Lambert delivering a Mothers' Day sermon.

Liberty Street

The Department of Women, in charge of Sister Carrie Ballinger, supervisor, gave a most interesting program on Mothers' Day at the eleven o'clock hour.

To open the service, everyone joined in singing "Home, sweet home." This was followed by a humble petition to God, offered by Brother Walter Curtis, youngest elder of our district. A very able history of Mothers' Day was given by Sister Fred Koehler, and the solo, "That little mother of mine," by Sister Leona Robinson, was a sweet little tribute to motherhood. A paper, "Mothers' Day, a day of remembering," prepared by Sister Maud Mills and read by Lyda Budd Robertson, was perhaps the most touching feature of the meeting, for it turned our memories back to childhood and the overwhelming love of mother more than any other number on the program. A reading, "My opportunity," was given by Sister Bessie Curtis, the mother of five little girls. The little folks were distinctly included in a story told by Sister Carrie Ballinger. "Silver threads among the gold," a violin solo, was nicely rendered by Marvin Turnbull. There was a tribute by Ocie Curnett, and in closing, "My mother's Bible" was sung by Sisters Rhoda Bowen and Sadie Simpson.

Brother Curtis then introduced President Floyd McDowell, who further added to the day's program by relating the story of Vesta, the Roman goddess, and her vestal virgins. He compared the mothers with the virgins, for it is the duty of mothers to keep the coals of faith, love, and service alive and burning on the hearthstone of each home. He closed by making a powerful appeal to the present-day mother, that to be successful she must add a fourth coal to her hearthstone—intelligent understanding—for it is only by understanding that our people can be saved from the snares and pitfalls which surround us and are increasing in number every day.

At the Religio hour, Brother J. W. Gunsolley gave an illustrated lecture on the effects of narcotics upon the human system. The program of this hour was in charge of the young girls' class, under the direction of Sister Ruby Inman. The efforts put forth by these young people are appreciated by the congregation.

Bishop C. J. Hunt was the speaker at the evening service. He dwelt chiefly upon the fulfilling of prophecy, comparing the testimony of the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, and showing how nearly the prophecies found in each one are all fulfilled. Along with these numerous comparisons, he brought in, in an interesting way, experiences of his travels and work in the mission fields.

On April 25 the funeral of Brother Frank S. Dillon was held at the Liberty Street Church, Elder J. M. Baker in charge. A quartet composed of Mrs. Mabel Sellars, Mrs. Fred Koehler, Walter Curtis, and Fred Koehler sang favorite old hymns. Apostle J. A. Gillen, a long-time friend and associate of our departed one, spoke from 1 Corinthians 15, beginning at the twelfth verse. He spoke with such mighty power and assurance that all who heard him were comforted and strengthened. Would that all who doubt the immortality of the soul could have been present and lifted up to see the wonderful love of God, the sacrifice for us that we might live again, the triumph and victory of Christ over sin and death, as Brother Gillen made his audience see and feel!

Those who bore the body to the grave were Harry Blake, J. D. Patrick, George Fender, George Bullard, Walter Curtis, and John Zion.

Enoch Hill

As a speaker for the morning, Enoch Hill people were privileged to hear President Elbert A. Smith, who took for his theme "Home work." Clearly Brother Smith gave the difference between a house and a home. In the home is mother. She makes the home from raw materials. Upon her the first eight years of a child's life depend. The discourse was based upon the scripture reading, Proverbs 31, and the speaker emphasized the thought, "Happy is the man that keeps faith in the home." Home is the place divinely appointed, where love, faith, trust, and companionship abound. If they have the right kind of a home, the children will cherish its memory and attempt to build after its pattern. Zion needs its industries, its churches, its schools, but primarily it is a collection of homes, the right kind of homes. To save the children of this generation to the church is the problem of present-day mothers and fathers, and this can be done only through the Zion home.

In keeping with the observances of the day, the choir rendered two Mothers' Day numbers at the morning service.

Following the sermon, Pastor Brewer presented Missionary H. E. Winegar a purse from the Enoch Hill Department of Women, especially intended for the purchase of a Bible. Brother Winegar gratefully responded.

A surprise farewell party was given Brother and Sister Winegar Monday evening May 9, at their home. They are leaving soon on Brother Winegar's mission, and the Saints of this district will miss them exceedingly. Sister Winegar for the past few years has been a staunch worker among the girls of Enoch Hill, being the Temple Builder leader, and it will be hard to find one to take her place. However, we wish them Godspeed and success in their labors.

At seven o'clock in the evening, Elder R. D. Weaver gave a comprehensive sermon on visions, showing how every great change or endeavor has been a part of some one's vision. He particularly mentioned the vision of Noah, of Moses, of Solomon, and more recently of Columbus, Joseph Smith, and Abraham Lincoln. This was Brother Weaver's farewell sermon before leaving on his Colorado mission.

A correction is necessary in the name of one of the babies blessed Sunday morning, May 1, as given in the HERALD of May 4. The first name should have been George Frederick Macklwyn, son of Brother and Sister Clive H. Heath.

Sorrow has entered one of our homes on the hill, that of Brother and Sister George W. Frick. On Sunday their son, Earl Stanley, twenty-six years old, was drowned at Guinotte Dam, just off Van Horn road between Independence and Kansas City. Brother George Frick has been ill many months and at the Independence Sanitarium for several days, and there news of his son's death reached him. Sister Frick is a zealous worker in the branch. To them the Saints extend sympathy.

Next Sunday evening at seven o'clock the Silver Wing Temple Builders of Liberty Street will present a pageant, "Have they lived in vain?" written by the chapter. This is the fifth performance of this pageant, and an evening of instruction for all is promised.

Sister Joseph Alexander, who has been in the Sanitarium in a very critical condition, underwent a serious operation there on May 7. Grave fears had been entertained for her surviving, but through administration strength was given, and she is now getting along fine, her condition being very satisfactory.

Walnut Park

Sunday, the 8th, found an unusually large attendance at Sunday school—344—practically everyone wearing a red or white blossom in honor of the day. A program expressing appreciation of mothers was rendered in the upper auditorium following the lessons.

In the junior Sunday school another class took its turn at dramatizing a lesson, this one being the lesson of the servant who, after having been forgiven a large debt refused, ungratefully, to show mercy to his own debtor. The class teacher, Paula Ballantyne, had prepared this very nicely.

At the eleven o'clock hour, our pastors were again called by four young couples in the congregation to officiate in the blessing of their babies. The babies were: Jack Edward, son of Brother and Sister Paul Roberts; Jean Marie, daughter of Brother and Sister Douglas Byrne; Edwin Dale, son of Brother and Sister Joseph Shupe; and John, jr., son of Brother and Sister John A. Ganson.

Some especially lovely musical numbers were given at this service, impressing the thought of the day. There were solos by Margaret Gard and Glau Smith and a number by a quartet, Mr. and Mrs. Glau Smith, Margaret Gard, and Kenneth Morford.

A. M. Chase was the speaker. His time being short, he occupied it in giving an appropriate and interesting tribute to his own mother, an industrious pioneer of Vermont and an early and valiant convert to the Latter Day Saint faith.

In the evening the choir, twenty-eight in number, gave the cantata, "The risen King," Mrs. Minnie Scott Dobson directing; Mrs. Gladys Reynolds pianist. The desire of those who had prepared this short hour's service, to lead their hearers to a deeper consciousness of the reality of the sacrificial death and glorious resurrection of our Redeemer was in great measure accomplished and their effort gratefully received.

The nomination for a pastor to succeed Elder Glau Smith was necessarily delayed one week. On Thursday evening, the 12th, the Presidency will be prepared to present a nominee at a special business meeting at the church.

Spring Branch

The regular services of the week drew the usual attendance. Special mention might be made of the Religio Friday night, at which the program was furnished by Brother and Sister Stewart Tandberg, of the Stone Church, and Sister French of Spring Branch. Its main features were solos, duet, and trio numbers of cello, piano, and voice. Their efforts were highly appreciated.

"Mother" was the theme for the 8.15 prayer service. Many touching tributes were paid to "mother" in the service of testimony.

At the eleven o'clock hour appropriate Mothers' Day exercises were given by the young people, followed by a sermon on that subject by Brother J. M. Terry, who also preached a fine sermon in the evening, using James 1: 23-27 as a basis for the discourse.

Next Sunday evening a special program from 7.30 till 8 will be presented by the K L D S Mandolin Club.

The series of dramatic plays by the Royal Players of Kansas City will not begin until Monday evening, May 16. There is still time for you to get your tickets.

Conference Notices

The New York district conference will convene at Niagara Falls, New York, June 4 and 5. All elders of the district will kindly send report to Elder P. L. Weegar, district president, 1721 Main Street, Buffalo, New York. Anna M. Lloyd, secretary, 92 Elmer Avenue, Buffalo, New York.

The regular second annual district conference of Kewanee District will convene May 28 and 29 at Savanna, Illinois. We are hoping for fair weather and excellent attendance, to make this one of the best conferences ever enjoyed. Though we do not yet know who is to be sent to us by general church officers, we are certain we shall profit from the spiritual and social development which has ever characterized our conferences. At this time will occur the election of district officers, the fixing of the district budget, and such other matters as may come before us. Branches are urged to elect delegates as soon as possible and send the credentials in to the secretary, not forgetting that to a great extent these are mass conferences and all who can should attend. It would be appreciated if branch officers could let us know how many are planning to attend from their branch and what contributions we may expect from them in the way of music, etc. May we make that spiritual preparation which will assure for us a progressive conference. Winifred Douglas, Savanna, Illinois.

Saint Louis district conference will meet with the Lansdowne Branch, 2001 North Thirty-eighth Street, East Saint Louis, Illinois, Saturday and Sunday, May 28 and 29. Business session, Saturday, 6 p. m. Something doing all day Sunday, from Sunday school at 9.30 a. m., to the closing session in the evening. All district officers please mail reports to C. J. Remington, 1423 Cecelia Avenue, Webster Groves, Missouri, so as to reach him not later than May 23. Branch clerks, please mail reports to same address. C. J. Remington, district secretary, phone Webster 2054W.

Gallands Grove district conference will meet with Mallard Branch, Mallard, Iowa, May 28 and 29. Election of officers and matters pertaining to the reunion will be part of the business to come before the meeting. Branch and priesthood reports should be sent to the undersigned before May 25. All are urged to attend. W. W. Reeder, district secretary, Cherokee, Iowa.

Eastern Iowa district conference, at Fulton, May 28 and 29. Business meeting at 2 p. m. Saturday. O. E. Lindsay, secretary, 124 West Locust Street, Davenport, Iowa.

Northeastern Kansas district conference will convene at Fanning, Kansas, May 21 and 22. Send all ministerial reports to Dave Little, Burlingame, Kansas; departmental reports to department heads. A representative of the general church will be at this conference. The General Conference is history, but we may keep the spirit of it alive if we carry the encouragement and enthusiasm of it into our district conference and move forward in the onward march of the church to 1930. Mrs. H. C. Pitsenberger, district secretary, 2331 Buchanan, Topeka, Kansas.

Pastoral

I take this means of getting in touch with Saints and friends in the Southern Missouri District. General Conference is over, and the appointing powers saw fit to appoint me missionary to labor in the above-named district. I am a stranger in this field and to the Saints there, but wishing to labor where I can do the most good I would like to hear from any of the Saints and friends of the church in the district who desire meetings and are willing to help make the meetings a success. I also wish to communicate with the district officers, that together we may labor for the upbuild-

Our Departed Ones

LESLIE.—Albert James Leslie was born March 4, 1861, at Dromore, Grey County, Ontario. He married Isabella MacInnes in 1892. Baptized in 1910, and for sixteen years was a member of the Toronto Branch. He was an active business man until the time of his death, December 11, 1926, although he had been in failing health for the past four years. His many business associates, social friends, and fellow church members who paid their last respects at his obsequies testified of his character as a citizen and Christian. He leaves a widow, a son, Roy Windsor, one brother, and two sisters. Funeral service by Elder James Pycok, interment in Park Lawn Cemetery.

POTTER.—Cora L. Potter, daughter of Millard and Lucy Potter, was born in 1877. She was baptized many years ago, and spent the greater part of her life in Rock Island, Illinois, with her widowed mother. She was a dressmaker. Died at her home in Matherville, Illinois, Saturday morning, April 29, 1927. Funeral services were held in the Saints' church in Matherville, Monday afternoon, May 2, the sermon being preached by Elder Leonard Houghton, assisted by John Lindburg. Interment was in Matherville Cemetery.

Blue Pencil Notes

"This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."—Paul.

I want to let go, but I will not let go!
I am tired, it is true, and discouraged and blue,
Worn out through and through! But I will not let go!

I want to let go, but I will not let go!
There is work to be done, a race to be run,
A crown to be won! And I will not let go!

I want to let go, but I will not let go!
There are battles to fight by day and by night,
For God and the right! And I will not let go!

I want to let go, but I will not let go!
I never will yield, nor lie down on the field,
Nor surrender my shield! No, I will not let go.

I want to let go, but I will not let go!
Be this ever my song, 'gainst legions of wrong!
O God, make me strong, that I may not let go!
—William M. Curry, in "The Pastor's Corner."

A keen-minded friend with a philosophic turn of thought put to us the following question: "Has this church as yet developed a particular type of man?"

That question is worth consideration. Also the correlated question, What type of man should the church be expected to develop?

Some years ago an ingenious artist attempted to produce a portrait that would be a composite picture of all the Presidents of the United States. The resultant picture did not look very much like any one of them (it would be hard to produce a picture reminding you at once of Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson, or of Theodore Roosevelt and George Washington), but it was supposed to resemble in some points all of them. Each one contributed to the result.

If it were possible to make a composite picture of the church, of all members in the church, what should be the result? We speak now of character rather than of facial conformation. Without doubt the result should be a character very much resembling Jesus Christ. Not a perfect resemblance, of course, for the church is but struggling toward a goal.

This keen-minded friend then put the following question: "Has the church produced even one individual that you can name who even approximated the Christ type of character?"

After some thought we named several men, the first of them being the late President Joseph Smith, who was blessed with great length of days in which to carry forward his sublime experiment in the imitation of Jesus, and who so treated friend and foe that both were in the end compelled to help him in his experiment. No one who had even a passing acquaintance with him will deny that we made a wise selection.

It is profoundly encouraging to have known even a few men who in the great fundamentals of character grew to be like Christ. The fact that they may have failed in some details is to be expected and accepted without undue concern. And there are probably a veritable host of people who in some or many ways have come to resemble the Master, if we but knew them better and could judge them properly.

The questions propounded are very profitable for consideration. Every Latter Day Saint may well ask himself the question: "What am I doing toward making the great composite picture of the church Christlike?" Each one will of necessity help to make or help to mar the result. And the result as yet is by no means as satisfactory as it should be. We ought to produce a pronounced type of man in every branch of the church—men who in conversation, in action, and in the very look of the countenance remind men, perhaps silently, but none the less impressively, of the Master, whose example they emulate.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson Sails Thursday

Brother Hanson has determined to sail on May 19, taking the Scandinavian Liner United States for Oslo, Norway. His intended stay is to be about eighteen months, during which time he will likely visit each European country in which the church has established congregations.

It is interesting to know that notwithstanding this is the fourth time Brother Hanson has taken missionary responsibility in foreign lands, he goes with alacrity and the finest of energetic, hopeful spirit, determined to give to the work of the church foreign missions all that his splendid personality, long experience, spiritual and mental equipment, and quiet energy have fitted him to give to a cause which he feels grounded in his innermost self.

In speaking of the fact that so many years of his ministry have been spent in the foreign fields, he related the following incident: "When I was about seventeen years of age, I arose to bear testimony in one of the prayer services. I was inexperienced in speaking and became somewhat confused. After closing my testimony as best I could, I sat down and sensed a feeling that my work was not in the public functions of the church. At the close of the meeting Brother John Evans arose and spoke in prophecy to me and stated that 'The Spirit of God has moved upon me to speak and say to you that the day will come when, if you are faithful, the gospel will be delivered to you to deliver unto others, even in the isles of the ocean, and you shall feel the Spirit and power of God in the marrow of your bones.' That," said Apostle Hanson, "has been literally fulfilled."

Brother Hanson was first ordained to the ministry of the church when eighteen years old, May 24, 1896, to the office of priest. He was ordained an elder and later a seventy, both in 1902. In that year he was assigned to New Zealand and spent the next four years in New Zealand and Australia, returning home in 1906, having visited on his way home the countries of Ceylon, Arabia, Egypt, and Palestine, and several European countries. He was ordained an apostle in 1911. In 1915 he took charge of the Australasian Mission, visiting the Society Islands while on this trip, and on the way home in 1917 he visited the Hawaiian Islands. In 1919, in company with Elder John W. Rushton, he again visited the Australasian Mission and made a survey of the Society Islands Mission, being gone on this mission about fourteen months.

Again in 1923, in company with Apostle J. F. Curtis, Apostle Hanson took charge of the European Mission and Palestine, visiting England, Holland, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Egypt, Palestine, Assyria, Turkey, Greece, Germany, Norway, Denmark, and Sweden, he and Brother Curtis returning to America in December of 1924.

The best wishes of the HERALD and of the church go with Brother Hanson. His progress will be reported through these columns and will be eagerly scanned by our readers.

Post Conference Comments

Another important piece of legislation of the late conference had also to do with finances. It is as follows:

To the General Conference; Greeting: The Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Order of Bishops at their session this morning unanimously approved the following resolution:

Whereas, it is essential to the stability of our general church endeavor that financial reserves shall be created and maintained; and,

Whereas, the maintenance of our essential function and the building of these reserves will necessitate economies both individual and collective, local and general, as provided in Doctrine and Covenants, section 130, paragraph 7, as follows:

"In order that the temporal affairs of the church may be successfully carried on and the accumulative debt of the church in its respective departments where debts have accumulated may be properly met and in due time discharged, the church is instructed, both as members and as the body at large, to avoid the unnecessary building of houses of worship or places of entertainment or otherwise expending the tithes and offerings of the church in that which may not be essential unto the continued onward progress of the general work; and both in private and in public expenditure carry into active exercise the principle of sacrifice and repression of unnecessary wants; and thus permit the accumulation of tithes and offerings in such amounts as may be needful to properly discharge the existing indebtedness of the church as a body." Therefore,

Be It Resolved: That the policy of the church respecting finances for the interconference period 1927-28 shall be

To provide funds for the care and expenses of General Conference appointees and their families, together with the general administrative expense;

To provide for the care of the poor and needy and expenses incident to the operation of the homes for the aged;

To supply the budget adopted by General Conference for Graceland College;

To provide for the building of a basement of a dormitory for Graceland College as fast as funds are available;

To provide for the continuance of the building of the Auditorium as fast as the observance of the foregoing shall release funds that were subscribed for that purpose which were utilized to supply past financial needs of the general church, or as may be provided otherwise by General Conference, or Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Order of Bishops.

And Be It Further Resolved That We Recommend: That the Christmas offering be used in support of the general missionary work of the church;

That stakes, districts, local congregations, and reunion associations be requested to make no local expenditures in any considerable sum or incur any local indebtedness except such as shall be approved by the First Presidency, and Presiding Bishopric or their representatives, and the member of the Twelve in charge of the respective field;

That the church through the Presiding Bishopric and the entire ministry of the church shall make special efforts to increase the church income through the divinely appointed channels of tithing, surplus, and offering.

The preamble stresses, first, the advisability of creating reserve funds to protect the church against periods of depression and unforeseen emergencies. Leading up to the creation of these reserves, the resolution put forth, first, a program of economy, to be applied generally and locally, in harmony with the advice in Doctrine and Covenants 130:7. Coincident with the effort to economize, there shall be continued efforts to increase the income of the church by systematic teaching of the fundamental temporal law: tithing, surplus, offerings. The Presiding Bishopric is to lead out in this work; but all the ministry are instructed by the resolution to engage themselves in that undertaking, and no doubt will be expected to do so.

The resolution, with its preamble, inevitably draws attention to the subject of economy, and that was the part most discussed at the time of its adoption. Arguments at that time presented indicate that the resolution should be intelligently applied and administered. We are admonished to be "temperate in all things." There is true economy and there is false economy. There is that which wastes while it seeks to save, and that which saves by wise expenditures.

In the matter of building local church edifices, as well as in personal or private expenditures, economy is enjoined in the revelation quoted in the preamble. Care should be taken locally before embarking upon a building program that will tend to withdraw or withhold moneys that should go to the general treasury in tithes, surplus, or free will offerings. But once it is determined to build, while true economy should prevail, false economy should not ruin or cripple the entire project.

In the past in some places we have been content to buy a lot in an undesirable location because it was cheap, and to build an inadequate and uninviting building of four walls and a roof. This is not necessarily economy, since such saving defeats one prime object of the first investment: the investigating public will not come to an out-of-the-way and uninviting neighborhood and the shabby church building, and so the congregation can not hope to grow by conversions and baptisms. Real economy would have been served by a better investment in the beginning.

Again, individual expenses (and this is mentioned because at the time the resolution was discussed so much stress was put upon the necessity of economy by the missionaries) there is false and real economy. A thirty-dollar suit may outwear two fifteen dollar suits and look better and fit better all the time it is worn. Such economies as sitting up at night while traveling, eating cold lunches, etc., were stressed while the resolution was under discussion. One who is to take a long trip by rail and who is robust and has time to rest afterward may thus economize sometimes to advantage. But a missionary or general church officer who travels much, and of necessity over a large territory, if he were to pursue such a policy would soon suffer in efficiency, unless he has an extraordinary constitution. A general church officer not so long ago made a trip taking two nights and most of three days. He sat up in the day coach all the way and saved some few dollars, but was in very poor condition to offer his services when he reached the place of his appointment.

To sit up nights and eat cold lunches may be economy if a minister is ordained to do that work; but if he be ordained and sent and required to preach forcefully, visit freely, advise carefully and constantly, administer and regulate intelligently and energetically, to be full of vim and enthusiasm and punch and go and vigor and to be on the job long hours, it may presently prove to be very poor economy. There may be branches where the Saints would prefer the man who comes at their call to ride all day and sit up all night while they sleep that they may doze next day while he tries to preach to them, but we have not heard of such branches. Most Saints would prefer the minister to sleep while they sleep and give them the best he has from a refreshed mind and rested body. They are willing to pay the difference in cost.

As a boy on the farm, when we went to town with produce the orthodox lunch was five cents worth of white soda crackers and five cents worth of bologna. The bologna was made of odds and ends of old flesh—beef, horse, or otherwise—shot full of pepper almost to the point of combustion. The pepper concealed the taste of decay and gave the stomach something to think about besides hunger. Sometimes for dessert there was added five cents worth of "store gingersnaps," so hot that nature must the second time call out the fire brigade to protect the poor stomach against one of the worst fires in its history. That was called economy, but it was not economy judged from the standpoint of efficiency.

Spurgeon may have had some such ideas in mind when he had occasion to travel with a younger and perhaps more "devoted" associate en route to a day and place of strenuous public service. Arriving at night, Spurgeon secured a room at a hotel at a moderate price and ate his breakfast. His traveling companion sat up and ate crackers and cheese for breakfast. The traveling companion said: "I always take good care of the Lord's money." Spurgeon re-

The Oblation

BY BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL

Do you know that the oblation is used to help the needy? Can you think of a better use? Can you think of a greater or better incentive for giving than aiding the worthy poor? those who are suffering for the bare necessities of life?

Giving your oblation does not take the place of the payment of your tithe and surplus. The tithe and the surplus are debts due God as his share of the profits of your business. The oblation is given, not paid. It represents a real sacrifice on your part. It is a reminder to you that God gave his only beloved Son for you and that Christ willingly—gladly—gave his all, his life, for you.

In giving your oblation, you are only in a small way doing what Christ did. You are commemorating his life and witnessing unto God, Christ, all the hosts of heaven, and unto your fellow men, that you have taken upon you Christ's commandments. You do this twelve times a year. Do you come to the sacred altar and solemnly commemorate Christ's great gift and fail to bring a loving gift for your needy brother or sister? Brothers and sisters, don't fail to do it! Learn to experience the sweet satisfaction that comes to the one who "loves his neighbor as himself."

Do you know that we never have enough to supply all those among us who ask for aid? There are one hundred thousand members in our church. We will cut the number in two and say, fifty thousand who attend church. Our oblation collections amount to $19,577.88 on a yearly average. This is only 39 cents for each member a year. Dividing this by twelve gives us an average of 3¼ cents per month. Dear Saints, can we not do better than this the coming year? Think for a moment what we could do for our needy Saints if fifty thousand members would give on an average per month, 25 cents. It would amount to $150,000 a year, or about seven and one half times as much as we are getting now.

Just think of it. Only 25 cents a month. What a tremendous lot of happiness we would bring to those who have need! and above all, what joy we will cause in heaven!

Some branches make no endeavor to increase the amount of this very sacred offering. Other branches do not even take up an offering. Others take what they get and use it locally. This should not be. Those on whom rests the responsibility of presiding over the branches should see to it that the members of their branch are encouraged and urged to make as creditable an oblation as possible. On every sacrament day the members should be taught to give their gift. The presidents of the various stakes and districts should urge the various branch presidents to see that this law is kept. This fund should be used for the needs of the poor, and for no other purpose. It is a sacred offering, given for a sacred and special purpose, for the poor and needy, and as such it should be used.

The General Conference has spoken and said:

That every branch should comply with the law by receiving oblations at sacrament service, as found in section 59, paragraph 2, and the amount so received should be placed with the Bishopric in harmony with section 42, paragraph 8.

Let this year be a banner year for the giving of our oblation. In no way can we please God better than to hear the cry of our needy brethren.

We Need a New Kind of Doctor

BY LEONARD S. RHODES

We are wondering how many consecrated young men and women, who have not yet decided upon their life's work, will see and read this article? It is a call for volunteers to enter a great, new field of gospel service; and if one or more shall respond and qualify, the benefits will be of untold value to God's people in redeeming Zion.

The church needs a new kind of doctor; one who can teach and practice those methods indicated in the revelations. But before we can have that kind of doctor in sufficient numbers to accomplish the work to be done, the church must found a school for their education and training. And before this can be done, there must be those qualified to do the pioneer work of preparing the way.

The present church policy makes allopathy the orthodox method of healing; once it was homeopathy. In addition to these, we probably have in our membership those also who practice osteopathy, naturopathy, and chiropractic. But not one of these five schools is based entirely upon scriptural methods, although naturopathy makes the nearest approach to it.

The profession of health and healing is as much divided against itself in the church as it is out of it. The practitioners of each branch of healing seem to have a conviction that all who use other methods are quacks, frauds, "irregular," "unscientific." This, of course, is just plain nonsense.

No one has a monopoly of the truth, or the ability to discover it. In each branch of the healing profession are to be found men who are equally intelligent, equally well trained, and equally conscientious with any that may be found in the others. It follows, then, that even if the several kinds of doctors can not work in harmony, the truths they teach will harmonize if given a chance.

We hear much about "medical science," "the science of health," etc.; but if by science is meant a systematized knowledge of truth in a given field, it is the writer's conviction that the healing profession in its present divided state can hardly be called a science.

There are several objections to be urged against the orthodox branch of healing. First, it does not lend itself readily to practical use by the laity; for obviously it would be neither wise nor practical for the untrained layman to prescribe drugs, administer immunizing agents, or perform operations. Consequently the profession is committed to the "consult a-reliable-physician" policy, as constantly suggested in all their free advertising.

Growing out of this policy is the theory that without a medical education one can not understand the intricacies of health and cure, and therefore should intrust such matters entirely in the hands of his physician. This theory is akin to the old doctrine that the laity should not read the Bible because only the priest was sufficiently educated to understand it, and has done tremendous injury to the cause of health culture. However, a reaction has set in, and many are learning to solve most of their own health problems, with gratifying results.

A second, and probably the most vital, objection to be urged against the orthodox branch of healing, is that its principal methods of treatment are neither identical nor in harmony with the methods indicated in the revelations.

Those methods of treatment that have received divine approval are called "natural methods," because they seek to gain and maintain health by correcting our habits of living to conform to the normal, natural state, and because their principal means of accomplishing this result is through the intelligent use of such natural agencies as mental attitude, food, water, environment, air, sunlight, etc.

On the other hand, the methods mainly depended upon by allopathy and homeopathy are drugs, immunizing agents, and surgery, which a little reflection will convince anyone are not natural to the life of man.

This observation is not intended as a reflection against the integrity of the noble men and women who are practicing these methods. When they chose their profession, they had probably never even heard the idea of scripturally preferred methods hinted; consequently it is only quite natural, after years of study and practice, that they are now conscientiously committed to their chosen profession.

Drugs intended for internal use, and which can not properly be classified as foods, are not natural to the life of man; and the fact that they are not used to maintain life and health is a valid argument against their value in restoring health. The younger and more advanced medical doctors are reducing the amount of drugs they prescribe to a minimum, realizing more and more their uselessness. Adherence to scriptural methods would reduce the use of drugs almost to the vanishing point.

That surgery is not natural to human life is obvious to any thinking person, especially when it is used to cut out God-given organs. Naturopaths declare that nine tenths of all operations prescribed by surgeons can be avoided through the application of natural methods of treatment. After allowing liberally for exaggeration resulting from overenthusiasm, their claims are still greatly deserving consideration, especially when we understand something of the penalty we are paying for the luxury of operations.

Leading naturopaths declare that every major operation greatly shortens the patient's natural span of life. But some one insists that an operation saved his life. Yes; a man smitten with acute appendicitis may die in a few days or weeks if something isn't done. And an operation may permit him to live; but he pays a toll of years from what would otherwise be his natural span of life. But often the operation is followed by death without a recovery; and the question whether the operation or the sickness caused the death is debatable.

The use of vaccines, serums, and anti-toxins is an unnatural practice, because they are filthy poisons and because they enter the body through other than normal channels. The persistent pollution of the racial blood stream by these agents can not be continued with impunity, for they are an inglorious substitute for the divinely approved method of securing immunity to the plague.

Moreover, their success as immunizing agents is by no means established. The question is still being debated, with men of equal experience and learning on both sides; and laymen do well to avoid a practice over which doctors disagree.

In this article we must confine our investigation to vaccination. Opposed to this practice we find such men of high standing as Doctor Charles Creighton, M. D., who prepared the article on vaccination for the ninth edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica after an exhaustive research; Doctor Benedict Lust,

M. D., Doctor H. Lindlahr, M. D., leading naturopaths; Bernard Macfadden, the father of physical culture in America; G. Bernard Shaw, who denounced compulsory vaccination as a crime; William E. Gladstone; and many other noted men and women from all over the civilized world.

From 1898 to 1902 the United States Army in the Philippines was systematically vaccinated and re-vaccinated. The work was probably as near one hundred per cent thorough as it is possible to make it, since soldiers must obey orders; yet in that five-year period there were 737 cases of smallpox among the soldiers, with 261 smallpox deaths. It is said that when vaccinated persons do get smallpox their cases are mild; yet here we have, not mild cases, but deadly ones, 35 out of every hundred dying.

During the decade from 1911 to 1920 the Philippine Islands was probably the most vaccinated country in the world, there being more than 24 million vaccinations in a population of about ten million. And here are the results: 169,991 cases of smallpox, with 75,339 deaths, a mortality rate of 44 per cent. Does vaccination stay the hand of the plague, or invite it?

During the three years from 1922 to 1924 the United States, one of the least vaccinated countries in the world, averaged 35,257 cases of smallpox annually, with 483 deaths; a mortality rate of only one and three eighths per cent. To equal the Philippine mortality rate we should have averaged 15,513 smallpox deaths annually; or if figured on the basis of population, we should have averaged 90,000 smallpox deaths annually.

But smallpox is a filth disease. Where a population lives in filth, as in the Philippines, smallpox is frequent and deadly; and where it is comparatively sanitary, as is the United States, the disease and death rate are comparatively low. The purchasing of an indulgence through vaccination will not be honored by Nature; if we live in filth, we must pay the penalty.

On the other hand, to just the extent and degree that two potent words of divine command are being obeyed, to that extent are smallpox and diphtheria declining; and at practically the same rate as yellow fever, measles, whooping cough, and scarlet fever, for which there are no serums. "Be clean," saith the Lord.

It is claimed that vaccines and anti-toxins are harmless; that there is not one "accident" averaged in five hundred cases. Undoubtedly that estimate is exaggerated; but no matter how rarely permanent injury or death may result, will that knowledge make your heartbreak any less if it should be your darling, the pride and joy of your life, that is taken in death?

The bacilli of more than a dozen terrible diseases, including tetanus and meningitis, have been found in these preparations, bought on the open market; and children have died of these diseases following inoculation; and their deaths have not been "sweet unto them," but hideous and terrible, wringing pity from the most callous hearts.

Vaccinating also furnishes opportunity to "conspiring men." In December, 1921, the Kansas City Health Office began spreading an epidemic alarm. In a short time there were 200,000 vaccinations at a collective fee of approximately half a million dollars. Then came an investigation by the Advertisers Protective Bureau, disclosing the presence of only 213 cases of smallpox in the city, or one to every 1,600 population. The bureau concluded their report by saying, "We do not believe in epidemics which can be started or stopped by publicity alone."

But even if every objection to the use of immunizing agents be overcome, and every objector silenced, Latter Day Saints will not forget that their use is a substitution for the divine commandment and the promise.

And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings [of the Word of Wisdom concerning diet], walking in obedience to the commandments [which include "Cease to be unclean," and all others that apply to health], . . . I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass them by, as the children of Israel, and not slay them.—Doctrine and Covenants 86:3; 85:38.

The above is not an untried promise. Many thousands in all parts of the civilized world, who depend upon natural methods for health and cure, have abundantly demonstrated their truth. Bodies that are kept clean and healthy inside by proper diet, and clean outside by proper cleanliness and sanitation, are practically immune to disease; and when sickness does come, it is much milder when treated by divinely approved natural methods than by any other.

In the physical redemption of Zion, then, as in the social and spiritual, the greatest blessings come from following the divine plan. Drugs, surgery, and immunizing agents should be abandoned as the principal methods of treating the sick, because they can not be practiced by the membership except through the medium of a physician, and because they are an unsuccessful substitute for the natural methods taught in the revelations and in conflict with them.

For an introduction to the matter under discussion in this article, and especially that which follows, the reader should turn to our articles, "Health a fundamental factor in Zion building," and "The scriptural way to health," published in the HERALDS for September 29 and November 3, 1926. They bring to light the scriptural principles of health culture.

In the articles mentioned we pointed out that in the redemption of Zion health culture as taught in the Scriptures is as important as the social and spiritual phases of the everlasting gospel. We cited scriptures indicating that healing and health, like other gospel blessings, are based upon works as well as faith; and that obedience to the divine laws of health are as much a religious duty, and as binding, as faith, repentance, or any other part of the gospel. The scriptural health principles follow:

First, faith in God and his laws, actively manifested through works of repentance and the ordinance of administration. (James 5: 14, 15.)

Second, works of obedience, beginning with correct bodily nourishment, as comprehended in diet, medicinal herbs, and fasting. (Doctrine and Covenants 42: 12; 86: 1-3; 85: 21. Alma 21: 75, 76.)

Third, the proper care of the body through cleanliness, observance of the proper hours of rest, and physical exercise. (Doctrine and Covenants 85: 38; 119: 9; 86: 3.)

Fourth, "the use of that which wisdom directs," as found in harmony with the first three principles revealed in the Scriptures. (Doctrine and Covenants 119: 9.)

The first three principles of treatment are the divinely indicated natural methods previously referred to in this article, and are a part of the natural methods used by naturopaths and others with such remarkable success. And surely it is logical to conclude that whatever man's wisdom shall add to these three principles, given by divine direction, shall be an extension of natural methods of treatment.

However, the schools that teach natural methods do not give these principles the same order of preference that the Scriptures do; nor do they teach diet just as it is taught in the Word of Wisdom. It is for this reason that we need a church college where our church doctors can be trained in the scriptural way for the physical redemption of Zion.

But before we even attempt to found such a college, we must have a group of consecrated men and women who shall have prepared for this task by an extensive study and training in these divinely approved principles of health and cure. At present there is no group of professional men fully qualified for this work.

The young men and women who take up this work of preparation must have courage and determination, for they are certain to meet many obstacles and much opposition. They must have vision and the ability to do independent thinking, for they will be required to leave the beaten paths. They must have an unalterable faith in the Scriptures relating to health and healing, for they are to do God's work in God's way.

Nor need they be startled or discouraged to find their methods referred to as fads; for if they are fads, then the Lord was first to introduce them among us as a people. If they are denounced as "irregulars," they can rejoice in the knowledge that they are accounted worthy to suffer with our missionaries, who have been denounced as unorthodox. And if they find themselves prosecuted in the courts, it has been the common lot of the noble men and women who have pioneered in this as well as other fields, because they dared to relieve suffering humanity.

Let them be assured that if they shall practice, study, and teach these scriptural health principles, they need have no fear, for they have the special promise of the Lord that "all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, . . . shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures." (Doctrine and Covenants 86: 3.)

Undoubtedly the training of these pioneers should begin with naturopathy, since, as before stated, this branch of the healing profession makes the nearest approach to the scriptural methods. However, their study and research should cover the entire field of health and curative knowledge, which includes chiropractic, osteopathy surgery, homeopathy, and allopathy. Thus they will be better able to sift out the chaff and retain the kernel of truth, reducing it to a science.

When there are a sufficient number of men and women in the church who are trained as outlined above, it will be time to found a college for the training of our own church doctors. Graceland, when it becomes a senior college, will be the logical place for this school.

It follows that our doctor's college should teach natural methods as the fundamental principles of treatment; furthermore, they should emphasize their importance in the order given in the revelations. Therefore their first and most important subject would be faith, and that vast related field known as mental therapy; which might be summed up as "the assurance of things hoped for." That faith can be cultivated, or "nourished," is taught by the Book of Mormon, Alma 16: 163-169.

Next, the church doctor should be trained in the law of correct diet, beginning with "herbs and mild food." His knowledge and practice of diet should be based on the Word of Wisdom. He should also be thoroughly trained in the use of the fast as a curative measure.

Third, comes the care of the body. This should include an extensive knowledge and larger appreciation of the injunction to "be clean," as it applies to the prevention and cure of disease, and the maintaining of health. Internal as well as outward cleanliness, pure air, pure water, and sanitary homes and surroundings, all come under this head. Bodily care should also include a knowledge of the value of rest, relaxation, and sleep in the hours set apart by God for that purpose; and their proper balance with work and physical exercise, to fit the various cases in gaining and maintaining health.

The fourth principle, "the use of that which wisdom directs," leaves open to the church-trained doctor a broad field of natural methods. Divine wisdom has shown the way by directing us in the first three principles; and now directs the wisdom of man to seek out and apply further methods in extension of those already given.

Chief among those in use in this field, and giving excellent results, are hydrotherapy and heliotherapy. Added to these should be a thorough training in those two marvelous systems, osteopathy and chiropractic. Finally, a knowledge of surgery should be had, to be used in accidental injuries and exceptional cases. Of course this necessitates a knowledge of anæsthetics, and perhaps other drugs, especially those for outward application, as alcohol "for the washing of your bodies," and tobacco (though not strictly a drug) "for bruises." (See Doctrine and Covenants 86:1.)

In the branch of the future, where a doctor may be found who is trained in the scriptural methods of treating the sick, a patient's experience will be encouragingly different than it is at present. He would be taught as the first step to send for the elders for administration, one of whom might be a church doctor. The latter would add to his faith, prayers, and the laying on of hands, the benefit of his training in the use of mental healing; in other words, he would know how to nourish and increase the patient's faith and hope.

This would tend to increase the present percentage of cases where the patient whose faith, thus nourished, would be sufficient, without further treatment. But if the doctor discerned further treatment to be essential, he could proceed to the second, third, and fourth principles of treatment, without the reaction on anyone's part that comes from the feeling that faith has failed and that worldly methods must therefore be resorted to. Religion would enter, not only in the administration, but in the entire treatment; and faith would tend to increase instead of decrease.

But no matter whether a miraculous healing or a hard-fought recovery were experienced, it would be the doctor's duty and opportunity to point out to the patient the habits or errors that caused his sickness, and to instruct him in those spiritual laws and commandments that promote health. Thus each case of sickness would serve as an education in health culture to the Saints, with the result that illness would decline and health increase.

There are yet other desirable results to be expected from scriptural methods of treatment. In very many cases the patient will enjoy better health after a sickness treated by natural methods than he did before, since this result follows natural methods of treatment as understood and practiced by men not of the faith.

But best of all, health gained through obedience to these laws of God will result in a spiritual exaltation or increased spirituality that can be realized from no other form of treatment. Note the factors all through the treatment that produce spiritual reactions: faith in God, administration, prayer, fasting, proper food (Brother H. V. Ellison has an excellent article on this point in the HERALD for December 8, 1926, page 1202) and sleep. All "my commandments are spiritual," saith the Lord. (Doctrine and Covenants 28:9.)

Health culture must, absolutely must, become a religion with our people before our bodies shall become temples, worthy in the fullest sense for the habitation of the Holy Spirit; and Zion be enabled to put on her garments of beauty. To this end we need a new kind of doctor: men and women consecrated to God's way, and qualified to practice and teach those principles of healing indicated in the Scriptures, until with the social gospel they shall become part of our daily lives, and shall wipe from our eyes all tears of illness and premature death. May God hasten that day! Verily, it is my will to provide for the temporal, which includes the physical salvation of my people, "but it must needs be done in mine own way," saith he in whose image we are made.

It requires much courage for the individual openly to profess his loyalty to some other standard in life than that of financial success. . . . If we were true to our natural instincts, some of us would pursue power through wealth, while others of us would pursue power in other forms. And some of us might not be interested in power at all. When we break the spell which money has cast upon our minds, we will open the way to a saner, healthier, and more productive manner of life.—J. R. Scotford.

The Dawn of Peace

BY JOHN ZIMMERMANN, JR.

A sermon delivered in 1922

The mighty God, even the Lord, hath spoken, and called the earth from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof. Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined. Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence: a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice. And the heavens shall declare his righteousness: for God is judge himself. Selah.—Psalms 50: 1-6.

I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass.—Isaiah 46: 11.

It is my purpose to review with you, if I may, some of the more recent events of history which seem to be pointing with amazing emphasis to the fulfillment of the prophecies which are contained in this book, the Bible.

All through the prophetic books of the Bible we find utterances which seem to point to the time in which we are now living. We are told in the scriptures, "At eventide it shall be light, and sorrow and sighing shall be no more, for the former things have passed away." Daniel tells us in the second chapter, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed." We read in Malachi, third chapter, "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord whom ye seek will suddenly come to his temple even the messenger of the covenant whom ye delight in; behold he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts. But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap." Isaiah tells us in the sixty-second chapter: "Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people. Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold my salvation cometh; behold his reward is with him, and his work before him."

Jesus refers to these coming events in some of his parables. In Luke 14 we read, "A certain man made a great supper and bade many, and sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come, for all things are now ready." And again in Matthew 20, "And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle? They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard and whatsoever is right, that shall you receive."

I desire to dwell particularly this evening on the work that is being accomplished, looking forward to the gathering of the Jews, and in this connection I want to call your attention especially to Book of Mormon, Nephi 9: 86.

And verily I say unto you, I give unto you a sign, that ye may know the time when these things shall be about to take place I shall gather in from their long dispersion the house of Israel and shall establish again among them my Zion, for it is wisdom in the Father that they should be established in this land, and be set up as a free people by the power of the Father. And when these things come to pass it shall be a sign, that they may know that the work of the Father hath commenced unto the fulfilling of the covenant which he hath made.

This prophecy is confirmed in the eleventh chapter of Isaiah:

And he shall set up an ensign for the nations and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth.

I want to particularly discuss the startling progress that has been made in the past few years in the work of the gathering of the Jews.

As a people, Latter Day Saints have long been looking for a fulfillment of the many ancient prophecies concerning bringing together the remnants of the scattered house of Israel. We have speculated for years as to how such a reunion could be made possible. As you all know, up until recently Palestine was in the hands of the unspeakable Turk, with all the traditions and barbarous practices of the Moslem faith. While the Zionist movement was organized as early as 1879, little progress was made.

Those of you who followed closely the events of the recent World War will recall, however, that along in the early part of November in 1917, Sir Arthur J. Balfour, who was then the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, wrote a letter to Lord Rothschild on behalf of the British Government, in which he stated that the British Government was prepared to establish in Palestine a Jewish National Home, where the Jewish people could develop their qualities and could freely exercise their religion and where, unhampered and untrammelled, they could both expand their culture and earn peaceful living, subject only to the very necessary qualification that there should be no interference of any kind with their religious or civil rights or of any other community that might be resident then in Palestine, or might enter it at any time. This came to be known as the Balfour Declaration, and it is really amazing when we remember the tremendous changes which took place immediately thereafter in the conduct of the war.

You will recall that the allied operations in the Near East had up to this time been a most dismal failure. You will remember no doubt the overwhelming defeat of the allied forces in their effort to capture Constantinople by way of the peninsula of Gallipoli. You will also recall the reverses which occurred in the campaign in Mesopotamia; particularly the loss of the strategic fortress of Kut-el-Amara and other points in this sector.

But with the advent of the Balfour Declaration, a new interest was aroused throughout the whole allied world in the campaign against the despotism of Turkey and for the conquest and liberation of Jerusalem and the land of Palestine. This remarkable declaration seemed to work like magic upon the conduct of the war in the Near East. Instead of retreats and defeats, we began to read of victories and advances. Kut-el-Amara was soon regained by the allied arms, and the operations were pushed on still farther. Events in Palestine followed each other thick and fast, until finally in December, 1917, we heard that the British forces under General Allenby had actually entered Jerusalem and that the campaign in this sector had reached a victorious conclusion. Soon after the armistice was declared, under the terms of the treaty of Versailles Palestine was declared a British Protectorate, and thereby the action already taken by the British secretary was again ratified. The military administration of the British lasted until July 1, 1920, when it was succeeded by the civil administration set up by Herbert Samuel, High Commissioner for Palestine.

At the conference of the powers at San Remo the question of Palestine again came up for discussion, and further provisions were made to safeguard its interests and to provide for the execution of the program that had been previously agreed upon. The United States later displayed its interest in the movement. I have here the text of a letter which the President addressed to this Palestine Foundation:

The White House, WASHINGTON, D. C., May 11, 1922.

Gentlemen: I am very glad to express my approval and hearty sympathy for the effort of the Palestine Foundation Fund, in behalf of the restoration of Palestine as a homeland for the Jewish people. I have always viewed with an interest, which I think is quite as much practical as sentimental, the proposal for the rehabilitation of Palestine, and the restoration of a real Jewish nationality, and I hope the effort now being carried on in this and other countries in this behalf, may meet the fullest measured success.

Very sincerely,

(signed) WARREN G. HARDING.

Also ratified the action that had been taken by the allies with reference to Palestine as a Jewish Homeland under British Protection. It was not very long before the Palestine Foundation was started. This is a plan to finance the various purchases of land and farming equipment, which the Jews are undertaking as a necessary preliminary looking toward the further colonization of this country. Some idea may be had of the tremendous interest of the Jews of America in this project, from the fact that in New York City alone three million dollars were raised in one of their drives. Even President Harding voiced his approval.

It is very interesting here to note that while the Jews had offered the Turkish Government millions of dollars for lands in Palestine before the war, they finally got it for nothing, and, moreover, the record says that they were to get it for nothing!

I was very much interested recently in reading the address of Sir Alfred Mond at Oxford University in England. This article appears in the April 7 issue of New Palestine. He gives a vivid picture of the conditions in the land of Palestine. He says in part:

A large number of the immigrants are from Russia. It is not unnatural that it should be so. They are the remnants of a people who have seen their fathers and their mothers killed before their eyes; they have also seen their mothers and their sisters raped and outraged before their eyes. I have seen these immigrants and talked to them. I have seen them at their work. They are glad, happy. No wonder they sing. They are under a blue sky. They are not in danger of meeting death. Twenty-five per cent of them are university men, professors, doctors, lawyers, and yet they are doing the work of laborers on the road. I remember talking to one of them there who is a professor of philology.

Palestine is a country which is starving for labor. Immigration into Palestine should be limited only by one fundamental fact, and that is the economic capacity of the country to absorb those who want to work. It would be criminal not to bring people there if employment could be found, and it would be equally criminal to bring people there if adequate employment can not be provided for them.

Do you know that this is the same problem which confronts us as a church in the West. In my mind the greatest problem which the church has today is to properly provide for those who have assembled themselves in the stakes of Zion in compliance with the revelations given to the church in 1830. Many have overlooked the fact that the revelations given the church distinctly state that those who move to Zion should have all things prepared before them. To move to Independence, or Lamoni, and become a charge upon the church, reflects badly upon the cause of Zion.

Unfortunately the industries and economic program of the church are still undeveloped, and for this reason I would personally caution anyone who is planning a move toward Zion to see to it first of all that they make proper arrangements with the Bishop before making any radical decisions. Let me reiterate the principle outlined above, "Immigration into the land of Zion should be limited only by one fundamental fact, and that is the economic capacity of the country to absorb those who want to work. It would be criminal not to bring people there if employment could be found, and it would be equally criminal to bring people there if adequate employment can not be provided for them."

I am afraid that that is a little off of our subject, but let us not forget that at least fundamentally Zion-building is pretty much the same problem, whether it be in the land of Palestine or in the land of Missouri.

I want to acquaint you with some of the details of the economic growth of Palestine, since the country has been thrown open to the Jews:

Cultivation of the soil has improved to such an extent that the area under cultivation this year is greater than ever before. The orange crop this year is very large. All the growers of the Jaffa district have combined in order to reduce the costs of transportation. Only recently the American Orange Packing House was built as an aid to care for this crop. Here the fruit is washed, dried, polished, and graded. Then packed for shipment. Before the war the industries of Palestine were very limited indeed. But since the Jews have been admitted to enter the field, the industries have seen an amazing increase. Only recently the Silicate Company has established a large plant for the manufacture of building brick. A number of new concerns making other building materials were set up and the old ones extended. Several new woodwork and furniture plants have been set up in Jerusalem, Jaffa, Haifa, and Tiberias.

A French group in which Baron de Rothschild is interested, is just finishing the construction of a large modern flour mill in Haifa. A number of other mills were started practically all over the country. The Sheman Company is erecting a new organic oil, soap, and margarine plant in Haifa. A chocolate factory has been built in Jaffa. Mechanical shops have been built in Haifa, Jerusalem, and Tiberias, a carpet factory in Jerusalem, and two quarries have commenced operation near Jerusalem.

Since 1921 building activity has assumed considerable proportions. In order to assist in the building activity, two Zionist mortgage banks have been opened, and it is hoped that they will begin operations during this season. The agricultural experiment station has begun work in several places in the country. This station has for its object the study of those plants which are best suited for the soil of Palestine with the view of obtaining the best crops by means of scientific working of the land, application of suitable fertilizers, and selection of seeds. Among the experiments carried out by this station have been trial plantings of cane sugar, flax, new fodder plants, and oil containing fruit. As soon as these experiments give satisfactory results, it will not only mean that better and wider prospects will be opened to agriculture, but will also serve as a basis for new industries.

A certain advance has been made in the fields of dairy farming, bee breeding, poultry raising, and cultivation of vegetables. It is interesting to note that the quantity of milk produced was appreciably increased because of pure breed cows imported and because of more rational methods of raising fodder.

No power on earth can take from this land its magic attraction for its people. I have seen their remnants droning their prayers by the Wailing Place, kissing its broken stones, and lighting their flickering candles of hope and faith on its ledges; I have seen their countless graves in the valley of Jehosaphat wherein lie the hosts of this chosen people drawn hither from every land to wait for the judgment, which they have been told is to take place there; I have seen the living, the youth, the believers, planting the waste places and adorning the land as a bride is adorned by gifts from the bridegroom. These things are evidence that in the heart of Judaism there is a love, and that in the Jew's mind there is a quest which he will pursue in the face of all obstacles, and through long weary generations, until the prophecies of his ancient teachers and of his own heart have been fulfilled.

Thus writes Ramsay McDonald, British labor leader, a powerful intellectual force in England, of his recent visit to Palestine. He has seen Zionism at work, he has seen the Jewish colonists; he has seen their intrepidity, their devotion, their undaunted bravery. Ramsay McDonald is a leader of men, with a clear vision that is not befogged by political considerations at home. He describes things in Palestine as he has seen them.

Writing in the Westminster Gazette, of March 20, last, he says:

Zionism has blown over the dry bones of Judaism, and so the faces and feet of many Jews are turned to their Zion. I have talked to them in the immigrant encampment on the sandy shore of Jaffa just off the sea, in Jerusalem, on one or another of the many committees of settlement; in tents on the slopes of Gilboa, reclaiming the waste places; by the sea of Galilee, where they are making roads and bridging the Jordan.

One afternoon as I was crossing the Plain of Esdraelon, close to the spot where Saul fought his last battle and fell before the Philistines, I was met by a country cart and jolted over some mile or two of unmade road to one of the new Jewish camps at Nuris on the northern slopes of Mount Gilboa. Just beyond the spring where it is said that Gideon chose his army of three hundred men, I found their tents. Most of them were in the fields, but the anvil in the smithy was clanging, saws and planes were going in the carpenter shop; through an open door I saw a dentist at work; and in the kitchens the pots and pans were rattling. The community consisted of members of the Labor Corps. They had been working at road making for twelve months. They had settled upon a large piece of land between the railway and the top of the hill; there they are planting 14,000 eucalyptus trees of 60 varieties, 4,000 pines, 5,000 cypresses, 10,000 olives, together with apple orchards, vineyards, plantations, and orange groves; they are starting nurseries for the supply of plants, especially trees; they are digging and preparing the land for cultivation. They believe that they are laying foundations of a new Zion.

To my mind this is a very beautiful picture which is here presented. Imagine what a great source of consolation and satisfaction it must be to those people to know that they are all working for a common ideal, an ideal which is as lofty as any that has ever been set as a goal for any people! I could not help thinking when I first read this account, what a fine thing it would be if more of our own people could be saturated with the same spirit which seems to be motivating those people over there in Palestine. If they can do it over there, why can't we do it over here? We have had the same promises held out to us as they have. I feel tonight that we as a people are not living up to our opportunities. I recall the last time I was in the city of Washington in company with President Frederick M. Smith. Among others we called upon Senator Spencer, of the State of Missouri. In the course of our conversation he asked me the question, Why is it that you people have never established any industries in the State of Missouri? Do you know he almost took my breath away. Of course I parried his question as best I could. I tried to point out to him the difficulties involved in moving any industry away from the source of supply of raw material and market of the finished product, etc. But deep down in my heart I was ashamed. I felt that as a people we had been living far short of our opportunities. We can never expect to establish Zion by merely sitting around, talking about it.

I am wondering tonight if the Jews in Palestine are going to get their Zion into active operation before we do. We must admit that just now at least it looks as though they are getting ahead of us. Perhaps we don't have faith enough in God's promises to us? Perhaps we have not been persecuted and reviled as much as those people over there have been. If so, let us not forget the words of the Fishing River revelation, "Zion shall be redeemed, if it must needs be by sacrifice."

On the whole I think we should be encouraged by the reports we hear from across the sea. These things give us an assurance that there is a higher power than man which is shaping the destinies of this world. And what a consolation it is to us that it is so. Let us not forget, in conclusion, the promise made by our heavenly Father, "When these things come to pass, it shall be a sign that ye may know that the work of the Father hath commenced unto the fulfilling of the covenant which he hath made with his people."

Yes—on our brows we feel the breath
Of dawn, though in the night we wait.
An arrow is in the heart of Death
A God is at the doors of Fate!
The Spirit that moved upon the deep
Is moving through the minds of men;
The nations feel it in their sleep;
A change has touched their dreams again.
Voices, confused and faint, arise,
Troubling their hearts from east and west;
A doubtful light is in their eyes,
A gleam that will not let them rest;
The dawn, the dawn is on the wing,
The stir of change on ev'ry side,
Unsignaled as the approach of spring,
Invincible as the hawthorn tide.

Have ye not heard, though darkness reigns
A people's voice across the gloom—
A distant thunder of rending chains,
And nations rising from their tomb?
Then, if ye will, uplift your word
Of cynic wisdom, till night fail.
Tell us He came to bring a sword,
Spit poison in the Holy Grail.

Say that we dream. Our dreams have woven
Truths that outface the burning sun.
The lightnings that we dream have cloven
Time, space, and linked all lands in one.
Dreams! But their swift celestial fingers
Have knit the world with threads of steel,
Till no remotest island lingers
Outside the world's one commonweal.

Tell us that custom, sloth, and fear
Are strong, then name them "common sense";
Tell us that greed rules everywhere,
Then dub the lie "Experience."
Year after year, age after age,
Has handed down through fool and child
For earth's divinen heritage
The dreams whereon old wisdom smiled.

Dreams are they? But ye can not stay them,
Or thrust the dawn back for one hour:
Truth, love, and justice, if ye slay them,
Return with more than earthly power,
Strive, if ye will, to seal the fountains
That send the spring through leaf and spray;
Drive back the sun from the eastern mountains
Then—bid this mightier movement stay.

It is the dawn! the dawn! The nations
From east to west have heard a cry,
Though all earth's blood red generations
By hate and slaughter climb thus high.
Here—on this height—still to aspire
One only path remains untrod,
One path of love and peace climbs higher;
Make straight that highway for our God.

THEY SAY--

"No one should scoff at honesty and an ardent zeal in the cause of what one believes to be truth and justice."

"Those who forget the rights of others should not be surprised if their own are forgotten."

"Be careful, then, that thou receivest no wages here, or elsewhere, that are not thy dues."

"Life is but another name for action; and he who is without opportunity exists, but does not live."

Some One: "Heaven lies hidden in our daily deed, even as the oak with all its centuries of growth and all its summer glory sleeps in the acorn cup."

"Build not the desolate throne of ambition in thy heart."

"Do that which is right to do, not because it will insure you success, or bring with it a reward, or gain the applause of men, or be 'the best policy'; but because it is right, and therefore ought to be done."

Ruskin: "Education does not mean teaching people what they do not know. It means teaching them to behave as they do not behave. It is not teaching the youth the shapes of the letters and the tricks of numbers, and then leaving them to turn their arithmetic to roguery, and their literature to lust. It means, on the contrary, training them into the perfect exercise and kingly continence of their bodies and souls. It is a painful, continual, and difficult work, to be done by kindness, by watching, by warning, by precept, and by praise, but, above all—by example."

The Talmud: A heathen asked of a learned Rabbi: "Fools that ye are; behold the living die, how then can the dead come to life again?" "Fools ye are yourselves," answered the Rabbi. "If that which was not has come into existence, why can not that which was, exist again?"

My Ideal Mother

My Ideal Mother is probably different from your Ideal Mother, because all of you have had your own experiences with your own mother, who has had a great deal to do with your ideal. Since I have had but one mother, I can not say what a real ideal mother is, but can only say what I think an ideal mother is.

The Ideal Mother is one who does not try to be like me, in having the same interests and the same ideas. Such a mother would be the same as a girl friend. A mother undertsands her daughter's viewpoint and is sympathetic with her in what she thinks. I want to feel toward a mother in such a way that if something happens among my friends, I may take the difficulty to a mother, not another girl friend whom I call mother. A mother is one to whom we look for advice in matters that are beyond our comprehension; and if a mother has the same attitude toward the daughter as a girl friend, the daughter feels sometimes that the mother could not help her out of her trouble.

The Ideal Mother is self-controlled and not easily influenced by something the neighbor mother does. She does not let her emotions carry her away but deliberates before acting. Just because daughter wants to do something the neighbor daughter does, is no reason she should do it. The Ideal Mother does not allow daughter to persuade her beyond sane judgment, but has a mind of her own. After wisely considering the subject, mother's No means no, and her Yes means yes. Her statements rest on solid rock instead of on shifting sand.

The Ideal Mother has high ideals in order to create inspiration for the daughter. She is one who is an example of the right kind of self-control and in whom her daughter can have faith. For, if the mother does not live aright, how can she expect daughter to become an ideal mother, when she has such a poor pattern to follow?

The Ideal Mother neither spoils nor treats her children with lack of understanding or with undue severity. She is able to understand and sympathize with matters that may seem trivial to her but are as great problems to the child as her problem of training the child is to the mother. Mother must have a certain degree of patience, since a human being's infancy lasts until he is twenty-one years old or older.

The Ideal Mother has a sense of humor, not wit, for she laughs with and not at things.

She is neat and exact in her personal appearance. She does not keep the standards of the preceding generation, but goes ahead promptly, not hastily, to follow the mode of the moment.

The Ideal Mother teaches by living. Her words, expression, acts, which she thinks are hardly noticed, will have an amazing influence when they are needed most.

Although we talk about an ideal mother, our individual mother is the Ideal Mother for us, or God would certainly not have made her our mother.

The Power of Motherhood

Synopsis of a Mothers' Day sermon delivered by Elder Eli Bronson of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at Portland, Oregon, May 8, 1927.

Take this child and nurse it for me, and I will give thee wages.—Exodus 2: 9.

We thank God, this morning, that he saw fit to place upon earth the masterpiece of his creation in the person of our mothers.

There is a very interesting story in the Old Testament of a battle of right against might fought by the mother of Moses. Her child came into the world with the sentence of death hanging over him, for Pharaoh had decreed that all the male children should die. With a mother's love and the help of heaven, she dared to challenge that mighty decree. She was only a slave; a humble, hard-working woman; but like most of the mothers of men, she had "found favor with God." When the mighty power of a mother's love is consistent with the purposes of heaven, there is no power in the universe so nearly akin to the power of God.

I'm sure you remember the story—after three anxious months of careful watching, the babe was found by the maids of Pharaoh's daughter, and at the request of the princess a Hebrew maid was sought to nurse the child. By the kind provision of Providence, the maid whom the princess employed was none other than the mother of Moses. As the king's daughter tenderly kissed the beautiful baby boy and placed him in his own mother's arms, she said, "Take this child and nurse it for me, and I will give thee wages."

I feel in my soul that every woman who has found favor with God in the blessed mission of motherhood has heard the voice of Jehovah say to her, "Take this child and nurse it for me, and I will give thee wages."

The Power of Motherhood

There is wonderful power in the loving touch of a mother's hand. A nervous child in the darkest night will fall asleep and rest in peace, soothed by the touch of a mother's hand. No sinner has gone so deep in the immeasurable darkness of mortal hell but the loving touch of a mother's hand, though wrinkled and trembling with age, will cause him to shudder at the thought of his devilish deeds and long for a moment of heavenly virtue.

A little child who had just regained consciousness after a serious operation was asked, "Were you not afraid, my dear?" She replied with a smile, "No, I wasn't afraid, because mother stood by me and held my hand."

There is great power in a mother's kiss.

How many wounds are healed, how many aches and pains cured by the soothing, healing power of a mother's kiss! And those wounds, my friend, those aches, those pains, are not always found on the hand or head of a little child, but frequently in the hearts, the souls, and the lives of men and women. And to these a mother's kiss can never lose its wonderful, healing power.

Oh, the power in a mother's smile. If this world can ever know heavenly sunlight, it will be through the smiles of mothers. God help mothers to smile always.

If we knew the little fingers pressed against the windowpane,
Would be cold and still tomorrow, never trouble us again,
Would the bright eyes of our darling catch the frown upon our brow?

Would the prints of little fingers vex us then as they do now?

Let us gather up the sunbeams lying all around our path,
Let us keep the wheat and roses, casting out the thorns and chaff!

We shall find our sweetest comforts in the blessings of today,
With a patient hand removing all the briars from our way.

There is saving power in a mother's song. The sweetest music this world has ever known is found in a lullaby from a mother's lips. That song finds its way deep down into the soul of the child that is nestled close to its mother's heart, and there remains for ever.

The tongues of men do not furnish words to permit us to express the tremendous power of a mother's love. Like the God of heaven, she loves her babe before it is born. Like the Son of God, she walks deep down into the valley of the shadow of death that another may have life. Like the Holy Comforter, that love shall abide for ever.

A mother's love can never fail:

And though he creep through the vilest caves of sin,
And crouch perhaps, with bleared and bloodshot eyes,
Under the hangman's rope—a mother's lips
Will kiss him in his last bed of disgrace,
And love him e'en for what she hoped of him.

A disobedient daughter left her home one night and failed to return for many days. Finally, when the inevitable results of sin brought her to her senses, she returned to her mother's arms. The kind mother looked upon her wayward daughter through tear-dimmed eyes, and placing a tender, forgiving kiss upon her forehead, she said, "My child, we have never locked the door since the night you went away."

I wish to speak not only of the mothers of the children of today, but also of the mothers of the men and women of today. Mothers who are now at the evening time of life have been spared to see their children useful in the world, reclaiming the lost, healing the sick, pitying the ignorant, earnest and useful in every sphere, and this is a portion of the reward that God intended for mothers. Oh, the satisfaction Hannah must have felt in seeing Samuel serving at the altar, and the joy of Eunice in seeing Timothy learned in the scriptures. This reward is justly due the splendid mothers of good men and women, for most successful people have had mothers who were home builders.

The following lines were found beneath the pillow of a mother just after she had passed away, and had been written by her during the closing hours of her mortal life:

Love me now while I am living,
Do not wait till I am gone,
And then chisel it on marble,
Warm love-words on ice-cold stone.

If you wait till I am sleeping
Ne'er to waken here again,
There'll be walls of earth between us,
And I could not hear you then.

I won't need your kind caresses
When the grass grows o'er my face;
I won't crave your love and kisses
In my last low resting place.

God help those who have living mothers to love them now while they are living.

I can not but speak with the deepest emotion of the mothers in heaven. Surely the keeper of the pearly gates of glory has never failed to open wide those heavenly portals and stand with bowed head at the approach of a Christian mother.

Those of us who wear white flowers today, and whose hearts are sad and heavy, may still find hope and comfort in the eternal promises of God so beautifully expressed in the following lines by James Whitcomb Riley, written for "A mother in heaven":

I can not say, and I will not say
That she is dead—she is just away!
With a cheery smile, and a wave of her hand,
She has wandered into an unknown land;
And left us dreaming how very fair
It must needs be, since she lingers there.

Atheism in the Schools

Shall It Be Palliated?

In a magazine of recent date appears the article headed "Atheism" here reproduced. We are glad to furnish the opportunity to read this interesting story to Herald readers, to whom it will suggest several thoughts.

Is it to be wondered that we hear more of atheism in schools than we do of atheism on the streets? Does it follow that more atheism exists in the schools than on the streets, because it more frequently comes to our eyes and ears that declarations such as were made by Miss Sapkowitz, "Of course, there is no God. . . . common sense proves that," come from the school sources?

Those who have no school complex and who wish to arrive at correct conclusions are likely to consider the fact that we hear more from the schools upon any subject of weight than we do from the streets; to speak is a function of the schools; and in the schools questions are raised.

Finally, is not the faith of the street a questionable one, founded as it is likely to be, rather upon superstition than reason? and is not the faith of one who goes to the "end of the road," if there be such a place—through the schools and the books, of more worth to humanity than the thoughtless belief of a score who have not fought their way to such achievement?

Atheism

Of late there have been numerous instances recorded in the daily newspapers in which students connected with universities of higher learning have given expression to their disbeliefs in the existence of God. It has been recorded that certain atheistic societies have been formed among these students, who perhaps pride themselves with the belief that they are separate and apart from the great mass of God-fearing citizenry of this country. Not long ago a society of atheists was formed at the University of Rochester (New York), terming itself the "Damned Souls Society." Newspaper publicity resulted, of course, that most likely being the aim of the proponents, but the tone of the press was decidedly ironic, and one editor made the suggestion that the word fools be substituted for souls. After desultory attempts to gain recognition, the enterprising members of the society apparently abandoned their godless course and were promptly forgotten by the public.

According to a United News dispatch from New York City, more than thirty girls, none of them over seventeen, and twice as many boys are active members of the new "Society of the Godless," local chapter of the "Junior Atheist League." A young woman named Beatrice Sapkowitz, an officer in this society, gave the following statement to the press:

"Of course, there is no God. Science and common sense prove that. I've studied science at home and at school for several years, and all of it shows that the Bible is just a myth.

Her words are significant. She has "studied science at home and at school for several years, and all of it shows that the Bible is just a myth." Perhaps Miss Sapkowitz did not realize when she made this statement that she candidly explained the alarming increase of atheism among our young men and women. Meyer Konikow, secretary of the "Society of the Godless," according to the same dispatch, protested recently against compulsory attendance at assembly in high school while the Bible was being read. Attention is directed to the names of this young woman and young man—they are distinctly alien and bear a strong communistic flavor.

It need not surprise one to read of instances in the daily papers wherein college students have transgressed the law. In fact, as has been brought out in testimony during a sensational murder trial in Chicago involving two super-educated youths, both atheists, why should civil and moral law be observed when according to the doctrines disseminated through atheistic circles there is no God, and man-made law may be violated with impunity?

It is not the purpose of this comment to criticize the curricula or methods obtaining in the institutions of higher learning. However, it must be conceded that thousands of young men and women, whose minds are still in the plastic stage, whose natures are impressionistic and easily influenced, are receiving their training in these educational institutions. The problem that must be solved by the deans and members of the faculties is: Does the so-called science that is being taught in universities of higher learning, which science, as Miss Sapkowitz claims, clearly proves to her that there is no God, insure a citizenship that will be a distinct credit to this nation, or will it be responsible for a continued increase in crime and misdemeanor? Shall these societies of atheists be permitted to continue with the sanction of college authorities, or shall it become necessary for aroused public opinion to take drastic measures in discouraging this all too apparent evil? A tree is known by its fruits, and the results of atheistic teachings do not reflect credit upon those responsible for this type of alleged "culture."

And you—O you, who so wildly yearn,
For the old-time step and the glad return;
Think of her faring on, as dear
In the love of there as the love of here;
Think of her still as the same, I say;
She is not dead—she is just away.

Where Trained Leaders Are Required

Leadership in church and religious affairs is as essential as in other fields of work. Nobody questions the fact that an alert and progressive directing head means new life and enterprise in a community's schools, or that the same type of general manager means a prosperous business corporation. But sometimes the point is overlooked that the religious activity of a community or of a single church is determined almost wholly by the degree of ability displayed by a minister or group of ministers.

The need of leadership in the rural churches of America repeatedly has been stressed. Attention recently was directed to the situation by Doctor M. A. Dawber of the home mission board, Methodist Episcopal Church. Doctor Dawber declared that, due to a lack of well-trained ministers, many country churches were closing their doors. In pointing to conditions that demand a high type of leadership, he said:

"In spite of the exodus from country to city, there are large numbers of high school and college graduates returning to make up a generation hitherto unknown in country life. To expect to hold this new generation with a ministry that has made little advance in educational standards is to ignore a present peril."

The importance of good schools in rural districts has been pretty generally recognized. In most of the States, consolidated schools of a modern type have been established, and calls have been made for better prepared teachers and higher standards of training. The church is a factor equally vital with the school in community welfare. Where religious development fails to keep pace with educational advances or with other forms of progress, a serious condition is certain to arise.—Kansas City Star, December 6, 1926.

United States Catholics Total 19,483,296

Roman Catholic population in the United States during the last year shows an increase of 684,574 over the population the year preceding, according to the official Catholic directory for 1927, published by Kennedy & Sons, which appeared Sunday. There are 19,483,296 Roman Catholics in the United States according to the directory.—From Daily Press dispatches of April 25.

NEWS AND LETTERS

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

May 3.—The activities of the branch for the month of April were ushered in on the evening of April 1 with an April fool social. This was indeed a novel social, one in which everyone was expected to do everything just the opposite from the way it should be done. It was entitled a "backward" party. The individual notices and invitations sent out were written backward, so that they had to be held before the mirror before they could be read. Sister Luella Shippy, chairman of the Religio committee sponsoring the party, sent out the invitations and received only one criticism, a humorous little rhyme outlining the nature of the backward party and describing the predicament in which one finds himself who has to do just the thing he does not want to do and to say the opposite of what he expects to say. This was read to the guests.

A very enjoyable evening was spent playing games of different kinds, after which dinner was served, the menu in the following order: toothpicks, napkins, ice cream; cakes, sandwiches, soup de bouillon (I presume they thought this was as near fool soup as could be made). Nearly fifty attended this gathering.

On Sunday, April 3, our regular sacramental service was held in charge of Pastor R. E. Cowden, assisted by Elder C. J. Cady and Priests L. E. Harris and H. V. Bates. A good spiritual meeting was had.

The old people's class was on the program at the Religio in the evening. Their part was to act a charade taken from the Bible. It proved to be a sort of pantomime, representing Moses leading the children of Israel out of Egypt. This was carried out by Moses smiting the Red Sea and leading them through, and then quieting their murmurings by feeding them leeks and onions, which apparently came down from heaven. He smote the rock from which water gushed and quenched their thirst, they seeming to be nearly famished; after they were revived, Moses led them on behind the mountain, where they disappeared. Moses, with his long white hair and beard, was typical of leaders of Bible days.

On the following Sunday Pastor R. E. Cowden was the morning speaker, his topic of discussion being "The pearl of great price." He gave us a splendid sermon, making his points plain and showing that in order to obtain the pearl of great price we shall have to keep the whole law, consecrating all that we have and are on the altar of sacrifice. Elder C. J. Cady preached the sermonet at Religio.

On Sunday, April 17, there was an Easter program by the Sunday school, young and old taking part. The entertainment was very pleasing, and the spirit present was manifested by a cheering influence. The children did well in their parts. Brother Cowden preached the Easter sermon, which was well received; he was assisted by Elder Cady and Brother H. V. Bates. Visitors from Oakland, Gilroy, and Irvington were present.

In the evening there was a soul-cheering cantata, rendered by the choir with some outside help. The title of this production was "The light everlasting." Soloists were Mrs. Cleo Smith, soprano; Mr. Eugene Mancini, tenor; Mr. Oscar Bradley, bass; Mrs. Ruth Bradley was the director; Miss Lena Christopher presided at the piano.

On Thursday evening, April 21, the organ booster club rendered another operetta entitled "The gypsy rover." This performance was presented at the Old Scottish Rite Temple. The club members worked very hard on their parts and put on a good performance. They were rewarded with a good audience. Mrs. Oscar Bradley was the leader, and Miss Lena Christopher presided at the piano. They realized something over fifty dollars for their fund. They plan to present this effort again on May 17 at the Pala School, about four miles from San Jose.

On April 24 the elders were called to administer to our young sister, Mabel Gilbert, who had been taken to the hospital to be operated upon for appendicitis. The doctor said it was a very serious case, as the appendix had burst. She was administered to before the operation and passed through the ordeal safely. At the present time she is getting along nicely. The other sick folks mentioned in our last letter seem to be improving.

The Saints here are rejoiced over the news of the splendid spiritual conference held in Independence in April. As we read the Daily Herald there were some of us at least who sensed the spirit of the conference away out here, and it caused tears of joy to flow from our eyes as the Spirit witnessed to us here just as it did to the Saints assembled there.

For the benefit of Saints and friends passing through San Jose, who would like to know the location of the church here, we are giving the following information: The church is located at the northeast corner of Spencer Avenue and Brant Streets, one and one quarter miles southwest of the Bank of Italy. Take any street car at the Southern Pacific depot, going south on First Street; transfer at San Fernando to the Delmas and Willows car going west; get off at Grant Street, and go one block east.

Sacramento, California

Corner Twenty-fourth and Kay Streets

Brother Earl R. Curry and family, of Lincoln, met with us one Sunday evening in April. He, holding the office of priest, was invited to speak for us, and gave us an able discourse on "Super-faith, the means of accomplishing our Zionie ideals." This young brother holds an important position with a large pottery manufacturing concern, and he and family have assisted in missionary efforts in Lincoln. Now a small branch is located there, drawing its membership from other nearby towns. The word idola, meaning a world of ideas and ideals, used in his evening's sermon, was later chosen as the name for the newly organized second senior class in our Sunday school. This group, numbering thirty-four, is composed of members over twenty-four years of age, young married couples, parents, and others. Its organization includes: Edwin C. Burdick, president; John B. Dawson, vice president; Bertha A. Austin, secretary; Hazel Blohm, teacher; J. Arlie Austin, assistant teacher. The Idolas meet monthly for a brief business session, one hour studying the Teacher Training Course from the Departments at Graceland College, and refreshments. A fine group spirit is being fostered and some splendid accomplishments undertaken. Some in this group are Sunday school officers and teachers, so they can only join in the monthly meetings. The personnel of five officers prepare the senior Sunday school lesson, so that on short notice, if occasion requires, as has happened a few times, the next succeeding teacher or officer teaches the class. A keener interest is being taken in the lessons, and all enjoy the lesson hour.

At their last business session, late in April, they voted to raise one hundred dollars of the Sunday school's two hundred dollar allotment of the Christmas offering, after reading of the same in the Conference Daily Herald. Each member is to fill a thirty-day "dime-a-day card" and turn in each page as filled, the cards being available at a local bank.

The members of the intermediate class, with Fred A. Taylor, teacher, early in the year pledged themselves to raise twenty-five dollars. They number only seven and already have their fund well started.

The third senior class, with Elder T. J. Lawn, teacher, has chosen the name "Alpha," signifying that they were the first or charter members here; and a few were indeed charter members of the branch.

Easter was fittingly observed here with special music by the choir and orchestra, floral decorations, and sermons by the pastor, Elder W. H. Dawson. The attendance at both Sunday school and church, of one hundred thirty-four, well filled our chapel.

This week, May 1 to 8, being music week, the orchestra gave a half hour of music during the program hour at the Department of Recreation and Expression last Sunday, with Brother E. C. Burdick, leader. The choir will give a half hour next Sunday, with Sister C. A. Clark, chorister. These programs were listed in the local papers and also included in the Music Week Bulletin printed and widely distributed by the Civic Music Committee.

Sacramental service found eighty-four present, and was a good meeting.

We are expecting Elder G. P. Levitt home from the General Conference to speak for us on Mothers' Day.

One of our number was taken when Brother Joseph A. Barr passed away suddenly at his home on March 28. He was a young man in business here, and a World War Veteran. He leaves a widow, Sister Florence Brooner Barr. Elders Levitt and Dawson officiated, the former preaching the funeral sermon, with the American Legion officers' ceremony at the cemetery.

Elder George H. Wixom was a visitor at our Wednesday prayer service this week, assisting in officiating, and gave us an interesting talk on the General Conference.

Our Department of Women, with Sister Geneva Beebe, superintendent, is making final plans for a bazaar this month. Their recent hard times party at the home of Sister Bertha Austin, netted over twenty-two dollars.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

A good representation attended the General Conference from this city, and so far as heard, all express themselves better satisfied with the understanding of the conditions of the church and its progress than for years. With a feeling of determination to overcome the obstacles that are now hindering the more rapid progress of the church, they have entered into this conference year's work. The sermon delivered here by Apostle Garver on the eve of the 24th of April, entered deeply into the hearts of the Saints, with the result to make them more determined to do their part.

A farewell for Brother and Sister Baldwin was had on the 22d, and an excellent time was enjoyed by those who knew of it and could be present. There seems to be nothing but regrets that they were not returned here another year, but with the recognition of others' gain their hearts are satisfied that it should be so. The blessings of heaven are sought for, that success may attend their efforts wherever they are.

On Easter the Saints enjoyed the day. The young people met for prayer in the morning, and the Spirit of God was enjoyed. The desire was expressed to show an appreciation for the great sacrifice of Jesus Christ by a closer walk with God, and a deeper consecration to his service. The cantata, "The Prince of Life," was rendered very effectively. Sisters Helen Anderson, the director, and Ruth Timm, the pianist, are to be commended for their patient efforts, and the success of their plans, assisted by the junior choir. There are several of our young who are willing to render what use is possible of their talents and ability to advance the work of the church, and there are several who have shown great ability to occupy in the various departments of the church. The demands of the work are increasing, giving an opportunity for all to occupy to the fullest extent. With these helpers so willingly helping in an effective way, the prospects are encouraging.

There have been several changes in the Religio, especially in the class work for the young, which has been thought would be an advantage.

The Department of Women held a mothers' and daughters' banquet Friday evening, the 6th, and from reports it was not only enjoyed but much social benefit will accrue from it. Sister M. A. Etzenhouser spent the time from Friday till over Sunday with the Saints, giving some very valuable information, and in her impressive way left them much benefited and encouraged.

On account of the action of the General Conference in forming one district out of what were the Fremont and the Pottawattamie Districts, there will be a conference for the purpose of completing the work of this new district and selecting its officers next Saturday. On the same day and following day there will be a ministerial conference of the Southern and Northeastern Nebraska Districts, Gallands Grove, Little Sioux, and the Southwestern Districts, in Iowa, having for its object to bring about a closer relation of the various church officers in quorum work, to further develop each one in his sphere of duty in the church.

There are some things which are trying the Saints; some are out of employment; some have the prospect of being out of employment soon; some are neglectful of duty; and some while in the church are not of the church, for they are opposing some of the things that God has by revelation made known as a part of his sacred work, and by his Spirit has given evidence is divine. The branch officials are moving cautiously, seeking to save the ones who are out of the way, and at the same time trying to remove the effect of such opposition, believing it wiser that mercy should have her perfect day. Some of those whose minds were at one time confused have returned, and the joy of the Saints has been measurably increased. With a desire that all shall see the error of their ways, we are patiently laboring, seeking the enlightening influence that they with joy may return to be one of us.

The encouragement of pleasant weather as a rule gives us pleasure and gratitude. While our hearts are made sad at the reports from other parts of this blessed land of Joseph where others are suffering from the destruction of the elements, they, the elements, are testifying of the restored gospel and the testimony of his servants.

Brother W. I. Fligg was with us on the first day of this month, and began a series of missionary services at the Belmont Mission on the 2d. With fair interest he is continuing to the present date, and with zeal is looking for other points where he can preach the gospel to the leading of souls to Christ. The Saints of this district are happy to have Brother Fligg to labor with us.

Dow City, Iowa

May 6.—Brother J. L. Butterworth occupied the pulpit at the morning hour April 10, his lesson theme being "Am I a soldier of the cross?" The young senior choir furnished the music.

A branch business meeting was held on the evening of April 10. Some important business was transacted.

Brother Fred Baber was the speaker at the morning hour of April 17. In the evening the Sunday school gave a very interesting and impressive pageant, "The gate ajar." The play was well rendered, and the church was filled to overflowing.

The next Sunday was junior service, Brother E. L. Edwards, of Pomeroy, Iowa, being the speaker. He gave a very interesting and instructive talk to the young people. We hope Brother Edwards will visit Dow City Branch oftener in the future than he has in the past.

The Saints here regret sincerely that Brother F. T. Mussell will be leaving this district this year, for we note from general appointments he has been changed to another field of labor. The members have appreciated his work in this place, but our loss will mean advancement for others, and we wish for him the blessings of the heavenly Master in his new field of labor.

The Saints were made sad by word that Brother Charles E. Butterworth was stricken with paralysis while driving his car the early part of last week. His condition is slightly improved; he has regained consciousness but is unable to speak. Brother Butterworth's work as a missionary is widely known, for he has been in the work many years.

The Sunday school superintendent, Brother E. B. Justice, was on the sick list last Sunday.

The Sunday school has fair attendance, but we would like to see a steady increase in membership.

The young members are planning a Mothers' Day program.

Denison, Iowa

We feel thankful to be able to report the Denison Branch in a most thriving condition. The spirit of unity seems to be prevailing throughout the entire branch. There is a goodly number of Saints manifesting a desire to help carry on the work by their presence at each service and their willingness to do when called upon.

The sacramental services of late have been exceptionally good. It seemed the good Spirit was with us in power on the first Sunday of April, and scarcely a moment was allowed to go to waste.

On Easter morning the Sunday school favored us with a few special numbers.

Recently we have been privileged to hear some excellent sermons upon the building up of Zion. They have been delivered by the local priesthood, who also have talked upon many other subjects which have been beneficial to all.

We have an encouraging number of young in our branch worthy of commendation for their faithfulness and willingness to make use of the talents God has given them, and much interest is being taken to develop them along the musical line. A fine orchestra has been organized under the leadership of Sister Cruzan, and good is being accomplished. Truly, "God is marshaling his army for the rescue of his truth; he is calling now to battle both the aged and the youth." May the youth throughout the church waken to their duty.

We regret that Brother F. T. Mussell and Brother W. A. Smith have been called from our midst to other fields of labor, but feel we can hear them say, "I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord." May God bless them in their new fields.

We wish to report the marriage of our branch president, Warren G. Oliver, to Sister Edith Messenbrink on March 21, and while Brother Oliver did not obtain the voice of the branch upon this action, it met with favor, and all extend congratulations to them for a long and happy wedded life. The ceremony was pronounced by Brother Loyd Winnans in the presence of a few immediate relatives and friends. Brother and Sister William McCord acted as best man and matron of honor. Brother and Sister Oliver were the recipients of many useful presents. They were visited by the charivari crowd seven times. They are at home to their many friends on Jefferson Street.

In the school musical lately held at Denison our branch was represented, and a few of the young Saints walked away with the honors, taking first and second prizes in singing contests. They were as follows: Denison High School, Lois Winnans, second; Denison primary, Fanchian Winnans, Maynard Newcome, first in group singing; and Ila Allen, first in primary group singing; Geraldine and Bettie Baber second.

Sister Ward Johnson went to Nebraska for a visit of four or five weeks with relatives. Sister Johnson is one of our most faithful workers and will be greatly missed.

Sister Carl Hansen underwent a serious operation, but we are glad to report she is convalescing and is now able to be at her home. Sister Min McCord has suffered another severe attack of gallstones. Of late an epidemic of flu, a few cases of mumps, and one case of whooping cough have been reported in the branch, but at this writing all are on the road to rapid recovery.

Newton, Iowa

On Wednesday night, April 20, a prayer service was held at Sister Marie Ackelsen's home, 924 North Third Avenue, East, in charge of Bishop E. O. Clark and Elder C. E. McDonald. A few earnest Saints expressed their heart's desire in song, prayer, and testimony at this hour, which was the forerunner of two weeks and a half of meetings in the interest of the doctrine of stewardships and Zion.

On Thursday night Brother McDonald spoke on the subject, "Individual preparation for Zion." Brother Clark then continued the services over Sunday, using charts of his own drawing to aid in making his message clear. These are very comprehensive and may be made available to the general ministry.

Sunday services were held in the Trades' Assembly Hall, under the Purity Bakery, with a good attendance. Some Saints who had been living in Newton for a year without having come in contact with other members of the church, came out and were overjoyed to know that the church was represented in Newton by others than their own family.

Cottage meetings continued the following week. Bishop Clark preached on Monday and Tuesday nights and Elder McDonald on Wednesday. The following evening Brother and Sister W. L. Christy, on their way to their mission at Niagara Falls, stopped with us. The Saints assembled and enjoyed a splendid sermon as well as the songs so sweetly sung by Brother and Sister Christy. It was a treat thoroughly enjoyed by twenty-two Saints and friends. It was made known that Brother Christy had baptized some of those who were in attendance when he was a missionary in this district some years ago. They were invited, coaxed, cajoled, and entreated to stay another night, but plans for their itinerary were complete and included a stop at Rhodes, so we bade them Godspeed, and they left Friday morning.

Brother Clark continued the meetings over Sunday, administering the sacrament in the morning and preaching at night to an appreciative audience. He had to report for jury duty Monday morning, so Elder McDonald continued the meetings another week with good attendance and interest.

On Thursday night the services were held at the home of Sister A. G. Parrish on East Tenth Street, North. Twenty-nine attended, and after the preaching service all enjoyed recreation on the lawn. Refreshments were served by Sister Parrish. Several nonmembers attended this service.

Friday night concluded the series at the home of Mr. T. A. Finley, whose wife and daughter are members of a popular church but are investigating our message. They first heard the restored gospel from two elders of the Brighamite Church who made their home their headquarters while tracting the town during the past two years. The Finley family were converted to their doctrine, with the exception of polygamy and kindred evils, when Brother G. C. Duvall found them, and then followed the teaching of the true Latter Day Saint doctrine by Doctor G. F. Hull and others who labored locally in the vicinity. Thus the light of the true gospel of Christ began to shine upon them. Mrs. Finley is convinced of the truth of our message, and the daughter, Clela, is expecting to attend Graceland this fall. Mr. Finley is friendly and has opened his home to us for meeting at any time.

Brother Clark visited the homes of all the Saints while here and assisted in the filing of inventories and gave counsel to all. At the last service the Saints acted upon the suggestion of Brother McDonald, representing the district presidency, and elected Brother Harold E. Shippy, teacher, pastor of the group.

Brother Shippy has had considerable experience in church work, having served the Eastern Iowa District as superintendent of Sunday school, besides doing the work of his office in Oelwein Branch. He is a machinist at the Maytag Company. Sister Shippy was put in charge of the music. Their address is 501 North Ninth Avenue, East.

We feel that these meetings have laid the foundation for a good work and have helped the Saints obtain a better vision of their opportunities.

Brother D. M. Hall lives here. He is teaching agriculture in the Newton Schools, vocational guidance, and has charge of the Jasper County Pig Club. These duties do not prevent his teaching in the Sunday school, and much credit is due his faithfulness in keeping the work going in Newton.

Brother and Sister Duvall are in Fayette, Missouri, where he is employed by the Maytag Company in one of their stores. The work suffered for a time because Brother Duvall, the superintendent of the Sunday school, was away, but now another has been found who will take his place.

Sister Alta De Loveland has moved to Waterloo and will be identified with the branch at that place.

The Saints of Newton need the prayers of God's children that they may continue in the good work.

Brother Stephen Robinson, district superintendent of Religion, will preach at the home of Sister Ackelsen Tuesday night, May 17, and a social time will follow for the young people.

A special invitation is extended to the young people of the district who can do so to attend a banquet to be given at Runnells, Iowa, Tuesday evening, May 31. A good program is being planned, and all reservations should be made by May 29, with C. E. McDonald. Address him at Runnells, Iowa.

Sioux City, Iowa

610 Center Street

Easter has come and gone again, leaving with us a more vivid picture of those wonderful events leading up to and including the resurrection of our Lord and Savior. The day was observed in Sioux City with fitting services, both morning and evening. The morning service was devoted to a program in keeping with the day, along with a sermonet by Elder George M. Vandel. A goodly number of the Saints took advantage of the beautiful day and were in attendance to enjoy the service.

The evening service Easter Sunday consisted of special Easter music by the choir, along with a sermon by Elder Vandel, and was a fitting climax to the day's activities.

Our district conference was held at Missouri Valley April 22, 23, and 24, but owing to the unfavorable condition of the roads only a small number of the Sioux City Saints were able to attend, among the number being Sister Johnson, Elder C. J. Smith, and G. Scott Daniel and wife, who stopped off on their return from the General Conference.

The Sioux City Saints are glad to note that Brother Charles J. Smith, of Sioux City, was again returned as a missionary to our district and that Elder G. Scott Daniel was returned to Sioux City to act as pastor. Elder Marvin Fry, of Missouri Valley, was appointed to labor as a missionary in this district.

Brother Vandel was the speaker Sunday morning, April 24, and at the evening hour Brother G. Scott Daniel talked, giving a synopsis of the General Conference.

The sacramental service May 1 was well attended by the Saints, Brothers Daniel, Smith, and Fry, of Missouri Valley, presiding. Many of the young, along with the older ones, took part in the service, and the good Spirit which prevailed to a great extent was enjoyed by all. The increase in attendance at the Wednesday evening service is gratifying. Especially do we appreciate the goodly number of young people who are attending and taking part in the service.

Brother Marvin Fry was accompanied by Sister Fry, who will remain and visit for a time, while Brother Fry is doing missionary work in the Gallands Grove District in company with Elder C. J. Smith. Brother Fry, who is also District Sunday school superintendent, gave an interesting talk to the Sunday school and delivered the Sunday evening sermon to an attentive congregation. Sioux City will thus be honored by having Brother Fry begin his official missionary work in their little church at 610 Center Street.

We are glad to welcome to our midst Sister L. C. Colville and family, from Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Colville has accepted a position with the Sioux City Journal.

Brother J. E. Keck is at this time attending a meeting of the Iowa State Probation Officers Association, at Des Moines, Iowa, he being president of that body.

As special days offer such opportunities to reach the people of any community, we endeavored to celebrate Mothers' Day in a way that would cause a more proper appreciation of mother. The Temple Builders, who are always on the job doing their bit, tastefully decorated the church with beautiful flowers. The morning service consisted of special music by a chorus of mothers, along with a sermon by the pastor. The evening hour was occupied with a program furnished by the Temple Builders, which expressed in a very fitting way the spirit of the day. Although there was a storm accompanied by a downpour of rain in the late afternoon, the attendance was good. A substantial sum was realized in the offering that was taken, which amount will be turned over to the local Red Cross to be used in the Mississippi flood relief work.

All departments are trying to do their part in the building up of the work. Just recently the branch took action authorizing the coordination of all departments of the church in harmony with the general church plan. Each department has also taken action signifying its desire to function along this line. This means that after July 1, which is the beginning of our fiscal year, we will be more closely coordinated and have only the one treasurer who will handle all the finances. The work in a general sense is "Forward to 1930 and beyond."

Burlington, Iowa

12th and Locust Streets

May 11.—For some time an increased interest has been gradually growing up in the branch, and all departments are working in their places.

Since our last letter to the HERALD, Apostle D. T. Williams has been with us on two occasions and delivered some very interesting and constructive sermons.

On March 27, Dorothy Eloise, daughter of Brother and Sister H. F. Bromann, was blessed by Apostle D. T. Williams.

The resignation of Brother E. R. Williams as pastor of the branch took effect April 1, as Brother Williams expected to leave immediately for Beloit, Wisconsin, where he is making new business connections. On account of business affairs in Burlington, plans were altered, and he will now take up his new line of work with the Yates American Machine Company, May 9.

Under the direction of Sister Melva Weishaupt, a glee club has been organized and has been an asset to the branch, occasionally demonstrating its ability at meetings of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

We regret the absence of Sister Emma Bromann, who left for an extended visit to Honolulu, Hawaii, but on the other hand we are glad to hear she is enjoying her trip, and we know she will have much of interest to tell us when she returns.

Several informal dinners were given in honor of Brother Williams prior to his departure for Beloit, Wisconsin, one of which was at the home of Brother and Sister Burt Kunz, when later in the evening the "S" Chapter of Temple Builders successfully surprised him and his family. About forty jolly young people, the young women and their husbands and children, participated in playing games, after which refreshments were served. At the close, all sang "Blest be the tie that binds," as truly it does. The out-of-town guest was Brother Fred Schweers, of Independence, Missouri.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is taking a better hold than it has for some time, and we trust that the interest will continue to grow. Brother Burt Kunz is at its head. On April 11 this department held its regular monthly recreational program in the church parlors. Sister Melva Weishaupt was in charge of the program, which turned out to be a farewell for Brother E. R. Williams. Needless to say, Sister Weishaupt had a well-worked-out program for the occasion, when many Saints and friends gathered and expressed their appreciation for past services as well as regrets because of the parting. All immensely enjoyed the entertainment, which was sentimental as well as devotional. With the good will of such a devoted body, Brother Williams surely will make a success in his new line of business. As a token of their esteem, the branch presented him a Scheaffer lifetime fountain pen with his name on it in gold. Presentation remarks were made by Brother H. F. Bromann. Refreshments were served.

We are glad to have with us at the present Brother J. J. Jenkins and son, John, of Taylorville, Illinois. We are looking forward to the near future when we will be privileged to have the whole family with us again, after three years of absence during their residence in Taylorville.

Sister Minnie Duke was taken suddenly ill and operated on for appendicitis May 1. She is doing very nicely now. Sister Willey is steadily improving and sits up in her wheel chair again. For this we are thankful.

The choir after a period of silence has taken on new life, and it looks good to see every seat filled, and adds much to our Sunday services. It is encouraging to see so many of the young developing their talent along musical lines, and makes us comprehend more fully that "avenues for service are opening today." This effort is due in large part to the leadership of Sister Melva Weishaupt.

H. T. Bromann and G. E. Schweers are taking care of the work at present until we have the pleasure of having with us our new pastor, Brother Sorden and family, for whom we are looking with pleasant anticipation.

As a branch we are praying for the success of the great work which rests upon the church, and with the leaders of the church we are looking forward to 1930.

We invite all traveling Saints to our modern little church on the corner of Twelfth and Locust Streets.

Birmingham, Alabama

We have our Sunday school, regularly followed by a Doctrine and Covenants class. As our numbers are made up of the same ones each Sunday, we do not try to have preaching service, but we do try to have a prayer and testimony meeting following the sacramental service the first of each month.

Last fall there appeared two letters at intervals of one month apart from Birmingham, urging Saints who contemplate changing their place of residence to consider this place as a possible location. I received a half dozen letters from different ones inquiring about working conditions, etc. Conditions were such at the time that I could not make a satisfactory reply as to work. Work has been very slow all winter and is now. It is next to impossible to promise anyone work. That is something we cannot do, as conditions change very quickly sometimes, from good to poor. The invitation is always out to come join our numbers, but if any do so it must be entirely upon the individual's responsibility. What we want here is some more good, earnest, solid, and energetic workers who are not ashamed of what they believe and who desire to help.

We do not wish to make the impression that we have a branch here. We have a group organization. What effort we make here in church work is pioneering, and people here are not so favorable toward our belief as they might be, especially in the locality where our services are held, which is in a private home. At present we have nine or ten regular attendants. Others live here but do not attend.

We hope and pray for the time when our efforts will be coupled with those of some good, live missionary who can stay with us indefinitely and establish the work here.

Our morning services are held at 419 Fulton Avenue. Anyone coming to Birmingham or passing through will be welcome.

From Olive Branch

JONESPORT, MAINE, April 1.—It has been a long time since there has been any news from Olive Branch. Realizing there are many that have lived here, but are now making their homes elsewhere that would be pleased as they tear off the wrapper and open up the pages of this valuable paper to see the name "Jonesport," we thought to contribute something concerning what we are doing here.

In the early part of the fall, the branch president, W. E. Rogers, and Brother Wilson went by car to visit the Washburn Saints. They found them firm in the faith. They held services in their homes and administered the sacrament, for which they were very thankful.

In the last of December we held our annual church fair, which proved to be a perfect success "as usual," socially and financially. It was directed by the president, Sister Cora T. Rogers, and the presidents of the two auxiliaries, Sisters Florence Davis and Newman Wilson. These auxiliaries were organized in the eastern and western ends of the town to work evenings, and gave those who are employed through the day a chance to help. They proved very willing, all working for the same objective. We realized two hundred and fifty dollars.

In February we received a telegram from Brother M. H. Fisher, saying he would arrive in Jonesport accompanied by President F. M. Smith. Imagine how pleased and surprised we were! That was his first visit to Jonesport, but we are hoping it will not be his last. He preached to us every evening, teaching us many important things.

For the last four Sunday evenings, we have listened to some powerful sermons by Brother Wilson, treating upon subjects of vital interest to everyone living in this momentous age of the world. The house has been filled with people who seem very much interested. We have had special music, also an orchestra of six pieces, which proved a drawing card. One high school teacher requested a copy of the sermons, supposing they were written and placed on file. Others were heard to remark on leaving the house, "That is the best thing I ever heard from the pulpit." And so the work of God moves on. Brother Wilson will remain one more Sunday to finish his work, and the following Monday leave for the General Conference. We shall miss him, and hope the Spirit of God will attend him and bring him safely back to his little family and us.

The following are the four subjects: "Our present day social conditions." Is the world getting better or worse? "The Jews in the light of prophecy." God's chosen are returning to the Holy Land after an absence of 2,000 years. "Who is the American Indian?" The blood of old Israel is in his veins. What is his testimony? "The two sticks mentioned in the thirty-seventh chapter of Ezekiel's prophecy." The Bible is one. What is the other? What is the sealed book of Isaiah 29?

May 7.—Brother Wilson has attended the General Conference and has been returned to us for another year. While he was away the Sunday school rendered a fine Easter program. Our large auditorium was filled to its capacity.

On May 8 Brother Newman will begin a series of meetings for the young. He will use the following subjects: "The golden image of the plain"; "The church of our fathers"; "The faith of our fathers"; "The heritage of our youth." These will be attended by special music, solos, duets, and quartets, with Sister Wilson at the organ. We will observe Mothers' Day in the Sunday school and afternoon service. The church is very prettily decorated with ferns and flowers. Thanks to our young men and maidens for their services.

Our branch is in a very healthy condition, and under the efficient leadership of our worthy branch president and his staff of officers we expect to see it grow and take on new life this coming year.

New Albany, Indiana

May 10.—We are getting along fine in the good work, and all seem to be enjoying the activities: Sunday school at 9.30 every Sunday; preaching at 10.30; prayer meeting, Wednesday night; Religio, Friday evening.

With us on Tuesday night, the 3d, were O. J. Hawn and Sister Hawn. Brother Hawn preached his farewell sermon to us Tuesday night, and after the service we had refreshments, ice cream and cake. Following the refreshments we presented Brother and Sister Hawn a token of love, a lovely basket of roses, carnations, and lilies. We were all hopeful that we would get him back with us for another year. He has done a wonderful work here and at Indianapolis. He is a man who makes friends everywhere he goes, and he will be sorely missed here by the Saints, for to know him is to love him. We feel the vicinity to which he goes will be better because he is in it; and while it is our misfortune to lose him, it will be a blessing to those where he goes. He will meet with a warm reception any time he wishes to come back to us.

We do not want to forget to make mention of our good stand-bys, Brother E. A. Jeagers, of New Albany, and W. O. Robertson, of Louisville, Kentucky. They are with us permanently, and both are spiritual men and uplifting to the Saints. Without them we would be a flock without a shepherd. The Saints of New Albany extend best wishes to the Saints the world around for a year of advancement and progress.

G. S.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, May 9.—Our members are taking new courage in the work. In the past few months the Spirit has been with our people to such an extent that all are made to rejoice in the services. Superintendent Luther Crabtree, though living eighteen miles away, is, with the help of others, striving to increase the attendance at Sunday school, and all agree that things are progressing nicely.

On Sunday, May 1, seventy-eight souls were present at service which was encouraging to all. At 10.45 began the sacramental service, and the Spirit of the Master was present as his Saints partook of the emblems reminding them of his supreme sacrifice. It was good to be there. There were thirty-seven who partook of the sacrament. Branch President Ervin Pyles requested promptness in the bearing of testimonies, and there were twenty-eight in thirty minutes. Brother and Sister William Culp and Brother and Sister Richard Shope and others, of McDermott, were with us at this meeting. We are glad and encouraged when other Saints are with us.

We were made to rejoice on May 7 when Elder Floyd Rockwell, wife and two sons, of Dayton, Ohio, came into our midst. Brother Rockwell preached to us, using for a text Matthew 1:21, making his statements so plain that nearly all could understand. At this meeting the house was filled almost to capacity.

On Sunday, the 8th, in spite of the heavy fall of rain, at our Sunday school hour, 9.30, there were seventy present. This looks encouraging, especially to the officers and teachers of the department. Here we wish to mention the good work being done by the teachers. They are striving hard to make the lessons so plain that all in the class may understand and learn. At this service Brother and Sister F. May, of Dayton, were present, and at the close of the lesson study Brother May was called upon to give a talk. His words were encouraging. Instead of our usual prayer service at a quarter till eleven, Brother May occupied the pulpit. He and Elder Pyles administered to two sick babies and blessed the daughter of Brother and Sister Pyles. Then Brother May preached to a large audience, using for the basis of his remarks Luke 10:25: "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" We pray God's blessings on such servants as Brother May, and hope they will return in the near future.

We are looking forward to the second Sunday in June to our Children's Day program and all-day meeting, which we feel will be a spiritual feast.

At present Sister Rosie Pollock is in very poor health. Her services are greatly missed, for she is the teacher of the Willing Worker Class.

From Indianapolis, the Hoosier Capital

Corner of Pratt Street and Chester Avenue

Patriarch Frederick A. Smith spent a few days with us just preceding the General Conference, and delivered some very interesting and instructive sermons. Some of our members availed themselves of this opportunity to receive their patriarchal blessing.

Nine members of our little branch were permitted to be present and enjoy at least a portion of the late General Conference, some being present at all its business sessions. And we certainly feel encouraged with the progress made during the past year and are optimistic and hopeful for the future.

Elder Jacob Halb occupied the pulpit at both morning and evening services, April 24, giving us good counsel and instruction from the word of the Lord. Brother Halb was returning to his field in Southern Ohio, and stopped to lend us a helping hand, Southern Indiana being the field of his first missionary labors. Call again, Brother Jacob.

Elder O. J. Hawn, our former pastor, and Sister Hawn spent a week with us the latter part of April, leaving to visit the Saints at Byrneville, where they held a successful missionary effort last fall; from there they will go to their new field of labor in Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District. On Friday evening, April 29, the Saints and friends met them at the church to bid them Godspeed on their journey and to present them a token of appreciation for their labors while with us. Our best wishes go with them.

On Sunday, April 24, Brother Jack Naisbitt, of Salt Lake City, worshipped with us; and a week later Saints from Middletown, Ohio, were with us. We are always glad to receive visitors, and they will find a welcome at our church home, corner of Pratt Street and Chester Avenue. Traveling elders, please put that address in your notebooks.

Our new missionary, Elder Jasper O. Dutton, arrived in our city May 5, in time to see our Department of Women at work, the occasion being a lecture at the church by Doctor Howard B. Mettle, of our city's health department, on the prevention of disease, a topic of vital interest to every good American citizen. This was a successful meeting, and was sponsored by our Department of Women.

Brother Dutton gave us two fine, instructive sermons on Sunday, May 8, the morning hour being appropriately commemorative of Mothers' Day. Brother Dutton and Pastor Robinson, assisted by members of the local priesthood, are conducting a systematic tracting campaign in the neighborhood of our church home, inviting the people to attend the series of meetings being held by our brother, which commenced the evening of May 10. We are hopeful that success may crown our efforts.

"Easter Dawn" in England

We presented "Easter dawn" on Easter Sunday evening, which was a great success, and brought us in contact with a great number of people we might never have otherwise met; and we hope good will be the result of our effort. We had about two hundred and sixty present, and all thoroughly enjoyed it.

ARTHUR SMITH.

WIGAN, LANCASHIRE, ENGLAND, 35 Greenough Street.

Sherrill, New York

We were locally encouraged by the institute sessions held here in March with District President Weeger, of Buffalo, and District Missionary W. L. Christy in charge.

On Sunday there were some visitors from Syracuse and Fulton. Sister Weegar and Sister Anna Landes were also with us. The urgent needs of the work locally and at large were discussed, and we were reminded that there is no royal road to success. It means constant attention to business. Many worth-while thoughts were brought out. Considerable time was devoted to talk on tithing, offerings, and inventories. Doctor Weegar always gives us something to think about. His good wife told us during the Sunday school hour Sunday morning of her work in their local school, which confirmed us in the idea that we have not begun to utilize the Sunday school as well as we may in the district. In our local, according to our membership, our attendance is very good. Our young people's class has advanced to senior work, so we have at present one lone youngster and the rest of the school seniors.

At the institute the sacramental service was held in the afternoon, and a good meeting enjoyed. This was preceded by a priesthood meeting in the little upper room. We can not vouch for that meeting, but feel, as has been suggested, the priesthood must fall into line and attend to their duties very faithfully before the body can be in the best condition possible. It can not be otherwise.

The dinner was served in the basement by two of our good men and true, neither yet a member of the church. They are Mr. Comfort and Mr. Dunn.

We were very sorry to have to do without Sister Christy, for we had counted on her earlier, but Brother Christy did pretty well trying to do her work as well as his. He remained over and preached for us three evenings through the week. A fair crowd turned out, and we had some fine sermons. We were glad to have him with us with his willing assistance.

Sister Ada Davison, our district chorister, ably assisted in the music during the institute, and she also came from Syracuse for two of our three services through the week and for all day the following Sunday.

When in the morning Elder Christy addressed the Masons, they spoke in the highest terms of his sermon and suggested we invite them again. His last service on Sunday night was well attended, and we regretted his having to leave us. We are glad to learn that he and his wife are returned to us this year.

We have kept the work going at about the same pace, having our two preaching services on Sunday, Sunday school, and study hour at 6.30 p. m. At this hour we follow the outline in the quarterly, "The Book of Mormon; Is it necessary?" Our Wednesday night meetings are quite well attended.

We have had two pleasant evenings of late, one when we surprised Sister Zetta Montgomery on the occasion of her birthday in April; the other when we gave a party to Miss Peggy Kent, a girl from across, who is finishing a nurse's course. We presented her a ring and think the occasion will be a bright spot in her life.

Returning from General Conference, Brother and Sister E. L. Traver, of Boston, made us a call. We were disappointed that they could not stay over and tell us more about conference at church next day. We followed the daily proceedings of the conference, and were pleased with results and the apparent hopefulness for a splendid year ahead.

Brother George Robley stopped in Sherrill, going to conference, and made us a longer visit on his return trip. He gave us some excellent sermons the two Sundays he was here. Brother Mesle was out of town on business.

Our nurse, Sister Esther Montgomery, is in New York now engaged in hospital work at Valhalla. We often wish back with us the various members who have moved away.

Our pastor spoke on the Sixth Word at the Good Friday service at the Episcopal Church. He met as usual with the Ministerial Association last month, and it being his turn to furnish the paper, he wrote on the Book of Mormon. It was received in a very friendly spirit, and he was thanked for his effort and the information it conveyed. One year ago he read a lengthy paper on faith, which later appeared in our missionary paper, the Ensign.

We were in Syracuse yesterday. Brother Mesle was called there for administration to Brother George Whitehead, who was very much tried with neuritis. We found that Brother Morris, his son, is enough improved that he gets out to ride and walks some with the aid of crutches. He seems to be improving as well as can be expected after his many weeks in bed and in distress. We feel to give God thanks for hearing the prayers of the Saints in his behalf, and hope he may be very wise during his convalescence, that in due time he may be able to return to his work. We rejoice to see him improving as well as he is.

We called on Brother Jay Whitehead's in their lovely new home in East Syracuse. Then on we went to the Davison home, where we found Sister Ada and Sister Elsie Elms practicing for our coming district conference at Niagara. We were just in time to help Elsie to Manlius, where her brother was to meet her, she having missed her car from Mattydale to connect with her car for Manlius. She is very enthusiastic over the personnel of the group at Rochester for real, worth-while work, and having spent the winter there, she is able to judge.

As usual, this turns out to be a district letter rather than a recital of Sherrill accomplishments.

Last week we held a food sale at Sherrill Hardware and did well for the number there to do the work. Sister Comfort sold all her wares on her street before she could get to the place appointed.

Yesterday we had a nice Mothers' Day program, the pastor being assisted by four of the Sunday school pupils with readings and music.

Special Anniversary and Easter Services

NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO, May 9.—We have much to be thankful for since we have emerged from another long-drawn-out winter into the arms of another beautiful spring, when all nature is taking on new life. The trees and flowers giving forth their fragrance seem to purify the air about us. It impresses upon our minds the beautiful things God has in store for us. All the Saints seem to be well pleased with the peacefulness of the General Conference, also the spirit of unity that existed among those in attendance. There are many among us who would like to have been there, but while we were not there in person we were near in spirit; and we are looking forward to a time when there will be one big conference which we all will have a chance to attend. We are also looking into the future when we shall be permitted to live in peace, unmolested by the enemy. Our aim is Zion, and this aim we expect to keep constantly before us, praying that by the help of God's Spirit we may attain this high favor from him. God has never failed us in our petitions and never will so long as we go forth with faith.

The Saints here are all very much interested in the work; and God is blessing them. They assist in every way they can, that the good work may be carried on to perfection. God wants his work to be carried on by us, and he is willing to help us that it may be successful. With him we can not fail.

On April 3 we celebrated the anniversary of the organization of the church, a very interesting program being rendered by the Saints. Elder James Carlisle preached an instructive sermon on "The Restoration." One thing deserving particular mention was a song composed and sung by Sister Elsie Goudy, wife of the president of our branch. It was sung to the tune of "In the gloaming," and touched the hearts of all present. The verses follow:

We are gathered here this evening,
Come to honor and revere
One who was the Lord's anointed,
Chosen though so young in years.
So when April breezes whisper
Minds go back so tenderly,
To the boy who in the forest
Knelt and prayed beneath a tree;
Saw the vision in the heavens—
Was told of all that he should be.

Though a boy, he could be trusted
With a task he held so dear,
Bringing forth the angel's message,
Which is talked of, far and near.
It came forth in all its glory,
Came e'en down to you and me;
We received it, oh! so gladly,
Tidings rich and full and free;
'Twas the fullness of the gospel,
Prophets foretold that this should be.

Thus the silence of Cumorah
Yielded up a treasure rare,
The sealed record was translated
By inspiration and with prayer.
Scriptures teach that the stick of Joseph
And the stick of Judah, too,
Will, combined, convince the nations,
Both the Gentile and the Jew.
Truth eternal from the dust
Glad we sing thy praise anew.

Our Easter services were fine and well attended, being witnessed by the Spirit of the Lord. We had a sunrise service at 5.30 a. m. Twenty-five per cent of our membership was present. This was our first service of this kind, and we hope for a larger attendance next Easter. At 9 o'clock, I think I may say, we had the best Sunday school attendance in our district, one hundred and thirty-six being present. The offering amounted to ten dollars and thirty-three cents. Our young people are taking a greater interest in the Sunday school, and we hope they continue in this interest. Two o'clock marked the opening of an Easter cantata, presented by the young people, directed by Brother Samuel Mansel, of Dover, Ohio. There was a fine attendance of people to enjoy the program. Preaching by Elder Charles Cramer began at 7.30. He spoke on the subject, "The resurrection." This too was an attractive service.

April 24 we took up an offering for the flood sufferers in the South, whom we know are very much in need. We pray that God will care for and bless them in this hour of need and suffering.

Our weekly cottage prayer meetings at Uhrichsville are going along fine. We have some wonderful outpourings of the Spirit at these services.

An entertainment and social on Saturday, April 30, was attended by a goodly number. At this time a fine program was rendered by the young people, and all present were pleased.

Our May sacramental service was well attended. The day with its sunshine and warm breeze was most pleasing. Gathered at the Lord's table, the testimonies of the Saints were many and filled with the Spirit. At the evening services Brother James Carlisle spoke on "Authority."

May 8, Sunday, was Mothers' Day, and we were pleased to have with us Elder Harold Muir, of Pontiac, Michigan. At the social service Brother Muir gave a fervent exhortation, using as the basis the word consecration. A Mothers' Day program was presented in the evening.

While the Lord is blessing us in many ways, we feel there is still much in store for us. Let us work together; let us put forth the effort, and God will bless us. There is no greater honor than to be an instrument in God's hands, leading men and women into the light and liberty of the everlasting gospel.

I have this motto in my Bible, and I commend it to you:

"Do all the good you can,
To all the people you can,
In all the ways you can,
And as long as ever you can."

If each of us will at once set about some work for God and keep continuously at it the whole of each year, a great deal will be accomplished. Let us live that it may be truthfully said of us, We have done what we could as well as we could.

ROBERT E. MASON.

Graceland Chats

Engineer Trip

The Graceland Engineers' Club recently had an interesting trip. The club is made up of pre-engineering students, nine in number. Under the supervision of Mr. Roy Mortimore, the club left Lamoni on May 6 and returned on May 9. They visited Keokuk, Iowa, for the purpose of inspecting and studying the dam and power plant there. They visited Nauvoo, Illinois, also. Specimens of geodes formations were secured for the geology department of the college.

The group camped out during the trip. They feel that it was a worth-while one, in many ways.

"Good English" at Graceland

In accordance with the plan for bettering the use of our national tongue, last week was set aside as Good English Week and was observed as such.

In Monday chapel plans were made for the week. Each student was given several tags by which to mark anyone guilty of grammatical error. As a consequence of this, the majority of the student body was quite well bedecked with colors during the week. During class recitation periods, class critics were chosen to correct all errors made. Each English student made a "Good English" poster and wrote a poem on the same subject.

Friday chapel was the climax of the week. Stunts were given by each class and by the faculty, and awards were made. The freshmen presented "Sauce for the goslings," a play in which the parents of a family cleverly eliminated the use of slang in that family by demonstrating the vulgarity of it. The academy stunt gave a method of ridding our campus of slang. A clever machine was presented by James Briggs, of the sophomore class, showing an ideal way of attaining good speech quickly. Esther Roberts, in behalf of the faculty, gave a reading telling how she had canned the line of slang that she had been pulling on unprotected people, and was properly corrected by Professor Bergman, who in a sophisticated way held her to say rather that "she had abandoned the use of all inelegant and unauthorized words." Last, but not least, was the trial of Harley Lorange for the murder of the King's English, which resulted in a verdict of "guilty," and a sentence to "recite one stanza of Rabi Ben Ezra." A small honor roll, consisting of all who had not been tagged during the week, was read. Winning posters by Harley Lorange and Earl Higdon were shown, and winning poems by Ferne Wilson and Gertrude White were read. Miss Lewers announced that in a grammar test given to the entire school, the Victorians had ranked highest and would be presented with a banner.

The common opinion is that, while not quite all of our errors have been eliminated, the student body has become speech-conscious, and for that reason the week has been a success.

Graceland Museum

A little-known department of the college is the Museum. The specimens which comprise it have been contributed by many persons who have been interested both in articles of historical worth and in placing them where they are cared for and are of good to large numbers. The displays consist of collections of coins and scrip, early books and manuscripts, relics of races of peoples, specimens of ethnology, anthropology, zoology, and mineralogy. These specimens are kept in cases, are classified, and labeled with the name of the contributor. Worthy of special mention are the collections of Indian relics; those from the South Sea Islands, contributed by Mrs. Devore; and from the Philippines, contributed by President G. N. Briggs.

In connection with the Museum is an herbarium of many hundred mounted and classified specimens. At present, facilities for displaying the collections are limited. We look forward to the time when adequate room will enable us to maintain a museum room. Until such time, all specimens will be carefully kept. Contributions to the Museum are greatly appreciated. We are working toward a real museum.

Modesto, California

May 2.—Our good prayer meetings are the life of the branch, for there each gathers strength.

On Easter Sunday "The gate ajar," was given by the Sunday school at the evening church hour. It was beautiful, and all the young people took their parts splendidly. We wish the church would publish more such plays.

At present there are a number in our branch who are sick. On April 19 an old-time Saint, Sister Arvilla Prothero, was laid to rest beside her husband, James Prothero, who preceded her some ten years. Sister Prothero was firm in the faith till the last.

Sister L. B. Rose, who has been visiting her sister in Idaho during the winter, returned and is welcomed home by all.

The departments are moving along nicely. The winter has been mild and lovely, the spring is about over, and all are looking ahead to and talking of the coming reunion where a good and profitable time is expected.
