Including the workers' training groups and Yemenite quarters in the older Jewish villages, the total number of Jews on the land assisted by Keren Hayesod comes to some 6,500, or more than one-fifth of the Jewish rural population.

More than one half of the members of the Kvuzot are between 25 and 29 years of age and have lived continuously in the respective groups since their establishment.

The 41 settlements in question cover an area of almost 100,000 dunams (25,000 acres). Five years ago, only 16,700 dunams were under cultivation by Haluzim. Almost 70,000 dunams, or 70 per cent are devoted to the growing of cereals, legumes, and vegetables, while 95 per cent, or over 9,000 dunams, are devoted to fruit plantations and shade trees. Over 9,000 dunams lay fallow last year, while over 7,000 had not yet been brought under cultivation. More than 2,000 dunams of these lands serve as sites for houses and farm buildings.

The principal crops are wheat, barley, oats, and maize, barley giving the best yield per dunam and wheat the next best.

The census shows that there were 3,116 head of cattle in these settlements, of which 2,241 were thoroughbred or crossbreeds of Damascus, Beirut, Dutch and German stock, while only 875 were native. The working animals numbered 987. There were 38,715 heads of poultry and 887 beehives.

The Kvuzot have 401 buildings, most of them large, while the Moshavim have 1,635 buildings of the size required by the individual farms. The total of 2,036 structures includes 237 dwelling houses of stone, concrete, or brick, and 452 stables of same materials.

The machines and agricultural instruments are 3,390 in number, including 43 tractors and motors, 21 large threshing machines, 716 European plows, 309 harrows, and 202 reapers.

For every thousand dunams in the Kvuzot, the statistical tables show an average of 49 persons, 288 heads of cattle, 9 working animals, 25 heads of poultry, and 360 agricultural implements. For every thousand dunams in the Moshavim, there is an average of 57 persons, 47 heads of cattle, 14 working animals, 675 heads of poultry, and 500 agricultural instruments.—The Palestine Bulletin, January 12, 1927.

Paying for Service

The total cost of government in the United States, according to the National Industrial Conference Board, in 1925 amounted to $11,124,000,000. In 1913 it was only $2,919,000,000. Per capita in 1925 this amounted to $96.41 as against a comparable $30.24 in 1913, but reducing the 1925 per capita to a comparable 1913 dollar value, the 1925 unit would be $57.17, almost twice the expenditure of the last pre-war year. These figures are given by the board, and are generally quoted to indicate an ominous increase in the cost of government, a dangerous tendency that must be curbed. Probably this is true, but there is another side of the picture. It is that this $96.41 is divided into $32.63 for the Federal Government; $13.26 for the States; and $50.52 for the local governments. More than half of the money, therefore, is going to the towns, cities, and counties. This is direct service, at least much more direct than that given by the States or by the Nation. This money goes for schools, for streets, and township roads, for garbage collection and sewage disposal, for police and for fire protection. Doubtless there are economies to be made in these expenditures, but when they are made they should be balanced against the need of the services. These services are not the intangibles that the unregenerate cry out against; these are not the chairwarmers or the scientists or the snoopers of Washington; they are the life and living of our communities. These communities are becoming better places to live in every year, and their inhabitants are continually demanding better services. If they are getting these improvements, they should be willing to pay for them and to remember when they deplore the overwhelming increase in cost of government just how much of that increase is due to the things they are demanding and are getting. Expenditure is not necessarily waste. —Engineering News-Record, June 9, 1927, page 932.

The New Terror in Russia

The Soviet Government has resorted again to terrorism. This is a fact remarkable enough in itself, but what is more remarkable is that the Soviet has not hushed up its brutality, as it has done on several occasions since the early days of regular massacre, but has advertised it and explained it. The local authorities all over Russia, for instance, have been informed that it was necessary to prevent the counter-revolutionary work of Great Britain and other "Imperialistic" Powers from going further. And so twenty aristocrats and former landowners and persons known to have sympathized with monarchy and with "Imperialistic" foreign countries have been hauled out of prison and shot without trial. The ignorant peasants may, of course, fall to the argument that when the aristocrats, or men who once had the audacity to own land, have been murdered, the proletariat is well rid of a few more of its natural enemies. But we doubt it. It seems rather that the Russian people as a whole have been disturbed and shocked by the fresh outburst of murder, and are much less concerned with the disappearance of a few "reactionaries" than with the new reminder that nobody is safe who is heard to utter a word in criticism of the Soviet.

To English minds it is inconceivable that the Soviet rulers can really believe what they say. M. Voikoff is assassinated by an unbalanced youth at Warsaw. Thereupon the Soviet accuses Poland of having regularly and maliciously harbored enemies of the Russian revolution, and demands that all these enemies shall be expelled from Poland and that the Soviet shall be informed as quickly as possible that this has been done. What the Soviet really requires is that Poland should feebly repudiate her right to give asylum to refugees. There may be plots in Warsaw against the Russian revolutionary authorities as there may be in other great capitals in the world, but it is almost impossible to trace these things. It is certain that if the Polish Government became aware of anti-Russian intrigues they would suppress them, for the very good reason that nobody would stand to be embarrassed more by such intrigues than Poland herself. The only government in the world, so far as we know, which unceasingly schemes to undermine the governments of other nations, is the Soviet itself.

In a long note to Poland the Soviet narrates a string of atrocious deeds against the Russian State, and has the effrontery to declare that Great Britain was behind them all. The fact that British metal was found in a bomb used in Russia is enough for the authors of these whirling accusations to charge the British Government with having ordered the assassination of Soviet agents. All this is a miserable excuse for reviving the functions of the infamous Cheka under its new name of OGPU. The twenty prisoners executed last week probably had not even heard of the Warsaw assassination. This week eleven more have been executed. Of the twenty, perhaps the best known was Prince Dolgurokoff. He had lived in England for some years. Under the old regime he was a politician of liberal sympathies. No doubt he has always hated communism, but his only crime seems to have been that he smuggled himself back into Russia by way of Rumania because he was filled with a longing to see his country again.

In a communication to the press, Sir Robert Hodgson, who was British diplomatic representative in Moscow before the recent breach, has pointed out the absurdity of the Soviet accusation that four of the twenty prisoners executed were spies in British employ. Sir Robert explains that the British mission in Moscow were extremely careful not to cultivate any friendship that could possibly be misunderstood. They knew only too well what danger threatened any man or woman who was seen consorting with the members of the mission. Accordingly the mission lived in a self-denying seclusion. Even that precaution, however, has not prevented the present grotesque charges. For instance, Sir Robert obtained employment for a Russian with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, in Moscow. The unhappy man was accused of acting as a spy for Great Britain for no other reason than that he was paid by British subjects. He was arrested and shot. A maid servant at the British mission was threatened with imprisonment for life unless she consented to act as informer on the mission. She was also threatened with death if she revealed the fact that she had been requested to become an informer. As Sir Robert justly says, "information supplied by agents recruited in this manner is entirely valueless."

The abominable distortions of which the Soviet is guilty are just such effects as we feared might flow from the expulsion of the Russian officials from London. It is true that the Russian pretext for resentment is absolutely false, but it is none the less a pretext. Harm rather than good will come of what the British Government intended to be an act of righteous indignation, if in the present Russian frenzy the extremists overpower the moderates, whose position had been improving.

The new terror professes to come of conviction, but it is, of course, the result of panic. When a Slav revolutionary turns to murder, he does so with less hesitation than was characteristic of the French revolutionaries. Danton had been driven by the logic of his own words and by circumstances into utter impasse before he could bring himself to sanction massacre. His subsequent boasts about the massacre were certainly caused by the knowledge that he could not in any case escape the responsibility. Robespierre was terribly deliberate in his cruelty, but he, again, was at the very end of his expedients when he gave the word. The new terror in Russia is a small matter compared with the slaughter of 1918 and 1919, but the Bolshevists among them have been responsible for a far greater number of deaths than Robespierre and Saint-Just ever dreamed of.

The only consolation is that terrorism can not last indefinitely. Because it is a kind of desperation, it heralds a change. The French Terror led straight to the rise of Napoleon. Probably there is not a Napoleon lying in wait in Russia, but there are countless Russians who loath murder, and they will help the first manifestations of change to become a transformation when the time comes. Words, however idealistic, are a poor covering for cruelty. Was it not Metternich who exclaimed, in regard to the horrors of the French Revolution, committed under the motto of "Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité," that if a Frenchman called him his brother, he would insist that he was only a cousin? When tyrants publicly attribute the frustration of their desires to a want of rigor, they are really advertising for their successors.—The Spectator (London), June 18, 1927.

One thing that Christ taught seems hard for us to practice, and that is concerning judging others. Some have said: "How can I help thinking certain things about those I come in touch with?" Christ did not mean that we were not to exercise discernment. What Christ condemns is the habit of putting a bad construction upon what we do not understand. Too seldom do we judge others as we ourselves would be judged.—Mattie M. Boteler.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The Teacher and Officer Meeting for August

Last month we discussed the technique of teaching having its basis laid in an appeal to the interests of the child. This month we shall stress the means by which our teaching may be vitalized; how the truth we would teach may be made vivid, real, and lasting as a foundation for spiritual feeling and right action.

Theme: Making truth vivid.

Text: How to Teach Religion: Betts, Chapter Ten.

The child's religious training follows the same lines of thought, feeling, and action as any other phase of education. His progress in religious growth is evidenced by the grasp of his thought, the deepening of his emotions, and the strength of his will to choose the right. If we would have him develop power, we must train him to think his religion clearly in terms of its cost and worth. Its ideals must become so real and vital to him that he is readily loyal to them, and he gives himself gladly in their realization.

Since religion deals primarily with human feeling and activity, it must respond to the undeviating law of nature. Understanding, reason, and common sense should reign in the field of religion as in other fields of training, so far as we are given to know the truths of life.

Religious truth does not contradict sound reason, though it may appear to contradict some preconceived notions, some traditions, or some narrow thinking. Nor shall we assume that all truth has been discovered by science and philosophy. An open-minded attitude will not draw hasty conclusions concerning either science or supposed revealed truth. True science and clearly understood revelation, both coming from the same source, must agree.

It is folly to maintain that the Bible is every word inspired; rather, we may safely assume that it "contains the word of God so far as it is translated correctly." Our deepest concern should be that the great laws of life portrayed in the teachings of the Bible shall be made vivid and vital in the lives of those we would teach. Our religious philosophy and idealism must be so true to life and so applicable to the present-day needs of humanity that our teaching challenges the best thought and effort of which our students are capable.

A chief concern in religious education is to furnish a background of information and experience from which shall emerge ideals and loyalties clear enough and strong enough to motivate conduct. Conduct moves surely in the line of the dominant imagery. One not only interprets new ideas, but he plans his action through the use of his imagination. The whole course of one's life is determined by the character of the pictures with which he stores his memory.

To make our teaching meaningful and effective, we must secure vivid and lasting impressions through our appeal to the imagination. This will be true in the use of a picture, a story, or a moral precept. Since the imagination of the child will be limited to the items of his past experience, we must recognize his limitations and appeal to his understanding through reference to familiar scenes, objects, and experiences.

We may build up his powers of comprehension and appreciation by the use of illustrative objects and through pictures.

We may stimulate the imagination by the use of vivid descriptions and thought-provoking questions.

Children delight in dramatization, or the acting out of a scene or a story. The setting, the events, and the emotions are clearly portrayed in action, thus exercising the imagination and deeply impressing the truth to be taught.

Often memory exercises are overworked in Sunday school.

Mere verbal memory concerning Bible characters, verses, and events have little if any value in motivating conduct. But if the characters become living heroes, the events have deep moral significance of human interest which the children can appreciate, and the verses learned are rich in their power of helpful suggestion; then memory work has a distinct place in our program.

Since we wish to store the memory with life experiences which may be drawn upon by the imagination in interpreting new experiences, in planning new activities, and in solving new problems, we shall do well to apply the following laws of memory to our effort:

1. Complete registration. Let the matter attempted be fully and completely memorized.
2. Multiple association. Develop as many closely related associations between the new idea and familiar past experience as possible, to make understanding certain and memory sure.
3. Vividness of impression. Memorize under the stimulus of high interest and keen attention. Call upon the imagination to make the picture and its associations vivid.
4. Repetition. The impressions must be deepened by being stamped again and again upon the mind. Review memorized material frequently to multiply its value and to insure permanence.
5. Wholes instead of parts. Experience teaches that material is best memorized in wholes when its unity and the relation of its parts may be clearly sensed.
6. Divided practice. After a reasonable effort at memorizing, there is a certain advantage in allowing a short time to elapse to permit the ripening of associations. Thus a series of consistent efforts will secure better results than intensive cramming.
7. Motivation. All human effort is best secured under the stimulus of some appealing motive. Interest in and love for the matter committed rank highest as motives, but approval of teachers and parents and the sense of achievement may also help.

Topics for Oral or Written Discussion:

1. Formulate arguments in favor of a religion which challenges one's thinking powers. Do our classes respond best to a lesson which requires personal thought and careful discrimination? How may we secure reverent thinking in our class work?
2. We think most intensively and persistently when we are trying to solve a real problem in life. Do you help your pupils think through their problem to a reasonable solution?
3. People invariably think upon topics which interest them. How may we direct our class work to stimulate constructive thinking?
4. Illustrate from experience the use of imagination in religious life. From what sources are our children deriving their conduct patterns?
5. Discuss the relative merits of various types of memory work in religious education. How will you direct memory work to make it function in conduct control?

REUNION NEWS

Eastern Montana Reunion

"How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!"

Eastern Montana district reunion is history which we shall all love to remember through the coming year. Another milestone to give the Saints courage, strength, a broader vision of the work of the redemption of Zion, and a higher standard set for everyday living, has been passed. One day at a time, one step at a time, what shall be our record at the beginning of the 1928 reunion as we look back over the year? Have we learned, have we made profit of the feast of good things set on the Lord's table for the benefit of his children? or shall we be numbered with those who, having looked in the glass, go straightway and forget what manner of face they saw? Oh, may we each remember and strive, praying earnestly that in our coming together again, we may know that growth, development, and progress have been ours to enjoy, and by this growth, greater blessings shall be ours to enjoy.

On Saturday, July 2, the Saints began to gather, Brother and Sister Gunsolley, Brothers Swenson, Thorburn, Sandage, and Ritter, besides many other Saints being present. Not wishing to waste a moment, services were announced for the evening. Elder Swenson gave one of his discourses, which was full of a living faith and convincing testimony of truthfulness of this great latter-day work. A beautiful spirit was present from the beginning, with an attendance of about forty, gaining in numbers all through the eight days, until Sunday, the 10th, our numbers gained more than one hundred and thirty.

The regular services were at 8.30 a. m., priesthood meeting; 9.30, prayer service; 10.40, preaching. Then came the dinner hour; preaching at 2.30; a class at 3.30; song service at 8; preaching at 8.15. Sisters Gunsolley and Elsie Andes had charge of the junior church, which was held in the forenoon and afternoon. Brother Curtis did most of the evening preaching, when friends and neighbors gathered to hear the gospel. Brothers Gunsolley, Swenson, Thorburn, and Sandage each did his part willingly.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave an entertainment which was much enjoyed by all, also giving an idea of what our young people can do.

After Sunday school, a sacramental service followed in charge of Brothers Thorburn and Ritter. Many wonderful testimonies were given by those who have labored faithfully for many years, testifying to the truthfulness and power of the gospel, giving courage and hope to continue on, enduring faithful to the end.

Sunday afternoon Brother Gunsolley occupied, presenting in his clear and kindly manner the truths an acceptable service to God consists of: Sincerity, earnestness, regularity, veracity, industry, consistency, endurance. Sincerity wins confidence. How true, unless our brethren give us their confidence we are unable to labor acceptably! Even Jesus could do no mighty work in a certain place, because they lacked confidence in him. Are we hindering our brother, our sister, because we do not give them our confidence? Are we sincere enough to be willing to accept every opportunity for service? Christ even washed his disciples' feet. Are we greater than he? Will we seek opportunity to serve? Our love to God is shown by and through our love to our fellow man. The more we love, the more we do for the object of our love. When labor for the object of love ceases, love ceases. Like a boat in the river, we never stand still; we are either progressing or retrograding. Can we afford not to love the brethren? "He that endureth to the end the same shall be saved."

Earnestness: The service of doing and giving our best.

Regularity: Promptness, attentive, progressing.

Veracity: The greatest sin of today is untruth. Do our mothers frighten their children into obedience by telling them lies about the big black dog, the policeman, or the dark? Too often do we hear an untruth fall from the lips of the thoughtless mother. Your child will find you out with the result of lost confidence in mother. What a deplorable condition!

Industry: The idler has no place in Zion. The idler must repent, for the idler can not eat the bread of the laborer. Napoleon said, "Every moment spent in idleness is opportunity for future misfortune."

Consistency: "Oh! consistency thou art a jewel!" By our lives we counsel the young.

Endurance: "He that endureth to the end shall be saved." As one good sister's testimony, lending help and courage to others was: "When discouraged and seemingly at the very end of the rope, tie a knot and hang on." "He that endureth to the end shall be saved." Much stress has been placed on service all through our reunion. "I myself must mix with action lest I wither by despair." Service is measure of greatness. The service or mission which Christ came to accomplish was fourfold: First, to save men from their sins; second, to destroy works of the Devil; third, to reveal God unto man; and fourth, to set up his kingdom. When we are saved from our sins, the work of the Devil is destroyed; when we are able to get a clear vision of God and his will, will not his kingdom be established?

We feel much good has been accomplished by our reunion. Seven were baptized, and crowds and interest were increasing. A young brother was called and ordained to the office of priest, which office was accepted in humility. Many patriarchal blessings were given. Sister Gunsolley and Sister Elsie Andes had charge of the music, and many gave willingly to the service of song, adding much to the success of the reunion. Time for some recreation was given.

It was voted that a reunion be held here at Andes next year.

Brother and Sister Gunsolley and Brother Curtis left for their work in Canada. Brother Swenson went with friends to Miles City, while Brother Thorburn and Brother Sandage went to Fairview to hold some services.

We hope more will plan to meet with us all through our next year's reunion. We feel the truth of Christ's statement, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

One brother said: "God is going to require of us all that we are able to do in our conditions and circumstances." Are we, or are we not, doing our best?

"We doubt not the Lord nor his goodness,
We have proved him in days that are past."

Kentucky and Tennessee Reunion

The Kentucky and Tennessee reunion opened Saturday, July 16, in the tabernacle at the reunion grounds at Puryear, Tennessee. It organized on the opening day, electing Thomas Newton and J. O. Dutton to the presidency of the reunion, and other officers necessary to do the work. The attendance of the Saints at the first was very light, owing to a heavy rain that made the roads hard to travel. However, attendance increased daily among members of the church as well as nonmembers. Especially the evening services were increased in numbers the seating capacity of the tabernacle being taxed to the limit, while many sat in their cars surrounding two sides of the tabernacle, making more outside than inside at the services. Interest continued to grow until it was estimated there were five hundred present.

The prayer services continued from the first to increase in spirituality and grew in interest until some remarked these were the best services they had ever attended. The Lord was with us in power, cheering and comforting the Saints through the gift of prophecy.

The order of services was: Prayer meeting, 9.30-10.45; preaching, 11 a. m., 2.30 p. m., and 8. The speakers enjoyed exceptional liberty in presenting the word. Saints and friends were intensely interested in the sermons from the commencement of the meeting.

Order throughout the entire reunion was excellent. Each family brought lunch baskets, and we ate together, enjoying a splendid social time. The Saints seemed hungry for information and kept the elders busy answering questions relative to the gospel and the program of the church.

On Friday, July 22, we had the great pleasure of inducting twenty-one splendid young people into the kingdom of God. They ranged in ages from nine to thirty-eight years, the greater part being in the teen age. Again on Sunday, seven more young ladies were added by baptism, making a total of twenty-eight baptisms, as the result of an old-fashioned reunion.

Many remarked that it was the best reunion they had ever attended. The roads soon dried, and beautiful weather continued to the end of the meeting. The air was cool, making it delightful under the tabernacle, and the plentiful shade surrounding it was inviting.

The reunion ground is owned by the district, and is beautifully studded with oak trees, furnishing pleasant shade. We think the Saints are fortunate to have so desirable a place to meet.

Brother T. C. Kelley is well remembered by the Saints here, and his many years of service as well as the years of service of many others who have labored here are treasured in their hearts.

It was voted to hold a reunion in 1928, the time to be left to the reunion committee. The reunion committee, Connie Gallimore, Elvin Seaton, Bertie Gallimore, and Homer Ross, rendered excellent service. Sister Flossie Gallimore presided at the organ; R. M. C. Ross was chorister; and Sister Hoffman with her violin and Connie Gallimore with his cornet did their bit.

PRESS COMMITTEE.

Texas Reunion

July 28.—The Southwestern Texas District has just closed one of the best reunions we have attended. The reunion was held near Bandera, on the same grounds we occupied last year, but this time we had the use of a large tent furnished by Brother Phillips instead of having to build an arbor.

The attendance of members was much larger than it was last year, there being nineteen tents, whereas last year there were only ten.

President R. E. Miller was in charge of the reunion. Sister Flossie Waite, district Sunday school superintendent, had charge of the Sunday school work; Sister Mary Barber, superintendent of Recreation and Expression, had charge of the recreational features, croquet, volley ball, and swimming being the principal features.

A splendid program in charge of Misses Mary Barber and Emma Jackson was given on the evening of July 16, which was enjoyed by all.

Sister Emma Jackson with her group of girls contributed greatly to the success of the reunion, with their beautiful choruses and readings. Sister Mary Barber arranged programs for several evenings after the preaching services. Brother and Sister Winegar contributed greatly to these. Also Brother Vanderwood and Brother Mannerling.

Get-acquainted songs were sung by the congregation, which helped to knit a friendship among the people.

Sister H. E. Winegar was appointed field worker of the reunion. She held three meetings, which considered matters pertaining to Sunday school work and were both instructive and edifying to those in attendance.

Brother W. H. Mannering had charge of the grounds and made himself very useful to the campers who were in need of a man's help.

Bishop C. J. Hunt had charge of round table work every morning and occupied at the eleven o'clock hour until Brother J. E. Vanderwood arrived, after which they occupied alternately.

Brother H. E. Winegar was the speaker at most of the evening services, Brother Vanderwood occupying once or twice. Brother Aldrich, of Yokum, Texas, preached one evening, which was enjoyed by all.

Patriarch Ammon White arrived Saturday noon. All were overjoyed at seeing him, as he was expected to be present at the first of the reunion. The few sermons he preached were well worth the effort put forth by the Saints to get to the reunion.

There were about six prayer services held during the reunion. At these meetings the Saints expressed themselves as feeling good in the work and as having a determination to go on and do more for the work in the future.

The young people held their last prayer meeting Sunday morning at eight o'clock, and as they came marching back to the tent singing, "We're marching to Zion," it was a beautiful sight.

The conference business session was held on the last Saturday afternoon. All officers were sustained, with the exception of the vice president. Instead of the vice president, two counselors were appointed by the president and ratified by the conference: Brethren T. J. Jett, jr., and Carl F. Wheeler.

On the last Sunday afternoon, four precious souls were led into the waters of baptism by H. E. Winegar.

The evening services were well attended. Besides all that could be comfortably seated under the tent, cars were circled around the tent to quite a distance. The Saints appreciated the courtesy shown them by the people of that vicinity, and when the time came to say good-by there was a sadness felt by all. This reunion seemed to draw the Saints closer together, and I am sure they carried the good spirit which they received from the meetings home with them.

Successful Reunion at Neligh, Nebraska

The reunion of Saints in the Central Nebraska District was held at Riverside Park, Neligh, Nebraska, starting July 14 and ending July 24.

The attendance at the beginning was small, but gradually increased until on the closing days there was a large attendance. A large number of outside people turned out for the closing sermons.

We feel that a great deal of good has been done as a result of this reunion; four were baptized and others we are sure will be later, from the interest shown during these meetings.

A very able company of men were here in charge of the reunion. Brethren E. F. Robertson, C. Ed. Miller, and William Bath were here at the start. Brother Robertson left us on Thursday morning for North Platte, Nebraska, another reunion. Apostle J. F. Curtis arrived on Wednesday evening, the 20th, and gave us some wonderful sermons between then and our closing day.

Sunday, the 24th, was our best day, at which time our building was well filled.

Saints were here from all over the district, and all enjoyed the wonderful spirit present at all meetings.

Gold is good in its place; but living, brave, and patriotic men are better than gold.—Abraham Lincoln.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Nauvoo District

The work in Nauvoo District is moving along as well as can be expected at this season of the year.

Burlington Branch held a rally day July 10. Apostle J. F. Garver was the speaker.

The Saints at Keokuk had the Montrose Saints meet with them Sunday, July 10; there also were some of the Nauvoo Saints present. Elder Miller was the speaker at the morning hour, after which all went to the park to have lunch. A good time was had.

Saints of our district were saddened because of the death of Sister J. McKiernan, Farmington, Iowa. She was true and loyal to her church. A number of the Saints from different parts of the district were present at her funeral. Brother Frederick A. Smith was in charge and preached a wonderful sermon.

Members of our district are full of reunion plans and anticipations. The place appointed for this gathering is Nauvoo, and the time is August 19 to 28. Young people of the district will be pleased to have young people of other districts with them. This reunion will be a place where the young will find education, inspiration, and recreation. How do I get to Nauvoo? Book to Montrose, Iowa. Then take the ferryboat across to Nauvoo. The boat meets all trains.

We expect President F. M. Smith at our reunion. If you are coming, plan now to write Brother A. Lee, or Brother W. Wood, Nauvoo, Illinois, that we can arrange for you everything you wish. There will be good speakers, good teachers, good recreational leaders, plenty of water, lots of shade, and a beautiful place to camp.

An Easter Conference

Southern New South Wales

Knowing the church in America is always interested in the various foreign missions, this report is attempted, though rather late.

We have usually had good weather for our Easter assemblies in Australia, but this time we were disappointed. I have been acquainted with this climate, more or less, for twenty-five years, but I never saw such severe weather here before. It was everywhere spoken of as phenomenal. All the sea coast country of New South Wales was persistently battered and pounded under a rain storm which I have seen paralleled in America but never in this land. Much damage was done to property, and several lives were lost. The best description I can find of its volume and ferocity is that of a storm described by Will Carlton in "The first settler's story":

"Through my small clearing dashed wide sheets of spray

As if the ocean waves had lost their way;

Scarcely a pause the thunder battle made

In the bold clamor of its cannonade."

Good Friday and Saturday were both very wet and windy, so much so that some who had come from the country to attend the conference and conventions did not venture out to the meetings. Sunday was comparatively fine and the crowds immense. In the main there was a good representation of our people, visitors being present from Queensland, Northern New South Wales, New Zealand, and South Australia, besides those in attendance from the district itself. The spiritual tone of the services was high from the start, each day being opened by a prayer service which set the standard, apparently, for the other meetings. On Friday Elders C. A. Dickinson and A. F. Robinson were in charge; on Saturday

Bishop G. Lewis and Elder H. E. Peisker; and on Sunday Elders G. W. Stewart and A. F. Robinson.

The Religio convention met on Friday at 3.30 p. m. in the Balmain church, where all meetings were held, District Superintendent C. A. Dickinson being in charge. Election of officers resulted in his selection for another year, other officers chosen being: assistant superintendent, G. Gillard; secretary-treasurer, F. Rawson; auditors, W. J. Haworth and A. J. Corbett. It was resolved to levy a per capita tax of 3d (6 cents) on all members over 16, and to have a delegate convention next year.

The Sunday school convention was held at 2 p. m. Saturday, the district superintendent, W. J. Swain, and his assistant, A. Hepworth, being in charge. The election of officers resulted as follows: superintendent and assistant sustained; secretary, R. Imrie; treasurer, E. Parkes; home class superintendent, P. Lawrie; normal superintendent, G. Gillard; librarian, F. Spencer; cradle roll superintendent, Essis Roberts; musical directors, E. Davis for Newcastle, and G. Rawson for Sydney.

The shield for increase of membership was awarded to Wallsend with 179 points, the other records being: Hamilton, 145; Guildford, 60; West Wallsend, 48; Teralba, 37; Toronto, 38; Leichhardt, 14; Balmain, 10; South Wallsend, 7; Campsie, 15; Lower Bendoc, 5.

A committee was appointed to arrange a yearly banner competition on a general "Standard of Excellence." An annual per capita tax of 6d (12 cents) was levied. It was also decided that all future conventions shall be on the delegate principle.

The conference convened at 10.15 a. m. Friday. The mission president, Elder W. J. Haworth, was chosen to preside, assisted by the district presidency, Elders A. J. Corbett, G. W. Stewart, and A. F. Robinson; Elder W. J. Swain, secretary; F. Rawson, organist; W. C. Henricks, assistant; G. T. Rawson, chorister. The Balmain deacons, assisted by all other deacons present, acted as ushers. Elders A. C. Barmore, R. McLaughlin, and H. E. Peisker were selected as press committee, and Elders W. J. Vaughan, J. T. Gresty, A. F. Robinson, R. McLaughlin, and H. E. Peisker for administration committee.

The branches reported numerically as follows: Balmain, 292; Hamilton, 120; Leichhardt, 141; Wallsend, 88; West Wallsend, 33; Teralba, 29; Lower Bendoc, 29. Total: 732.

Reports from branch and district presidents show progress all along the line. Hamilton has a new church building, and Balmain and Wallsend are working to the same end. The following missionaries reported: W. J. Haworth, G. Lewis, J. T. Gresty, W. J. Vaughan, and A. C. Barmore. Reports were also read from the Women's Department, Sunday School Department, and Religio Department. The women held two meetings, one at 11 a. m. Saturday, and the other at 1 p. m. Sunday, the programs being greatly varied, some business being transacted. At the latter hour a priesthood meeting was also held.

At 9.45 a. m., Saturday, Elder R. McLaughlin delivered an address entitled, "Are the rank and file well informed scripturally?" and Elder J. H. Jenkins spoke on "Sunday outings; are they right?" Both were followed by spirited discussion.

Five sermons were preached. On Friday night Elder A. C. Barmore preached from the question: "What think ye of Christ?" the theme being the divinity and humanity of Christ. Elder J. T. Gresty assisted. Saturday night Bishop G. Lewis appealed to the Saints in behalf of the financial law, Elder A. J. Corbett being in charge.

The real Easter sermon was preached by Elder W. J. Vaughan Friday at 11 a. m., Elder H. E. Peisker presiding. His subject was: "The dying Christ." Elder J. T. Gresty spoke at the same hour Sunday, his theme being: "The living Christ." Elder A. Hepworth was in charge. Sunday night Elder W. J. Haworth was the speaker, his topic being: "Thine the work, the glory thine." Elder A. F. Robinson assisted.

Sunday at 2 p. m. Elder A. J. Corbett baptized three boys, Elders S. W. Ballard and H. E. Piesker assisting in the service. At 2.30 p. m. there was a communion service, Elder W. J. Haworth presiding, assisted by the various missionaries and the district presidency. By this time a change had occurred in the latter, Elder R. McLaughlin having been elected district president, A. J. Corbett and A. F. Robinson being his counselors; W. J. Swain as secretary and treasurer, and G. T. Rawson as chorister completed the executive. The ordination of V. Alberts as priest was ordered and effected at this service.

The musical part of the conference was well cared for under Brother Rawson's baton. He handled both the choirs, Balmain and Leichhardt, to the satisfaction of all.

The next conference was arranged for Easter, 1928, at Hamilton.

June 17.

ALMA C. BARMORE,
For the Press Committee.

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church, 1421 First Avenue, South

July 20.—Rally day dawned bright and clear on Sunday, July 17. Saints felt their prayers for a nice day had been answered. There were Saints from Valley City, Casselton, Sheldon, Leonard, and La Moure, North Dakota, and from Audubon, Beltrami, and Clontarf, Minnesota. Several non-members from Fargo also attended.

The first service at ten o'clock was a program by the Sunday school members. The main feature was a very pretty exercise called "The garden of His love." The platform was arranged like a garden, with trellis work for the entrance. This was filled with green vines and flowers and the words, "The garden of His love," were arranged in pretty gold letters about the entrance.

Several numbers were planned to be given by visiting Saints who were unable to attend, with the exception of Sister Ada Harpster, of Audubon, Minnesota, who composed some very pleasing poetry as a rally day greeting, and read it at the service.

The program was followed by the baptism of four children, one from Casselton, North Dakota, daughter of Sister Ella Langdon, and three from Valley City, children of Brothers Ed and Frank Stowell. Elder Thomas Leitch, our pastor, officiated.

Missionary Robert Gunlock gave a short talk on baptism, which was followed by the confirmation of those baptized. Elders Thomas Leitch and Robert Gunlock officiated in this service.

The Saints then wended their way to Oak Grove Park, where baskets of delicious food were unpacked and enjoyed by all, eating together. As soon as the tables were cleared, Elder Leitch preached for one hour; then a short recess was had to get a snapshot of the brothers and sisters, followed by an interesting talk by Brother Gunlock. Lunch was partaken at six o'clock, and most of the visiting Saints returned to their homes.

A preaching service was held at the church at eight o'clock by Elder Gunlock. The day was very much enjoyed by all, and it is hoped that these Saints may every one meet with the Fargo Branch again before cold weather in another rally day.

A baby girl, Lorene Evangeline, arrived at the home of Brother and Sister R. H. Freeman June 28.

Sister Florence Rife, of Sheldon, has obtained employment here and will remain indefinitely.

Elder M. Rasmusson and wife, of Independence, Missouri, recently passed through Fargo on their way to Sykeston, North Dakota. They will spend the summer months there.

Sister John Konietzka's little son, Marvin, underwent an operation for tonsils a short time ago and is feeling much improved.

Brother N. C. Anderson attended the North Dakota reunion at Logan, as did also Elder Thomas Leitch. A very spiritual and beneficial time is reported.

Sisters Ferne, Elizabeth, and Ava Shackow left last week for Independence, Missouri, to make their future home. The branch regrets to lose these fine, faithful daughters of Zion, but best wishes go with them to their new home in Zion.

Sister Marvin Zieck and husband, of Minneapolis, have been visiting with Sister Zieck's mother, Mrs. M. Peterson. After a week's stay, they returned home, accompanied by Sister Ella Mae Peterson.

Elder Swen Swenson called on Saints here on his way to reunion. He expects to return to Fargo about the first of August to hold services. He is now in Montana.

Brother Calvin Wager, of Independence, Missouri, also Brother J. E. Omans, of the same place, both holding the priesthood, are now employed here in Fargo and will be of much assistance in the work here.

Sister Irma Walker has returned from Straubsville, North Dakota, where she has been visiting Sister Jacob Muffle.

Sister Dave Freeman and five boys, of International Falls, Minnesota, are visiting relatives here.

Mrs. Robert Good, of La Moure, North Dakota, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Walker.

Elder William Sparling, of Minot, our district president, called on Fargo Saints the first part of June on his return from Kempton, North Dakota, where he went to perform a wedding ceremony.

Elder J. E. Wildermuth, of Aurora, Illinois, was a welcome visitor in our branch last month. While here he remodeled his dwelling houses and did good work in our branch. He baptized and confirmed Willis Freeman, administered to several of the Saints, blessed two babies, administered the sacrament the first Sunday of July, conducted a Wednesday evening prayer service, and preached several good sermons. Two of the texts were: "The church of the living God"; and, "Hold fast to whatever you have that is good and true, till He comes."

The new song books came just in time for rally. It is hoped to get our Bungalow Church freshly decorated in the near future.

Our aim is to hold fast to the truth till He comes. Though few in number, we know God will bless and help us if we be united. Let us keep courage, trust God, and keep smiling through the tests that may come to each one. "Forward to Zion" is our slogan.

Some one had failed to gain what they much desired by putting off duties from day to day, and finally never doing them, so we are told he gave this good advice, Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today. We are convinced many Saints put off things they should do, because they think they have too much to do. Thereby they lose many blessings which would come to them if they were faithful to their duties in the church of Christ. The writer is guilty this time, so we suppose he should not preach at some one else. We promise to do much better next month.

The vacation bug hit us hard during the past month. Brother F. M. Sheldon and family spent some time visiting eastern Iowa and Illinois. Brother Albert Haynes and wife visited his brother, Elder Guy Haynes, at Waterloo. Sister A. R. Crippen and Sister Reeder and families spent some time in Minnesota. Others have made short visits away from home, so at times our attendance has been small. However, we are not discouraged but are determined to keep the work moving forward.

The church building has been much improved with the installation of opera chairs, which we were able to purchase at a bargain. The old chairs have been sold at a fair price and proceeds used to pay for the new ones. An additional room is being finished for Sunday school use. Deacon Ballantyne is putting in all his time when off duty from his work, in repair work on the church building.

The members of the Department of Women were given a treat at their last meeting, when Doctor Glen Will, chiropractor, gave an excellent talk on spinal and nerve troubles. Doctor Will is an attendant at many of our services. He also saved Brother Harold Reeder from drowning while swimming in the river one day this summer.

Sunday, July 24, an all-day meeting was held in the church. At half past eight prayer service was much enjoyed, and a spiritual blessing was received by those present. A large attendance at Sunday school took part in the lesson study and heard the talk by Brother E. L. Bedwell. At eleven o'clock Brother Edwards, of Pomeroy, was the speaker, and his sermon was most profitable.

The crowd partook of a picnic dinner on the lawn at the home of Brother and Sister Alfred Ballantyne at noon. Again at half past two Brother Bedwell talked to an attentive audience, after which he led the priesthood meeting, where a fine spirit was present. In the evening Brother Bedwell was the speaker, also preaching a few nights this week. Brother Bedwell is winning his way to the hearts of the Saints by his kind but forceful way of presenting the gospel message. We believe he will be successful in his work in our district.

Brother W. W. Reeder spent a few days of his vacation visiting relatives in Moline and Rock Island, Illinois. He enjoyed the trip very much and had a wonderful time. Now he is saving the balance of his time for district reunion and expects to meet all of the Saints of the district at Sac City August 26 to September 4. Saints should order their tents from Brother E. L. Edwards, Pomeroy, Iowa, at once and be prepared to enjoy a grand week with fellow Saints.

From the Pastor at Springfield, Missouri

I am more than pleased with the HERALD and its service. I think every member of the church should have access to its pages. The only way I know that this can be done is by having it in every home.

I delight in reading the letters from the hands of the correspondents in various localities. Especially am I interested in letters from places where I have labored with the Saints, Alexander and Twin creek, Kansas; Joplin, Webb City, Carthage, Missouri, and other places; also our own Springfield, Missouri, Branch.

Having served as pastor in Springfield Branch since the latter half of 1922 to the present time, I have been able to observe the modesty of our branch correspondent, Brother Francis M. Bishop, and his faithful companion, Sister Hattie M. Bishop. The responsibility of giving news from this part of the vineyard has been given to them, and they have been sustained by the branch without dissenting voice. How well they have discharged their obligation is open to all the readers of the HERALD, and especially to those who live in and around Springfield and have been in position to observe items of news. Brother Francis is bishop's agent's solicitor for this territory and has been faithful in this duty. Sister Hattie has been pianist for the church during all the time that I have been pastor here except one year, when she was assistant. Her work has been well and faithfully done. She has been a source of comfort to our patriarchs in that she has been able to take patriarchal blessings on the typewriter as they are given in the service. The Lord has blessed her in that he has given her the talent to do this. She has developed this talent that it may be used in glorifying his cause. I make mention of these things for the reason that modesty may not allow them to mention their own activities in the church work here and elsewhere.

Our young people are shaping themselves into that proper attitude of heart and mind to be of untold wealth and service to the church, not so much in dollars and cents, perhaps, but in the worth of consecrated service.

The work here is forward and onward, and we have been ably assisted in all departments by the faithful discharge of duties by those to whom the work has been assigned.

Brother Francis M. Reynolds has been very faithful as assistant pastor and has carried far more than his share of the work, but he has done this without murmur or complaint.

SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI, July 15.

J. B. ANSLEY.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Vacation season is on, and as a result the attendance has not been so good at church.

Also, a number of the Saints are sick at the present. Sister J. Hendra is very low. Our pastor has been kept busy visiting the sick and answering calls for administration.

The Sunday school and Department of Women had a joint picnic a week ago, and a good time was had by all.

The sermons of the past month have been of a high order. The pastor has been blessed with the spirit of liberty. God has used him to raise the warning voice to the Saints at this place.

The sacramental service for July was well attended, and a good spirit prevailed. A message was brought to us through our pastor which should be long remembered. Also the pastor read to us a letter on oblation. This bore good results.

A son was born to Pastor F. C. Bevan and wife July 21, bringing joy to their home. He has been named Richard Eugene.

Some of the Saints are planning to attend the best reunion in the whole church. At least they think it will be the best reunion. It is to be held at Nauvoo, the Beautiful.

1321 Milburn Boulevard

The South Bend and Mishawaka Branch is still striving to hold up the banner of King Immanuel. Owing to sickness and unemployment, our path has not been entirely free from care, but as a united people these obstacles have been presented to the Lord, and he has heard and answered.

Regular services have been held, and we believe attendance has been good considering obstacles. Our prayer meeting Wednesday evening, June 29, will be long remembered by those present, because of the splendid spirit that flowed from heart to heart. Sister Coonfare, who had been unable to meet with us because of sickness, was again present, and in many testimonies the thought was expressed that is so beautifully mentioned by the Savior, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if you have love one to another." There seemed to be much joy to feel that "our fears, our hopes, our aims are one, our comforts and our cares."

On July 3 we were pleased to have Brother and Sister Starr Corless, of Coldwater, Michigan, and daughter, Sister Jessie Parker and husband, of Dowagiac, Michigan, meet with us. Brother Corless assisted in the sacramental service. Our Sister Myrtle Perry was reared in the Coldwater Branch, and others of us have had associations there, so it was a real joy to hear Brother Corless's admonitions again. Some that were given in our youth have lived through all these years. At this service some stated they had plans for the holiday, the Fourth, and were tempted to go before the service, but felt they could enjoy the holiday so much more if they could feel they had made God first. They expressed themselves more than repaid for their sacrifices.

Sunday, June 10, we were privileged to have Brother and Sister A. B. Phillips, who are traveling in the interests of the bishopric department of the church, and Sister T. S. Williams and son, of Detroit, Michigan, with us. Bishop Phillips's coming having been announced previously, we had Saints present from Elkhart and Hibbard. Brother Phillips was not well, but preached morning and evening to an interested people. His coming was timely, for the Saints were talking inventories, tithes, and offerings. Our goal is one hundred per cent stewardships for the Lord.

On Tuesday evening Brother Phillips met with the priesthood and all were present.

On Wednesday evening, after a season of prayer, Brother Phillips preached again, and on Thursday at 1.30 p. m. Sisters Phillips and Williams met with us in our regular women's meeting. By request, both sisters gave interesting talks, and because of this their experiences in the women's work of the church will serve as an inspiration to us. Friday morning Brother and Sister Phillips left for Clinton, Iowa, and Sister Williams and son for a visit to her parents.

Sunday, July 17, regular services were held in the church, and in the afternoon three carloads of Saints met with the Elkhart Saints. Brother S. W. L. Scott was the announced speaker, and we listened to a very good sermon.

The two small children of Brother and Sister Clair Galloway, of Mishawaka, were blessed at this service.

Sunday, July 24, all the Saints who could attended the reunion at Indian Lake. Only a few were left to worship in the little church. In the evening Brother Forest Myers made his first effort to preach, taking for his thought Matthew 22: 1-14. We hope this will give our brother courage. Those going to reunion reported a pleasant and profitable time.

Ontario, California

June 18.—We of the Ontario Branch extend to the Saints everywhere greeting in the name of the Master, and pray that peace and blessings be multiplied unto you, to the end that together we might be strengthened and encouraged to carry the increased burdens that are rapidly falling upon us and will continue so to do until our task, the establishment of Zion, will be accomplished. And all this must be borne on account of the magnitude of our task and the lateness of the hour.

We feel it a joy to be engaged in this glorious work.

We have been blessed in many ways since last we wrote and can say that though slowly it may seem, yet surely the vision of our goal grows clearer and brighter and consequently our joy and courage greater.

Our beloved brother, Apostle Gillen, was with us one day last month and gave us much food for thought and wise counsel and encouragement. He also brought us more fully to the realization of the necessity for a more consecrated and intensified service to accomplish the work that lies before us. May he be abundantly blessed in his work.

Our sacramental service of June 5 was a pentecostal shower, so it seemed, and will be long remembered.

Brother F. G. Pitt was with us last Sunday and gave us a real gospel sermon, accompanied by the Spirit of God in much assurance which caused us all to rejoice. May God bless and strengthen him.

We have inaugurated a young people's prayer service from 8.30 to 9.30 a. m. the first Sunday in each month. Two sessions have already been held, and both were very inspiring. The young people have responded wonderfully.

Oh, that we might put aside all our little petty differences and join hands, hearts, and minds in harmony with God's plan in a steady, affirmative, and positive effort, and bring the good ship Zion safely into the harbor and bask in the sunlight of peace, safety, and righteousness, an ensign to the world and glory to God.

We can do it if we will closely and unitedly follow his instructions as contained in the sacred records, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants; also the revelations we receive from time to time through him whom God has appointed to receive revelations for the whole church, for he has so promised in his word. Ever praying for the success of our cause we remain,

Your brethren in Christ,

Eastern Colorado District

As soon as conference was over this year, we moved to Holyoke from Venango, Nebraska, and began to establish ourselves for the summer's work. Local conditions at the Chase County, Nebraska, Branch, at Lamar, Nebraska, of which I am president, made it necessary that I stay on the job more than I had anticipated.

Considerable rainy weather made it necessary to cancel several engagements at different times. However, I spent one Sunday with the Liberty Branch, south of Laird, about June 1. Two very fine meetings were enjoyed, and I drove home, about seventy-five miles, in the face of one of the worst rain and windstorms I have ever driven through. A little later I spent a Sunday with the little group at Sterling. They are few in number, but are real sticklers, holding a bigger program of meetings than many larger branches do.

Memorial Day I was invited to Otis by the American Legion, at which place I gave the memorial address to a large crowd.

A second trip was made to Sterling in June. Other nearby points were visited as occasion provided.

Immediately after the celebration I started on a tour of the southern portion of the district. The first stop was at Genoa. There in the home of Brother and Sister Owen Self I had the pleasure of presenting the message to a very fine group of Saints and friends. Leaving early the next morning, I headed south through a stretch of barren waste until I struck the Arkansas River Valley. I paused long enough at the famous Rocky Ford region to decide that if one were fortunate enough to be there at harvest time, he should find enough cantaloupes to fill up on. But my mission was to preach and not to speculate on the melon crop prospect, so I took the Santa Fe Trail east to La Junta. Here I found the latching hanging low at the home of Brother and Sister Willard Berry, and put up for the night.

It has been a long time since I have enjoyed a Sunday's worship and visit more than that one. Had some fine meetings all day. Ate fried chicken with the Berrys, (that's a complete menu, isn't it?) and after the night service, in company with the family of Brother Paul Darnell, I drove through the rain to the Darnell home at Las Animas, some twenty-two miles east. Brother Darnell had been with us all day, but in the evening he was forced to return to Las Animas as he was billed for the speaker at the opening of the union services for the summer.

I was highly gratified with my visit at Las Animas to find Brother Darnell respected by both the business men and churchmen of the city. It is a wonderful thing when our local pastors are of such type and capacity that they command the respect of the entire community. But few men can claim a higher local rating than Brother Darnell. Our work is bound to prosper as a result.

On leaving Las Animas, I was forced to reach Uteville by way of Lamar because of severe rains and washouts. Brother I. N. DeLong met me at Lamar, and about four o'clock in the afternoon we started for Uteville, a distance of about eighty-five miles. Brother DeLong and his daughter took the lead, and I brought up the rear. The trail to Uteville sort of reminds one of Kipling's poem when he says something about "where the trails run out and stop." Brother DeLong's car was nice and shiny—new, in other words—so about twenty-five miles per was the limit. On reaching Springfield we held caucus and decided that his new Star would never negotiate the thirty-five miles of trail (?) that was left in time for services. With the daughter for a guide, we made short work of the remaining distance and left Brother Newt to arrive when he could.

At Uteville we found a house full of interested people. I spent two nights there among those sturdy pioneers. Pioneers they are, if I have any concept of term. Fighting economic conditions that would seem absolutely hopeless to most people, they still look forward with a faith and a hope that is almost unbelievable. Only a few miles from the wastes of New Mexico, with practically no crop in sight and nothing left over from the barren years just past, they are holding together with true Latter Day Saint spirit.

My time was limited, so limited that I was forced to say good-bye to Uteville and drive to Wiley for services Wednesday night. After a good visit and a fine meal with the Hugheses at Lamar, I drove on to Wiley in the face of a threatening storm.

A nice house greeted me there, and we enjoyed a pleasant hour. Leaving after services I tried to drive to Las Animas for the night, but when about half way was caught in a veritable cloudburst. Forced to stall at the roadside for over an hour, it finally abated until I was able to make the way to a small town where I found shelter for the rest of the night. With the coming of daylight I was on my way in the mud and water with Fort Collins as the goal, some three hundred twenty-five miles away.

Thursday night found us in Collins, but mighty tired. Friday and Saturday were spent attending the Colorado Editorial Association meeting at Fort Collins and Loveland. Friday night I was happily surprised to have Brother B. E. Brown walk in on me. Saturday I introduced him to the association, and he passed for a full-fledged newspaper man.

The mountain parks were visited, as were also the oil fields, canning factories, and many other places of interest. They were two days of enjoyment, as well as being highly educational.

On Sunday morning, I spoke at the chapel at Fort Collins. After a short visit with the Fritzes, old Iowa friends, as well as with the Brolliars and others I have known for long, in company with Brother Brown I worried out the one hundred and eighty miles between Fort Collins and Holyoke. Brother Brown will be with us for Sunday and will then leave for other points.

Economically, Eastern Colorado is in a serious condition, especially in the rural districts. Yet most of the Saints are hopeful and are shaping their affairs as much as possible that they may be of greater service to the church.

HOLYOKE, COLORADO, July 22.

WARD A. HOUGAS.

Mallard, Iowa

We are moving forward and trying to keep busy in the Lord's work.

On June 19 we had nine visitors and heard a fine report of the institute held at Lamoni. This was given by Sister Ethel Fish, who was in attendance. She felt she gained a great deal, and her talk was very much enjoyed.

We have been pleased to have our visiting brothers and sisters with us. On June 26 there were twelve visitors at our services, and a week later nineteen attended our sacramental service, assisting in making it a spiritually helpful meeting.

An all-day meeting was held July 10, beginning with prayer service at 8.30, Sunday school at 10, and preaching by Elder E. L. Edwards at 11. Then a picnic dinner was served in the yard of Brother and Sister Carmichael. We all enjoyed this part of the program very much. At half past two we were back at the church for a round table discussion, Brother E. L. Bedwell being the leader. He gave us twelve specifications of what he thought a Latter Day Saint should be. Sixteen visitors were present at this time.

Brother Bedwell was the speaker at the evening service also, and his effort was much appreciated by the Saints. He plans to remain a few days and hold services, striving to give us the spiritual food we all need.

"Mother"

An Appreciation of a Graceland Official

There are mothers and mothers. Everyone has the mother of all mothers, and no one in the wide world can take her place. But there are mothers that come very near to even the worst of folks, and by their great-heartedness and their splendid helpfulness, they endear themselves to all who come in contact with their tender ministrations.

There is such a mother at Graceland, and though her work is silent, as such a mother's work always is, she inspires us all with her quiet helpfulness. She is not an afternoon-tea mother, for her strenuous and often trying work keeps her going from seven in the morning until seven at night. To her is intrusted the task of "feeding the multitude," as the eager, hungry dinner line is often called.

This is the big service that makes her happy—to have the meal on time, to have it as tasty as possible, and then to watch the line as it goes through. What if some one is away? There is an immediate inquiry, "Are they sick?" If so, "Can I fix them something?" The answer may as well be in the affirmative, for she will worry around until some little dish has gone on its way to the sick room.

Who are her favorites? The girls? No! it's the big blundering boys far from home that she must fuss and do most for.

Sometimes the rush of the day's work and a sleepless night will set her nerves on edge. Then, presto! it's good to have everything just so, for neglected work and nerves on edge do not blend. These sudden flashes soon pass, like clouds before the west wind, and the sky seems clearer because of them.

Her sphere of helpfulness is wider than the mere inward man, for she has often helped the higher man, too. It's only a small, trembling voice that is occasionally heard at prayer meeting, but it does convey some of the motherly yearning and helpful desire to the listening students. Just a few words, maybe, about mother's old advice when we eagerly left home for a party or a trip. "Don't be late," that fond voice would say, and the fond voice of the little mother in meeting made you feel just all that "Don't be late" meant.

She tells, too, of the help and strength that she herself gets from the students, and gives to all a greater desire to make that strength stronger. Just a little comely mother with a heart of gold, and a cheery helpfulness that inspires all who know her, is the picture we will keep in memory's storehouse, of "Mother" Johnson. GEORGE MESLEY.

Jonesboro Expects Branch Organization

HERALD readers may be interested in a letter from this little group of Saints. In the near future we are to be organized into a branch. The group is located four miles north of Jonesboro. It consists of about thirty-six members. We were organized into a group a year ago this September through Brother E. A. Erwin and Brother Daniels. It was through these Saints that Brother Giles Turner was ordained to the order of priesthood and made a leader of this group. We are glad to report the fact that a spirit of unity prevails in our midst, and all, as far as the writer knows, are striving to work together for the good of the cause.

Brother E. A. Erwin has been with us and delivered a number of sermons by which we feel very much strengthened, and he also added two more souls to God's kingdom on earth. He is now visiting the Fisher Branch to try to build up there. Brother and Sister Erwin are good and faithful Saints, sowing the seeds of kindness wherever they go. We have had some wonderful prayer meetings during their visit with us.

We have a fine Sunday school and Religio, also preaching quite often. Remember this little band in your prayers, that we may do our part in helping to build up Zion, and also remember Brother Daniels and Brother Giles Turner as leaders of our group. They are strong in this work. We feel that there are yet many to be added to this group. Pray that the hindering cause may be removed and they may yet be permitted to enter in and enjoy the blessings God has in store for them. Onward with the cause of Christ, is the watchword of the children of God.

MRS. LILLIAN ELROD.

JONESBORO, ARKANSAS, July 25.

Brother Terry Writes of a Trip in Zion

Sunday morning, July 24, my companion and I, with Brother and Sister Thomas McKevit in their automobile, started for the reunion at Holden and were soon gliding along through a most beautiful country to look upon. There were gently rolling timbered hills and rich soil in which was growing a good crop of corn. Cattle covered many hills, and fine houses and large barns showed prosperity smiling on every side.

A fixed-over car limited our speed to twenty miles per hour, but in due time the fifty miles was passed over, and we were happily greeted by a fine congregation, so large it filled the tent, inside and out, located on the grounds of "The Home," which enabled the inmates to enjoy the services.

We can not name all the dear ones we met, some of whom we knew in the misty past in different places, and whose names we would love to mention, but space forbids. The spirit of good will and love accentuated the happy throng, and they joyed in each other's association—the spirit of Zion. The Australian pastor of Cameron Branch, Elder John Blackmore, preached a good sermon, telling us in his peculiarly interesting way about the true riches.

At 2.30 a prayer and testimony meeting in charge of Patriarch H. O. Smith was enjoyed, in which such witnesses as M. H. Siegfried, President F. M. McDowell, H. O. Smith, R. J. Lambert, our editor, and many others just as strong and positive were heard from. If these witnesses told the truth, who can say the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is not divine and will not stand every test? Our testimony, with that of the rest, is that the work is divine and will stand.

Time sped by, and we were on our way home. After two hours of pleasant riding, we were home in time to hear Brother Cyril E. Wight speak at the Campus. He gave us a good, logical sermon.

A beautiful oasis was afforded us in our life travels by the receipt of a kind letter written by Sister Julia A. Crocker, of Loomis, California, and sent from the Irvington reunion, Northern California District. It contained a list of seventy-one names of our past associates and well wishers of the Seattle and British Columbia District, assuring us of their continued love. In that region we spent eight years of most pleasant ministerial work, which endeared the good Saints to us, for they were and are good to us. May the Lord bless the Seattle and British Columbia District. Irvington is a historic spot. The reunion ground is there by divine direction.

As we are engaged in group work, having charge of district number eight, composed of five groups, we find as a rule a growing spirituality among the Saints yet no special increase in the attendance at the Wednesday night prayer services. Our Sunday afternoon prayer services in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church are good indeed and should be heartily supported. They are for all of Zion, with no age limit. Come next Sunday.

We have an appointment for the 31st at Fourth Kansas City Church, where is a happy congregation under the able pastorate of Elder J. O. Worden, whose parents and grandparents were faithful ones of the belief in the restored gospel.

We wish all peace and happiness in the Lord. Press on, dear Saints; the work is true.

J. M. TERRY.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, 904 Van Horn Road.

Tunnel Hill, Illinois

On Saturday night, July 23, District President R. L. Fulk and Brother J. R. Lentell began a week's meetings at the little church. Brother Lentell did the preaching till Wednesday night, when he was called home on business and to get his family into the district before the reunion, which convenes at Brush Creek August 19. During the rest of the week and over Sunday Brother Fulk preached.

On Sunday an all-day meeting was held, and the Spirit was felt by all present. We feel sure that the work will be revived in this place, and other places as well, with such able men as Brothers Fulk and Lentell to point out the duties of the priesthood and laymembers.

Des Moines, Iowa

July 25.—“We can if I will” was the snappy slogan which characterized the efforts expended in carrying our Sunday school membership and attendance campaign to an unusually successful conclusion. Old members were encouraged and new members attracted by the beautiful spirit prevalent during the entire eight weeks of the drive, especially at the devotional periods and song services which preceded each of the Sunday school sessions. Much credit and more praise is due the generalship of Brother J. L. Parker, under whose direction and leadership the attendance steadily increased from two on the first Sunday to three hundred and twenty-six at the eighth and final service. Competition was keen among the classes and individuals for the rewards which were offered for the securing of the greatest number of new members and visitors. The success of the campaign was celebrated July 4 by an interesting and well-attended district Sunday school picnic at Grandview Park, at which Apostle F. Henry Edwards was principal speaker and Sister Blanche Mesley a most welcome guest.

Real religious training in worship and prayer was the goal of the Daily Vacation Bible School this year, particular attention and instruction being given in the formation of real, fervent prayers, and the whole course being directed along religious education lines, rather than emphasis being laid on handwork. The school, which lasted from June 20 to July 15, was very well attended, there being an enrollment of seventy-five, with an average attendance of about sixty. Brother C. B. Hartshorn, as principal, and the following corps of teachers, gave untiring service to make the school a success: Sister Blanche Williams, intermediates; Sister Mildred Turner, junior boys; Sister C. B. Hartshorn, junior girls; Sister Carrie Maitland and Sister Verba Parker, primaries; Sister Evalyn Finch and Sister Margaret Mayer, beginners. An exhibition of the work done was given at the closing-day exercises held the last Friday night of the school, at which time the children also put on dramatizations of Bible incidents, and some original sketches, which were indicative of the high type of the training they had received.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards held the first Des Moines district priesthood institute in Des Moines July 16 and 17, which was very well attended. Inspirational lectures by Brother Edwards were the order of the day on Saturday; and besides several more sessions on Sunday, Brother Edwards preached two fervent and long-to-be-remembered sermons to the branch en masse.

For the balance of the summer, the 6.30 Sunday evening session of the Religio has been discontinued, and recreational evenings every other Tuesday at the park have been instituted. The first attempt was very well attended and was voted a huge and unqualified success, from the picnic supper to the surprise watermelon feast at the end of the evening. We believe this plan will prove a pleasant change during the hot summer weather.

The Saints of Des Moines District are looking forward with enthusiastic anticipation to August 12, when what is expected to be the largest and best reunion ever held in the district will convene at Runnells, Iowa, for the ten-day period. Fine speakers are scheduled, and a splendid recreational program has been provided.

Sylvania, Ohio

July 28.—I was thinking perhaps some news from this place might not be out of place at this time. As a little branch, we have had our ups and downs and discouraging features to meet, yet the trials can not be compared with the blessings God has seen fit to bestow upon us.

Sunday, July 10, was the scene of much activity when an average of about one hundred and twenty-five Saints met with us at the different meetings of the day. They came from Toledo, Bradner, Oak Harbor, Ohio, and also from Detroit and Dundee, Michigan. The meetings of the day were in charge of District President R. F. Slye. They were of a spiritual and educational nature. Elder John R. Grice was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, and at eight o'clock in the evening he commenced a series of meetings which ended July 25. As a result of his efforts, four more precious souls were led by him into the waters of baptism.

At the Sunday morning prayer service of July 24, we enjoyed a very marked degree of the Spirit and power of God among us as we prayed, sang, and testified of his goodness and blessings to us.

We hope to stand firm, bear the trials of life, and sacrifice at all times, that the Lord may add many more souls to his kingdom and the work of his church be accomplished.

ROY G. YEAGER.

Nauvoo, Illinois

July 27.—When last we wrote, Nauvoo was having an over abundance of rain, and the farmers were having difficulty in getting their planting done; then for a whole month not a drop of rain fell, and the farmers were confronted with another difficulty. A splendid shower arrived last week, and things are brightening up once more.

Owing to so many being away on vacations, at school, etc., our numbers have been few of late at the services, especially the Wednesday night prayer meetings, but God's promises have been fulfilled, and where the few have met in his name, he has been there to bless, and all who have attended have returned to their homes rested in body and with their spiritual life renewed.

The Women's Department held a strawberry and ice cream social on the church lawn during the strawberry season and cleared twenty dollars.

A number of visitors have been with us of late. The Lees entertained Elder John Jenkins and family, of Burlington, and Brother Jenkins preached for us one Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour.

Blanche Edwards Mesley, Mabel Carlile, and N. Ray Carmichael and wife stopped at Nauvoo on their way to Chicago and were guests of Irene Layton. A picnic supper was to have been held by the branch on the shore in their honor, but a shower of rain prevented the majority from going. Those who did go, gathered in the Mansion House and had an enjoyable time.

Sister Victoria Lewis, of Sherrill, New York, an aunt of L. H. Lewis, has been a guest at the Lewis home for the past week. She is now visiting in Chicago before returning to her home.

Heman H. Davis, of Independence, was a guest of the Sanfords on July 17. Brother Davis attended the convention of the Institute of American Banking, which was held in Detroit; and having always wanted to visit Nauvoo, he took the opportunity while on the way home to stop off for a day. He arrived just in time to be the speaker at the 11 o'clock hour on Sunday morning.

W. H. Gunn and Brother French, of Fort Madison, visited Nauvoo last Sunday, and Brother Gunn occupied at the morning hour.

The Laytons have been very busy the past month, telling the gospel story and conducting visitors through the historic buildings. On Sunday, July 3, one hundred twenty-five visitors registered; and the following day, July 4, ninety-six.

Escatawpa, Mississippi

July 22.—The attendance at Sunday school was rather small last Sunday, on account of rain and several of our members' going to Mobile for the day.

Sister Mary Parker, of Lucedale, recently visited relatives here.

Elder D. W. Sherman was called to Gulfport last Sunday to administer to Brother Forehand.

Brother and Sister Dan Miller, of Mobile, and Sister Lola McQueen, of Cedar Lake, spent the Fourth with home folks.

Brother Lynd Harris and Miss Nora Martin, both of Pascagoula, were united in marriage June 26, Brother D. W. Sherman officiating.

Sister Mabel Smith visited relatives in Vancleave last week, also attended the old settlers' reunion while there.

We were proud to have with us on last sacrament Sunday Brother Oscar Tillman, of Bayou Labatre, Alabama.

Several of the Saints from here attended conference held at Vancleave in June and were very much pleased to make the acquaintance of Apostle Roy S. Budd.

We expect to have Brother J. W. A. Bailey with us soon to hold a series of meetings.

Sister Audentia Smith and Mr. Elwin H. Cropp were very quietly married at the home of the bride's parents Wednesday evening, July 20. Elder D. W. Sherman officiated.

Gladstone, Michigan

Corner of Eleventh and Wisconsin

For the benefit of Saints who may be passing through Gladstone, Saints may be found at 1009 Dakota Avenue or 141 Michigan Avenue.

At 9.45 June 30, our branch met to transact business for the first half of the year. Favorable reports came from all departments, informing us that the work has moved on in a greater effort than ever before. During this period we decided upon a young people's convention for the Upper Peninsula. This was a success, and will be continued next year.

We also had our annual two-day meeting June 18 and 19, District President Allen Schreur, of Gaylord, presiding. He was assisted by Elders Bearly, of Whitedale, and Boomer, of Gladstone. Their discourses were on the subject of love. Some very beautiful thoughts were brought out, and much food for thought was gained from the meeting.

On June 5 Branch President Milo Boomer, Brother De Coppick, and several of the young people visited with Munising Saints, where we held service all day, and much good was done by words of encouragement dispensed by the speaker.

Almost a month later, July 3, we met with the Monistique and Whitedale Saints in a prayer meeting in charge of Brother Matthew Bearly, assisted by A. M. Boomer, Bert Welch, and I. R. Caffey. Their testimonies and prayers gave assurance that God was in our midst.

On July 7 Elder A. M. Boomer and a few of our young people motored to Garden River, Ontario, where they attended a one-day meeting. They reported a very good time.

At seven o'clock in the evening, July 20, two brothers were baptized at Day River. They were Rex Stowe and William Walker. The ordinance was administered by Brother Bert Welch and is the result of the Saints' steadfastness and loyalty to the gospel.

During the first half of the year we met together and organized a stewardship class, and much interest has been taken in this movement.

Our Religio met Friday night, July 22, enjoying a party for the young.

The Saints are looking forward to attending the reunion and young people's convention at the Park of the Pines. We can truly say that man's extremity is God's opportunity. A year ago our branch went through a sifting time, and now we can appreciate the work for God.

"Oh, watch, and fight, and pray,
The battle ne'er give o'er;
Renew it boldly ev'ry day
And help divine implore."

"Act well your part, therein the honor lies," is our motto.

Elder Burgess Answers Query as to Bobbed Hair

Not long since there came to the desk of the editor a letter, part of which read: "I have long wondered what the church in general thought of bobbed hair. I feel that I want the real solution to this matter. It is my earnest desire to follow as closely as I can the teachings of the church. . . ."

This letter bears through its entire length evidence of sincere anxiety to know, and do according to the truth. Her letter was referred to Elder S. A. Burgess, and we here produce the reply he makes:

"Quite frequently the prophets of old Israel condemned the apparel of the times, but there appears to have been some definite reason. The customs of dress at that time doubtless had a certain heathen and licentious significance.

"As to bobbing the hair; this has rarely been done, especially among women. It seems evident, from some of the pictures, that the men in Egypt were shaven and had their hair bobbed. In Greece at one time the back hair of women was cut short and the side hair permitted to grow, about 450 B. C. Later never below the shoulder.

"In the fourth century B. C., the men cut their hair short, while the hair of the women became more elaborate. Among the Romans we will recall that the men were close shaven and also cropped their hair very short, just prior to the Christian era in the late centuries B. C.

"Some writers suggest that the provision among the Jews in Leviticus 21:5 and 19:27 was primarily to distinguish them from the neighboring nations. These verses are given: 'They shall not make baldness upon their head, neither shall they shave off the corners of their beard, nor make any cuttings in their flesh.' 'Ye shall not round the corners of thy head, neither shalt thou mar the corners of thy beard.'

"This is addressed rather specially to the men of Israel. I do not recall a single statement in the Old Testament of any woman who bobbed her hair, for the simple reason that there seemed to be no tendency in that direction.

"I think that most of us will agree that a full head of hair in woman is preferable to a shaven neck. Our æsthetic taste might favor uncut hair, but for comfort and convenience there is probably no comparison. Men have long shaved their beards to save, in part, caring for them; and have cut their hair short, though some are certainly less beautiful by doing so. The women have the same right to cut their hair and also to be comfortable.

"In the case of the Nazarene, distinct provision was made that hair should not be cut, nor beard be trimmed, that hair should be worn full; sacred to the Lord.

"In the case of leprosy, the hair was closely shaven all over the body. (See Leviticus 14: 8, 9.) Other passages also indicate that the hair was to be cut as a curse, or for some similar reason. There does not appear to be any reference in the New Testament that would apply except the one statement of Paul.

"It is true, if you will pardon an aside, that whenever there has been a change in style of headdress some minister or other has attempted to oppose it from the pulpit, and prove it unscriptural. . . .

"I do not recall nor can I find a single reference in the Book of Mormon in regard to either men or women and their style of dressing the hair. I read the Book of Mormon three times when I was young, and have given considerable research attention to it and can think of nothing that would apply.

"Nor can I recall in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants any statement bearing directly on women bobbing their hair. One might argue by analogy that their apparel was to be simple, the work of their own hands; therefore, those who wore short hair should cut it themselves. But if you wish to be logical you should extend it to the men as well as the women.

"As to the early history of the church; at that time it was the custom in Europe for very elaborate headdress, and such a style as bobbing was not thought of except in case of serious illness. Joseph Smith and his associates were mostly close-shaven, and the men of the early Reorganization were mostly bearded.

"You may ask why discuss beards? For the simple reason that the question seems to be morally one. If men may be comfortable, why not women? Also we may fairly allow something for personal adornment, if that adornment is not an end in itself, or a means towards an undesirable end, and if it does not lead to extravagance.

"In turning to Apostle Paul we quote 1 Corinthians 11: 14, 15: 'Does not even nature itself teach you, that if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him? But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her; for her hair is given her for a covering.' Here we have a clear statement that it is a shame for a man to have long hair, and that God gave woman her long hair for a covering, and that woman's long hair is a glory to her. But to get the real purport of the 14th and 15th verses, we should also note the 16th verse: 'But if any man seems to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God.'

"In fact, to get a very fair statement, one should read from the beginning of the chapter. Paul is of course urging that they keep the ordinances: 'The head of the man is Christ; the head of the woman is the man.' In this we recognize that he was expressing his own opinion, not speaking by way of prophecy. In the fifth verse he declares that if a woman prays with her head uncovered, it is the same as though she were shaven; or in other words, bobbed. One might say if they are not covered let them be shorn, or bobbed, one might argue if they wished to make a point, but the rest of the paragraph condemns. . . .

"As a case of extreme interpretation the Utah Church quotes the 11th verse of this chapter: 'Nevertheless neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord,' as proving that everyone must be married or he can not be saved, but the next verse explains this.

"Summing up; Every change in style brings forth a few sermons, but why do we not quote the Old Testament and insist that men should wear untrimmed beards. The reference to this is clear, while there is little if anything said about women and their hair.

"In the New Testament there had been, shortly before the time of Paul, a custom of trimming the back hair among the Greeks, but they still wore long ringlets on the side. Hence the apostle is quite outspoken in regard to women's hair, and yet he adds verse 16.

"The question does not appear to have arisen in Book of Mormon times.

"As far as the history of the world is concerned, it is very rare that we find instances of women cutting their hair, except in cases of illness. This appears to be true in the early history of the church. There are cases of the priesthood cutting their hair and shaving the top-tonsure.

"As lovers of the beautiful, we may raise some objection. As a church no action has been taken. As ministers of the gospel we should speak against wrong, and that which leads to evil, but the cutting of the hair leads only to the comfort and convenience of men and women.

"Further, I have the impression that at one time in Europe during the time of the Empire that it did become the style for women to cut their hair. The style was for extreme simplicity in dress, and for the same reason the women wore their hair cut short. Also the Greeks for a period of time in the sixth century did not permit their hair to come to the shoulders, but kept it cut back. But the instances of short hair in history are quite few."

Oelwein, Iowa

July has been a very busy month in our branch, many things going on in the district and immediate vicinity. Some seven or eight members of our branch attended the reunion held at Mount Pleasant Park, Clinton. All report a most enjoyable time. We heard some most excellent sermons delivered by Elder John F. Garver, Bishop Phillips, Elder Kress, and Superintendent Woodstock.

Marie Shippy, who attended the entire time and superintended the classes, found much of interest in them; also in the Department of Recreation and Expression.

We note the interest our young people take in the work and hope the time is not far distant when "like a mighty army" they shall march forward "to do or die"—to redeem Zion. We older ones, who have borne the heat and burden of the day, though still strong in the faith, know that our footsteps are not as firm as they once were and that the arms that bear aloft the banner of the cross are not strong as in youthful prime; therefore, we view with pleasure the stand our young people are taking. We are glad the Lord is with the Saints to help carry on the work.

Elder Hall, one time of Waterloo, visited us a week ago Thursday and met with us at our study class. We are sure that his lucid explanations made our lessons in Doctrine and Covenants much more interesting. We were sorry to learn that Mrs. Hall has been ill. She was always a welcome visitor and was a young woman of many talents, being musical and wonderfully talented as a whistling soloist.

Brother and Sister Kress, of Independence, spent part of last week with us. They are a most genial young couple. Brother Kress visited Stanley, where there are some people who show quite an interest in the gospel as presented by our missionaries.

Sister Garver and three charming daughters accompanied Elder Garver to the reunion. When we met the lady, we knew the brother had a most worthy helpmate.

Sister Phillips is the soul of geniality and seems an ideal mother. Her classes for the small children were conducted in a most pleasing manner.

Brother George McFarlane and family have returned from a trip to Vida, Montana, where they once lived. They were gone three weeks and returned in good health and spirits. Brother George attended a church meeting there, but not of our faith. The preacher took for his text, "The Adversary, or Devil," and painted his satanic Majesty in most glowing terms—made him very good looking, even handsome. Said all the latest improvements in art and science belonged to him, but some day the Lord would step in and take over all these inventions, etc. It was certainly a new doctrine to all of us. We know the common opinion of the Devil is that he is far from handsome, although he is a fallen angel, and that he has power to deceive even the very elect. Which is correct? or are both possible?

We find our Sunday school growing, and the children from the outside attending quite frequently. Last Sunday there were twenty-seven children present, which means a good deal for our little branch.

Last Friday night two little girls, sisters, sang, "Put my little shoes away." Their parents are not members, but the girls have been regular attendants this summer, and they are very bright and intelligent.

We are making an effort to "gather the children in." We all know the quotation, "And a little child shall lead them." Most of these children belong to nonchurchgoing parents, and we hope the good seed may be sown and may grow. Some of them are really talented in music, speaking, and acting. We feel when we look over the community that truly the harvest is great, but the laborers are few.

We are few here to look after the real needs of the church, but truly the hand that multiplied the loaves and fishes can give us the aid to carry on this great work. Many times we are reminded of the text, "Be not weary in well doing," and we want to go on and faint not by the way.

Nauvoo, West Virginia

Activities among the Saints at Nauvoo, West Virginia, this summer have been above the average. In the early spring, at our branch business meeting, Elder Jasper Dobbs was sustained as our branch president, Samuel Hall and W. H. Dobbs, priests; Clarence Dobbs, teacher; Jess Dobbs, deacon; Sister Diora Lydick, branch secretary and also branch reporter and publicity committee.

Our Sunday school this summer has been well attended and is doing much good, with Brother Clarence Dobbs as superintendent.

The first of June we had an all-day meeting, dinner being served in the church for all.

Sister Lillie Bishop, of Steubenville, Ohio, was with us and organized the Women's Department, which has been very active since. On Saturday eve, July 16, they gave a box social on the church lawn. Ice cream and cake were also sold. A nice crowd was present, and a nice sum of money was received.

About the middle of June, Elder Thomas Clark, our missionary, held a week's meeting, which resulted in several being baptized.

Early in the year we felt much discouraged, as one of our main helps or pillars in the branch, Elder Gordon Dobbs, passed away suddenly. We had not yet recovered from the loss of our aged Brother James Craig and Brother J. F. Dobbs, who were called away by death in 1926. Nevertheless, we are trying to press onward, and the memory of their good works encourages us.

There has been some one here to keep the work going for about sixty-five years. Most of the old-time elders who labored in this branch have passed to their reward. Brother G. T. Griffiths preached here when he was a young man, just starting out in the ministry.

Elder Thomas Clark is now holding services in the M. E. Church in Glen Easton, near here. Quite a number of our members live in Glen Easton.

The members of our branch are scattered over the hills in this part of the country, but on the Sabbath Day they drive for miles to attend church, so we are thankful for the auto.

Wheeling district conference will be with our branch this fall, the first Saturday and Sunday in September.

Sunday School Institute at Oakland

Oakland, being the center geographically of the bay cities church activities, was selected as the logical place of meeting for the local Sunday school institute, which held its first regular meeting after organization last May. Refreshments were served at 2 p. m. by the Oakland Women's Department, and at 2.30 p. m. the institute was called to order by the president, Sister E. Inslee.

First was a very interesting illustrated talk on blackboard work in the Sunday school, by Sister Walter Davis, during which she attempted to convince us all that we could draw for children, whether we were artistically inclined or not, and I must say that she very nearly succeeded.

Sister Davis's illustrations were made up of straight lines, circles, half circles, ovals, and half ovals. Her contention was that pictures true to life were not appreciated by the youngsters and that even grown-ups liked the skinny, grotesque forms, made with straight lines, better than the more conventional types of true-to-life sketches.

Not only does Sister Davis use chalk on her blackboard, but during the week in the preparation of her lesson she makes and draws all manner of things to interest her class, who help enthusiastically to assemble the various ensembles which go to illustrate the lessons.

Sister Clegg, superintendent of the Park Presidio School, of San Francisco, was in charge of the music and gave a demonstration of "How I would like a chorister to conduct music in my Sunday school." Certainly there was life and spirit in the songs sung. The songs were interspersed with timely remarks to choristers and their duty to the school, and the effect of indifference on the quality of the music.

The singing was followed by a paper, "Sunday school discipline," written by Mary Shippy, superintendent of the San José Sunday school. The word discipline was not taken in the strict sense of the word, but rather a general outline of Sunday school procedure and methods for creating interest by doing things differently. Promptness was the keyword. "Every superintendent should be so punctual in stepping on the platform to open Sunday school that a clock could be set by him." I would like very much to write in all of the paper Sister Shippy read, but it would take too much space. I will give a few excerpts from it, which will tell the story better than my words: "When the superintendent lacks system, it is useless to expect that quality in the school." For keeping order in crowded classrooms, the following was offered: "It may be understood that you will hand a piece of red paper, as a warning, to the teacher whose class is disorderly." Sister Shippy is alive to the possibilities of an altered ritual in the Sunday school. "Variety and surprise features are provocative of attention.

In conclusion, the suggestion that "superintendents talk too much," although a "bright little story half-a-minute long" was permissible, gave some of us food for thought. Also the help the school might be to the church service. "Where a service of worship follows Sunday school, the work of the school is unfinished or incomplete unless it imbues the pupil with the spirit of worship and sends him into service-prepared."

This paper was followed by more music and comments on songs to sing and how to sing them, by Sister Clegg.

Gladys Carmichael next read a very interesting paper on normal and abnormal students and the psychology of teaching.

Sister Clyde Holmes, teacher of the junior class in San Jose, brought with her from home her arrangement for teaching the Easter Sunday lesson by sand box "artistry." It comprised a "tomb," made very realistic by cutting a hole in a cardboard box to represent the mouth of a cave and covering the whole with a mortar of flour and salt. This was buried in the sand in such a way as to represent a cave. Palm leaves were standing in the background, while angel forms, cut from white paper, were stood up in front and a little to one side of the "tomb." The scene was very natural.

All five of the schools making up the Bay Cities Institute were well represented.

The young people went on a hike to Muir Woods on the Fourth of July, going by boat to Marin County, and then by train to Mill Valley. The hike takes one over some pretty rough country before the redwoods are reached. Muir Woods, at the base of Mount Tamalpais, is one of the most picturesque spots in California. After dinner the hikers climbed the mountain. Mount Tamalpais claims the most crooked railroad in the world.

Sister Ethel Christensen, the recreational leader, has just returned from Graceland, where she and her sister Lois attended the Young People's Convention.

Brother Etzenhouser has inaugurated the group system in Oakland, and is much pleased with the results. The city is divided into four groups and elders are placed over them so far as possible. Group 1 is in charge of Elder M. F. Ralston; Group 2, Elder C. Moran; Group 3, Elder W. Anderson; Group 4, Priest G. M. Hawley. Weekly prayer meetings are held in Group 1 and Group 2, and a joint prayer service in 3 and 4. The attendance in each of these meetings is easily as great as was had before the groups were organized.

A business meeting was called by our pastor on the 12th of July to elect delegates to conference and to transact other business. The ending of the fiscal year was changed from December to June, to conform to that of the general church. The budget committee was rearranged to conform to the plan outlined by Bishop Becker.

District President Guy P. Levitt was with us at that time and offered some good counsel on business meetings in general. "I believe this business meeting is as important as any prayer meeting"; "You are doing business for God,"—were his opening sentences.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Sunday was a mild day, and it was quite a relief from the extreme hot days we have experienced the past week, until the heat was broken Friday evening by a gentle rain. Owing to a number having left the city on vacations, the attendance at Sunday school was below normal. At the close of the lesson study, the Central Orchestra rendered a pleasing number under the direction of Sister J. L. Johnson.

The eleven o'clock service was in charge of Brother Fred Anderson, "Welcome, delightful morn," being the opening hymn. The choir rendered "Recessional" by Kipling, and the speaker of the hour was Elder A. R. White.

At 7.45 o'clock Pastor J. A. Tanner continued his missionary effort, speaking to the people on the lawn and giving them a message which visualized the principles of the doctrine of Christ and the church which has been restored upon this earth in the last days. There are a number of strangers in attendance at these Sunday evening services, which is very gratifying to the officers in charge, and is an opportunity to reach our neighbors and give them knowledge and understanding of the gospel as we have it.

The picture that followed the sermon was "Joseph," as presented by Pathe's Holy Land Series, and we journeyed with the cameraman over points of interest of which we have studied in Holy Writ and which brought back to mind the wonderful character portrayed in this servant of God. Following the close of the picture, a few beautiful scenes were thrown upon the screen, and quietude and happiness reigned over the audience as another Sabbath Day was about to close, and we were to depart to our several homes feeling invigorated for the dawning of another week filled with the duties and cares of life.

The ice cream social held on the lawn of the church by the Semper-Fidelis, a group of young women, was very well attended and netted a nice little sum of proceeds. A very lovely program was rendered prior to the serving of ice cream and cake, and all reports indicate everyone had a nice time.

These young women are an asset to Central, are ever ready to be of service, and are vitally concerned in doing things for the welfare of the people and to create a burning enthusiasm within their bosoms to be present at each and every meeting.

On Tuesday, July 26, Sister Helen Bootman England passed into the great beyond after an illness of but a few days. She is survived by her husband, Chester England, an infant son, Richard Wing, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bootman, and two brothers, Wayne and Max.

Funeral services were held from the home at Overland Park on Thursday afternoon in charge of Elder C. E. Wight, the sermon being delivered by Elder Wilber Prall, president of Lamon Stake. Elder Prall had previously performed the marriage ceremony of Sister Helen. A quartet consisting of Sister Israel Smith, Luella Wight, Elbert Dempsey, and Paul Craig, with Jeanette Craig at the piano, rendered several beautiful numbers, these participants having been closely associated with Helen in musical activities of the church. She was laid to rest in Forest Hill Cemetery, and the wonderful and gorgeous display of so many floral pieces was but a brief expression of the many friends that mourn her loss. Helen was gifted with that wonderful talent of "song" and was oftentimes heard rendering her service in various places where she will never be forgotten. Now that her voice has been stilled, there live with us beautiful memories.

Women's Department

The fourth annual camp of the girls of Kansas City Stake was held at Horseshoe Lake, four miles east of Independence, July 11 to 17. The Blue Birds, Orioles, Temple Builders, and their leaders attended this camp. This year the mothers were invited. The camp has grown from a small beginning four years ago to an attendance of over two hundred this year. Each group furnishes its own tent and provisions, each leader overseeing the girls of her group. The name of La Da Sa Camp Hope has been chosen as a permanent name for the camp, and it will be held each year.

The activities of the camp were well planned. Each morning began with the bugle sounding at six o'clock; then the morning dip of thirty minutes, followed by setting-up exercises. Breakfast must be over and everything in order for tent inspection by nine o'clock, and it was, too. At 9.30 worship service each morning followed by nature study. The noon meal and a rest period; then a class in first aid, after which came the evening swim and supper.

The evenings were filled with games, singing, and entertainment, excepting Wednesday evening, when there was a wonderful prayer and testimony meeting. Saturday afternoon was a treasure hunt, and at the end a pot of piping hot beans was found. The leaders followed with sandwiches, so the beans were eaten on the spot. That evening the Camp Queen was crowned. This was a lovely ceremony.

Sunday morning at sunrise the girls marched to a beautiful hillside for prayer service and again enjoyed a spiritual blessing. Elder J. A. Tanner spoke for the girls in the morning and Elder Cyril E. Wight in the afternoon. There were visitors from Kansas City and Independence. By five o'clock Sunday evening a very profitable camp was broken. We feel that the girls have come to know and love one another during this wonderful week in God's great out-of-doors.

Mount Washington

Notwithstanding the many who are absent from the church at present, there was almost a record attendance last Sunday. We especially enjoyed the 11 a. m. sacramental service and the evening preaching by Elder E. T. Atwell. He chose as his subject, "Why does He love me so?" A quartet of men from Independence was very generous in singing several selections at the evening hour.

The prayer meeting this Wednesday evening will be held at the house of Sister Morse, on Crescent Avenue.

The Boy Scouts have a contest for advancement on, the losing side doing the honors at an evening's entertainment. This contest is quite an interesting affair—including 50-mile bicycle trips without lifts, swimming ability, reading road maps, and numerous other stunts the boys must do to win merit badges, and to advance.

Our pastor and family are not planning on returning immediately because of the illness of Sister Bishop, but we are hoping for a speedy recovery that they may soon be back with us in our church association.

Bennington Heights Church

The funeral of Mrs. Benton D. Brooks, sister of Sister Icie Swanson, was held at the church Thursday, July 14. The church was filled with many friends, many of whom were Saints.

The girls are grateful to the Big Brothers for the attention they received on their trip to the girls' camp at Horseshoe Lake. The Big Brothers secured a truck to take the girls and their luggage to the camp, erected the tent, and cut a supply of wood. They returned later to cut more wood and to see that the girls were comfortable. The Big Brothers is an organization of the young men for the purpose of doing good deeds wherever they can.

The girls got much pleasure from the girls' camp, and they appreciate the work Sister Roy Newkirk, stake superintendent, is doing for them.

Friday evening, July 22, a farewell party was held at the church for Brother and Sister Lon A. Cantrell and Brother and Sister J. H. Tyrrell, who are leaving this week to live in Detroit, Michigan. Brother Cantrell has been superintendent of the Religio, teacher of a Sunday school class, and a member of the choir. Brother Tyrrell was very much interested in his Sunday school class, while Sister Tyrrell was a worker in the primary department of the Sunday school. Both were engaged in the choir work, and Sister Tyrrell has been a regular singer for K L D S. Bennington will feel the loss of these people but feel that they will be an asset to the church in Detroit.

July 17 Elder E. S. Zink was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, and Elder H. W. Goold spoke at 7.45. Elder Ross Higdon preached the morning of the 24th.

Elder D. F. Winn recently drove to Macon, Missouri, to visit his daughter, Sister Stella Wilson.

Stark Acres Church

We continue to gain ground. We have had splendid speakers this year. Patriarch Ammon White was with us from April 27 to May 8. Several of the new members received their patriarchal blessings at that time. Following his meetings, we held forth one night a week in a small settlement, Little Pittsburg, where we held services in a private house until warmer evenings; then held lawn services. Elders E. T. Atwell and the pastor, Ira G. Clutter, were the speakers.

June 27 and 28 the stake missionary, W. D. Tordoff, preached, and then commenced a series of meetings at the Stark Acres Church. On account of sickness, Elder W. I. Fligg filled his appointment one night and Elder Atwell one night. The attendance has averaged thirty-three. There have been four baptisms lately, each from a different family. We gained new members for the Sunday school from the effort at Little Pittsburg.

The banner day was fifty-three at Sunday school.

We have a very interesting Bible class on Wednesday night, also a church history class of adults on Friday night, and a Book of Mormon class of young men and boys. On the same night Sister Willis has a group of Oriole Girls, who meet in a private house close by the church. Brother Willis has charge of the Boy Scout movement. The recent baptisms were two Boy Scouts and two Oriole Girls, ranging from fourteen to eighteen years in age.

On July 9 a wiener roast was held on the lawn of Brother Willis, in South Englewood, about forty being present to enjoy the games.

With splendid sermons, good six thirty o'clock Sunday prayer meetings, and spiritual sacramental meetings, we feel very much encouraged. We have a live bunch of folks to work for and with, which lightens the burden of possible discouragement and enables us to preach and teach and live the gospel as the Master of men would have us to do. The prayers of the Saints are solicited for their continued faithfulness.

Armourdale Church

Sister William Powell, in charge of the Temple Builders, announced Monday evening, July 18, as the date of a business meeting for the Temple Builders, to be held at the home of Sister Woodhead. However, it seems that the girls were "disobedient" and had made other plans, owing to the fact that it was Sister Powell's birthday. Upon her arrival, she found a birthday party had been arranged in her honor and that the girls had a number of presents for her, which were greatly appreciated. Sister Powell's success with the Builders needs no comment.

Sunday evening the Mission had the pleasure of having a musical program, presented by Professor H. C. Koontz, director of the Kansas City, Kansas, Conservatory of Music and Koontz School of Fine Arts, and others under his direction. Miss Nofsinger, instructor with Professor Koontz, demonstrated her talent and versatility by a beautiful rendition upon the violin, and other numbers upon the trumpet and the saxophone during the progress of the program. Saxophone numbers played by Master White, eight years old, one a "trick" musical composition, would indicate a future in music for this youngster. Saxophone numbers executed by Brother Clifford Harris, who has been receiving instruction in music but a short time from Miss Nofsinger, were decidedly complimentary both to Brother Harris and to his instructress.

The piano accompaniment for the program was furnished by Mrs. Flossie Tomlinson, former pupil of Professor Koontz, and well known for her ability of performance upon the piano.

We look forward with pleasurable anticipation to the fulfillment of Professor Koontz's promise to return with another program in September.

Saturday evening, July 23, Brother Verne McCann and Sister Pauline Gross were united in marriage at the home of Elder Charles Strader, Brother Strader officiating.

Argentine Church

Pastor Roy E. Brown is preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons, explanatory of the doctrine of the church, which are designed to more perfectly instruct the newer members with reference to the faith.

On last Sunday a baptismal service was held at the font of the Grandview Church, when three were baptized, Virginia Lucille Campbell, Marion Edwin Weir, and Berl Orville Baker, who were confirmed at the half past six prayer meetings.

Celebrate Elder Weate's Seventieth Birthday

Brother and Sister N. J. Weate were sitting at their evening meal on July 10, at their home in Columbus, Ohio, when a number of their friends unexpectedly called on them and reminded Brother Weate that he had this day attained his full measure of three score and ten years, and would in the future be living on borrowed time.

There were twenty-four of the callers and they brought presents and refreshments, including a birthday cake. They also rendered music and otherwise made the occasion one long to be remembered.

Later a postcard shower came to him from many quarters of the land, including Independence, and his heart was cheered.

Great Britain will never forget this veteran of gospel warfare. He was known especially in the Manchester District. The correspondent was present at the first Sunday school of what is now Beresford Road Church, Manchester. Brother Weate is known to many in the church. The late Joseph Smith, R. C. Evans, also F. G. Pitt, Gomer Griffiths, and many others have testified concerning the hospitality they have received at his hands while over there.

Independence

Stone Church

Pleading for harmony between our ideas of human nature and our ideas of morality, Doctor G. Leonard Harrington concluded his series of three lectures at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday, speaking on the application of some mental laws. Human nature is not inherently bad, he said, but we degrade it by presenting false patterns for it to express itself through. The religion of Jesus Christ should be used, not as a means of escape from facing life squarely, but as a pattern through which human nature and personality may find complete expression.

We must indeed be born again in order to be free from the false patterns, Doctor Harrington said. We must become as little children, and take on their characteristics, which are trustfulness, fearlessness, freedom from anger, freedom from self-consciousness, and capacity to lose self in a serious and significant task. These characteristics are often repressed and warped by a concept of "goodness" which degrades human nature and provides nothing in the way of constructive activity for the growing child personality to follow. "The good child is the one who does what we want him to," said Doctor Harrington; "the bad child is the one who is always active, doing things."

Habit and will power are one and the same thing, he believes. Parents should so train their children that when they grow up they will have the will power to do the right thing, because they have developed the right habits. Their personalities should be given opportunity to develop in unified rather than into divided and conflicting channels. Doctor Harrington's idea of being "too good, too religious," is to have a concept which warps and represses human nature rather than giving it full expression through beautiful patterns such as are found in the religion of Christ.

The morning anthem, "To Thee, my God and Savior," was sung by the Wa Dem Na Glee Club, under the leadership of Paul N. Craig; accompaniment was played by Rosamond Filson, pianist, and Melva Ward, organist. Albert Brackendbury sang a baritone solo, "Fear not ye, O Israel." As an organ offertory, Melva Ward played the largo movement from the "New World Symphony," by Dvorak.

The invocation and benediction were offered by Elder S. S. Smith. Brother D. O. Cato was in charge of the service.

At the Campus

Apostle F. Henry Edwards was the speaker at the Campus Sunday evening. The sermon was preceded by a concert by the Walnut Park Band, under the direction of E. E. Moorman.

After telling the story of the victory of the ancient Christians over the pagan cults of their day, Brother Edwards voiced a call for modern Christians to take up serious combat against the paganism and idolatry of today. He stressed four outstanding aspects of the victory over paganism in the time of the early Christians, which he held might well be revived in these latter days. These were: The Christians out-believed the pagans; they out-thought the pagans; they out-lived the pagans; and they out-died the pagans.

They believed more deeply and believed bigger truths than the pagans; and their beliefs were confirmed by experience, while the pagans were betrayed by their own experience. The religion of the pagans would not stand investigation, while the Christ life demanded thought and was not afraid to venture into uncharted fields. The pagan religion demanded no outstanding moral quality or excellence, while Christianity emphasized wholesomeness and purity of life. The Christians had no fear of death, for their religion taught them of an increasing fellowship with God which went beyond earthly existence; thus they out-lived and out-died the pagans.

There is need today for a vital Christianity which shall overcome modern paganism, Apostle Edwards declared. We must grasp a new significance of the value and worth of life, and intensify the quality of our living because of contact with the Source of better life; we must find actual fellowship with God and thus be remade. Our only justification for taking pride in being called as "the light of the world" is that we shall match that calling. We should refine our lives by demanding the finest of ourselves, and we should recognize the eternal nature and value of spiritual qualities, thus outliving the pagans. We should work with God for the good of all; not that the pagans should really die, but that they should become Christians, that the idolaters should become followers.

A pageant, "The search for happiness," was staged by the Englewood Branch, following the sermon. A girl was seeking happiness, and in her search she was interviewed by Riches, Pleasure, Social Popularity, Knowledge, Fame, Love, and Industry. All promised to make her happy, but when she questioned them each one failed to assure the complete contentment for which she longed. Finally an angel came, bearing the gospel, the means of obtaining everlasting joy and peace, in which all the other sources were blended and purified. The congregation stood to join with the cast in singing, "I have found the glorious gospel," at the close of the pageant.

The service was in charge of Brother D. O. Cato. Bishop Mark H. Siegfried offered the opening prayer. Song service was under the direction of Paul N. Craig. Brother Cato pronounced the benediction.

Following the service proper, a motion picture, "As we forgive," was shown. The story was based on Saint Paul's epistle to Philemon.

The Music Club

This year the Independence Music Club is offering, in addition to the assistance they will give through their loan fund, one full scholarship and one half scholarship in piano, and the same in voice instruction.

This offer is made to the winner in a contest to be held Friday night, September 16. The instructors will be selected from the Department of Music of the Independence Institute of Arts and Science.

Contestants will be required to give their numbers before carefully chosen judges. The judges will consider only the talent of the contestants, giving the untrained equal opportunity with the trained. The contestants will be required to memorize two contrasting numbers. Those who are interested may call one of the members of the committee, Mrs. I. A. Smith, Paul N. Craig, Cordie Hulmes. The Independence Music Club assisted six students to obtain a musical course through their scholarship loan fund last year.

Liberty Street Church

Sunday, July 24, about forty of our congregation started out on an interesting tour. After leaving the church at two o'clock, they went to a well-known place, "Fishing River," where they stopped and read a section in the Doctrine and Covenants and enjoyed a very spiritual meeting. They went on to Richmond, Missouri, and visited the grave of Oliver Cowdery. After taking lunch at the camping grounds, everyone met at the church, where one of the local brethren, Brother Glen Davis, was the speaker, with Brother Ray Wrigley in charge. Everyone feels that this trip has indeed been worth while and educational.

At the morning services, July 31, Miss Virginia Williams rendered a very beautiful vocal solo.

Brother John Dowker was the speaker, taking his text from the second chapter of Paul's epistle to Titus: "But speak thou the things which become sound doctrine: that the aged men be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience. The aged women likewise, that they be in behavior as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things that they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, to be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed. Young men likewise exhort to be sober minded: in all things showing thyself a pattern of good works; in doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech that can not be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you." The speaker of the hour conveyed many new thoughts to the minds of the people.

Walnut Park

Forty Saints were out for the early prayer meeting Sunday. Elders C. K. Green and Ira Burdick presided. The name of Sister J. W. Adams was presented for special prayers, she having returned to the Lakeside Hospital, Kansas City, on Saturday. Beautiful unity was shown, prayer after prayer being offered, with each one remembering Sister Adams in her present need. Testimonies followed, promptly as usual, and Pastor White was constrained to comment on the cause of the spirit present—this being "sincerity of purpose."

The Saints were pleased at this time to see in their midst and to hear in testimony Elder John Boswell, here with his family from Moorhead, Iowa, for a visit with relatives and friends. Brother Boswell was Walnut Park's first pastor (1913), and he and his wife are lovingly remembered here, and warmly welcomed.

Sunday school showed a lighter attendance than usual, some having gone to the Holden reunion for the week-end, and Brother W. T. Gard having taken a class of young men to join other Independence young men at Memorial Hall to hear Doctor Henry Edward Tralle, famous lecturer, formerly of Independence, now of New York City. Following our Sunday school lesson study, Bethen Barnhardt gave a pleasing piano solo, and Beth Collins a clever little reading.

The eleven o'clock speaker was Bishop G. W. Eastwood. Pastor White presided; prayer was offered by R. Barnhardt. Margaret Gard sang "Love never faileth," accompanied by Minnie Dobson. The speaker being a bishop, his subject was the natural one—church finances—which he is able to explain completely and interestingly. He is concerned not only with our stewardships of property, but also with our stewardships of action, assuring us, whether rich or poor, we are all stewards, with a superstructure to build upon the foundation of first principles we have accepted.

Among the Holden visitors Saturday and Sunday was the Walnut Park Band, about twenty-five going together in a bus and others going in their own cars. They enjoyed the trip, the good they could do in several services, the good they likewise received, and the kind hospitality extended to them in the various homes of the Saints. They returned to Independence in time to do their part in the evening service at the Campus.

Second Church

Sunday, July 31, just an hour before noon, Brother Baxter Lafayette Hickman, a bedridden invalid for years, was called to pass from earth life. Brother Hickman had lived for a long time in terrible misery, though wife and children had done what they could to relieve him of pain, and his death was to him just a release for which he had quietly, and sometimes, vocally, prayed. A funeral service was held at Second Church Monday afternoon, at which Elder J. T. Curtis presided and assisted, Bishop B. J. Scott delivering a short sermon. The body was interred at Mound Grove Cemetery.

Spring Branch

The attendance at prayer services, both midweek and Sunday, is steadily gaining which we believe is an indication of spiritual growth. And week by week new faces appear at the various services, which is an indication of numerical growth. This is being partly offset, however, by the vacation season taking its toll, so only ninety-seven were in attendance at Sunday school. Brother W. A. Smith was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, using Matthew 16:13 as his text, and "Building the church" as his subject. He stressed love for one another as the greatest adjunct in the building process, and used freely Zion's Praises, No. 82, as the basis of his remarks.

Brother Jacobson's family have recently returned from a trip through Iowa and to Watertown, South Dakota. The Mabbot family expect to start for points in eastern and western South Dakota the fore part of this week. They expect to be gone about four weeks. These and other choir member vacationists, together with anticipated hot weather during the month of August, have made it seem advisable to give the whole choir a rest for a few weeks, so they can come back full of energy for the fall and winter work.

The Sunday school held its annual picnic at the Campus Saturday afternoon and evening. Handball, swinging, racing, a long table spread with everything good to eat, and all topped off with watermelon and ice cream furnished entertainment until the lights went out.

Englewood

Our pastor, Elder C. F. Davis, worshiped with us Sunday, July 31, the first for some time. His work was of such a nature that he could not be in town. We are pleased to know he will be here now. Elder J. E. Warne presented the morning sermon; his subject, Baptism.

The Religio meets on each Friday night. A short period of class study is enjoyed. Volley ball is played before and after each service. On last Friday night the program was a play given by Sister McConnell's class of summer school pupils. It was a beautiful play and well rendered.

Our attendance at Sunday school has fallen off of late. A few of our number are on the sick list. However, we are glad to report Sister Robert Clow, who has been very sick, as improving. Some of our number are away on vacations.

On Wednesday night, July 27, the young son of Brother and Sister Will Ely was blessed at the prayer service. They have moved to Saint Louis.

On Sunday, July 16, Sister Ruby Petentler and Brother S. Robinson were united in marriage at the church at the close of the Sunday school period. Brother J. M. Terry performed the impressive ceremony. They have gone to Nebraska for a short time. The Sunday school lost one of its best primary teachers, but we wish for Sister Robinson and her companion a happy and prosperous life.

Stewartsville Branch Union Meeting

Sunday, July 24, was a big day for the Stewartsville Branch. It was union meeting of the three branches, Maple Grove, Pleasant Grove, and Stewartsville.

Sunday school was held at 9.45 a. m. in charge of local officers. A fine talk was given by Coventry Archibald at the close of the lesson study.

Preaching services at 11 a. m. were in charge of John Hovenga, Apostle Gleazer being the speaker. He gave us some very useful and practical instructions on how to be true Latter Day Saints.

After a twenty-minute intermission, prayer meeting was conducted by Brethren Moses Hinderks and Coventry Archibald. It was a good spiritual meeting and was enjoyed by all.

Religio at 6.45 was in charge of Elmer Armstrong. After a short lesson the audience was delightfully entertained by the stake orchestra. The members of this orchestra and their leader, Mrs. Omer Hinderks, are deserving of much praise. Preaching followed at 8 p. m., in charge of Brother Frank Hinderks, of Cameron. The music was furnished by the Ladies' and Men's Chorus, Brother Elias Hinderks in charge.

The theme of Apostle Gleazer's sermon was the necessity of building a Zion, a place of refuge and safety, in our day. It was surely a rousing sermon and well received by all. Thus ended a very busy and profitable day.

On Thursday evening, July 28, the Reds, losers in the recent contest, royally entertained the Blues. Everyone entered the spirit of the occasion and donned the red or blue cap which was given him as he entered the church. The Blues were conducted to seats of honor. When all were assembled a short, snappy program was rendered by the Reds. Several original numbers gave it zest. After the program the Blues were escorted to the Christian church basement, where tables were laid for all. The tables were beautifully decorated, blue being the prominent color in the decorative scheme. An abundance of flowers and ferns made the scene very beautiful. A two-course luncheon was served, consisting of chicken sandwiches, potato salad, ice cream, and cake. Approximately one hundred of our members were present. A spirit of geniality and good will prevailed.

When all had been served, they returned to the church, where they were guests at an elaborate wedding. This ceremony united the Reds and Blues again.

Columbus, Ohio

Sacramental meeting July 3 was in charge of H. E. French and A. H. Nieman. A beautiful spirit prevailed throughout the meeting, and everyone felt encouraged.

July 4 Second Columbus Sunday school had its annual Fourth of July picnic on a farm twenty-one miles east of Columbus. There was a bus load and five automobiles full, making fifty-five in all. Games were played and contests held. The swimming was fine, and everyone had a good time. A picnic dinner was spread, and there were many good things to eat. In the afternoon ice cream was served, and in the early evening we started home, tired but glad to have enjoyed a day in the great outdoors.

July 8 the Department of Recreation and Expression had its first meeting, which was a success. We hope to see our numbers increase each week. On July 22 they had a wiener roast at the Storage Dam, with thirty-seven present. We were glad to have our branch president and wife to give inspiration to the young people. We hope to have many more good times together before cold weather.

July 10 our district president, William Grice, met with us and preached at the morning service, taking for a text John 13:34: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another." This was a beautiful sermon and one long to be remembered by those who heard it. We hope Brother Grice will come again soon.

Women's Department met July 14 at the home of Ethel Kirkendall, 832 Oakwood Avenue. Everyone enjoyed the study hour as well as the social time. Hazel Gribben read a paper on "Music in the home," which was very much appreciated.

July 17 T. S. Williams preached, taking for a text Ephesians 2:21: "In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord."

At the evening hour our assistant district president, A. E. Anderton, took for a text Matthew 7:16: "Ye shall know them by their fruits." Both sermons were ably delivered.

The Temple Builders, July 28, had a steak roast at Shady Lane farm, the home of one of their members, Mary Emma Wheeler. All had a wonderful time. Under the leadership of Lucinda Madden, these girls are taking a course in story-telling, and she also teaches them to sing. They have sung some beautiful anthems at church services.

Our prayer services are of a high spiritual order, and everyone takes part, making one hundred per cent meetings.

Brother Joseph Wemlinger and Sister Dorothy Kehlmer, who have been in the hospital, are both able to go home. Sister Francis Morris and Brother Tom Myers are still confined to the hospital but are improving.

The other speakers for the month were G. P. Myers, G. H. Kirkendall, and H. E. French. We appreciate the splendid sermons of our local brethren.

Our Departed Ones

BARNES.—Jane Haxton was born in Sarnia, Ontario, Canada, April 7, 1860. Was united in marriage to William T. Barnes May 3, 1878. She entered the church at Petrolia, Canada, and was a faithful and consistent member until the time of her death. She passed beyond in Los Angeles, California, July 16, 1927. Leaves to mourn her departure, two daughters, Mrs. Royal F. Ballard, Greeley, Colorado; Mrs. Charles R. Wildermuth, Plano, Illinois; and one brother, John H. Haxton, Los Angeles. Funeral sermon was by Glau A. Smith. Burial at Evergreen Cemetery, Los Angeles.

ADKINS.—Victoria Callon Adkins was born October 7, 1843; united in marriage to George D. Adkins in 1863. To them eight children were born, three sons and five daughters. She was baptized early in life. Died at her home in Wakenda, Missouri, June 19, 1927. She was a faithful member. Funeral in the Methodist Church; sermon by Elder William G. Hamann, to a large number of relatives and friends.

WILLIAMS.—Mary Williams, daughter of Evan and Margaret Davis, was born at Erwin, Wales, May 26, 1839. She married William L. Williams in April, 1856, and with her parents sailed for America on the S. Gurley sailing ship, with Captain Dan Jones, on her wedding day. They settled in Ohio, where they lived some years. After moving several different places, they settled in Bevier, Missouri, where she resided until the death of her companion twelve years ago. Eleven children were born to them, ten having preceded her in death. Since the passing of her husband, Sister Williams has lived with her daughter, Mrs. Alma R. White, Kansas City, Missouri. She died at the Independence Sanitarium July 13, 1927. Sister Williams had the distinction of being among the oldest members of the church. She joined when quite young, being a member for three quarters of a century. In her younger days she was a very active member, devoted to her church and faithful in attendance. Of later years physical disability kept her confined most of the time to her home. Funeral services were conducted from the Stahl Undertaking Parlor, Independence, by J. A. Tanner. Interment in the White family vault in Woodlawn Cemetery.

HICKMAN.—Baxter Lafayette Hickman was born November 13, 1866, at Coldwater, Tennessee. Surviving are his widow, Ida E., with whom he has lived since 1889; three daughters, Mrs. Anna Inman, Mrs. Gladys Weir, Mrs. Dorothy Griffith; two sons, Frank Hickman and Harry Hickman; his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hickman; two sisters, Mrs. T. C. Kelley, and Mrs. Lillie Wolfe; a brother, E. P. Hickman. He became a member of the church in 1887; has been an invalid and bedridden for many years; and death came as a release to him on Sunday morning, July 31, at the home on South Delaware Street, Independence. Funeral services were conducted at Second L. D. S. Church, at 3 p. m., Monday, by J. T. Curtis and B. J. Scott, and the burial was at Mound Grove Cemetery.

finement can come from reading and intense study of the word of God as contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the revelations of God to man, wherever found. Latter Day Saints have been neglectful of these treasures put in their care, and we trust the exhortation of Bishop Fry will find response in many of the homes of the Saints.

Macy Campbell Honored by Coworkers

Rural America for June contains an article of appreciation of the life and work of Brother Macy Campbell which challenges our interest. Brother Macy Campbell was one of the boys who found himself in circumstances not made to correspond with his ambitions. He was not content to remain in these surroundings, so at an early age he began intense effort to extricate himself. In the process, he used much of energy, intelligence, and application, which are likely the constituents of genius.

We are quoting the appreciation from Rural America in another column, that the church may get the inspiration to like achievement.

World Peace

The London Spectator, in an article on "Mr. Mellon," makes the frank statement that the editors of The Spectator place "Anglo-American friendship above all the other aims of British policy," for "if the United States and the British Empire stand together, the peace of the world will, for all practical purposes, be assured." This belief is not fully shared by Mr. Stoddard, who in a recent number of Colliers in an article on "The rising tide of color," seems to think that not even the union of all English-speaking nations will prevent the rising of the yellow race.

New Booklet on Stewardship

There is now in process of being printed, a new booklet entitled "Problems of Industrial Zion." The content of this booklet is an amplification of a series of lectures given during the last General Conference and the matter of stewardships and cooperation in developing Zion is presented from quite a new angle.

It is written in a very interesting style. Definite situations are discussed and analyzed in a logical, common sense way, and the pleasing thing about the book is the fact that the entire treatise is based on the spiritual ground work of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The booklet is designed as a text for study by the priesthood in their priesthood meetings and by the membership in their study classes throughout the church. The First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric urge that this booklet be secured and study work begun. The Herald Publishing House will receive your orders now for this booklet.

The booklet will be about one hundred and seventy-five pages and will be sold for 20c each.

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

A VISIT WITH A UNIQUE CHARACTER

In a recent "Little Journey to Palmyra," I spoke of having met at the hotel a Mr. Miner. We had just registered (on July 23) and made inquiry about "Mormon Hill," and we were by this man regaled with a series of yarns told in a manner which suggested oft telling. So we determined to visit him at his home, which he told us was about half way to the Hill from Palmyra. On the morning of the 24th, after a rather early breakfast, we drove to his place. His house lies just off the new concrete road some two or three hundred yards, in the midst of a small grove of shade and fruit trees, amid a rambling confusion of shrubs, perennials, and annuals. It gives many evidences of age and at one time must have been a fairly well-appearing farmhouse; and even yet presents a picturesque appearance despite its unpainted and run-down condition and the neglected surroundings.

Not quite certain from its appearance that anyone was "at home," I went to the house to reconnoiter, while Brothers Fry and Gardner with their cameras skirmished for some good views of the quaint farm place. I don't know just why these military terms occur to me while writing of the visit, unless it be the memory of the mild battle which went on in the ancient and somewhat squalid interior a little after our arrival there.

You may remember I told of this man being an "old-timer" about Palmyra, some eighty-four years of age, and that he poses as an authority on the history and family doings of "Joe" Smith and his relatives. I found the old gentleman just having finished his breakfast, prepared and eaten in his self-imposed loneliness. Thus finding him "at home" and willing to talk, I called the brethren in, and we listened to a queer conglomeration of tradition, historical fact, projection, untruth, and what not. I shall not try to give a connected story of our questioning and his replies, together with his voluntary contribution, but rather to present a "story" of what we learned. Later I hope to use an article he promised to supply us, together with a picture or two.

It seems he was born in that part of the country, and with the exception of a few years spent in Kansas, (near Blue Rapids, if I remember aright,) he had lived his life in the environs of Palmyra. About twenty years ago he had purchased the present farm of some one hundred acres, with the intention of himself and wife spending their remaining days there. Some twelve years ago his companion passed away, and he has lived alone despite the urging of a son and other relatives to live with them.

This much of his own history told, he launched into a history (?) of "Joe" Smith. For many years I have wondered at the persistency of certain stories, the truthfulness of which may well be doubted; but after listening to this man's tales, I wonder no longer. He poses as an "authority" on "Joe" Smith's early history, yet he has gathered his "material" largely from local traditions and "hearsay." These have doubtless been modified and changed to some degree by his readings, etc. "Historians" so-called, and newspaper story writers coming to Palmyra to get local coloring, meet this old man, note his yarns and assertions, and without any attempt to verify, hand them out as true history. A series of stories is right now running in a daily paper of Rochester in which much of this jargon appears. Here is a part of the "stuff" he gave us:

"Joe" Smith's mother early had a manifestation that she was destined to mother a son who would in God's hands become a great religious leader. She had picked Alvin to be the one, but he disappointed her by "dying young." So "Joe" succeeded to the place. He was early religious and claimed to receive visits from heavenly messengers, who told him of the plates buried on the Hill, which he was to get and translate after he had properly prepared himself. He spent considerable time digging for treasure and would frequently be seen in various fields at this strange occupation. Besides this, he dug three "caves" by divine or angelic command. The purpose was to meet God in these caves, when the right one was finally finished. The first two proved abortive, after having been carried into the hill about twenty feet, it then in each case being told him by his angelic monitor that the ground was not sacred. But in the third case the cave was carried in forty feet, and this ground, he was told, was holy.

To this cave "Joe" would come each day and spend an hour or so in it alone, while two of his faithful followers stood guard at the adit. Mr. Miner was sure where all three caves were dug, the last named being on his own farm, not far from the house, and which he would show us.

He mentioned sheep stealing, and we asked him, "Were the Smiths thieves, or immoral?" And he answered quite positively, "No, they were not; and their reputation for integrity was good."

"Well," said we, "how about this sheep stealing story anyway?"

"I never heard of him stealing sheep except once." Then he told this odd tale:

One morning Mr. Stafford, a neighbor of the Smiths, missed a black wether. In a few hours "Joe" came and asked Mr. Stafford if he had missed a sheep. On being told he had, Smith said, "Well, I got it. The Lord commanded me to get a black sheep and offer it as a sacrifice. All creatures are His, so I did not think I was stealing to take it. But so long as you think the sheep was yours, I want to pay you for it. I have no money, so I am willing to make sap buckets for you if you need them." So, according to the story, "Joe," being told Mr. Stafford did need the buckets, made an amount of them. I asked Mr. Miner, "Did Smith satisfy Stafford in the payment?"

"Yes," was the reply; "Mr. Stafford said he made enough buckets to pay for three such sheep."

Then I asked, "Did he steal any other sheep?"

"No! I never heard of him stealing anything except this black sheep."

What a queer tale! How did I feel? Amused.

The frankness with which Joseph Smith has told of his early experiences, strange and unusual as they may have been, and the utter absence of any hint of "sacrificial sheep" and "sacred caves," together with the highly "hearsay" character of Mr. Miner's story, justifies one in discrediting it in toto. And to me it is strange how newspaper writers and "historians" (?) of the Werner type, and Linn, will credit to any degree such trash and nonsense.

If Mr. Miner's sources of information are correct, Joseph Smith must have been distinctly lugubrious, for while he would sometimes smile, "he was never known to laugh," said Mr. Miner. Of course I've neither heard him laugh nor seen him smile; but the oil painting of him, which for so many years hung in the sitting room in Liberty Hall, was not that of a man who never laughed. And of course no one who is at all acquainted with the writings of the man can believe such a tale. Really it makes me laugh to recall the statement.

Mr. Miner brought from somewhere in the house the copy of a letter which he some years ago had written to George Albert Smith. This letter Brother Fry read aloud while we listened. In it was recounted most of what I have just written, and some more. A copy of this letter we were promised. When I get it, I want our readers to have a chance to read it.

Well, about an hour was spent with Mr. Miner in his home, and then we asked him if he would show us one of the caves, the one which is, according to him, on his farm. He said he would. So we went outside, and pausing long enough for Brother Gardner to take a snapshot of the aged man, we accompanied him slowly through the barnyard and an old and moribund orchard, through a sheep pasture, up the slope of a ridge smaller but similar to Hill Cumorah, over the ridge a few yards to where on the east slope of the hill in a small cluster of trees is a bare spot which Mr. Miner said is the "caved-in opening" of a cave dug by "Joe" Smith and which he is sure still exists in the hill. It is the "completed" cave which was often visited by Joseph for meditation near sundown, according to the "tale." No sign of a cave appears on the surface, and in response to questions, Mr. Miner said he would permit us to explore sometime. We three expressed to each other the desire to visit again the spot, with shovels, to see if perchance there is a cave there, and if so, what for a cave it is. Even if a cave be there, it is far from established that Smith dug it. Why dig on other people's property when they had a farm of their own?

Oh, well, a thousand questions or less arise. These traditions and old men's tales (or should I have said women's?) are amusing to say the least. What with "treasure digging," which according to the traditions was carried on over quite a territory, the "sacred cave" enterprises, the regular tasks of farming, together with the many tasks of writing, reading, studying, visiting, talking, etc., etc., which Joseph Smith himself tells of engaging in, he must have been quite a busy chap—industrious to the "nth" degree, yet some people would have him lazy.

Despite his eighty-four years of age, Mr. Miner seemed to make the not easy walk from the house to the hill and return quite easily, though slowly, and kept up a "running fire" of talk, and displayed quite a sense of humor and ready repartee. On the way back he asked us if we had visited the Martin Harris home. We had not, and he offered to go with us. So we got into the car, and driving through Palmyra again, went north of the village a mile or so and saw what is claimed to have been the home of Martin Harris in the twenties of the nineteenth century. It is a substantially built house of "lake stones" well laid up in cement. I do not know that it is definitely stated that the house is the one Martin Harris lived in then, but it is the farm, without doubt, on which he lived. Mr. Miner informed us that Mr. Harris's support in publishing the Book of Mormon cost him the farm; at least he was compelled to sell it to pay his obligations.

After taking some pictures of the house, and chatting with the present owner, Mr. Jeffrey, we took Mr. Miner back to his home, left him at the gate (or, the gap where the gate once was), and headed the Dodge south on the road to Fayette, or near it. It was late in the afternoon when we again passed Hill Cumorah, so when we reached Waterloo we stopped for lunch.

From "Brother Bean" at the Joseph Smith Farm, we had the day previously received accurate information how to reach the Whitmer farm; so shortly after leaving Waterloo we were some three miles or thereabouts south and west of Waterloo at a farm which the Utah people have recently purchased from the owner, Mr. Manger. It is a well-lying farm, some one hundred acres or so in extent, and has on it a well-preserved wooden building of the Doric type of architecture, rather striking in appearance. It is said to be the farm owned by the Whitmers, and doubtless is. Bought by the Utah people recently, they get possession next April. Thus another one of the historic eastern places is secured by our ecclesiastical cousins. They will, I venture the guess, soon have it looking better than it does at present. We were courteously shown through the house by Mr. Manger, and later, while Brethren Fry and Gardner photographed under difficulties, I chatted with the farmer. He was not at all well informed in the history, but seemed quite positive that the farm is one of the best in the State of New York.

Leaving the Whitmer farm about two o'clock, or a bit after, we returned to Waterloo, and then headed for Keuka Park, my desire being to call briefly on Mrs. Mack, widow of Herman Mack, deceased about a year ago, a descendant of the Macks to whom Lucy Mack Smith was related. We reached Keuka Park somewhere about four or five o'clock, had a very brief visit with the aged woman, and left for Elmira. There we ate supper and there we separated, I taking the train for New York City, Brethren Fry and Gardner to return, after a night's rest, to Rochester.

On the trip from Palmyra to Elmira, we had enjoyed not only the historic spots we had visited, but we had seen a most beautiful country. For miles we had skirted Seneca Lake, and had driven for miles along Keuka Lake. It is one of the prettiest of landscapes around these lakes, vistas rich in beauty being so plentiful that one is surfeited. And so when I crawled into the narrow and stuffy bunk of a Pullman on the siding at Elmira, to be taken by a midnight train to New York City, I was weary, but I presume that I, together with Brethren Fry and Gardner, was glad of the opportunity to have visited spots so rich in historic memories of church development, and wishing that many more of the Saints could have been with us on the trip. And I am glad to share with my readers this another Little Journey, and shall hope that the emotions experienced and pleasures enjoyed together, perhaps with the disappointments met, might the better qualify me for service to the cause I love and the church to which I have given my fealty and labor for so many years. I think without doubt my interest in and knowledge of our earlier history have been vitalized by the visit.

Are You Reading the Book of Mormon?

In the HERALD of August 3 our readers saw printed a telegraphic message from Bishop Charles Fry, which proposed to all interested parties that between now and the centennial date of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon they join him in re-reading the book. I will say that to me there came the urge to do as Bishop Fry suggests. This is not the result of shallow emotion, but came from the sense of not knowing enough about a book which is more important to Latter Day Saints than any other outside the Holy Bible.

I am persuaded that many have learned from others the major part of what they know about both the Bible and the Book of Mormon, and I believe this to be an unsafe basis for my faith, or for the faith of any man or woman who is seeking eternal life, or to become an instrument of God in the salvation of man.

I suggest that any believer in the Bible set himself down now and read the first seven chapters of the New Testament—do it while you are keenly alive and awake—work at it. I feel safe in saying you will gain enough new thought to pay unbelievable dividends on this investment of time and effort. The Sermon on the Mount will lift you to a new mountain of faith; the simplicity and directness of the language will enlist your admiration; the doctrine will impel you to repentance and action; you will become a new man.

If this results, and it will, then turn to Doctrine and Covenants 83: 8, and read the paragraph under your softened and progressive mood. The climax of peace and acceptance will come when one follows this by the reading of Bishop Fry's telegram, and resolves to join him in rereading the Book of Mormon before September 22.

What will the church gain if this be done?

1. A confirmed faith that Jesus is the Christ.
2. A knowledge at first hand of what the book contains of history, of doctrine, of the contact of God with his people.
3. A habit of relying upon oneself for a comprehension of the word of God, rather than accepting the deductions of friends or foes.
4. A spiritual vision; this always results in proportion to the time and effort given to study of the books of life.
5. A unity of endeavor which will tend toward a common faith and understanding.

Elder J. Charles May states that on last Friday night ten young people of Richmond, Ray County, Missouri, in Far West Stake, expressed themselves as anxious to join Bishop Fry in rereading the Book of Mormon. Since that meeting, according to information received from the president of the Richmond Branch, Elder William Hamann, the number of Saints who have resolved to read or reread the book has been increased to twenty-four.

Elder O. Salisbury called Sunday night from Saint Joseph and stated that seventy Saints in the First, Second, and Third Saint Joseph Branches had pledged themselves to reread the Book of Mormon this year.

Doubtless throughout the church there are very many who have responded or will respond to the suggestion. Let us with one accord consecrate time enough to accomplish this good work, so that knowledge and unanimity of understanding may crown the people of God, and prepare them for the intensive work of the near future—for the activities of the hastening time and the building of Zion.

September 22, only a month and one half, and the church will be celebrating in Independence, and in a large number of local churches, the centennial of the coming forth from the earth of a great and marvelous witness that Jesus is the Christ. What does it matter that upon this same day two men shall choose to do battle for supremacy in the fistic world? What does it matter that the rage and vain imaginings of men shall deter them from investigating the claims of those who have received an earnest of their inheritance? Let peace and faith and the spirit of study prevail among the Saints, and Zion shall arise and shine. R. J. L.

Change of Wave Length Denied

Considerable has been said in the HERALD about the dissatisfaction existing among those who usually tune in to hear K L D S programs, but who have been missing since the change of wave length because they could not get satisfactory results under the present arrangement.

Because of this condition, a hearing before the Federal Radio Commission was applied for and granted.

The hearing was held before the Federal Radio Commission at Washington July 29. Brother Franklyn D. Jones, of Washington, presented the case for K L D S in such a masterly manner as to win comments from the commissioners and others in attendance at the hearing. The witnesses for K L D S were President Frederick M. Smith and Brother Arthur B. Church. In order to obtain a hearing before the commission, it was necessary for the church station to request a specific frequency, or wave length. The specific frequency requested was denied, but it seems quite possible, judging from the following letter from Commissioner Bellows, that K L D S will shortly be moved to a more favorable wave length than that used at present:

August 5, 1927.

Mr. Arthur B. Church,
Director, Radio Station K L D S, Independence, Missouri.

Dear Mr. Church:

In transmitting herewith the order of the commission denying your application to be assigned to 650 kilocycles, I want to tell you that the whole commission was very much impressed by your presentation of the case for Station K L D S, and wants me to see if I could work out any possible plan whereby your station can get a better frequency. Two or three shifts are about to be made as the result of recent hearings, and I believe that I could work out a solution which in the end will be even more satisfactory than the one you suggested.

I am going to get to work on this problem within the next few days and will let you know just as soon as I have arrived at some results which seem feasible.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) H. A. BELLOWS, Commissioner.

The Book of Mormon and Archæology

BY S. A. BURGESS

The Compass

The Book of Mormon speaks of a ball and a moving needle which gave to Lehi the directions in which they should travel. This has been challenged, but those well informed by later investigations have shown that the compass was had among the sailors in the eastern seas as early as the third century of the Christian Era. It may not have been used in Europe until Marco Polo returned from China in 1260, but it appears that it was used for at least a hundred years before that, and it may have been much earlier. Encyclopedias date it back to a very remote period. (See Stebbins' Book of Mormon Lectures, pages 139, 140.)

Language

Articles have previously appeared in the HERALD giving a list of words and names showing Hebrew influence.

Some writers stress clearly the difference between the Indian and Hebrew, but we must remember it was twenty-one hundred years from the time Lehi left Jerusalem until Columbus discovered America. During that period the Lamanites were without "the record" and possessed only a limited tradition. The brass plates brought from Jerusalem, the plates of Nephi, which doubtless tended to preserve the language for the first one thousand years among the Nephites, were not had by the Lamanites.

Yet when we note the sweeping changes which have taken place in the English language, since Chaucer, a matter of only five hundred years, we can see that even the written record would not preserve their language entirely, or prevent many changes taking place in so long a period as one thousand years. In Italy there has been a continual literature, yet the language was greatly changed from the classical Latin. The same is true of the Greek. Languages change, even with a written literature.

But the changes which take place without a literature are many times as great. We may note the difference in the five hundred years from Alfred the Great to Chaucer, in England. To the student of languages, these changes are remarkable and would easily account for the great variety of dialects and tongues which have developed among the Indians. The Indians, or Lamanites, were one thousand years with very little literature, then for eleven hundred years without any possible access to the sacred records, as the plates were buried while they descended during this period in the social scale. There then followed four hundred and thirty-five years under the contact of a variety of European cultures. Even with a literature, sweeping changes in language have taken place in central Europe, and there is a wide variety of dialects. This is true even in cultural Germany and cultural France. Is it not remarkable that so many similarities of language can be found, rather than the reverse? These similarities are to be found in The Book Unsealed, chapter 7.

Hebrew Origin

It is true that many writers do not recognize the Hebrew relationship, but many writers have noted as has Bancroft, that the Hebrew descent theory has been discussed at greater length than any other. Tradition points to a coming from the west. There are a number of incidents repeated of relics found, and even of parchment found, with Hebrew characters (see American Antiquity, pp. 68-70); stone with Hebrew characters (Antiquities of Licking County, Ohio; also traditions of the De Coo Dah, pp. 116, 117). R. Etzenhouser mentions this in the seventh chapter of The Book Unsealed, and follows in the eighth chapter with Egyptian resemblances. In the seventh chapter appears a list of comparative Indian and Hebrew words.

The Aztec Indians possessed traditions of the Creation similar to the early Biblical record (The Book of Mormon Proved by Archæology, pp. 46, 47, 60). There is evidence of one true God among them (ibid., pp. 60, 101, 130, 134, 135). They had an organized priesthood (ibid., page 128).

Evidences of Christianity

The Book of Mormon states that Jesus came to the people on this continent. Evidences of the cross as a type of immortality and of the resurrection are exceedingly numerous. A few of them are found in the Book of Mormon Proven by Archæology, pages 47, 106, 145-150.

*Will You Help Raise
the 1927-28 Budget?*

There are also numerous traditions of a bearded white man who brought peace and blessings to the people. Among the Aztecs he was called Quetzalcoatl (page 47). He was known by different names among the Peruvians and others, Viracocha and Bochica (page 61). Partial discussion with a list of other names, but which are evidences of the same culture hero, is to be found in this same book, pages 138 to 145, 149 to 153.

There is also evidence of Christian baptism and of Christian communion. (Ibid., pp. 48 and 138.)

When the Spaniards found the cross, the rites of baptism, and of communion practiced among the Aztecs, they doubted, repudiated, but finally some were inclined to believe they had a knowledge of Christianity. But they failed to recognize that the Bible itself gives evidence of an early revelation of the Son of God, even before there was a Hebrew people? There are several of these passages given in the New Testament.

On the American Continent there is not only the symbol of the cross as a type of immortality and the Son of God, but there is this tradition of the Bearded White Man coming to them. We are even informed in Kingsborough's Mexican Antiquities, volume 6, page 166, quoted by H. A. Stebbins in his Book of Mormon Lectures, page 156, that they were acquainted not only with the Sublime Conception of one great Spirit, the Creator of the Universe, but also with the Holy Trinity.

The Book of Mormon tells the story of Lehi and his four sons, four brothers, who crossed the sea. In fact, according to the Book of Mormon, there were eight in the party, including Lehi and his four sons, the two sons of Ishmael, and Zoram. It is interesting, therefore, to find a Mexican tradition of seven families who crossed broad lands and seas until they reached the central country (Native Races, vol. 5, p. 209). The people of Mexico more frequently spoke of themselves as the descendants of four or eight original families. The Pawnee Indians also had a tradition of ancestors.

It is, however, to the four brothers they most frequently refer in their traditions. There is also the story in the Book of Mormon of the difference between the brothers, which is repeated in Indian tradition. One of the tribes speaks of the coming of four brothers, of whom the eldest was "puffed up." (North Americans of Antiquity, p. 28.)

These are but a few brief indications of what archæology has to offer. The books to which we referred in a previous article give more data upon this and other points of interest. Taken separately, some of the evidence might be rejected. Taken together, they present a remarkably complete story.

The Development of Talents

BY FLORENCE KENNEDY

"There is a time in the affairs of men which, taken at the tide, leads on to fortune." In Matthew 25:14-30, we find the parable of the talents. We are to understand that a talent is a sum of gold equivalent to about $29,000 in terms of our present money system.

We see where the servant who had received five talents made an additional five talents, likewise he that had received two talents made an additional two talents, but he that had received but one talent buried the same and forgot all about it until the day of reckoning came, when, because of his failure to improve on that which was given him, his one talent was taken away from him and was given to the servant who had ten talents. They that had improved on their talents justly received the blessing of their master.

Let us see how we can apply this parable to our own lives.

We are brought into this world to do good. As we grow, we acquire a certain degree of intelligence; as we develop and our knowledge of the universe increases, we become children of our circumstances, and we are held responsible to God for our success or failure in life. If we succeed, we receive the blessing of the Father; if we fail, we can not expect to receive any more than the servant in the parable, who had failed to develop the talent given him.

Being creatures of our own circumstances we are, nevertheless, possessed with certain God-given talents. It is expected of us that we develop these talents, using them to further the spread of God's work among men. How to discover and develop the God-given talents is another problem; and as the development of our talents should start in childhood, it places a great responsibility on parents. We should watch closely the actions of our children, and as a certain talent asserts itself we should encourage and aid in its development, that the results obtained from a proper development of the talent made, be used in the proper direction.

We often hear the expression made that a person is talented, "but how sad it is that his talents are not used in the furtherance of God's work!" So you see we have a twofold responsibility; first, to discover our talents; and second, to see that proper development is made of our talents and that the development is used in the right direction. We are not all gifted alike, but nevertheless God gives unto us certain talents, and as we discover them, their development, if properly applied, comes in a natural way. It is as if God were saying to us, "Here, take this talent, and as you endeavor to improve it, I will crown your efforts with success."

Have you ever noticed one of our giant ocean liners docking at its pier? On either side and at the stem and stern of the vessel are powerful little tugs, first pulling this way, then that way, but working always in unison, and finally the large ship is docked. The tugs have done their work, and the ship has arrived safely home. So it is in the development of our talents. We may require lots of energy, but if applied in the right direction the desired results are obtained, and we may then feel we are entitled to the reward that is justly earned.

There are many talents which we can develop for the service of God: the secretary's work; treasurer's; and in fact all offices in the church can be developed. We should fit ourselves and develop those talents by careful study every day, and when the time comes that our branch needs those officers we will be prepared to act. Study your branch, see what it needs, then try to fit yourself accordingly.

The priesthood is a gift from God. Could we not call it a talent? It has to be developed by careful study, not only in the church, but at home in everyday life, and when put into practice becomes a talent. I would call hospitality a talent. How nice it is to go into a home and feel content because there is a welcoming spirit there. We could all develop this talent by gentleness and kindness to others, and if we put this in our everyday life it will become a habit. It is then a talent well developed.

Our vocabulary can become a talent. This we must study carefully. Let us pick up our dictionary every day, study a word, and the meaning of that word. If we were just to take one word a day, we could soon improve much, and after a while we would have a talent developed. If we will try to develop this talent, when asked to give a short talk it will not be so hard for us. There is a true story of a great sculptor who found a piece of marble. It was dirty and supposed to be of no value, but he took it home and out of it carved a beautiful angel. Though discarded by others, he knew its value as soon as he saw it, and is it not the same with many of us? We think we are no good, but if we will study every day, not just once in a while, and put these talents into action in the service of God, we can soon develop wonderfully.

We must develop our talents so that their proper use may become a habit with us. Habits once formed cling ever so tenaciously; so let it be with our talents. May they cling to us and may we use them properly.

Lamoni a Music Center

It has come to be traditional that Lamoni and Graceland College form a center for fostering the best in music in this part of the country. Graceland has cooperated with Lamoni to this end. The musical interests of the college and of Lamoni are so closely interwoven that it is practically impossible to draw a line of distinction. The music course at Graceland is so constructed that it can take care of the many who desire to appreciate music as well as of those who wish to specialize in that field. The Oratorio Society, the orchestra, and for the more talented singers, the A Cappella Choir, make an unusual opportunity for those who desire to participate in music. It has been found that about eighty per cent of the college students take part in some musical activity during the school year. Upon arriving in this community one soon catches the spirit and agrees that music is a very worth-while avocation, from a social and cultural standpoint. People who sing in just a mediocre way and who appreciate music enjoy many happy hours in Lamoni's musical organizations.

There are four music courses offered at Graceland: the three-year public school music course, a piano course, a vocal course, and one in band and orchestral instruments. These courses are fully accredited, and graduates from the three-year public school music course receive a state certificate from Iowa. The public school music course offers three majors, piano, voice, and band or orchestral instruments. By taking one more year in a larger institution, one may receive his degree in music.

Each of the literary societies at Graceland has a glee club, a quartet, and an orchestra in which one may participate and enjoy much good.

The Lamoni public schools offer very good instruction in the musical field. There are classes in stringed, woodwind, and brass instruments. About fifty children are enrolled in the stringed classes. These classes act as a feeder for the high school orchestra. There is also a beginners band which supplies more experienced material for the high school band. The high school orchestra plans to go to the Iowa state high school music contest again next spring, as it did last year. The trip was exceedingly valuable. The vocal department of the public schools is also very good. The high school has a glee club and a quartet. Each year the grades and high school give separate operettas.

The community is very proud of the orchestra. This organization is made up of college and towns people. It plays for Sunday school every Sunday morning and gives a monthly concert at the church on the third Sunday evening of the month. The orchestra also furnishes a number on the Lyceum course each winter. Not only does it play in Lamoni, but it also gives concerts in some of the neighboring cities. The band is an appreciated asset to the community. This band gives weekly concerts during the summer months and a concert or two during the winter. The music is not the usual small one can appreciate and comprehend the unequalled beauties and advantages of this style of singing—where the participants are without the aid of the instrument to draw their faulty intonation, diction, phrasing, tone production, etc. This choir has set forth these standards and ideals.

The A Cappella Choir represent Graceland College in a most commendable way by giving concerts in some of the larger branches. A member of this choir may, upon recommendation of the head of the music department, receive a Graceland College gold seal of honor after two years of consistent work.

Graceland college fosters a Lyceum course which also proves a very delightful asset to Lamoni. This year some of the numbers are: Harry Farbman, violinist, first rank; the Drake Quartette; Riccardo Martin, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company; well-known lecturers; a concert by the Graceland orchestra; a play by the college players; and others equally good. The Lyceum committee is very particular to select only the best for its audiences.

From this brief survey of the musical band type, but, like all of the other musical organizations is of a very excellent standard. The Lamoni Band is always dependable for all local and church activities where it is needed.

The Oratorio Society is the largest regular choir in Iowa. It furnishes music for the regular preaching service at the Brick Church and a monthly concert on the first Sunday evening of each month. This choir gives the "Elijah" annually, and a secular concert with an assisting artist. This year the proceeds will go for a much-needed grand piano for the church.

With the disorganization of the Oratorio Society at the end of last school year, the summer choir was organized. It kept up the usual concerts and gave the cantata "Olivet to Calvary" by Maunder at the Lamoni stake reunion. This was very successful, and the plans for next year are similar.

The A Cappella Choir is composed of about twenty of the better singers of Graceland and Lamoni. The aim of the A Cappella Choir, as the name would indicate, is to foster the art of unaccompanied singing. Some of the greatest authorities in this country and abroad have advocated unaccompanied singing of this kind. After hearing an A Cappella Choir, interests of a small college and an agricultural community, it can readily be seen that this very cultured phase of musical development is amply provided for.

Lamoni's reputation as a music center is largely attributable to its being the home of Graceland College.

In the Spirit of Sacrifice

In response to letters sent out telling the wives of missionaries what the Budget Committee has adjusted their allowances to be for the coming fiscal year, the Presiding Bishopric is receiving some very nice replies.

One brother writing in behalf of the family says: "We received your very kind letter and report of the Budget Committee, and while we had hoped for a slight raise in our family allowance, yet let us assure you that we are seeking to make our contribution to the work in the spirit of sacrifice, and we would not ask more than others in similar circumstances can also receive."

This kind of a spirit will certainly encourage those trying to do the work in the general offices, and will build up the work everywhere.

Here is one whose allowance was also cut: "I believe you have allowed me what you were able to, and I also believe that if it should become necessary and I need extra help you will be willing to help me. I am as strong as ever in the faith."

This last one is a widow whose husband gave his best to the ministry of the church.

Are those laboring in the affairs of men as willing to sacrifice that these families shall have their allowances on time?

Are we laborers together, as stated in Doctrine and Covenants 119:8—men of business and of labor sacrificing equally with the man of the ministry and his family?

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By M. H. SIEGFRIED.

Sister Hiram Harder, 105 Forest Avenue, Independence, has turned over to the Graphic Arts Bureau a copy of an extra edition of the Nauvoo Neighbor, published on Sunday, at 3 p. m., June 30, 1844, after the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. The copy is in a fairly good state of preservation. It will be mounted on linen, a photograph copy made of it, and then placed in a vault. Throughout the church there are many photographs, books, pamphlets, etc., of great historical value which will eventually be lost if not properly taken care of. The Graphic Arts Bureau will file such away in the fireproof vault in the Library Building in Independence if they are placed in possession of its officers.

Three-Toed Horse Clue to Oldest Nebraska Man

Men lived in Nebraska 4,000,000 years ago, because—

They made peaceful instruments out of the fresh bones of a three-toed horse, and—

The three-toed horse lived in Nebraska 4,000,000 years ago, because—

That is the estimate of geologists—

Many of whom admit they are not sure of their estimate on the same.

Such is the line of reasoning behind the latest scientific discovery, or claim, that "Nebraska has produced the most ancient evidence of the existence of man known to science."

Based on Finds

The claim is propounded as a question in the May issue of Science, a magazine that features the "finds" of archæologists.

The archæologists base their claim to 4,000,000-years-ago men on the "finds" or "artifacts" on the Cook "fossil farm" near Agate, Nebraska.

For seventeen years Doctor Edwin H. Barbour, geologist of the University of Nebraska; Doctor C. W. M. Poynter, anthropologist of the University of Nebraska Medical College; and Doctor Robert Gilder, Omaha archæologist, have been contending that a man with a mien similar to the mudmen shown here, [illustration not reproduced] broad of face, powerful of neck, and receding forehead, roamed these plains along with the three-toed horse and mastodon some 4,000,000 years ago.

The Artifacts

And now they've found the "artifacts"!

What are the artifacts?

Let Doctor Poynter explain:

"When aboriginal man first bashed his enemy upon the head, he took whatever stone was handy," said Doctor Poynter. "But he came to observe that some stones are more efficacious than others for bashing purposes. Whereupon, given a smooth stone, he chipped it to a point, as being conducive of producing more damage.

"Thus was produced the first artifacts. All tools and implements found by archæologists which show that they have been artificially altered by the aborigines are known as artifacts."

300 of 'Em—300!

For four years, working with tractors, Harold Cook of Agate and his scientific friends have been mining artifacts from Cook's fossil farm on the "bad lands" of Nebraska.

With the utmost secrecy, lest curiosity seekers disturb them, they unearthed 300 artifacts.

Nebraska knew nothing of the project. When the first announcement of the rich find was made in New York by Doctor Henry Fairfield Osborn, president of the American Museum of Natural History, in a report to the American Philosophical Society, he did not even give the exact locale of the finds to fellow scientists.

He reported that the 300 implements of different types discovered were made of the bones of extinct animals, the three-toed horse, camels, deer, elephants, and mastodons.

He said that they were made from fresh bone, that they could not have been made from fossil bone. And if the animal bones used in the artifacts were 4,000,000 years old, and man made them, it would follow that man was among the animals present on these plains 4,000,000 years ago.

The 300 artifacts used by the broad-faced boys included skin dressers to clean animal hides; pointed awl-like implements, evidently used in sewing; neck ornaments of strung bones, and combs believed to have been used as tattooing instruments.

"These are just as real artifacts as the famous worked flints of Europe," declared Doctor Osborn.

He pointed out that whereas the early European artifacts mostly pertained to warfare, the Nebraska artifacts were nearly or wholly related to peaceful arts.

"Does that mean that a peaceful people lived here 4,000,000 years ago?" Doctor Poynter was asked.

"I should say not," he answered judicially. "If a flivver and a corn planter were found on my grave, it would not indicate that I hadn't been in the World War draft."

Doctor Poynter's chief chuckle came from his belief that the Nebraska fossil finds—the first completely fossilized bones ever dug up—may explode the theory of the "cradle of the human race."

"Had No Cradle"

"Maybe now they'll quit hunting the left rocker and the headboard," he said. "As a matter of fact, the human race had no cradle. Its lullabies were being simultaneously sung in Europe, Asia, Australia, America."

He pointed to what Science had to say on the subject, being:

"Since past opinion has been that the most ancient evidences of man were to be found in the Old World, and since claims of the discovery in America of man antedating the Indian, some 25,000 years ago, have been received heretofore with skepticism, the announcement of Doctor Osborn, one of the world's leading authorities on the antiquity and evolution of man, will create a great scientific interest."

Which voiced a conclusion to which Doctor Poynter had long been saying the scientific world would one day come.

He said it years ago, in the face of bulletin 33, put out by Doctor Hrdlicka, now head of the Smithsonian Institute, to deal a deathblow to the claims of a trio of Nebraskans.

In 1910, Gilder, Barbour, and Ward unearthed strange skulls north of Florence.

"A very early man," pronounced the discoverers. "He must date back to the pliocene period!"

"Pooh! Pooh!" pamphleted Hrdlicka, in bulletin 33, after making a special trip from New York to Nebraska to look over the ground where the skulls were found.

The Loess Man

Poynter was interested by the controversy that followed.

He took neither side until he had made an exhaustive study of the subject. He took the disputed skulls to Peabody's in Boston and to the Smithsonian Institute, and there delved into all the scientific data available on the subject. With the most painstaking measurements he reconstructed the Loess man, using the actual skulls as his foundations.

Why Four Million

"Those skulls were different from Indian skulls," he said. "The more I studied, the more I became convinced that Gilder, Barbour, and Ward were right—that man actually existed in Nebraska 4,000,000 years ago."

"How do they know it was 4,000,000 years?"

"They don't," he replied, spreading a chart which explained the method of arriving at the yearage of artifacts.

From a glass cabinet in Doctor Poynter's laboratory, the two clay heads of Loess Man, somewhat cracked, but still quite intelligent-looking, smiled as he blithely bade them, "Be your age!"

Doctor Poynter listed contemporaneous skulls to the two he covered with clay as follows: One in Davenport, Iowa; two in the Smithsonian Institute; eight in Nebraska; one in Lang, Kansas. It will thus be seen that Nebraska possesses preponderance of the evidence of paleolithic man.—The Omaha Evening Bee.

REUNION NEWS

Eastern Iowa District

Friday, July 15, on the camp grounds of Mount Pleasant Park, Clinton, Iowa, was the beginning of a successful reunion.

The camp ground is situated on the bluff road near the city. Many improvements have been made since last reunion. A large swimming pool has been constructed, which affords clean recreation. A large hotel is about completed and is modern in every way. The spacious dining hall is equipped for serving all food cafeteria plan. The peace and quiet was somewhat marred by the drilling of a new well, but of course this was unavoidable.

The attendance of the young people was very encouraging, while that of mothers and fathers should have been strengthened threefold. While it is very important that our youth should be present at the reunion to partake of the spiritual food that is to make them a mighty army for the Lord, yet parents too should plan and sacrifice as one young sister testified she had done since the reunion of 1926, for they are the backbone of our army of youth, and much responsibility rests upon them.

We were privileged to have with us Apostle J. F. Garver and family, Bishop Phillips and wife, Superintendent C. B. Woodstock, Missionary C. A. Kress, and District President C. Heide.

Brother Woodstock conducted class every morning at 8.30. It was here we learned how we must qualify to be leaders, what religion is, what the needs of the child are today, and how we may build character. Great interest was manifested in this class, and a large majority came to class with notebooks and used them. Following this class was prayer meeting, which was always of a high order. Each testimony revealed that the young as well as the old are beginning to sense the needs of the church today. Several themes were carried out in the prayer meetings and revealed that all are working toward the same ideal or goal.

Brother Phillips conducted class every morning at the eleven o'clock hour, and in harmony with Brother Woodstock's class, carried out the theme of religious education, its meaning and purpose of life. He says stewardship represents all the activities or agencies of our life.

When class was announced for afternoon, Brother Woodstock took charge, at one time dwelling upon the duties of the several offices of the Department of Women, and again on the need of our Department of Recreation and Expression.

Sister Phillips conducted the junior class of boys and girls. She was associated with Sister Kress and Bernice Coolon. This class was held every morning, which included songs, stories, and handwork, and one day they prepared a junior program for the adult class. Sister Phillips and her helpers are to be praised for the efforts they put forth in arousing within the children the conviction that a reunion means much to them.

The evening sermons dovetailed with the class work. Brother Garver was faithful to us, giving us six sermons in his seven-day stay. How well he discerns the need of the hour. Every sermon stirred our souls to the greatest depths and made us realize that the power of the gospel was to conserve that which is wholesome, that life is a great universality for the unfolding of the mind, for developing character; counseled us to restrain our children at times; it is not right that children should be a law unto themselves.

Recreation and Expression was led by our able Sister Ruth Benson. She promoted impromptu programs, games, and marshmallow roasts. Surely it is pleasing to note the development of leadership in Sister Ruth the past year.

Nor must we forget to mention how well our janitor, no other than Fritz Steigel, fulfilled his office. Fritz believes the prettiest touches of coloring in his masterpiece are the little works well done.

The temporal wants of the Saints were cared for by our faithful Sisters Heide and Lindsay, and helpers. Meals were of the best.

Special vocal and violin solos, duets, and quartets were promoted by our chorister, Sister Marie Shippy. Brother Garver's girls are developing their talents worthy of praise. We are glad to have met Brother Garver's family and Sister Phillips and will welcome them again to our reunions.

The last Saturday afternoon of the reunion was given to conference election. Officers were elected for the following year, Brother Heide being sustained as district president for the coming year.

The reunion came to a close on Sunday, the 24th, following a sincere and forceful sermon by Brother C. B. Woodstock, to the young, and especially of the responsibility that rests upon fathers and mothers. He likened it to a masterpiece painting, how parents paint the picture for their children until they assume age and responsibility and they pick up the brush and finish the picture. This masterpiece does not stand for the education, the wealth or position he might have attained, but the character he has developed out of the material given him to make a man.

All who attended feel greatly benefited—a desire has been created in us. Let us act.

ESTELLA ALLEN.

Eastern Montana Reunion

The Eastern Montana reunion convened at Andes, Montana, July 3 to 10. We had with us of the missionary force: Apostle J. F. Curtis, Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley, Elders Swen Swenson, George W. Thorburn, and Joseph Sandidge. Sister J. A. Gunsolley was in charge of the junior school work.

The reunion was well attended, the following places being represented: Miles City, Malta, Glasgow, Nashua, Sidney, Fairview, and Andes. We were also glad to welcome several families from north of the Missouri and from North Dakota.

The prospect before us is brighter than ever. Seven precious souls accepted the gospel and were baptized during the reunion. Brother Jerome Andes, eldest son of Elder Sam M. Andes, was ordained to the office of priest.

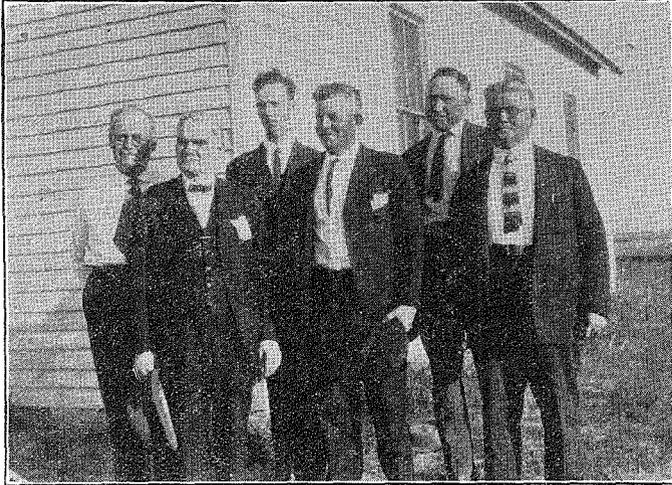

The whole reunion was a spiritual feast to the many isolated Saints present, and all returned to their homes with renewed vigor for the work of progress. Outsiders drove miles to hear the gospel sermons by J. F. Curtis, Swen Swenson, George W. Thorburn, and others of the missionary force. Brother Curtis remained a day after the reunion and preached to a full house. One family came fifty-five miles to hear his last sermon on "The second coming of Christ." They were made to realize that the hastening time is here. Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley gave some very instructive lectures to the priesthood and membership. We hope to see and hear him again next year.

Friday, July 8, was given over to departmental work. The afternoon session was in charge of Brother Gunsolley. Short talks were given by Jerome Andes, for the Department of Recreation and Expression; Sister Ossie V. Wilcox, representing the Department of Women; and Orrin R. Wilcox, for the district Sunday schools.

The young people of the district presented a very enjoyable program Friday evening. Swen Swenson, J. F. Curtis, and George W. Thorburn were "boys again" in reciting their humorous selections for the entertainment of a large gathering of young people. A guitar solo by Sister Ossie V. Wilcox called us back to the heart of the Ozarks, the emerald fields of Ireland, or the highlands of Scotland as our respective memories in romance wandered.

Many stayed to the very last service on Sunday night and were loath to say good-bye. A vote of thanks was extended to the Andes Branch for the pleasant time at their reunion. We would not fail to speak of the untiring efforts of our district president, Elder Arthur Ritter, who gave so willingly of his time and service. Counselors Chase and Sandidge were present and assisted in every way to make all feel welcome. These men are consecrated to the cause and are doing their utmost to advance the work of Christ in Eastern Montana.

Apostle Curtis and Patriarch Gunsolley left on the 12th for Canada. Brother Swenson went south to Miles City with Sister F. A. Ingles of that place. He was scheduled to preach in Fairview Sunday, July 24, but evidently his efforts in Miles City warranted his staying longer than he expected. He baptized five at Miles City July 24. Elder Swenson will always be remembered by the Saints of Eastern Montana, and we hope he will be permitted to labor in this part for some time, as the field is large and the local workers need help.

Elders George W. Thorburn and Joseph Sandidge held a short series of services in Fairview, but the interest was not so good as early in the spring. This was on account of the extreme warm weather and the "pesky" mosquitoes which inhabit the Yellowstone Valley in swarms at this season. From Fairview the elders went to Nashua, working westward to attend the Western Montana reunion.

We are expecting a large group of young people at the home of Elder W. R. Hillman, pastor of the Fairview Branch, Thursday evening, July 28, for the annual wiener roast given by the Hillman family. Andes, Sidney, and Fairview communities will be represented.

Educational and Spiritual Activities

The Little Sioux district reunion will be held in the beautiful park on the Harrison County fair grounds at Missouri Valley, Iowa, August 19 to 28.

The fair association has granted us the use of their large floral hall for dining hall and kitchen, and the Missouri Valley hustlers have already put a floor in the building, have it equipped, and it is ready for use. There will be plenty of shade and an abundance of good water. The park is wired, and all that wish to have their tents wired can be accommodated.

Biographical Notes

An Appreciation

On May 24 last, at her rural home near Devizes, Wilts, England, there passed away from this life, in her eighty-sixth year, a woman almost entirely unknown to the church, yet who, because of her contribution to the church, is worthy of this note of appreciation.

Harriet Abraham was born November 5, 1841, at Devizes, England, the youngest of ten children. Her people were of humble class, though highly respectable, holding with steadfastness to the Christian religion as they had learned it.

When Harriet was about ten years of age, Devizes, in common with many other British towns, was swept by a wave of missionary work conducted by elders of the church in Utah. This was in the early fifties, when such doctrines as polygamy were only beginning to be taught in Salt Lake City and were not heard in the preaching of the missionaries abroad. They taught the simple gospel as originally held by the restored church in 1830. Their ministry was accompanied by the divine Spirit, and followed by promised gifts and blessings of the gospel in confirmation of the word which they preached. Thousands were converted and baptized.

Among the number accepting the gospel in Devizes were Harriet's eldest sister, Mary, and her husband, who were at the time well-to-do farmer people. They zealously brought the good news to the parental home but were disappointed when it failed of a reception. But newborn zeal could not be suppressed, and going home one afternoon this elder sister took the younger one out and proceeded to the place of baptism and persuaded her to be baptized. The parents never learned of the incident.

The gospel of that day was accompanied by the doctrine of gathering and emigrating to Utah. Thousands of the new converts sold their possessions and started out under conditions which brought most of them sorrow and regret, among the number being Mary and her husband. Crossing the ocean, their babe found a watery grave, and on the way overland to Utah the husband died. Mary lost her possessions and reached Salt Lake destitute, in which condition she was drawn into the evil conditions of the times, marrying into a polygamous family. When the true nature of her condition dawned upon her soul, she revolted and turned away in bitterness of spirit, lost her faith in God and the gospel, and at the first opportunity left Utah with her daughter, Emma Rhodes, for the Central States, then back to England, where disappointment was further increased. By the and some have thought this park would be a noisy place, but the railroad officials have kindly consented to use another switch for the limbering up of their repaired engines and other switch work, and there will be nothing run out past the camp except the regular trains during our ten days' stay at Missouri Valley. This we appreciate very much.

We extend an invitation, not only to the members of the Little Sioux District, but to all the Saints of the neighboring districts who can attend, to meet with us. We have the promise of Apostle James A. Gillen, Superintendent C. B. Woodstock, and Bishop F. B. Blair as speakers. Our three district missionaries are expected to be with us also, and a number of departmental workers will be present as helpers. We wish to mention, too, that usually we are favored with a number of visiting members of the ministry, and we always appreciate this. We anticipate having a spiritual feast at this reunion, and we say to the Saints, one and all, come and bring the good spirit with you.

help of friends she returned to the States, soon after to lay to rest in the little cemetery at Tabor, Iowa, her only remaining treasure, her young and beautiful Emma. With empty soul she retired to Chicago, and in the last few years of her life found a degree of solace in Christian Science. The writer visited her upon several occasions. She lived alone, and died alone in 1905, at an advanced age.

Another older sister, Miriam, having been baptized subsequently, started for Utah, fell in with a young elder named Edmund C. Brand while crossing the ocean, and married him at Saint Louis before crossing the plains. They, too, met disappointment in Salt Lake, and in time forsook the church there, going to California, where upon learning of the Reorganization they united with it. The subsequent years of his life were spent as a missionary, and he died in Kansas in 1890 while out upon mission work. His home was then near Tabor, Iowa. Mrs. Brand died in 1899 at Independence, Missouri.

When it became known in England that polygamy was a part of the faith and practice of the church in Utah, many deserted the new faith, and the work declined until in most parts it practically ceased. It was so in Devizes.

Harriet grew up attending but very few, if any, of the meetings of that church. Nor did she hear further of the gospel except as it was taught by the Wesleyans. She remained subject to her parents, who were strongly opposed to the faith which two of their children had espoused. At the age of twenty-three she married James Fry, a baker, who established himself in a small business at Number 8, High Street, and after eight years, viz, in 1872, when the place of business was no longer adequate, moved to a small farm known as "Drews Pond," where there was a flour mill of the water-wheel type, built a large bakery, and engaged in the triple business of farming, milling, and baking, selling bread only under contract with the national and local governments to the army and public institutions.

With three other children (a fourth having died in infancy), Mrs. Fry took her fifth babe, which was the third son, the writer of these notes, in her arms to the Drews Pond home, where he spent his early childhood in one of the beauty spots of rural England, for there were woods and fields, brooks and ponds, cliffs and hollows, decorated in their seasons with beautiful wild flowers—the sweet-scented violet, the fragrant primrose, the bluebell, the sweet William, and the ever present buttercup and daisy.

During those years mother worked by father's side in the bakery, besides caring for her growing family. The children, too, took their places as they became old enough, the eldest daughter Annie in the bakery, William caring for the farm, and George assuming charge of the mill.

In 1885, when Charles was just finishing in the public schools at the age of thirteen, there occurred an important incident in family life. Mrs. Brand, mother's sister, then lived upon a small farm near Tabor, Iowa. Her husband was most of the time away from home preaching the gospel, and being childless she was left much alone. She had previously expressed a wish that one of mother's boys might be sent to live with her, which wish had received little consideration. About this time an Englishman, Mr. Elijah Baggs, passed the Tabor settlement on his way to England and was requested by Mrs. Brand to visit her sister's home, which he promised to do. She then wrote her sister a plea that one of the boys be sent with Mr. Baggs upon his return.

It was about the first of May, when one of the boys, working late in the mill, was greeted at the mill door in the twilight of the evening by a stranger asking the way to the Fry home. Shortly after, a younger brother came to the mill to announce the arrival of Mr. Baggs. That night there dawned upon the soul of the youthful worker the certain consciousness that he was going to America. That assurance remained unmingled with doubt until some six weeks later when he was upon the way.

To the request for one of the boys, the parents gave an emphatic refusal. Upon a second visit of Mr. Baggs, a second refusal was given. But gradually a change was wrought in their feelings and attitude, until it was thought that one of the boys (there were then five) might be spared. But the question arose as to which one. One boy knew all the time but said nothing. The casting of the lot resulted in the writer embarking with Mr. Baggs on the Bristol, sailing from Newport, Wales, for Quebec, on June 18, 1885. There came to him upon the stormy sea what he did not then understand, the spirit of calm assurance and hopefulness which buoyed him up through fifteen days of seasickness and did not forsake him when in the Gulf of Saint Lawrence the boat struck a rock and stranded in the darkness of the night. At that time he knew nothing of the church and little of the gospel, but in the light of later knowledge he recognizes those early assurances as the work of the Holy Spirit.

Reaching Tabor, he took up his abode with his uncle and aunt who lived in a small community of Saints. Here he came into touch with the church, and for the first time heard the gospel in its fullness, being baptized early in the following year. At his confirmation the Spirit of prophecy indicated divine leading in his life and pointed out his work in the ministry of the church. In 1900, after four years of local ministry, he accepted an appointment by the General Conference and has continued in the general ministry to the present time.

In December, 1915, while rereading a letter from his youngest sister, who was caring for the widowed mother, which told of her severe illness and of the physician's assurance that she had but a short time to live, there came a distinct prompting of the Spirit to go and visit her. Being editor of Zion's Ensign at the time, and president of the Spring River District, and also a member of the Standing High Council whose sittings were soon to be held, it seemed that his official responsibilities made it impossible to leave. Besides, financial difficulties immediately appeared, and he answered, "I can not go." But there came the reply, "If you will go, you can go."

In counsel with various church officials, plans were worked out, after obtaining consent of his wife, for it was a time of war and ships were being sunk daily by the terrible submarines, and the journey could not be made without extreme danger, he started. The fears and anxieties for personal safety, which at first had been almost overwhelming, were supplanted by the same spirit of peace and assurance which he had felt when crossing the ocean for the first time, and when upon the sea the Spirit gave absolute knowledge of a safe passage.

Sitting in the cabin of the New York one day, he thought and prayed over the work of his life, over the strange events which had led him away from his father's house when but a child, and more particularly as to why he was then being led back to that home, when by the inspiration of the Spirit this was given: That God had accepted the offering and sacrifices of his mother in her young life, and now in the afflictions and distress of advancing years, her years of widowhood, he was not unmindful of her and was sending back her son to minister to her comfort and peace, and the blessing of the gospel.

He found his mother slightly improved. He ministered to her the gospel ordinance provided for the sick, and she continued to improve (except that her sight departed), and she lived without further illness until her death eleven years later. During that visit occurred the most intimate conversations on family history, and one morning sitting by the fireside she told him what had remained a treasured secret of her own heart for forty-five years. Eight months before the birth of her third son, yielding to a burning desire, she made an offering of him to the Lord and consecrated him to his service. She little realized what sacrifice that offering would require of her in after years.

When this child was two years old, there came the first call for the devoted mother to give him up, but the mother-love was too strong for that. But at the age of thirteen, when the second call came, she yielded, and her offering was made complete. Her subsequent letters revealed the anguish of her heart at her voluntary loss. It was no small sacrifice. These things the Lord observed and remembered, and in the hour of her need sent her son, who had been made his minister, to convey to her the blessing of comfort and peace, with health and prolonged life.

It was a mother's offering and a mother's sacrifice that gave to the church the son who has served it these many years. His accomplishments may not have been great, but such as they are they are attributable in large part to the faith and devotion of that God-fearing mother who lived apart from the church, and yet whose hope in Christ her Savior grew brighter to the last.

Notes From the Departments

Mrs. Blanche Edwards Mesley, after a few weeks of intensive office work following the Lamoni institute, left for reunion work in Michigan. She spent some days in Chicago and then went to the reunion at Indian Lake. She will later attend reunions at Coleman and Park of the Pines, returning to the office early in September.

The day following the receipt of his degree at the University of Iowa, Elder Eugene E. Closson, general superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, was enthusiastically engaged in the busy work of his department and as an instructor at the Lamoni institute. On the day the institute closed, he was on his way to Chicago to attend the annual Educational Recreation Institute, to which he and Brother McDowell had been elected as members. The institute is an interdenominational gathering of outstanding leaders in recreational activities in all Protestant churches. This membership is limited to those who are able to make some definite contribution to the constructive work of the institute, and "Gene" and "Mac" are recognized authorities in certain phases of leadership. They are not only able to gain much from the experiences of the institute, but they have frequent opportunity to explain our church belief and mission in connection with our religious educational program. They are also able to influence the making of the recreational program for other churches as well as for our own.

Direct from Chicago, Brother Closson went to Independence for six weeks of most intensive work in recreation as a part of the work of the summer institute held at the Campus. He was able to do a splendid work for the young people of Zion and to contribute much to the success of the summer project.

After a week of work at his desk in Lamoni, Brother Closson went to Champion, Nebraska, spending two days en route to assist in the reunion at North Platte. On Wednesday, August 3, at the home of Brother Edward Travis, occurred one of the happy scenes of the busy drama of Brother Closson's life. President F. M. McDowell performed the ceremony which gave him the right to take as a life partner and companion, Miss Julia Travis. "Gene" and "Judy" had been pals at Graceland, and both received degrees in June at the University of Iowa. Both are accomplished young people, trained, consecrated, and ready for active service in the church.

Brother and Sister Closson will spend a few days in the mountain regions of Colorado and then go to assist in the reunion at Colorado Springs. They are scheduled, later, as workers in the Gallands Grove reunion at Sac City, Iowa. The Clossons will make their home in Lamoni.

On the closing night of the International Institute at Windsor, July 3, Brother C. B. Woodstock received a telegram from a relative in Wisconsin, saying that a new Essex Six Sedan had been purchased and was to be presented as a gift to him and his wife for use in church work. Accordingly the return to Lamoni was made from Milwaukee in the comfort of a stanch and easy-riding car dedicated to the work of the Lord. The gift is heartily appreciated, and we trust its use may be blessed to the purposes intended.

Mrs. C. B. Woodstock, young women's supervisor in the church, was privileged for a week in July to attend an annual girls' camp at Lake Winona, Indiana. The camp was for the week under the direction of the Moentita Girls' Movement, centered in Chicago. It is being developed as one of the highest types of girls' organizations, beautiful in its ritual, impressive in its symbolism, vitally interesting in its activities, and church-centered in its teaching and loyalties. Mrs. Woodstock has been permitted to try out the program with some of her girls' groups and finds it admirably adapted to the needs of certain ages in our church. The Moentita movement is still in the experimental stage, but as it is further perfected it should help to strengthen, enrich, and beautify the life of our girls.

Mrs. Woodstock was accompanied by Miss Vera Klein, one of the girl leaders from Lamoni. They were shown every courtesy and kindness in the camp and came away enthusiastic over the possibilities of a similar summer camp in a convenient location for our church girls.

The week of July 29 to August 5, Mrs. Woodstock spent in camp with a group of Lamoni Temple Builders at Creston, Iowa. Camp life is planned with a regular schedule of study, observation, devotion, recreation, and camp duty. She will later attend the Lamoni stake reunion as a leader of girls, and still later go to Missouri Valley, Iowa, for a similar work.

Brother Woodstock attended the Eastern Iowa reunion at Clinton, conducting classes in religious education and looking after other departmental interests. He reports a light attendance through the week but commends the earnest group of young people who were always to be counted upon to be present and attentive. A parallel course leading to a discussion of stewardship problems was conducted by Elder A. B. Phillips. There is an unusually large number of fine young people in the district. One just wonders what might not be accomplished if, with one accord, they were all to determine to make the necessary sacrifice to attend the reunion, or a similar gathering, and to move on, with trained abilities and consecrated purposes, unto the work to which God calls them.

So many in every district feel that they must work to hold their jobs, or to earn that they may have to spend. May God bless our young people with a vision of their own possibilities and the opportunity of the hour for unprecedented attainment. May they with courage and valor press onward in the spirit of true discipleship, choosing those paths that lead to beauty, strength, and heavenly joy.

Following a week of routine work at his desk, Brother Woodstock will leave on Friday, August 4, for the reunion at Decatur, Nebraska. He will later accompany his wife for a reunion assignment at Missouri Valley, Iowa.

Union Branch

August 1.—Clitherall is becoming quite a Mecca for Latter Day Saint tourists and vacationists. This is to be expected, especially among those who have once made their homes here and know of its connection with the early church history of this district. Visitors during the past month are Mrs. Jane Crane, who is spending the summer here with relatives; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lund, the Mansel Williams family, Clayton Gould, and the Birch Whiting family, all from Independence and near-by points; Mrs. Herring of Charles City, Iowa, and Mrs. Nels Person and Mrs. Wallace Peterson of Mallard, Iowa; the three last-named are daughters of Brother and Sister Frank Horne, of Almora. District President Ray Whiting was here over two nights on business connected with the church, and he spoke one night at the Religio session. Brother Birch Whiting also spoke, his subject being stewardships. On the following Sunday, July 31, he spoke again on the same subject and cleared up many points. Brother Williams gave some helpful suggestions during the Sunday school hour. In a dwindling branch, such as this is, it is gratifying to entertain tourists and visitors, and all will be made heartily welcome.

Another event of interest to the branch is the marriage of Sister Bertha Hunter to John Murdock, which took place July 21, at the home of the branch president, Lester Whiting. Sister Murdock has always been isolated from church privileges, but now feels that she may be able to help in branch activities, as her new home is within a mile or two of church.

Reorganization at San Antonio

It is with a feeling of great joy and thanksgiving that we are able to report the reorganizing and establishing of the former Second San Antonio Branch, at its former location, 912 North Colorado Street, San Antonio, Texas.

During the recent visit of Apostle E. J. Gleazer to this city, a petition signed by thirty-nine members of the church, requesting the reorganizing of the former Second San Antonio Branch as an independent branch, was presented and met with the approval of Apostle Gleazer, who had thoroughly investigated and found the granting of the petition advisable for all concerned. Apostle Gleazer, after first presenting the matter to the attention of the First Presidency at Independence, requested Elder R. E. Miller, district president here, to proceed to organize the branch accordingly.

Upon the night of Monday, July 25, 1927, Elder Miller proceeded to organize the branch in full conformity to the law and by virtue of the authority in him vested. Fortunately, and to the pleasure of all present, Bishop C. J. Hunt, who had attended the recent district conference, was with us at the time. After the business meeting had been closed, at which meeting Elder R. E. Chrone, sr., and Elder T. J. Jett, sr., were elected by a unanimous vote as president and vice president respectively, Brother Guy L. Renfro was unanimously elected deacon, and Sister Cora S. Chrone, unanimously elected secretary, Bishop C. J. Hunt edified the audience with a most profound, logical, and illustrative address, which was greatly enjoyed and should prove productive of much good in the future. Also, following the address by Bishop Hunt, Elder Vanderwood submitted a few remarks freighted with some splendid advice, good will, and encouragement to the officers and members of the new branch, which were deeply appreciated.

District President R. E. Miller closed his work in the chair with a most excellent address to the new branch. Brother Miller is always a source of inspiration, seemingly guided by the Holy Spirit at all times, and one never needs wonder what he will say, for he can always be depended upon to say the right thing at the right time. Would that we each might equal Brother Miller in sincerity and fervency, as well as wisdom and judgment. Having closed his address, he invited the new president to occupy. We have attended many business meetings in different branches throughout the United States, when intricate and difficult questions and problems had to be met, but never have we attended any business meeting anywhere which was conducted in greater peace and harmony or with greater promise of spiritual progress than was this particular meeting. We feel that every heart was made to rejoice and each went to their several homes with a sense that all was right and that God had been with us and was directing all things.

first regular meeting of the new branch, upon the following Sunday, July 31, when a sacramental service was held under the direction of Elder T. J. Jett, sr., with Elder R. E. Chrone assisting. At this meeting the Holy Spirit of heaven must certainly have been present, for sincerity and fervency, truth and happiness, were strongly in evidence. Though this was a last instead of a first Sunday of the month, Brother Chrone felt a joint prayer and sacramental meeting most appropriate in celebration of the reestablishment of the new branch, and we feel that he was guided aright.

As we write this account of the reorganized Second San Antonio Branch, we feel that many of our friends in and out of the church, throughout the country, will rejoice with us in our new environment, and we wish to take this opportunity not only of greeting those many friends in their several different points of residence, but to urge with the utmost sincerity and cordiality, that when in San Antonio, (for San Antonio, Texas, is essentially a tourist town, where people from all over the earth eventually come, and, naturally, many who are interested in or seeking the true light of the gospel), you meet with us and worship, thus making our union of spirit and our friendship doubly sweet.

We can not close this report without especially expressing our sincerest appreciation and heartfelt gratitude to Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Bishop C. J. Hunt, and Elder R. E. Miller for all they have done, not only in assisting in the reestablishing of the Second San Antonio Branch, but more especially for the kind and loving words of counsel, for the encouragement and inspiration which they engendered in us, and it will be our constant aim to remember and be guided by those words.

We ask the united prayers of the church for the successful continuance of this little branch, and for the sustenance and inspiration of its officers and members, to the end that the gospel may spread therefrom with unending good to all mankind.

CORA S. CHRONE, Branch Secretary.

An Appreciation of Fellowship

An article in Autumn Leaves under the heading, "Why I appreciate the church," has caused me to think so much of how I appreciate the church that I would love to tell the whole world, if I could only find words to do so. I came into the church because I was convinced it was the true church of God, and I felt that if God saw fit to organize a church it must be a great help in the saving of souls; and I felt that I might be able to live a better life, therefore I would be able to rear my children to a higher and better life.

To me the gospel is the most beautiful thing in all the world. It gives us a hope and satisfaction that the world can not know. If I can bring my children up so they will be qualified and willing to give their lives for the church, it is all I could ask, for I feel they would find more pleasure in this life than anything else could afford, and more hope of the next life.

I often think there would be nothing in this life worth while without the gospel, for without the hope of the next life, why would we care to live here?

Many people with whom I associate tell me their troubles, and I have tried to be a counselor and friend wherever I could. Each thinks his trouble is different from the other fellow's, but we all know, or ought to know, that man is of few days and is full of trouble. If we could not get our mind away from self, we surely would see only trouble in this life.

I have enjoyed my association with the Saints a great deal. Before I came into the church there were very few people in my whole life with whom I cared to make friends. I always went where there was sickness or need, and did what I could, and I always had a neighbor from whom I could borrow a dollar, because he knew that I would pay it back. Yet I have come to realize that we as Latter Day Saints are so linked together that what one does and his circumstances affect the others.

When I read of the burning of Patroness Hall at Grace-land, I thought of all those young people there and what a trial it was for them, and it seemed a heavy cross that I couldn't help them any.

May God help us all as Saints that we may be able to put on the Christlike life; that we may find pleasure in our trials in this life, and a realization of our hopes in the next.

Gomer T. Griffiths Writes of Death of Francis J. Ebeling

It has been some time since my last letter to your columns. At the close of my fifty years' ministerial labor I have been taking a rest for a few months, during the warm summer weather. I realize I can not endure the intense heat as I once could. However, I have been very busy painting our house, etc., during the process of which work, unfortunately for me, the stepladder upon which I was standing broke and threw me to the ground. This resulted in a few cracked ribs, from which I suffered for a time, but at this writing I am fully recovered.

Our reunion here in Kirtland is close at hand, and it will not be long until the Saints from all parts of the United States and Canada will be gathered here. The Temple has been redecorated, and it looks beautiful. Many tourists continue to visit the Temple daily, keeping the attendants busy.

Two of the reunion committee, Robert Miller and Francis Ebeling, have passed over to the other side; both of these will be greatly missed at the coming reunion. Brother Ebeling died suddenly, sitting in a chair on the back porch of his home. This was a great shock to his immediate family, as well as to his friends and associates. Brother Ebeling had worked faithfully as a missionary for the church for twenty-five years. He presided over districts and branches in addition to his work as a missionary. While thus engaged, he was greatly beloved by all, as he was a good mixer and made friends for the church wherever he went. It must be said to his credit, too, that some of his work did not lie in flowery beds of ease; he never sought easy places in which to work, but always went willingly and cheerfully to the field assigned him, regardless of the conditions obtaining.

The funeral service was held in the Temple. The Temple was crowded with both Saints and outsiders, to pay their last tribute of respect to the deceased. It was the sad lot of the writer to preach the sermon. Brother Ebeling was to me as a son, for I had known him since he was a lad. Brethren Stone and Bishop assisted.

Brother Ebeling was just fifty-nine years of age. He leaves his wife, two sons, a granddaughter, three brothers, two sisters, and many other relatives.

The loss of Brother Miller was also a great shock, and it will be difficult to replace him in his duties at the coming reunion. His experience and ability in his particular work have been very valuable.

Both of these brethren have been laid to rest in the cemetery close to the reunion grounds.

In the passing of these two brethren we are again reminded that death is ever present, and we naturally wonder who will be next to answer the summons. It is a good thing to be ready for the change when the Grim Reaper makes his appearance.

The summer months will soon have passed away, and we shall go forth in the Master's work with renewed diligence for the work of the fall and winter months.

I am thankful to the Lord for the blessing of health and that I still have the desire in my heart to be a useful instrument in his hands in helping to carry on his wondrous work. Of all people we should be the happiest and the best, in view of the glorious hope that we have; and while there are many obstacles in the way of progress, we must be of good courage and press forward with greater zeal than we have manifested hitherto, as the redemption of Zion is dependent upon the efforts we put forth. It is to be hoped that this conference year will be one of the most successful yet realized. There is no time to waste, as the field is ripe for the harvest and the laborers are few. Therefore, let those to whom the Lord has given the sickle (priesthood) go forth gathering the golden sheaves into the garner while it is yet day.

I wish God's people success in all their endeavors to work out their salvation.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

WILLOUGHBY, OHIO, August 1.

Tulsa, Oklahoma

Tulsa Branch seems to be forging ahead. It may be slow, but the very atmosphere spells advancement. The choir has taken on renewed energy. The midweek prayer meetings are very good. The Sunday school, under the efficient management of Brother Riley Cunningham, our superintendent, is holding its own through the warm weather. The Religio is growing in attendance.

Since General Conference a feeling of sadness has hung over us because our pastor, J. A. Thomas, was sent to other fields by the powers that be. The members gathered at the beautiful home of Brother Sam Bailey on South Evanston Street to bid him and family farewell. Ice cream and cake were served. A study lamp was given as a remembrance to Brother Thomas and wife, and the presentation by Brother Riley Cunningham was beautifully expressed. He said, "We hope that when you light this lamp, you will think of us trying to reflect the gospel light in our lives, as you have taught us both by precept and example, as its rays reflect on you." Brother Thomas replied in the same spirit, using the lighted lamp to illustrate what it would mean to him in bringing to mind his little flock and labor of love among us. The sentiment was beautifully expressed, and many were in tears.

And now has come his farewell sermon, last handclasp, his last charge to the members. His heartfelt pleading to them for more consecrated lives will be long remembered by those who heard it.

He has labored faithfully for us, and I hope we appreciate what he has done. There is no doubt that he has had many a heartache and disappointment while here, but we hope he will forgive us. We certainly are growing spiritually, and improving in many ways.

We expect to be loyal to our new pastor, Brother Emmett Lancaster.

The Twelve-Cylinder Preacher

Bishop C. J. Hunt tells of an occurrence at San Antonio, Texas, where a seven-year-old boy has caught the mechanics of the automobile and is making some progress in applying his knowledge to the new preachers he hears.

A mother calls to this boy and instructs him to turn his attention from the amusement of the moment and prepare to attend church.

Comes the query: "Is Apostle Gleazer going to preach?"

"No; Bishop Hunt will preach tonight."

"Say, mother; is Brother Hunt one of those twelve cylinder preachers, too?"

Independence

Stone Church

The sacrament of the Lord's supper was observed at the Sunday morning service of the Stone Church. Elder D. O. Cato was in charge, with Brethren J. E. Matthews, R. T. Cooper, Ellis Short, sr., J. M. Terry, and J. E. Vanderwood in the stand.

Brother Short offered the opening prayer. Songs were led by Brother Cooper.

In the opening remarks, Brother Terry characterized the sacrament as one of the most sacred moments and observances of the church. We should praise the Lord for the wonderful privilege of being brought back into divine favor, through the intercession of Jesus Christ. The renewal of our pledge should be entered solemnly and sacredly. We should hope and pray that this service may be a stepping-stone to even higher things, which should bring us "Nearer, my God, to thee."

After the administration of the sacrament, President Elbert A. Smith led in a short period of prayer. The testimony service following was opened by Elder J. E. Vanderwood.

Patriarch J. E. Matthews, of Columbus, Ohio, pronounced the benediction.

At the Campus

"It is given unto us to become the sons of God," said Elder Cyril E. Wight, in his discussion on "Some of the religious problems of life," at the Campus Sunday night. However, it rests with us whether we are to rise to such a plane as will make us indeed sons of God, or whether we shall exist on a lower level. The kingdom of God is within us and among us, but only in a potential way—it is for us to decide whether it shall be expressed and given full development in our lives.

As the little seed is of no value until it gives expression to the possibilities within it, so are the divine potentialities within man meaningless unless interpreted and expressed in terms of human living and service to fellow men. And service means the interpretation of godlikeness in humanity.

If the teachings of Jesus are to be vital, they must have expression in our lives, Elder Wight said. Conversion should not be a cleansing process only but also a process in which strong and rugged characters are molded through a daily seeking "first the kingdom of God."

Service means self-denial, but that does not mean it is not worth while. Who succeeds best in any field without at times denying self?

We should think of Zion, not in terms of accumulating a surplus of money, but in terms of making men, building lives.

A pageant was presented by the Saints of Gudgell Park, following the sermon. The story was laid in the time of King Herod and his persecution of Peter. Peter was imprisoned by the king, but while the Saints were met in prayer for him he was released by an angelic messenger. He comes to the saints and tells them of his wonderful experience.

Patriarch H. O. Smith offered the opening prayer and the benediction.

Everybody is invited to the Campus on Monday evening, August 15, by the Walnut Park Band, the band that has helped out near and far on many occasions during the past months. They promise their best concert on the 15th and a moving picture; will also serve ice cream and cake. Tickets for all of this will be twenty cents, the money to be used for the band's needful expenses.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At 8.30 a. m. the children's program arranged by Mrs. C. A. Shoop was presented by the Junior Chorus of Watson Memorial Methodist Church; Hester Marcia Swan, pianist; Randall Offut, saxophone soloist; Mrs. Fred Seiser, violinist. The story was furnished by Margaret Shoop.

Half an hour later Bible study was conducted by the K L D S radio pastor, Ralph W. Farrell.

A studio program took the air at eleven, at which time music was presented by a mixed quartet consisting of Thelma Vincent, Elizabeth Okerlind, Francis Holm, and Frank Russell, assisted by an instrumental trio; Frank White, violinist; Martin Mills, flutist; and Emma Tandberg, pianist. The sermon was by Elder H. O. Smith.

The 2 p. m. program was silent for Prince of Wales program.

K L D S radio church commenced at 3, the service for this hour being conducted by Reverend Harold L. Fickett, of the Mount Washington Baptist Church, with music given by the Mount Washington Baptist Choir; Mrs. Earl L. Phillips, accompanist.

Radio vesper music was furnished by a mixed quartet consisting of Lilly Belle Allen, Edna Daniel, Alma Kearns, and Wingfield Lewis. Sermonet, Ralph W. Farrell.

The musical program for the 9.15 Latter Day Saint studio service was presented by Dorothy Koehler, organist; Vivian Latta, soprano; combined Walnut Park and Stone Church orchestras, and a mixed quartet arranged by Thelma Vincent. Sermon was by Bishop G. W. Eastwood.

Interesting Personals

Sister Ida Gordon, of the Spring Branch congregation, and Mr. Lewie Shireman, of Hamilton, Ohio, were married Thursday, August 4, at the home of Elder R. J. Lambert, 225 South Pendleton, the only witnesses to the ceremony being the daughter of Sister Gordon, a daughter of Mr. Shireman who is a resident with her husband in Kansas City, J. A. Curtis, and Mrs. Curtis who sang and played for the occasion, and Elder and Sister Lambert. The pair started the first of the week for their home in Ohio, accompanied by the bride's family, where they expect to live until Mr. Shireman succeeds in getting a transfer to Independence or Kansas City, when they will return. The three Gordon boys, Jerrold, Elbert, and Lorren, were baptized Saturday, in the open stream near Courtney, before leaving for their new home.

Second Church

The attendance at Sunday school was light, but the interest was good. We missed the presence of our secretary and treasurer.

The communion service was enjoyed by a goodly number. All the time was well occupied in testifying of the joy and blessings received in gospel service.

Bishop B. J. Scott will be the speaker next Sunday at eleven o'clock.

Walnut Park

Two excellent prayer meetings mark the August sacramental Sunday at this church. At eight o'clock Brothers Weldon Wood, F. R. Schafer, and Fred Wille were in charge, and the theme suggested in Brother Wood's opening talk carried throughout the meeting—a spiritual life in preference to one dominated by seeking worldly pleasures and advantages. After a meeting like this, one wonders at the attitude of those who lose so much to attain popularity in this world.

The Sunday school was left without its regular leaders, Superintendent R. Barnhardt and family being in Canada and his assistant, Doctor P. O. Griffin, having gone with his family for a vacation trip in Iowa. However, two former superintendents were present, one, Brother W. T. Gard, being left in charge, Brother Chester Constance offering prayer.

The heavy rain kept some at home in the morning, but the attendance grew until the sacramental meeting showed the auditorium well filled. In fact, an actual count gives splendid attendance for the summer, Sunday school and other services showing a ten per cent increase in the past sixty days over the preceding ninety days, which is remarkably good for a summer record and surely indicates increasing interest.

Brothers O. C. White, B. J. Scott, and Samuel Smith presided at eleven o'clock, and though the rule is to close at twelve, interest was so apparent and participation so splendid that time was extended nearly half an hour. Two thoughts seemed uppermost—the desire not to “lie down on the job,” and the wish to “make our gift worth the giving.” Prayers are still asked for Sisters J. W. Adams and Vermel Tillery.

Liberty Street

The young people of Liberty Street district met on Sunday for early morning prayer meeting. Brothers Walter Curtis and Ray Wrigley presided during the hour of testimony, song, and prayer. The attendance was good, and the service much enjoyed by all present.

Elder J. B. Barrett made the opening remarks at the sacramental service Sunday morning, bringing to the minds of the congregation the sacrifice which Christ made for the world and mankind. A spiritual season was shared by the Saints.

East Independence

The last Sunday in July had for the morning speaker Brother Thomas Hartnell. He gave an interesting discourse on the signs of the times, the events we may look for in the last days, and urged us to be faithful, assuring the congregation that the coming of Christ is near at hand. We were glad to make Brother Hartnell's acquaintance, also to know his wife, and hope they will come again.

In the evening Brother F. C. Smith was the speaker. There is no doubt in his mind regarding this latter-day work and its ultimate triumph. When he had finished, we could not see how anyone could have had any doubts as to what stand to take. There certainly is no need for looking on the dark side; there is too much of brightness, too much of good to be gloomy.

Considering the threatening weather, a good crowd gathered for the sacramental service, and an encouraging meeting was enjoyed. Brother George Herbert, who formerly lived here, had written requesting the prayers of the Saints. He is quite aged and suffering a great deal of pain. We trust that the Lord may be with him in his declining years.

Sunday evening, Brother David Spease was the speaker. His subject was, “The need of the hour,” and his text, “Occupy until I come.” He counseled us to use whatever we have in the service of the Master, whether it be money, time, or talent, that with which the Lord has blessed us. Those who were not present missed something good.

Persia, Iowa

Since last writing the branch services have been conducted in the usual way. The Sunday school is fairly well attended and has been running for a number of years.

There are several young people going to the school who are not members of the church, but the prospects seem to be favorable. I think there are many brought into the church through the work of the Sunday school.

I remember a young girl attending the Persia Sunday school a number of years ago. She had, with others, been instructed in the principles of the gospel. She was taken very sick suddenly and learned that she might die. She felt that she was not ready, because of not having been baptized. The family tried to pacify the girl. They were members of some of the Protestant churches. It caused quite a little talk. Was baptism necessary?

Conference of the district convened at Woodbine on July

8, 9, 10. There were many in attendance. Persia Branch and Sunday school had no services that day.

We are trying to make out of the church and the Sunday school what there is in it for us, and if we fail we will be the losers.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Due to weather conditions which made it quite appealing for a Sunday morning sleep, the attendance at Sunday school was only 277, with a collection of $14.27.

The auditorium at 11 o'clock was pretty well filled for the regular monthly sacramental service. After the administering of the emblems, the remaining part of the service was devoted to a season of prayer in behalf of Sister Gertrude Sandy, wife of Brother Seth S. Sandy, of the stake presidency, and Sister Lena Bishop, wife of Brother R. L. Bishop, pastor of the Mount Washington Church. These sisters have been sorely afflicted for some time, and it is to be hoped that God in his infinite love will come to their aid. They both maintain an undying spirit of consecration and sacrifice to the cause in which their companions are enlisted, and have expressed a desire to be spared that they might raise their children to the glory of God.

At 6 o'clock the assembly gathered on the church lawn, having brought a lunch for the evening meal and enough extra to provide for any visitors that might be present, and an hour and a half was enjoyed in visiting, after which the combined Independence orchestras, under the direction of Brother Orlando Nace and Bishop R. T. Cooper, rendered a most enjoyable and entertaining program, which consisted of overtures, sacred hymns, and other very inspiring numbers.

“Blest be the tie that binds” was flashed upon the screen for the opening hymn, prayer being offered by Elder Harry Paxton.

Brother Tanner was the speaker of the evening and was blessed with a marked degree of the Spirit, talking on the judgment and the glories which we shall receive. He stated that man will be punished for the wrong he has done; likewise he will receive compensation for the good he has sought to do, and that if we would but search the scriptures we would find they teach a grade of punishment according to our works and deeds.

The “Do you know” series which follows the sermon and is flashed upon the screen is very interesting, and we feel sure will find lodgment in the hearts of the people. These pictures contain reminders of the doctrine of our church and point out the passage of scripture that will bear out this reminder and leave food for thought.

“Our common enemy” proved very educational, as it showed the house fly from the time the egg was laid until it unfolds and flies forth to pester humanity.

Bennington Heights Church

Brother Emmet Barton, age sixty-two, died Saturday, August 6, of heart trouble. Brother and Sister Barton were converted to the gospel and baptized only a few years ago, and have attended church at Independence.

Sister Mary E. Jones received a broken arm and injuries about the head and neck when she was struck by an automobile as she was crossing the street in front of her home. Reports come from the hospital that she is very sick. Sister Verbra Jones and Brother Roy Jones, who were in California, returned home when they received news of their mother's accident.

The Sunday school attendance on July 31 was 155, but on account of the rain August 7 the attendance was down to 96. A new intermediate class was organized in the Sunday school, which makes fourteen classes in the whole school.

Stake President J. A. Tanner preached the morning of July 31, and Elder W. Wood was the speaker in the evening. Pastor James E. Cleveland preached last Sunday evening.

West Pullman—Chicago

11926 Parnell Avenue

The month of July brought many pleasant memories to our little branch, and we believe we are now moving Zionward. The last three prayer meetings of the month were one hundred per cent in testimonies given, and on the 27th we had our first one hundred per cent prayer and testimony meeting, every one offering a prayer and each one testifying of God's goodness. We feel we are progressing spiritually.

The 3d of July sacramental service was one that the Lord blessed abundantly with his spirit. Our pastor, E. O. Byrn, was in charge, assisted by Charles Cotton. At the Religio service that night, we had an excellent patriotic program furnished mostly by our troop of Boy Scouts. Our scouts are progressing nicely, and we hope to see more of these programs, as they are very inspirational as well as patriotic. At the regular evening service, the pastor spoke in his usual forceful manner on "I bring you glad tidings of great joy," using as his text a portion of the first section of Doctrine and Covenants.

On the morning of the 10th, Clyde Bullard, of the First Chicago Branch, spoke to us, bringing us a message of comfort and cheer. In the evening the latest addition to our branch, Brother Clem Evans, spoke to us. We are indeed glad to have Brother Clem sojourning with us, for we find him a valiant worker in the Master's cause.

On the 17th of the month we were pleased to have with us Brother Earl Rogers, of Deselm, who occupied in the morning hour, breaking unto us the bread of life in no uncertain terms. We are always glad to have these visiting brethren meet with us. The evening service was dismissed to permit our members to attend the services at the Central Church and hear Bishop Albert Carmichael.

On Saturday, the 23d, a special fasting and prayer service was held in behalf of Sister Ruth Wahlgren, daughter of Brother and Sister John L. Cooper, who was critically ill but who at the present writing, we are glad to say, is somewhat improved. We hope and pray for her speedy recovery; her presence is sadly missed at church services; Sister Ruth makes a valuable contribution to the branch.

On the 24th Elder Heide, of the Central Branch, spoke to us at the morning service. This is Brother Heide's first visit with us, but we hope to see and hear from him often in the future. Our pastor again addressed us at the evening service, speaking to us on the "Fruits of faith." Brother C. A. Edstrom, pastor of the First Chicago Branch, spoke on building character on the 31st, giving us a very clear idea of building the superstructure strong and sure like that of a sky scraper. Brother Roy Healy occupied at the evening service, choosing for his subject "Zion builders," and using as his text 2 Corinthians 6:16, "Ye are the temple of the living God." Special musical numbers were given by Sister S. H. Batton, Brother Alfred Lester, and Brother Charles Scribner, accompanied at the piano by Brother Harold Buseth. We are indeed glad to have these visitors meet with us and make a contribution to our meetings.

Among the visitors to our midst this month were Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Sutton and Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Shook, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, as well as Brother George Crum, of Kansas City, Missouri. We unintentionally omitted the name of C. B. Woodstock when listing our visitors last month.

Our members are now anxiously looking forward to our reunion, which starts the 5th of August. Regular church services on Sunday will be discontinued during the reunion, only the midweek prayer meeting will be held.

Our departments are still active, and the summer with its hot, sultry days has not served to dampen their ardor. On the whole we seem to be pressing forward to closer union and brotherly love. We want to assist in the establishment of Zion. The question was asked in one of the sermons, "What is your contribution toward the establishment of Zion?" We hope ours may be great, and we are striving prayerfully to attain that end.

Our pastor has just returned from his vacation, spent in the city of Detroit with his brother.

Visitors are always welcome.

Month of July With First Columbus Branch

Saturday, July 2.—The young people's association had a swimming party, followed by a banquet at the home of Brother and Sister F. C. Welch. Wilbur with the ukelele, Don with his violin, Florence at the piano, the rest singing, all spent an enjoyable afternoon and evening.

Sunday, July 3.—Sunday school was in charge of High Priest C. W. Clark and Nathan Weate. Sacramental service in charge of High Priest C. W. Clark, Elders Gabriel and Welch. A very spiritual meeting. Sunday afternoon a patriotic sermon was delivered by Elder F. C. Welch. This sermon was full of inspiration, and visitors received a good knowledge of their duty to God and their country, as we Latter Day Saints see it.

Monday, July 4.—First Columbus picnic was well attended, with the heat of the sun very much in evidence. The women designed a new type of hat—made from newspapers—and gauze bandage for ties. Sister A. Buhler spent the week-end with the Saints of the First Church.

Games, races, and novelty contests amused and entertained the crowd. Among the more important events were the baseball game between married and single men, the fat men's foot race, fat women's foot race, novelty baby bottle pop-drinking contest, and others. The day was finished at the home of Brother and Sister Welch, the Y. P. A. headquarters.

Wednesday, July 6.—Prayer service was in charge of Elder Anderton and Priest Tom Williams. Sister Schmidt and Jessie Weate were spoken to by the Spirit, as were also the Saints collectively. It was an enjoyable meeting.

Thursday, July 7.—Women's Department meeting at the church was presided over by Sister Fay Clarke, superintendent. A talk was made by Elsie May Weate, giving experiences to and from Y. P. A. convention at Lamoni, Iowa, and telling of the experience while at the convention, and the lessons received. Parents' intelligence tests were held at this meeting followed by business session.

A lawn fete was decided upon for the first Thursday in August, to be held at the church. Visits to the sick at their homes and the hospitals were reported at this meeting.

Sister Bailey's son, of Middletown, Ohio, was the guest of Brother and Sister Nathan Weate, the week-end of the 4th; and Sister Countryman and son were guests of Sister Hershberger.

July 9.—The class of Elder F. C. Welch held a surprise party at the home of Brother and Sister C. H. Foster for their nineteen-year-old son, Lewis Charles. Brother and Sister Welch made the cream, Sister Mary Knagie made one of her championship cakes, and with Sister Foster's cakes, drinks, etc., and the games, the Y. P. A. had a very enjoyable evening.

Sunday, July 10.—Brother Charles Ferguson preached a wonderful sermon. Brother and Sister Ferguson may well be proud of this young man. Sunday afternoon Brother William Grice preached to a full church. His subject was "What shall be the sign?" This sermon was a real soul inspirer. Brother and Sister Evans, of Battle Creek, Michigan were visitors; also Brother and Sister Clemons were in from Grove City, Ohio; also Sister Davies, of Independence, Missouri.

July 11.—Elder A. E. Anderton called a teachers' and officers' meeting for school interests. These meetings are being held often and appear to be beneficial to the Sunday school.

July 13.—Prayer meeting was in charge of High Priest C. W. Clark and A. E. Anderton. Good attendance and a nice meeting were had.

July 14.—The Y. P. A. lawn fete occurred at the church. A good crowd was out, and an enjoyable time was had.

Sunday, July 17.—Brother Elwood spoke on obedience. At 7.30 p. m. Elder G. Ferguson spoke of succession, reformation, and restoration. Both sermons were well received. A solo was rendered by Sister Dollie Overly.

July 18.—Special prayer meeting was held in the wing of the church for Brother Tom Myers, seriously injured, in charge of Elder Fred Welch, assisted by Charles H. Foster.

July 19.—The choir had its social evening at the home of Brother and Sister C. W. Clark.

July 24.—Y. P. A. swimming meet, and musical evening at Elder F. Welch's home. Usual cream and cake. A Miss Moore, nonmember, was present. She proved to be a wonderful entertainer, violinist, pianist, and vocalist.

July 25.—At 10.45 Elder J. Gabriel spoke on authority. A good attendance; many fine points were brought forth. At 7.30 p. m. A. E. Anderton spoke on preparedness. A surprise party was given to Elder N. J. Weate for his seventieth birthday by his family in Columbus. Brother Weate is one of the old warriors of the gospel in Great Britain, and his works will speak long after this life here is ended.

July 26.—The Saints of the First Church had a postcard shower for Brother Weate.

July 31.—At 10.45 preaching by C. H. Foster; topic, "Building Christian lives." The sermon was devoted to the young men and women, and they were brought face to face with their present duties and future responsibilities. At 7.30 p. m., preaching by Elder F. C. Welch, "Watch and pray." The value and power of prayer was proved by incidents in Elder Welch's life, related by him. The young people's choir occupied morning and evening alternating with the seniors, which was well appreciated by all, both for the day off and the manner in which the young people conducted their program. Miss Moore, nonmember, but friend of all our young people, sang a beautiful solo in the morning.

This concludes another month of activity, and August points to a greater one.

Springfield, Missouri

August 2.—I feel that in the coming summer and fall months the work in the Southern Missouri District will take on renewed energy. Having just returned from the district conference at Thayer, Missouri, I would say that, while the conference was not largely attended, several things of importance to this district were discussed, and necessary legislation enacted to start development. The central theme to meet present conditions seems to be in the organizing of the priesthood of the district for missionary effort, as Southern Missouri has only one missionary at present. It is a large district in territory, many of the branches and members being scattered, and one man can not possibly fill the calls.

Those attending conference from Springfield were Brothers Henry Sparling, F. M. Reynolds, F. M. Bishop and wife, and none can speak too highly of the hospitality shown to the visitors by the Thayer Saints. It is always a pleasure to meet with them. Those attending also had the pleasure of meeting Brother G. W. Eastwood and Brother George Gould, of Independence, Missouri, who were attending the conference.

All departments are up to their usual standard in attendance and activity. All speakers were from our local talent, but with six to draw upon, many original thoughts and subjects were presented.

Our hearts were made sad by the death of Sister Tommy Palmer, on July 1. Funeral services were held at the church, with Brother F. M. Reynolds in charge; sermon by J. B. Ansley.

Mrs. Ethel White, of Newark, New Jersey, is visiting relatives here during July. Sister White is the daughter of Sister Henry Sparling, and in the early days of the work here served as organist.

Brother Holt and wife, of Lees Summit, paid us a visit at the morning service July 31. Brother Holt and wife had made a trip to the White River country the previous day, accompanied by their son. They were well impressed by the beauty of the scenery. We think there are a good many more of our church people who pass through here on their vacations and week-end trips who do not pay us a visit. Better stop! Be glad to have you; especially a right good preacher. Brother and Sister Cobb and Sister Mildred Freeman, all of Webb City, were visitors here on Sunday, July 31.

Visitors at Kirtland Temple

The church will be interested in the following table, which shows the number of visitors at Kirtland Temple from January 1, 1927, to July 20, 1927, as compiled by Elder James E. Bishop. Many will be surprised that visitors from 39 States and 9 foreign countries have visited the Temple within the six months and twenty days included in the report. It is likely worth while to give consideration to the appended suggestions of Elder Bishop:

Fanning, Kansas

The Sunday school contest closed on the last Sunday of June, the Whites losing to the Greens. The losers served a three-course supper to the winners on Thursday, the second week in July, at the church in Fanning. Branch President F. G. Hedrick was toastmaster. Several toasts were called for and given. It was an occasion long to be remembered. The Sunday school was built up in this way, and at times almost doubled in numbers.

Sisters Margarite Hopkins, Sylvia Chestnut, Helen Tilden, and Edna Dittimore Williams gave a miscellaneous shower at the home of the first named in June, in honor of our chorister, Miss Vera Twombly, who was to be married in July. Many beautiful and useful presents were given. Sisters Hopkins and Chestnut then left to attend Kansas State Normal at Emporia. They returned for a day or so to attend and assist at the wedding of Miss Vera to Harry Ratcliffe, of Washington, District of Columbia, on July 19 in the Fanning Saints' chapel. The church was tastefully decorated with garden flowers and ferns for the occasion. Elder James Thomas, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, performed the double ring ceremony. The bride was given at the altar by her father, Elder Samuel Twombly.

Brother M. L. Schmid, Troy group leader, joins with the ministers of the town in open-air services on each Sunday evening. He takes turn in preaching, and when possible our musicians put on a special number or two. There is a kindly feeling among them. Thus we cooperate with our neighbors, and much good may be done. Sister Schmid and daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson Blanton, are in Colorado at present, visiting for two weeks with old friends, and sight-seeing. The William Marsh family is in the Ozarks this week.

The playing of volley ball each Tuesday and Friday evening brings large crowds to the church lawn, and we have had four ice cream socials in connection with outdoor moving pictures thrown on the screen, the branch having purchased a little machine last spring through Brother Hedrick's efforts. By giving socials we expect to finish paying for it soon.

On July 24 our branch president offered his resignation, which was accepted, and a rising vote of thanks was tendered Brother F. G. Hedrick for service so well rendered. He has been untiring in his efforts to build up the branch and increase attendance. He left July 25 for Lamoni, Iowa, where Sister Hedrick joined him a week later, to take charge of a hotel at that place. May they be blessed in their new location. They have had some experience in hotel work before. By his going, also that of Sister Vera, some changes have necessarily been made in the branch. Brother William Twombly was chosen branch president; Brother Charles Marsh, clerk; Brother Emil Jeschke, leader of Religio; and Edna Williams, chorister.

The annual reunion of the three families of McNutt, Price, and Gurwell, pioneer Latter Day Saint families of Fanning and Troy, was held Sunday, July 31, at Lake Contrary camping park. There was a large number present, and a basket dinner was enjoyed. The day was spent in visiting and games, and a general good time was had. It will be held next year at the same place on the third Sunday in July.

Dallas, Texas

August 1.—Dallas Branch wishes to let her friends and Saints in general know that we are holding forth at the old stand, but taking on new life and forging ahead. While we do not have baptisms to report, we can say there is a better spirit of unity and desire to push forward than has been evidenced for some time, and we are hoping for good results.

Elder Vanderwood held a series of meetings here during the latter part of May and part of June, which meetings were well attended by the Saints. But few outsiders came. He gave us good things to consider. Then Bishop Hunt came and gave us three of his very individual presentations, which brought cheer to the hearts of many. These brethren proceeded to district conference at Hearne, Texas, to which conference a number of the Dallas Saints went, and on returning they reported a very spiritual time and were loud in their praises of the young people of that conference. They remarked particularly on the young people's willingness to take up any duties assigned to them.

The last few prayer meetings here have been very spiritual. We were told by the Spirit operating through our pastor, Brother H. H. Davenport (who is a very busy man in his office), that we would be made to rejoice if we attended the meetings and took interest in them.

The Religio, or Department of Recreation and Expression, is also coming to the front, even with the hot weather operating against us.

The Women's Department has been very active in every branch of their work, and they enjoy it.

The Sunday school is a bright feature of the branch and is ably presided over by Sister L. R. Wells. She gave a splendid talk Sunday morning on "Preparation and efficiency of the teachers."

We had two splendid sermons last Sunday: Brother Fuller in the morning and Brother Moore at night.

We will be glad to welcome visiting Saints or others. Our church building is located at Third Avenue and Dallas Streets. Second Avenue street car to Second Avenue and Dallas Street; walk one block west.

We hope to report progress from time to time.

J. E. NICOLL.

Minot, North Dakota

Sunday, July 31, saw another gathering of the members of the Minot Branch at the farm home of Brother M. D. Graham, at Burlington. They came from far and near, Brother Frank Hodges and family of Alamo arriving at 10.30 a. m., in time for Sunday school, after a drive of one hundred forty-four miles, while fifty, thirty, twenty-five and fifteen miles were common phrases among the guests. Sixty-one were present at dinner, which was followed by preaching at 2 p. m., by Elder William Sparling, assisted by Elder Frank Hodges.

The sum of eight dollars and seventy-five cents was taken as collection, and owing to the fact that so many Sunday schools were represented, it was decided to make it an oblation.

A number decided to go to Washburn, North Dakota, on Sunday, August 7, to meet with some of the recently baptized members of the branch, while the Sunday following, August 14, the branch again meets for a day of services and dinner at the home of Mr. and Sister J. F. Bailey, twelve miles north and west of Minot. Bring your baskets and meet with us; you will surely enjoy the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cooper and children drove up from Parshall, North Dakota, Sunday, to meet with the Saints.

Mrs. Fred N. Fetch (formerly Ellen Graham) and sons, Robert and Arthur, from Spearfish, South Dakota, have been visiting for the past two weeks with her brother, M. D. Graham, of Burlington, and sister, Mrs. Charles A. Smith, of Minot. While here she renewed old acquaintances, and met with the Saints at their branch picnic. She was accompanied by Miss Fanchon Cohrt, of Spearfish, whose father, Elder Cohrt, has worked for some time among the Saints in the Black Hills.

Anamosa Branch Flourishing

Only a few weeks have passed since the Anamosa Branch was reorganized by Elder C. A. Kress. Eight baptisms and six children blessed have been the results so far.

The Sunday school has been organized with a membership around forty. Religio was organized July 29 with a full set of officers. Sunday, July 31, three responded to the birthday box. After services Sunday a picnic dinner in the woods was given in honor of Sister Kress, who was our guest. In the evening services were held on the lawn at Sister Raymond's, which were attended by the Methodist people of Fairview, together with their minister, Harry Newlin, of Viola. Brother Kress, with his usual courtesy, assigned the opening and closing remarks to the Methodist leader.

Visitors from other points who attended the different services Sunday, were Mr. and Mrs. Yarrington, Sister Fleming, and Brothers Trevy and Woodard from Cedar Rapids. Brother Woodard spoke to us very encouragingly. He and the others from Cedar Rapids urged cooperation between these two branches, which was heartily approved by all.

Monday evening, August 1, officers of the Religio gathered at the home of Sister Ellison at Martelle, together with Brother and Sister Yarrington and Sister Fleming of Cedar Rapids, who took active part in the exercises of the evening. After prayer and song, the evening was spent in games for entertainment, it being the last night that Sister Kress of Independence would be with us. The pleasant hours passed all too quickly for those assembled.

Prayer meetings also have been organized. The first meeting will be held with Brother Bobst, who was recently ordained to the priesthood.

The Saints here, and those who meet with us from other places, are very much enthused; the revival is spreading, and all are looking forward to splendid results from the good work. When Brother Kress came here, the branch was at a very low ebb, a few faithful ones waiting for some one who had the spirit and the ability to go forward against the conditions and state of apathy that existed.

There is a great work in the world, everywhere, for us to do. We feel and know this to be true, and in the work here there is great need of consecrated service; not for the few, but for all; and when this is fully realized the burden will not rest on the few, but will be more equalized and more enjoyable to all.

My Impressions of Nauvoo

By L. H. Lewis

Three years ago this coming October, 1 drove my Dodge from Kirtland to Nauvoo. Nauvoo was to be my new home. I therefore had more than an ordinary interest in the place. As I drove in from the east, I found what seemed to me to be an ordinary, small western town, with its usual one main street leading through the middle of it, lined with the usual business places, stores, garages, post office, etc., and the usual two banks on the usual two most prominent corners. Money is still king!

Approaching Nauvoo, I had been racing with time for several hours, determined if possible to reach my destination before sundown. I arrived in the town about 4.30, and as I stopped in front of the post office I saw a characteristic group of schoolgirls, talking, laughing, and giggling, in the characteristic schoolgirl fashion. In the midst of the group I saw my own daughter, Roberta, so I felt that I was nearing home. My family had preceded me about a month and were already settled in our (old house) new home. The girls gave me directions, and as I approached the brow of the hill on the western side of town, a most beautiful scene met my vision. Along the slope of the hill and on the wide flats below were vineyards, orchards, pastures, meadows, fields of grain, and corn. Here and there the landscape was dotted with white and brick houses, buildings, and barns, and around these homesteads were shade trees and shrubbery, all decked with the beautiful colors of autumn. Beyond was the great Mississippi, the Father of Waters, bending in a huge arc like an immense rainbow around the city. Across the river was the little village of Montrose, and in the distance loomed the hills of Iowa. The sun was nearing the horizon, and a great ray of light streamed across the water, perfecting the beautiful picture. The point I occupied I afterwards learned was what is known as David's Lookout. What wonder that he received the spirit of poetry and song amid such beautiful surroundings!

Down on the flats I found the house that was to be our home. It seemed like a building of olden days, with thick brick walls, large rooms, and high ceilings. The large lawn is inclosed with a white picket fence and planted with trees, spruce, cedar, maple, an arbor vitæ, a tulip tree, and best of all, a great white weeping birch. Truly the deeds that men do live after them. If some one had not builded and planted, we could not have occupied and enjoyed. I love the old place, and we are trying to increase its beauty by adding shrubbery and flowers.

There seems to be a quiet and peace pervading Nauvoo

Special Book of Mormon Anniversary Conference

The district is invited to make this the banner conference for the Southern California District. This will be our opportunity to celebrate the coming forth of the sealed book of Isaiah 29. We have delayed our summer conference to give the district the opportunity to celebrate this anniversary together. Let everyone prepare for this notable event. This will be a mass conference; every member has a personal interest. Business of interest to the district must have your attention. Election of district officers will take place in all departments. Reunion grounds having been sold, shall we buy another ground? If so, where? Southern California must have a reunion next year. A special program for the occasion will be prepared and excellent speakers provided. Come and enjoy two days together and make this a social and spiritual event. Send all ministerial and branch reports to Sister Amy Lewis, district secretary, 6223 Poppy Peak Drive, Los Angeles. She will print your report for the conference. Please report promptly. N. T. Chapman, district president.

that I have rarely experienced elsewhere. Especially is this noticeable on an early Sabbath morning when I have gone for a stroll, or met with the young people for an early prayer meeting down by the river or up on the hill.

The old church buildings, the Mansion House, the Nauvoo House, and the old Smith Homestead with the little graveyard nearby where the Martyrs lay, the other old houses, some rebuilt, some crumbling, and some in ruins, all tend to make the early history of the church very real, almost causing one to feel as though he were living in that early day.

While there is a certain sadness about Nauvoo, there is also a surpassing peace like a benediction hanging over, waiting to break forth in blessings some day. Let us hope that it may be so.

Safeguards

Do you know of any other investment with these safeguards:

- Ratio of assets to liabilities 7 to 1.
- Proven integrity and good will.
- Safe investment of your principal.
- Regular guaranteed interest income.

Church Bonds measure up to these "safeguard" requirements.

A $25 church bond can be bought on installment payments of $1 or more. 4% interest will be allowed on these installment payments and when the bond is secured there is interest at 5%.

Many young people have already started to do this. When a start is once made it is easy to continue the habit.

New Booklet on Stewardship

There is now in process of being printed, a new booklet entitled "Problems of Industrial Zion." The content of this booklet is an amplification of a series of lectures given during the last General Conference and the matter of stewardships and cooperation in developing Zion is presented from quite a new angle.

It is written in a very interesting style. Definite situations are discussed and analyzed in a logical, common sense way, and the pleasing thing about the book is the fact that the entire treatise is based on the spiritual ground work of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The booklet is designed as a text for study by the priesthood in their priesthood meetings and by the membership in their study classes throughout the church. The First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric urge that this booklet be secured and study work begun. The Herald Publishing House will receive your orders now for this booklet.

The booklet will be about one hundred and seventy-five pages and will be sold for 20c each.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price $2 a year in advance. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103. Act of October 3, 1917; authorized July 21, 1921.

In my last letter to you I told of a visit to western New York and various points of interest in church history. It was at Elmira that I left Brothers Gardner and Fry, they to return by motor car to Palmyra, Rochester, and Buffalo; I to go to New York and Washington, at the latter place to meet A. B. C., of K L D S, to work together for a few days in the interests of our broadcasting station; and from early Wednesday morning, the 27th of July, till after the hearing before the Radio Commission on the 29th, that work was to the fore.

Brother Church had secured the cooperation of "Frank" Jones, and I must say it was a pleasure to me to see the businesslike and thorough way these two former Graceland boys went at and stuck to their job, getting the case ready to submit to the commission. And I was further pleased to see the masterly way in which the case was presented. I'm not going to tell of that here and now—perhaps later. And I'm going to jump over a few days and start on this "journey" at Boston, or rather Arlington.

On the morning of August 5 folks were astir early at 20 Winchester Road, Arlington, Massachusetts, the home of Brother E. L. Traver. I had arrived late the night before from New York, and found only "E. L." up. The occasion for the early rising on the 5th was to get an early start on a long drive, and at about a "quarter to seven" or three quarters of an hour late according to "Skipper" Traver, the Packard Six was "packed" with baggage and loaded with its human "freight." Bishop A. Carmichael and wife and Sister Traver in the rear seat, and I in the front beside the skipper, who was at the wheel, comprised the "passenger list."

Slowly leaving the yard of the Traver home, cautiously feeling its way down the hill, the Packard under E. L.'s capable management soon was on the highway with its nose (radiator, bumper, front wheels) pointed towards Maine. Our destination was Brooksville, and the definite spot was the reunion grounds or camp of the Maine Districts, Eastern and Western. It was the best part of a day's ride away, so we settled down to enjoy the comfortably riding car in a trip through a beautiful and interesting country. All the way we were close to the sea or its arms, and the beauty of the New England coast is so well known that I need not here tell of it. The day was fine, the roads excellent, the car comfortable, the company congenial. What more could be asked?

The country abounds in towns and cities, villages and sea resorts. It is a most interesting country. Out of Massachusetts into New Hampshire, out of that into Maine, it seemed not long before we were at Portland, Maine. Here a short stop was made to "stretch" and rest a bit by walking about. It wasn't noon, but Brother Carmichael and I hinted a time or two that it might be well to "get a snack" while we could. But our apparently hard-hearted "skipper" said "No! On the way." So we clambered into the car again and were soon on the way.

Along about noon that skipper began looking for certain "signs" along the roadside, and at a certain sign he swung sharply to the right, and about a mile or so off the main road turned into the yard of "New Meadows Inn." From the location on the upper reaches of an arm of the sea, and from certain signs around the place, we made up our minds that the skipper had "shore dinner" in his head all forenoon, which accounted for his seeming hard-heartedness about our proposed "snack" at Portland.

And shore dinner we had—one of the finest. That skipper knew his business.

As we returned to the car, Brother Traver remarked, "Do you want to drive?" Say, does a man who loves machinery want to get at the wheel of a piece of machinery such as is the Packard Six? I tried to appear casual as I remarked, "I wouldn't mind it." And I enjoyed driving, too.

A new ferry, Prospect Ferry, offered a cut-off to our destination, so we left the main road before reaching Bangor, and crossed the river to Bucksport, and thus saved a number of miles. We had a taste of primitive Maine roads, however. But without much inconvenience and by making several inquiries how to get into and out of the various Brooksvilles (East, North, South, and West) we finally reached a farmhouse, and of the man in sight, near the barn, we asked, "Where is Brooksville?"

"You're right in it," said he.

Queer how these eastern "towns" will mix up a westerner. Townships they call them out West.

"Well," said we, hoping to get a line on our situation, "where is West Brooksville?"

"You just left it," was the answer.

I was about to suggest that we inquire about South Brooksville, but didn't. Questions seemed to be at an end—we just didn't know what to ask next, but we knew where we wanted to go. Then I had a happy thought, and turning to the man who had by now come close to the car and stood with his hand cupped to his ear, I said:

"Well, brother, we're a bunch of Latter Day Saints looking for the reunion grounds."

"Oh," said he with a grin, "that's it, eh? Well, go straight ahead [that means follow the road, crooks and straights] to the next corner, then turn to the right and you're soon there."

"Thanks," said we, and threw the motor into gear and went on. To the corner, to the right, up the hill, and into the woods at a sign stretched across the road, "Latter Day Saint Camp Grounds," down a short winding road into an open space on the shores of a lake, and we were there, and made welcome, too.

This is, I believe, the third year in which the two Maine districts have held joint reunion at this place. I had been told that grounds has been purchased near Sargentsville, on the shores of "Walker's Pond"; and on hearing it had made the mental comment, Why with all the miles of beautiful seashore sites did those people want to locate inland on some fresh water pond? I presume my somewhat disgusted query arose from the connotation of "pond" to one raised on the prairies of Iowa. But I might have known that those level-headed and self-reliant Maine Yankee Saints would know what they wanted. And they certainly picked a beautiful location.

"Walker's Pond!" Just why that beautiful, peaceful, spring-fed jewel of a lake, surrounded by thickly wooded hills, the lake itself some three miles long and about three fourths mile wide, with stretches of white sandy beaches alternating with boulder-strewn shores, should be called "pond," is more than I can understand, any more than I can understand why the hill standing on one of its shores, from whose summit one of the prettiest vistas in the country can be seen, should have been dubbed Caterpillar Hill. Such spots in, say California, would probably have been called "Emerald Lake" and "Elysian Mound," or something akin. But wait! That bit of sylvan water beauty has a name more to its character, for the Indians who seem to have had the habit of calling things by their right names, spoke of it as Lake Winnegwanauk, which means "Waters Beautiful." So there! And I'd like to know what they called Caterpillar Hill.

The "camp grounds" owned by the Maine reunion is located on the west side of the northern part of Lake Winnegwanauk, and comprises some thirty-nine acres of land, mostly thickly wooded, and includes nearly a half mile of irregular shore line. At least two springs of clear cool water bubble out on the tract, one of which flows continuously throughout the year and is one of several which "feeds" the beautiful lake. This spring is utilized to supply the camp with needed water. A cleared field, sloping gently up from the lake to the northwest, affords space for dwelling tents, the tabernacle, young people's tent, and the "dining hall"; the latter a permanent wooden frame building.

On our arrival we found the camp just finishing the evening meal, but we were not too late, and were regaled with a fish chowder, one of Newman Wilson's best.

The reunion, as I understand it, is in the hands of the officers of the two districts. Brethren Wilson and Berve, presidents respectively of Eastern and Western Districts, were on the grounds. Brother Wilson was running the commissary, and together they planned the other activities. This year's reunion was booked for August 5 to 14, I believe, and we arrived on the 5th. Usually the first day (and sometimes the second) is used in getting settled, and meetings go by the board; but not so here. On consulting with the directors of the activities, Brother Carmichael and I learned meetings started that night, and that one of us was to "occupy." Well, we persuaded them to put Brother Greene (U. W.) in the stand that night, and as I was to be on the grounds for about two days only, I agreed to speak Saturday night and twice on Sunday, Brother Carmichael to preach once each day. And so it carried out. The daily program was early morning prayer service, followed by class work, preaching at eleven o'clock, recreation in the afternoon, and preaching in the evening.

Well, supper over, the arrangements understood, the Arlington crowd sought the quarters to which we had been billeted. About 1.3 miles (I know, for I checked the odometer several times) west of the grounds is the home and Maine farm of Sister Etta F. Gray. There we found her, a bright-eyed, vivacious little woman with hearty and unsimulated hospitality and ready repartee. She was for a moment flustered at the unexpected number. She had expected Brother and Sister Traver, but hadn't Brother and Sister Carmichael. And as for me? Well, in that frank and ingenuous countenance I detected a look askance. I understood it later on taking leave. (I'll tell you about it later.) But she soon had us assigned to rooms, of which there seemed to be plenty. You who have been to Maine know the New England custom of connected dwelling and barn—a great convenience in severe winter weather. And one never knows just how much spare room there is in a rambling New England farm home until the hostess gets through locating her guests. There seems always to be beds and rooms enough.

Saturday, the 6th, was one of New England's very best. The air was clear, warm, but pleasant, the visibility so good as to be rare. After prayer meeting, camera strap across shoulder, despite a lame hip which had been bothering me for some days (don't know yet, though I still have some of it left, whether it is sciatica, neuritis, tic douloureux, or just hurting meanness), I walked over the grounds, part of the time alone, part with Brother Berve. I had two things in mind—to learn more about the grounds, and to get some photographic records. It was a wonderful day for photographic work, but I'm not at all certain I got any good views, for the kodak was new to me, and the shutter was obstreperous. But, anyway, when one is out looking for pretty views, his observation is keener, and he enjoys the beauties all the more. So what does it matter? I may have a roll or two of "duds"; but I got an eye-full of splendid views of the camp and its surroundings.

And I had an experience with a snake. I was strolling up the slope to the east of the lake, picking blueberries occasionally, stopping now and then to see and admire the wonderful picture spread before me as I would turn and look back. I was making thus slowly towards an oak tree from which I felt sure some particularly good views could be had and which would help some in the composition of the pictures. I was nearly there, walking slowly, when suddenly on the ground a short step before me there was a flashing movement. A beautifully marked small snake resenting my approach, had put himself in the attitude of defense. It was his sudden movement which revealed to me his presence. Otherwise I would not have distinguished him from the grasses in which he was lying. There he lay, head toward me, motionless, but on the alert. I had stopped short on his first movement and for a while watched him as he remained in fighting attitude, his slender body prettily marked with black and white spots, larger in the middle of his body, growing smaller in size towards tail and head. He was partially coiled, with that double sharp curving of the body at the neck which makes for the quick, darting strike. I had never seen his like before.

The black and white spots gave him a gray color in general and his skin glistened in the sunlight. He was I judge about eighteen inches long, about as large as one of my fingers. I learned afterwards it was an adder. Reaching out with the small metal tripod I carried in the right hand, I nearly touched his head. Would he strike? No. Did he know it was metal? Perhaps not. Then I touched his tail with the tripod. Like a streak he struck—not the tripod, but in the direction the touch came from. Before he got back into position I touched his middle and a couple of flashing strikes followed. I shook a weed near him, and he struck at that. I tried to shoo him away, but got a series of strikes in response. Then he ran—not away but towards me. I stopped him and tossed him back to his original place. On defense again, facing me. Do you know that little reptile made me feel at home, and I smiled. And there he lay a belligerent, angry, obstreperous little reptile, resenting he knew not what! He's not the first to impugn and attribute to me sinister motives as I moved out along peaceful and constructive lines. And as I smiled down at the pugnacious little fellow I thought: "Well, in my boyhood days we thought it necessary to destroy your kind, but you remind me so much of some people I've met, fighting they know not what, just fighting—that I'm not going to destroy you, but let you live. Perhaps some day you'll learn better when and what to fight." And so I tossed him off into the bushes and went on with my preparations to photograph.

While I was thus photographing and viewing, Brother Carmichael and those in charge were organizing the class work for the reunion. You know Brother Carmichael is never happier than when teaching. With him in the class work were to be Brother Beggs, of Vinal Haven, in recreational work, Sister Clarke, of Graceland and Corea, in young people's work, and others I can not now name.

After dinner (lunch) Brother Traver took us, Brother and Sister Carmichael, Sister Traver, and me, for a ride. Leaving camp we went to the four corners called Brooksville, thence southeast up over Caterpillar Hill. Part way up that hill to the left of the road, quite hidden in the trees, stands the church building, Sargentsville Branch, I believe. Apparently off by itself, only two houses being visible near it, yet "they say" that when meetings are on the people come out of the woods from all directions and fill it. We paused long enough to photograph and to see the fine landscape. We were south and east of the camp. Below us, stretching north and south lay the beautiful lake, its blue smooth waters shining in the sun like a mirror reflecting along the shore lines the images of the forest trees which come down to the shore. Here and there along the shore could be seen summer cottages nestling in the trees, while to the northwest on the light green open spaces of the camp, could be seen the glistening white of the tents on the grounds and in the center of the space the big tent used as a tabernacle. Only a short way beyond the lake could be seen the waters of Penobscot Bay.

"What a view!" I exclaimed.

"It's nothing," said Brother Traver; "wait till you get to the top."

They Are Reading Book of Mormon

President McDowell taught a large class of young people at the reunion in Central Michigan. Word from Apostle John F. Garver, in attendance at this reunion, dated at Coleman, August 11, say that forty members of President McDowell's class have pledged themselves to reread the Book of Mormon.

A common task for the people of the church will lead to a common sympathy and a common understanding both of each other and of the doctrine and purpose of the church. We should be glad if this movement could become so wide as to deserve the term general, at least, if not universal.

We believe the church would be interested in the appended letter of Apostle James A. Gillen:

Editors Herald: In reading the HERALD for August 3, must say I am greatly impressed with the suggestion offered by Bishop Charles Fry in his telegram to you which appears on page 892.

I feel that the record as contained in the Book of Mormon is yet to play a very important part in our affairs as a church, and in connection with Brother Fry's suggestion I wish to state: undoubtedly it would be a very worth-while experience for the entire membership of the church to join with Brother Fry in his suggestion to read or reread the Book of Mormon. I hope the missionaries of the church, and especially those under conference appointment doing active missionary work, will make the Book of Mormon a part of their daily reading.

In view of this year being the centennial year of the Book of Mormon, it can be read in the light of one hundred years of history, and I am sure the Spirit of the Master will bring added testimony of its truthfulness and importance.

I will say for your information that a splendid feeling has prevailed among the Saints in the reunions where I have labored this year, and it is more than likely that the year will mark great progress for the church. I assure you that as a minister for Christ I am glad to be identified with such a work, and hope that the blessings of the Master will accompany every effort put forth in its best interests.

JAMES A. GILLEN.

DECATUR, NEBRASKA, August 10.

In consideration of the centennial year, the condition of the world religiously, industrially, politically, it is likely that no man can read the Book of Mormon without receiving added faith and ambition to serve the Master in these latter days.

Auditorium to Be Used Again in Autumn of 1927

The basement of the Auditorium will be seated again temporarily and in use the latter part of September to accommodate the centennial pageant, "Remember Cumorah," written by President Elbert A. Smith. The congregations in Independence and visitors from nearby stakes should fill it to capacity. The Laurel Club and the Dramatic Club are uniting to put on the pageant and have been at work on it for some weeks. There will also be appropriate Sunday services in celebration of the centennial, and immediately following will come the great annual Harvest Home Festival. Districts in America and abroad have been invited to send exhibits and representatives to this festival, and the Auditorium will be a place of beauty and interest. Saints proposing to visit Independence this fall might well watch for further announcements and dates, and time their visit to attend the pageant and festival which will begin on or shortly after September 22.

Good Report from Western Reunions

Apostle Myron A. McConley reports from three reunions in the West. We glean a little from his reporting letter:

"Compared with last year, Irvington reunion was larger, and there was a noticeable presence of peace and good will, instead of an undercurrent of dissatisfaction and suspicion which was there last year. . . .

"Portland reunion was much larger than last year, and while smaller than Irvington, the spirit of peace and good will was there.

"Seattle reunion was smaller than last year. Financially, however, this district has been a success."

President Elbert A. Smith has been off duty for nearly two months on account of ill health—a general rundown condition, with neuritis and indigestion. An automobile trip into Iowa was undertaken with the idea that it might prove beneficial, but it had the opposite effect and he returned home on the train. He was obliged to cancel his reunion dates for the season, but is making an improvement in health and expects to be back at the post of duty presently.

September "Autumn Leaves"

There are features of unusual interest in the September Autumn Leaves. The number is arranged especially in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

The Book of Mormon and the American Indian

BY S. A. BURGESS

As we have pointed out, the Book of Mormon is significant for all of us, as further evidence of the fatherhood of God, and also as another proof that Jesus is the Christ. But though it has this general value to all people, it is especially the Book of the American Indian.

To the Indian it gives direct challenge; it concerns the origin of his race and tells him directly the story of his people. It explains the splendid ruins left on this continent before the Europeans came to America.

It tells him that he is descended from an honorable race of the chosen people of God; that he himself is of Israel, and should rightly worship the one true God.

It tells him from whence his ancestors came and the story of their life in America for a thousand years. It tells of their prosperity and happiness and blessings when faithful to God! It tells of their sufferings when rebellious. It explains the diversity of language and of custom, because of the division of the family, when brother fought against brother.

It gives to his customs and traditions a new significance, and shows him, if he does not already know, that he is not a savage by lineage, but one who has lost his once high estate, to which he may yet return. It tells him how darkness came upon his skin and that by being faithful to God this curse will be removed and he will become in all ways a delightful people.

It tells him what he had long hoped; that he is the child of the Great Spirit; that the everlasting Father, the Eternal God, has raised him among his chosen ones, and is still waiting, willing to help him to return to the paths of righteousness. To him it is, and must be, a book of traditional significance.

It is therefore not surprising that when this book came forth and was printed in the spring of 1830, and the church was organized with six members on April 6, 1830, less than six months later, in September, 1830, the command came that Oliver

Cowdery should go among the Lamanites and preach the gospel to them:

And now behold, I say unto you that you shall go unto the Lamanites, and preach my gospel unto them; and inasmuch as they receive thy teachings, thou shalt cause my church to be established among them, and thou shalt have revelations, but write them not by way of commandment.— Doctrine and Covenants 27: 3.

In the same month Peter Whitmer was commanded to go with him (Doctrine and Covenants 29: 2):

Behold I say unto you, Peter, that you shall take your journey with your brother, Oliver, for the time has come, that it is expedient in me, that you shall open your mouth to declare my gospel; therefore, fear not but give heed unto the works and advice of your brother, which he shall give you. And be you afflicted in all his afflictions, ever lifting up your heart unto me in prayer, and faith, for his and your deliverance; for I have given unto him power to build up my church among the Lamanites.

In the following month, Parley P. Pratt and Ziba Peterson were added to these two on the same mission. (See Doctrine and Covenants 31: 1.)

Much stress has been laid upon this later revelation on this trip to the West. Of those who were converted in Kirtland, Doctor Frederick Granger Williams became a fifth member of this missionary party. They left Kirtland, preaching on the way at Saint Louis and Independence, which they reached about March 1, 1831. But today we wish especially to stress that work among the Indians of America was begun at an early date in the church. They left in October, 1830, and called on an Indian tribe near Buffalo and left two copies of the Book of Mormon before proceeding to Kirtland. (Parley P. Pratt, p. 49.)

On this trip we are told that they traveled 1,500 miles, on foot, through a wilderness country, and preached to thousands of Gentiles and two races of Indians, reaching Independence, but passed on and visited the Shawnees, then crossed the Kansas River among the Delawares, relating to the sachem the story of the Book of Mormon. At first it was rejected, as was all missionary work, but when he understood the contents of the book he changed his mind, and called a council, when the missionaries explained it to his tribe. After this they presented him with a copy of the book.

But this first Indian mission was soon to close. They had preached to the tribes near Buffalo, the

Are You a Producer?

Wyandottes of Ohio, and the Delawares west of the Missouri. (Parley P. Pratt, p. 6.)

It is not surprising, with the many other stories that were scattered, that the missionary work among the Indians was misconstrued, and the report made that they would make a rising among the Indians. Objections were made by other clergymen, and the Indian Bureau forbade their continuance.

Yet contact was made with the Indians where possible. Some of them were present on the first Sunday after Joseph Smith arrived in Jackson County, and W. W. Phelps was the speaker. Then at Nauvoo, Indians were in the near vicinity. Several incidents are related of Keokuk, the chief of the Sac and Fox Indians, but real missionary work was not resumed.

Today a very large part of the Indians have been admitted to American citizenship. They took part in the World War. There are factors which prevented their development, for which they are not to blame. The great majority of them live in houses, interest has increased in their welfare, and they follow the customs of the country and have proved themselves able to adapt themselves easily to modern customs and civilization. The Book of Mormon is particularly their book and is naturally well received among them.

It is to them that Moroni gives his challenge in the closing chapters of the book. His challenge is to test the truth of this record of God. But it is more than a challenge, it is a plea to the Lamanites. He is about to seal up the records, and he asks them when these are returned to a knowledge of mankind that they should remember how merciful the Lord has been unto the children of men from the time of Adam even down to the time when these plates shall come into the world.

Behold, I will exhort you that when ye shall read these things, if it be wisdom in God that ye shall read them, that ye would remember how merciful the Lord hath been unto the children of men, from the creation of Adam even down until the time that ye shall receive these things, and ponder it in your hearts. And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost; and by the power of the Holy Ghost, ye may know the truth of all things. And whatsoever thing is good, is just and true; wherefore, nothing that is good denieth the Christ, but acknowledgeth that he is. And ye may know that he is, by the power of the Holy Ghost; wherefore I would exhort you, that ye deny not the power of God; for he worketh by power, according to the faith of the children of men, the same today and tomorrow, and forever. And again, I exhort you, my brethren, that ye deny not the gifts of God, for they are many; and they come from the same God.—Moroni 10: 3-8.

This, after all, is the supreme test of the book. It reaches beyond any other proof that may be brought to bear. It is right that we study and consider carefully the other proofs, biblical and archaeological, but in the end the promise is made that he who seeks to know the truth will receive it. This is the promise of the book to the Indians, and to every other honest reader.

Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find.—Matthew 7: 9.

Ask God the Eternal Father in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you.—Moroni 10: 4, 5.

Physical Education at Graceland

The long registration line is yet in formation when one hears the question, "Have you taken your examination yet?" The physical examination, given each fall by the college physicians, is the one referred to. The results of this examination are used to determine whether a person should engage in the various physical activities throughout the year. They are used also in prescribing individual work for some individuals whose physical condition prevents them taking work with the group. Any program which works harm to the boys and girls of the college is undesirable, so the physical examination is given for their protection and to assist in caring for their welfare.

Classes are in full swing. An observer may notice on the campus groups of boys or girls being taught how to throw and catch a ball, how to control the body in running, how to dodge a person. A calisthenic exercise may be in progress and injunctions to "stand tall," or "head straight on the shoulders" may be heard. These groups are the regular physical training classes taking work required of all students unless excused because of physical inability or conflicting industrial assignments.

A group of about fifty girls are leaving the college campus, laughing and talking among themselves. Inquiry might disclose that this was one of the organized gymnasium hikes for girls.

School work drops into the routine as time passes. The literary societies are becoming more and more interested in the coming contests. The girls are to play playground ball and the men, tag football.

Finally the time for play arrives. Amid cheers and support of their societies, some teams march on to victory while others must yield to defeat. Every person is interested, for almost every person is a member of one of the teams. No one's ambition is crushed, however, as this is just the beginning of a series of athletic events to be carried on throughout the year.

The football team, composed of thirty stalwarts of the college, practice every evening on the "bean field." They seem to be a bunch of clean men, with lots of enthusiasm and determination. The first game is won, and so is the second. A successful season seems assured.

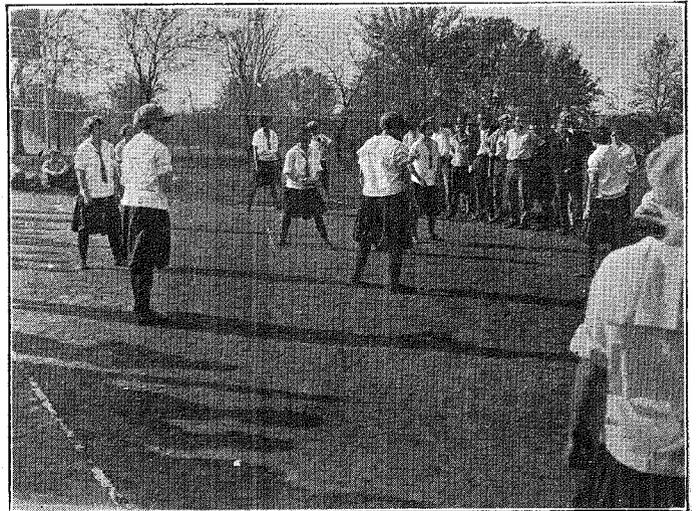

What's this the girls talk of? Gym show and athletic points. Oh, yes, the gym show is a review of the gymnasium work for the year and is to be given in the spring. The athletic points are credits for different activities which apply on the winning of the girl's official "G." It seems the girls are just as determined as the men in their efforts to win the coveted letter.

The foregoing is a presentation of the machinery used by the physical education department in carrying out its part of the college program. A physical examination, required physical education classes, intramural competition, and varsity competition are essential in this program.

The college is engaged in the business of education. The purpose of that business is to develop men and women in accordance with a certain plan, much as an inventor might construct a machine according to a certain plan and for working in a certain way when finished.

Graceland's justification for existence lies in the fact that her human development plan contains specifications calling for instilling into the habitual life of her students such factors as "faith in God," "dynamic of service," "life with a purpose," "being industrious," and "fidelity to church and its social program." The justification for the physical education department is that it assists in this program.

It is maintained that such qualities as these following are worth while, individually and socially: Physical efficiency and power including general well-being; having a fund of exercise material, including a repertoire of games and an ability to play them and initiate them into the play of others; desire and ability to play; being a friend to one's associates.

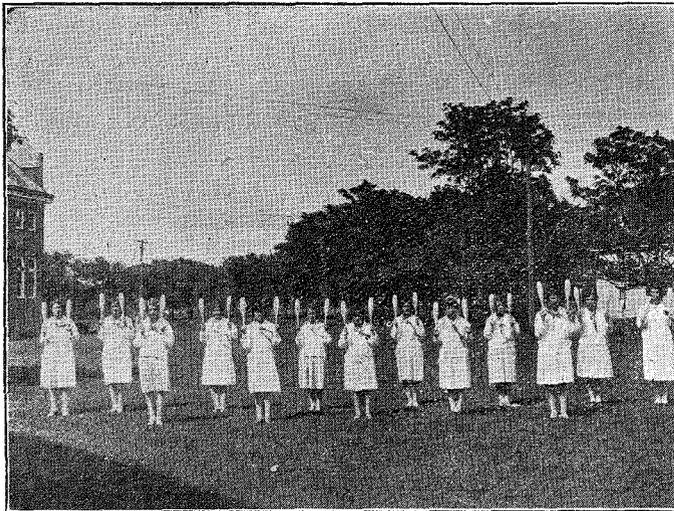

Women's Volley Ball

These are qualities the college attempts to develop in the Graceland student.

It is the conscious purpose of the physical education department of Graceland College to assist in the development of "Zionic Citizens" and to avoid the development of traits and tendencies detrimental to the existence of that social order. Boys and girls must "do things." Some things are liked and continue to be done, while other things drop out because they are not liked. By presenting to Grace-land students "things to be done" which are at the same time socially desirable and interesting to the student, physical education attempts to do its bit in developing men and women whose conduct is proper and efficient, whose attitudes are without taint, and whose countenances are joyous from the thrill of wholesome activity.

Approving Work of Budget Committee

In answer to our letter sent out concerning the adjustment of family allowances the bishop's office continues to receive fine-spirited letters.

I wish to thank the Budget Committee for the interest they have taken in me. I wish to thank them for the monthly allowance.

I seem to be gaining a little strength, but am still blind and need the assistance of my relatives to help me about.

One of our able high priests writes as follows:

Replying to your letter relative to our budget and allowance for the new period. We note that the allowance has been increased from $— per month to $—. For this gracious consideration of our needs we wish to thank the committee or whoever may be responsible for this. And now may we offer a suggestion in the matter, and that for the sake of the Work.

We believe we can make the grade on the old amount and would be glad to have you change it back to that. Our expenses have been heavy since coming here, but we are not complaining if we can but find things moving in the right direction. The Saints here have just about all they can do to make the present budget of our branch. We are hoping after the reunion to make a survey in the matter of finances and see if there are not some who would be glad to help who possibly may not be doing anything now.

That certainly is consecration of the sort that will build the kingdom of heaven.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By M. H. SIEGFRIED.

Add to Knowledge Temperance

BY GUY HAYNES

From the Second Epistle of Peter, 1:5, 6, we quote and paraphrase: "And to faith, virtue [power]; to virtue, knowledge [experience]; to knowledge, temperance [habitual moderation in the indulgence of appetites and passions]." With this thought of temperance in mind, let us turn to Doctrine and Covenants 11:4, which tells us we should be temperate in all things whatsoever shall be intrusted to our care. Let me outline a few things concerning health.

Health is, to every organized being, the condition of perfect development; the condition of perfect happiness. Health in a human is the perfection of bodily organization, intellectual energy, and moral power. Health is entire freedom from pain of body and discordance of mind. Health is beauty, energy, purity, holiness, happiness. Health is that condition in which man is the highest known expression of the power and goodness of his Maker. When a man is perfect in his own nature, body and soul, perfect in harmonious adaptations and action, and living in perfect harmony with nature, with his fellow man, and with God, he may be said to be in a state of health.

Paul tells us in Hebrews 1:6: "Therefore not leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection." It may be that at times we have looked at this statement in the light of spiritual perfection in man. But I believe it applies to the physical in man as well. For I do not believe man can attain unto perfection except he attain it both physically and spiritually. If I were to ask each individual as I come in contact with him if he loved himself, nine out of ten would answer that he did. And if we repeat the question in another form, Do you love yourself enough so that you would not think of harming your body deliberately? they would, I believe, answer me, "Yes." And yet for all of this, perhaps those same individuals may be loving themselves in such a manner and degree that they are sinning against their own bodies and don't realize it.

Our thought is, Habitual moderation in the indulgences of appetites and passions. Stop for a moment and look around you, at the people you see every day. Then ask yourself, Do I love my body? In what way do I love it? Ruling the appetites and passions that I have? Or are these ruling my body?

The Apostle Peter says: Add to your knowledge, temperance, perfect development, perfect happiness. Are these things so today among the children of men? If not, what is the cause? Did not God at the creation exclaim, "All things which I have made are good"? What has happened to change this condition? Has God changed the laws that govern this condition? Doctrine and Covenants 85:8: "That which is governed by law is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same." Paragraph 9: "And unto every kingdom is given a law, and unto every law there are certain bounds and conditions." Paragraph 10: "All beings who abide not in these conditions are not justified." God gave a law to govern this kingdom, the human family, which we are in—the law of nature. He has not revoked that law that there can not be born into this kingdom, perfectly developed boys and girls to make perfectly happy men and women. The result of the disobedience of the first of God's creation was death, and death has been taking her toll in ever-increasing numbers. And obedience brought no restrictions. They had right to the tree of life. It is therefore necessary that every minute organ of the body, every faculty of the mind, every power of the soul should be fully formed and active; that every passion have full sway, all balancing and harmonizing each other, that man should act out all the fullness of his nature, and woman all the glorious beauty of her character, in perfect freedom, and in full enjoyment, to make up the integral conditions of health.

Look around you today and see if the children of men are not allowing their appetites and passions to rule their bodies and destroy them? The world is sick today; it needs the gospel of Christ, and included in this gospel is the Word of Wisdom. The world is diseased, and disease is any deviation from health. If the body as a whole, or any part of it, is wanting in proper development, that body is diseased. If there be lacking any faculty of the mind or any degree of energy and activity suitable to such faculty, it is diseased.

Let me give you a few figures. There are according to report published in Waterloo Evening Courier of June 9, 5,431 insane patients in our asylums in the State of Iowa; 2,386 feeble-minded and epileptic; Toledo Juvenile Home, 250; Davenport Soldiers' Orphans' home, 487; Rockwell City Women's Reformatory, 80; Marshalltown Soldiers' Home, 416; Oak Dale, tuberculosis sanitarium, 265; Anamosa reformatory, 938; Fort Madison Penitentiary, 1,055; Eldora Training School for Boys, 487; Mitchellville Girls' School, 161. A total of 11,956 individuals are confined in state institutions, who are not healthy. These individuals are lacking in development somewhere.

Health is the fullest expression of all the faculties and passions of man, acting together in perfect harmony. What is wrong? Let me ask a question: Does food play any part in this? The writer believes it has a great deal to do with it. It was my privilege at one time to be a member of a Guard Company. And I have studied some of the men we took to camp and the food we received. I will say that food and proper exercise will build men. I can not recommend so highly the standard of morals.

We cater to our appetites and eat many things that we like, yet our stomachs revolt at them. God has spoken in all ages of the world and given certain things for the use of man for food. Genesis 1:31 (Inspired Version): "And I God, said unto man, Behold, I have given you every herb, bearing seed, which is upon the face of the earth; and every tree in which shall be the fruit of a tree, yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat." Also Genesis 3:23, 24: "Cursed shall be the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. Thorns and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field." Here twice God told man that he should eat the fruit of the ground. Genesis 8:27: "And take unto thee of all food that is eaten, and thou shalt gather fruit of every kind unto thee in the ark, and it shall be for food for thee, and for them." Note again Exodus 16:13-15; Numbers 11:18-20, 31-33, and see how God punished those who lusted or allowed their appetites to long for the fleshpots of Egypt.

Jesus said of John that there was not a greater prophet born; and we find John ate locusts and wild honey.

Now, I believe in the Word of Wisdom, and God has said that it is his will in the temporal salvation of all Saints, given for a principle with a promise.

Custom plays a big part in health and happiness; for instance, man from habit can take twenty grains of opium—while at the beginning five grains would have killed him—or he can chew or smoke tobacco all day long, when at first just a little bit would make him deathly sick. He can drink liquor in large quantities which at first he could not do. Habit enables people to live in hate and all kinds of evil, yet shall we say that these things are conducive to good health or to the happiness or development of man? Poison never did anything but destroy if it was taken in large doses. Do not these things destroy the body? How about coffee and tea which contain drugs? The extract from them, like prussic acid, will kill small animals.

All the functions of life are carried on by the nervous system, and I believe these poisons, acting on the nervous system, are responsible for a large share of our illnesses today. Food today will ruin or regulate and make healthy the human family.

Natural food is a condition of health to every organized being. A plant finds its appropriate nourishment in the air, or draws it from the earth. We do not expect a vegetable to flourish in an uncongenial soil, because it is the soil that furnishes a portion of the matter necessary for its growth. It is the same with animals. Every animal, from the smallest to the largest, is furnished its food by a bountiful nature. And every animal save man eats in a natural state the food that nature intended. The higher intelligence of man is proved beyond a doubt. He is possessed of a greater intelligence than the dumb brutes. His greater capacity and freedom, which enable him to do greater and nobler deeds, enable him to do meaner and more debasing ones. Vegetables, by careful effort, may be made to grow in soils not especially adapted to nourish them and in climates not best adapted to their best development. So may animals be educated to live on an unnatural diet, but this is never a condition of health.

The cows upon a barren seashore learn to live on fish; a sheep has been taught to eat beefsteak and drink coffee, and a horse has been taught the habit of chewing tobacco. But can we say these are natural or healthy conditions? In the same way man learns to eat and love a variety of unnatural and hurtful articles of food, such as are not adapted to his digestive organs or the best nutrition of his system. He also learns to tolerate and love the most nauseous and detestable poison, which we have previously mentioned. The unperverted taste of every animal points with unerring certainty to its natural diet. Wherever a decaying carcass taints the air, there will be found the foul creatures that feast on carrion, the hog, the hyena, the wolf, the crow, the buzzard, and the vulture. Worms and insects finish the feast. The lion and tiger revel in the warm blood of animals they kill, but they turn away from carrion. We ask the question, Do men love themselves enough so as not to injure their bodies? Now, if you want to look on a beautiful scene, would you go to a garden where all things are growing for the use and benefit of man, or would you go to a slaughterhouse? We think you would turn to the garden.

In Japan, China, the whole East Indies, Persia, Turkey, flesh is seldom eaten by the poor. Over much of this territory not even the rich eat it. The finest forms, the best teeth, the strongest muscles, the most active limbs in the world are fed on a vegetable diet, and how about their intelligence, the intellectual and moral development? Nearly every poet or philosopher of ancient or modern times has given his testimony, either in his opinion or his practice, in favor of a vegetarian's diet. And God has added his testimony, section 86: "All grain is good for the food of man, as also the fruit of the vine, that which yieldeth fruit, whether in the ground or above the ground. And all Saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel and marrow to their bones. And shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures. And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint, and the destroying angel [death by disease] shall pass them by." Isn't it worth our while to test this principle and see for ourselves the results to be obtained by obedience?

Peter, in his second epistle, said: "Add to your knowledge temperance." I believe we have received knowledge enough of the results of our appetites and passions ruling us. Let us add temperance and rule these things to the good of our bodies. Jesus said they that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. Many of the physicians tell us when we are sick, Correct your food, and you will be all right.

Our elders need to be able to direct the minds of the Saints along this line of selection of food and the governing of appetites and passions. And I believe that by getting at the root of this, our trouble and the most of our sickness and disease will pass from us.

God has given us a promise in James 5:14, 15: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." Notice, "the prayer of faith shall save the sick." I wonder if our elders really have faith in the eighty-sixth section of Doctrine and Covenants. If they have and are living it in their lives, their prayers will be of faith and will save the sick. This means the deliverance from evil of any kind, deliverance from immediate or impending danger. That elder can be an instrument in the hands of God, and through God deliver from immediate dangers. But the elder's work goes farther than just the laying on of hands and a prayer over the sick; they, the sick, should be taught some of the things necessary to the care of the body.

It says also, "the Lord shall raise them up, and if he have committed sins it shall be forgiven." Sins against what? and of what kind? Surely against our bodies, not against our souls. If he has been intemperate in matters concerning the body, and sickness

Activities of Zionist Departments

The Hebrew journalists of Palestine met a second time yesterday afternoon at the invitation of the Keren Hayesod (Palestine Foundation Fund) at its offices to hear reports on the Zionist activities in this country.

Professor Pick, director of Immigration Department, and Mr. S. Kaplansky, director of Colonization Department of the Palestine Zionist Executive, reported on the work of their departments. Professor Pick produced the following figures on the number of Jews in Palestine:

In 1923, 93,000; in 1924, 109,000; in 1925, 146,000; in 1926, 158,000.

During the last three months a large decrease in Jewish immigration was felt, but it is hoped that the situation will be changed. Of last year's immigrants, 10,000 were men, 7,000 women, and the rest children. The majority, some 11,000, come from Poland. There were among them some 2,000 persons who brought with them at least £E. 500 each, that means one million pounds altogether. Thirty thousand Haluzim in the various countries of the Diaspora are waiting for an opportunity to come to Palestine, but this would require large financial support.

Mr. Kaplansky stated that he required a colonization budget of £E.330,000, but only £E.170,000 were granted to him by the Zionist General Council. The colonization scheme therefore had to be cut, and no more than 350 families can be settled on land during the coming year. The settlement of each family costs £E.700, but the department will try to reduce this sum to £E.500. This year eight labor is the result, the prayer of faith shall save, and the Lord shall raise him up. But it does not give the promise that we can continually do the same things again and receive the same blessing. We must control ourselves. Let us take knowledge from the things we see around us. Knowledge is experience.

A certain big surgeon of Waterloo made the remark the other day that he had just come from the hospital where he had performed his ten thousandth operation, and that he was going that afternoon to perform three more in a certain small town where he had already performed 265 operations in the course of two years' time. Why are conditions so that man must be cut open and things taken away? Think of these things? Does God know what is best for man?

settlements: Nahalal, Kfar Yehezkel, Ben Shemen, Gan Ehmuel, Merhavia, Geva, Degania A, Degania B. will be made self-supporting. Some 35,000 dunams of land belonging to the Jewish National Fund have lately been chosen for colonization by labor groups, Sephardim, middle class settlers, and others. These schemes will be carried out within three years.

Mr. Ulitzer, secretary of the financial department of the Keren Hayesod, stated in his report that the total income of the Keren Hayesod during the three months, October-December, was £E.171,000. Of this sum £E.151,000 have been handed over to the Zionist executive for expenditures on the activities of its various departments.—The Palestine Bulletin, January 12, 1927.

How Lazy Can a Minister Be?

A recent survey of the ministry in one of the larger denominations and a collection of official opinions as to the principal reasons for ministerial failure reveal a surprising unanimity in the judgment that more ministers fail on account of laziness than for any other reason.

The minister has no immediate boss to see that he puts in full time on the job. And if he is the kind of person who is disposed to be easy on himself, he can begin late and quit early and still comfort himself with the delusion that he is doing a great deal because he is doing a great many different kinds of things.

Anyone who has had pastoral experience will be inclined to challenge the statement that the minister has no boss; he has as many as there are members of his congregation, plus the bishops, secretaries, and other ecclesiastical higher-ups in his area, plus all the boosters of civic enterprises and the promoters of good causes who want the support of the church. But though these bosses are many, they are not organized, and neither any one of them nor all of them together can keep tab on the minister's working hours. In fact, the very multiplicity of bosses of this sort may convince even the most indolent parson that he is worked to death, just as the frequency of appeals for money may give a man the impression that he is very generous even though he never gives anything in response to any of the appeals.

But this is only a one-sided statement of the case. Doubtless preachers can be lazy, doubtless some preachers are lazy, but are preachers in general lazy? A writer in one of the Christian Advocates comes to the defense of the profession by reciting a tabulation showing that a minister's year's work requires 379 days of twelve working hours each. The largest single item in this table is 2,592 hours for the preparation of 144 sermons. Few preachers, we imagine, preach that many sermons in a year—at least that many upon which they have to spend eighteen solid hours of preparation. But as a matter of fact, there is something radically wrong about any estimate of ministerial activity which puts punching a clock in the foreground. A minister is often most profitably employed when he is just "sitting thinking"—provided he is not just sitting.—Christian Century, for July 21.

Would Tax Churches in Pennsylvania

One of the accomplishments of permanent value bequeathed to the State of Pennsylvania by the administration of Governor Pinchot is the report of the commission which studied the tax situation in that commonwealth during three years beginning with 1925. It is not often that a State commands such intelligent service. One of the conclusions at which the commission arrived was that the amount of tax-exempt property in the State is out of all proportion to the realty listed for taxation. With a total assessed valuation of all property in 1924 of a little more than nine billion dollars, the assessed value of exempt realty was found to be equal to 12.26 per cent of this amount. In the city of Philadelphia, this exempt property reached 14.77 per cent of the total. And of this exempt class, churches, parochial schools, and buildings for teachers of parochial schools furnished approximately 14.25 per cent. The commission is convinced that this constitutes a subtle and dangerous form of securing a state subsidy for religious institutions. "However commendable the purposes of these institutions may be," it says, "it is nevertheless a fact that the rapid increase in welfare facilities and the generous public donations to welfare work are gradually creating a non-taxed class of property which is increasing more rapidly than the wealth of the community, thereby forcing additional tax burdens upon the taxable wealth to an unfair degree." For this reason the commission recommends that all religious and charitable institutions be required to pay taxes on their land values, leaving improvements exempted. Whether or not these recommendations ultimately become law in Pennsylvania, there is undoubtedly a rising body of public opinion against the taxation policy which, in the words of the Pennsylvania commission, "calls upon everyone within the district to contribute to the support of all the churches, schools, hospitals, Y. M. C. A.'s, and other public charities."—The Christian Century, August 4, 1927.

It Would Be Better to Hire a Hall

A church wedding is certainly the most beautiful of all weddings, and if both the parties and the service are what they should be it is doubtless the most beautiful of all ceremonies that can be conducted in a church. It is both solemn and joyous. It looks back to the countless generations gone before, as all high ceremonials of religion do, and it looks forward down the brightening vista of the future, as all religious aspiration must. If religion is, at least in some of its aspects, the celebration of the supreme moments of personal and social experience, then it is possible for a wedding to be about the most religious thing that can happen in a church. Or, again, it may be one of the least religious. Setting aside for the moment the more important fact that the wedding may not be one to which the church can give its sanction or upon which it can ask the blessing of God with any lively hope that its prayers will be answered, the dominant spirit of the occasion may be one completely at variance with the spirit of religion. The rector of Trinity Church, New York, Doctor C. R. Stetson, who may be conceded to be in a position to know something about weddings in high society, recently said: "The fashionable church wedding is often vulgar as well as pagan. The church is turned over to a florist who does his best to take away every appearance of the Holy Place from the sanctuary and to advertise the wealth of the contracting parties. Often one hears of such weddings where orchestras are engaged to entertain the spectators and crowds gather in the streets to catch a glimpse of the bride, of whom they know nothing except that she is rich. There is no excuse for the use of the church for such display. It were far better if such weddings took place in a hall where an adequate entertainment could properly be given!"

Well said. If they don't want the church to look like a church, let them hire a hall. If they want the atmosphere of a masquerade ball rather than that of a house of prayer, let them go on to the country club. If there is to be nothing religious about the situation except the walls of the church, the words of the service, and the vestments of the minister, by all means hire a hall.—The Christian Century, August 4, 1927.

Central Illinois Reunion

The Central Illinois district reunion opened Friday, July 29, at Sheldon Park, near Edinburg. The first ones to pitch their tents were Brother and Sister Peter Adamson and family, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, who arrived a day or so before the reunion and stayed with us until the close. We were certainly glad to have them with us. By Friday noon the committee had the tents up and everything in readiness. The first service was preaching in the evening by Elder Fred T. Mussell. Brother Mussell was at his best, and the Saints are thankful to have him sent to our district. We trust he shall be permitted to stay in our district for some time.

Bishop and Sister A. B. Phillips, of Lamoni, Iowa, arrived in time for prayer service at 8.30 a. m. Saturday. The daily program was: prayer service at 8.30; class work at 9.45, in charge of Bishop Phillips; preaching, problem meeting, or round table, 11. The afternoon was given over to recreation, and at 7.30 song service in charge of District Chorister J. A. Williams began and preaching was at 8. After services the Saints gathered out under the lights for about thirty minutes of games and contests, and then song and prayer were had before retiring for the night.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer arrived at the grounds Saturday afternoon and preached that evening. His subject was, "The modern ark." He told of the necessity of an ark in our day. Sunday evening Brother Gleazer continued his subject and told the kind of an ark which is to be, a land of peace, a city of refuge, a place of safety called Zion. Monday evening he concluded this series and told who will build the ark. Those who missed any of these sermons missed a rare treat.

Sisters A. B. Phillips and F. O. Pritchett were in charge of the junior church each morning. The last Saturday of the reunion a booth was built in one corner of the auditorium, and work done by the children was displayed.

Sunday, July 31, was a busy day. There were about one hundred and fifty people in attendance. Prayer service started at 9 a. m. and preaching at 10.45, by Brother Gleazer. Priesthood meeting convened at 1.30 p. m. in charge of Brother Gleazer. Preaching was again had at 2.45, Bishop Phillips delivering the discourse, and preaching at 8 p. m. was by Brother Gleazer.

Monday and Tuesday at 10.45 Brother Gleazer was in charge of problem meetings, and Wednesday and Thursday Brothers Phillips and Gleazer conducted round table meetings, a great deal of good being done at these meetings. The Saints responded well.

Elder Walter Daykin, of Taylorville, Illinois, occupied the pulpit three times during the reunion. Brother and Sister Daykin are spending their vacation in Taylorville, and we were glad to have them with us during the reunion. Brother Daykin taught at the University of Iowa last year and will teach at the University of Kansas this year.

Friday night the Oriole Girls presented a little play entitled "An attempt at benevolence." And the ladies' senior class of the Taylorville Sunday school gave a play, "The unfortunate delegates." This program was very good. After the program, the Saints gathered around a large fire for a marshmallow roast. While the fire was burning down, a program was given and the camp paper, The Crazy Kamp Krieket, written by Sister Lena Shoemaker and daughter, Leah Denton, was read. Brother Mussell auctioned off an empty marshmallow box, and Brother William Vanhoosier was the highest bidder. It sold for $5.75.

Saturday and Sunday the semi-annual district conference was held. The district presidency presided. Brothers Gleazer and Phillips left Friday, as they had other reunions to attend.

Saturday evening a musical was given, "Mary, the doubter's daughter," by members of the district's choirs. Sister Tresa Nowack, of Pana, gave the readings.

Sunday morning at 9 a. m. the feast of the Lord's supper was observed. This meeting was truly a spiritual feast. Every prayer service during the reunion was of a high order, and the young as well as the older ones took part.

At 1.45 p. m. Sunday a meeting of the Department of Women was held in charge of Sister Beth Williams and Brother Mussell, the latter being the speaker. We regret that every sister in the district could not have been present at this meeting.

Seven were baptized at four o'clock in the afternoon. One of the candidates was a sister who came from Bath, Illinois, to investigate our work during the reunion.

The committee, composed of F. O. Pritchett, L. C. Jones, F. T. Mussell, William Vanhoosier, and E. E. Thomas worked hard to make this reunion a success. They were somewhat discouraged at first because of lack of interest of the Saints, but interest grew, and the latter part of the gathering was well attended. At the business session at conference, when a motion was made to discontinue the Central Illinois reunions, it was immediately voted down, so we hope to have a larger reunion next year but doubt if it will be possible to have a better one, as this reunion was one of the best we have had. The grounds are located about six miles from Taylorville, and owing to the miners' strike many are out of employment and did not camp but came to the grounds for the entire program each day. MRS. PEARL A. JONES.

Western Nebraska Reunion

Western Nebraska reunion convened at North Platte, Nebraska, from July 22 to 31, inclusive.

At 8 p. m. business meeting was called to order by E. F. Robertson, from Southeastern Nebraska. Apostle J. F. Curtis was chosen as chairman of the reunion, to be assisted by Brothers Robertson and Shakespeare.

The three above named were speakers, Apostle Curtis being the evening speaker after he arrived. He also had been selected as speaker at the Neligh, Nebraska, reunion, which overlapped the North Platte Reunion three days, hence Brother Curtis did not come until July 25.

Order of the meetings was: 9.30 a. m., prayer meeting; 10:45, class meeting conducted by Brother Curtis and Brother Robertson; 2.30 p. m., Women's Department; 4, recreation, consisting principally of volley ball; 8, preaching. At 10.45 junior church met in a separate tent under the leadership of Sisters Robertson and Jessie Morant. Brother Englebrecht faithfully acted as policeman, always being found on the job. Sister Elsie Hale, from Lincoln, Nebraska, acted as secretary of the reunion, furnishing the data from which this letter is written.

The reunion opened with an unusually large attendance and continued so throughout the entire ten days, the last day, July 31, being the largest, at which time there were between 150 and 200 present.

The Saints in general seem to be deeply interested in reunion work, some coming a distance of three hundred miles to attend. Grand Island was well represented all the way through, with most of the Kearney Saints coming for the last day or two. Brother Ward Hougas and family, of Holyoke, Colorado, came over for the last Sunday. Brother Hougas delivered one of his clear-cut sermons on stewardship, which, if put into operation, will greatly assist in the redemption of Zion.

Brother Shakespeare was elected chorister and Sister E. R. Sivits pianist. For some specials in music, we were favored with solos and duets by Brother Shakespeare, Sister E. R. Sivits, Sister Elsie Hale, and Sister Godfrey, from Kearney.

The Kearney orchestra came up for the last Sunday and furnished us some good music. They have made marked advancement since they were here two years ago.

Brother Eugene Closson stopped over with us the last three days, taking an active part in the leadership of the recreation. Brother Closson was on his way to Champion,

Nebraska, where on August 3, he was to be united in matrimony with Miss Travis. His bride-to-be met him here, and from this place they journeyed together. We wish much happiness for you and your bride, "Gene."

On Friday, July 29, all motored to a community grove a distance of three miles, taking lunch, where we played volley ball, baseball, and other games, after which we ate our lunch, returning just in time for the evening meeting. Everyone seemed to have enjoyed the occasion.

At 2.30 Saturday afternoon, July 30, business meeting was held to determine the reunion work for next year. Brother W. L. Sivits, C. G. Englebrecht, and Sister L. M. Richards were elected to be in charge of the work, being given authority to select the place and set the time.

On Sunday afternoon, July 31, Brother Shakespeare led nine precious souls into the waters of baptism, one young mother, two young ladies, and six children.

Thus we have passed another milestone in the history of reunion work in Western Nebraska, and are looking forward to a still better one next year.

E. R. SIVITS.

Western Colorado

The fourth annual reunion of the Western Colorado District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, convened Sunday, August 7, 1927, at the North Delta school grounds.

At 9 a. m. a very splendid prayer session was held, in which some very good testimonies of God's love and mercy were given.

At 10 a. m. Sunday school was held in charge of District Superintendent, Mrs. B. Mae Boyd, of Montrose.

At 11 a. m. Apostle James F. Curtis, of Independence, Missouri, gave a very fine sermon along the lines of practical religion. He spoke of his trip to Egypt, the Holy Land, Germany, and other points in Europe and Asia and told of the blessings of God enjoyed by the American people in our land of liberty as compared with the conditions he found in other lands.

At 2.30 p. m. Elder Richard D. Weaver, of Independence, Missouri, who has spent many years in gospel work in United States and Canada, delivered a sermon along the lines of faith in God as seen through the eyes of science. He showed how the miracles of Jesus were merely the application of laws which were unknown to man, and stated that all miracles are to be understood the same way. He spoke of the radio and said he felt if man could harness a force by which he could send his voice through space for many miles, surely God could harness a force or power by which he could make his will known to the sons of men.

After Elder Weaver finished his sermon, the following organization was effected: Apostle Curtis, Evan A. Davis, and R. D. Weaver to preside over the reunion. Albert Rose, of Olathe, was elected chorister and given power to choose assistants. Evan A. Davis, R. D. Weaver, and Mrs. B. Mae Boyd press committee. Mrs. Boyd was also elected secretary; William Boyd, superintendent of grounds; J. F. Curtis, superintendent of Recreation and Expression Department. The heads of the departments were placed in charge of their respective work.

An excellent prayer service was enjoyed by all at 8.30 a. m. Monday, in charge of Brother J. F. Curtis, the theme being "Hope." About twenty-five were in attendance.

At 9.45 a. m. Elder Curtis delivered a wonderful lecture regarding the Doctrine and Covenants and showed that some of the questions which are giving some of our people trouble in certain quarters, can be easily answered by those who are in possession of the facts in the case. He showed conclusively that the Book of Commandments is not to be relied upon fully, as it was never completed or proof-read. He also showed that the Doctrine and Covenants is reliable in every way and was adopted by all the quorums of the church and by the general church as well in 1835. Elder Curtis is amply qualified to meet the issue at any time.

At 11 a. m. we listened to a powerful and inspiring sermon by our district president, Elder E. A. Davis, the theme of which was "Stepping-stones to success," or, "The intelligence of God as revealed in man." Brother Davis is very logical, and his sermon showed the result of deep thought and study.

The Department of Women and the Sunday School Department met in joint session at 2.30 p. m. Brother Davis made timely remarks. Sister B. Mae Boyd gave a talk on Sunday school work. Sister Inez Rose made a talk on women's work. Brother Curtis gave a talk on departmental work.

At 8 p. m. Elder R. D. Weaver preached from the text, "And now abideth faith." His sermon was very inspiring and greatly enjoyed.

Tuesday, August 9, prayer meeting was held at 8.30 a. m. in charge of Brother Weaver. A goodly degree of the Spirit was present, and all enjoyed the service. At 9.45 Elder Curtis again lectured on the Book of Commandments and the Doctrine and Covenants. He made many clean-cut arguments which served to strengthen the faith of the Saints. At 11 a. m. Elder Weaver preached a soul-stirring discourse from the text, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" The attendance is good, and the meetings all of a high class.

The daily program was determined as follows: Prayer meeting, 8.30 a. m.; class study, 9.45; preaching service, 11; class work and educational lectures, 2.30 p. m.; recreational exercises, 3.45; song service, 7.30; preaching service, 8.

Representatives from the following places are in attendance at the reunion: Paonia, Delta, Montrose, California Mesa, Olathe, Summerset, Grand Junction, Durango, and Cory, Colorado; Independence, Missouri.

MRS. B. MAE BOYD.

Portland, Reunion

The seventh annual reunion of the Portland (Oregon) District has come to a close. In every respect it was the most successful of all our reunions.

Last year the district conference delegated the reunion committee to purchase a new tent. After paying four hundred and twenty-five dollars cash for a new tent, and after all expenses were paid, there is the substantial balance of two hundred dollars in the treasury to start next year's reunion. It might be of interest to mention that a paper was circulated among the young people, which each one signed, pledging himself two dollars that he should earn for the reunion fund for next year. Sixty-two of the young people signed, making a total of one hundred and twenty-four dollars.

There were more services each day this year, more departmental work, more class work, more lectures, more preaching services, more everything. Fortunately Apostles Gillen and McConley and Bishop Becker were the principal speakers.

A permeable spirit of fraternity and fidelity pervaded the Saints; and it was good to feel and to see the love and good-will expressed. Never before had there been the unity and cooperation among the young people. About forty young persons were reached by the Department of Recreation and Expression every day. Following an illustrated lecture on Graceland College on Friday evening, the children and young people under the age of twenty gave a program and a wiener roast. At the bonfire parties after church there were readings or monologs, and some missionary stories by Brother Becker or Brother McConley. Then everyone joined in singing a few old familiar songs, such as "The old, old path," which is dear to the heart of every Latter Day Saint, and "Consecration," and retired.

Supervised recreation was provided for the younger children during the services throughout the reunion. They played games together; they learned to weave paper mats, to cut pretty colored papers, to sew, etc. Some of the small boys made bird houses.

The community-dining-tent plan, an experiment this year, will function again next year. It brought the most satisfactory results, and it more than paid for itself. A hired cook and volunteer helpers fed on the average of one hundred and forty persons for dinner and supper, and one hundred for breakfast on week days, and about four hundred for dinner and supper on Sundays. Everyone was well pleased with the food and the service.

The prayer meetings were well attended. The young people met out in the woods, a short distance from the camp, at 5.45 every morning. As is the custom, they stood in a semicircle around their leader, and each one that cared to speak did so as his turn came. The last two mornings the young people met as usual, and they also met with the adults at the general prayer service.

Nine boys and six girls, all under the age of seventeen, were baptized by Brother Eli Bronson in the Clackamas River.

The illustrated lectures on Graceland College, the pictures of the Auditorium and of the Hawaiian Islands were extremely interesting. Large numbers attended.

The reunion was only a glimpse, only a foretaste of the peace and love that will prevail when the Saints shall be more firmly united in Zion. The Saints sensed that as they bade one another good-by. Knowing that sometime, not far distant, they shall meet, never to part, will cheer and encourage them as they go back home to resume their respective responsibilities.

HELEN STOVER.

Northeastern Illinois Reunion, Elmhurst, Illinois

Northeastern Illinois annual reunion opened Friday, the 5th, at 2 p. m. The opening session was an excellent prayer service. The committee had things well in readiness, in spite of the "usual" handicaps in organizing their camp. The evening service consisted of a symposium, Brethren W. A. McDowell, F. A. Smith, and Norman Hield occupying.

On Saturday the workers under appointment of the General Reunion Committee arrived: Bishop and Mrs. A. B. Phillips, Apostle E. J. Gleazer, and Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser coming to serve us during the reunion. A very excellent program was rendered Saturday evening in the interest of Graceland College. Brother Charles Wildermuth was in charge. Sidney and Donald Barrows, George Anway, and Ethel Williamson rendered excellent musical numbers. Our district missionary, Roscoe Davey, gave a fine talk on "How Graceland helps the missionary," and Brother Gleazer spoke on "Why the necessity of a church college." These inspirational addresses aroused interest on the part of our young people. We also enjoyed the camp fire and recreational activities after the service.

Sunday opened with a beautiful morning, and we enjoyed a wonderful sacramental service, after which Patriarch Fred A. Smith gave an inspiring sermon, outlining in particular the responsibility of parents. At this service Brother George Anway sang, "God is our refuge," while Nell Atkinson Kelley rendered "Behold what manner of love." Both these numbers were beautifully rendered, and we were appreciative of having these well-known musicians with us. In the afternoon Apostle Gleazer gave a thrilling sermon on the necessity for lifting up the standard of the risen Christ in our lives and, in spite of the cloudburst which came at this time, kept his listeners absorbed. The district choir, under the direction of Sister Ruby Newman, district chorister, sang "I will forgive," and George Anway again delighted his listeners with "Save, Lord, or we perish." Owing to the severe storm, many were deprived of hearing the excellent sermon by Bishop Phillips, but all who remained on the ground felt this was the crowning feature of a well-spent day.

Monday morning found the Saints attentively listening to Brother Phillips at the first class hour, and time seemed to pass before we realized this class was over. The next class by Sister Etzenhouser, on heredity and eugenics, was indeed a treat. This is the first time a course of this character has been prepared at the Elmhurst reunion, and indications point to its popularity. At the lecture hour, our district chorister had arranged a round table discussion on musical problems, and we were fortunate in having Sister Zella Harder, of Independence, with us to take charge of this discussion, which was of a most helpful nature. Another severe rain prevented class work, but an hour of music and games in the big tent helped us to forget the unfortunate weather conditions.

Remarks

Elder H. L. Barto, of the stake presidency, will have active oversight of the young people's social services. Brother Barto needs no introduction to the young people of Far West Stake, but for the benefit of those who may not have made his acquaintance we can safely boost him. He has a deep interest in the youth of the church.

An opportunity will be afforded at the reunion for those desiring their patriarchal blessings.

Present indications are that the reunion this year will be the largest in attendance in the history of the stake, and we hope the most successful from a spiritual standpoint.

WALTER H. CRYER, For the Reunion Committee.

Central Oklahoma Reunion

The season's reunion gathering of Central Oklahoma District, at Sand Springs Park, near Sand Springs, "the home town" of Charles Page, the most noted of Oklahoma's philanthropists, came off on schedule, July 29 to August 8, and though our workers did not reach us until we were under considerable headway, their added "push" put us in high all the way through.

Brother C. Ed. Miller was the first to reach us, with a Ford load of pictures and good cheer; the first were used successfully to the advancement of both young and old; the latter was indiscriminately passed out in advice, counsel, and splendid sermons.

Brother T. C. Kelley, patriarch, was kept busy ministering in his line.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards arrived Wednesday morning and left for home Sunday noon. His splendid logic and spirituality, we are sure, will prove of lasting benefit and uplift to those who came in contact with him.

The faithful and efficient work of Hubert Case, our missionary, was also valued, as well as the work of local men in the persons of Peter Adamson, sr., and S. W. Simmons, superannuated.

Some of the subjects used by the speakers were: "The messenger of the covenant," "The Restoration," "Is there not a Caesar?" "Difficulties," "Duty," "Seek learning by study and also by faith." Only those who heard and are able to remember to do these things of which we were admonished will be really benefited by the excellent teaching given in the class work as well as the preaching. The latter was of a very high order indeed, being motivated by the Spirit of God.

There was little sickness on the ground. All of our needs, so far as lights, fuel, water, seats, dining hall, etc., were furnished by the park board, for which everyone felt truly thankful. We hereby express our appreciation to Mr. Evans, of the park board, and to Mr. Lane, park superintendent, and his coworkers, for their courteous consideration of our needs as well as a hearty invitation for our return. We also wish to express our gratitude to the Oklahoma City Branch for the use of its large tent, which served so well in sheltering the crowds from the sun as well as the rain, which was intermittent.

Both Western and Eastern Districts were represented. To a great many of us, there were things occurred that will prove to be more than mere incidents in our lives.

Order of meetings was: Young people's prayer meeting, 7.45 a. m.; regular prayer meeting, 9 a. m.; preaching, 11; class work or round table, 2.30 p. m.; song service, 7.30; preaching, 8.

Both adult and young people's prayer meetings were of a very satisfactory order, several of the "gifts" being manifested.

Tulsa Branch took the lead in the dollar donation to the general reunion fund.

A splendid spiritual uplift was experienced by all, the kingdom of God was brought nearer to men, and our goal is closer than it was ten days since. F. ED. DILLON.

Work of Department of Women at Chetek Reunion

At the Chetek (Wisconsin) reunion, held from July 1 to 10, the Department of Women of the Northern Wisconsin District did very efficient work under their leader, Sister Effie Hield, of Janesville, assisted by the district superintendent. We held fifteen meetings, including junior church, women's problem meetings and prayer services. The topics for the problem meetings were "Outlook of the Department of Women," "Obedience," "Health," "Stewardship." A feature of particular interest was an intelligence test for parents. In this Brother S. E. Livingston proved himself to be the best-read parent by having the highest percentage of answers correct. There were also several round table talks. Sister Hield gave some very instructive lectures on the different phases of the department's work, and health. Sister Dennis, of Ashland, and Mary Mair each gave a short talk on health.

The department was very fortunate in having Sister Ethlyn Hield, who told some good stories and led the singing at junior church. The children loved her in this work. The efforts of Sister Arlene Holloway, who played the piano at the general meetings in the auditorium, were deeply appreciated.

The kindergarten was well cared for by Luella Mair, Vera Calkins, and Flossie Longsdorf during the eleven o'clock services each day.

The Spirit was present in a marked degree all during reunion, and especially at the consecration prayer service at the start, and the closing one, the theme of which was, "What have I received during the ten days, and how can I carry it back to my branch?"

Thus closed one of the best efforts the department of women has put forth in the Northern Wisconsin District, and we sincerely hope to go forward to 1930.

MARY MAIR,

District Superintendent of Department of Women.

Alabama Reunion

The Alabama reunion for the year 1927 is now history. It was held at McKenzie July 22 to 31 and was the most instructive the writer ever attended.

Brother E. A. Curtis was in charge of the class work each afternoon. He very forcibly showed the needs of the young preparing so they may become efficient workers for Zion. On Thursday afternoon Sister Mamie Taylor gave us a very instructive lecture.

Brother M. M. Turpen attended nearly all the reunion, and by his counsel, and advice, by his faith made manifest through long years of service to the church, strengthened our faith. Brother Turpen is a former missionary to the South and is greatly loved by the southern Saints.

Patriarch Ammon White arrived on the grounds on Thursday afternoon and saved the day for us, since Brother Turpen had to go to the Florida reunion, while Brother Curtis had a very bad throat. Brother White's sermons were very spiritual and uplifting. His visits are always appreciated.

The last Friday was set aside for the children. Prayer meeting at 9.30, and at 11 a. m. junior church. At 2.30 p. m., story-telling was by Sister Evie Sellers, Sister Eunice Sellers, and Brother Curtis. This was a great day for the children and I am sure will long be remembered by them. At seven in the evening the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a program which was a big success.

This reunion seemed to draw the Saints together, and I am sure they carried the good spirit which they received home with them. Many remarked it was the best they ever attended.

MRS. VIDA H. BOOKER, for Press Committee.

Foraker Saints and the Sand Springs Reunion

The Foraker Saints are still in the faith. The Sunday school has had an average attendance of something near fifty scholars most of the summer. We have prayer service and preaching by the local helpers once a week. The Religio is held on Wednesday nights, and we are contemplating the organization of a Department of Women in the near future.

Brother Ray Slover has returned home from the Sanitarium, where he has been for the second time in a few months. We are hoping for his ultimate recovery.

Sister Martha Bowers has been in the hospital at Arkansas City, but is better now.

Brother Reuben Workman, our deacon, is a great sufferer of late. Many prayers have been offered by the Saints in his behalf.

Brother Walter Wells recently sustained a great loss when their home burned. Their barn was burned last fall, being ignited by lightning. This double loss is keenly felt by the family.

Quite a number of the Foraker Saints attended the reunion at Sand Springs, and to say they enjoyed this splendid opportunity to learn the lessons all need to know is putting it mildly. There is much in our lives which we do not sufficiently stress.

Although the rain descended almost in torrents at times and the winds beat upon our tents, yet we never heard less complaining or met with a happier lot of Saints. On the first Sunday night the crowd had so far exceeded the expectations of the committee there were not enough seats, and many sat upon blankets or tarpaulins which had been spread on the grass. At that time none of our Indian brethren were there. Many of the Saints who lived in the regions round about and who intended to drive to and from the reunion were cut off part of the time by high water.

We think, taken as a whole, this was the largest gathering of Saints for Central Oklahoma since the one in 1920 at Red Rock. At the beginning of our reunion, Brothers C. Ed. Miller and Hubert Case, of Independence, and Ed. Dillon, of Oklahoma City, were our speakers. They assisted in any way they were called upon to serve, taking charge of services, administering to the sick, etc. Later Patriarch

T. C. Kelley was with us, and with his kindly manner he seems indeed one fittingly chosen to be a father over the flock. And Apostle F. Henry Edwards came about the middle of the week, giving us some very much appreciated talks the three mornings he was with us.

Brother Miller preached some beautiful sermons and illustrated with slides, this proving a very effective way of presenting the evidence to the minds of many.

Brother Samuel Simmons was present with his aged companion, and his voice, accompanied by the presence of the Spirit, was heard in prayer and testimony each day cheering the hearts of many. He has been the old wheel horse of Texas and Oklahoma, but like many others his most arduous tasks are done, although within his spirit he has the zeal of youth.

On the afternoon of the 6th a very peaceful session of conference was held. Two young brothers were voted upon for ordination to the office of elder. They are Brother Lancaster, from Tulsa, and James Bailiss, of Terlton. Also the ordination of two priests was approved, Brother Winfred Goodwin, of Tulsa; and Brother Ellis Rathburn, of Skiatook. The ordinations were attended to Sunday morning. Brother Lancaster was chosen by Brother Dillon, district president, as one of his counselors and was unanimously sustained by the conference. Brother Rex Rowland is the other counselor, and with these three in charge of district affairs we feel they will be wisely administered.

This letter will not be complete unless mention is made of the work done by Sister Rowland with the little folks, and the prayer and testimony meetings conducted by Brother Case with the young people in a downpour of rain upon different mornings. The women's work was also represented by Sister Dillon and others. At the nine o'clock prayer service, peace seemed to flow from heart to heart. The lectures given by Brother Edwards to the priesthood were spoken of as a great incentive for better work.

There were to have been baptisms on Sunday, but because of threatening weather some families, living on dirt roads much of the way, thought best to start home in the morning. Among this number were the three families of Foraker Saints. Thus we were not permitted to remain until the close. But as we journeyed homeward, each one could say it had been a soul feast to be there.

Erie Beach Reunion

Chatham District, near Chatham, Ontario

Friday, August 5, found the usual hurry and bustle manifest at Erie Beach as cars containing supplies for erecting camp, were being unloaded. The D. W. & L. E. has always been very prompt about getting our tents through, and this year was no exception to the rule. Friday evening found a goodly number of tents erected; and while the number of workers was somewhat less than that of former years, yet the same good spirit prevailed, and all worked with a will to see the fulfillment of hopes which have obtained in the minds of the Saints for several months past, i. e., to live in the friendly spirit of cooperation for ten days and enjoy the Spirit of our heavenly Father as in times past and gone.

Thus far, there has been no disappointment. The Good Spirit has been present in the prayer services; class study hour has been well attended and enjoyed, and the preaching has been of a high order on account of the Spirit accompanying the messages which have been presented.

Apostle R. S. Budd, James Pycok, and J. R. Grice are present, representing the missionary force. Patriarch Richard Baldwin and wife are in charge of the study classes and junior church. R. T. Brown, of the district presidency, and president of the reunion committee; and J. C. Dent, representing the bishopric, with Patriarchs Shields and Leaverton and others of the local force, constitute the speakers and workers for the reunion.

Sunday found a goodly number present from a distance, and the next week-end will, no doubt, find a great many more in attendance.

Sports and games are being entered into with zest, and all seem to be enjoying the opportunity to sing and pray and work and play together.

More later. J. R. GRICE, for the Press Committee.

Spring River-Clinton-Southern Missouri

With the most favorable conditions the district has ever known for a reunion, the Spring River, Clinton, and Southern Missouri Districts met at Joplin, Missouri, August 12, with Elder Amos T. Higdon, president of Spring River District, in charge.

A large tent, fifty by one hundred and ten feet, is used for the main meetings, although the open-air pavilion is used for the young people's meetings and junior church.

Amos T. Higdon and James A. Gillen, of Independence; R. T. Walters, of Eldorado Springs; and J. F. Cunningham, of Thayer, were elected to preside over the reunion. They also will form an advisory council.

The following program was adhered to for the Sunday services on August 14. Young people's prayer meeting 7 a. m., in charge of Ellsworth Gilbert and V. E. Sheppard; general prayer meeting, 8.15, in charge of Andrew W. Jones and T. C. Kelley; Sunday school, 9.30; preaching at 11 by Bishop C. J. Hunt; preaching at 2.30 by Patriarch T. C. Kelley; song service, 7.30, in charge of John F. Sheehy; preaching, 8 p. m., by Apostle Gillen.

The following are accounts taken from our local paper:

"Five hundred members of the Spring River, Clinton, and South Missouri Districts of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are expected to attend the annual reunion which will convene here today. The meeting will last nine days, and churches from southwest Missouri, northwest Arkansas, northeast Oklahoma, and southwest Kansas will be represented.

"All sessions will be held at Cunningham Park, and church members will live in tents there. About fifty tents are expected to be pitched today to house the visitors.

"Elder Amos T. Higdon, of Independence, Missouri, president of the Spring River District, will supervise the reunion. C. E. Wilson, of Joplin, is secretary of the reunion committee.

"Apostle James A. Gillen and Evangelist T. C. Kelley, of Independence, will be the principal speakers. John F. Sheehy, of Independence, will have charge of the song services.

"Job Negeim, of Jerusalem, will lead singing each night and will give several solos during the reunion.

"The daily program will be carried out as follows: 8 a. m., class work; 9.15, prayer meeting; 10.45, lecture; 2 p. m., departmental work, with John F. Sheehy, of Independence, in charge; 4, recreational period, with Ellsworth G. Gilbert, of Pittsburg, as director; 7.30, song service; and 8, preaching. Exceptions to this program will be made on Sunday."

Latter Day Saints Reunion Is Opened

"The largest district reunion of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints ever held here was opened with a business session at Cunningham Park last night.

"A large crowd nearly filled the big tent in the park, and approximately fifty tents, in which persons attending will reside until the reunion is ended Sunday, August 21, had been pitched on the grounds.

"Amos T. Higdon and James A. Gillen, of Independence, R. T. Walters, of Eldorado Springs, and J. F. Cunningham, of Thayer, were elected to preside over the reunion meetings. They also will form an advisory council.

"Other officers elected were C. E. Wilson, head usher and secretary; John F. Sheehy, chorister; J. F. Mackey, policeman, and Raymond Troyer, publicity agent.

"At the conclusion of the business session, short talks were made by Evangelist T. C. Kelley, of Independence, Missionaries V. S. Sheppard and T. J. Sheppard, of Joplin, and J. T. Riley, of Pittsburg.

"A large delegation from Springfield is expected to arrive today."

NEWS AND LETTERS

The Gunsolleys in the West and Northwest

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

Since last report we have done some traveling and a little ministerial work.

Leaving Logan, North Dakota, our next stop was Andes, Montana, where we arrived July 2, and were met at Culbertson by Ralph Andes, who took us for a twenty-mile ride across the Missouri River by ferry and through the bad lands to the Andes settlement. Arrangements had been made for wife and me to occupy the teacherage, a little one-room cottage built for the teacher of their school to occupy. This house is furnished the teacher as part of her compensation. The practice is common in this part of the country, for it is often difficult for teachers to find suitable accommodations in private families. We liked the arrangement for us very well, as it afforded comfort and was apart from the crowd, affording privacy for our special work. We gave sixteen blessings here, and shared generously in other services, preaching and assisting in music. Wife also had charge of junior church activities and assisted in Women's Department work.

The attendance was not large, but a little better than last year, I think, and the vote was unanimous for a reunion next year. We remained to the close of the session, and on Thursday the Andes automobile was ready to take us across country to Plentywood, Montana. With us were Apostle Curtis and Brother and Sister Andes, the apostle at the wheel. Plentywood is about seventy-five miles from Andes, and the apostle as helmsman lost no time, even at the risk of tossing the occupants of the rear seat against the roof of the car occasionally by way of diversion. We reached our destination in time for dinner, and after being served, Brother and Sister Andes started on their return. The rest of us waited for the appearance of a car from Radville, Saskatchewan, which was to convey us across the boundary on our way to the conference of the Southern Saskatchewan District.

About four o'clock Burdette (Bud) Bergersen with his Ford touring car arrived, and by five o'clock we were on our way to Radville, a distance of about seventy-five miles. Talk about touring, there is nothing like touring in a Ford touring car with Bud at the wheel, or at least we had never had anything like it in all our experience. The ride from Saint Joseph to Lamoni via Grant City is nothing in comparison. From side to side, up and down, forward and backward, hanging on for dear life. My vocabulary fails me when I attempt to describe it. Bud's long years of roaming the prairies of Saskatchewan by day and by night in his Ford had rendered him oblivious to the ruts and humps and detours, so that he never slackened speed and rarely glanced to the rear to see whether we were still there.

Between seven and eight o'clock we reached the home of Brother and Sister Campbell, having crossed the international boundary without being observed and without observing, for I did not discover we were in Canada until we had gone several miles into the king's dominion. Bud had notified the Campbell's on his way south that we would stop at their place for supper, and Sister Campbell had a nice meal in readiness for us, to which we did ample justice. These people keep a little country post office called Fairlawn. Here the apostle made arrangements to leave our party and accompany Brother and Sister Campbell a day or so later. I am a little suspicious he had an idea that he would have a smoother ride, but in this he seemed not to have bettered himself, for on their way Brother Campbell lost control of his car which jumped the ditch by the roadside, broke off a fence post, ran through the wire fence, and took to the wheat field; and after finally succeeding in getting Henry under control, Brother Curtis, having a bruise on the top of his head that drew blood, but not otherwise badly hurt, took command by virtue of S. D. C. and drove the last part of the journey in safety.

But back to my story. Leaving Fairlawn about sundown for the last lap of our journey, Bud knowing the last part of the trip would be in mud, for it had rained there hard in the morning, wished, so he said, to make it before it got very dark. Consequently, he stepped on the gas, and not having a speedometer, away we went over hills, through vales, around coulees, detouring mudholes, in the ruts and out of them, over bumps, through chuck holes, winding constantly along the valley or along the ridges, following faint trails at times where a road was scarcely discernible to the eye, and much less to the feeling. When a bump would show up ahead, Bud would call out, "Look out, a bump!" and over we would go, and up we would go; and when we dropped into a chuck hole and crashed down upon the rear axle, he called out "Bingo!" and wife and I would grit our teeth and grin, hanging on for all we were worth; in fact, I kept my teeth shut tight most of the time for fear that I would lose them upon the prairie. But finally the lights of Radville appeared in the distance, and I imagine the feeling that came to us was not dissimilar to that of a tempest-tossed mariner when he beholds the light of a friendly beacon upon the shore, assuring him that he is safely within the harbor. Sister Bergersen and the family received us with a warm welcome, and soon the terrors of the trip were only a matter of memory. I do not think I would hesitate much to tackle the worst bucking broncho of the plains after that experience; but now that it is over, I would not have missed it for anything.

The next morning, July 13, wife and I boarded an accommodation train on the Canadian National en route to Bethune, where the conference was to be held. This train as far as Avonlea was just a little better than the aforementioned Ford, but at Avonlea we changed to a passenger train, which compares favorably with the "Q" branch trains. Reaching Regina, the capital city of Saskatchewan, with a population of about 40,000, we spent the five or six hours we had to wait in typing blessings. We left Regina about midnight and reached Bethune about half past one and were met at the train by Brothers O. W. Okerlind and Ernest Blakley and taken to the home of the latter, where we spent the remainder of the night and a part of the next day in getting some rest. Brother and Sister J. R. Neill met us here and took us to the place of the conference meetings, about six miles in the country, on the farm of this Brother Blakley. Sister Neill is the daughter of my Brother J. L., and she found her most excellent husband, who is president of the district, while they were students at Graceland in 1907 to 1909.

Here we met a fine bunch of Saints and spent a strenuous four days. The meetings were fine and there were plenty of them, beginning at six in the morning and continuing until half past nine or ten at night, with just enough intermission for eating and a little recreation. Many Saints came for hundreds of miles and were hungry for meetings, so that the most was made of the time. Some expressed themselves as favoring the establishing of a ten-day reunion. A vote was unanimous for another conference at this place next summer, the time to be left with the officers. Eleven blessings were given, and others would have liked to have had theirs had opportunity been afforded.

On the 20th we went to Saskatoon by train, and Brother C. E. Diggle met us and took us to his home, where we were very kindly received by his wife and family and entertained during our stay. If the time had been strenuous at the former conference, it was doubly so here. There were so many wanting blessings, and it had been so long since a patriarch had been here, and it might be so long before they would have another chance, that it was almost impossible to refuse those who asked. We remained three days after the close of the conference and gave in all fifty-four blessings, and then some had to be put off, who might arrange to meet us at the next place, the conference of the Alberta District at Ribstone, Alberta. The Saskatoon Fair, or Exhibition, as they call it in this country, was on the week following our conference, and wife and I were very fortunate in Brother Bergersen's being at the fair accompanying a group of farm boys from his town. He looked us up and showed us a good time at the fair, as well as showing us some about town and seeing us to the train, or rather in getting our tickets.

Friday, the 28th, found us at Ribstone, Alberta, reaching there at two o'clock. The conference was in session, and after a hasty lunch we entered into the work, wife addressing the women and I the men. We had planned to arrive Thursday evening but found that the train we planned on taking did not stop at the small towns, so had to wait until Friday morning. This conference, like the two preceding, was a well-attended meeting. One man came seven hundred miles to be at the conference, who had been isolated for years and was hungering for the word of life. Ten blessings were given at this place.

We received a pressing invitation from the officers of the Senlac Branch to visit them and hold a meeting or two, which we accepted. We went by train to Artland, Saskatchewan, where we were taken care of by Brother and Sister Clark until after supper, after which he took us in his car to the Senlac Branch, where I preached that and the following evenings. We gave Brother and Sister Clark their blessings while at their home previous to our going to Senlac Branch. While at the branch we blessed seven. While at this last place we were entertained at the home of Brother and Sister Leslie Mogg, who were at Graceland a few years ago, where he took the course in religious education. She is a sister to Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. We certainly enjoyed our stay with them, as well as meeting so many of the Saints of this place. This is the home of the Cornishes, of whom there are many. J. J. Cornish homesteaded here, as did his sons and other relatives. The sons still remain, but the father has located on the western coast on account of the health of his wife. He was at the conference at Saskatoon and preached twice with much of the old-time vigor and fire.

There is a definite movement on foot to establish a joint reunion by the two Saskatchewan and the Alberta Districts. Committees have been appointed by the Northern Saskatchewan and the Alberta Districts, with power to act with a view to holding such a reunion next summer at some point centrally located. On Wednesday last a party of us, two carloads, went to inspect a proposed site for the reunion. It is located on a beautiful lake right on the line between Saskatchewan and Alberta, and is central north and south. It is a beautiful spot in a government reservation. The lake is very fine, both for bathing and fishing, and is quite well shaded for this country, the trees being of fair size of the poplar variety. It is almost certain that such reunion will be held next summer, and there seems to be a great deal of enthusiasm among the members. This location has not been decided upon, but it is near two branches of the church, the Senlac and the Michigan, and the brethren of these two branches would willingly look after the matter of preparing the grounds and getting everything in shape. The location is about fifteen miles from the nearest railroad station or any other town. In many respects it is an ideal location, but the place is to be selected by the joint committees of the districts concerned. I am in favor of the project and feel like recommending it. In case it is held, I hope it will be practicable for some of the Twelve and other general officers of the church who have had experience in conducting reunions, to attend, and see that it gets a good start. The men here are not experienced and would welcome some one being sent to their help who has had experience and who has the ability to organize and conduct such a project. It is important, for there will doubtless be a large gathering of several hundred Saints coming from four or five hundred miles in various directions.

Barring mosquitoes, we have had a very pleasant, and I trust profitable, trip into Canada and with our fellow Saints on Canadian soil. They are all looking Zionward and are preparing to make their contributions to assist. There is fine prospect for a bumper crop this year. We passed many fields of wheat, the estimated yield of which according to Brother Mogg will be forty to fifty bushels to the acre. I never saw such fields of wheat in my life, and also oats and rye, and prospects are good at present for a good price. The Canadian Saints will be heard from in a financial way when this crop is disposed of.

My ministerial diary shows the following activities for July: Sermons, 18; in charge, 6; assisted, 7; other services, 58; total services, 89; confirmed, 3; assisted to confirm, 2; assisted to ordain, 1; children blessed, 1; patriarchal blessings, 94; administered sacrament, 1; house to house visits, 1.

We are visiting until Monday with our niece and family here, expecting to preach Sunday, and then will proceed southward, being due at Runnells, Iowa, the 12th, where we are assigned for reunion work in the Des Moines district reunion.

There is experienced a further increasing interest in the midweek prayer services. At the sacrament and social service on the 7th, there was an excellent spirit, and the honest in heart went away refreshed and strengthened.

The district president and his counselors are making a commendable effort to increase the activity of the local ministry, and some response is seen, but not all that should be expected. We are hopeful of a reconciling of all the local priesthood to acting their part in building up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness. Brother C. W. Morgan, of McClellan, preached an interesting sermon at Central May 31. Several favorable comments were heard.

Brother W. I. Fligg was in the city on the 6th, having in charge the funeral service for the babe of Brother O. A. Currie, who died quite suddenly on the 5th. He returned to Neola, where he has enjoyed quite an interest. He says they are interested in the gospel on dry land, but some whose interest would indicate that they are very near the kingdom do not seem to be so friendly to the water part of the gospel.

The aid society of the Women's Department has been doing considerable work at the Grand View Farm for the children who are cared for there, by sewing and preparing clothing for them. A Mr. and Mrs. Richardson have charge of this home. They are very friendly to the church and its work.

Brother J. R. Epperson, who has for more than a year had charge of the local Sunday school work, resigned because of being selected to have charge of the district Sunday school work. His associates, Brethren M. A. Smith and Fred Hansen, were sustained to care for the local work.

The Religio has discontinued for the month of August, the study feature of its work on Sunday night, and is making an effort to have recreational work on Friday nights. So far its efforts to have recreation have not been successful. Many are expressing the desire for the return of the study feature on Sunday.

Sister Voorhies was taken quite suddenly last Thursday with an attack of gall trouble, but at once called upon God's servants, and at this time is feeling much better. Sister P. T. Anderson has had an operation at the sanitarium, and the report is that she is doing well. Sister Griffin went through the city to the sanitarium last month, and we learn that she, too, is recovering from an operation. Sister Griffin is from Dow City.

Brother and Sister T. A. Hougas, of Henderson, with her mother, Grandma Gamet, spent several hours at the home of J. F. Mintun, recounting old times and the benefit that we could now see from the efforts then made in the Religio and Sunday school work at the three institutes held at Independence, Saint Joseph, and Council Bluffs, as the pioneering work done in the interest of institutes, and how blessed we were who were engaged in them at that time. Grandma Gamet is strong in the faith, and her mental powers are bright for one of her age, eighty-nine years. It was interesting to hear her recount events that had occurred in her life for the more than seventy-two years she had been in the Little Sioux District.

Brother E. Skinner, of Sac City, Iowa, was here over Sunday visiting his father, M. Burke Skinner, and his brother, C. A. Skinner. He gave evidence of his continued faith in the great work of God of latter days.

Brother W. T. Fay spent Sunday with his family, and expresses his great faith in the church and his joy in seeing his mistake in believing the assertions of those who should have sought his increase of faith instead of bringing confusion and doubt, by their late ministrations. How great has been and is being the sufferings of many who have been confused and their minds darkened by the ministrations of those who were once true ministers of the gospel, but for reasons they have thought justified, have turned to a misrepresentation of what they once sought to build up. The honest in heart will sooner or later be recovered, and they be made to rejoice again in the work of God continued till the present time through the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Leonard Houghton, jr., who has been employed in Chicago, spent the Fourth of July with home folks.

Roy Cheville, of Lamoni, Iowa, was also here the Fourth visiting at the Houghton home. Brother Cheville occupied the pulpit on Sunday evening, Brother Allan Houghton assisting him. His discourse was centered on conception of God. In part his remarks were: "Man thinks of God in many ways. No two have the same answer as to what he is. As experience grows, conception of God grows. Members of the ministry of God are attorneys for God as well as witnesses. The witness in a case tells something which he experiences. This is the spirit of the witness, his attitude. The man who believes the message he wishes to deliver will find some way of conveyance. Man should sense the spirit of religion; few catch the inner force of religion. Many people hang on the outskirts of the church instead of getting into it and making it a part of themselves. The function of this church is to be witnesses for the church. How much of this church can we prove? How much have we experienced God?" The sermon was very forceful and gave many good points for consideration. We believe it caused each one to ask himself the question, Am I witnessing for him?

The outstanding feature of the month was the young people's institute held July 9 and 10. Brother Lenox had charge of it until Saturday evening, when President F. M. McDowell arrived. Previous to his arrival, recreation was had at Tenney Park. Saturday morning prayer meeting was enjoyed, and classes convened both in the forenoon and afternoon.

Some of the outlines Brother McDowell used in the evening were: Qualifications of Zion, among which were mentioned consecration, pure-mindedness, love, truth, self-sacrifice, charity, loyalty, industry. These come through religious education. More time should be spent in religious education. The membership of the church should be able to play the game as the church would have them play. To be a saving influence religion must be made to saturate the entire life of the personality of the growing child, that when adulthood is reached, religion and life become one in reality. Then head, heart, and mind have been saturated.

Priesthood meeting in charge of President McDowell was conducted at 7.45 a. m. Sunday. At 9 o'clock a meeting of prayers was presided over by Brothers McDowell and Willard Field. Brother McDowell's remarks were woven around the theme, "Putting God in every walk of life." Following was the song of consecration. Wonderful testimonies were borne by the young, showing they were desirous of growing with the church and giving it their best.

A beautiful spirit prevailed at the 10.30 class period. Brother McDowell was teacher of all classes held at the convention after his arrival. His central theme was, "Direct your path rightly. To everyone there openeth a high way and a low, and every man decideth the way his soul shall go." There is much to learn. The church which has nothing to learn has nothing to teach.

Picnic dinner was served at the church.

Apostle D. T. Williams arrived Sunday noon from the Chetek reunion to join President McDowell and leave for Michigan in the evening.

At two o'clock we enjoyed a sermon by Apostle Williams on the text, "Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." Some of the sayings were: To be a good leader one must be a good follower. We do not know what there is in the power we possess. The church needs intelligent leaders. We need preparatoin worth while and must utilize the time given to us.

At the close of the service, the institute asked that the district secretary send a letter of condolence to Brother and Sister Edwards, of Lancaster, whose daughter was killed in a car accident the Fourth of July.

The hour of 3.15 saw another class period, which time was used to sum up the things we had considered at previous classes, the subject being, "Making men for God." This was the theme of the institute. President McDowell said, "It's a great task, and too little time is spent at the job." He gave a creed for youth which every youth should consider: 1. I will keep in touch with God. 2. I will be pure. 3. I will qualify. 4. I will make my choice with care. 5. I will be dependable. 6. I will be consecrated. 7. I will be true to my heavenly vision.

"Master, what good thing wilt thou have me do?" was the text upon which Brother Lenox based his evening's sermon. It was a most fitting close for the institute.

Brother Floyd Carpenter and Brother Woodstock are preaching to us, the latter taking the morning hour and the former the evening. But on the evening of the 24th Brother Burns was the speaker, using for his subject, "Consequence of sin." Brother Burns holds the Aaronic priesthood, being a teacher. With practice and preparation we believe he will some day be a very fluent speaker. He left many guideposts for us to follow, that our ways may not result in sin. He enjoyed good liberty. Brother and Sister Burns came here from the western part of the district to work at Mendota, the State Hospital for the insane.

Each Thursday evening the young people gather at Tenney Park with lunch baskets for a picnic supper and season of supervised recreation.

The Department of Women held an ice cream social at the home of Brother and Sister Floyd Carpenter, the night of the 28th. A large crowd was present, and the proceeds amounted to almost twenty-one dollars.

The Sunday school is moving along very well, with good attendance. On the last Sunday of the month at the eleven o'clock hour Reverend Jones, district president of the Anti-Saloon League, spoke at the church. His discourse was very good, the text being, "If you love me, keep my commandments."

At 6.45 the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a musical program. For the beginning, the chorus sang, "If your heart keeps right," "The hunt" (a round),

"Beautiful garden of prayer" was sung as a solo, "Follow me" was beautifully rendered by a quartet, and a violin solo, "Evening star," was appreciated. A group of twelve girls sang, "If your heart keeps right," "The hunt" (a round), "The murmuring sea." Another musical feature was "Legend of roses," rendered by violin and flute, with organ accompaniment. Closing numbers were a violin solo with organ accompaniment, and a chorus, "Now the day is over." We have very good talent among the youth of our branch and frequently hear from it. We hope these young people can be held to the church, that when they have grown to womanhood and manhood their efforts may still be for the church.

At the eight o'clock hour, Brother Woodstock was speaker, employing for a text, "None of us liveth to himself," and bringing out the things which are personally required of us.

We are looking forward and making preparation for the reunion, which will be held from the 19th to the 28th, inclusive, in the beautiful Gallager Park. We believe it will be a much better place than we have had heretofore, for we will be by ourselves in a beautiful, shady, quiet place. We hope to see a large crowd. An educational program has been prepared, and very able speakers are selected for the occasion.

Sioux City, Iowa

August 8.—Inasmuch as the five young men who were approved for ordination to the priesthood could not all be present at the district conference at Woodbine July 10, the district presidency set July 17, at Sioux City, Iowa, as the time and place for the ordination. So Sunday morning of that date found Brothers Joseph Lane and W. R. Adams of the district presidency with us. The weather man was good to us; it was a beautiful day, which stimulated a larger attendance at Sunday school.

Our recently appointed bishop's agent, Brother W. R. Adams, was the speaker at eleven o'clock, and from the character of the message he delivered one would be forced to believe that there were both wisdom and inspiration in the appointment. It is doubtful whether there is a more solemn, spiritual, and sacred service among the many that are a part of this church than an ordination service. Perhaps the reader would not agree, but if it could have been his privilege to be in attendance at the church in Sioux City, Iowa, July 17 at 2.30 p. m., he might have changed his mind. At that time five young men, three of whom were still in their teens, and three of whom were brothers and of the fifth generation in the church, were ordained to the priesthood.

The service opened with Brother G. Scott Daniel in charge, Brothers Joseph Lane, C. J. Smith, W. R. Adams, and G. M. Vandel, along with the five brethren who were to be ordained, occupying the platform. Prayer was offered by Brother Adams, of Logan, and after a hymn Brother Daniel as branch president made some remarks regarding the call of the brethren. Brother C. J. Smith followed with an impressive charge, setting forth the sacredness of such responsibility. Following these remarks, all joined in singing "Consecration," after which Brother Lane offered a very humble prayer imploring the presence of the divine Spirit during the ordination. Brother Lane then directed in the ordinations, which were as follows: Richard Sheetz was ordained a deacon, by C. J. Smith and W. R. Adams; Sanford Vandel to the office of priest, by G. M. Vandel and G. Scott Daniel; George Vandel to the office of deacon, by W. R. Adams and C. J. Smith; Raymond Haycox to the office of priest, by G. Scott Daniel; and G. M. Vandel and Frederick Vandel to the office of deacon by C. J. Smith and W. R. Adams.

Brother Adams then addressed the congregation on the responsibilities of the membership and offered some suggestions as to how they should respond to the ministrations of the priesthood. Brother G. M. Vandel made some timely remarks regarding the call of the brethren to the priesthood.

The service was certainly impressive, for the Spirit was there in abundance, and wonderful blessings were promised these young men if they remained faithful to the work intrusted to their care. At the conclusion of this service, the entire congregation came forward and gave the newly ordained officers a hearty handshake, congratulated them, and bade them Godspeed.

We were very glad to have with us Sunday, July 17, the Saints of Wagner, South Dakota, who came down Sunday morning and spent the day with us. Many old friendships were renewed, and many new friendships were made. We are looking forward to the time when we can meet with them again.

Each Wednesday evening finds a larger and more interested group of people at the prayer meetings; particularly is the increase noticeable among the young people. Very frequently we have a one hundred per cent meeting in that all present take part either in prayer or testimony.

Apostle J. F. Curtis recently passed through here en route to the reunions being held in Northwestern Nebraska, and spent a few hours with Brother Vandel.

Friday, July 15, Brother Hartshorn, the father of Sister Daniel, the wife of our pastor, died; senility was given as the cause of his death. The body lay in state at the Larkin Funeral Home until Monday, when it was taken to Marathon, Iowa, for burial beside that of his companion. The funeral was conducted that afternoon from the Methodist church, Elder Samuel Twombly, a personal friend and admirer of Brother Hartshorn, officiating, bringing a message of comfort to the many relatives and friends.

Duluth, Minnesota

Corner Sixtieth Avenue West, and Bristol Street

July 27.—We were strengthened on July 3 by the appearance in our midst of neighboring Saints, Brother and Sister Lundeen, of Minneapolis, and Brother and Sister Peter Adamson, Miss Goldie and Miss Betty Adamson, and Master Adamson of 1934 South Saint Louis, Tulsa, Oklahoma. Brothers Lundeen and P. G. Schnuckle were in charge of the sacramental service. The Saints were strengthened by the testimonies borne by these people, the expressions of their faith in the restored gospel, and their trust in God.

Brother and Sister Robert Zuelsdorf and daughter, Marjorie Ann, Sister Mahala Bundy and Sister Sybil Bundy motored to Chetek, Wisconsin, July 2, and enjoyed the reunion, Brother W. C. Stauty going by train. Though he was there only the 3d and 4th, he noted that that feeling of unity, the bond of love as of one big family, was imminent when priesthood and laymen joined together to receive spiritual, physical, and mental food. True manna from heaven was delivered by such stalwart men as Patriarch W. A. McDowell, Apostle D. T. Williams, and Elder L. G. Holloway, of the Seventy, assisted by local men. The physical man was taken care of in the big dining room; recreation was enjoyed, volley ball, horseshoes, fishing.

Brother W. C. Stauty was the speaker July 10 at eleven in the morning. For a text he read, "For if you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things I have commanded you and required of you." His theme was, "What must I do to inherit eternal life?" The promise given to Adam (Genesis 4: 9, Inspired Version) was read: "And in that day, the Holy Ghost fell upon Adam, which beareth record of the Father and the Son, saying, I am the Only Begotten of the Father from the beginning, henceforth and for ever; that, as thou hast fallen, thou mayest be redeemed, and all mankind, even as many as will. And in that day Adam blessed God, and was filled, and began to prophesy concerning all the families of the earth; saying, Blessed be the name of God, for, because of my transgression my eyes are opened, and in this life I shall have joy, and again, in the flesh I shall see God. And Eve, his wife, heard all these things and was glad, saying, Were it not for our transgression, we never should have had seed, and never should have known good and evil, and the joy of our redemption, and the eternal life which God giveth unto all the obedient."

Too many times in our human experiences we set a high standard for our fellow men, but fail to look into the mirror of self, for there is a way that seemeth right unto man but the end thereof is death; for God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth he shall also reap. Is it right? Is it Christian? Is it just to give little and expect much. "Let us prepare, O Israel, to meet our God."

Elder P. G. Schnuckle, pastor, spoke in the evening, using for a reading Luke 18: 17-25. His text was taken from John 17: 3: "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." The theme of this discourse was, "What lack I yet of receiving eternal life?"

Elder Samuel Case was the speaker on the morning of July 17, reading Isaiah 35 and using as a text Numbers 14: 21: "But as truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." The theme of his sermon was of the need of preparedness and of becoming united as one for the great task that lies before us, being rewarded according to the fruit attained.

In the evening Elder George W. Day, of the district presidency, spoke to us. For a subject he read Psalms 19, his text being the seventh verse of that chapter: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple." Our brother clearly showed us the need of personal application of the gospel law in our lives.

Brother Ray Whiting, district president, Bishop Leslie DeLapp, and Elder Charles Johnson, of Minneapolis, were in Duluth Saturday and Sunday, July 23 and 24. Brother Whiting went home Saturday night; Bishop Leslie DeLapp was the speaker at the morning hour Sunday, Brother Charles Johnson assisting. Readings for this discourse were taken from Ephesians 4: 6; Acts 17: 28; Doctrine and Covenants 42: 3. The theme seemed to be, "The need of the hour." Brother DeLapp stated that the possibilities of man are unlimited; that there is that divinity within us which, if allowed to develop and grow, will bring us back to God. Man has gone a long way in subduing things as commissioned in the beginning, but failed to subdue self. The need was never greater for a godly people, a Zion where all can live in righteousness where we shall be able to say, "Follow us, and we will show you the way to salvation, the way to your God." The ministry today should be living up to the fullness of the gospel, that the power of God may be enjoyed for a great witness to the world. Many thoughts were advanced which, if applied, will bear much fruit.

Elder Day was the speaker in the evening, using Romans 8: 1-14, taking verse 2 for his text: "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

The Sunday school picnic will be held at Kenwood Park Labor Day.

On July 24 Sister Virginia Stauty and Brother Cyrus Stauty were chosen captains of teams to complete the raising of funds for the Christmas offering.

On July 31 the Sunday school is to be divided and chosen by these captains for the contest. The duration is one month, and the losing team is to furnish a wiener and marshmallow roast on Indian Point, 72 Avenue West. After this month other contests will be entered into, so that each one may have a part in this glorious work which we have espoused. All, from those of older years down to the smallest tots, are trying to work together to accomplish the task before us, Zion, the redeemed.

Fall River, Massachusetts

July 29.—The regular business meeting of the branch was held July 11, and the members voted for no more church services until after Labor Day. Prayer meetings will continue to be held. No Sunday school will be conducted. The members of this department donated fifty dollars to the branch and ten dollars to the teachers' kindergarten classes toward refurbishing their room.

Sister Rogerson was able to be present at the July sacramental service. Her voice was the first to be heard in testimony. Only a few were present. Mabel and Charles Cockcroft, of Providence, were there.

Sacrament was carried to Myra Cockcroft and Sister Halstead by Pastor James W. Heap and Alma M. Coombs. Through the kindness of Walter McGuire, Sister Halstead attended the June sacramental service.

Sister Roberson has now gone to Onset for the summer. Her grandchildren, Marion and Willard, went to Onset at the close of school. Blanche Howlett and Chester McGuire are at Onset for all summer with Sister Beatrice York, of Boston. The Brindley family have rented a cottage for the summer.

The last meeting of the Department of Women was held at the home of Sister Margaret Chesworth. They voted to buy three tons of coal for the branch.

On July 16, the Department of Women held an outing at Crescent Park, Rhode Island, going by automobile. They enjoyed a shore dinner. No more meetings will be held until fall.

In June, John Henderson's class of fourteen-year-old boys held a circus and earned about ten dollars for their Christmas offering.

Elder Patterson and wife came from Onset one Sunday in June, and Fall River Saints enjoyed meeting them. The attendance was rather small, as there were thunderstorms of long duration several times through the day. The Patterson family had to drive by automobile in the storm, and the Baldwin family followed them.

Brother Thomas and Sister Bertha Wilkinson, of Washington, District of Columbia, are visiting here at present. They moved from Fall River nearly ten years ago. Friends and relatives are glad to see them again.

Sister Mary Bowden has been very ill with indigestion. Sister Sophia Brodie has been administered to several times for a heart condition. They went together for a few days at Onset in early July. Sister Brodie has a cottage there.

One of the youngest Sunday school children, Edgar A. Pillsbury, fell and cut his arm on broken glass, requiring six stitches to close the wound.

Brother Moses Sheehy went Saturday to Onset for a few days.

Southern Saskatchewan

The ninth annual district conference was held at the farm of Ernest Blakely, near Bethune, Saskatchewan, in a large tent provided by Bethune and Disley Saints, with District President J. R. Neil in charge, Apostle J. F. Curtis, Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley, J. W. Davis, and Missionary O. W. Okerlind assisting.

Meals were served in a large building amass. Brethren Curtis, Gunsolley, and J. W. Davis were the speakers. This was one of the best conferences in the history of the district. It was moved and carried that the conference be held at the same place in 1928. The Saints were looked after by the two branches, and their hospitality was appreciated.

District officers elected for 1928 are: District president, J. R. Neil, of Weyburn; first counselor, Peter Trembley, of Bethune; second counselor, John Tomlinson, Bethune; bishop's agent, J. R. Dickson, of Weyburn, sustained; treasurer, Sister J. R. Dickson; district Sunday school superintendent, Baler Blakley, Bethune; Sunday school secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Myrtle Neil, of Weyburn; superintendent of Department of Women, Mrs. Zella N. Malden, 2211 Smith Street, Regina; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, Miss Marjory Tomlinson, Bethune; assistant superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Mrs. T. E. Mountenay, Bethune; musical director, Miss Florence Blakley, of Bethune, all in the Province of Saskatchewan.

Missionary Okerlind was presented with funds for a new suit, and a Ford coupe was purchased for the use of the district work, as many isolated Saints have not been located in the past.

The budget system was unanimously adopted.

The ladies of Bethune, reported by Sister Brooks, for the past three years showed donations of $126.60; cash in bank, $247.45; on hand, $14.77; total, $388.68, their effort being to assist the branch in a church building.

The small tots were looked after by Sister T. E. Mountenay, while Sister Zella Malden supervised the juniors in hikes and other meetings. "Uncle Jerry" Gunsolley and wife were in charge of the singing, and we will welcome them next year.

Many individuals assisting and taking part in making the conference a success have not been mentioned. In passing through the Bethune Branch later, we find them already preparing for 1928 conference, for funds, etc.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, August 7.—A spirit of ambition and interest prevails here. The regular attendants are all at the church services of our branch. And we have fair attendance at all our meetings.

On the evening of July 15 Sister Rosa Pollock met with others at the church and reorganized her class. The former name of this organization was Willing Workers and is now changed to Loyal Workers. She has an excellent class and is a noble instructor. They are planning a box social for Saturday night, August 13. Proceeds derived from this social are to be applied to the church fund.

In spite of the heavy downpour of rain on the evening of July 30, we netted the sum of twenty-five dollars to be given to the church fund. Owing to the rain, we were compelled to move our stand in and sell in the church building. The crowd present was not large, but everyone bought liberally.

Brother Richard Shope, of McDermott, has preached some for us during the past month.

Brother Mark Crabtree has been holding a series of meetings during the past week. A number of new members were out to hear him each evening. Last evening Brother Richard Shope occupied the pulpit, as Brother Mark was taken home ill. Brother Shope did well, though a beginner. We feel that some day he will be a valued instrument in the hand of God to bring souls to Christ.

Our aged sister, Joan Crabtree, is improving.

Brother Emery Williams, who came near getting his leg broken, is again at work.

Sister Rebecca Bond, who sprained her ankle, is up and about.

Sister Sopha Crabtree, another aged sister, who some few weeks ago got up one morning to find her eyesight rapidly failing her, can now see at times.

Sister May Crabtree, of 1004 Eight Street, Portsmouth, Ohio, is poorly at this writing, being subject to something like the flu.

We feel that much good could be accomplished at Portsmouth if the missionaries could come with their tent. Several members of the church are already in Portsmouth and West Portsmouth. Also there are several, who have never heard the gospel, anxious to hear it expounded. They have expressed themselves as desirous of having some one come and preach to them.

Southeastern Illinois District Reports Progress

A letter recently received from O. C. Henson, bishop's agent of the Southeastern Illinois District, reports substantial gains in receipts of tithes and offerings from that district.

For the first five months in the current year, 1927, the receipts for tithes and offerings amount to $1,932.28. This is $1,200 more than was contributed in the same period the preceding year. This is a splendid report, and the Saints and officers in the district are to be congratulated for their loyal support of the church interests.

R. L. Fulk is president of the district, and a recent request for literature and advertising matter from the Brush Creek reunion to be held in Southeastern Illinois District, indicates they are alive to the possibilities of advertising the church through the medium of the reunion services.

We can not help but wonder what district will be next to show such a marked gain in receipts and loyal interest.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By M. H. SIEGFRIED.

Colorado Springs Branch

Work at this place has been very pleasant, moving along with a spirit of love and helpfulness.

At the recent election of officers, the following were placed in office: Pastor, Brother J. D. Curtis; branch president, J. E. Ebeling; secretary, Sister S. J. Conway; treasurer, Brother B. M. Geringer.

The Department of Women has been doing much good work and continues still. We have just completed a quilt to be donated to the district reunion grounds. We will have a chicken pie supper in the basement of the church August 3.

Several visitors are at present with the Saints of this local. Sister J. F. Curtis and daughter, Flora, have been here since May. Flora, we are happy to say, is feeling much improved. Brother Curtis will be with us soon for reunion. Brother and Sister Myer, of Oklahoma, were with us last Sunday, Brother Myer being the speaker at the evening service. Sister Blackman, of Sheffield, Missouri, who recently underwent an operation here, is rapidly recovering. There are also several from Independence, Brother and Sister Lowell White, Sister Stevenson and niece, Miss Head, and a cousin of Sister Stevenson's, Miss Head, of Stewartsville, Missouri.

We are anticipating a well-attended reunion August 12 to 21.

RUTH COOPER ROBERTSON.

Brush Creek, Illinois

Thursday, July 14, a working took place on our reunion ground. The men worked on the grounds and the women cleaned the church.

Saturday night, July 23, an ice cream social was given for the benefit of the Oriole Girls. This circle consists of seven members.

The following Sunday our district Sunday school convention convened with us in the afternoon, a large crowd being in attendance.

Thursday, August 4, another "working bee" was had, with splendid results. We are fencing the reunion and church grounds. This certainly is an improvement. The grounds have been raked with hand rakes.

Brother Fulk is on the grounds to stay until after the reunion. We are expecting Sister Fulk and daughter soon.

Some are busy each day, working on the plot where our reunion is to be held.

Our volley ball games are in full swing. Come play us a game. Mount Vernon, Illinois, is planning to play us a game at the reunion.

Brother Lewis DeSelm, superintendent of Recreation and Expression, was with us Saturday afternoon, helping us play volley ball. We appreciated his help.

Brother O. C. Henson, of Mount Vernon, gave us a short call Sunday morning.

W. W. Brown and family, of Centralia, were present at our sacramental service Sunday, also Brother Fulk, wife, and daughter, of Mount Vernon, and Sister Caroline Lily, of Taylorville. Sister Lily is making an extended visit with friends at Brush Creek.

All Saints are invited to attend our reunion, which will be held at Brush Creek, August 19 to 28. The Lansdowne Saints are especially invited to come with their music and help us.

Lamoni

The Brick Church and its attractive park made a beautiful setting for a gathering of Lamoni and neighboring Saints on July 31. The day was occupied with one of those "all-day meetings" that have come to be a characteristic part of Latter Day Saintism. It offered an opportunity for the interchange of friendly greetings that may be overlooked easily in the larger branches.

The church school was conducted in the several departments as usual. At the eleven o'clock hour the junior service was held in the lower auditorium; and in the upper auditorium Roy A. Cheville spoke on the theme, "New regulations." The choir sang "Remember now thy Creator," by Adams.

About three hundred joined in the basket dinner in the church park. The meal was served cafeteria style, in two courses, by the local Department of Women, with Mrs. W. E. Prall supervising.

At two o'clock the Lamoni Band gave a half-hour concert, playing among other selections a favorite medley of old religious hymns. Other musical numbers were furnished by a male quartet, and a girls' quartet known in Lamoni as the Jolly Four. Miss Florence Thompson, who has just returned from the University of Iowa, read the one-act play, "The old lady shows her medals."

Unexpectedly President F. M. McDowell came into Lamoni over Sunday and spent the day with old friends. As a fitting close to the afternoon program, Elder W. E. Prall announced him for a few words of greeting. At suggestion of the theme of the day, Elder McDowell spoke of the coming Lamoni stake reunion and the part it had played in his life. A hope of the summer was that he might be able to drop into the gathering at the South Woods, if only for a day. He spoke of the large place our reunion program has in the development of our people. Somehow those who attend spiritedly are usually found in the van of service in the church over a period of years.

The evening service was held on the church lawn. Congregational singing and a song by a male quartet furnished the prelude to the illustrated talk by Brother M. E. Mortimore—a travelogue through South America. The evening was beautiful and the service well attended. The slides were made by Brother Mortimore from pictures he had taken during the time he was engaged in commercial geology in South America.

Following this evening meeting, the officers of the stake and branch gathered at the Prall home in honor of Brother and Sister McDowell, who were celebrating their fifteenth wedding anniversary. On the lawn in front of the house, the forty guests received the McDowells and enjoyed an appropriate program and refreshments. George Blair spoke of the fifteen years of married life; Oscar Anderson, of the McDowells as former townspeople; and G. N. Briggs, of Brother McDowell as a general minister. A quartet sang an old favorite hymn, "You may sing of the beauty of mountain and dale," and in the spirit of this hymn Brother McDowell spoke feelingly in a personal way of his life in Lamoni and his work as a general minister. A pair of cut glass candlesticks was presented. Somehow the people of Lamoni feel that these good people are still numbered in their neighborhood.

Each year prior to the reunion, the local men hold a cleaning bee on the reunion grounds, preparing it for the coming reunion. This year's bee was held last Monday. Some fifty men and boys began work about eight in the morning, and by evening all refuse and weeds had been removed. Dinner was served by the Women's Department, Mrs. J. H. Anthony heading the committee. They also served pie, ice cream, and lemonade in the afternoon. Another day was spent the latter part of the week to erect service tents and finish preparations. These bees are evidence of the loyalty of the people and are healthy in the happy friendship that prevails as men work together.

Holden Stake

Atherton

Brother Leonard White, who is pastor at Liberty Street Branch in Independence, has been out twice recently, bringing with him some musicians who rendered some enjoyable numbers. Two young brothers recently ordained occupied in the pulpit with Brother White in charge.

Brother Blackmore and Brother Baughman, residents of Atherton, have given us some interesting sermons of late.

Brother Elmer Pierson, who moved into this vicinity with his family, became seriously sick a couple of weeks ago and upon being taken to the Sanitarium had to undergo an operation. His condition was so serious that the doctors said they could do no more for him and gave no hope of his recovery. Sister Pierson asked for a special prayer service in his behalf, and Brother Ware, our pastor, called a prayer service last Sunday at the eleven o'clock hour. Earnest prayers were offered by the Saints in his behalf. Brother Pierson is on the road to recovery now, for which we are all thankful. This is another manifestation of God's love and power.

Brother Koehler has recently been with us, and a good sermon is reported.

Sedalia

We have enjoyed having our stake missionary, H. V. Minton, to preach to us for several nights, also at both services on Sunday. His general theme was, "How to do local missionary work," emphasizing the necessity, first of all, of our living such lives that those with whom we come in contact will want to know about our religion. He gave us much food for thought, which we hope may be of benefit to us and to the work in general. We hope to have him back again in the near future, and trust we may prepare the way for a good work to be done.

Our pastor's wife, Sister R. E. Bozarth, who has been seriously ill, having undergone an operation at the hospital here, is much improved and able to be at home, to the delight of her family and friends. Little hope was held out for her recovery, but God's healing power was made manifest, and through administration and the prayers of the Saints she received the needed blessing. Her sister, Mrs. Francis Allen, of Henry, Illinois, came to see her and assisted in caring for her at the hospital. Sister Simmons, of Knobnoster, is with her now.

We are glad to have Brother and Sister Nitz, of Hutchinson, Kansas, located here, temporarily at least. We hope Brother Nitz will be able to get permanent employment so they can remain.

Brother and Sister Weaver were called to Independence recently on account of the serious illness of Sister Maude's husband, Toga Cannaday. We are glad to hear he is much improved now. Sister Weaver is visiting her mother in Wichita.

Brother and Sister F. E. Dunham drove to Joplin for a few days' visit with his mother.

Brother Minton also occupied here at both services Sunday, July 10. He was accompanied by Sister Minton; also a Brother Smith, of Independence, who favored us with a beautiful solo at the 11 o'clock service.

Sister Minton and Brother and Sister Harpham, of Warrensburg, met with us again Sunday evening, July 17.

Sunday afternoon, July 17, several carloads of Saints gathered at the bank of a beautiful stream south of town and witnessed the baptism of five children. They were confirmed at the evening service by Elders Minton, Rodger, Weaver, and Bozarth. Those baptized were LaVera and Ethel King, Bertha Riesland, and Ralph and Lois Reno.

Holden

The Holden reunion, considered from the standpoint of program and effectiveness, was the best ever held in the stake. Mrs. D. J. Krahl had charge of the activities of the Department of Women, with Mrs. J. A. Koehler, Mrs. John Blackmore, and Mrs. C. J. Hunt as assistants. Children from five to twelve constituted the "junior church" and were in charge of Sister Blackmore.

The preaching, lectures, and class work were done by Brethren Edwards, Koehler, Blackmore, Minton, and H. O. Smith, all being the kind which reaches its objective. All services were seasoned with the Spirit. Elder H. L. Barto was a visitor and occupied at the evening service. Recreational activities were directed by Brethren Blackmore and Minton and occupied the hours from three to six daily. Musicians came and went, but Ivan and Finas Beebe, Marie, Kelvin, and Mrs. J. A. Brendel were "on the job" all the time. The Nace-Moorman band and orchestra, of about thirty-five members, was with us over the last Saturday and Sunday and gave three excellent concerts. Holden Stake has a large number of young people, and they outnumbered the older people in attendance. The meeting was a decided success, and by unanimous vote provided for a reunion in 1928.

At a session of the stake conference held on Saturday, July 30, Brother Robert Dillon of Holden was approved for membership in the stake high council and was ordained high priest and councilor by F. H. Edwards, F. A. McWethy, and C. F. Scarcliff.

Through the hot weather the Sunday night services are being held on the church lawn. Vance Eastwood has furnished motion pictures, which, with a sermonet and musical program has brought an increase in attendance of over two hundred per cent. Collections have nearly met the expense. These services will be featured through August on the lawn, and in the church for cooler weather. The Holden choir furnished some good music for these services, and the increased attendance is stimulating their efforts to supply the demand. The ladies' and male quartets are being asked for repeat numbers.

Under the supervision of Brother G. F. Baker, work has begun on the erection of a front porch for the Home. This improvement will be a source of comfort to the Home family.

By the time this is read by the HERALD family, the Square Deal Dining Hall at the State Fair, Sedalia, Missouri, will be serving meals to thousands of people. The earnings of this project is used for development work in the stake. If you attend the fair, hunt up the Square Deal for your meals.

Warrensburg

The church at Warrensburg was the scene of the first wedding of the season when on Sunday, June 26, at 11 a. m. Miss Bertha Johnson, of Warrensburg, was married to Mr. Raymond M. Hursh, of Independence. The ceremony was performed by Elder I. M. Smith, of Warrensburg. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Hazel Ball, sister of the bride, sang, with violin obligato "At dawning," "Oh, promise me," and "I love you truly." Prayer was offered and a short talk on the beauty and significance of marriage given by Elder W. S. Macrae. The bridal procession marched in to the strains of Lohengrin. The single ring ceremony was used. Miss Ethel Macrae, close friend and for the past several years roommate of the bride, was the only attendant. Following the ceremony the Anvil Chorus from Il Trovatore was played while the bridal party and friends left the church. Miss Edna Johnson, also sister of the bride, presided at the piano, and A. W. McCullough used his violin.

A wedding dinner was served immediately following the service by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nalmer Johnson, at their home at 324 West South Street, Warrensburg. Mr. and Mrs. Hursh departed that afternoon for their home in Independence.

Brother George Hancock, our pastor, and family have moved to Independence, and Brother Robert Burgess of Knobnoster has been placed in temporary charge. Brother Burgess is a very quiet, unassuming man, firm in the faith, and steadfast for the program of the church, which is the establishment of stewardships and the redemption of Zion. He has given us several instructive talks. Following are a few of the extracts from his sermons:

"What shall I do in regard to those whom I know are in the wrong?" Pray for them. Move in the spirit of love. Revile not against those who revile. God's love for us is so great that it should awaken in us a desire to please him. God can use us only when we have a humble estimate of ourselves.

It is a splendid thing to see our young people going to school to qualify for service. He pleaded with the young people to make their choice of friends with care and to attend church regularly, that they may have the greatest measure of God's Spirit to guide and protect them.

We should delight in going to God's house. It is our duty to prepare ourselves to meet our Savior.

As we overcome our larger faults, we will see other smaller ones to overcome, then others, etc., till if we are faithful, we will grow more and more into the ideal of our loving Master.

Kansas City Stake

Bennington Heights

In reporting to the HERALD last week, a mistake was made in the announcement of the death of Brother Emmet Barton, concerning his baptism. It was reported that Brother and Sister Barton were baptized a few years ago; but Brother Barton was a member of the church for years, and Sister Barton was baptized about three years ago at the old Central Church font.

Sister M. E. Jones, who was struck by an automobile while crossing the street in front of her home, is improving but still suffers headaches.

Ruth Hastings and Sister D. F. Winn have each attended Sunday school one hundred Sundays without being absent. There are now six who have attended one hundred or more consecutive Sundays. The others are: Dorothy Hastings, 150 Sundays; Sister S. D. Hastings, 148; Dorothy Ladd, 137; and Orville Helm, 123.

Elder E. S. Zink preached a very interesting sermon last Sunday morning, and in the evening Elder Ross Higdom was the speaker.

Quindaro Church

Old Grandma Simpson passed from this earth life on July 29 after living a long and useful life of eighty-four years. Elder J. A. Tanner spoke many comforting words to those who are left to mourn.

Our pastor, Elder A. Wallace Eskridge, and family, went by way of auto to spend their vacation in Sanlac County, Michigan. They are missed by the local church. Elder Emmett Palmer has charge of the work in his absence.

Interests in local activities are up to the standard; numbers at the Wednesday night prayer service are on the increase, and a good spirit is present.

Brother Theodore Foley and family are on a trip to Colorado Springs. Several others are away on vacations. We look forward to the time when all will be home again.

August 14.—Our Religio at 6.30 was in charge of the superintendent, Brother Frank Murrah. After the lesson the audience was entertained by a string trio: Sister Eola Hawkins at the piano; Brother Otis Swart, violin; and Mr. Wilkinson, cello. Three numbers were rendered and appreciated by all.

We are pleased to have with us Elder and Sister H. A. Higgins. Sister Higgins is a valuable help in assisting Sister Dora Halverson in the junior department in the Sunday school.

Brother Higgins occupied the eight o'clock hour, using as a basis for his remarks Mark 16: 15 to 18. Brother Higgins is a very forceful speaker and carries conviction to his hearers. His sermons have the old-time ring. Their assistance is appreciated very much at this place.

The Ladies' Aid and the Fidelia Chapter of Temple Builders have each sponsored successful ice cream socials in the recent past.

Independence

Stone Church

To be of service to the church and its program, to be faithful to its teachings and ideals, to live above reproach, to be unselfish, were the paramount desires echoing through the testimonies and prayers of the young at the young people's early Sabbath morning prayer meeting. Brothers D. O. Cato and Ed. Darman presided over the gathering, and though there were not as many in attendance as there should have been, a spirit of calm and comfort blessed every attendant. In these services of prayer, song, and testimony, the young hope to bring about the happy condition worded in one of the old hymns:

"May faith, and hope, and love abound;
Our sins and errors be forgiven;
And we, from day to day, be found
Children of God and heirs of heaven."

Associate Sunday School Superintendent Glenn Fairbanks opened the Sunday school session with the reading of several verses to be found in the sixth chapter of Galatians. Music during this service was furnished by Mrs. Emma Tandberg at the piano and Miss Dorothy Koehler at the organ, and as a special musical number, Miss Koehler at the piano and Miss Evelyn Turner at the organ rendered a beautiful duet.

Attendance at Sunday school was noticeably diminished due to two causes: The absence of many regular Sunday school scholars on vacations; and a rain with threat of more during the early morning. However, an unusually long list of visitors was registered, there being one hundred and sixty-nine present, who were made welcome in the various departments of the school.

Bishop Mark H. Siegfried was the morning speaker and devoted his time to calling the attention of the Saints to some of the financial aspects of the church, its business methods, its budget etc. "This work is the basis upon which successful society is maintained," he declared. "Without it not only the church and the Nation, but the individual would go to pieces." Since the success and worth-whileness of society depends upon the Christian element in it, he urged a twentieth-century business method of conducting the church to correspond to its twentieth-century program. "We are too careless, too indifferent, too lax about religious connections. We leave it to some one else to maintain the church, but should ask ourselves daily, What is it that keeps up this institution that protects my family, my home, all that I am and all that I have? What am I giving of myself to make this society a permanent affair?" Reminding the congregation of the budget adopted by the church at last General Conference, he advised discussion among the people concerning its items, and offered as methods of determining what is the equitable contribution of every member: Filing of inventories; paying of tithes; and paying surplus.

Preceding the morning's sermon two songs were sung by the congregation, "Awake, ye saints of God, awake," and "Praise ye the Lord." Robert Miller at the organ contributed a pleasing offertory, and Pastor C. Ed. Miller offered the opening and closing prayers.

K L D S Sunday Activities

A children's program arranged by Mrs. Ethel Moorman took the air at 8.30, and at 9 Bible study lesson was conducted by K L D S radio pastor, Ralph W. Farrell. The main auditorium program at eleven o'clock was heard by radio listeners.

An instrumental program was presented by the combined Walnut Park and Stone Church orchestras at 2 p. m. And one hour later K L D S radio church commenced. Music for this service had been arranged by Miss Ina Hattey, soprano, and was presented by a quartet consisting of Ina Hattey, Hazel Moler, Alma Kearns, and George Gates, and by Dorothy Koehler, organist. The sermon was by the Reverend Joseph Myers, jr., of the Linwood Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City. This was the first of a series of talks by Reverend Myers, and the opening theme was "The forgotten purpose of Jesus."

At 6.30 vesper service, arranged by Mrs. Cyril E. Wight of the Central Latter Day Saints Church, Kansas City, Missouri, was broadcast. Ralph W. Farrell delivered the sermonet.

The Latter Day Saint studio service at 9.15 consisted of a musical program furnished by Dorothy Koehler, organist; Margaret Gard, contralto; Lois J. Burnett, violinist; a mixed quartet arranged by Thelma Vincent. Sermonet, Elder R. J. Lambert.

Though the ground was quite damp from morning rains, the weather was favorable for meeting at the Campus Sunday evening. Seated on the platform and directed by Brother Orlando Nace, the Walnut Park Band began the evening activities. "Lord, we come before thee now," was the song which commenced the eight o'clock service. Elder A. K. Dillee, pastor of Second Church, offered the invocation, and a pleasing offertory was played by the band.

Pastor C. Ed. Miller, recently returned from several reunions, had been chosen to speak to the people and read a few verses from the twenty-first chapter of Revelation. The seventh verse, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son," he declared to be "the grandest promise made in the whole Bible." Further he read John 3: 5, then 10: 10, emphasizing the importance of life and the promise of Christ, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Several years ago Thomas A. Edison startled the world with his statement: "I believe life is in everything, in every atom."

Classifying Christ's teachings in two divisions: ethical, which has to do with man's relations to man and the finer, beautiful, high things of life; and doctrinal, which deals with the observance of the laws of God, compliance to his will and government. The speaker gave his attention to the latter division. "God created all things, the flower, the animal, and man, but man is of the 'God species.' God is our Creator, but in order that he may be our Father, we must obey his law." Man is the head of creation, but is now in a very crude form; he is undeveloped and must (can only) develop by obedience to law. There is an immense range for man's mind, from the highest heaven to the most debasing plane. God wants us to come up, to be his children and share in the infinite inheritance. Jesus taught, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." We must be born again to receive the inheritance here and hereafter, for God's promise is sure: "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

Following the benediction the congregation enjoyed a reel of educational moving pictures.

On Tuesday evening, August 9, the third Religio program of the summer was scheduled to be presented. In these programs each branch in Independence is supposed to be represented, though some have not yet appeared in this capacity this season. The first on the entertainment was a well-rendered quartet number by four Enoch Hill girls. Little Helen Rich, from Englewood, gave two readings, and a saxophone duet by Homer Kelley and Merrill Etzenhouser, of the Stone Church congregation, was enjoyed. From Spring Branch came the Smith sisters, Ruth and Winnogene, who gave a beautiful vocal duet. They were accompanied by Mrs. Walter Gibler.

Due to a heavy rain Saturday evening, the regular moving picture could not be shown and was therefore postponed and given to the large crowd gathered to hear the Religio program Tuesday night. During the intermission two numbers of the program were presented. Bernice Boyd, Second Church representative, gave a reading, and a vocal duet was contributed by Jennie and Katherine Friend, from East Independence. Ralph Smith accompanied them on the piano.

Second Church

Early Sunday morning the pastor and Brother Andes were called to Blue Springs to administer to Brother Henry Campbell, who was taken very ill Saturday night. Until the last few months Brother Campbell has been a member of Second Church congregation since its establishment.

Brother Mortimore presided over the young people's meeting at 8.15, which was few in number but rich in spirituality.

Attendance and interest at Sunday school were very good.

At eleven o'clock Bishop B. J. Scott was the speaker, giving the Saints one of his characteristically rousing sermons. He made an earnest and eloquent appeal to the Saints to live a higher, more godly life. "Straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." "I plead with each of you," said the speaker, "to be one of the few." A beautiful number was rendered by the choir, the members of which are diligently working to keep up their department of work during the vacation period. Their influence for good is being felt.

This meeting was presided over by the pastor, who is Brother Scott's nephew. He was assisted by Wilfred Winn, Brother Scott's grandson.

At the two o'clock meeting the infant daughter of Brother and Sister Verney Hursh was blessed by Brother Dillee and Brother Whiting.

A few weeks ago the sisters of this congregation undertook the task of cleaning and redecorating the church, and with their usual energy and thoroughness set about the task. The work has been done, the task accomplished. The interior of the church is now a delight to the eye as well as a joy to the soul. The work of the sisters is appreciated by all.

Liberty Street

On last Wednesday evening Brother R. T. Cooper and family met with the young people in prayer service, where a very good meeting was enjoyed.

At the morning service on Sunday, the choir under the direction of Sister Leona Robinson rendered a beautiful anthem, "Are we trusting in the Lord?" and a male trio composed of Brothers Harry Blake, Clarence Pace, and Fred Koehler sang "Nearer, still nearer to thee."

Elder W. A. Stevenson was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, taking his text from Doctrine and Covenants 105: 9: "Verily, verily I say unto you, darkness covereth the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people, and all flesh has become corrupt before my face. Behold, vengeance cometh speedily upon the inhabitants of the earth—a day of wrath, a day of burning, a day of desolation, of weeping, of mourning, and of lamentation—and as a whirlwind it shall come upon all the face of the earth saith the Lord."

Walnut Park

The speaker Sunday was a local elder, Samuel Smith. His sermon, on the thought of "Preparation," was a stirring one, full of warning and emphatic instruction.

The Walnut Park Band didn't realize until Monday night how many friends it did have. The band is only beginning its second year of existence and had never given a benefit social before, so they hardly knew what patronage to expect. However, they with their helpers including some from Spring Branch were at the Campus, well stocked with ice cream and homemade cake, water melon and pop corn, by half past six, with six long tables arranged on the lawn, when the crowd began coming for the concert and pictures. Apparently everyone wanted cake and ice cream before or during or after the entertainment, and those serving had an anxious time as they saw their supplies sold out faster than they could be replenished. But the larger the crowd grew, the more enthusiastic the band became, and their music resounded joyfully over the grounds. They are still happy and grateful, and wish to thank the community for the splendid reception given them. Just as sincerely, too, do they thank Him who has charge of the sunshine and rain, as the prospects for a clear evening were doubtful, but when the time came the weather was ideal, which means everything to an undertaking like this. The amount cleared in dollars and cents is not yet known.

Enoch Hill

A Sunday school picnic was planned for Thursday, July 25, but on account of rain the gathering was held in the basement of the church rather than to postpone it to a later date.

Group 33N held an ice cream and cake social August 2 in the church basement. In spite of bad weather twelve dollars was realized. This group plans to hold another social in the near future when they hope the weather man may be more considerate.

The sacramental service on the first Sunday in August was in charge of Brothers Brewer and Sarratt, and was one of the best in many months. An unusual degree of the Spirit prevailed, blessing all with peaceful instruction and a pleasant hour.

Brother W. D. Bullard was the morning speaker on Sunday, breaking the bread of life to an attentive congregation.

Last Sunday morning Brother William Sarratt's class of young people, perhaps a score in number, accompanied by Patriarch H. O. Smith and wife, Pastor Brewer, and Brother Robert Whitsett, started out to visit the historic site of Haun's Mill. But owing to unfavorable weather, they were compelled to change their plans, and going by Saint Joseph and Cameron they stopped at Kingston, Missouri. Upon their arrival, regular service was dispensed with and the hour given over to the class. Brother Brewer took charge, and Patriarch Smith gave an instructive talk concerning the massacre of Haun's Mill. At the time of this massacre, Brother Smith's grandfather, Lyman Wight, was in the jail at Liberty.

Members of the class report a pleasant visit with Saints of Kingston and vicinity and plan to make the trip to Haun's Mill sometime in the near future.

Gudgell Park

On Sunday, August 7, Sunday school was conducted at the usual hour with good attendance and attention.

Sacramental service was presided over by Pastor P. A. Sherman, assisted by Brother Cleland. This hour was one of spiritual uplift to all.

After dinner we motored over to Second Church where a young sister was conducted into the kingdom, Brother P. A. Sherman officiating at both baptism and confirmation.

We are buying a piano for our building. A piano is something we very much need. We contemplate other improvements in the near future. Our congregation is growing until at times it taxes the seating capacity of the church. If the good work continues, we shall have need to enlarge our borders.

Topeka, Kansas*1116 Clay Street*

August 8.—The theme of F. O. Kelley's discourse on the morning of July 10 was "Religion." What is it and how does it help us? "We may have faith without worship, but we can not have worship without faith." Many excellent thoughts were presented.

The theme in the evening was given to us by B. F. Deller.

The eleven o'clock hour on the 17th was occupied by the pastor, C. C. Graham. No services were held in the evening.

On Wednesday, the 20th, the Department of Women met all day at the home of Sister A. P. Crooker and tied comforters. Mrs. Noe and family, of Jackson, Mississippi, and many other friends were present, and a very enjoyable day was spent. Mrs. Noe is a sister of Sister Crooker. The sisters brought pies and salads, and the rest of the menu was furnished by the Club Aluminum Company, who are giving economy, efficiency, and health demonstrations in our city. The waterless meal cooked in their wares was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Sister A. P. Crooker was presented with a piece of the ware as a token of appreciation for her interest in this campaign. A health lecture delivered by Mr. Taylor followed the luncheon.

At the evening prayer service on this same day, a business meeting was held. District President Dave Little was in charge. Brother Graham's resignation as president of the branch was accepted, and B. F. Deller was placed in charge. A building committee composed of B. F. Deller, C. J. Sheets, and F. O. Kelley was authorized to sell the present site on the corner of King and Clay and look for a better building site. Clayton Crooker's resignation as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression was accepted.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held on Thursday evening, July 21, at Chesney Park. There was an abundance of good things to eat and some to spare. Sister Emma Happe furnished the strawberry preserves served with the ice cream and cake later in the evening.

Elder James Baillie, of Scranton, Kansas, occupied both morning and evening on the 24th. His theme was the gospel, and he spoke of Job as an outstanding character of righteousness. The trials we pass through do not amount to anything compared with what Job suffered and endured.

Clayton Crooker was the speaker on the morning of the 31st. The subject was, "Our bodies a living sacrifice in the work of the Lord." Life from the one cell to the more complex form of the human body was used as an illustration. Comparison was also made between the human and the spiritual organization, appropriate scriptural references being read.

Sacramental service on August 7 was in charge of Dave Little. J. G. Juergens stated in the opening remarks that in this service more than any other our hearts and minds are more united in the thought of the renewal of our covenant with God. Petty difficulties come between lay members and members of the priesthood as well, and we can not afford to have hard feelings and malice in our hearts toward each other. As long as we do not understand ourselves, we shall have difficulties. We can hope to develop perfection only through the spirit of forgiveness. Brother Little was accompanied on this visit to us by his family.

Attendance at our services has been small this month, due to the fact that many of our members are away on their vacations.

Two of the upstairs rooms of the church have been newly decorated for the primary department. The cost involved was a contribution to the Sunday school by the superintendent of this department, Sister Mildred Goodfellow.

Sister A. P. Crooker and family are moving to Lawrence, Kansas, where her son, Clayton, will enter the university. We shall deeply feel the loss of this talented family in all the activities of the branch. In view of "more efficient service" for the church, we bid them Godspeed.

Out of town Saints worshiping with us this month are Sister Pearl Richardson, of Ballinger, Texas; Sister Richardson, of Lamoni, Iowa, and daughter Lilah Woodrum, now employed at the State Hospital.

Little Frank Copp still needs the prayers of the Saints, as he is yet unable to walk although he has recovered his speech and can now converse. We hope to see him regain the use of his limbs. Remember him; also Brother Pees, who is sorely afflicted.

Alexander, Kansas

Elder A. C. Silvers and wife are here helping us get ready for reunion, August 19 to 28. The reunion will be held in Brother Teeters' grove. Plenty of water is close by. It is not a quarter of a mile to Alexander. We expect a good time and want everyone to attend. We want Graceland students to come and put on a Graceland program; so Gracelanders will take notice. This is the home of Chrystal Teeters, who was with you in Graceland the last year, and she will help in the program and will be very much pleased to meet you.

Meals will be served by Mrs. John Teeters at a reasonable price. Brother Teeters has five rooms to rent to those wishing them. The house is on the reunion grounds.

A very pleasant wedding took place at the home of Elder John Teeters on the morning of August 1, when Mr. Marion Walker, of McCracken, Kansas, and Sister Dove Stuel, of Brownell, Kansas, were united in marriage by Brother Teeters. They are fine, well-respected young people. Mr. Walker is a farmer, and Miss Stuel a home economics teacher, having taught in La Cross, Kansas, for four years, and she has the school for the coming term. We all join in wishing them a happy and prosperous life. Mrs. Stuel Walker is the daughter of our much-beloved Sister Jenny Stuel, of Brownell, Kansas.

The attendance at church is small.

Our branch was shocked and saddened by the sudden death of our beloved Brother Jacob Schadel on July 19. He was ready to go, but we were sorry to give him up. The funeral sermon was preached on July 21 at 2.30 p. m. at the union church in Ness County, Kansas, by Elder John A. Teeters. A large crowd was in attendance, and the casket was covered with flowers. The frail wife and children are left to mourn, but not without hope. He was laid to rest in the union church cemetery.

Remember the reunion, and if you want a room, write Brother John Teeters, Alexander, Kansas. Brother and Sister Bruce Brown, of Colorado Springs, will be workers at the reunion and also Brother Peter Whalley, of Wichita, Kansas. They are live wires. Come and hear them.

Minneapolis, Minnesota

Fifth and Queen Avenues North

The event of chief importance this month was the visit of President Briggs and Dean Lonzo Jones, both of Graceland College, on July 10. Brother Jones spoke to the young people of Sunday school, and also preached the morning sermon. In the evening President Briggs lectured about Graceland College, using slides of the buildings, faculty, and students as a basis for his remarks.

The Minneapolis Saints greatly enjoyed what these men had to bring, and hope they will come another time.

On the same day two families from Boston, the Fishers, stopped and worshiped with us. They were en route to the Pacific coast. Brothers Briggs and Jones were quite surprised to meet some of their former students at this time and place.

In other ways the month of July has been rather uneventful, especially so in contrast with the reunion of the preceding month.

A business meeting was held on Monday, the 18th, to decide various questions with regard to preparing for the dining hall which is conducted every year at the State fair grounds.

The young people had an outdoor party on the 22d at the Lake of the Isles. Everyone had a good time, canoeing, playing games, and eating.

At the last meeting of the Alpha Nu Omega Society, Kenneth Wolfe was elected to the office of president; Alice Light as vice president, Loleta Johnson as secretary-treasurer, and Wesley Elvin was sustained in the office of editor of the paper.

Stockton, California

Corner Sutter and Clay Streets

July 30.—On July 1 the Sunday school held its annual picnic at Oak Park. There was an abundance of ice cream, and the usual contests, games, and prizes, and all enjoyed the day under the beautiful oaks.

For two weeks during July no services were held at the church on account of many of the members attending the district reunion. All feel strengthened and renewed, ready to go on with the work whatever it may be through the influence of the wonderful spirit which was manifested throughout.

Our new church windows have been installed at a cost of about two hundred dollars. They fill a long-felt need in the way of better ventilation, as well as a more subdued light. It is also planned to paint the building in the very near future. The Department of Women is planning a busy year and rejoicing at the prospect of helping in the various undertakings of the branch.

Brother George Vallem has been ordained an elder, and Brother Harold Bolton a priest. These reinforcements are a welcome addition to our priesthood, for the number of men of the ministry has been greatly depleted.

We regret that some of our members have found it necessary to go away to find employment. We miss them and hope conditions may soon prove favorable for their return here. Some also are absent on vacations. Though not many in number at present, a good spirit prevails among us.

Building the Work at Harrisville

We have hitherto been silent concerning our group, but now wish to avail ourselves of the opportunity to tell you what we have been doing here.

Elder S. T. Pendleton, of Beaverton, Michigan, opened the work here about two years ago. About two weeks after he started preaching here, three were baptized, and the number of church members has increased since that time until now we have thirty-one members. During that period we have had many series of meetings, Elder E. S. White, of Bay City; Elder G. W. Burt, of Beaverton; and Elder Chapman, of Bay City, laboring here. Also we have had about twelve all-day meetings.

A number of our members attended the young people's state convention last fall and returned to tell those who were unable to go about the good things they enjoyed.

Sunday, July 31, we met with Brother G. W. Burt and Brother Matthew Umphrey for an all-day meeting. About fifty souls were present. A calm spirit was enjoyed throughout the day and everyone was sorry when the time of parting arrived.

Brother M. A. Sumerfield, of Tawas City, and Brother Richard Stewart, of Greenbush, have also been with us many times. There is great interest here at present, and we need missionaries very badly.

THE KILLMASTER GROUP.
HARRISVILLE, MICHIGAN, August 4.

MISCELLANEOUS

Notice to Graceland Freshmen

A special three-day program for Graceland Freshmen beginning at nine o'clock, Friday, September 9, has been planned. These three days will probably be among the most important of the entire year for the Freshmen. The chief purpose is to give personal attention and help in enrollment and academic advisement, in personal interviews, in budgeting of time, in giving physical examination, explanation of rules and regulations, explaining and demonstrating use of library, etc, etc.

All Freshmen should arrange to be on time, as the work of the year will be greatly helped by the three days devoted especially to Freshmen.

Remember the date: Nine o'clock, Friday morning, September 9. G. N. BRIGGS, President Graceland College.

Attention, Springfield Saints

We are to be in Springfield from the sixteenth to the twenty-ninth of August, and would be glad for some of you to call on us at the "tented city" Fair Grounds. George Inman, proprietor; Misses Minnie and Lena Fusselman.

Conference Notices

Officers and members of the Western Michigan District, please take notice. Western Michigan coordinate conference will convene at Freesoil, Michigan, August 27 and 28. Meals will be served by the ladies of Freesoil Branch at twenty cents, straight. All branch clerks please forward reports to Sadie Irish, 211 West Ninth Street, Box C, Traverse City, Michigan. A. R. Ellis, district president.

Reunion Notices

Northwestern Kansas reunion will be held at Alexander, Kansas, August 19 to 28. Alexander is on the Santa Fe Railway and Kansas State Highway 96. Brother and Sister Bruce E. Brown, of Colorado Springs, and Brother Peter Whalley, of Wichita, Kansas, will be visiting workers. A few sleeping rooms may be rented; meals will be served at reasonable prices. Bring your tents and camp in the beautiful grove on Brother John A. Teeter's place in the edge of Alexander. A. C. Silvers, for the committee.

Requests for Prayer

Mrs. W. P. Peden, of Drumright, Oklahoma, requests the prayers of the Saints for her husband who has heart trouble and black jaundice. He is very low. Mr. Peden is not a member of the church, but his wife thinks him a believer at heart. At present they are at the home of Sister Peden's mother, at Rocky Comfort, Missouri.

Correction in Notice of Death

Two corrections should be made in the death notice of Sister Savilla Spriggle, as published in SAINTS' HERALD of July 27, page 886, at the bottom of the first column. The writer of the notice communicates with HERALD editors in these words: "Sister Spriggle died of dropsy and complications, not 'as the result of an accident brought about by a runaway horse as she was on her way to a funeral,' as you have it. It was her daughter who was killed by a runaway horse. Also, the funeral was not held 'in the Methodist church at Myersville,' but in the Methodist church at Uniontown, where she was buried."

Marriage Notice

HARDY-CRANE.—At the home of Brother and Sister C. W. Hawkins, San Jose, California, August 23, 1927, Sister (Miss) Edith May Hardy, and Mr. Edwin W. Crane were united in the holy bonds of wedlock. Those present at the ceremony besides the minister and his wife were Sister Scott, mother of the groom, Sister Christopher, aunt of the groom, and Sister Lena Christopher, cousin of the groom. Elder C. W. Hawkins performed the marriage ceremony. The contracting parties will make their home in Stockton, California.

Our Departed Ones

SIMPSON.—Mary Catherine Simpson was born in Illinois on June 19, 1843, and departed this life July 27, 1927, aged 84 years, 1 month, and 8 days. She has been a member of the Latter Day Saints Church for a number of years. She leaves three sons and one daughter. Services conducted from Quindaro Church, Kansas City, Kansas, by J. A. Tanner. Interment in Mount Hope Cemetery, Kansas City, Kansas.

Satisfaction

It is one of the satisfactions of life to have investments that turn out right—that keep every dollar of principal safe and that pay a good income with un-failing regularity.

A church bond has back of it the moral integrity and good will of "a people" in addition to tangible resources of property and money.

Description of Bonds

- $25 Baby Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, payable annually.
- $50 Thrift Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $100 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $200 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $1,000 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.

The $100 bonds may be purchased by paying $10 down and $10 per month until the face value of the bond is paid. On $25 and $50 bonds any amount of $1 or more will be accepted as part payment. The church will allow 5% interest to the purchaser on such installment payments, when full payment of the bond is made. Installment payments will easily and quickly secure a church bond if you do not have the money to pay cash. Government bonds will be accepted at their market value in exchange for church bonds.

PROBLEMS of INDUSTRIAL ZION

A new booklet just off the press is now ready for sale. Orders filled same day as received. The content of this booklet is an amplification of a series of lectures given during the last General Conference, and the matter of stewardships and cooperation in developing Zion is presented from quite a new angle.

It is written in a very interesting style. Definite situations are discussed and analyzed in a logical, common sense way, and the pleasing thing about the book is the fact that the entire treatise is based on the spiritual ground work of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The booklet is designed as a text for study by the priesthood in their priesthood meetings and by the membership in their study classes throughout the church. The First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric urge that this booklet be secured and study work begun.

The booklet will be about one hundred and seventy-five pages and will be sold for 20c each.

Order through the publicity agent in your branch when possible. Otherwise order direct from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Independence, Missouri, under Act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly at Independence, Missouri. Price $2 a year in advance. Accepted for mailing at the special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917; authorized July 21, 1921.

Are You One of Bishop Fry's Company?

Bishop Charles Fry was visiting scenes of the establishing of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Particularly he had visited the Hill Cumorah and in reflection had seen enacted the life of the young prophet, Joseph Smith, as he had been given the commission to take to the world a new and sacred record, complementary of the Bible, which should be another witness that Jesus is the Christ.

Now he was in Palmyra and the quiet conviction came upon him that he did not know enough about this record for which Joseph Smith and many others gave their lives, and he resolved that before September 22 he would again read the Book of Mormon.

Then followed the thought, "I wonder how many members of the church feel as I do, and would join me in rereading the book!"

To think in the line he had been thinking was to incite action, and he found a message blank, filled it with a telegraphic letter to the HERALD, and he had started a movement which bids fair to extend over the entire church.

Last week we reported that many in Far West Stake had joined Bishop Fry's company. This week we have received reports as follows: Lamoni, 159 have pledged rereading the book, beginning at once; excellent close to reunion. Eastern Michigan District and Port Huron, sixty-five are trying to reread the Book of Mormon before its first centennial, September 22. Far West reunion, 195 have undertaken rereading the book. Kirtland, 147 members of Kirtland reunion pledged themselves on Sunday to read the Book of Mormon by September 22, the centennial of its coming forth. Park of the Pines, Boyne City, Michigan, a fine reunion, fifty pledged themselves to reread the Book of Mormon by September 22.

In many other places we are assured the movement is in progress. What a wonderful impetus to the unity of the church has been started by this natural process!

God's Gifts of Health and of Healing

I attended a prayer meeting not many months since, and the Saints seemed to vie with each other in telling of the wonderful gifts they had witnessed; especially had the gift of healing by the laying on of hands of the elders been a testimony to them. I was made to reflect upon the gifts of the gospel which had followed me in my gospel life; and sitting in the fellowship of Saints, I enjoyed my contemplation immensely.

But there came in the course of my reflection this thought: Healing the sick is a demonstration of the forgiveness of God to the one or ones who have broken the provisions of his law. Is there no more perfect gift than this? Yes; there is the reward of an unimpaired, uninterrupted health which is the result of an unbroken law. I may not be able to say just what statute I have broken that has brought me a particular affliction, sickness, or distress, but it is very likely I can establish a very close connection between my troubles and my infractions of the law. Likewise, it is not a great task to credit the reward of health I have received and am enjoying to a regimen of law observance.

God has given his law in sufficient detail and plainness as to make it possible for me to trace my possession of continued blessing to the observance of its provisions, and herewith comes the greatest rejoicing of all.

Notwithstanding the truth of these statements, it does bring great joy to many when a respected and faithful elder of the church reports as does J. W. Metcalf in a letter dated August 1, as follows: "I was called by wire to Marengo, Indiana, to administer to Sister H. Thompson on the 18th of June. She had had locked bowels for eleven days, and the doctors had given up all hope for her recovery. They had done all they could. I arrived there on the 19th and found her very bad and the room full of anxious men and women. I offered a prayer to God for her and administered. Then I asked the men to vacate the room, and in less time than five minutes the Lord did for her what the doctors had been trying to do for eleven days. She was healed and is well."

Auditorium Construction Proceeding

Steel for the superstructure of the Auditorium above the first floor slab is now being set. This will be welcome news to the members throughout the church who are watching the progress on the building. Since the building was begun, three hundred tons of steel have been used for reenforcing and in the pillars and girders, bringing the building to its present state of construction.

The ramps (inclines) by which one may approach either the basement or first floor, have been completed in the four corners of the building, and with this stage of the construction completed, the steel framework for the main auditorium, gallery, and roof is being set as fast as it arrives.

With the exception of a few rainy days, the weather has been ideal for building operations, and the work is progressing steadily. The rooms for the heating and electrical equipment are completed, and but little work remains to be done preparatory to installing this equipment.

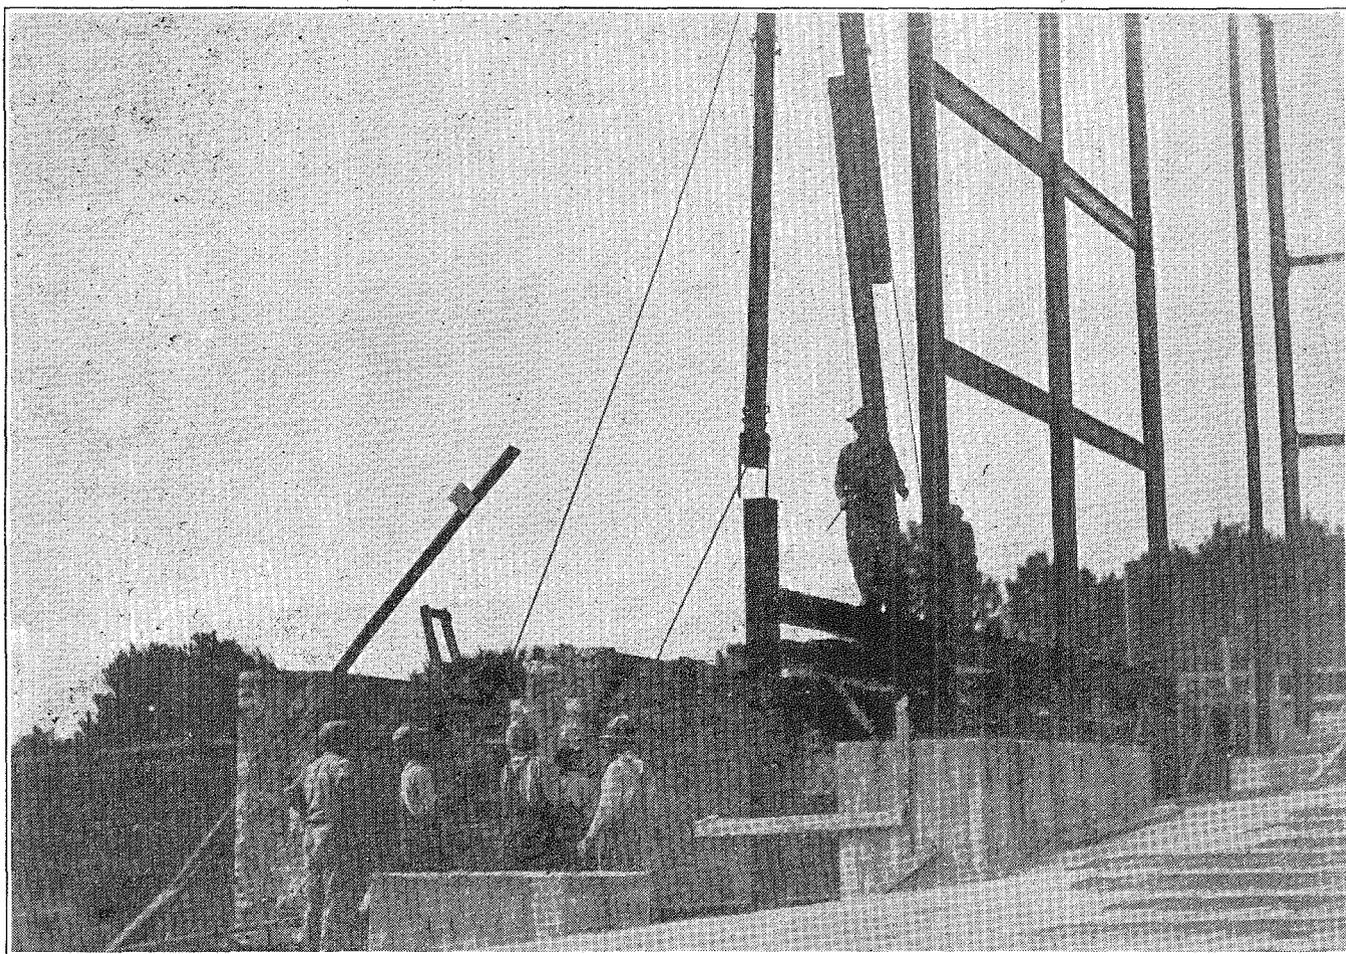

The building continues to draw its full quota of visitors every day, those who are interested in watching the building take form. If present plans are matured, it is hoped that the building will be inclosed and seated for the General Conference of October, 1928, and from that time until the April conference of 1930 what member of the church will be content not to have the building advanced to final completion for the centennial year of the church?

It is very gratifying to note that many are fulfilling their Auditorium pledges, and almost every letter expresses personal interest and enthusiasm in seeing the building go forward to completion.

The accompanying cut reproduces a picture taken August 11, showing workmen erecting the steel beams at the northwest corner of the Auditorium Building.

The Bible is not a book of mere secular wisdom, though much secular knowledge is embodied in it, not a book merely of grand thoughts about religion, of fine, ethical teachings, and noble biography, of soul-stirring narrative. It is, above all, a book of revelation, of God's historic revelations down through the ages, to the coming of Christ and the advent of the Holy Spirit.—Stanley R. Grubb.

A view of the work taken August 11, 1927, looking north along the west wall, showing steel being set in the northwest corner of the building.

Build Character by Teaching Children

The gifts of the gospel should not be underrated. The working of miracles should continue to be an incentive to the believer, causing him to follow more closely the direction of the Master as contained in the statutes and commandments of the law. The fundamentals enumerated by the Apostle should be established by elementary teaching, and every man, woman, and child should know what the Master has said regarding faith, repentance, and the other principles.

But in these things and their attainment, we should not lose sight of opportunities to instill fineness and strength of character by teaching children and young, during the plastic periods of their lives, those things which may be taught by the glance of approval, the tone of the voice, the attitude toward various types of visitor and friend. Once embed the idea in your child's mind that it is possible to tell the truth though it bear disagreeable intelligence without giving offense or injuring one's standing with acquaintance or friend, and one has done a greater thing than to have spoken in an unknown tongue or have prophesied under unctious of the Spirit of God.

There came to my desk this morning a small slip of paper containing two paragraphs written by Miss G. Kendall, and they caused the reflections we have just recorded. We will reproduce them herewith. They bear a message to Latter Day Saint fathers and mothers:

Teach Children Kindness

This teaching kindness to animals may seem a simple thing; but the more one looks into its merits the more penetrating this spiritualizing influence proves to be, causing a change of conduct, inspiring justice and compassion in the place of selfishness and cruelty; training the mind to apprehend, and the heart to sympathize with the needs of the lowly creatures who form the theoretical object lesson of such surpassing interest to the young; obviously the "protecting sympathy" which a child may be taught to feel towards its helpless dumb companion, may in after years inspire the life of the philanthropist.

How much teaching is needed is demonstrated by the incredibly cruel deeds perpetrated by children even of tender years, which call forth neither remonstrance nor reproof from parent or guardian.

Let us teach our children humane treatment of the creatures known by the misnomer dumb animals, and reap for ourselves and them great benefits of peace and happiness.

R. J. L.

Eugene Closson, superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, is having a busy reunion season, and if reports are indicative, it will be a no less busy season in 1928. It has been decided to continue the Cub and Scout organizations. The Cub organization is planned to care for boys of ages nine to twelve years; the Scout organization cares for them from twelve to fifteen years of age. A new organization to enlist the youth from fifteen to twenty-one years of age is being planned and will be tried out. It has appeared that there is legitimate demand for such organizations, and the field is one which should be fruitful. Surely the youth of the present need the touch of the church in their recreational activities as well as in educational and purely religious lines.

K L D S on New Wave Length

The Federal Radio Commission has assigned K L D S the frequency of 1110 kilocycles, corresponding to a frequency of 270.1 meters. Tuesday morning, August 23, the first program on the new wave length was sent out. This wave length has just been vacated by the two Shenandoah stations, K M A and K F N F, which have been moved to better berths. 1110 kilocycles is not expected to be the permanent frequency for K L D S, but pending further action will be used by the church station and should enable listeners to hear our programs better than on the higher frequency of 1260 kilocycles. The power of the station is unchanged.

An increased schedule is contemplated for K L D S, beginning in September. Further announcement concerning this will likely appear in next week's HERALD.

Alexander Klein Honored

In a letter from Alexander Klein, of Saint Louis, Missouri, to President Frederick M. Smith we find the following news: "By the inclosed clipping from our weekly 'Y' paper, you will notice that I have earned the highest honor that may be given to an individual of our local 'Y,' and I feel that to some measure you ought to be given credit, for it is through you that I have associated myself with high ideals, learned to appreciate fairness, loyalty, consecration, sportsmanship, and service. . . ."

A clipping from the paper mentioned is attached to the letter. From it we quote the intelligence: "Sixteen representatives of the various Young Men's Clubs held their third meeting last Monday evening for the purpose of completing the organization of a Young Men's Club Council.

"Alexander Klein was elected president, Herbert Sayers, vice president, and K. F. Brunkow secretary-treasurer."

God gave man an upright countenance to survey the heavens, and to look upward to the stars.—Ovid.

The Testimony of Jesus

BY S. A. BURGESS

A very common mode of attack on the church has been to set up the claim that it is non-Christian—as though the Book of Mormon could take the place of the Bible, or were another Bible in any sense of substitution. But to those who are acquainted with the book and with the teachings of the church, this is a very evident error, when not a gross misrepresentation.

In Joseph Smith's first vision, his desire was to find the truth. He had attended a revival service and was ready to accept Jesus, but there was such a confusion and contention that he turned to the Bible and there read, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God." The immediate response was a vision of the Father and of the Son, "This is my beloved Son, hear him." That has been and is the great corner stone of the restoration to the ministry and to the people. "Hear him."

When after earnest prayer he received his second vision in September, 1823, the scripture referred to by the angel was Malachi 3:1: "Behold, I will send my messenger before me, and he shall prepare the way."

The next was the 11th chapter of Isaiah, which concerns the restoration of Israel:

And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots: and the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears: but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath and from the islands of the sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off: Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. But they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the west; they shall spoil them of the east together; they shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab; and the children of Ammon shall obey them. And the Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of his Egyptian sea; and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it in the seven streams, and make men to go over dryshod. And there shall be a highway for the remnant of his house, which shall be left, from Assyria; like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

This he stated was about to be fulfilled:

For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear the Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.—Acts 3:22, 23.

How Long Have You Been in Business for Yourself?

And that Prophet he said was Christ. It will be found that all of these passages refer to Jesus Christ. He also quoted many other scriptures, but the fundamental has always Jesus as the Christ.

Then the Book of Mormon itself at the very beginning, in the vision of Nephi, forecasts the coming of the Son of God. This was plainly revealed 600 years before Christ and was made a part of their record. When Alma reorganized the church, he told again of the holy priesthood, that it is the order of the Son of God, and that the church should be called after his name.

The book relates that Jesus came to this continent. All through the book it will be remembered is the story of Jesus as the Savior of the world. See 2 Nephi 11:45-79:

And notwithstanding we believe in Christ, we keep the law of Moses, and look forward with steadfastness unto Christ, until the law shall be fulfilled; for, for this end was the law given; wherefore, the law hath become dead unto us, and we are made alive in Christ, because of our faith; yet we keep the law because of the commandments; and we talk of Christ, we rejoice in Christ, we preach of Christ, we prophesy of Christ, and we write according to our prophecies, that our children may know to what source they may look for a remission of their sins. Wherefore, we speak concerning the law, that our children may know the deadness of the law; and they, by knowing the deadness of the law, may look forward unto that life which is in Christ, and know for what end the law was given. And after the law is fulfilled in Christ, that they need not harden their hearts against him, when the law ought to be done away. And now behold, my people, ye are a stiff-necked people; wherefore, I have spoken plain unto you, that ye can not understand. And the words which I have spoken, shall stand as a testimony against you; for they are sufficient to teach any man the right way; for the right way is to believe in Christ and deny him not; for by denying him, ye also deny the prophets of the law. And now behold I say unto you, that the right way is to believe in Christ, and deny him not; and Christ is the Holy One of Israel: Wherefore ye must bow down before him, and worship him with all your might, mind, and strength, and your whole soul, and if ye do this, ye shall in no wise be cast out. And inasmuch as it shall be expedient, ye must keep the performances and ordinances of God, until the law shall be fulfilled which was given unto Moses. And after Christ shall have risen from the dead, he shall show himself unto you, my children, and my beloved brethren; and the words which he shall speak unto you, shall be the law which ye shall do.

Nephi taught that they should take upon them the name of Christ (2 Nephi 13:16). The purpose of the book itself was the convincing of the Jews that Jesus is the Christ. This includes not only the inhabitants of this land, but all the household of Israel. This is the purpose of the church, the teaching of the Christ, Jesus and his crucifixion.

People have attempted in many ways, and unsuccessfully, to undermine this book. Quite recently we have asked ourselves the question, "What if they should prove that Joseph Smith was a scoundrel, and the Book of Mormon was merely a production of his, for selfish ends?" Would our faith be destroyed? Certainly not; for our faith is in Jesus Christ and in him only.

But in fact each effort to disprove the book and each effort to discredit Joseph Smith has failed. We recognize that he was a prophet only when under direction of the Holy Spirit. But he was a good man at all times.

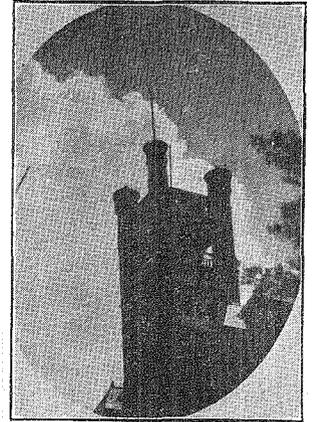

The Book of Mormon does not detract, but clearly increases the faith of everyone who reads it with a desire to know the truth. It is indeed a new witness of the life of Jesus Christ and is a witness especially for the people of this continent, a witness especially for the household of Israel; but a witness to all who read the book with faith and a sincere desire to know the truth.

Space forbids our carrying out our topic further and showing the numerous testimonies of the Christ that is contained within its pages, but we refer you to the index in the back of the Authorized Edition, under the three headings of "Jesus," "Christ," and the "Messiah." Here we learn, in addition to the above, that the prophets had hope of glory hundreds of years before the coming of Christ. Atonement and salvation are only through him. The resurrection is through him, and in him is death swallowed up, for he is the light and life of the world.

Lamoni, the Home of Graceland College

Lamoni is an old and respected name in church history. The community of Lamoni has long been a mecca toward which the eyes of the people have turned. More than fifty years ago, members of the Latter Day Saints Church began to settle in Decatur County, on land which surrounds the present site of the town of Lamoni. On June 1, 1871, the first United Order of Enoch published the results of the work of a committee which had been appointed at the conference before to select a suitable tract for the furthering of their activities. Quoting loosely from the History of the Church, volume 3, page 617, we find the following:

After having traveled through two counties in Iowa and three counties in Missouri, the committee finally visited Decatur County, Iowa, and decided to locate in Fayette Township. At that time the committee had purchased twenty-five hundred acres of land. . . . The Township of Fayette lies next to the Missouri line. The soil throughout the country is good; wheat is raised, but not in abundance; corn, potatoes, oats, timothy, and clover flourish. Water is obtained at a depth of thirty to forty feet. The price of land varies from $5 to $10 for unimproved and $12 to $25 for improved farm land. A line of railway is supposed to run from Chariton, Iowa, to Cameron, Missouri, connecting with the line of the Hannibal and Saint Joseph Railway. Should this be accomplished it will place the dwellers in Decatur County within some five or six hours ride of Jackson County, Missouri. Anyone wishing to do so may find good locations in Missouri as near to the settlement as they see fit, or if they wish, anywhere on the line between there and Jackson County, Missouri.

From the foregoing, it is apparent that Lamoni was settled by the Saints as an approach to the establishment of their work in Jackson County, Missouri, as had been pointed out in revelation years before. The idea of the "gathering" has always been a prominent one with the Latter Day Saints, and thirty years or more had elapsed since they had been forcibly driven from their "chosen land" in Missouri. Yet the dream of establishing the headquarters of Zion according to divine command remained with them constantly. It seems to me there is no doubt but their choosing of this location so close to the Missouri line upon a railroad connecting directly with the old settlement of Far West, and in Jackson County, presaged the later movement of the headquarters of the church to Independence, Missouri.

Again quoting from the History of the Church, volume 4, page 120, from the pen of Joseph Smith, who with a group of church leaders visited Decatur County in 1875, we have the following:

It was a very enjoyable trip and resulted in satisfying the excursionists that the land was excellent. The crops this year are good, the people agreeable . . . and the country a delightful one to live in. . . . There are 153 members in the Lamoni Branch this fall with a good prospect of increase, as interest is awakened all over the district. We are also authorized to say that no one, be he saint or otherwise, who will not consent to the righteousness of God and the rules of right dealing of man to man is wanted there, nor will such be welcome there whether they are in or out of the church. But men, honest men—true men and women will find warm hearts and good neighbors. . . . There has not been a lawsuit during the five years of their settling there.

Referring to volume 4, Church History, page 289, Joseph Smith again writes for the HERALD of October, 1879. He speaks of his visit to Lamoni in which he mentions that the railway is practically completed to a distance of thirty miles west of Lamoni and that the "colony" has the assurance that the town will be called Lamoni, instead of Sedgwick, which had been the name of the post office established some years before.

I can not but pause for a moment to invite your rereading of these quotations from the pen of President Joseph Smith, who at that time had been the President of the church some fifteen or twenty years, to ask the reader to note particularly his reference to the type of people who were invited to settle in the new location for the church. If that injunction were complied with, as I am inclined to believe it was pretty largely, it was a significantly selective factor in the settlement of the place which was ultimately to be the home of Graceland College.

In 1882, 1883, the headquarters of the church were established at Lamoni. The majority of the leading men of the church moved there to establish their homes. The Herald Publishing House was moved to Lamoni, and the first issue of 1883 was mailed from its new location. General Conferences were held on alternate years at Lamoni until 1919, and those of us who had the privilege of residing at Lamoni or visiting it often can remember as familiar figures and acquaintances, the men of the Quorum of Twelve, such as Heman C. Smith, J. W. Wight, W. H. Kelley, and a number of others; and the patriarchs of the church; Alexander H. Smith and Frederick A. Smith; the church recorders and historians, H. A. Stebbins and Heman C. Smith; the men in the financial division of the church, E. L. Kelley, Elijah Banta, and David Dancer; and finally the men of the Presidency, Joseph Smith, F. M. Smith, and Elbert A. Smith. The influence of these men upon the public policy of the town of Lamoni, and their personal influence and that of their families upon the young men and women of the town, provided a beneficent atmosphere for the establishment of a thriving and substantial college.

November 12, 1895, the corner stone of Graceland College was laid and the building subsequently erected on a plot of ground in the southeast section of Lamoni. The erection of that building marked the first concrete step in the establishment of the college which had been advocated several times by President Joseph Smith and other leading men of the church since 1867. In 1890 there had been an attempt on the part of the town of Lamoni to build a college, but the financial backing had not been adequate and the plan had fallen through. A little later a conference resolution authorized the building of a college at Lamoni, and even before the building was completed the college was opened in quarters rented for that purpose.

Written in behalf of the college that was to be, we find in the SAINTS' HERALD, volume 32, number 26, under the date of September 4, 1895, a letter from President Joseph Smith as follows:

It is a special feature of Graceland College that in addition to the ordinary advantages of first-class academic and collegiate instruction, students will also be so situated as to secure the inestimable advantages of good moral and social surroundings. The population of Lamoni in general is composed of a class whose moral tone and aims are excellent. All of these things enter deeply into the educational question and are considered among the first in importance for the welfare of study. . . . Young people attending college at Lamoni will largely be removed from the corrupting influences that endanger so many at college away from home. The citizens as a whole are moral, upright, progressive, and enterprising. The moral atmosphere of the city is far above that of the average town or city and will im- press any for good, who make even a temporary residence while in school life.

I have quoted at length because it emphasizes the words of one who was living at the center of community activities thirty years ago, and whose interests in the establishment of a college for the church would make him a keen analyst of the environmental surroundings in which it should be founded. In view of the fact that the educational interests then founded were to live over a long period of years and the place of its establishment was of vital concern, he could not afford to blind himself to the faults or exaggerate the virtues of the community in which it was to be established. Lamoni was just such a community as he indicated, composed of citizens of high moral standards and of progressive vision. People whose morals and practical Christian lives could not help but be the most potent educational influence with which the young people of the church could come in contact.

In 1905 began the removal of the headquarters of the church from Lamoni to Independence, Missouri. One by one the leading men of the church moved away so that their homes might be near their offices and their offices at the headquarters of the church. The older officers who still maintained their homes at Lamoni, have answered the call of the Great Beyond, so that now Lamoni is the home of but very few of the leading officers of the church. Apostle John F. Garver still maintains his home here, and Apostle D. T. Williams has his home in Lamoni. In May, 1921 the Herald Publishing House was moved to Independence, thus leaving Graceland College as the last vestige of general church interest at Lamoni, which had been the temporary home of the church in the gathering of the people of Zion. The little town of Lamoni had served its purpose as a temporary headquarters of the church. It had furnished a home when it was still impractical for the church to move to Jackson County. It had received the beneficence of the splendid men and women who represented the church. It has had left indelibly upon its tradition and upon the standards of its citizens the impress of these religious pioneers.

However, such a hejira from one mecca to another can not but leave for the deserted place a grave problem of readjustment. It is true today that Lamoni has a smaller population than she had ten years ago; that there are fifteen or twenty empty houses in the town, and that the town sadly misses the inspiring leadership and support of those people who have occupied in the leading services of the church. But Lamoni is making her readjustment; she is coming to be known as one of the finest cultural centers in Iowa. While she is no longer known as the headquarters of the church, she is coming now to be known as the home of Graceland College.

Lamoni today is a thriving little rural town. She has some five or six grocery stores, as many clothing stores, two hardware stores, one furniture store, some half dozen cafes, two hotels, an unusually good printing house, and a number of minor industries. The town has a large area of paving, is electrically lighted, is widely served by water and sewer system, and is up to date in the matter of modern conveniences.

The school system is a splendid one. A large percentage of the high school graduates continue on through a year or two of college. Lamoni sends out scores of teachers to the surrounding towns and communities. It has one of the most complete musical organizations in the State. Nearly every child has some training in vocal or instrumental music. The town boasts several orchestras and claims the largest choir in Iowa.

The amusements of Lamoni center chiefly about the activities of the school, the church, and the college. Wholesome entertainment is furnished by the students in dramatic or musical productions and in literary and athletic contests. The lyceum course of the community, open to everyone, fostered by the college and the schools, brings to the people outside entertainment. The Coliseum, a building now owned by the college, is a center of community activity. In it the large social meetings and banquets are held and the productions of the school and college are presented. There are no pool halls or dance halls in the town and a moving picture only three times a week. It has been years since a road show has been shown in Lamoni.

All the good things that President Smith had to say of the people of Lamoni can be reiterated today in spite of the high tide of social revolt in practically every community.

There has been from time to time the recurrent agitation of the question of establishing industries in Lamoni. Industries such as would serve the nature of the town would be welcome. But Lamoni is gradually adjusting itself to a new and larger ideal—one that fulfills the criterion of President Joseph Smith, when he invited men, honest men, and true women, and lovers of righteousness and right dealing to settle at Lamoni. Lamoni is beginning to recognize as the hope of its future its place as a clean college town, with community pride in the beauty of its surroundings, in the efficiency of its schools and the culture of its citizens. As such it is an ideal location for a small college; it furnishes a place of retirement free from the hurrying and aggravating influence of a crowded city. It is a place where students may learn the ways of life, both historically and idealistically, and through their own activities apply the best of both to practical living. Lamoni that has played so important a part in the forward march of the church is to continue her service to the church in furnishing a home for Graceland College. She is still in a new and vital sense a mecca towards which the eyes of the Saints are turned.

How Much Taxes Should You Pay?

BY D. H. SCHMIDT

The self-evident law of consistency and justice places everyone under financial obligation to the public welfare in an amount proportionate to his financial ability; no more and no less. Where much is possessed, much is required; where little is possessed, little is required. None are excusable from taxes unless entirely insolvent. This is absolutely the only just standard or basis upon which taxes should be levied. Is it not wrong to assent to the levying of taxes on any other basis?

Assessment should be made on the net worth of the farm or other property, subtracting all mortgages and debts, and nothing should be exempted. All securities, notes, bonds, etc., should be brought to an authorized collector frequently, the taxes paid, and the instrument officially stamped, indicating payment to date, the law utterly invalidating every paper or security not bearing said stamp indicating full payment at time of presentation for collection. Believe me, with such a law not many would get out of paying these taxes.

Justice demands that there be no non-taxable bonds whatever. One sure road to the rocks, for any nation, is to put the expenses of government on taxation by taking duties, tariffs, revenues, customs, poll tax, stamp tax, tolls, gasoline tax, occupation tax, auto licenses, all kinds of licenses, per capita tax, franchises, etc., instead of direct tax on the payer's net worth. All these can in no way, shape, or form represent the payer's ability, or responsibility to society. It is self-evident that by these the individual owning most is relieved from contributing his proportion to the public welfare. It is irrational to suppose that if these richer men can not or will not bear this load, those poorer should have to make it up.

The world owes men an opportunity to make a living. These various forms of taxation bar the poorer class from their opportunity, placing privi-

Church Ushers Well Organized for Real Service

(From Church Management April, 1927, p. 390.)

Ushers in the First Presbyterian Church, Fairmount, West Virginia, are efficiently organized, as follows:

1. Chairman and secretary.
2. Periodic meetings for plans and good fellowship.
3. Be at church fifteen minutes before hour of church worship to have calendars folded for distribution; also, to greet and seat early arrivals. One failure in the past has been the late arrival of ushers, with confusion as to duties, congestion of people at the door, and many people not being ushered to their seats or given church calendars.
4. Always seat people in empty pews and as far front as possible. One failure in the past has been to usher people to partly filled pews, asking people to move over, rather than usher them to an empty pew one or more pews farther front.
5. Look at the church as a whole, rather than your aisle. If your aisle is filling up quickly and other aisles have fewer people, kindly suggest to people that they be seated in the less-crowded pews. Exceptions, where people are accustomed to certain seats.
6. Always greet people with a smile as you meet them. Away with sober faces when ushering.
7. Look out for visitors. Many present every Sunday. Be cordial. Let them remember our church as a friendly church. Use visitor's card to get names and addresses. Introduce visitors to church members.
8. Stand near doors of church after the meeting to greet people and get names. Be among the last with the minister to leave the church.

lege and business opportunity in the hands of those already better off.

Wise men who framed our Constitution declared taxation without representation to be tyranny; if that be true, what but a grosser crime is taxation without ability to pay?

The principle of justice enunciated by our Lord, that of him who has much, much should be required, justifies the levying of income, inheritance, and direct assessment taxation for all public expenses, thus distributing of the surplus for the public need.

STEWARTSVILLE, MISSOURI.

Detroit District and Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana

The first joint reunion of the Detroit District and the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District was held at the reunion grounds, Lemon Park, Indian Lake, near Vicksburg, Michigan. It was so successful that the probabilities are that another will be held next year.

The park itself is an ideal place for reunions, having nice level ground for the pitching of tents, lots of beautiful shade trees, a good ball diamond, and a good bathing beach close at hand. A roomy tabernacle takes care of the services, and a well-equipped cook shack does its part in taking care of the material necessities.

Of those who contributed to our spiritual needs were Patriarch F. A. Smith, Bishop Fred B. Blair, Apostle J. F. Garver, Sister Blanche Mesley, Elders Thomas S. Williams, and J. Charles Mottashed, of Detroit; O. J. Hawn, and H. A. Koehler. Each one of these gave us spiritual food according to his or her calling and his or her characteristics. Thus we enjoyed a well-balanced spiritual ration.

Four young folks prayer services were held in the early mornings, conducted by Apostle Garver, and were quite well attended, good interest being manifested.

Classes were conducted each morning by Elder Thomas S. Williams on the subject, "The practical application of the gospel principles"; and by Sister Mesley on "Women's contribution to the building of Zion."

The music was very ably rendered by choir and orchestra under the excellent leadership of Sister Louise Evans, of Grand Rapids. Two very fine musical programs were enjoyed. One evening an orchestra came out from Kalamazoo and gave us a program.

Recreational activities were well provided, although we were disappointed at not having the two leaders with us

9. One extra usher at Sunday school door to church to distribute church calendars.
10. Have paper and pencil to quiet small children.
11. Watch ventilation. Keep church warm and yet plenty of fresh air.
12. No moving about church during scripture reading, prayer, sermon, or singing of anthems.
13. Some calendars on front pews for children.
14. Distribute church leaflets on table after church meetings.
15. See acousticons are used. Reserve those five seats.
16. Never lose temper with queer people. Be diplomatic, patient, kind, and smile. Win people for our church.
17. Wear white carnations, dark suits, and white collars.
18. Not too fast in walking down the aisle.
19. Our ushers are fine. By teamwork and watching the above suggestions, our church can become famous for its ushers.

who were expected. There were baseball, volley ball, horse shoe games, and swimming. One evening the Boy Scouts present gave us a demonstration of the building of a camp fire which would last all night, and on another evening a marshmallow roast was enjoyed by all.

Due credit should be given to those in charge, through whose efforts the reunion was the success it was. Elder G. E. Harrington spent two weeks at the ground working to have things prepared beforehand, and those who know Brother Harrington will not need to be told that his work is no half-hearted effort. Elder E. B. Blett had the "eats" well in hand. The food was well prepared, there was plenty of it, of good variety, and reasonably priced. His careful organization made it possible to serve over four hundred people in an hour. Brother Volney Glidden had charge of the grounds and the tents, and almost every morning he could be seen kindly and courteously providing and arranging accommodations for the late arrivals. Responsibility of arranging for the services was shared by Elder Harrington and the writer.

The reunion was a great success, insomuch that we believe everyone went home feeling glad he had been there.

A. H. DUROSE.

Onset Reunion

Preceding our regular reunion period this year, meetings were held every night for one week under the supervision of our district missionary, William Patterson.

A get-together entertainment was arranged among the members on the grounds for the Friday evening preceding our opening. Music, songs, readings, and speeches were the order. A splendid feature of this entertainment was that provided by Brother and Sister Vernie Ruch and their little daughter. These good people, our brother and sister, have just returned to this country after five years' missionary work in Norway. Sister Ruch and her little daughter each sang a solo in the Norwegian tongue. Brother Ruch entertained us with a very interesting account of their experiences on their trip and in relation to their work among the people of that country. We have been delighted as a result of having this deeply consecrated couple with us. On one other occasion Brother Ruch told of the people and their devotion to the work. The family entertained us with songs in the native tongue of that far-off land. Sister Ruch, we can freely say, has been a valuable contributor to our reunion. We can not speak too highly of the beautiful solos she rendered, which not only gladdened but won the hearts of all our people.

The presidency elected and presiding over the reunion this year was composed of Apostle D. T. Williams, Bishop A. Carmichael, Elders E. L. Traver, W. A. Sinclair, William Patterson, and T. J. Elliott.

Apostle Williams's sermons have been of a very high order and have brought spiritual ardor and blessings to the people. His quiet, kindly, genial way has won him the admiration of all. In his supervision of the young people, the work undertaken and discussed, they admit is of great value to them.

Bishop Carmichael has been at his best. At no time have we heard him to better advantage. His sermons, keen, sharp, and to the point, were freighted with much that was new to many who were present who have had long years of experience and understanding in the work. His lectures each day for one week brought the people to the front with their questions, and as a result left them more satisfied with the immediate work of stewardships and building Zion.

Brother D. T. Williams's lectures on "Duties and responsibilities of the priesthood," carrying the work of organization and the conjoint responsibility of priesthood and laity, brought a degree of unity on these subjects, we believe not before attained.

Sister Lenore Christy we also mention as having presented two general lectures before the reunion assembly. They were splendidly received and carried in special lines some much needed information. She was successful also in holding a goodly number of afternoon meetings for that particular branch, the "women's work." In this she was associated with Sister Pauline Elliott, who had been elected the local leader this year. Sister Christy rendered other service in connection with her station as departmental worker, with the kindergarten workers, the beginners, the junior church, and the young people. We are pleased and delighted with her work.

We had this year a very good effort and real success attending the work of the junior church. This was supervised by Brother T. J. Elliott, and he was assisted by Sister Margaret Roberts. The way in which the children memorized and recited the lessons given them brought real joy to all who were witnesses, but especially repaid those who had given their time to this line of work.

We can not speak, we feel, the praises sufficient to commend the very splendid work among the children by Sister Patterson. We were most fortunate in having her with us this year. She, with her able corps of assistants, carried through a splendid program of instruction, and also the making of things, weaving baskets, etc. Sister Patterson is in no new field in this line of endeavor; her experience as teacher helped provide for us this year one of our best and most qualified workers. Her children's entertainment was a surprise to everyone.

Our own Florence Leeland had charge of the little tots. Sister Florence also serves out of the rich field of her experience, and you know, as touching her work, what Florence does is done well.

All these workers and others, perhaps overlooked and thereby not mentioned, are worthy of the highest praises for their contributions and the making of these phases of our reunion a success.

The meetings of the Sabbath Days were well attended and of a highly spiritual order. In fact, the Saints in these meetings and the everyday prayer services giving their contributions, presented for us the real church in its power and spiritual activity. We have one report to make of what seemed to be nearly the crowning glory of this work. On the morning of August 4 in the prayer service, both Sister and Brother E. L. Traver spoke of their blessings from God and their great desires to serve him and render in every way all that God had asked of them; they stated they were now ready to take up the work of fully consecrated stewards in the work of God. This seemed almost to electrify the audience, and why not? Such a wonderful declaration, made so earnestly, so sincerely, known to all present to be truly self-consecration to the work and to God, caused the Spirit to affect all present. Would we had many more good brethren and sisters, brave and God-fearing, ready to take this step!

A splendid athletic program was provided by George Sinclair and Bert Cummings. Nearly every day some real sport was indulged in, when it did not rain. Saturday's finals were the best we have had. George also helped in the games, as did Brother Patterson and others. In this work and others Brother Patterson had his hands full. The Boy Scouts literally climbed on his back, and down poor "Pat" went, down in the sand, down but not out. Every day these boys had a merry time. Hikes were the order, swimming every day, parties and outings at different times for all grades of children and young folks.

Two joint prayer meetings by juniors and young people were held out in the open on that famous spot, "No man's land." The young people insist on having these meetings and then insist on having the responses as nearly one hundred per cent as possible. Not a bad indication, and we do all we can to encourage them. The young people also had their own outing and prayer meeting.

The work was big with promise this year. We feel sure the most spiritual reunion we have had for years has been closed only a short time.

A change will be in vogue for the coming year. By vote it was decided to have the reunion under the supervision of the district presidency with two other members elected by the body, associated. All preparations for future work that of the coming year will be taken up by the new committee at its meeting to be held Labor Day.

One fine feature we had this year was a branch of associated stores at which we could buy our commodities at our own stand and our folks share the profits. This store was ably managed by A. O. Toombs. PRESS COMMITTEE.

Florida Reunion

The reunion of the Florida District convened at the Alaflo Branch Saturday July 29, at 10 a. m.

Brothers A. D. McCall, J. W. A. Bailey, and E. A. Curtis were chosen to preside. After the business session, the afternoon was devoted to recreation and other activities. The campers were pitching their tents, and all were getting ready for a busy week of reunion activity.

Brother M. M. Turpen arrived Saturday evening and preached for us his inspirational sermon on "Love." The theme of stewardship and tithing was one given in due season, for we feel that if our members could grasp the beautiful plan and pay the tenth which the Lord requires, then seek to live on a stewardship basis, not only would we have more missionaries in this part of the Lord's vineyard, but we would also become a prosperous people and be blessed in health.

We were privileged to hear the wonderful words of admonition and encouragement given in tongues. We were told that the Lord was indeed pleased with many things his children had done, and were exhorted to be faithful, enduring all things and living according to the plan given of the Lord; then we would be led as the children of Israel, unto Zion.

To look at Brother Turpen's hoary head, one could hardly realize the enthusiastic boyish spirit he has, and to hear his discourses is a spiritual feast.

It was decided to continue the reunions at Dixonville for a period of five years, and so we feel sure that the coming reunions will be even better than the past ones, because we can look forward to a definite place and make necessary plans and improvements. This year the grounds are very much improved. We now have baseball ground and a volley ball court, which add much to the recreational part of the gathering. The church ground has been fenced, making it safe for small children. As one stops to listen, the happy voices of children echo throughout the ground.

Brother Ammon White and Brother E. A. Curtis arrived Monday evening and were greeted with broad smiles and a hearty welcome.

Brother A. D. McCall is conducting the morning session of class work, his theme being "Morality," and he pointed out the fact that this word in its broader sense is indeed one of vast importance and that it behooves every Saint to grasp at least a part of the meaning.

Brother Curtis has charge of the 2.30 class. He comes to us brim full of enthusiasm and has created quite a discussion in regard to the full meaning of religion, proving beyond doubt that our religion is really what we are; it is our everyday life, our every act. Brother Curtis has the real spirit to be a leader of the young and is very much appreciated in the work here.

The early morning prayer meetings are a source of great comfort to many. Here the beautiful testimonies given manifest the spirit of love for the program of the church as it stands today. We are praying that the Saints everywhere may think deeply on this subject, put their shoulders to the wheel, and move speedily to redeem Zion.

Brother Bailey was with us several days, and in his convincing way gave a very instructive discourse on the financial side of our church problems, and as it takes money to put across the program of the church, which is indeed the gospel in action, we should heed his lesson; or shall we face God and have him say to us, "Ye have robbed me in tithes and offerings!"

Brother White has given us many wonderful sermons, and we feel that the Spirit of God has filled his soul with many inspiring things to impart to our people. We are not able to relate them all, but on Sunday morning the Spirit of prophecy was given to him, and the Spirit was felt to such an extent that many expressed themselves as being spell-bound under its influence. Surely the instruction given will be of far-reaching good. He spoke of the Word of Wisdom, how blessings would be given God's children if they would heed the advice given. The Word of Wisdom must be heeded if we expect the blessings we desire. Can we not abstain from the use of tobacco, coffee, unnecessary meats, and strong drinks? Let us clean up the temple, that God's Spirit may dwell therein, for his Spirit does not dwell in an unholy temple.

Brother White could not give all the patriarchal blessings desired, as time and conditions would not permit, so we hope that we may be permitted to have him again next year.

Sister Taylor, from Evergreen, Alabama, was in charge of several classes, and her lectures on child psychology and training in general, from infancy to old age, were splendid. We very much appreciate her efforts. She is one of our home girls, and we are pleased to see her step forward to do her part in the work.

Thursday morning at 8.30 a special prayer meeting for the young was conducted by Brother Curtis, and he invited Brother Turpen to assist, for he considers him one of our young. The boys and girls demonstrated the fact that they are ready to be Zion builders by their beautiful testimonies, prayers, and efforts put forth to make the reunion successful. Surely God is calling now to armor both the aged and the youth.

Friday morning the young people gathered on the church grounds at 4.30, ready for a hike and wiener roast. It is needless to say they enjoyed this to the fullest extent. They were well chaperoned and arrived back in time for early morning prayer service.

That night a play was given, entitled "A proposal under dimculties." Other numbers were also added to the program.

Saturday afternoon many enjoyed a refreshing swim in the creek near Brewton.

The music was a pleasing feature of our reunion. It was in charge of our district leader, Sister A. D. McCall.

Eighteen precious souls were conducted through the waters of baptism. Most of these were promising young boys and girls, and the Spirit witnessed to several of our ministry that some of these young people would be used as instruments in the hand of God for the accomplishing of his work. Several others expect to be baptized later.

The reunion was a wonderful success, and many pledged a consecration of their lives to this work, by standing. The beautiful Spirit was ever present. May God help us so to live that our next reunion will be a better one. It is up to us to answer the question: Shall I be a consecrated helper? We trust that as such all shall be engaged in the work.

Western Nebraska Reunion

The reunion of Western Nebraska District, held at North Platte, from July 22 to 31, was well attended, Saints coming from north, south, east, and west. In the past some have spoken of changes that, were they initiated, would help greatly, such as being more friendly to all present. Every Saint seemed happy at this gathering, and some say this year's reunion was the best had at North Platte.

Elders Shakespeare and E. F. Robertson were the speakers. Brother Shakespeare had his picture slides each evening, and these were enjoyed by all.

The Department of Women was represented by Sisters E. F. Robertson, Jessie Morant, and others. The junior church was well managed, and on Friday afternoon a nice little picnic was had for the junior church. All were invited, and a fine time was had.

Some of the Saints live so far away they could not attend the reunion all the time, and farm duties kept others away part time. Some were present from the East who had not before come to our gathering.

It is to be hoped that all who can will come and help make the next reunion the best ever. It is thought by some that a cook tent should be arranged and run like the one had in the sand hills years ago when Brother J. A. Gunsolley was with us. This arrangement would help Saints who come from a long distance.

Elder E. F. Robertson and wife stayed part of the week after the reunion and held meetings.

MRS. W. A. STODDARD.

Southwestern Kansas—Winfield

Once more the Southwestern District's reunion, held at Winfield, Kansas, has passed into history, and that gloriously.

We started off with a sacramental service held in the Winfield church. The afternoon service of preaching was held in the splendid park in which our reunion was conducted. The evening service, as well as all the rest of our services, was held in the great auditorium, which is something like the Onset Tabernacle, only the Winfield Auditorium is larger; and no matter how hot the day may be, it is always cool in this spacious building.

The district president, E. L. Barraclough, had charge of all matters pertaining to the reunion. The women folks of Winfield did a fine piece of work in supplying our needs and wants, and we hope as the years go by they will be given better tools with which to work, so as to make their work easier.

Our preaching staff consisted of Bishop C. J. Hunt, John F. Sheehy, George Jenkins, and Peter S. Whalley. We can not speak too highly of Brother Hunt's services; especially did we enjoy his talks on stewardships. We surely did get close together and become acquainted. Brother John Sheehy, with his splendid personality and happy smile, won all our hearts, especially those of our young people, and the desire is that he come back to us next year. Brother Jenkins, our district missionary, who is a lovable man of God, gave us unstintingly of his long experience, and he was at his best, and we ourself fitted in whenever opportunity offered.

The day started at six each morning with a young people's prayer service, Brothers Sheehy and Whalley in charge, and one morning we were favored with the help of our talented young brother, Lawrence Brockway. Another morning we had a splendid hike led by Joe Newman. When we had walked about five miles, we had prayer and then roasted wieners and marshmallows, Brother Sheehy cracking jokes and telling riddles. On our way back to camp, we stopped at a farmhouse to drink water, and sang two of our songs for the farmer's wife. She would like to have had us stay longer, but we wanted to make camp by noon.

We had regular prayer service at half past eight each day, followed by stewardship class, then preaching service. And at two each afternoon there was some subject of an intellectual character. Sister Doctor Barraclough gave us a splendid talk on health and how to keep it, and it was all in line with our stewardship plan. These talks should rank on a level with our preaching. Sister Whalley gave us a talk on welfare work, which was much enjoyed; welfare activities are becoming an important feature of our work. After these classes, at three o'clock recreation was in order; our volley ball net was set up, and we went at it. Among the men folks Brother Sheehy was the star player, and among the ladies Juanita Deck was easily the leader.

We had visitors from different places: the Swains and the Storms, from Oklahoma; Sister Dillee, from Sun City, Kansas; Doctor Cockran and family, from the city of Pratt, Kansas. We would like to meet these people again. The last Saturday and Sunday many visitors came from Wichita, and we were glad to see them.

Two of the good things we especially enjoyed were the lantern slides of Graceland, Brother Sheehy lecturing on these slides, and a good little play given by six Temple Builders, of Wichita. The name of the play was "Truants," and it was directed by Brother William C. Holsworth. These young people came from the city of Wichita in a truck in the drenching rain and somewhat muddy roads. A special feature of the plan was that three of the girls had to take men's parts, and of course were dressed for the occasion, and anyone not knowing them would not have recognized them as real girls. Their acting was good, and they were word perfect. Their expression and features were all that could be desired. The star actor, in our opinion, was Miss Dorris Badford. Drama is her gift, and we hope to see her in bigger work in the future.

On the last Sunday of our reunion, the Grand Army of the Republic veterans and the Spanish War veterans met in the park and conducted very impressive ceremonies of inducting the Grand Army veterans into honorary membership with the Spanish War veterans. They had several speakers, but they lacked a minister and requested Brother Barraclough to furnish them one. He gave them Brother Whalley, who is himself a World War veteran, and he spoke to them, and was more than well received and many compliments were given him.

Evening came around, and it was our last. Brother Sheehy was again our spaker, and he was as strong in his last talk as he was in his first. Many strangers were present, and we all rejoiced exceedingly. So ended a fine reunion. We hope we can do even better next year.

Northeastern Illinois

The closing day of our reunion found a large, happy crowd enjoying the beautiful sunshine that so wonderfully graced our gathering. The day's services were ushered in by a sunrise prayer service on the banks of a nearby creek, the young people thus engaging being under the leadership of Brothers Roscoe Davey and J. F. Wildermuth.

At the regular morning prayer service closely following this, the attendance was all that could be expected. A spirit of deep devotion and humble gratitude was evidenced in every testimony and prayer.

Sister Ethel Williamson and Brother Sidney Barrows were in charge of the Sunday school period, functioning in their capacity of district officers. Sisters Lillie R. Nelson, Hattie Bell, Olive Sherman, and Doris Wildermuth, together with Brothers H. P. W. Keir and Orrin Hayer, held the attention and directed the activities of the various classes.

The sermon of the morning hour was the contribution of Brother L. O. Wildermuth, president of the Northern Wisconsin District. Brother Wildermuth was in fine form and gave us one of his characteristically forceful sermons, driving home with telling effect the obligations of sainthood.

For the afternoon service, Brother Roscoe Davey, district missionary, occupied with a talk on "giants and grasshoppers." He identified for us some of the giants in the path-way of progress and told us of the methods to be used in disposing of them.

The closing service of the day was a summing up of the good things of our reunion period. Brother David Dowker, our district president, told us of the progress of events and reminded us again of the soul-satisfaction engendered by so many of the meetings—the sermons, the prayer services, and the class meetings. It was a fitting climax to ten days of wonderful cooperation and instruction. All felt a great regret as they saw the closing scenes of the reunion of 1927 being enacted.

Especial reference should be made to some of the special features of our reunion. Under the capable and devoted direction of Sister Ruby Newman, district chorister, the music of the reunion was made most interesting and instructive. From time to time special numbers were provided. The closing day, for instance, brought before us the district choir, Sister Nell Atkinson Kelley, the Sisters Okerlind of K L D S fame, Mrs. Street, and Brothers George Anway, Frank B. Almond, and Marion Blakely. All of these artists should feel that they have contributed in no small degree to the atmosphere and to the wonderful success of the reunion.

The recreational features of the camp were under the direction of Brother Roy J. Healy. A boys' camp and a girls' camp were in operation throughout the reunion period and proved most interesting, while camp fires, marshmallow roasts, and hikes were on the program in sufficient number to prove recreation and variety for all.

For the services of the special workers assigned by headquarters, we certainly owe a deep sense of appreciation. The lectures of Brother A. B. Phillips on stewardships, the class work of Brother and Sister Etzenhouser on social adjustments in Zion, and heredity and eugenics, as well as the exposition by Brother E. J. Gleazer of the problems of industrial Zion, were all highly instructive and of a character calculated to enlighten the class workers along the line of preparation for Zion, the ultimate in group service. Many of the points brought out by these talented and devoted instructors were new to their hearers, and it is believed that the interest thus enkindled will continue to animate these hearers and to urge them on to further study of the topics discussed.

A report of this reunion would not be complete without mentioning the fact that we had visitors from several adjoining States. As our information goes, we had people in attendance from Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, and Wisconsin, as well as a fine representation from our own district. We were glad to have these visiting Saints and trust that they enjoyed their stay as much as we did.

We are already looking forward to a bigger and better reunion in 1928. Plans are being worked out for additional permanent improvement of the grounds and equipment.

Central Michigan Reunion

On Friday, August 5, we, Brother and Sister Hal. Grosfield with myself and little son, arrived in Coleman, a town about forty miles southwest of Saginaw. Everyone gave us the usual glad hand in the usual Central Michigan style. It had been some years since we had seen the Coleman church, and it truly made us rejoice to see the dear, familiar building, a large, well-built edifice, probably somewhere between forty and fifty years old. There it stood as imposing as ever, never showing its age, it seemed to me. As we entered the door I looked for the familiar old sign, fearful that in the past years it might have been removed. But there it was in large, plain letters, each letter about ten inches high, written on the wall above our heads so that one's eyes would fall upon it directly upon entering the building—one word Welcome. Then I turned to look over the top of the doors that we had entered, and there I saw the words Come Again.

Yes, Coleman always did know how to make folks happy and welcome, and as the days of the reunion went by, we realized they still have that gift. After looking over the church, we eagerly started upon a tour of investigation to see what else we could see and who had arrived.

Is it not thrilling to want to be everywhere at once? Our feet seemed not to carry us fast enough. There were many to talk to, many whom we have not seen for years, and there was much news to hear. Perhaps there were some whom we have looked forward to seeing, and we learn the sad news that they have gone to their reunion on the other side. But saddest of all is it to hear of some brother or sister, who in times past has been a polished shaft in the hands of the Lord, now grown careless and indifferent because he or she has let himself or herself become discouraged and has lost the vision of the work, forgetting that only through our being tried and standing the test are we enabled to win the race. Then there are those who are still carrying on, no matter what comes. They become stronger with each trial. They have a greater vision of the work before them, and the Lord has given them a greater understanding.

Saturday morning we were all ready, when the bell rang for breakfast at 6.45, to make a rush to line up for breakfast, which we all know is a good way to become acquainted while we wait. And great was our joy when we were close enough to put our foot on the step of the cafeteria and torment some one on the end of the line. And hungry! No wonder; because, didn't we know who the cooks were and what they could do? It is impossible to find anyone who can surpass Sisters Yeager and Grimm, with their able corps of assistants. After receiving our tray of food, we retired to the dining tent. We could hear many different subjects discussed around us, some spiritual topics, some otherwise. It is interesting to sit and listen. It always reminds me of the two women who were attending a funeral, and as the songs were being sung, they were discussing their culinary problems. Suddenly the song ceased and through the silence there came a raw, rasping voice, "Yes, I always fry my oysters in lard."

Each morning we enjoyed our prayer meetings; then classes taught by Sister Blanche Mesley, at ten in the forenoon; Elder Oliver McDowell, pastor of Flint Branch, and our "big brother," Floyd McDowell, at eleven o'clock and two in the afternoon. We wish we could express to our teachers the inspirations and strength they have given us.

We were wonderfully blessed in having Apostle Garver and family with us. He is truly a friend to all, one who understands us and our problems. He can always find time to help others.

The music was in charge of Willis Schrock, of Beaverton, assisted by H. A. Koehler and Oliver McDowell. Special numbers were provided by quartets and soloists, violinists, pianists, and the orchestra. These were much enjoyed.

One evening was given over to the merchants of Coleman, and they were all represented. They donated one hundred dollars for lumber for a large cook building. Another night was given over to the Boy Scouts, and they made a fine showing. I want to say their fine showing was not alone apparent that night, but during the reunion they were constantly on the alert to assist in everything.

Saturday night was Graceland night. The program furnished by the students was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone there.

I have hesitated about telling you of our experience on Thursday, but when I think how good God was to us, I feel I must relate it. We were all well and happy until about an hour after breakfast, then without warning we were stricken, one after the other, children and adults. Inside half an hour we had a hospital in the park. The doctor informed me there were forty sick at that time, and later on more were attacked. It was an awful sight. Some were very near death's door. We had been poisoned in some way and knew of certainty it was not in the cooking. How we got it is still a mystery.

As each one was taken sick, he called for administration and directly began to improve. Also three doctors attended us, staying with us throughout the day, until nearly all were able to be about. Next day we were feeling fine, except for much weakness. It was truly a miracle.

Sunday morning the Lord spoke to us, telling us that the enemy of the church had tried to destroy us and that only through our faith and calling upon him were we saved. Had we not done so, there were some who would have been taken in death. Oh, how it humbled us, and we felt how great was God's mercy to us, especially when we thought of how in our visiting and other ways we had failed to give the sacredness to the reunion that we should have given! We realized even though we may become careless and forgetful, God is ever watchful and forgiving.

As in the past, the meals were free. They were bountiful, well cooked, and nourishing. Each branch of the district donates its quota and collections are taken. About two or three collections were taken in the whole ten days. Last year, I understand, they were nine hundred dollars ahead after all was paid.

The reunion this year was as usual a success, the city of Coleman doing all in its power to assist the Saints, kindly turning over the large school building free of charge, also giving us the keys of the city, if we may be permitted to express their hospitality in that way.

In thinking back over the ten days we were there, we truly feel we were enriched and much better equipped to return to our work in our several branches. As we left the church, our eyes fell upon the words Come Again, and we said, "Surely I will." MRS. BYRDIE MAGARGEE.

FORDSON, MICHIGAN, 13115 Wellesley Avenue.

Nauvoo District at Nauvoo

Reunion opened Friday, August 19, with a prayer service at 9.30 a. m., with forty present. A good spirit was in attendance. Six prayers were offered, and twenty-five testimonies were given. The district presidency was in charge, assisted by Brother Gunn and Brother Sorden. The theme of the meeting was, "What has the church done for me?" which found good response.

At the eleven o'clock hour Elder F. C. Bevan was the speaker, taking as a theme, "The second mile." He enjoyed good liberty; the message was one needed for the present time.

At 7 p. m. we held our reunion business meeting; at 7.45 Elder Daniel Sorden was the speaker. His firmness and earnestness of presentation were fine.

There are five tents on the ground. We expect many more. The Nauvoo Saints are working hard with the reunion committee to make things as pleasant as possible for visitors. There is no doubt in the mind of the writer that Nauvoo is an ideal place for a reunion. It is certainly a wonderful location and a glorious place for such meetings.

Saturday, August 27, will be a big day for the young people. An invitation is extended to the young people in all parts of the country who are able to attend. If you want a good time, young people, come. You will be well treated.

The Choice

By Minnie Eugenia Warnock

Why spend life's precious hours on "fleeting toys"?
And stifle that sweet inward voice that calls
For higher walks, for wisdom's shining halls
Where endless treasures are, and lasting joys.

"God's Spirit will not always strive with man,"
But Satan's call persists unto the end.
Men list to follow where their ears they lend,
For agency is theirs since time began.

As Earth-bound souls, they flounder madly on
And seek to satisfy their senses, mere.
Choose tinsel for gold, and for bread a stone.
Few tread the lowly path of godly fear
That leads unto a glorious shining dawn
Where they may dwell without a sigh or tear.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Northern Saskatchewan District Conference

The conference of the Northern Saskatchewan District was held in Saskatoon from July 18 to 21. This conference like the one in Bethune, Saskatchewan, which was held a week earlier, was well attended. Everybody present was cheerful, and a splendid spirit prevailed throughout.

Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley and his genial companion were with us, and their assistance was much appreciated. Brother Gunsolley's sermons and institute lectures were very instructive and educational, and Sister Gunsolley gave valuable help in the Women's Department as well as in the Sunday school work. Brother Gunsolley gave a large number of patriarchal blessings, Sister Gunsolley reporting them for him. This feature of their work was also much appreciated by the Saints, there having been no patriarch in this district for a number of years.

Another whose presence in the conference was much enjoyed was our veteran brother, Elder J. J. Cornish. His smiling countenance, his infectious cheerfulness and enthusiasm, have always been stimulating and inspiring to the Saints wherever he has gone, and notwithstanding his advancing years he is still active, and his sermons have the oldtime ring. One hears such remarks as this: "What a pity that a man like Brother Cornish should ever grow old?"

Elder J. W. Davis, of the seventies, who is laboring in Manitoba and Northern Saskatchewan, was with us, and made his contribution to the work of the conference in preaching and singing, and his efforts gained for him the appreciation and friendship of the people. He has many calls for labor throughout the district.

The weather conditions were ideal. However, owing to the fact that the church was overcrowded, the heat was oppressive. This was the only drawback we had, and it was felt most in the afternoons and evenings. This difficulty will be overcome when larger quarters are obtainable.

In organizing the conference, the district presidency, Elders W. J. Cornish, Roy Bowerman, and Frederick Scott, and J. W. Davis were chosen to preside, with the provision that they complete the organization and arrange the conference program. E. Leslie Mogg, district secretary, was selected to do the secretarial work of the conference. Sister Grace Cornish was appointed to have charge of the musical features, and Brother Brant was placed in charge of the ushering.

Each day's activities began with a prayer service, all of which were good, but the one most enjoyed was the young people's prayer meeting on Saturday morning. This was a real spiritual feast.

The preaching was done by Elders J. W. Davis, J. J. Cornish, and J. A. Gunsolley, there being seven of these services. Owing to the heat, the Sunday night service was held on Brother C. E. Diggle's lawn, which proved to be a wise arrangement.

There were three business meetings, and they were controlled by a spirit of cheerfulness and courtesy, there being no unpleasantness at all. W. J. Cornish was reelected district president, with Roy Bowerman and E. L. Mogg for his associates. Elder E. L. Mogg was continued district secretary, and C. E. Diggle was reelected district treasurer and sustained as bishop's agent. Elder James Cornish continues as district superintendent of the Sunday School Department, and Arthur Gendron was elected district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Sister Lottie Diggle was recommended for reappointment to have charge of the Women's Department. The time and place of the next conference were left to be arranged by the district presidency in collaboration with the neighboring districts.

A committee was appointed to take under advisement holding a reunion in 1928, and they were given power to act. Sentiment in this district is very strong in favor of introducing the reunion work, and it is quite probable that a start will be made next year. The committee was instructed to seek the cooperation of the Southern Saskatchewan and Alberta Districts; and if this is obtained, one of the largest and best reunions in the whole church should be the result.

The women's work in this district is ably presided over by Sister Lottie Diggle. They held two very good meetings during the conference. Sisters Diggle, Whiting, and Gunsolley took prominent parts in their program. Sister Whiting, who is a graduate nurse, gave a lecture on "Tuberculosis; its prevention and cure." This was excellent and much appreciated.

The Sunday school, under the leadership of Elder James Cornish, and the Religio, under the direction of E. L. Mogg, held several sessions, all of which were very helpful. Brother and Sister Gunsolley contributed splendidly to the success of these meetings.

There are a large number of earnest and zealous Latter Day Saints in these provinces, but we need more missionary work. We are hoping the time will come when more men will be available. Our local workers are entitled to much credit for their faithfulness and splendid labors, but they likewise are too few in number.

Our conference was a source of inspiration and encouragement to all, and the Saints were loath to bid the farewells that follow adjournment.

Newspaper Notice of Elder Fligg's Meetings

The following report concerning an all-day meeting held July 31 at Neola, Iowa, was clipped from the Neola Gazette Reporter:

The tent services conducted by Elder William Fligg for the past two weeks have been full of interest, and the attendance has been splendid. Sunday, July 31, was a full day of service. Nels Johnston, of Hazel Dell, spoke at 11 o'clock, his theme being the "Signs of the times," showing the near approach of our Savior and our need for preparedness.

Picnic dinner was arranged on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Bennett, about one hundred enjoying the noonday repast. Visiting members were in attendance from Boomer, Underwood, Hazel Dell, Persia, and Council Bluffs. The 2.30 meeting was one of experience. From many of the members, some spiritual testimonies were very feelingly borne.

Evening services were in charge of Elder Chambers of Persia. He introduced the speaker, William Fligg, whose subject was "Civilization," from the standpoint of the home, church, education, industry, and state. For one and one-half hours the speaker showed from current events the spirit of the times in which we live and the need of the reign of the Prince of Peace, to bring about good will to all men.

The meetings are to continue another week.

Explaining a Previous Statement

On page 941 of the HERALD for August 10, under the heading, "Anamosa Branch Flourishing," the idea is carried that Anamosa Branch had been disorganized. This is not intended, as the branch had never been declared disorganized; but it has recently, according to report of some of its members, taken on considerable new life. It would be more correct to say the branch has been rejuvenated, or that it has renewed or increased its activity. Brother Albert Welch, of Center Junction, is still president of Anamosa Branch.

Gives a Reason for His Hope

[We are reproducing below a letter written by Elder Leon A. Gould, of Minnesota, in answer to one of those written by one whose faith has been shocked. The HERALD wishes to call attention to the similarity in tactics of those who are making a practice of spreading their lack of faith to the tactics of the "modern," who asks a dozen questions which he calculates will shatter faith in the God of the Scriptures, but who does not supply a philosophy to take its place; or at best presents nothing which does not call for the exercise of more credulity than the philosophy he attacks. The writer of this note is not particularly concerned because there are passing over the country and among the Saints these poisonous, destructive missiles. They cause the man who has received a knowledge of the work of the Lord some uneasiness for a time if his armor has not been kept bright, but if, instead of grasping at this philosophy of unbelief (if it may be referred to as a philosophy), the recipient "examines himself, whether he be in the faith," the almost inevitable result is that the Christian armor is brightened, polished, and its possessor stands firm, for he beholds his unobtrusive faith standing the shock of the missiles hurled against it, and again he feels the joy and peace of the possession of that which courts the Spirit of the living God; that which tends to do good, to love truth and peace, and to seek it out from the mass of material presented for the consideration of every man who is unwilling to go blindly through the world.—R. J. L.]

BEMIDJI, MINNESOTA, March 20, 1927.

Dear Sister: After reading your letter of recent date, I felt a desire to put into words some of my convictions in regard to priesthood, that you may understand what priesthood, the order of church organization, and the magnitude of this latter-day restoration mean to me.

Origin of Priesthood

To better understand what priesthood is, let us go back to the beginning. First, I want to present a picture, not primarily because it is claimed to have been given by inspiration in answer to fasting and prayer for knowledge of the origin of priesthood and what it means, but rather because it fits in so perfectly with that which is given in the record as to be self-convincing. My presentation of it is necessarily brief, but I will try to get the main points. The one to whom it was given saw himself, freed from the body and hurrying through space, joined by others from time to time seemingly hurrying in the same direction and intent upon the same purpose, as if in answer to a summons. In due course they were ushered into a large building where a vast concourse of people was assembling. The vast assembly coming to order, his attention was directed to the rostrum, where the presiding officers sat, in whom he recognized the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

As he wondered, the Father arose and addressed the throng, telling them of a fallen world to be, and the necessity for some one to offer himself as a Savior of the world to redeem the world, and called for volunteers. Immediately an individual of large and pleasing proportions, wide of forehead and intelligent of countenance, head and shoulders above others of the congregation, arose and walked with all the assurance of one who thinks highly of himself down through the aisle to the front of the assembly and thus addressed the Father: "I will go and redeem mankind, and not a soul shall be lost; but give me thy glory." A look of displeasure crossed the Father's face as he replied, "My glory is mine. My glory will I not give to another." Whereupon the Son of the Morning, for it was he, walked back to his place in the congregation, his face black with anger. Immediately the Son arose, and standing with quiet dignity before the Father, said: "Father, send me! I will go and redeem mankind, and the glory be thine." His offer was accepted, a chair was placed to the fore of the rostrum, the Son led to it, and the Father and the Holy Ghost laid hands on him and ordained him to be the Redeemer of the World, giving him authority and power to bring to pass the redemption of all those who would believe on him, telling him that this authority should also be given men who should be called to represent him on earth as his ministers wherever the gospel should be preached, and should be known as the "holy priesthood, after the order of the Son of God."

The Priesthood upon the Earth

According to the Inspired Translation of the Scriptures, this priesthood was held by all the ancient worthies, from Adam down, and was handed down from father to son, until at least the days of Moses, when we read that "Moses and the holy priesthood were taken out of their midst." We read something of this holy priesthood, the priesthood of Melchisedec which was after the order of the Son of God, both in the Inspired Translation and in the Book of Mormon, and the two books are in perfect agreement. First let me quote from the Inspired Translation:

"And this is the genealogy of the sons of Adam, who was the son of God, with whom God himself conversed. And they were preachers of righteousness, and spake and prophesied, and called upon men everywhere to repent."—Genesis 6: 23, 24. And God said to Adam, "Thou art after the order of him who was without beginning of days or end of years." (See verses 67 to 71.) "And the Lord ordained Noah after his own order." (See chapter 8, verses 6 and 7.) "Now Melchisedec was a man of faith, who wrought righteousness. . . . And thus having been approved of God he was ordained an high priest after the order which God made with Enoch, it being after the order of the Son of God; which order came, not by man, nor the will of man; neither by father nor mother; neither by beginning of days nor end of years; but of God. . . . And now, Melchisedec was a priest of this order."—Genesis 14: 17-40. God also made covenant with Abraham: "And remember the covenant which I have made with thee; for it shall be an everlasting covenant; and thou shalt remember the days of Enoch thy father."—Genesis 13: 12, 13. By this we see that Adam and his sons were preachers of righteousness, men of the holy priesthood, after the order of the Son of God; Noah, also, we are told, as it was given to Enoch; Melchisedec, a high priest of the same order, and then it is established with Abram, and his household for an everlasting covenant, "that in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." The Book of Mormon tells us that "they have taken away from the gospel of the Lamb, many parts which are plain and most precious; and also many covenants have been taken away." (1 Nephi 3: 168, 169.) Christ also said, as you quoted, that while the law of Moses had been fulfilled in him, his covenant had not been fulfilled. Listen now, to the covenant: "Now this same priesthood which was in the beginning, shall be in the end of the world also."—Genesis 6: 8. This is the means through which Abram and his seed were to be a blessing to the families of the earth. This covenant, at the time Christ was speaking to the Nephites, had not been fulfilled. It is now in the process of fulfillment in these latter days, when through the restoration of the gospel, and restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, this holy priesthood has been restored that it may be in the end of the world also, as in the beginning.

Four hundred and thirty years after this covenant with Abram was made, Moses and the holy priesthood were taken out of the midst of Israel, and they were left under the rule of the law of Moses until Christ came. But notice that Paul says, "And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, can not disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect."—Hebrews 3. No, although the Mosaic law was introduced to bridge the gap from the days of Moses until the days of Christ, it could not disannul the promise made to Abram nor make of no effect the covenant confirmed before of God in Christ by the laying on of hands when Christ was ordained to be a high priest for ever, this same priesthood to be given to his servants upon the earth, and to be in the end of the world also as in the beginning. So when Christ fulfilled the law of Moses, the covenant remained, and he brought back again the holy priesthood, the priesthood of Melchisedec after the order of the Son of God, and was, as Paul says, "The apostle and high priest of our profession." Paul was speaking to the "holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling," the holy priesthood after the order of the Son of God, they being apostles and high priests also, that being "our profession."

Book of Mormon on High Priesthood

To further identify this high priesthood, we quote from the Book of Mormon:

"Alma was appointed to be the chief judge; he being also the high priest; his father having conferred the office upon him, and had given him the charge concerning all the affairs of the church."—Mosiah 13:63. Later "Alma . . . confined himself wholly to the high priesthood of the holy order of God."—Alma 3:28. Alma "ordained priests and elders by laying on his hands according to the order of God, to preside and watch over the church." "The Lord God ordained priests, after his holy order, which was after the order of his Son."—Alma 4:1, 6-63. "Taking upon them the high priesthood of the holy order, which calling, and ordinance, and high priesthood, is without beginning or end; and thus they became high priests for ever, after the order of the Son, the only begotten of the Father."—Alma 9:72, 73. "Concerning the holy order of this high priesthood; there were many who were ordained and became high priests of God."—10:1. "Yes, humble yourselves even as the people in the days of Melchisedec, who was also a high priest after this same order which I have spoken, who also took upon him the high priesthood for ever."—10:7.

This harmonizes the Book of Mormon with the Inspired Translation as to the identity of the high priesthood that should be in the end of the world as it was in the beginning. We have believed in a restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. If that restitution fails to restore all that was had in all the dispensations of God's providence to the children of men as it relates to the gospel of Christ, it is not living up to its mission. The restitution is to bring back all, everything, that there may be a consummation of all things, a complete setting up of Christ's kingdom in its organic form. It is not the purpose of the restitution, as some seem to think, to eliminate a part of the covenant of Christ; it is not to take away from that which the prophets have spoken, and tell us that this same priesthood is not to be in the end of the world as at the beginning. I never could be happy in a movement that had lost sight of the covenant of God, and eliminated it from their confession of faith.

If this covenant that was made in the beginning is not to be realized, then the world is doomed; for said the angel: "And I will plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse," quoting from Malachi. Is that promise made to the fathers concerning the priesthood planted in your heart and mine? It should be. It is a precious promise. The Book of Mormon tells us, however, that while many were ordained unto that priesthood, many others there were who failed to make themselves worthy, and hence failed to receive their ordination, a blessing which they might have had.

High Priests Among Men

Your contention that Christ was the last high priest because Paul speaks of Christ as "the high priest of our profession," sounds queer to me. If that statement eliminates all high priests after Christ, it eliminates all apostles, too, for Paul says, "Consider the apostle and high priest of our profession, Christ Jesus." If I accept that as meaning no more high priests, I must accept it as meaning no more apostles. In that case, what is the Church of Christ doing with apostles? I'd like to know. But what does the Bible say concerning men holding high priesthood?

"For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God. . . . And no man taketh this honor unto himself except he that is called of God as was Aaron."—Hebrews 5. "For this Melchisedec was ordained a priest after the order of the Son of God. . . . And all those who are ordained unto this priesthood are made like unto the Son of God, abiding a priest continually."—Hebrews 7:3. Strange language if there are to be no more high priests after the order of Melchisedec, don't you think? He does not say all those who were ordained; but "are ordained," present tense. Then why not expect, why not believe, why not be assured that in the restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, there would be restored also that which was prophesied by the high priests of old, that their priesthood should be in the end of the world also as at the beginning?

Organization

Organization is necessary in every movement. In fact, there can be no successful movement without organization, notwithstanding some hold opposite views. I was at one time talking with a Church of God man who claimed they had no church organization, and that there should be absolutely no church organization whatever. Before we were through, he admitted they had a headquarters where they sent their tithing and to which their traveling ministers reported. They could not get along without an organization of some kind, and rejecting God's plan of organization they had substituted a man-made thing.

Permit me to quote from one of the revelations, not asking you to accept it as a revelation if you do not believe them to be authentic after 1835, or after 1829, as the case may be, but accept it as a matter of common sense, justified by common experience, for our experience tells us it is true without the thought of its being a revelation: "Of necessity there are presidents, or presiding officers, growing out of, or appointed of, or from among those who are ordained to the several offices in these two priesthoods." No one, I hope, will deny such a self-evident truth as that. So a quorum of deacons chooses one of its number to preside over the quorum. He is one of them, they are his equal in authority and power, and yet by common consent he is recognized as the president of their quorum, sits as chairman, calls to order, signs their documents, and as pertaining to the quorum officiates in the usual duties belonging to a presiding officer. So with every quorum from deacon up. Take the Quorum of Twelve Apostles, one is chosen to preside over their quorum. He is one of their number; they are each equal in priesthood, authority, and power, all brethren laboring together in the same calling in the church, but by common consent he is recognized as their presiding officer and performs as pertaining to the quorum all the duties of a presiding officer. To maintain a Quorum of Twelve Apostles there must be order, and you can not have order without organization, and you can not have organization without a presiding officer. Let us carry it further: If, then, it is necessary that each quorum have its presiding officer in order that it may exist as a quorum and function in an orderly manner, what about the whole body of the priesthood? Shall it be organized in its various divisions, and then each left to act as it pleases, in independent action? Hardly that. Just as it is necessary that there should be presiding offices growing out of, or appointed of, or from among the members of the various quorums, so is it self-evident truth that there must be a presiding head over the whole body of the priesthood, organized as they are in their various units, in order that uniformity of action may obtain. Listen:

"Three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office . . . from a quorum of the presidency of the church."

"The twelve traveling counselors are called to be the twelve apostles . . . and they form a quorum equal in power to the three presidents previously named."

"The seventy . . . form a quorum equal in authority to that of the twelve especial witnesses, the apostles just named. And every decision made by either of these quorums must be by the unanimous voice of the same; that is, every member in each quorum must agree to its decisions, in order to make their decisions of the same power or validity one with the other."

"The standing high councils at the stakes of Zion form a quorum equal in authority in the affairs of the church, in all their decisions, to the quorum of the presidency or to the traveling high council."

"The high council in Zion forms a quorum equal in authority in the affairs of the church, in all their decisions, to the councils of the twelve at the stakes of Zion."

These various bodies of men, holding the priesthood of Melchisedec after the order of the Son of God, each body represented as having equal authority and power, are not left to their own independent action, but one body is chosen to preside over the whole body of the high priesthood. Of necessity there must be presiding heads. There is no getting around it. These organized bodies of men are all as bodies equal in authority and power, they are working together in a common cause; by common consent one is recognized as their presiding head, having, as pertaining to the high priesthood, the rights and duties belonging to a presiding head. Why not a president of the high priesthood? Is it not logical? Is it not reasonable? Is it not just what our common experience teaches us we should expect?

"There must needs be presiding elders to preside over those who are of the office of an elder, and also priests to preside over those who are of the office of a priest, and also teachers to preside over those who are of the office of a teacher, in like manner, and also the deacons; wherefore from deacon to teacher and from teacher to priest, and from priest to elder, severally as they are appointed, according to the covenants and commandments of the church; then comes the high priesthood which is the greatest of all, wherefore, it must needs be that one be appointed of the high priesthood, to preside over the priesthood; and he shall be called president of the high priesthood of the church, or in other words, the presiding high priest over the priesthood of the church." If we are to eliminate a presidency of the high priesthood, then we must eliminate the high priesthood, because we can not have a priesthood without order, and we can not have order without presidency. So out goes the twelve, the seventy, the high priests, the stake councils, the high council in Zion, and the elders, for elders are an appendage to the high priesthood, and if the high priesthood is done away with entirely there can be no appendage, nothing to append to.

Why?

It is very easy to ask why was not this or that so, or why is it not in the New Testament, or Book of Mormon; or why, if a man held the high priesthood as Enoch did, do they not exercise the same authority and power? Everybody can ask hundreds of whys that nobody can answer, but they get us nowhere. I do not know the why of all the queries.

I do not know why the Book of Commandments differs so widely from the Doctrine and Covenants. But I do have my opinion, and that is this: that there was either some one most criminally careless on the one hand, or most damnably crooked on the other. There are some facts that stand out, however. The Book of Commandments came through those, some of whom were at one time or another opposed to Joseph Smith the prophet, some against the introduction of high priests after the order of Melchisedec or after the order of the Son of God, some against his being made president of the high priesthood, some against even the publication of the revelations themselves. (Read David Whitmer's address.) And after it came through their hands, thou beholdest and lo, many plain and precious things were taken therefrom, and many covenants also! What was the force that eliminated many of these plain and precious things and the covenants from the Bible? You answer. What was the force that took the lost manuscript of the first part of the Book of Mormon and so changed the wording that they set a trap for the prophet, in a vain effort to make the world believe that he could not translate the same thing twice alike? You answer. What was the force that eliminated many of these same plain and precious things from the revelations given in these last days, and changed the wording, which makes it appear that the Prophet doctored up his own revelations from time to time to suit his changing desires? You answer.

Another fact stands out. We have the very man who printed the Book of Commandments on record as testifying to the correctness and truthfulness of the Doctrine and Covenants; and this was after a committee had been appointed to compare all revelations with the original manuscripts. Do we have him on record as to the correctness of the Book of Commandments? Joseph Smith, I know, is quoted as saying that he found only a few errors in the Book of Commandments; but there is no evidence that he said this after having made a careful comparison of the Book of Commandments with the originals. Try it out yourself. Take chapter 44 of the Book of Commandments, or some other section with which you may be most familiar in the Doctrine and Covenants, read it without comparison, and see if you can tell that there is a difference. I have tried it, and have been surprised at the great difference, which I could not detect by reading alone.

You ask why, if men hold the high priesthood now, do not they exercise power equal to that of Enoch? There may be various reasons. One may be the condition of the people among whom they labor. Enoch, you remember, was backed by the cooperation and righteousness of a people who were eventually translated because of their perfection; while Christ, himself "the Apostle and High Priest of our profession," as you will admit, and surely the equal of Enoch, in another period of the world, and mingling with another class of people, found it impossible to do many mighty miracles, but only "laid his hands on a few sick folk and healed them." So for every "why" you ask, I could ask another. You may ask why the Bible and Book of Mormon do not mention a first presidency if they had one, and I could ask why the Book of Mormon does not mention several officers that are found mentioned in the New Testament. The fact of the matter is, we do not know why, and probably never will. For that matter it is not necessary that we should know why. Neither is it absolutely necessary that there should have been a first presidency at Jerusalem, or a quorum of twelve in America in order that men might be taught in the ways of salvation. Let me explain: It is recognized by us as a standard doctrine of the church that where there are six members, one of whom is an elder, there may the church be represented in an organized form. As an organized branch, they have the right and authority to preach the gospel, administer in the ordinances essential to the salvation of souls, and under the direction of God to grow to a more complete organization. Very good. A district, then, composed of one or more branches, would also have the same right and powers, or a stake, or a combination of stakes, districts, and branches, with or without twelve apostles or a first presidency. That is, the presidency might be removed, and the twelve go into apostasy, still there would be the divine authority represented in the stakes, districts, and branches which is necessary to carry on the work of regeneration, and of salvation, and under the command of God to expand to a complete organization.

The church of Jerusalem, then, with its twelve apostles, could have completed an organization at any time under the direction of God; whether it did or not, the record does not say, and it is immaterial—theirs was not the time of the restitution of all things.

We have a few scriptures that might indicate a first presidency: "James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars." James in a general assembly at Jerusalem rendered a decision, saying, "This is my sentence"—a function of the president over the high priesthood, where the high priesthood assembled with their presiding officer in the chair. Peter, James, and John held the keys of the high priesthood, and bestowed them upon Joseph Smith. (See church history and revelation.) I might ask why Peter, James, and John? Why not some of the other apostles, if Peter, James, and John always remained of the twelve, with no presiding responsibility over the high priesthood? Can you tell?

I might ask, What were the twelve men chosen by Christ on the American Continent? Can you tell? Why doesn't it say? The Book of Mormon calls them disciples; it does not call them apostles. Anyone who follows Christ is a disciple, ordained or not. Why are we not told what they were? For one thing it is not necessary that we should know. If we understand the order of the priesthood, we understand that they were a part of that order, authorized to officiate in all the ordinances necessary to the salvation of souls. Does it matter to you or me if they were a stake high council composed of twelve high priests after the order of the Son of God, having authority equal to the twelve at Jerusalem, or to the first presidency, and in the absence of both officiating in all that pertains to the salvation of souls and the care of the church?

Remember, too, that they were not living in the times of the restitution of all things. Then the fragmentary organizations in Christ's time at Jerusalem and in America, and the fragmentary organization now, if under the direction of God, were and are authorized to minister for the salvation of souls. But we should have all the officers found in the New Testament church, the Book of Mormon times, and more, because we are living in a greater dispensation, when all things shall be brought together in one in Christ Jesus. Up to and including the present time, there never has been, so far as I can learn, a full and complete organization of the kingdom of God upon the earth; for the restitution is not yet complete, and the latter-day restoration is only in process of complete organization. Do you know of any body of people whose organization is complete? I do not; have never heard of one, speaking of course of religious bodies, organized after the divine pattern. But we are in process of reaching that perfect organization. We can not do it by cluttering up our pathway with whys that no one can answer and whose answer is immaterial anyhow; it would only confirm that which we ought to know without waiting for an answer.

I am willing that the church in Christ's time should have been governed by a quorum of twelve apostles if you will allow me to accept them in the light of section 104, the same being equal in authority and power in the affairs of the church with the first presidency. I am willing that the church in America after Christ should have been governed by a council of twelve high priests, if you will permit me to accept the same as having authority and power equal to the twelve at Jerusalem, or to the presidency over the high priesthood, in all the affairs of the church. I am willing that in every dispensation the gospel may have been preached and administered by a fragmentary organization, so far as the complete and perfect system being upon earth is concerned; but I am not willing that, in the "fullness of times," the times of the "restitution of all things [not a fragment]," we should be content with a partial organization of the kingdom of God for all times. I am willing to admit that should the Reorganization fail to accomplish all that is designed, it is possible for the Lord to raise up a people who will; but mark you, the Lord will raise up a people who believe in all the covenants of the past, and are willing to work to a full and complete consummation; he will not raise up a people whose main effort is to eliminate these covenants which have been given, except they repent.

You say you are still just as happy in your new association. Now, sister, is that a safe rule to judge by? I know a sister who left the church, joined the Baptists, and thinks she is much happier than as a member of Christ's church. Why? Is it not that she is happier living a terrestrial law with its small requirements, than she would be to remain in Christ's church and not live the celestial law with its stricter requirements? Her manner of living happens, by her choice, to be such that it conflicts with the plain requirements of the church of Christ, consequently she is happier among a class of people who do not require such a high standard of living. So the fact that we are happy may mean simply that our environment is more to our liking, and not that we are in a greater state of acceptance with our heavenly Father. Friction does not add to happiness for the most of us. But lack of friction may give us a false sense of security and make us happier for the time being. So people of like feelings may separate themselves from those with whom they have at times been antagonistic in some sense, and because of the feeling of relief at the cessation of friction and strife, believe they have reached a sphere of greater righteousness.

No, sister, I have never had any fault to find with the system of organization revealed in the restoration of the gospel—though perhaps the weaknesses of men called to occupy have disturbed us at times. And yet, the Apostle Paul indicates that to be one of the qualifications of high priests when he says, "Who can have compassion on the ignorant, and them that are out of the way; for that he himself, also, is compassed with infirmity."

For me to throw away the revelations from 1835, or 1829, would lead me to eventually throw away the Book of Mormon and the Bible; it must be one or the other with me, accept or reject all. Not that everything is free from mistakes. We accept the Bible so far as it is translated correctly. The Book of Mormon comes to us with the statement, "Now if there be mistakes, they are the mistakes of men," etc. I would not hold the Doctrine and Covenants as superior to them in this respect. But the mistakes that are in any or all of these books can not frustrate the work of God. Did not the Lord say in his communication through Uncle Aleck to the committee on the Church of Christ, that there had been and would be mistakes, but that they could not hinder his work, and would only hurt those who suffered themselves to be deceived thereby?

How the question of the Book of Commandments and the Doctrine and Covenants will be settled, if it ever is, I do not know. Can you think of anything that could settle the question satisfactorily to all? Could God speak to anyone and tell him that one or the other was acceptable to him? How many would believe? Just those who believe that particular one now, so what difference would it make? He might as well not speak. But we can study them both if we are so minded, and test them by the Book of Mormon and the Inspired Translation. Shall we not cling fast, then, to the whole counsel of God, and not be tossed to and fro by every little wind of doctrine that comes along?

August 11.—We are glad to say the work in this corner of God's vineyard is still going forward.

We were privileged to have Brethren W. J. Cornish and J. W. Davis as visitors here for a short time. We enjoyed several good sermons by Brother J. W. Davis, with Brother Cornish in charge.

The Saints were greatly encouraged by seeing five young people enter the waters of baptism. Confirmation service was held immediately after baptism at the home of Brother A. I. J. Lockyer, branch president. Those officiating were Elders J. W. Davis, W. J. Cornish, and A. I. J. Lockyer.

Webb City, Missouri

The Webb City, Missouri, B. P. O. E. sponsored a parade in celebration of the one hundred fiftieth anniversary of our Flag June 14, in which our local branch participated.

The parade consisted of thirty-two entries, which included business houses, churches, lodges, local battery, Boy Scouts, Toutz Band, and the city Boys' Band.

Prizes were awarded to the three floats which the judges thought the best. However, according to our local paper, "the judges had their troubles in deciding, one way or another. Many thought that the elaborate Hub store float, an historical tableau gotten up with great attention to detail, should have had first place. Others were as firm in favor of the tableau entered by the Latter Day Saint Church,

August 11.—On Monday night, July 25, the group gave Sister Margie Pitcock a farewell party. Ice cream and cookies were served, and all had a good time. At the close of the evening they presented her a nice hat box. We are sorry to have so faithful a member leave us. Sister Mildred Reynolds was selected secretary of Religio to fill her place. Marie Phelps takes her place as pianist.

Brother Amos T. Higdon, district president, was with us on last Thursday, Friday, and also Sunday and Sunday night.

The spelling contest in Religio was very well attended. Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Reynolds and their daughter, Ruth, made the highest score in spelling the most words correctly.

We are having fair attendance Sunday evenings, Brother G. G. Cadwell and Brother O. E. Pender preaching alternately.

July 30.—This week found the close of a new experiment in our branch—summer Bible school. The idea of church summer school, of course, is not original with us, nor is it really a new thing generally, but since this was the first attempt of the sort in our branch we felt as if we were almost pioneers in the work. Our superintendent had a great many cards printed and distributed throughout the neighborhood, to interest nonmembers particularly, hoping to bring in new people to the Sunday school as well as to revive enthusiasm in those who are already members. A group of women offered and very faithfully gave their services as teachers, and the end of the first week found the attendance increased from seventeen to nearly forty. Out of this number, scarcely a dozen were members of the Sunday school.

The children were segregated and taught things that would appeal to the various groups, then all but the very young ones united in their Bible study. There were also group songs and flag drills. Memory verse contests were held each day in order to encourage the students to memorize more and more Bible verses. There were children of a number of different nationalities present. Most particularly were we interested in a little German girl, who was the most assiduous Bible student in the school. She taught us all a lesson in diligence as she struggled with her German Bible, translated her verses into her eleven months' knowledge of the English language, and usually came out victor in the contest. We even forgave her for feeding well-known Bible characters "grasshoppers and honey" instead of the conventional locusts of Bible lore.

The four weeks of church summer school closed with a program and an exhibit of the work in various lines. But to most of us the Sunday following the end of school was more important than the commencement exercises on Friday evening, or the picnic on Saturday. Sunday brought its reward, for almost every class was enlarged by prospective new members who came to us directly because of the Bible school. We feel certain that another summer's work will be less of an experiment and bring even greater results.

Our branch feels itself particularly blessed because of the many splendid people who from time to time associate themselves with us. Brother and Sister F. G. Pitt have been living in Long Beach for some time, and though we have to share them with all the neighboring district, we appreciate having them with us whenever possible. They recently gave us some wonderfully interesting personal impressions of Kirtland Temple, which proved to be very educational and instructive. To many who have always lived so far away, the Temple is little more than a name, but, thanks to the Pitts, it has now become almost a part of us.

Brother John Martin, our new Southern California missionary, spent Sunday, July 3, with us, and I am sure we all very much enjoyed every moment of our association with him and hope he will come to our city again soon and often.

Sister Myron A. McConley and little Alice are again in Long Beach for the summer, and we hope "the summer" will last long after the season is supposed to be over.

Our beloved district president, N. T. Chapman, lives in Long Beach, of course, but because of his poor health and his widespread and varied duties we are unable to have him with us as often as we want and feel we need. Each meeting he attends is blessed with his spirit, and we are happy just knowing he lives near us.

Of the various departments of the branch we may say one thing: We are flourishing. Our Sunday school is a living, growing, thriving thing. We are having growing pains. We are compelled to have one or two classes hold their study hour in some kind brother's automobile—and still scold because the brother does not come to church in a truck. It is very gratifying to see the interest manifested in our classes.

If we had no other inspiration to work, the Department of Women and their enthusiasm and vigor would bring us to a realization of the church's need for us, and our need for the church. They never fail to meet any demand that is made on them, and often anticipate the need before it is half formulated.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, with its newly elected corps of officers and committees, is promising more and greater accomplishments than we have ever had. We are attempting to have living, active, functioning committee work, each in its own department, working toward the common end—the greater good of the whole.

We are pleased to see the progress in our orchestra. Our leader moved to Santa Ana soon after the orchestra was organized, but instead of proving a handicap, his move has increased the membership, for he has made it a Long Beach-Santa Ana orchestra of considerable dimensions when all are in attendance. An orchestra, like Rome, is not made in a day, but if Rome had made as much progress in a corresponding length of time as our orchestra has, then we might well have been proud of Rome.

The choir is functioning, active in its part of the church work, doing its bit toward the accomplishment of God's work. We hope our monthly choir parties will do much to make us feel ourselves a united, organized group and give us greater joy in our services.

But if you want to find the real source of our inspiration, come to our Wednesday evening prayer meetings. Surely God is blessing us in our prayer services, and the Wednesday that finds us unable to attend finds us unhappy indeed. We have a remarkably fine attendance and are blessed abundantly. Our pastor, Brother W. A. Teagarden, and his wife are tireless in their efforts to further the work, and we are certain God recognizes their desires, and they will be blessed accordingly.

The prayers of our branch go out to all who are in need, whether of things physical, mental, or spiritual.

August 2.—Some have asked the question: Why these news letters? Here are some of the answers:

I enjoy reading the news letters from my home branch and always look for them in the HERALD. They stir up our minds in remembrance of the good things of the past, "lest we forget" the many choice blessings, as well as the instruction we receive from God's ministers.

Another: They show that some one in the branch is keeping "tab" on us, and is watching our step and knows a part at least of what is going on in the branch; and we are led to think that they perhaps see our missteps, too, as we travel life's pathway as well as those that are embedded in the "straight and narrow way," though they have charity enough not to air them in the news letter.

A third: Living quite a distance from the branch, and not being privileged to meet with the Saints very often, the news letter keeps us pretty well posted as to how conditions are in the branch, its activities, spirituality, and general welfare, besides births, weddings, deaths, etc.

A fourth: Being an invalid and shut-in, and not permitted to mingle with the Saints to any great extent, I not only enjoy reading what is going on in my own branch, but it gives me a spiritual uplift to read of how the Lord is blessing his people all over the world.

A fifth: Oh! They are fine and so helpful! As branch historian I keep these news letters and file them away. At the end of the quarter I go over them, segregating such data as I think will be of value for church history, and enter it in my quarterly report. They help one to remember some things we might otherwise forget. The news items are generally dependable.

There are others using this same trend of expression, but space will not permit our quoting further.

On Sunday, July 3, was held the regular sacramental service, which is always appreciated and enjoyed by the Saints. The visitors present at the meeting were Sister Annie Jennings and her daughter, Lilly, from Fresno Branch; Brother and Sister Leonard Younger, Santa Barbara Group; Brother and Sister Mark Fonda, Oakland Branch; Sister Schall and son, Myron, Palo Alto; all members of the church. Besides these there were several non-members present.

On July 5, Brother and Sister Hawkins got another surprise. As they were sitting down to dinner, their son-in-law and daughter, Brother and Sister Hook, and two children, from Roseville, Placer County, rang the door bell and demanded entrance. This was happily granted, and when the surprise was over and greetings exchanged all sat down to dinner. Brother and Sister Hook spent two days visiting with their folks and then returned to their home. Brother Hook is a railroad engineer, working for the Southern Pacific Company. He is a grandson of Brother Harvey Green, of California's early church history.

The regular quarterly business meeting of the branch was held on July 6, at which time, besides the regular routine business, delegates were elected to the district conference. It was also decided not to hold any more services in the branch after the 10th of the month until the close of the reunion.

On Wednesday evening, July 27, was held the first meeting of the branch since the close of the reunion. Brother C. W. Hawkins was in charge, and the meeting was replete with reunion experiences, which were enjoyed by all. The Saints have returned to their homes very much encouraged and strengthened in faith. It was a grand reunion, the largest ever held in the district, and unity prevailed. One hundred and thirty-five tents were pitched on the grounds. From beginning to end the Holy Spirit was present in power. The activities of this gathering will no doubt be reported by the reunion press committee.

Fairview, Montana

August 1.—July has been a very busy month for the Saints of Fairview Branch. Our district conference and reunion occupied the first ten days of the month, during which no services were held here. After the reunion, our Montana missionaries, Elders George W. Thorburn and Joseph L. Sandidge, who had worked faithfully all through, baptizing seven at Andes, came to Fairview and held a week of special meetings, preaching three times Sunday, July 17.

Another reunion laborer, Elder Swen Swenson, promised us a visit, since his route lay through our town. He arrived later than expected, having been delayed by the baptizing of five at Miles City, but just in time to take part in the annual jollification put on by the Stampeders Sunday school class. Close to a hundred gathered beneath the lights suspended above Brother Hillman's lawn, sang a few songs led by Brother Hillman, made themselves comfortable on the grass or in the provided seats, and listened about half an hour to Brother Swenson's account of his gospel experiences. This proved to be about the best entertainment that could have been provided. Leaders were then appointed for the different groups, and the rest of the evening was devoted to the usual outdoor games and frolics of young people everywhere. A wiener roast, sandwiches, pickles, cake, ice cream, etc., sufficed for refreshments. This little entertainment is anticipated quite eagerly each year by a number of our friends.

Brother Swenson remained here long enough to visit most of the Saints and interested investigators, preached once in Sidney, where about half the members reside, and twice here.

We would like to have our location marked upon the map of all our traveling ministers, with an invitation to make us a call when passing this way.

Brother Ami Briggs and family have returned from a year's sojourn in Oregon and are now located at Sidney.

Brother Orrin Wilcox and family have moved to Sidney, making them several miles nearer Fairview than formerly.

La-Da-Sa Camp Hope

"Be glad of life because its gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars."—Henry Van Dyke.

Verily, I should like to write it thus: Be glad of Camp Life because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars and to commune with God.

La-Da-Sa Camp Hope is the name of our girl's camp here in Kansas City Stake. For four years our girls have been attending in growing numbers. This year there were more than two hundred girls from the various locals and some from Independence. We have no permanent home for our camp, but this summer it was located at Horseshoe Lake, east of Independence, which proved to be an ideal place. Brother and Sister Edwards, who own the camp site, did everything in their power to help us in making our stay a success.

Under the great spreading trees that skirt the lake front, we pitched our twenty-five canvas homes and began house-keeping in "dead earnest." These were real "homes," too. A banner was awarded the group whose tent ranked first in cleanliness, tidiness, and attractiveness by the time the "inspectors" made their rounds at nine each morning. Chelsea was first to get the banner, Grandview next, and Malvern Hill the last two days. One or two mornings the banner could not be awarded, as the inspectors were "rained in" along with the rest of us; and, anyway, it was no time for inspection with everything crushed and dampened except our spirits. That reminds me! We had a real storm our second night in camp. Next morning we were glad to be alive! A few tents went down, and the occupants fled to what looked like a shelter house and proved to be otherwise. The roof leaked like a sieve, but at least the walls didn't fall in. The next morning we looked in vain for the sun, and some of us looked in vain for our shoes and other apparel left outside the tents. In the tent we called home, there were ten of us and a pup. The "dawg" was one too many, but who could turn him out on a night like that? The next morning we found our breakfast eggs floating in rain water and our soap adrift on the green, but they were soap and eggs just the same.

Many of the girls testified in the prayer meeting on Wednesday night that they were glad it stormed, because they had received a special blessing through their prayers and were brought nearer each other than they could have been in any other way, and were also made to realize that God is ever near us and ready to help us when we call. One of the best features of our camp each year is the prayer meeting. These meetings have been reflected in later meetings in our local groups, to the joy of all present. Brother R. E. Newkirk, a member of the priesthood and husband of the young women's superintendent of the stake, has charge of these meetings. He also works faithfully each year helping with the more arduous tasks about camp which require the muscles of a man. We appreciate the fact that he has done all in his power to help us.

Sister Newkirk has worked long and faithfully for the girls of Kansas City Stake, nine years in all, and she has had charge of the camp each year. She has been a grandmother for several years, but her heart is still young. Through years of experience and effort, she has fitted herself for her particular work, and I should say, too, through special study and prayer. All this with much sacrifice at times and under handicaps.

If there are no girls' or boys' camp in your reach, fathers and mothers, take your family out for a week to cook and eat outdoors and to "look up at the stars." Learn to play and to love the great outdoors, and you'll enjoy your work better.

Hutchinson, Kansas

August 12.—Much spirituality is being enjoyed by the Saints of this branch, and with the careful supervision of our able branch president, Brother T. Comer Turpen, we are living as a large family together in the bonds of love.

On July 4, the Saints motored to the country home of our pastor to spend the day. A delicious picnic dinner was spread out under the trees, and everyone had all the ice cream he could eat.

Sister Margaret Peters became the bride of Brother T. Elbery Turpen on July 11 at 8 p. m. The pastor, who is the father of the bridegroom, officiated at the ceremony in the presence of a few friends and immediate relatives of the young couple.

On July 25 the parents of the newly married couple held a shower in their honor, and many beautiful and useful gifts were presented.

Brother and Sister J. N. Madden have changed their headquarters from Dodge City to Hutchinson, thereby permitting their attendance here more regularly.

The services at this place are well attended by the Saints, and several nonmembers are becoming interested in the work. The place of meeting will accommodate but few, but plans are being made for purchasing a church in the near future.

MRS. MARGARET TURPEN.

Dow City, Iowa

It has been several weeks since the branch news letter has been sent in to the HERALD. The faithful few are trying to keep this branch going forward, though at times it seems a struggle. The attendance is not what it should be.

Since our last writing Pastor J. L. Butterworth met with an accident, fracturing his ankle, which has worked a hardship on him the last few weeks in attending to the duties as pastor. At different times he has secured assistance from other branches, for he is the only man in this branch who holds the priesthood.

Brother Fred Baber, of Arion, Iowa, and Brother Winian, of Denison, Iowa, assisted in the sacramental service on July 3.

On the following Sunday the district Sunday school superintendent, Elder M. O. Myers, of Deloit, was with us at the Sunday school hour, also the preaching service. He gave words of encouragement at both of these services, which brought to those who are trying to forward the work, new strength and courage to go on.

Brother Ward Johnson, of Denison, Iowa, was the speaker in the morning of July 24, giving a very instructive and interesting talk.

On the Sunday following we were pleased to have with us two of the new missionaries to this district, Elder M. K. Fry, of Missouri Valley, Iowa, and Elder C. J. Smith, of Sioux City, Iowa. They remained and preached alternately through the week. Some illustrative lectures were given, showing pictures of the latest ruins found in South America, also some slides of places of interest in the early history of the church. These meetings were most interesting and instructive. Dow City Saints were very glad to make the acquaintance of these two men and hope they will return again to help revive the members here.

District President E. L. Bedwell, of Lamoni, Iowa, was with us August 7 for the two services, remaining over for a series of services during the week. These meetings were both profitable and enjoyable to all who attended. We are hoping Brother Bedwell will come again soon.

Mrs. La June Smith Griffin and Miss Bethel Wight, of this branch, were in attendance at the Institute of Religious Education, held at Graceland College in June. They feel greatly benefited by the instruction given there. La June enjoyed the visit as well as the institute, meeting old friends and instructors, she being a product of Lamoni.

The Religio has been changed from Sunday evening to Friday evening, and some changes were made in the program to try to stimulate a better attendance of the young people. Not long ago, under the direction of La June Griffin and Bethel Wight, the junior boys dramatized the story of "Daniel in the lion's den." There was a good attendance.

There has been a reorganization of the Orioles and Blue Birds, and they are enjoying activities under the supervision of their leaders.

The district reunion at Sac City will convene August 26, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance.

Bay Minette, Alabama

The Saints of Bay Minette are still in the faith and are progressing as well as could be expected under existing conditions.

Since our last report we have had some fine services.

Brother T. M. Carr came up from Mobile and bade us farewell before leaving for his Pennsylvania mission. We all certainly were sorry to have Brother Carr leave us, but are glad in the fact that he is working nearer his home.

Elder J. W. A. Bailey held a series of meetings here the last part of June and first of July. Brother Bailey revealed some things to us of which we had never dreamed. He did not have a large congregation all the time, but much interest in his effort was shown among the Saints. On the last day of Brother Bailey's meetings, two young girls were baptized; and after preaching in the evening, three more entered the waters of baptism, making a total of five added to our band through Brother Bailey's work here.

We are planning and looking forward to our reunion to be held in Mobile August 11 to 21. Quite a number from here are planning to attend. We hope to have a good spiritual meeting.

Brother Franklin Stiner, district Religio superintendent, came up a few weeks ago and organized a Religio, with Mrs. Hattie Booker superintendent and Brother T. J. Booker assistant. We are taking up the study of the Book of Mormon. There seems to be much interest manifested, and we hope to accomplish good in this work.

Our aim is to press forward to 1930 and to help build Zion.

CARLOTTA WIGGINS.

Cherokee, Iowa

417 Clark Street

Our Sunday school picnic was held the last Saturday afternoon and evening in July. It rained in the afternoon and kept many from attending. Supper was served in the pavilion at Riverside Park and was enjoyed by those present.

Brother and Sister Crippen, Harold Reeder, Floyd Custus, and Doctor Will, formed a party who attended the all-day meeting at Deloit, July 30. They report a great meeting and fine crowd of Saints in attendance. Brother and Sister Albert Haynes and Sister Tena Crippen and daughter, Lamerne, were also in attendance at Deloit service July 30.

Sister Leese, of Denison, has been visiting her daughter, Sister Haynes, and attended services August 7.

Sister William Leonard, who has been quite sick, is somewhat improved at this time, and hopes are entertained for her recovery.

Sunday school attendance has been very good during the summer months, which is more than can be said of some of the other meetings. Sunday evening is very poorly attended.

We suppose it is more comfortable to ride in cars on hot nights than to go to worship God. We wonder what we will say at the judgment when we have to face the things we have done or have not done in this life.

The Sunday school will miss the services of Sister Myrtle Reeder who, on account of ill health, has been compelled to resign as teacher in the beginner department. Sister Reeder has been a teacher in the school for over twenty years and leaves her post with deep regret, because she loves the work with the little folks. Her class has so far this year raised over half of the Christmas offering reported in the school and is inviting the other classes to catch them.

Our church presents a much better appearance since the new seats have been installed. Deacon Ballantyne has also cleaned up the grounds, setting out some flowers and adding much to the appearance in general.

Sickness at present threatens to cut down our representation at district reunion, August 26 to September 4, at Sac City. Very few will be able to tent on the grounds but will drive back and forth as much as possible.

We are looking forward to a better work for fall and winter, and hope some of our missionaries will be able to call on us as soon as reunion season is over.

San Francisco, California

Arguello Boulevard and Clement Street

Since our last letter, the Park-Presidio Branch, of San Francisco, has had numerous activities which have been broadcast through our local newspapers in our immediate locality, as we are endeavoring to put the Reorganized Church work before those who are not acquainted with our church in preference to telling HERALD readers what we are doing.

The Park-Presidio Branch meets regularly in the Richmond Masonic Temple, Arguello Boulevard and Clement Street, Sunday mornings from 10 to 12 o'clock; and lest we forget before this letter is finished, a cordial welcome is extended to all who happen to be in our wonderful city.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, under the able leadership of Brother Charles Kreuter, has given to us many pleasant evenings along educational lines.

The women of our branch have organized a club known as The Ruths Club, and have for their object philanthropy, culture, and social activities. The name selected is to commemorate the life of Ruth Lyman Smith, the departed wife of our President F. M. Smith. The officers of this club are as follows: President, Bessie Bohall Holling; vice president, Ruth Waller Clegg; and secretary, Edna Frosier.

The Park-Presidio Branch voted to celebrate the centennial of the Book of Mormon on Sunday, September 25, 1927. With the indorsement of our district president, Brother Guy P. Levitt, we are planning on having a Northern California joint celebration and will keep open house on that date. The banquet hall committee is planning on serving many of our Saints, and the pageant committee is doing everything in its power to arrange an elaborate program to commemorate the event.

Thus far our local papers, The Richmond Banner and The Weekly Herald, have accepted all of our articles verbatim. Last Friday's issues contained over one hundred and fifty lines, which we appreciated. This week's papers which will come out tomorrow, will also contain publicity.

Members of the Park-Presidio Branch are deeply indebted to those who have made it possible for us to succeed, and the writer feels that while we appreciate the services rendered and have thanked them personally, the Saints at large should know who are putting forth their efforts to do God's will. Following are the elders who have served us: W. D. Gillen, Los Angeles; L. B. Shippy, San Jose; G. J. Waller, Honolulu; J. B. Carmichael, H. W. Savage, V. B. Etzenhouser, Cecil Hawley, Edward Ingham, of Oakland, and Apostle J. A. Gillen. Our branch president, Edward Nelson, has kept the wheel going without any hesitation and is worthy high praise for his efforts. The music rendered by Sister Christiana Waller and the Misses Jane and Betty Cooper has always been deeply appreciated by all who have attended our meetings. Sister Bessie Holling has won praise for the floral decorations at all of our meetings.

The writer's attention was called to an incident that will be of interest to HERALD readers. Doctor Parker, who filled the pulpit of the South Methodist Church of San Francisco last Sunday night, August 7, and whose address dwelt on "An occupation in life," touched upon the most successful financiers of today and made special mention of Elder Gilbert J. Waller, of San Francisco, as being "the real inspiration for a life worth while," as he had found that Brother Waller was not only a success in the business world, but that he succeeded in the gospel as well. Brother Waller is a stranger to the Reverend Parker, but the manner in which Brother Waller expressed himself in Touchstones of Success so impressed this gentleman that he made it known he wanted to meet Brother Waller in person on his return from Honolulu in September. The sermon was closed with "Stewardships," as expressed by our own beloved Brother Waller.

It is indeed a pleasure for me to make mention of this incident, and I can picture the get together of two men of such high standing.

I have just been advised that Brother John W. Rushton will be our speaker Sunday morning, August 21. Saints desiring to meet with us should know that Municipal cars A, B, and C, also No. 2 Market Street Railroad cars pass within a block of our hall. These cars run direct from the Ferry on Market Street.

A. L. HOLLING.

Lamar, Colorado

August 10.—Brother R. D. Weaver just completed a series of meetings in and near Lamar, which, owing to the busyness of the season and the weather causing bad roads, were not as successful as was hoped. Only a few nonmembers attended. The closing day of the meetings, Wiley Branch extended invitations to all isolated members and the Utleyville and LaJunta Branches for an all-day meeting. The church was well filled with visiting friends for the morning prayer service, which was much enjoyed by all. Following the usual bountiful dinner was a sermon by E. P. Darnell, of Las Animas.

A movement was started recently toward the sale of the church building in Wiley, with the object in view of rebuilding in Lamar. But the price agreed upon by the Saints was too high for the prospective purchasers, and so the matter was dropped.

Several friends and isolated members of the branch have been visitors lately. Brother T. C. Gray and family, formerly of Lamoni, Iowa, were visiting relatives here; also Brothers Leslie Allen and Austin Johnson and families, returned from Texas. These all appreciate much the privilege of attending services regularly. Brother Allen had the misfortune to get his car wrecked almost as soon as he reached Lamar and since has decided to stay in Lamar for a while. While we are sorry for his misfortune, everyone who knows these good people is glad to have them make their home in our midst.

Last Sunday word was received that Brother J. D. Curtis, our loved missionary of Eastern Colorado, would be at Eads to preach morning and evening and would hold a baptismal service in the afternoon. And immediately everyone who had a car decided he must see Brother Curtis once more. Even the Sunday school superintendent who almost always stays when all the others fail, called on the assistant superintendent to take charge, packed up a lunch and started to Eads. After the Sunday school session at Wiley, three more cars of Saints wended their way Eadsward and arrived in time for the baptismal service.

Those who were fortunate enough to arrive in time for the morning service felt themselves well paid for the effort when they heard Brother Curtis's kindly admonitions for saintly living, and felt inspired to put forth more effort to attain the ideal he sets for us.

A very worthy sister has been added to the church in the baptism of Mrs. Mosher; and Wilma Smart, a dear little girl of nine, was the other candidate for baptism.

While Wiley Branch is not making any sensational moves, we believe it is holding its own. The Sunday services are well attended usually, and we do not feel to criticize harshly. A spirit of harmony prevails quite generally. Brother C. A. Ralston, our branch president, does not enjoy the best of health and has not been able to do all he would like to do, but he is the best qualified one in the branch for his office, and he has tried faithfully to fulfill his duty. He is just another one of the many men in his position throughout the church who humbly and prayerfully carry on the work of the various branches, often without adequate assistance, very often unappreciated, but still carrying on in an unassuming way. He always brings out some fine thoughts in his sermons and the best thing of all is that he is living the things he tells others to do. What a hollow mockery when a man presumes to tell others what they should do when he knows he is not living up to his own instruction!

The Child and Obedience

By Sister W. S. Shea. Paper read at New York District Conference, Niagara Falls, 1927.

Proverbs 22:6 says: "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Proverbs 29:15: "The rod and reproof give wisdom; but a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame."

The child should be taught obedience at an early age in life. But before the child can reason for itself, it is necessary to exact a prompt obedience, not only because the parent knows best, but also for the sake of the training. A child who throws its food on the floor when told to eat it quietly, or who stiffens out in amazing rigor and screams until black in the face rather than be undressed, must learn that he must do as he is told, and, if necessary, he must learn it with tears. The wise parent, however, will not take these things too seriously.

Blessed is that mother whose sense of humor does not desert her even in nursery crises! She will exact obedience as firmly and quietly as she can, and at the same time she will not feel that her child will grow up a monster of self-will. He must obey—that goes without saying; but little by little he will learn to do it gracefully rather than rebelliously, as he sees he must.

Of course a perfect obedience forbids teasing the mother to change her mind. If once, only once, she yields a forbidden point, and the child with its abnormal keenness sees it, she is lost. When she says even a small thing must not be, she must stick to it. It is infinitely better not to give a command than to let the child evade it. By giving in to the child when at first she says no, she is weakly giving up the whole situation and barring the angel of peace for ever from the home.

As the child grows older, he is learning at school and at play to use his own mind to think and to decide for himself, and this holds in the family circle as well as outside. To meet this difficulty, it is always best to give a child a good and truthful reason for any commands laid upon him, not before he obeys, but afterwards.

Children of reasonable, thoughtful, conscientious parents do obey them.

The way of demanding obedience counts for a great deal in securing it. It is by far the best way to put commands in an attractive form; then the child is sure to do as he is told.

Mrs. Gilman has a clever essay in which she says that to train a child to unthinking, unquestioning obedience is to make him absolutely valueless as a citizen. He will never initiate, but will follow where others lead. He will be but a half-developed being, devoid of individuality and independence.

V. D. Ruch and Family Return to America

A Letter to the Quorum of Twelve

It is with great pleasure that I write you from a point within the borders of the United States, after a safe and pleasant journey over the North Sea and Atlantic Ocean. While it was with a great degree of sadness in our hearts that we left our brothers and sisters in Norway, still we are glad to get back to our homeland for a time. We have been made glad upon our arrival in this country to hear that Brother Hunker has been asked to go to Norway and that he is now making preparation for his departure.

We were kept busy right up to the last and were made to rejoice on the very last day of our sojourn at Bón when we were asked to baptize a lady into the church. She said that if she let us go away without baptizing her, she would not be able to sleep at nights. I baptized her about six o'clock in the evening and confirmed her later that evening. I also blessed a little child and administered to a sister. So our last evening was a busy one.

We sailed on July 5 from Bergen to Newcastle and proceeded by train, to London, where we spent some six days. Sunday, July 10, was spent with the Enfield Branch, where I was called upon to preach both morning and evening. These sermons were the first I had preached in the English language since leaving America, nearly five years ago. I found it a little difficult to find just the words I would like to use to express my thoughts. The Sunday school hour was also turned over to us, and Sister Ruch and I occupied the time in speaking of our Sunday school work and other activities in Norway. The prayer meeting later was a spiritual one and a real treat to us. We couldn't hold back the tears as we listened to the songs of Zion as they were sung in our own tongue, and to the testimonies of our brothers and sisters in that branch. We were very kindly treated by the Saints of Enfield, and a strong tie of love and brotherhood grew up among us. We stayed at the home of Brother and Sister Foster, at the headquarters of the church. They made us feel welcome at once, and we were at home with them. Brother Judd, president of the Enfield Branch, is a very spiritual man and a fine one in my estimation.

Just as we were leaving London for Southampton, we met Brother Peter Muceus, who had just arrived from Norway, and we enjoyed each other's company the remainder of the journey to New York. We sailed July 12 from Southampton on board the Leviathan and had a very fine trip. We brought Commander Byrd and company, Chamberlin, as well as Byrd's plane, with us. They were given a rousing welcome upon arrival at New York.

We landed at New York July 18, about two o'clock in the afternoon. Not having any business to keep us in New York, we left that evening at 5.30 and came to Onset, Massachusetts, to enjoy the reunion. We had the privilege of having our tickets made out from Norway to either New York, Philadelphia, or Boston, for the same price. Our tickets were to Boston. So the steamship company furnished us transportation up here which, of course, was quite a saving to us.

We arrived at the Onset reunion ground July 19 and were at once made welcome by the Saints on the grounds. We were here about four days before the reunion started. The Saints have all been very kind to us and have anticipated our every need. We are very comfortably located in a missionary cottage.

Brother William Patterson was on the grounds when we arrived, holding a short series of meetings preceding the reunion. As soon as he found out I was here, he requested me to preach that night. So it wasn't long before I was pressed into service.

In coming to this large reunion there are so many workers, that we thought we would be permitted to be sponges and sit down and soak in all the good things they had in store. But such has not been the case. Both Sister Ruch and I have found plenty to do and have been called into service in several different ways, so that we can at least partly repay the Saints for their kindness to us.

Bishop Carmichael and wife, as well as D. T. Williams and family, are here and have made a wonderful contribution to the reunion. We are having a good reunion, with excellent instruction and presence of the Spirit of God. I am getting some of the instruction and spiritual food that I desired to get upon my return to America. We go from here to the Kirtland reunion, and from there to my home in Bevier, Missouri. . . .

Can Parents Form in Their Children a Taste for Good Reading? and How?

By Mrs. A. R. Richardson, East Syracuse, New York. Paper read at New York District Conference, 1927.

If we wish our children to have a taste for good reading we must begin to think about it in the first years of their lives, when they become interested in pictures and storytelling. The pictures we give them at this time should be good ones. Pictures should help the text, not substitute it. From then on lists should be consulted to be used in the different stages of the child's development. In every public library there are lists of books that have been agreed upon as really good books for children. They are graded according to the age of the child. They will be found a great help. The trashy books have been eliminated. These lists will be found useful in establishing the habit of good reading.

What a gift to bestow upon children—the companionship of books! The doors that can be opened at will, and one pass out into a greater knowledge and bigger world of things, sensing what people are doing and thinking now.

Children should be made to feel that reading is a pleasure rather than a duty.

Constantly reading silly or poorly written books that make evil things seem right, will have the same effect on character, as always being with the wrong sort of people. Choosing the best books will lead us into the society of the world's greatest minds and make us capable of enjoying that society.

Some of the books children receive at Christmas time appear to have nothing wrong about them. They fool the inexperienced reader into thinking them good.

Simple, beautiful speech should characterize the books we give our children. The ability of Lincoln to make his Gettysburg address came partly through his early reading of few great books—his Bible and Shakespeare. The best and greatest helped him to be great.

The best is none too good for any boy or girl.

Anne Carroll Moore says: "The only way to make children read is to make them love to read. Begin young enough, recommend the best, and leave it to make its own appeal."

The branch at Gladstone, Michigan, wants to get in touch with some young man or woman of the church who can teach band and orchestra and develop the talent they have into working units. They believe they have a good opportunity for the right person. If you are interested, write H. Roy Denio, 1009 Dakota Avenue, Gladstone, Michigan.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

On Tuesday evening, August 16, Miss Ruth Young and Mr. Russell LeRow were united in marriage at the home of the bride, Bishop F. B. Blair officiating. Preceding the ceremony, Sister Marcine Murphy sang, "I love you truly." The wedding march was played by Roland Young, a brother of the bride. After a brief honeymoon at Estes Park, Mr. and Mrs. LeRow will make their home in Lees Summit, and it is with regret that we will lose these young people from our midst.

The Sunday school attendance Sunday was only fair. In the contest the women are but 600 miles out of port, and they are expected to reach Palestine (their destination) by next Sunday, which will mean that their brothers will entertain them in some manner, that having been the bargain, that the losing side would entertain the winners.

At the eleven o'clock preaching service we were favored with a very interesting discourse by Brother R. L. Bishop, pastor of the Mount Washington Group. His theme was "You," and he pointed out the necessity of our giving ourselves a constant examining to see that we are overcoming the daily obstacles of life that hinder our progress in the onward march.

The 7.45 service consisted of a few numbers from the stake orchestra, after which the congregation joined in that wonderful hymn, "What a friend we have in Jesus," prayer being offered by Brother Harvey Sandy, in charge of the service.

The congregation was very grateful to have as the speaker of the evening, Elder Ralph W. Farrell. He based his remarks upon a poem, "Be ye nowhere else, God is in all that liberates and lifts and in all that humbles and sweetens and consoles." He reminded us that God is a father to us, that whenever one of his creatures lifts his hand to him, he will find it and that the concept of God is justice and mercy. His remarks were short, inasmuch as it was necessary that he return to Independence for the radio program.

Brother and Sister J. A. Tanner are spending a vacation in Saint Louis, visiting with a sister of Brother Tanner and a number of friends, he having been pastor of the Saint Louis Branch before coming to Kansas City.

The Excelsior Class is having an ice cream social on the lawn of the church next Monday evening, at which time they will show pictures and promise a very nice entertainment for all who attend. Tickets are twenty-five cents, and neighboring Saints are cordially invited to attend.

Second Church

Last Sunday Elder H. A. Higgins was the speaker in the morning and E. S. Zink at night. Both sermons were good. Brother and Sister Higgins have visited us quite frequently of late, and we appreciate the help they have so willingly given us.

Other speakers have been Brother Sanders, of Armourdale, our pastor, Brother H. R. Higdon, and Berwyn Lungwitz who preached his first sermon a few weeks ago. He is the youngest member of the priesthood here, and a good crowd of both young and old gathered to hear him. All were well pleased and helped as he spoke of the necessity of study, preparation, and consecration. Members should prepare themselves for service and then be active workers.

Meetings have been well attended and collections good. Last Sunday we raised $18 for the Christmas offering, and we hope soon to have the amount assigned us by the bishop.

Several new families have moved into the neighborhood. We welcome the Saints from other places; hope they will make our church home theirs also.

Sister Amy Parr, a daughter of M. H. Forscutt, attended prayer meeting a few weeks ago and bore a splendid testimony and spoke of the life of her father. She was visiting Brother and Sister Higgins. Peace and harmony prevail, and our meetings are frequently blessed with the gifts of tongues and prophecy. A prayer meeting for the young people was held the first Sunday at eight o'clock, in charge of Berwyn Lungwitz. These will be held monthly in future, and we hope the attendance and interest will increase with each meeting.

Sister Audrey Hathaway, who formerly was one of our members, but who had been very ill for a long time, received a wonderful blessing through administration a few weeks ago and has been gaining rapidly since, for which we are thankful.

From the Hoosier Capital

August 15.—Since our Sunday school institute in June, we have striven to keep busy despite the vacation season and are able to report that we are still working.

Elder J. A. Robinson, our pastor, visited the branches at Louisville, Kentucky, and Byrneville, Indiana, in the interest of the district work, delivering illustrated lectures and preaching the word at both places. Sister Robinson accompanied him in the interest of the department of music of the district, and they report splendid interest at both points. They also were present at the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana, Detroit, and Eastern Michigan Districts' reunion at Indian Lake and are now attending a national photographers meeting at Winona Lake, Indiana. As Brother Fred M. Smith puts it, Brother Robinson, too, is a "camera nut," and he is getting some first-hand information. They met with us last Sunday and brought us a message from the services at Indian Lake.

The Sunday school held its picnic the 13th at Garfield Park, and a very pleasant time was enjoyed by all. The usual picnic activities and features prevailed, and the social contact of the same was reflected in the attendance at services the following day.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is planning to put on the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," written by Brother Elbert Smith, some time in September, the entire branch voting to back them in the effort.

Some of our members are expecting to be present at a part of the Kirtland reunion, to enjoy the feast of spiritual good things usually obtained at this historic spot.

During the first part of September, the Indiana State Fair will be held in our city and, as usual, we will have a concession there. This will be a busy week for us, and all hands and the cook must be on deck. We will report the outcome of this undertaking in our next communication.

Our district conference convenes at Derby, Indiana, September 17, and a number of us expect to be present and take an active part in its sessions, so we find there is plenty to do if we keep our eyes open and our hands and hearts willing to work. We remember the scriptural injunction, "It is good to be zealously engaged in a good cause."

We have been favored with the presence of the following at services recently: Sister Pauline Davis Allnut, of San Antonio, Texas; Brother J. W. Davis and Mr. Marshall Perkins, of New Albany, Indiana; Brother and Sister Ralph Marshall, of Midland, Michigan; Sister Abbie Shetron and Sister Myrtle Cunningham and three children from Flint, Michigan. We are glad to have visitors with us; we welcome you; come and worship with us and make our church home your church home while sojourning in our city.

Mallard, Iowa

Many of our members are farmers and have been kept very busy harvesting and threshing, so our midweek prayer services have not been very well attended, but those of us who can attend have striven to keep the camp fire burning until the rest are able to meet with us again.

Every Sunday we have had the pleasure of having some visitors who are always welcome. It is a pleasure to meet with Saints.

We held our Religio picnic in July at Harrison Park, Emmetsburg, all of our members and three visitors attending. The day was spent playing volley ball and other games. Picnic dinner was at noon, a meal enjoyed by all.

Because of circumstances which we can not control, our attendance at district reunion will be small.

Denison, Iowa

We are still striving to keep the gospel light shining in this part of God's vineyard. We have been visited of late by our district president, Brother Bedwell, and at his request the branches throughout the district have been visiting in all-day meetings. On July 27 we united with the Deloit Branch, having with us a number from Cherokee. The day was filled with worship, morning services beginning at the hour of 8.30 when the Saints were called together for a sweet hour of prayer. Although this meeting was not so largely attended, it was a spiritual feast to those who were present. The meeting was in charge of Brothers Warren G. Oliver and Ralph Roy. Sunday school convened at ten o'clock with a goodly number present. Brother E. L. Edwards was the speaker at the eleven o'clock meeting, selecting as his subject "What lack I yet?" This was chosen to be the theme for the day.

At noon hour all enjoyed a basket dinner prepared by the sisters, and at the close of this feast none felt that he lacked for anything to eat.

Brother Bedwell addressed the congregation at 2.30 p. m., and at 7 the Department of Recreation and Expression favored us with a home talent play which demanded much credit. Brother Bedwell was the evening speaker, giving us a very good discourse to close the day's exercises. We enjoyed having Brother Bedwell with us for a couple of nights last week.

Our meetings of late have been exceptionally good. Among the many good sermons preached by the local priesthood was one on education delivered by Branch President Warren G. Oliver. The last sacramental and prayer service and also the prayer service of last Sunday were all we could wish them to be and were enjoyed by an encouraging number. Many good prayers and testimonies were offered. The Spirit was truly with us in power, and not a moment was allowed to go to waste.

At this writing many in our midst have been suffering from different ailments. Sisters Min and Belle McCord both have been suffering from gallstones, and Brother Loyd Winnans has been confined to his home for the past three weeks with inflammatory rheumatism. The summer flu has been very prevalent throughout the branch, but we are glad to report that all are convalescing at the present time.

Comstock, Nebraska

Brother William Bath and wife and daughter arrived in our branch July 26 and commenced a series of meetings July 28. The attendance was good and increased steadily. Sister Bath and daughter conducted the song services, which were much enjoyed.

Sunday, August 7, following the services, a picnic dinner was held in the park. Later baptismal services were held at the Middle Loup River, and Brother Bath conducted eight precious souls into the kingdom. They were confirmed the same evening.

August 8 the writer and Brother Bath drove seventy miles through the muddy sandhills to Brother Neumann's. After getting acquainted, Brother Bath said if they would call the neighbors he would preach to them. We had arrived at 6.30, and about 8.30 three carloads came in to hear Brother Bath. He preached one hour and five minutes, after which questions were asked and answers given from the Bible by Brother Bath.

At ten o'clock two more carloads of people came to hear Brother Bath preach. Everyone wanted to hear more, and so he preached fifty-five minutes more. Two sermons in one night; who can beat that?

August 9 we drove ten miles to the North Loup River, and Brother Bath baptized a fifteen-year-old girl into the kingdom. After the confirmation we set out for home, where we arrived in good season.

On Sunday another young woman was baptized. That makes nine added to the Comstock Branch, and we think there will be more soon. These meetings have been the most spiritual witnessed here for many years. Brother Bath and wife and daughter are certainly workers for the Master.

JOHN NAAB.

Louisville, Kentucky

August 15.—Elder J. O. Dutton, of Galva, Illinois, is here with us, and has been preaching some wonderful sermons, getting the Saints on their toes, causing them both to think and to do.

Yesterday, Sunday, August 14, he baptized four young people into the church. The candidates were the daughter of Brother and Sister W. O. Robertson, daughter of Brother and Sister Henry Oliver, and the two sons of Brother and Sister F. R. Tarter.

All enjoyed the spirit of the confirmation, and we hope Brother Dutton will stay with us for some time yet, as we are greatly in need of him here.

W. R. KREUTZER.

Corner Twenty-fourth and Kay Streets

On Children's Day in June, our baptisms included the twin daughters of Sister Morley, of Kirtland, Dorothy and Dana. Priest Earl Curry, of Lincoln, their uncle, officiated. These two families have since left by auto to return to their homeland at Kirtland. Albon Healy, of our branch, was baptized by our pastor, W. H. Dawson. This young brother is one of our dependable orchestra members. His sister, Florence, has joined us since, G. P. Levitt officiating. An adult baptism that has brought joy to loved ones and many friends was that of our brother, J. Arlie Austin, the husband of one of our earnest workers, Bertha Duncan Austin. He has been assistant teacher of the Idola seniors in Sunday school for some time. Brother Levitt also officiated at this service early one Wednesday evening, with only a very few present, and in the confirmation the Lord's Spirit was present in power. A young brother present, John B. Dawson, was called to the office of priest. Last Sunday morning, Richard Barmore, of Newcastle, a Sunday school boy from the Lincoln Branch, was baptized by Brother Levitt. A few others have also been added to our numbers by letters or transfer.

Our finance and building committees are steadily working on the new building project. A large picture of the proposed building stands in the church now. On Sunday a pledge rally was held; and though a number are still away on vacations, there was pledged at this service $3,665.

The orchestra, with Brother E. C. Burdick, leader, held a lawn social at the home of Brother Ralph Ensley, in North Sacramento, one evening recently. Ice cream, hot dogs, and watermelons, assisted in clearing fifteen dollars for their music.

The Women's Department are to hold an all-day meeting at the home of Sister Amy Beebe in North Sacramento this Thursday, to sew for a future bazaar.

Ninety-three of our members visited the recent reunion at Irvington.

The branch is planning to give the play, "Remember Canaan," on the evening of September 22d, at the church. The committee includes Brethren W. H. Dawson, E. C. Burdick, and J. A. Austin and Sisters Burdick and Austin.

Independence

Stone Church

K L D S Ladies' Quartet and Brother Robert Miller furnished the music at the worship service hour.

Assistant Pastor C. Ed. Miller was the speaker. He used as a text Genesis 4: 5. When Cain in answer to the question of the Lord, "Where is thy brother?" answered, "Am I my brother's keeper?" he presented a problem that thinking men and women have been trying to solve ever since.

This church is not trying to evade finding a solution to that problem from a temporal, financial, or spiritual standpoint. This morning we wish to consider the spiritual phase. We can not evade responsibility, either as individuals or as a group. We can measure the value of an institution's contribution to society by the intelligent service it renders, by the ideals it fosters, and by the projects it fathers. We are willing to be judged by that rule.

A well-balanced mind learns from the past as well as the present, and plans for the future. To this church has been revealed a most marvelous conception of man's responsibility to man, here and hereafter. Weakness will always have claim on strength. There is a natural division of humanity into classes; there is also an artificial division. The natural division is caused by difference in intelligence, culture, and character. There will be a division of humanity into classes throughout the countless ages of eternity, for some, "where God and Christ dwell they can not come worlds without end." Everything in the universe is governed by the law of degrees. There are degrees of salvation.

In the book known to us as the Doctrine and Covenants is recorded a most marvelous vision received by the Prophet Joseph Smith. It is in the 76th section. Here are revealed three conditions in which humanity hereafter will be placed: celestial, terrestrial, and telestial. Responsibility, brotherhood, are carried to eternity. Those who are heirs of celestial salvation will be permitted to dwell in the presence of God and his Christ and are ministers to those of the terrestrial world. Those of the terrestrial world minister to those of the lesser glory, of which the stars are typical.

Brother Miller repeatedly asked the congregation before him and his radio audience to examine themselves and judge to which class they belonged. He said everyone wielded an influence for good or for evil. That influence developed into a chain of influence that reached throughout this life and into eternity. We are our brother's keeper here and for ever.

The sermon feature of the Campus service on Sunday evening was provided by Elder J. W. Paxton and was an appeal for unity and love. He read a portion of the prayer of the Savior, recorded in John 17: 15-21, placing special stress on the last verse of the reading. Associated with this was the Savior's answer to the lawyer who approached him asking him the question, "Which is the great commandment in the law?" Reference was made to John 13: 34, 35, where Jesus says through a manifestation of love the world might know the disciples of the Lord.

He referred to Romans 12: 9, 10; also Galatians 5: 13, 15, endeavoring to show how by working together in the spirit of brotherly kindness and love, having our brother's interest at heart as well as our own, we might build up in a co-operative way industrially as well as spiritually.

He sought to show here how the great business interests of the world had long ago revised their business methods to correspond with this philosophy, combining their interests in order to place their business interest on a more solid foundation, but suggested this should not be done for the purpose of selfish motive in crowding out the smaller concern, for as Paul said, "Use not this liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another. For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another."

Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences

The Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences will open its winter activities with a mass meeting at the Stone Church, Sunday, September 4, at 3.15 p. m. At this time President Floyd M. McDowell and other members of the faculty will explain the arrangement of the educational work for the coming year. This will be a good time and place to ask questions. The meeting is for everyone.

Courses will be offered at the Institute this year in: First year junior college, high school, religious education, home making, music, expression, kindergarten, and special lines.

The calendar for the opening of the Institute follows:

August 29 to September 3—Registration in high school and kindergarten.

August 29 to September 10—Registration in junior college, religious education, music, and specials.

September 6—Classwork begins in high school and kindergarten.

September 11, 12—Classwork begins in junior college, religious education, music, and specials.

Death of Sister J. A. Kennedy

One of the faithful early Saints of Independence, Sister Mary Sloan Kennedy, widow of J. A. Kennedy, died August 19, at her home, 110 South Pendleton Avenue, at the advanced age of eighty-seven years, she having been born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in June, 1840. Sister Kennedy had been a faithful Saint since her baptism in 1880, and she is sincerely mourned. Seven children survive her death. Elder C. Ed. Miller conducted her funeral and preached a short sermon on Sunday, August 21.

Second Independence

The young people who met at the early morning service Sunday enjoyed the good Spirit made manifest through testimony of God's many blessings and of their determination to read the Book of Mormon to learn the truths contained therein.

Sunday school at 9.30 was both interesting and instructive. We wish many more were getting the good of these meetings. Brother Albert McCullough, author of "Consecration," was with the young people in the basement, and judging by the way they sang with him the meeting was enjoyed. At the same hour Brother F. A. Cool addressed the older Saints in the upper auditorium. His sermon was well received and appreciated. Following the sermon, our K L D S Quartet gave a beautiful selection. We would be glad to have them with us more frequently.

At this meeting announcement was made of the approaching marriage of Brother Samuel Edmunds and Sister Mary Fields, to be solemnized at the church Friday evening at eight o'clock.

At three o'clock the church was filled by sorrowing friends and relatives to pay last respects to our beloved Brother Henry H. Campbell, who died Friday at the home of his nephew, Brother Alma Campbell, south of Blue Springs. Brother R. J. Lambert spoke comfort and courage to the soul of each one present, helping us to forget our sorrow at our loss and to rejoice in Uncle Henry's triumph and joy in his reunion with loved ones gone to the other side before him. A large procession followed the remains to the cemetery, where he was laid to rest beside Aunt Mary, who preceded him by nearly three years. Both had been run down by autos and injured fatally, he so badly that he could never go back to his former occupation.

Liberty Street Church

At the ice cream social given at Courtney Thursday, August 18, a group of young people from our congregation furnished the program of the evening.

Sunday afternoon, August 14, a number of people from our congregation met in prayer service with Brother and Sister Hancock, who live on the Lees Summit road. A good meeting was enjoyed.

Brother E. T. Atwell talked to the Sunday school on the subject, "The Book of Mormon."

We were privileged to have Brother Clyde F. Ellis as our speaker at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday. His text was taken from the tenth chapter of John, sixteenth verse, "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd."

Walnut Park

The usual forty or fifty were out for early prayer meeting Sunday, where Elder John Schwab presided, and another very interesting meeting is reported.

At eleven o'clock Elder C. K. Green was the speaker, with Elders R. Barnhardt and W. W. Scott assisting. The sermon, on the thought of being heirs of God, was full of splendid instruction for daily living.

Among Sunday visitors at the church was Sister Callie B. Stebbins, from Lamoni, who found in the congregation a large number of acquaintances, some of whom she had not met for years, and who were happy to welcome her. Another visitor was Brother Lloyd Minor, from Welland, Ontario, who came here with Brother R. Barnhardt on his recent return from Canada. Brother Minor is here for a short visit with old friends.

Enoch Hill

At the eleven o'clock service Sunday, a pleasing musical number was given by Sister Charles Warren's Blue Bird Band.

Brother William Sarratt was in charge of the service and presented as the speaker one of his old acquaintances from Nebraska City, Nebraska, Elder H. A. Higgins, now of Kansas City. Brother Higgins was also greeted by a goodly number of other Saints who had known him formerly and were glad to hear him discourse again on a gospel theme—"Faith."

One thought impressed on our minds in his sermon was the need of our living a life that would bear watching and imitating since each of us has an influence on those around us. We should choose a high ideal and strive faithfully to live up to it, having faith in God to help us and getting really acquainted with Christ.

East Independence

Brother E. T. Atwell spoke at the eleven o'clock hour August 14. He also sang two solos. At the evening service Brother Frank Minton gave an interesting discourse. We are always glad to have Brother Frank back in our midst.

At the morning service, August 21, Brother E. T. Atwell was the speaker. He discussed the Book of Mormon and urged us to try to read it, from beginning to end, before the last of the year, as we have been requested to do. He spoke of Longfellow's poem, "Hiawatha," and connected it up with the Book of Mormon. He showed that the Indian legends as Longfellow learned them from the Indians themselves were proof of the Book of Mormon.

Brother H. J. Friend was the evening speaker, also basing his talk on the Book of Mormon.

A letter from James A. Wilson to the Presiding Bishopric, writing in behalf of the Lowbanks reunion, says: "You will be glad to hear that the reunion has proved a success in every way. We will have about two hundred dollars to start next year. As to the spiritual side, God was with his people and made his mind and will known on several occasions. It was the unanimous opinion that it was by far the best reunion we have ever held in these parts. We are all happy over the results."

The Mother of Tomorrow

Paper written by Mrs. H. Ecker, 85 Carlisle Street, Buffalo, New York. Read at District Conference, Niagara Falls, New York, 1927.

The name mother is so closely associated with the name father that it is almost impossible to speak of them separately.

Perhaps there never was a time in the history of our beautiful Nation when mothers were under a greater strain than at the present time, and it is growing more so with the onward march of time. Why?

Partly because our mothers have lowered their standard. Partly because fathers neglect their duty in teaching their boys. Outside the name of our heavenly Father and his glorious Son, there is no name so sweet as mother, unless it is that of father. Yet how often are our young men and women permitted to speak of their mother as "the old woman," "the old girl," "the old lady," and of the father as "the old man," "the boss," "the governor," etc. The parents sit by and smile as if it were really to be approved. Such disrespect should be nipped in the bud, because it grows rapidly and carries with it a disrespect for mother—a lowering of the standard of womanhood, if you please—and puts mother in a place where the girl can not come in confidence to the "old girl" for information when needed.

The blame for this condition is not to be placed on the woman alone. The husband is blameworthy who so disrespectfully addresses his wife before their children, when she has gone into the valley of the shadow of death that they might have life, for his sake. For is it not his duty to teach his son that the name of woman is sacred and holy, and should be used as such?

I fear too many fathers and mothers, in telling the wonderful story of life and creation, tell it in such a way that a vulgar accent is left with the name of woman, marriage, and the creation of life. True, it should be told; but with the greatest of reverence and respect for the plans which God has made in the creation of mankind.

There is nothing so sweet as to walk down the street behind a couple who are truly in love, whose minds are pure and clean, and who have the greatest respect for each other's character: the girl who has the respect of the boy or young man, to whose care and protection her parents have trusted her; and the young man who is too manly to betray that trust; and who have not spent the years of their younger lives flirting with everyone they happened to meet, and can still blush at any time at a sign of affection in public.

On the other hand, there is nothing so vulgar, so coarse, so disgusting, as to walk down the street behind a couple where lust, evil-mindedness, degraded actions, and giving the public (who are not interested but amused at the cheapness) a full view of their so-called affections without a blush. How can we expect our future mothers to be different from the girls of today? Haven't you seen girls going down the street hanging onto young men when really they would have looked a great deal better walking on their own strength?

No girl who is active in the ballroom is active in the church.

The girl who will take a drink, smoke a cigaret, or use God's name in vain, has lowered her standard of womanhood and can not make a good mother. No man with a good father's teaching would trust her for the mother of his children.

There is much promiscuous kissing among both single and married folks at the present time. It has come to the time when men and women go to parties and see other men and women kissing their companions and consider they are not to be questioned about it, either. Such parties should not be had in the homes of the people of our church. It is the first step to home breaking, distrust, and jealousy. Such things are all wrong. If such things should happen, uninvited, we should have the gumption to stop them lest those who do not like it go home.

The mission of the mother is very sacred. While it is true she does not hold priesthood, yet it is also true she is the mother of the priesthood and should keep herself spiritually in a condition to be worthy to give that boy to the church, to be used as God sees fit in his service, in the priesthood; and our girls can fill a responsible place in the work of helping the priesthood, and all work together for "the march of the angel's message."

The church is calling for pure men who are worthy to bear the vessels of the Lord; and women to be worthy wives to such men. How will the mother of tomorrow (the jazz age) be able to serve the church in such a capacity, unless she draws herself apart and is different? They must row against the stream and not drift with the tide.

How many of our girls today are willing to be wives of missionaries and live as they do, on the plainest of food and clothing, in order that others may hear the gospel story and be saved in the kingdom?

How many of our girls could marry a missionary and not complain of her sacrifices to the extent that her husband who has accepted the holy priesthood and must answer in the same would be drawn from the field and even forsake his priesthood? Not that we desire to have our missionaries' wives living so plain, but in most cases they do, and we do not hear much complaining either; perhaps not as much as from those who have plenty and to spare. But right here let me say, There is no room in the best home in America or food on the best table in the world too good for our missionary's wife. I mean collectively, not individually. Many a heartache and worry she has for our sake that we know nothing about. She is left to be both father and mother, and sacrifices the desires of her children and herself that we might have the service and teaching of the best years of her loving husband's life, and she does it cheerfully! If we could feel the lonesomeness she does at times and feel the pinch that she does, we would try to train our girls and boys to put their pennies in the Christmas offering instead of buying lollypops.

It surely would do us all good to take the missionary mother's allowance from our pay check and compel ourselves to live on it. If we did that for a month or so, we surely would not be backward in slipping her a dollar or two now and then.

They are the wonderful mothers. They have no fear for their daughters as future mothers, because they have taken the time to teach them.

Some one has said the time to train a child is long before he is born, and there is more truth than poetry in it.

A great speaker in France once said while their country was upset, "What France needs is good mothers"; and that is not true of France alone. What any country needs is good mothers. We remember the saying, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

If we smoke, drink, swear, and tell vulgar jokes and stories, we can only expect our future mothers to do one worse.

But if our time be spent in telling the gospel story to our children, watching the books they read, being careful of the shows they attend and the company they keep, we will be able to say with one of old, "Train up a child in the way it should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it," and remember always to take our troubles to God in prayer.

In prayer there is true power, and we will not have so much worry about our future mothers.

If we would have good mothers, we must be on our guard all the time. "We must have no sleeping soldiers in the army of the Lord," and that refers to the mission of mothers just as much as anyone else. It seems very popular to have undue familiarity between our boys and girls. There is also a great wave of disobedience to parents. The young man of today thinks he has a perfect right to take any girl he pleases out joy riding, against the wishes of her parents; in fact, insinuates it none of their business; and the girls think they are badly used if they are not allowed to go. They have wonderful confidence in themselves, which as a rule does not turn out so well.

If our fathers were doing their duty, in training their boys that a girl's character is all she has and it is his duty to protect her character, and that he should not only regard her parents' wishes but encourage her to do likewise, how much more confidence her parents could have in him! Then, when the question of marriage comes up, they would not have to run off and get married, as many do, and then beg to be taken back home.

If our young men were trained when young to be ashamed to take their sweethearts to questionable places, or themselves be seen in such places, and if they were taught to look for a good mother for their children instead of a doll for a glass cage, girls would show a marked change.

If mothers will insist on having respect, they may have it; and the girl who respects her mother generally makes a good mother.

Woodbine, Iowa

607 Weare Street

The local priesthood have given us much food for thought during the past month.

Brother D. R. Chambers was with us last sacrament day and took an edifying part in the testimony meeting. He also occupied the pulpit in the evening; and as we listened, our mind went back to the time when our home was in Gallands Grove Branch and Brother Chambers was as a member of our family for weeks as he preached the gospel with such power as to convince the people of the necessity for obedience, and buried many in Christ in the waters of old Mill Creek.

Brother W. R. Adams preached both morning and evening on last Sunday, expounding the temporal law with power and understanding. Come again, Brother Adams. Some of our new members are much interested in learning more of this phase of the work.

We have been blessed with the much-needed rain, and a smiling countenance depicts the farmer's gratitude.

Brother James Adams and Sister Zella Lizer were recently married and will soon be at home in Woodbine. We wish happiness for these worthy young people.

Many of the Saints are busy preparing to attend Missouri Valley reunion.

Book of Mormon Theme at Stewartsville

At the largest and best reunion held at Stewartsville, Missouri, in Far West Stake in the last several years, sentiment was crystallized Sunday afternoon when 195 responded to an appeal to consider the importance of the Book of Mormon in this anniversary year and read or reread it this year. The exercises of the day combined to make a correct setting for the Book of Mormon theme, and when suggested it became the theme for conversation for the rest of the day. Officers of the reunion say that undoubtedly many more during the reunion will express their willingness to undertake to read the Book of Mormon through this year.

Pleasantview Branch

TRYON, NEBRASKA, August 16.—It has been decided by the branch president, W. L. Sivits, that no more all-day meetings here would be advisable. The all-day meeting at North Platte may depend on the interest of the Saints that are isolated. If all who live at a distance can come, and will come, surely they will create an interest that will be for the good of all. Try it and see what the outcome will be. You are welcome. Come.

The Book of Mormon should be in the home of every Latter Day Saint, and if possible every member should have his own book.

September 22, 1927, is the one hundredth anniversary of the date when the records contained in the Book of Mormon were delivered to the keeping of the church. This event makes the year a significant one in church history.

It will be a wholesome experience for every member of the church to read the Book of Mormon this year. Hundreds have already signified their interest and have started in this worth-while endeavor.

PROBLEMS of INDUSTRIAL ZION

A new booklet just off the press is now ready for sale. Orders filled same day as received. The content of this booklet is an amplification of a series of lectures given during the last General Conference, and the matter of stewardships and cooperation in developing Zion is presented from quite a new angle.

It is written in a very interesting style. Definite situations are discussed and analyzed in a logical, common sense way, and the pleasing thing about the book is the fact that the entire treatise is based on the spiritual ground work of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The booklet is designed as a text for study by the priesthood in their priesthood meetings and by the membership in their study classes throughout the church. The First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric urge that this booklet be secured and study work begun.

The booklet will be about one hundred and seventy-five pages and will be sold for 20c each.

Order through the publicity agent in your branch when possible. Otherwise order direct from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

The Menacing Speeder

We have no quarrel with the man or woman or child who enjoys swift motion and who controls his indulgence so that he does not endanger the lives of others. But society is awakening to the fact that the sufferance of the incapable pilot or chaffeur, or of the careless, drunken, or speed-mad driver is no longer endurable, and we find ourselves in full accord with the opinion.

The examination of statistics discloses several facts which all should know. 1. The great majority of accidents in which automobiles figure are caused by one or more fast drivers—drivers who not only disregard the speed regulations, but who make minor matters excuses for very high speed and the taking of risks to themselves while they force any they meet to take a similar risk. Few accidents occur in which no speeder figures.

2. The victims among pedestrians are largely children five to fifteen years of age, and elderly people. In order to be safe on the streets today, with speeding at its present high tide, one must be in possession of alertness and maturity of mind and judgment, and be capable of quick movements: hardly a condition consistent with a high state of civilization.

3. The laws of commonwealth and municipality are largely antiquated, and are not observed by any respectable proportion of the people, for the reason that they impose ridiculous and in some cases almost impossible restrictions, resulting in lack of respect for statutory law in general.

But some means must be found to eradicate this hazard which is equal to if not greater than the average war, which in Kansas City alone has resulted in more than a thousand deaths in the past fifteen years—and serious work has begun in this direction.

Sunday morning's Journal-Post of Kansas City contains on its front page a news item under the heading, "Speeders to be shown no mercy," and this records the fact that during the latter part of June two men and two women of mature years were driving near Fairmount Park, in a reckless manner, the party being in a state of intoxication. They had been arrested, taken to the court of Thomas H. Knight, in Independence, Missouri, where they were tried June 22, and each sentenced to six months in jail. They had appealed to the Jackson County parole board, which on Saturday recorded themselves as strongly opposed to "showing any leniency towards speeders and reckless motor car drivers." Judge Ben Terte of the parole board remarked, "A reckless driver is a potential murderer; with the death toll from accidents mounting each month, severe measures must be taken to stop reckless driving." So the six-months sentence will likely be executed, and we believe it should be. Fines of one dollar to twenty dollars have but little effect; they scarcely lessen the speed of those fined, and they afford no example with deterring effect. Imprisonment must be tried out, and resorted to quite generally if found effective.

The Kansas City Times for August 30, in a news item under the headline, "Rock pile a safety aid," quotes the remark of J. J. O'Rourke, superintendent of the municipal farm: "In the last fiscal year we had 118 drunken, careless drivers spending their vacations on the farm. We had twenty-three careless drivers who were sober when their offenses were committed. Of these 141 careless drivers, only four have repeated their visits to the farm."

The news item says that these drunken and careless drivers sent to the farm serve their sentences in shackles, pounding rock, and that they feel deeply the ignominy of classification as dangerous criminals. "Shackles remind them of the necessity of taking their time. You can't even walk speedily with shackles on."

And so the campaign goes on for the control of the speeder. We find no sympathy in us for the law-breaking, reckless, murderous man at the wheel. We do believe that a determined effort should be made to enact laws which will permit reasonable speed, or speed consistent with conditions and safety. "Slow down to eight miles per hour," is no longer an aid to traffic regulation when placed at the entrance to a small village or country town. Such a regulation only invites its abrogation. Lawmaker and judge should work out from their experiences a reasonable demand, and citizen, driver, and especially Christian should lend every aid, and keep the law. R. J. L.

As Centennial Date Nears, Book of Mormon Readers Increase

Only three weeks now intervene before September 22, the centennial date of the giving to the world of the Book of Mormon. Within the past month thousands of Saints have taken up the reading and study of the book, and every day or two we have news of additions to the army thus employed.

One hundred and twenty-eight signified their desire to begin reading or rereading the Book of Mormon when the subject was presented to a meeting at the Nauvoo reunion.

Fifty have been added to the seventy-five already reading the book, reported from the Michigan reunion at the Park of the Pines.

In past years the church has been admonished of God not to neglect the study of the Book of Mormon, or the former commandments. There have risen from time to time in the Christian church, those who believe that the reading and study of the Scriptures is not of as great moment as it was in former years. These have their duplicates in the Reorganized Church, who believe that the mission of the Book of Mormon is largely fulfilled, and that we can afford to place it and the Bible on our shelf of books to be used for occasional reference, but we are glad that these are only occasional individuals, and that to the great body of Latter Day Saints both the Bible and the Book of Mormon are living, fundamental, spiritual, practical, inspirational records of God's dealings with humanity.

When the church began to fall to pieces in the early Christian era, the word of God was not accessible to the great body of believers; and so long as priestcraft was able to restrain its distribution and study, darkness reigned. But a great reformation and a start in the direction of God came when the Bible was released and the people became busy in reading its pages.

Satan seems to have achieved by other means than physical force, the putting away of the word of God, and again we find mankind slipping and doubt and unbelief increasing. Men and women, youth and maidens are neglecting and even ridiculing these records of divine truth, and profanity and blasphemy are stalking abroad.

It is time for a great awakening; the taking from shelf and case the books of the law, the books of prophecy, the books of divine exhortation, the books of history, replacing the book of fiction, the trivial and mischievous journal of the day with these records, and the imbibing of their information, their doctrine, their statutes, their spiritual atmosphere. If we do this, the time is near when we shall be able to claim that we are God's people in very deed, for unity shall displace dissension, a common thought and purpose shall come to God's people, and they shall go forward to 1930 and beyond.

The proposition of rereading the Book of Mormon before its centennial year shall have closed is being put to the church with the commendable purpose of securing this unity of thought and purpose, and the administrative officers are sending the proposition in definite form to district and branch presidents and others. Slips upon which you may place your name and address as one who wishes to lend impetus to the movement by becoming one of the readers at the present time, accompany the letters to these officials. Get one of them, record yourself, and let the church go forward! R. J. L.

Elder James E. Bishop, in writing the First Presidency, tells of opportunities recently enjoyed while waiting upon visitors at Kirtland Temple. It would seem that there are inquiring minds who are looking for our social message, and if Latter Day Saints are able to present that message, without their own additions or attempts at ornamentation, we expect to see the theories adopted by many now in the world. A proportion of these will look with favor upon the source from which has come the answer to their social questions, and will obey the church's ordinances and commandments. Elder Bishop's letter appears in Zion's Ensign of September 1.

Sister Emma Burton, well known to the church, the wife of the late Joseph F. Burton, has turned over to the Graphic Arts Bureau photographs of the late Elder D. S. Mills, Alexander H., and David H. Smith when they were young men, a splendid picture of Apostle Josiah Ells, and a fine picture of Bertha Madison Smith, mother of President F. M. Smith, when she was about thirty-five years old. It may be you have some photograph of historical value to the church which is of no particular value or use to yourself. Why not look through your collection and sort out those you wish to contribute?

The church's radio station, known by the call letters K L D S, has been granted full-time wave length, and this number of the HERALD and Ensign contain the forthcoming schedule. In order to meet the requirements of the Federal Radio Commission, it will be necessary to largely increase the schedule, eventually reaching forty or more hours per week. The additions are expected to be made partly by the sale of broadcasting privileges to business and other organizations.

Graceland Opening

Graceland College opens in September under most favorable circumstances for its thirty-second academic year. There is a growing conviction on the part of the entire membership of the church that our young people must have the fullest opportunity possible for preparation for their life's work, and they continue to feel that this opportunity should be given in the church college under the best surroundings available.

Graceland has never been so well equipped for a successful year. The faculty will bring added inspiration and preparation to the students this fall, after a summer spent in graduate work in some of the best universities in the land. The administrative officers have been in attendance at conferences and conventions, in Minneapolis and Chicago, having to do with the solution of college problems, thus enabling them to bring to the students the best in the way of college planning and organization. It is confidently predicted that the year will open under most favorable auspices.

The special three-day program for Freshmen, beginning Friday, September 9, will give the Freshmen a better insight into the year ahead of them and enable them to have a much more even start with the older students—the Sophomores and Juniors.

Graceland continues to enjoy the highest accredited standing for three years of college work by the Iowa Intercollegiate Standing Commission, and as a junior college by the North Central Association. Graduates from the teachers' course are granted State teachers' certificates, thus enabling them to enter the public schools of the country with confidence of success.

The library and the laboratories will serve the students in a larger way than ever before, due to large additions and reorganization.

It is expected that some of the general officers of the church will each be able to spend at least a week at the college this year in courses of lectures and conferences with the students, thus enabling the students to become intimately acquainted with the church leaders. This one opportunity alone will be of great value to the hundreds of young people from all over the country who come to spend the year at Graceland. Every indication is that the year will be one of the best in the history of the college.

The opening date for Freshmen is Friday, September 9; for all others, Monday, September 12.

G. N. BRIGGS, President Graceland College.

The Book of Mormon: A Summary

BY S. A. BURGESS

We have taken a very brief survey of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, summing up its history and its evidences.

September 22, this year, it will be a hundred years since the plates were received by Joseph Smith. Naturally our account is a condensed one, only a little more than indicating possible fields of research. It is a wonderful theme to consider: a loving Father who reaches after and blesses all his children.

The Old Testament gives a record of the Jews, but it is mostly taken up as a schoolmaster to bring them to Christ. We expect, in fact we are assured, that most of the early record before them is lost, for there is little written of the ages that preceded the life of Moses. Moses himself doubtless had revealed to him very much more and had handed down to him quite possibly great records, but even the books of Moses were lost and were rewritten by Ezra. Even the original record of Ezra has long since gone the way of the other. The Hebrew manuscripts go back only to the ninth century of the Christian Era. There are versions of an early date, but not further back than the second century before Christ.

The Old Testament was a schoolmaster.

Has not the Lord given other schoolmasters to people to bring them to Christ? Confucius taught the Chinese concerning the great prophet who shall come out of the west, who would teach them concerning the Eternal One and the life to come. Buddha and Mohammed brought their people nearer to the one true God. It is not enough to consider their teachings as understood, and misunderstand, today. We need to go back and consider the conditions under which their revelations were presented and how wonderful was the improvement it made in the understanding and worship of the people to whom they came. We need to go deep enough, then, to understand what they really have done. This is only by way of comparison, for of course they can not compare with the Old Testament Scriptures, but this is a great story of the revelation and purpose of God in these ancient times, of which traditions remain. Kersey Graves wrote of sixteen crucified saviors. Later writers have greatly increased the number, but are they not after all a testimony of the great love of God, perversions of the one true story, the revelation in ancient times of the Son of God?

In the Bible, note this one evidence of this ancient knowledge of the Son of God: when the three Hebrews were cast into the fiery furnace by Nebuchadnezzar's orders, and the fourth was to be the Son of God.

When Jesus was crucified, the Roman soldiers said, "Surely this is the Son of God."

Then Paul wrote the Corinthians that the Hebrews with them "drank of that spiritual Rock . . . which Rock was Christ."

Then we turn to the American Continents, and here we find records preserved, parts of which date from before the sixth century B. C., and other parts written at different times in the following millennium, and the abridged account prepared in the fourth century of our era.

It is true that we do not have, in this case either, the original record, but it comes as an added testimony and witness to the eternal Father and his beloved Son. This record was hidden away and brought forth and translated by the power of God. It is true that membership in the church does not require belief in this book, but it does require faith in God, and a willingness to take upon one the name of his only begotten Son and to keep his commandments.

Still the story of this book is a great one, and well worthy of careful thought and prayer. The book was translated by a young man of little learning. He presents things quite beyond his knowledge. Much of it is written in the language of western New York, but that is to be expected. Nor is it strange that the King James Version of the Bible was quoted at times. God does not open our minds and give revelations word by word, with every punctuation; but we should study and pray to secure those things that are the truth coming from Him. "Holy men spoke in early times as they were moved upon by the Holy Spirit."—2 Peter 1:21.

The truth is there, but we must study it out that we may grow mentally and spiritually. He does not desire, nor does he offer a leadership of continued ignorant obedience: though he may ask a very different thing, that we have faith in him where we can not yet understand his purpose. But we will some time learn that it was necessary and for the best.

With the Book of Mormon, inspiration was given to read and understand and learn to translate. But the language is usually, if not always, the language of Joseph Smith, or Oliver Cowdery, his scribe.

These plates were found in the Hill Cumorah, translated, a church was organized, and the book sent forth. The primary purpose of the church is the restoration of the gospel of Jesus Christ, with the same ordinances, the same organization as that had when he was upon earth. In this purpose, this book plays the part first of all to the American Indian and the Jew, but also to all mankind.

The church was organized to send men out to take the gospel to the people of the earth. The book was taken to the Indian, but hindered there, was taken to others, to men like Sidney Rigdon and his associates at Kirtland, for example.

The book has gone all over the world. It has been translated into many languages; it has been carried by oxcart, by team, on foot, by railroad, and may yet be carried by airplane in the time of His hastening.

It is significant that in the time of His hastening we should find the means of rapid transportation increased beyond anything the world has ever before known.

The boats that crossed the sea in months, now cross it in days. The highways that once took many months of dangerous travel are now crossed in a very few days by railroad trains, and in still fewer days by the airplane. To this may also be added the automobile as one common means of rapid transportation to carry His word to all parts of the world, nor should we overlook the service of the United States mail in carrying the gospel throughout the country; in fact, throughout the world.

How many of our readers have wondered, and simply marveled when we read that every eye may see Jesus when he comes to earth, and hear the final triumph? That seemed, a hundred years ago, to be so far beyond possibility as to be purely miraculous, if not foolish, to the mind of man.

But here again one of the foolish things of humanity becomes simple and easy in the sight of God. The telephone extended the power of man to hear, but even that does not give as wide a response as the radio. The telephone speaks from one to another, or from one to a few, but today it is not impossible to vision a great super-station of thousands of kilowatts instead of watts, and then in every home where there is a radio, a voice speaks out in thunder tones. It may indeed sound like Gabriel's horn. Many loud speakers bear the resemblance of a horn.

Each eye shall see. It is the hastening time. The century just closed was one of marvelous developments in mechanical science. We now have on display the speaking vitaphone, a moving picture, with speaking likeness. Already the invention is made which permits of sight as well as sound over the telephone.

To some it has seemed impossible that people all over the earth will see at one time. Refraction has caused a mirage of things a hundred or more miles away. A series of mirrors might send a vision around a corner, or many corners. Those that have seen a mirage will not consider it impossible that such reflection might be carried to some different parts of the world.

But we know now that the intelligence of the universe need not depend upon anything so uncertain when we consider what the mind of man has done. It is but a trivial thing to conceive of the use of electrical energy in such a way that happenings are not unseen, though they occur on opposite sides of the earth.

The Bible teaches the great love of God and his Son. It speaks of early revelations; it gives the prophecy of the coming forth of such a record. Archæology confirms the story in its many details.

Here is indeed the voice of God bearing testimony a second time to the fact that Jesus is the Christ.

All who can read the signs of the times are convinced that this is the hastening time. The rapidity of the development of the world in mechanical ways, the growth in spiritual and moral development, gives hope of a people worthy to receive further direction of the Divine Will and a revelation of ancient knowledge, including the sealed part of the plates. To those who are prepared, it will not be in word only, but in spirit and in truth, for they have taken upon them the name of Jesus and are living in such a manner as to be a living testimony of his love.

Our centennial of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon is incidental with this great theme.

"Remember Cumorah"

The pageant written by President Elbert A. Smith, a triumph of his special talent, is being worked out in many quarters of the church for presentation September 22, the centennial date, and September 25, the succeeding Sunday. Spiritual Gifts

BY EDMUND J. GLEAZER

A General Conference sermon in the Auditorium, April 11, reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

The subject assigned me this evening is spiritual gifts. I will discuss this topic somewhat in connection with the coming forth of the latter-day work. Permit me to invite your attention to the 12th chapter of 1 Corinthians, commencing to read with the 1st verse:

Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant. Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led. Wherefore I give you to understand that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are differences of administration, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues. But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.

My text is found in the 12th verse of the 14th chapter, 1 Corinthians, a portion of which I read: "As ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church."

I am just wondering how best to present the thought that the power of God was made manifest in these latter days. I do not know whether I should commence with the vision of 1820, or with the organization of the church in 1830. You will agree with me that it was a wonderful demonstration of power when God the Father and God the Son saw fit to reveal themselves to Joseph Smith. It was in truth a revelation, a revelation such as the world had not experienced in hundreds of years previous to that time. It was a revelation that was going to mean much in the lives of men and nations, not only as it might affect the church which would come into existence, but also because of the influence which it would have upon the world then, and the world which was yet to be.

Some of you may suggest that the power of God was in evidence even previous to the vision of 1820. This I grant to be a fact, but you will also agree with me that the Church of Jesus Christ, as an organized body, was not in existence. Hence the necessity of the organization of the church on April 6, 1830; and with the coming into being of that church there was manifest again in that body that which was known as the gifts of the gospel. These gifts have been characteristic of the church in these days, as they have been characteristic of the church in other days.

When the church was established in New Testament times its divine head, the Divine Head, manifested itself through the body, and gave gifts unto men. The same was true previously. In the Old Testament times God revealed himself to the people through his servants the prophets, and this was not limited to the priesthood, for he had handmaidens who prophesied. The gifts which are enumerated in the reading I presented were also made manifest in those days; and I thank God that the church in these days still has the manifestation of divine power in the numerous gifts of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Use and Abuse of the Gifts

The Restoration, or the great Restoration movement, not only brought back to the earth the church, as a church which had existed in the days of the apostles, but it also brought back with that church a manifestation of the gifts of the gospel. It may be that we do not as fully appreciate the gifts as we might, and I think that is due to the fact that too many of us have been ignorant of the purpose for which these gifts have been placed in the church. I say that kindly, but I speak out of the experience I have had as a servant of the Lord. Sometimes when we protest the misuse of the gifts of the gospel we are misunderstood and are looked upon as those who do not truly appreciate this phase of divine power or expression. I think that is a mistake. The abuse of the gifts is harmful. Those of us who have protested against their abuse or their misuse, must not be regarded as having no faith or confidence in their manifestation, for that does not represent us aright.

Paul had difficulty in his time as a regulating officer in the church of Jesus Christ—and I want you to note he had occasion to visit the branches of the church, too, by the way. He discovered there was occasion for regulation; that the church at Corinth was troubled and distressed over the question of spiritual manifestations, and it was necessary to address to them an epistle, a part of which you have just heard. Notice the opening words of the chapter: "Now, concerning spiritual gifts, I would not have you ignorant."

To be ignorant of spiritual gifts would be disastrous. To be ignorant of spiritual gifts in this age would be disastrous to the church of today. Paul did not discourage the exercising of these gifts, but he attempted to instruct the people, the saints, in a proper use of the gifts which God had bestowed upon them. He referred to the fact that at one time there were Gentiles carried away unto dumb idols, even as they were led. They were carried to and fro by every wind of doctrine, by the cunning craftiness of men whereby they lay in wait to deceive, but now ye are the body of Christ, and there have been bestowed upon you gifts severally as God will, for a wise purpose, that you no longer be misled; that you no longer be deceived, but that you might become vessels of power, instruments of power, in my kingdom, or in my church, but that these other forces which God has set in his church, if not properly used may destroy the church; but if properly used, if properly exercised, if properly understood, they will redeem.

He found it necessary, even as we find it necessary, to call their attention to the fact that no man can receive the testimony of Jesus Christ in the fullness save by the Spirit of God, and I am convinced that if this people knows one thing more than another, in order to bring to pass the ideals of this church it will be through the living, individual testimony of the divinity of Jesus Christ.

We have our problems to solve, but these problems which confront us and which grievously burden us, can be solved. These burdens roll away if the membership of this church individually would seek for an individual testimony of the divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ. That means more than saying, "I believe in Christ." It means more than acceptance of his faith. It is that Spirit which has been responsible for the carrying on of this latter-day work, and which has caused men and women to sacrifice all that they held dear that they might make their contribution to this church.

None of us can truthfully say that Jesus is the Christ unless we have a manifestation of the Spirit of God, and I have wondered, my dear friend, just what might happen this conference, what might happen this next conference year, if there would only come to this people a greater or more abundant portion of the power of the Almighty. We need it. We should seek for it, not for self; but that we might edify the church.

Diversities of Gifts

Paul found it necessary to call their attention further to the fact that there are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit. No doubt there were folks in those days who were somewhat jealous because they did not have, or seem to have, the gift of prophecy that some other brother or sister was blessed with. Others were jealous because some seemed to speak in tongues and others to interpret the tongues, that they did not seem to have that gift, and I am wondering if any of them were jealous because some seemed to exercise the gift of wisdom and others did not seem to have it. I believe there were those then who forgot all about wisdom, all about knowledge, for they were very much concerned, as we are sometimes, about prophesying, speaking in tongues, or the interpretation of tongues; or, in other words, those spectacular gifts appealed to them as they do to us. I do not mean to discount the spectacular gifts when I say that, for I believe in prophesying, and speaking in tongues, and interpretation of tongues, and believe these must increase as the body increases. But, my good friends, while I believe in these, I would, if I could, emphasize the necessity of a cultivation and seeking after the gifts of wisdom and of knowledge. All these gifts are essential. I don't know of one that is more important than another, although some of my brethren have urged at times, and possibly they are right, that we should have the gift of wisdom—that the gift of wisdom is even more essential than the gift of knowledge; but wisdom, as some have defined it, is the correct use of our knowledge.

I have met men in this world who have had a considerable amount of knowledge, but they certainly lacked wisdom in the use of that knowledge; and instead of being a blessing to the church and to the world, their gift has been destructive. But I am not going to suggest as to the relative importance of these various gifts, because I have already stated I believe they are all essential, and believe furthermore that the church can well afford to seek God for a more abundant manifestation of them, for the purpose of edifying the body; but we must learn the lesson, even as the Corinthian saints learned their lesson, that there are diversities of gifts, and that God divideth to every man as he will; not that one man should profit or be exalted above his fellows, but dividing these gifts severally as God willeth, the body would be edified in love, and grow up unto him in all things, even Christ.

The Gifts Are for the Church

That leads to this suggestion, that the gifts of the gospel exist not for the benefit of any one particular individual, but for the benefit of the church of the living God directly, or the world indirectly, if the church functions as God intended it should. So Paul pointed out that there were diversities of gifts operated by the same Spirit and divided severally as God willed, and it is not the right of any man to dictate to God as to what his gifts should be, for God knows better than we what our gifts should be, and God distributes that gift with the interest of his church in mind.

If I had continued my reading you would have discovered in that wonderful analogy that Paul gives as to the body of Jesus Christ, how these gifts are all necessary, even as members of the body are necessary, and all should make their contribution to the will of the body—but I wonder if you noticed my text. It was a new one to me. I thought there was something in the 14th chapter I might use, for I remembered Paul admonishing the saints somewhere that these gifts should not be consumed upon their own lusts, and I noticed this text.

Zeal Is Necessary

You know even preachers are pleased at times when they get a new text. This is new to me, although it may be old to the rest of you. Notice, if you will: "Forasmuch as ye are zealous"—and God knows we should be zealous. I have been criticized in the past for my zeal; now I am criticized at times because I seem to lack that zeal. When I first came into this church, like most of my brothers and sisters, I had a great deal of zeal and very little knowledge. You know about what happens. I think I was just as honest then as now, and as anxious to promote the interests of my Father's kingdom, but in my zeal I oftentimes failed to do the thing I should have done in bringing men to God. In other words, I drove them away. But of late I have become aware of the fact that if I am to make my contribution to the church more effective than it is today, I must have a restoration of that zeal that characterized my early experiences in this church.

You know there is a passage in the scriptures that runs something like this: "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation. Then will I teach transgressors thy ways and sinners shall be converted unto thee." These are the words of David, and I am convinced, my fellow Latter Day Saints, that not only does your speaker require a restoration of that zeal which characterized our first acceptance of the gospel of Jesus Christ, but the church, as a whole, requires that zeal; and so we should be zealous, but not for self; not for selfish purposes; not for the advancement of self. We should be zealous for the building up and establishing of the kingdom of God. "Forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church."

Would you, then, find fault with any brother or with any sister who was seeking to excel for the edifying of the church? Think what that would mean to this church! Think what it would mean to the world if every member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints would be seeking to excel, not for self, but that they might edify the church!

I received a great deal of inspiration tonight in watching these little fellows playing for all they were worth upon their cornets and trombones. I thought, if they can blow and put their zeal into the contribution they are making to this service, even though I am not as prepared as I would like to be, I must take my place with similar zeal and attempt to make my contribution.

I can imagine what would happen to this church if everyone of us put zeal into our respective tasks or work that some of these little fellows were doing here tonight. Seek to excel in the manifestation of these spiritual gifts, not for self, but for the edifying of the body of Christ, and the body of Christ can not be edified without this divine manifestation, or without this divine unction.

Should Seek to Manifest Our Gifts

I have called your attention to the fact that these gifts existed for the purpose of edifying the body. That means that every Latter Day Saint, old or young, whether he be a member of the priesthood or laity, regardless of sex, every one of us should seek our respective gifts, and manifest those gifts under the divine Spirit to such an extent that the body of Christ might be glorified among men.

Some of my friends who believe in the gifts of the gospel have limited the exercise of these gifts to the prayer meeting, to the sacramental service; and some have gone a little further, and said, O yes, the speaker may also be blessed with the gifts; but we usually expect the speaker to be blessed with the gifts of wisdom and knowledge; and yet there have been occasions when our speakers have been endowed with the spirit of prophecy when they have been preaching. But I go farther than that. I believe, my good friends, that these gifts, as the Scriptures have suggested, have been divided or given to all the members of the church severally as God willeth.

I hope that the business man, as he conducts his business affairs, is blessed with gifts even as the speaker is blessed with the gifts as he attempts to defend the church on the frontier. My brother on the right, with whom I was associated in Boston for some time—a business man in that city—is entitled to the gifts of the gospel even as your speaker, or any other member of the church. I truly believe, and do not believe I would embarrass him by saying that he believes, that as he attempts to conduct his business affairs with the thought in mind of the advancement of the church of the living God, that the Spirit of God has come to him time and time and again of the revelation of God which came to him when he had reached his human limitations, and God revealed to him the next step. He took that step and was successful.

Manifestations of Gifts Are for All

I am trying to impress you that in this church we are one. We are one body, and the manifestations of that Spirit are not limited to a few members or to the priesthood. It is not limited to the men who go out as general conference appointees, but the same Spirit is poured out upon all our members; for God distributes it severally as he willeth, and God bestows the respective gift that is needed in that particular place.

I believe that God builds well. I believe that God builds wisely. I believe whatsoever God doeth it is for the benefit of the church of which he is the head. Sometimes, too, I become convinced that we should attempt to justify the principles of our gospel, the latter-day gospel, from the standpoint of utility; and I have attempted to ask myself the question, Just what contribution does the body receive from the gift of prophecy? I mention this first, as most of us seem to think it is the most important of the gifts—let us take the gift of prophecy. We want to hear God speak through his servants the prophets. Sometimes we fast and pray that God would thus declare himself. We have sat in the meetings, in the assemblies of Saints, we have heard his voice, we have recognized the source, we have known that it was the voice of God through his servants the prophets; we have gone forth from those meetings refreshed; we have gone forth invigorated. We have told our friends they should have been there; that there was a wonderful meeting. We were bathed under the sunlight of the power of the living God—and we have let the matter rest with that. I think that is a mistake.

Have the People Heard God?

Sometimes when I have been deprived of being at some of these meetings where the Spirit of God has been made manifest in prophecy, and individuals have told me about the wonderful meeting they have had, and I have turned to them and asked them, What did God say? they have looked at me in amazement; and they hesitated and said, "Well, now, let me see . . . I can not tell you." And I have oftentimes wondered what God accomplished when he spoke to the people.

I was returning from my second or third General Conference in my early experience in the ministry when I met a brother on the street car in Philadelphia, who was largely responsible for my coming into this church. I greeted him, and he returned the greeting. I was sure if there was any man in this church who would be pleased to see me, and to know that I was one of the men who was giving my time to the ministry of this church, it would be this particular brother. As we stood there together, he asked, "Where are you coming from?" I said, "I just came back from Independence; I was at the conference."

Why Does Not God Speak?

He asked, "Did you have a revelation this year?" I said, "No." He said, "Just as I thought. Just as I thought. The Lord doesn't seem to recognize the church any more. The Lord doesn't speak to the church any more. It is becoming a man-made church"—and a number of other things he said along that line. He said so much that I spoke back. I said to him, "Do you know why God doesn't speak? Simply because there are too many people in this church like you." Oh, I could talk to him, because he recommended this church to me, and according to his story, on this particular occasion, he succeeded in getting me into a terrible mess. "The reason why God doesn't speak is because there are too many people like you. You have heard the voice of God and paid no attention to what he said. You enjoyed it while you heard it or read it, but that is as far as you are willing to go. But, my dear brother, we have in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants an abundance of revelations which this church has not yet put into effect, and maybe if this church attempts to put into effect what God has given, God will give more."

My dear friends, that's the trouble, as I see it, with the branches and districts of this church. Often we hear the voice of God and enjoy it as we hear it, but fail to profit by the instruction contained in that voice, and to that extent the gift has been given in vain. While it inspired us at the time, that is not enough. What may be said of the gift of prophecy may be said of the gift of tongues and the interpretation of tongues, and personally I question the wisdom of exercising the gift of tongues unless you are assured that the interpretation is present. The same thing is true of the gift of wisdom. Of what use would the gift of wisdom be to us if we failed to use it?

The Gifts Are Gifts of Utility

Remember, I said I want you to examine these gifts from the standpoint of utility. They are not ornaments. To the extent that we utilize them, to that extent does the body profit. I wonder if we are using the gift of wisdom which God is anxious to place with the membership of this church. The same thing is true of the gift of knowledge. I envy some men in this church; I envy their knowledge. I would to God I had the knowledge that they have. I would like to use it.

Occasionally I go to some of my friends who have a great deal of knowledge and say to them, "Would you mind letting me have a little of that? I want to use it." We have a good friend here, conducting a very successful class—time and again I have gone to him and said to him, "I would like to have a little of your thunder." He is a good man and usually supplies me, but there are some men who have abundance of knowledge, but for some reason or other they fail to use it, or do not use it to the extent that they should use it for the benefit of the church of the living God, and that applies to more than the ministry. It applies to the realm of business even as it applies to the ministry.

The same thing is true of the gift of healing. I have been very much impressed in regard to that gift also. I had a communication from one of our branches just recently; a good brother writing to me called my attention to the fact that a large proportion of the membership of that branch was afflicted and ill. This should not be. I have ministered time and time and again, alone, and sometimes in company with my brothers, and have attempted to examine this gift—the gift of healing—from the standpoint of utility, and have been made to realize that the elders of this church are not living up to their responsibilities, or to their privileges in the laying on of hands for the rebuking of disease. There are men in this congregation who can bear testimony with me that individuals have been raised under their hands practically from the dead. You know that. That is no new story to Latter Day Saints. But you will also realize that when this gift is not exercised as it should be, and sometimes it is abused, the body suffers.

Do Your Gifts Assist Your Brothers?

What about the gift of faith; that wonderful gift! Where we lack in knowledge we require faith. I wonder if those of you who have the gift of faith are using that gift to such an extent that it helps your brothers! In my experience there are times when my light is burning low. There may be times in the experience of my brother when his lights are burning low. Your light may be burning bright. If you bring that light to us and assist us when our lights are low, you can see how that will benefit; or do you consume that gift upon your own lusts? Oh, my brothers and sisters, those who have the gift of faith, when the way is dark, if you will only exercise that gift, think what it would mean to your brothers and sisters struggling along the highway of life!

The gift of faith. All of these gifts must be utilized for the body, if it is to profit and if the purposes of God are to be conserved. But in the utilization of these gifts let us beware lest we misuse them, when they will be destructive to the purposes God had in placing them in his church. And as we look forward to the redemption of Zion—I wonder how long we will look forward to the redemption of Zion—these gifts must be exercised more frequently than they have been, more wisely, and with the thought in mind of edifying the body of Jesus Christ or his church. We must become more conscious of our relationship one to another. We must become more conscious of the individual contribution which we were expected to make in order that the body may be blessed. You must realize the part that God expects you to play. The place that God expects you to fill. I must realize the part that God expects me to play, and a place where I must fill, and I must attempt as well as you to so occupy, to so function and to so serve that the church as a whole will answer the purposes of its creation.

May God help us to appreciate the fact that the gifts and blessings of old have been restored, and to see to it that the restoration shall be worth while; to do this we must take advantage of what the Restoration has made possible.

Peter and Me

BY MARY E. GILLIN

I often think of Peter, how brave and weak was he;
And then I think of Jesus and of blue, blue Galilee!
I fancy I can hear him say, "Come, Peter, follow me!"
And Peter fished no longer in the Sea of Galilee.

To learn from the Great Teacher the souls of men to call.
And very quick was Peter—both quick to rise and fall;
"I'll never, never leave Thee"; then, "I know Him not at all!"

He followed—by the seaside where fishermen were found;
He followed—up the mountain and stood on holy ground!
He tried to walk the waters where winds and waves abound,
And sinking cried, "Lord, save me," above the fearful sound.

O Peter, Brother Peter! how weak and yet how strong!
First to defend the Master, and then so prone to wrong!
At Jesus' side we find thee amidst the shouting throng,
But at the hint of danger, thou followest "far" along.

"Shall I forgive my brother more times than seven?" asked
he;

And then the Master taught him how great God's love can be.
Again, when asked of Jesus, "Who am I? What say ye?"
"Thou art the Christ," he answered; "the Son of God," said
he.

God pardoned you full often; the price in full was paid;
Learn thou, from the Great Teacher, foundation sure is laid—

That in every clime and Nation all men by God were made, Taught you by Heavenly Vision; He was your help—your aid!

Till Peter, Simon Peter, a shepherd you became—
You fed the "sheep" He gave you and glorified His name;
You went unto the Gentiles, you healed the halt and lame,
You overcame your weakness—May I not do the same?

My kinship to your weakness I feel across the years;
In sorrow for my failures, I share your grief and tears.
But Love grows daily stronger, so I put away my fears,
And Galilee seems dearer as the Evening Time appears!

REUNION NEWS

Spring River—Clinton—Southern Missouri

It is with a reluctant hand that I sit down to write an account of the wonderful reunion held at Joplin, Missouri, of the Spring River, Clinton, and Southern Missouri Districts, from August 12 to 21. The pouring out of the Spirit of our Holy Savior is to be long remembered by everyone present at any of the meetings. The effects we feel will be felt even unto the end of time, for many were made to realize the duties which were before them and in doing these duties they will spread the gospel to others who will in turn take up their cross and follow Jesus, and thus the work of one will be made everlasting.

The wonderful sermons presented by Apostle James A. Gillen at the beginning of the ten-day period are to be cherished in our hearts as evidence of God's great love for the universe. Brother Gillen had a way of telling us so that we all could understand.

Patriarch T. C. Kelley was also inspiring in his sermons. His special work, however, was in the giving of blessings through the power of God, not only to the older people, but the blessing of the precious little ones is a gift which many a mother will long appreciate.

All the leaders are so dear to our hearts that we can not know which to place ahead of the other. Bishop C. J. Hunt was blessed with the Spirit of God in presenting to the people one of the fundamental laws of the church, that of tithing. To be remembered also are the jokes he seemed to think of in the right place at the right time. Class work was presented by Brother Hunt at the eleven o'clock hour.

Now for John F. Sheehy, "Uncle John." "He's here," Brother Gillen stopped in the midst of his sermon to tell us on Tuesday night. The games started then and there, for not one hour after arriving in Joplin, Uncle John was down in the park in the large open-air pavilion, saying, "O'Grady says, 'Bow your heads a little lower.'" The class work at 8 a. m. was another one of Brother Sheehy's jobs. During one of the song services he was leading, he stated it was the best singing he had ever heard except in the Stone Church at Independence. The junior services each morning at 10.45 were in charge of him.

The reunion had a fine send-off with the finest kind of weather a person could ask for. But when Henry Sparling, a missionary from the Southern Missouri District got up to preach Monday morning, the rain started coming down, and the faster and louder he talked the faster the rain came, until he was forced to abandon his effort. The new 50 by 110 tent came in handy after it had been water-soaked, but until that time everyone was looking for a dry spot where there wasn't any.

The five young people's prayer meetings held at 7 a. m. did honor to the name of Jesus. It was there that many hearts expressed their thankfulness for the opportunity of attending such a reunion. There, the gladness and joy that had been theirs since coming to the reunion or of the help of the Savior in their walks through life, was expressed. At the young people's prayer meeting, the motto was launched, "Begin preparing now for the reunion next year." Young men who are striving to prepare themselves for a service in the church were told that the time was near when the Lord would have a work for them to do. And no more beautiful testimony from an older person could have been expressed than the children, of having a determination to press forward with zeal, and to put their whole might and soul in this work.

Nine other prayer services were held during the meetings. These were well attended, and an enjoyable spirit was present to all. When time came to close, there were always a few who had not had the opportunity to bear their testimony.

Slides illustrating the history and development of Graceland College were shown before an audience of approximately eight hundred on Saturday night, August 20.

There were sixty tents on the reunion grounds in Cunningham Park besides the big meeting tent. A large open-air pavilion close by served as a place for games, young people's prayer meeting, junior services, and Sunday school.

Elder Amos T. Higdon, president of the Spring River District, must not be forgotten. He was the one who was largely responsible for the success of the reunion. He was mainly in charge of things and was assisted by Brother R. T. Walters, of the Clinton District.

Others who will remain long in our memories are: Ellsworth Gilbert, who assisted in the young people's prayer meetings; Job Negeim, with his voice especially adapted to singing; Lee Lamons, in charge of the grounds; Virgil Sheppard, Lee Quick, and Brother Riley, missionaries.

The reunion next year is expected to be held at Eldorado Springs, Missouri.

RAYMOND TROYER.

Western Oklahoma

The best reunion ever held in this district just closed at Eagle City, Oklahoma. We make this unqualified statement after having been in close touch with the district for many years. It did not seem to matter in attendance or spirit that the reunion began in the rain and continued so for the greater part of the time. It poured down rain at least five days or nights and drizzled or threatened rain most of the other days. We were fortunate, however, in that the rains came in the night, leaving the days generally dry, though cloudy, and this made volley-ball conditions ideal. Still we had about three bright and sunny days, including the last two. We appreciated these the more.

There were thirty-two tents on the grounds, exclusive of the service tents. The sleeping tents were new and therefore leaked the more. The day services were well attended, and the sermons and social meetings enjoyed a goodly portion of the Spirit. The lectures by Brother Sheehy were refreshing, because they covered subject matter in a measure new to this field. They were powerful, because all could see that they analyzed the deeper undercurrents of the soul. Brother Hunt kept the spirits buoyant with his cheerful optimism, and his inexhaustible fund of rare facts and special bits of history. The undersigned, being the other one of the missionaries present, gave sermons on missionary topics. These, with others of the district officers, including our missionary ad. lib., Lemuel Dyke, allowed the zeal to cool not a bit.

We would like to call attention here to a fact that has much to do with the success of a reunion. It is this: One branch, the Davidson Branch, came thirty strong upon the first day of the reunion and stayed the entire ten days, making a total attendance of 300 for the ten days, not to mention others to swell the attendance to about 45 the latter part. Other branches varied downward from this record of attendance to zero. Some branches were represented the last three days with nearly as many, but thirty persons in attendance for three days will bring an attendance of only 90 for the season. Still other branches were never represented with more than three or four, and these for only a few days. And again this Davidson Branch held a social before the reunion to raise money to assist those who could not afford to attend, and this was being one's "brother's keeper" and helped out the attendance. We expect the reunion of next year to be even greater than this one.

The most promising feature of the reunion was in the young people, for they have grown from a little group to a small multitude. One night after the evening service a wiener roast was given, and on the grassy slope not far from camp in the moonlight, over one hundred, mostly young people, circled hand in hand for some games. It was a revelation to me, who has noted the growth of these young people from year to year. The circle must have been fifty yards across. And then the suit-case race! How they did run; and how they did don those old clothes and beat it back to the relay point. Some thirty-odd pounds of wieners and many buns were required to supply the crowd, including the visitors, and no baskets were required to gather up the fragments.

One of the contributing causes of the good reunions held in this district from year to year is the fact that there has never been any fussing or grumbling. If the people do not like the board, they eat everything set before them and make no remarks for conscience' sake. Many remarked that there seemed to be a spirit of peace pervading the camp from first to last.

Some ordinations were attended to: Ray Diamond, deacon, of Eagle City, to the office of elder; Allan Owings, teacher, of Calumet, to elder; provision was made for the ordination of Fred Durfee, of Seiling, to the office of priest; Ed Balingier, teacher, of Seiling, to the office of elder; and Raymond Dyke, of Eagle City, to the office of deacon. With this list of fine men in new positions, we feel the work in this field will receive an impetus for good.

Six were baptized at the close.

Owen Sound District

The reunion of the Owen Sound District was held at Port Elgin from July 1 to 10. This was the second reunion to be held in the district, the one last year being at Holstein, a town some sixty miles from Port Elgin.

The reunion being in its infancy, and considering also the fact that the major part of the membership of the district are either farmers or laborers in factories, etc., we think we may look back and say it was a real success.

Of the general church officers there were Apostle R. S. Budd and Sister Christy in attendance. Sister Christy was with us last year, and the friendship she gained for herself then was only deepened this year by her winning manner and inspiring talks. Apostle Budd won for himself a place in the hearts of the Saints that we feel will always be retained. This was the first visit from Brother Budd to this part of the Lord's vineyard. We hope he may be able to return, and that not too distant in the future. Of the conference appointees, S. G. St. John, Harry Daton, J. Shields, and P. E. Farrow were present.

Elder Perkins, district president, was on the ground several days ahead, and with the assistance of local members had comfortable arrangements made for the accommodation of the entire reunion.

Two factors worthy of mention that contributed greatly to the success of the reunion, were the splendid location and, closely allied with it, the assistance rendered by the town. Port Elgin is a very picturesque and clean little town, noted for its maples, situated on the shore of Lake Huron, some one hundred and fifty miles north of Sarnia. It can boast of an ideal beach, which attracts many summer visitors. The water is excellent for bathing during July and August. The town council granted us free use of the agricultural park and its buildings, which afforded an ideal spot and accommodations for reunion purposes. By making use of the fine little church owned by the Port Elgin Branch for meetings, the pavilion at the park for dining purposes, and the grounds for recreation, and by locating the visitors among the local members, much expense was avoided.

On Sunday, July 3, at 2.30 p. m., a formal opening was held in the pavilion at the park, though the reunion proper commenced Saturday, July 2. A large crowd, of both members and nonmembers, was present. The town band offered their service and rendered splendid assistance. Councilor Bell, a member of the town council, gave the Saints an address of welcome in which he spoke highly of the splendid example of Christian living the Saints of this locality have set. He said, "Mr. Chairman, I do not know much about your creed; I know practically nothing of what it contains.

I am not so much concerned about your creed; I am watching your product." He then spoke very highly of the lives of Saints he knew. To this Brother Budd made a very fitting reply, using for his theme, "The spirit of cooperation." Other speakers were Patriarch R. C. Russell and Sister Christy.

The order of activities, with only a few exceptions, followed the following schedule: 9 a. m. to 10.15, prayer meeting; 10.30 to 12, study hour, Apostle Budd and Sister Christy in charge; 12 to 1, dinner; 2 to 5, recreation; 5.30, supper; and 8 p. m., preaching. The preaching was done by Apostle Budd, the above-mentioned conference appointees, and local visiting ministers, each occupying in turn.

The attendance was not as large during the week as was hoped for, but each of the Sundays that were included in the ten days found the church, which is capable of seating at least two hundred people, filled.

The district conference was held the last Saturday of the reunion, July 9. The following resolution was passed affecting next year's reunion: That we hold a reunion in 1928, from July 1 to 10, and that it be held at Port Elgin. The following officers were elected for the inter-conference period of 1927-1928: District president, D. B. Perkins, Wiarton; first vice, J. A. Morrison, Owen Sound; second vice, King Cooper, Guelph; secretary, Sister J. H. Guyer, Port Elgin; treasurer and bishop's agent, F. B. Stade, Harriston; Sunday school superintendent, O. R. Moore; Owen Sound; assistant superintendent, C. W. Elliott, Owen Sound; chorister, Mabel Humphries, Wiarton; orchestra director, G. T. Furness, Owen Sound; Sunday school secretary, Kirby Tarzwell, Cedar Valley; Department of Recreation and Expression, J. Hockiday, Guelph; superintendent of Women's Department, Sister Viola Moore, Owen Sound.

Perhaps the experience which will be longest remembered by all took place outside the church the last Sunday evening of the reunion when the good-byes were being said. Only by sensing the feeling one had in his own heart could he understand how the others felt. For a full hour the crowd lingered, growing smaller of course as this group and that would break away. "Breaking away" it was, indeed, with those sublime thoughts and feelings of friendships deepened by the tie that binds, during those ten days, making one want to stay—stay and enjoy another ten days. But such partings must come, though one can not help on such occasions looking into the future and breathing the prayer, "Lord speed the redemption of Zion, that we may more frequently and perhaps always enjoy these influences created by the spirit of brotherhood and service." Thus were the writer's thoughts, at least, lost in the beautiful, in this case, the far-reaching, program of the church. We feel confident however, that all went away feeling more deeply consecrated to the work than ever before, with their task made clearer to their comprehension, and with more determination to serve. And what greater things can a reunion accomplish? When we think on these things, though we had our difficulties to surmount, we can not help saying, "Our reunion was a splendid success."

PERCY E. FARROW.

Little Sioux District

Little Sioux district reunion opened with a rush and a zeal that was a pleasant surprise to all.

The organization is practically the same as all others, providing for such services as prayer and testimony, class work representing the departments of the church, preaching which is highly representative of our theology.

There are nearly fifty tents on the ground to date, with others coming. Attendance is very good, and interest is keen.

Apostle J. A. Gillen is on hand, representing the church through the Quorum of Twelve; Bishop F. B. Blair representing the work of the bishopric; and to say that they are doing nicely is too mild. They are going over with an energy and zeal that will brook no interference. The response of the membership is evidence supporting this statement.

The reunion is being presided over by Joseph W. Lane and counselors W. R. Adams and Fred A. Fry. Brother Lane as usual is here, there, and everywhere. In fact, he is always on the job.

All meetings are spiritual and are creating a desire in the majority to climb to greater heights. The junior services, supervised by Nell Kennedy, are of a high character and will accomplish much in that line.

Sunday was a day appreciated by all. Brother Gillen was at his best at the morning hour, and at 2 p. m. Bishop Blair evened up the score. These services were preceded by a good spiritual prayer meeting and a short Sunday school period. Over one thousand were in attendance, and more are coming.

We make mention of Brother C. B. Woodstock in general charge of departmental work, assisted by his wife, who is working wonders with the girls.

Recreation is a feature of the reunion, supervised by J. E. Keck, always with a smile and a punch.

District Missionaries M. K. Fry and Charles J. Smith are on hand, making such contributions as are called for.

Discouraging matters? Unknown! We are all prepared for the trip to 1930 and beyond.

Look for future news items of this reunion carrying some pictures to stimulate greater interest. More in the next.

Erie Beach Reunion Activities

In our last we stated that the week-end would, no doubt, find a great many more in attendance, and we were right. Friday night they began coming in and continued in a constant, steady stream. Besides this, there were a great many who came in from different points in Michigan on Sunday morning. This reunion, being not far distant from the border, attracts a goodly number from Eastern Michigan and Detroit Districts, as well as other points.

There had been no cessation of activities during the week, and the close of the reunion found everyone actively engaged, trying to crowd in the various things which "just couldn't be left out." Sports of various kinds find a ready response from those who patronize Erie Beach reunion, and our good bishop, J. C. Dent, is one of the most enthusiastic rooters on the grounds. We noticed Apostle Budd taking a very active part in all the games, especially volley ball and baseball, which is one of the things that especially endears the men to the youth of the church. His instructions "to play the game fair" will not soon be forgotten by the young people.

Two young people's prayer services were held during the reunion. One down on the sandy shore of "Old Erie"; the other in the little church not far from the grounds. At each of these services Brother Budd exhorted the young, and we had a splendid response from them. It is indeed heartening to hear the testimonies of those young in years, especially when the spirit of true consecration is found to be the dominating factor in their lives. "Slippery" is the path of youth, but God is mighty to save; and those who fully consecrate their all to him will surely be successful in their endeavors.

Camp sports were in charge of William Andrew and Ezra Miffin. Friday was general "field day" and thoroughly enjoyed by all. The usual races were featured, and the kiddies, especially, were pleased over the prizes won.

Thursday evening the usual musical entertainment was featured, which, as in times past, drew a large crowd of interested listeners. One of the special features was a song by Elder Robert Brown's two little girls, who were dressed in the native costume of the South Seas and sang in a dialect of one of the islands. Brother and Sister Brown spent several years in this mission, and their girls were born there, hence the ability to use the native tongue.

The study classes occupied a prominent place in each day's activities and were well attended. Just recently we were privileged to hear a brother say the things heard there had made him a better man. If this were all that was accomplished, even then it would not have been time spent in vain; for who can evaluate a human soul? One man started toward the goal, like "the pebble dropped in the water" whose "waves circle round with the shock," may continue until many souls have felt the divine touch, and untold good will result. Elders Baldwin and Budd had these classes in charge. Departmental work was featured during different afternoons of the reunion, an hour being given from recreation to devote to this work.

Not the least of the activities was the junior church conducted by Sister Baldwin, assisted by Sister Jones, superintendent of the Women's Department of Chatham District. A tent was especially provided for this work, and a good attendance was had every day. The juniors were just as interested in their services as were the older ones. Various committees were selected from among their own number, whose duty it was to care for the needs of the junior church. Each day one of the ministers on the grounds was selected to preach a fifteen-minute sermonet. These men were asked to occupy by a committee chosen for the purpose. The youngsters seemed delighted to have such a responsibility, and I am not aware of anyone refusing their request. A special feature of this department was a confirmation meeting held in their service Sunday morning. Four or five children, who had been baptized on Saturday, were confirmed by R. S. Budd, R. T. Brown, R. R. Wood, and J. R. Grice. This was surely an impressive ceremony, and the Good Spirit was there to witness the acceptance of these children. I am sure they will not soon forget this confirmation service. We trust it may ever be before them and help them to keep on the right road, that they may grow up to be men and women who will be of service to the church in some future day. Sisters Baldwin and Jones are to be commended for the way in which they conducted junior church.

Sunday's activities commenced with a prayer service at eight o'clock. This was a large gathering of people, and a splendid spirit was felt from beginning to end. While no special ocular demonstrations of the gifts were in evidence at this reunion there was a good spirit present at each and every service, and educationally it was par excellence. Apostle Budd spoke both at the morning and afternoon preaching service and many were the comments heard on his sermons. Sunday school was held immediately after dinner under the direction of district officers. The writer preached the closing sermon of the reunion, and there was a splendid crowd in spite of the many leaving, during the afternoon, for home.

Monday morning, bright and early, one could hear laborers at work pulling up tent pegs and making other necessary arrangements incident to breaking camp. After breakfast was served, the sun came out in all its splendor, and soon tents were dry enough to pack. Though the crowd of helpers was small, I do not know of a time in the past twelve years that I have been attending reunion at Erie Beach that such a great amount of work seemed to be accomplished in so short a time. The spirit of good will prevailed, and all worked with a will. The women contributed their share, under the able leadership of Elder Charles Osborne, and seemed to be able to do about as much as the men at folding and packing tents. Though we were loath to part, still we were glad to be able to say we had spent a very profitable ten days and could vote this reunion the "best ever."

Perhaps we should not fail to mention the fact that at the business session held Saturday afternoon it was decided not to serve "meat, tea, coffee, or cocoa" at future reunions. This is a very important piece of legislation and should have something to do with the spiritual part of services to come.

Another special feature of the reunion was the Camp Cricket, edited by the writer, assisted by Janet Andrew and Nellie Andrew, of Windsor. We noticed that few people left the tent after preaching, seemingly desirous of hearing the paper each night. Perhaps it was not alone the desire to hear what new joke might be pulled on the other fellow, but whether one himself was going to escape. We may say that few were missed.

The committee are looking up another site for next year's reunion, and there will, no doubt, be a good deal of speculation until authentic reports are had. It would not be hard to find a better environment for our young (surrounding environment we mean), but perhaps not so easy to find as good location for tenting. May God direct we pray.

Park of the Pines Reunion-Convention

One of the first attempts in the church to combine a young people's convention with a reunion closed August 21, with all feeling that it was a decided success, opening the possibility for the future reunions being carried on after the same fashion.

The Park of the Pines, situated on the shores of beautiful Pine Lake, near Boyne City, is as ideal a location as we have in Michigan, with very little outside attraction. The reunion committee accomplished wonders the past year in making needed improvements, trimming trees, leveling the recreation grounds, and building two new bath houses and a convenient dining hall. Over the dining hall, ten rooms were built. These rooms, nicely furnished by the Department of Women of the Northern and Western Districts, were greatly appreciated by the missionaries and their families.

President F. M. McDowell and Apostle John F. Garver, associated with the reunion and convention committees, were given full charge of the activities of the reunion-convention. The first three days were spent with regular reunion activities—Apostle John F. Garver and Bishop F. B. Blair being the principal speakers. Elder R. E. Jones was given charge of the junior church work.

Sunday evening Brother McDowell gave the opening address of the convention, emphasizing the big objectives of the convention, taking for his subject, "What is the mission of the church?" Quoting Brother McDowell: "The Michigan young people want more than an inspirational convention—I feel they want to know how to do the work."

The following classes attempted to answer this "How": President F. M. McDowell held a class in the "Principles of religious education." Apostle John F. Garver conducted a class in "The spirit of stewardships." Brother O. A. McDowell taught a class in the "Twelve tests of character." Sister Blanche Mesley gave a specialized course in the "Methods of teaching by the use of pictures." The four classes were so arranged that every member could attend three classes out of the four each day.

After the convention was well under way, it was found there was a group of boys too old for junior church and too young to be inspired by the class work. To supply this need, Elder R. E. Jones was chosen to organize a class in recreational leadership. This class attracted a number of the older boys. Sister Katie Reek had charge of the girls of the same ages, advising them as to the classes best suited for their needs.

Sister A. Koehler, Verna Burt, and Nina Harper are to be complimented for their wonderful services in the junior church. They were assisted by many of the local workers. Sister Hattie Schreur should also receive mention for the methods used in conducting her class. This class, under her leadership, began activities even before the reunion opened. Later this class was turned over to a Boy Scout leader, Brother Earl Falconer. With such cooperation as was received from all these workers, the church may expect to take its youth through a course of supervised instruction.

From early morning until night, every hour was planned to bring a deeper and richer experience to life. At 6 a. m. the bell to rise and start the day's activities was rung. At 6.45 the camp family prayer was called—in charge of one of the patriarchs or fathers of the camp; at 7 o'clock breakfast; at 8.30 the general prayer service was held in charge of President F. M. McDowell and Elder Allen Schreur. These social services were inspiring to our souls, laying a foundation for the day's activities; studying, playing, working, and living together. At 9.45 the classes which we have previously mentioned were started. At 1 o'clock, Sister Louise Evans, of Grand Rapids, conducted a choir practice, teaching anthems which were sung at the services. She endeavored to inspire every member of that group to study under a competent teacher so they could make a real contribution to this department of the church. Sister Evans also instructed the junior church, teaching them new songs. Michigan is proud in having a director so capable and devoted, one who is turning our faces in preparation for the great choir in 1930. At 2 p. m. recreation started. The camp was divided into four groups for the games and stunts, with some of the best leaders in charge. The leaders were Carlisle Whitehead, president of the young people's state committee; Blair Jensen, Jay Doty, and Hector McKinnon. These leaders worked with Elder R. E. Jones and others to make the recreation a moral uplift. Both boys' and girls' teams were in competition in community games. At 4.30 p. m. the contestants found much enjoyment in the cooling waters of the lake. At 6.30 p. m. Elder B. H. Doty, our Michigan famous orchestra and band leader, conducted a practice. This enthusiastic group of musicians made their big contribution to the success of the convention. At 7.30 the evening song service began. The songs and music selected were appropriate for the general convention theme, "On the road to Zion." Our speakers marked well the landmarks along that way. At nine the stunts and games and fellowship sings were enjoyed by the camp fire on the shore of the lake or in the auditorium, after which hymns were sung and camp prayer offered.

The crowning feature of the convention was the banquet which was held in the auditorium the last Saturday evening, with about five hundred in attendance. Wild flowers, ferns, and pines were effectively used in decoration of the building and tables. Apostle John Garver, toastmaster, introduced in a very clever way President F. M. McDowell, Elders Dirk Schreur, and E. S. White as speakers for the evening. The final issue of the Camp Paper was read by Sister R. E. Jones, camp editor. Throughout the whole evening program, was developed a spirit of fraternity that will not soon be forgotten.

Two pairs of newlyweds, who were in attendance at the convention anticipating a quiet honeymoon, were the victims of serenades and jokes too numerous to mention. The happy couples were given the congratulations and best wishes of the brothers and sisters.

Much of the success of this convention is due to the untiring efforts of the Schreur families and Brother and Sister Hartnell, who do not hesitate to attempt to accomplish any big task.

The present committee were chosen to act for another year. They are looking forward to a bigger and better reunion-convention for 1928.

Life is divided into two main periods—the period when we take in and the period when we give out. Youth is the receptive period, and although that period does not end, there comes to keep company with it an expressive period when the individual makes his or her contribution to the general life. He does more than that, however; in his work he also makes a contribution to himself. The sum of earthly life is the making of character. It is inevitable.—Dearborn Independent, July 23, 1927.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Northeastern Kansas Conference

Geographically speaking, the conference assembled at the center place, Netawaka, August 13, 14. The weather contributed its quota of muddy roads from some points in the district, which hindered many from arriving until Saturday noon or after, and some failed to arrive. Notwithstanding this inclemency, each local was represented by two or more.

For some unknown cause, the speaker, J. Charles May, failed to put in his appearance, and our district missionary, C. E. Harpe, gave us two good sermons, one on "Spiritual life and its growth," and the other on "Church problems."

The first service was a lengthy business session at 2.30 Saturday afternoon, but a saintly feeling prevailed and continued throughout the whole conference. In the evening after the preaching service a social in charge of the district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, W. F. Bolinger, was held at the home of T. J. Christensen. Some games, "Cat's paw," "Three deep," etc, were played, and then ice cream and wafers were served.

A fine talk was given at the Sunday school session by Brother Bolinger on family worship. Can we have it? What is it? There was a time when father and mother gathered the family around the fireside, read a chapter and had prayer, but not so today. A time when we had more time than now. Why? We are going faster. Soon we will own our own airplanes. Our momentum is just getting started. All are working. Some quit at six, seven, eight, and eleven. Hard to get entire family together. Parents must, if possible, see that this is done. I can not do it. Brother Harpe can not do it, nor anyone else. We all know something valuable has gone out. What is the trouble? We have failed to supply something in its stead. What is going to be done? What are we going to restore—read a chapter and sing a song? Is not this formality? Does it suffice? Does formality definitely strengthen relationship with God? That is what we must do; and not just picture him as a future God of reward. We must develop the reality of his constant presence in the room. There are two fundamental things, i. e., strengthened relationship with God and the reality of his presence. When nature is saturated with moisture, it is in condition to receive more moisture. So it is with us. We must keep ourselves in condition to receive at all times. We can not get religion on Sunday morning only and expect to receive spiritual food through the week. We can not reach our young people with the old method. We must change our methods, but not the message. Don't let dad do all the choosing. Let members of the family choose a song or some subject to talk about. Quote portions of scripture or psalms. Let one quote a sentence, then other members of the family the next, and so on, until the entire psalm is finished. This is play, but in reality all are training their memory. Let us have family worship.

In the afternoon a sacramental service was held in charge of C. E. Harpe, W. F. Bolinger, and William Twombly. Some very comforting words were given at the close by Brother Harpe. Members of priesthood on the rostrum were: Dave Little, C. E. Harpe, M. L. Schmid, W. F. Bolinger, Roy Tilden, William Twombly, Dave Donahue, T. J. Christensen.

Much credit is due these stanch Saints at Netawaka for their hospitality and care of the Saints. There were only three families there for the entertainment of the conference visitors, Ed Banks, T. J. Christensen, and John Green, but no effort was spared to make it pleasant for all. At the home of Brother John Green forty-eight were served at the noon hour on Sunday. Sister Wolverton and Sister T. J. Christensen, daughters of Brother and Sister Green, helped prepare the noon meal. The little church here has a bell, and before Elder Henry Green passed to his reward he said to his son, "John, keep that old bell ringing." We can say for Brother John that he not only has kept the old bell announcing the hour of worship, but in the silent ministry of kindly acts and care for the comfort of the Saints the melody of his stewardship is heard in clear, ringing tones. Could the grandparents have looked down from their habitation above and beheld this scene at the home of their posterity, they would have rejoiced. It was like one big family.

Brother T. J. Christensen is the newly elected district Sunday school superintendent, and, like one of old, his helpmate was chosen to be his secretary. Improve your opportunity, Brother Christensen. The Saints of the district bid you Godspeed.

At the close of the service Sunday afternoon, the Methodist minister, F. E. Buckley, came and invited Brother Harpe and his congregation to their church in the evening. The invitation was accepted, and then Brother Harpe was asked to preach. This invitation was accepted also by Brother Harpe, and he chose for his theme, "The future protection of our young people." A band of young people from Topeka were there boosting for the Epworth League institute to be held at Baldwin this week. They also remained for the service. This act of courtesy upon the part of these people was much appreciated by the Saints, and especially when we remember their kindness to us the last two years in serving meals while we were assembled in the city park in reunion capacity. Brother Bolinger gave the opening and closing prayers. At the close all united in singing, "In the garden," after which the Saints returned home refreshed in spirit and thankful for the kindly feeling that existed in this little union service. MRS. H. C. PITSEBERGER, District Secretary.

Southern Indiana District

This writing finds me at Louisville, Kentucky, after the close of the Kentucky and Tennessee reunion at Puryear, Tennessee. Elder Thomas Newton is the only man under missionary appointment in Kentucky and Tennessee. There are so many calls for preaching that five men could have plenty to do in those two States. Sometimes I think it would be well for some of the elders and priests who have gathered to Independence to return to the fields where they were called, and enter upon the work before them. Some branches are nearly, if not quite, depleted of officers, and yet at Independence there are more than can find work to do, and some seem to be rusting out. What is true of Kentucky and Tennessee is also true of Southern Indiana as to calls for preaching, but as to officers in the branches they are more fortunate.

I have been at Louisville over three Sundays during the last week holding four preaching services at New Albany group, and Sunday at 10.45; then returning to Louisville for Sunday afternoon, for baptism of four young folks at 3 p. m. in the font in the church, they being confirmed at the same service by Elders H. W. Burwell, W. M. Hanner, and the writer.

This district could keep several men busy in missionary work, just looking after the openings already made. We certainly can pray: "Lord, send more laborers into the vineyard." Everywhere I go the Saints and friends are wanting more meetings than we have time to conduct.

The Saints of Byrneville have their church well under way, and I expect are plastering it by now. They are requesting meetings there in the near future. We should have five missionaries where we now have one. I am wondering if we could not find a number of young elders and priests who would take the field, say for five years, while yet single men, thus increasing our missionary force with but little expense to the general church, and yet making a young army to spread the gospel to a dying world! There are some men now in the field who in the past have thus traveled for five years and more as single men, and it seems to me there should be young men now developed who would do as well or better. I sometimes think that, seeing the church has been organized now nearly one hundred years, we should be producing some full-blooded Latter Day Saints! Certainly it should not require another hundred years. I mean where there have been three, four, or even five generations of Saints, that as a result we should have very nearly, if not quite, full-blooded young Latter Day Saint men, therefore not have to go to the outside world and other churches to get men to take the missionary field.

Certainly if we have fathers and mother who are approximating full-blooded Latter Day Saints, they have been teaching their sons and daughters according to the action of the General Conferences upon various doctrinal questions, and therefore we should have no trouble finding good, clean young men.

Fathers and mothers, wherever you may live, have you a good, clean, full-blooded Latter Day Saint son to offer the Lord and the church to take the gospel to a dying world? One that you have reared in a home of prayer, where he has heard the Inspired Scriptures read about the family altar, where he has heard his father and mother offer prayer daily, and where you have taught him to pray also, as well as in secret? That is the sort of boys we need, who will be willing to go and teach folks the gospel and set their homes in order as they enter the church, thus forming full-blooded Latter Day Saint homes.

Now a word to all fathers and mothers who have your sons and daughters around your family altar: See to it that you teach them faithfully, for fifteen years later we will need this sort of young men, just as well as now. Plan to give them two or more years at Graceland, and then let them be ready to answer the call of God and the church, saying, "Here am I; send me," and not do as so many are doing, turn to the world and worldly gain.

May God hasten the day when there will be plenty of boys thus reared, who will consecrate their lives to the missionary work of the church, and plenty of young women who will one day become their companions and do their work cheerfully and well.

Hopefully trusting,

JASPER O. DUTTON.

Lucasville, Ohio

We of the Pleasant Valley Branch extend to the Saints everywhere greetings in the name of the Master, and we pray that we may be strengthened and encouraged to carry on and help to bring about the redemption of Zion. We have been blessed in many ways, and we feel it a joy to be engaged in this glorious work.

Sacramental meeting, August 7, was in charge of Ervin Pyles, Walter Culp, and Mark S. Crabtree. A beautiful spirit prevailed throughout the meeting, and everyone felt encouraged.

Brother Mark S. Crabtree preached for the past week, beginning Sunday night, August 7. Using as a text Isaiah 54: 16, he brought many good thoughts to us, there being near one hundred present to hear the message.

On Monday night he spoke on the agency of man. It was a rainy night, and the attendance was not so large. Tuesday evening he spoke on the doctrine of Christ to a fair-sized gathering.

We were again made to feel glad on Friday evening when Brother Thomas Crabtree, of McDermott, took the pulpit and gave us a wonderful talk. When these Saints from other places come among us, we are made to rejoice.

Saturday evening the class of Loyal Workers gave a box supper, which netted the sum of thirty-two dollars to their fund, which will be used to purchase a new organ. A large crowd was present, and a good time was enjoyed.

Sunday night, August 14, ended our meetings. Brother Mark preached, using Romans 3: 3, 4 for his lesson text. He did well at this time, and the house was filled almost to seating capacity. Many not of our faith attended these meetings, and some of them remarked on the excellence of our speaker's efforts. His sermons certainly strengthened many of the Saints.

Sunday, September 25, is set for an all-day meeting and a basket dinner. We are expecting a good speaker here at that time. May God's people all be united on this date, as it nears the one hundredth anniversary of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon plates. Do we really know what this day will bring to us? We feel that joy, peace, and comfort will be ours to enjoy.

Sunday evening, August 7, Sister Rosy Pollock's class of Loyal Workers had a meeting at 7.30. Sister Ora Altman was in charge, and she did fine for her first time in the position.

Sherrill, New York

Children's Day observance in June came soon after Mothers' Day, as we all know. Enough Syracuse Saints came to help and encourage, and after the exercises we had our dinner together at the Sherrill city park. It was cool enough so that a fire in the fireplace felt good while we finished up on ice cream.

Knowing our pastor was due to be away the last Sunday in June and the first in July for his annual Platers' Convention, over which he presided as head of the electroplaters' organization this year in Toledo, Ohio, Brother Ward L. Christy very graciously agreed to spend his time at this end of the district during that interval. He preached part of the week in Syracuse and part in Sherrill, holding forth on Sundays in Sherrill. Sister Christy was so soon due at a Canadian reunion that she could not accompany him. We plan on a visit from her with him, later on.

Attendance is especially low during vacation season. We will not forget to mention that the building where we hold services in Sherrill is at the corner of Marshall Place and East Noyes Boulevard, where we have been located for seven years or more. We wish we might increase our membership to the point where it could be considered wise to build again.

A number of families have moved in and away again, and others threaten to be going. Brother Floyd Rathbun and family still live twenty miles away, coming in quite regularly in all but the worst weather of the year. We consider Sherrill a desirable place in which to live, but owing to our advantages by way of schools and other things and being limited to one industry, taxes are high. Sherrill residents are not strong on church attendance, and it is hard to get them out often. But on the other hand they are usually good neighbors. They are too indifferent to their duties to the church, as in many other places. If anything will awaken them, we know not what it is.

On August 13, at Sister Elsie Elms's farm near Pompey Center, Syracuse and Sherrill held their joint Sunday school picnic and had a fine time. Sister Lodato and daughters represented Rochester. Brother Christy and Doctor Weegar's daughters, Maurine and Doris, came from Buffalo and Niagara. Brother Stark's family from Red Creek, Brother Carpenter's from Fulton, and others were present. Brother Morris Whitehead was with us, making good headway at walking without his cane, although he tires easily and is not yet well.

Our fall program calls for the trip to Greenwood, New York, the week-end previous to Labor Day, institutes at Rochester and Fulton, and a convention at Sherrill the first of October. Dates for all of these will undoubtedly be published in the HERALD; we do not have them here.

The writer is having a restful week at Panther Lake, camping next to her older son, Carl, and two boy friends, all Boy Scouts who do their own cooking. We retire soon after dark and get up when we like. The sunsets over the lake are grand. The people who run the place and those who come here seem to be law-abiding, which makes it ideal. The Sherrill Auto Club had its sociability run here Saturday, a big family affair. There was a fine time for all, and contests and prizes for all ages. A certain amount of fun and frolic seems necessary to help keep us fit and out of ruts.

At the picnic a week ago Saturday there were four of us who were celebrating our birthdays on the fourteenth: three from Sherrill, Brother Floyd Rathbun, Sister Agnes Comfort, and Sister Mary Mesle; and Sister Fern Collinge of Syracuse. Sister Ada Davison very kindly presented us with a cake appropriate to the occasion but did not undertake to put on enough candles to go around—no, that would have been impossible!

The following Sunday Brother Christy preached in Syracuse in the morning and for us in Sherrill in the evening. Sister Davison came down to sing with Brother Christy for us. The Sunday previous Joanna Lord, who has been attending services in Sherrill since we started eleven years ago, was baptized, and confirmed at the evening service by Elders Mesle and Rathbun. Sister Joanna has hesitated to come in because she did not want to come in and then grow cold and indifferent as some have done to the distress of all.

Early in August we had a short visit from Doctor W. A. Sinclair, his wife Susie, and son Wallace. Brother Sinclair occupied on Wednesday night and gave us a splendid reminder of what it means to be a Saint in latter days and how short we fall as a people of reaching the ideal life. They met with Syracuse Thursday night, going on Friday to the Low Banks reunion.

Sister V. A. Lewis has been West this summer, visiting Chicago friends and attending church there. She went on to Nauvoo to see her nephew, L. H. Lewis, and family and other former Boston Saints. Her granddaughter Dorothy Mesle, has been attending the Eastern reunion and visiting Boston friends and relatives further east. She is having a never-to-be-forgotten time.

"Mankind in all ages has had many and varied concepts of God," was the theme of the sermon by Elder Ralph W. Farrell at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning.

He pointed out the difference between the concept of the children of Israel who were led out of Egypt and the concept of Moses who led them out. Moses brought down the tablets of the law from Mount Sinai only to find that his people had reverted to the form of worship in which they had been trained for three hundred years. They were not ready for the advanced concept which Moses had, and he threw down the tablets and they were broken. He must turn them away from the worship of the golden calf and raise them up before they could appreciate and follow the code of law in the tablets which he would later bring.

The people of Israel thought of God as a jealous God, hating his enemies; as a God of war, a God of wrath. But this was not the concept held by Moses. They considered themselves the peculiar and chosen people, and they thought that God hated all other peoples. And yet there were great men of the times, such as Plato, Socrates, Aristotle, and Confucius, who were not of their race.

Jesus came also with a different concept of God. In the first temptation which came to him, if he would bow to evil he might become the leader of all nations. But the nations of the earth were looking for a material, military leader who would wield a bloody sword and lead them to conquest by might—and had Jesus Christ yielded, they could no doubt have done it. But he said, "I bring a message of peace," they rejected him, and he died on the cross. They wanted what they conceived to be God's type of leader, which was not the peaceful and loving one. They had been victims of a false concept of God.

What was Jesus' concept of God? He was a God of life, not death; he was a God of light; he was a world God, not solely for a handful of Jews; he was Our Father, as expressed in the Lord's prayer.

Elder Farrell also mentioned the Calvinistic concept of predestination, under which some were elected to everlasting glory, others to everlasting damnation. He contrasted this with the Christ concept, and pointed out that Calvin's concept has been changed and is not held to today as it was when it was first set forth.

In speaking of his own concept of God, Elder Farrell stressed the goodness of God, and his belief that man could and would never be frightened into being good; he must be won by love and not by threats. "If man turns to God in any age of the ages to come, he will find God waiting for him," he said.

Elder Farrell quoted some verse from James Russell Lowell, as expressing a twentieth century concept of God:

Be he nowhere else,
God is in all that lifts,
He is in all that exalts,
He is in all that consoles.

Lilly Belle Allen sang a soprano solo, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High," accompanied by George Miller, pianist.

Doctor F. H. Criley was in charge of the service, Elder B. M. Anderson, of Omaha, Nebraska, offering the prayer and the benediction. Francis Holm led the song service.

A special priesthood meeting will be held at the Institute Building September 4, at 2.30. As a number of projects will be considered, an invitation has been sent out to department heads to be present. A member of the First Presidency will be in charge.

At the Campus

Elder William I. Fligg was the speaker at the Campus Sunday evening, taking for his text Ephesians 6: 11, "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil."

Music was furnished for the service by the Walnut Park Orchestra, under the leadership of Brother Orlando Nace. Pastor C. Ed. Miller was in charge.

Special moving pictures were shown following the service proper. A film entitled "Autumn" depicted unusually fine scenes of forest and animal life in that season of the year. The Bible story of Jacob and Esau was also portrayed on the screen.

Labor Day at the Campus

A day of recreation and fun is planned for Labor Day, September 5. There will be enjoyment for the entire family. Two closely contested ball games are expected to draw crowds of spectators, the first at ten o'clock in the morning between Standard Oil and Bar Gar Teams; the second at 2.30 in the afternoon between Crick Lumber Company and Independence Merchants. At five o'clock there will be a balloon ascension with a parachute drop to thrill little and big. Half an hour later the Standard Oil Band begins a concert, while picnickers spread lunch suppers on tables and grass. The free moving picture to be shown is "Charlie's aunt," and will start at 7.30. All are invited to come to the Campus on Monday, Labor Day.

Institute of Arts and Sciences to Open

September 6 will see a maximum of renewed activity of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences in the Institute Building at the Campus. The 6th marks the beginning of work for the winter term of study. You are urged to enroll now at the Campus in courses you desire to take in the school "for those who must work but are willing to study." All are invited to come to the Stone Church at 3.15 Sunday afternoon, September 4, to hear Floyd M. McDowell and others of the faculty explain the work of the Institute.

Kindergarten for children between the ages of four and six years will open on the above date, the term to last five months. Tuition for the tiny folk is $3 per month; transportation, $2 per month extra. The hours are 9 to 12 each morning.

Also at this time the high school starts. These subjects are taught in evening classes. It is offering to our youth the following subjects: English I and III, ancient history,

American history, physical geography, commercial geography, physiology and hygiene, sociology, economics, general science, agriculture, algebra, bookkeeping I and II, typewriting I and II, shorthand I and II, art I and II. Tuition for high school subjects is $15; $10 payable at time of registration, $5 at beginning of second semester; $7.50 to be returned upon satisfactory completion of courses taken. It is to be remembered that the Institute High School is accredited and recognized.

Those who are interested in the School of Music may enter afternoon and evening classes. High school graduates desiring the first year of junior college should find their way to the Campus. All prospective students of the Institute, friends, and patrons should gather at the Stone Church next Sunday afternoon to learn of the courses offered in the School of Religious Education, Home Building, and special courses.

Opening date of the School of Religious Education is September 11, and Junior College and other courses begin September 12.

A Week of Church Weddings

Second Church was the scene of a wedding Friday evening, at which close to four hundred guests and spectators witnessed the marriage ceremony which united Sister Mary Fields and Brother Samuel Edmunds. The church was profusely decorated, the dark-green foliage covering or base being brightened and toned with gladioli and lilies, making Second Church excel even herself. This church's patrons always furnish a plenitude of flowers and plants to make the house beautiful.

Elder H. W. Goold, a former pastor, now a resident of Kansas City, was the officiating minister, the wedding party was complete, and the program dignified yet joyous. Surely these church weddings are to be commended. A reception at the Fields home followed the wedding at the church.

Sister Mary Fields has been a member of Second Church congregation since childhood, is a member of the K L D S Ladies' Quartet, the daughter of Elder and Sister S. H. Fields, and a worthy young woman and Saint. Brother Samuel Edmunds has been a member of the congregation for four or five years, is a son of Brother and Sister Charles Edmunds, is a member of the priesthood, and begins work in the faculty of the Independence high school within a few days. We sincerely hope their present bright prospects may be realized, and if they are the church will surely be honored.

Sunday afternoon Liberty Street Church, a beautiful little brick church just off the courthouse square, was in readiness for the wedding and reception of Sister Dana Becker and Brother Daniel Snider, both Independence young people who have here come to manhood and womanhood. This church is particularly suited for wedding occasions, and under skillful hands had received special decorative treatment which left nothing to be desired.

Bishop J. A. Becker was the officiating minister; a large wedding party and a complete program made a beautiful and enjoyable wedding occasion, which was completed by an informal and very friendly reception in the church rooms.

Sister Dana is the second daughter of Bishop and Sister J. A. Becker, has been an employee in the offices of the Presiding Bishop for a long time, is known for her thoughtfulness and activity, and is an example of womanly grace and modesty. Brother Snider is the son of Brother and Sister Claude F. Snider, finished William Chrisman High School last school year, has been engaged as a salesman of recent months, in which he has shown energy and capability. The pair is planning further education and is looking forward to becoming able to make a goodly contribution to their commonwealth and church. We expect much from them.

On Monday evening the Stone Church was opened for the wedding of Sister Carol Gillen and Brother Frank Holmes. The church had been made ready by decorations of commanding beauty, growing plants and flowers and greenery softening and subduing lines until the atmosphere was ideal.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards was the officiating minister, a complete wedding party was in support, and the program was distinctive and gave an English tone to the occasion, which was appreciated and enjoyed. The church was well filled with guests and spectators, and no more effective wedding has occurred in the Stone Church recently. A reception to special friends and relatives followed the church wedding, being held at the home of Brother and Sister Gillen on South Fuller Street.

Sister Carol Gillen is the firstborn daughter of Apostle and Sister J. A. Gillen, spent several years at Graceland College, is a graduate of Kansas University, and for some time has been doing social service work in Kansas City. Brother Holmes came from England several years ago, attended Graceland, and graduated from the college of liberal arts, since which he has been teaching in the high school at Springfield, Nebraska, and doing work at Kansas University. Both parties will teach in the Springfield schools the coming year. This young pair of Saints has wonderful possibilities of usefulness, and with the two mentioned before, make a group of young married people that will in all probability be heard from in church and civil stations.

Second Church

A pretty wedding was witnessed by a large crowd of friends of the contracting parties when Brother Samuel Edmunds and Sister Mary Fields were united in marriage at 8.30 p. m., Friday, August 26. The church was artistically decorated; the music was inspiring. Brother H. W. Goold pronounced the words that united these two young people in this holy bond. Our best wishes are for their welfare and happiness.

The young people's prayer meeting Sunday morning was good, and each one who was there is going to try to bring some one else two weeks hence, that more may share in these blessed experiences.

Regular Sunday school session was conducted at 9.30, and at the morning preaching hour Elder E. T. Atwell spoke on the Book of Mormon.

A number of the Saints of this district are reading the Book of Mormon now and are enjoying a feast of good things in so doing.

A. K. Dillee, our pastor, spoke at Atherton to an interested audience, Sunday, August 28. He enjoyed good liberty.

Liberty Street

On Friday, August 19, an ice cream social was given at the church under the supervision of the choir. The evening was spent in playing volley ball and other games, and in singing songs.

The choir furnished the music at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning, at which time Brother Miller was the speaker on the theme "Soul perfection," taking his text from Matthew 5: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

Sister Pearl W. Moriarty left Independence two weeks ago to join her husband in Amarillo, Texas. Brother Moriarty has been ill. Before leaving, Sister Moriarty resigned as leader of the Silver Wing Chapter of Temple Builders, a group of girls organized under her leadership more than three and a half years ago. Her stay in Amarillo will be of indefinite duration.

Walnut Park

Brothers William Haskins and R. D. Weaver presided at the eight o'clock prayer meeting, where fifty Saints were in attendance and an hour of brief and earnest testimonies was enjoyed.

Three hundred and four attended Sunday school. Junior service at eleven o'clock numbers from sixty-five to eighty-five.

At eleven o'clock Brother Orlando Nace directed the singing and orchestra, Brother F. W. Lanpher having charge of the meeting, assisted by Brother F. A. Hawley.

The speaker was Elder J. W. Paxton on the statement of Paul: "We are saved by hope." His sermon was replete with scriptural quotations on the hope of the gospel for the future life. We shall be glad to hear this splendid speaker often. At this service the little son of Mr. and Sister J. T. Peel was blessed, Brothers Samuel Smith and J. Walter Adams officiating. The baby is named Marvin.

Again Walnut Park must choose a new pastor, circumstances having necessitated Pastor O. C. White's changing his residence from Independence to some place in Kansas. While his stay here was short, the branch thrived under his leadership, and he leaves many friends.

Monday evening the orchestra went out to the Salvation Army Fresh Air Camp a few miles from town and played about two hours. This camp entertains every summer, entirely free, hundreds of poor children and their mothers, changing their guests every two weeks. At present the camp is full of Mexicans, the older ones unable to understand English. Announcements were made through an interpreter, but the appeal of orchestra music is universal, and the attention and evident enjoyment were all that could be desired.

Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue South

Evangelist J. A. Gunsolley and his good wife visited Saints here August 8 and 9, en route to Runnells, Iowa, to attend a reunion. We were very much pleased to see them and appreciated the good instruction given at the two sermons by a kind, spiritual father.

The first evening his text was, "What is acceptable service?" Seven things were mentioned that would come under this heading, namely: sincerity, earnestness, reliability, veracity, industry, constancy, and endurance.

Some of the thoughts brought out were as follows: Not to be a Christian out of policy. Not to serve God for financial gain. Serve him because we think it the best thing to do. We should work full time. Go forward all the time. This world wants real men, brave, strong, dependable. Speak nothing but the truth, so help me, God. Half truth is the worst kind of a lie. It is wrong to remain silent when hearing a falsehood. The idler has no place in Zion. Be industrious, both spiritually and temporally. There are jerkers, shirkers, and workers; which type are we? We must meet trials, temptations, and afflictions patiently and bravely, for eternal life is promised to those who endure to the end.

Sister A. H. Thompson has been visiting with her parents, Brother and Sister James Langton, at Devil's Lake.

A sweet baby girl arrived at the home of Brother and Sister Fred Wiedling Sunday, August 7. Mother and daughter are doing well.

Sister William Shackow has returned from Winnipeg, Canada. Her brother, John Corliss, is still in a helpless condition.

Sister J. E. Omans, of Frazee, Minnesota, spent Sunday, July 31, with Brother Omans and attended services here.

Sister Hennamen, of Moorhead, Minnesota, has been ill at the hospital, but is home now and feeling some better.

Sister Minnie Peterson and son, Donald, have returned from Dunseith, North Dakota, where she has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Emma Oakes, and other relatives.

Visitors in our branch recently were: Sister Sophia Fetting, of Borup, Minnesota; Mr. and Mrs. Pank, of Dunn Center, North Dakota; Sister Josephine Bullis, Brother Alfred Rife, Randal Rife, Maurice Rife, Mabel Rife, and Florence Rife, all of Sheldon, North Dakota.

Elder Robert Gunlock, our missionary, stopped over a few hours, August 11, on his way to Minneapolis and delivered an interesting sermon that evening. His text was found in John 1: 14, "And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us," etc. Jesus lived that which he taught. Jesus had something to give to the world; that was the meaning of the "word made flesh." Decide definitely if headed in the right direction what to do. Then go into it. Be willing and be dependable.

Sister R. T. Walker and daughter, Virginia, who have been visiting with Mrs. Robert Good at La Moure, North Dakota, have returned home.

Brother Calvin Wager, of Independence, Missouri, has been in Fargo for almost two months. He has helped out in the branch work while here and preached Sunday evening, August 14. His subject was, "Christ, the head of the church." He also conducted a Wednesday evening prayer service. He left for the western part of the State August 22, to visit his children.

Sunday, July 31, the services were held at Oak Grove Park, with a picnic dinner at noon. Elder Thmas Leitch preached at eleven o'clock and at three o'clock in the afternoon. He used a chart and gave some fine thoughts on the different dispensations of time. We hope to have more services at the park before snow flies.

Some changes in offices in the Sunday school have recently taken place. Sister Arthur Thompson has been elected superintendent of the Sunday school in the place of Sister Cora Dehn, who is soon leaving for Missouri. Brother Courtney Rotzien has been chosen secretary and treasurer to succeed Sister Elizabeth Shackow, who has gone to Independence, Missouri.

Our pastor, Elder Thomas Leitch, spent Sunday, August 14, at Clontarf, Minnesota. He held three services while there and encouraged the Saints to press forward and keep the faith.

The Fargo Saints are planning to give the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," on Sunday, September 25, to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the recovery of the plates of the Book of Mormon, September 22, 1827. Evangelist J. A. Gunsolley and wife, and Elder Swen Swenson have promised to be with us. Elder Robert Gunlock may also come. The Fargo Saints invite the Saints far and near to come and celebrate with us. Interesting sessions will be held, and a program will be given. A picnic dinner at noon will be one of the features not to be overlooked.

Elder Swen Swenson has been a very welcome guest in Fargo Branch the past few days. He preached Saturday evening, August 20. His subject was, "Examine yourselves and see if you be in the faith." He said we should examine ourselves day by day and week by week, or we may lose out. We should not take time to examine somebody else as most people like to do. The Israelites fell because they lost faith in God and in their leader. "Oh, for a faith that will not shrink," was sung.

On Sunday morning Brother Swenson revived our spirits with the twenty-third Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." A most beautiful text, yet it makes one feel his lack of faith. He said we should keep this text in mind each day in business, in work, in everything. Most people have faith in the dollar and not in God. Teach the children to pray and to have faith in God, and they will have peace and blessings and be prospered by right living. What more do we want than to have God for our shepherd? He will be good to us if we will be good to him! Goodness and mercy will follow us all the days of our lives.

In the evening Brother Swenson preached again. Monday evening his theme was, "Sinning against the Holy Ghost," a subject which has been discussed more or less among the Saints of late. His explanations were very good. Among the passages read was one from Hebrews, sixth chapter, "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened and have tasted of the heavenly gift and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted of the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they fall away, to renew them again unto repentance."

Brother Swenson left August 23 for Audubon, Minnesota, where he will hold services.

Several frosts have been reported, and last evening many of the cucumbers lost their lives. So the usual hot days of August have changed to real chilly ones.

Brother and Sister Dory Freeman and family have gone to Finley, North Dakota, where they have employment.

One of the grandest things in this world is to stir the hearts of men to do right. Lift them up, encourage them, keep your troubles to yourself, and always be cheerful, no matter what may come. Remember that he whose heart has joy and song gives joy to others, too.

Whether the days be hot or cold, stormy or clear, let us be at our posts with brave and prayerful hearts. When hard tests come, let us meet them cheerfully. Without having these tests and standing up under them it can not be said of us, "Well done." So let us keep the faith to the end.

Renew Their Faith by Reading Book of Mormon

Your article in the August 10 issue of the HERALD, entitled, "Are you reading the Book of Mormon?" was a capital suggestion for any tower builder. I read the book through nearly three months ago, which reading resulted in my joining this little group [San Diego Branch of Saints], and the spirit of refreshing wisdom and sustaining strength that the reading brought me stayed on through the last three months of buffeting that a new member must always expect to go through before he finds his niche in a new atmosphere.

The delightful experience has begun to dull somewhat, and I have decided to get back to first principles, which in this case means a rereading of the book, which seemed hard to do.

Your article was just the right impetus I needed, and I am now on my hundredth page. I find it is a newer and more delightful book than before, and I know that many readings will still prove it to be an inexhaustible source of spiritual power.

There is nothing in the world that would promote unity of feeling and rapid growth in our organization more than if at least ten thousand of its members would join in prayerfully reading this book before September 22. The concerted reading of many would give added strength to each reader. In Religio this evening I succeeded in obtaining pledges from the members whose names follow, and I hope for more next Sunday.

A Wedding of Interest to the Church

Mitchell-Jones

A simple but pretty wedding took place Wednesday evening, August 10, at the Saints' church, Bay City, Michigan, when Sister Mildred Mitchell, of Bay City, became the bride of Elder Robert E. Jones, of Oronogo, Missouri.

An attractive arrangement of palms made a pretty decorative setting for this service. Mrs. L. K. Buchanan sang "O promise me," after which the bridal party marched to the altar to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. Fern Moore. The ring service was used, the ceremony being pronounced by Elder E. S. White. Miss Leona Mitchell, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and Fred Mitchell, the bride's brother, attended Brother Jones as best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given at the home of Elder and Mrs. E. S. White, 208 North Dean Street, to relatives and immediate friends of the bride and groom. The guests, which numbered about thirty-five, were seated at tables attractively decorated in the bride's chosen colors, yellow and white.

The bride is well and favorably known in church circles, particularly in Central Michigan District, where she has been an earnest and faithful worker. She is at present district secretary, and has been a very energetic worker in reunion and other activities. Sister Jones was chosen on the first committee appointed in Central Michigan to start the reunion movement in this district, and much of the success of the reunions here can be attributed to her untiring efforts and those of her associates. Brother Jones is a young man of sterling character, a decided asset to the church. At present he is doing missionary work in Western Michigan District, and while he has not been in Michigan very long, these qualities together with his earnestness in doing the Master's will, have won the love and admiration of Saints throughout the State.

The Saints congratulate Brother and Sister Jones and wish them Godspeed on their journey through life. Surely much good will result from the efforts of this splendid young couple, and we trust God's choicest blessings will be theirs to enjoy.

Has Benefited by Reading Book of Mormon

The Book of Mormon being the theme for this year, I thought to write a little letter to the HERALD. Next Saturday, August 27, will be the sixty-third anniversary of my birth. I had read the Book of Mormon through by the time I was sixteen years old; that would be about forty-seven years ago.

Since then I have read it, by count, fifteen times, and how many more, if any, is not recorded by me. Much of it has been read and reread many times. During the past five years I have read it as much as once a year; and while doing so, have recorded an alphabetical index comprising about 17,000 references to paragraph and page to the Authorized Edition.

It is not such a very difficult task to read the book; the hardest task is to start and keep at it; I once read it in about three weeks. I wish to say that the Book of Mormon contains some of the best discourses on doctrine that can be found anywhere: faith, repentance, baptism, resurrection, and the judgment. These subjects are made very plain. The laying on of hands is not so much talked about, yet enough is said to make it plain.

As a testimony that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, it surely is a faithful witness, and bears record of God's dealings with man; that his promises are sure when man does his part; and that man is protected and prospered when keeping all the commandments.

The purpose of the book, as stated within its pages, is to be a witness to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews, in the last days, that Jesus is the same yesterday, today, and for ever. It comes forth to test the faith of the people, and if they will but accept and believe this, then there are other records to be brought forth in their time. But the people must believe the Book of Mormon and exercise faith before they can expect to get any more records.

A careful reading of the book will do anyone good. During my first reading, forty-five or more years ago, there were some things in the book that remained in my mind as a guide and a warning and kept me out of much trouble, into which I should have fallen had it not been for the warning of those statements retained in my memory. It will help anyone. Read it: carefully.

J. F. GUNSOLLEY.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, August 25.

Vocal Exercises

If the Northern California reunion Saints who had several study periods with Mrs. E. C. Jenkins will read and practice faithfully the following exercises, they, with others, may achieve the results promised at that time:

Both speaking and singing voices may remain youthful until a ripe old age, if the following simple exercises are practiced faithfully every day. Incorrect habits of enunciation may be corrected. Fatigue, as a result of strain, both in speaking and singing, will be postponed much longer, and the student will attain a resonance and clearness of voice surprising to himself and pleasing to his hearers.

When one realizes the wonder of the divine intelligence which made the human body and the human vocal organs with their wonderful mechanism, one can certainly worship the owner of that divine intelligence—God. The vocal mechanism should be prized and treated as the most wonderful instrument in the world.

In the writer's course of study, one is taught that the cavity back of the nose and cheek bones is the resonance box of the voice, just as the piano, cello, guitar, and violin boxes are the resonance boxes of those instruments. The tone and quality of all are improved by the resonance boxes.

The student wishes to remember that he must convey to his hearers on air wave lengths pleasing, melodious, and beautiful sounds, and therefore he trains himself in getting the correct pitch, tone, and quality to his speaking and singing voice and in talking and singing with a minimum of exertion.

Breathing and Humming

The body needs deep breaths to sustain life, but one can sing neither steadily nor effectively on deep breaths, so it is necessary to draw several deep breaths before beginning to sing or speak. If the student will stand on tiptoe for a moment, this will give a correct posture; then draw several deep breaths and let them go.

Then sit down and relax to practice; take a short breath and hum with the mouth shut:

e—f; e—f; e—f f—g; f—g; f—g
g—a; g—a; g—a

Get the pitch on the piano or on a tuning fork.

Practice staccato for five minutes, rest, then practice again several times during the day. Do not tire yourself.

The humming exercises practiced staccato with the mouth closed, the tongue against the lower front teeth, being sure to start with right pitch and quality, are very effective in helping one to attain the correct resonance quality that is so necessary to become a good speaker or singer.

After a few days of these exercises carefully practiced, one may try three notes, then four notes, five, etc., and then scales. In order to pronounce one's vowels correctly in speaking and singing, hold the hum until assured the resonance is in the right place, then open the mouth gently, so: um—me. Hold the nose; if one shuts off the sound, he is getting the resonance correctly. Do the others this way also: um—mi; um—mo; um—moo; um—ma; um—me. Let the short breath you have taken, come against the vocal cords gently. Do not push the breath; that causes strain, and the voice grows old and weak under strain.

The idea of the short, small breath is that one is able to control it; keep it steady and pleasing to hear. To sing on a deep breath causes one to sing unsteadily and irregularly.

Drop all old songs you have been singing by the old method until the new method has been well acquired. Hold all vowels in speaking and singing as long as possible, and do not add the consonants until the last possible second.

The next exercise to be taken up is octaves; hum, mm—me, starting with "me" on treble c and rising to high c; then striking high c on o and down to treble c on o. Be sure to take hold of the nose occasionally to see if the resonance quality is there.

Rules to Remember

The musician can invent many musical exercises and scales, but must remember always to:

1. Keep the correct pitch, quality, and resonance.
2. Keep the tongue back of the lower front teeth.
3. Sing with short breaths, but at every opportunity take a long breath, for the needs of the body, and then expel it.
4. Be sure to breathe often enough, and take a short breath, if possible, before singing a high note or a group of high notes.
5. Stand erect by standing on the tiptoes a second or two. Do not puff out the chest or assume any unnatural position. Stand at ease.
6. Practice regularly every day. Be very exact in your pitch, quality, resonance, time, and enunciation.
7. Believe in this method. It will do wonders for your voice.
8. Do not practice when tired.

Early morning is preferable as a practice time, when the mind and body are refreshed by the night's rest. Short practice periods are better than long, tedious ones. Consider the practice time a recreation and pleasure.

The student's intelligence creates the music, using the voice as the musical instrument by which he conveys to others his knowledge and technique.

Speakers may improve their talents by practicing all of the above, or they may use just the first simple exercises, regularly. Soon they will notice that they have acquired resonance on every word they utter, also clearer enunciation.

Say: um-m-m, the boy stood on the burning deck, etc., on the same note and then finish with the hum. Enunciate the words distinctly.

Each person in the world owes it to his fellows to cause as little irritation as possible, and thus by practicing the difficult art of speaking and singing correctly much of the unnecessary irritation may be eliminated.

ELIZABETH C. JENKINS.

Conference Notices

London Ontario district conference will meet with the Saint Thomas Branch, September 10 and 11. Business session at 2 p. m. Saturday. Apostle J. F. Curtis will be present. Miss Grace Perry, 19 McDonald Avenue, London, secretary. George C. Tomlinson, jr., Saint Marys, president.

Our Departed Ones

CAMPBELL.—Henry Hartgrove Campbell was born in Illinois, August 14, 1849. In 1883 he and Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Meece were united in marriage at Billings, Missouri, and to them there were born six children. His companion and one daughter, Gertie, had preceded him to the great beyond. There remain Mrs. Esther Maxwell, of Willow Hill, Illinois, Mrs. Bertha Hymes, 618 South Willis, Independence, and Mrs. Okia Hatton, daughters, Buckner, Missouri; Glenard, of Blue Springs, Missouri, and Archie, sons, 902 West Maple Avenue, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Stella Hulse, Westhope, North Dakota, stepdaughter; twenty-two grandchildren, four great-grandchildren, and many, many relatives and friends. He departed this life at the home of his son Glenard, at Blue Springs, August 19, 1927, having been a member of the Reorganized Church since his baptism by Elder George Jenkins on June 9, 1901. A large funeral gathering and procession bore testimony of the sincere regard in which this faithful brother was held. Elders A. K. Dillee and R. J. Lambert conducted the services at Second Church.

RATH.—Anna Mae Rath was born April 1, 1871, at New Philadelphia, Ohio. She united with the church at about the age of sixteen. Married Marion Rath October 2, 1892, and to them were born three children, two boys and one girl. She passed into the beyond August 8, 1927, at Canton, Ohio, at the age of fifty-six years, four months, and seven days. Surviving to mourn are her husband, two boys, Edgar M. Rath, of Akron, Frank B., of Canton; a daughter, Mrs. Melvin Struble, of Canton; also her father, Francis M. Brown, of Canton; two brothers, Frank Brown, of Colorado, George, of Canton; three sisters, Mrs. Marie Derr, of Springfield, Ohio; Mrs. Milo Druckenbrod, and Mrs. Florence Thompson, of Canton, and three grandchildren. Funeral services were held at the home in Canton, J. C. McConaughy preaching the sermon. Interment at New Philadelphia, Ohio.

Conference Minutes

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.—At Netawaka, August 13, 14. District President Dave Little presided; W. F. Bolinger and C. E. Harpe were associated with him. District president reported four conferences and three two-day meetings during the year, with eleven visits to branches; also visits to scattered members. District Missionary C. E. Harpe reported two tent meetings, one at Blue Rapids and one at Marysville, which is a new opening; sixty sermons preached, thirty administrations to the sick, one baptism, and a thousand tracts distributed. Atchison, Fanning, and Blue Rapids locals reported eighty-six services held, sixteen administrations to sick, and nine baptisms. Departmental reports were received from superintendents of Department of Recreation and Expression and Women's Department. An itemized report from Bishop's Agent Schmid showed $284.27; balance on hand $13.64. The recommendation of the ordination of David Davis to office of deacon from Fanning was approved. The conference also reaffirmed previous action had with reference to the ordination of Charles Marsh, of Fanning, to office of priest. A committee on display composed of branch presidents of the district, with Dave Little as chairman, was appointed for the Harvest Home Festival at Independence, Missouri, September 24 to 30, 1927. All branch presidents were asked to cooperate with the district president in securing addresses of World War Veterans for editor of Autumn Leaves. The committee on missionary transportation reported the following: "We, your committee on missionary transportation, submit the following report: 1. If the Northeastern Kansas District is to purchase a car for missionary use, it is our opinion and we recommend that a fund of not less than $600 be created before a car be purchased. 2. We are not in favor of incurring any indebtedness in purchasing a car. 3. We favor the purchase of a moderate-priced new car rather than a secondhand car. 4. Inasmuch as pledges are sometimes made in good faith but oftentimes are broken by reason of circumstances over which we have no control, we recommend that any subscriptions to a fund for the purchase or maintenance of a missionary car be in cash. John Green, E. L. Bullard, William Twombly," Treasurer of reunion committee, C. E. Harpe, submitted an itemized report, showing a balance of $68.13 deposited in the Exchange National Bank at Atchison. Fifteen dollars from this fund was allowed Brother Harpe for reunion expenses at Stewartville. The following resolution of condolence to the family of the late A. P. Crooker was submitted to the conference by the committee: "We, your committee on condolence to the family of our departed brother, A. P. Crooker, submit the following report to the Northeastern Kansas district conference: We assure the family they have our sincere sympathy in their bereavement. Having associated many years with our late brother in district conferences, reunions, and various other gatherings of the church, we with the family sense the loss. Words are too cold to express our sympathy as we would like, but we extend to them our undivided faith and prayers, realizing that our loss is his gain, and looking forward to the time when we shall meet in that great reunion where separation is not known. M. L. Schmid, C. E. Harpe, T. J. Christensen." The election of officers was as follows: Dave Little, district president; counselors, W. F. Bolinger and E. L. Bullard; secretary, Clayton Crooker; chorister, Sister Emma Happe; assistant chorister, Sister Edna Williams; Sunday school superintendent, T. J. Christensen; Sunday school secretary, Sister Christensen; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, W. F. Bolinger; superintendent of Department of Women, Sister W. H. Dittmore. The conference voted to have two conferences and two two-day meetings. Bishop's agent was instructed to reimburse Sister H. C. Pitsenberger for stationery and postage for district, and a rising vote of thanks was extended for services rendered as secretary. Bishop's agent was sustained also by a rising vote. The next conference will convene at Blue Rapids. Mrs. H. C. Pitsenberger, district secretary.

Satisfaction

It is one of the satisfactions of life to have investments that turn out right—that keep every dollar of principal safe and that pay a good income with un-failing regularity.

A church bond has back of it the moral integrity and good will of "a people" in addition to tangible resources of property and money.

Description of Bonds

- $25 Baby Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, payable annually.
- $50 Thrift Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $100 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $200 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $1,000 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.

The $100 bonds may be purchased by paying $10 down and $10 per month until the face value of the bond is paid. On $25 and $50 bonds any amount of $1 or more will be accepted as part payment. The church will allow 5% interest to the purchaser on such installment payments, when full payment of the bond is made. Installment payments will easily and quickly secure a church bond if you do not have the money to pay cash. Government bonds will be accepted at their market value in exchange for church bonds.

The Book of Mormon should be in the home of every Latter Day Saint, and if possible every member should have his own book.

September 22, 1927, is the one hundredth anniversary of the date when the records contained in the Book of Mormon were delivered to the keeping of the church. This event makes the year a significant one in church history.

It will be a wholesome experience for every member of the church to read the Book of Mormon this year. Hundreds have already signified their interest and have started in this worth-while endeavor.

INDUSTRIAL ZION

A new booklet just off the press is now ready for sale. Orders filled same day as received. The content of this booklet is an amplification of a series of lectures given during the last General Conference, and the matter of stewardships and cooperation in developing Zion is presented from quite a new angle.

It is written in a very interesting style. Definite situations are discussed and analyzed in a logical, common sense way, and the pleasing thing about the book is the fact that the entire treatise is based on the spiritual ground work of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The booklet is designed as a text for study by the priesthood in their priesthood meetings and by the membership in their study classes throughout the church. The First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric urge that this booklet be secured and study work begun.

The booklet will be about one hundred and seventy-five pages and will be sold for 20c each.

Order through the publicity agent in your branch when possible. Otherwise order direct from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

Home Owners

In thinking of Zion, I can not but think of it as comprising citizens who own their homes, for it is difficult to think of ideal conditions being otherwise. Yet we know that such an ideal will not be reached at a bound, but will be brought about gradually as improvements go on apace. Hence it is with interest that I note the results of a survey made last year by the Independence church officers. Brother C. Ed. Miller a few days ago laid before me the tabulated results of a survey on the ownership of the homes in which the Independence Saints are living.

Survey of fifteen hundred and forty-seven families in the forty-one groups showed six hundred and eighty-three owning the home, four hundred and sixty-three buying the home, and four hundred and one renting. This means that about forty-four per cent own the home, thirty per cent are buying, and twenty-six per cent are renting; seventy-four per cent own the home or have equity in it.

That is a good showing and holds hope that we may soon see the day when all the Saints in Independence will be owners of homes clear of debt.

It would be interesting to know how largely the work of the Order of Enoch has figured in bringing about this condition.

Study and Industry

Do geniuses have an inexhaustible ability to work, or does work develop geniuses? There is too prevalent an idea that men of ability are so by natural endowment, accident, or fate, but observation will uncover the fact that they all had or developed great capacity to work, and especially at what will prepare for greater usefulness—study. And usually such study is systematic. Benjamin Franklin was one of the greatest, wisest, and most useful men of his time. Recently I was struck on reading his autobiography with a passage in which he in simple manner tells how he did it. Speaking of a library he was instrumental in founding, he said:

“This library afforded me the means of improvement by constant study, for which I set apart an hour or two each day, and thus repaired in some degree the loss of the learned education my father intended for me. Reading was the only amusement I allowed myself. I spent no time in taverns, games, or frolics of any kind; and my industry in business continued as indefatigable as it was necessary.”

I wish he had said something of the kind of reading he did; but it is easy to surmise that he read only the best, and instructive literature. I have underscored the words of his simple statement which I would emphasize to our youth. Regular study hours and no time for frivolity.

As his rule of conduct in business, he quotes from Solomon a passage his father brought to his attention: “Seest thou a man diligent in his calling, he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men.”

From the foregoing quotations, then, we can gather two simple rules leading to success and usefulness: systematic and continuous study in worthwhile subjects, and indefatigable industry in business.

Keep these in your eye, reader.

Clippings

From many places the Saints send us clippings from papers and magazines. We are glad they do. We are glad to have them on the alert for articles which refer to the church, its history or work, and even if we receive duplicates, we are still glad to have the Saints send to us, for we desire to file all such, and to miss no important item of press notice.

And articles which are not about the church or its work, but are thoughtful in content, neat in expression, or on live topics, we appreciate; for our reading time is limited, and we are glad to have the reading Saints remember us; for the articles are stimulating and helpful generally.

The alert Saints are thus a self-constituted clipping bureau. Thanks! And keep it up.

The Passing of Emma Burton

In the passing of Emma Burton on the 3d instant, the church loses another outstanding character. Others may take up her work, but none can replace her. Hers was a faith which counted no sacrifice too great to make for the cause she loved and in the interests of which she labored long; and no burden was too great for her to attempt if within the limits of her strength. She was ever ready to say, "All that I am and have I give freely to God and his church." And she knew service, too; service which called for all she had to render. At home and abroad has she worked beside her companion, Captain Joseph F. Burton, as he labored in the cause. At his side she followed into the islands of the sea and labored faithfully and assiduously among the dark-skinned Tahitians and Polynesians. At his side she worked among her own people.

In her younger years she wielded a ready pen, and it, too, was ever at the service of the church. As "Beatrice Witherspoon," she unfolded her life to the Saints, and as correspondent to the HERALD her name frequently underwrote articles and letters from which the Saints drew strength.

Many men and women in the church have received from her, by word of mouth or in neatly written missive, words of encouragement and commendation. She was free with commendation and seldom criticized adversely, and in this she wielded an influence enjoyed by few.

But perhaps in no way has she contributed more to the Saints than in her exemplary life. As a faithful companion, a devoted mother, a trusted neighbor, a true friend, she walked a life of faith which has steadied many a soul. No crisis through which the church was called to pass daunted her faith; and no rumor destroyed her trust in the officers of the church. Hers was a faith which shrunk not before woe or cowering before fear.

Memory of her faithful devotion will still strengthen us.

F. M. S.

Wayne B. Wheeler, noted dry crusader, is dead. Mr. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, died at the Battle Creek, Michigan, Sanitarium Monday afternoon, September 5. He had been at the Sanitarium three days, and his condition was thought to be some better when death overtook him. The death of Mr. Wheeler is an irreparable loss to the cause of prohibition in the United States, for in a broad sense there is no successor to him. In his field he was a genius. For the last thirty years his career has been the story of the temperance movement in this country until in a large part of the public mind he was the personification of prohibition. He was also the butt of severe criticism and even suspicion.

Book of Mormon Center of Interest

Reports continue to come that people are making the reading of the Book of Mormon one of their main activities. Several have almost completed the work—will have it accomplished long before September 22, the centennial date of the delivery of the plates to Joseph Smith. Some of this class we have interviewed, and their expressions are of the highest satisfaction. They say their faith in the whole latter-day work has been strengthened; that they are finding support for their faith not found before or elsewhere; that the calm assurance of the divinity of the work of the Prophet Joseph Smith is again given; that the work of Jesus Christ upon the earth seems grander than ever before.

This is constructive activity, and we trust there are thousands who have joined the band who intend to finish their rereading of the book by January 1, 1928.

Why not form small groups in the branches of the church, consisting of a convenient number for the living room, gather at a central place two or three or four evenings of each week, select a ready reader, and prosecute with vigor the reading of the Book of Mormon, while the companionship of Saints shall add to the comfort and peace received in individual reading?

Probably there is no man in the church with more pressing work to accomplish than President Frederick M. Smith, yet he is rereading the book and hopes to complete it before 1927 comes to an end. He has done one thing which few now living have done: that is, he has read the Book of Mormon in the original manuscript.

It is true of this book, as of the Bible—a rereading is much like the reading of a new book. We commend the activity of Saints in this line, and expect that the reward of the faithful will be abundant.

Latter Day Saint Harmonies and Sentiments

Whether the organization be a state, a nation, a society, a school, or a church, that organization is moved to a unity of sentiment, a desire for achievement, or a satisfaction in existence by an appropriate song. Fortunate is the man or woman so touched by the muse that he can crystallize the feeling of a body of people in a few verses of perfect song. He has made for himself a place which is not easily obliterated—he may err later in individual act; he may be overtaken in sin; he may desert the ranks; but he has spoken the mind and felt the heart throb of his people and inscribed it in song, and his place is secure in their affections.

Our church is rich in its song literature, and today we are privileged to present the list of those compositions of word or music or both by members of the church organization which have had such deep meaning as to live out the years and become incorporated in one of our generally used present-day collections, The Saints' Hymnal, or Zion's Praises. I envy the feeling of the Saint who will devote an hour to a close examination and contemplation of the list appended. What memories are revived, of stalwart Saints and men of God whose faces appear and whose voices greet our ears as we give rein to our imagination, and sing for ourselves a verse of "Unmoved by fear, my praise is due"; "Lord, may our hearts be tuned to sing"; "Yes, we feel the clouds are breaking"; "Bow, ye mortals, bow before him"; "Redeemer of Israel"; "As musing I sat all alone"; "The Saints shall wear robes as the lilies"; "The angel message"; "The old, old path"; "Lead me, Savior"; "Tenderly lead thou me on"; "One day as fell the Spirit's whisper"; "The angel message." There is no stopping place in the list. May God's blessings rest upon those who have felt and expressed our sentiments in these songs we sing.

In the near future we hope to submit a more complete list of the songs of our people which have at any time seen publication:

Auditorium Building Financed The General Conference Resolution of 1927 Is Carried Out

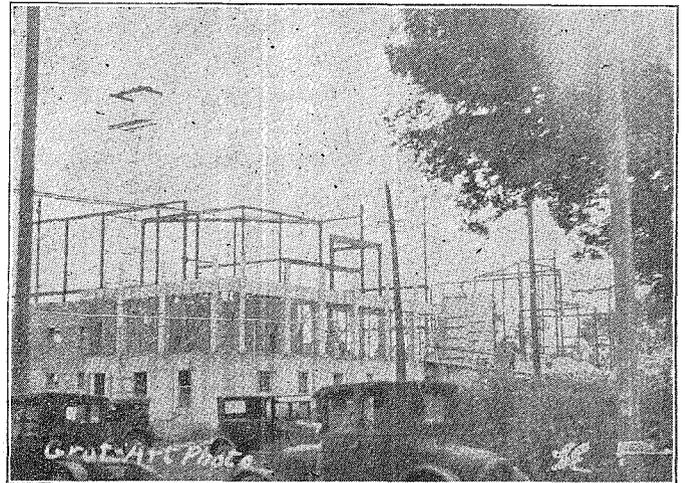

The General Conference of April, 1927, authorized the Presiding Bishopric to finance the further construction of the Auditorium by securing a loan, offering as security the Auditorium site, that is, the land on which the building is being constructed and the building itself. Soon after the last General Conference, arrangements were matured and a loan secured.

The property covered is that parcel of land situate between River Boulevard and Grand Avenue lying south of Walnut Street and north of the north property line of the Columbian School.

In general terms, the land covered by this mortgage is about one block square. The Auditorium, which is now being built on this parcel of land, is included in the mortgage.

No other piece of church property is included in the mortgage.

Possibilities

BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

I am convinced that the average person does not appreciate his possibilities, and that he falls far short of the good he might enjoy. We are what we will be; nothing more, nothing less! But many of us have never learned to will, and we therefore go along through life, following thoughtlessly the lines of least resistance. We can never reach the best, nor can we come to expect to contribute to the welfare of society as we should, until we have learned to will. I am desirous of making clear this thought, that the things presented later may find a more ready response in the mind and heart of those who consider them. I learn as I should when I will to learn the truth about things. I hear as I should when I will to hear fully and distinctly what is said, and how, and why it is uttered. I do as I should when I will to do the thing that is profitable to humanity; and, the thing that is not profitable to mankind is not acceptable unto God.

Whether we know it or not we are required to make choice for ourselves. Almost daily I am permitted to hear mankind speak of serving God, of the services they attend, etc.; and I would like to begin here and reason a while with those who have ears to hear and an understanding to perceive, that thereby the way might be opened for the enriching and enlarging of life and its experiences.

What is service? Is it possible for me to contribute anything that shall either enrich or enlarge God? I speak it reverently, and would like to have these things considered to a fuller extent than they usually are. I used to think that when I had prayed, or had participated in the Sunday school, or had listened to a sermon, or had attended a prayer meeting I was rendering service unto God. I had come to have this idea because of the common expression, "There shall be a religious service held here tomorrow, and the people are all invited."

What did the people really mean to say who expressed themselves in this way? I at that time gave no thought, and therefore I with other men considered religious service as simply singing hymns, praying prayers, and preaching and listening to sermons. I know now that these things are only a means of preparing me for service, and are not service itself.

I can serve God acceptably only when I will to help mankind understand and accept that which is true and beautiful. The exercise of worship is a good thing, but we should go further than this. Food is an essential; the body receives its strength from the food that it takes in; but he who goes on from day to day, eating food but never performing any labor, is a very unprofitable person. So it is with him who goes on feasting on the spiritual things he receives from his religious worship, and who does not render real service to his fellow men. Service to God must mean service to man; it can mean nothing else.

Our Lord came to the earth, he tells us, not to be ministered unto, but to minister. He said unto his disciples, I am among you as he that doth serve. Even the casual reader would be able to see that he went about daily doing kindnesses to mankind, and trying to get them to understand God and his purposes by reason of his service among them.

What Is Your Net Worth?

He sought to cause them to understand that his ability to serve was occasioned by his relationship with the powers of heaven. He said to those whom he sought to teach, "I do always the things that please him." Then he turned and ministered to the needs of the poor, the blind, and the needy. Isn't it strange we are unable to see the real meaning of our Master's message? Is it not largely because we have failed to will?

There is one text of scripture frequently quoted by us that I think we have failed to appreciate as we should, because I am convinced that the great majority of us fail to grasp its real significance. The reading is: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." Let us analyze it. If we would simply supply the preposition to after the first will in the sentence, so as to make it read, If any man will to do his will, etc., we would have the real import of the original meaning of the language of our Lord. We must will to do his will. Some passive act is not sufficient; our volition is needed; we must choose to do the thing; we must will to do it. I shall never forget the impression the poem "John Maynard" had on me when I read in my youthful years the wonderful message it contains. The flames had surrounded the noble man who was at the wheel, trying to run the ship ashore that its passengers might be saved. The captain called to him in words something like this, "John Maynard, can you yet hold out?" and the answer from out the stifling smoke came back, "By God's good help I will!" Note very carefully the language, for he didn't say by the help of the Lord I shall, but he said by the help of the Lord I will! He willed to do it, and therefore he succeeded in saving the people, but he himself sank beside the wheel. His will power, or more properly speaking, his power to will, enabled him to run that ship ashore. Without the use of his power to will he would have forsaken his post when the flames began to creep in upon him, and the result would have been the death of the three thousand people who were the freight of that steamer. John Maynard willed by the help of God and did the thing he willed to do. To him it was of but little consequence that he himself should sink beside the wheel, when he had the consolation of knowing that he had in his sacrifice been made the savior of men.

There is great possibility for the man or the woman who will exercise will power. All things must yield to the indomitable will.

When Napoleon the Great had planned an expedition through the Alps, the less courageous said to him, You can not go that way. No one has ever crossed the Alps. It can not be done! But that courageous general said, "There shall be no Alps; I will find a way or make one!" From my earliest recollection I can recall the common expression, "Where there is a will, there is a way." Today I see much more in those words than I did at the time it became a common expression to me. It says to me today that when I really will to do a thing I will find a way to do that thing. That is evidently what Jesus meant when he said, "If any man will do my will, he shall know." When I will to know a thing I shall surely come to know that thing, and when I will to do a thing I shall find a way to do it. Let me remember, then, that I shall be what I will to be.

Every achievement of men has come as a result of willing. The men of power have become such because they had the will to become powerful. He, therefore, who has the power to will shall also have the will to power, and the limitations I set for myself are those I have willed to fix. Jesus said, "The works that I do shall ye do also, and greater works than these." We fail of this achievement because we have not willed to fit ourselves for the task. As I think back over my life's work and see its mingled failures and successes, I am able to read clearly the causes of both. When I have willed I have succeeded, but when I have neglected to will I have failed. When I have willed strongly, I have achieved a measure of success far surpassing that which has come to me when I have willed weakly. Doubt has always been destructive; fear has always paralyzed and always will. He who would succeed must establish confidence. That is to say, he must learn to have confidence in God and the right, and then he must have confidence that when he wills to do what God would have him do, it is possible for him to do it. This confidence will fit him for the best in life, and he shall come to share the presence of the Infinite, for he has willed to come to that place where he can meet the divine One. Great possibilities await the one who wills to do the thing that God would have him do! The things already acquired are but a drop in the bucket as compared with the things that may yet be achieved by those who have power to will.

The man of faith becomes confident, and thus he comes to commune with God, and this communion increases his confidence until he gains a power to will that lifts him above the common multitude and unfolds to him the possibilities that are within the reach of those who will use their achievements for the welfare of the race. Selfishness, like doubt and fear, is a handicap to anyone. He who learns to make the proper uses of his powers shall come to know the real glory of life, for his usefulness shall be increased, and in proportion as he comes to serve the interests of his fellows will his joys increase and multiply. His feet may tread in the mist-bound valleys of earth, but his mind and his heart shall penetrate the realities of the infinite sphere, and he shall know what it means to sit at the feet of the Master of men and receive counsel from him. He shall come to understand what the language of our Lord, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," really means. But we must remember that these things are for those only who will to become what the Master of men would have them become. The superlative joys are only to be realized by those who will to prepare for service, and having prepared, learn to serve. Joy comes as a result of service rendered and not from things lavished upon self.

Possibilities of the choicest nature are about us on every hand, and we have failed to see them because we have as yet failed to train our eyes to see these things. At times we give them a superficial glance but fail to understand them because we have not willed to know the truth concerning them. The thing that now remains for us to do is to awaken from our slumbers, clear our vision, increase our powers of perception, and form better concepts of life and its possibilities, and then will to do and to be all that the Master of life would have us become. There is no time for delay if we are to achieve the best there is for us. He who squanders time is only planting seeds of sorrow and failure for himself, while he is placing obstructions in the way of the progress of others. There is much in the words of Scripture: "Whosoever will, may . . ." Surely we can see that it is he who fails to will that is going to suffer loss and make failure.

Let man come to will to do the things that are pure, beautiful, true, uplifting, and constructive in every sense, and he will make strides in life that shall astonish his fellows. But he must will to be constructive and not destructive; he must learn that the field of possibility lies in the forward course and not in the traditions of the past. He must come to understand the needs of his fellow men and then will to do the thing that will enrich their lives, extend their vision, poise their reasoning, and equip them with the things necessary for the utilizing of the opportunities and possibilities of life.

As we come to see the need for constructive and creative work, will we begin to discover the largeness of the possibilities that are constantly about us, and to see the need of conserving and utilizing our time, rather than wasting it. We will realize that the best there is in us is constantly being demanded of us, and we will then will to do our very best.

Living to Eat, or Eating to Live

BY ELMER A. KALER

In my work as chef, I made a tour of several eastern reunions in the late summer and early fall of 1921.

At one of these reunions occurred an incident which many who were there camping will recall. For supper one evening a very rich salad had been prepared by one of the assistant cooks. The chief ingredient of the salad was a heavy pure oil and egg dressing, and there were several foods on the table, which when combined with this made a very poor combination in diet. With appetites sharpened by outdoor life the Saints ate most heartily, and the next day a number complained of having been ill during the night, some even requiring the services of the hospital corps for treatment. Some jokingly accused me of trying to poison them.

Strange to say, I was guilty! Thousands of cooks are guilty of the same thing in the food they prepare for human consumption. No, actual poison is not put in the steaming kettles, but the combination of foods served are not well balanced, and when eaten at the same meal are injurious to health.

Doctor Frank Crane says that devitalized foods are causing much ill health and suffering today. A noted English physician said in an article in the Dearborn Independent some time ago that thousands die unnecessarily from diseases caused by indigestion and constipation.

Would you knowingly take a drink of or eat a deadly poison? Yet every day thousands are taking slow poison in the devitalized foods and ill-balanced meals which shorten their healthful years and add ones of suffering and distress. "Absurd," says one to me. "I eat any and everything and never had a doctor in my life. My father lived to be ninety-five." Yes, nature was kind to you and gave you an iron constitution, but your neighbor is an old man at forty-five, and your other neighbor suffers with tumors of the stomach and must undergo a severe operation. They, too, eat anything they wish. The old-saying, "What's one man's food is another's poison," is verily true.

Devitalized foods—the miller takes the wheat, one of the most important foodstuffs, the outer shell is removed, and the grain is bleached and sifted into a snowy-white product called patent flour. What lovely bread it makes! One can hardly eat enough when it comes fresh from the oven. "Highly nutritious," say noted experts; "eat more bread." It is true, but there is something lacking. The combination of the original elements is not in the loaf of white bread; they have gone with the shell of the wheat.

Polished rice—light, flaky, and tasteful. How about the natural brown rice nature gave us? Granulated sugar—white, pure in color, a pure carbon bleached from natural cane and beets with chemicals. High in heat energy, it lasts for but a short time in body energy. It is like firing a furnace with newspapers. Rolled oats—where are the dishes of old-fashioned cracked oatmeal that were once served?

Drinks and preserved foods beyond description are used today, sulphur dioxide, benzoate of soda, alum, glucose coating, and other preservatives being printed plainly or otherwise on the goods as designated by pure food laws; coal tar products, aniline dyes, certified food colors—all called harmless in the amounts used.

Substitution in foods—something else for butter, oleomargarine and nut substitutes, while corn syrups and pectin make up various imitations of pure fruit preserves. Imitation flavors and colors, egg substitutes, patented and prepared food products are widely advertised and extensively used. Even the water used in large cities is devitalized by chemicals.

Millions of dollars spent for devitalized foods and patent medicines, one used to offset the other. Doctor Oliver Wendell Holmes once said, "If all the medicine in the world were thrown into the sea, it would be bad for the fish and good for humanity."

We should take foods for our medicines—the unadulterated grains of the field, the honey of the flowers, and the fig of the tree. At their various reunions our people should train themselves and be trained to eat so as to avoid the mistakes of the past. We have been promised that the angel of death shall pass by our doors if we direct our lives according to the best knowledge that we have. Let us learn to eat and live, rather than live to eat.

God of the Earth

By Joseph Ecclestone

O praise the Lord, ye sons of men:
O praise him, all the earth,
In him we life and being have;
He gave the spirit birth.

He sitteth in the heavens and
He watcheth o'er the earth,
Distills the glistening dewdrop,
He watereth the earth.

How glorious is the sunshine; how Refreshing is the rain;
The seedtime and the harvest,
The golden sheaves of grain.

The earth is his own garden, where
He sojourns day by day;
We sense his mystic presence, for
He walketh by the way.

Our mortal eyes are holden that
His face we can not see,
But still he lives in every flower,
Each leaf and budding tree.

Behold his golden chariot
Appearing in the sky,
As gliding on its noiseless wheels,
It stealeth gently by.

How radiant are the jewels that Adorn the milky way:
Which, through the long night watches, guide
The traveler on his way.

How wondrous are the blessings that Befall his creature man,
But greater still his promises
In the great gospel plan.

The Bridegroom, he is coming, and
His voice shall soon be heard;
He bears the crown of glory that
Is promised in his word.

Our eyes shall then behold him
Through the intervening space,
And see the King of Glory; yea,
Behold him face to face.

REUNION NEWS

Kirtland Reunion

The reunion at Kirtland, closing on August 21, proved to be one of the best ever held here. The committee, composed of James E. Bishop, T. G. Neville, Charles Fry, and G. M. Nichols, labored diligently to make the appointments fit the needs and desires of the Saints and friends who gathered in, and in consequence the ten days passed with scarcely a murmur or complaint, all finding a high degree of enjoyment and spiritual uplift.

The meetings were of a high order, many splendid sermons being delivered by such brethren as R. S. Budd, F. A. Smith, John Grice, William Grice, Richard Baldwin, Hubert Case, V. D. Ruch who stopped on his way from a five-year mission to Norway, E. Y. Hunker who was proceeding to Norway to take the place of Brother Ruch, and Thomas Carr.

Other general ministers present were, G. T. Griffiths, A. E. Stone, J. E. Bishop, and Charles Fry, with many other of the local priesthood, all of whom rendered acceptable service.

Mrs. R. Baldwin conducted work in the Department of Women, and in junior church, besides conducting a class in Zion building during the class hour, at which time also R. S. Budd had a class in doctrine, and Charles Fry a class in stewardship. Miss Auverne Proper cared for the smaller children in school and kindergarten work.

Recreation was under the direction of Brother Herbert Voltman, who supplied a wide variety of social activities, from the lawn games to a trip to Lake Erie on one afternoon, where many found delight in bathing in the waters of the lake. Brother Holland entertained the multitude one night in front of the Temple after the service with lantern pictures of the Boy Scout movement, and upon another evening Brother Bishop showed some original comic cartoons made by John Collins, and Charles Fry presented a series of slides on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

On Friday, the 19th, the committee provided a "community night," when Mr. Sidney S. Wilson, secretary of the Western Reserve University, gave an address on "The influence of religion in Lake County." He traced the history of the settling of the county, the development of the political and religious bodies, and showed the influences which determined the course of the canal running from Lake Erie south, and which by being laid through the village of Cleveland gave that place the start which ultimately made it a great city. Had the canal been made to enter the lake at Willoughby, it is probable that that village would today have been the city, in which case Kirtland might have been surrounded with mills and factories and become an integral part of the great city.

Mr. Wilson spoke with appreciation of the influence of the Latter Day Saints in the community, stating that they were the first people in the Western Reserve to establish schools of higher learning. He also said it was they who closed the distillery which was operating on the flats in lower Kirtland when they first came. Words of praise were spoken regarding the devotion and sacrifice of the Saints who built the Kirtland Temple.

The morning prayer services were mostly in charge of Patriarch F. A. Smith, and as a whole were a little above the average in order, activity, and spiritual life. On Saturday, the 13th, a priesthood meeting was held, at which Charles Fry spoke on "The relation of the church to civil government and to civil law." On Saturday, the 20th, an open priesthood meeting was held, when R. S. Budd spoke informally on the relation of the priesthood to the membership, followed by F. A. Smith. These meetings were beneficial to the ministry and the Saints.

Attendance may not have been quite so large as on some previous occasions, though satisfactory. The Kirtland reunion is becoming more cosmopolitan each year, and Saints and friends were present from such distant places as Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, Alabama, Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and from several New England and other States which we do not now recall. A goodly number also came from the Canadian side.

The song service and music were in charge of T. G. Neville, who availed himself of the assistance of Evan A. Fry. Sister F. Haynes, chorister of the Kirtland District, prepared for the rendition of the cantata, "From Olivet to Calvary," which was given on Sunday afternoon of the 21st. It was a great undertaking to train and unify the scattered choirs, but it was successful.

Among the items of business were the passing of resolutions of condolence on the death of Brother Robert Miller, who was one of the reunion committee, and on the death of Brother F. J. Ebeling, who served on the committee for many years until his release last year. With the passing of faithful laborers, new ones must be found to take their places. This year Brother Thomas Carr was placed on the committee.

The one great appeal of the reunion was to higher and better lives, better service, and a closer walk with God. It was a divine call to that life that will make Zion possible.

Mobile, Alabama

The Mobile district reunion was a grand success. Thirty-three were baptized, and several more will be baptized Sunday, August 28.

Preaching was done by Brethren M. M. Turpen, Ammon White, E. A. Curtis, and A. D. McCall. Each sermon was Zionward, uplifting and educational, and accompanied by the divine Spirit of God.

Class work was conducted by A. D. McCall, E. A. Curtis, and Sister Mamie Taylor. The lesson periods were well attended, and everyone was interested and blessed.

Recreational activities were supervised by Franklin Styner and E. A. Curtis, swimming and ball games being the main features.

The prayer meetings were of the highest and best type ever held in the district. The blessed gifts of the gospel were manifested in abundance in tongues, prophecies, and healing of the sick. In fact, it was almost a day of Pentecost. Many old backsliders were revived, and some were baptized who had been putting it off for many years.

The general reunion committee could not have sent a better team of workers to us. All four men are indeed big brothers, filled and inspired with the Holy Spirit. Brother Curtis is a big brother and boy with the young, a splendid leader and entertainer. Brother Ammon White is a wonderful "father in Israel." Brother Turpen is an excellent spiritual adviser and counselor.

Brother Turpen had a birthday during the reunion, and the good sisters and several of the men gave him a birthday party. The table was well dressed, and a big birthday cake occupied the center place. While he was away being entertained, the table was decorated and arranged, and all the attendance of the reunion was circled around the table. Then Brother Turpen was rushed by auto to the scene of the party. He was so astonished and surprised that he stood spellbound for a while. Then Brother Curtis, as spokesman, presented him with a nice purse of money given by Saints and friends.

The reunion was well attended. Six weeks before the convening of the reunion, the location was secured. A clearing was made, and a tabernacle was erected, also a kitchen. Lights and water were installed, tents were hoisted, and all went on like a whirlwind. Everything was done in harmony and peace. The buildings cost about one hundred and thirty-two dollars, water and lights over ten dollars, and we gave each minister and helper a little money. After paying off all we owed, we still had some left.

The mayor of the city came out the last Sunday and addressed the congregation at eleven o'clock.

The Saints were admonished by the Lord to make preparation for his coming and the gathering to Zion; to put away contention, pride, excess of dressing, contending for riches and gain; and to let their lives be turned Zionward to the things of God. That God would send them such blessings as they had never thought. That the time was very, very near when great destructions would be poured out upon the nations of the earth.

The 1928 reunion was voted by unanimous decision to be held in Mobile. The committee now consists of the district presidency. We are looking forward to 1928 and a bigger and better reunion.

We thank the general reunion committee for these noble men and women sent us this year. God bless the good work of the gospel. We can surely see Zion established and his people redeemed, if faithful. The reunion attenders voted unanimously to be Zion builders.

The young people, led by Brother Curtis, went for a hike at 5 a. m. down the seacoast for prayer and testimony meeting. It was a great success, many taking part who had never done so before.

PRESS COMMITTEE.

Western Montana District

The dates for this reunion were August 5 to August 14, inclusive.

Because of the scattered condition of the church members of this district, the work of preparing for the annual reunion falls heavily upon the Saints who live in the vicinity of the reunion grounds. These faithful brethren erected tents, set up stoves, made improvements on the pavilion where services are held, and dug a well.

The sisters, under the efficient supervision of Sister Bootman, operated the dining hall. Excellent meals were served. The liberal donation of provisions by those living near the grounds enabled the sisters to provide meals at very reasonable rates.

Interesting and instructive sermons were preached by Elder G. W. Thorburn, Elder Joseph Sandidge, Bishop Becker, and Apostle McConley.

Bishop Becker gave a series of lectures—using a blackboard—on the financial law of the church. One class period was devoted to explaining how the finances are used. The Saints gave undivided attention to these lectures, and many expressions of approval were heard.

The Women's Department, led by Mrs. R. M. Esgar, held two sessions, and a bazaar, after which refreshments—dainty and delicious—were served.

The Sunday School Department, under the leadership of Sister G. W. Thorburn, held its annual session, at which time Apostle McConley gave an unusually interesting address relative to Sunday school work. At its close a round table session offered to Sunday school workers the opportunity of stating their problems and having them solved by Apostle McConley.

The Religio Department in charge of Sister Jerome Wykoff held a session Sunday evening at 6.30, the principal speaker being Apostle McConley. He urged the Religio members to have live, wide-awake socials and provide games that can be played by all present. He said the reason there is so much dancing is because it is an amusement which is provided with the least effort. He urged that the Religio leaders make a study of games and have something new and snappy at each social.

The welfare of the children attending reunion was had in remembrance. Junior prayer meeting was given a regular forenoon hour, at which time—if the weather was favorable—the leader, Sister Thorburn, took the children into the woods to hold their devotional meetings. A member of the priesthood assisted by giving a short talk to the young folks.

The children also had their regular hour for junior church service. The supervisor, Sister Thorburn, appointed leaders to conduct the meetings. A large number of children attended reunion, and they appreciated these services provided for them.

Doctor Casey lectured on "Dentistry."

Sister Jacobs, instructor in Montana State College of Agriculture, lectured on "Nutrition." She stressed the necessity of using raw fruits and vegetables in the daily diet. She stated that the tomato is one vegetable which retains its vitamine element when cooked.

Special mention should be made of the high grade of music, which those who have that talent so freely gave to help toward making the reunion a success.

Another greatly enjoyed feature of the reunion were three lectures illustrated with lantern slides given by Apostle McConley and Bishop Becker.

The reunion committee, of which Elder David Allen, district president, is chairman, is negotiating for the lease of a fine ground on which reunions can be held annually for ten days. The terms of the lease are for a period of fifteen years, at a rent of ten dollars per year. There is a frame building which is used for the various reunion services, and the north end of it is furnished for kitchen and dining hall purposes.

There was a wedding at the close of the musical and literary program, and two thoughts in connection with it come to mind:

(a) The kindness of the young people in thus permitting so many of their friends to be present at the happy event; and

(b) The desire to observe the sacredness of the marriage vows by having the ceremony performed by an elder, Brother G. W. Thorburn, and in a place used for church services.

As we recall the ten days spent at the reunion, there is cause for only one regret, and that is that many of the members of the district, because of being so far from the place of meeting or other reasons, failed to attend and thereby lost the benefit of it.

Throughout the whole reunion time, the influence of the divine Spirit was felt—particularly at the prayer meetings, and the Saints feel that they want to follow the injunction of Apostle McConley, "Be good. Be good for something."

The above program spoken of was in charge of a committee composed of Harvey Eliason, Julia Eliason, and Dorothy Perrin. Saints from Bozeman, Deer Lodge, Stevensville, and Race Track contributed their part in making the entertainment a success. Those taking part showed both talent and trainning.

LOUISE REES.

God is Love and wants a lovable people. His Spirit will not come where there is rebellion, confusion, defiance, and hatred. He wants a clean, law-abiding, and energetic Ministry who are willing to do His bidding and keep His law. He is a loving Father. Look at our own bodies and see what a wonderful piece of work it is, with every part perfect to the finest part performing its work in perfect order. We are held responsible for keeping our bodies in order and each part performing the work for which it has been created; if not we suffer pain, sickness, and will get rewarded or punished when we appear before the Judgment Throne. No excuses them. Not only have our bodies and life been given, but all the wonderful things in creation for our use, needs, pleasure, enjoyment, and satisfaction, and then His Holy Spirit to feed our souls to cause us to feel joyous and happy. He is calling for helpers to reap the great harvest. Are you ready?—J. E. Meredith.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Touring Montana, the Land of Shining Mountains

At the close of the Eastern Montana reunion, Jerome Andes and I resolved to be at the Western Montana reunion to be held at Deer Lodge August 5 to 14. So we planned to start on Monday, August 8.

Sunday afternoon, while we were visiting at the home of Sister May Blanchette, of Fairview, a storm came up and left the roads so slippery and muddy that my faith failed me, and I concluded our trip to Deer Lodge was doomed. But Monday morning found Jerome at my door, he having driven the thirty-five miles from Andes before breakfast. He was determined to go to the reunion if he had to ride a freight train.

So, bidding good-by to wife and children, we left Sidney about nine o'clock on Monday morning. Our trail took us up the Yellowstone valley to Livingston, over the mountains to Bozeman, down the Gallatin to Three Forks, then up the Jefferson and across the divide to Butte, and past Anaconda to the reunion grounds above Deer Lodge.

The Yellowstone valley is at its best at this season of the year. From Sidney to Intake, a distance of forty miles, the valley is under irrigation. Even the hills are beautiful this year, for this has been an unusually rainy season for Montana.

After passing Glendive, we crossed a strip of country which had been hit by hail. The cornfields had been shattered until only stumps of the stalks remained. Some farmers had cut part of their fields, and the remainder was beaten into the earth. These hailstorms are a source of terror to Montana farmers, as they often bring a total loss unless the owner carries hail insurance.

The first night out we were welcomed at the home of Sister F. A. Ingalls, of Miles City. Here we plan to organize a Sunday school in the near future.

Sister Ingalls's younger son, Jerry, kindly took me for a drive in their Chevrolet coupe. We visited Fort Keough, just south of the city. This is an old army headquarters, from which General Custer marched to his fate on the Big Horn. During the World War thousands of horses were shipped from this point to France.

Leaving Miles City early Tuesday morning, we crossed the Yellowstone and followed the trail up the western bank to Forsyth. Here we called upon Sister Frank Palmer, whose husband is a dry land Latter Day Saint, but who entertained us royally for about three hours. There is only one other Latter Day Saint in Forsyth, a sister who was away from home at this time.

After a pleasant afternoon drive we arrived at Billings and took it in hand to locate the home of Doctor Charles Chase. We finally located his residence, on the outskirts of the city. We arrived just in time to take part in a big supper to which Brother Chase had invited some of his neighbors and friends. Our travel-worn condition did not hinder our method of attack on fried chicken, potato salad, cake, and ice cream. Our missionaries would do well to call on Doctor Chase when passing through Billings.

Taking French leave of Doctor Chase and his fine family, we left Billings feeling fit for an all-night drive to the mountains. About two o'clock, however, we became so sleepy that we parked beside the road and, spreading our bed upon the ground, lay down to get what rest we could before daylight. Jerome says he fought mosquitoes till morning, but he must have been mistaken, as they would surely have frozen. We needed twice the bedding we had with us.

Daylight found us on our way again. Half awake, Jerome asked, "What time do you think we will be in Bozeman?"

"About eight or nine o'clock today."

"Oh," said Jerome, sleepily opening his eyes, "is this tomorrow?" And the nearer we got to Bozeman the worse he became.

We were now within thirty miles of Livingston, and the mountains rose on every hand. We had run far up among them during the night. To the west rose the Crazy Range. Off to the left and south were the mountains in Yellowstone National Park. Granite Peak, of the Beartooth Range, rose to the southeast. This is the highest peak in Montana, something over twelve thousand feet in altitude.

Within an hour we came to a bridge over the Yellowstone. The water looked so clear and inviting that we decided to take our morning bath. It turned out to be the coldest bath I ever took. The river here is not much more than a mountain stream, being fed by springs and melting snow from the mountains above. A person does not mind the cold water after the first shock.

Feeling much revived and invigorated after a good plunge, we drove on up the mountain to Livingston.

On leaving this little mountain city, we climbed for about fifteen miles to the Bozeman Pass. The road here follows an old railroad bed, and even a Ford can make most of the hills on high. When the railroad was first built through this pass, it is evident they did not commence their grade soon enough; thus they left too steep a climb at the top. When modern business began to cut schedules and lengthen freight trains, it became expedient to adjust this grade to a more gradual climb. So they have constructed a new grade, which winds around the mountain, sometimes hundreds of feet above the old bed.

Arriving at Bozeman about nine o'clock, we were lodged at the home of Elder Moore, pastor of the Bozeman Branch.

In the afternoon Jerome offered to show me over the college grounds and buildings. The State Agricultural College at Bozeman is not surpassed by any of its kind in the West. Its Administration Building was erected in 1896, the other buildings being of more recent date. They have a new gymnasium, with a fine large swimming pool on the first floor and room for general assembly on the top floor. The largest building on the campus is the Engineering Building.

Bozeman is offering many courses besides the agricultural course for which it was originally founded.

The building that to my mind best typifies the modern age in which we live, is the power house which supplies this group of buildings with light, power, and heat. This is built sufficiently large to house twice the equipment that is now necessary. One enormous boiler is kept steaming at 120-pounds pressure. The fire is kept replenished by sliding grates, which automatically carry crushed coal to the fire under the boiler. If the steam drops even one pound the grates, controlled by steam pressure, speed up, thus supplying the fire with additional fuel. Night and day this monument of engineering skill goes on tirelessly supplying power and heat through the long winter months, while the engineers sit quietly by with folded arms.

Is it not true that "Labor saving machinery is bound sooner or later to annul the curse pronounced upon the human race, that by the sweat of his brow should man eat bread?" How many of our young people are preparing to help utilize these wonderful inventions to the glory of God and for the building of his city?

We were given a special guide through the Agricultural Building. He lectured to us on some of the work being accomplished here. I was especially interested in some of the results of their "hard shell germination tests." They are keeping about fifteen hundred samples of clover seed under the blotter test for four years. Some of the seeds are just sprouting after two years.

Our trip to Bozeman gave us a greater appreciation of what our State is doing for her young people. It is probably doing more than any other State in the Union having the population of Montana.

Driving down the Gallatin valley from Bozeman, we passed near the Race Creek church. This is the oldest branch of the Reorganization in Montana. It must have been organized at the time Apostle J. W. Gillen came up into Montana, as recorded in the third volume of Church History. The branch is now in a disorganized condition, most of its members belonging to the Bozeman Branch.

Another rode with us from Bozeman to Deer Lodge. This made quite a crowd for our little Ford, but all were congenial and we had a delightful trip over the divide, through Butte, past Anaconda, to the reunion grounds near Deer Lodge.

Here we were pleased to meet the Saints of Western Montana, and for the next three days we enjoyed the feast of good things passed out by Apostle Myron A. McConley and Bishop J. A. Becker.

Brother Becker spoke Thursday night on the work being done on the Auditorium, using the lantern slides to show the building in its different stages of growth. In the classes conducted by Brother Becker, we were given a clear insight into the financial condition of our church and were caused to feel more keenly each individual's responsibility.

The young people of the district put over a very enjoyable program on Friday night. About two hundred people were present in spite of the cold. The young people of this district are certainly a talented bunch. May they use their talents to the glory of God.

Apostle Myron A. McConley spoke Saturday night on the work of our church school. By the use of pictures he took us through Graceland and its beautiful grounds, leaving with us a desire to do all in our power to boost Graceland.

The early morning prayer meetings were a source of strength to all who attended.

On Saturday afternoon a tour was made through the state penitentiary at Deer Lodge. We were glad to see the sanitary conditions in which these unfortunates exist. I wonder if any or all of them would not be more than glad to exchange all these minor comforts for just one hour of freedom!

A Sunday school institute was held at the usual Sunday school hour Sunday morning. This one hour fully repaid us for the trip. Apostle Myron A. McConley spoke on the "Relation of the Sunday school to our work."

He said, "We need at least one scholar to start a Sunday school. The Sunday school is the hub around which the church turns. When doing Sunday school work, we are writing insurance on the church of tomorrow. Be on time; some people were born behind the clock. Have a change of program every Sunday. Variety is the spice of life."

So, with much food for thought and action, we left the reunion grounds about three o'clock Sunday afternoon. Our road home lay by way of Helena to Havre. From there we followed the route of the Great Northern over the Glacier Park Highway to Culbertson. Crossing the divide at Priest's Pass, just west of Helena, we arrived in that city about seven o'clock amid a downpour of rain.

After leaving Helena our road carried us down Prickly Pear Canyon. The rain continued to fall all night long as I guided "Henry" down the canyon. Passing cars with flaming torches at night on a canyon road is a thrilling experience. A person feels better at the wheel. Responsibility seems to steady the nerves.

Two o'clock in the morning found us approaching Sullivan's Hill, between Wolf Creek and Cascade, and the rain still pouring. The roads were so slippery that we decided to park beside the road and wait for daylight. So we got what rest we could sitting erect in our coupe with the rain falling.

At break of day we adjusted our chains and started for Sullivan's Hill. It was on this climb that we had our only blowout. Here we "tasted of the bitter that we might better enjoy the sweet." In my struggle with mud, chains, and tire, I ruined my trousers and had to don my overalls.

At last we topped the hill and reached the graveled road at Cascade. An hour's drive brought us to Great Falls, where the clouds seemed to be literally bursting. Here we were told that the road to Havre was gumbo and almost impassable.

What were we to do? I had promised the good wife to be at home by Sunday, and it was now Monday morning. Jerome's folks were expecting him to help with the harvest. We felt like Columbus before unknown seas, and resolved to sail on!

We were the first car over the road since the rain. The gumbo'rolled to the fenders and stopped the car on the smallest grade. I got out to push up one hill while Jerome tried about fifteen times to go "over the top." At length he became discouraged. But what could we do but plow on! and on! and on! And so we plowed until two high-powered cars passed us without a contest.

Following in their tracks we made better time until we arrived at Big Sandy and sandy roads. Night found us on the fine, graveled highway leading from Havre eastward.

We now took turns driving through the night. You may imagine it to be a wonderful experience to drive over a fine road at three o'clock in the morning, but we had lost so much sleep that the monotony of the night and the steady purr of the motor made it almost impossible to stay awake at that hour. The brain would pass into unconsciousness with the eyes wide open, and often we would catch ourselves just in time to hit a bridge or miss a ditch.

This drive recalled my experience in Uncle Sam's mail service. Many times while working mail on the California Limited, during the graveyard shift, I have caught myself starting for the floor, or awakened myself by bumping into the letter case. Experience has taught me the wisdom of God's command to retire early that we may have rest and arise early that our bodies and our minds may be invigorated.

About half past three, when my turn at the wheel came, I began to think of home and loved ones dear, so decided to park the car and rest until morning.

During the night we had passed through Malta, Glasgow, and Nashua. By sunup we passed through Wolf Point, and eight o'clock found us at the ferry at Culbertson, with the muddy Missouri before us. After crossing the ferry, an hour's drive up Hardscrabble Creek brought us to Andes.

Twelve hundred miles around Montana, and we could have gone one hundred miles farther west and still been in the State. No wonder some of the Montana Saints are isolated. But let us remember that no matter how isolated may be our condition, there God can come.

The poet Bryant was once wandering weary and alone along a lonely mountain side. Stopping to rest beside a brook, he observed high in the air above him through the gathering dusk a lone waterfowl. As he stood watching until the bird was lost in the gloom, his thought found expression in these immortal lines:

He who from zone to zone
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must tread alone
Will lead my steps aright.

May we all have that faith. ORRIN R. WILCOX.
SIDNEY, MONTANA.

Union Branch

August 31.—The branch at Clitherall feels the loss of its president, Lester Whiting, who left on August 12 for Duluth, where he expects to spend a month or so under direction of the district presidency. However, Brother Frank Tucker is conducting the affairs of the branch during the absence of Brother Whiting in a very creditable manner.

The branch has sustained another loss, a permanent one, in the persons of Brother and Sister Frank Horne, who have sold their hotel at Almora and have gone to spend the winter with relatives in Iowa while deciding where to make their home. Sister Horne was the teacher of the senior Sunday school class and is greatly missed in all the departments of the work.

On the second Sunday of the month, three services were held at the home of John Murdock, who recently married Sister Bertha Hunter, and the day was profitably enjoyed. This change in services was arranged for the benefit of Sister

Rebecca Murdock, who is eighty-eight years old and confined to her chair, but whose mind is bright and active. She took part in the prayer and testimony meeting, as did also Sister Jane Crane who is in the middle eighties.

One of the pleasant features of this branch, and one that we believe is mutually helpful, is the weekly meeting and mingling together of the young and middle-aged and the old. Brother and Sister Abner Tucker are nearing the eighties and are still faithful in attendance and active in the work. The majority of the members are in middle life; but there are a number of young people growing up with church opportunities, and several small children, upon whom in a few years the burdens and the rewards of the work will rest. We feel that we have reason to look forward with hope to their future and to the future of the church.

Long Beach, California

August 21.—Today has indeed been a very full and satisfying day for the people of our branch, and all others who were associated with us.

Every three months the locals of the Department of Recreation and Expression of the district have a convention or "get together" with the idea of gaining strength and new enthusiasm from each other as well as talking over problems and helpful ideas which come to the various locals. Today, Long Beach was host to the convention. The day was fittingly started with a prayer meeting for the officers and leaders particularly, and all members who wished to attend. Brother John Martin, the "young people's missionary," and Brother Jonathan Milner were in charge of the meeting. The theme of the day was "The mind of Christ in us," and the hour was well spent in prayer, song, and testimonies along this line of thought.

During Sunday school we heard short talks by various Sunday school superintendents of the district.

Brother Martin was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service and carried on the theme of the day with a most inspired and inspiring sermon in which he told us to remember, if nothing else, we must be, first, physically sound; second, mentally alert; third, morally clean; and fourth, spiritually alive if we would have and prove that we have the "mind of Christ in us."

Noontime found us all in the church basement enjoying a particularly fine luncheon. We noticed especially that it was not only delicious and plentiful, but organized. I believe everyone enjoyed the calm simplicity of it, and the Department of Women is to be commended on it.

At three o'clock the orchestra played a few numbers before the meeting was opened by Brother W. J. Burton, district superintendent of the department, who was associated with Brother Martin. The meeting was arranged in a symposium of talks on themes, the first letters of which formed the word Religio. "Recreation" was assigned to Sister Bertha Ball, of Los Angeles; "Expression" to Sister May Lewis, also of Los Angeles. These proved to be very interesting. Brother Martin showed himself capable of handling the subject "Love," for he says he can always find something about everyone that he can love. The next theme was "Instruction," by E. Leola Nice, of Long Beach; then came "Goal," by Brother Stewart, of East Los Angeles Branch; "Inspiration" by Brother John Blair, of San Bernardino. Here let me comment: How often have we heard the indifferent ones who, through a deep-seated conscience, realize they should be active, try to excuse themselves for not being so by saying they have never been given the inspiration the others have. Thus, you see, they lay the blame for lack of inspiration at the feet of the great Giver of gifts. But, according to Brother Blair, we must first want inspiration, then prove ourselves worthy of it before we can hope to have it increased. I like that. It "puts it up to us."

The closing subject was "Obedience," and at the conclusion of the speeches we saw clearly that each subject was an important element in the working of an active, well-ordered Department of Recreation and Expression.

The usual study hour of the evening was dispensed with and the time used for program, which consisted of contributions from several locals. The program closed with a one-act play, "And he came to his father," a story of the prodigal son, which was presented by the Long Beach Group. The parts were particularly well taken, being played by Brother Jess Johnson as the father; Brother "Jack" Milner as Benjamin, the prodigal; Brother Arthur Moran as Mordecai, the elder brother; Mrs. Ethel Dillon, Rachel, a young girl grown up in the household; Brother Harry Sacre as Joseph, an old family servant; Mrs. Bertha Leibold as Deborah, a maidservant; and Sister Marjorie Lacy, Sister Flossie Sacre, and Brother Robert Leibold, people of the household. We heard many favorable comments upon acting, costumes, and lighting.

The services of the day ended with a sermon by Brother Martin, his subject this time being "Women." He showed us the splendid part the women of the Bible and modern times have played, and the wonderful influence they have had and may still have, in the lives of those in whose hands this gospel rests.

The close of the day found us reluctant to separate ourselves from so agreeable an association, but we must carry our new spiritual strength to all our district, as well as gain rest for the morrow's struggle.

May God bless us all in our efforts to carry on his work, that through his divine help we may speedily bring about the fulfillment of the gospel. May he direct our "recreation" and "expression" in the right channels, so as to increase our "love" for the furtherance of this work and for each other; may we find our greatest "instruction" in his word which will teach us to reach our "goal" filled with "inspiration," which will come to us in great abundance through "obedience" to his laws.

Anamosa, Iowa

September 1.—It is to draw the Saints' attention for a moment to a small branch of Saints, about twenty-five in number, that I write. The Saints in Anamosa have tried very hard to be faithful and gather together, but after a time grew weak and were scattered. We were like a flock of sheep scattered and forced to feed from other pastures than our own. We grew hungry for the proper food and also very weak. But we were always listening for the shepherd's call, and when he called we once more gathered together that we might receive the mental and spiritual food we so much craved. How we rejoiced to once more be associated to praise God in one mighty voice! Brother C. A. Kress has the credit for waking us up to our predicament, for through him and a few other faithful ones we were able to organize a Sunday school on June 19.

We have Sunday school and services every Sunday from 10 to 12 a. m. Then we have meetings almost every Sunday evening; prayer meeting Wednesday, 8 p. m., and also Religio on Friday evening, 8 o'clock. Sacrament is observed and partaken the first Sabbath of each month. For this we are very thankful.

Elder Kress has been a faithful worker in this community and is loved by all. With the cooperation of other elders from the different communities he is "starting the ball a rolling," as the saying goes. When Sunday school was organized about sixteen were present; now the number is nearly forty.

We have no church home here, but hold Sunday school and nearly all our meetings in an empty house which has three small rooms. The largest room we use for the seniors, the two smaller rooms for the junior grades. We have a number of chairs, but not enough, so we have to sit on boards placed from chair to chair. We are very poor and humble, but are living in the faith that God will allow us to prosper spiritually, mentally, physically, and financially. Then we will be better qualified and located to carry on this glorious work of God.

We have a pretty hilly and crooked road to travel, but we're getting there just the same. I live on the State road, but have only about one quarter of a mile of gravel. Then we strike off on this other road, which is a mile or so over. The house in which we meet belongs to one of the brothers and sisters. It is situated on a small hill near Stone City, which is a very small station on the Wapsiepinecon River.

Elder Kress has baptized seven since starting his missionary work here. We sometimes hold our services on a sister's lawn at Fairview, a small village consisting of a Methodist Church, a schoolhouse, one store, and an oil station. The church and schoolhouse being denied us, we have to meet where it is possible.

Saints, remember us in your prayers, that we may not stray from the straight and narrow path, but help to fulfill God's commandments. God bless and keep us all, is my prayer.
SISTER KIZZIE A. GRASSFIELD.

Enid, Oklahoma

We are trying to do a work for the Lord in this place. If there are any Saints in or near Enid whom we have not met, we would be pleased to hear from them. Should anyone who reads this note have relatives or friends here who are members or who would be interested in our work, we would appreciate hearing from them.

The daily papers list quite a few families moving in here from time to time, and there may be some of our faith among them. We are holding services in our home at present. There are about four active families, and we feel to say to those who do not come, Come over into Macedonia and help us. We surely need you.

Neligh, Nebraska

On Sunday, August 21, the Neligh Sunday school decided to hold the annual farewell picnic on the following Sunday, also to invite the surrounding schools, the place to be at the Derry picnic grounds about fifteen miles southeast of Neligh. Many were disappointed when they awoke Sunday, August 28, to find the weather very damp and many clouds in the sky. Nevertheless it had been announced that Sunday school would be held at the picnic grounds, so the majority of the school thought it necessary that they be there. Despite the weather we went to the grounds and had our regular Sunday school meeting, after which we heard a wonderful sermon by Brother Charles Sodersten, of Clearwater, Nebraska. The picnic dinner was then served, and by the time it was over the clouds had disappeared and the sun was shining brightly. The volley ball net was put up, and some very interesting games were staged. The sun kept getting hotter, which reminded us that ice cream would be very appropriate, so some of the young folks went to Elgin and in a short time were back with the ice cream, which was served immediately. Some more games were then played before the journey for home.

Religio was held at the usual place at Neligh at 7.30, and the discussions which took place were so interesting, that we went over time quite a bit, but we consider the time well spent.

This farewell picnic is given every year for those going away to school. This year Sister Veva Allen is going to the Wayne State Normal, which she has attended for two and one half years. Brother Herbert Atwood is going to Grace-land to begin his second year. Brother Ezra Oehring is going to the University of Nebraska to begin his third year. On behalf of those leaving, I wish to take this opportunity of thanking the Neligh Sunday school for this picnic, and it would be impossible for us to say that we did not enjoy ourselves, as was seen by all present. We regret that Brother and Sister O. W. Tuck were unable to be with us, both being sick. However, they are feeling better now and hope to be up and around in a short time. Others that were not present will have to take our word for it that we had a wonderful time.

Knowing that when the Saints get together they always enjoy themselves, we decided to meet at Brother A. D. Oehring's and play volley ball on his lawn on Tuesday night, and we were not a bit disappointed by the outcome.

E. P. O.

Lincoln, Nebraska

Church at the Corner of 26th and "H" Streets

Brother and Sister Robertson returned from their reunion trip August 17. We certainly are glad they are back. Brother Robertson informed us that he hoped, after September 4, to spend more time in the Lincoln Branch than he has for some months. They have been gone most of the summer, and we are very glad they plan to be here awhile now.

Virginia Easton is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She was taken ill quite suddenly and was taken to the hospital before any of us realized she was ill. We are glad she has recovered so quickly. The first Sunday after her operation was the first time she had missed Sunday school for over a year. It is too bad that such a record has to be broken.

Charles Friese returned to Lincoln a few weeks ago and is now employed here. He expects to attend the university this year. He has been working on a farm in Kansas this summer. We expect Ezra Oehring and Lawrence Brockway back in about a week, to start with the fall term at the University of Nebraska. It is quite inspiring to contemplate the activity we hope to have here this year. We have a live group of young people, as well as a cooperative group of older ones.

Eunice Easton is home from her vacation. She spent a week in Omaha visiting her aunt. Eunice is superintendent of the Sunday school and is employed by the Lincoln Board of Education as a stenographer.

Miss Marian Gee, of Florida, has been visiting for the last few weeks at the home of her brother, George Gee and Mrs. Gee. Mrs. Gee and her brother, Jimmy Chapple, left last Friday, August 26, for Kansas City and Independence. Jimmy returned home, but Mrs. Gee remained to visit her sister, Mrs. Lyle McFarlane, of Independence. Marian Gee will meet her there, and they will leave soon for a week at the beach in Florida and will go from there to Jacksonville, where Miss Gee will begin her duties as English instructor in one of the high schools of Jacksonville. Mrs. Gee will stay about a month altogether and return home by way of Chicago the first of October.

Lillie Barrett left August 4 for her home in Texas, where she will teach the coming school year. She will be the home economics teacher in the public schools in McAllen. Miss Barrett has attended Graceland two years and has taken a year of work at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

Miss Elsie Hale returned home the 20th of August from North Platte, where she attended the reunion and visited friends and relatives north of town. She started her trip with Brother and Sister Robertson in July, when they went to Neligh to attend the reunion held there, and then they motored on to North Platte. She remained two weeks longer than they and returned home on the bus. Miss Hale expects to attend the University of Nebraska this year. It will be her third year, and her plans are to finish her four years of work and then teach awhile before taking work for her Master's Degree.

The Temple Builders had what might be called a reunion last Thursday evening, the 25th, since so many of the members of the club were home from vacations and it was the first time they had all met together for quite a while. They discussed plans for redecorating the basement of the church so it will be more fitted for socials and parties which are already in view for the winter. They hope to raise a fund, with help of the others, with which to carry on the work.

The Department of Recreation and Expression sponsored a general church picnic at Antelope Park. The attendance was very small, but everyone reported a very good time, and those who were not there missed a lot of fun.

A large number of the Lincoln people expect to go to Wilber the 1st of September to attend the conference and young people's convention. Brother Sheehy and Brother Koehler, of Independence, will be there and will, we are sure, help out greatly in the meetings. Brother and Sister Robertson left on Tuesday to help get ready for those expected. All are expecting a good time on Thursday, which will be the day devoted to recreation, with a monster program in the evening. We know all of the meetings will be greatly enjoyed.

Brother Poague and family, of Nebraska City, have moved to Lincoln this week, and although we know they are needed at Nebraska City, we are certainly glad to welcome them to our midst in Lincoln. Brother Poague is expected to help us out with our music, which we know he will be able to do very well.

We were made happy when a larger number than usual attended the meeting Sunday evening. Brother Robertson was the speaker and, as everyone will say, he delivered a very inspiring sermon. He used for the text a saying of Christ: "I came not to judge the world, but to save it."

There is a new little baby at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Rawlins. This is the first child in their family, and we know how proud they must be of it. We hope he will grow up to be a fine man in the years to come.

San Antonio, Texas

3522 South Flores Street

The prayer and sacramental service on the first Sunday was well attended, and a splendid spirit was present.

This branch is fortunate in having the help of Brother L. V. Aldridge who has recently located in San Antonio. We have been favored with some splendid sermons delivered by him which were greatly appreciated by both members and nonmembers. We have also been recipients this month of some splendid sermons by our pastor, R. E. Miller, Brother H. E. Winegar, Brother T. J. Jett, jr., and Brother W. H. Mannerling. With such efficient help we feel that our branch is bound to grow, if the members will cooperate.

The Sunday school, under the leadership of Brother Rouss Eastham, is growing to that extent that the building that we have is hardly adequate to meet the requirements for room. We are looking forward to the erection of a new church building in the near future, so that we can take care of all the Sunday school.

Members of the branch seem to have taken on new life since the reunion. The weekly night prayer meeting is better attended than formerly. We hope that others may catch the spirit and the attendance will continue to grow. We are glad to welcome Brother H. E. Winegar and family who have recently located here. We feel they will be a great asset to the branch. At this writing Brother Winegar is holding a ten-day meeting at Pipe Creek.

We are looking forward to organizing a Sunday school orchestra in the near future, which we feel will be a great benefit to the work here.

The Religio, under the leadership of Sister Emma Jackson, has been revived, there being five classes now. Two of these classes are studying the Book of Mormon. Last Friday evening there were forty-seven present.

Cupid has been pointing his darts at one of our members and succeeded in captivating Sister Willie Barber. Mr. Fantley Hall was the lucky man. They were united in the holy bonds of matrimony August 10, Pastor R. E. Miller officiating. The wedding took place at the church. Prior to the ceremony Claud Reaves sang "I love you truly," accompanied by Miss Emma Jackson. Gifford Edwards, violinist, played the processional and recessional, Wagner's and Mendelssohn's marches, accompanied by Miss Jackson. Miss Mary Barber, sister of the bride, was the only attendant. The best man was Fay Hall, brother of the bridegroom. The church was beautifully decorated with regina corona and ferns. The young couple left in the evening for Galveston, where they spent a week. They are to make their home in Austin, Texas. Willie was formerly our Religio president. We shall miss her very much, but we wish them happiness in their wedded life.

Sister Josie Haught has been very sick in the recent past. We are, however, glad to report that she is much better at this writing.

Waterloo, Iowa

405 Parker Street

Some time has elapsed since Waterloo news has appeared in the HERALD. We shall not try to catch up on the happenings of our branch. The work of the Lord is still moving along, and the Saints are active in doing good. Several changes in the branch have been made since our last communication. Also several speakers from other places have been in our midst, giving us food for thought and leaving us rejoicing. Elder Slocum, of Webster City, Iowa, was with us in July, telling us many good things concerning the gospel. He left with us the thought of necessity for development of character. Also Brother Woodward, of Council Bluffs, visited us the last Sunday in July, giving encouragement from the word of God. Brother Woodward is a priest. On August 14, we were permitted to listen to two fine sermons, the morning discourse being given by Elder Victor A. Hall, and the evening sermon by District President Heide. Both brought to us matter for consideration. Brother Hall talked concerning "Love," and the evening theme was "Building the foundation." Brother Heide was with us over Monday and spoke again Monday evening. He is a zealous worker for the Lord.

Elder C. A. Kress, district missionary, resigned as our branch president in order to give himself and his time more fully to the missionary work of the district. Elder William Wood was elected branch president. This is Brother Wood's first experience as president of a branch, and we feel he will be successful. He is an earnest, humble man. All are working to carry the Lord's work to success.

Brother Wood called a get-together meeting at his home August 11. About thirty-eight Saints responded. The purpose of the meeting was to get the concensus of opinion of the branch, and that opinion was that while there has been progress and development, each one has felt dissatisfied with himself because he had failed to take advantage of the opportunities presented to him under the gospel law. We understand each other better as a result of this meeting. Sister Mabel Hall wrote several songs for this occasion, and we felt the inspiration of the Spirit as we sang them.

Our official family has been broken into, Brother Harrison Rhyan leaving for Creston, Iowa. Brother Rhyan is a teacher, and his departure leaves us without one of his office. He is new in the duties of teacher, having been ordained last spring. Both Brother and Sister Rhyan are missed. We had learned to love them, and they in turn had learned to love us; but wherever they may go among the Saints, their loving and kind dispositions will always make them many warm friends. Brother Rhyan was assistant superintendent of Sunday school, and Sister Rhyan was chorister for Sunday school and Religio. Sister Mabel Hall was elected to fill the place of chorister.

There has not been much sickness among the Saints of late, for which we are duly thankful. Elder V. A. Hall was made an invalid at home some time ago. He received a badly bruised leg from falling through a floor in a store where some repair work was being done. He has had to have it lanced twice. He is now able to be around and will soon be back at his work.

Our hope in the gospel is strong, and our determination is to be faithful to our covenant. Our prayer services are good, yet we feel they could be improved if more of the Saints were interested in the services. The eight o'clock Sunday morning prayer service is enjoyed by those who come. God does not forget the faithful ones. We pray that the time may come when our people will sense the importance of the prayer service. We are not discouraged, because we feel our foundation is firm, and bear in mind the song:

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent word;
What more can he say than to you he hath said,
You, who unto Jesus for refuge have fled!"

May God help us to keep these thoughts in mind and to continue in the forward move of the church, is the prayer of Waterloo Saints.

Moorhead, Iowa

August 26.—During the reunion at Missouri Valley our church services are dispensed with, as many of our branch wish to attend there. Some of our members are camping on the ground, but the majority of the Saints are driving back and forth as their circumstances will permit.

We wish it were possible that each Saint could enjoy a few weeks' vacation and spend the same attending one or more of the splendid reunions that are being held for their benefit.

Bishop Blair, Apostle Gillen, and Brother and Sister Woodstock are present at our reunion, and are being assisted by our district and local missionaries and helpers. They are presenting some wonderful messages, which if heeded by the Saints will greatly assist in purifying their lives and bringing them up to the full standard of excellency.

Saints and friends are pleased to welcome Brother Frank Thompson, of Lamoni, who is visiting among us. Brother Thompson spent his boyhood and early manhood days in this locality.

Since our last report several of our number have returned or have taken trips to various places. Sisters Clara McDonald and Nellie Larson made a visit to Colorado and other points. In western Colorado they visited their brother, Frank Larson and family, also Brother Cecil McDonald. Brothers Chester Davis and John Boswell and families took a trip to Independence and other places, visiting relatives and viewing the work of the church at those places. Brother and Sister Irvin Clark recently enjoyed a visit from his uncle, Albert Stewart, from California; also his brothers, Maurice and Olis Clark, of Washington. Brother D. Blair Jensen and family, of Glendale, Ontario, accompanied by Brother Dirk Schreur, jr., of Gaylord, Michigan, departed for Gaylord, August 5. The following week they encamped at the Park of Pines reunion. This being Blair's boyhood home they spent several weeks visiting relatives here and at Lamoni.

A fine baby boy came to make his home with Mr. and Sister Ed Shoff, August 10. Sister Minnie Rawlings has been assisting in caring for the new grandson.

Sister Florence Fuller, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, has been visiting Moorhead relatives of late.

Brother T. O. Strand has occupied the pulpit at the Jordan Church several Sunday evenings this summer. Brother Mark Jensen preached there on the evening of the 21st and at the Thompson Schoolhouse on the Sunday evening before. The local brethren have taken turns occupying in the church at the preaching services.

We are informed that Sister Myrtle Perrin and Mr. John Mobely, of Walsh, Colorado, were married on August 16 and have gone to the groom's place of residence to live. Moorhead friends wish them happiness.

Brother and Sister Carl Mann have spent the past week visiting Moorhead relatives, while their household effects are being shipped from Huron, South Dakota, to Sioux City, Iowa, where they are moving.

Lima, Ohio

On Sunday, August 7, the Lima Branch Saints were pleased to have with them District President R. F. Slye and wife, of Bradner, Ohio. The forenoon was occupied with Sunday school and sacramental service, and the Spirit was felt to a great degree by all present.

In the afternoon at two o'clock Brother Slye preached to us, using the text taken from Hebrews 2:6: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the Son of Man, that thou visitest him?" He preached a very good sermon, telling us of the necessity for steadfastness in the work.

We are glad to report the fact that a spirit of unity prevails in our midst. All seem to be striving to work together for the good of the cause. We wish to press on, bear the trials of life, and enjoy the blessings God has in store for us.

J. F. REAM.

Santa Ana, California

The rereading of the Book of Mormon in commemoration of the bringing forth of the plates is of predominant interest at the present time among the Saints of Santa Ana. We feel that it will prepare us to more fully enjoy the spirit of the district conference, which will convene in September.

We have had the pleasure of hearing some splendid and helpful sermons. Those who have recently been with us are: Patriarch John F. Martin, Brother Glaud Smith, pastor of the Central Los Angeles Branch, Brother Hiram Holt, Brother Johnson, of Long Beach, and our district president, N. T. Chapman, also of Long Beach.

Miss Loene Kibler, of Whittier, California, a former Grace-land student, was with us a few Sundays ago. We enjoyed the beautiful piano selection she gave us during the Sunday school hour.

Our Sunday school workers will miss the help and cooperation of Misses Phyllis and Marie Mitchell, who left last week to go to Berkeley, California, where they will resume their university work.

One of our Temple Builder girls, Miss Lola Melton, was married recently to Marvin Morrison. Mr. and Mrs. Morrison will reside in Santa Ana.

Members of the Department of Recreation and Expression had a good time one night last week at Balboa Beach. A huge and lovely bonfire was built out on the sand, and everyone enjoyed "hot dogs" and toasted marshmallows. After supper, games were played. Brother Bob Lacey, while playing "last couple out," ran a little too far; an unexpected wave struck him, and down he went into the surf. Needless to say, Brother Bob spent the remainder of the evening admiring the fire.

Last Sunday night Brother James Farley was elected president of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Brother Farley will take the place of Brother Wilford Burton, who with his family is moving to Long Beach, California.

The interest and attendance in all of the departments here have been very good this summer. Santa Ana Branch is moving forward.

Creston, Iowa

August 31.—August has been a busy month for the Saints of Creston. A number have just returned from the reunion at Lamoni, and all report it one of the best ever held in the state. They report the class work as being very helpful and all feel better equipped to return to their work. We wish to express appreciation to Brothers Edwards and Koehler for the installation and strength they have given us.

The first of August we had our Sunday school picnic. Brother Prall was with us and spoke at the eleven o'clock hour. We always feel encouraged after a visit from Brother Prall.

We desire as soon as possible to start our new church. Nearly all the Saints here have pledged to do their share, and some of the people of the town have told us they would help as soon as we start to build.

The Department of Women has begun its fall work, sewing for a future bazaar.

The weekly prayer meeting in charge of Brother David Blair is using for its general theme this month, "What can I do to help build my branch?" Brother Blair is faithful in his task of looking after this midweek service.

We miss the summer school students that met with us during the summer. All visitors are welcome. Come and worship with us. Our services are held in the I. O. O. F. hall.

RALPH WICKER.

Deloit, Iowa

August 25.—On July 31 the Deloit and Denison Branches held a joint all-day meeting, beginning with prayer service at 8.30 a. m. At 10 o'clock Sunday school began with a crowded house. An hour later found Bishop E. L. Edwards, of Pomeroy, Iowa, in the pulpit. Basket dinner was served at 12.30. District President E. L. Bedwell preached at 3 p. m., and at 7 the Religio presented a good play which was enjoyed by all. Brother Bedwell preached again in the evening.

A good spirit was enjoyed throughout the day, and all services were well attended. A number of Saints from Cherokee drove sixty miles and were present at the early morning prayer meeting. There also was a goodly number from Denison Branch.

During the month of July our Sunday school held its annual picnic at Lake View, Iowa. An invitation was extended to the Methodist Sunday school to join us, which they did. The day was ideal and the attendance large. Ball games, bathing, and the usual big dinner were some of the sports and enjoyments. Many expressed themselves as having enjoyed the day and wished it might come oftener.

Brother and Sister Will Rounds are spending their vacation in Minnesota and Canada, catching some of the big fish for which that country is noted.

Brother Lowell Newcom, of Deloit, and Sister Bethel White, of Dow City, were united in marriage August 7, at the home of the bride's parents in Dow City. They will be at home to their many friends at Buck Grove, Iowa.

On August 21 the usual meetings were held during the day. At the Religio hour Sister Sarah Gardner gave a very interesting talk on "The progress of education." Professor Norman Cooper, who has been touring the Dakotas, Minnesota, Montana, Wyoming, and Yellowstone National Park gave a sketch of his travels during the summer which was very interesting. He expressed himself as glad to be back where the tall corn grows.

Brother and Sister G. R. Johnson spent several days of last week touring South Dakota.

Sister Vivian Lee and daughter of Des Moines, are visiting her mother, Mrs. Melissa Jordan and daughter, Nora, for a few days.

On Wednesday afternoon, August 24, the Department of Women met at the church to discuss and make plans for the harvest festival to be held at the district reunion. From there the products will be sent to the Independence harvest festival. All seemed anxious to make donations and do their part. The women are anxiously looking forward to the purchasing of a new heating plant for the church and plan to give a supper in the near future for the benefit of the same.

District President E. L. Bedwell and wife passed through here on their way to the Gallands Grove reunion at Sac City, Iowa, which starts August 26. Many Deloit and Denison Saints plan to attend.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Seventh and Lottie Streets

September 1.—The Oklahoma City Branch is moving along very nicely considering the number of Saints who have been and are away on vacations.

We had with us Brother Sheets, of Sioux City, Iowa, an enthusiastic supporter of the program of the church. He preached for us while he was here.

On August 14 Brother Earl D. Bailey, of Tulsa, was here and preached two excellent sermons.

Pastor E. L. Kemp and family, who have been visiting their old home in Springfield, Missouri, have returned.

The Department of Women has been holding a food sale at the courthouse once a month. This is done in order that the different Sunday school classes may raise money for their Christmas offering and building fund.

The Saints had a box supper at Sister Dearing's dining hall last Tuesday evening, which netted them quite a neat little sum besides giving a pleasant evening's entertainment to all present.

We are making preparations to operate a dining hall at the state fair this fall, as has been the custom for years.

On August 24 a new member was added to our branch, a young man, Lewis S. Andrews, of Apache, Oklahoma.

We are expecting District President Ed. Dillon and wife home about the fifteenth of this month. They have been making quite an extended tour, visiting reunions. They are now at Minneapolis, Minnesota, helping the Saints in their dining hall at the fair.

Modesto, California

August 29.—The Modesto Branch is moving along nicely, with good meetings which are well attended by Saints who are interested and happy in the gospel. The Sunday school had twenty-three present last Sunday at fifteen minutes before opening time. This department is improving in attendance under the leadership of Sister Ethel Coplen.

The Department of Women is not doing much during the summer months, but work for its members will begin about the middle of next month.

The Religio is doing splendid work. Its programs are enjoyed, and the quarterly lessons are splendid.

The senior young people had a party at the home of Pastor A. E. Frazier during the past month. After some altogether instructive and enjoyable games, a watermelon feed was held in the yard under the torchlight. Then outdoor games were played. About thirty were present. The teacher of this class is Caroline Pierce, and she has the good will of the class. Needless to add that she is a successful teacher.

A birthday party was given on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Sister K. G. Stark, at Patterson. A number of machines drove over from Modesto, a distance of twenty miles. The time was taken up in games. Cake and ice cream were served to about forty-six old and young, who seemed to enjoy the evening. Irma Swall and Clarence Butterfield were honored guests, both their birthdays coming in the same week.

Another party was had last Friday evening in honor of Melvin Howe, who leaves next Thursday for Graceland. The party was held on the lawn of the home of Brother and Sister John C. Howe, in Modesto. Beside games, music was enjoyed and delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake were served to everyone. Melvin received a number of useful gifts to take along for use at Graceland, one a quilt made by his aged grandmother. All his friends wish him a pleasant trip and success in his work.

All these parties were appreciated and participated in by all ages, Saints young and older.

The Saints here are looking toward some repairs which are badly needed on the church—painting, tinting, etc. We are also expecting our district president to make us a visit soon.

All feel encouraged to go on and to improve our minds by study. The Lord is blessing us abundantly, although we have some sickness. Sister Whitenack has been in the hospital for some time. Brother I. A. Phelps is very sick at his home. We are wishing for their speedy recovery and praying for the speedy redemption of Zion.

San Francisco, California

All is well with the San Francisco Branch. Our meetings are quite well attended. Peace and harmony prevail, and strangers are almost always present at our services.

We have had quite an improvement in the way of music of late. Brother Holden, from Stockton, has united with us, with his family. He and his wife are musicians. He has organized an orchestra, in which he has gathered nine persons, all young brothers and sisters in the church. They give us music at our meetings, and they are doing fine. It is a wonderful addition, and we all enjoy it.

We have just had our church building painted, and it now makes a good appearance. No one need be ashamed of the outside appearance, or of the doctrine taught within.

On the 7th of this month we had with us Elder McDole, president of the Seattle Branch. He assisted us in our sacramental service. There were only forty-five present, but of that number twenty-two took part in prayer and testimony. It was a good meeting. Last Sunday Brother Berkhart and wife and Brother Crane, from Los Angeles, were with us. All our preaching of late has been by the local priesthood.

GEORGE S. LINCOLN.

Palestine Missionary Writes

(A letter to the First Presidency)

Relative to your letter of July 12, asking about a flag from Palestine for display at the General Conferences, I have to say that to date this country has no flag of its own, but uses the English flag.

Brother A. E. Hanna, at the last moment decided that he could not take the package for the harvest home festival with him, so I am packing for shipment via parcel post. Hope it reaches Independence in time for the event.

Yesterday I enjoyed a rather rare privilege for a Michigander. I baptized a one-time Moslem in the Pool of Siloam. This man comes from a very notable family of Jerusalem. Any credit that may be due for this should be given to Brother Solomon Njeim. He has known the young man for several years and has talked with him much. I have talked with him several times, and he has read much of our literature. He is going to Mexico soon and eventually hopes to get into the United States, where he can study. You may hear from him some of these days. His name is P. J. Douzdar.

Twenty-one feet of our fence fell the other night as a result of the earth tremors of late. Fortunately, no one was passing at the moment.

Stone Church

So busy was the session of Sunday school Sunday morning that it seemed the hour was not long enough. Many who have been away on vacations were back again in their classes, taking part with renewed interest. Superintendent C. B. Woodstock and wife were present, visiting the various departments of the school. At the close of the lesson period a musical number was rendered by the young men's class of Brother Walter Betts.

The house was filled with Saints before the hour of eleven, and those who could not find room in the main auditorium went downstairs to observe the feast of the Lord's supper.

Bishop Albert Carmichael, Apostle Roy S. Budd, Bishops R. T. Cooper and C. J. Hunt, Elders C. Ed. Miller and D. O. Cato, and Brother Paul N. Craig occupied the stand and conducted the adult sacramental service. In order that more time might be had to hear from church representatives just in from the field, the opening remarks were dispensed with, and after the emblems had been partaken of by the congregation, Pastor Miller turned the meeting over to Apostle Budd, who commented upon the great privilege the Saints enjoy who share the sacrament, and briefly sketched an incident or two which occurred at reunions this year. He then called upon reunion workers who have been present at from one to four or five gatherings of that nature this summer. Those who were called upon were Bishop Albert Carmichael, Apostle F. Henry Edwards, President Floyd M. McDowell, Apostle D. T. Williams, and Sister Ida Etzenhouser. Their talks were much enjoyed by the Saints. These workers emphasized the growing desire of the Saints to learn the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, to know his laws and obey them. "Another thing which was noticeable about these reunions," said Brother Carmichael, "was the close cooperation between the officers of the church and the people for the interests of all." That the work is gaining in strength and is now on the verge of greater possibilities and opportunities if the Saints are active, humble, and obedient. They assured the congregation they are returned to the center place with a desire to reconsecrate every effort for the upbuilding and establishing of Zion. The songs, directed by Brother Craig, were sung with deep feeling by the congregation, and all felt a spirit of unusual calm and peace throughout the meeting.

In the lower auditorium Apostle Frank Curtis and Brother C. B. Woodstock talked to the young people. And over on the Campus the first Sunday of the month found most of the children returned from vacations and at the service. All seemed full of life and thankfulness. Four prayers and forty-four testimonies were borne in the fifteen minutes of time given, and the singing reverberated with unusual vigor.

The Religio of the Stone Church district will hold its first regular meeting of the winter season at the Stone Church at six o'clock next Sunday evening. Everyone is invited to attend.

At the Campus

The weather for the Sunday night service on the Campus was ideal, being clear, cool, and refreshing. Several excellent numbers were contributed to the success of the meeting by the Walnut Park Band, led by Brother E. E. Moorman. A large congregation of Saints gathered to this meeting. The invocation was offered by Missionary George Jenkins, and Elder William I. Fligg, speaker of the evening, was announced.

Stating that he had chosen an old-fashioned text, Brother Fligg read Proverbs 14:12: "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death," contrasting with it the words of the Psalmist: "Thy word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my pathway." The speaker carefully gave several instances in the history of the children of God to prove his text. Associated with the text was the thought of worship—true worship—as a means of seeking the divine will and finding the way which is God's. Asserting that the primary work of the church is to teach, Brother Fligg quoted the admonition: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Christ said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life," and by true worship we may find this way, avoiding the way the end of which are the ways of death. Service and obedience seemed to be uppermost in the speaker's mind, and he pled with the Saints to serve and to obey.

A large number of children attended the junior service on the Campus on Sunday evening, and were present to enjoy "Cain and Abel," the first of a series of pictures on Bible history, to be shown following the evening services, also scenes in British Guiana.

Regular recreational activities were had on the Campus on Saturday afternoon and evening, there being a ball game with large attendance and a movie, "Nanook of the North." On Monday the grounds were open all day to picnickers, and there was some feature for every member in the family. It seemed there was almost too much for one day. Baseball, volley ball, croquet, horseshoe games, a balloon ascension and parachute drop, a band concert, picnic suppers, and an enjoyable movie were some of the things shared by all ages.

Historical Trip, September 18

The historical trip sponsored by the young people of Zion, headed by the young people's councils of thirteen and forty-four, is to be an all day excursion to the following places: Liberty, Excelsior Springs, Richmond, Far West, and Lexington, Missouri. Stops at interesting places will be made between these towns. Saints of Independence and vicinity are invited to join this band intent upon viewing historical places of church history. There are to be good guides and interesting speakers who will give information of historical value. If you have extra room in your car, call Lee Moore, Independence 2921. If you want to go and have no car, call Independence 440 or 2921, and provision will be made, and expenses arranged. Listen for further announcement in your local churches September 11.

Liberty Street Church

In making the opening remarks at the sacramental service on Sunday, Brother Chester Young related some of his personal experiences in which his faith had been greatly strengthened. The testimonies that were offered were inspiring and helpful to everyone present. A good spirit prevailed throughout the meeting.

Sister Leona Robinson has been appointed Temple Builder leader in Liberty district.

Walnut Park

The death of Sister Nancy Elizabeth Hickman, of this community, occurred at three o'clock on the morning of September 1, after many months of failing health due to her advanced age, nearly eighty-nine years. For two months preceding her death, she required almost constant attention, being lovingly cared for by her daughter, Sister J. E. Wolfe, at whose home she passed away, and by Sister T. C. Kelley, also a daughter. The funeral occurred at J. E. Wolfe's residence on the afternoon of the 2d, Elder R. D. Weaver preaching the sermon. Mrs. Joseph Barnhard and Mrs. Frank Good sang, and six grandsons served as pallbearers. The service was largely attended by relatives and by old friends who also had known and loved Sister Hickman for many years.

Two prayer meetings in one forenoon never seem too many for this district on sacramental Sunday. Last Sunday sixty-one were counted at the eight o'clock service, and not one moment was unoccupied. Brothers George Jenkins and Ira Burdick presided.

At eleven, Elder F. W. Lanpher, who is temporarily in charge of the work here, presided at the sacramental service; prayer by W. W. Scott, F. R. Schafer leading the singing, and George Jenkins giving a talk preceding the partaking of the emblems by about two hundred and fifty Saints. Little Patricia Striblin, from Chicago, daughter of Mr. and Sister Harry Striblin, was blessed at this time by her grandfather, W. W. Scott, assisted by Samuel Smith.

East Independence

Bishop B. J. Scott was the speaker Sunday morning, August 28, and left with the congregation the thought that the gospel is the greatest thing in the world, and we who confess it should put forth our best efforts to live up to its principles. At this hour Carrol Ellsworth, the small son of Brother and Sister Michael Friend, was blessed by Brothers B. J. Scott and N. Carmichael.

In the evening Brother J. J. Teeter addressed the Saints of this district with an interesting discourse. Sister Teeter accompanied her husband, and both were joyfully welcomed here where they formerly lived. We are always glad to have them in our midst.

Last Sunday sacramental service was observed at eleven o'clock, and marked by a peaceful spirit. It was enjoyed by everyone.

Brother T. W. Thatcher was the evening's speaker. Brother Thatcher has lately been ordained to the office of deacon, and this was his first effort. His sermon showed careful, thoughtful study, and we could not help but think when he mentioned the Book of Mormon, if each Saint studied this book as requested, how much greater power the church would have collectively as well as individually!

Apostle Hanson Writes of the North

Abiskojokk, though situated at a latitude farther north than Iceland, has a very agreeable summer climate. It produces a rich vegetation; gayly colored flowers grow on the slopes of the hills; the pine woods typical of the north are here displaced by stunted birch trees.

The greatest attraction to the foreigner journeying above the Arctic Circle is the phenomenon of the midnight sun. In this land the summer knows no sunset and the winter no sunrise.

In order to cut my luggage to a minimum, I laid aside my camera before starting from home; but afterwards concluded to take it. I was glad to have it in the north.

A number of pictures were taken of the sun. It is difficult for me to believe that the sun was ever in a more glorious setting than when I beheld it at Bodø, Norway, on the night of June 24. I was troubled about my exposures, feeling possibly I had made a mistake. But I was happy upon reaching Stockholm in seeing the films after they were developed. The General Kodak Agency on Hamngatan, one of the leading streets in the city, asked permission to have one of the pictures enlarged and placed in their window.

I shall carry a deep and lasting impression of the "Land of the Midnight Sun." My trip to the north will remain a delightful memory as long as life lasts.

In traveling, often one meets persons from remote parts of the earth. Invitations from friends met on the journey to visit them in their homes, came from a young Chinese couple from Semarang, Java; a traveler from Switzerland; and a family in Czecho-Slovakia.

On the way down from the north one could not but observe that great pine forests, lakes, rivers, and cultivated fields are typical of Sweden. The country is noted for its modern industry, iron mines, and factories, driven by electricity from imposing waterfalls.

Sweden's railways carry three classes. By far the greater number travel third class, the cost of which is about one third of the first-class fare.

At the station in Stockholm, Elder C. O. Johnson, our missionary, met me and took me to his home. With his family he has labored here about seven years. My intention was to stay in the city only about a week, but after a few days I felt definitely led to remain for a considerable time.

Meetings of various kinds were held in the hall where the Saints regularly meet. Through the untiring efforts of Brother Johnson, quiet mannered, but ever loyal to the truth of Christ, a fair footing in the city has been secured. He served as my interpreter.

Invitations to the homes of friends interested in our work were accepted. Charming is the hospitality of these northern people.

We visited Gimo, about ninety miles from Stockholm, where a number of preaching services were held. There are no members of the church in this place. The attendance was good.

Making Hay

It was hay-making time. We went into the fields and helped: eight or nine poles in line were driven into the ground; a wire was attached about two feet above the ground to an end pole, then around each pole to the other end. The hay drawn from the field with a peculiar rake drawn by one horse, was dumped where desired, near the rick. Then after hay was distributed along the wire, another wire was stretched above from one end to the other and hay put on top of this, until finally there were four or five wires. Good weather for curing the hay can not be depended on, hence the special care.

I thought I was getting along quite well pitching the hay, until I noticed how the young woman, who with her mother was assisting in the work, handled her fork.

Altogether it was a joyous experience, the new way of putting up the hay, the women working, the sound of the Swedish language—stirring up memories of experiences on the farm in my early years.

After a month's direct contact with varied forces surrounding our church work, I prepared an article with the view of its being used throughout the European field, entitled, "A call from Zion."

Axious to See Foreign Missions Prosecuted

The whole European field is ready to harvest. Reports coming to me from England, Holland, Germany, and Scandinavia indicate a noticeable awakening.

I would like to see, if possible, that a substantial sum of money be appropriated for the extension of our work in foreign fields; then under the blessing of God, with a well-designed missionary broom, sweep Germany, Holland, Sweden, and all other countries of the European mission. Such an amount as could be employed consistently with the needs of other projects in mind, for building headquarters in the capital cities, using the press in advertising well-prepared and ably translated pamphlets, etc., etc.

Every member of the church is, I believe, at heart, and should be practically, interested in the spreading of the gospel of Christ—the "power of God unto salvation."

Stockholm, the "Venice of the North," appealed to me very much with its many waterways, beautiful parks, gabled houses, ancient and modern buildings, and cultivated people. Here on a summer day the sun glitters on the water, the sea gulls are flying overhead, and at night daylight lingers as if loath to depart.

Missionary Johnson to Return to America

Brother Johnson with his family will be leaving for America the latter part of September. Both members of the church and nonmembers expressed to me appreciation of his labors.

In Copenhagen I am staying with a cousin, who is a contractor and builder. This city, with its population of 800,000, old palaces, historical buildings, museums, and parks, is well worth visiting.

Among the places of interest is Thorwaldsen's Museum. A hundred years ago he was the greatest sculptor of his age. In his museum, in which he is buried, is a collection of his splendid works.

The sun smiles on Denmark. It is a land of verdure-clad islands, surrounded by blue waves.

Thousands of Viking graves are spread over the country.

A most beautiful trip from Copenhagen by auto is along the shore to Frederiksborg Castle, Elsinore, and to the famous Kronborg Castle at the entrance of the sound, where according to tradition the ghost of Hamlet's father appeared on one of the bastions.

In our meetings at Aalborg, Elder P. T. Andersen acted as interpreter. There has been growth in this city.

In a couple of days I am to leave for Germany.

Visiting Father's Native Land

It is my happy privilege now to be in Copenhagen with my father, mother, and younger sister, who are here visiting relatives. Father was born near by, but left for America when twenty years of age, the only one of his family who ever went to the land of greatest opportunities. Mother was eight years old when with her parents she embarked at Fredericia for New York.

She walked nearly all the way from Florence, near Omaha, Nebraska, across the plains to Utah, one of a company traveling by means of ox teams. The ideal of Zion was inspiring them. The gospel as preached in Denmark by representatives from Salt Lake City appealed to my grandparents.

How different was traveling in those days from the comforts of the transcontinental trains of today! Indians were along the way and making threats. Once they swooped down on this caravan, shot arrows into a number of men, and carried off a woman who was never heard from again. On to Utah the wagons rumbled.

Few things are harder to bear than religious disappointment. Imagine the feelings of my forbears when coming face to face with the actual conditions in Utah! Polygamy preached from what was supposed to be the altar of the Lord's house! The leading officials of the church setting a practical example of polygamous life!

Later they learned of the Church of Jesus Christ as re-organized under the direction and blessing of God, presided over by Joseph Smith, son of the man chosen of God from all men to usher in the latter-day dispensation. They accepted with joy the truth held by it in custody, and never released their hold of it.

It appears not inopportune for me here to relate that when I was a babe, one of two boys in the family, my mother suffered from a cancer on the shoulder. On account of her health, and to provide proper medical attention, father sold his farm and moved to Council Bluffs, Iowa. But it was beyond the power of human skill to cope with the disease. After much suffering she resorted to the church ordinance for healing. She was administered to but once. The elder, a Danish brother, who was spokesman in carrying out the provisions set forth in James 5:14, prophesied to her that she should not die of her affliction, as she had looked forward to, but should get well from that moment on, and should live to see her children in the church. That was nearly a half century ago. There is now a large scar, but from the day the prophetic words were spoken she has not suffered a tingling pain in her shoulder. She lived to see her children "in the church." Whether the prophecy means she shall live to see all her children, including three born after this event, come into the church, I do not know. Because of prophecy possessing very profound meaning, sometimes I think she will. But the words of the Lord have been fulfilled. At the time the words were uttered, on account of sickness it was not thought I should live.

Why was mother slow in seeking administration—first passing through deaths of suffering? A few years ago one day in the parlor at home I asked her. Her head dropped, and in a faltering voice, through tears, she told me she loved her boys, that naturally as a mother she yearned to be with them and teach them what was right, but this did not seem possible. The greatness of it all caused her to refrain from openly asking for it, as she felt she had nothing to place on the altar of God in return.

While a conference of the church was being held in Council Bluffs, her mother told her she was going to call the elders for administration, and asked if she would not like to have the elders also administer to her. She said she answered,

"Yes, have the elders come." She told me she knew then she would be healed. She did know, for she was healed! But she did not know she would live to see her boys in the church. The Lord soon added those words.

And to God be the glory for their fulfillment!

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK, August 17.

Is Grateful for a Wonderful Blessing

I want to tell the Saints about a wonderful blessing I have received.

On June 20 I became very sick and underwent a serious operation the day following. The Sedalia Saints "rallied round" and proved themselves to be real brothers and sisters. Two of my children were taken into their homes, while the other two went to stay with their grandparents. Each day the dear loved ones came to see or inquire about me, and my room was kept full of flowers.

On June 28 I suffered a cerebral hemorrhage, causing my entire right side to be paralyzed. Doctor G. W. Rodger and R. F. Moorman administered to me, but in my semiconscious state I could not feel benefited. My ideas were very vague and hazy, but I became obsessed that the Lord would not help me unless I sang, "Oh, thou God who hearest prayer," No. 199. It rang continually through my mind, "Hear us in our hour of need." I tried to sing it, but could not even talk. The doctors had given me up to die. At the second administration Brother Weaver sang my song for me, and a load slipped from my mind. I felt much better, and hope revived. I thought, Now, He surely will hear us in our hour of need. My husband fasted and prayed and for four days and nights never left my bedside. When I had a second stroke, paralyzing my left side, the case seemed to be hopeless. My sister was telegraphed, and she came to my bedside.

On July 3 the branches here and at Warrensburg, Knobnoster, and Marshall held fasting and prayer services for my recovery. I felt very unworthy and that I did not deserve to be healed, but I prayed that I might be spared for my husband and children, who need me so much. I humbled myself before God and made solemn vows and promises. At each administration the power of the Holy Spirit was felt, and I improved. On July 4 I had a convulsion. My doctor marveled that I survived it, "but the Lord is mindful of his own." For days I lay dying; my eyes were set and glazed. The medicine did no good, but there is a great Physician who heard our prayers and healed me. The faith of those men of God who anointed me, G. W. Rodger, R. F. Moorman, and A. A. Weaver—the prayers of my husband and my dear brothers and sisters in Christ, were answered, and at present I am almost well, having full use of all my limbs. To God be the praise.

Several have said that my illness has brought the Sedalia Branch into closer unity and harmony. At any rate, the rest seem closer to me than before. I can never forget nor repay the loving kindness, especially my much-loved Sister Mount, and daughter-in-law, Myrtle Moorman. Here, at least,

"We share our mutual woes
Our mutual burdens bear."

I am more humble than before, and I hope to be more useful in the Lord's work. We more fully appreciate our wonderful bodies after having lost and then regained the use of them. I want to be good and be of service, but I am weak.

"We hope, we aspire, we resolve, we trust,
When the morning calls us to life and light;
But our feet grow weary and ere the night
Our lives are trailing the sordid dust."

Let us strive to build up and not tear down; to be broad-minded and tolerant of others' mistakes, removing the beam from our own eye.

I am humbly grateful to God and to all the kind Saints.

Bishop Hunt Writes of Reunions

Also proposes ways to free hands of church

Five of the church reunions I have participated in have been reported. All were of real worth to the districts, blessed with unity, strong faith, spiritual uplift, educational, increased numbers more favorable to filing inventories, payment of tithes, and complying with the general program of the church, that in time means Zion realized.

I trust my associates in the five reunions in the South will not feel offended when I say that "the best of the wine" spiritually and numerically was realized at Brush Creek camp grounds in Southeastern Illinois District, August 19 to 28.

The historic Brush Creek Branch, near Zenia, was organized in 1842, during the presidency of Joseph the Seer, and has continued its organization and regular church services ever since. The splendid influence of the Saints, the good reputation of the reunion for religious as well as other wholesome entertainments, was attested the last Saturday evening when the camp police reported 824 cars, and two war veterans estimated the crowd at over three thousand. Placing the value of the cars at about five hundred dollars each, there was represented nearly a half million dollars in conveyances to the camp grounds that night.

This reunion was noted for a deeper interest along financial lines than usual—a strong indication of church prosperity.

The recent visit of President Frederick M. Smith to the district proved to be a great blessing, for some who had faltered have renewed their faith and are workers with us now. We certainly welcome them.

I would gladly mention the many whose faithful labors made possible the success of the reunion at Brush Creek, but will leave that to other writers.

If the Saints throughout the world will make an extra effort in filing inventories, paying tithes, also suppressing unnecessary wants, and denying themselves scores of so-called luxuries, then contribute freely of money saved to the church, there will be no accounts overdue at the Presiding Bishop's office by one year from now. It can be done. Let us do it.

During that splendid church reunion at Joplin, Missouri, a trusted missionary who has endeared himself to the membership in parts of Canada and some Northern States, was blessed with an encouraging spiritual vision, which will very probably be fulfilled in the near future, and may be the means of bringing nearly all the faltering Saints, including thousands of the Utah people, to the true and safe fold of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. God is for us. Why should any be disheartened? Take courage—be of good cheer.

Wish I could set my birthdays back twenty-five years, that more time might be assured me for service in this blessed church militant. It is good to be a Saint in this dispensation.

By request of the Presidency and Presiding Bishopric, I will do church work for a few months in Owen Sound and Toronto District, Canada.

C. J. HUNT.

MISCELLANEOUS

Book of Mormon Centennial and Young People's Convention

The place of the centennial and convention has been changed from Akron, Ohio, to Cleveland, because of the likelihood that the church may not be ready. The new home of the Cleveland Saints is a large and well-arranged plant, well suited for educational and devotional purposes. We are invited to use this fine structure for our convention. The centennial will open September 22, date of the delivery of the Book of Mormon plates to Joseph Smith, with a stereopticon lecture of Book of Mormon themes. Other features will be class work, lectures, and sermons. We are expecting President McDowell, Apostle R. S. Budd, Charles B. Woodstock, and other prominent workers in the district, including Brother and Sister Baldwin, Bishop Fry, and the district president. Good music will feature the convention and centennial. All should plan to attend the centennial. It will help us to heed the following admonition: "Wherefore repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon." Send in your names to the committee on cards which will be provided. Come early and stay through the whole period.

For seven years after her marriage, they lived in Prairie Siding, Ontario, where the gospel came to them, and where their first child was born; then they came to Saint Clair, Michigan, where they resided about thirty-eight years, until her death. Her life has always been an exemplary one, and her kind, sunny disposition won her many friends. She has been one of the mainstays of the church, and her children are all members of the church, the boys all holding the priesthood. The funeral was held from the Latter Day Saint church, Cass Street, Elder George H. Skinner in charge; sermon by Elder John R. Grice; interment in Saint Clair.

Hickman, of Aurora, Missouri, and Mrs. J. E. Wolfe and Mrs. T. C. Kelley, of Independence, Missouri. She also leaves twenty grandchildren, forty-one great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild. She was converted to the Latter Day Saint faith by Elder T. C. Kelley, was baptized by him in 1882 in Lawrence County, Missouri, and has lived a life devoted to the church. She died September 1, 1927, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Wolfe. Funeral at the home, conducted by Elder R. D. Weaver. Interment in Mound Grove.

In 1882 she returned with her husband to Nova Scotia, doing missionary work for two years. In 1884 they went on a mission to Australia, returning to California in 1888. In 1894 she accompanied her husband to the Society Islands on the gospel boat, Evangelia. Since that time three missionary trips were made to the islands. During the last eighteen or twenty years she has lived in California, later moving to Nauvoo, Illinois, and for the past two years had been living in Independence, Missouri. Satisfaction

It is one of the satisfactions of life to have investments that turn out right—that keep every dollar of principal safe and that pay a good income with un-failing regularity.

A church bond has back of it the moral integrity and good will of "a people" in addition to tangible resources of property and money.

Description of Bonds

- $25 Baby Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, payable annually.
- $50 Thrift Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $100 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $200 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $1,000 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.

The $100 bonds may be purchased by paying $10 down and $10 per month until the face value of the bond is paid. On $25 and $50 bonds any amount of $1 or more will be accepted as part payment. The church will allow 5% interest to the purchaser on such installment payments, when full payment of the bond is made. Installment payments will easily and quickly secure a church bond if you do not have the money to pay cash. Government bonds will be accepted at their market value in exchange for church bonds.

The Book of Mormon should be in the home of every Latter Day Saint, and if possible every member should have his own book.

September 22, 1927, is the one hundredth anniversary of the date when the records contained in the Book of Mormon were delivered to the keeping of the church. This event makes the year a significant one in church history.

It will be a wholesome experience for every member of the church to read the Book of Mormon this year. Hundreds have already signified their interest and have started in this worth-while endeavor.

INDUSTRIAL ZION

A new booklet just off the press is now ready for sale. Orders filled same day as received. The content of this booklet is an amplification of a series of lectures given during the last General Conference, and the matter of stewardships and cooperation in developing Zion is presented from quite a new angle.

It is written in a very interesting style. Definite situations are discussed and analyzed in a logical, common sense way, and the pleasing thing about the book is the fact that the entire treatise is based on the spiritual ground work of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The booklet is designed as a text for study by the priesthood in their priesthood meetings and by the membership in their study classes throughout the church. The First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric urge that this booklet be secured and study work begun.

The booklet will be about one hundred and seventy-five pages and will be sold for 20c each.

Order through the publicity agent in your branch when possible. Otherwise order direct from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

EDITORIAL

Articles for the Ministry

It has always been my desire, and certainly that desire is felt by all the present editors of the HERALD, to present among other articles those calculated to be of help to the local ministers; and particularly the pastors or presiding elders, for in helping them we have thus indirectly helped the local congregations. It is expected that presiding elders and pastors, district and branch officers will be constantly concerned about studying their job and studying for it; so in presenting for their reading articles which are studious in character, the HERALD will be of assistance in this direction.

It is not likely that all the articles will have been written by our own men, but will be gleaned from other journals. Without doubt some few, very few, will object to our using articles from other church journals, but fortunately such narrow-visioned men are growing fewer in the church. Many of our problems as ministers are very similar to those of other denominations; and where those problems have been subjected to careful analysis by thoughtful men there is no good reason why we should not look over their presentation and appropriate whatever of solution may be applicable.

I want to suggest here the necessity for our ministers to digest what they read and study, and after assimilation apply it to our ideals and philosophy. It is not only unethical to plagiarize, but it is bad pedagogy. To try to present other men's sermons or articles (in or out the church), except in obvious epitomization, will sooner or later react to the disadvantage of the one doing it. Get the ideas and present them in your own language and style.

In this issue we present the first of a number of articles which we hope to follow with some degree of regularity by others. This is an article by Edward S. Amers, and appeared in the Christian Century for February 18, 1926. We commend it to the thoughtful and analytical reading of our ministers.

Wants

Who does not want? Is it not common for men to want some things they do not have? Who can tell what creates the wants men experience, and in how many instances do wants synchronize with what is best for us or what is likely to best contribute to real happiness?

"Just wants." What a wealth of meaning in that phrase! When shall we learn to want those things which are just, for justice will be conserved in satisfying: wants when social rightfulness is conserved and when our own welfare is promoted. "Just wants" afford a whole field of problems for study.

Recently there was sent to me a clipping. It is an editorial which had just appeared in a paper devoted to country life, one of those editorials which moves the heart and touches human interest. The writer so clearly and yet briefly sets out some time disparity between an abnormal or artificial want, and what may after all best suit us if the "want" is granted, that I quote the article entire, feeling sure that our readers will enjoy it as I have, and will see a new bearing of "just wants," as set out in our stewardship ideals.

"Soft Soil to Run My Fingers In"

For three hours, business had been discussed with all that tenacity for which the modern man is famous. Policies, ideas, methods of finance and organization—all the complex details of modern industry—had been gone over patiently and thoroughly.

"We have a great success ahead of us," the keen young manager said, "for this product satisfies a fundamental want of all mankind."

Some one told a joke, and they pushed back a moment and commenced to discuss "the fundamental wants." It became a moment of personal inventory—the lid was lifted, and one caught a glimpse of the inner dreams of all.

"I want half a million," said one, his lips tightening. "The income from it will give my family real security, and I can travel and visit the fallen cities of antiquity."

"I want a factory of my own," said a professional man, "so that when I go fishing my income will go right on!"

"I want to earn enough so that I can have a new motor car each year and my wife can have all the clothes she wants," said a young man, who had not yet lost his youth or taste for fine things.

Then, all turned by common consent to a man whom all fancied beyond the realm of "wants"—a man who could "buy and sell" anyone in his community.

A far-away, half-helpless look came into his gray eyes. "I want," he began slowly, "I want a modest cottage once more;

my babies back again, prattling under the shade of the cherry tree, the summer sunshine and the sense of unhurried luxury that comes to those who live close to the simple things." Then his voice fell almost to a murmur, "I want soft soil in which to run my fingers, to get down on my knees and plant things in! Ah, I dream of that soft soil of old—it is the soil of all happiness—it yields dreams and treasures we never knew until they are gone!"

There was a hint of flushed faces on every hand as they turned once more to their "business." But a dreamer sat and speculated and heard not the monotonous drone of their voices. In his heart, he breathed: "What could be finer than that—to keep the soft soil of life around one, forever!"—

Harvest Home Festival

The dates to be observed by the 1927 Harvest Home Festival are from Tuesday, September 27, to Sunday, October 2, including both dates.

The scene of this celebration, which gives much promise of being adapted to the needs of such an occasion, is the basement of the unfinished Auditorium Building, now being constructed on Walnut Street between River Boulevard and Grand Avenue, in the city of Independence, on a portion of the original Temple Lot plot of ground.

The participants in the celebration of the harvest festival of 1927 are widely scattered as are the communicants of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, for word has been received that there have been or will be forwarded to the committee in charge of exhibits and of the festival in its other aspects, contributions and exhibits from such distant points as Jerusalem, Palestine; Honolulu, Hawaii Territory; Wales; Canada; distant and near points of the United States; and likely some countries not here enumerated.

One thing which makes this wide participation doubly interesting is the fact that Saints in the most remote points are asking Saints who have been in these localities but who now reside in Independence, the City of Zion, to look after their exhibits, and give them their natural advantages wherever possible; Saints from over the face of the earth are cooperating to create and display that which shall praise the Lord and cry in thunderous tones of his bountiful providence. For the Lord of the Harvest must be the central figure in this Festival of the Harvest, that Saints shall not be permitted to forget whence comes their strength and blessing.

In former years this fall festival has come to be of service in several distinct ways:

1. It has emphasized the resources of the land of Zion in particular.
2. It has stimulated activity in production and preservation of vegetables, fruits, grains, flowers, grasses, etc.
3. It has developed talent in the building of display or exhibit, and the voicing of acknowledgment and praise.

4. It has brought unity in several groups because of having afforded a point for common effort in a common cause which held no element of contention.

In addition to the exhibits which will be on display for the entire six days in commodious and well-appointed booths, there will be daily programs of music, speaking, judging, lectures; and it is fondly hoped that much of the spirit of the gospel of the Saints may be dispensed in the social intercourse indulged.

There is still time for the Saints who have not thus far arranged for representation in this year's festival to obtain space and make a creditable showing. Address C. C. Koehler, 1015 West South Avenue, Independence, Missouri, at once, and ask for information and state your requirements. He will be quick to respond. If you are ready to forward your exhibit, you should send by suitable carrier to Brother Koehler, who is responsible for their proper handling.

Sportsmanship or Millions

In another column we are reproducing a special article written by Westbrook Pegler, and printed in the Kansas City Star of September 8. He is writing under the urge received by a knowledge that several millions of dollars will change hands because on September 22 a young man named Gene Tunney will defend his title as world's champion heavy weight prize fighter against an attempt to regain this title by a former champion, James Dempsey.

Now the HERALD is not particularly interested as to who shall carry the coveted title after September 22—in fact, I deeply wish there should be no such prize fighting as now exists, and am unable to imagine a system of prize fighting which would be commendable by any nation or commonwealth. But there is great interest in the figures submitted by Mr. Pegler and in his general comments, among them being the comparison he makes between the respectability of prize fighting millionaires and millionaires created by inheritance of fortunes made by board of trade gambling.

I am interested in the fact that it is possible to extract millions of dollars from the pockets of American citizens who have shown themselves to be more than an average in capability in accumulating money, for it is going to cost the average man outside Chicago a neat sum to witness the contest. I am interested that the public encourages a sport which has for its avowed aim the brutal pounding into unconsciousness of human beings. I am interested in trying to discover a fundamental difference in the street or back yard fist fight in which one American citizen attempts to wreak his vengeance upon another, and the fight arena where one is encouraged to show hatred, viciousness, cruelty, and to batter his foe until his own strength is exhausted and his personal grudge is satisfied. I acknowledge I am puzzled at the attitude of the American public, and do question if this is not just a reverting to inhumanity and unsportsmanship.

I confess to keen interest in such sports as tennis, golf, and baseball, and believe that much benefit may accrue to those who participate, and to those who because of admiration of skill and endurance and contest witness these sportsmanlike exhibits. But these are essentially different from the work or sport(?) of the prize ring or the cock pit.

It is impossible to conceive any satisfaction coming to the individual witnessing the prize ring contest which is unadulterated or would elevate the human soul. Joy at victory surely does not mean less than callousness to unnecessary cruelty. Admiration of endurance must involve lack of comprehension of the meaning of loss of ability to endure by the beaten man; for unlike the great sports, prize fighting does not bring development to the beaten man except in rare instances, but in place of development brings ruin and destruction. A fighter is not considered game who is beaten and still retains enough physical resource to regain his former condition—he is lacking in “fighting spirit.”

I am sure it would be better for Saints to put from them any taste for this sportless sport; there is no real contribution to be made by it to the good of the group.

Book of Mormon Pageant at Independence

“Remember Cumorah,” the Book of Mormon centennial pageant, will be produced in Independence in the basement of the Auditorium Friday and Saturday nights, September 23 and 24.

Independence Saints are going to attend the pageant Friday night, the 23d, so that seats for the Saturday night performance may be reserved for out-of-town visitors who wish to spend the week-end in Independence, where they may witness the pageant Saturday night and attend the special services Sunday. It is expected the capacity of the Auditorium will be taxed.

The White Mask Players in Independence are putting on the pageant, and the Laurel Club is managing the seating, costuming, and general business affairs.

A large number have been cast for the pageant, rehearsals are in progress, and Sister Gladys Newton Six, from Ford, Kansas, has returned to Independence for two weeks to direct the staging and production.

No Saint within driving distance of Independence should miss the Saturday evening performance of “Remember Cumorah,” and the association connected with its production in the Auditorium Building.

Many in Independence Read Book of Mormon

There has been carried to the members of the church in Independence the challenge of Bishop Charles Fry, of Kirtland, “How many will join me in rereading the Book of Mormon?” An official group of possibly two hundred men has tried to present the proposition to the membership and obtain their statements that they will now, in 1927 and before this centennial year of the coming of the book shall close, reread or read for the first time, the Book of Mormon.

About 825 Saints have signed such a statement, duplicate of which appears herewith, and many more are reading or going to read who prefer to do so without declaring themselves as doing it. Interest in the project is daily increasing, and with the coming of cooler weather, this activity will likely double.

At the Campus outdoor meeting which occurred Sunday evening, President Frederick M. Smith spoke at length in appreciation of the value and work of the Book of Mormon, and gave hearty personal and official support to the movement to study it anew, stating that he is rereading it, and that experiences within the last two months have stirred him to an appreciation of the early events surrounding the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and to a high appreciation of the book itself. He hopes that the Saints will read it with the definite purpose of gaining its philosophy of human conduct.

There are some Saints who do not possess a copy of the book, and many who are not owners of any helps in studying it, and for this reason there has been mailed to each branch president or to some member of every branch, a list of publications which will assist in obtaining a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the book including its making in ancient and modern years, its doctrine, archaeological and kindred proofs of its authenticity, etc.

Isolated Saints should be permitted to know fully of this movement and join the large number now engaged in the creditable undertaking, and in order that they may record themselves as so doing, we are reproducing the blank form of declaration, which may be clipped from the HERALD and mailed to the editors. We would really like to know that there are fifty per cent of the church at serious work, gaining the knowledge and spirituality to be obtained

New Call Letters for "Midland Broadcast Central"

Pursuant to action taken at the last General Conference, the church radio station has been leased to a group of five men to operate on a stewardship basis. For carrying on its operations, this group has organized the Midland Broadcasting Company, which will operate commercially from studios in Kansas City, to be known as Midland Broadcast Central. Call letters K M B C have been issued for the use of Midland Broadcast Central, and the call letters K L D S will be retained for church programs and services. It was thought that perhaps some of the features on commercial programs would be of a nature which would be better broadcast under other call letters than those used for the particular type of programs and services that have identified K L D S.

The Board of Trustees operating the station for the church consist of Bishop M. H. Siegfried, Bishop F. B. Blair, and Brothers F. H. Criley, C. R. Smith, and A. B. Church.

Broadcasting schedules hereafter will be published for both K L D S and K M B C.

It surely means a unity of spirit and a common thought or comprehension which bodes the destruction of petty criticism and strife, and who does not long to see the day speedily come when we shall be of one mind, thus being able to draw down the Lord's blessings upon our own individual selves, and blessing the body or church with increased life?

1827 REMEMBER CUMORAH! 1927

September 22, 1927, is the one hundredth anniversary of the date when the records contained in the Book of Mormon were taken from Hill Cumorah by the angel of God and given to the church.

Desiring to better inform myself of the teachings of this book, in appreciation of its importance, and in recognition of the significance of this centennial year, I wish to express my desire to read the Book of Mormon.

I will do this carefully, sincerely, and prayerfully, keeping in mind the historical events which have occurred in the century since the Book of Mormon was given to the church. If possible, I will complete the reading by December 31, 1927.

A Correction

Attention is called to an error in the list of songs published in HERALD of September 7. On page 1036 the authorship (words and music) of the song, "One hour with Jesus," is credited to J. L. Morgan. Brother Morgan did set these words to music, but William Lewis, an uncle to Brother Morgan, and long a trusted minister in the church, wrote the words.

According to The Spectator of May 21, unemployment in England is decreasing gradually. On May 9 the figures were 998,300, improvement in the heavy industries being accountable for the absorption of more men in industry. The cost of living in England is now lower than at any time since the World War.

A Vital Church

By EDWARD SCRIBNER AMERS, in Christian Century, February 18, 1926.

There are many kinds of churches, and there are different ways of conceiving the "true" church. Some persons think it must be very old and have a venerable tradition. Some think it is found where there are great numbers. Some identify it with the church which is the most familiar to them, while others expect to find it in the newest sect. Many times it is felt to be the church which has answered some particular need of the moment, such as health or intellectual awakening. Again the ideal church may be thought of as one which surrounds itself with the greatest mystery, professes occult powers, or proclaims an esoteric doctrine of divine truth.

All of these conceptions show themselves upon reflection to be partial and inadequate. Perhaps it is better not to talk of the ideal church, but only of a vital church. A vital church is one that offers to people the fullest, freest, and most enlarging life in the circumstances in which they are living and in those wherein they will live tomorrow. What is the best kind of a church in a given community here and now? If we forego any attempt to derive the answer from proof texts and preconceived theological opinions, we have left the practical experience of religious history and enterprise. There have been great changes in the conditions of life in different periods of Christianity. Many problems which pressed upon the early Christians no longer exist. The old persecutions have ceased, there are no slaves, the empire has fallen, the kings have departed. We have new forms of government, new inventions, new kinds of cities, new public schools, organized charity, and a vastly better understanding of the life of man.

Different Community Needs

Communities within the same city are highly differentiated. An industrial neighborhood needs a different type of church from that of a rural or a residential urban center. Certainly churches in different countries or among people of different nationalities must take account of varying customs and stages of culture. In the actual adaptation of religious work, the vital church takes careful account of its constituency and provides methods and forms of interpretation most effective for developing the religious life. The question must then be made quite specific, remembering meantime that it is a universal faith which is to be cultivated within the concrete situation. What, then, would be the nature and work of a vital church in a residential section of a large city which is also a great educational center? Suppose the membership contains business men of the executive and clerical class; a smaller group of professional men and women, such as lawyers, physicians, teachers, and artists; and a small but influential class of university faculty and students.

All are living a highly specialized and exacting daily life; most of them have many social connections and activities in clubs, fraternal orders, philanthropic organizations, and cultural sets; and in general their economic circumstances are comfortable but circumspect. What should the church try to do for them, and what should it expect them to do?

Work for Members

The most inclusive and significant answer is that they should carry the spirit of their religion into their daily life with its varied interests. They are constantly told that religion is a way of life in the concrete and practical world. There is no distinct line between the sacred and the secular. What the church trains and inspires people to do can not all be done in the church building or within the church agencies. An analogy may be drawn from the work of other institutions. The law school trains lawyers, but it sends them out into the world to practice. Women buy food in the market, but take it home for use. Men purchase clothing in the stores, but do not remain there to wear it. A certain amount of organization and of attention to the practical life of the church is necessary, but it is impossible to provide enough offices and committees to give such employment to all members, and if it were, such activities would be but a part of an adequate expression of the religious life.

Other specialized agencies have been rapidly developing in our modern society, and they often embody the good will and idealism of Christianity with more skill and efficiency than specific church organizations could do. Their workers receive technical training and achieve professional thoroughness and expertness. It would be impracticable for the church to extend its roof to cover schools, hospitals, industries, and arts. It can not carry on extensive industries nor conduct assemblies of state to sign peace treaties. Yet it has a very vital and genuine responsibility with reference to all such enterprises of civilization. It can help to create the spirit of good will, of justice, and of mercy which motivates fruitful social reforms and happy daily living.

Without interfering with your tithes or local expense contributions, CAN you give $500 as a free will offering toward the 1927-8 budget?

Function of Services

It is the function of the church services and atmosphere to make clear the needs and the opportunities for social benefaction and spiritual illumination and to induce an intelligent, sympathetic attitude toward them. To this end church members contribute by their presence in the church and by their loyalty to its ideals and good works. For most individuals these attitudes are most surely awakened and maintained in face to face association with other people seeking the same ends. Persons seated in a congregation need not be merely passive listeners and recipients. If they are sympathetic and intelligently in earnest, they vitally contribute to one another and to the whole institution an atmosphere charged with spiritual energy and high purpose. The psychologists have discovered the stimulating effect of the unconscious demeanor and slightest gestures of the individuals in a crowd. Every public speaker knows the difference between an audience which is alert and responsive and one which is cold and uninterested. He himself is but one factor in gaining the desired mood and direction of purpose. Every attendant contributes to or detracts from the proper spirit of the place.

Members may also promote the cause of religion by their "daily walk and conversation." Human beings live, so far as their significant existence is concerned, largely by conversation. Even the passing exchange of greetings has its part in determining the tone and spirit of a group. Buoyancy, good nature, friendliness have their subtle facial expression. But so also have cynicism, indifference, selfishness, and false pride. The self-centered person who does not "see" any but those from whom he hopes for advantage or prestige, obstructs the flow of spiritual life. Probably the church must take some account of different social sets within its fold and encourage an intimacy of friendliness among them which may not be possible for any one toward all other members equally. But this need not interfere with the sense of a genuine companionship of interest and of cooperative enthusiasm throughout the whole membership. After taking into consideration all proper regard for the delicacy of personal relations, there remains a wide area of common life in which all human beings meet upon a common plane. And all who are genuinely loyal to the church will feel a real partnership with all others who "belong."

A consistent member of the ideal church will accordingly give some time for participating in its services and social life; he will contribute generously of his money in reference to his ability and not merely with reference to what others give; he will radiate in conversation and by unconscious expressions a wholesome, unifying, and buoyant faith in its work and purpose. Every person must in large part decide for himself the measure of his gifts of every sort. It would be a generous devotion for some members to give as much interest to religion as they give to football or the theater or the opera. Some men belong to the city club but do not often visit its building. They might give more to it and get more from it, but the club would not wish to have them withdraw because they can not always be on hand. Their names are on its roll, they pay their dues, and in conversation they are loyal to its enterprises. Some persons are so situated that they can not give much more than that to a church, but that kind of adherence to a religious institution is better than none and may reasonably be expected from any person who wishes to render aid to constructive social forces.

Free Thinking

In the second place, a vital church cultivates free and effective thinking. It is inevitable that human beings should think about the interests which they feel to be vital to them. Their thoughts may be merely routine and custom-bound, but again they may be quite free and enlightened. In the ideal church of the type here described, the members will strive for clear and adequate knowledge. They will not accept a creed in the usual meaning of that word, but they will have ideas about life and duty and destiny. It will be a real part of their religion to seek an understanding of the world they live in, and they will readily turn to the wise men, the scientists, and thinkers of the time, for help and direction.

We have been more successful in discarding and questioning the old than we have in formulating the new. It is easy to deny miracles; it is not always easy to recognize the mysteries which remain. It is not difficult to dissent from the traditional creeds, but it is difficult to build up a satisfying philosophy of life and to hold it subject to revision without paralysis or cynicism. Yet this forward-moving spirit is an essential of true religious faith. It involves more than trust in history or heroes; it requires trust in life itself. The great testing of religion at the present time centers in this fact. The conservatives hold to a fixed body of doctrine, a static system of truth. The liberals believe not so much in revelation as in discovery and in a continuing, creative process of knowledge and faith. Professor Kirsopp Lake has classified religionists as fundamentalists, institutionalists, and experimentalists, the second group mediating between the other two. The institutionalists are for keeping the peace and will concede only as much to the experimentalists as may be appropriated without endangering the welfare of the church or its constituted agencies. They are given to compromise, to expediency, and not infrequently to obscurantism. Their opportunism is not satisfying to either extreme, however valuable it may be in conserving an external harmony and practical cooperation.

Experimentalists

The members of an ideal church will know what these distinctions mean. They will find their way more and more into sympathy with the experimentalists, but they will not be intolerant of those who linger in the other camps. The final test of the validity and the significance of ideas and systems of ideas for religion is the freedom, power, and satisfaction which they bring into life. The great end of religion is to gain life, and life more abundant. By this standard many traditional ideas are being discarded. For example, perhaps the world had no beginning. If science points to such a conclusion, religion is not thereby undermined, but only an old theory of creation is given up. Religion may well take us where we are and ask how we may become better. When this religious outlook is won, many solving ideas appear with it. There occurs a new perspective and a new horizon. I well remember the thrilling experience of discovering and adopting certain new ideas about the order of the world. They opened fresh vistas, created attractive opportunities, and awakened measureless enthusiasm.

Another fruitful thought came from a fifteen-minute talk on the idea that the world is young and that the process of creation is now going on. That brief, quiet talk by a learned professor in a college chapel furnished all subsequent years with fresh interest and meaning. It prepared a welcome for the modern hymn which begins:

Creation's Lord, we give thee thanks,
That this thy world is incomplete;

That thou hast not yet finished man,
That we are in the making still.

That thought has been an inexpressible relief from old puzzles as to how this actual world of stress and pain, of partial justice and defeated hopes could be the finished work of a perfect Being. Many events, disasters, and bereavements, which in the old view had to be accepted as the workings of an inscrutable Providence may now be frankly viewed as accidents and miscarriages which were never deliberately intended or purposely visited upon mankind. It is also possible now to understand how many calamities may be avoided and eliminated.

Optimism Possible

It becomes evident that while existence is precarious, it is not clouded by angry threats of suffering for no cause or reason. Life is not wholly a weary pilgrimage in a completely hostile and hopelessly evil order or nature. It has its measure of genuine joy, of fruitful achievement, of realizable ideals. Religion is justified in celebrating joyously and confidently many actual events and many reasonable hopes here and now. This melioristic optimism is strengthened by the growing scientific conviction that human nature is not set and fixed in a fatalistically determined pattern or character. A better knowledge of infancy, of the flexibility of behavior under nurture and training, through an indefinitely long period of plasticity, opens the way to promising experiments of education and eugenics. The marvelous achievements of scientific discovery, invention, and organization in the physical realm are beginning to be regarded as significant of equally great possibilities in the psychological and social life of mankind.

Such ideas suggest the increasing power of the race to develop a greater use of reasonableness, of exact and serviceable knowledge, and gradually to attain more and more understanding and control of the means for securing and enhancing all the spiritual as well as the commoner values of life. It therefore becomes the opportunity, not merely the duty, of religious people to use their intelligence to the utmost in the pursuit of the highest ideals. The fact that this is an arduous and endless task does not lessen its appeal or destroy its incentive. From such insights and suggestions, new religious outlooks and new ventures of rational faith emerge.

How transforming and solving is the idea that the doctrine of the Trinity is now relatively of little importance; that the truly modern thinker is neither unitarian nor trinitarian; that it is not the birth but the life and thought of Jesus which should be considered; that popular amusements may be used religiously, bringing joy and natural comradeship into life; that cities are helpful to the moral as well as the physical and intellectual life; that the missionary attitude is present in foreign trade and politics as well as in religion, and therefore the "missionary" is just as natural as any kind of idealistic promoter; that it is easy to be liberal in theology and difficult in social and political matters; that experimentation often leads to discovery of important ways of making religion vital and benign.

Symbolism

The third characteristic of a vital church is its symbolism. A symbol is something—an object, a word, an act, a personality—which suggests far more to the imagination than is present to the senses. A cross may be only an upright piece of wood with a shorter piece fixed at right angles to the upright and at two thirds of its height. But as a marker for a soldier's grave or as a sign above an altar, it becomes the symbol of divine love poured out for the redemption of broken and undone humanity. In a world of defeat and loss, it is the token of victory and hope. It signifies that the love of God is adequate to blot out the shame and heal the wounds of every soul. Who does not need to be reminded of infinite mercy by some such simple yet profound sign of divine love?

The church building itself becomes a quickening symbol to the congregation which gathers in it, especially when age and use have made it a place of rich and vivid memories. A very plain chapel which has been the scene of inner conflicts and of aspiring faith undergoes a transformation. It becomes in truth a house of God, and a very gate of heaven. A beautiful and suitable building stirs and releases the imagination with still greater power and illumination. It is inviting and hospitable like the love which created it. The warmth and friendliness of its aisles and pews are reassuring, and its arches are sheltering and uplifting. Its seeming distances, though within small dimensions, have the effect of setting the soul in an open place yet surrounding it with that mercy which is "like the wilderness of the sea."

The congregation is itself a symbol. Usually, in a modern church, not half of the members are present at the regular services. Those in attendance represent the whole group, and on occasion act for them. But the congregation is still more widely symbolic. It suggests the universal experience of humanity, seeking light and companionship and salvation from its burdens. The church offers an idealized fellowship, not only with those visibly present but also with those great souls of the ages who have wrought and conquered and bequeathed their works and spirit to the race. And at the center of that fellowship, vivid and dominant, is the sense of a divine presence. It is humanized and brought near in the thought of Jesus Christ. It is magnified and lifted up to infinity in the speculative doctrines of faith. In that world of aspiration, each human soul learns to see himself in two widely contrasted relations. Now he is of earth and time, set in the vast order of the universe and subject to the decrees of the divine will; again he is taken up out of his limitations and finiteness into sonship with the eternal, sharing in the mysteries of the powers of life and of death.

In our own time there is a deep and widespread craving for an enrichment of public services. In every communion, even in those which in the past have inclined to confuse all symbols of beauty with popery, there is evidence of a longing for something more than extemporaneous speech and an impromptu order of service. They are seeking nobler hymns, they experiment with the surplice for the choir, they venture upon processions, they retrieve some lines of gothic architecture, they light a candlestick, they put flowers about the altar, they place stained glass windows, they celebrate Christmas and Easter, they give pageants and indulge in festivals. Even the moving picture and the radio have been consecrated here and there to sacred uses.

Religion, in its free, normal expression, has always employed the great forms of art. Only in some age of reaction and austerity has religion been barren and puritanical. Today it is recovering the richness and beauty of symbolism which protestantism too much excluded. But that symbolism will necessarily be more than a reproduction of the forms of the past. It will adopt such of them as are consonant with the spirit of a religion of adventure and discovery, but it will not hesitate to find new rituals, poetry, music, and drama as it has already appropriated and invented new forms of organization, new methods of instruction, and new programs of reform. So long as it keeps the spirit of freedom and spiritual understanding, it will not allow its symbols to become bonds and chains, or think of any of them as necessary to salvation or essential to Christian character, but will permit the widest variation without prejudice or exclusion. When a symbol is mistaken for an ordinance, it loses its value; when an ordinance is viewed as a symbol, its power is enhanced.

A vital church will continue to seek and to create more expedient and effective ways of cultivating the religious life in close cooperation with the enlarging and deepening life of society. It will endeavor to keep its members alert, dynamic centers of idealism and good will; it will encourage them to think and to attain all possible knowledge; and it will enlist them in the production and use of diverse forms of art by which the heart and will may be profoundly moved to feel and act in harmony with the finest possible visions of human well-being and destiny.

The Book of Mormon in the Sunday School

BY SUPERINTENDENT C. B. WOODSTOCK

One hundred years ago, by angelic hands, there was given to the world through the humble instrumentality of this church, a divine record of God's dealings with the former inhabitants of the American Continent and of Christ's ministry among them. It was prepared by servants of the living God under divine command and the spirit of revelation. It was preserved, together with other sacred writings and instruments, according to the divine will, to come forth for a special purpose in the latter day. The magnitude of this purpose and the full value of the ancient record in the accomplishment of the marvelous work necessary in the preparation of a people for the redemption of Zion and the second coming of the Master, has not yet been fully appreciated.

As the day approaches when we shall have rounded out a full century since the organization of the church, there is a significant awakening among the membership as well as the priesthood to the striking importance of the Book of Mormon and its message in the restoration of the gospel and in the perfection of a people who shall be worthy and able to receive of the fullness of knowledge and power which must characterize children of the kingdom in the day that the Lord shall return.

Indeed, the entire church is eagerly looking forward to 1930 and beyond, and we press on to the fullness of times when promises of old shall be verified. Undoubtedly the call of today, as never before, is a call to prepare, by study and exercise, as also by faith and prayer, that we may show ourselves approved unto God. The day and the occasion demand knowledge, faith, charity, purity of life, and willing service.

That we may fully comprehend and put into practice the revealed will of God in the solution of the tremendous social, economic, and spiritual problems confronting the church and the world today, the Saints must avail themselves through consistent study and application of the gospel principles as revealed in the word of God in the three books, and keep themselves in a condition to receive further as it may be the Lord's will to give. This does not prevent a wider study of art, history, languages, science, and philosophy if undertaken in a true search for truth and power in harmony with the Lord of Life. The latter-day slogan, "Our creed, all truth; our field, the world," is still expressive of Christian idealism.

From its inception, the Sunday school has been distinctively a "Bible school," while in the Religio, from its origin, study classes have centered around the Book of Mormon. In general, Religio quarterlies have featured the study of the Nephite record, although the present tendency in the Department of Recreation and Expression is to demand study courses dealing with broad phases of social and economic as well as spiritual development. Aside from some scattering attempts to teach an adult Book of Mormon class in Sunday school without a quarterly guide, the study of this record has been left to the Religio.

For many years the Outline Studies in the Book of Mormon, by Louise Palfrey-Sheldon, were in use in Religio classes. Last year Brother Cyril Wight gave us an intensive study in one year under the title, "The Book of Mormon, is it necessary?" This quarterly was widely used both in Religio and Sunday school classes. It was printed in sufficient quantity to supply the need of class study for some years to come. The lessons are not dated, and the study may be begun at any time. It is equally suitable for Religio or Sunday school use.

There is apparent need for new courses in the subject matter of the Book of Mormon, especially as its teachings have vital bearing upon the life and work of our day. One such course should be ready by July 1928.

An unusually interesting and valuable little quarterly of the Junior Religio series is entitled "The Book of Mormon Story," by Sister Marcella Schenck. The story in brief is told in fifty-two lessons or chapters, the first of the lessons going into use in July, 1927. The story is entertainingly told for children of eight to fourteen years, its incidents are well chosen, and the teaching is interpreted in terms of youths' problems of today. This quarterly is also printed in large quantities and may be used with equal advantage in Sunday school classes where not already used in Religio.

We see no reason why the Sunday school should be limited in its subject matter to the Bible. Rather do we feel that as the church school conducted on the most advantageous hour of the Sabbath, there should be made available for its classes the most valuable teaching of the "three books," with special emphasis laid in the solution of particular problems confronting the membership of the church. At the same time we should welcome material wisely selected from "all good books," that our instruction be not unduly narrow or circumscribed. In our teaching, too, there should always be kept in mind the great, constructive program of the church, that the product of our Sunday schools shall be well informed, trained in heart and hand as well as in mind for active service in the church.

From every consideration, the study of the Book of Mormon should have a prominent place in our Sunday schools.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Familiar Misquotations

M. Jourdain was astonished to find that he had been talking prose all his life without knowing it. Had he lived on this side of the channel, he would have proceeded, in due course, to learn, no doubt to his profound gratification, that this prose of his was full of quotations from and allusions to half the famous books in the language. The English are inveterate quoters. We quote shamelessly from books we have never read—from authors whose very names we do not know; nay, like M. Jourdain, we often quote without realizing that we are quoting at all. And yet we have the effrontery to turn up our noses at anyone who consciously applies to the affairs of this modern age some jewel of speech from the great writers of the past, and to snigger "cliche," "tag," "vieux jeu."

It would be interesting to discover which is the most misquoted phrase in English literature. I am inclined to believe it must be the last line of Milton's "Lycidas," which so many people who should know much better persist in quoting as

"Tomorrow to fresh fields and pastures new," making miserable tautology of a fine line.

A short time ago I read an interesting character sketch of Shakespeare's Lady Macbeth, in which occurred the well-known phrase "sticking point." The writer knew perfectly well, I have no doubt, that Shakespeare wrote,

"Screw your courage to the sticking place," but nine readers out of ten would have supposed "place" to be a mere misprint for "point."

Another author who has paid the penalty of greatness is Pope:

"A little learning is a dangerous thing" is almost always quoted, nowadays, as "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing." Science is substituted for the classics. It must be admitted that the popular version is less priggish than the original, but it plays havoc with the second line of the couplet.

Butler's "Hudibras" is more often mentioned than read in these days, but it is a mine of good things. One of the best known is

"He that complies against his will
Is of his own opinion still."

This usually undergoes a strange transformation into

"A man convinced against his will Is of the same opinion still," which is sheer nonsense, although the underlying idea is plain enough. A sentiment which appealed perhaps more to our grandfathers than to ourselves is "Pity is akin to love."

Most of us would confidently assert that this comes from "Alexander's feast," but it does not. Dryden wrote

"Pity melts the mind to love."

Thomas Southerne (1660 to 1746) has

"Pity's akin to love,"

but we can not shelter ourselves behind him. We misquote Dryden: we do not quote Southerne.

It must be grimly exasperating to an author to reflect that posterity will, in all probability, refuse to read his masterpieces, but will merely seize on his best things and misuse them!

"Steal! To be sure they may, and, egad, serve your best thoughts as gypsies do stolen children—disfigure them to make 'em pass for their own."

Sir Fretful Plagiary, in his righteous wrath, can not refrain from pilfering and misquoting Churchill's lines:

"Like Gypsies, lest the stolen brat be known Defacing first, then claiming for his own."

But our consciences are clear on this point. Our weakness is rather that of the poor relations or humble friends of the great. We do not profess to be the originators of our purpose patches. Nay, we make haste to avow that they are borrowed, in the hope of inducing our audience to believe that our acquaintance with the artistocracy of literature is far more intimate than it really is. We may even achieve a reputation for having read their works by the judicious use of a few trite quotations of half a dozen words each!

More of our familiar and everyday quotations come, as everyone knows, from the Bible than from any other source. But, curiously enough, many pious aphorisms have become household words on the strength of an origin in Holy Writ which they can not establish.

"God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," which, in fact, comes from such a very unbiblical source as Sterne's "Sentimental journey," "A merciful man is merciful to his beast," "Not lost, but gone before," "Fish in troubled waters," would be attributed to the Bible by most of us, while "I am escaped with the skin of my teeth," which actually occurs in the book of Job, would probably be fathered on Shakespeare.

The student of the natural history of quotations is continually meeting fresh surprises. For instance, who would have thought that such an expression as "Old women of both sexes," which might, perhaps, have come out of one of Disraeli's novels, but belongs, one would say, more properly to the nineties of the last century, was written by an author who died over 150 years ago? And yet it occurs in Tristram Shandy. And "Alliteration's artful aid," which ought, according to all the laws of probability to be found in Pope's "Essay on criticism," comes from an otherwise forgotten poem of Churchill.

"He that borrows the aid of an equal understanding doubles his own; and he that uses that of a superior elevates his own to the stature of that he contemplates." Our fault is that we do not "borrow the aid of the understanding" of those whose words we appropriate. We are too content to use them as mere stock phrases, which save us the trouble of thinking for ourselves, until they become:

"Staled by frequent, shrunk by usage into commonest commonplace."

There is a certain element of meanness and ingratitude in our behavior. Ordinary decency, one would think, should impel us to consider and appreciate the gems which we borrow from our forefathers. It is true that the very greatest passages in our literature have escaped such ignoble use. Such phrases as:

"Oh, thou art fairer than the evening air,

Clad in the beauty of a thousand stars," or those marvelous lines in the middle of the fourth act of the "Tempest," to choose at random, do not lend themselves easily to quotation. But this does not exonerate us. We would profane them if we could!

The meanness lies in the manner of our borrowing, not in the act itself, for, as Emerson says, "There are great ways of borrowing." D. H.

A Cold-Blooded Business

CHICAGO, September 8.—Two weeks from now, two large, healthy young men will step into a roped-off square and try to knock each other senseless with their fists. You've heard about that.

If you should have a disagreement with a street car conductor or vice versa, and the pair of you should step over onto the sidewalk to arbitrate the matter with your knuckles in your own clumsy way, somebody probably would blow a scream on a police whistle, and presently you would be locked up in a very unpleasant place for a couple of hours. Eventually, some judge would rattle the don't book and read you a law about fist fighting being contrary to public morals, and you would be fined $5 and costs.

Well, now, these two large, healthy young men are capable of killing people with their fists, but when the Messrs. Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey step into this roped-off place on the evening of September 22, weather permitting, to fight with their knuckles, they not only will be immune to arrest, but under the protection of the police; and, far from being fined, they will be paid a great deal of money.

A Three-million Dollar Gate

The spectators, or customers, will pay in round numbers three million dollars for seats more or less approximate to the roped-off square, and three millions is more money than many a big, conscientious, carefully managed business concern with thousands of employees, and with agents in the far places of the world, can make in a year. This fist fight will last no more than thirty minutes, so if you take the trouble to dot and carry one for a moment you discover that the entertainment will come to approximately $1,666 a second, or $99,600 a minute.

The price per second is as much money as many an industrious, intelligent provider with kids to feed, and a bungalow to pay for, can make by strict attention to business in the course of a year. The annual interest on the rate per minute for this fist fight at 6 per cent would support a couple of families in modest respectability and a lot of things like that. You can reduce the money to so many operations on impecunious invalids or so many B. A.'s for financially hobbled intellects with futile yearnings toward the universities, or you might just reckon the total price of three million dollars as enough money to pay the salary of the Presidents of the United States from this day until September 7, 1967, and then ask yourself whether you are crazy or can such things really be.

Questions Value of Fights

Not that my personal notions matter. I have no objections to all this, because it seems just as respectable and beneficial to the community for a young man to make a million dollars by knuckle fighting for half an hour as it is for some other young man to derive as much from a father who happened to guess that cotton, corn, or early June watermelons would be going up or down at a proper given time.

Sometimes I question the sportsmanship of knuckle fighting as a profession, because I have seen a prize fighter in a clinch spit on another prize fighter's wishbone or slug a fallen opponent at the base of the brain from behind and get away with it. I once saw an emaciated little man with a wife and baby beaten to death in the ring because he was too Irish to quit and too weak to get his hands up, and the referee too mindful of a money's worth for the crowd to stop it. Then, also, Mr. Chuck Wiggins, who is sparring nowadays with Mr. Tunney at Lake Villa, tells of a bout in which the late Harry Greb hit him on the nose and let go only when Mr. Wiggins brought up a knee and kicked him in the groin.

A Romantic Side to Game

Yet these questionings seem trivial when I consider the romantic whole of a profession in which a young man may rise from the stews and joints of desert towns of the West to such a position that he is worried sick when the kitchen maid resigns her job in his California mansion and the chauffeur has to wash the dishes. You may take this as a gaudy exaggeration of the facts, but I assure you that Mr. Floyd Fitzsimmons, a confidant of Mr. Jack Dempsey, told me in all solemnity the other day that Mr. Dempsey's digestion failed him at Saratoga a few weeks back because he received word from home that the female staff of the household was absconding and the chauffeur had been summoned from the $12,000 car to cleanse the dinner service.

Young Mr. Tunney's last workaday job in civil life paid him $16 a week, and now he has a manager to attend to the cares of his fortune, a secretary to answer a mail of some 200 letters a day, and a firm of Wall Street lawyers, much preferred by traction corporations, to keep him out of litigation when possible and fight his way through when that is necessary.

Mr. Dempsey is 32 years old, and Mr. Tunney is 29, and, inasmuch as money, lawfully acquired, is the gauge of a man's success in his line in this country, I take it that Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney are two boys of humble beginnings who made good in an exceptionally grand way.—By Westbrook Pegler, in Kansas City Star, September 8.

Peace

By Ruth Kirby

O may my restless soul
By a divine control
No bitterness nor enmity e'er know
Toward any living thing,
Base slave, nor haughty king,
Not toward God, should life prove full of Woe.

May sweet and earned content,
A blessing heaven sent,
Lend quiet influence to my feverish life;
Whate'er may be my lot
God grant I may let not Within me dwell tumult and hate and strife.

May my faith stronger grow,
May my heart ever know,
And trust, through all the powerful storms of mind;
Through all life's blinding tears
And silent, changing years,
May I in faith and peace my comfort find.

Thus may I fill my place
And my love bridge the space,
That separates my soul from God and heaven
Until I can at last
Hold secure and fast
The goal for which my soul has ever striven.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The Officer and Teacher Meeting for September

We turn for this month to a brief discussion of the types of effort necessary on the part of the teacher to accomplish his purpose. This cannot be exhaustive in our limited space, but it should be helpful and suggestive of the larger field of study open to workers in religious education.

Theme:—Types of teaching.

Text:—How to Teach Religion; Betts, Chapter Eleven.

Teaching must differ in its type according to (1) the age of the pupils, (2) the nature of the material to be presented, and (3) the occasion on which it is taught. The value of each type must be judged according to the result achieved or anticipated in its use. A teacher should know what type he is using for any given purpose and why he is using this type in preference to any other.

The Information Lesson.—This type of teaching aims to give new knowledge or fact as part of the equipment of thought and understanding needed for the new or larger experience sought for the learner. Its use may be easily overstressed or misunderstood. Mere facts or mere information have but little value and none whatever except as they are used at once in the constructive thinking, feeling, and willing of the pupil.

An intelligent religion is based upon certain fundamental ideas and concepts most readily obtained through familiarity with certain facts, stories, personages, and events recognized as worthy in the best experience of the past. We need such a broad and sympathetic basis for the evaluation of life experiences upon which we may safely make our religious choices of every day. To undertake to teach a child the deeper meanings and relationship of God to our lives without the necessary background of information is to confuse him and to fail ourselves as teachers. In using the informational lesson the teacher will lay emphasis upon the particular fact or relationship or experience to be gained by the pupil; other matters for the time being are secondary.

The Developmental Lesson.—This type of lesson seeks to lead the child to observe, discover, think, find out for himself. Its purpose is to encourage the pupil to gain experiences from which he may be able through observation, comparison, and reasoning to draw conclusions which shall be logical and safe. Information thus discovered for oneself is of far more personal value than any amount of facts or principles accepted secondhand. The final validity of such information depends upon the breadth of the pupil's experience and the further logic of his reasoning.

The basis, or starting point, in the developmental type of teaching, must be found in knowledge or experience already in the possession of the pupil. Like all teaching, we must proceed from the already known to the related unknown.

The important teaching of the moment lies in the answer to the question or problem in the mind of the pupil which demands solution. The question arises because a new fact or set of facts is seen in the new experiences and the mind is stimulated to inquire, "What has happened?" "What will result?" "What caused it?" "What should I do about it?" and the like.

In conducting the developmental lesson the teacher must from the beginning have a very clear idea of the goal or conclusion to be reached by the learners. Otherwise the experience will be haphazard, partial, uncertain, and the conclusion will be vague, erroneous, unreliable. The ideal teacher will have had rich experiences, and broad research, with readiness and skill in right thinking and living.

The Deductive, or Application Lesson.—Not all teaching however, can be of the inductive or discovery type. Valu-

REUNION NEWS

Runnells Reunion

The Des Moines district reunion began with the putting up of tents on August 10 under the direction of three members of the committee, Brethren Castings, Beye, and McDonald. At noon the tabernacle was pitched, and by night several of the house tents were up and occupied. The township farm bureau organization held their annual picnic at the grounds and used the big tent for their program in the evening. They furnished two men to help raise the canvas and drive stakes. Some of the Saints were asked to assist with the program, and a very enjoyable time was had.

Promptly at 10 o'clock on the morning of the 11th, District President H. Castings opened the first service, a prayer meeting, there being seventy in attendance. This proved to be a good meeting, and prayers were offered by many that this service might be the means of creating unity and peace among the Saints, and that the adjustments necessary to be made might be made quickly and the full benefits of the reunion enjoyed by all.

There were twelve prayer services held during the ten days, including one sacramental service and two services for the young people. Each and every service was a literal baptism of the Spirit to some, until almost everyone present was given a new testimony of the work. Much rejoicing was expressed in song, prayer, and testimony. Admonition and instruction were expressed through the Spirit as well as words of comfort and consolation.

Children's prayer meetings were held at the church each morning. About sixty attended these services, which were marked by unusual interest taken.

Love was manifest in every life, and care for one another was expressed in word and deed.

The classes which met at 9.15 each week day were conducted by Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, Brother J. A. Gunsolley, and Brother C. B. Hartshorn. Brother Gunsolley had so many blessings to give that he asked to be excused as soon as the others arrived. Alternate mornings were occupied as three thirty-minute periods with a sermon at eleven and three forty-five-minute periods. All felt they were sitting at the feet of the most wonderful of teachers. The Spirit was felt in the classes as the great lessons of life were portrayed as if drawn upon canvas by Brother and the ground to be covered, the method to be followed in preparation, and present in an attractive way the results to be expected. The teacher must be perfectly familiar with the coming lesson, must develop an interest in its contents, must seek to remove certain obstacles or difficulties, and provide an incentive for mastery of the text or the securing of certain data for the next class period. A clear, definite, and businesslike assignment leaves no chance for failure or mistake through a lack of appeal or misunderstanding.

Topics for Written Report or Oral Discussion

1. Using any current quarterly, analyze the lessons to determine which of the six types of teaching each lesson will require. What conditions affect your choice?
2. Which type of lesson do you like best to teach? With which are you least successful? How may you train yourself for greater efficiency?
3. Explain how you train children to discover truths for themselves. What advantages and what dangers do you find?
4. How do you make your review lesson interesting and effective?
5. Describe an ideal assignment of a coming Sunday school lesson.

able as it is to the student, it would be impracticable, for each generation or individual to cast aside as worthless all the great moral and religious laws which have been found true and helpful in past generations. In general, these great principles and truths are our best statement of God's and Nature's laws. It is sheer folly to assume that each must discover independently and state for himself the laws of life which shall govern his actions.

Often, then, we may start with a conclusion assumed as a truth, and search for evidences of its truthfulness. Our search may lead us to history, biography, science, everyday life about us, and to our own personal experience. Because of the respect we have for the Scriptures as containing the precious truths of God's word, evidences found in the lives and teachings of godly persons, and especially of Christ, have supreme value.

It is our part as teachers to make the great fundamental moral and religious laws which underly our lives living truths to our pupils. We must show them successfully at work in the lives of others. We must help our pupils to make the application to their own lives.

The Drill Lesson.—The purpose of drills is to make certain matter automatic in the mind, or to train definite acts to a high degree of skill. No one should assume that mere memorizing of biblical or other material is any assurance of moral development. Yet there are some things which the child should learn very thoroughly and completely in the process of his religious education. He should accustom himself to pleasing expression of prayer. He should know the words and music of certain songs and hymns suited to his age. He should learn certain passages of rare beauty and choice sentiment from the Bible and from other sources.

As a matter of convenience and skill he should be familiar with the names and the order of the books of the Bible, and with the outstanding men and women of all time whose life and work have been of value to the world. All this should serve as a background for personal expression and appreciation and should give readiness and freedom in religious exercises.

Sufficient motive for complete mastery is the secret of success in the drill exercise. The child should feel a real need for mastery of the task assigned and should find satisfaction in the use of the material memorized or the skill acquired.

The Appreciation Lesson.—It is quite as essential that the child shall come to enjoy and admire the good, the true, and the beautiful, as that he shall know it in a more formal way. One should not only know the facts about the lives of righteous characters, but he should feel and admire their gentleness, goodness, and courage.

Thus the teacher becomes an interpreter of picture, poem, or character, helping the child not only to see but to feel and love their admirable qualities. The teacher can not hope to excite admiration in his class which he does not genuinely feel for himself.

It is this appreciation which finally develops a desire on the part of the learner to cultivate those feelings and actions which promise to produce similar traits in their own lives, the basis for beautiful character.

The Review Lesson.—The great purpose of the review is to provide an occasion for a new or more mature view of the subject in the light of all the study and broader experience had in class. It should help to organize and make usable all the material that has been learned. Incidentally, it may serve as a check for the teacher upon the success of his teaching.

The review should deal with the essential points and so organize and relate them that the threefold aim of the teaching process, fruitful knowledge, right attitudes, and practical application shall be stressed and made secure. Successful review depends upon the clearness of vision and the enthusiasm of the teacher, and the keen interest and alertness of the class which should follow.

The Assignment.—An effective assignment will clearly set out

Sister Etzenhouser. Their words sank deep into the consciousness of the Saints, bringing remorse or joy and holding out hope to the youth who heeded the instructions of the wise.

Brother Hartshorn gave instruction in "How to teach religion," to the same class. Much interest was manifested by all in his masterful lectures on this important theme.

Brother Gunsolley taught two mornings on the "Problems of youth," a subject which he knows how to handle because of his contact with so many young people at Graceland. He was excused because of his more pressing work after the second morning.

The preaching was "meat in due season" to all who attended. Brother O. L. D'Arcy preached the first sermon and the last, as well as two between. These discourses all were given in the power and demonstration of the Spirit. Bishop G. W. Eastwood at eleven o'clock preached three sermons on his special line of work. These were well received. "Uncle Jerry" did his share of ministering the word in plainness and power. District President H. Castings preached a sermon on the principle of tithing that caused many to reach for their pocketbooks and check books and resolve to comply with the law of temporalities. Doctor G. F. Hull preached one of his characteristic sermons from a chart on the subject of "The Apostasy, Reformation, and Restoration." He was filled with the Spirit and rejoiced as he delivered the sermon to an appreciative audience.

The Department of Recreation and Expression carried out its work with remarkable precision and effectiveness. Brothers Stephen Robinson and Victor Lents had prepared a program for activities of the youth that was well followed, and much enjoyment was the result. They gave an entertainment on the first Friday night, consisting of stunts, songs, music, and readings. It was splendid. About five hundred people were in attendance. Games were the order after the first afternoon, when all played at raking the campus and executing a general clean-up of the grounds. Two swimming parties were had at the river, with Brother Lents as lifeguard and chaperon. A declamatory contest was held one afternoon just before games. Three camp fire services were held which were well attended and were pleasurable events. A harvest hunt was held on Monday in which all campers participated. Many prizes were given by Runnells business men.

Sister Kirkwood for the Department of Women had prepared a program of stunts for another afternoon, to which all of the branches and groups contributed.

Brother Vern Deskin directed the singing in person, and through his assistants when he could not be present. His program was thoughtfully prepared and carefully executed.

Brother William Robinson, assisted by Nora Park, Sister D'Arcy, Sister Gunsolley, and Sister Hartshorn, directed the work of the Sunday school and junior church. This department functioned perfectly, with a splendid attendance and interest. Brother Victor Lents presided over the children's prayer services, in which much of the Spirit was manifest. Others of the priesthood were pressed into service and took their turn preaching to the "youngsters." Junior church was held in the upper auditorium of the church building. They enjoyed games and a picnic as part of their program. Sister Forrest Pratt, Sister Ruth Richeson, and Sister Mildred Turner led classes during the period from 9.15 to 10.30 a. m., on week days.

Sister Bertha Deskin directed the group of newly organized Temple Builders, which made many contributions to the success of the work. They sang, they played, put on stunts, bore testimony in the prayer meetings, and everywhere helped to make the Saints happy because they were happy.

The commissary was in charge of Sister Viola McDonald, assisted by Mrs. Stella Hammer, who has had charge of the cooking since the reunions have been held here. Good food was served at reasonable prices in the basement dining room of the church. The basement was cool and well ventilated and practically free from flies.

The health of the campers was excellent, a very few cases of sickness reported. Weather was from extremely hot to very cool, with only two rains during the ten days.

Brothers Steve and Bill Robinson were detained at home much of the time, owing to the arrival of a new Book of Mormon student at the former's home and a Sunday school pupil at the latter. Both visitors were too young to attend, so the boys came down as often as they could get away from work and home duties.

Gaylord Castings was injured in an automobile wreck at La Grange, Illinois, on the Monday before the beginning of the reunion, was unconscious for many hours in a hospital, and his parents did not get word from him until Saturday. He was thrown through the windshield of the car in which he was driving with a friend, receiving two deep cuts on his temple and neck. The jawbone prevented the severing of the juglar vein, saving his life. He came over for a part of the time while convalescing, returning to work at La Grange on Saturday. His life was marvelously spared, to the joy of his family and all the Saints in the district.

The success of the reunion was due to the fact that from the start the Saints entered the "inner" court where God dwells, and he could not withhold his presence from them. Revelation thus became pervasive and was not confined to a few. All felt the divine presence in every service. On the playground and in every activity, love was expressed in word and deed. It was an example of the time spoken of by the prophet, when "every man should know the Lord from the least unto the greatest." One brother bore this testimony: "I know that I have passed from death unto life, because I love the brethren." Many expressions of love for others were made by the priesthood in public utterance as well as in private conversation.

Not an unpleasant experience marred the peace of the Saints in any of their activities, but joy was unconfined, and "peace flowed onward like a river."

Brother Castings was warned in a dream to see to it that all of the tents were staked securely at the setting up. This was done, and when the storm arrived on Wednesday night not a tent was blown down. Service was held at the church that night, where "Uncle Jerry" preached a wonderful sermon, using the blackboard to illustrate the "Game of the Saints." Brother Gunsolley gave an illustrated lecture on the subject "Graceland" on the last Friday night, assisted by Graceland students who sang the songs of the college. This evening was thoroughly enjoyed, and our own school was brought closer to us.

Yes, Des Moines District is going forward to 1930 and beyond, with the help of such meetings as these and with the divine fellowship they enjoy. C. E. McDONALD.

Nauvoo Reunion

The Nauvoo reunion has now passed into history. It was held at Nauvoo, Illinois, the beauty spot of the State, from August 19 to 28.

We were very fortunate in having as our speakers President F. M. Smith, Apostle F. Henry Edwards, Patriarch H. O. Smith, Bishop G. W. Eastwood, and Elder D. Sorden. In addition to these, we had several other workers stop off on their way to other reunions, and some on their way home. Others came that they might visit this beautiful place and share in the reunion with us. All of these we were happy to have with us, for their presence inspired others, and the messages they brought will not soon be forgotten. Among those who came were President F. M. McDowell, Bishop Mark H. Siegfried and family, Apostle Roy S. Budd, Elder J. W. Peterson, Elder Hubert Case and wife, Elder Houghton, Elder Kress, Sister Blanche Mesley, and others. Some of these stayed only a few hours, but long enough to catch the spirit of this place. Bishop M. H. Fisher and family were with us a few days, also Bishop I. A. Smith and family.

Attendance at this reunion was very good, most of the Saints being from outside our own district. We were made happy by the interest shown by these folk in Nauvoo and our district.

At the business meeting it was decided that the district presidency be in charge of the reunion. Order of meetings was: 7 to 8, priesthood meeting; 8.30 to 9.30, prayer service; 9.45 to 10.45, study hour; 11, preaching; in the afternoon recreation was had in the form of swimming and ball games. Several took advantage of the opportunity and visited Carthage Jail, Keokuk Dam, and other places of interest. In the evening at 7.30 was a congregational sing; preaching at 8. We also had some early morning young people's prayer meetings. Speakers to the priesthood were President F. M. Smith, Apostle F. H. Edwards, and Bishop Mark H. Siegfried, who brought out some very fine thoughts for the consideration and application of their hearers.

The prayer services were in charge of the district presidency. A good spirit was present at all these meetings, some fine testimonies being borne to the truthfulness of the work. Three early morning young people's prayer services were held, one being conducted on the banks of the river, one in David's Chamber, the other in the tent. All these were well attended, and most of the young people took part in their meetings. Elder Lee Lewis, leader of the young people at Nauvoo, had charge of these young people's services.

The class work was of a high order. Brother Edwards put his work over in a masterful way. He is a wonderful teacher. Sister Florence Sanford had charge of the class of those up to twelve years. She kept the attention of the children, and all the little folk seem to enjoy the morning study hour in her class. Sister Irene Layton had a class, but she thought Brother Edwards was doing such good work that she turned her class over to him, which was very thoughtful of her, as his work was so interesting that those from twelve years up got much out of it.

Speakers at preaching services were President F. M. Smith, from whom we heard twice, his messages being forceful and stressing in a constructive way the work of the church. Of us he asked the question, What part are we playing to make possible this work? One of his sermons was to the young people. All profited by it. Brother F. Henry Edwards in his sermons held out some splendid thoughts, showing that God had placed before us an open door that no man could shut. Brother Edward's vision of the work is to be admired. Brother H. O. Smith in his fatherly way brought to us some very timely messages with good practical advice. Bishop Eastwood stressed the need of keeping the whole law of God, filing inventories and paying the surplus. He made it so plain that all could understand him. Elder J. W. Peterson preached some real missionary sermons. Elder Hubert Case spoke for us once and in a very convincing way presented his message, which surely removed all doubt from his hearers' minds, did there chance to be any. Sister Blanche Mesley occupied one of the evening hours. She is truly a big sister in this church. From the beginning of her talk to the end she held the attention of her audience. Tears were seen in the eyes of many, and a number spoke of the wonderful talk she made. All were made to love her for the straightforward way in which she presents her message and for the kind expressions for those of her sisters and brothers in the faith.

Bishop Mark Siegfried was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour on Sunday, August 28, and in a very businesslike way presented to us the things we must do if we shall go forward. Not only does he see the need of twentieth century business methods in conducting the businesses of the world if they are to be successful, but we must use twentieth century business methods in our church to correspond with its twentieth century program.

All were very happy to have Brother McDowell drive in Sunday afternoon, August 28. He kindly consented, although very tired, to preach for us the closing sermon of the reunion, at which time he brought a message full of things worth thinking about, not only thinking about, but which, if put into operation, will spell success. This was a good climax to our reunion, a message long to be remembered.

The music was in charge of Sister S. Lee, of Nauvoo, with Sister Irene Layton at the piano. These two sisters did all they could along this line.

Other activities which we wish to mention are the reception for young people which was given on the lawn of Brother and Sister Lee Lewis's home on Monday afternoon, August 22. Seventy-five were present, and a number of games were played under the supervision of Brother Bert Kunz, of Burlington, Iowa. A good time was had, and refreshments were served.

Thursday we had old folks' day. Sister D. Sorden had charge at this time and arranged games for the afternoon. She did all she could to entertain them with the help of others. At the conclusion ice cream was eaten.

We were pleased to have Brother Hands, of Kansas City, with us a few days. He gave two good talks to the young people. These were timely and enjoyed.

Brother A. Ourth, of Nauvoo, was in charge of the recreation. He did his best to make all happy. Some of the things he arranged were a hike, marshmallow roast, a musical program on Saturday night, August 27, which was enjoyed and attended by many.

The food served in our commissary was the best. There were no meat, coffee, and tea served. Much credit is due Brother E. Sherman, Sister Smith, and Sister Langford for the good meals served.

Another important thing in the history of this reunion was that ten were baptized into the kingdom. I also wish to make reference to the sermon preached by Elder C. A. Edstrom, of Chicago, which was a clean-cut type of discourse. Elder D. Sorden preached an excellent sermon.

The Saints who live in Nauvoo did all they could to make things pleasant for reunion visitors. The work of Elder W. H. Gunn was very fine. As a member of the district presidency, he did all he could to make the reunion a success. We are not forgetful of the beautiful solos rendered by the following: Sister I. A. Smith, of Independence; Sister J. Santee, of Ottumwa, Iowa; Brother Barker, of Burlington, Iowa.

We are looking forward to a still bigger and better reunion in 1928.

We wish to express our appreciation to those who attended this reunion and helped make possible the good time we enjoyed. We trust we shall have you with us next year.

Brush Creek Branch

The Southeastern Illinois district reunion convened with our branch August 19-28, and proved to be a grand success. It was blessed with a greater portion of the Holy Spirit than any other ever held in this district. The Spirit of peace and unity prevailed throughout the entire camp.

Several able speakers were present. They left much good food for thought with us.

Brother and Sister J. R. Lentell had charge of the junior services each day from 8.30 to 12, in the church. Their outline of work was as follows: prayer meeting, 8.30, in charge of Brother and Sister Lentell and Sister Fulk, generally. This was followed by fifteen minutes of recreation; worship, 9.45; then the industrial period. These services were hugely enjoyed by the children. We certainly appreciate the help of Brother and Sister Lentell, as well as that of others who gave their time to assist, for we feel this to be a wonderful thing for the children.

The crowd was entertained two evenings with lantern slides. One evening they concerned the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. On the next they were about Graceland College. The evening the slides were about Graceland, we had as our pianist one of Graceland's students who was shown in the picture.

The Marion players gave a splendid play, entitled "The old-fashioned mother," on Saturday night, the 27th. The crowd present was estimated at about five thousand.

There were about forty tents on the ground. At least seven States were represented here sometime during the ten days.

Two prophecies were delivered during the reunion, one by our district president and missionary, Elder R. L. Fulk, the other by the district missionary, Elder J. R. Lentell.

Nine were baptized in Old Brush Creek.

We have a splendid permanent reunion ground at this place. Plan to attend next year.

Elder F. L. Sawley, who has lived in the "dining hall" for several months, left Tuesday, September 6, for Springerton, Illinois, to live with his family. We regretted to see him go, for he was a great help to us. He preached his farewell sermon to a goodly number Sunday night.

On Monday night his friends and neighbors, about sixty in number, gave him a surprise farewell party out in the grove. Special music was furnished by two young men. Games were played, songs were sung by all, but especially one must mention the singers who surrounded him and sang, "We're sorry you're going away."

Sunday we held our regular sacramental service, with a goodly portion of the Holy Spirit present. All the members seemed eager to renew their covenant with God.

In the afternoon several from Brush Creek attended a baptizing at Poplar Creek Branch, Brother R. H. Henson doing the baptizing. Elder Fulk was in charge.

The children of this branch have nearly all paid tithing. Our youngest tithing payer is James Robert Clow, age four years. We think this fine, to have the kiddies thus interested. We hope and pray that this grand work may continue.

Gallands Grove

Gallands Grove district reunion closed Sunday evening, September 4, and was declared to have been a success by all those who attended. It opened Friday evening, August 26, with a sermon by Missionary M. K. Fry.

Saturday morning the first prayer service was held with a fine spirit present. Brothers John F. Sheehy and J. A. Gunsolley arrived, and the work was started in earnest. These brethren remained until Wednesday, and Bishop F. B. Blair arrived the first of the week.

Order of services throughout the reunion was: Young people's prayer meeting, 8 a. m.; general prayer service, 9; with study periods and sermons occupying the time until noon. The afternoons were largely spent in recreation and play, this part of the program being in charge of Brother Eugene Closson, of Lamoni.

The Department of Women held meetings on several afternoons, the time being spent in study of various subjects.

The writer was unable to be present during the week, but was permitted to hear Brother Sheehy and Brother Gunsolley preach excellent sermons on the first Saturday and Sunday. The prayer service on the first Sunday was well attended and proved to be a profitable meeting. However, we believe many more could have taken part and more of the Spirit been enjoyed had the Saints not waited so long between testimonies. To have a real successful service, we must keep the time well occupied.

The message of Brother Sheehy at the eleven o'clock service was indeed an inspiration for good to all present. The sermon of Brother Gunsolley in the afternoon was also worth going many miles to hear, and all Saints should have heard it.

We had to leave on Sunday evening, but have been told the sermons and all services of the week were of the highest order.

Sunday, the 28th, Doctor Will, chiropractor, of Cherokee, gave a most excellent lecture on health. His chief thought was that our mental condition controls our health to a great extent. If we would quit worrying about our condition, live clean lives, be careful of our diet, eat very little meat and plenty of vegetables and fruit, we would be much better off, and by using the wisdom of God in our lives, our faith would be greater in all things. In this way we shall be in better condition to help our brothers and sisters in improving their living conditions. The Saints enjoyed his talk greatly and gave him many compliments. He will no doubt be given other opportunities to lecture for us.

The children were divided into groups and given study and play periods each day. Sister E. L. Bedwell, of Lamoni, and Sister Ethel Fish, of Mallard, were in charge of this work and are to be commended on the manner in which their work was performed.

We wish to say the reunion was a success in every department.

Missionary Charles J. Smith arrived on Monday and preached twice during the week. He was called away on Friday. The teaching during classes of Brother Sheehy and Brother Blair can not be praised too highly, for both brethren are filled with the spirit, and years of experience have prepared them for the good work they are doing.

Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley is also a good worker and made many friends during his stay with us.

District President E. L. Bedwell was very busy during the reunion, as all of the details and directing of affairs were carried out by him in a most pleasing and effective manner. He with his wife camped on the grounds to be handy if he was needed. Brother Bedwell is modest; he would not preach, but did those things which must be done and which many do not like to do. He is truly the right man in the right place.

Brother Closson did a fine work with the young people, his kind, pleasing manner making him a favorite at once.

On the last Saturday the services were devoted to the young people with special features of various kinds. A stunt program in the afternoon had universal appeal, and Brother Closson will be remembered for some of his clever stories and stunts. In the evening the college slides and views were thrown on the curtain by Brother Fry. Brother Closson delivered the lecture on Graceland and its environments.

The last Sunday found a large crowd present at the nine o'clock sacramental service conducted by Brother Blair. The Spirit was present to a great extent, and many who are not often so privileged partook of the emblems. The oblation offering amounted to more than thirty-two dollars.

Bishop Blair preached both morning and afternoon, and his message was one of simplicity and clarity. So easy was it to comprehend that we do not see how Saints can say they do not understand the law of tithes and offerings.

Brother M. K. Fry, our young missionary, who opened the reunion with the first sermon, preached the last discourse on Sunday evening. And the reunion was over.

About twenty-three tents were on the ground most of the time. The week-day attendance was small, but this was due to the late date which conflicted with the opening of school in many places and the overlapping of the first three days with the Little Sioux reunion. It was not due to a lack of interest in reunion work.

At the business session it was voted to hold a reunion in 1928, everyone to work to make it the best ever.

Brother Cleave Lane, who lives in Sac City, is entitled to our thanks for his valuable work in obtaining grounds and equipment, also for assisting Brother Bedwell in putting up tents and keeping things in order.

Duet numbers rendered by Brothers Sheehy and Fry were very fine and much appreciated by the Saints. After Brother Sheehy left, Brother Fry sang several solos for the entertainment of the Saints.

We were somewhat disappointed when we learned that the men who had been assigned to us could not come, but this disappointment changed to pleasure as we met and heard the new men who are indeed men of God and worthy servants of him. Brothers Bedwell and Fry were on the job every minute of the time, and the success of the reunion is largely due to them and their untiring efforts. Brother Charles Smith could not be with us so much, but he did his bit when he was present. The local men of the district assisted in every way they could when they were on the grounds.

Come to Sac City in 1928.

W. W. REEDER, District Secretary.

Eastern Colorado

August 12 to 21, 1927

Again has come to a close the annual reunion of the Eastern Colorado District. Located at Colorado Springs, under the towering peaks of the surrounding mountains, including Pike's Peak, no more fitting place could be selected for reunion of folks who wish to become more godlike. Certainly, with the handiwork of God and nature roundabout, it is sure that the inner, spiritual man should be stirred to higher desire and attainment; and with the inspiring sermons and prayer services which were enjoyed, together with the able and businesslike management of the reunion, conditions were conducive to spiritual uplift and appreciation of God's love.

Meals were served cafeteria style under the supervision of Sister A. E. Bullard.

Brother A. E. Tabor ably served as business manager.

Preaching by District President Bruce E. Brown and A. E. Bullard, together with organization of the camp, were in order the 12th and 13th.

Apostles J. F. Curtis and E. J. Gleazer preached Sunday the 14th, Brother Curtis morning and Brother Gleazer in the afternoon and evening; also a lecture during the Sunday school hour by Brother Gleazer. This was the first of a series of lectures which Brother Gleazer gave at 9.45 each morning, his subject being, "Problems of industrial Zion." These lectures were enjoyed by a large number, and a keen interest was taken in them from the beginning.

Each day's program was as follows: Prayer services 8 to 9; lecture by Brother Gleazer 9.15 to 10; lecture by J. F. Curtis 10 to 10.45; 11 o'clock preaching. 2 to 4 p. m., recreation in charge of A. E. Bullard and Eugene Closson; 7.30, song service in charge of District Chorister Ines Schrank; and preaching at 8 p. m., with thirty minutes social hour at 9.30 spent in telling stories, readings, and singing of old-time songs. Eugene Closson, general superintendent of Recreation and Expression, helped very much in putting life and interest into the recreational part of the reunion.

One very important part of the reunion was the faithful work of Sister Bertha Stephens, Sister Fishburn, and Sister Tilton, assisted by Brother Closson and others, in the children's reunion Bible study class. It was marvelous to see what was learned by these young Latter Day Saints during the short time allotted to them. Saturday night these young folks gave a very interesting program as a climax to their week of study. Those who are responsible for this work among the little folks deserve a great deal of credit for their untiring efforts. From among these young folks will arise the Zion of the future.

Attendance at the reunion was very good this year, there being sixty tents and cabins used. Five hundred was about the peak of attendance. Among those present from a distance was Brother James Houghton, of Boston, Massachusetts, and many from surrounding States were here.

Each alternate morning at six o'clock, the young people's prayer service was held in Straton Park in charge of the district president, Bruce E. Brown, who was assisted by Brothers Eugene Closson and A. E. Bullard. These services were held under the canopy of the heavens in the early morning. They were wonderful. The zeal with which each one testified of God's goodness and of his desire to serve him was inspiring. Surely from among the young of this church shall Zion arise.

Each Sunday during Sunday school session, the Denver

Sunday school orchestra was on hand and very much appreciated.

On Saturday evening, August 19, Elder R. D. Weaver, district missionary, preached a very good sermon on "Repentance."

On the last Sunday Ward A. Hougas, bishop's agent, gave a lecture on "Financial duties and responsibilities," and also a lecture on "Sunday school problems" during the Sunday hour.

During the sacramental service at eleven o'clock, the following brethren were ordained: Brother Dale B. Fritz to the office of deacon; Leslie Travis, priest; Clifford C. Cable, priest.

Elder J. D. Curtis preached a powerful sermon at 2.30 p. m., bringing to his audience the question, "What are acres of land compared to souls of men?"

Apostle J. F. Curtis preached the closing sermon of the reunion at eight o'clock Sunday evening.

From all standpoints the reunion was a splendid success. The unity of purpose, the determination to serve, and the genuine fellowship of all in attendance were very marked. Under the splendid leadership of District President Brown, together with the consecrated efforts of the people who desire to do God's will, this district should move forward in the program of the church. We believe that a clearer comprehension of this task before us has been gleaned from this reunion.

RALPH E. VINCENT, District Secretary.

Deer Park, Pennsylvania

Deer Park reunion is over. It was the best we have had since the first one. In making that statement, I am voicing the opinion of a number of people whom I purposely asked because of their ability to give such an estimate.

The success of the reunion was due to nothing more nor less than full cooperation of everyone in attendance and to the untiring efforts of Brother George Robley, who was taking the place of Brother A. E. Stoff as head of the reunion committee. The field workers sent by the general church fitted in to the program outlined to perfection and supplied the Saints with food for thought that will take a long time to mentally digest. The members of the reunion committee were on the grounds and functioned better this year than I have ever known them to do; that is, each one had a special function to perform, and each did his part well and to the happiness and satisfaction of all in attendance.

The spiritual success of the reunion was due to Brother Robley and the field workers who came in, as well as to the local preachers who were on the grounds. The field workers were: Apostle D. T. Williams, Presiding Bishop Albert Carmichael, Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith, Sister Ward L. Christy, Brother and Sister E. B. Hull.

Prayer meetings were well attended, as were preaching services and institute classes. The young people's prayer meeting was better attended and accomplished more than ever before.

In speaking of the spiritual success of the reunion, we must mention the classes of Brothers Carmichael and Williams held in the mornings. In these the program of the church was outlined both from a financial and spiritual viewpoint. Sister Christy worked with the women on the grounds and held classes each afternoon and outlined the program of the Women's Department.

The financial success of the reunion was due to the untiring efforts of Brothers Ostertag and Bacon, who while they labored in different fields accomplished much.

Brother Louis Ostertag saw to the comfortable arrangement of tents, cots, and other conveniences of the camp and collected all the money. Besides this he helped in the recreation and will long be remembered by all as a comedian as well as a leader.

Brother Russell Bacon supplied us with "bacon and eggs" and every other food necessity; and from the standpoint of all his department, the commissary, was not only best attended, but as well handled as any department. Deer Park is lucky to have such a fellow as Russell.

The recreational success of the reunion was due to W. B. Hartley and the cooperation of everyone. It was the second best in attendance and interest. Camp fires were held each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and they were successful from every viewpoint. The programs at camp fire were conducted by different groups, as follows: First camp fire, women's program; second camp fire; third camp fire, an impromptu night; fourth camp fire, missionary and priesthood night—preaching outside and experience meeting. Fifth camp fire, gray heads' night; sixth camp fire, young people's night.

Other programs carried through successfully were: Treasure hunt, which took us all over the park, and then we found the treasure (a box of taffies). The young people under sixteen put on a program inside on one rainy night. Each afternoon consisted of games of volley ball, indoor baseball played outdoors, tennis, and swimming in the Delaware River when the weather permitted.

Brother Hartley gave a stereopticon lecture on Graceland College.

Last but not least was the pageant written by Brother Elbert A. Smith, entitled "Remember Cumorah" given Saturday evening, August 27. The pageant was directed by Brother Hartley, who was very ably assisted by Sister Charles Irwin, who looked after the expression; Sisters Rittenhouse and Humphreys who were in charge of the costumes; Sisters Hoxie and Herman, who looked after the grouping; and Brother Glen Parrish, who superintended the scenery and lighting effects. It might be stated that had it not been for rain we would have given the pageant outside. Brother Beckman was in charge of the music of the pageant. About sixty people took part. It was well advertised in the towns of New Hope, Pennsylvania, and Lambertville, New Jersey, and the seating space of the large auditorium was nearly filled. Considering that we have to work with a transient people at reunion at Deer Park, and despite weather handicaps, it was a wonderful success. Parts were distributed on Monday of the last week and partial practices were held each day until Friday when a full practice was held. It was an exhibition of what a group of people can do when they are united, when they have a purpose, and when they are willing to cooperate.

Daily vacation school was held each day in charge of Sister Myrtle Weber, for children under eight. And junior church was held each morning for children above that age by Sister Christy, assisted by Sisters Irwin and Anderson.

Nature study hikes and classes that were conducted on those hikes were held during the first week in charge of Brother Hartley. The fact that Deer Park has about thirty different kinds of trees, and every different kind of insect and wild life was disclosed.

Brother Roy Squires and the Brooklyn Church Orchestra came down on the first Saturday evening and rendered a concert as well as the music for church services of the first Sunday. These boys are exceptionally well-trained musicians, and their music was well appreciated by all. Two soloists came with them, Sisters Adeline Harris and Dorothy Potts, and sang to the enjoyment of all who heard them.

Sister Catherine Shaffer was given the task of getting the names of all who came on the reunion ground. She was able to get the names of four hundred and twenty-one people before the camp closed. On the evening camp closed, three carloads of Fishers from Boston—I should say that three cars with the families of the Fisher Brothers of Boston—came into camp. We had a special extra camp fire to entertain the folks. Brother Weegar and family from Buffalo supplied the entertainment that evening.

Our only regret was that it rained the evening we were to have a special camp fire for ex-service men. The program was all arranged and was to be on the funny side of the war. Brothers L. J. Ostertag, J. M. Cummings, and W. B.

Hartley told of a spiritual side of the war for them at the missionary camp fire.

Deer Park reunion this year was without doubt the biggest and best reunion ever held there.

Spiritually, mentally, physically, and socially speaking, everyone who attended was built up as much as he was willing to be, and, like Jesus, we all "increased in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man."

Deer Park Reunion Camp

Deer Park Reunion Camp was started six years ago and was for the purpose of allowing all who cared, from the membership of the branches of our church in the New York and Philadelphia District to come and enjoy living together.

Our church, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, like all other churches, has salvation as its aim. We, however, believe that God is not only interested in the salvation of the next world, but that he wants us to work out our salvation here and now. In other words, our church believes in a social and economic freedom and salvation which will relieve the sufferings of today.

We are different from the other churches in that we believe that God has spoken to us and has given the plan to gather together his people and methods of harmonious living together. It may be stated, however, that in these revelations there is nothing differing from the New Testament and the teachings of Jesus. In fact, we make the claim to adhere to the New Testament scriptures more than any other church.

Deer Park this year is as beautiful as ever. It has seventy-five acres of woodland, with a clearing for games to be played. It has an equipment that could very well take care of several thousands of people, and it has been estimated that this equipment has cost thirty thousand dollars.

The park this year, too, has as elaborate an array of speakers as we have ever had. Apostle D. T. Williams is a young man who has had a novel set of experiences and who is a wizard in talking to young people. Bishop Carmichael, who is head bishop of the church and who with his assistants controls the whole financial program of the gathering, will have many items of interest to both young and old and to any nonmembers who may attend. Sister Ward L. Christy, of Chicago, will take care of the Women's Department work. Patriarch F. A. Smith, who presides over the Order of Patriarchs, will be here, and he has long been noted as a preacher of the old Jerusalem gospel.

The reunion committee are on the job and have provided comfort and entertainment for you both in and out of church hours. All of the committee are here on the grounds or will be during the reunion some time, excepting Brother Stoft, who was detained in the West because of recent illness. Brother John Zimmermann, Brother Robley, Brother Charles Irwin, Brother Louis J. Ostertag, and Brother W. B. Hartley are all ready to serve you.

Recreation in the line of camp fires, hikes, games, treasure hunts, and swimming are all to be enjoyed. These things are held mainly for the enjoyment of those who are in camp, but we offer a cordial invitation to anyone who cares to join to come out to Deer Park and participate with us both in the spiritual and recreational sense.

Meetings begin at 8.30 a. m., with young folks' prayer meeting. Regular prayer meeting at 9.45 a. m. Discussions and round tables at 11 a. m. Recreation all afternoon. Preaching at 8 p. m. Recreation at 9.30 p. m., and lights out at 11.

Sunday the schedule is varied to allow for Sunday school at 8.30 a. m. and an extra preaching service at 11 and one at 3. Everyone is invited to Deer Park for a spiritual and recreational feast.—The Lambertville Beacon.

Notes on Deer Park Latter Day Saints' Camp

Preaching services at the camp of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at Deer Park, are being well attended. Apostle D. T. Williams has touched everyone by his varied experiences and wonderful sermons. Bishop Carmichael has held regular classes, teaching the principles of the financial program of the church. He related how many thousands of people have made out their inventories and filed them with his office.

Sister Ward L. Christy has conducted classes for the women and has filled everyone with inspiration. Patriarch F. A. Smith, a cousin to President F. M. Smith, is in camp. He is an interesting man who has preached for thirty-five years.

The local and district priesthood are in cooperation with the general officers of the church and have helped wonderfully.

George Robley, as district missionary and acting as chairman of the reunion committee in place of Brother Stoff, Philadelphia pastor, who is ill, deserves high commendation.

E. B. Hull, Brooklyn pastor, has been with us all the week and is a fine worker.

Other pastors active in camp are Brother Treat, of Archbold, Pennsylvania; Brother Hawkins, of Scranton; and Brother Parsons, of Elk Mills, Indiana.

The reunion committee, John Zimmermann, W. B. Hartley, Louis J. Ostertag, and Charles Irwin, are all on the job every minute of the time.

Recreation has been ideal this year because of the spirit of cooperation. Volley ball has been a favorite, as has tennis and indoor baseball. A hike to Aquetong took along about a hundred people, and the countryside rang with happy voices and joyful songs.

The treasure hunt led a hundred young folks to search all over the seventy-five acres of the park, and we all sucked taffy at the close.

The next week-end will be the largest from every point of view. Saturday will be a special anniversary day. Saturday evening a pageant commemorating the centennial of the starting of our church, the angel's visit to Joseph Smith, the message to organize the church, the plates for the Book of Mormon, the preaching of the gospel to all nations, and the blessings of the church will be presented.

This pageant will number about one hundred people, directed by William B. Hartley, principal of schools, Upper Providence School District, Pennsylvania. Each department is in charge of an expert. . . .

People of New Hope, Lambertville, and all outlying districts are cordially invited to attend the meetings, the pageant, and the Sunday preaching.—The Lambertville Beacon.

Southeastern Illinois

The pitiful poverty of words fails us when we try to think of describing the spiritual, educational, and social uplift of the Southeastern Illinois district reunion through which we have just passed.

District President R. L. Fulk proved the type of metal of which he is composed by coming nearly three weeks before time, and part of the fruits of his labor and ingenious diligence were grounds nicely fenced, trees in our beautiful little park whitewashed, a fifteen-hundred-watt light plant with grounds all wired, and enough good seats to accommodate about six hundred people.

Then the reunion began with a crash; yes, crash, for it was about as good the first day as it was the last.

Our routine each day began at 6 a. m., young people's prayer meeting; 8.30, regular prayer service; 9.45, stewardship lectures by Elder J. A. Thomas, of Lamoni, Iowa; 11, religious education lectures, by Elder C. B. Hartshorn, Des Moines, Iowa. The work of these men was good, being the result of conscientious effort. During this time Brother and Sister Lentell and Sister Fulk had the children from kindergarten age to about sixteen years, at the church, and the writer attended a few of these meetings. Truly, it was the most wonderful thing in that line I ever witnessed. Saints of the district who failed to have their children here certainly missed something. Surely, surely the Lord is going to raise up a people to redeem Zion. The slogan of these meetings was, "The Lord can depend on me."

In the afternoon at 2.30 there was institute work; 3.30, recreation, which consisted of volley ball, baseball, songs, etc.; 8 p. m., preaching.

Special features were: Thursday evening, Book of Mormon slides with lecture by J. A. Thomas; Friday evening, Grace-land slides, lecture by Brother Lentell; Saturday evening, drama, "The old-fashioned mother," by Saints of Marion, Illinois; and judging by crowds that attended they were met with approval, as the estimate was from 2,500 to 4,000 in attendance.

Some of the very good things we shall mention, but can not ask for space to describe everything. Things which are outstanding in our memory are Elder O. C. Henson's sermon on the first Sunday; words of inspiration given through Brother Fulk; and sermon by Brother Thomas following with same thought as theme; Elder Hartshorn's lecture on "People stop too close to where they get in"; Brother Hunt's Saturday afternoon sermon on "Book of Mormon and signs of times"; the Camp Cricket, a camp paper compiled by a few of our active young; the Missionary Ford; the musical department's human pipe organ. One had to be present to really enjoy all of this. It can not be described.

The last Sunday was a day long to be remembered, and we must tell about it. During the regular prayer service, all the priesthood had been requested to sit on the large platform; and while a spiritual feast was in progress at this service, suddenly in the distance there burst the refrain, "Send us showers of blessings," and it was discovered that the young people between seventy-five and a hundred in number were coming from the church about two hundred yards distant to the camp prayer service. Brother Fulk being in charge hurriedly made room for them; then the audience sat in silence and waited for them. After they were seated, Brother Lentell arose and through the Spirit spoke at length to the young, the Saints, the priesthood. Surely it was good to be there. And we wonder if perchance there were some there that had been entangled and dissatisfied if they could not feel that God was with us. There is no question that there is a new day dawning for the church, and we must step up or remain behind.

Sunday afternoon at 3.30 a momentous event took place with a short service in memory of the organization of Brush Creek Branch. A rock was placed on the site of the old log schoolhouse where the Brush Creek Branch was organized in 1842. This branch has continued without interruption, and the members were never rebaptized after the reorganization. A picture of this event was taken and may be had of Mark Holman, Xenia, Illinois, for one dollar.

Thus passes without doubt the best reunion the South-eastern Illinois District ever had. Saints in adjoining districts, watch for our date next year, and come. We are going to have another and a better meeting next year.

MABRE K. PHILLIP.

Kewanee District Reunion

Since reunion is a foretaste of Zion, we feel even more impatient for that happy time when reunions shall not end, for in our meeting together at Galva, Illinois, from August 12 to 21, we experienced a great many of the joys for which our souls hunger all year long. With an aggregate attendance of 330, about 80 of whom camped with us in the beautiful Spring Lake Park, we enjoyed that spirit of fellowship and strength that emanates from communion with the people of God. For ten days we worshiped and played together, studied and worked in the same atmosphere of congenial companionship, and drank from that same spiritual rock. Truly reunion gives a picture of Zion that burns itself into our desires and ambitions with such vividness that we can never displace that wonderful goal with any earthly ambitions.

Our speakers were from various States, each presenting a phase of the gospel in an individual and characteristic manner. Brother Ray Whiting, president of the Minnesota District, delivered a series of lectures on, "Is religion scientific?" With a wide knowledge of the facts and theories of science, together with a deep and fervent faith, Brother Whiting presented our religious convictions in a new and stimulating light. We may well rejoice in the fact that with every proved fact of science, with every towering milepost which they have set up, our religion agrees perfectly, for truth will ever coincide with truth. On the other hand, blessed with inspiration and divine guidance, our church has fallen short of what it should have accomplished, and it is up to us to raise the torch of truth, the banner of intellectual accomplishment, and a material demonstration of our wonderful faith if it is to be recognized as the greatest in the world. Only by our works can we prove that this church is the one recognized of God as for the salvation of the world. Beside these lectures Brother Whiting's work with the young people was especially appreciated in the early morning prayer services, where he was assisted by Brother Harry Jones. The attendance increased from 15 to 30 at these meetings. We also enjoyed having Sister Whiting and baby with us during the entire reunion.

Evangelist W. A. McDowell, of Plano, occupied the pulpit several times. His sermons with the old-time gospel ring, and his fatherly counsel were very much appreciated and helpful. His contributions were a real asset to our reunion program.

Several sermons and stewardship lectures were presented by Brother A. B. Phillips, of Lamoni, Iowa, which were highly intellectual and intensely vital to the interests of everyone.

We were sorry to see such a well-qualified and devoted man in such poor health, and trust that it may soon improve.

Brother Leonard Houghton, district missionary, was detained at Matherville during the early part of the reunion. After his arrival on the grounds, he took charge of all the 8.30 prayer meetings and preached the closing sermon of the reunion, the discourse being on the signs of the times. Brother Houghton was very agreeably surprised when he arrived to find that Sister Houghton, of Madison, Wisconsin, was on the grounds to greet him. He was not expecting her, but we were all glad to make her acquaintance, though sorry to note that she had met with an accident which resulted in a broken wrist.

We were very glad to have Brother Jasper O. Dutton and family with us. Brother Dutton's mission is in Indiana, but his family reside at Galva. He preached a very inspiring sermon for us on the last Sunday afternoon.

The dining tent was in charge of Sister Williams, of Buffalo Prairie, who is a consecrated Latter Day Saint and an untiring laborer in supplying the necessary food for the campers. We surely appreciate her efforts and also the volunteers who assisted her at the dining tent.

Of the district presidency, only President E. R. Davis was able to attend throughout, and to him we owe a debt of gratitude. Although still under the cloud of sorrow for the loss of his youngest son, Gomer, who was recently killed in an auto accident, yet his every thought was for the welfare and comfort of others, besides bearing the burden of responsibility for the entire reunion. If success is measured in the love we bear to others, and forgetfulness of self for the accomplishment of much that shall be our food and drink in spiritual things, then he has achieved success. To Sister Davis, too, we extend our utmost sympathy, and appreciate her efforts in spending the reunion with us.

Our faithful bishop's agent, Brother Edw. Jones, was under the necessity of working at his trade in Kewanee during most of the reunion, but we were glad to have him with us the preceding and following days, as well as evenings and Sundays. Brother Harry Jones was in charge of the erecting of tents. The deacon's work was in charge of Brother John Williams, of Joy.

We were very pleasantly entertained for a half hour one evening by a male quartet from Kewanee, Brother Winquist humbly accepting his share of the blame for that. However, it is said that the camp slept admirably that night, being entirely free from all rodents, etc. Also on Saturday evening we enjoyed a delightful and unusual program, including several classical and sacred numbers, and ending with a display which proved beyond all doubt that the "fountain of youth" has actually been found. Nearly a score of the members of the Women's Department with the decorum of the kindergarten, recited such memorable rhymes as "Little Boy Blue," and "Tom, Tom, the piper's son," with all the gestures expressive of a professional elocutionist. Sister Winquist sang, "Rock-a-bye, baby," to a three-inch dolly tied to an oak twig. We certainly enjoy such youthful numbers from such youthful people.

Toward the end of the week there was a display of articles made by children of the reunion while in the children's tent. Sister Effie Field, of Janesville, Wisconsin, superintended these activities with unusual ability, with the splendid assistance of Sister A. B. Phillips. The result of their labors with the junior church is commendable indeed, and we feel indebted to them for the spirit of consecration they have communicated to the Women's Department in inspiring them to take up their task with the spirit of crusaders. Sister Grace Sultz, our district superintendent of women, was present all the time, and very ably presided over most of these meetings, giving herself unstintingly to the work she loves.

Four children were baptized the last Sunday afternoon during the reunion, at Calhoun Lake, near Galva, Brothers Dutton, Whiting, and Davis officiating. The candidates were the little daughter of Brother and Sister Hare, of Aledo; the little son of Brother and Sister Fiefield, of Joy; the little daughter of Brother and Sister Niece, of Galva; and the little son of Brother and Sister Kewish, of Galva. We rejoice to see as the fruits of reunion, consecration of children who are yet tender and have in the early years promise of a full and useful life unmarred by early regrets.

The usual business session convened Saturday afternoon to transact the necessary business. A letter from the Harvest Festival Committee at Independence requesting our cooperation in gathering and sending the first-fruits of the harvest to be displayed at Zion and then distributing to the needy, was read and discussed. The chair appointed Brothers John Williams and Harry Jones to investigate and do what they can in this work, reporting back to conference. Truman Ziegenhorn was selected to represent the district there for us, if he finds it possible to do so.

Our regular young people's convention will be held at Rock Island at Thanksgiving time, and the February conference will be at Kewanee. We regret the resignation of Sister Orpha Holmes as district chorister, and wish to express our thanks and appreciation for her work so well done. We shall never forget the "Saul" which she directed and worked so faithfully to perfect a short time ago. Brother Edwin Winquist, a talented and consecrated priest from Kewanee, was chosen to take her place.

Some discussions followed the motion that we have a district reunion next year, for there was a little sentiment in favor of amalgamation with one of the neighboring districts. However, the motion carried, authorizing the district presidency to determine place and date, and report to next conference. It was also urged that each reunion visitor should come amply prepared for his own needs while camping, that there might be no extra burden upon others for bedding, etc., and that the tents be ordered several weeks in advance to insure delivery, and relieve a great deal of anxiety on the part of the committee.

And so, with an intense longing for that perpetual reunion, we broke camp and separated for another year, far and wide, for although Kewanee District is not so large, we had visitors from Madison and Janesville, Wisconsin; Lamoni, Osterdock, and Farmington, Iowa; Independence and Sedalia, Missouri; Indianapolis, Indiana; Minneapolis, Minnesota; and twenty-two points in Illinois. If to each of these the torch of the light of reunion shall carry over into the lives of the branches there, it should not be in vain that reunion workers have striven so nobly. May we all bear our candle brightly in our corner. WINIFRED DOUGLAS.

Far West Stake and Northeastern Kansas District

At Stewartsville, Missouri, August 18 to 28

"I'm pressing on the upward way,
New heights I'm gaining every day,
Still praying as I onward bound,
Lord, plant my feet on higher ground."

The above hymn portrays beautifully the sentiment which characterized the desires of the Saints who met in reunion at Stewartsville August 18 to 28.

Ideal weather favored the gathering of the Saints from the opening day until the close. The officials in charge of the reunion were pleasantly surprised at the large number of tents erected on the ground ready for the opening program. Before the end of the reunion, ninety-one tents were counted, with approximately two hundred people living on the grounds. On Sundays the crowd was swelled considerably, at times reaching the neighborhood of twelve hundred.

The reunion officially opened on Thursday evening, August 18, with a splendid attendance and program of selections by the stake orchestra. This was followed by an initiatory sermon by Elder G. T. Richards, newly assigned missionary to the Far West Stake.

Early each morning young people's social service was held under the direction of Elders H. L. Barto and J. Charles May. These meetings were of an exceptionally high order and had much to do with the success of the reunion. The last young people's prayer service of the reunion will long be remembered by those present, for the heavenly benediction it carried.

The general social service in the main auditorium tent were also spiritually uplifting, and contributed their portion to the happy time enjoyed on the camp ground.

Undoubtedly the most outstanding feature of the reunion, as compared to former years, was the attendance and attention given to class work. Two classes were conducted each morning, with the exception of the two Sundays, one by Bishop J. A. Koehler concerning the problems of industrial Zion, and religious education by Elder John Blackmore. It would not be fair to discriminate between these two classes, as they both directly launch out into different fields of thought; but suffice to say, most excellent attention was given to each teacher. We are assured that there is an awakening desire among the Saints in general to come to a more intelligent comprehension and understanding of their religion and its relation to everyday problems.

The children of the reunion were very efficiently cared for this year under the trained leadership of Sister John Blackmore and capable assistants. The needs of the little ones were taken into consideration and given attention so far as possible, and as a result they were always happy and looked forward to their junior church and other work. Children's Day was indeed a happy day. Instead of the children providing a staged program, as has been the custom heretofore, they gave an exhibition of junior church work. Later they enjoyed games and races under the supervision of leaders connected with the Department of Recreation and Expression.

Priesthood meetings were conducted regularly each morning. Bishop J. A. Koehler and Apostle E. J. Gleazer delivered a number of lectures and discussed thoroughly many problems confronting the local ministry.

Elder E. J. Gleazer, of the Quorum of Twelve, was the chief speaker throughout the reunion. His general theme, "Making safe the modern highway to Jericho," was richly supplemented by practical logic and earnestness. The seeds he sowed fell on fertile ground, we know from association with many who heard his sermons. Bishop J. A. Koehler also gained the respect and cooperation of the Saints by his forceful and masterful discourses on Zion and the problems pertaining thereto. Other speakers during the reunion were Elders C. E. Harpe, G. T. Richards, and Stake President O. Salisbury.

The stake high council and bishopric held a number of sessions, with the following members in attendance at one or more of these meetings: O. Salisbury, H. L. Barto, and Elias O. Hinderks, of the stake presidency; Milo Burnett, John Hovenga, and Moses Hinderks, of the stake bishopric; J. L. Bear, Ben Constance, Archie Constance, Thomas Fiddick, Coventry Archibald, Alex Jensen, Zenos Lewis, Frank Hinderks, Samuel Simmons, and William Hamann of the high council. Brother Hamann was ordained a member of the council during the reunion.

The Department of Recreation and Expression certainly contributed its share to the welfare of the reunion. Supervised volley ball tournaments were conducted frequently and enjoyed greatly. After evening services, campus games and songs were capably sponsored by Elder John Blackmore and associates. Greater interest is evident regarding the work of the Department of Recreation and Expression, which is a good omen for future conventions and social "get-togethers."

Those connected with the commissary department are indeed to be congratulated on the splendid and efficient service rendered the Saints. Excellent meals were served at the very modest charge of twenty cents, made possible only through the consecrated efforts of many volunteer helpers. The stake reunion has good reason to be proud of its commissary department.

Many new faces were seen at the reunion this year, some coming from great distances. Kansas City and Independence were quite well represented, especially of Sundays. A young brother from Norway spent a few days at the reunion prior to proceeding to Independence, thence to Graceland College for training this fall.

Summing things up, the reunion of 1927 was a unanimous success in more ways than one. From the standpoint of unity and spirituality it has had no equal, and from the viewpoint of educational benefits we are led to rejoice to note the eagerness with which the Saints grasp precious truths as they are presented by qualified servants of the church. Indeed we are "pressing on the upward way," and at the present rate of development the redemption of Zion will soon unfold into a reality.

The Maine Reunion

Months ahead we planned on attending the Maine Reunion at Brooksville, which convened August 5 to 15 in charge of the district presidents, Newman Wilson, of Eastern Maine, and Amos Berve, of Western Maine.

At last the day came to go, and after sailing three and one-fourth hours in a noisy motor boat, we gladly stepped ashore at Buck's Harbor, South Brooksville, to be made glad by the hearty welcome of Sister Clemency Black, Brother A. Begg, and Brother Walter Joy, Sister Black and Brother Joy patiently (?) waiting with autos to take us to the camp grounds. We were agreeably surprised to find the small village of tents neatly arranged, ropes taut, and cots installed awaiting occupancy. Brother Dave Joy appeared from "somewhere" and walking down the main street (?) soon showed us our homes for the ten days of the reunion.

While waiting for our baggage we were busy greeting old and new friends, and discovering the many things that had been done for the convenience of the visitors. Much credit is due Brother Berve and Brother Begg for their untiring efforts in getting things "shipshape" as we say in the East. They had also installed a Delco Lighting system, the wires leading to the big tent, commissary and store, also street lights, this being a great improvement over previous years.

Brother Newman Wilson was again in the kitchen, Brother Dickey, of Vinalhaven, and Mrs. Clark, of Eastern Maine, assisting him. After working there for a few days and being confronted by the fact that no one could be found to take his place, Brother Wilson was forced to give up the work he had planned to do among the young people, which was a great disappointment to all. He provided the folks with well-cooked and well-served meals, but oh, how much he was needed about the grounds, while the kitchen could have been presided over by some other good cook having less complement of talents.

We were pleased to have President Frederick M. Smith with us for the first part of the reunion, and he very kindly took care of the program. A very enjoyable sacramental service was held Sunday at 9 a. m., at which time Brother E. L. Traver, of Massachusetts, was ordained to the office of bishop, and near the close of the meeting was witnessed the lovely sight of God's servants holding a baby in their arms and blessing it as Christ taught his disciples to do.

At the close of the afternoon service three children were brought into the fold by baptism, the confirmation taking place at the beginning of the evening service.

Each day, at the time of the meetings in the large tent, meetings for the young people were held in the smaller tent in the upper field in charge of some of the priesthood, while the younger ones had junior church in still another tent, in charge of Sister Elizabeth Barton, assisted by one of the priesthood, and the little ones were ably cared for in the dining hall by Sisters Lillian Eaton and Ruth Barton, where they greatly enjoyed sewing cards, handmade furniture, beads, and other handwork.

Brother Fred M.'s sermons were much enjoyed during the too short time he was with us, and I heard many express the wish that he and Bishop Carmichael might meet with us next year. Brother Carmichael stayed the entire time, and much benefit was derived from his "talks" as he modestly tagged them. His talks in which he expertly taught the law of stewardships, going into details, gave the attentive listener a much clearer understanding of the temporal law, putting business and labor on a spiritual basis; or in other words, "Bringing God into our work."

Apostle D. T. Williams gave the people some serious things to think about in his sermons, also held some very spiritual prayer meetings with the young people; one especially should be mentioned: August 14 they assembled in the tent at 7.45 a. m., for prayer service, and then at the close marching to the large tent, singing, "We are marching upward to Zion," making an impressive sight, arriving at the tent a few minutes after the opening hymn, while the crowd was standing, as it were, to receive them.

Saturday evening after service slides of Graceland College were shown with the stereopticon lantern and an able talk given by Sister Madalyn Clark, of Corea, Maine, and Graceland.

The speakers for the ten days were President Frederick M. Smith, Bishop Albert Carmichael, Bishop E. L. Traver, Apostle D. T. Williams, Elder Amos Berve, and Patriarch U. W. Greene.

The afternoons were given over to recreational activities which were much enjoyed by the young people and kiddies, and no doubt by those having charge. Some of the games were baseball, volley ball, playground ball, corner ball, croquet, drop the handkerchief, farmer in the dell, and also water sports. Then an hour of games and songs was enjoyed after the service each evening.

Much appreciation is due Brother Dave Joy for the able way he extended welcome to the visitors upon their arrival. Everyone was provided with sleeping quarters, and although some left after having places assigned to them, this was not due to any neglect of Brother Joy. He was on the grounds in time to have the tents ready when folks arrived, assisting to erect the large tents, ever ready to assist the new arrivals, as well as a willing helper at all times and staying to help "break camp," but it being stormy Monday morning we were unable to do so.

There were fifteen of us who depended on the calmness of the sea and the small motor boat to return home, so we were forced to stay over another day. From these fifteen is due a bit of gratitude to Sister Joy for those "down-east-doughnuts" she so kindly made for us before leaving for her home in Jonesport. The sun shone rightly soon after dinner, so about 3 p. m. one could see a scene of activity only to be witnessed at the breaking of camp. A small group of "left-over willing workers," under the leadership of Brother Berve, soon had the camp looking rather desolate, and although the "chef" after helping with the tents till 5.30 p. m., supplied us with an appetizing and filling meal, there were hardly enough doughnuts to share the next morning. No one seemed to know just what happened, but no doubt several could have explained.

Much credit is due Brother William Clark, of Castine, whose work Monday was much appreciated. He arrived in time to begin breaking camp with the rest, and after the tents were ready, took them in his motor truck to the wharf in South Brooksville. A stop was made for supper, and then the last load was "put aboard" by lantern light, and at 8.30 Brother Clark left for the trip to the wharf before starting home.

If more of the Saints had the zeal of the ones who are always giving that others might enjoy, there would soon be more real brotherhood in the world, and the time would indeed be short till we would be working together and resting together, and the one topic would be stewardships, for we would be living it, and find joy in service.

The last day of reunion was a day of deep spiritual pleasure to all. The prayer service at 9 a. m. was well attended and much spirituality was expressed. Admonition was given to the Saints through Brother Amos Berve; the priest-

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys with the Editor in Chief

In Maine

As I stood near the Sargentsville church and looked at the most picturesque landscape spread out before me, Lake Winneagwanauk lying peacefully below, the tents of the camp glistening on the far shore, and exclaimed, "What a view!" I didn't know just what to think when Brother Traver said, "It's nothing! wait till you get to the top of the hill." But we got in the car and drove up the road, and near the top got out and walked to the apex. There I found he was right. I would scarcely say that the other view was nothing; but that from the top of Caterpillar Hill was grander, more striking. It was almost awe-inspiring in its beauty. The day, as I have said before, was remarkable for its visibility; and so from that point of vantage the eye could sweep over a long range of view. Before one as he looks to south, west, and southeast, lies a typical Maine coast view. The blue sea is dotted with islands of varying sizes, while arms of the sea reach into the mainland at many points. Behind one, the mainland stretches back in wooded slopes and knolls. The variegated greens of the typical northern fauna, the blues of reach, river, narrows, and open sea, the brighter blue of a clear sky spread with occasional white pile of glorious cumulus, while here and there in the forest and along shore gleamed the white of pleasant farm and town buildings, with boats and vessels of various sizes visible here and there on the waters of sea and cove, altogether made up a picture so glorious, that from my perch on a big rock I just looked and looked, and marveled at the rare beauty, and formed a mental image which will long remain with me. Caterpillar Hill, whatever we may think of the name, will at its summit on a clear day afford a view that is well worth the effort of any person to make the climb.

Returning to the car, we continued our journey, to Sargentsville, across the ferry to Deer Island, to Stonington where some shopping was done, one or two visits made, and we returned to the camp, feeling that we had had an outstanding half day of sight-seeing. At the camp I was the speaker at the evening meeting.

Next day, Sunday, was ushered in by fog, which "lifted" from the camp, and retreated towards the sea; but all day long clouds of it could be seen rolling on the top of Caterpillar Hill, which seemed to stand there as guard to keep back that bank of chill and damp. We learned that all day at the seashore the thick fog prevailed. But at the camp it was pleasant, though the sun failed to "burn away" the fog.

It was a day likely to be long remembered by the Saints. At the early prayer meeting the sacrament of the Lord's supper was observed; and, added to the beauty and spiritual uplift of a quiet but deep-feeling meeting in which the bonds of fraternity are strengthened through common renewal of hood, of which there were twenty present, were strongly admonished.

Immediately after the 2 p. m. service three more children were baptized, the confirmation taking place soon after, in the tent, as many were leaving for their homes.

During the afternoon a feeling of sadness and desolation settled over the remaining campers, as one after another left with good-byes and many fond messages, while hopes and plans were discussed for meeting in 1928.

The 1927 Maine reunion is history. One real, social, spiritual ten days of association that have sent at least a few men, women, boys, and girls home with brighter hopes, new resolutions toward the right, good will toward mankind and renewed faith in God and his latter-day gospel.

WESTERN MAINE PUBLICITY AGENT.

the covenant, was an event not common there, the ordination of a bishop. Through a string of happenings, the ordination of Brother E. L. Traver to the office of bishop had been delayed till then; and as I, assisted by Bishop Carmichael, in the usual ceremony set this brother apart for work in the office to which he had been called, I felt it was an auspicious occasion for the Maine districts. A splendid spirit pervaded the meeting, and I am sure all present felt a distinct spiritual uplift through the ceremony, and the meeting, with their eyes more firmly fixed on Zion. Brother Traver will doubtless be active in the Maine districts as bishop, and I look for a forward movement there as a result of his example and labor.

It was a busy day; Brother Carmichael and I "divided time" so far as the preaching services were concerned, I speaking at the morning and evening services, he in the afternoon.

Monday, the 8th, the forenoon was spent on the camp grounds. Shortly after lunch Brother Traver took Brother and Sister Carmichael, Sister Traver, and me to our stopping place, Sister Gray's, where I "packed up," preparatory to taking my departure. It was on taking formal leave of our genial hostess that she with New England frankness gave utterance to an expression at once amusing and pleasing to me. Said she: "Well, Brother Smith, good-bye! Come again to see us, and when you do you'll be welcome at my home. When you came this time I didn't want you here, for I was afraid of you. But I'm not now." Of course we laughed, especially Brother Carmichael. I guess he saw some Scotch humor in that remark. That remark of Sister Gray's explained the look askance I had detected on coming first to her place. I wonder how she had formed her opinion of me. From some rumors, do you think, which some persons had circulated? I've met a few of them which quite misrepresent me, and it's always pleasing to me to see what happens to those rumors when persons get acquainted with me. Thanks, Sister Gray, for your frankness.

At West Brooksville they left me on the dock, and soon thereafter I was aboard the steamer Southport bound for Rockland. It had been a lowering day, and ere we had reached Rockland the fog had thickened to such an extent that the steamer, with regularly sounding fog whistle, felt her way cautiously into harbor but made a safe landing.

On landing, after securing reservations on the Belfast for Boston, and hunting upstreet for a mail box to mail letters I had worked on en route, and securing some refreshments in the way of food, I amused myself while waiting the arrival of the Belfast by watching wharf activities and listening to the water traffic in the fog-enshrouded harbor. Whistles and bells were sounding to an extent quite confusing to the landlubber, yet the boats were moving here and there. I was standing at the edge of the wharf, and two vessels out in the harbor were whistling a series of signals. We guessed them to be the Belfast and some other boat. Near me was a small group of young women who were evidently local people. I overheard a discussion among them as to the probable identity of the other boat. "It's a tug," says one. Soon it came near enough to show us its lights. It was a tug-boat. And then the same person, catching a dim outline of the approaching tug, said, "It's the Eugene Spofford."

That interested me; for its captain is Brother Knowlton. So I watched it closely, and soon was satisfied that it was the Spofford. I passed around to where she was trying to land and was recognized by the crew even before the boat was made fast.

It was an interesting story Captain Knowlton told me a few minutes later as we chatted on the wharf, of a whole day's work at sea in a heavy fog. "I believe," said he, "that I laid and ran a hundred different courses today." The whole crew being in service because of the necessity for extra watches, Captain Knowlton had been at the wheel in the pilot house all day. He explained to me the "duet" we had heard between his whistle and that of the Belfast. He had been placing at the anchorage a large barge, and the movements were of course near the main channel. The Belfast seeking the wharf was near them. And so it was toot, toot, etc., till the Spofford had left the barge at anchor, cast off, and headed for the wharf.

It was an interesting half hour, talking to Captain Knowlton and a big Indian who was selling sweet grass brooms on the dock.

In the meantime the Belfast had docked and received her cargo and passengers, so I crossed the gangplank and sought my quarters. Then went out on deck to marvel at the sagacity of seamen who can take a big boat through a crowded harbor with a comparatively narrow channel, out past the breakwater into the sea, and head away for Boston. And the fog whistle kept up a steady series of signals till in the "wee sma' hours."

Early on the morning of the 9th, the Belfast entered Boston Harbor, and landed about an hour late. A short run in a taxi, and I was at South Station, and soon on the way to New York, where a change of roads was made and a conference had with Brother Squire, and I was on the way to Washington, where I arrived about 10 p. m.

Nauvoo, "The Beautiful"

It was on the 18th of August, after three busy days spent at home and in Independence, that my daughter, Lois, and I in the Nash left Kansas City for Independence, en route to Nauvoo. A hurried visit to the office, two or three errands, a hasty lunch, and we were off about one o'clock.

Missouri only a very few short years ago had an undesirable reputation for bad roads, though in some sections, e. g., Jackson County, a system of macadam road had been constructed from the "rum tax." But on the whole, the roads were unimproved, and the soil of Missouri in most places when mixed with rain makes bad "footing." And so from one part of the United States to another I've heard disparaging remarks about our notoriously bad roads. But on the road question, Missouri is thoroughly awake and is fast earning the reputation of being in the van on a program of road improvements which is covering the State with a network of first-class paved highways. Our plans were to make Nauvoo in a triangular course by going first to Saint Louis, then up the Illinois side of the Mississippi River. Road 40 was our course to Saint Louis, and we found it an excellent road.

I'm not here attempting to tell of what we saw of Missouri in crossing the State, for I'm leaving that for another time. Suffice it to say that having been reared in Iowa, about three miles from the Missouri-Iowa line I had been influenced by the provincialism always present along borders, and I had believed Missouri to be a rather unimportant part of the Union; but as my work has taken me in and out of the State, across it and about it, I have learned that in resources, beauties, and possibilities, it is far from occupying a place low in the list of great countries. And our trip across the State that day did not lessen my growing admiration for it.

It was late in the evening when we reached East Saint Louis, but we found a characteristic welcome at the Barraclough home where we spent the night. Up early the next morning, Brother Barraclough took us to see Shaw's Gardens and the Park. Then lunch with the Barracloughs, and we were off about one o'clock for Hancock County, and at 9.30 we were in Carthage where we put up for the night at the Carthage House.

Up early, some tire repairs made, gas replenished, and we were off for Hamilton, which was soon reached. There we left the "slab," at a sign marked, "Nauvoo, 12 miles," and found ourselves on what is evidently an old road which follows the bank of the Mississippi River—a picturesque road indeed. It is one of the old roads and has been in use for many years, and was doubtlessly used in hauling the materials for the Temple.

To one who because of deep interest in our church has followed its early history, the word Nauvoo recalls many events which stir the soul. More strikingly are those memories brought up by a visit to the old town, especially if it be one's first visit. It had been my lot to have made before only two visits to Nauvoo, both short ones, one of which is outstanding in memory because made with my father. So when Nauvoo was first sighted in the distance as we wound our way up the river road, some of the emotions stirred up by my first visit to the place were again aroused; and they were augmented by seeing the Nauvoo House standing now so close to the river. But when one is driving a car, especially on a rough road which runs at times almost uncomfortably close to the river bank, not much time can be taken for meditation, so I kept attention on the car and the road.

When last I had visited Nauvoo, the buildings in which I was particularly interested, those now owned by the church, were in a dilapidated condition, the grounds unkempt, and I could not but wonder how I would find them. And so as we drove up to the grounds occupied by the camp, a hasty scanning of grounds, the Homestead, the Nauvoo House, the Mansion House, the old family cemetery, caused pleasure, for buildings and grounds showed the effects of care, and appeared the best I had ever seen them. The tent for the reunion, the "tabernacle," was placed on the grounds of the Homestead, while the living tents were pitched in the small grove across the street to the north. The grounds around the Homestead and the Mansion were mowed, and showed that thoughtful planting had been done, while the family cemetery inside the neat iron fence showed the same care.

By Brother and Sister J. W. Layton and daughter, Irene, we were given a hearty welcome and given quarters in the Mansion House, and Lois and I had the to us strange experience of being for the first time domiciled in a home of our ancestors.

Our baggage placed in our rooms we went out to see how the reunion was organized and progressing. It was under way, the business meeting having been held the day previous. Brothers Bevan and Gunn, of the district presidency, were in charge, and seemed to have things well in hand. In getting things started they had been ably assisted by such a corps of workers as the Lewises, the Lees, the Sanfords, the Sordens, the Laytons, and others. Of the general ministry there were present Brethren Bevan, Sorden, H. O. Smith, and George W. Eastwood, Brother F. H. Edwards was expected at any time, and Brother John W. Peterson had "dropped in" en route to another reunion, while W. O. Hands was present doing some surveying. With such a corps of workers, I felt that the reunion would run a good course without much help from me, so I decided to enjoy part of that reunion as a layman.

In one of my last journeys I spoke of an obstreperous hip which had been making days and nights miserable for me. On reaching home from my Maine and Washington, District of Columbia, trip, I had consulted a doctor who said, "Sciatica," and had treated me accordingly. Relief to a degree had come; but the weeks of steady pain and nights of little rest had drawn my energy down. To use common parlance, my "pep" was at a low ebb. In the car I had brought a suitcase full of papers to work on while in Nauvoo; but one day spent on that pile showed clearly that I'd have to restock my energy; so I changed my work by giving attention to something else that I want to tell you about. Before doing so, let me say that I participated in that reunion as a worker only at the latter part, speaking twice, to the members of the priesthood once (on Saturday morning), and to the Saints on the closing Sunday afternoon. Besides those I have mentioned, the reunion was visited for a greater or lesser period of time by the following: F. M. McDowell, of the Presidency; Brother Budd, of the Twelve; Bishops I. A. Smith, M. C. Fisher, and M. H. Siegfried; Hubert Case, of the Seventy, not to mention a number of others who stopped in passing through to or from other reunions. With Bishop Fisher was the whole Fisher "tribe," of Boston.

So I felt that I wasn't badly needed. Brother Edwards had the class work in hand, and Sister Blanche Mesley had the work of the Women's Department. And everything moved along nicely under the combined management of Brother Edwards and the district presidency.

I want now to tell a story which will require going back into history a distance. The "Homestead," comprising a block of the city of Nauvoo, was secured by Joseph Smith, my grandfather, sometime about 1838 or 1839, probably the latter date. In the division of property which was made, this block came into the possession of my fathers. On this block is the family cemetery, now inclosed by an iron fence, and tradition has it that somewhere on the block were buried the mortal remains of Joseph and Hyrum Smith after they had been so cruelly murdered at Carthage. The final burial (for there were two) was a secret one, and the exact spot of the interment was kept a secret by the family for reason not necessary to discuss here.

An Interesting Story from President Joseph Smith

I have in another place spoken of having visited Nauvoo twice before, once with my father. On that occasion Uncle Alexander H. Smith and Cousin Fred A. were also there, and we four were standing beside the grave of Emma Hale Smith, mother of the two older men and grandmother of us younger ones. And there under those unique conditions father told in his simple, quiet way what to us was a most interesting story. He told of how the bodies of the murdered church men were brought from Carthage, and by the family given quiet burial temporarily, and how another resting place had been quietly and secretly prepared near the home, and how one night the family, aided by trusted helpers who faithfully kept the secret ever after, disinterred the bodies from the temporary resting place and placed them in the grave where they now lie, and all signs of the interment removed. At the time he told us this story, neither father nor Uncle Alex could show us the exact spot; but they described a certain landmark by which we could with certainty find the spot should occasion require, as it probably would at some future time. At only one or two times subsequently did father ever advert to the killing and burial of his father and uncle; but on those occasions, as on that beside the grave of his mother, I marveled at the freedom of bitterness he displayed. He had learned the lesson of forgiveness.

The recital of his story at the grave impressed me deeply, and I had a vivid mental picture of the grief-stricken widow with her family of three boys, the oldest twelve the youngest perhaps six, standing beside that secret grave, and could sense the deep emotions which could not but surge through the bosoms of mother and children as they saw before them the fruits of the passions of the mob. And I wondered then had I gone through such experience if I could have so completely eradicated bitterness from my soul as father evidently had done. Many years have passed since the day we four stood beside the grave, and those two older men have joined the ranks of those who have gone on before, while the responsibilities they carried have fallen on our shoulders. And those years have been replete with experience, and I have learned great trials are not confined to loss of parents, nor is the need of forgiveness confined to occasions of mob violence. I have learned that the "test of the heart is trouble, and that always comes with years."

A few years after that visit to Nauvoo, father deeded to me the Homestead. But in the deed he stipulated that should I ever sell the ground I should first exhume the bodies of those buried on it, and reinter suitably. He further stipulated that in such case I should give to Joseph F. Smith, of Utah (then alive but since deceased), the privilege of taking the remains of Hyrum Smith, his father. Subsequently, however, when I thought the time had come to turn the property over to the church, these stipulations were removed by a new deed which he gave me, which made it possible to transfer to the church without disturbing the cemetery.

I have for some years intended that I should sometime visit Nauvoo and remain long enough to locate the landmark father mentioned. Seeing Brother Hands at work surveying suggested the idea of having him help me. And feeling the necessity of keeping as a secret to a great extent the spot of burial, I told Brother Hand the story, and found him at once interested and anxious to help. So we began the work of finding the landmark. Inquiry revealed many "traditions"; but at last I got the idea that perhaps some old photographs could be found which would help us. And we found such. Taking these in hand, we began a survey which resulted in locating to our satisfaction, the spot. But verification of this remains for a subsequent time.

Independence

Stone Church

Brother Harry Barto opened the session of Sabbath school Sunday morning, reading from James 1 and Matthew 26: 40 and making a very short but timely talk on these texts. The lesson period was all too short, and much interest was manifested by the students in the class work. The special musical number was a vocal solo by Brother Leon Snow who was accompanied by Sister Marcine Smith.

Classes in religious education for teachers and officers of this department all over Independence opened on this morning at nine o'clock and were reported crowded. The classes met in the library building across the street from the Stone Church and continued work until 10.50 a. m.

The young people's early morning prayer meeting, which for past months has been convening at 8.30, has changed its time of meeting to 8.15, in order that those who attend prayer service may get out in time to go to these classes of religious training at nine o'clock. Young people, remember your prayer meeting. Place, Stone Church lower auditorium; time, 8.15 a. m., Sunday. Capable officers are in charge. You are missing something every time you do not attend.

The eleven o'clock service was one of dignity and reverence, being opened by an organ number rendered by Sister Clara Curtis. The Ladies' Quartet, composed of Thelma Vincent, Jeanette Kelley Craig, Hazel Koehler Moler, and Elizabeth Okerlind sang two beautiful songs, "Jesus saves" and "Rock of ages." Elder J. F. Sheehy, who directed the congregational singing, offered the opening prayer, and Elder D. O. Cato announced to radio listeners and those seated in the auditorium, the speaker, Apostle Edmund J. Gleazer.

Reading Acts 26: 1-20, Brother Gleazer took as his text the nineteenth verse: "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." His theme, "Obedience to the heavenly vision," proved to be one of interest and instruction to his hearers. Graphically he sketched some of the experiences of Paul, showing how because of obedience to the vision God gave to him he was enabled to travel extensively, bearing his testimony in deed and word to many peoples concerning the goodness of God and the glory of the gospel. Paul was loyal; he was faithful and true to his task, and spoke and wrote the truths of life which today gladden many nations. Then the speaker made the application of Paul and his heavenly vision to Joseph Smith and his vision. "I know," he declared, "that this church is the result of a heavenly vision." Can we like Paul say that we have been true to the heavenly vision? Obedience to it is the only means by which we may advance. Our lives must be regenerated in accordance with the vision. We are responsible to God for what we do; we must obey the vision and carry on his work to success.

At six in the evening the Stone Church Religio assembled in the main auditorium of the Stone Church. Two special classes were started for the winter. And it was decided to hold election of officers for this department next Sunday evening. Everyone interested in the Department of Recreation and Expression is invited to be present. The program for the first regular fall session was excellent. There was a pleasing vocal duet by Thelma Vincent and Elizabeth Okerlind, accompanied by Mary Okerlind, and also a violin solo by Gomer Cool, Bertha Gunsolley accompanying. Allegra Luff contributed a reading, and the saw solo by Charlie Dell, accompanied by Nida Vincent, was very pleasing.

At the Campus

About thirty-five hundred Saints and interested ones gathered at the Campus Sunday evening for the final outdoor preaching service of the season. On the platform were seated the faithful members of the Walnut Park Band, rendering several well-executed numbers. Elder Sheehy led the congregation in the singing of "America" and "Joy to the world," preceding the opening of the service. "Glorious things are sung of Zion" began the program, and Elder J. W. Peterson gave an earnest prayer. Following the band offertory the K L D S Ladies' Quartet composed of Mary Fields Edmunds, Clara Curtis, Amelia Good, and Gladys Good, contributed to the success of the meeting, singing two much appreciated numbers.

President F. M. Smith, who preached the opening sermon on the Campus this season, also gave the last, and on this evening devoted his attention principally to suggestions for avocations for the older people. "No people can advance who are not actuated by ideals; and no people can have ideals and live up to them without having a program whereby they may be brought into existence," he began. The younger people, he said, have their winter's work before them in school. Many of them have resolved to make this school year the best they have ever had. This is possible only by application. The way they can do this is to master their lessons daily. How are you older people planning to spend your time outside of that you devote to your vocation? Every Latter Day Saint should have the ambition to some day have a surplus to consecrate to the church. Everyone in the church should have an avocation. What is yours? As desirable avocations he suggested: First, being true and real Latter Day Saints. We are proud of the initials L. D. S.; let us make them some thing more; let us be Living Doing Saints. Let us ask ourselves the question, How are people of the world judging my ideals by my conduct? To be Living Doing Saints we must know our religion, and to know our religion we must know its principles and ideals. This knowledge is acquired only by study. To know your religion you must know your ethical ideals, your aesthetic ideals; you must know yourself. Know what you are good for for the church. When you serve the church you serve mankind. Second, for an avocation this winter, read the Book of Mormon. In an interesting manner Brother Smith told of his recent experience of visiting Cumorah and Nauvoo. Then he briefly related some of the hopes which are his for the church, and expressed the desire that during this fall, winter, and next spring every Saint shall endeavor to study those things which shall make his life a testimony that he is a Live Doing Saint.

The evening's collection amounted to more than eighty dollars.

Saturday evening the usual large crowd was at the Campus for the picture. It was Gene Stratton Porter's last book, The Magic Garden. Next Saturday evening The Iron Horse will be shown.

Department of Women Meets

Unusually good attendance marked the first monthly meeting of the Department of Women for this season. An encouraging number gathered at 1.30 for the meeting of the Frances E. Willard Chapter of the W. C. T. U. and elected officers and selected delegates for the approaching county convention of that organization.

In charge of Sister Alice Cowan, superintendent of women in Zion, the meeting of the department opened at 2.30. With Sister John Schwab, of Walnut Park, and Sister Nelson, of Englewood, leader and accompanist, the women sang as the opening song, "Oh, for a faith that will not shrink." Prayer was offered by Sister Thomas Reese, leader in Group 24. During the course of the meeting Sister E. C. Harrington rendered two pleasing solos: "The prayer perfect," and "O love that will not let me go," being assisted at the piano by Sister Nelson.

Sister Fred Koehler, a member of the department who attended the Institute of Religious Education held in Lamoni, in the month of June, gave an informal and informative talk on the institute and what it did. She enthusiastically discussed the subjects offered at the institute, the hours of class work, the interest of the students, the teachers, the splendid lectures, and added a hearty commendation of the town of Lamoni.

President Floyd M. McDowell then spoke briefly concerning the need for qualification if we are to accomplish all God has outlined for us to do. He vividly brought out the need of the world for religious influence, an influence not superficial or external but one that will permeate the hearts and souls of men, and asserted that this influence will be given in a systematic way, beginning in the early years of the individual's life. His discourse was earnest and to the point, and his explanation of courses which the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences is offering such as classes in parentcraft, household problems, child study, recreational leadership, social service, etc., was much appreciated. The sisters were attentive listeners, and when he had finished, in standing vote expressed to him their willingness to support him in this work of training Zion Builders.

The Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences

Besides the number of academic and special courses offered at the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences in former years, arrangements have been made this year to begin the work of a school of religious education and the first year of junior college.

The object of the school of religious education is to train officers and teachers for Sunday school and other departmental work. Its classes began Sunday morning at 9 o'clock, lasting till 10.50, in the Library Building. Eighty-one students were present and divided into five classes. The second class met Sunday evening at 6 o'clock in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church. There will also be a Friday evening class in this school from 7 to 9.30. The total enrollment in this phase of institute work is more than a hundred.

Standard first year junior college courses: English, French, German, history or citizenship, college algebra, psychology, sociology, elementary designs, household problems, public speaking, zoology, or botany, can be had at the Institute. The instructors will be expected to meet the requirements of all college instructors. Students will be admitted only upon completion of accredited high school work. The success of the college depends upon the interest, appreciation, and patronage of the public. If during the year the standard work is done and public interest justifies, officials of the Institute will ask for inspection by the State with a view to the school being accredited for one year of junior college. Junior college work opened Monday evening, the 12th.

While the total enrollment of the school is not so large as formerly, officers and teachers of the Institute feel that those who are taking up work this year will pursue it more purposefully to the end.

Butler Family Reunion

The entire family of Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Butler, 1227 West Hayward, was reunited last week for the first time in seven years. Seven children, all married, were present with the parents to make the reunion circle complete.

The children are: J. H. Butler and A. N. Butler, of Inman, Nebraska; Mrs. Lyda Walsby, Mrs. Lyle Mossman, and Mrs. Sarah Brewer, of Independence; Mrs. Vera Spencely, of Dubuque, Iowa; and Mrs. Alta Chapman, of Pueblo, Colorado. This was the first family reunion with all members present since 1920, when they met at Inman, Nebraska.

Historical Trip

Don't forget the historical trip to be taken next Sunday. If you intend to drive your car and have room for others, call the pastor's office, Independence 440, and tell them about it. Also if you want to go and have no car, call the pastor's office. Then be at the Stone Church early Sunday morning. Plans are to leave en masse at 6.30 o'clock.

Several branches in the vicinity of Far West, Missouri, are planning a get-together Sunday service and dinner. There the travelers from Independence and Kansas City and regions round about will eat basket lunch. Each one should bring his lunch. A good time is planned for all. Come and be one of us.

Second Church

The services at Second Church were of a very high order. The young people at the early morning service enjoyed an active meeting, and next Sunday we will enjoy the meeting, for we are going to see how completely we can occupy every minute of the time with short testimonies.

At the Sunday school session four of our number were presented with their certificates of completion of part of the normal training. Others will finish soon.

Brother Ammon White gave us splendid counsel and caution at the eleven o'clock hour, and in the afternoon the regular prayer meeting was enjoyed, after which the priesthood were edified in their meeting by talks by Pastor A. K. Dillee and Deacon Jay Mader. A day well spent in joyful service.

Walnut Park

Elder W. W. Scott was the Sunday speaker. Being called unexpectedly to take the place of the announced speaker, he chose as a subject, "The building of Zion," and showed that Zion building is an individual work, each of us being accountable for the effort we make personally.

On Monday afternoon at one o'clock word came that Brother Robert Kirkwood had passed away. His home was next door to the church, and for nearly a month he has been confined to his home, following a visit by himself and wife to their son in Iowa. Brother Kirkwood was nearly eighty years old, a teacher in the branch, and a loyal Latter Day Saint. The funeral has not been arranged for.

Sister B. J. Scott is reported much better than during the past week. Sister J. W. Adams is also getting along nicely. Sister Lurett Whiting, after having recovered sufficiently to attend church regularly for some time, suffered an injury recently which has again compelled her to remain in bed.

A splendid opportunity is offered the sisters here to learn home nursing. They will meet each Friday afternoon at 1.30 at the home of Sister John Schwab, near the church, and be taught by the county nurse or one of her qualified assistants. Those who take these free lessons regularly for the twelve-week period and comply with requirements will receive a certificate in practical nursing. They will begin September 16.

Enoch Hill

Group 33 South will hold a social and supper on the church lawn Friday evening, September 16. Supper will be served in the church basement from 5.30 o'clock on. Group 33 North will have a booth where quilts, articles of wearing apparel, and fancywork will be sold. The Enoch Hill Orchestra promises to furnish the music, and a happy time is planned for all ages. You are invited.

Directed by Brother William Worth, jr., the orchestra rendered several numbers at Woods Chapel last Sunday evening, where they were given a hearty welcome and expression of gratitude.

Little Myron Warren, youngest son of Brother and Sister Charles S. Warren, returned home from the Sanitarium last Wednesday, where he was for twelve days. In falling from a tree he ruptured his appendix and received several other injuries which made his condition serious. The children of the Sunday school put their pennies together to buy their playfellow something to cheer him during the long hours of illness. We are glad to have him back at home.

Elder J. A. Dowker was the speaker at Enoch Hill Sunday morning, and was accorded good attention by the congregation.

Liberty Street

The eight o'clock prayer meeting was in charge of Brother Walter Curtis and Brother Ray Wrigley. A good meeting was enjoyed.

At the preaching service the choir sang an anthem, "Jehovah reigns." Brother Philip Turner played a horn solo. At this hour we were privileged to have President Floyd M. McDowell as our speaker, who brought to the minds of the congregation the thought that we must qualify to teach our children. As the mission of the church, he named the development of the divine power of man. We shall never have Zion until we have pure people to build it. Brother McDowell expressed many fine thoughts which if held in the hearts of his hearers will take root and call forth the best in them for the service of the Master.

Kansas City Stake*Central Church*

Cupid has been quite busy of late in the ranks of our young people at Central. Saturday evening, September 3, at the home of the bride, where there were assembled a number of their friends, the words were pronounced by Elder Cyril E. Wight that united Kenneth Sandy and Thelma Lucile Owens as husband and wife. Preceding the ceremony, Mildred Clark sang, "I love you truly." It was a very impressive little home wedding, and after the well wishes of those present the young couple retired to their own home at Thirtieth and Flora. While Thelma is not a member of the church, she has been a member of the Sunday school for the past three or four years, has taken an intense interest in the activities of the church, and has endeared herself by her enthusiasm and loyalty to the cause of Christ.

Recently the Plus Ultra Club met at the home of Sister D. D. Davison and outlined plans for the remainder of this year for the raising of funds, etc. These women are to be commended for their good work. They have been untiring in their efforts to be of service and have turned over attractive sums of money to the bishop for the aid of the church finances. After transaction of all business, the club was served very appetizing refreshments, which Bertha is so capable of preparing.

One of the functions which resulted from this meeting, was the Plus Ultra dinner, prepared by the club women and served on the lawn last Friday evening. The dinner, which consisted of fried chicken with all the trimmings, was a wonderful success, and brought about a closer relationship of good fellowship among the class members. After the dinner, the remainder of the evening was spent in singing, playing games, and conversing with one another, and at 9.30 all retired to their homes, having spent a most delightful evening.

Despite the fact that Labor Day followed Sunday and there were a number who took advantage of week-end excursions, the attendance at Sunday school was 234, with a collection of $13.93.

At 11 the auditorium was fairly well filled for the serving of the Lord's emblems, and the meeting was full of enthusiasm and was a source of comfort to those present. The Saints were made quite happy on learning that Gertrude Sandy, wife of Seth S. Sandy of the stake presidency, who has been seriously ill for the past nineteen weeks, is showing a marked degree of improvement, and her complete recovery is reasonably certain. During this illness she has never lost faith in God, and we are hoping she will soon be privileged to return to her duties at the church.

Pastor J. A. Tanner and wife having returned from their vacation, he occupied the evening hour with a continuance of his effort to present the gospel in all its fullness to neighboring people. This was followed by the usual educational picture, which was quite entertaining.

Among recent visitors was Sister Jane Lewis, from Lamoni. We were also pleased to meet Sister Marie Holm, who crossed the mighty ocean from her home in Denmark to visit relatives and friends in this country, Sister Dagmar Root being a cousin to her. She states she is very much pleased with America and shall carry back memories with her of the land shadowed by wings which is a land of plenty and of beauty.

The Labor Day picnic, at which all groups of the stake participated, was very well attended. It was held on the church campus, and the day was well occupied by games of all sorts, community singing, and the usual picnic eats. At dusk a very entertaining picture was flashed on the screen, which closed the exercises of the day.

Bennington Heights

There has been good attendance at the children's preaching services. A good interest has been shown, and all have responded well when called upon to assist in the program. Beginning August 21, children's prayer meetings are to be held each Sunday at 8.15 a. m. Last Sunday there were thirteen present. The children are trying to overcome their timidity, and several testified and prayed.

Sister George Garrett and Sister P. I. Kelley are reported sick. Sister William Beaman attended the reunion at Stewartsville, Missouri. August 15 Brother Paul Wright and Sister May Davis were united in marriage by Elder Ross Higdon.

Brother R. L. Bishop, former pastor, was the speaker in the evening of August 21. Brother James E. Cleveland, the pastor, spoke last Sunday morning, and in the evening Elder E. T. Atwell preached. Brother James W. Stobaugh, of Mount Washington, spoke to the children last Sunday.

Sister M. E. Jones, who was injured early in August by a motor car, is still suffering with her head, which is abscessed.

Special Meetings at Warrensburg, Missouri

Brother Harvey V. Minton has completed a series of lectures at Warrensburg on the subject of growth and development, stressing these two points:

1. Missionary work. We are helping materially in this line of church work by paying our tithing. The Saints who are keeping the financial law are helping to spread the gospel to all the world.

One of the biggest missionary efforts is the establishment of the gospel in the homes. Example goes farther than preaching. Where a family of Saints is living the gospel, it is easy to introduce the gospel, but where they are not it is almost impossible to do so.

The straight and narrow way not only leads to redemption hereafter, but also brings joy and peace and consolation in this life. The broad road to destruction brings sorrow, remorse, and suffering in this life as well as in the life to come.

2. Redemption of Zion. If the gospel had been lived, the conditions which sin has brought about would have been eliminated. The Saints must be steadfast and faithful, consecrated, humble, and full of love, temperate in all things. The world will not say, "Come let us go up to Zion and learn of her ways," until the people of the church are keeping the full law of God and the inmates of every home are properly disciplined and educated.

The dispensations in which mankind has had special opportunity to obey the gospel are Adam's time, Noah's time, Moses' time, Christ's time, and Joseph's time.

Brother Minton explained with much liberty the "four horsemen of Revelation." The white horse represents the restoration of the gospel; the red horse signifies war and bloodshed; the black horse, dishonesty; and the pale horse, suffering and death.

Each evening Brother Minton closed his lecture by making a special appeal to all to keep the whole law of God and press forward to the redemption of Zion.

Central Chicago Branch

Sixty-sixth and Honore Streets

With the return home from reunion and other vacation trips, Central Chicago Branch starts laying plans for the winter's work with enthusiasm.

Brother and Sister Davy and little daughter remained with us several days, Brother Davy's sermons being attended with interest.

We are rejoicing in the fact that Brother David Dowker's family have moved to Chicago, and we are to have their co-operation and assistance in our work.

Sisters Thelma Dowker, Freda Ball, and Zelda Sherman are attending Graceland this year. We send with them our earnest prayers for increased usefulness in the church and life in general.

At the Sunday-school teachers' and officers' meeting, it was decided to give the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," on the evening of the Sunday school rally day the first Sunday in October, and practice is now under way for this occasion.

A class has been organized to be held at half past six Sunday evenings for the study of Industrial Zion, Brother Philemon Pement being the speaker.

The other departments will soon be making themselves known, and work will be started for the winter.

Far West, Missouri

September 5.—The Saints of Far West Branch have lately had their church painted white on the outside, and now it is freshly painted and papered inside. We are proud of our little church and of its pastor, Elder G. B. Koger.

We are to begin a series of preaching services here September 11. Elder G. T. Richards is to be the speaker. Elder Charles May will also be with us after the first week. We hope to be able to give a play or two some time during the services and perhaps other entertainment. Pray for us that our meetings shall be an event for good.

Elder J. W. Roberts, of Cameron, Missouri, was with us for sacramental service September 4, and we had a spiritual feast in this gathering together.

* Quite a number from this branch were privileged to attend the reunion at Stewartsville, Missouri, August 18-28. All report enjoyable services and a good time at games, etc. It seems that the young people's prayer services were the most appreciated by the young people of all the good things to be had at the reunion.

Laura L. Day.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fairview Avenue

September 1.—Since our last letter to the HERALD we have lost by death Sister Mary Jane Hendra, who died August 7. She had been a member of this church for thirty-one years. She had been sick for several months previous to her death, being confined to her bed ten weeks. The funeral sermon was preached by our pastor to a large congregation. Sister Hendra was well acquainted. She was a hard worker, having been left a widow ten years. She will be missed by the Saints here.

We regret to report that Sister A. Scott is still sick.

This past month we were made very happy to have with us Elder Lee Lewis, district superintendent of the Sunday school department. He gave us a fine talk which all enjoyed. Elder E. R. Williams was with us over a Sunday and preached a good discourse. He was on his way to Independence, Missouri, where he is going to make his home.

The church was closed for two Sundays while reunion of this district was on, for some of the Saints attended and others were gone on vacations.

With reunion over and vacations passed, we hope to settle down to real business.

of

INDUSTRIAL ZION

A new booklet just off the press is now ready for sale. Orders filled same day as received. The content of this booklet is an amplification of a series of lectures given during the last General Conference, and the matter of stewardships and cooperation in developing Zion is presented from quite a new angle.

It is written in a very interesting style. Definite situations are discussed and analyzed in a logical, common sense way, and the pleasing thing about the book is the fact that the entire treatise is based on the spiritual ground work of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The booklet is designed as a text for study by the priesthood in their priesthood meetings and by the membership in their study classes throughout the church. The First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric urge that this booklet be secured and study work begun.

The booklet will be about one hundred and seventy-five pages and will be sold for 20c each.

Order through the publicity agent in your branch when possible. Otherwise order direct from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

It is one of the satisfactions of life to have investments that turn out right—that keep every dollar of principal safe and that pay a good income with un-failing regularity.

A church bond has back of it the moral integrity and good will of "a people" in addition to tangible resources of property and money.

- $50 Thrift Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $100 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.

The church will allow 5% interest to the purchaser on such installment payments, when full payment of the bond is made. Installment payments will easily and quickly secure a church bond if you do not have the money to pay cash. Government bonds will be accepted at their market value in exchange for church bonds.

The Book of Mormon should be in the home of every Latter Day Saint, and if possible every member should have his own book.

September 22, 1927, is the one hundredth anniversary of the date when the records contained in the Book of Mormon were delivered to the keeping of the church. This event makes the year a significant one in church history.

It will be a wholesome experience for every member of the church to read the Book of Mormon this year. Hundreds have already signified their interest and have started in this worth-while endeavor.

Reform of the House of Lords

I have learned to admire the British Government for its flexibility and apparent ability and determination to adapt itself to changing social conditions and thought. A monarchy at one time nearly absolute, it has at various times modified its form of government by "evolution without rupture" till, while it remains a monarchy in outer form, yet in its workings the better aspects of democracy have been included in a way to challenge admiration. And yet there has been preserved that complete governmental authority which is essential to national progress and welfare. How these various changes have been wrought makes an interesting bit of study.

In another column we reproduce an article from the Spectator, of London, on "Reform of the House of Lords," which will be of interest to any of our readers who are watching the tendencies of the times in governmental organization, particularly in legislatures, as they might be affected by the age-long fight for the extremes in democracy.

Many of the legislatures of the world are bicameral—divided into the "upper" and "lower" houses. And these have usually served a good purpose by preserving a well-intentioned and well-working balance. In some governments there has been a tendency towards making both houses "democratis" by having the tenure of office elective. This has aroused a fear not entirely groundless that "democracy" will be thus carried to a point where the relations between upper and lower houses will be greatly disturbed by a party which will give rise to jealousies and their concomitants, which will lessen the efficiency of the legislatures as now constituted.

It is therefore of great interest to observe as to what the reform of the House of the Lords will lead.

In the United States a gradual "reform" is progressing which is likely to change the constitution of its upper house, the Senate, and behind it lie many of the forces tending or forcing the reform in the English legislature.

Graceland College Opening Days

Graceland College last week opened her doors to some two hundred and fifty students and took them into her keeping for nine months—months in which they shall be inducted into the ways and customs of the institution, months in which they shall learn the art of living with fellow students in dormitory, library, and classroom, on playground and athletic field, and in social circles.

To the passer-by it was "just another college" opening its new year and just another group of college students embarking upon another term of academic pursuits. Not so to one who has spent one or more of the best years of his life on the Hill, within those revered halls which now reverberate anew with the sounds of the opening days. This is Graceland opening; this is a different school.

And to President G. N. Briggs this college is not just another among the many which have recently resumed their functions. For in the initial number of the Graceland Record, welcoming the students, he says:

A college education then is a matter of development of character, not primarily so much mathematics, so much science, so much history. These are all important as affecting character development, especially the thoroughness and carefulness with which they are done. . . . What we all are, Graceland College will be. Our talk, our habits, and our attitude will determine the standards of the college. Our work, our study, and our play create those conditions and the atmosphere for a truly great institution. If our standards are high, they will furnish an example, a memory, and an inspiration to all at times of depression and when difficult problems must be solved. . . . My best wish for you all is that the year may bring you the happiness and growth which you have measured out for yourselves and for which your parents and loved ones have made you ready.

As one comes up the Hill for the first time in many days, the old, familiar "Ad" Building towers first into view, a venerable guardian reared against the placid blue and cottony white of summer sky, hovering motherlike over the companion buildings. And even now these newer halls are taking on something of the wealth of experience and tradition which hallows the turreted, red structure, once the lone sentinel on the Hill.

The ring of class bells echoes out across the "bean field," and the classrooms yield forth the streaming gayety of "between class" crowds. The mingling white and blue of middy uniforms, the care-free laughter, the weaving lines from building to building of smiling, cheerful faces—all merge into the picture of buoyant youth in a moment of relaxation. Soon all is quiet again, heads bend seriously at study in the library, classroom work is in swing, and all are energetically engaged in the tasks they have set for themselves. We shall see them at other moments—in chapel, at worship, in social life, at play—with the selfsame spirit which gives each activity its proper place and blends all into a wholesome and rounded life.

A new plan was inaugurated in the opening exercises this year—that of having the freshmen students on the campus several days ahead of the upper classmen. These days were given over to helping the freshmen in their orientation and adjustment to the new atmosphere, and to developing among them the college spirit. The success of the “freshman days” was obvious, and the policy will no doubt become permanent. When the sophomores and juniors arrived, they were met by the most enthusiastic and thoroughly alive group of freshmen in the history of the college. They were imbued with a college spirit that brought forth the cheers and songs of Graceland with a finish and a “pep” which even “old-timers” on the Hill might well emulate.

Occasional assemblies were held during these first days, at which inspirational talks were given, faculty members introduced, and the cheers and songs of the college learned and practiced. Lectures on the value and use of the library were given by Miss Lydia Elefson, head librarian, while Morris E. Mortimore consulted with various groups on the budgeting and proper distribution of a student's time. Placement tests for the classification of students were interspersed with physical examinations. Social activities were not lacking. The young people of Lamoni gave a reception at the church lawn for the newcomers, Friday, September 9, and a “get acquainted” service was held at the Brick Church Sunday, September 11. Following the latter, the students were taken for an automobile tour of Lamoni and places of interest round about. Religious services Sunday, September 11, began with a morning chapel at the college, including special musical numbers, and short talks. Roy A. Cheville was in charge. Apostle D. T. Williams spoke on “The power of thought” at the eleven o'clock special service of the Brick Church. Apostle John F. Garver, alumnus of Graceland and member of the Board of Trustees, was the evening speaker.

But the faculty was really the first group to assemble on the campus, and had held two days of meetings before even the first freshman reported. They discussed the program for the coming year and the preparations for receiving the student body, the increasing responsibility placed upon the faculty by the parents of an increasing number of Graceland students, and the necessity of giving their best that these students might be helped in the accomplishment expected of them. Lectures and discussions were in charge of Lonzo Jones, academic dean and director of the personnel bureau. The discussion covered teaching aims, what is expected of teachers, and the measurement of teaching results and student achievement by more definite and specific methods. “Keep each student achieving at the level of his ability,” was adopted as the faculty slogan for the year.

The faculty of Graceland for this term includes a number of new instructors, several who are returning from leaves of absence for further training, and many who have spent the summer months in additional preparation. Graceland may well be proud of her faculty, both from point of academic preparation and the ideals which they hold before the student body both in the classroom and out.

The upper classmen came on the scene for their registration Monday, September 12. That evening a general assembly was held, at which Dean Lonzo Jones spoke on the part to be played by each student in upholding the standards of the college toward the Graceland ideal of manliness and womanliness—“the ideal which considers both a high standard of personal conduct and the rights of others in the social relationships of the school.” The cheers and songs of Graceland rang out in the old chapel with renewed spirit.

Class work began Tuesday morning. By Friday the enrollment had reached a total of two hundred and forty-nine, with the freshman class numbering one hundred and twenty. Twenty-one of the United States, Canada, Australia, and Denmark are represented among the students. Enrollment in the studio departments from Lamoni and vicinity is expected to increase later.

The buildings of the college were all in readiness for the incoming band of students. Briggs Hall had been redecorated and repaired from the damage of the fire which removed dear old Patroness from the scene. Marietta Hall, women's dormitory again this year, had been redecorated in numerous ways, and the “Country Club” had been moved to the east campus, where it keeps Sunnymede company and provides a cottage for women students. Herald Hall, men's dormitory, had been made ready for the inflow which now fills it to capacity, and the former Children's Home in southwest Lamoni had been transformed into “The Gables,” a new dormitory for men, with Dean Jones in charge. Zimmermann Hall, containing the new gymnasium, had been completed.

The Effective Branch

BY APOSTLE F. HENRY EDWARDS

A SYMPOSIUM

Some time ago I asked a number of our successful pastors to state their conception of the chief characteristics of an effective branch. This was done in no mood of idle curiosity, but in the hope that by sharing our ideals and experiences we can gradually achieve common understanding regarding the things which make for effective local ministry.

Quite a number of the brothers gave considerable thought to this assignment, and from time to time have written me along the lines of our first conversation. The survey might have been prolonged, but perhaps it will be an advantage to make the present summary of the replies received, in the hope that further experience and careful evaluation of this epitomization to our experience may lead to a refinement of this article at a later date.

The Branch President

It is not surprising that practically every pastor collaborating in this survey feels that the key to branch effectiveness is in the quality of its leadership. This of course centers in the branch president. While it is true that in a few places and for a brief time branches may appear to succeed under poor or mediocre leadership, no continuing ministry to its members or the community is ever possible without leadership. This leadership must vision the task of service adequately and then organize the whole branch effectively to meet its opportunities.

The branch president should be a man of broad information, and with an understanding which shall embrace the church purpose, the community needs, and the lives and spiritual power of both priesthood and members under his direction. This breadth of vision, moreover, should enable him to see life as it is and to recognize his problems in terms of actual individual and social need, but it should be balanced by qualities of creative leadership characterized by deepest sympathy and spiritual energy.

Mere ability to see is not sufficient to qualify a man for pastoral responsibility. He must also be an organizer who can direct the forces of the branch toward the achievement of branch objectives with the least possible friction or loss of time or effort.

Such vision and organizing ability is finally dependent on the quality of the pastor's personal life. If he is to be the human dynamo who will electrify and inspire the priesthood, the departmental officers, and the membership, he must manifest the spirit of kindness and sympathy, of cooperation, and of loyalty which he wishes those under him to cultivate. His personal cleanliness must result from a wholesome attitude of mind which will guarantee purity in every part of his life. If the pastor will have his people well informed, he must himself be a student continually preceding his people into fields of human value and interest. If he would have them be open-minded and yet not "tossed about by every wind of doctrine" or opinion, he must himself venture courageously, but manifesting always the firmness of his convictions which makes his adventuring possible with safety.

It is to be desired that the pastor shall be a good pulpiter, but almost all of the brothers recognize that, desirable as preaching ability is, a man may be a good preacher but a poor pastor, or a good pastor but a poor preacher. The pastor should nevertheless have the ability to express himself with sufficient clarity and impressiveness to make his pulpit leadership an assured factor in branch success. His general deportment, however, his personal contacts with the membership and the community, his tactfulness and stimulating but unprovocative attitudes, will all speak much more loudly than the words he might express in his flights of pulpit oratory.

But though the pastor may do effective work in spite of not being blessed with outstanding preaching ability, he must be a man in whose life prayer is a vital power. Perhaps nothing is more revealing of the depths and shallows of a man's spiritual life than is his prayer, and nothing will be more effective in molding the pastor into an effective servant and leader of the church and community than will continuous and heartfelt praying, in which he will take to God those things which affect more directly the success of the work, and will receive from God a quality of sustenance which can come from no other source.

Without affecting the payment of your tithes or local expense contributions, WILL you give $500 as a free will offering toward the 1927-8 budget?

In a word, the pastor should be such a man as will embody the ideals of the church in his community, and who will relate the needs of the branch and community to the ability of his members and stimulate through his associates in their various charges the progress of every concern rightfully theirs.

Priesthood

Rivaling the branch president in their relation to branch success, are the priesthood of the branch. They share with him the tasks and the opportunities of spiritual leadership. The first qualification demanded of the priesthood is alertness to spiritual opportunity. The elimination of inactive priesthood should come through their invigoration into activity, or, if that is not possible, through the imposition of silence. Priesthood is too sacred to be lightly held. There must be enough members of the various grades of the priesthood to meet the branch and community needs, and they must be active.

In common with the branch president, it will be the task of the branch priesthood to interpret the ideals of the church in terms of their own activity. These men must be well grounded in the fundamentals of Latter Day Saintism, understanding the teachings of the church in a way that is deeper than merely intellectual understanding, in that it is rooted in a sure and continuous fellowship with God. They need to be alert to the many possibilities for greater refinement of spiritual expression in the lives of the members and of the group to whom they minister. But their eyes must not be on the present only. While they may not be fully qualified, they must be qualifying. This extension of preparation and of ability to serve must be the fruit of continuing creative ministry, such as comes from intelligent and consecrated individual service, and the sharing of increased understanding with the others of the priesthood under the direction of the branch president. This socializing of individual experience is one of the chief purposes of priesthood meetings.

The most important function of the branch is the promotion of increasingly desirable human relationships. The admonition of God and the experience of the church combine to indicate that these Christian relations are best promoted through intelligent, sympathetic, and continuous visiting with both Saints and nonmembers by the members of the priesthood; and, in fact, by all those members of the church who breathe the distinctive Latter Day Saint spirit. The primary responsibility for visiting is with the priesthood, but the communion of Saints in every field is perhaps the most stimulating factor in the creation of the family spirit which should be characteristic of every branch. It was said of the Master, "He calleth his sheep by name." This implies personal intimacy. Without it priestly ministry is impoverished and branch progress is impossible.

Visiting is vital for the continuous sustenance of the branch membership and the conviction of many who otherwise would never join the church. But visiting is also vital to the other phases of the ministry of the priesthood. Nothing will make the messages from the pulpit so apt and so satisfying to the actual soul hunger of the congregation as will an intimacy with the present problems and activities and hopes of the people. Nothing will more surely redeem the minister from a tendency to overemphasize the academic aspect of his work than will frequent touch with the everyday problems and needs of his people; and while more academic training is needed by the ministry as a whole, such training can be safeguarded and made fruitful only as it is balanced by constant visiting inspired by genuine love of humanity.

Departmental Leadership

Some of the pastoral functions will be shared with departmental leaders, as well as with the priesthood of the branch. These leaders, specialists in their respective fields, will be alert to the spirit and total purposes of branch endeavor, and so will adjust the work of their departments to each other under the coordinating but stimulating influence of the pastor.

Here, as in the priesthood, some stability and permanence is desirable. The members of the priesthood and the departmental leaders, however, should recognize the dual nature of their work. These leaders should be giving definite and necessary service, but should also be continually gaining such experience and deftness in function as will fit them for wider usefulness.

Among the most helpful of these cooperating executives will be the branch secretary, whose far-sighted and creative interpretation of branch trends will be of untold value to his associates.

Membership

Leadership responsibility rests with those who are definitely called and authorized and popularly sustained. To make it effective, however, the leadership of the priesthood must be balanced by a ready and constant and unified responsiveness on the part of the Saints. It is the task of leadership to call forth this cooperative response, but it is also the privilege of the Saints to meet their leaders by the manifestation of an instinctive loyalty which is the basis of fellowship and understanding.

The ideal branch in any community will have sufficient membership to make that branch constructively and persistently influential in the community life because this membership is responsive to its inspired leadership. As a matter of fact, the measure and quality of the inspiration of the priesthood is not alone dependent on the preparation and consecration of those holding priesthood authority. It is also a reflection of the confidence and support of the priesthood by the membership. The blessings of direction can come to the church in its various local and general organizations only as the leaders are upheld by the Saints in faith and prayer and personal encouragement. The task of the branch is committed to its members, and while the leaders of the branch must be foremost in visioning and achieving the branch purpose, they must be foremost among many brethren who are looking ahead with them in eagerness and in spiritual strength.

Objectives

There is a need for definite objectives in local endeavor. The branch president and priesthood will of course take the lead in determining these goals and inciting and inspiring the Saints to their attainment.

The general church has certain traditional purposes. Our ultimate missionary goal is nothing less than the winning of the world for Christ. This we share more or less definitely with the rest of Christendom, for Christianity is essentially a missionary religion. Another of our objectives, or perhaps it is the same objective differently stated, is the building of Zion. This is more distinctively ours.

These general and final purposes need to be interpreted in terms of intermediate goals. For example, in the process of winning the world for Christ we must build a large and increasingly effective missionary force. The building of such a missionary army therefore becomes one of the intermediate objectives leading to the greater end. But if we are to have an efficiently organized missionary corps, we must have books for their instruction. An even more immediate objective is therefore the writing of such books. Books such as we need can not be written by everyone, but the men to write them must be discovered and enabled to qualify. This, then, is one of the most immediate objectives that we have in this particular field. Other phases of our total church purpose can be similarly reduced until they are stated in terms of the immediate tasks of the church. Assured progress is only possible when both general church and local branches determine the tasks immediately ahead and organize and direct their forces toward the achievement of the goals thus set.

These many immediate goals are not unrelated. Each one influences the other. Moreover, they have all to be achieved by the same group of people, for no matter what our responsibility or interest in the church, our work is definitely related to that of every other department of church activity. One of the major tasks of the general officers of the church, and particularly of the First Presidency, is to determine and unify the objectives which should be achieved in the immediate future. When that time is past, their task is to review the progress made, and to discover from that review how more rapid advancement may be made in the period ahead through emphasis upon the sources of strength and elimination of the causes and avenues of weakness.

The goal set for the general church must be reached by the church throughout its organic life. If the baptismal goal of the church for the next year should be ten thousand new converts with their faces towards Zion, the conversion of these new members is to be achieved by the missionaries and priesthood and the Saints generally in the various districts into which the church is divided. This is equally true of the other objectives of the church. It therefore becomes the task of the presiding officers of districts to determine what share of the total church objectives, many of which are indicated in the annual messages of the President of the church, can be reasonably and securely realized in the district. This task of achieving the district goals, then, devolves on the branches, whose presidents should take the lead in determining what contribution the individual branches should make. It then remains for the pastors to see that their branches do make at least this contribution, or as much better a contribution as circumstances make possible.

The branch is related to the community as well as to the general church. To every local organization is given the task of representing the church creatively and progressively in its community. The branch has a definite community responsibility, and it can evidence the value of the Christian ethic only as it shall stand for the most worthy community relations possible.

Summing up the foregoing, the branch ought to take stock of its membership and equipment periodically, to determine what community service it can reasonably render in view of our general church objectives, and it ought then to set out determinedly and in accordance with stable and intelligent policies toward these definite things. Numerical objectives are by no means exhaustive and should always be qualified by the setting of other and parallel goals. To baptize twenty people may be retrogression instead of progress, if a certain quality of life has not been generated in these people through their baptism. (Matthew 2: 7, 8.)

The determination of objectives is but the beginning. Our effective branches are already in process of achieving these goals. They are growing in quality of leadership, in spiritual power, in effective knowledge, in responsiveness to the demands of the stewardship law, in numbers, in equipment, and in many other less tangible ways. Such branches have special meetings as part of their planned activities. They have well-directed missionary meetings, in which either an "imported" missionary or a member of the local priesthood ministers the word with the intelligent and organized support of the branch. They have regular instruction and reinvigoration from the evangelist in their territory. The bishop frequently occupies the pulpit and visits the homes of the Saints to indicate the possibilities of spiritual expression through temporalities. And the Saints respond to this leadership.

Equipment

Many of our branches which have several of the major possibilities of success are handicapped and restricted because of their lack of equipment. Without doubt an effective branch will have a church building through which it can express its good will to the community and minister to the spiritual needs of its membership. With a branch below the numerical strength necessary for successful work, it is frequently impossible to secure a building which is representative of the task which the church assumes when a branch is organized in any community. However, if the community is stable and permanent, one of the chief goals of the branch without a building of its own will be to so increase its membership and conserve its finances that whenever the general church needs are such as to warrant the building of the church in that locality, the opportunity for such building will be present. Such a branch will have a church building sufficiently large and differentiated to house its congregations for the various branch and community gatherings, and so constructed that additional units can be added with convenience, symmetry, and at low expense. Nor will the church building need to be elaborate, although it ought to look like a church, while its architecture will be conducive to worship and meditation. In addition to the main auditorium, it will have classroom accommodations, and will be well seated, ventilated, lighted, and heated and a baptismal font, announcement boards, blackboards, etc., will be available.

Church location is of an importance very infrequently appreciated. The building should be easily accessible to all parts of its constituency, both actual and potential; on a corner lot if possible; near, but not on street car lines, highways, etc.; and it should stand on a lot large enough to permit necessary expansion. This lot should be well though simply landscaped, and kept clean and attractive.

Finances

Finances may be called "temporalities," but the able administration of branch finances will have definitely spiritual results. Branch finances should be administered on a budget basis intelligently conceived and directed. The problems and opportunities of each period come from previous periods and reach over into those which lie ahead. This should be remembered in determining budget appropriations, and financial reserves should be accumulated against coming financial obligations, such as building a church, repairs or extensions, etc. When budgets are determined on this far-visions basis, the Saints are generally willing to pledge their support and to honor their pledges when they become due. This is good for the Saints individually as well as for the branch as a whole.

Services

The services of the efficient branch must minister to the deepest needs of those who will attend, such ministry being destructive in both its quality and its method, the work of the various departments in such a branch will express the ideals and the contribution of the church in the fields of these departments. The services specially designed for the young people will seek to minister to the uncovering of the divine light among those young people. The general services of the branch will emphasize those religious needs which both youth and age have in common and which can be stimulated or satisfied conjointly. The recreation of the branch will not necessarily be different in kind from recreation which might be found elsewhere, but unless it is of unique and superior quality the branch is inefficient to that extent. The Sunday school will use many references and books which may not be distinctively Latter Day Saint, but the use to which these materials shall be put and the ends achieved through their use will be such as will make for growing understanding of the meaning of Latter Day Saintism, and continuous and creative achievement of Zionite attitudes.

The teaching element will be present in every church activity. In some it may be paramount, as in the Sunday school. In others it may not be so obviously present. But every service of the church should cause those who participate to achieve an expanding knowledge of the meaning of our church ideals in terms of life, through their own physical and mental and spiritual activity.

The element of testimony, moreover, will be one of the dominant characteristics of the branch services, whether departmental or otherwise. In some places this spirit of testimony has been lost, and we need to be reminded that one of the characteristics of a Latter Day Saint is that he knows some things which are not apparent to others, and which are not even discoverable by the ordinary processes of observation and induction and deduction. The early Christians knew that Jesus was the Son of God, impossible as this seemed then. The Latter Day Saints know that Jesus, the Son of God, has restored the gospel in this dispensation for the enlightenment and salvation of men. The reflection of this fact in the lives of the Saints will be found in every service of the branch which is awake to its opportunities and responsibilities.

The element of worship will also be present in the services of the branch, particularly in such services as the sacrament and prayer meetings. The greatest possible stimulation towards spiritual living comes from a sense of communion with divinity. It is one of the tasks and opportunities of the church to give to its membership opportunities for association and communion which will stimulate this sense of divine presence. Perhaps here more than anywhere else, have our churches lacked. This worshipful element should be conserved through the structure of our churches, through the melody and harmony of our songs, through the devoted earnestness and spiritual depth of prayer and testimony, and through the ministry of the word of God.

The Branch Spirit

The most significant characteristic of a successful branch is the branch spirit. From this all branch effectiveness arises. It will become stronger with its own expression and continuance. It is difficult to measure this, but not difficult to sense it, for the branch spirit is evidenced in everything that is done.

Every branch of the church should be characterized by a certain creative optimism born of convictions regarding the most fundamental things of life, and sustained by happy and inspired and unostentatious service to the church, to the community, and to its own membership. This Latter Day Saint spirit will be evidenced in the missionary enthusiasm of the Saints, in their joy in sacrifice; in their growing understanding of the significance of the gospel; in the safeguarding of young people and the continuous development and use of their growing powers in discovering the best methods of building and spreading the Christian way of life; in the home standards and the quality of recreation and expression participated in and enjoyed by the membership. It will be evidenced in the mutual confidence of priesthood and Saints; in ready acceptance of responsibility coupled with a willingness to prefer those more qualified to discharge similar responsibility; in the growing awareness of spiritual opportunity and social responsibility. In a word, the spirit of the ideal branch is such that the branch could be transferred to Zion and find joy and added opportunity in the association of the pure in heart to whom the building of the City of God is committed.

Elder R. L. Fulk writes from Orchardville, Illinois, September 12: "I am at the Hellem Branch, or Poplar Creek, near where Brother R. H. Henson lives, holding meetings. House is full every night, and some are deeply interested. Last week Brother Henson and I went to Xenia and helped the Saints make out two inventories, and three men paid $400 tithing. More will come later. As a result of reunion work, four have been baptized at Poplar Creek. Things look favorable for a good revival of church interest in this neighborhood."

Elmer C. Evans, in submitting his report as bishop's agent for the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District for the fiscal year closing June 30, 1927, gives figures of receipts from the various localities. It is interesting to note that the total receipts for the district are about eighty-nine per cent larger than the year previous. He expresses appreciation of the cooperation of the solicitors which has made possible "this excellent report." He also thanks "the Saints for observing the financial law," and trusts the Saints "will continue to give and sacrifice that the work of the church will continue on and upward."

Exhibits for the Harvest Festival are coming in rapidly. The entire basement of the Auditorium Building will be used for the festival, and Brother C. C. Koehler, who has general charge, and Brother J. A. Curtis, his assistant in caring for and displaying exhibits, say there will be no room to spare.

"Robes—Surplices—Gowns"

BY H. ARTHUR KOEHLER

During a convention of the music lovers of our church, held in the Stone Church while the conference of 1927 was in session, a motion was unanimously passed supporting the move for gowns or surplices for our massed choirs.

Some of the reasons that gave stimulus to this movement, are those that are given by our musicians from all parts of the world. A few of them we wish to mention without much comment, as their reasonableness is quite evident.

1. The variegated hues of the modern dress attract too much attention.
2. The abbreviated cut of the dresses is unacceptable in choir.
3. Too much individuality that the modern styles manifest.
4. The revolutionary and insurrectionary spirit they foster.
5. Many feel they are excluded because of the lack of attractive attire.
6. Some are in the choirs only to show their finery.
7. The attraction of interest from the speaker to the choir.
8. The lack of cohesion and unification of effort the modern dress encourages.

Modern colorings of the ungowned choirs, typical of the variegated hues of the rainbow, are very disconcerting to the speaker who is endeavoring to get and retain the attention of the audience, and equally embarrassing to the audience attempting to follow the message.

Every factor of the service should lend support to the message. Neither the choir, the minister, nor the audience has any right to project anything on the service that will militate against its reception. As far as the background behind the speaker is concerned, there should not be one solitary thing that would encourage interest to something foreign to the message. And yet each one of the following factors, viz, choir, minister, and audience, feel the disconcerting influence of the riot of color that particularly is evidenced in the choir, and sometimes in the audience.

At this writing we have but little to say as to what we think one should wear when he is a part of the audience; but we do wish to challenge the right of anyone, or any class of individuals wearing garments whose alluring, distracting faculty is so impelling, and we think we can demand that they wear a vestment conducive of reverential and righteous purpose.

Objections Answered

At the very suggestion for gowned choirs, we hear the objections offered that, "We are getting too much form into our services," and, "It is copying after Romanism."

I think we can safely say that more form would improve our services immensely. We should feel ashamed of the utter disregard that some of our branches have for decorum in divine service. We have a long way to go before we can even hint at having too much "form of godliness." As to the second objection, let me ask, When has the Roman Church secured a monopoly upon anything that would increase the spirit of worship in our churches? It is also claimed that modern choir vestments have been derived from those of the Levitical priesthood. Another idea is that the ceremonial dress of the choir and clergymen was derived from the civil costume of the Romans.

It appears, however, that careful research has shown that the church vestments have had more of a secular than a divine origin, although Moses was commanded to make them for the priests in divine service. The New Schaff Herzog Religious Encyclopedia states that "the choir and clerical vestments and adornments in the Catholic Church use, are almost entirely of ancient and secular origin. Until recent years their historic foundation was sought in the Old Testament worship. But now research has discovered a different origin. The ecclesiastical garb first became secular in a strict sense when, under the influence of migration of the Germanic tribes, the costumes as well as the forms of the ancient world passed away and the more convenient dress was substituted, while the church clung to the Roman and Greek fashions."

The Encyclopaedia Britannica says "the older history of the surplice is obscured by lack of exact information. Its name is derived, as Durandus and Gerland also affirm, from the fact that it was formerly put on over the fur garments which used to be worn in church and at divine service as a protection against the cold. It has been maintained that the surplice was known in the third century. In all probability the surplice is no more than an expansion of the ordinary alb, due to the necessity for wearing it over thick furs. It is first mentioned in the eleventh century as a canon of Synod in Spain, 1050. In Rome it was known as early as the twelfth century. It probably originated outside of Rome, and was imported thence into the Roman use. Originally only a choir vestment replaced the alb as a vestment proper.

They regarded the surplice as an ensign of the spiritual estate. Durandus tells us that "the surplice stands for innocency." The Roman church perhaps did go too far in ornamenting their vestments. This doubtless was the objection urged by the children of Israel against those which Moses had made for the priests. It seems that we have arrived at a condition when there is much practical need for a surplice to be worn over the dress of the street that would make for beauty and reverence of service.

Mr. Macalister, speaking of the modern dress, says "that it is subject to constant changes, which in time amount to complete revolutions, but the devotees of any religion, true or false, are by nature conservative of its doctrines and observances." In this connection it will be interesting to mention those vestments which antiquarians have traced to Roman costume that lend dignity and sympathy to divine service.

Suggestions in Dress

The impressions to be gained from dress are rather obvious. The significance which it is meant that clothes should bear are still more numerous and important.

Doctor Flacus claims that in a large, heavy hat his spirits are low. A broad hat makes him feel jolly. If he has a fancy hat on, he is in a coquettish mood, and he feels brighter in a hat that rolls away from his face. "Feelings of lightheartedness are the result of filmy clothes. The pleasant mental effects of gauzy stuffs and laces are said by the investigator to be due to their lightness. Putting on a smoking jacket suggests relaxation to a man, and so does the assuming of an evening dress impart the idea that correct behavior is necessary. Heavy clothes and a tight collar bring about mental depression."

Sunday clothes are a time-honored institution. They put on garments which are appropriate to the relaxation in which we are accustomed to indulge. Saint Jerome and Saint Clement both exhorted the early Christian worshipers to wear a special dress for worship, and the Jews in their synagogues put on a vestment which was used by the whole of the congregation as well as the official minister.

The varied feelings aroused by the picademic dress, such as of Punch and Judy, Perrot, the clown, Mephisto, Mother Hubbard, and others is apparent to everyone.

Similarity in the vagaries of fashion followed for centuries is evidenced in the wedding gown, the costume of mourning, the robes of royalty, the legal dress, nuns and Sisters of Mercy, state and court attire, military uniform, naval uniform. The fraternal and academic dress, others we could mention.

In sports, whether it is in baseball, basket ball, ice hockey, aquatic and others, each group is represented by a distinct garb, and each member of the group is compelled to array himself in the class costume.

This uniformity of dress is cognizant with the Boy Scouts, Blue Birds, Temple Builders, at Christmas, Easter, Fourth of July and other times of celebration. Our ministry of twenty-five years ago wore the Prince Albert coat as a special vestment, and I am not loath to think that a special sort of covering would engender a reverential feeling as we stand behind the sacred pulpit.

In regard to the effect of the uniformity of dress, Winifred Mark Webb, who wrote The Heritage of Dress, says: "That if boys and girls dress alike, taught together, and played together, this would do much to direct attention away from, instead of towards, sex distinction. The best school for the training of life and conduct is the school of equality, where privilege and subjection are alike unknown.

The Common Gown

In this connection we wish to say that in wearing the common gown, each member of the choir automatically subjects himself to the group spirit, and this is much needed in unpaid choirs. In the present arrangement of dress, the individual spirit is fostered, but with the other each one is absorbed into a collective arrangement, developing proper cohesion.

The common gown imparts a fraternal spirit, encouraging each other, aiding in a common cause, producing harmony, and eliminating the revolutionary and belligerent spirit caused by too much individuality displayed in most of our choirs.

This gown suggests modesty. It is symbolic of innocence. It is an ensign of the spiritual estate and an indication of sacrifice. It is a manifestation of purity and righteousness and all of the heavenly graces. No other sort of dress depicts the like.

Flowing surplices give dignity, and we find that among the Romans such were used in dignified leisure on occasions of state in contradistinction to the dress of active existence. The flowing robe gives rise to a more stately appearance than the common dress that is short and tight fitting. It will give the singer the mental and physical poise that is needed in all public work. It will fit the occasion.

The surplice commands reverence and true worship that is much needed in our services. Did you attend the noon hour of silent service at the Stone Church during General Conference? The order, the deep feeling of respect, the inward stimulus aroused is significant of the sort of response that is engendered by the gowned choir. Like the gowned court magistrate, it commands due reverence.

Last, but not least, of the evident reasons, the common gown as nearly completely as it is possible to do, makes a blank wall behind the minister, causing very little to detract from the message. It enables the preacher, audience, and choir to more fully concentrate attention upon the theme of the hour. It completely eliminates the disconcerting and distracting element in worship that is caused by the regalia of color and cut of the modern dress.

As to Color

Professor Henderson, of the University of Michigan, declared that the first thing we see as to distinctive personality, is color.

The use of color merely as a distinguishing mark, without any deeper origin or special significance, is general all over the world. It plays a tremendous part in dress. Not only has it often a great significance, but its presence or absence must also have a considerable effect upon the minds of the people at large.

The ordinary liveries of royalty in England are red. The red shirt of the followers of Gariabaldi, the red rose of Lancaster, call to mind great struggles. Red is a danger signal. It is with a red rag that the Chulos in the bull fight enrages the bull. Yellow is a favorite color of gypsies. The color was worn by mediæval Jews, and had a contemptuous or degrading significance. We speak of a person having a streak of yellow, denoting cowardice.

The gorgeous dress of the Masons and the bright green scarfs of the Foresters are further evidences of the love which civilized man still retains of dressing himself up. The color schemes of collegiate life play a big part in stimulating loyalty, devotion, and allegiance.

White has for centuries been used by the choirs and clergy in the services. White is significant of virginal existence as imparted by the marriage dress. It symbolizes innocency and purity as displayed in the dress of infants. It marks a righteousness and holy purpose. It portrays sacrifice and cleanliness, admitted in the garments worn by the nurse and doctors. It is the color we would naturally expect to behold in the one hundred forty-four thousand that shall "sing a new song." It is the color we dream of observing in those "arrayed for the marriage supper of the Lamb."

What shall it profit humanity if it gain wealth and education and freedom, and lose character and culture and fellowship?—John M. Moore.

The Message Which the Book of Mormon Bears to the American Nation

BY CHARLES FRY

The Book of Mormon bears a message of vital import to the American people. That message includes historical information of value, inspired counsel, prophetic warning of social and national dangers, and divine commands. It reveals the decrees of God regarding the land, and his purposes regarding the people.

Moreover, the Book of Mormon purports to have been written under divine direction, kept under the Lord's protection through centuries of barbarism, revealed by him and translated by his power in latter days; all for the benefit of the American Nation, to whom it was first given, and that through them it might go to others.

A work in which God himself has been deeply concerned for two thousand four hundred and thirty years, in which angels as well as many righteous men have participated under his direction; a work holding in view the welfare of the nation to whom it should come, must be of most vital importance to that nation. It points the way to unmeasured blessing with prosperity and progress, and warns against national decline and disaster. Like the law given by Moses, it "sets before you life and death, blessing and cursing."

God's Decrees Regarding the Land

The Book of Mormon affirms that the land of America was chosen of God from the earliest times as a land above all others where he would exemplify his truth and righteousness in the people, and where he would perfect the human race. Any people upon this land turning to wickedness and thus defeating God's purpose, would in time be swept from the land.

The history records the wiping out of two great nations, when, through moral decline God could no longer effect his purpose through them, and in many instances smaller portions of the nations were destroyed for the same reason.

A Choice Land

After the waters had receded from off the face of this land, it became a choice land above all other lands, a chosen land of the Lord; wherefore, the Lord would have that all men should serve him, who dwell upon the face thereof; and it was [to be] the place of the New Jerusalem, . . . — Ether 6: 2.

Reserved for a Righteous People

In leading a colony of people from Babel to the Western Continent, from which grew the first great nation, the Lord said to them that he had reserved it for a righteous people:

And he had sworn in his wrath . . . that whoso should possess this land of promise, from that time henceforth and for ever, should serve him, the true and only God, or they should be swept off when the fullness of his wrath should come upon them.—Ether 1: 30.

Similar information was given the second colony which the Lord led to this land about B. C. 600, to supplant the former nation.

For it is a choice land, saith God unto me, above all other lands; wherefore, I will have all men that dwell thereon, that they shall worship me, saith God.—2 Nephi 7: 31, 32.

Wherefore, this land is consecrated unto him whom he [the Lord] shall bring. And if it so be that they shall serve him according to the commandments which he has given, it shall be a land of liberty unto them; wherefore they shall never be brought down into captivity; if so, it shall be because of iniquity; for if iniquity shall abound, cursed shall be the land for their sakes; but unto the righteous it shall be blessed for ever.—2 Nephi 1: 11-15.

God Intended the American Nation to Know of This Decree

The ancient author's intent in writing these words was that this "everlasting decree of God" might come to the knowledge of the present American Nation, for he says further:

And this cometh unto you, O ye Gentiles, that ye may know the decrees of God, that ye may repent, and not continue in your iniquities until the fullness comes, that ye may not bring down the fullness of the wrath of God upon you, as the inhabitants of the land have hitherto done.—Ether 1: 34.

The bringing forth to this nation by the providences of God, a knowledge of the purposes and decrees of the Lord concerning the land upon which they live, leaves the burden of choice with the people, with the consequent results of blessing unto life or condemnation unto death, according as they may heed or fail to heed the law given of God.

Jesus Christ Is the God of This Land

The position vaguely though commonly assumed by the people that the earth is altogether under the dominion of man, is, according to the Book of Mormon, quite in error, particularly so in relation to the Western Hemisphere. That Jesus Christ holds the right and power of dominion over this land is definitely set forth, and no people has been permitted to possess it except by his special dispensation. Former nations were planted here by his own hand, and uprooted when no longer worthy of the privileges granted to them, and the land was purposely kept from the knowledge of other nations until the Lord saw proper to reveal it. Columbus received his inspiration from the Spirit of God when the time had come for the land to be revealed, and to become the possession of the Gentile people.

There is a divine guarantee of liberty, with freedom from the oppression of all other nations, to any and every nation which shall be permitted to possess this land of America, on conditions that they serve God in righteousness:

Behold, this is a choice land, and whatsoever nation shall possess it, shall be free from bondage, and captivity, and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve the God of the land, who is Jesus Christ who hath been manifested by the things which we have written.—Ether 1: 35.

Because of the dominion exercised by Jesus Christ over the land of America, he has not consented that kings should rule over the people, that prerogative remaining within himself. The prophet—founder of the first great American nation—opposed the setting up of kings, saying, "Surely, this thing leadeth into captivity." But when the people insisted, a king was granted, which led to bondage and ultimate destruction.

Likewise, the founder of the second great nation, declined the request of his people for a king, but finally yielded, though the trend of this policy toward evil was discovered in time, and the form of government peacefully changed to that of a republic.

Christ Is King

Promise is given that in the latter days the land should be delivered from the domination of all foreign nations, and that there should be no kings upon it. Warning was given that any who should raise up a king upon this land should perish—a prophecy which had its sole fulfillment in the downfall of the empire set up in Mexico by Austria during the Civil War, and the execution of Maximilian Ferdinand Joseph who had been placed upon the throne.

But behold, this land, saith God, shall be a land of thine inheritance; and the Gentile's shall be blessed upon the land. And this land shall be a land of liberty unto the Gentiles; and there shall be no kings upon the land, who shall raise up unto the Gentiles. And I will fortify this land against all other nations; and he that fighteth against Zion shall perish, saith God; for he that raiseth up a king against me, shall perish. For I the Lord, the King of heaven, will be their king; and I will be a light unto them for ever, that hear my words.—2 Nephi 7: 17-21.

A Call to Repentance

In accordance with the purpose and decree of God relative to this land, and the dominion which Jesus Christ holds in a special manner over it, the Book of Mormon issues a call to the nation of today to heed the voice of the Son of God, and by repentance, and faith in him, do the works of righteousness, that they may be worthy of a perpetual inheritance.

Hearken, O ye Gentiles, and hear the words of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, which he hath commanded me that I should speak concerning you, for, behold he commandeth me that I should write, saying,

Turn all ye Gentiles, from your wicked ways, and repent of your evil doings, of your lyings and deceivings, and of your whoredoms, and your secret abominations, and your idolatries, and of your murders, and your priestcrafts, and your envyings, and your strifes, and from all your wickedness and abominations, and come unto me, and be baptized in my name, that ye may receive a remission of your sins, and be filled with the Holy Ghost, that ye may be numbered with my people, who are of the house of Israel.—3 Nephi 14.

Woe be unto the Gentiles, saith the Lord God of hosts; for notwithstanding I shall lengthen out mine arm unto them from day to day, they will deny me; nevertheless, I will be merciful unto them, saith the Lord God, if they will repent and come unto me; for mine arm is lengthened out all the day long, saith the Lord God of hosts.—2 Nephi 12: 40, 41.

The Gospel in Its Fullness Given to This Nation

That there might be full opportunity to repent and come to the Lord's standard, it was designed of God that in restoring the gospel in its fullness of power and blessing in the latter days, it should come to the American Nation which is Gentile:

Behold, because of their belief in me, saith the Father, and because of the unbelief of you, O house of Israel, in the latter day shall the truth come unto the Gentiles, that the fullness of these things shall be made known unto them.—3 Nephi 7: 31.

Nephi saw in prophetic vision that when

The Gentiles . . . have been lifted up by the power of God above all other nations upon the face of the land, which is choice above all other lands . . . I will be merciful unto the Gentiles in that day, insomuch that I will bring forth unto them in mine own power, much of my gospel, which shall be plain and precious, saith the Lamb.—1 Nephi 3: 176, 183.

Every promise made to Israel is, upon obedience, extended to the Gentiles, for they are to "be numbered with the house of Israel," and their inheritance upon this land will be perpetual. But as every Israelite has been, or will be, cast off because of rejecting Christ and his gospel, so will the Gentiles. The promises of God are only upon obedience.

Nation May Lose Gospel and Fall

Notwithstanding the gospel is given to the American Nation in the last dispensation, there is a possibility of their losing it. Jesus said:

At that day when the Gentiles shall sin against my gospel, and shall reject the fullness of my gospel . . . behold, saith the Father, I will bring the fullness of my gospel from among them; and then will I remember my covenant which I have made unto my people, O house of Israel, and I will bring my gospel unto them.—3 Nephi 34-36.

The withdrawal of the gospel is a withdrawal of the blessing of God, and national decline and destruction are inevitable. This was foreseen by Nephi, who saw that not only this nation but all the nations of the Gentiles were engulfed in disaster:

And thou also hast heard, that whoso repenteth not, must perish; therefore, woe be unto the Gentiles, if it so be that they harden their hearts against the Lamb of God; for the time speedily cometh, saith the Lamb of God, that I will work a great and a marvelous work among the children of men; a work which shall be everlasting, either on the one hand or on the other; either to the convincing of them unto peace and life eternal, or to the deliverance of them to the hardness of their hearts and the blindness of their minds, unto their being brought down into captivity and also unto destruction, both temporally and spiritually, . . . — 1 Nephi 3: 212-216.

The American Nation Held Accountable by God as the Guardian of the Indian Race

The American Indians being of the Hebrew race, they come under the covenant God made with their fathers—the founders of the race—that he would be with them in all lands whither they should go, and though they might drift into unbelief and idolatry, he would in the last days restore them to his favor and blessing and establish them as a people. These promises are reaffirmed in the Book of Mormon and are specifically applied to the remnants of the land modernly known as the American Indians.

The Lord therefore is not only cognizant of them, but takes cognizance of the dealings of the Gentile people toward them, and will hold the nation accountable for those dealings.

While the Lord would permit the native Americans to be driven from their lands and many slain, the promise was made that he would not suffer that they should be destroyed. (1 Nephi 3: 178.) Mormon wrote:

And after they have been driven and scattered by the Gentiles, behold, then will the Lord remember the covenant which he made unto Abraham, and unto all the house of Israel. . . . And then, O ye Gentiles, how can ye stand before the power of God, except ye shall repent and turn from your evil ways! Know ye not that ye are in the hands of God? . . . Therefore repent ye, and humble yourselves before him, lest he shall come out in justice against you; . . . —Mormon 2: 49-54.

They [the Gentiles] shall be a scourge unto the people of this land. Nevertheless, when they shall have received the fullness of my gospel, then if they shall harden their hearts against me, I will return their iniquities upon their own heads, saith the Father.—3 Nephi 9: 65, 66.

The tables will be turned, for

Then shall ye who are a remnant of the house of Jacob, go forth among them; and ye shall be in the midst of them, who shall be many; and ye shall be among them, as a lion among the beasts of the forest, and as a young lion among the flocks of sheep, who, if he goeth through, both treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver.—3 Nephi 9: 51, 52.

The Book of Mormon affirms the divine sonship of Jesus Christ, and his resurrection, notwithstanding the trend of modern thought. It maintains the unchangeability of the gospel, with all its powers, gifts, and blessings, and warns against the invasion of deceptive and false doctrines. It reveals the superficiality of the modern churches which deny the power of God. It condemns the "secret combinations" whose purpose is to favor a select class while neglecting the poor and needy. All these things, with many others, are given as counsel and warning to the American Nation, and they are worthy of consideration and decision.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Reform of the House of Lords

The Government took the Lords by surprise on Monday by announcing the general principles of a scheme for reforming their House. It is true that the Unionist Party has long regarded itself as committed to reform of the Lords. When Mr. Asquith passed the Parliament Act, he spoke of it as only the first step in the logical application of democratic treatment to the House of Lords. Naturally from that moment the Unionist Party held it to be its own duty to see that further changes, since there must be changes, should be along safe lines of constitutional development. On the other hand, at the last general election, Mr. Baldwin made only a casual reference to the House of Lords question. It has been suggested that the Government, in suddenly producing the outlines of reform, think of their scheme as a possible issue for a general election. We rather doubt that. If the Lords become the issue at a general election, it is likely to be rather the result of circumstances than a deliberate choice. We agree, however, that the question has to be tackled, and in our judgment the Government have done well to give the country ideas for consideration.

There is much that seems to us good in the Government's proposal, but something ambiguous, too. There are also omissions, one of them very serious. Briefly, the scheme is that the reformed House shall consist of 350 members instead of 740 as now; that a "sufficient number"—the number to be fixed by statute—of these 350 members shall be appointed on the recommendation of the Government of the day, and that the remainder shall be elected by the present hereditary peers out of their own ranks. Peers of the Blood Royal, the Archbishops and the Bishops and the law lords will all sit by right. The elected hereditary peers and nominated peers will serve for twelve years; one third to retire every fourth year and be eligible to sit again. Hereditary peers, not chosen to sit in the House of Lords, will be eligible for the House of Commons. Most of these points are familiar to everyone who has read the Report of the Bryce Committee of 1917.

No doubt this scheme will be altered before it becomes a bill, and still more altered before it becomes an act. The Government have been very wise, we think, in deciding to keep the House of Lords as a body quite unlike the House of Commons. If ever there should be an upper house here elected either directly or indirectly, like the senates of other countries, an intense rivalry of a sort which does not now exist would spring up between the two houses. It might well be that the upper house, conscious of a higher order of intelligence, would grow impatient of the House of Commons in its worst moods, and would tend to try to rule the country. It may be said that the House of Lords has that consciousness already, for its "full dress" debates are conducted with unapproached knowledge and efficiency. But the truth is that the House of Lords is kept from any foolish policy of self-assertion by its very nature; just because it does not depend upon any franchise it does not pretend to reflect exactly the opinion of the people. It offers its judgment and its experience for what they are worth—and they are frequently worth a great deal—but for many years it has not attempted to do more than act as a delaying force in doubtful issues. It astonishes us when people urge that a fully elected upper house is the only democratic solution. Superficially, of course, there is point in that argument, but surely on deeper reflection it must be seen that to keep the House of Lords entirely different in character from the House of Commons, so that the popular supremacy of the House of Commons is not really threatened, is the true democratic way.

Besides, we are extremely fortunate in this country to have a class of men who by tradition give their services freely to national causes. The members of the House of Lords who really count have all been through a regular discipline in the House of Commons, in county work, in the services, as governors of Dominions, States, and Colonies, and so on. America would be happy if she had such a body of experienced men ready and anxious to work for the public good. Mr. Roosevelt used to say that it was one of his ideals to build up such a caste of voluntary politicians and public servants as existed in Britain. The hereditary principle is illogical today, no doubt, but it relates us in an interesting way to the past, and above all "it works." On the other hand, the numbers of the House of Lords are unwieldy, and in a political emergency the cooler and more experienced men may be swamped by a whipping up of the "backwoodsmen" who are seldom seen in the House of Lords except on an occasion of great public excitement. The "backwoodsmen" pour in to vote just when they would have done better to stay away, for on such occasions they are more likely to be the prey of prejudice than the followers of reason.

As the House of Lords is constituted at present, Labor is badly treated. There are only about ten members who can be counted upon to vote for labor. The provision that the Government of the day can nominate temporary members to build up an opposition is good, but it will need very careful handling to make it work fairly. The Lords spiritual and the Law Lords are most desirable permanent members of the Upper House, but we should like to see representatives of the free churches added. And why should not leaders of Roman Catholicism and Judaism be nominated? Some of these might come to be nominated in any case by custom, but the matter ought not to be left to chance. Similarly, in our judgment, regular rules ought to be laid down for the choice or election of the hereditary peers who are to sit. No one ought to be able to say that they have been chosen capriciously. It would surely be easy enough to fix some standard of public service. Another suggestion which seems to have escaped the Government, is that among nominated members there should be a certain number representing the Dominions. Dominion members would certainly not be "reactionary," and they might even be sympathetic towards labor.

We have written elsewhere about other points in the Government's scheme. Here we have been concerned mainly with the personnel of the future Upper House, but one thing we must say in conclusion: We deeply regret that the Government have not mentioned the Referendum. The Referendum, or Poll of the People, is the final safeguard of democracy. It insures that in every disputed case the will of the people shall prevail. With this safeguard in existence, it would be a matter of comparative indifference if the Parliament Act was left untouched. Under the Referendum, the Lords need never decide against a majority in the House of Commons. They would only secure that the people should have the opportunity to decide for themselves. No reform can be complete without the Referendum.—The Spectator, June 25, page 1112.

Respite

By Minnie Eugenia Warnock

When doors are closed, or in the silent night,
You bare your aching, breaking heart to God
And plead an easing of the chastening rod—
That he your wounds would heal and clear your sight.

Then all your moans and groans must be repressed,
For walls, it has been said, have list'ning ears
Yet feel no kindly interest in your tears;
To hide them in the pillow then 'tis best.

And then when time is called, and once again
You face your problem in the light of day,
With thought that others must not share your pain
You find yourself quite cheerful, almost gay;
And wonder how this state you did attain
'Less God, upon your soul, his peace did lay.

REUNION NEWS

Southern Wisconsin Reunion

The 1927 reunion of Southern Wisconsin District is now a thing of the past. It was held in the beautiful park belonging to Clyde Gallagher. We had the use of the park free of charge. The ground was provided with swings, and equipment for many games and amusement—a lovely playground. It was a much better place than we have had in previous years. Campers and tourists were kept out of the park during our ten days of sojourn there, and we enjoyed being alone in the beautiful place. Quite a number of the people of the community attended our services.

Meetings began on the morning of the 19th at 9:30 with a prayer service. District President E. J. Lenox was in charge, and the song, "Guide us, O thou great Jehovah," was sung. "Gratefulness" was the theme of the meeting. Brother Willard Hield offered the opening prayer, asking the Lord to bless the grounds, and come and make his abode with us. Only a few were present, but a spiritual service was enjoyed.

The first sermon at eleven o'clock was delivered by E. J. Lenox, using for his text the words of the Lord unto Cain, "If thou doest well, thou shalt be accepted." At 2:30 organization of the meeting was held. The reunion program was put into the hands of the reunion committee, which consisted of E. J. Lenox, L. G. Holloway, and H. W. Woodstock. Brother Ray Whiting was selected to have charge of recreation; Sister Effie Hield, women's work; Leda Colbert, junior church.

On Saturday afternoon came Patriarch W. A. McDowell and Bishop A. B. Phillips and wife, from Galva, Illinois. Our reunion would not seem complete without seeing Brother McDowell with us. He is indeed a father to the Saints of this district.

Brother McDowell preached in the evening.

Sunday morning church school was in charge of District Superintendent Leda Colbert. At this time Brother Phillips began his class in stewardship and the financial department of the church, which class was held every morning thereafter.

Sister Phillips and Ethelyn Hield helped with the children in their handwork as well as in junior worship.

Monday evening Brother Ray Whiting and wife drove in from Galva, where they had attended the reunion.

On Tuesday morning Brother Whiting began his classes on science and religion. These were held each morning.

Patriarch McDowell had charge of prayer services, and each of the brethren took his turn at preaching.

Not a very large crowd was present at the beginning of the reunion, but as each new day arrived it brought a few new faces until at the close of the reunion, especially the closing day, quite a goodly number was present.

The closing prayer service was the best held. After singing the hymn, "Will your anchor hold in the storm of life?" Brother Holloway arose and spoke the words of the Lord. Some of the things said were: "Have you firmly anchored your souls? I have led you and given you of my Spirit. Your souls have been touched; your souls have gone out in gratitude to me. The coming year will be one of trials and disappointments. Are you being led by me? My Spirit has testified to you of my gospel; be true, and God will be with you in every trial." To the ministry: "Trying times are before you; you must be diligent before me. The souls of men are required at your hands. Go out in diligence and humility, and your souls will be made glad for the work you have accomplished. My gospel must move in mighty power. You must carry the things I have desired of my church. Thousands must hear my message before it shall go to all the earth. You are nearing the redemption of Zion, the day of my power. Go with firm determination from this reunion, that you shall stand firm in my gospel. Many forces are at work, but I have seen fit to protect you; remember the obligations I have given you. Remember what I have bestowed upon you. You will receive great demonstration of my power. Be faithful, remember the testimonies that have been given you, and thus you shall stand firm and secure.

At 1:30 three candidates were led into the waters of baptism by Brother E. J. Lenox; they were confirmed at the afternoon service.

On Saturday evening illustrated slides of Graceland were used with an explanation by Brother Ray Whiting. This was very instructive to the youth and to fathers and mothers who have young people in Graceland and others who should go.

Saturday at 9:45 Brother Willard Hield gave a lecture on vocational guidance.

Many of the afternoons were devoted to recreation and visiting places of interest in the city.

There was also an hour for recreation after the evening preaching services. One evening brought a treat of water-melons, and another's wieners.

Brother Healy, of Chicago, was with us for a short time and had charge of recreation one evening.

Junior church was very well attended, and we feel some good has been accomplished. The sermons and story-telling were of a nature that will help in building Christian character. Fifty-two children were enrolled, the average attendance being forty. One evening the children went for a little hike and picnic supper and wiener roast.

Brother Carl Wirth had charge of the dining hall. The food served was very good. Meals were served cafeteria style, which was more satisfactory than the way they had before been served. Much labor was given by Brother Lenox and others getting things in readiness before time. A large screened tent had to be erected for kitchen and dining hall, also a large tabernacle tent, but even at that it was much pleasanter than it had ever been before. We were by ourselves and away from the noise of traffic and tourists.

Brother Lenox was called away from the reunion to preach the funeral sermon of Brother J. W. Whiteaker.

We hope the Saints of the district will begin now preparing for next year's reunion, that we may enjoy a better one, and that each one may be a consecrated helper, that we may feel we have come up higher and have made progress Zionward.

Mobile District

The 1927 reunion of Mobile District, held August 11 to 21 in Mobile, Alabama on the Bay Shore, is now history and a bit of history that each person attending shall love to remember through the coming year, for the memory of such a beneficial, successful, and pleasant reunion will serve to strengthen and encourage the Saints to press onward and upward.

There were seventeen tents on the grounds, with a large attendance from Saints and friends living in the city. Unity and cooperation prevailed, and we were made to rejoice many times because of the wonderful and convincing spirit that was present.

The association of Brother Turpen, Brother White, and Brother Curtis meant much to the Saints, and we were glad indeed to have with us Brother and Sister McCall, of Florida; Brother and Sister Clark, of Birmingham; Sister Taylor, of Evergreen; and a number of Pensacola Saints.

The prayer, preaching, study, musical, and recreational hours, each held their different treasures to impart, filling each day with joy. And the dining hours can not be forgotten, where splendid food and visiting were enjoyed. Meals were served at the reasonable prices of fifteen and twenty-five cents.

Thirty-three were baptized during the reunion, and others are to follow soon.

A broader vision was caught of what our reunions can mean to us.

The tabernacle and kitchen erected on the grounds this year will remain there for future use.

I shall be glad to get in touch with scattered members; and let us, every person interested in this glorious work and the marvelous results of reunions, begin now, to prepare for the success of our 1928 reunion.

More of the Little Sioux District Reunion

Without question the biggest and best reunion in years for the Little Sioux District has come to a close. The increased zeal and determination of the Saints bids fair for the future of the church. We fear there was not enough time in the ten days allotted. However, so much was accomplished that it will be necessary to travel fast with those who are making a practical application of the message as presented.

From the eight o'clock class period, conducted by C. B. Woodstock, to the closing sermon each evening, was a time filled with the best this gospel affords in these days.

Apostle J. A. Gillen, though traveling a great distance, was equal to the task and surely brought the people nearer to God through his sermons illustrated by so many of nature's beauties.

Stewardships, industrial Zion, tithing, and all that goes with it were presented so clearly and sincerely by Bishop F. B. Blair that many testified a greater light and broader vision of the work and a keener sense of their duties.

The prayer meetings were a source of keen interest, and a large attendance was had. Time was consumed promptly and profitably. Many testimonies were borne that strengthened and increased the faith of the membership. And ere long many testimonies of God's blessings will be borne to Saints and to the world because of a strict compliance with the temporal law. This will then indeed be creative.

The juniors were ably cared for by Sister Nell Kennedy. This work was planned and carried out accordingly. It is reaching the youth and laying a premise that will later carry them into the heavier responsibilities of the church work. This should have the full support of the whole membership. The church of tomorrow will depend upon these youth of today.

Recreational activities were also a feature of the reunion. J. E. Keck, in charge of this work, kept all busy. Volley ball, horseshoes, playground ball, croquet, hikes, wiener roasts, marshmallow toasts, and circle games gave plenty of exercise to all who occupied. This department is caring for a much needed part in the great program for building strong bodies, keen minds, and sincere desires to carry on the work.

Sister Myrtle Crabb, superintendent of the Department of Women, assisted by Sister O. A. Currie, presented a very good representation of this field of activity. And an active work it is. There is never a time or a place to stop. They are always going and doing. Surely we are learning to appreciate that this is a part of the church. The women are and are to be complimented not only in words, but by an earnest cooperation in this great task. Zion can not be re-deemed without the great contribution of the women.

Near the close of the reunion, Apostle J. F. Garver came via Ford, accompanied by his family. Of course his contribution was appreciated because it was presented as only Garver can do it and was wholly representative of the work.

This reunion was favored with two special features very much representative. Graceland College was much in evidence, as a group of the "K" girls were in camp. These girls, supplemented by the efforts of many of the alumni, presented a very entertaining and edifying playlet, which was strictly Graceland, and of course Graceland is a part of the church. Then as a climax to this group of "K's" and their activities, a number of the "Boys" drove in about 3 a. m. (unholy hour), and surely we had Graceland at the reunion; for we had just shown the pictures of buildings and grounds and groups, and all felt they had been to college.

Then last, but not least, we were favored with a play, entitled "Other sheep have I," presented by a group from Omaha. This was strictly a Book of Mormon play, and the costumes and settings were appropriate, as was the time approaching the one hundredth anniversary of the receiving of the plates. The play, under the direction of Sister Vera Gamet, represented the birth, ministry, death, resurrection, and the appearance of Jesus to the people on this continent. It left a lasting impression and a desire for more features of the work to be dramatized. One thing that drew much interest and attraction was a large electric sign bearing the slogan, "Forward to 1930." This was originated and built by L. L. Clinkenbeard and E. B. Purcell.

Meals were served under the management of O. J. Barr, and quality and quantity were all sufficient. Also, one was made to think of "old times" because of the many who brought their stove and prepared their own meals.

No accidents, no sickness on the grounds. A spirit of unity and fellowship prevailed, and all were sad at parting on the last day. We feel that the interest developed will carry over to the next reunion. This one good and great, we shall make the next one better and greater. PRESS COMMITTEE.

Northwestern Kansas

We will never again say that Northwestern Kansas District can not have a reunion, for we had one, and a good one, too. It was held on the banks of the Walnut Creek on Brother John Teeters' land in Alexander. The reunion was small in number, but not in spirit. District President Silvers has worked for many months for the reunion, and his works were rewarded.

Thursday, August 18, Brother and Sister Peter Whalley arrived from Wichita. We can not say too much for them. Although most of us had not known them before, we learned to love them. The young people received much help from them. Brother Whalley conducted a class each morning except Sunday on the church's program. This was for the young folks. Both Brother and Sister Whalley are small in stature, but their hearts seem to encompass all of the young people of the church.

Sister Whalley conducted a Book of Mormon class for the children. Twenty-five children attended one hour for the study of the Book of Mormon in story form. One hour was spent in character work, and one hour in handwork, making three hours a day. She reported that the interest in the study was astonishing and pleased her greatly. She says the attention was the best she has found anywhere, and it was a pleasure to teach them.

Brother Bruce Brown was here from Colorado Springs. This was not his first appointment to Northwestern Kansas. He was here two years ago. This visit more than doubled our affection for him. He is a real preacher, a real recreation leader, and a real Latter Day Saint. We are only sorry that Sister Brown was not able to come.

Those that were on the grounds and near by were Brother and Sister A. C. Silvers, missionary; Brother and Sister Whalley, Wichita; Brother Bruce Brown, Colorado Springs; Brother and Sister Jay Hoffman, Arkansas; Brother and Sister W. W. Ebert and family, Larned, Kansas; Irvin Ebert and family, Ness City, Kansas; Ernest Ebert and family, Bazine, Kansas; Brother Herman Ebert and wife, Bazine; Brother George Kelley and family, Modoc; Brother Carl Franks and family, Norton; Brother and Sister Parsons and daughter, Ruleton; Sister Stull, of Brownell, and Sister Bergier, Osborne.

Recreation was carried on through volley ball, croquet, swimming, and community singing. Friday night, the 26th, we were entertained by "reunion ground talent." Some very fine numbers were rendered, including a reading, "The soul of the violin," by Ethelyn Ebert; duet, "Whispering hope," by Ethelyn and Juanita Ebert; and readings by Sister A. C. Silvers and Sister J. A. Teeters.

Saturday conference convened. The officers were all sustained except the leader for Recreation and Expression. Sister George Kelley, of Modoc, is to fill this place, and we know she can do it. Brother John Teeters, as one of the counselors to Brother Silvers, is to assist in this work. Between the two something ought to be accomplished.

Saturday night witnessed a wiener roast with Brother Brown in high speed. He is an excellent leader. Like a magnet he drew the talent right to the front. Songs were sung, readings given, jokes told, and those hot dogs eaten. People could not help but have a good time.

Sunday was a "basket meeting and all-day dinner" in Brother Silver's words. Brother Whalley preached in the morning. Five were baptized after dinner. Brother Silvers preached at 2.30, after which Bert Limpken from Bazine entertained us with some of his singers and some of his songs. Brother Brown completed a fine reunion with a splendid sermon that night.

Toronto Reunion

The Toronto reunion exceeded our wildest expectations. It was a success from several angles, spiritually, numerically, and financially. One of the outstanding features of the camp this year was the stability of the camp population. We had over eighty regulars the first week and more than one hundred and twenty-five the second week, besides larger crowds in the evening and on the week-ends, especially the middle Sunday, when our equipment was taxed to the limit. The success of the camp was made possible by a few willing workers who went down early to get the equipment in shape. We had to move all our outfit from Woodbridge, where our reunions had been held for three years, and it was some job, but willing hands "put it over."

A wonderful spirit pervaded the camp throughout the meeting, and the decorum was excellent indeed. We felt like one great family—a miniature Zion. The good Spirit was with us from start to finish and was especially powerful in some of our meetings. The Lord saw fit to reveal his will through Patriarch Richard Baldwin in words of encouragement and admonition to be faithful, firm, and true. Several received messages of personal comfort. Those who were present will not soon forget. Many Saints were strengthened, and many of the young people were impelled to reconsecrate their lives to the Master's service.

General church appointees with us during the reunion were Apostle R. S. Budd, Patriarch and Sister Baldwin, B. H. Doty, our missionary, and Ward L. Christy, or the Seventy. The practical sermons and whole-heartedness of Brother Budd won for him a distinct place in the hearts of the campers. The boys will tell you that he is a "good sport." Brother Baldwin gave valuable assistance along spiritual lines, and Sister Baldwin's work with the women and children was one of the features of the reunion. Doctor W. A. Sinclair, of Boston, paid us a flying visit.

We had an extensive program daily. Rising at 6, occasionally young people's prayer meetings at 6:30, family worship at 7, then breakfast, we were ready for the day. At 8:15 Sister Baldwin conducted a class for women, while Brother Christy took charge of a meeting for men. At 9:15 there was held a general prayer meeting. Sister Baldwin conducted junior church at 10, and forty-five minutes later classes on stewardship convened. The afternoon was given over to sports, baseball, volley ball, horseshoe, water ball, and swimming. Lowbanks has a wonderful beach for bathing, and we had considerable fun on a raft which C. Ed. Miller made four years ago. Each evening there was preaching at eight o'clock except Saturday, when we had concerts of a high order.

At the district conference it was decided to have reunion business done at reunion by those in attendance; consequently all campers were given a vote, whether they were members of the district or not. The same committee was sustained.

We were very loath to break camp and depart from that sacred old spot, which latter-day revelation says was used by the Nephites for their sacred meetings. We anticipate a bigger reunion next year, and the committee aims to make it bigger and better.

The Man for the Hour

By Mary E. Gillin

Every force in human nature,
Every urge with all our strife,
God has known—anticipated—
Holds the key to every life.

As with one, so with ten thousand,
Heaven plans—though man defies—
God sends Moses to deliver
In the hour that Israel cries.

Every crisis brings its leader;
Hid from men until the need
Calls them to the world's arena—
Then we marvel at their deed.

Thus was called out Julius Cæsar—
Saul of Tarsus—Joshua—
Each one played the part appointed—
Each as Leader blazed the way.

God sent Washington and Lincoln
For the task that each man did:
Never yet the "cry of bondage"
But there was a Moses hid.

When the World's stupendous struggle
Brought Goliath to the fight,
Woodrow Wilson was the answer,
Champion of Peace and Right.

And 'tis thus throughout the ages—
Every hour has found the man,
Till we recognize a purpose
Threading through Infinite Plan.

So we set our faces "forward;"
Hopefully the "morrow" scan,
Knowing well that He is keeping
For our need His chosen man.

And the trail is ever onward—
Upward by Tomorrow's deed,
God is God of all the people—
Every nation—blood—and creed!

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys with the Editor in Chief

"Nauvoo the Beautiful"

Lois and I reached Nauvoo on the morning of August 20, and we left there the morning of the 30th. So we were there ten days, and I was in that city and on the reunion grounds mostly except on four half days. The first visit from there was to Keokuk for a treatment for sciatica and one or two other errands. The second was when Lois, Sister Frazier, Brother Eastwood, and I went to Fort Madison. Some two years or so ago a man, once a playmate of mine, became involved in a concatenation of circumstances which ended in his imprisonment at the penitentiary. We had gone to school together, and for some years we were neighbors, and our children played together. And I had promised myself and his wife that if ever I was near Fort Madison I should try to see him. So that is why we went to Fort Madison. On reaching the prison gate, the turnkey said we were late—about eleven minutes—and that we would not be admitted as visitors till afternoon. But a few words with the warden resulted not only in our admittance, but we were shown through that interesting prison by the warden himself. I had visited it once before, several years ago, and was greatly interested to see the many evidences of improvement and the efficiency of the present management. Of this I shall not further speak.

While we were going through the various buildings, I spoke to the warden about my friend, and said I'd like to talk to him. "You may see him," said the warden, "but he talks to no one."

"Well," said I, "he may talk to me."

As we were approaching the gate to leave the inclosure, I spoke again. "Oh, yes," said the warden, "you wanted to see your friend." Then looking at some men passing to the dining room he said, "There he is now," and called to him.

And so I met my old friend. A man just my age, he appeared haggard and years older than he is. Yes, he talked to me. Not much, for we had only a few minutes. But there was enough for a few words of encouragement to look forward to the time when he should go home again, and to think of what he would do then.

Thanking the warden for his courtesy, and with a nod to the turnkey who would have kept us out, we left. I was sad, for while I had visited many prisons, and have seen former friends and acquaintances behind bars, it had saddened me to see this man, a one-time intimate playfellow, just my age, so disheartened and despondent. For I was thinking, as was perhaps he, of a fine family waiting for the return of husband and father.

A visit to the Sheaffer Pen Factory gave us other things to think about, and by about three o'clock we were back to the camp.

The next half day away from the camp was a trip with Brother Siegfried to Keokuk, Carthage, Ferris, and other places around Nauvoo, a trip made unusually interesting by Brother Siegfried's intimate knowledge of the early history of that country.

The fourth trip away from Nauvoo was on Monday, the 29th, the day after the closing of the reunion, when about nine or ten of us by boat went up the river to Burlington and were met at the landing by some of the Saints and taken to Crepo Park, where a picnic lunch was served to about forty-two Saints and a fine time had. This was followed by a visit to the church and a trip about the city. The boat returned to Nauvoo about 6:30 p. m.

So in the ten days I had a number of opportunities to see historic spots in Nauvoo, and to think about the city in its relations to the past, present, and future.

It has been called "Nauvoo the Beautiful." But as one sees it now, especially one who knows what it once was, he feels more like saying, "Nauvoo the Sad," for its crumbling ruins remind one of a neglected cemetery. And yet, what a spot for beauty it is! It is quite unthinkable that one would ever tire of going to the spot where the temple stood, and looking out to the west over the bottoms to the hills of the Iowa shore. Few more sightly spots in the United States for a city. I was there on my former visits, and on this one was on the spot several times. It is a place sure to recall a flood of memories and arouse thoughts of the morrow. As I stand on the hill and look out towards the beautiful prairie State across the majestic river, and see the gleaming curve of water sweeping a half circle of riparian beauty around the city, and see lying before me on the bottoms below the outlines of right-angled streets and square city blocks of the old city, and recall that on those bottoms once stood the building of a thriving, busy, happy city of Saints numbering near thirty thousands, in fancy I try to reconstruct it and try to catch the spirit of the enterprise which builded so well and with the brilliant hope of permanency and social perfection. And I could not but recall the disappointments and trials of Kirtland, Independence, Far West, and the shock that checked the zeal and activity of Nauvoo, the murder of the Martyrs. And in fancy I tried to trace the decay that set in after the Saints had been scattered by those ruthless forces which drove them from rooftree and homestead. And I could not but think of the ideals that prompted the activity that built Far West, Nauvoo, Kirtland, and survived the terrible ordeals. Those ideals are still unrealized; but they have heartened the Saints through all the scattered years, and kept their eyes ever towards the Zion yet to be. And I was grateful that our people had always had those ideals. They are the life of religion; they vitalize it. Lose such ideals, and decadence sets in. Hope and trust in God are the great dynamics of achievement by a people.

Kirtland, Independence, Far West, Nauvoo! And now again Independence! And so my eyes in fancy are turned again Zionward! What of Independence?

To build a Nauvoo in five years was a tremendous achievement. Our growth at Independence is less spectacular, less rapid. Is it more safely based? Are we laying stone on stone, house to house, building to building, farm to farm, with the cement and bond of the righteous ideals which will guarantee eternal growth and advancement?

And I thought of the forces which wrecked the hopes and blasted the faith of the Saints at Far West and Nauvoo, and I could not but ask, "Watchman, what of the night?" Are forces at work threatening our welfare? Yes, though perhaps not just as at Nauvoo; yet dangers lie all about us. Into the ranks of the happy Saints of Nauvoo crept the invidious forces. Inordinate ambitions and disloyalty within their ranks locked hands with the bitterness and hatred without, and the combination was too much.

And gazing into the future and thinking of Independence and the work before us, I wished that all the Saints could have stood there with me and felt anew the urge of our ideals, and consecrated anew our whole life and energy to the accomplishment of our unfinished task; and to feel as I felt the necessity of clinging closely to our great ideals, those ideals which strengthen the bonds of fraternity into the dynamic of cooperative achievement; ideas which create a zeal and devotion which hold promise of reaching our great goals.

Saints, let us remember Nauvoo, but sublimate its sorrows, its disappointments, into a virile spiritual Independence, where ideals of social justice, social welfare, shall carry us to the heights of civil and religious building, carried through by the ideals of a Zion, out from which shall shine the glory of God.

And Nauvoo! Need she remain for us in decadence? One evening some of us crossed over the river to Montrose, and as the boat lay at the wharf we heard one of the songs of Zion floating to us across the river. The Saints in the tent were singing, and the music, softened by the mile of water surface lying between us and the tent enhanced the harmony and made "concord of sweet sound" to our ears, for I could not but think that some day once again the singing of Saints might be heard from the head of Main Street as it touches the river on the north to its foot where beside the Nauvoo House it touches the river in the south; for as a place of recreation and reunions, conventions, and institutes, that spot holds possibilities for us not small; for there the teachings of the ideals of the church to young and old members of the church, to youth and adult, would have their gripping appeal sanctified by the memories of the past and hallowed by the sufferings and sacrifices of the Saints of the early days.

I am glad the church has the Mansion House, the Nauvoo House, and the Homestead. But we are not utilizing them as we should. They have been repaired and restored. The Mansion House is being well used. But the Homestead and Nauvoo House are empty, and their hollowness mocks us. May I here say what I should like to see done with them? The Homestead and the Nauvoo House should be furnished with furniture of the period 1830 to 1845, and the Homestead should be used as a literature depot and historical museum to put on display all sorts of articles which have been connected with the history of Nauvoo and the early days of the church. The Nauvoo House should also be furnished in period furniture, and equipped to minister to Saint, friend, and stranger, as planned.

With several of the Saints one day in Nauvoo, I was telling my ideas concerning this, and a sister, Sister Lee, said, "Why, I have some pieces of furniture of that period, and I'll gladly give them for such purpose." So there's the start. Sister Layton said, "I have one I'll give." And there's that. I am of the opinion that in the attics and store-rooms, perhaps the barns of many of the homes of Saints and friends in Hancock County and other places, are many pieces of old furniture, some of which might be closely connected with Nauvoo events, which if repaired and restored could be made attractive in either of the houses mentioned.

Saints, what about it? Would you like to see that done? Have you old furniture, historic, which we could so use? Spinning wheels, looms, andirons, cranes, chairs, bedsteads, cradles, trundle-beds, pictures frames, stools, tables, dressers, wash stands, benches, bed warmers, cooking kettles, pans, kitchen implements, pewter dishes, old plates, cups, saucers, tureens, etc. Let me hear from you. The brethren at Nauvoo will undertake to repair the materials, etc.

It was on the 30th, Tuesday, the day following the boat trip to Burlington, about 7:30, that Lois and I on the front seat, and Sister Frazier in the rear along with the baggage, we pointed the nose of the Nash away from Nauvoo, and the waves of the hands of the Lewises, Laytons, and other good friends and courteous hosts, started our homeward trip. A stop at Keokuk for oil and gas, another at Carthage for a brief visit at the jail, and later with relatives, Salisburys and Deans, we left Carthage about eleven o'clock and that night about 9:30 stopped at Jefferson City, after a day in which a series of tire troubles had taken some of the joy of traveling away. And the next day we visited the Missouri capitol and the penitentiary.

A visit to the penitentiary at Jefferson City is not calculated to arouse the pride of a Missourian. With rather poor accommodations for about 2,400 prisoners, there were that day 3,600 incarcerated there. Comparison with what we saw at Fort Madison did not speak well for Jefferson City. But if we were depressed at Missouri prison conditions, we were elated with our capitol. It is a beautiful, well-appointed building which all Missourians should see.

About eleven o'clock we headed for Independence and despite more tire trouble reached Independence about five o'clock, where we left Sister Frazier at her home and a little later were at our own, tired but with pleasant (and some sad) memories of a visit to Nauvoo the Beautiful.

Ideals and Achievements

(We have a letter from a sister in Los Angeles, California, who signs the initials E. C. J. to her communication, which shows a consideration for "the things of eternity," as the Book of Mormon would put it, and is indeed refreshing. We reproduce it here, in order that HERALD readers may enjoy her cogitations.—EDITOR.)

In Better Homes and Gardens for June, 1927, there is an article about "Soft soil to run my fingers in." In this article business men gave their personal inventory—the lid was lifted and one caught a glimpse of the inner dreams of all.

"I want half a million," said one, his lips tightening. "The income from it will give my family real security, and I can travel and visit the fallen cities of antiquity."

"I want a factory of my own," said a professional man, "so that when I go fishing my income will go right on!"

"I want to earn enough so I can have a new motor car each year, and my wife can have all the clothes she wants," said a young man who had not lost his youth or his taste for fine things.

Then, all turned by common consent to a man whom all fancied beyond the realm of "wants"—a man who could "buy and sell" anyone in his community.

A far-away, half-helpless look came into his gray eyes.

"I want," he began slowly; "I want a modest cottage once more; my babies back again, prattling under the shade of the cherry tree; the summer sunshine, and the sense of unhurried luxury that comes to those who live close to simple things." Then his voice fell almost to a murmur, "I want soft soil in which to run my fingers; to get down on my knees and plant things in! Ah, I dream of that soil of old—it is the soil of happiness—it yields dreams and treasures we never know until they are gone!"

There was a hint of flushed faces on every hand as they turned once more to their "business." But a dreamer sat and speculated and heard not the monotonous drone of their voices. In his heart he breathed: "What could be finer than that—to keep the soft soil of life around one forever!"

In the rich soil of Missouri, in the soil "watered by the rains of heaven," one can realize the above dream.

After the floods and calamities are over that are going to happen to Missouri, the promised land, in the future, to drive out the weak in faith, and those who have no faith at all, the following prophecy given at Irvington will be fully believed.

"Yea, I say unto you, this is indeed my church, this is indeed my people, and although mistakes have been made, and things entered in which have not been entirely in harmony with my will, yet down through the stream of time, like a silver cord in the fabric of time, I have preserved my truth, and I say unto you again, that this is my church and my people. And my arm is not shortened. My will has not changed. I shall redeem Zion. I shall lead this church to victory. I have spoken and it shall be done, saith your God.

"It behooveth you, therefore, my people, to be faithful, to study my word, to withdraw yourselves from that which is unholy that I may use you for the accomplishment of my purposes in the earth."

With the above prophecy and the following which I will quote from Isaiah, chapter 35, about the "flourishing of Christ's kingdom," we can be as giants in the faith. We can have beautiful and flourishing gardens and farms; we can have the condition quoted by Joseph, the son of the prophet: "In the subtle transition of a dream I was gazing over a wide expanse of country in a prairie land; no mountains were to be seen, but far as the eye could reach, hill and dale, hamlet and village, farm and farmhouse, pleasant cot and homelike place, everywhere betokened thrift, industry, and the pursuits of a happy peace were open to the view. I remarked to him standing by me, but whose presence I had not before noticed: 'This must be the country of a happy people.' To this he replied, 'Which would you prefer, life, success, and renown among the busy scenes you first saw, or a place among these people, without honors or renown? Think of it, for a choice will be offered to you sooner or later, and you must be prepared to decide. Your decision once made you can not recall it, and must abide the result.'—Church History, volume 3, pages 254, 255.

We each, as we pass through life, have a similar proposition offered us.

Shall we choose the busy scenes of the world, "life, success, and renown," among busy scenes, or—

"Pleasant cot and homelike place, everywhere betokening thrift, industry, and the pursuits of a happy peace"?

If the latter, we may expect to enjoy the following: "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing; the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God. Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; he will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. . . . And a highway shall be there, for a way shall be cast up, and it shall be called the way of holiness. The unclean shall not pass over upon it; but it shall be cast up for those who are clean, and the wayfaring men, though they are accounted fools, shall not err therein. . . . And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs of everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." E. C. J.

August 25.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, September 3.—While we have many hardships, disappointments, trials, and temptations, we are not discouraged in the work of the Lord. His cause is moving forward in this part of the vineyard of the Master.

Sunday, August 21, was a fine day, and many were out to Sunday school. The prayer service was dispensed with because Sister Margery Williams, of Ironton, district Sunday school superintendent, was with us for the last time. She is planning to go to Graceland College this season. Her talk to us was wonderfully instructive and encouraging. We wish her success.

At eleven o'clock we met the McDermott Saints near Brother Levi Crabtree's home, where five of the McDermott children went into the waters of baptism. The candidates included the children of Brother and Sister Ed. Wiget, Ida May, John Henry, and Edna Ruth. Brother Wiget is the elder of McDermott Branch. Horton Crabtree, son of Brother and Sister Thomas Crabtree, and Elizabeth Schallinger, daughter of Sister Trecie Schallinger, also were baptized. Brother Thomas Crabtree is the priest of that branch. The children are a promising-looking band and have the talent to do much for the church. Elder Francis May, of Dayton, officiated and was assisted by Franklin Riesbe, 222 Clemmer Street, Dayton.

The spirit of the Master prevailed all through the lesson of Sunday school on August 28. A feeling of peace and unity was enjoyed by all. Brother Luther Crabtree presented the proposition of purchasing a new organ. It was carried, and Brother Crabtree will secure the instrument in a few days. At fifteen minutes to eleven our prayer meeting started, with Ervin Pyles in charge and Brother Walter Culp assisting. This was one of the most spiritual meetings we have had for many months. The Spirit of the Lord spoke through the instrumentality of Brother Mark S. Crabtree, first to the audience, then to the priesthood, telling the priesthood that God is pleased with the work they are doing. Nearly every eye in the house was filled with tears. It was a cheering season of testimony and prayer.

Teacher Luther Crabtree and Brother Harvy Culp visited Brother Matthew Smith and Sister Margaret Smith, his mother, near Stockdale. They are isolated Saints who were baptized some twenty-two years ago by Brothers Thomas and Ebeling. They have never had the privilege of hearing the true gospel since, but are still in the faith and want to bring their membership to Pleasant Valley Branch.

Quite a number of Saints from this branch attended the reunion at Missouri Valley during the day, one family camped on the ground. All have expressed themselves pleased with the services, especially the preaching of the word. Many express their regrets that there was no reunion in our district, among whom are those not of the faith, who became interested during past reunions. Since the reunions are over, there is an effort to renew and increase an interest among the young of the branch in the Women's Department pertaining to their work. This has been done in the past at the reunions held here, but encouragement has been secured by attendance at other reunions and in reading what other reunions have done that has caused them to renew and increase the activities among the young.

The branch is now preparing to give the play, "Remember Cumorah." Much study and prayer, as well as expense, have entered into this preparation, but it is thought worth the effort which is being made.

Several are preparing to attend Graceland College, and from now on for a time we will miss them at the services, but we know they are not in danger of being led astray as long as they are there and will attend to the work which they claim they are desirous of doing to better prepare themselves for the future. The schools of the city are now open, and some new teachers are in the city, a few of them Saints, and we are glad to note that they are willing to be known as Saints. We just learn that Brother Edward Larsen, from Denmark, has been visiting in the city for several days previous to his attendance at Graceland College, from where he hopes, as he expressed it while here, that he shall be prepared to take a beneficial message back to his native land.

Excellent prayer meetings have been enjoyed for the late Wednesday evenings, and especially at the last sacramental service. The social service was begun by the blessing of four babes, followed by a touching and earnest prayer by Brother Nels Hansen for the foreign missionaries, especially for Brother Leonard Hoisington, that he might be restored to health and be given strength to finish his mission work in Germany.

Brother Carl T. Self, of Omaha, Nebraska, gave us a good sermon on Sunday evening of the 4th inst.

The Religio has renewed the study work and its sessions on Sunday evening, and we hope with renewed energy that the interest will be renewed and the attendance increased, but we are aware that this will take considerable effort.

Many business men are not encouraged, hence are laying off men, which affects some of our brethren, and their unemployment will make it hard for them to meet their home obligations. And when one member suffers all the members suffer with that one—and should if we are bound together with the proper ties of brotherly love.

Much enthusiasm is expressed at the possibility of soon having hard roads. This will be good for business in some ways, but will it be better for more to be in attendance at the places of worship? Those who feel that because of being indoors at their work during the week, they should be out in the open on Sunday, can if they desire to so arrange, be back at the time and place of worship much more easily.

Brother J. A. Waterman and family have been spending several weeks on a vacation at the farm. Their presence was noticeable at the services on last Sunday.

Brother A. E. Dempsey and wife were absent from the city on an outing for a couple of weeks, but we noticed her presence at the sacramental service last Sunday.

Brother Guy F. Mintun and wife, of Independence, Missouri, spent a part of Sunday and Monday on a visit to his father's where the whole family, except one, was present after a separation for several months. While here the old birthplace was visited, and the place of the dead was honored.

Brother J. R. Epperson and wife were present at the prayer meeting this week, after an absence in the work of the Sunday schools in the district.

Brother A. J. Wicker, the father of Sister J. R. Epperson, is improving from his illness, but his recovery is slow, and at his age not expected to be permanent, although the Lord does do marvelous things in this our day.

Chatham District Conference

On Friday, September 2, the Saints of Chatham District again met in conference capacity. Although the gathering was not so large as expected, yet the district was well represented. Owing to the illness of our president, the business session of Saturday afternoon was in charge of R. H. Jones, assisted by James Pycock, district missionary. All of the officers of the past year were sustained for another year, with the exception of the office of superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, which was filled by S. E. Miffin.

On Saturday evening we had an enjoyable time in the form of a varied program consisting of vocal solo by G. O. Coburn, district chorister, "Building song"; address by B. H. Hewitt, of the Toronto High School of Commerce, "Can we sit and watch the world go by"; vocal solo by Nellie Andrew, "Rose in the bud"; address by Lawrence Campbell, local pastor, "Automobile body finishing"; vocal solo by Royal Wood, "A perfect day"; reading by Annie Clark.

Sunday morning at nine o'clock, conference met in prayer and testimony meeting in charge of Arthur Leverton, assisted by J. C. Dent and Isaac Andrew. Brother Leverton, in his usual enthusiastic manner, confirmed his ardent faith in the work and offered many words of encouragement, the chief one being that "Prayer and devotion bring the Holy Spirit." The eleven o'clock service was Sunday school, in charge of local superintendent, J. A. W. Kettlewell.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, Bishop Dent gave us a very timely sermon, dealing with some of the things that we as Latter Day Saints often risk and leave to chance in our endeavor to win celestial glory. One of the outstanding statements made by Brother Dent was: "There is everything in this gospel to provide for a man from the cradle to celestial glory."

James Pycock was the speaker at 7.30 p. m., following a very fine song service conducted by Lawrence Campbell and a vocal solo by Sister Clifford Seldon, "Teach me to pray." Brother Pycock dealt with some present problems confronting not only our church but every form of organized religion. His theme was very fitting, and characteristic of the attitude of the Apostle Paul, who always was concerned with the present-day needs of humanity. Some of the questions dealt with were: 1. The depletion of rural population, which, however, should not prevent any from attending who live within twenty or thirty miles of a church building, owing to means of rapid transportation. 2. The fading interest in spontaneous religion, and the things substituted for it, such as sports and the radio. 3. The question of growth of our branches. Are we increasing in numbers in proportion to the increase in population of our various communities? 4. Narrow-mindedness. Pessimism in the world. Dissatisfaction with efforts of others. 5. Is the world getting better?

Brother Pycock expressed a firm conviction that it is getting better, evidenced by the present-day ideals of humanity which are higher than ever before, and that much of the so-called lawlessness of today is due to the higher standards of life which have been raised for us.

Vacation time is quite noticeable in that so many of our members are out of town. However, all meetings have been held regularly, and have been good and profitable to all.

On the 14th Brother A. E. Frazier and family, of Modesto, made us a visit, Brother Frazier favoring us with one of his forceful sermons.

Sister Edith Hardy and Mr. Edward Crane stole quietly away and were married in San Jose. Mr. Crane is employed by Uncle Sam, and they will make Stockton their home. Sister Edith has been our organist for several years and a worker in the branch in other lines. Their many friends all wish them the best.

Brother and Sister Caryl Holden, of San Francisco, were visitors on the 28th, Brother Holden occupying at the morning hour.

The Department of Women held a food sale at a downtown store on the 20th. Usually such activities are dispensed with during the summer months, but on account of the added improvements the women are desirous of doing their part to wipe out the debt.

Second Columbus, Ohio, Branch

The first prayer meeting in August was one long to be remembered, for two reasons: first, the Spirit of God was present in power to encourage; second, it was our pastor's birthday, and following prayer meeting a surprise was given H. E. French in commemoration of his forty-ninth birthday. We were glad to show our appreciation of his faithful service in this way. He was presented a beautiful wrist watch, and we hope he gets as much pleasure out of wearing it as we did in giving. Ice cream and cake were served to forty-four, and everyone had a good time.

I want to tell my readers about our branch president, who has acted in this capacity since February 15, 1915. We think him one of the best in the church. He is always willing to do more than his share. Although busy earning a livelihood all day, he finds time to visit those who are sick and need encouragement. From the experiences we have had under his leadership, we feel we are better prepared to follow our leader, the prophet. Since being ordained bishop his burden has been heavy, but still he has faithfully served us. We realize that sometime the church will require all his service and that we shall lose one who has grown very dear to us. We hope he shall be with us many years, but when God calls him to greater service, may we be able to say, Not our will but God's be done.

Sacramental service on August 7 was in charge of H. E. French and G. H. Kirkendall, a beautiful spirit being present to edify and help. Brother and Sister W. J. Graham, of Middleport, Ohio, were present.

The Department of Women met August 11 at the home of Sister Lucinda Madden, and a profitable evening was spent in study and social time.

At the morning service August 14 the baby daughter of Brother and Sister Joseph Wemlinger was blessed by H. E. French and G. H. Kirkendall, the former being mouthpiece.

The church was closed August 21 to permit those who wished to attend Kirtland reunion. The writer was privileged to attend the last two days and came home encouraged, well repaid for the trip to this historic place.

We are glad to have with us again Patriarch J. E. Matthews. He preached one of his beautiful sermons to us on the morning of the 28th. At the evening hour Patriarch G. T. Griffiths preached, taking for a text 1 Samuel 15: 22: "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice and to hearken than the fat of rams."

Other speakers for the month were H. E. French and G. H. Kirkendall. We heard some interesting and instructive sermons from these brothers.

The prayer meetings for the month have been of a high spiritual order.

September 1.—Fresno Branch has been moving steadily along during the summer months. Though some of our members were away, others visiting us made up the number, and we have been enjoying the spirit of love and union in all our services.

Among those visiting us was Sister Edith Vandell, of Nebraska, who remained in Fresno several weeks; we appreciated having her with us and hope for her return to Fresno. Others were Sister Inez Emerick and daughters, Loranna, Helen, and Hester, with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Emerick, of Bakersfield. Brother J. F. Wiles and family attend church in Fresno as often as is convenient for them. Brother Wiles usually speaks to us, and all are glad to hear him.

On July 14, Brother Cecil Troup and Sister Merriam Lewis stole a march on us and were secretly married in Dinuba by Brother Robert Hurley. They are at home to their many friends at 2042 Webster Street, Fresno.

One of the priests of our branch while visiting some scattered Saints in Sanger, saw a possibility of holding cottage prayer meetings and obtained the home of Brother and Sister J. Stainton, for Thursday evening of each week. There are usually from twelve to fourteen in attendance, and the Spirit of the Master is with them. They are looking forward to having a mission.

We are now preparing and training for the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," each one entering into the significance of his part and desirous of making it a success.

A Possible Opening for the Gospel

Work in this part of the Lord's vineyard is not progressing as well as I would like to see it, for many have moved away, making it rather difficult for the few left to carry on. They still have Sunday school part of the time at the community church, four miles west of town; also sacramental and prayer meeting every first Sunday in the month. The Department of Women is quilting a quilt for the bazaar this fall. They have one quilt already completed, and we are sewing rags to make rugs for the same purpose. Our little Sunday school here in town has had to be given up, for there are only three women left. Before Sister Baughman, Goldie, and Sammie, and the rest of her family left for Colorado, we certainly had an animated and interesting little Sunday school. It was with many regrets we saw them leave us.

But I have arrived at the main reason for writing this letter: Sister Sam Baughman and family moved to Hardin, Colorado, and they have no church privileges there. Sister Baughman is very desirous of having her children brought up under the influences of the church. Brother James Conover lives there. Brother Conover holds the priesthood, and his wife and Sister Baughman are fine church workers. I wish the missionaries of that district would call on these dear Saints and see if there could be anything done in the way of Sunday school and church services. Both these families have gone from our branch and are practically beginners in the work. Hardin is located east of Greeley about twenty miles.

Realizing that troublous times are near at hand, I am ever praying for the progress of the cause of church here and elsewhere.

SELDEN, KANSAS, September 1.

Duluth, Minnesota

Sixty Avenue West and Bristol Street

August 31.—We come again through the pages of the HERALD with our mite, to do our individual part in making our paper a welcome guest in the home of each Latter Day Saint.

On July 31 Pastor P. G. Schnuckle, was the speaker, using 1 Peter 3: 1-18 as a reading.

Sunday morning at eleven o'clock found us assembled together to partake of the broken body and spilled blood of our Lord and Savior, holding in remembrance the great sacrifice he made for us. Elder Ray Whiting, district president, presided, with Elders George W. Day and Samuel Case assisting. Brothers Robert Zuelsdorf and W. C. Stauty passed the emblems. A fine spirit prevailed, one which should encourage us to go onward and upward. Brother and Sister William Dennis, of Ashland, with their daughter, Dorothy, and Sister Lula Kopperhaver, of Gordon, Wisconsin, joined with us to receive a spiritual feast.

Brother Ray Whiting was the speaker in the evening, using John 14: 1-15, 30, 31. The text was John 10: 14: "For I am the good shepherd and know my sheep, and am known of mine." He read, "Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Show us the Father?" If we love God, we will keep his commandments, for they are life eternal. Jesus says, "The works I do in the Father's name testify of me." Can we not take this admonition to self? The works we do testify of our attitudes of life, whether for good or evil. Should we not be living epistles of righteousness?

Elder M. F. Gowell, of Independence, came up from Chetek, Wisconsin, making his headquarters at the home of W. C. Stauty. Wednesday, August 10, he met with the Department of Women at their regular semimonthly meeting and spoke to them, encouraging them in the work before them.

We have been holding forth from the 14th each evening two meetings, gathering first in prayer and then Brother Gowell speaks to us, bringing much counsel and admonition, exhorting us to move forward in unity, that atonement which characterizes the Lord. In his sermons Brother Gowell has brought to us many morsels of food divine, much food for thought, counseling us in the words of President Smith: "To be carefully prayerful and prayerfully careful." He brought to us a greater vision of the work of the church, the great program that is before us as a people. He comes as one that is filled with love for truth, a strong adviser of unity, of going forward, learning from past experiences. He has strengthened us for the work which lies before us in our city, believing now is the opportune time to work, and not to tarry allowing time to waste.

Sunday, August 21, we held a rally when we gathered for a day of continuous activity, starting it right by inducting into the kingdom of God two precious souls. This occurred at nine in the morning, W. C. Stauty officiating. Both candidates were young people. May their lives be guided aright by the hand of our Redeemer. Frank Lewis Lundie was confirmed by Elders M. F. Gowell and Robert Gunlock at the afternoon prayer service, while Dorothy Leona Olson was confirmed at the water's edge by Elders Samuel Case and M. F. Gowell. This day was indeed a feast spiritually as well as physically, for both the outer and inner man were supplied. How nice it is to learn to live together!

Out of town visitors were Brother J. P. Fetting, Port Huron, Michigan, chief engineer of the steamer J. C. Morse which plies the Great Lakes; Sister Samuel Sloan and Sister Susie Cravens, of Two Harbors, Minnesota; Sister A. H. Dathe, of Barnum, Minnesota; Brother and Sister J. E. Walters, of Carlton, Minnesota; Brother and Sister Robert Gunlock, of Minneapolis; and Brother Lester Whiting, of Clitherall, Minnesota, who has been with us since the 13th engaged in church work. Brother Lester Whiting, Brother Robert Gunlock, and Brother M. F. Gowell brought to us much food for thought, giving to us a greater realization of our duties before God and our fellow men.

Brother George W. Day, who has been employed by the D. M. & N. Railroad Company on its ore docks, has been laid off and left for North Dakota. We thank him for the service he has rendered us while in our midst.

On July 17 Dorothy Luverne White, eight-year-old daughter of Brother and Sister Harvey White, was baptized by Elder George W. Day and confirmed by Elders George W. Day and Samuel Case. This item was omitted in our July letter.

Elders M. F. Gowell and Lester Whiting have made a visit to the Two Harbors Saints, the former being there at this writing.

The contest for Christmas offering between the Whites and Greens is nearing a close, the time expiring after Sunday school September 4, when the boxes will be opened, and we shall find out which side must furnish the marshmallow and wiener roast on Indian Point.

Next month Sisters Mahala Bundy and C. E. Silverthorn will be captains on a contest tour over the Northern Pacific Railway on special trains on their way to Portland, Oregon, advancing one mile for each cent. The Sunday school will picnic at Chester Park Bowl Labor Day. This year it was placed on Labor Day so that the parents could join with the children in their enjoyment.

Sister Mollie Feathers has returned from viewing the Kirtland Temple, and is loud in praise of same, especially of the decorum had in the inner courts during meetings.

First Columbus Branch

On August 1 special prayer meeting was held for the sick. Elder J. Gabriel and Brother C. H. Foster were in charge, and an unusually goodly number of young people was present. The service was one of profit and interest.

Prayer meeting in charge of Elders Schafenberg and C. W. Clark was good. An encouraging crowd was in attendance.

The members of the Department of Women had a lawn fete on August 4, to aid in buying books for the teachers' training class.

August 6, sacrament Sunday was marked with a good service of the Lord's supper. At 7.30 p. m. High Priest C. W. Clark spoke on the theme "The awakening." There was a pleasing solo by Miss Moore.

The Y. P. A. had a surprise party on their president, E. Smith, and the usual good time was reported.

Prayer meeting on the 10th was conducted by Elders Anderton and Schafenberg. Brethren Schafenberg, Ted Welsh, and Theodore Daugherty were spoken to through High Priest Clark.

Kirtland reunion opened August 11, and in consequence there was a general exodus from our branch. The departure was so general that the last three days of reunion saw about all of our First Branch at Kirtland.

Preceding the reunion Brother and Sister C. H. Foster visited old-time Saints from England, Brother and Sister Whittaker, in Hamilton, Ontario, also stopping at Niagara Falls, Ontario, visiting Brother and Sister Lindlay and her mother and others that space will not permit our naming. They also visited Brother and Sister Alex Warner, of Niagara, New York, remaining with them four days and being shown the various points of interest by Brother and Sister Warner. Then on Wednesday at 4 a. m. both families moved on to Kirtland, where the power of God was made manifest. The meetings were spiritual feasts.

On August 24 prayer meeting was in charge of Elder John Gabriel, and a goodly number was present.

Sunday, August 28, found Patriarch G. T. Griffiths with us, and at 10.45 a. m. he spoke on "Spiritual neglect." Elder A. E. Anderton preached in the evening, using the subject "Moral courage." Comments concerning these two sermons were very complimentary.

The last Sabbath in August had prayer meeting in charge of Elder Fred C. Welsh, assisted by Elder A. E. Anderton. A special blessing was given to Elder Charles Schafenberg under the hands of Patriarch G. T. Griffiths. This was a good meeting.

San Jose, California

September 1.—On July 31 was held the first preaching service in the branch since the district reunion. Pastor Robert Cowden was the speaker at the morning hour, giving us some very good instruction. He reviewed some of the work done at the late reunion, putting special stress upon a revelation given through the Spirit by Evangelist John Martin. Brother Martin made a splendid impression upon the Saints at the reunion, particularly the young people.

The visitors today were Brother and Sister Thorman, of the San Francisco Branch. They tarried and camped at the reunion grounds, after the reunion closed, remaining there about a week.

The members of the Department of Women met on August 3, at the home of Sister Pearl Cowden, and gave a farewell party in honor of Sister Annie Jennings, and her daughter, Lilly, who have been visitors during the summer while Sister Lilly attended summer school at the state teachers' college. Their presence here was very much enjoyed, and the Saints were sorry to see them leave. They have returned to their home in Fresno, which move is no doubt appreciated by Saints of that place.

On the evening of the 3d thirty or more of the Saints gathered at the church for the midweek prayer meeting, which was very spiritual and much enjoyed by everyone. Visitors present at this meeting were: Brother and Sister Hartsough, and two daughters, from Redwood City; Brother Rudolph, of Independence, Missouri; Sister Annie Jennings and daughter, Lilly, of Fresno, California; Sister Rose Dawson, of Sacramento; and Sister Loyd, of Windsor, who is going to school at the teachers' college here at present. Elders Robert Cowden and Charles Cady were in charge of this meeting.

An item of interest, to two individuals at least, was omitted in our last news letter. Of it we now make mention. On Thursday, July 28, there occurred at the home of Brother and Sister Hawkins, a quiet wedding when Mr. Edwin W. Crane and Sister Edith May Hardy, both of Stockton, California, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Elder C. W. Hawkins officiating.

The regular semimonthly meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression was held on the evening of August 5. Attendance was more than average, and a profitable session was had. Professor Brant, of the Brant Institute of Music, was at this meeting and gave the department valuable information and advice in regard to the purchase of a suitable organ for their church building. He gave this talk by the request of some of his pupils who are members of the department, and it was deeply appreciated.

On Sunday, August 7, was held the sacramental service for the month. A splendid spirit was present which prevailed throughout the meeting. The visitors present at this meeting were Mrs. Rosenberg, of Santa Clara, mother of Brother Frank S. Laurence, of Lexington, Missouri, who also was present with his two nieces, Pearly and Irene Laurence; Sister Orpha Tully, of King City, California; Brother Oliver Tousley, late of Graceland College. The meeting was in charge of Elders Robert Cowden and C. W. Hawkins, assisted by Elder C. J. Cady, and Priest H. V. Bates, who passed the emblems.

Sunday, August 14, Elder V. B. Etzenhouser, pastor of Oakland Branch, was the speaker at the morning hour. He gave us a fine sermon, emphasizing the fact that Jesus was and is still the Christ. The effort was appreciated and well received.

At the close of his sermon Sister Ethel Christensen, district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, gave a splendid talk along her line of work. Music at this service was exceptionally fine.

Visitors present were Sister Etzenhouser, and Sister Ethel Christensen, of Oakland, Brother and Sister Hardy; and Brother and Sister Driver, of Irvington; Sister Crane, of Stockton; Sister Foreman, of Gilroy; Sister Anna Hawkins, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Mosier, of San Jose.

Regular meetings were held on Sunday, August 21, but the correspondent was out of town and has no report on the meetings.

On the evening of the 22d Elder John W. Rushton, pastor of the Saint Louis, Missouri, Branch, gave the Saints of this local a very agreeable surprise, and preached a fine sermon. It would take a very long measuring line to measure the depth of it. The Saints gave him a kindly greeting, and the sermon was well received. There were visitors present from Redwood City, and Oakland, and about half a dozen non-members from the town.

Brother and Sister Hawkins are visiting isolated Saints at Monterey, and Santa Cruz. Sister Minnie Bates is visiting relatives in Sacramento; Brother and Sister George Cowden are camping at Santa Cruz.

Joplin, Missouri

Twenty-First Street and Annie Baxter Avenue

"Good music constitutes half of the church service," was the expression uttered by Brother S. N. Gray at the beginning of the church service, Sunday morning, September 4. This statement was prompted by the song, "Nearer, my God, to thee," so beautifully sung by Sister May Lou Carrow. Elder C. T. Sheppard, in keeping with the order of the day, presented a sermon that was inspiring and helpful to all those who listened to it. His talk centered around the thought of "Loyalty." "Can God depend on us to do the task that he has given us the talent to do and intrusted to our care?" was a question he asked. He continued by expressing the sentiment that there is a work for all to do and that we shall be neglecting our duties if we shove those duties upon some one else's shoulder when the opportunity comes. Another thought was that if we are to redeem Zion we must not rock along with the world.

As a special visitor and an able speaker, J. T. Riley, of Pittsburg, Kansas, a missionary of long experience, was present to speak for twenty minutes at 11.40 a. m. He began by saying, "There is always something to talk about in the gospel." He deliberated upon the thought that we are not perfect, neither shall we be perfect until Christ comes to redeem his kingdom upon the earth. But though we may not be perfect, we are told to go on to perfection and prepare ourselves.

In the afternoon sacramental and prayer service, everyone expressed the joy that was his in being in the work. At the beginning of the meeting, every member of the priesthood offered prayer, there being twelve in number present.

A reception was held Friday, August 26, by Mrs. H. V.

Holthausen for Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gray, who were married at Independence, Monday, August 22. The bride, Eleanor Hufferd, is a daughter of Brother and Sister Hufferd, of Independence. The reception was held after services of the Department of Recreation and Expression at the church.

Oelwein, Iowa

The Oelwein correspondent is now visiting at Anderson, Indiana, and before giving an account of my trip will tell a little of the August news at home.

Mrs. Charles McKurker visited in Cedar Rapids this month, was there one Sunday but had to leave before church time. However she saw Brothers Yarrington and Kress a short time. It always does one good to meet the Saints in any locality. True Saints know how the spirit of real geniality prevails among us, and we feel as one big family.

Brother and Sister Charles Shippy spent Sunday, the 14th, in Clinton, the old home of the latter. They attended church there and met the Clinton Saints.

Friday, August 12, five girls of the intermediate grade, Ruth and Evelyn McGuire, Donna and Lois Powers, and Doris Kahler, gave recitations that were a credit to the ones who trained them, Mrs. Bernice Pratt also rendered a musical number, "Little Boy Blue."

Ira Shippy and Ervine Weston spent a week-end in Independence this month. They enjoyed all the meetings and came home happy, as all do who really appreciate the opportunity of being able to visit the headquarters of our church. The writer's son met Sister Estella Wight in the Herald Office and was most pleased to meet her. He knew his mother would have hailed it as a most delightful privilege, she having written stories for Sister Wight's paper, Stepping Stones, and corresponded with her at intervals for a number of years.

Elder William Weston, of Lamont, Iowa, visited us the first Sunday in the month and attended prayer and sacramental meeting. He is a most earnest man and always makes a clear and concise talk on the gospel.

The Women's Society met with Brother McFarlane's family, Thursday, August 11, and had scripture questions for the lesson, just to see how well grounded they were on Bible characters (men). They have studied Doctrine and Covenants for over a year and as extra study have taken story-telling and Mrs. Etzenhouser's lectures as given in the HERALD. There are some very earnest young mothers here who are anxious to study and improve their minds as far as possible. We feel it the duty of all our women, young and old, to study all good books, that they may be able to better understand the great plan of our church and accept the gospel.

A rare little musician has been added to our church from Clinton, and it is indeed an excellent acquisition. Our young men and maidens are requested to cultivate the gift of song.

We are few in number in Oelwein, but are striving most earnestly to do the things we know are approved by our God and by our noble leader, Frederick M. Smith. We wish always to follow in the straight and narrow path.

" 'Tis a narrow way and a long way
We must follow all our earthly life;
But the city that it really leads to,
We are nearing, surely nearing every day,
The reward is surely certain
The bright crown for even you."

On our trip we have visited the home of the poet, James Whitcomb Riley, in Indianapolis. It stands on a short street only half a block long, a tall, old-fashioned building of brick. We tried to gain entrance, but the caretaker said it was after time that day. Then we visited the house where he was born in the town of Greenfield in 1849. It is a two-story frame building and in excellent condition. I have been an admirer of the Hoosier poet for many years, and his poems,

"Little Orphant Annie," "Old swimmin' hole," and "Old sweetheart of mine" were favorites with me.

Indianapolis is a city of many beautiful homes. The capitol building, courthouse, Monument circle, a wonderful statue with figures of men representing nearly all the wars of our Nation, are to be seen here. There is a fountain on each side of the statue.

We also saw in Galena, Illinois, a monument for General Ulysses S. Grant and the house where he lived in that city. Having once seen the famous general in Dubuque, it was pleasing even at this late date to see his home and monument.

Anderson is a city of some 40,000 people and noted for the large building the Remy Manufacturing Company has here. Many people, both men and women, are employed.

There is no branch of our church in this town, and I do miss our Sunday school and church and weekly prayer meetings.

Indiana is not a good farming country, as there is gravel underneath the soil, which allows the moisture to drain off. The roads here, however, are better than in many States, as all roads, even country lanes, are graveled. One sees great piles of gravel along in places. The corn in this section of the country is not as good as it is in my home State, but then we know that Iowa is where the tall corn grows even if the paved roads end and the mud begins.

Huntsville near here shall have celebrated its hundredth birthday in 1930. It came very near being the state capital at one time but lost out to Indianapolis.

At La Fayette, Indiana, is also the noted college of Purdue. The buildings seem to cover a good deal of ground.

Mishawka, Indiana

Sunday, July 31, the South Bend and Mishawaka, Indiana, Branch was quite well represented at Indian Lake reunion. Among those who attended were Sister Myrtle Perry, Brother and Sister Lee Coonfare, Sister Margaret Tappan, Brother Fred Struebe, and Sister Lillian Freeman. Brother A. H. Nieman, of Columbus, Ohio, and Brother and Sister Seymour, of Berrien Springs, Michigan, met with the few that remained at home. Regular services were held, with the exception of the evening preaching service.

Twenty-two were present for the sacramental service, August 7. Brothers Coonfare, Perry, and Walter were in charge. A splendid spirit was present, and the faith of the Saints was renewed. Special prayer were offered for Sister Slack, of Elkhart, who was in a very critical condition.

Brother and Sister C. A. Ferry, Brother and Sister Lee Coonfare, Sister Margaret Tappan, and son, Leonard, Sister Myrtle Perry, of South Bend, and Brother and Sister M. J. Willsey, and Brother and Sister R. R. Walter, of Elkhart, Indiana, were permitted to attend the Kirtland reunion. They returned feeling they were well repaid for the effort made.

Brother and Sister John Hoover are camping in Michigan for about two months, hoping his health will be benefited.

Mrs. Jennie Serman, of 1819 Sheffield Avenue, Chicago, spent a week with her sister, Mrs. Clair Galloway. She met with us for services Sunday, the 21st, and expressed the hope that she could get in touch with the church in Chicago.

The Department of Women met with Sister Eura Fout, at Koontz Lake, near Walkerton, Indiana, August 25. A lovely time was enjoyed by the few that were able to go.

August, it seems, was noted for its reunions, both family and church. We can not report much accomplished, but our sick seem to be improving, and most of the wage earners have employment. The clouds are breaking. Activities are planned for the month ahead, and we trust growth will be made.

Independence

Stone Church

Early Sunday morning the Stone Church was the scene of activity, it being the gathering point for those who went on the historical trip. A large number of Saints of all ages met there. They had planned to leave at half past six, but were delayed because of rain until seven o'clock. Then under the leadership of Elder John F. Sheehy and Elder C. Ed. Miller everyone was given a place in an automobile, lunches were stowed away, stickers bearing the words Far West were displayed, and they were off. The rain was a blessing, for it cooled the air and laid the dust, making the trip more enjoyable to all.

In charge of Superintendent G. S. Trowbridge and Associate Superintendent Glenn Fairbanks, the Sunday school assembled and held a profitable hour. As a special number Miss Dorothy Koehler, who for the past weeks has been presiding at the organ for the Sunday school session, played a beautiful organ solo.

Patriarch H. O. Smith as the morning speaker read for his text Philippians 4:8: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." His discourse centered about the Book of Mormon and what it purports to be, and he presented some conclusive evidence substantiating our belief in its divinity and importance. First, he took up the discussion of the Book of Mormon as a history of people who formerly inhabited the American continents, and read the blessing of Joseph given by his father, Jacob, as recorded in Genesis 49:22-26; also the description of Joseph's land found in Deuteronomy, and then in answer to the question; If the Book of Mormon is a record prepared and brought forth for the good of man, does the Bible say anything about it? he gave numerous scriptural quotations referring to the "stick of Joseph," "the words of a book that is sealed," "thy speech shall be low out of the dust," etc., showing how the coming forth of the Book of Mormon is the fulfillment of prophecy. The attention of the congregation was called to several principles which teachings of the Book of Mormon settle altogether, such as infant baptism, the mode of baptism, partaking of the sacrament, the dual nature of man, moral teachings, and others. Brother Smith spoke earnestly upon his comprehensive subject, giving the people proof of his statements and appealing to their reason. The hour was one of instruction and enjoyment.

Again the Stone Church choir is back with us after a few weeks' rest. It was good to see the members of this organization in their usual places Sunday morning. Led by Chorister Paul N. Craig, the choir rendered a pleasing anthem, Miss Lilly Belle Allen taking the solo, and Brother Albert Brackenbury sang a bass solo, "Rest," being accompanied at the piano by Robert Miller.

Friday evening, September 16, at 6.30, a banquet was served the fifty-seven graduating juniors in the dining hall by the junior department. G. S. Trowbridge, superintendent of the Stone Church Sunday school, was master of ceremonies. A farewell speech was made by Miss Lillian Nunamaker, superintendent of the junior department. Glenn Fairbanks, assistant superintendent of the Stone Church Sunday school, gave the welcome to the incoming intermediates. Bishop Becker was the speaker of the evening. The tables were prettily decorated in yellow and white, and chicken, potatoes, baked beans, ice cream, and cake were served. The dinner was very much enjoyed, as the children felt they were just like the grown-ups.

At the Campus at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning the juniors considered they were highly honored. Brother John A. Gardner, publicity agent, showed views he had taken on his visit to Palmyra and the Hill Cumorah. The talk accompanying the pictures was interesting, and they feel as the speaker said, that now after seeing the views they know for a surety that there is a Hill Cumorah and there is a Book of Mormon.

Promptly at six in the evening of the last Sabbath, the Religio began its second session of the season. It had been announced that this evening was to be election of officers for this department, but owing to the fact that a number of active Religio members were absent, having gone on the historical trip, and that attendance at the beginning of the meeting was small, the business was postponed until next week. About half a dozen classes of this school met and made definite plans for the work of the coming months.

Elder F. A. Cool presided over the evening meeting, announcing the soloist, Miss Lilly Belle Allen, and the evening's speaker, Evangelist H. O. Smith. In keeping with the program of the evening meeting, Brother Smith told in an interesting way four outstanding experiences in his ministerial life in the church. These were of such a nature as to convince him of the truthfulness of the gospel and the divinity of his calling to the priesthood. Having been for many years a laborer in God's vineyard, Brother Smith's life is rich with experiences of a spiritually strengthening nature. His hearers were edified.

The film which followed the sermon was "Noah and the ark"; also there were some beautiful scenic views.

The prospects for the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences promise a winter of instruction and growth. Presided over by a corps of consecrated instructors who are giving their time and effort free, classes are meeting regularly. The students are eager and interested, and the faculty is pleased with the type of purposeful young people who are coming to the Campus, many of them every night, this year. Enrollment in the high school is gradually creeping up, being more than a third higher now than at first; and while enrollment in the junior college courses is not as large as it might be, those who are enrolled are ready to work.

On Friday evenings a number of special courses are being offered, and a student may take three classes on that night. Some of the courses offered are recreational leadership, parentcraft, public speaking, journalism, dressmaking, landscape gardening, and others. Brother Floris Hand teaches the landscape gardening, and it is hoped that he will have a large class. If we are to be real Zion builders, we must know how to make our homes beautiful outside and inside. Here is your opportunity to learn gardening. On Tuesday evenings there will be a class on interior decorating, taught by Brother Frank S. Jennings, who is well qualified for this work. This course will help Zion builders beautify their homes. The journalism class is another opportunity for those who wish to learn to write for the church papers. Brother Leslie E. Flowers is teacher of this class.

There is yet time to enroll, but do not put it off. The classes are already at work, and if you wait, work will have to be made up.

Independence Music Club

The Music Club conducted its contest for prize scholarships on Friday evening at the Stone Church. First and second prizes were offered in piano and voice, first prizes being one year's scholarships in piano and voice; second prizes were one half year's scholarships.

There were seven persons in the contest which was conducted by carefully chosen judges who used the standard score card, which places musical talent first.

This is the first year the Independence Music Club has conducted the contest by tryouts before a board of judges. The scholarships are in the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Winners of the prizes were: Piano: First place, Emma-gene Etzenhouser, nine years of age; second place, Rosamond Filson. Voice: First place, Doris Blake, fifteen years of age; second place, Mrs. Frank Good.

The Music Club also maintains a loan fund of three hundred dollars which it places annually.

Interesting Personals

Now that reunion season is a thing of the past, members of the various quorums are setting themselves at other tasks. Some have been home for a week or two; others have gone from reunions into new communities. Each new achievement spurs them on to make greater plans and climb toward higher goals.

President F. M. Smith is home at present, kept busy at the office. We suspect he finds time to visit the Auditorium frequently. He was in Saint Louis the middle of last week. President Floyd M. McDowell spent the latter part of last week in Lamoni, and has arranged with Apostle John F. Garver to hold a ministerial institute in Council Bluffs, Iowa, this week-end. Bishop Albert Carmichael is in Owen Sound District, in Canada, and expects to be there for several days. Brothers Garver and Edwards spent Saturday and Sunday with Rock Island, Illinois, Saints, and report a good meeting. Brother James A. Gillen, president of the Twelve, departs for the West soon to start his winter accomplishments; also Apostle E. J. Gleazer is leaving for Colorado. Brothers McConley and Curtis are in their respective fields, as is Brother Hanson. It is sometimes hard to say just where all conference appointees are. They move constantly from place to place, preaching the gospel, spreading the truth, and are so busy that they do not always keep headquarters fully notified of their whereabouts.

The "Messiah Choir"

Preparation for the tenth annual Christmas rendition of Handel's great oratorio by the Messiah Choir begins next Sunday, September 25, at the Stone Church at 4 p. m. Announcements urge that members let nothing short of physical inability prevent their attending this first rehearsal. They are invited to consider the benefits of Messiah Choir activity to themselves and to the church, to look forward to 1930, when it is expected that a great chorus of voices from choirs throughout the church will join in the rendition of "The Messiah" in the new Auditorium Building; and to bring their thoughts to this first rehearsal.

Brother Paul N. Craig, conductor, the board of managers, secretaries, accompanists, and membership committee are already at work. Opportunity for affiliating with the choir was granted new voices on Sunday. Further opportunity will be extended next Sunday. Any not yet enrolled who desire to assist in this choir movement are urged to meet with the membership committee at the Stone Church dining hall between 3 and 4 o'clock next Sunday. The committee desires to complete its work, that all may have part in the first rehearsal.

"Remember Cumorah"

The Book of Mormon pageant, "Remember Cumorah," is being rehearsed each night in the Auditorium Building. Curtains are being hung, lights and scenery arranged and placed. Sister Gladys Newton Six, of Ford, Kansas, is taking complete charge of the production. Paul N. Craig will direct the chorus numbers sung in the pageant and the Hallelujah Chorus to be sung at the close.

The rendition will be on Friday and Saturday nights, September 24 and 25, and it is likely the seating capacity will be taxed to its limit. Friday night is designed principally for Independence Saints, and it is hoped Independence people who can by any possibility arrange attendance for that evening will do so, and this will leave it possible to seat the visitors who will attend Saturday night, from Kansas City, Holden, and Far West Stakes in large numbers, and in smaller number from many more distant points.

The complete cast of characters is as follows: The Historian, Kenneth Fligg; Two Children, Ruth Holsworth, Lucile Watkins; The Minister, Doctor J. A. Harper; Joseph, Albert Brackenbury; First Nephite, John Sheehy; Second Nephite, George Gates; Third Nephite, A. K. Dillee; Moroni, Elbert Dempsey; The Church, Nina Smith; The Blind Man, Mansel Williams. Industrial groups and foreign countries are represented by the following: D. R. Snively, J. M. Peck, Wesley Brocaw, Edward Brackenbury, Ray Moler, D. O. Cato, Mrs. Warnock, J. A. Holsworth, Kathleen Armour, Rosa Small, Mr. Ellis, John Davis, Ella Jones, Suzanne Lenham, Jack Custead and wife, Margery Bartholomew, Emlyn Fender, William Gard, Samuel Thiel, Muriel Etzenhouser, Elizabeth Okerlind, Mary Okerland, Hazel Clow, Joe Farrow, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, Fred Rauh, Marcine Smith, Pauline Murphy, Alfred Powers, Pauline Siegfried, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Inouye, George Gould, Mary Arterburn, Donald Pierson, Mrs. William Gard, Mr. and Mrs. Jess West, Agnes Adams, J. G. Fairbanks, Mrs. J. G. Fairbanks, Joe Katsumma, Wilma Dalzell, Tom Franklin, Thelma Vincent, Roland Flanders, Lillian Williams, Quentin Madison, Harry Blake, Doris Blake, Madeline Barto, Lee Davis, Hilton Hartley, Beatrice McNamara, Francis Anderson, R. J. Pace.

Second Church

The Saints of Second Church were edified by two splendid sermons on Sunday, as well as the other regular services of the day. In the forenoon Bishop G. W. Eastwood spoke with good liberty to a very attentive, interested audience. In the evening Apostle Roy Budd stressed the fact that we are called to be Saints, pointing out to us some of the things necessary to heed that calling. He spoke as a special witness and as one having authority.

At 6.15 p. m. the Religio reorganized, selecting the following officers: Superintendent, Lora Weir; assistant superintendent, Ted Scott; secretary, Mark Diefendorf; treasurer, Maudel Hopkins; chorister, Vera Redfield; pianist, Palace McPherson; member of library board, Brother Shedd. They are a band of young enthusiastic workers, and we believe under their leadership the department will go forward.

Liberty Street

On Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour the choir sang an anthem, "The blessing in my soul." Brother Ivor Davies was the speaker, to our profit and pleasure. He related some of his interesting, personal experiences, when he has been called upon to defend the gospel. Following the sermon Mrs. Donkwich sang a pleasing solo, "Twilight and dawn."

Sunday evening the Religio met to choose officers for the coming year. Brother Glenn Davies was elected president, with Ray Wrigley and Irma Peek assistants; secretary, Ruby Inman; pianist, Evelyn Turner; chorister, Sister Lee Davis; treasurer, Walter Curtis. The Religio officers gave a clever play written by Miss Irma Peek, "The building of the church."

At the evening service the congregation was favored with a number from the Liberty Street Quartet, "I would know him," and a vocal duet, "The beautiful garden of prayer," by Mrs. E. C. Harrington and Mrs. Viola Parsons. The choir contributed its number, "Guide me, Savior."

Elder R. L. Bishop, of Mount Washington, was our speaker for the evening. He took as his subject, "God everywhere—and nature." In conclusion he read two poems, "The non-believer," by Edgar Guest, and "The beautiful world."

On one day last week Elder Coral E. Willis, of this district, fell while at his carpenter work on a building in Kansas City, sustaining severe injuries of the spine. He was immediately brought to the Independence Sanitarium, where an operation was performed. The prayers of the Saints are for Brother Willis that he may make a speedy recovery.

Walnut Park

On Wednesday evening, the 14th, a special meeting of the district was held at the church, called by the church Presidency. Elders F. W. Lanpher and C. Ed. Miller were in charge. A half hour of prayer and testimony was enjoyed, after which President F. M. McDowell was given opportunity to present the information for which the meeting was called. He settled a matter of considerable interest to the Saints by stating that since for the second time this year we were without a pastor, the Presidency had arranged to appoint one for the balance of the year and named a young man who during the past few years has had pastoral experience in Coffeyville, Kansas—Elder Howard P. Andersen, son of the late Apostle Peter Andersen. Brother Andersen was present and being a stranger to many was asked for a short talk, after which, at the suggestion of a local officer, a unanimous expression of welcome was extended to him and to his wife.

The funeral of Brother Robert Grey Kirkwood, aged seventy-eight, whose death was reported last week, occurred at the church on the 14th, Elder B. J. Scott officiating. Sister Kirkwood is making her home with relatives at present and has the sympathy of many friends in her loneliness.

The women of Group 28, Sister Laura Mosier, leader, arrange each year for a course of study. This year they are beginning home nursing. They have invited all who are interested to meet with them on Friday afternoons, and at their first meeting, last Friday, forty women came, more than could be conveniently accommodated in a private house, so they went to the church basement where Miss Dunham, the county nurse, gave an interesting demonstration in the first principles of the profession.

On Sunday the attendance was splendid in spite of the popular historical trip. The same earnest zeal continues at the eight o'clock prayer meeting.

At eleven, Pastor Howard Andersen was in charge, with Ada Fallon and her girls' chorus serving creditably as choir. Elder R. D. Weaver was the speaker, teaching in his definite and forceful way the absolute futility of following after the vain things of this world, for—"he that drinketh of this water shall thirst again."

In the evening, the weather having turned cooler, the Saints were glad to gather back to the church after the summer evenings at the Campus, and a fine crowd greeted Brother Anderson to hear his first sermon at this place. Sister Minnie Dobson directed congregational singing. The speaker, basing his discourse on various scriptural passages concerning love as a foundation for qualifying as effective workers for the Lord, enjoyed splendid liberty and made his applications clear and interesting.

East Independence

On September 11 Brother Hancock spoke to our congregation on the subject, "Faith." If our lives are as his sermon, full of faith from beginning to end, we shall be able to withstand all trying things and come out at the end conqueror. In the evening Evangelist T. C. Kelley preached an interesting discourse.

Last Sunday Brother J. W. Davis was the speaker. As a text he took the words, "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven," associating with it this verse: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness, and then shall the end come." His was a helpful discourse, which made us want to reconsecrate our lives to the service of God, and breathed the missionary spirit throughout. He urged the parents to dedicate their children to the work of the Lord.

Pastor N. Carmichael spoke in the evening on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. He delivered a very interesting discourse and especially appealed to the young people to study the Book of Mormon.

Enoch Hill

Elder Thomas Hartnell was the Sunday morning speaker on Enoch Hill, and his discourse was based upon the Book of Mormon. His attention was principally given to a discussion of the divinity of the book, its importance, and the proof of the existence of early inhabitants of the American continents as presented by archæologists. Brother Hartnell stated in the beginning of his sermon that he was not accustomed to preaching to a congregation of Saints in Independence but his listeners deeply appreciated the instruction he imparted and the clear and direct way in which he presented his beliefs. We shall be pleased to have him speak to us again. Sister John Jones at this hour sang a solo, "I have been alone with Jesus."

On Sunday evening Enoch Hill Saints gathered in the little white church on the hill for the first time since evening services were dismissed, that the Saints might attend Sunday evening meetings at the Campus. Elder Ralph W. Farrell was the speaker and was accorded undivided attention by the congregation.

The cafeteria supper, a new thing in this district, held on the church lawn last Friday night was a success in every sense. It was sponsored by Group 33 South; and Group 33 North had a booth on the ground. A large crowd was in attendance, and the decorum was excellent. More than fifty dollars were cleared by the two groups, and everyone is hoping the experiment will be repeated.

Graceland ChatsExtracts From President Briggs's Welcome to the Students of Graceland

What we all are, Graceland College will be. Our talk, our habits, and our attitude will determine the standards of the college. Our work, our study, and our pay create those conditions and the atmosphere for a truly great institution. If our standards are high, they will furnish an example, a memory, and an inspiration to all at times of depression and when difficult problems must be solved.

One of the most distinguished industrial leaders of all ages recently said "All the carefulness, dependability, honest pride, and power one builds into his work is somehow built back into oneself."

A college education, then, is a matter of development of character, not primarily so much mathematics, so much science, so much history. These are all very important as effecting character development, especially the thoroughness and carefulness with which they are done.

My best wish for you all is that the year may bring to you the happiness and growth which you have each measured out for yourselves and for which your parents and loved ones have made you ready.

With the happiest of greetings and the heartiest of welcome, we enter upon the new year with every indication that it will be our very best.

G. N. BRIGGS, President.

Freshmen Week

The Freshmen this year were given an opportunity that those who have gone before did not have. They came early and were given a touch of the Graceland spirit, and were also conducted into the realm of college life before their older brothers landed. Then when the upper classmen returned, they were greeted by a class of freshmen which had already started on its way. Because of this week, everyone has a better start, and the Graceland activities will move much easier and faster this year.—Record.

Sunday Services

The Graceland spirit was demonstrated to the new students last Sunday morning in the college chapel. An informal service of song and special musical numbers together with a few short talks was held. Both old and new students were urged to take advantage of the religious opportunities offered in Lamoni. It is hoped that all students will endeavor to build up a balanced personality while at Graceland.

At 11 o'clock a special service was held at the Brick Church, where Apostle D. T. Williams spoke on "The power of thought."

In the afternoon a "get acquainted" service was held in the lower auditorium for the college students. After an appropriate program, the students were taken for a drive by the Lamoni people. Old historic and noteworthy scenic spots were visited, and the students feel that they are just a little better acquainted, and really feel this is home.

After the congregational singing, Apostle J. F. Garver was the speaker at the evening service—Record.

Social Is Held for the Gracelanders

Another event for the Graceland freshmen was a reception given for them Friday night on the church lawn by the Lamoni young people.

It started off with a snap with Uncle Roy in charge. A large circle was formed by the Lamoni young people, and the college people marched inside the circle and formed another. Both circles marched around, and at a signal they stopped and each became acquainted with his neighbor in the opposite circle. After this everyone was seated on the ground.

It was an inspiring sight to see almost three hundred young people seated on the beautiful church lawn engaged in contests and games. Older folks looking on could not have helped but be encouraged concerning the future workers for the church.

A grand opera was staged by a group of last year's college students—the like of which has certainly never been seen or heard in Lamoni before. It's too bad Miss Carlile could not have been there to make some selections for the A Cappella Chorus. Seeing it, might also have helped Mr. Roberts in selecting some new College Players.

Another enjoyable event was the dramatized songs by a group of Lamoni young people.

Short speeches of welcome were made to the freshmen by Brother Walter Hayer, superintendent of the Sunday school, and by Brother Fred Condit, assistant superintendent of the Religio.

Since the evening was so warm, everyone agreed that the most delightful part was the iced punch, and there was enough to go around several times, too. Please don't ask Dean Jones how many cupfuls he drank.

The college people want to express their appreciation of the good time given them by the Lamoni young people, and hope they can be real workers with them the coming year.

West Pullman, Chicago

11926 Parnell Avenue

Our branch was closed during the first two weeks of August with the exception of the midweek prayer service, to allow our members to attend the reunion at Elmhurst. We returned for a feast of good things on the 21st and with an increased desire to press forward in this latter-day work.

We were indeed glad to have with us as a speaker on the morning of the 21st Brother Joseph Smith, of Independence, Missouri. His theme showed us very clearly the many instances of divine interference in history, and he concluded his discourse with a fervent appeal to the Saints to remain faithful during the trying times ahead of us. Brother George Anway, of Lamoni, rendered a beautiful solo at this service. We are glad to have Brother Anway contribute to our service.

The evening service was one of unusual interest when Sister Nelson, of Independence, Missouri, gave her wonderful lecture on "The quest of happiness." This lecture served to inspire the Saints and was an incentive to move forward in search of this happiness.

On the morning of the 28th, our district president addressed us from the third chapter of Malachi, appealing to the people to honor the requirements of the gospel law, that righteousness might abound in our lives. Brother Harold Buseth sang a beautiful solo as a special number. In the evening Brother Roy Healy spoke to us from John 10:10: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly," pleading for a better class of literature to be placed in the homes of the Saints. Brother Howard Byrn, of Terra Haute, Indiana, played a beautiful cornet solo, and Sister Batten, of Central Chicago, sang a special number. Our chorister, Sister Irene Scribner, is always on the job, providing special music for our services.

Among those visiting with us the past month were Howard Byrn, of Terre Haute, Indiana; Will Dowker, of Danville, Illinois; and Sister David Dowker and family. Visitors are always welcome to meet with us.

Saint Louis, Missouri

Beginning this Sunday, September 11, the evening services will be renewed. They were suspended during July and August.

The priesthood meeting will convene Tuesday evening, the 13th, at 8 o'clock, in the vestry.

The Ladies' Aid Society has resumed its sessions and will meet each Thursday morning at 10.30.

Prayers were asked for Sisters Minshell, Richardson (in the Missouri Baptist Hospital), Bessie Peat (in the Deaconesses Hospital), Ahalt, Anna DeJong Smith, McCash, Anna Bateman, and others. A very sympathetic spirit pervaded the service, and all enjoyed the prayers and testimonies which were offered.

We were glad to welcome as visitors among others, Brother and Sister Wolfe, of Kansas City; Brother and Sister Swartz and son and nephew; Brother Fears, of Chicago; Brother Genaseo, of Jerusalem, a student at Graceland College; and Sister Ollie Cook, of Chicago.

We are grieved to learn of the sudden death of Brother Jones recently, who after a serious operation in the Saint John's Hospital and a very critical time, seemed to be recovering. Brother R. Archibald conducted the services.

We are sorry to know that Miss Florence Schaffer, one of our faithful workers, was the victim of an auto accident, but glad to know she is recovering. Mr. Amos, husband of one of our members, was injured in an explosion at the Niedringhaus plant in Granite City, in which six men were killed. Glad to report he is recovering.

In the month of July there was a very pretty wedding in the church, when Brother Archibald solemnized the marriage of Brother A. Carl Larsen and Sister Helen Archibald. We extend hearty congratulations to them and pray for happiness and prosperity.

A Church Member Sixty-four Years

The Herald Publishing House has an interesting letter from Sister Alice Savage, Route 6, Number 239, Oregon City, Oregon: Our sister is seventy-two years of age and has been a member of the church since she attained the age of eight years. In her present circumstances she can not get the full amount of good from meeting with the Saints, for she is quite deaf. It is also hard for her to get to the church house, for rheumatism has afflicted her so that she can with only the greatest difficulty mount any stairs. She sends a remittance for four of the church papers and asks that the prayers of the Saints may be enlisted for her, that she may have reasonable comfort in her advancing age. She sends in her declared intention to again read the Book of Mormon, which she has begun.

The new hardwood floor awaited the scurrying feet of gym classes and the later basketball frays of the winter. The athletic offices were located in their new quarters at the front of the gymnasium.

The athletic program of the college is getting under way. Football practice began Monday, September 12, and thirty-one candidates have been braving the extreme heat of early workouts on offense tactics. According to Coach A. R. Gilbert, the outlook for the football season is "fair." Seven letter men are back, and although there is no stellar material, the prospects for a good eleven are in sight. At any rate they will play as Graceland players always do—clean, hard football, win or lose—for Coach "Willie" demands good sportsmen. Graceland will have a good line, but will be short on experienced backfield men as in previous years. The first game is scheduled for October 1, when Graceland plays Iowa Wesleyan at Mount Pleasant.

Twenty men are out for the six weeks of fall track practice. Basketball practice will begin in late November, with the games following the holidays. The intramural athletic schedule will be started at once; the men are now practicing tag football, and the women in playground ball. The women are beginning plans for their annual gym show to be given in the spring.

Graceland continues her "self-help" plan, by which about fifty per cent of her students will work their way through college this year. The industrial department received during the summer more applications for work than could be taken care of. A number of new positions have opened up this year, more women students are employed in the homes of Lamoni than ever before, and more boys are at work on farms nearby. All who came were placed, but many did not come because work could not be promised them. About one hundred and twenty-five students are now or will be working outside of school hours this term. According to N. Ray Carmichael, business manager of the college, the possibilities for student self-help have been covered more thoroughly this year than ever before. And yet the increasing numbers who stayed at home for lack of such help indicates the great need for development in the college community of further means of employment.

The opening chapel of the school year was held Friday morning, September 16. Devotional exercises were in charge of Roy A. Cheville. President F. M. McDowell was the speaker, coming with some suggestions as to the problems to be faced by the students—problems of self-direction, choice, and purpose. He urged that Graceland students should catch, in addition to their intellectual progress, the zeal of the men and women who sacrificed to make the school what it is today.

The faculty and students met informally at the annual faculty reception Friday night in Zimmermann Hall. Short talks were given by Mayor George W. Blair and Apostle John F. Garver. Distinctive songs were rendered by groups—faculty, academy, freshmen, sophomore, juniors, and alumni. A grand march was staged—ending up eventually at the refreshment tables where punch and wafers were served.

Thus the new Graceland year is ushered in. One who visits the scene but temporarily is thrilled with the handclasp and the hearty greeting of renewed friendships, the pleasure of meeting new people, forming new bonds of fellowship. There comes, too, a feeling of loneliness and "left out-ed-ness" in the activity of freshly swollen ranks, a longing tug at one's heart to be again numbered among those who throng into the classroom, a sense of standing back while others come into the place once yours. Yet what a feeling of joy at the ever-increasing caravan of happy, hungry, earnest, youth coming eagerly up the Hill and into these halls, seeking what Graceland so willingly and reverently gives to them! What a feeling of common purpose, of fellowship in mutual ideals and mutual sharing of this source, this fountain of life—our college, the crystallization of our educational hopes and ambitions.

The ties of Graceland fellowship transcend time and place, and even though thousands come and go in the shadows of her towers—yet one in meeting another of this vast throng feels that he has in him a friend, for they have tasted of joys, the meaning and sweetness of which both understand.

Youth marches on—some must always face the world and bear the torch, lighted at Graceland's altar, aloft and into life. For those who have passed through the sacred halls, it is to represent Graceland in the world, and do it well. Thus they encourage those still within her walls and those yet to come beneath her benediction.

L. E. F.

"Remember Cumorah" is to be given September 23 and 24 in the basement of the Auditorium Building. Friday evening is for Independence people, and Saturday evening for out of town visitors, of whom there will be many. President Elbert A. Smith has done some splendid work in the authorship of this centennial pageant, and the White Masque Players are expecting to give it a masterly rendition.

Our Departed Ones

JOHNSON.—Eric Johnson was born in Sweden, November 3, 1844. Emigrated to America, locating in Chicago, where with his wife he obeyed the restored gospel under ministry of M. H. Forscutt. His wife and four children, two sons and two daughters, preceded him in death. Some ten years ago he moved to Lamoni, where he resided since, the last three years as an inmate of Saints' Home. There he died September 12, 1927, in his eighty-third year. The funeral was conducted at the Home, the sermon by G. R. Wells, assisted by J. M. Stubbart. The only surviving relative present was Mrs. Grace Johnson, daughter-in-law, of Chicago, Illinois. Interment was in Rose Hill Cemetery, Lamoni.

GODFREY.—Seth Ulysses Godfrey, son of John and Mary Godfrey, was born October 19, 1908, at Delta, Colorado. Baptized June 14, 1917, at Lamoni, by R. A. Ballantyne. Was employed at the factory of the Buick Motor Company, Flint, Michigan, when death came September 10, 1927, after a brief illness and an operation for appendicitis. About a year ago he had a premonition that he would not live to see twenty years. He was in his nineteenth year at the time of his death. Besides father and mother, there remain six brothers, Albert, George, Leonard, Ether, Harold, Dewey, and two sisters, Frances and Anna. The deceased was a good son. Funeral sermon at Brick Church, Lamoni, September 13, by G. R. Wells, assisted by J. M. Stubbart. Interment in Rose Hill Cemetery.

ST. JOHN.—Fred Carl Dolan St. John was born near Burlington, Vermont, April 23, 1878. Most of his boyhood was spent in Michigan. On June 10, 1894, he was baptized into the church and on September 3, 1916, was ordained a teacher. Died at Oak Park, Illinois, August 10, 1927. He leaves to mourn his passing his wife, Hattie St. John, and five sisters. Brother St. John was a loyal and devoted Saint, a faithful servant of the Lord, a true and loving companion, and a person loved by all who knew him. A good man has gone on to a sure reward, and his friends will miss him. Funeral services were conducted from the late home in Oak Park, on August 13, 1927. Henry P. W. Keir in charge; sermon by David E. Dowker.

Satisfaction

It is one of the satisfactions of life to have investments that turn out right—that keep every dollar of principal safe and that pay a good income with un-failing regularity.

A church bond has back of it the moral integrity and good will of "a people" in addition to tangible resources of property and money.

Description of Bonds

- $25 Baby Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, payable annually.
- $50 Thrift Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $100 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $200 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $1,000 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.

The $100 bonds may be purchased by paying $10 down and $10 per month until the face value of the bond is paid. On $25 and $50 bonds any amount of $1 or more will be accepted as part payment. The church will allow 5% interest to the purchaser on such installment payments, when full payment of the bond is made. Installment payments will easily and quickly secure a church bond if you do not have the money to pay cash. Government bonds will be accepted at their market value in exchange for church bonds.

The Book of Mormon should be in the home of every Latter Day Saint, and if possible every member should have his own book.

September 22, 1927, is the one hundredth anniversary of the date when the records contained in the Book of Mormon were delivered to the keeping of the church. This event makes the year a significant one in church history.

It will be a wholesome experience for every member of the church to read the Book of Mormon this year. Hundreds have already signified their interest and have started in this worth-while endeavor.

Training for the Job

Some two years ago I saw in one of the newspapers of the country an extract from a commencement address delivered at the California Institute of Technology, at Pasadena, by William B. Munro, of the Department of History, Harvard University. The extract was as follows:

Were I to go out upon the street this afternoon and say to the first man I meet, "Here, you, make me a pair of shoes," he would look at me in amazement and reply, "You're mistaken, sir; I'm not a shoemaker; I don't know the first thing about making shoes; go to a shoemaker." "Oh, that's all right," I would say, "all men are equal in this community. You are just as good as any other citizen. You are entitled by the Constitution," etc. He would probably wonder how I escaped from the psychopathic ward.

But suppose this same man in the street were asked to become city manager of Pasadena. Would he display any such modesty or reluctance? Not a bit of it. He would throw out his chest proudly and say, "I'm your man." Then he would call in the reporters, shake his fingers wisely at them and say: "I'm going to put this city's business on an efficiency basis, reduce taxes, and make everybody happy." It is the old story. Only an expert is competent to make shoes, or put the plumbing in your house, or even to cut your hair; but anyone, anywhere, at any time, feels himself competent to perform the far more difficult task of efficiently governing his fellow men.

I may have used this extract in the HERALD. I intended to anyway. But that extract used in the press made me want to see the speech. So I wrote, and finally Doctor Munro himself sent me a printed copy of the address with his compliments. In another place we reprint it (Department of General Interest in HERALD of October 5), and commend it to the careful attention of our readers. Commending it to our readers does not necessarily mean I agree with all Doctor Munro says; but his statements and arguments are on questions which deserve attention, and I may even suggest the reading at times of articles with which I would be in entire disagreement. And that's that.

What Doctor Munro says of politics and government may be said of church affairs and government. Within our own organization we have seen many manifestations of where men have shown clearly that they were quite certain they could run church affairs better than some who have made them a life study. Well, the application is clear, and our readers can make it. Read what Doctor Munro says. His address was entitled "Scientific education and unscientific democracy."

Some Things Our Ministers Should Do

I have a desire, deeply seated, to be of help to the members of the priesthood in their work for the church; and I have many times felt that perhaps I could by suggestions give them help but have refrained from fear that such suggestions might be unwelcome because believed to be critical in character. This fear may have sprung from the fact that my church work as an official was begun as a comparatively young man, and many of my fellow officers were men many years my senior, and suggestions from me might be received as an affront. In fact, I suffered several times in just this way. And it may be that as a consequence I have refrained from making suggestions or even giving official instructions because of such experiences and their memories. But the passing time has remedied the fault of being young (if fault it were), and many of the men now in the ministry are my juniors, and so I may make bold to suggest some things. And under the above caption I hope to run a series of short articles in the hope that they will be of benefit or help to our men.

I am deeply concerned in the welfare of this church, and in the success of the men of the ministry. Their failure grieves me, while in their successes I rejoice. To see their refinements and accomplishments lifts me up, while a consciousness of their faults depresses me. No further apology need be given for presenting what I may in these articles.

Each minister should catch the vision of the work and goal of the church. And he should be sure that the vision he thinks he sees is the real one of the church. And such vision, like many other good and necessary things, has its price. The price we must pay for it is study, work, prayer, meditation, devotion to duty, and close walk with God. And to walk close to God means close walk with our brothers.

Study to show thyself approved unto God may mean "catching the vision," for to work for the fulfilling of our mission means to have seen the kingdom of God. It is the fruit of rebirth which follows not alone the consciousness of God, but the equally important consciousness of man and his reasons for being.

Therefore every minister should study. His study should be purposeful, systematic, continuous. Every day should see a definite task of study accomplished. And to avoid waste of time and unnecessary expenditure of energy, our study should be checked up occasionally by "comparing notes" with our brothers. Our minds should be stored constantly with the needs of the church always in view.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God."

Harvest Festival at Auditorium

Some of the general officers of the church have been watching with interest the growth of the Harvest Festival in Independence. For two years this annual festival has been under their direction and fostering care. Before that time it had been growing under the care of the Second Church of Zion, having its annual displays and festive seasons in the brick church at Delaware Street and South Avenue.

While located in the Second Church it was first entirely local to that community; then because of the expressed desire of others from different parts of Independence, it was opened to the city of Zion and neighbors, and the idea of making an annual harvest festival for the church at large seems to have been born.

Soon it outgrew the narrow confines of its nativity and was taken to the Campus, where it expanded beautifully and wonderfully. Then last year the Stone Church and dining hall housed it with great difficulty, for the child of but few years had grown into a youth of generous proportions and demanded more space for prospective development.

And this year of our Lord Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-seven finds the infant of just a few seasons past a rangy, angular youth whose extremities reach into every nook and corner of the lower auditorium of the new Auditorium Building lying south of the Stone Church property on Walnut Street between River Boulevard and Grand Avenue.

From far-off Honolulu, in the Pacific Ocean; from Jerusalem, in the Holy Land; from Canada on the north, and from a number of the States far distant from the city of Zion, have come exhibits of the first fruits of the harvest to the House of the Lord, that all men who visit Zion may see how bountiful is the creation of God, that man may have joy and plenty.

Saints within driving distance of Independence who do not spare a day or two with the Harvest Festival now going on are neglecting an opportunity to broaden their knowledge of what the Saints of the earth are doing in their places of abode upon all the face thereof. Come, Saints, to Zion, and here look upon a wonderful object lesson of God's goodness to his creatures. Come, and your hearts will swell when you see how the Saints are occupying in the various lines of agricultural endeavor.

A program for the season of the week has been planned and will be carried out for the benefit of the visitors and the Saints in Zion. I am sure there will be no disappointment in the quality of this portion of the Harvest Festival. I append the printed schedule of days:

Tuesday

Opening Address President F. M. Smith
Program arranged by Albert Brackenbury

Wednesday

Address: "The harvest a time of rejoicing" F. Henry Edwards
Program arranged by Thelma Vincent

Thursday

Address County Agent Night
Program arranged by Kansas City Central Church

Friday

Address: "Our obligations to our fellow men" J. A. Koehler
Program arranged by Orlando Nace

Saturday

Illustrated Lecture C. Edward Miller
Program by Male Quartet

Sunday

Closing Address M. H. Siegfried
Stone Church Choir
Program arranged by Paul N. Craig
Programs each night at 8.00 o'clock.

Let the rejoicing of the Saints in the production of another bountiful harvest know only the bounds of reasonable constraint. May our joy be full.

Book of Mormon Interest Deepens

Numbers are being added to the large company of Saints who are now reading the Book of Mormon, but the most gratifying fact in connection with the movement is that the interest is far more intense as the reading progresses or is finished.

This morning there comes to the editor's desk information that many have already completed their reading; that large numbers are now in the midst of the work; and that still larger numbers are just commencing or will soon commence reading the book, with a view to completing the work before January 1, 1928.

A class of young unmarried men called the Braca Class, of the Fourth Kansas City Sunday School, eight in number, have signed a statement that they will devote at least one night each week to reading and study of the Book of Mormon, and their leader reports a splendid devotional spirit characterized the making of the pledge.

For several weeks we expect the HERALD and Ensign shall present sermons or articles which bear directly upon the book and its study. There can be no better time to open the work of rereading and study than the present.

Independence to Celebrate Centennial

Independence is one hundred years of age, and from October 2 to 7 will celebrate the occasion in a fitting manner. Not a street fair, not a place and a time for the throwing of confetti and the howling of street hawkers will this celebration be, but a series of events and entertainments in which it will be sought to impress our own people and our visitors with the importance of the part this community has played in the life of the great commonwealth of Missouri and the development of the West and Southwest.

Leading public men of Independence are carefully fostering and sponsoring this celebration, and the many social organizations are working out parts of the program. Those who can make it possible should visit Independence during the centennial celebration.

R. J. L.

A young brother from the East, coming to Graceland this year as a freshman, by name Robert Alden Foote, was attacked by that dread destroyer, infantile paralysis, and succumbed, the account of his death being in another column, under heading "Graceland chats." This tragedy has spread gloom at Graceland, for this young man had in his few days at Graceland made a number of friends. It is worthy of note that Graceland's faculty has shown every possible attention to every phase of the case. The intelligence that every precaution has been taken to prevent a spread of the disease, and that the period of greatest danger of contagion has already passed without further cases developing, is welcome in this chapter of gloom.

The Book of Mormon

Any book which will live for one hundred years in this age of the world's history is worthy the consideration of all to whose knowledge it may come.

The record of God's dealings with the people which inhabited and populated the Western Hemisphere, known to us as the Book of Mormon, has lived its first one hundred years, and today is being printed and sold in larger editions than at any time before. Hundreds of thousands have lived and died believing in the doctrines it teaches, the history it recites, and in the predictions of its prophecies.

It has suffered the concerted attacks of professed believers in God and the Bible and of disbelievers in these and the history and doctrines of Christianity.

It has stood up under the scrutiny of Christians who are willing and anxious to know all about the God of the Bible, but who in the beginning have been skeptical of any other sacred book.

It has told a reasonable story to Jew and Gentile, to Red Man and Caucasian, and today stands higher in the esteem of man than at any period since its appearance one hundred years ago. Probably more people are reading the book today than at any former time.

A patriarch eighty-two years of age is just finishing reading its pages again. He commenced this reading about one month since. A child twelve years of age was introduced to me a few days since, and his mind is full of the wonders of the book, for he had read it from cover to cover within two weeks—a marvelous achievement. A mother in Israel says she has read it through twice within the year. It is worthy your attention, friend, foe, believer, skeptic, scholar, social worker, or any who have the faculty of sight and the training which will enable him to sense its language.

A century of achievement has passed, but one of far greater portent looms large before us. Shall we have the good fortune to accomplish some part of the future work of the Book of Mormon and of the church which sponsors it?

R. J. L.

South Dakota's "Hidden City," discovered by Fred Schuler on his farm seven miles south of Rapid City, is claiming country-wide interest. Several technical descriptions of the ruin have been published by the press of the country, but we shall not attempt any such thing until reclamation has gone further. Just the last of July, Mr. Schuler uncovered a column of some twelve feet, standing in an upright position and doing its regular office work—supporting other portions of the structure. It is likely more accurate and exhaustive accounts of the ruin may in the future be reproduced in the HERALD.

Denver Church Gets Press Notice

A cutting from the first page of section 2 of the Denver Evening News for September 3, gives a good halftone picture of the church in the Colorado metropolis, and accompanying the picture is one of its pastor for the past ten years, Elder E. J. Williams, and a favorable story of the accomplishments of the Denver body of Saints.

The HERALD is glad to get such as this, and files them for future use or reference. We reprint this particular notice because of the spirit of friendly interest so easily discernible, and suggest that Denver Saints and officers should be congratulated on the results they have secured:

Where machines of traffic, links of an endless chain welding the lives and affairs of the world, whirl by on broad, straight ribbons of asphalt, stands a modest red brick building.

Two square towers rise above a green roof and flank a cloudy-paned window and a flight of stone steps. The building is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Speer Boulevard and Logan Street, where come many on the Sabbath to quench a spiritual thirst.

A painter, a dreamer, or a psychologist might well pause and study the picture unfolded there. The intersecting lanes of paving, the modest red brick building splitting the lines of droning motors as a ship's prow parts the waves. Is there not something of symbolism there?

Let us join those who are proceeding up the steps into the church. We find seats in the walnut pews and gaze about the well-filled auditorium.

Silence in Chapel

Silence broods in the half-shadowed chapel in compliance with the scriptural command, paneled on the wall where all may see:

"The Lord is in his holy temple; let all the earth keep silence before him."

It was sacrament Sunday and through prayer, hymn, and testimonial the congregation renewed its covenant with the Father of all living.

The Reverend E. J. Williams gave a short sermon based on the hymn, "Nearer, my God, to thee." He emphasized the significance of the words contained therein.

"I hope we shall not regard them as empty, printed characters, but a prayer of true righteousness," he said.

Scattered through the gathering Sunday were a few persons who witnessed the foundation of the church more than thirty years ago. Scarcely twenty of the original communicants were in the congregation.

Erected in 1909

In the early days the church was directed by E. F. Shupe, who served as pastor many years and worked unceasingly for the upbuilding of the congregation. Though past seventy, Elder Shupe still is active in Sunday school and church work.

The present church edifice was erected in 1909, when the Reverend Charles E. Everett was pastor. The Reverend Williams has occupied the pulpit for the last ten years.

Within the last year many improvements have been made upon the building; new pews replace the old seats and an organ was installed. The church enrollment now numbers nearly four hundred.—By Loudon Kelly.

The Sacred Book of Ancient America

Sermon by Apostle Paul M. Hanson at the Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, April 7, 1927.

Your attention is invited to a few verses of the twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah:

Woe to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt! Add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices. Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow: and it shall be unto me as Ariel. And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee. And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust. . . . And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I can not; for it is sealed. And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned. Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men: therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid. Woe unto them that seek to hide their counsel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark, and they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us? Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay: for shall the work say of him that made it, He made me not? or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, he had no understanding? Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest? And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness. The meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.—Verses 1-4, 11-19.

How many church members CAN and WILL give $100 as a free will offering toward the 1927-28 budget?

Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men: therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid. Woe unto them that seek to hide their counsel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark, and they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us? Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay: for shall the work say of him that made it, He made me not? or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, he had no understanding? Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest? And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness. The meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.—Verses 1-4, 11-19.

The Book of Mormon, the sacred book of ancient America, claims the attention and holds the belief of Latter Day Saints, because it is strongly supported by evidence from the Bible, American archaeology, and human testimony. Our belief in its divine origin does not rest upon the ipse dixit of anyone in our midst holding a priestly office. It may be seen from the foregoing that our acceptance of the record does not rest upon credulity, but on a foundation that is most secure.

You have noticed that a "book that is sealed" is spoken of by the prophet. This "book" has an unambiguous connection with the "city where David dwelt."

It was to come "out of the ground."

Words from the book were to be delivered to a learned man, and the book itself to an unlearned man.

Lebanon, soon after the appearance of the book, was to be regarded as a "fruitful field."

The meek were to "rejoice in the Holy One of Israel."

The entire twenty-ninth chapter relates to the "sealed book" and events associated therewith. This chapter may very appropriately be called the Book of Mormon chapter of the Bible. One reading of it clearly discloses that when God proceeds with this work which he designates as a "marvelous work and a wonder,"

there will be a clash with forces of tremendous magnitude in operation in the world. This conclusion is drawn from such prophetic words as: "Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay."

Religionists who cherish wrong principles, but think they have things right side up, do not readily acknowledge their attitudes need changing. A conflict of views is forecasted.

The prophet declares: "The wisdom of their wise men shall perish." Again:

Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men: therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder.

A belief gripping with an almost inextricable force a large part of the professing Christian world has led them to conclude that the one, or those in charge of their faith, can infallibly announce what is necessary to be believed or practiced—with present revelation from God left entirely out of consideration.

There is a host of other professing believers in Christianity who cherish the tradition that the Bible is the final and complete revelation of God's will to man. The very words final and complete admit of no room in their minds for God to reveal one word to man today.

Between these two humanly designed millstones that are kept continually grinding, the Lord has been pretty well crowded out. There was no room for Jesus in the inn. There is now not much room in the world for the God of heaven to reveal himself as in past ages.

The Book of Mormon is a record of God's dealings with the civilized nations inhabiting America before its discovery by Columbus. It sets forth the ways of the Lord with these people. It shows how when they worshiped him, observed his laws, and kept his commandments, they prospered, became powerful, and spread over North and South America, including Central America. The record exalts Christ. It informs us of his appearance to his church on this continent, after his crucifixion; contains many of his teachings, and unfolds how when people forsook the ways of righteousness their descent into degradation was rapid, and how they then were swept nationally from the face of the earth. The American Indians are remnants.

There is much other matter setting forth the gospel of Christ in its fullness.

When was this great work of the Lord, his "marvelous work and a wonder," to be inaugurated? When was the "sealed book" to come forth?

We have learned it was to be in a time when there was an amazing violation of laws ordained of God for mankind to observe. When it would seem to many the promises of God do not vibrate with certainty. It was to come in an age when there was marked vacillation and an unbounded disposition to compromise, for how can any people worship God merely with their lips, with their hearts far from him, without being vacillating and compromising, and thoroughly overwhelmed in serious violations of divine law? Walking in darkness at noonday! It was to come in a time when it was believed the channel of communication between heaven and earth was closed. This all portrays that a collision was to take place between God's great work that he was to proceed to do and man's work already in existence, and the result was to be a setting of things right side up that by somebody had been turned "upside down."

Do not lose even partial sight of the fact that the people whose doings are chronicled in this book are related to the "city where David dwelt"—this will open the mind to perceive the truth that the God of heaven who worked with Israel as recorded in the Old Testament, will marvelously and similarly work with the posterity of the city of David. The divine Being changes not. After long intervening centuries, he was to proceed in such a manner and perform such a work that could be properly described, even by himself, as a "marvelous work and a wonder."

We are dealing with the ancient God, not with a new-born conception of divinity, such as might be formed in a jazz age. It was Jehovah that was to move in the last days in the bringing forth of this remarkable book to the attention of the world.

When we recall how the Lord led Israel from the midst of the nation deriving its wealth from the valley of the Nile, led them across the desert under his outstretched arm, fed them with manna, gave them the precious things of heaven, revelations, and finally settled them in a land which was parceled out to the various tribes—with such an understanding of his dealings with Israel, the record of whose descendants in America was to be contained in the "sealed book," we are prepared to receive some perhaps startling claims that may arise in connection with the book itself.

The Book of Mormon was translated from metallic plates on which was written by the ancient American prophets and historians the record of the things of great importance, civil and religious, of their people, and was translated by the Prophet Joseph Smith in the early part of the nineteenth century by the power of God. Truly, a strange claim! At once we note that the coming forth of this sacred book is enveloped in a miraculous atmosphere. Is not Christianity itself so enveloped? Does not the Bible start with a miracle and close with a miracle? Look through the New Testament and see how Jesus came into this world differently from all others. Not only was his entrance into the world surrounded by what is miraculous, but also his life, and his exit by way of the resurrection from the grave.

What is a miracle? The people of God, both of Old and New Testament days, were not alarmed when the word sounded in their ears.

The Apostle Paul said:

God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.—1 Corinthians 12: 28.

A miracle is an act of God beyond the power of man to perform—an interposition of divine power for the good of man.

Who, then, need be afraid of miracles?

In connection with the deluge in Noah's day were revelation, power, and strange procedure.

In the heavens is enthroned the same God!

Nowhere in the Scriptures is man directed to a speechless, cast-iron deity.

Turn to the 12th verse:

And the book [Three times the word book is found in this chapter, and four times in one verse it is stated that it would come from the ground. Now we find something about the translation.] is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned.

Then the Lord moves to bring forth the work in clarity. It was not to be done by a learned man, not by a linguist, but by the power of God.

In due time even the "deaf should hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind should see out of obscurity, and out of darkness."

Is it too strange that plates of metallic character should come from the ground, bearing writings placed thereon by men inspired by God? Not to Latter Day Saints. They remember there were two tables of stone, two that were written on by the finger of God that were handed to Moses on Mount Sinai, and the contents of these plates we have in the Bible today.

Is it a mark of credulity to believe that by the power of God a record on plates was translated? Not to Latter Day Saints who have read in the Old Testament the account of Belshazzar making a feast for a thousand of his lords, and while drinking wine in the gold and silver vessels that had been taken from the temple in Jerusalem—with reverence for God entirely gone, and no concern for the ancient God—suddenly as the king's eyes looked upon the plastered wall of his palace he saw the fingers of a hand write the words: "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin." He called the soothsayers, the Chaldeans, and astrologers, and promised them that if they could tell him the interpretation of those words he would dress them in scarlet, hang a chain of gold on their necks, and make the one that could read the writing the third ruler in his kingdom; but they all failed. The wisdom of these wise men was not sufficient. Finally, the name of Daniel was mentioned, a man who did not believe the channel from God to man was closed, and who was known for his spiritual light and understanding. He appeared before the king and said:

This is the writing that was written, Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin. This is the interpretation of the thing: Mene; God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it. Tekel; Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. Peres; Thy kingdom is divided, and is given to the Medes and Persians.

Such is the corroborating support found in divine testimony to God's work today.

We are presented with language by Isaiah that comes to us easy to understand. But we are not compelled to rely alone on words in the Old Testament. We may turn to the New. I quote one verse, the words of Jesus. No greater authority could be brought into the discussion. He knew what he was talking about. He did not talk to confuse, but to enlighten, and of such worth was it that it was placed in John's record of the gospel. Jesus said to his disciples:

Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice: and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

He did not refer to the Gentiles, for he declared that he was not sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. With this in mind, encompass his words once more: "Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold. Them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd."

Other sheep of the house of Israel were to hear his voice.

There is abundant archaeological proof of prehistoric American civilizations. There is no larger field anywhere awaiting the research of archaeologists than portions of North, Central, and South America. In these countries are innumerable mounds, cliff dwellings, massive pyramids, remnants of cities of stone, and sculptured monuments. All of which go to indicate that this land was once peopled by a series of prosperous nations.

Tiahuanaco, in Peru, is perhaps the oldest city in America. There are flights of stone steps still standing amid the ruins, cut stones with level surfaces, and straight lines and angles that are accurately drawn. There are complicated carvings of symbolical character that proclaim their antiquity. All that remains of the ancient city shows that here once was a dense population, a government possessing skill and power and fine administrative ability. Situated high up in the mountains, thirteen thousand feet above sea level, it remains an unsolved mystery. It is pre-Inca in character. Its origin is lost in the mists of antiquity, but there it stands in support of the general claim of the book we are considering.

One of the most important and interesting gods of the Mexican theocracy was Quetzalcoatl, of whom Short in his North Americans of Antiquity writes:

This mysterious person came from the distant East to Tula, and became the patron God and high priest of the ancestors of the Toltecs. He is described as having been a white man with a strong formation of body, broad forehead, large eyes, and flowing beard. He wore a mitre on his head, and was dressed in a long white robe reaching to his feet, and covered with red crosses. In his hand he held a sickle. . . . He condemned sacrifices, except of fruits and flowers, and was known as the god of peace; and when addressed on the subject of war, he is reported to have stopped his ears with his fingers.

He is looked upon as the leader and civilizer of the people which preceded the Toltecs who preceded the Aztecs.

Not far from Mexico City is the great pyramid of Cholula, larger at its base than Cheops on the Nile. On its summit once stood a temple dedicated to Quetzalcoatl. Tradition says he took his departure from this place, and that he promised his disciples he would sometime return, and again a reign of peace and prosperity would be instituted.

When Cortez and his followers reached the shores of Mexico and couriers carried the news to Montezuma, at once the Aztecs called to memory their legend that led them to look forward to a time when their deity would appear in their midst, and when they saw the white men they concluded they were children of Quetzalcoatl. This belief was taken advantage of by the Spaniards, and aided them immeasurably in the conquest.

Time does not permit entering into details. A few evidences are being presented from the Bible, American archaeology, and human testimony.

God has said: "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established."

Does anyone rise to bear unwavering and irrefutable testimony to this book?

There are three special witnesses: Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris. All until their deaths solemnly reaffirmed that their testimony given at the coming forth of the Book of Mormon was true, this testimony appearing in every copy of the book; namely, that they saw the plates from which the book was translated, that an angel of God brought and laid them before their eyes and they saw the engravings thereon, and declared that they heard the voice of God proclaim the translation was by his gift and power.

Why should it be considered strange that one should hear from the God of heaven today?

What was the purpose of writing the Old and New Testaments except to assure all readers that the principles are true underlying the procedure therein, that certain things have been, therefore they may be, and that what God is he will be, and has been; and if we know his past, we know his present, and if we know him now, we know the manner of his dealings and the principles of his procedure with mankind in the future.

It was probably such reasoning that stirred Emerson to write as follows:

Every age is retrospective. It builds the sepulchers of the fathers. It writes biographies and criticisms. The foregoing nations beheld God and Nature face to face. Why should not we also enjoy an original relation to the universe? Why should not we have poetry and philosophy of insight, and not of tradition, and a religion of revelation to us, and not the history of theirs.

Let us select another thought from the twenty-ninth chapter of the book of Isaiah; the prophet says:

Therefore thus saith the Lord, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale.

One of the blessings to come to Israel after the appearance of the sealed book was to be the brightening up of Jacob's face.

In the year seventy of the Christian era, the Roman soldiers under Titus lay siege to Jerusalem. On Mount Scopus they were encamped, and from here Titus gave his commands to his legions to throw up ladders against the walls of the city and grapple with its brave defenders. The siege was successful. A scene of carnage unparalleled in the annals of time was enacted. The temple was burned and the city destroyed. Many Jewish captives were taken to Rome, and soon an arch commemorating the conquest of Jerusalem was reared between the Forum and the Colosseum. It is known as the Arch of Titus and can be seen today. On the inside, on one side, is what appears to be Titus in a chariot drawn by four horses; on the other side are soldiers in sculpture bearing sacred vessels from the temple, the seven-branched candlestick, silver trumpets, and other objects.

What about the face of Jacob not now waxing pale? The Lord said this happy circumstance would take place after his marvelous work was inaugurated—it was to be after the coming forth of the "sealed book."

In the midst of the World War Great Britain announced it looked with favor upon Palestine becoming a national home for the Jewish people; since the close of the war, leading nations have expressed similar sentiment. Great Britain is now in Palestine administering its governmental affairs under a mandate received from the League of Nations.

On April 7, 1925, a national Hebrew university was dedicated on Mount Scopus.

While the Arch of Titus is crumbling, on Mount Scopus a great university is rising, destined to contribute in making Palestine a world-renowned center of cultural, intellectual, and spiritual power.

While the Roman Empire lies in the dust, Jacob's face is radiant with hope for the future. With heads lifted up, shoulders erect, and spirits undaunted, Israel, exiled for so long among the nations, is gathering back to the land of their fathers.

Such are the strange but true dealings of God with Israel—on the Eastern and Western Continents.

The evidences are many and are well-nigh inexhaustible.

We accept the "sealed book" of Isaiah not only because the Holy Scriptures speak so plainly of its coming forth, but also because of supporting proofs from American archaeology and trustworthy human testimony.

The Golden Rule

BY WILFRID D. TORDOFF

From the pen of one who is not a member of the church comes this on "Giving or paying—which?"

"Give: To transfer the possession of property to another without receiving a consideration therefor.

"Pay: To compensate, as for goods or service rendered. We give to the poor: we pay our debts."

In view of the foregoing definitions, when we contribute to the maintenance of our church, do we give or do we pay?

If we view our contributions as gifts, the benefits we receive from the church are accounted as naught. And since all of us are beneficiaries of the church's ministrations, whether we will or not, our contributions to its maintenance can not be rightly considered "gifts."

If we consider our contributions as payments for service rendered, for benefits received, they can not, by the definition, be constructed as acts of generosity; but only as the just payment of debt, the necessary discharge of obligation arising out of benefits received.

Logically, therefore, contributions made because of the obligation to do our part in maintaining an institution that promotes our welfare, are not "gifts." Taxes are not gifts. Payments made in the support of our families are not gifts. Club dues are not gifts. Neither are contributions made to the support of the church.

It is true that if we do not pay our taxes, we are sold out or jailed. If we refuse to support our families, we are ostracized and ultimately locked up. If our club dues are not paid, we are first posted and then put out. But nonpayment of church dues is lightly treated: we are not only not deprived of our church privileges, or the benefits of the church's ministrations, but the officers of the church dare not even reproach us for our failure in duty. Why? Because to support one's church has been mistakenly regarded as giving—as an act of generosity involving self-denial—not as honoring an obligation, not as merely the honest payment of debt for value received.

As parents we may, out of a generous impulse, give to our children more than they require, more even than is good for them. But we are under the sternest moral and legal obligation to pay for what our children need in the matters of proper clothing, food, and warmth. And these latter are not gifts.

We may give to our church for special benevolent objects, but we are under the same imperative obligation to pay our fair part of the church's expenses for the heat that keeps us warm, for the light by which we walk and read, for the janitor's service that keeps the church clean for us, for insurance that protects our property rights in the church, for the music that soothes and inspires us, for the salary of the minister on whom we call in time of sickness and trouble and death, that we are to support our families. We can no more honorably ignore or procrastinate in fulfilling our obligations to the church (or justifiably meet them in a grudging and parsimonious spirit) than we can our obligations to our families. Let us not deceive ourselves about this.

"Ah," you reply, "is it not lawful for me to do what I will with my own? Haven't we the scripture for that?"

Try it with money due for taxes, for the support of your family, or even for your club dues, and see what happens. The money we owe is not our money. We are merely the custodians of it until the time comes to pay. If we refuse payment, universally we are considered dishonest, and we suffer the consequences of our refusal. Not to be dishonest, we must be honestly unable to pay.

Every man, whether he will or not, is under obligation to the church. In the present order of society, it is an obligation born with us, because we are all beneficiaries of the church labors, wrought by its missionaries of the past or pastors of the present, whether we go to church or not, whether we believe all it teaches or not. Because, directly or indirectly, the church protects us and those that are dear to us, by standing always for right against wrong; by creating and maintaining an environment conducive to wholesome physical, mental, moral, and spiritual living.

Contributions to maintain the institution that serves us in this wise are not gifts, but simply and only partial payments of an honest debt, requitals for benefits received. Until all of us have learned to accept the results of clearer thinking on this subject, some of us will continue to excuse ourselves for not "denying" ourselves, when in fact we are only dishonoring our obligation to pay a just and morally inescapable debt.

A very careful rereading of this short message written by one who perhaps has never heard of the latter-day work, will surely give an added impetus to study to be approved, a workman that need not be ashamed, for after all, none of us can be workmen unless we are giving, one way or the other. We can not be workmen in this business of selling the gospel unless love for the work is the dominant characteristic in our lives. With love for the work and for each other, we shall not give in a parsimonious spirit, quoting the wrongs or imaginary wrongs of others, but rather we shall gladly support the institution, without which there would be no protection for our dear ones, and such things as clean physical, mental, moral, and spiritual living would be almost unheard of. The golden rule is still needed, even in the church. Every individual is charged with the responsibility for his relations with every other individual. Is this stewardship? The only joy that we can get, as workmen, from labor, is the joy that we put into it.

We can not live without each other. We must do unto others as we would have them do unto us. According to the degree in which we recognize the spark of divinity in all men, black, brown, white, or what not, we lift our standards of conduct. And I say that though my mission to Cuba and the British West Indies may have been a total failure in all other respects, I think I learned the lesson of the standard of conduct towards people of other nationalities. It will mean an advancing of thought by thought and deed by deed, until we all can conform to the standard that God has fixed.

We must, too, remember that we are all responsible to the church. I heard one of our bishops say, and his word certainly can be received as in the Spirit of Christ, for he lives as he asks others to live, "You can not expect the ministry to live according to the budget while you do otherwise." The ministry have at least tried to do so for many years. In the kingdom of heaven, special privileges are accorded to all, but certainly the membership can not expect to receive special privileges from God when withholding themselves, and what they have received from God, from their fellow men.

"The greatest growth in living up to spiritual standards can not be attained when one limits himself by ideas of exclusion; that is, when under the new standards his desire to serve goes out to a few and not to all. True spiritual standards are based on a perfect oneness that exists among all God's creation; under these standards the distinctions of high and low, rich and poor, strong and weak, do not exist."

If you have ever had the privilege of knowing some man, indeed one who has succeeded in a clean-cut business, a great man, you have seen one whose business is not alone a money-making scheme, but rather something into which he pours all his desires and ambitions. I have in mind such a man, a doctor, member of the church. In so far as others are concerned, he simply lives for them, that they too might receive the vision he has received. He works primarily because he loves others. To him the money he makes is simply the channel through which he can in turn help others. He works because he loves to see others made over, and herein is the difference between common labor and craftsmanship. And the difference is love. An artist produces a thing because he loves; the artisan works for so much a day. That is the difference between great and small.

Robert Louis Stevenson said: "Dearly as I love my wife, and lonely as the days would be without her, I can see how I could live on were she taken from me by death; but I can not conceive of any continued existence without my work."

I have known men working for organizations who have not made the business of that organization their chief concern, but have been occupied with other things, which certainly can not be condoned by any good business organization, and much less by the church, and the words quoted by Stevenson seem to me to be timely warning to those who would place the work of God in a secondary place. We need to believe in each other, and Frank Crane said, "All men as a rule want to do the right thing. They do not want to do what is unjust, cruel, and mean."

In the church, especially, we can not afford to forget the golden rule. If we remember it, we shall have high standards of thought, which will mean constant vigilance upon our part to keep out thoughts that are not conducive to our best and highest good. Do ye unto others as you would have them do to you.

Graphic Arts Gets Valued Print

The Graphic Arts Bureau has obtained a print from Mr. W. Earle Dye, of Richmond, Missouri, of David Whitmer's home in that place. This is possibly the only print in existence of the house where the Book of Mormon manuscript was carefully guarded by one of the three witnesses chosen of the Lord.

The Kansas City Star of January 10, 1897, published the following:

Mr. Whitmer lived in Ray County many years and was highly respected. His belief in the Book of Mormon was deep and reverential. He was bitterly opposed to polygamy and so incurred the hatred of Brigham Young. Every effort was made to get the manuscript of the book from him and into possession of the church at Salt Lake. Mr. Whitmer always believed that this was for the purpose of interpolating into it alleged divine authority for polygamy. Mr. Schweich (son-in-law of David Whitmer) asserts that Orson Pratt, a high dignitary in the Salt Lake Church, came to see his grandfather and endeavored to purchase the manuscript for the church. It is stated that as much as $200,000 was offered for it, but although the old man was not rich, he would not sell his principles. . . .

The house in which David Whitmer lived in Richmond, Missouri, for many years still stands in the main street. It was built in 1843. During the cyclone of 1878 the house was wrecked. Every room in it, except that in which the manuscript was, was torn and racked and the contents destroyed. In this house Whitmer received all such as came to him for food or rest. Travelers, passing through stopped to enjoy his hospitality. . . .

The house is no longer in existence.

The bureau is also obtaining a print of the Liberty jail in which the authorities of the church were incarcerated for months; also a print of the first courthouse at Liberty.

The bureau wishes to obtain a print of the first church in Independence, which was located near where the electric light plant now stands.

Henry Smith, the church architect, has turned over to the church some valuable negatives.

The bureau received two photographs from Louise Evans which were the property of the late E. K. Evans, her father. One of the photographs is of the Quorum of Twelve as organized about thirty years ago. The other is of the late Patriarch John Lake.

One of the elders was in the office the other day and said that some years ago they had destroyed a bushel of old-time pictures, not realizing their value. If you have historical prints, don't burn them; send them to the Graphic Arts Bureau, Box 255, Independence, Missouri, and they will be taken care of.

The Miracle of a Majestic Mood

By William L. Stidger

Majestic moods are miracles which lift the soul on high;
A flaming maple tree against an amber autumn sky;
Thin smoke that curls in spiral grace above a little hill;
White mists that rise in silver skies from rivulet and rill;
A camp fire sending through the trees its faithful, friendly light;

The glowing glens, the singing stars, the crescent moon—the night.

These are the moods, majestic, which every autumn brings:
These are the mystic miracles of which the wide world sings.

The mood of love brings every man to that great mystery
Which sweeps the soul on wistful wings to some far destiny;
The love of any little child for any human heart
Is something sacred, infinite, and holy—set apart;
The love of man for woman and the love of maid for man,
This gift of love, this tug of timelessness, this sweep and span,

This majesty and miracle, will quicken any clod
Until life's dust and dirt becomes a habitat for God.

Ah, Mood of Majesty, be born in these poor hearts of ours!
Come! Touch us with thy mystic might and quicken all our powers!

Come! Waken these dead souls to life and lift us to the skies
Until we walk amid the stars and all death's darkness dies!
And come, oh, come, ye rushing, mighty winds—ye tongues of flame

Like sumac leaves in autumn days, to speak aloud God's name!

Then may our sons see visions and our older men dream dreams

Until these moods majestic flow in everlasting streams!

REUNION NEWS

Lamoni Stake Reunion

The Lamoni stake reunion opened with a prayer service on Wednesday morning, August 10, with a large attendance. There were 92 residence tents, 9 scout tents, and 7 service tents, 108 in all, on the grounds during the reunion. The census of the camp gave the population as follows: 364 Lamoni stake people, and 211 visitors from other stakes and districts. In addition, hundreds of people drove in from the surrounding territory and nearby branches. On Sundays the attendance reached fifteen hundred. Representatives from every branch in the stake attended all or part of the reunion.

Speakers

F. H. Edwards, of the Quorum of Twelve, and J. A. Koehler, of the Order of Bishops, were assigned as speakers and workers. In addition to these the following were in attendance and assisted with the preaching: Mark H. Siegfried of the Presiding Bishopric, G. Leslie DeLapp of the Order of Bishops, L. G. Holloway of the missionary force, and C. E. Wight, our former stake president. W. E. Prall and Roy A. Cheville of the stake presidency, A. J. Yarrington of the stake bishopric, and James A. Thomas and G. R. Wells, stake missionaries, assisted with the various activities of the reunion.

Class Work

Apostle F. H. Edwards conducted classes each morning at 10.45 in the study of church history and current problems, and Bishop J. A. Koehler taught a class in problems of industrial Zion each afternoon at 2 o'clock. As many as 250 adults attended these classes and were unusually interested in this phase of the reunion.

Nursery Work

The children under five are very interesting characters, and more interesting if they can be organized into a group and directed by one who has been trained in that work. Arrangements were made with Sister W. E. Haden to conduct work for these children of preschool age each day during regular service hours.

The twelve days of the reunion were joyous times for these children. They began their day's program at 9 o'clock each morning, holding sessions until noon, then back into their circle at 2 o'clock and played until about half past four. Their activities consisted of nature songs, religious stories, prayer songs, finger plays, games, and rhymes. Sister

Haden also used modeling clay, the large sand box, and the Montessori inset for handwork. Last in the program was a bonfire at 7 o'clock for the nursery children about five years old (as most of the babies were ready for bed by nightfall). It was interesting to see the little people gather sticks and papers from all over the camp so that the camp fire might be a success. They kept the grounds quite well policed and did it because they found joy in doing so.

The average attendance was about thirty, but on the two craft. The subjects for talks and stories were very carefully chosen, and the articles made by these little girls in the handcraft period were of distinct value in helping to teach certain lessons pertaining to their regular program requirements. The afternoon period was devoted to supervised play.

The girls of Oriole age were divided into four groups and given points of rank for work accomplished. About twenty girls completed requirements in knot tying, fire building, nature study, signaling, and handcraft.

One hour each morning and one and one half hours each afternoon were allowed these girls for their activities. One half hour each afternoon was devoted to the learning of new songs under the direction of Miss Gertrude White.

The other work for these girls was carried on by Miss Vera Kline, Mrs. Woodstock, and three first-class Boy Scouts.

For the older girls the Temple Builder activities were stressed. The morning hour was devoted to the winning of points toward a health honor. A short lecture, followed by demonstrations actively participated in by every member of the group, was given by Doctor Clara N. White, of Lamoni. One half hour each afternoon the girls were given special musical direction by Miss Gertrude White, and one half hour was devoted to handcraft.

Each morning at the sound of the bugle call, "To the Colors," played by Alice Lane, at 7.10, all the girls assembled on the campus for flag raising. After flag raising they Sundays the circle grew to sixty, and this included children from three or four months to five years.

One of the nursery children celebrated his fourth birthday during the reunion, and that made a fine party, for anniversaries of this kind mean much to little people. Animal cookies and homemade ice cream were served, and later on in the evening, when the bonfire was lighted, they roasted potatoes.

Children's Meetings

The children between the ages of five and eight years were cared for under the supervision of Sister Ralph Lorange. They had four regular meetings each day at the same hour as the adult services. A certain theme was selected for each day and carried out through devotional exercises and dramatization or handwork in the morning and recreation and stories during the afternoon and evening. Special programs were arranged for Sundays, in which the children of the camp had an active part in helping to entertain their little guests from the neighboring branches. There was an average daily attendance of about twenty-five during the week and a hundred and fifty on Sundays. The children learned a greater appreciation of the reunion and felt more keenly their part in making it a success.

Girls' Activities

The work for the girls was under the general supervision of Mrs. C. B. Woodstock. This work was divided into three divisions. The little girls from eight to twelve years of age, under the direction of Mrs. Ellis Bedwell and Miss Dorothy Gunsolley, were given those things which have a direct bearing on their work as Blue Birds. Each morning the hour from nine to half past ten was occupied by talks, stories, the learning of some new songs, and a half hour of hand-marched in a body to the young people's tent for prayer meeting at 7.30. Each evening at the sound of the bugle the girls again assembled for flag lowering.

All the girls who took part in these activities felt that they had gained much which would be of lasting benefit to them.

Boys' Work

The boys' activities were directed by Roy A. Cheville, with the assistance of Lyle Flynn. The programs consisted of study and project work at 10.45 each morning, recreation in the afternoon, and meetings in the evening when the boys did not participate in the general services. The evening meetings were directed by Lyle Flynn, and the discussions included themes of adventure, invention, manliness, and missionary activities.

Health

For a number of years past the committee has given close attention to the sanitation of the camp. The people have been urged to observe the laws of health and sanitation. Only one case of illness was reported during the reunion. This suggests the blessing of God and also speaks well for the obedience of our people to the laws of good health.

Musical Activities

The Lamoni Choir and the Lamoni Orchestra furnished special musical numbers for each of the preaching services. On Monday evening the Lamoni Band gave an excellent concert, which was followed by a short informal program. Friday, August 12, was designated as Music Day, and on that evening the choir and orchestra gave a full evening's program, which was greatly enjoyed by all. Following this concert the entire camp, together with those who had driven in for the program, joined in a sing fest which was conducted by Roy A. Cheville.

Social and Recreational Activities

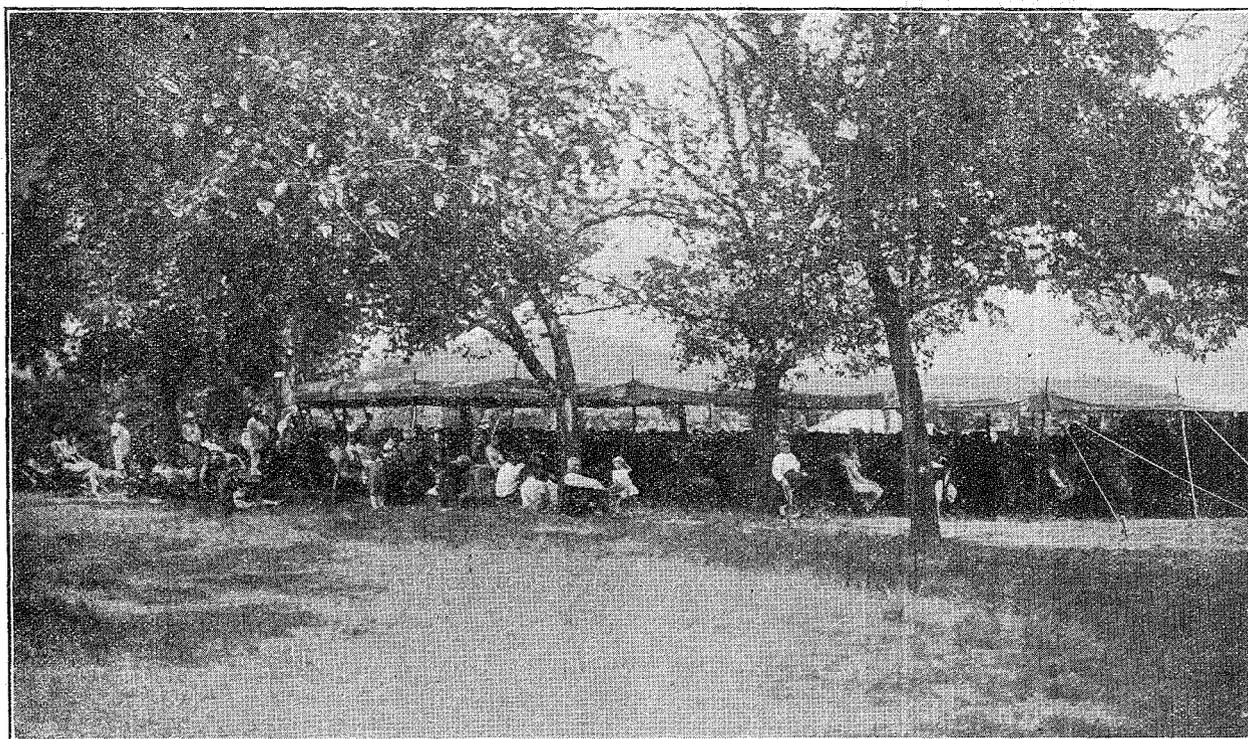

On the opening night of the reunion, the two plays, "The hour glass," and "Where love is, God is," were given by local talent under the supervision of Sisters Lyda Elefson and Florence Thompson. The Lamoni Orchestra furnished the music for the occasion. This program added much to the interest and success of the reunion. All other social and recreational features were cared for in a unified program directed by Roy Cheville. This arrangement made for a balanced program, caring for different ages and types of activities. This phase of the reunion sought relaxation from the more serious side of the day, the sociability of the campers, and the helping through real demonstration such workers as were in attendance. Besides the provision for all ages, emphasis was placed this year upon the playing together of different groups and age levels, of local and visiting campers.

Certain days were designated for specific interests, and these were woven into the program of play. The Monday of the reunion has been observed for several years as play day, thus furnishing a rest from the full day's activities of Sunday, and stimulating friendliness through play. This year a track and field meet was held during the afternoon hour for general recreation. The camp was divided into two sections, and these were matched against each other in the contest. The events were of the sort that were fun-provoking rather than exhibitivie of athletic prowess—wheelbarrow races, sack relays, tugs-o'-war, and the like. Practically the entire camp were out on the playground, either as contestants or enthusiastic supporters. In the evening the Lamoni Band gave an appreciated concert, and this was followed by an informal program of stunts, music, etc. The large congregation entered into this gayety whole-heartedly, and it was with real brotherhood that they stood to sing and receive the evening prayer.

Wednesday, August 17, was observed as Children's Day. On this afternoon for general recreation the children prepared a circus and carnival. There was a parade, the circus ring, a giraffe, the cowboys, etc. On the last Saturday evening a camp fire and friendship circle were conducted for the children.

Friday's recreation centered around the young people—those above the grade school age. This afternoon some seventy young people motored to Slip Bluff, a few miles from the camp, and enjoyed a jaunt in the hills and a picnic supper. Hamburgers fried over a camp fire have come to be a conventional part of these outings. After the evening service, which was for the young people, there was another surprise. The eighty who had assisted in the music went on a hayrack ride.

Some of the social affairs were designed as "mixers." On the opening day, the Lamoni Women's Department received the visiting women. On another day the boys were hosts to the men, challenging them to a game of playground ball and treating them to several gallons of ice cream, which the boys had made as one of their projects. At the same time the girls received the women of the camp.

Besides these features, there were the usual games of volley ball, playground ball, horseshoe, hikes, etc.

The "after-church" gatherings were some of the most enjoyable features of the reunion. Sometimes there were circle games; one night "Run, sheep, run," was the attraction; on music day the camp joined in a sing fest; on the week-ends there were editions of the newspaper, The Camp Cricket. Each night as the games closed, the leader would gather the players in a circle and with song and prayer they would close the day. One of the most impressive events of the reunion was the camp prayer on the closing Saturday night of the reunion. After the jollity of game and song, the circle sang an evening hymn and the president of the stake offered the benedictory prayer. While all stood silent for a moment, there came from the main tent a few yards away the organ strains of "Blest be the tie that binds." In these moments the meaning of Zion's brotherhood was very real.

The social and recreational program was not a separate part of the reunion; it blended into the whole and augmented the spiritual tone and friendly spirit of the camp.

Spiritual Development

All of the activities of the reunion were conducted with one end in view, the increasing of the spirituality of our people. The prayer services, the young people's meeting at 7.30 and the adult meeting at 9 o'clock, were of an exceptionally high spiritual order. The sermons were highly instructive and conducive of spirituality. The priesthood meetings were conducted along practical lines and should assist the members of the ministry to higher spiritual planes. Three junior church services were held each Sunday for the children of junior church age.

The reunion theme, "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God," was carried throughout the prayer and preaching services, suggesting practical things that might be done and enthusing our people with a desire to assist in the building up of the kingdom of God here on earth.

The sum of the whole matter is this, that our civilization can not survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually. It can be saved only by becoming permeated with the Spirit of Christ and being made free and happy by the practices which spring out of that spirit. Only thus can discontent be driven out and all the shadows lifted from the road ahead.—Woodrow Wilson, in "The road away from revolution," The Atlantic Monthly Press.

What Is Our Work?

By Gladys R. Myers

God, the great merciful Shepherd,
Keeps close watch over his sheep;
Watching and guiding them daily,
And keeping close guard while they sleep.

But often the enemy cometh,
Stealing right into the fold;
And taking the weakest among them,
He leaves it to perish from cold.

Then will the Shepherd's good helpers,
The ones who are strong in the faith,
Go out in the wilderness dreary
And bring back the one in distress?

Or will they stand back in the shelter
And never face dangers untold,
But leave all the work for the Shepherd
To bring back the lost to the fold?

Little Journeys with the Editor in Chief

Columbus, Ohio

To make this little journey with me, we must turn back the clock a few months. It was on June 17, last, that I left home, bound for Columbus, Ohio, and one or two other points on an itinerary which had been arranged for me by the "boys at the office." For some time the church building of the Second Columbus Branch had been ready for dedication. I had given my promise several months previously that I would if practicable be with the Columbus Saints at the dedication, if date could be arranged. They had waited for me to set the date, and June 19 had been fixed. And so the 17th of June found me boarding a Missouri Pacific train a little after noon, and bound for Saint Louis.

The Missouri Pacific Railroad is one of the oldest in Missouri, and its main line from Kansas City to Saint Louis passes about through the center of the State, and one of the finest countries in the whole world. I'm not saying this because I'm a Missourian (by adoption and choice) and through provincialism, but because it is a truth of which I have become firmly convinced despite an early prejudice against the State. I was reared in Iowa, three miles over the line from the northern boundary of Missouri, and imbibed the usual provincial prejudices against a nearby State along border lines. But some twenty years or so ago, because my destiny has been linked closely with the interests of the church, the organization to which I have unreservedly dedicated my life and work, it seemed wise for father and me to move to Independence. And thus I became a Missourian; and my homeward or return trips from journeys taken in church work or interests, would bring me back to Missouri, and to Jackson County; and these trips would always enhance my admiration and love for the beauty and greatness of the State and the county.

And so to me the journey across the State becomes ever more interesting; for ever from car window or through auto windshield there unfolds before one a beautiful panorama of rolling agricultural country or heavily wooded higher hills between which wind the picturesque rivers and creeks which drain a terrain well watered by nature. And one never tires of seeing stately walnut groves or hardwood forests, interspersed with green or golden wheat fields, inimitable fields of growing corn, great orchards, or luxuriant vineyards. For the crops of the State, like its natural resources, are varied and rich in value. And I am convinced that Missouri, the Land of Promise, holds more for the future than she has given in the past. The grin which usually greets the man who says, "I'm from Missouri," which seems to mean, "You poor hound," will some day give way to another facial expression, which will mean, "You lucky dog," and that's that.

And so, though I got the usual table and went to work, as the train swept around curves, and up and down the long and short grades, crossing creek and river, skirting the vigorous and dangerous Big Muddy, through village and thriving city, I found my eyes frequently raised from the work before me, to catch fleeting glimpses of picturesque landscape, of prosperous farms, stately hills, or pretty vales, and to feel anew the thrill of being "from Missouri." Say, Saints of other States and lands, it's something to look forward to.

Reaching Saint Louis about 8.30, it was only about half an hour before I was in a Baltimore and Ohio train, where once more I took up my work till bedtime. But at the station I had been met by Brother George Barraclough, district president, with whom I had a chat about church matters. I enjoyed the visit.

When I awoke and arose the next morning, we were beside the Ohio River. Anyone who has worked on it is quite sure to recognize it rather promptly. And the sight recalled some experiences I had when I was a lineman for the Bell Telephone Company. And say, despite the warmth of June I found myself almost kicking to warm my feet, for one of the memories recalled so vividly by sight of the Ohio River was of two of the coldest days I ever put in, unrafting cedar poles. My feet ache whenever I recall the experience.

But we were soon in Cincinnati, where time was had for breakfast and a change of trains to get the morning papers, and we were off to Columbus.

A little after noon the train reached Columbus, and as we rolled into the station I wondered if as once before I'd be met by a policeman. I was—by two! I must be getting worse in reputation! Two, and big fellows, too! But say, the smiles on the faces of those two, and the warmth of the handclasp of Chief French and Corporal Bragg, would have relieved me had I been perturbed at sight of those "minions of the law." And besides, Brother Ulrich was with them. And, Corporal Bragg at the wheel of his Dodge, we were soon at the home of Brother French, where we were heartily welcomed by the fine little lady whom "Harry" recognizes as one of his very few "bosses."

Not long after, the chief came home and, lunch over, we were given a pleasant drive about the city, learning of its resources and historic spots. Supper and a fine visit round the hearth filled the evening.

Sunday, the 19th, dawned bright and clear. Rain had followed me most of the way from Kansas City and all night on the train, and into Columbus, and I wondered if the dedication had been set on a poor day. But it was fine!

I found a busy day had been laid out for me—three sermons, morning, afternoon, and night. At each session the house was full; and at the dedication in the afternoon it was packed and overflowing.

The building is well located on a lot which because of its surroundings will grow in value. The main auditorium will seat somewhere about two hundred and fifty or three hundred, is well appointed, well lighted, is easy to speak in, and restful in color and arrangement. Besides the main auditorium, the building contains in the basement a social chamber, kitchen, and comfort rooms, which make for a well appointed and arranged little church home. In outward appearance the building is pleasing, of red brick, and designed so as to leave a good impression on the observer.

Brother Harry E. French has for a number of years been president of the Second Columbus Branch, and under his leadership the congregation has bought the lot, built the church, equipped it, and paid for it, and it is suitable that under his leadership it should be dedicated. At the dedication ceremonies, I did what I could for my part as speaker; but the dedication exercises, carried out simply, were yet so dignified and impressive that I am sure the gathered Saints from far around enjoyed them, as I did, better than the sermon. The building committee reported on their work, cost, etc., and turned the deed and key over to Brother French as representing the general bishopric. He in turn gave to the deacon of the branch the keys, and admonished him to see that the building was well cared for, and used for the benefit of the church and the congregation in furthering the ideals of the church. Then Brother French very graciously and in fitting words called to their feet the various department leaders and told what efficient services each had rendered, and thanked each for the good work. He told of the harmony which had prevailed, and gave so much credit to his splendid corps of workers that I might have wondered what had been left for him to do, had I been less acquainted with what an executive has to do. But it was fine, and Brother French endeared himself the more, if possible, to his congregation.

I want to tell you of something else—a custom which is usual, I learned. At the close of each preaching service, the audience remained standing, while the ministers passed down the aisle and into the social rooms; then those of the congregation who wanted to “visit” followed the ministers into the social rooms, where all shook hands with pastor and the preacher and then “chatted” and “visited” to their hearts' content. A fine custom, don't you think, to avoid noise and confusion in the ceremonial chamber.

I forgot to tell you that the cost of the building was about $22,000. And the branch has much to show for the money spent.

I went to bed that night, tired, but happy. I had spent the day with a fine and happy crowd of Saints. They manifested a deep religious spirit, and gave evidence of having their eyes on Zion. And as I closed my eyes for sleep, I found in my heart the deep-seated hope that peace and harmony might prevail in that branch, that happiness would grow, that the congregation would expand, and crowd out the walls of their fine little building, and build up a corps of workers whose faces towards Zion would be kept bright with the hope of seeing the ideals of the church realized, a hope so strong and so vital that the whole congregation would become or continue to be a band of workers for Zion the Beautiful.

Beauty and Truth

By Katherine Nichols

As I sit here on an evening in August, listening to the soothing sound of a summer rain as it pelts the leaves on the trees outside my window, my thoughts revert to the beautiful things in life; and allowing the thought free rein, my mind is flooded with reminiscences of the many beautiful things I have been permitted to see. While meditating on these things, it occurred to me that we can find beauty almost everywhere; sometimes in the most unexpected places, if we will only look for it. The writer of the hymn in Zion's Praises, “Look for the beautiful, look for the true,” no doubt was inspired to connect the two, as it does seem that they belong together.

During a recent visit to Washington, District of Columbia, I had the pleasure of viewing the Congressional Library Building for the first time. Although I have been to Washington several times, for one reason or another I did not get to see the library until this trip. I would advise anyone contemplating a visit to Washington not to overlook seeing this building; it alone is worth a trip to the Capital. I am sure I shall never forget the thrill of pleasure and admiration it gave me to view the work of the different artists whose efforts to beautify with marble, mosaics, carvings, symmetry, etc., produced such a beautiful building, both inside and out. Among the inscriptions was one that impressed me as being very appropriate, namely:

“Beauty is truth, and truth is beauty,” and I thought, How beautiful and how true that is!

If the beauty to be found in “marble palaces,” which are the handiwork of man, is so inspiring, how much more so is nature, the handiwork of God, which is to be found all about us! When we tramp through the woods or ride through the country in the summertime, we are forced to exclaim over and over, “How beautiful it is!” Is there anything more beautiful than a tree? The following poem by Joyce Kilmer expresses our thoughts in this connection:

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree;
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain,
Who intimately lives with rain;
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

In the first Book of Nephi, where Nephi relates his vision of the things his father, Lehi, saw, he speaks of the tree of life which he saw. In describing something beautiful beyond anything he had ever seen, he uses the tree; or shall we say God used the tree as an emblem of beauty in showing Nephi those things that he wished him to know. Nephi compared the tree to the love of God, shedding itself abroad in the hearts of the children of men. And so we say again, nature is beautiful. In summer the little wild flowers in the woods, the fruit on the trees in the orchards, the leaves on the stately shade trees, the beautiful green carpet of grass, the blue heavens above with their fleecy clouds; in winter the woods transformed into fairyland by the soft snowflakes, and always the starry heavens and the silvery moon at night, the majestic sun in the daytime, the rains when needed. When we dwell upon these things, we must needs say with the writer of the hymn:

My God, how wonderful thou art!
Thy majesty, how bright!
How glorious thy mercy seat,
In depths of burning light!

As we often say, “Last but not least,” there is the apex of all beauty and truth, and that is the beautiful character which is exemplified in our Lord Jesus Christ. We, his brethren and sisters, have the privilege of striving to attain to a measure of that beautiful character by exercising the virtues and characteristics upheld before us by his teachings as we absorb them through our studies and adherence to the principles both primary and secondary of the gospel as taught in his church, of which we have the privilege and good fortune to be members.

It is my prayer that we may demonstrate Beauty and Truth in our lives to the exclusion of the antithesis, and the more we think along these lines the more we will crowd from our minds the things that lead us into sin. Let our slogan be: Beauty and Truth; Now and For Ever.

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK.

Mallard, Iowa

Sister Hahn has returned from Lamoni where she accompanied her daughter, Violet, on her return to Graceland. She reports more freshmen than ever before, more than one hundred and twenty-five having registered at the beginning of school.

We are thankful for the hot weather of the past two weeks. It was just what the corn needed.

We have much to be thankful for here in our branch. Many of us have been away on vacation trips this summer, and we have all been protected from harm and have gathered together again. Our church attendance will be larger now. Due to reunion our services were dismissed one Sunday.

We have had a number of visitors the last of the month from Ayrshire and Albert City.

It is fortunate for our branch, we think, that most of the members were in attendance at the reunion some of the time and that a few were able to camp on the grounds throughout the session. We trust that more of our number will find it possible to camp on the grounds next year. We learned at prayer service this week that those attending reunion received much good and all were strengthened.

News comes from Graceland that it has become so crowded in the dormitories that the reception room has been turned into sleeping quarters. Let us all boost for our college.

Runnells, Iowa

On the closing night of the reunion, Brother J. A. Gunsolley preached to a small audience in the brick church. His sermon was a father's advice and full of divine counsel to the youth. He explained the attitude of the church and the faculty of Graceland on the dance question, also emphasizing the Word of Wisdom. At the opening of the service, he and Sister Lola Harvey sang a duet.

The Saints have endeavored to hold the ground gained during reunion and to go onward toward Zion. Some of the sisters of the branch worked at the State Fair and were absent from the Sunday services on that account.

There were five baptisms in the river on Sunday afternoon of the last day of the reunion. Brother E. G. Beye performed the rite with confirmation following at the big tent. Brother Castings' sister, from Oklahoma, was one of those uniting with the church. She is Sister Smith, the mother of a large family who will no doubt follow her into the church before long. Brother Castings has several brothers, all on the outside of the church, but with the baptism of Sister Smith, all his sisters are members.

On Saturday, almost Sunday morning, August 27, our branch president and family were rudely awakened by some one pounding on the front door of their house. A cautious opening of the door revealed Brothers Thamer Warren and Bernard Hurshman and Sister Lurene Laughlin, who had come up from Graceland to pay them a short visit and attend the State Fair. Thamer had a truck load of apples, and the three had made the journey together from Lamoni. Lurene had written her parents at Oskaloosa, asking them to meet them at Runnells, but the letter had been delayed. A long distance telephone call brought them, however, and the afternoon was enjoyed at the Mac's.

Brother Laughlin preached at night to an audience of Saints and old-time friends. With health restored he preached with old-time power the gospel that has been his delight for many years. His sermon showed that he is keeping pace with the onward march of the church and looking forward to the redemption of Zion. Sister Laughlin and Ralph stayed for the fair on Monday, when all returned to their homes in the evening.

Carl McDonald had an operation performed to straighten his eyes, during the last days of July, which proved very successful. After the operation he was administered to, with the result that he did not suffer pain at any time following. His eyes are straight, and he is thankful for the great blessing.

Brother J. L. Parker occupied the pulpit on Sunday night of September 4, while Brother McDonald occupied at Dumreath.

September 11 was a very hot day, so Sunday school and preaching were held in the cool basement of the church. Everyone enjoyed the experience.

Mrs. Margaret Bateman, of Logan, Iowa, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Clyde McDonald, for two weeks.

Brother J. M. Park is in Canada with his son, James, of Colfax, helping to harvest and thresh the bumper crop of small grain on their farms in the vicinity of Kerrobart, Saskatchewan.

Our teachers are gone to their respective schools. Sister Lola Harvey has moved to Youngstown near her school and near her husband's work, where they will temporarily reside during the school year. They expect to assist in the church work at Runnells as much as possible. Sister Faye Heiny is at Grandview, Iowa, in Eastern Iowa District. Saints in that vicinity should call upon her.

We do not expect that our branch will ever cross the Atlantic in thirty-three and a half hours, as Colonel Lindbergh did, but we expect to continue to furnish steadfast workers for the church. We expect to send our children to Graceland, and do the work of a recruiting station for Zion builders. We are looking forward to 1930 and beyond.

Conference of Southern Nebraska District

Conference of the Southern Nebraska District, in connection with the young people's convention, was held in the district tent on the Walter Broliar farm, near Wilber, the first four days in September.

Bishop J. A. Koehler and Elder John F. Sheehy were present, as were Elders E. F. Robertson and W. E. Shakespeare and the following local elders, Samuel Broliar, C. F. Teeter, and David Gamet.

Class work under the instruction of Bishop Koehler and Elder Sheehy was interesting and highly profitable. Sermons were good and uplifting. Recreation was under the leadership of Miss Wana Black, of Grand Island. Prayer and testimony meetings were well attended and active, and were an indication of healthy spiritual life.

District President E. F. Robertson was chosen unanimously to preside over the conference.

Sister E. F. Robertson was authorized to draw on district treasury for money to carry on her departmental work.

The following ordinations were provided for: J. Orville Preston, of Nebraska City, elder; Reese Preston, of Nebraska City, priest; John Preston, of Nebraska City, deacon; Ethan A. Godfrey, of Kearney, priest; and Earl Grubb, of Kearney, teacher.

The request of the Presidency that we participate in the harvest festival in Independence by sending a display, was acceded to, and Brother Robertson was requested to write letters to the various parts of the district in an endeavor to interest the Saints.

A request for a month's meetings with the tent in Kearney, during the month of August next year, was referred to the district president and missionary.

It was moved that when the conference adjourn it do so to meet at the call of the district presidency, in the month of March, 1928.

A Dream

By James Skelding

In my patriarchal blessing I was promised that I should be blessed with visions and dreams that would make clear to me many things that might otherwise trouble one. According to the promise, I have indeed been greatly blessed.

One thing I have very clearly been shown is that Brother Fred M. Smith is in his proper position as the President of our church, acting as God's mouthpiece regarding the government of his people. One night last winter, I do not remember the date, but some time in February, I dreamed I saw Brother Smith standing in a suit of the finest material. There were three colors in it, formed like a crossword puzzle. The main color was gray, with the contrasting colors running through it in very fine lines. I was given to know in my dream that the crossword puzzle design meant education. So that it meant that the gospel gives out its invitations to the educated and the learned in what is termed higher walks of life.

He next appeared to me clad in furs, as if he were a savage. His arms were bare below his elbows, and his legs below his knees were also bare. That meant to me that the gospel would go to the heathen and to the savage tribes of the world.

The next time he appeared in the clothes of civilization that represented men in all walks of life and all lines of the professions. That showed to me the gospel was for all, for everyone the world contained who would receive it.

The next scene showed me a large platform in the shape of a semicircle, with Brother Smith standing in the center with a man and his wife, the man standing on one end of the platform and the woman on the other. There was a very large congregation of people seated in the building. Brother Smith in giving his discourse would turn to the man and ask counsel from him, and would then turn to the woman as if asking permission, then turn his face to the audience and tell them. To me in the dream or vision it meant that Brother Smith was asking counsel from the Father and then turning to the mother, the church on earth, for permission to carry out the Father's counsel.

The dream was ended, and I awoke filled with the Spirit of the Lord.

SAINT THOMAS, ONTARIO, 25 Eagle Street.

Home-Coming at Galien, Michigan

September 11 dawned bright and exhilarating to both soul and body. A copious downpour the previous day had broken the longest uninterrupted drought remembered in some localities in southern Michigan. So with elated spirit the distant resident Saints and friends from a wide territory moved out in the glowing morn to regale and refresh with the gathering at Galien, Michigan.

Brother and Sister McKnight, with Brother James Best, of Dowagiac, and others, staged a "home-coming" with the brethren and sisters of southwestern Michigan and northern Indiana with one of the oldest branches of the Reorganized Church. While not widely nor lengthily advertised, the gathering was a distinct surprise in point of numbers and enthusiasm.

From Elkhart, we drove through the cities and country with Brothers Wilsey and Walter and families, rolling over the concrete in Brother and Sister Wilsey's fine Hudson, and arriving at Galien at 9:30 a. m. The first service was a Sunday school session with forty-eight visitors present. Brother Stoner and Sister Ola Green with Brother McKnight, were in charge, while the undersigned attempted the Socfatic method of teaching a large senior class, the lesson deduced from Jonah, the "gourd," the "vine," and the "repentance" of Kinebah. The teachers seemed very much energized, and classes were finely disciplined, the ensemble of which was inspiring and left a long afterthought.

At the close of this session, the Saints began to arrive in numbers. Carloads attended from Nile, Dowagiac, Buchanan, Berrien Springs, Bridgman, South Bend, Elkhart, Hibbard, and Coldwater, while Southern Illinois, and Gary, Indiana, had representatives in the audience.

Mr. Editor, that audience looked good, and I had an opportune view, as Brother McKnight placed me before it three times during the day. I always feel like "talking" the latter-day work, but somehow, the feeling was intensified during the occasion. But who couldn't talk with beaming faces before him? Many of these were scattered members with no great privilege of church fellowship and Sainly association, and were wonderfully benefited by the opportunity offered them by the Galien brethren.

The big "eats" in the basement at the noon hour will furnish future reminders that the assembling of good things to feed the outer man gave evidence of great activity in culinary departments as well as advancement in dietetic creeds. Oh, we are coming to the unity of the faith, at the table as well as in pulpit and pew. The Spirit of the Lord was with that gathering during the day. But sadness will obtrude at times. Many of the olden faces were absent. Those who fought the hardest battles of the past in that locality for the establishment of the great work have "folded their tents" and passed on, and the charter members who remain, have honorable discharge by virtue of age and infirmity.

Some have removed to other localities, and some have been carried in the swirl of the latter-day flood from the anchorage of hope. So the new generation, or the children, are doing the best they can.

The leading topics for the sermons of the day followed along the lines of latter-day work: "Signs of the times," "The rebuilding of the world," "God's effort through the message of Christ," and "Prophecy the light"—the "search-light." Some administrations occurred during interims.

Flint, Michigan

521 Newall Street
1502 Jane Avenue
Baltimore Boulevard 726

The summer has been a busy one for the Flint Branch members. All were called to attend our reunion at Indian Lake, but few responded. The Central Michigan district reunion was closer, and many responded. The call of the north with its strong appeal for the young people, being a young people's convention of the State, was responded to by many. Five consecutive Sundays at reunions and conventions made a noticeable decrease in our local attendance. Our young people's state convention was held at the Park of the Pines, Charlevoix Lake, near Boyne City.

Our Sunday schools are doing fine, meeting at nine o'clock. The other services are showing an increase in attendance.

Jane Avenue Group has a new pastor, as the pastor preceding him resigned. Elder J. A. Phillips is the new officer. Elder Phillips is an organizer and will do his best to get the group to cooperate and become strong. I am sure if "we will honor, God will bless."

Elder L. E. Welsh, of Baltimore Boulevard Group, has planned to preach a series of Sunday evening sermons on "Why be a Christian?" Elder Welch just recently united four souls in the holy bonds of matrimony. They were Inman P. Sharr and Clara Dinnan, and Milburn D. Niles and Lelah Sharr; all fine young people who will be an honor to the church and community if they will it so, and we trust they shall.

The pastor of Newall Street Group resigned, as his family has moved to Mount Pleasant to attend the state normal. Elder O. A. McDowell was chosen to fill the vacancy for the balance of the year.

The Graceland group which came here for the summer and for work gave a very good entertainment one Sunday evening recently. The following took part: George Mesley, George Lewis, George Negeim, Walter and Lewis Kuhn, Martha and Herman Fultz, Hillard Cox, Henry Lorange, Seth Osborn, Charles Ballantyne, Byron Jennings, Thad Howland, Theo Bush, and Donald Fletcher, assisted at the piano by our local pianist, Dorothy Notter.

We sympathize with the loved ones of Sister Bertha Porter and Sister Aileen Walden, who recently passed on to their reward. Both of these sisters were young in years and active in the work. We miss them.

The following news is taken from the Flint Branch Capsule of September 1:

September 22 we celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. This event means much to the church. Arrangements are being made to bring our membership together in one united group to fittingly celebrate the day. Appropriate services will be held on Sunday, the 25th, at which time Elder C. M. Clifford will be the speaker. This union service will be held in the Newall Street Church on Sunday evening, beginning at 7.30, September 25.

Brother William Palmer and Sister Merna Darling, a recent graduate of Hurley Hospital, were married Friday evening by Elder O. A. McDowell at the home in the country. Ernest Darling and Miss Florence Jensen were the attendants. A delicious wedding dinner followed. A reception was held for the popular young couple at the country home Tuesday evening. All join in wishing them much happiness.

Those privileged to attend the joint reunion and young people's convention held at the Park of the Pines are very generous in their praise of the worth of this gathering to them. A very splendid organization and the most excellent response of all attending to the call of leaders, made this gathering what many experienced workers termed as "the most inspirational and very best reunion or convention I have ever attended."

So enthusiastic is each member of the reunion committee over the class work done and future possibilities along this line of work, they are now preparing plans for erecting classrooms in addition to the many accommodations now on the grounds. Flint was well represented.

A number of homes have been richly visited recently and great potentialities in the form of dear little babes have been intrusted to the care of happy parents. Glennie Mae is the name given the sweet little daughter of Brother and Sister Frank Rivett. Now Brother Fred and Sister Leata Hutchins feel that Herbert William is the very best name for the very best boy in the world. But Brother and Sister Yarrington (Grant and Mildred) contend that Lyle Keith beats them all and have the word of grandpa and grandma to prove it.

Spokane, Washington

August 30.—I appreciate an opportunity of sending the news from Spokane broadcast through the HERALD to the many interested Saints throughout the land.

I never felt so much like writing as I do now. One of the first reasons is I am able to write; the second is, we have something to write about; and the third is, that Brother P. R. Burton and wife are here holding tent meetings in the city.

In the recent past Elder J. A. Bronson was elected co-ordination president of the Spokane Branch; and coordination and cooperation have had a marked influence for good upon the work here. Some of the officers were exchanged for new ones, and some of them were retained in their old positions. We feel that wisdom was used in the selecting of the officers, and our best material has been placed in positions of leaders and servants.

Under the new arrangements things are looking much better. A better interest, attendance, and—well, let us just say that everything looks better for the Saints of Spokane; and if I say that Brother Burton's influence and work in the district will make the whole district better, I am sure all who know him and his disposition to do things will agree with me.

His meetings have started off with a bang, and many are interested. From two hundred to two hundred and fifty are in attendance each evening, and a large percentage of these are hearing the gospel for the first time. Brother Burton says he had a dream of catching a lot of fish, and that signs indicate that some one is going to get wet.

I want to report that several here have joined in reading the Book of Mormon in accordance with the inviting request.

As one of the local missionary force of the Spokane Branch, and filling appointments in four different places in the district, I want to say that there is a marked improvement since our reunion. The work is taking shape, and the spirit of coordination and cooperation among the Saints, also the power and liberty that has attended and is attending our efforts in the stand, indicate to your writer that the same spirit that sent our forefathers forth in the face of much opposition does attend our labors, and in the consummation we will be glad we were faithful to the covenant.

Last Sunday the Coeur d'Alene and Spokane Sunday schools held a joint picnic in the beautiful park in Coeur d'Alene. Over a hundred were present. An open-air school was held, and after the class study was over Brother Burton gave us an interesting talk, after which we had a fine lunch. All were filled, and many baskets were taken up.

I will have more to say about the meetings in the next letter.

W. W. Wood.

Central Los Angeles Branch

The work of the church in this locality is progressing nicely and brings encouragement to the Saints here. The Wednesday evening prayer service has more than doubled in attendance, and it is not possible to definitely estimate the great increase in the portion of the Spirit enjoyed.

The Sunday services are unusually well attended for late summer. The sacramental service was very uplifting because of earnest prayers, fasting, significant selection of songs, a prophecy of commendation and admonition, given through Brother Johnson, and some beautiful testimonies that evidence sacrifice, service, and love for the work of God.

During the last two months we have been favored with the following speakers: Brother J. W. Rushton, Doctor A. W. Teel, Brother John Martin, Brother F. G. Pitt, Bishop J. A. Becker, and our pastor, Brother Glaud Smith. Each gave much food for thought and seemed to be blessed with the Spirit.

One outstanding social event of the summer was a pound party given by the Good Time Club at the home of Brother and Sister Frank Gregg, in favor of our pastor, his wife, and little son. The fore part of the evening was spent in out-of-door games on the lawn which Brother Gregg had gone to much trouble to wire and light. Punch was served all evening, and ice cream and cake in generous portions were passed after the games. Finally all assembled in the house, where the following program was enjoyed: The Crum (ladies) quartet, two numbers; Sister Mae Lewis, two readings; two vocal solos, by brother Glaud Smith; pianologues by Sister Margaret W. Jones; and mandolin and piano number by Brother and Sister Newland; Brother Badham then made a short speech, presenting the groceries to Brother and Sister Glaud Smith, and Brother Smith responded with thanks.

A happy, jolly evening was experienced by all. Brother Dana Crum and Sister Mabel Crum arranged the party program, etc., and thanks are due largely to them and Brother and Sister Frank Gregg for the success of the evening. We appreciate their efforts and those of others who made smaller contributions.

On August 18 a surprise shower was given Brother and Sister Albert Gilstrap at their home 907 East Seventy-third Street. Brother and Sister Gilstrap had just returned from their honeymoon trip by auto to Montana, and friends were anxious to have a visit with them and present some jolly gifts for use in the new home.

Sister Stella Hodges, our faithful chorister, was also given a surprise party as an expression of appreciation of her splendid services and joy over her recovery from an operation which she recently had to undergo.

The young people had their outings on the beach, but so far have failed to give the details to the writer.

We are now looking forward to district conference September 24 and 25. We expect many Saints to attend, and trust all will make such mental and spiritual preparation that our time of rejoicing over the Book of Mormon, the restored gospel, and present opportunities, may be complete.

We also anticipate having Brother John Martin with us again soon. His last visit was one of great encouragement to both the priesthood and lay members. He gave a number of blessings and, with our pastor, made many visits to the homes of Saints, and to hospitals where calls came for administration.

Our district president has not been enjoying good health, but we pray for the return of his strength, that we may have him with us oftener, as his visits too are a source of comfort.

Northeastern Illinois Young People's Convention

The young people's convention of the Northeastern Illinois District met with the Belvidere Branch on Sunday, July 10, 1927. The day was ushered in with a prayer service at 8 a. m., Assistant Superintendent E. O. Byrn and Brother H. T. McCaig in charge. This service will long be remembered by those privileged to be present as the Master poured out his Spirit in abundance. The spirit of prayer was especially manifest, and all rejoiced under its influence, bringing peace and love to start the convention.

At 9:40 a. m. a beautiful prelude was played by Sister H. T. McCaig, of Chicago, after which Number 158 in the Hymnal was sung, followed by a prayer by District President David E. Dowker. After singing "Consecration," the Department of Sunday School took charge. Following the Sunday school, was the children's hour, and a large number of the children presented a program enjoyed by all. To Sister Minnie Pinkerton, of Belvidere, and Sister Louise Simpson, of Rockford, belong the credit of this program, for both worked hard to make it a success.

A lunch was served cafeteria style, and visiting was the order of the day until 2 p. m., when Roy F. Healy, the district superintendent, spoke on "What can we do?" At three o'clock Elder David Dowker spoke on "Bible appreciation."

After dinner had again been served, we gathered together at 6 p. m. for the Religio hour; the classes were divided into two sections, Brother Roscoe Davy speaking to the young people and Brother Healy to the adult class. The evening hour was occupied by District Missionary Roscoe Davey, who spoke on the "Stewardship of service." We were glad to greet many of the Saints who drove a long distance to meet with us. The Rockford church was closed all day to allow the Saints there to attend. Many came from the southern end of the district. We hope we may have more of these meetings, as they always bring us a message of hope and cheer.

Denison, Iowa

At this writing we are rejoicing in the fact that we are able to report an addition of one to our number. Brother Lee E. Coburn, who for some time has been investigating the work, decided the time had arrived for him to take up his cross and follow the meek and lowly Nazarene. On July 21, he was led into the waters of baptism by Branch President Warren G. Oliver. The meeting was in charge of Brother Fred Baber, and the good Spirit seemed to be with us in power. Brother Ward Johnson was the speaker of the eleven o'clock hour and gave us a very instructive sermon on how we should live. Brother Warren G. Oliver occupied at the evening service, being also the spokesman at the confirmation meeting. A goodly number was present, and all seemed impressed with the sermons delivered in the morning and evening services.

No services were held here during the reunion at Sac City. A number from our local were able to camp on the grounds this year, among them being several of our Temple Builders who camped together under the efficient care of Sister Nora Johnson and Sister Pearl Liese. They report a good time, and we feel much has been accomplished by their being able to attend the reunion, for upon their return home a special request was made by them for a young people's prayer meeting. This request was readily granted, and now in addition to our regular Sunday services the prayer meeting is conducted at the hour of 8.30 p. m. Brother Ward Johnson had charge of this hour and rejoiced over being able to report a hundred per cent meeting. The Temple Builders inform us that under the direction of Brother Closson, of Lamoni, they were enabled to put on a home talent play called "The ten virgins," which brought forth much comment. We feel that we should commend our young for their good behavior while at the reunion, also for their willingness to render service whenever called upon.

Brother Loyd Winnans is again able to occupy in the pulpit, for which we are thankful. On Last Sunday morning he delivered a very good sermon, employing as his subject, "Faith against human reason."

Brother Ralph Roy spoke at the evening hour, his talk being upon the redemption of Zion.

A farewell party was held at the home of Brother and Sister Ward Johnson by the Temple Builders in honor of Sister Pearl Liese, prior to her leaving to attend Grace-land College. Light refreshments were served at an early hour, after which they departed for the city park; and after spending some time in playing games and talking over the times they had been permitted to enjoy together at the reunion, they all escorted Miss Pearl to the station, where she took the train for Lamoni.

Sister Robert Montgomery is feeling poorly, owing to her declining years. She is frail.

Parkersburg, West Virginia

Considerable activity has been witnessed in this branch the past few months. All the departments of the work are moving forward, and we feel that steady progress is being made.

Among recent visitors to our branch were Brother George Criswell and wife, of Wheeling, West Virginia; Brother O. J. Tary and wife, of Wheeling; Brother Thomas Mills, of Moundsville, West Virginia; and Brother and Sister Frank Johnson, of Marietta, Ohio.

Sister Anna Craiger died May 6, and Brother Delbert Williams on May 19.

The following have been recently baptized; Lydia Withee, Lillian Withee, James Withee, Florence Germon, Ethelene Williams, Pauline Shutts, and Ella Kenney. Brother Germon did the baptizing.

The class in Religio studying stewardships finished on May 22, and is now studying "The meaning of our religion," with Brother Germon as teacher.

On July 1 the enrollment of our Sunday school was four officers, five teachers, and twenty-six scholars. During the past year the percentage of attendance of the officers was seventy-seven; teachers seventy-seven; and scholars sixty-seven, giving our school an attendance of seventy-four per cent. Our branch enrollment is seventy-four, but we have only seventeen of them enrolled in the Sunday school, which is twenty-three per cent.

Our branch did well in a financial way the past year. Total contributions were $339.06. Our per capita average was $4.36, and ten contributed, which was fourteen per cent. We also had ten tithe payers in the branch. One inventory was made and one annual tithing report made.

The Women's Department presented the branch with a very nice communion set. They meet monthly and study church history. They have their monthly payments of one dollar paid up to date.

Brother Thomas Newton paid us a farewell visit July 3 before going to his new field in Tennessee and Kentucky. He has been with us several years and will be missed from our gatherings.

Brother Alma Booker, our new missionary, was here the fore part of August and preached a few nights with right good interest. We hope to have him with us later in some special services to try to reach some people with our message.

Brother Otis Forester, of Clarksburg, West Virginia, who is superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, was here looking after his work August 7. Sister Mildred Griffiths, district chorister, was here also in the interest of the music for our conference.

Brother Germon, our district president, took this opportunity to meet with the department superintendents of the district, as all were here on this occasion. Plans for our coming conference were talked over.

Several attended the district conference at Indian Creek, August 26, 27, and 28. Our branch made a good report for the past year. Those of our branch who held district offices were commended for their efforts in looking after their work. The talent of our Religio made a good showing in the program given by the different branches that have this department of work.

Sister Mabel Smith was sustained as secretary-treasurer, and Harry Smith as Sunday school superintendent and bishop's agent. Harry Smith was selected by our new district president, Brother Alma Booker to act as one of his vice presidents of the district.

Our quarterly branch business meeting was held September 7 with fifteen members present. All departments made a good report of the work during the past year. Our church fund now amounts to $258.44. Our branch treasury showed a balance of $26.69. Sister May Griffin is caring for the work very efficiently as clerk and treasurer. New officers were elected to take office the first Sunday in October. They are as follows: C. W. Germon, branch president; May Griffin, clerk and treasurer; Harry Smith, historian and publicity agent; C. W. Germon, chorister; Shirley Germon, organist; Harry Smith, Sunday school superintendent; Cecil Smith, assistant superintendent; May Griffin, superintendent Recreation and Expression; Burns Wilson, assistant superintendent; May Reese, superintendent of Women's Department; Luella Smith, assistant superintendent.

A vote of thanks was given our retiring president, Brother Baronet Beall. He has done a good work in here. He came at a time when the branch was needing some one of experience to help get the work in good working condition. He has been faithful in looking after his duties and can always be depended upon to be present to do his part. He has served faithfully and well.

Burns Wilson, who has been a faithful attendant at our services, since coming here, attended the Kirtland reunion and was baptized while there. He says they had a fine reunion, and he greatly enjoyed his time there.

This fall will make ten years since the first openings of the work were made here in 1917. Great changes have taken place. We hope to have some sort of a service to commemorate the opening of the work some time this fall. We hope to keep moving forward.

Tells of Her Anxiety and Her Faith

I have just read Apostle Paul Hanson's letter in a recent HERALD telling of the remarkable healing of his mother many years ago. It did me so much good. Sounded like a voice from the past, and once again my faith seemed to revive in the power of God to bless his suffering Saints. In the same HERALD is another very wonderful testimony by Sister Bozarth. I rejoice with these Saints in their experiences, for unless this gospel comes to us with more power—if there is not more than the "word only" to make it different from the churches of the world, then I feel that all our "assurances" are vain.

And Emma Burton has gone over to the Other Side! So well do I remember when her powers of mind and body were at the zenith! How far-reaching her influence, none but the God who gave can tell. When I first began to read after Emma Burton, about thirty years ago, she had the happy faculty of emphasizing those times that God had helped her in the hour of need, and the Spirit bore witness that her testimony was true. When I was but a young woman in this work, I have been strengthened times without number by reading her cheery words. And Sister Walker, too! How I used to look for her name each week! Always something good came with it.

But yesterday is gone! And our opportunities for doing lie dead with it! Tomorrow is yet unborn! Only today is ours. How little we dreamed on yesterday what the problems of today would mean! And who knows what tomorrow will bring? But if we are to safely cross the Sea of Doubt and Disaster that floods the earth today, we must, like the airmen of our time, mount high above the fogs and storms that hug the ground. And in the Sunlight of Eternal Truth, with the love of God in our hearts as the guiding compass—we will not lose our way nor be wrecked in the angry waters, but will reach the Safe Harbor where the lights of home, and our loved ones await us on the Other Side.

And some way I feel that the Father who heard and answered yesterday's prayer will not be deaf to the moan of pain and the anguished cry of today. For he is the God of Today.

And Tomorrow—we leave with Him who holds the destiny of all people in his hands.

MARY E. GILLIN.

PEORIA, ILLINOIS, 102 Clarke Avenue.

Battle Creek, Michigan

September 16.—Work at this branch has been and is very pleasant, moving with a spirit of love and ambition; and a general interest prevails, having a good attendance at all our meetings.

Within the last two months six adults and two children have accepted the faith and have entered the waters of baptism.

We are also pleased to announce at this time that Brother Paul Kirby has been ordained to the office of deacon, Elders Gross and Harrington officiating.

Brother Binkley and son Carl escaped serious injury when the car they were driving was hit by an approaching car and was overturned. Both received minor injuries but are now able to be about their duties.

Sisters Beatrice and Marie Radcliff are slowly recovering from bruises and wounds received while riding in an automobile which was hit head on by another car.

A box social was held at Sister Radcliffe's at 349 Wood Street, with much success, and a good time was had by all who attended.

An ice cream social was held at the home of Brother and Sister Young, and a goodly crowd attended, plenty of ice cream and cake were served, and a very enjoyable evening was spent with songs, readings, and the playing of games.

Brother and Sister Shaller spent the first Saturday and Sunday of this month at Grand Rapids, Michigan, where Brother Shaller gave a talk at the morning services.

Brother Harrington, our district president, is with us again after spending a few days at Grand Rapids and Kalamazoo.

Brother and Sister Mark Gross, Brother and Sister Glen Cease, and Brother and Sister Reed, from this branch, attended the Kirtland reunion. They report a very spiritual meeting.

Brother and Sister Nichols were with us Sunday, September 10. Their home is at Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Miss Rena Keeler and sister Isabel were visitors at the morning services last Sunday, accompanied by Sister Esther McDonald.

Brother Fred Kirby and family, Brother Paul Kirby and family, Brother Guy Cole and family, and Brother Orlando Clark and wife, attended sacramental services at Saginaw Sunday, September 4.

Brother Mark Gross is spending a few weeks with his daughter at Fort Wayne, Indiana, where he is building a house.

Brother Ray Watson is home again with his mother, at 39 Seedorf Street. Brother Watson is a musician and has been working in New Jersey for some time.

Brother and Sister Nulff recently moved to this city from Coldwater. They live at 120 Winter Street. Sister Nulff attended Sunday school services here last Sunday.

Brother John Graham, of Kalamazoo, Michigan, is a frequent visitor of this branch.

Brother Charles E. Bower and family, with Sister Dunn and daughter, of Kalamazoo, Michigan, attended services here last Sunday evening. Brother Bower was in charge of the services.

Woodbine, Iowa

607 Weare Street

September 14.—District reunion is over, and if the good instruction given out there is imparted by those who were in attendance to the different branches and localities, it will surely be an incentive to more intensive labor. We are working with a desire to be better fitted for our individual work, that we may do the part that is ours humbly and efficiently before our Maker, that Zion's redemption may be hastened.

Among our visitors on last Sunday were Brother and Sister T. A. Hougas, of Henderson, Iowa; Brother and Sister Bert Gamet, of Lamoni, and a number of Saints from neighboring branches.

Brother Hougas occupied the eleven o'clock hour, his subject being, "What is life?" He made the observation that to one life may be a selfish accumulation of wealth; to another real life can be found nowhere as it is in the dance hall, while others delight in breaking certain laws of our country, etc. Then to the Saints came the question, What is your life? Is it an acceptable service to God, or is it otherwise?

Among our afflicted ones are Brother J. M. Pett and Sister Elsie Butterworth, both having recently been in a hospital. We ask for them divine blessing.

This is an exceptional September; the thermometer will persist in climbing to ninety degrees and upwards.

From the Heart of the Ozarks

SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI, September 10.—Brother and Sister George Gould, of Independence, were visitors here on August 7. Sister Gould talked to the Sunday school in the morning and gave a lecture in the afternoon. Brother Gould was the evening speaker. Brother E. L. Kemp and wife and son, Billy, of Oklahoma City, visited their parents here during August. Brother Kemp was the speaker at both morning and evening services August 21.

A nice crowd from Springfield attended the reunion at Joplin, Missouri. Brother Swearingen took several of the members in his car, also taking the branch tent and other necessary equipment in his truck to make them comfortable. Quite a crowd watched him load up at Joplin for the return trip, and the way he packed things in that Ford, with his passengers on top, reminds one of the method used by the circus in loading their wagons. But they made the trip home without a hitch. All attending the reunion reported a fine time and expressed themselves as having heard some wonderful sermons while there.

Brother Henry Sparling, accompanied by Brother F. M. Reynolds and Sister Kate Akridge, attended the funeral of Brother Stephen C. Hughes August 24 at Dixon, Missouri. Brother Sparling conducted the funeral services. Brother Hughes was eighty-six years old and was among the first to accept the gospel in Springfield. He served the branch here for a number of years as deacon. A machinist by trade, he was among the first thirteen men to be pensioned by the Frisco Railroad. Brother Hughes is survived by his wife, eight children, thirty-three grandchildren, and nineteen great-grandchildren.

Brother M. B. Williams, of Independence, spent a few days the latter part of August visiting the Erickson family here, having formed the acquaintance years ago in Montana. Brother Williams was the morning speaker August 28. Brother Henry Sparling has been the principal evening speaker during August, using the Book of Mormon for his theme.

Historical Trip to Missouri Points

An historical automobile trip was planned by the members of the Council of Thirteen (a group of young people representing the thirteen districts in Independence).

Ninety-three automobiles and a large bus left the Stone Church Sunday morning at 7 o'clock, planning to arrive at Far West at 11 o'clock in time for the services in the Far West church.

John Sheehy, D. O. Cato, R. Flanders, and O. Swenson sponsoring the trip, apparently provided for every emergency. A garage "ambulance" followed the procession and supplied a fresh battery to one car, helped when punctures or blowouts occasionally happened, and performed other services required. One of the brothers, a physician, was with the party and would have rendered aid if it had been necessary.

An advance car, in charge of D. O. Cato and John Sheehy, posted markers along the route, so it was impossible to get confused and take the wrong road.

A stop was made at Richmond, and David Whitmer's grave in the new cemetery was visited; then to the old cemetery, where a monument has been erected by the Utah Church, on which is engraved on the four sides a history of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the names of the three witnesses, in connection with that of Joseph Smith. Oliver Cowdery is buried under this monument. The graves of two of the eight witnesses to the Book of Mormon are also located nearby.

In front of the courthouse at Richmond stands a magnificent bronze monument of General A. W. Doniphan, who played an important part in the early history of the church following Governor Boggs's exterminating order. When General Lewis ordered General Doniphan to shoot the leaders of the church, he refused to carry out the command of his superior officer, but he was never punished for his insubordination. He also defended Joseph Smith after he was imprisoned. He was the author of a bill to set aside Caldwell County for the use of the Saints. In recognition of the valuable service General Doniphan rendered to the State of Missouri in many ways, a grateful people have erected this monument in front of the courthouse.

After leaving Richmond, the party motored to Kingston, located eight miles from Far West. After a short stop there they proceeded to Far West, arriving during the eleven o'clock service, which was brought to an abrupt close so the Saints could welcome the visitors. After the building had been packed to capacity, a song service was conducted by John Sheehy, and the old songs of Zion were sung with the spirit and understanding on this historical spot.

C. Ed. Miller was introduced, giving a short sketch of the places visited. He asked Bishop Siegfried to make a few remarks in reference to the witnesses for the Book of Mormon. When the services closed, the inner man was refreshed with good things to eat. After viewing the Temple Lot and a few other places of interest around Far West, Orvar Swenson, president of the council of 44, was in charge of the service at 1.30. Roland Flanders, president of the council of 13, offered prayer. The visitors filled the church, and Brother Miller gave a sketch of the founding of Far West and the work of the pioneer women, the dedication of the Temple Lot, the persecution of the Saints, the arrest of the leaders; their trip to Independence, Liberty, and Richmond; and of their final triumph in escaping the mobs. Brother Miller exhorted the young people to finish the noble work these sturdy men and women had started. While our work is not the same as theirs, yet it will require courageous and dedicated, intelligent men and women to carry that work to completion.

At the close of this service, the party motored to Haun's Mill, where years ago many tragedies were enacted, women and children being persecuted to death. There is nothing of historical value remaining at Haun's Mill. The homes, the blacksmith shop, the mill are all things of the past.

From Haun's Mill the party returned by various routes to their homes in Independence, in meditation living over the scenes of the past which were enacted in these historical places.

The trip was made without serious accident, we believe, although on the return trip a car containing several drunken men ran into a sedan driven by one of the sisters. Just what damage was done we have not yet learned.

This trip, which requires twelve to thirteen hours over splendid roads, was formerly made in the time of the pioneers by ox-carts and horse-drawn wagons.

The church in these latter days has been established at a price. Noble men and women gave their lives that the gospel might be preached in all the world for a witness to all mankind. Noble men and women today are dedicating their all to that same cause, and Zion, our objective, will eventually triumphantly materialize as a city set on a hill with the light of God for its splendor.

Wichita, Kansas

Corner Water and Osie

Vacation time is over. We note an increase in our church attendance as our people are returning home from the summer's outing.

Mrs. A. A. Buschow and children have returned from their trip to Honolulu. Miss Alice Bozarth, who accompanied them, remained in Denver for a short stay, but will be home in the near future.

Mrs. Buschow gave a talk at our women's meeting, telling us of the customs and mode of living of the islanders, also of the church and its movements which proved to be very interesting to all.

Our Department of Women has resumed its class study after a period of rest during the summer months. We plan on studying the third volume of church history. We have completed the first and second volumes. Miss Bozarth is our teacher and is well qualified for her work.

Missionary George Jenkins occupied our pulpit here Sunday. He gave two wonderful sermons which sank deep into the hearts of his hearers. His very being was illuminated by the spirit of inspiration. We believe our missionary will be a power for good in our district because of his righteous living. He is endowed with the spirit of inspiration when he presents the message of truth.

Pastor Whalley occupied the pulpit at Hutchinson Sunday. Brother and Sister Whalley were away during most of the month of August at various reunions, etc. We are glad to have them return to us. The work is moving along nicely under their leadership. Our prayer services are fine, of the highest order and well attended, but if we heed the admonition of our humble pastor, we will be helped to come up to higher planes. Sister Whalley is faithful in her line of service. Notwithstanding the heat of the summer days, she continued work with the girls who are in her charge, holding their meetings regularly. She has made several noticeable accomplishments.

During the absence of Pastor Whalley the work was in charge of our district president, E. L. Barraclough, who gave us some good sermons. Brother Barraclough is really the father of our branch, for he was one of the first to establish the work here, and because of his earnest efforts toward the accomplishment of good he has endeared himself to many.

Our quarterly conference was held during the reunion at Winfield, in August. A very peaceful spirit reigned and unity prevailed. The ordinations of three of our brethren were provided for. Brother George Turpen and Brother Carl Holsworth were ordained to the office of deacon; Brother Ralph Smoyer to the office of teacher; the two later named are members of the Wichita Branch.

Brother Lawrence Brockway has returned to Lincoln, Nebraska, where he will continue his line of study.

Sister Doris Nelson, who has been living at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Kate Brockway, has accepted a position near Lamoni. We regret the loss of these young people, as they were numbered among our most faithful ones.

We believe as a branch we are united in purpose in trying together with you to establish Zion.

Hutchinson, Kansas

September 4.—It was indeed a happy group of Saints that gathered on this beautiful Sabbath morning to partake of the sacrament. It was the first meeting held in the new church and an event of great importance to those who had labored and prayed for years that the Hutchinson group might have a desirable place for services. Brother George Turpen was ordained to the office of deacon under the hands of Brother E. E. Mettlen, T. C. Turpen, and E. L. Barraclough, in this meeting.

Following the sacramental service, at which nearly one hundred persons were present, a basket dinner was served in a park near by. At two o'clock the Saints were again assembled in the church to listen to the splendid sermon delivered by District President E. L. Barraclough.

The evening services were well attended, both the Religion and preaching service. The pastor, Brother T. Comer Turpen, was the speaker.

Brother E. E. Mettlen has gone to western Kansas to work for a few weeks, and his presence is greatly missed in the meetings.

The Department of Women is working hard for a bazaar to be held in the near future, the proceeds of which are to be placed in the building fund. Every department of the branch is growing, and now that a church building is in our possession, the work may be carried on to a greater advantage.

MRS. MARGARET TURPEN.

Bradner, Ohio

We have been very busy this last month painting and papering our church, varnishing the seats and woodwork, and making many other minor repairs, which has meant a lot of hard labor, especially for our men-folks who are working every day for a livelihood; but now that job is completed, and we were made happy to be able to entertain the district conference the 3d and 4th of this month.

Bishop Fry and Brothers John Grice and E. L. Ulrich were the speakers, giving us much good admonition. The district was well represented, though there were many who have attended in past years who were not present with us, and we missed them. We all feel that our conference was beneficial in many ways.

The Sunday school contest ended with the winning of the banner by Oak Harbor School, this banner being formerly held by Bradner. Oak Harbor gained thirty-nine new scholars during the year, and we felt they well earned the banner, though they are going to have to work hard to keep it.

Our district missionary was elected to succeed Elder Sly, who did a very good work. Owing to financial conditions of the district, it was considered a good plan that Brother Grice act in the office of district president, thereby killing two birds with the proverbial one stone, providing the head authorities decide to approve the plan.

Each branch in the district seems to be active in putting across the pageant, "Remember Cumorah."

We have been playing volley ball on the back of the church lot, which the men-folks arranged for recreational purposes, and these games have a wonderful significance. We are in hopes that many of the younger ones can be kept from the worldly pleasures by entering into this clean recreation.

Brother Grice expects to hold meetings three nights this week.

Coffeyville, Kansas

September 21.—Coffeyville Branch is holding its own in the world. Brother G. G. Caldwell, of Independence, Kansas, who was elected branch president at Brother Andersen's leaving, preaches every Sunday night that he finds it possible to come over. We appreciate his zealous efforts.

About a year ago we had an active young people's organization, but for some reason, none of us quite know why, we neglected our meetings and have not had one since last October. Our young people were gradually losing interest and were not coming to Religio or Sunday school as they should. A week ago last Sunday, September 11, the young people of the Religio decided to organize their meetings. We held the meeting last night at Thelma Walton's home. There were ten members present. The following officers were elected: President, Lois Henson; vice president, Raymond Yeubanks; secretary-treasurer, Mildred Reynolds; chairman of social committee, Thelma Walton; chairman of program committee, Evelyn Yeubanks. The vice president has charge of the membership committee. We are going to try to have regular bimonthly meetings, and to keep the young people so interested that they will want to come to Sunday school, Religio, and church.

Elder Lee Quick, of Mapleton, Kansas, was a visitor in our branch Monday, August 29. We very much enjoyed the message he brought to us and hope he can come again soon.

Edith Biggerstaff, a member of the junior class, is ill with typhoid fever.

Cherokee, Iowa

Reunion is past and vacations are over, so we are trying to settle down for a good winter's work in all departments.

Some of our workers have left us and some seem indifferent to the importance of God's work, but we have faithful ones who will carry on in spite of adverse conditions. God has blessed us in the past, and we know he will be with us in the future if we do our part.

Pastor A. R. Crippen conducted the funeral of John O. Reeder from Wallace's funeral home on August 26. While John was not a member of the church, he asked for prayers and administration during his illness and received some comfort therefrom. He was the youngest son of Sister Estella Reeder and brother of Elder W. W. Reeder.

Sister J. T. Spence and son, Maurice, have gone to Burlington, Iowa, where Maurice will learn the barber trade. We hope the Burlington Saints will be able to locate them.

Quite a number of our members have been sick, but all seem on the road to recovery. Sister Myrtle Reeder, who had to give up Sunday school work, is some better, but will be unable to resume her work for some time.

Brother Frank Horn, a member of Clitherall, Minnesota, Branch, passed away at the Cherokee State Hospital last week. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon from the church, sermon by Pastor A. R. Crippen. Interment was in Oak Hill Cemetery. Brother and Sister Horn have conducted a hotel in Minnesota for many years. They sold out about two months ago, and moved to Albert City, Iowa, in order to be near their children. Brother Horn became ill and was brought to Cherokee for treatment. He was unable to withstand the ravages of the disease and passed away. The Saints all extend Sister Horn and five children heart-felt sympathy.

Our services were somewhat poorly attended the two Sundays of district reunion, as all the Saints who could attended the splendid services held in the fine park at Sac City. All felt well repaid for the fifty-mile trip. The sermons of Brothers Sheehy, Gunsolley, Blair, and all others were indeed sources of inspiration for great good. Sister Christina Crippen and daughter, Lamerne, were the only ones from here who camped on the grounds.

We are looking forward to meeting the Saints of the district next month when the district conference will be held in our church. We are expecting Apostle J. F. Garver to be with us at that time and hope many of the Saints will be present. An invitation is extended to all.

Graceland Chats

Graceland—to a Freshman

As we near the hill famous as the home of our school, the first thing to greet us is the tower of the Administration Building. At a glimpse we catch the spirit surrounding its spirals, a spirit of higher ideals and surer purpose.

As we draw closer, we can distinguish the marks that age has left upon the building, and to our minds comes the realization of the age and strength of Graceland's foundation.

Our attention is drawn from the main building to the nearby structures. Briggs Hall and Zimmermann Hall make us realize the simplicity of life and law at Graceland. The trees and flowers reveal the closeness of nature to the school, to the faculty and student body.

Taking the school as a whole, we get as our first impression one of highest thinking, cleanest living, firm standing, and constant growth. At once we resolve to take this impression deep into our hearts and carry it with us throughout our school years and into our later lives.

College Mourns Student Friend

Robert Alden Foote, a Graceland freshman, who entered college last week, from Caribou, Maine, died at the segregation hospital near the Gables Sunday morning about 4 p. m., of paralysis.

Mr. Foote had been ill for several days but was not thought to be serious. He was receiving medical attention and was attended by a special nurse. Developments Friday looked more serious, and symptoms were those of infantile paralysis, which disease is quite prevalent in many parts of the country, so he was removed Saturday night to the segregation hospital, where he died early the next morning.

Mr. Foote came from his eastern home sometime in advance of the opening of school. Becoming somewhat homesick with nothing to do, he went to Illinois where he found work among relatives until the time of the college opening. Upon his return, he seemed contented and happy and had made a number of good friends in the short time of his college association.

A special chapel service was held in his memory at the college Monday afternoon, and the body was shipped to his home, upon receipt of advice from his parents, Monday night.

The memorial service held at the college at 4:35 Monday afternoon was one of the most impressive ever witnessed by the college students. After the quiet assembling of the students, Alta Royer played an appropriate voluntary. Then a quartet composed of Eunice Butts, Doris Waterman, Carl Prall, and Franklyn Weddle sang "Beautiful home."

Miss Condit, of the faculty, then read a cutting from "Thanatopsis." The beautiful simplicity with which she rendered the bit of poetry made it an impressive and lingering thought.

Edith Woods, president of the student body, spoke in behalf of the students. She spoke of Graceland's student body being as one big family, and the entering of sadness into the realm so soon, but impressed the feeling of brotherliness present. She reminded the students of what they must do to carry on.

Mrs. Gates, dean of women, told the student body of the love of their fellow classmate for them. She was present at the deathbed and wanted to tell the students how he really felt the big brotherliness present at Graceland.

Roy Cheville, dean of Herald Hall, at which Alden roomed, made brief mention of the boy's spirit and good will. "May this incident prove to you," he said, "that we as a faculty do appreciate and care for each student."

A resolution committee previously appointed, read a message of condolence to the grief-stricken parents. The quartet then closed the meeting by singing, "My times are in thy hands."

Mr. Foote died about four o'clock Sunday morning. Before daylight President Briggs had consulted with the local board of health and communicated with the state board of health by means of long distance telephone, regarding the situation, and immediately proceeded to carry out their instructions. Every precaution was used to prevent the spread of the disease, and most careful watch has been kept of the least symptom of any illness. The most dangerous period of incubation of the germ has passed, and there is no sign of any more cases. It is hoped that parents and friends will not be unduly alarmed, as great care is being taken, and every indication is favorable for the health of the student body.

Wilber Welcomes Southern Nebraska Conference

On the last day of August, some of the Saints of the Southern Nebraska District loaded their tents into their cars and headed toward Wilber. Others found it impossible to start until September 1, the day our conference was scheduled to start. Still others found it impossible to plan to camp at all, but attended as many meetings as possible and drove to and from Wilber each day.

Brother and Sister Robertson went from Lincoln on Tuesday, taking the district reunion tent with them. They and some of the Saints of Wilber worked very hard for two or three days getting the tent and the grounds in condition for the ones who were expected to come later.

The tent was put up in the spacious yard of Brother Brolliar, two miles south of Wilber. There were a number of small tents with cars parked close by. Bright and early Thursday morning the people from Kearney drove to the grounds in three cars, which were full. They had started very early in the morning, which enabled them to arrive at an early hour. They brought their orchestra and helped with the musical part of the conference very much. There was a representation from the following places in the district: Lincoln, Grand Island, Kearney, Wilber, Fairfield, Pawnee City, Tecumseh, and Nebraska City.

As had been announced previously, Thursday was devoted to recreation. The games, and so forth, were in charge of Wana Black, of Grand Island. About the middle of the afternoon, Grover Wall, from Lincoln, came in his little truck with a Kohler light plant, which he installed on the grounds, wiring the large tent and two or three of the smaller ones. This provided very satisfactory lighting, and no one had to think of filling lamps or lanterns. Brother Wall also put a large globe outside on the grounds and it was easy to find one's way over the ground at night.

Thursday night there was a large program, which had been arranged by Carrie Hale with the help of various ones in the branches. Everyone apparently enjoyed it immensely.

Friday morning prayer and testimony meeting was held in the tent at 8.30. At 10 o'clock Brother John Sheehy lectured. This was especially for the young people, but all who heard it enjoyed it very much. At two o'clock in the afternoon, Bishop Koehler, of Independence, lectured.

Saturday was started with a prayer service at 8.30 o'clock. This meeting did not seem quite as interesting as the one held on Friday, but was very enjoyable. At 10 o'clock Brother Koehler lectured again, telling us much about stewardships and the working of the church program. We enjoyed this very much, and it seemed we drank in every word he told us. He painted very vividly the work that is now being done in order to work out the program. The afternoon was devoted to recreation. There was a volley ball net up, and it proved popular. The older ones and the young were interested in the games.

Sunday morning as many as could do so came to sacramental services fasting. We spent a delightful hour together, telling each other our blessings and thankfulness to God. At ten o'clock Brother Sheehy talked to the adults and young people, and Sister Robertson and Wana Black had charge of the beginners and intermediates. There was baptism in the afternoon at the Blue River, and immediately following was ordination and confirmation service. There were five brothers ordained to the priesthood. Brother J. Orville Preston was ordained elder; Brother Ethan Godfrey, priest; Brother Reece Preston, priest; Brother Grubb, deacon; and Brother John Preston, teacher.

After the services some of the ones who lived at distant places started home. The others stayed and enjoyed the afternoon together. Brother Shakespeare took Brothers Sheehy and Koehler to Lincoln, where they took a train for Independence. We were very glad to have these two men with us and feel that they felt much for us.

The ladies of Wilber and community are to be commended on the efficient way in which they took care of the meals. There was a cook tent erected and fitted with a stove. A long table was placed outside the door of the tent, and everyone was served with simple but wholesome meals. All of the visitors hope that when it is their turn to have the conference to entertain, they will be able to do as well.

Sunday afternoon saw our ranks depleted somewhat, but we are all looking forward to the next conference and hope we will have as enjoyable a one as before.

CARRIE HALE.

San Francisco, California

Danvers and Casella Avenue, Near 18th Street

August 28, we had Elder John W. Rushton for our speaker. A good congregation greeted him. He was more than welcome.

Ben S. Parks resigned as Sunday school superintendent, and Sister Mary Seat was elected to fill that office.

At our sacramental meeting September 4, there were fifty present. Thirteen took part in testimony and prayer. On vote, sixteen promised to read the Book of Mormon this month. Deacon Cecil Smith was the speaker in the evening.

The Park Presidio Group is reading the Book of Mormon at the Wednesday evening meetings.

On the 11th, Elder J. B. Carmichael, from Oakland, was our speaker and teacher. C. Holden spoke in the evening.

At the Religio service the orchestra gave a good concert. It consisted of six numbers and was very fine; such selections as the "Bohemian girl," "Over the waves," and "Flag of truce" being rendered. There was also a duet, "Roses of Picardy," cornet, C. Holden; trombone, E. S. Parks. The Religio paper, Star of the West, was read by the editor, Sister C. Holden. It was a splendid edition. The orchestra assists our choir in its singing at our several services and is a very helpful addition.

On the 13th our branch priesthood held their regular meeting. The writer was the speaker in the morning of August 28.

All goes well with us.

GEORGE S. LINCOLN.

Independence

Stone Church

A Sabbath morning at sunrise. A gathering of Zion's young for prayer. A season for testimonies of gratitude to God and of love for his work. Short, well-worded prayers. The comforting communion of the Spirit. A time of joy together. Such was the 7.30 young people's prayer service held in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church in charge of Elders D. O. Cato and John F. Sheehy, in commemoration of the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon to the world from Cumorah's Hill a hundred years ago. Many were the references to historic incidents of the church by the young people, and these were always linked with the expression of a desire to go on, to carry on the work for which our forefathers sacrificed friends, pleasures, comforts, and in many instances their lives.

Last Wednesday evening the young people's meeting of prayer and testimony was conducted by Elders C. Ed. Miller, and J. R. Lentell, missionary of Southeastern Illinois.

Graduating exercises occupied the eleven o'clock hour at the Campus. The front of the room was pleasingly decorated in yellow and white crepe paper and goldenrod and white daisies. The fifty-eight graduates sat in the center of the platform, and at one end was a table on which was a book-case containing the books of the Bible the junior boys had made at summer school, and Solomon's Temple that Miss Frances Fassnacht's graduating class of girls had made of plasticine. Chester Constance, of Walnut Park group, gave the address. He told the story of the rich young man who came to Christ, and took for his text the question: "What lack I yet?" It was an interesting and instructive talk and was enjoyed by all. Marcine Turner and Mary Ethel Cool, of the graduates, sang a duet, "Whispering hope." The Campus faculty, while glad to see the children going forward in the school, are sorry to lose so many talented pupils.

In keeping with the centennial celebration of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon plates, Pastor C. Ed. Miller spoke at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning on the claims of that book. He made use of biblical citations, the testimony of personal witnesses, and archaeological evidences in support of the Book of Mormon and what it claims to be—a record of the ancient Americans and an additional witness to both Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ.

"How beautiful upon the mountain" was sung as the morning anthem by the Stone Church Choir, under the direction of Paul N. Craig. Solo parts were sung by Albert Brackenbury, baritone, and Lilly Belle Allen, soprano. Accompaniment for the musical service was played by Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist. The opening prayer and the benediction were offered by Elder J. D. Gault. Elder D. O. Cato presided over the service.

Brother Miller read from the eighteenth chapter of Isaiah, "Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia: that sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters, saying, Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation scattered and peeled, to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers have spoiled. All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifted up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye." He affirmed the belief of the church that America is the land referred to as "shadowing with wings," and pointed out that no other land is spread out in the form of a pair of wings as are North and South America. The position of America coincides, too, with the location, "beyond the rivers of Ethiopia," the speaker explained. And in this land an ensign has been lifted up, through the restoration of the gospel.

Other individuals and other groups have taken this same position with regard to the interpretation of Isaiah, eighteenth chapter, Brother Miller said, and have used the same passages and arguments which Latter Day Saints have affirmed since the establishment of the church in 1830.

In discussing the testimony of personal witnesses, Brother Miller made particular reference to David Whitmer, one of the three who told of viewing the plates and the engravings thereon, shown to them by an angel of heaven. These three men went to their deathbeds reaffirming and reiterating the truth of the testimony which they had borne. And the neighbors of David Whitmer in Richmond, Missouri, none of them members of the church, had certified to the sterling character and integrity of the man. These people included General A. W. Doniphan, noted army officer, bankers, city and county officials.

The work and writings of Professor Daniel G. Brinton, famous archæologist, concerning the Mayas, an ancient American people, were described by Brother Miller as confirming the story told in the Book of Mormon. That the early Americans did work in gold and did make gold plates has been verified by the findings of archæologists in the temples of Central and South America. A number of gold breastplates similar to the one described by Joseph Smith as being with the Book of Mormon plates, are today preserved in the museum of the University of Pennsylvania, according to Brother Miller. Furthermore, a study of the traditions and folklore of the American Indians today reveals evidence that Christ must have at one time appeared and preached to the peoples on this continent. Many students are affirming that belief today—the Book of Mormon was brought forth and told the story one hundred years ago. The full text of this sermon will be published soon in the columns of Zion's Ensign.

Almost an entire new corps of officers has been put to work in the Stone Church Religio as a result of the election held Sunday evening. Brother Gordon Kress, the nomination of the Presidency of this department and one of our active alert young men, was chosen by the congregation to pilot the work of the Religio through the next year. Others selected by vote are: Assistant superintendent to have charge of class work, Oral Andes; assistant superintendent, in charge of programs, Glenn Fairbanks; secretary, Nida Vincent; treasurer, Bishop G. W. Eastwood; chorister, Mrs. Lyle MacFarlane. Delta Friend was reelected pianist. A third assistant superintendent, to have charge of recreational activities, will be chosen by Superintendent Kress and his two assistants. To the retiring officers are due praise and gratitude for the work they have accomplished and for their undaunted efforts in every phase of Religio activity. We thank them. To the new workers, every member of the department should pledge support and lend his efforts to the progress of the body.

On this evening the Young People's Religio Class chose for its president Brother Lyle MacFarlane, and as secretary Sister Frances Fassnacht.

A throng of several thousand Saints gathered Sunday evening in the Auditorium in observance of the Book of Mormon centennial program. Long before the opening hour arrived every seat was occupied by Independence and visiting Saints, and with Elder John F. Sheehy leading they entered into a spirited song service. The place was filled with music, with the mighty volume of song, and the words of "All hail the power of Jesus' name," "Book of Mormon, hid for ages," and "The morning light is breaking." Elder D. O. Cato in charge of the service announced the opening song, "When earth in bondage long had lain." Evangelist U. W. Greene, recently returned from the East, offered the invocation.

President Frederick M. Smith, who was to have been the evening speaker, was incapacitated by a cold. He was present and requested Elder John A. Gardner to take his place. This summer President Smith, Elder Gardner, and Bishop Charles Fry visited that section of New York State which saw enacted much of the early history of the church. An account of this trip was published in a recent number of the HERALD in one of President Smith's "Little journeys."

A number of pictures taken by these three brethren had been made into lantern slides and were exhibited to the congregation at this hour, being explained by Brother Gardner. There were scenes of Palmyra, its post office, the old Palmyra Hotel, and other historic buildings, and the site where stood the building in which the Book of Mormon was first printed. Pictures of Joseph and Emma Smith were flashed upon the screen and were followed by scenes of the old Smith Farm, near Palmyra, the grove where Joseph Smith saw his first vision, and many views of beautiful Hill Cumorah. There were slides of the three witnesses, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris, and other people and places of striking interest to people of the church. As we were made more familiar with these places, particularly with Cumorah, we thought of the verse:

"Book of Mormon, hid for ages
On Cumorah's lonely hill,
Written by those ancient sages Whom Jehovah taught his will"; sensing a deeper truth in and thrilling at the lines:

"Glad we hail it,
Fullness of the gospel still!"

At the close of the lecture President Smith came forward and spoke briefly, impressing upon the Saints that we should be interested in not so much what our forefathers did, but how they did it, and with what ideals and hopes they pushed forward. We should question ourselves if we are keeping the trust they have given us. Are we really approaching Zion spiritually and temporally?

"Remember Cumorah"

The Book of Mormon pageant conceived by President Elbert A. Smith for production as part of the centennial celebration, had its first production in Independence Friday evening at the Auditorium Building, before an audience of between two and three thousand people, composed of Latter Day Saints and their friends and neighbors, in very large majority residents of the city. There were, however, several residents of Kansas City and other near points who then witnessed the production.

The director of the production was Mrs. Gladys Newton Six, who returned to Independence from her recently established home in Kansas for two weeks of hard work in directing the players of the White Masque Dramatic Club.

Several have said that it has not been their privilege to witness such an effective presentation of the Book of Mormon and of the work of the church.

The cast was well selected, the staging, costuming, lighting, all were excellently done, the audience was handled well by the Laurel Club ladies and their assistants, and it can be said truthfully that the occasion was pleasant and impressive. A hush prevailed which indicated deep interest and satisfaction while the historical matter of the rise and progress of the Restoration was recited by the players or was acted under proper settings upon the large stage of the Auditorium Building, itself an epochal occurrence in the development of the church.

It is to be presumed that HERALD readers have acquainted themselves with the contents of the pageant, how it demonstrates the making of the record of the Nephites, which is the Book of Mormon, and how this record of the first settlers of the Western Hemisphere came forth to take its place in the literature of the world. The story is recited of the hard way in which this record made its way among the people of the nineteenth century for a short time—then was embraced as the truth by many thousands within a few years. The Book of Mormon is presented as a gift of God to all mankind, and like many other gifts of God it found hesitating receivers among its needy beneficiaries. The rise of the church, the progress of science, invention, and church keeping pace until the present, and the status at present being one of coordinate effort of church, state, invention, and science, that truth may spread and the gospel be taken to all nations, tongues, and peoples that dwell upon all the face of the earth, in preparation for the gathering of those who embrace the truth, that Christ may come to the earth and find a people prepared to receive him.

An impressive closing scene of the pageant represents members of the nations of the earth asking for place in the work of carrying the gospel to the world and completing the errand of the church.

On Saturday evening the pageant was again presented, principally for out of town visitors, and many hundreds of them came and witnessed the realistic presentation of "Remember Cumorah," taking it back to home branch as best they could.

The Messiah Choir

The opening rehearsal for the tenth annual Christmas rendition of Handel's "Messiah" was held Sunday afternoon at the Stone Church. The attendance was good for the first meeting, but the leaders anticipate a considerable increase for the following rehearsals.

George H. Hulmes, president of the board of managers, was in charge of the meeting, and introduced President Frederick M. Smith, who spoke briefly on his "dream" for the progress of the church along musical lines—looking forward to a trained choir of one thousand voices at the centennial conference in 1930. The inspiration of President Smith's talk gave the initial rehearsal a tone of reverent determination on the part of each singer to give his best toward the perfection of choir work in Zion.

Paul N. Craig, director of the choir, took the stand and led the preliminary rehearsal of several of the choruses in "The Messiah." Sectional practices will begin next Sunday.

The membership committee will try out new voices for the Messiah choir at two further dates—next Sunday and the following Sunday, October 2 and 9, between 3 and 4 p. m. in the Stone Church dining hall. All who are interested in the choir movement should meet the committee and arrange to be numbered among the singers of "The Messiah." Regular rehearsals 4 p. m. each Sunday.

The Independence Institute

The faculty of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences will give a reception to the student body Saturday evening, October 1, 7.30 in the Institute Building. All students enrolled in the Sunday classes in the school of religious education are urged to be present and become acquainted with the week-day students and faculty.

A bright outlook for the school year is shared by members of the faculty. They are encouraged by the eagerness and determination with which students are launching into their courses. Interesting Personals

On Saturday evening, September 24, at 8.30, a pretty wedding was conducted at Walnut Park Church when Miss Lyra V. Curtis became the bride of Mr. Jerard H. Logeman. Elder E. A. Curtis pronounced the words uniting the couple in matrimony. Miss Rosa May Curtis, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Misses Pauline Millender and Nellie Curtis, were bridesmaids, while the groom was attended by Ronnie Curtis, brother of the bride, as best man, and Frank Curtis, brother of the bride, and Ammon Logeman, brother of the groom, as groomsmen.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Curtis, of Odessa, Missouri, and Mr. Logeman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Logeman. They plan to make their home in Kearney, Missouri, and their friends wish them a happy and prosperous life.

Neville Cool, twenty years old and eldest son of Brother and Sister F. A. Cool, of Independence, was fatally injured when thrown from a motorcycle Sunday evening. He was rushed to the Independence Sanitarium where he died a few hours later. He was a graduate of William Chrisman High School. He leaves a young wife, Ruth Mikel Cool, his parents, one brother, four sisters, and many friends. The funeral service was held at the Stone Church Tuesday afternoon, beginning at 2.30. Elder John F. Sheehy preached the funeral sermon.

Second Church

Only a few met in young people's prayer meeting at 8.15 Sunday morning, for quite a number were in attendance at the Stone Church.

Sunday school was conducted and had the usual average attendance.

Brother John A. Gardner was the morning speaker. A good crowd was out to hear him and enjoyed the sermon.

The afternoon prayer meeting had light attendance. Priesthood meeting convened at 3.30.

At six in the evening the Religio started its activities for the winter.

Our congregation worshiped with other Saints of Independence in the Auditorium at the preaching hour Sunday evening.

On Saturday afternoon at four o'clock Mary E. Monroe and Charles S. Taylor were married at the pastor's home, Elder A. K. Dillee officiating.

Liberty Street

Sunday being observed for the centennial of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, a special program was arranged for the entire day. A sunrise prayer meeting was held at half past seven o'clock, at which time a very spiritual meeting was enjoyed.

At the Sunday school hour Sister Leona Robinson sang a vocal solo, "In the beautiful garden of prayer." Brother Glenn Davis talked to the school upon the subject, "The coming forth of the Book of Mormon."

At eleven o'clock the choir rendered a pleasing anthem, "What was witnessed in the heavens?" Three of the local brethren shared the morning preaching hour, Elder J. B. Barrett speaking on the theme, "The testimony of the Son of the living God"; Elder Walter Curtis, "Morals taught by the Book of Mormon"; and Elder W. A. Stevenson talking on "The mission of the Book of Mormon to the Jew, Gentile, and Indian."

Miss Irma Peek and Brother Lehi Christenson sang a duet, "Oh, stop and tell me, red man," at the Religio hour.

For the evening service the choir contributed music, and Brother Philip Turner played a horn solo. Elder E. T. Atwell, first speaker of the hour, brought with him some of his drawings, with which he illustrated his sermon and laid the foundation for Pastor Leonard White's discourse. We were happy to have five of our local members of the priesthood as speakers for the day.

Sister Ennis White, one of our active young church workers, was married Friday night, September 23, at the home of her parents, Brother and Sister W. A. O. White, 809 North Dodgeon, to Mr. William C. Triplet. A houseful of relatives and friends witnessed the pretty ceremony, Pastor Leonard White, a cousin of the bride, officiating. Miss Evelyn White, youngest sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Aurun Weyland acted as best man. Alberta King, niece of the bride, was flower girl, and Teddy Crawford, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer. Mrs. Mabel Sellars sang "I love you," and Robert Crawford played a violin solo. Miss Dorothy Koehler played the wedding march. Sister Triplet was formerly a member of the Silver Wing Temple Builder Chapter and is well known in Independence. She and her husband have the best wishes of their many friends.

Reports from Independence Sanitarium inform us that Elder C. E. Willis, who was hurt by a fall week before last, is resting well. The Saints will do well to remember him in their prayers.

Following the Wednesday night prayer meeting September 7, and in the presence of seventy-five relatives and well wishers, Sister Ella Barrett was married to Brother Caleb Blodgett at the home of Sister Barrett's daughter, Sister J. O. Blakesley, 407 East Walnut. Elder J. B. Barrett, son of the bride, pronounced the ceremony in the hearing of the children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren of the couple. Sybil and Margaret Barrett, granddaughters of the bride, were flower girls. The bride has been a member of Liberty Street congregation for several years and is loved by all for her faithfulness, her sweet disposition, and her wise counsel. Brother and Sister Blodgett are living at their home at 411 East Lexington.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

September 18.—The regular monthly priesthood meeting was held in the I. X. L. Sunday school classroom at three o'clock. Stake President Tanner, in his address, emphasized the importance of three lines of work most prominent in the church, viz, pastoral, missionary, and financial, and, as stake missionary, W. D. Tordoff, who was present would have something to say in regard to his department, and the bishopric would occupy the time of the next meeting, he would set forth the work of the pastors. He said the purpose of pastoral work was to feed the flock, that the flock receive that which is nutritious. That pastors should learn to impart that which would nourish all the congregation at each effort, and suggested that it would take skill and tact to do that. Do not try to get away from the words of Christ, "To study the word." Also he must be a diplomat in insisting on proper deportment, a wholesome regard for the house of God and its services. It was up to each pastor to thus regulate.

The chief regret of our plucky, resourceful, diligent, and faithful stake missionary, W. D. Tordoff, is that he has been laid up, undergoing needed repairs at the Sanitarium, the greater part of the summer and is not now as strong as one should be to do missionary work as vigorously as this brother likes to see it done; but feeling that he can begin the work again, he will commence at the Grandview Church today and continue as long as wisdom directs. Beginning next Sunday, Elder Jesse Paxton will start a like series at Second Church. Thus two missionary efforts will be conducted simultaneously. He emphasized the necessity of cottage meetings where the local force could start the work, as is done in some localities, when he could supply the follow-up system and continue their efforts.

Other suggestions were made by several pastors, the burden of some being that they were imposed upon by some members who insisted on disposing of wares to the Saints, who purchased under pressure something they did not need because the seller was a member, and concluded they would not suffer this method of cheap business transaction longer. One pastor had been the victim of a brother, who had a sick relative at another town and secured money from him and several of the pastor's friends to secure transportation to the fictitious relative's bedside.

After two of the hottest weeks of the season, in which the thermometer hovered well in the nineties and old Sol did his level best to make everyone miserably hot and tax the physical strength of man, relief came late Saturday evening, and Sunday found everyone somewhat invigorated, and a goodly attendance was reported at Sunday school.

The main auditorium was very prettily decorated with large baskets of goldenrod, reminding us that autumn with all its beauty is near. The services of the day were in charge of the I. X. L. Class inasmuch as it was their home-coming event.

At eleven o'clock the congregation joined very enthusiastically in that hymn so remindful of the advent of the Son of Man, "Joy to the world, the Lord is come," prayer being offered by Brother Calvin Budd. The choir very ably rendered the anthem, "Blessed be the name of the Lord," to a very attentive audience, and as the choir has been on a two months' vacation, the rendition was very much appreciated. However, during that time various choir members have given of their talent so as to provide for that part of the service which stimulates and inspires the speaker as well as the congregation.

Apostle Roy S. Budd was the speaker of the hour, taking for his theme, "What is your life?" He stated that we go to church on Sunday, but on Monday and Tuesday and the remainder of the week we serve God, and that life is the impression we have made, the impression we have left for the coming generation. What impression are you making with the people with whom you associate? What thoughts do you cause them to think as you associate with them? Life is a trust. It is committed to us to keep and as we commit a treasure to a friend. We are made responsible for it to God, whereby we become stewards. He put the proposition squarely up to us to choose this day whom we would serve, reminding us that the way of the transgressor is hard and that our sin finds us out.

The I. X. L. members and their visitors partook of a very appetizing luncheon on the church campus, after which they had a short program and then journeyed by motor to the farm of Brother and Sister Simpson, former members of the class, and enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon, returning in time for the evening service.

At 7.45 Pastor J. A. Tanner resumed his missionary effort, and there was a very good number present. This was followed by the usual educational picture.

Doctor Edward Paul Nelson has returned and resumed his duties after several weeks' visit with his parents near Saint Joseph.

Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Conway are recent visitors, and worshipped with us Sunday.

Fourth Church

Attendance for the month of August at regular services was: 424 at Sunday school; 238 at eleven o'clock preaching service; 125 at junior service, same hour; 242 at Religio; 109 at 8 p. m. meeting; 281 at Wednesday prayer service.

In July all groups enjoyed a basket picnic at Penn Valley Park, and for the month of August the social activity was on the lawn of Sister Bertha Wilson, seventy-eight being present. Games were played, ice cream and cake were served, and those having birthdays in August were honored.

A special prayer meeting the Wednesday preceding the opening of school was arranged in behalf of the school children, eighty-six attending. The children will know after such a service that their heavenly Father is truly their friend, and they can go to him with their troubles and be heard of him and will receive his protection during the school year if they trust him.

September 11, at the eleven o'clock hour, two of the young men of the laity occupied; subject, "Perfection," Brother Berius taking the affirmative and Brother Marion Sneed the negative. Twenty minutes was allowed each. They quoted frequently from all the standard books of the church, making a very interesting effort, which showed real study by these young men.

The Blue Birds went on an outing with their leader, Sister Eva Branham, after church, taking their driver to Swepe Park. This organization is helping our young girls, and they are very much interested.

At 7.45 the young people rendered a program on the life of Christ, under the direction of Sister Evelyn Worden. The program consisted of music, poetry, song, and prophecy.

The Women's Department has been meeting regularly, doing sewing and quilting. They plan to resume class work September 15.

We are glad to welcome Sister Hattie McPherson and daughter, Marion, back to services again, as they have been detained at home on account of Marion's having whooping cough during the summer.

The choir is doing good work, always favoring each preaching service with special numbers. The young are mixing with the older in this work, which is commendable, as all who can are admonished to cultivate the gift of music. Truly Brother J. F. Wolfe has caught the vision and is doing his best to teach them to sing the songs of Zion better.

Armourdale Church

A social gathering was held recently at the home of Brother and Sister Clarence Bell. A varied program was furnished by members from the local church as a feature of the evening, after which watermelon was served.

Friday evening, September 9, the program at Religio was furnished by the Temple Builders, and after Religio the

He united with the church in Wisconsin, being baptized March 30, 1873, and was ordained a teacher, March 21, 1877. In 1875, he married Mary Ellen House, and this union was blessed with seven children, four boys and three girls; of these five are living and three were present at the funeral: Cora M. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints May 27, 1906, at Chattanooga, Jackson County, by Elder F. B. Farr. Was a faithful member until death. The surviving members of his family are his wife and three children, two daughters, Mrs. Anna Welch, of Independence, and Mrs. Abbie Arterberry, of Maquoketa; one son, Wilbur, of Independence, Missouri; nineteen grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren; one brother and one sister. Two daughters, Mrs. Albert Welch and Mrs. Clemence, have preceded him in death. Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at eleven o'clock from the Buchner chapel, with Elder John Heide officiating. Interment was made in Mount Hope Cemetery.

On April 7, 1884, they came to Free Soil, where they since have made their home. He became a member of the church October 16, 1887. Was ordained a teacher November 25, 1888, and an elder November 13, 1898. He was in the missionary field about eight years, serving the remainder of his life as pastor of the Free Soil Branch. He was the first of a family of nine children to pass away. Departed this life July 21, 1927, after an illness of six months. Leaves to mourn his wife, three sons, two daughters, thirteen grandchildren, and a large number of other relatives and friends. Funeral sermon was by Elder Alvin Ellis, of South Boardman, Michigan. Interment at Maple Grove Cemetery, Free Soil.

Builders held a pie and ice cream social in the rear room of the church.

Interest and attendance have been holding up well in spite of any weather conditions, and numbers are being added to our group here, two having been baptized Sunday.

IN this the first centennial anniversary of the discovery of the Book of Mormon records, the entire church is directing its thought and attention to the import of the Book of Mormon message.

For years the church has sought to prove the content of the Book of Mormon to be true. It is now directing its attention to the message of the book, giving emphasis to its teachings and their application to human conduct today.

Many believe that the Book of Mormon is yet to find a more vital place in the program of religious teachings of this church, and in an endeavor to stimulate thought, study, and research to accomplish this, it has been decided to offer prizes for articles written on Book of Mormon themes as listed below:

TOPICS

- "The Zionie Idea in the Book of Mormon."
- "The Missionary Message of the Book of Mormon."
- "The Book of Mormon and Religious Life of Today."

Independence Centennial

This week Independence is celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of its founding. Under the auspices of the city authorities, a variety of programs are being presented throughout the week, and there has been aroused a hitherto unparalleled interest in the history of the little city and its environs.

Established in 1827, it was only about four or five years old when the Saints came here from Ohio; and though driven from here some two or three years later, there have not been very many of the one hundred years of existence when the Saints have been away from Independence and the regions roundabout. Since the 70's of last century, our people here have been steadily, though for many years slowly, increasing in numbers, and since some twenty or so years ago when the headquarters of the church were moved here, the development and history of the city has been of prime interest to us as a people. So the Saints who are citizens of Independence, in particular, and the Saints generally, are greatly interested in the ceremonies which mark and celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the beginning of the city.

By one of the strange turns of fate, Independence, though older than Kansas City, has remained a small city while the latter has grown into a vigorous city of near a half million population. And unless there develops in Independence a purpose and objective which will give impetus to its growth, industrial stability to its citizens, and greater refinement to its civic spirit, it may indefinitely remain a comparatively small residential ward of Kansas City, though always a separate municipality. A city like a people, and a people like an individual, must have a goal, an objective, and a plan for reaching it. Some of the great cities of the United States and the world have become such by accident; but most have done so because those who have controlled their destinies or given direction to their advancement have had a vision of what the city should be, and out otherwise groups in severalty has grown a civic solidarity which has given direction as a whole to those forces which make for municipal growth and progress.

What will the centennial contribute in this direction for Independence?

The Harvest Home Festival

There may have been a few persons, but very few, who anticipated the remarkable growth of the Harvest Home Festival of nine years ago held by the South Side Branch in Independence, to the splendid display made last week in the basement of the Auditorium. This fine growth, or expansion, has greatly encouraged me and others in the hope that soon we shall see realized the idea of an annual exhibit of agricultural, horticultural, and animal husbandry products which will be of great value, particularly in their educational aspects, and which can be of value in the way of increasing the production of the regions round about because of improvement in methods. It is well known added to the friendly and profitable competition of local groups to grow better garden, orchard, vineyard, and barnyard products, there is added the wholesome competition of groups in far-outlying districts, from Maine to California, from Canada to Florida, from Australia, Hawaii, Palestine, and Jerusalem.

I had, of course, known somewhat of how the Harvest Home Festival of Independence had expanded, and I had with the serious brethren in charge discussed possible and probable expansion, together with ultimate ideals; but I was pleasantly surprised when in the forepart of last week I entered the basement of the Auditorium to be confronted by the extensive and artistic display presented. As a result of good cooperation and management, there has been developed a variety of display design in the booths brought together in a unity of ensemble which converted the finished basement into a miniature paradise, and despite unfavorable attitude of Jupiter Pluvius, who sent torrents of rain upon almost every day of the week, there prevailed among the workers and visitors a spirit which caused smiles to abound and frowns to be taboo.

The fine spirit of helpful cooperation among musicians, speakers, decorators, exhibitors, and helpers is greatly valued by those in charge, and I am safe in saying that everybody is looking forward to and planning for a bigger and better Harvest Home Festival next year. And it is expected and hoped that the educational aspects of the festival will be proportionately expanded, and in this we anticipate support from city, county, and state officials and departments.

This annual event is destined to be one of the factors in learning to know better the ultimate resources and possibilities of Independence, Jackson County, and the regions round about. "Know thyself" is good individual advice and counsel. "Know thy country" is equally good for a people. So, while we hope to see more of the Saints in outlying districts participate in this annual institution, we hope to see the nucleus made Independence and the regions round about.

Outside the city of Independence, the largest and best display this year was from Holden Stake. Next year, Kansas City, Far West, and Lamoni Stakes should be better represented. And these organizations should begin now to make preparations. Honolulu sent a fine display of Hawaiian products. May the Harvest Home Festival now already preparing for its tenth annual event, continue to expand in size, in usefulness, in interest, in ideals, in working for Zion and its cause.

Notes on Book of Mormon Reading Activities

Elder Guy P. Levitt writes from Sacramento, California, September 26: "We are glad to report that there are over two hundred people in the Northern California District who are reading for the first time or rereading the Book of Mormon the coming year. Some have completed it. In my visits among the branches I hear of some splendid results coming from this movement. I feel assured that good will come to the church. Surely the book is true and carries with it the spirit of assurance when one reads with earnestness and a desire to understand. May the spirit that shall be developed the coming year give to the church more power and greater expansion."

The Westerly Branch, of Westerly, Rhode Island, issued a beautiful ribbon badge recently inscribed, "1827—September 22—1927. 'Remember Cumorah.' One hundredth anniversary of the Book of Mormon. Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Westerly Branch, 6 George Street, Westerly, Rhode Island." We are not informed just how these Saints used the badges, but can imagine good uses to which they may have been devoted.

A telegram was received from Apostle M. A. McConley September 29 which reads: "Send me immediately one dozen Books of Mormon, cloth binding, and fifty tracts, Kirtland Temple, new edition. Rush forward special handling, care branch president at Ogden, Utah, for use at conference next Saturday and Sunday."

An aged sister, past the seventy-seventh milestone, writes that she has just finished rereading the Book of Mormon. "It is a wonderful book, and a fit companion for any good man or woman."

Roy Remington, publicity agent and HERALD correspondent for the Webster Groves Branch, near Saint Louis, makes the following report on his quarterly report blank: "Book of Mormon: There is a Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants in every home in Brentwood Branch and an Inspired Translation of the Bible in eleven out of fifteen homes in Brentwood Branch. There is a King James Bible in every home. During the past year, cooperating with Sunday school superintendent, we have put out thirty-six Holman flexible pocket Testaments. One hundred per cent owners and readers of the three standard books. Is there another branch with that record?"

Sister Julia A. Crocker, of Loomis, California, writes: "I live in the country many miles from a branch, and am so hard of hearing I get very little of the sermon when I do get to church. . . . I enjoyed a great degree of the Spirit while rereading the Book of Mormon, which I began August 18 and finished September 19. I thank and praise God for such a wonderful book, and that I am privileged to be numbered with Saints of latter days."

Clara M. Wheeler writes from Andes, Montana: "After reading the Doctrine and Covenants for family worship, we commenced a rereading of the Book of Mormon. We have read it many times and always find new helps. It makes clear many points of doctrine which without very careful search of the Bible are not clear. We hope to finish ere 1927 closes."

Auditor's Report

In another column we present a report of the auditor made to the Presidency which will be found of interest to the Saints. As the accounts are audited, we hope to present to our readers such number of reports as will give the Saints an adequate knowledge of the financial situation of the church.

Passing of Daniel Macgregor

A telegram addressed to Brother T. J. Sheldon announces the death of Brother Daniel Macgregor, the night of October 3. His death occurred at Port Huron, Michigan, and was due, we are informed, to cancer of the stomach and liver. At such a time we should and do forget any differences of opinion that may have arisen of late years, and our minds instead go back to the many years of service courageously rendered the church in years of the past, to the many pleasant hours spent together in common service, to those good qualities of character that commended him to our fellowship. And to Sister Macgregor in her hour of bereavement we extend sympathy and condolence. Daniel Macgregor was born at Lansing, Michigan, March 6, 1875, baptized at Saint Thomas, Ontario, December 14, 1891. He was ordained an elder July 2, 1894, and to the office of Seventy June 19, 1898. During the past two years he has represented the "Church of Christ." The funeral is announced to be held Thursday of this week.

DANIEL MACGREGOR

A Tribute to Wayne B. Wheeler

I recently picked up the then current issue of the Christian Century and hastily scanned its pages; but I read and reread a short two paragraphs in which the editor gave his appreciation of the life and work of Wayne B. Wheeler, characterized as Prohibition's Field Marshal.

No man can deliberately choose and persistently pursue a calling coming from a cause like the cause of prohibition but deserves consideration at the hands of his fellow citizens, whether or not they agree with his course or his convictions. Such a man possessed a burning desire to protect his fellow men and a rare quality of courage else he would not have been found in the position which brought to him such a large number of capable and unscrupulous enemies.

What a heritage has Wheeler left to his family and his friends! It is worth the shortening of one's life span (if shortened it was by this responsibility and its countless encounters) to have worked and achieved in the cause of prohibition, and I wish to record perfect agreement with the closing sentence of the Century's tribute to his life. R. J. L.

Prohibition Field Marshal

"Wayne B. Wheeler was a magnificent example of that small order of men and women, so frequently derided, but so often the real builders of the nation—the reformers. He was no fanatic. He was no dour killjoy. Least of all was he a subject for psychoanalysts. He was a normal, upstanding American citizen, with a hearty laugh, and a capacity for friendship, and the other characteristics of the substantial citizen. He possessed a combination of brains and character that would have won him success in any field. He became convinced of the evil of the liquor traffic and enlisted to fight it. Fighting it, he fought with his whole soul. He made himself a target for a thousand attacks. He underwent personal abuse such as few men in our history have known. He lived under the unceasing strain which must be the portion of any man who is fighting an entrenched evil that will stop at nothing to gain its ends. He undertook tasks constantly from which the sheltered and cautious among us would shrink with dismay. But he lived to see a prohibition amendment written into the constitution, and the liquor traffic disestablished and put on the defensive the country over.

"A man who lives such a career pays a fearful price. He grows old before his time. His sense of loneliness increases with the years. Death comes at last as a release. The newspapers report that Wayne Wheeler died suddenly. They speak of the effect which his wife's tragic death, earlier in the sum-

Book of Mormon Essay Contest

Registrations for the Book of Mormon essay and story contest have begun to come in. The first one to register is Walter L. Cryer, of Saint Joseph, Missouri; secretary of Far West Stake, and publicity agent for the stake and the First Saint Joseph Branch. The second to register is from the missionary force, G. Scott Daniel, from Sioux City, Iowa.

Since the HERALD for September 28 was received, many inquiries have been made concerning the contest, indicating that it is already being received with interest and enthusiasm.

Here is an opportunity. It will take consistent reading, thoughtful study, and logical analysis; it will take some hard work. But what real Latter Day Saint will shy at hard work? This contest offers one of the opportunities of a century to make a worth-while contribution to the literature of the church.

A person making inquiry about the contest said, "If I can win one of the first prizes, it will mean a year at Graceland College for me."

Another said, "If I can win any of the prizes offered, my tithing shall be paid first, and then my Auditorium pledge."

One, a middle-aged person, made the remark that he would be glad to participate whether any prizes were offered or not, but if his contribution should be of sufficient merit to secure one of these offers, it would be a joy to make a free will offering for the benefit of the poor.

Every minister, every district and branch president, every bishop and bishop's agent—in fact, the entire ministry of the church can well afford to take the lead by participating themselves and urging every member to likewise center his best effort in this contest.

Those who participate should register by sending their names and addresses, name of branch, and district, to the Publicity Department, Box 255, Indemer, may have had upon him. But those who knew Mr. Wheeler knew that for months past he was coming nearer and nearer to the end. He had been bearing an intolerable load; nature could not support it longer. Twenty years from now, fifty years from now, however, when the fact of a saloonless nation shall have had time enough to effect its full influence on American life, men will still be pointing back to the reformer just dead as one who served his nation's good."—The Christian Century.

Annual Graceland College Day

This year October 30 has been set as the date for the annual College Day. On this date appropriate services and programs should be planned, telling the story of Graceland College; its purpose, accomplishments, and present needs.

There is not a college in the world which does not make an annual appeal to its constituents for moral and financial support. Doubtless every district in the church has its proportion of those who have at some time been students at Graceland College. Branch officers will do well to use these people in the Sunday services, including sermons, talks, music, etc.

This year the college reports the largest freshman class in the history of the school. This group of enthusiastic young people comes from twenty-seven of the States, from Canada, and from three foreign countries.

The College Day collection, which is taken annually on this date, as ordered by General Conference resolution, is used to provide scholarships for worthy young people who would otherwise be unable to get the benefits of Graceland. If each branch will carry its fair share of this responsibility, no hardship will be worked on any one community; all can share in this expression of good will and helpfulness, and many young people will thereby be able to secure an education.

Information concerning the college, the purpose of College Day, and the way to proceed, together with suggested plans, will be mailed to each branch president this week. Last year, with hardly any effort, the membership contributed $4,971 to this worthy project, and surely with a little thought and planning this year an equal or greater amount can be raised.

The Palestine Bulletin of July 12 gives its entire first page to details of the earthquake occurring July 11, which extended throughout Palestine and was the most destructive since 1836, nearly a century. The shock lasted for five seconds; buildings were wrecked or damaged, and practically the entire population ran to the open streets and roads. More than one hundred lives were lost, and nearly a thousand wounded are being cared for in hospitals and at improvised quarters. The Winter Palace Hotel at Jericho collapsed, killing three Indian ladies and an entire party of tourists, and injuring a larger number.

Harvest Home Festival

BY LETA MORIARTY

The Auditorium, decked in gayest autumnal dress, welcomed visitors to the Harvest Festival which opened September 27 and closed Sunday, October 2.

In spaces which when the Auditorium is finished will be Sunday school rooms surrounding the lower assembly room, stood the booths in a glory of color and beauty—more than two dozen of them. Several States—Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, Missouri, and others—were represented; over miles of water and of land Hawaii, Germany, and Jerusalem sent their contributions; and Independence and surrounding stakes were prominent in the exhibit. On one side the ladies of the Laurel Club were always busy behind a lunch counter trimmed with white and green crepe paper and asparagus vines. At the Independence Sanitarium booth, pamphlets concerning children's diseases were distributed free. The word "Conservation" announced the commodity shop display stationed in a corner, and there Sister Mary Bush, in charge of the commodity shop, sat between garment-lined partitions and tables, willingly explaining her wares to visitors. The Frances E. Willard Chapter of the W. C. T. U. had been allotted space and made the most of it.

Things to eat, from eggs to assorted Hawaiian cookies, from raw and canned vegetables and fruits to live chickens, were to be seen on all sides, on the floor, in boxes, cans, baskets, and sacks. Maine sent canned fish; Hawaii brought her honey. There were cotton and Spanish moss from Louisiana, tall stalks of corn, sheaves of grain, heaps of vegetables from many places. To enhance the exhibits, floor and table lamps were used in the booths; there were small white picket fences with tiny gates, and crepe paper, purple, blue, brown, white, yellow, pink, crimson, and lavender, was ingeniously draped over and entwined about ceilings, walls, and furniture.

Lights in the Auditorium, crowned with huge orange shades, from each of which were suspended more than half a dozen colorful balloons suffused the scene with a fire-like glow. The platform, its gray cement pillars and background concealed by numerous small trees, was converted into a veritable greenwood, from the depths of which one might have expected a member of Robin Hood's band of merry men to appear. Above the miniature forest rose a rainbow in graceful bend. Everywhere the heavy, cement supports of the building were disguised with greenery.

The Outstanding Booths

Many were the original ideas worked out in the arrangement of the booths, which evoked much comment and commendation. In fact, there was something unusual in each section. They all deserve mention and description, but here we shall attempt to tell only of the most unusual of the unusual.

Let us begin with the Maine booth, in a corner of which stands a lighthouse in pasteboard, not beautiful but typically rugged. About its base are stacks of canned fish, big shells, and even rocks from the Maine coast to give local color. Here a lobster trap has been the source of much speculation to landlubbers, who invariably decide it is a new kind of "two-way rat trap."

Farther on we are attracted by the profuse decoration of Second

Church section, and the lavish contributions of fruits arrayed on shelves. Here is much joy for those who will have need this winter. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard," greets us from Englewood, and it is evident from their handiwork that these Saints have learned industry of the ant. In the center of the floor rises an ant hill (brown paper topping a stack of fruit) with a sweet potato and cucumber ant or two clambering gingerly down into the hole where the winter's store is put away. Back through the woods a harvest moon gleams promisingly.

A large Liberty Bell, crack and all, made of crepe paper, behind which is an electric light, is the chief attraction in the Liberty Street display.

Again the eye is drawn aside from the path of our tour to rest upon the pleasing results obtained by Groups 18, 19, and 34, a scene called "Home, sweet home," a peaceful living room, cheerful and homey, in the background two sets of shelves bearing up a generous load of things to eat.

Deep red crab apples impaled upon a white board announce the next stop to be Bennington. In this inclosure looms a well, over which is generously strewn Louisiana Spanish moss. Beside the regular display there are also cotton and pine needles. White trel-

the 1927-28 budget?*

lises and pink flowers here delight the æsthetic senses.

Walnut Park presents a Dutch scene—a windmill, the interior of which is lined with fruits and vegetables and melons, wooden figures of a boy and girl of Holland and even a recumbent goat. Tulips growing along the border of a sandy path, grass, and a tiny mirror pond bearing a water lily complete the picture.

A moss-covered well with rope and bucket represents Mount Washington, and we immediately discover this is no ordinary well, for in its depths instead of water are seen jars and jars of fruit. Inclosed by a small rail fence, Spring Branch in one corner of her gifts presents in miniature its basement church home. People of Division 8 have named their section "Truth," and in it have happily represented the scene on Hill Cumorah when Joseph Smith was permitted to take the plates.

At the front on the west side of a Hawaiian scene stops all who pass by—sand, a shell-rimmed pool of water, a grass house, coconut palms, mountains in the distance set in relief by a glorious sunset, the sky melting from a blush pink into orchid and pale green. A larger native house reveals many curiously wrought Hawaiian products, and below it are things shipped from those islands, grape juice, coffee, cookies, honey, etc.

Tuesday night, the opening meeting, found a large number present to see everything and hear the program. They had weathered cold and rain to come, but it was worth the effort. The program, chiefly of a musical nature, was brief. Bishop J. A. Koehler gave the opening prayer. Two numbers were rendered by the K L D S Ladies' Quartet consisting of Mary Fields Edmunds, Jeannette Kelley Craig, and Amelia and Gladys Good. Brother Frank White played two difficult violin solos, and Miss Ina Hattey, soprano, sang two pleasing songs, being accompanied by Mrs. Jeannette Kelley Craig.

A number by the Chrisman High School Boys' Quartet began the Wednesday night meeting, and hearty applause brought an encore. Miss Allegra Luff favored the audience with two excellent readings, "The lesson of the fan," and "Papa in the morning." A saw solo by Brother Charles Dell was next, and in a charming manner little Lois Jean Williams read "Sugar cooky," and "You're too young to know." "Drink to me only with thine eyes," and "My Lady Chloe," were sung by the Stone Church Ladies' Quartet: Thelma Vincent, Jeannette Kelley Craig, Hazel Koehler Moler, and Elizabeth Okerlind.

The speaker, Apostle F. Henry Edwards, was assigned the subject, "The joy of the harvest." The joy of creation, to be able to make things with God, the success which comes to those who persist in their efforts, and the development and broadening of character we get from our work of growing and creating were given by the speaker as some of the chief reasons for the joy of the harvest. That those who get the most abundant joy from seeing the exhibit at the Auditorium are those who have themselves done the harvesting, those who made the fruitage possible, he clearly explained. As the supreme joy of the harvest, the combination of all the joys and the inexpressible satisfaction which comes to a man who may share the results of his creative work with others were named. In this work—in the planting, in the caring for, in the harvest, in the sharing with others—we are making ourselves, we are adding richness and broadness to our own souls.

As a part of the service on Thursday, September 29, Bishop J. A. Koehler led a song service which was heartily joined in by the gathering of Saints and their friends. When the Kansas City Central Church representatives, scheduled to give the program, arrived, Brother John F. Sheehy at once announced their first number, "Rolling down to Rio," by a male quartet composed of C. J. Wolfe, C. B. Dunn, A. D. Hitchcock, and W. Blankenship. Brother C. J. Wolfe, tenor, sang a beautiful tenor solo, which was followed by "a" and "b" piano numbers by Miss Hazel Scott. A vocal duet by Mrs. Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock and C. J. Wolfe, "Sing, sing, bird on the wing," pleased the listeners who were then favored with a tenor solo by Lester Fowler, "I've done my work." With two numbers by Mrs. Cyril E. Wight, contralto, cello obbligato by Miss Ada Griffice, and a song by the quartet, the musical program was concluded.

Professor Paul Naylor, of the University of Missouri, and for ten years associated with the agricultural extension work, was introduced by Elder Sheehy. In an interesting manner he recalled methods of farming in earlier days, having himself grown up on a farm in Missouri, and discussed the improvement in farming methods as a result of developments made through experimentation in agriculture extension stations. Whereas farmers formerly did their work by the signs of the zodiac, trusting chance for success, they now are learning the rules governing their work and by application of these rules are insuring greater and more productive accomplishment. "The handicap in farming," he twice declared, "is the inefficient, incapable farmer," and strongly urged the need of better rural schools in order that farmers may have a means of learning scientific farming. Vividly he described the progress in other industries, assuring his audience that education is the only thing which will raise farming to a higher plane. Carefully he took up the question of disregard for books held by many farmers, proving that all must learn some things concerning their work from books.

Some men go beyond books, men of the caliber of Luther Burbank and Thomas A. Edison. They know what the books contain and through research they unfold new truths; they open the course for progress. "The way to lay up treasures in heaven," Professor Naylor asserted, "is to build up land on earth."

Friday night's speaker, Bishop J. A. Koehler, spoke on "Religion and production." His lecture was short and terse, a digest of fundamental truths. "About thirteen sixteenths of the people of the church are expecting God to make the church rich by some miracle," he said, "but we have found that God makes people rich through the natural process of nature." God made man supreme above all animals, a creature with knowledge to have control over the forces of nature, to subordinate self-interest to the interests of the group; in short, to be socialized. We come into the world surrounded by advantages and helps which have been bought for us at great price by our forefathers; we owe the world our individual productiveness, and our minimum production should equal our consumption. Society must needs be remodeled to a great extent before we reach a state of ideal productiveness. Religion must help in this changing of society. The efficiency of Christianity is the only ground upon which the church has a right to appeal for approval and support. Bringing these statements and beliefs home, he applied them to our problems as a church, to the establishing of stewardship, the redemption of Zion. His talk, clear and informative, was gratefully received by the congregation.

Preceding the lecture the Walnut Park Band, directed by Brother E. E. Moorman, furnished a number of excellent selections. It is an encouragement to see this band of workers busy in a common cause. Two solos were contributed by Mr. Herbert Fraher, tenor, Miss Fraher accompanying.

Rain which commenced early Saturday afternoon and continued throughout the evening and night prevented the convening of the meeting arranged for that night. It was to have been an illustrated lecture by Pastor C. Ed. Miller and promised both instruction and entertainment.

A good congregational sing ably conducted by Bishop J. A. Koehler with Miss Dorothy Koehler, Liberty Street pianist, at the piano was the opening event of the Sunday night program. "Jesus is calling," "Where he leads me I will follow," "We're marching to Zion," were some of the songs which resounded from hundreds of throats, making every worshiper happier and more aware of his blessings.

"Praise ye the Lord," was the opening song, and the abundant harvest to be seen upon every side bore evidence of the truth of these lines:

He makes the grass the hills adorn,
And clothes the smiling fields with corn.

He has indeed clothed hills, valleys, fields, gardens, and orchards with abundant fruit for our Harvest Home. Elder A. K. Dillee, pastor of Second Church, voiced the invocation, a petition of sincere gratitude and consecrated desire. Accompanied upon the piano by Miss Katherine Haberlein, Mrs. Corinne Haines French sang a beautiful soprano solo.

Sunday was the opening day of the centennial celebration of the city of Independence, and as a fitting commencement Governor Sam A. Baker, of Missouri, spoke at Memorial Hall. Despite this attraction, a large number of the Saints gathered in the Auditorium to listen to the fervent discourse, "Reaping the harvest of life," delivered by Bishop Mark H. Siegfried. Rapidly the speaker traced the events of the beginning of the church in Missouri, the pioneer experiences of the first comers, early days in Jackson County, and the zeal with which those Saints pushed forward the work. "I wonder if in this late day we are as zealous, as determined, and as full of hope and confidence as were those young men who brought the gospel into the land of Missouri?" queried Brother Siegfried. "Are we going about our task with the same determination as did they?" "Opportunity is largely made up of the activity of honest souls," he several times reminded the congregation. Every worth-while accomplishment involves effort, pain, discouragement, but the man who succeeds is the person who persists in spite of these things. To make out of men and women citizens for the kingdom of God, is our great task, and the only way this can be brought about is for us to continuously labor together with God. Great opportunity is before us waiting to be utilized in our important work. We must recognize the laws of God, see the advantages in them, and obey them. In this way we may become workers together with God.

Following the sermon, Brother C. C. Koehler, general manager of the Harvest Festival, thanked the people for their contributions of fruits and labors, telling in a few words the history of the Harvest Festival, and expressing hopes for its growth in the future. He repeated several commendatory comments made concerning the exhibits by members of packing companies, railway representatives, and others who have visited the display.

Elder A. K. Dillee dismissed the final meeting of the festival, and the people dispersed, joy and gratitude filling their hearts.

The Harvest Festival has been another testimony for the Saints that God's promises are sure, that

His bounty will provide;
His saints securely dwell;
The hand which bears creation up,
Will guard his children well.

Traditional Landing of Aborigines of America

BY J. F. GUNSOLLEY

Votan, accompanied by chiefs and followers, many years before the beginning of our Christian era, passed through the island-strewn Laguna de Terminos, ascended the Usumacinta River, and on one of its tributaries laid the foundation of a large city which became the metropolis of a mighty empire. It was called Nachan, and was none other than Palenque. This tradition is found on page 452 of volume 3, Bancroft's Native Races; also on page 162 of F. A. Ober's Travels in Mexico in 1881. According to Bancroft's Native Races, volume 5, page 254, the Votanic empire was overthrown a century before or after the beginning of our Christian era.

Anyone at all conversant with the Book of Mormon will readily see the harmony between the foregoing and the record of the Jaredites. Their landing was on the north coast instead of the south as indicated on the map of the report of the committee. This tradition also spoils some other theories concerning their landing.

"The Chilians assert that their ancestors came from the west; the Algonquins preserve a tradition of a foreign origin and a sea voyage."—Native Races, volume 5, page 22.

Professor Daniel Wilson and many another distinguished scientist believed that in prehistoric ages, before the northern steppes of Asia were peopled, a wave of Asiatic emigration crossed by the islands of the Pacific to the west coast of South America. (Geraldine Guinness, in Peru, page 12.)

There two citations will give the Book of Mormon student the location for the landing of the Nephites. The archaeological ruins in Yucatan and in Peru attest these traditions.

The ancient Mexican legend says that, after the flood, Coxcox and his wife landed in Atlán. (Atlantis, page 168.)

A city named Atlán existed when the continent was discovered by Columbus, at the entrance of the Gulf of Uraba in Darien; it is now called Acla. (Baldwin, Ancient America, page 179.)

There is not much to this tradition concerning Atlán (Atlán) only the location. Whether Atlán and Atlán are the same is not possible of determining, but there seems to be a striking affinity. This Atlán was an inhabited city at the time of its discovery by the Spaniards; its location is on the north coast of the isthmus and opposite and east of the location of the landing of the Mulekites, as given by the committee. Where the committee got their authority for making the location in this place is not stated.

The location is, however, quite reasonable, for, had the Mulekites landed much farther north they would have come in contact with the Jaredites. There is no evidence to prove that the Jaredites and the Mulekites ever came in contact with each other.

The Votanic (Jaredite) empire, according to the tradition, becoming overthrown a "century before or after our era," and the landing of the Mulekites about 586 B. C. (Book of Mormon), would make these two peoples occupying in the land contemporaneously more than four hundred years; so that the landing of the Jaredites in the Laguna de Terminos and the Mulekites on the Isthmus of Darien would be very logical. The Mulekites migrating to the land south would be another conclusion why they never came in contact with the Jaredites.

The landing of the Nephites, according to the tradition, on the coast of Chili, is another good reason why they did not come in contact with the Zarahemlites until about 200 B. C., thus making these three peoples occupying contemporaneously in this land for about four hundred years.

The only reason for writing this is that it has never before appeared in this light, and it may help some to a correct understanding of the landing places of the people mentioned in the book.

Lest We Forget

BY J. A. MORRISON

From the earliest history of God's dealings with mankind, he has, previous to visiting calamity upon the wicked and disobedient, warned them of impending disaster. His unchangeability is one of the bulwarks of our faith. Considering what has already been given through God's servant, the Prophet of the church, also business men who are leaders in their respective lines of work, should we not therefore give the more diligent heed to the warnings given? From Doctrine and Covenants 132: 3, given April 5, 1916, we extract the following: "I admonish the church, and particularly those of the priesthood, that the hastening time being upon us," etc. Again, Doctrine and Covenants 135: 2, given April 18, 1925: "The hastening time is here," etc. Again, from the address of President F. M. Smith to the General Conference as found in SAINTS' HERALD of April 7, 1926, pages 317-326, we quote: "Not all the necessary economic and industrial readjustments following the war have been made, and as those readjustments come and as nation after nation makes the monetary and economic and industrial readjustment necessary, we are bound to feel the effects, and the church can not escape them. Hence this indicates the wisdom of a word of warning to the Saints and caution that they be careful in their financial and industrial affairs, that they be not caught by a depression industrial which will injure them perhaps beyond recovery. And what I say of individuals I say of the church, and I am deeply concerned in regard to it."

From the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, for December, 1924, we excerpt the following from the pen of the late W. S. Stone, grand chief, who died in Cleveland, June 12, 1925: "Now a prophecy: we are not a prophet, but we are venturing the prophecy that we are going into the greatest period of inflation we have ever known for the next year or two. Every European country, almost without exception, is now floating or will soon be ready to float a loan here in the United States—this in addition to the industrial loans many of the foreign countries are hoping to make here. We have had a German loan of $140,000,000; a Swedish loan of $30,000,000; a French loan of $100,000,000 is on the way; likewise the Greek loan, and many others. In addition to this, many foreign industrial loans will be unloaded on the American people, and many domestic enterprises are clamoring for action. The stock market is booming. Fortunes are being made and lost in a day. Men are paying good money for investments now being sold that six months ago they would not have even considered, let alone purchase. After this year has passed, the pendulum will swing the other way. We shall have a period of depression, and thousands of the workers, wage earners and toilers, will have lost their money. This is only a prophecy. Those of you who are living three or four years from now, see if it does not come true."

From Associated Press Cable, Oxford, England, August 2, 1927, we quote: "Sir George Paish, the economist, in an address here today predicted a great economic crash unless the United States stopped granting credit abroad on such a large scale. Sir George was speaking before a meeting of the League of Nations union on the danger of the world's unprecedented indebtedness in the event of any break in world unity. He declared that the United States is giving credit abroad on a scale which can not possibly last. In view of the world's leading bankers and economic experts, he said, a great crash must come unless the United States changes her financial policy. Sir George further asked how Germany and Italy could possibly repay their borrowings.

Surely President Smith uttered a timely warning in 1926. We have need to heed it.

For the week ending August 13, 1927, Royal Bank of Canada $100 shares were selling at $300; Canadian Bank of Commerce, $280. Surely values are inflated. Considering the falling off of our receipts from tithes, offerings, etc., perchance some of the Saints have found themselves engulfed in the thing they were warned to avoid.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Scientific Education and Unscientific Democracy

There was once a very wise man, and in his day he said many wise things; but the wisest thing he ever said was this: "Wisdom is better than gold. Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore, get wisdom, and with all thy getting, get understanding." Now you will observe that Solomon regarded not only the ends but the means. He emphasized not only the getting of wisdom, but the getting of it by the right method, namely, by the process of understanding. And very properly so, for wisdom can never be soundly acquired in any other way. I have heard a good many definitions of education, but I know of none better than this—the development of one's capacity to understand.

Some years ago, one of my colleagues put on an examination paper this question: "Tell what you understand by polarized light." Only one student gave an answer that was both concise and correct. He said: "Polarized light, as I understand it, is something that is not very well understood." Now that may sound amusing, but it showed that the student was getting a real education, for he was at least learning to recognize the limits of his own understanding. Education is not merely a matter of assimilating various chunks from the world's stock of accumulated knowledge, although there are a great many people, both old and young, who look upon it in that light. In much larger measure education is the process of training men and women to realize the range and the profundity of their own ignorance.

Man is not by nature an understanding creature. The capacity to understand is sometimes asserted to be one of the instinctive traits of the human race, but every educator is well aware that it is nothing of the sort. It is an acquired capacity. The ability to put one's thoughts in a rational series, to survey a problem in all its bearings, to approach it in an objective spirit, to weigh all the evidence and to form a logical conclusion—the ability to do all these things is not inborn but acquired. It comes through persistent drilling in the right mental processes. It comes through the method of trial and error, even as every other human accomplishment comes. We who are teachers have seen a great many freshmen making their first attempt at the analysis and solution of new and strange problems. They behave exactly like a child learning to swim, with the same display of intellectual splashing and floundering. No, the desire to understand may be instinctive; but the capacity is not. It is an achievement that entails long years of patient effort under competent guidance, in an environment where rigorous standards are maintained.

Twenty-four years ago, when I began my work as a teacher in a small New England college, I tried the experiment of giving my students a list of good books which they were expected to read and study for themselves. This, as I soon found out, was an unheard-of innovation, and of course it was not popular. One of my students said to me very frankly: "We don't think you are playing fair. As we understand it," he said, "you are paid by the college to read these books and tell us what is in them. Instead of that you tell us to go read them for ourselves." That was his naive conception of the royal road to learning, and I suspect that he was by no means unique among college undergraduates. Even today, I am afraid, there are thousands of parents in this country who look upon an institution of learning as a sort of retail emporium from which the payment of an annual tuition fee entitles their sons to draw so many units of knowledge as though it were flour or molasses.

Still, we are making progress. The quest for a royal road is being given up, and what people are now seeking, apparently, is merely a system of rapid transit in education. Hence we have, almost every year, the reputed discovery of some new educational alchemy whereby we can make a silken purse out of a sow's ear, a job that is simplicity itself when compared to the task of transforming mental vacuity into genius. The problem method, the project method, the Meiklejohn method, the socialized recitation—they all point to the fact that some educators have not yet abandoned the hope of attaining the end without the means, the whole without the parts, the reward without the effort. There is nothing new in any of these methods except a new name. They are merely the gold dust twins of education which advertise that you can get work done without doing it. No one of them, or all of them put together, can ever accomplish much as a substitute for sustained intellectual exertion. In the catalogue of a well-known Eastern institution there is an announcement of an elementary course in which the instructor says: "The purpose of this course is to compel freshmen to think." I have no fault to find with his ideal, although I am disposed to wonder why this particular form of hazing should be confined to freshmen. But is it not a strange delusion that men of any age can be compelled to think, or that thought which is induced by compulsion can ever be of value to anybody? If that were the case we need only add an Eleventh Commandment to the Decalogue, namely, "Thou shalt Think," and all other things would be added unto us.

But unhappily, as the colleges have found out, you can no more compel the unthoughtful to think than you can compel the sinner to be saved. The Muse of thought can be cajoled, but never constrained. Anyhow there is a technique of orderly thought, and until a student has become acquainted with it there is nothing to be gained by asking him to strike out beyond his depth. To do so is merely to invoke a series of non sequiturs, or of illogical conclusions based upon false premises. Learning to think in a rational, orderly, objective way is a long and difficult process, far more so than most people imagine. Thousands of our young men and women go through the schools and colleges without mastering the art, and hence without obtaining a real education.

Now it is the glory of pure science and of mathematics that these subjects train men in orderly and objective thinking as no other subjects can. Here are fields of study in which loose or crooked thought leads inevitably to demonstrable error, to error which can not be glossed over or concealed. Here are branches of knowledge in which there is no confusion between right and wrong, between post hoc and propter hoc, between the mere coincidences and the consequences of a cause. When you have finished with a problem in any of the exact sciences you are either right or wrong, and you know it. That is why we call them exact sciences, to distinguish them from philosophy, sociology, economics, and the other social sciences, in which the difference between truth and error is still, in most cases, a matter of individual opinion. Many years ago physics was known as "natural philosophy"; it was merely a body of speculative ideas concerning the mechanics of nature. It became an exact science by developing an inductive methodology, which makes all the difference between science and guesswork.

Some years ago, in the Harvard Law School, we thought it worth while to inquire into the educational antecedents of the student body, with a view to ascertaining whether there was any relation between success in the study of law and the previous collegiate training of these young men. In the Harvard Law School there are more than a thousand students, all of them college graduates, drawn from every section of the country. Nearly all of them have specialized, during their undergraduate years, in some single subject or group of subjects—languages, history, science, philosophy, economics, mathematics, and so on. Offhand one would probably say that the young man who had devoted most of his attention to the study of history, government, and economics while in college would be gaining the best preparation for the study of law—for these are the subjects which in their content come nearest to the law; but that is not what we found. On the contrary the results of this inquiry showed that the young men who had specialized in ancient languages, in the exact sciences, and especially in mathematics, were on the whole better equipped for the study of law, and were making higher rank in it, than were those who had devoted their energies to subjects more closely akin.

Some of my colleagues were surprised at this discovery, but I confess that I was not. For after all, it is the training in method, not the training in substance, that counts. The study of law calls for strict objectivity in thought, a keen analysis of all the facts without preconception or prejudice, and a conclusion based solely on the implications of the evidence. That is precisely what a scientific education develops in a man, and it is unhappily what a training in the social studies often fails to develop. A good many college students, I fear, pursue their study of political and social problems in the spirit of the sophomore who came back to his room at noontime and said to his roommate: "D'you know, Bill, I made a hundred per cent in my work this morning?" "Did you?" said Bill in amazement. "Yea, bo," was the reply, "I made fifty per cent in history, and fifty per cent in sociology." Far too much of our thinking is done on a fifty per cent basis.

Now there is no good reason why the study of political and economic problems should not be conducted with the same scientific thoroughness, and the same rigid objectivity that characterizes our analysis of the facts of nature. Surely the student of government and of economics has a sufficiently vast laboratory at his disposal. The whole world, in fact, is one gigantic workshop of political and social experimentation, a laboratory that is working night and day. Everywhere, in plain view beneath our very eyes, this process of experimentation with new governmental forms and devices is going on, day after day, in ceaseless round. Every theory and suggestion that the human mind can devise is being given a trial somewhere, and all of it at the public expense. The astronomer who sits in his observatory has seen no such dramatic and varied panorama of change as has passed beneath the naked eye of the political observer during the past ten years. During this short interval we have seen proud empires pass away, new republics arise overnight, new constitutions appear, new and strange parliaments assemble, proletarians mount thrones, new social orders emerge, new and fantastic devices commence to function; we have seen a league of nations born to bring peace on earth, while a great soviet commonwealth flames like a red sunrise against the eastern sky. What strange constellations we have seen from our terrestrial observatory! And do we know the causes, processes, and significance of it all? Only to a very slight extent. We are as unscientific in the observation and study of these terrestrial phenomena as was the astronomer when he saw a conjunction of the planets in the days of Aristotle.

The student of government, in other words, is provided with an incomparable laboratory but lacks a technique of investigation. He is convinced that there are principles and laws in politics as in physics—principles and laws of politics that are just as eternal and inexorable as the laws of nature; but just what they are, and how they function, he does not know, nor is he making much headway in the direction of finding out. This is mainly because a democratic environment is altogether unfavorable to the dispassionate, impartial, and scientific study of political phenomena. Every adult American is an expert in matters of government, or thinks that he is. In the realm of politics he believes that all ideas are created free and equal. The science of physics does not disdain its obligations to Newton, Faraday, and Einstein. But the science of politics, as the politician understands it, owes nothing to Aristotle, Locke, or Bentham. It had its origin in the Declaration of Independence, and has made its chief development in the congressional district where the politician himself lives. What would be thought of the scientist who insisted on ignoring every experiment, every contribution to science made anywhere outside the bounds of the United States? He would not deserve the name of a scientist. Yet that is what our statesmen do, most of them. Their horizon ends at the water's edge. What other countries are doing they neither know nor care. There are exceptions, of course, but they are as rare as the politician who would rather be right than be reelected.

As a people we quite frankly admit that we have much to learn from other countries in the fields of art, literature, and music, in poetry and the drama, in science and in education—but nothing at all to learn in the art of government! All our political institutions and methods, of whatsoever sort, we hold to be the best on earth, models for the rest of the world to copy. But the rest of the world, it seems, does not always look upon them with the same adulation. During the past seven years at least a dozen countries of Europe have adopted new constitutions and have set up new governments of a republican type—Germany, Austria, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and so on. We have even seen what the world had waited long to see, namely, the Irish people constructing a government of their own. Now it may interest you to hear me say that despite our monumental power and prosperity, despite our world leadership, despite our exalted opinion of ourselves politically, not one of these countries has seen fit to adopt a single important device or method drawn from the governmental practice of the United States. One and all of them, having studied our political system in all its bearings, decided that there was nothing in it worth copying. Even Ireland did not deign to accord us the flattery of imitation in a single particular—and that was the most unkindest cut of all. The new constitution of the Irish Free State draws a good deal from England, from France, and even from Switzerland; but nothing at all from us. I am not justifying the action of these various countries: I am merely calling attention to what seems to be an interesting and significant fact.

Experience and experiment ought to be our best teachers in government as in every other field of human activity; but our legislators sometimes pay astonishingly little heed to either. Take the matter of taxation, for example. It is among the oldest of governmental activities. There have been taxes since the beginning of time. We have tried during the past five thousand years every conceivable plan of taking money from the pockets of the people and putting it into the coffers of the state. The world has tried every possible form of tax, under almost every conceivable set of conditions; it has accumulated a vast amount of experience in this field, yet how much enlightenment do the makers of our tax laws get, or try to get, from this long and varied series of experiments? Very little, I am afraid. To the average legislator of our day the science of taxation has only one principle, to wit, that you should pluck your goose in such way as to cause the least amount of loud squawking. Any tax, he thinks, is a good tax if it does not stir up too much political resentment. Hence it is that the most popular tax with the politicians is the inheritance tax, the tax on the estates of dead men—for dead men have no votes and can raise no outcry. It is not without significance that the only tax which is levied both by the Federal Government and by all the States with one exception, is this inheritance tax. Florida, I think, is the only State that does not have an inheritance tax; and the reason, I take it, is that in Florida they count on getting your money away from you before you die.

I have heard it said that four fifths of the experiments which the scientist undertakes turn out to be failures—and this in spite of the great care which the scientist exercises. How very much larger must be the percentage of failures in our governmental experiments, where infinitely less caution is exercised and so little heed paid to the errors of the past. In the field of politics, however, we rarely admit that anything is a failure; we conceal the realities by an appeal to our national pride or civic patriotism. The government of our American cities, for example, has been, and still is, replete with failures that we do not have the candor to acknowledge. There is not a single American city, from Portland, Oregon, to Portland, Maine, that does not claim to be the best-governed and the most efficiently administered community under heaven. It matters not how high its tax rate or how wasteful its expenditures, how improvident its borrowing or how inharmonious its administrative authorities; it matters not how faulty its administration may be when judged by any objective test—you will always find the same assertion that everything is a great success. Is it not an amazing thing that the scientist, using scientific methods, should admit eighty per cent failure, while the politician, using methods which are often pure guesswork, should claim a hundred per cent perfection? It is the difference between science and democracy. Incidentally there is one other difference, namely, that when the scientist fozzles an experiment he is merely out of pocket himself, but when the politicians do it the people have to foot the bills. When you and I invent a joke it does nobody any harm; but when Congress makes a joke it becomes the law of the land. It is a highly expensive variety of humor.

A democracy is not governed by the methods of science or reason, but largely by formulas and emotionalism. "Few ideas are correct ones," said the cynical old parliamentarian in one of Disraeli's novels; "but with words we govern men." That is the truth, even in the United States. It is mainly with words, not with ideas, that we are trying to govern one hundred million people. The beacon lights of American politics are a series of formulas, slogans, and shibboleths. "All men are created free and equal." "Government must rest on the consent of the governed." "No taxation without representation." "A government of laws, not of men." "Every man has a right to hold public office." "The executive and legislative branches of the government should be kept separate." "The office should seek the man." "Freedom of speech." "Avoid entangling alliances." "Political parties are groups of voters who think alike." And so on through a long list of creedal phrases. These formulas have all the sanctity of gospel in the popular mind. They have become American institutions, like the spoils system, the gerrymander, Tammany Hall, and the pork barrel. They are the bromides with which we put our reason and our common sense to sleep. Together they form a sort of political fundamentalism, to be accepted on faith with the same enthusiasm that Mr. Bryan accepts the first chapter of Genesis.

But if you proceed to examine these formulas in the light of the facts, as a scientist would scrutinize any generalization in chemistry, physics, or biology, you will find that some of them are not self-evident truths by any means. Some of them never were true; they are merely perversions of history which have become enshrined in the literature of patriotism. Take the stock phrase about "entangling alliances," for example—a formula which has had an enormous influence on the foreign policy of the United States. I have heard this expression attributed to George Washington hundreds of times; in public discussions, in sermons, in newspaper editorials, even in the college classroom. The impression that the Father of his Country advised against alliances of all sorts and under any circumstances has been so widely accepted by the public mind, and has been so authoritatively transmitted from one generation to another, that it seems almost to have become a biological inheritance. It is one of our mental stereotypes that nothing, apparently, can efface. Yet even a superficial reading of the Farewell Address will demonstrate to you that Washington never promulgated any such doctrine as is so universally ascribed to him, but that on the contrary he explicitly advised his countrymen to enter into alliances with foreign countries if ever the urgent desirability of so doing should arise by reason of extraordinary emergencies.

Mark you, I am not arguing for American participation in the affairs of Europe at the present time. I am not urging, even by implication, that the United States should join the League of Nations, or adhere to the World Court, or accept the Geneva Protocol. I am merely contending that we should not put into the mouth of an illustrious patriot words that he did not say, or attribute to him ideas that never entered his head. No one, among the Fathers of the Republic, desired that the country should be governed by the graveyards. This nation, as Jefferson once said, "should always belong to the living generation," and not to generations that are past and gone. That was the philosophy of the men who coined the phrases which have now become our creed. They were themselves revolutionaries. They had not hesitated to break with the past. They expected that posterity would use its brains and do likewise if ever the occasion should so demand.

It is sometimes said that the scientist renders a great service to mankind by the discovery of new ideas. But it seems to me that he renders an even greater service by exploding some of the old ones. In the realm of practical politics the chief deterrent to progress is our bondage to principles and devices which are often unsound, inapplicable, or unworkable. The idea that any able-bodied citizen is competent to hold public office, irrespective of his own abilities or experience, is one that works incalculable harm to the efficiency of democratic government. In estimating the scientific aptitude or the industrial capacity of the individual citizen we are a sensible, modest people, but when it comes to evaluating the political and administrative abilities of the ordinary man we throw both sense and modesty to the winds. Were I to go out upon the street this afternoon and say to the first man I meet, "Here, you, make me a pair of shoes," he would look at me in amazement and reply, "You're mistaken, sir; I'm not a shoemaker. I don't know the first thing about making shoes. Go to a shoemaker." "Oh, that's all right," I would say; "all men are equal in this community; you are just as good as any other citizen; you are entitled by the Constitution," etc. He would probably wonder how I escaped from the psychopathic ward.

But suppose this same man in the street were asked to become city manager of Pasadena. Would he display any such modesty or reluctance? Not a bit of it. He would throw out his chest proudly and say, "I'm your man." Then he would call in the reporters, shake his finger wisely at them, and say: "I'm going to put this city's business on an efficiency basis, reduce taxes, and make everybody happy." It is the old story. Only an expert is competent to make shoes, or put the plumbing in your house, or even to cut your hair; but anyone, anywhere, at any time, feels himself competent to perform the far more difficult task of efficiently governing his fellow men.

Under the circumstances we have made an extraordinary success of democratic government in this country. We have abundant reason to be proud of our National Constitution, the finest piece of statesmanship ever evolved by the handiwork of man. We have established and maintained the world's greatest and most successful experiment in federal republicanism. In no other country is democracy so well and firmly established as here. Yet this very element of success carries its obligations. It means that we must redouble our efforts to preserve and improve what we have. For it is a law of both nature and politics that what man does not change for the better, time will inexorably change for the worse. Even democracy has its dangers. A democracy gives the ballot to every adult citizen, yet the ballot is potentially the most dangerous weapon that can be put into unthinking hands. As a weapon of vindictiveness, oppression, and nation-wide folly, there is, potentially, none other to equal it. That is why it is sometimes said, and with grim truth, that we are today engaged in a race between education and disaster, between the rule of reason and the misrule of emotionalism. In this race the institutions of scientific education are the ones on which we must most heavily rely.

It is a big task, this task of trying to clear the cobwebs from the nation's mind. It is made an infinitely bigger task by the fact that when you want to enlighten a young man you usually have to begin with his grandfather. But I am enough of an optimist to believe that it can and will be done. There is no reason why institutions of education should feel discouraged at what they have been able to accomplish in leavening the whole lump. A few years ago the greatest and most discriminating student of American political institutions, the late Lord Bryce, wrote as follows:

"Political opinion is being better instructed in the United States today than in any country of Continental Europe. A knowledge of the institutions of the country is more widely diffused among the people." This has been partly due, Lord Bryce declared, "to the practice of local self-government, but also in part, 'to the influence of college teaching.' One of the most hopeful and significant features of American life," he concluded, "is the prominence of educated men in all the higher forms of political activity."

The college graduates of the United States form less than one per cent of the population. Yet they hold more than fifty per cent of all the key positions in the public service. One per cent is a very small fraction; but let us be of good courage, for it is righteousness not numbers that counts. You will remember that once upon a time there was an ancient city doomed to destruction, and ten righteous men would have saved it. In America we have placed our trust in education, and it is a trust which will not prove to have been placed in vain.—Commencement address by William Bennett Munro, of Harvard University, at the California Institute of Technology.

Privilege implies duty and demands that it be performed. The greater the honor and prestige, the greater the duty. Advantage not only increases opportunity, but multiplies responsibility.—Mrs. Ira M. Boswell.

Joseph Smith's Daybook

Note: Sister J. Ed. Trevey, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has sent us the following interesting bit, which many will be curious to peruse. We thank Sister Trevey.

A bunch of the Oriole Girls visited the Masonic Library one day—Mrs. Trevey accompanied us—and the librarian very kindly got Joseph Smith's daybook out of the vault, where they have placed it for safe-keeping, and let us look at it. It contained some very interesting things on its yellow, stained pages, which are given below.

The book covers a two-year period—1842-1844.

On the very inside cover we read this notation:

"This is the last daybook used by the noted Mormon prophet, Joseph Smith, in his store at Nauvoo, Illinois, and was in use there at the time of his assassination and death at the hands of a mob at Carthage, Illinois. It fell into the hands of the administrator of his estate, by whom it was given to me in 1857 and is now placed in the Masonic Library of Iowa for preservation.

"(Signed) E. C. Blackmar

"Burlington, Iowa

"June 1894"

At the end of the book there is this notation:

"On June 23, 1844, Joseph Smith surrendered himself to the Illinois authorities at Carthage. In the jail at that place, June 27, 1844, he was foully murdered by a mob. It is said that when stricken by two musket balls, he threw his hands above his head and died with these words, 'Oh Lord my God' upon his lips."

"(Signed) Joseph E. Marcombe"

The following prices as obtained from the daybook are ridiculously low—all except calico, which is higher than it is today:

OFFICIAL

Facts From Department of Finance

September 23, 1927.

The First Presidency; Brethren: I submit herewith such information as is now available pertaining to the Income and Expenses of the church for the year ending June 30, 1927.

The income of the church may be divided into two general classes, Membership Contributions and Miscellaneous, the latter including income from real estate holdings, interest, dividends, etc. The membership contributions have now been completely audited and may be summarized as follows:

General Offerings:

Individual Offerings:

Tithes	$263,603.78
Surplus	2,930.72
Offerings	8,168.35	$274,702.85

Group and Miscellaneous Offerings:

Oblations, etc.	$ 20,448.28
Christmas Offering For Institutions and Departments	41,992.67
Bequests	6,998.95
Consecration Agreements	8,715.86
Given to Elders by Saints and Friends	43,984.24
General Conference Collections	1,416.82	$132,043.18

Total General Offerings $406,746.03

Special Offerings:

Auditorium Fund	$ 20,836.42
Graceland Endowment Fund	48,951.78	$ 69,788.20
		$476,534.23

A schedule is attached (this schedule appears on pages 1168, and 1169 in this issue) in which these contributions (except consecration agreements, amounts given to elders by Saints and friends, and General Conference collections) have been allocated to the stakes and districts from which received.

Tithes and General Offerings have been subdivided under two general headings, Individual, and Group and Miscellaneous. Individual Offerings consist of Tithes, Surplus, and Offerings. The approximate number of members in each district represented by these three classes of individual offerings is shown in the column headed "Contributors" and has been arrived at by multiplying the active tithing accounts by three, inasmuch as most of the accounts represent families rather than individuals.

The enrollment as furnished by the Church Statistician at June 30, 1927, is shown for each stake and district in order that the approximate proportion of the membership contributing may be known. The estimated number of contributors was 28,791, which is but 28.62 per cent of the total membership.

Per capita figures are not given, as they often prove misleading. However, if per capita figures are desired, it should be observed that the number of contributors applies only to the three columns headed Individual.

The strict order of giving as taught in the law, viz: tithes, surplus, and offerings, has not been closely observed. Had this been done, a part of the amount included as tithes and also a part included as offerings would have appeared as surplus. After giving full weight to the foregoing, however, it is apparent that the consecration of surplus has not yet become a reality.

The amount received for institutions and departments comprises the following:

College Day Collections	$4,592.10
Sanitarium	347.38
Children's Home	130.68
Saints' Home	127.00
Department of Women	1,721.38
Radio Department	11.00
Department of Recreation and Expression	69.41
	$6,998.95

The total of general offerings, $406,746.03, is $175,427.73 less than the total for the previous year. An analysis shows that this decrease is due to the fact that the previous year included several items properly included but of such nature as not to recur annually, as may be seen from the following comparison:

	1925-26	1926-27
Ordinary Offerings	$417,961.24	$406,746.03
Lamoni Electric Co.	89,212.52
Extraordinary Bequests and Offerings	75,000.00
Total	$582,173.76	$406,746.03

From the foregoing it is evident that the variation in ordinary contributions is so slight that it can not be construed as indicative of general decreased support.

The offerings of $406,746.03 are approximately $70,000 less than the general expenses, full details of which will be available soon.

A discussion of the special fund offerings and their disposition will also be available later.

Yours faithfully,

AMOS E. ALLEN,

General Church Auditor.

October 3, 1927.

The First Presidency; Brethren: The membership contributions for general purposes for the months of July and August of the current year are about five per cent greater than the contributions of the corresponding period of the fiscal year just closed.

While this percentage of increase is not sufficient to raise the income to the level of expense appropriations, the fact that fifty-two or approximately sixty per cent of the districts show increases (and that, too, in the face of unsatisfactory economic conditions in some sections) is no doubt indicative of an increasing sense of responsibility on the part of the membership.

A list of the districts showing increases is appended.

Yours faithfully,

AMOS E. ALLEN, General Church Auditor.

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

Columbus, Ohio

In my last I told of my visit to Columbus to be present at the dedication of the church building of the Second Columbus Branch. I had gone to bed tired but happy in the thought that mayhap I had contributed some to a joyous day for the branch and the visiting Saints.

Up betimes the next morning, I went with Brother French to police headquarters, and spent the forenoon observing some of the activities there around. I was introduced to the Director of Safety, Mr. McCune, and sat beside him as he and Judge Miller reviewed several parole cases, an experience reminding me of the times some years ago when as a student of criminology and penalogy I had sat many times beside Judge Porterfield in the Juvenile Court of Kansas City, and in Judge Latshaw's "criminal" court, and in the police courts of Kansas City, and observed the scenes from tragedies in the lives of people which such courts bring to light. And one can not but wonder how many tragedies come to the sight of the few, not commented on by the prying newspaper reporters who are hunting for "human interest" (?) stories with which to regale the readers of the daily press.

I wonder if it's curiosity, morbid or natural, which has impelled me to go to police and juvenile courts, and criminal courts, and to prisons and jails on many occasions? As an amateur photographer I used to study the films and negatives of my "duds" or failures sometimes more closely than the good ones, for I learned that by getting the facts of the case in the failures I learned the more quickly and surely how to get the good ones. My work as a churchman has been, so far as its ultimate objective is concerned, towards betterment of human conditions. Those ideals are the better understood when the "failures" of human relations and interactions are evaluated. And how often are the tragedies and heart-rending scenes of police courts and parole boards but the symptoms or outcroppings of underlying pathological conditions or wrong social forces. To become thus conscious of the wrongs by seeing their fruits gives one the better orientation in striving for betterment, and lagging courage or growing disheartenment are checked by renewed determination to carry on, even in the face of opposition and apparently slow progress.

And so, court over, pleasantries and courtesies passed with the judge, I with my thoughts left the room with Brother French and the Director of Safety. And soon we were at lunch, we three and Corporal Bragg. And as I listened to and participated in the "chit chat" and banter while the meal progressed, I saw in them what has at times been misunderstood in me. Here were two men chiefly responsible for the "safety" of the city, and in the administration of the laws and regulations of the city, together with one of the patrolmen of the street. Heavy responsibilities resting upon those shoulders! And yet, the casual observer seeing and hearing us at that lunch with banter and repartee, might have said: "There's a care-free lot—cares are resting lightly if at all on them!"

How easy it is to be thus misunderstood! I had seen the "Chief" and his "Director" in their offices, sat beside them at their work, and had seen the heavy hand of responsibility line their faces and brows as they applied themselves unreservedly and wholesouledly to the discharge of their onerous tasks; had discussed with them the difficulties of their tasks, and knew that on their hearts lay the sense of responsibility. And I could understand why the necessity for relief from tension which comes at times in the form of banter, light chatter, and repartee. And as I joined them in it, I found myself wishing that I might be understood by those near me when at times, to escape the slough of despond reached through disheartenment and overload, I give way to lightness of conversation and even the caprice of badinage. I even find some relief in giving vent to the humorous or even trivial in these "Journeys," with you, my readers. And in this I may have been misunderstood at times.

Lunch over, by the Director and the Chief I was shown some of the buildings of the city, and then by the Chief and Officer Bragg I was taken up the Scioto River to see the provisions made by the city to insure a plentiful supply of wholesome water, where a good bit of engineering has impounded storage water enough for four hundred and twenty-five days' supply, even though the continuous supply by rain should be stopped.

All of this was of interest to me and furnished me with information I was glad to get and glad of the opportunity to see the character and beauty of the country surrounding Columbus.

The evening was spent in pleasant converse with a group of Saints and in listening to a lecture at the church by Brother Klar. Doctor Klar is one of our zealous health specialists, and I was glad of the opportunity to hear him.

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

On Tuesday noon, the 21st of June, I left the hospitable home of Brother and Sister French, at Columbus, and was taken to the station by Brother French and Officer Bragg, and at 12.40 left on a Baltimore & Ohio train, bound for Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, as my itinerary called for a stop there en route to Washington. Reaching Pittsburgh about 7.50 p. m., I was met at the station by Brother Shinn, who in his car took me to the church. Don't ask me how he got there. About all I know is that we crossed the river and somewhere, went up a hill, through a tunnel and up hill and down, straight ahead, around corners and curves, to right and to left, and finally stopped on a high hill, and there was the church. In it we found a waiting congregation of Saints. With few preliminaries I was introduced. I learned afterwards that the congregation had been waiting for some time, and Brother Tom Carr had been talking to them. Well, for an hour or so I talked to the Saints. I was pleased to see several old acquaintances in the audience, Brothers Curry and others of Pittsburgh, and the smiling face of "Uncle Abe" Morgan.

It was a hasty visit for me, for after the service and the usual "visiting" at the close, Brother Shinn took me to the station, where I found several others had preceded us to bid the traveler Godspeed. And soon I sought the Pullman to retire. As I did so, I had many memories called up by the visit. For as a young man just out of college I had gone to work for a telephone company whose headquarters were in Pittsburgh. And though I had worked in outlying cities, such as New Castle, Wheeling, Beaver Falls, etc., yet the visit to Pittsburgh recalled many experiences had when an employee of the Central District Printing and Telegraph Company. As I recall, I have only once previously visited Pittsburgh as an officer of the church—some years ago when making a tour of that part of the country with Brother U. W. Greene.

So I was glad to renew old acquaintances at Pittsburgh and form new ones among the Saints, and as I bade them good-bye I found myself wishing I could stay longer. But "duty" and "itinerary" called me "onward." And so I retired to my bunk, knowing that the morning would find me approaching Washington, where I expected to spend a couple of days on matters which would have to do with government departments. Of this work I will say nothing here.

Mount Vernon, Illinois

It was on June 24, late in the afternoon, that I left Washington in a Baltimore & Ohio train, for a twenty-four hour ride to Odin, Illinois. Writing till about 10.30, I retired to awaken near Cincinnati. Despite the rough-riding qualities of the coach I was in, I still managed to "grind out" quite a bit of work on the 25th. But about 4 p. m. I found myself approaching Odin, Illinois, where I was to leave the Baltimore & Ohio for a close connection on the Illinois Central for Centralia. Only a few minutes at Odin, and I was off for Centralia, and in a few more minutes was there. About an hour's wait there, and on a Southern Railway train I was on the last lap to Mount Vernon, where I arrived about 6.40. Being met by Brother R. L. Fulk and Brother J. R. Lentell, I found a hospitable welcome at Brother Fulk's where Sister Fulk had made ample provision for refreshment.

I had gone to Mount Vernon expecting a church dedication ceremony on Sunday, the 26th, but I learned that a conference was also in session, and that I was "billed" for the evening speaking the 25th. So, after supper at Sister Fulk's and a "clean up" at the room to remove what I could of travel stain, we went to the church, where I found a full house.

I was interested in seeing the signs of progress. The church building, well located, is a frame building neatly finished outside in stucco, and inside in natural finish woodwork. It is well arranged for a small church, comfortably seated, and indicates an alertness and unity among the Mount Vernon Saints, who deserve much credit for their work in securing the good little church home.

Sunday was a busy day, and the best of weather prevailed. I found myself "billed" for three speaking services, morning, afternoon, and evening. It had been anticipated by Brother Fulk and his coworkers that the building would be inadequate to hold the audiences; so unique provisions had been made for overflow, by erecting a tent just west of the building, and mounting loud speakers in the tent; and besides these loud speakers, three had been mounted on the peak of the roof of the church, and another in a tree on the grounds. These, of course, were connected to the microphone on the speaker's desk, and the equipment worked so well that not only the "overflow" in the tent and on the grounds "heard everything," but people sitting in their automobiles parked along the street, and neighbors on their porches heard, and it was afterwards said that people several blocks away listened successfully to song services and speaking.

Of course I spoke of Zion, and here again I found good attention and deep interest, and here again I felt good in presenting the word. Zion and her ideals have taken a firm grip on me and will not let go. I chafe under the delay in getting fully under way for that desirable port, and sometimes become depressed when I think there is apathy among the Saints concerning the great work of the church in redeeming Zion, and I become weary at times in repeating again and again what I feel should be of almost universal knowledge among the Saints—repeat because I am conscious that Zion in her great possibilities is not comprehended by the Saints; yet when on occasions such as we had in Mount Vernon I find new courage in the response from the Saints, rejoice because some seem to have caught the vision or had their zeal renewed, their determination fortified, I gather heart to go on, and am strengthened at the same time that I hope the Saints have been stimulated by my efforts to visit among them.

The whole district seems to have turned out, and the morning and afternoon meetings "overflowed" into the tent and onto grounds.

Conviviality and Sainthood visiting were promoted by the common meal at noon on the grounds, and everybody seemed happy. And it is to be hoped that the Saints left the conference and church dedicatory services, strengthened, heartened to carry on, towards greater achievement, with their faces more determinedly towards Zion.

I have not here attempted to name the many workers who helped make the occasion a success, for that has been told in other columns; but the whole occasion seems to have been organized, and the district officers were ably supported by the priesthood, departmental workers, musicians, and members.

May the Saints of Mount Vernon and the Southeastern Illinois District make steady progress, in numbers, in faith, in vision, in ideals, and find rejoicing in service well rendered to God and his church.

Lawrence, Kansas

The opening of school for 1927 found the little mission of Latter Day Saint students and older members at Lawrence, the home of the University of Kansas, ready and eager for study and work, both in the school and the church.

After the first few days required for enrollment at the university and getting acquainted, a meeting was called the night of September 15 at the home of Brother Eugene Christy, 1019 Alabama, for the purpose of organizing for the ensuing school year. The meeting was called to order at eight o'clock by Elder Walter L. Daykin, with fourteen members present. Brother Daykin had been elected president by the group of last year. He is an instructor in the department of sociology at the university and is recently from the University of Iowa.

The officers elected include: Walter L. Daykin, president; counselors to the president, Clayton Crooker and Eugene Christy; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Bessie May Taylor; musical leader, Elmira Stauffer.

For the present, work in Sunday school includes Bible study by Brother W. L. Daykin and Book of Mormon study by Brother Eugene Christy, taught on alternate Sundays to the adult class. The children's classes are for the present in charge of Sister Roy A. Chapman, an experienced teacher of the primary department of the Stone Church at Independence. Changes in this department are hoped to be facilitated later.

Arrangements have been made to use a hall at the corner of Nineteenth and Massachusetts, the same as used in previous years.

For church services it is hoped special arrangements may be made to have speakers from Independence at least twice a month. On the other Sundays home talent will be utilized. Hope is had for bigger, better, and more homelike meetings, more and better music, and for the development of students who will have the courage of their convictions, to go forth from this institution better prepared to spread, live, and establish the greater latter-day gospel.

This year there are about thirty members of the church living in Lawrence, known to the group leaders. It is hoped through this news letter to the HERALD that if there are other Saints residing in or near Lawrence or any students attending school who do not know of the church mission here, they will get in touch with any of the following people: W. L. Daykin, 1028 Tennessee; Eugene Christy, 1019 Alabama; Mrs. A. P. Crooker, 1323 Kentucky.

Cheboygan, Michigan

September 14.—Sunday, September 11, occurred our one-day meeting, beginning at nine o'clock with prayer service. District President Allen Schreur, of Gaylord, was in charge, assisted by District Missionary E. N. Burt, of Onaway, and Elder Elmer Parks, of Gaylord. This was a very spiritual prayer service.

At eleven o'clock Elder E. N. Burt preached, assisted by Elder Amos Guy. The sermon at two in the afternoon was by Elder Allen Schreur, Elder R. D. Kleckler, of Alanson, assisting. Our pastor, W. H. Sheffer, preached at 3.30, and was assisted by Elder Max Kramer, of Onaway. The 7.30 discourse was by Elder Amos Guy; Brother William Martiñ, of Levering, assisting. Throughout the entire day the sermons were spiritual and helpful.

Sister Lalone's mother, Sister Wittum, has gone to Washington to live with another of her daughters.

All who attended the reunion at the Park of the Pines report the time well spent.

How a Missionary Patriarch Is Traveling

(From a letter to the first Presidency)

By Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley

Following the conference at Ribstone, Alberta, we went to Artland, Saskatchewan, on Monday and were taken to the home of Brother and Sister V. W. Clark, where we spent a very pleasant afternoon, or the major part of it. While dinner was cooking, we gave Brother and Sister Clark their blessings, and after dinner was over and the dishes done, we went with them in their auto to the home of Leslie Mogg, a distance of about seventy-nine miles.

Leslie Mogg lives in the Senlac Branch, which is the branch in which the Cornishes live. J. J. Cornish has removed to the coast on account of the health of his wife, but the rest of them still live here. I preached two evenings, Monday and Tuesday, August 1 and 2, in their hall. They do not call it a church, though all their religious services are held in it. Pretty good crowds came out, and the mosquitoes came also, in swarms.

On Wednesday two cars of us went to Dillberry lake to have an outing and look at a proposed site for the Western Canada reunion, which they hope to inaugurate next year. The proposed ground lies on the bank of this beautiful lake and is government land, which it is hoped may be leased for a long term, if it may not be granted outright for religious purposes, as some of the brethren are inclined to believe it may be. This place is fifteen miles from the nearest railroad station and four or five miles, I believe, from the nearest farm home. It is an ideal place for quiet camping and is becoming quite a resort for picnics. The bathing beaches are number one, and it is good fishing and boating, if they had the boats, and Brother William Levitt said he would see that there would be boats. After we had taken our lunch and looked about for a suitable camping spot for the big tabernacle tent for the reunion, we went in to try the water, and it was surely fine. The Alberta and the Northern Saskatchewan Districts appointed committees with power to act, and the sentiment is that they will try to have the reunion next summer, probably in July. It is centrally located for the three districts. While the Southern District conference did not consider it, as it was proposed at the northern conference after the adjournment of the southern conference, the officers of the Southern District seem to favor it. . . .

Thursday morning Brother Mogg drove us to Macklin, Saskatchewan, where we boarded the Canadian National Railroad train for Weyburn, where we arrived at noon on Friday, after stopping over night in Moosejaw because of poor connections. My niece, Mrs. J. R. Neill, met us at the train and soon transported us by means of the new Ford to their farm home. We certainly enjoyed the short time we could remain with them. It was pure country life, exhilarating and refreshing.

Sunday morning we all loaded up for Goodwater, where Missionary O. W. Okerlind had planned an all-day meeting. This trip was about twenty-nine miles and was soon made over pretty good roads with ideal weather. The meetings were good, consisting of sacramental services following a baptismal service in the morning, a Sunday school meeting in the afternoon followed by a sermon by the patriarch. Following the afternoon meeting, we drove on to Torquay, the home of Brother Roy Toovey, and we preached there in the evening in their little union church to a fair audience, three carloads having accompanied us from Goodwater, a distance of twenty-five or thirty miles. These three carloads went home after the service, a distance of more than fifty miles. There are some Saints who think a few city blocks is too far to go to church.

Monday morning bright and early, about five o'clock, even before the Canadian sun was up, we were on the road to Crosby, North Dakota, Brother and Sister Neill, my niece and nephew, offering us the service. We crossed the international boundary without bothering the revenue officer to come out, though Brother John went to the door and called to him and advised him of our passing. We were not inspected either in entering Canada or leaving, though no effort was made to evade the officers. We entrained at Crosby at seven with tickets for Fargo, where we arrived at 11.30 p. m. and were met at the depot by Brother and Sister John Rotzien and Robert Gunlock. Arrangements had been made for our being entertained at the home of Brother and Sister Worth Couey. We held meetings Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and tried to encourage the Saints, the few that are left, as best we could. We had a good time with them, for we love the Fargo Saints, as well as all the others.

Following the Wednesday evening service, we boarded the 11.30 Great Northern for Minneapolis, and connecting there with the Rock Island in the morning, we reached Des Moines about six p. m. After a short trip window-shopping, which is about all the shopping we do nowadays, and a little to eat, we got on the Wabash with tickets for Runnells where we arrived at 9.45, and no one to meet us, not having been advised of time of our arrival. Leaving wife holding down the baggage, I soon found Brother McDonald and Brother Castings, and in short order we were delivered with our baggage at the comfortable home of Sister White, where we were cared for during the reunion in first-class style. The reunion at Runnells, while not quite so largely attended as on some former occasions, was considered by those who attend from year to year as being of a much higher type spiritually. Something like thirty-four tents on the grounds. We gave twenty-nine blessings here.

Closing our work at Runnells on the 21st, wife accepted an invitation of Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser to occupy a seat, or part of one, in their car bound for Lamoni. On Monday morning I accepted an invitation of Brother Harvey to ride with him to Des Moines as he went to his work, he being employed with the Swift Packing Company and driving back and forth each day. How times have changed—a man driving twenty-one miles twice a day, to and from work! By way of the Fort Dodge Des Moines Electric Railway to Ames, and the Chicago and North Western to Missouri Valley, and back to fair grounds, I reached the reunion of the Little Sioux District. I had not been assigned to this reunion, but went because I desired to meet some of the old-time friends, and take a little vacation, since we had gone through a pretty strenuous siege for the past several weeks. Meeting Brother Lane, who is president of the district and also of the reunion committee, he expressed his pleasure that I had received his telegram, as there were a number who desired blessings. But I had not received any telegram, for it was sent on Sunday to Runnells and I left early Monday morning, the telegram having not been delivered. With the assistance of Ruth Gunsolley, of Logan, my niece by marriage, wife of Gerald Gunsolley, I gave nine blessings. Some others were asked for, and more would have been had I been able to stay longer; but Brother Ellis Bedwell, president of the Gallands Grove District, urged me to go to their reunion at Sac City for the first part of the session as they had hardly anybody in prospect for the first part, but more for the latter part. So, since I desired to spend a few days there for the same reason that I wanted to be at Missouri Valley, I went to Sac City on Friday, the 26th, arriving Saturday. The meeting at Missouri Valley was quite well attended, and the verdict of those who ought to know by comparison said the meetings were of a high order.

With the coming of several of the ministry on Monday, in consultation with the president of the reunion I decided to cut my stay short, as there were no demands for blessings, only one having applied; and as I desired two or three days at home before going to Minnesota, I left Tuesday morning, reaching Des Moines at one o'clock. I took in as much of the state fair as I could in the afternoon, and accepted an invitation from Howard Steckel to take a ride home in the evening with him in his Chrysler. This was a happy relief from the anticipated night trip by train to Chariton and thence to Lamoni, necessitating being up all night.

I leave tomorrow afternoon (Friday) for Minneapolis, where I have promised to assist the Saints of the Minneapolis Branch in their dining hall enterprise during the state fair. Wife will follow the first of the week.

Work Progressing at Tulsa

September 20.—We are getting settled down to our fall and winter work in this branch, and it is going forward seemingly with vigor and a better cooperation and willingness to move together under the shepherding of our new pastor, Brother Emmet Lancaster.

The new pastor readily grasped the arduous task he had before him and soon decided he would need assistance, "that it is not good for man to be alone." He took one of the fair maidens of Tulsa, Miss Helen Bailey, and persuaded her to help him in his work. After two weeks' honeymoon they returned, and the members of the church gave them a shower, sweetening the occasion by serving ice cream and cake. When the pastor expressed his appreciation for this whole-hearted welcome, he was filled with emotion as he looked into the happy faces of those under his care. He said, "With God's help and your help we shall work together in this glorious cause."

Our Wednesday night prayer meetings are more spiritual, the attendance better, and those who come are more active than ever before. A week ago the Jenks Saints came over on prayer meeting night and brought a fine spirit with them. Together we had a meeting long to be remembered.

Our women are becoming more interested in training their children each day. They are taking more interest in their homes, and talk more about spiritual things than ever before. We are surely though slowly climbing the golden stairs. May God speed our feet.

MISS HELEN LOGAN.

TULSA, OKLAHOMA, Box 1231.

Park Presidio Branch, San Francisco

September 17.—At the present time we are planning a stupendous presentation of the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," to be given Sunday, September 25. We have arranged to take over the entire Richmond Masonic Temple (our regular meeting place) for this wonderful centennial celebration.

The large hall will accommodate approximately four hundred people, and this will be used to present the pageant. The Red Room will be used for the morning services. The Banquet Hall will be used to serve a hot lunch consisting of creamed chicken and all that goes with it. We have engaged Mr. and Mrs. Ben Holmberg (the caretaker and wife) to assist on the various committees, as we shall need their help in conjunction with the regular committees.

Thus far we have received the whole-hearted support of our local newspapers and have been offered help by some of the organizations of which Sister Holling and Brother A. L. Holling are post officers. The Weekly Herald, a district paper with a circulation of 12,000 copies, came out yesterday, Friday, September 16, with a bold headline of "Anniversary pageant by Reorganized Church L. D. S. Sunday, September 25," and a write-up containing thirty-five lines. This was also published by our pioneer paper, the Richmond Banner. Both papers published the names of the principal characters, which are as follows: Historian, Louis B. Shippey; Joseph, Fulton E. Hartsough; Minister, V. B. Etzenhouser; Blind Man, Robert Cowden. And mention was made of the total of over forty in the entire cast.

Sister Bessie Boholl Holling was requested by the Park Presidio Y. M. C. A. Board of Management to address the audience of the fifth anniversary of the "Y" celebration on Sunday evening, September 24. She consented to do so, being a member of the women's auxiliary, and she also proposed to make mention of the pageant which is to be presented the following day.

We have obtained the forest scene necessary for one setting, and the writer made arrangements with a Mr. Dettreville, a famous artist, to reproduce the Cumorah Hill scene on a canvas six by twenty feet, and hopes to get the desired effect. Up to the present moment all is going well, and we look forward to a record-breaking crowd. Will be glad to advise you as to the results of our efforts in our next.

We trust the membership of the church as a whole are trying to do as much in proportion as the twelve members of the Park-Presidio congregation.

"San Diego to the Front"

The fruits of our people's resolution to read the Book of Mormon before September 22 are about to blossom forth, and the harvest will prove that Brother Fry's idea was inspired. I finished my reading September 9, and am going back over the ground, looking up the references I collected the first reading. This way of reviewing is not only delightful, but instructive.

When I was half through the book, I experienced a hunger to search the writings of Isaiah, and now before breakfast every day I listen in fancy to this wonderful prophet as he reveals what God would have him reveal. Here, too, I am collecting references for a second reading.

Evangelist J. F. Martin and about fifty of our Saints spent the entire day together Sunday, which was the last day he was to be with us. The church was simply saturated with peace and good will.

The word pictures he painted never failed to fasten the lessons in our minds. His exposition of the Book of Mormon was complete and satisfying; his "Young man and young women talks" were tactfully worded, but most penetrating.

Besides entertaining us with good music, he found time to baptize three young ladies, and later on in the day, assisted by Elder A. T. Gray and Elder Sherman, enabled these young people to receive through the laying on of hands, the Holy Ghost.

Our pastor, Elder A. T. Gray, whose wise leadership has brought us through the hard places, seemed very happy and very busy.

Our people seem to be studying the revelations and listening to the precious word more eagerly, and generally speaking, a drawing closer together seems to be in progress. In fact, a wonderful spirit of love is prevailing wherever our people congregate.

Concrete evidences of progress are not lacking. Within a week or ten days, at least two Melchisedec mantles will be added to our group, also one new priest and one new deacon will come into being.

We have some more candidates ready to be baptized the first of the month. Yes, the mist that has hung over San Diego for so many years is lifting. A great day is dawning, not only here, but over all the earth, wherever the latter-day work is going on. Anyone keeping in touch with the affairs of our church can see it coming.

I expect in the near future that from some quarter a well-thought-out plan will appear that will increase four-fold the circulation of the HERALD and the Ensign, as well as Autumn Leaves; also a good working plan that would bring them into active discussion in the Religio.

When we can gather our members together in one accord lined up unanimously behind our periodicals and our intrepid missionaries, victorious will be our day.

W. F. KELLERBY.

2144 El Cajon Avenue, September 19.

Topeka, Kansas

1116 Clay Street

September 26.—On August 12 C. R. Crooker, oldest son of the late A. P. Crooker, left for Detroit, Michigan, where he had been transferred by the Bell Telephone Company. The Department of Women held a farewell party at the same home on August 18, in honor of Sister A. P. Crooker and family previous to their departure for their new location at Lawrence, Kansas. The best wishes of the branch go with these families to new fields of activity, both industrial and spiritual, for such is the loss to Saints in Topeka.

F. O. Kelley was the speaker on the morning of August 21. No special preparation had been made, as he did not know he was to speak until a few minutes before entering the stand. His effort at this time was a forecast of ability as a minute man on the firing line. About five years ago a stranger came into the audience during preaching service and took a seat near the front. Upon inquiry the writer found he was a member but had been isolated most of his life. He kept coming, and finally brought his wife and baby. He was studious, and today occupies a place in the priesthood, is Sunday school superintendent, and the wife is a member and a loyal worker. This is only another evidence of what can be attained when we improve our opportunities.

A new member was added to the cradle roll on the 22d. Her name is Deloris Joan, and the proud parents are Brother and Sister C. C. Graham.

Brother C. C. Graham was the speaker on the 28th. In the evening Sister Esther Grim was elected superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

B. F. Deller had charge of the sacrament on September 4. The writer was not present but was informed that the remarks by Doctor H. A. Merchant, of Omaha, on the power of prayer, were well illustrated. Brother Ord Lasley, formerly of this place but now of Saint Joseph, was present and assisted in passing the emblems.

Doctor Merchant also gave a talk at the meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression in the evening and at eight o'clock took his audience on an imaginary trip to the islands. His graphic description seemed almost real, and we hope some day for a return trip. A "special" was rendered at this service by J. G. Juergens. Contributions of the gift of song from this brother are always appreciated.

Sister B. H. Buntin and family, of Chadwick, Missouri, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Vera Young and little son, of Independence, Missouri, were guests of Mrs. H. C. Pitsenberger and attended service in the evening. They were en route for their old home in Delta, Colorado. Sister Young will return after a short visit.

On the evening of September 11 Brother D. G. Francis gave a motion picture illustration of the development of the Cooperative Farmers' Association. The pictures were instructive, showing that the farmer of today meets his problems as his forefather did, by cooperation. Industrialization and separation of producing and consuming centers resulted in the development of marketing problems. There were a few marketing problems in the early day, and cooperation was a part of the daily work of the pioneer. Thus, step by step, is the mind of man being prepared for the greater cooperation in the problem of Zion. Brother Francis expects to return and show pictures on church lines in the near future.

Brother Daykin and wife, of Taylorville, Illinois, and Sister America Christensen and sons, of Lawrence, Kansas, were at this service. Elder Daykin is an instructor at Kansas University at Lawrence.

On the morning of September 18 Elder James Baillie, of Scranton, Kansas, was introduced as the speaker by our pastor. Brother Baillie gave an interesting talk on the Book of Mormon. In the evening Sister Phelps and Sister

Matthews, of Coffeyville, Kansas, accompanied Sister Helen Hays to the study class of the Department of Recreation and Expression. This department is now studying the Book of Mormon instead of the Doctrine and Covenants. Brother Don Grim is the instructor.

The sympathy of the branch is extended to Sister Connard and family in the death of her daughter, Sister Beulah Brown, of Hiawatha, Kansas. She was a member of our local.

On September 25 Elder B. F. Deller was the speaker in the morning, "Why be a member if not a faithful one?"

In the evening a program commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the date when records contained in the Book of Mormon were taken from Hill Cumorah was given by the Recreation and Expression Department. Appropriate songs with the following addresses were had; "History of the church," by Sister Grim; "Evidence of divinity of Book of Mormon," by Don Grim; and "What the Book of Mormon means to me," by B. F. Deller. A trio composed of Sisters Alfrey, Lucile Little, and Dorothy Deller, rendered the closing number. A bank of flowers placed on the rostrum brightened the room.

Brother and Sister Sheets kindly took the donations for the Harvest Home display at Independence, Missouri, from this point. This act is appreciated by Topeka Saints.

Fairfield, Illinois

September 20.—We had a very successful meeting at the Dry Fork Branch, conducted by Elder J. M. Henson and Brother L. C. Moore, of Mount Vernon. Meetings continued for nearly two weeks, beginning September 6. Attendance was good, and the Spirit was present.

I enjoyed the services so greatly myself that I thought to pass the good tidings along. Four souls were baptized by Brother Henson, and the confirmation meeting on the first Sunday at three o'clock was wonderful; the Spirit poured in upon us.

Brother L. C. Moore helped us in the song service, and several nights he played and sang for us. This we greatly enjoyed. His stringed music is good. On the last night he played on the violin which Brother P. T. Plumb made in the year 1911, and sang. This violin was presented to Brother Moore last Sunday by W. E. Green of this branch, and I think it was highly appreciated, for Brother Moore and Brother Plumb traveled together in the ministry until the latter's death.

Will you remember this branch in your prayers, that it may grow and prosper in the good work?

LELIA TIBBS.

CHASE, MICHIGAN, Route 1, Box 36.

Nauvoo, Illinois

September 28.—The Saints of Nauvoo have been kept busy entertaining during the summer. Nauvoo seems to be growing in popularity, and there has been a steady stream of visitors from all parts of the country.

Bishop A. B. Phillips and wife were guests of the Sanfords for a few days while en route to the Central Illinois reunion. Brother Phillips was in charge of the Wednesday night prayer meeting, and his talk was encouraging to the Saints.

We also had the honor of entertaining several of the Smith family. Sister Lucy Lysinger, of Lamoni, youngest daughter of the late Joseph Smith, and her family, visited Nauvoo for the first time, coming a week before reunion and camping in the Nauvoo House for a few days. During reunion we had with us President F. M. Smith and daughters, Alice and Lois, and Bishop I. A. Smith and family.

The Fishers, of Boston, who had been touring Canada and the West, also attended the reunion for a few days. When they left for home, Betty, who was to attend Graceland, remained, a guest of the Sanfords until school opened.

Bertram Lewis, who has been attending Boston University, returned home for a short visit, bringing with him Edward Traver, junior, of Boston, and Alfred Toombs, of Providence, who were to attend Graceland. They made the trip on a motorcycle and reached Nauvoo without a mishap. The following day, Edward took a short ride to Keokuk and returned swathed in bandages. The motorcycle struck a depression in the road, and he was thrown to the ground, but fortunately his injuries were only skin deep, and he was able to leave the bandages behind when he went on to Graceland.

The boys heard that Alden Foote, of Caribou, Maine, was on his way to Graceland, so they persuaded him to come to Nauvoo and go on with them. Bertram drove to Monmouth to meet him, and he was just in time to attend a supper being held at the Sanfords in honor of the Graceland students and a lawn party following at the Lewis home. Alden was soon one with the rest, entering into all the activities and winning a place for himself in the hearts of all, because of his pleasing personality. He, with Myron Wood and Betty Fisher, left for Graceland early the next morning, a light-hearted group, never dreaming that the angel of death stalked by their side. Alden was at Graceland but a few days when he was taken sick and in a few days had passed away. The hearts of the Saints in Nauvoo go out in sympathy to the bereaved parents who were called upon thus to part with their only son.

Bertram Lewis drove Edward Traver and Alfred Toombs up to Graceland on the motorcycle, renewed his friendship with former friends, and returning home soon started on his journey back to Boston again, where he is to finish his studies at the Boston University. He was accompanied by Kelley Anderson, of Lamoni, who is to attend Harvard University.

The district, at the suggestion of President Smith, purchased a motor boat, and the young folks of Nauvoo have found it a great help in entertaining visitors. An occasion long to be remembered was a moonlight trip on the river with a steak fry at Lingerlonger Beach.

C. B. Woodstock and wife and Gene Closson and wife, of Lamoni, made a flying trip to Nauvoo, arriving Saturday afternoon and returning the following morning. A picnic supper was held at the Layton home Saturday evening, and the visitors were treated to a motor boat ride across the river and back.

Patriarch F. G. Pitt and wife were visitors last week, coming from Joliet where they are making their home for a short time. They were on their way to Carthage to visit Brother and Sister Hare.

Sister J. W. Layton and Sister T. J. Henderson and little daughter Mabel were called to Independence by the serious illness of Emma Burton. On reaching Independence they found she had passed away a few hours before. Sister Henderson is a granddaughter of Sister Burton, and Sister Layton is her youngest sister. Sister Henderson spent a week in Independence, visiting her mother, Addie Matthews, and then Brother Alexander Kenty and wife and son Norman and wife drove her back to Nauvoo, where Sister Kenty was a guest of her sister, Clara Lewis, for a few days. The Kentys then drove on to Saint Louis.

The centennial of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon was observed last Sunday. Part of the pageant written by Brother Elbert Smith was given during the Religio hour by the young people, and this was followed with a splendid sermon on the Book of Mormon by H. C. Snively. The rostrum was prettily decorated with flags of all nations and summer cypress.

The Laytons report over seventeen hundred registered at the Mansion House during the summer months. If all who called had registered, doubtless the number would have been well over eighteen hundred. This means that eighteen hundred people from all parts of the country have listened to the gospel story, received literature, and been favorably impressed, who probably would have been reached in no other way.

Far West, Missouri, Branch

The series of preaching services conducted by Elders G. T. Richards and J. Charles May opened September 11 and closed September 25. Good weather and good attendance were enjoyed throughout. Each Sunday was a special day for attendance and program. The first Sunday night a play was put on by the women of this neighborhood. Eight persons were required to present this effort. On the second Sunday, fifty or more cars of people came from Independence as visitors and gave us a historical program. Our attendance then reached its peak, there being over three hundred present.

The men of the neighborhood gave a pageant, "Remember Cumorah," on the last Sunday night preceding the preaching service. It included seventeen cast members.

The seventeen services held here by Brothers Richards and May had an average attendance of seventy-eight.

We enjoyed the preaching of both, and the special music by Elder May, who plays the guitar, ukulele, and ocarina or "sweet potato."

Southern Indiana Conference

The Southern Indiana District held their yearly church conference at Derby, Indiana, on September 17 and 18, and at this conference the following officers were elected to serve the district until next September:

Gage, Indianapolis; chorister, Keo M. Robinson, Indianapolis; pianist, Edna S. Gage, Indianapolis; Women's Department head, Margaret Stacy, Louisville, Kentucky; Sunday school superintendent, Houston Glenn, Derby, Indiana; and Sister Glenn has appointed as her assistant, in this department, Katherine Schmidt, Louisville, Kentucky; secretary for the Sunday school, Margaret Stacy, of Louisville, Kentucky; head of the Department of Recreation and Expression, H. W. Burwell, Louisville, Kentucky; secretary for this department, Lois Hornocker, of Indianapolis.

The writer is sure we are all going to try that Southern Indiana this conference year will do the very best it can. We are going to work in every way toward a complete church program.

ARTHUR W. GAGE, Secretary,
Southern Indiana District.

Lamoni Stake

Celebrate Book of Mormon Centennial

A record-breaking attendance was had at the Brick Church September 18 when the Lamoni Branch observed the centennial in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the receiving of the Book of Mormon plates.

The day opened with a priesthood prayer service at eight o'clock and Sunday school under the supervision of the local officers. At the eleven o'clock hour a program of three short talks was substituted for the regular sermon and proved very interesting. Elder W. E. Prall was the first speaker, taking as his subject, "The history of the Book of Mormon." He told of the origin of the book, the history of its people and its purpose. Sister W. E. Haden was the next speaker and took as a theme, "The significance of the Book of Mormon to the American Indian." Some of Sister Haden's ancestors are of the Indian or Lamanite race, and she told of the customs and beliefs of the Indians, their history, their oppression, and their attitude toward the Book of Mormon which gave a history of their fathers and of God's dealing with them in the centuries of the past. Elder Roy Cheville was the last speaker of the morning and discussed the "Contribution of the Book of Mormon to religion," calling attention to certain religious controversies of the time of the coming forth of the book and set forth clearly the influence it has had during the past one hundred years on religious thought. The music for this program was furnished by the choir, assisted by Brother and Sister Fields Jones, of Orson, Iowa. Brother and Sister Jones were former residents of Lamoni, and their many friends here enjoyed their part in the program. In addition to these musical numbers, the congregation joined in singing L. D. S. hymns in keeping with the spirit of the day.

At 12.40 a basket dinner was served by the ladies of the Department of Women under the supervision of Sister J. H. Anthony. Over four hundred partook of the dinner, which was served cafeteria style on the lawn south of the church.

The afternoon program was also held on the church lawn, seats having been previously arranged for the occasion. The program opened with a forty-minute concert by the Lamoni Concert Band, under the direction of Brother J. H. Anthony. A ladies' quartet sang two numbers, "A garden of beautiful roses," and "The Rosarie." The personnel of the quartet was Miss Mabel Carlile, Mrs. Fields Jones, Mrs. J. H. Anthony, and Miss Helen Anthony, with Byron Neville at the piano. Charles Ballantyne played a violin solo, accompanied by Sister Eunice Butts. The closing number of the program was a Book of Mormon story, "The gleaming stones," told by Sister Marcella Schenck. She told of the voyage of the Jaredites and the making and lighting of the boat with gleaming stones. This story taught a lesson of faith in God and the blessings which come to those who keep his commandments.

The pageant, "Remember Cumorah," as presented by a selected cast under the direction of Florence Thompson and Mrs. M. E. Mortimore Sunday evening, was a remarkable success.

The Cast

Joseph Smith	Roy A. Cheville
Minister	Oscar Anderson
Moroni	Lonzo Jones
Spirit of Prayer	Lyda Elefson
The Church	Rae Lysinger
Reader	Lois Garver
Historian	Gene Closson

The stage setting was that of a wood, the entire stage being banked with large boughs of green. In front of these were placed a circle of screens to transform the scene to an interior in some of the acts. The whole was effective and a good substitute for regular scenery. The story of the finding of the plates, the angel's visit to Joseph, the organization of the church, and the sending forth of missionaries, first on foot, then by rail and airplane, then the broadcasting of the message by radio; and finally the response of the nations to the call, was told in the various scenes, the intervening history being read by the historian, Eugene Closson. The last scene was very spectacular and realistic, made so by their ability to call on personal representatives of many of the foreign nations who are attending Graceland College. There were: Canadian, Scotch, English, Irish, Australian, Dane, Indian, and South Sea Islanders, who were either native or direct descendants. Other nations were represented by costuming, such as Japan, and others.

On Wednesday night of the anniversary week, the monthly union prayer service was held at the church. The centenary theme was carried out in the opening remarks by Roy Cheville, who spoke of lessons from "The Youth of Cumorah." Coming from the prayer in the woods, this young man carried three great convictions, essentials to effective religious activity: God had given him a specific work to do; divine help would assist in the task; and he would be held responsible for its accomplishment. The church of today needs this sense of assigned work, assurance, and responsibility. The congregation was augmented by several college students, whose outlook at the beginning of the school year brought the spirit of trusting and energetic youth.

Following the class work at the Religio hour on Thursday evening, Elder A. M. Chase gave an illustrated talk on the Book of Mormon.

Elder W. E. Prall was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour on Sunday, September 25, taking as his theme "The significance of the Restoration." Brother Prall presented in this discourse the contribution the Restoration has made to religion during the past one hundred years.

The centennial observance closed with the evening sermon by Elder James A. Thomas, who had chosen as his subject, "Shall we carry on?" Brother Thomas reviewed the work of the men and women of the church during the past century, outlined the work before the church today, and raised the question, "Shall we carry on?"

Des Moines, Iowa

September 26.—Work in this part of the Lord's vineyard seems to be moving forward. On last Sunday morning, the pastor, C. B. Hartshorn, spoke upon the topic, "The Book of Mormon as a contribution to sacred literature." The subject was very ably handled and the Saints edified. The program of the Religio hour was rendered by the Des Moines Blue Birds. This is a band of young girls under the leadership of Sister Josie Potter. The program was very interesting and educational.

A member of the local priesthood, Brother J. L. Parker, was the speaker at the evening hour. His theme was, "The Book of Mormon as another witness for Christ." Brother Parker, as many know, was formerly a missionary and always possesses that missionary spirit when he stands behind the sacred desk.

An evangelistic campaign will be begun by the branch on October 2. The meetings are to be conducted by Apostle F. Henry Edwards, of Independence, assisted by Elder O. L. D'Arcy, missionary to Des Moines District. The Saints here are looking forward to a spiritual revival among their number and an ingathering of precious souls for the Master.

Prayer meetings are being fairly well attended, and the spirit of love and of fellowship is made manifest. All the departments of the church are functioning well, and we feel that the march is Zionward.

N. V. ANDERSON.

Independence

Stone Church

Sunday, October 2, being the first of the month, the Saints gathered in sacramental service, Pastor C. Ed. Miller in charge. "Sovereign and transforming grace" was sung under the leadership of Bishop J. A. Koehler, and prayer was offered by Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith. In his opening remarks, Evangelist U. W. Greene referred to the coming forth of the Book of Mormon plates, the translating of these plates by Joseph Smith and the work of Oliver Cowdery, their desire to obey the law, the bestowing upon them of the Aaronic priesthood, and their baptism. "This morning it would be an excellent thing," observed Brother Greene, "for us to look into our hearts, and as we bow at the table of the Lord ask ourselves the question, Have we forgotten the promises the Lord has made us, and are we ready to move on doing whatsoever we can to help in this divine work?"

In accordance with the schedule of the city centennial, the initial celebration commenced in the various churches on Sunday morning, and so following the serving of the emblems the order of the Stone Church meeting was changed to one of reviews and reminiscences of earlier church days in Independence. Elder Miller announced Bishop Roderick May, who briefly and interestingly began with the establishment of the church in 1830, bringing it up to the present time. Just as the children of Israel wandered in the wilderness forty years, so did the early Saints wander away from Independence after being driven out in 1833—for forty years. Bishop May himself came to the Land of Zion in 1879, going into business in Kansas City. In 1884 he and Sister May came to Independence. The first district conference in a grove, the hard times, and his work as branch president and bishop's agent were touched upon, also his ten-year mission to England and the gathering to the center place. Rapt attention was given Brother May.

As a result of questions put by Pastor Miller to the congregation, it was found that there were a number of members present who met in the first church of the Reorganization, the "brick" church, on East Lexington Street. They were the following: Mary E. Pooler, Mrs. Leona Austin Bartholomew, Rose Loar Nesbitt, Mrs. Alma Roberts McClain, James Armour, Mrs. Tomlinson Lyon, Edith Ruth Clow Koehler, William Williamson, Rose Pooler Page, Mr. and Mrs. Roderick May, Joseph Lively and family, Frances Williamson Hilliard, Ida Beam Williamson, Alice Clark Hattey, Lottie Gould Williams, Mattie Kemp Roberts, Jennie Kemp Campbell, Myra Chatburn Brackenbury, Nellie Chatburn Brocaw, Joseph A. Brackenbury (helped make brick for the church), Hannah Parker Clow, Catherine Andes Wilcox, Mrs. Stevens (who has the organ that was used in the church).

Sister Jennie Newton Yingling was then called to the stand and in turn narrated in a vivid fashion activities of the church occurring in her young womanhood, the organization of the Hawthorne Society for the purpose of putting a pipe organ in the new church (the Stone Church) which was being builded, the aggressive campaign for improvement in church decorum, the branch elections, etc. That the people of those times were inspired by the Spirit to a sincerity, a willingness, and a vision which compelled them to progress, is this sister's belief.

Patriarch F. A. Smith, who began his first official work in the "brick" church as a deacon, also spoke concerning the work of those days.

After singing "Shall we gather home to Zion?" with unusual fervor, the Saints were dismissed, feeling spiritually and mentally refreshed. Those who have of late years come to the center place better now understand the struggles of those who came here years ago and, surrounded by opposition and prejudice, proceeded to establish their homes and their church.

In the stand downstairs for the junior sacramental service were Elders George A. Shearer, George A. Gould, and James L. Gray. A hundred and sixty young people between the ages of eight and twenty were present, and the meeting moved along rapidly, there being at one time twelve testimonies in ten minutes. Elder Gould made the spiritual manifestation talk, and Elder Gray was in charge of the service.

The Campus service, in charge of Brother James Strachan, was not quite as active as formerly, there being only five prayers and thirty testimonies. Brother Mansel T. Williams made the opening remarks, which were instructive and if lived up to will make better girls and boys, and older ones, too. The fifty-eight pupils who had been promoted to the intermediate department were missed, but great hopes are held for the sixty little ones who have come in from the primary department that they, too, may be workers for the church.

The principal item of business transacted by the Religio Sunday evening was the selection of Brother Evan Walden, recently of Graceland, as superintendent of recreation. The program presented by Superintendent of Programs Fairbanks consisted of two readings by Blaine Bender and a vocal duet by Gladys and Margaret Givins.

Conference of Churches in Zion

President Frederick M. Smith called the conference of the churches of Zion to order at eight o'clock Monday evening, and after opening exercises asked the people to act on the appointment of G. S. Trowbridge as secretary of the conference. The appointment was approved.

President Smith read a letter of resignation as secretary from P. G. Fairbanks who is now residing in Chicago. The resignation was accepted.

The names of three men who had become members of the church but had so far forgotten their obligations as to have become criminals, being convicted and sentenced in the courts of the land, were upon recommendation of the bishop's court, dropped from the church records.

Several names were presented in reports from bishop's court of members who had become disaffected and wished their names taken from the church roll. The court's recommendation that the requests be granted was adopted by the body.

The chairman stated there were vacancies in the board of directors of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, some of them caused by the change in the Presiding Bishopric in 1925, and asked that the conference take cognizance of and provide remedy for the condition. The body selected Albert Carmichael to succeed himself, and he was named for a term of seven years' service. M. H. Siegfried was chosen to succeed James F. Keir for a term of six years. G. W. Eastwood was chosen to fill the unexpired term of B. R. McGuire in case his resignation should be received.

Several ordinations were recommended to the conference by various pastors and others, and each was approved by unanimous vote. Those approved and the offices they are to hold are: R. E. Whitsett, elder; Elvin Y. Rawlings, priest; W. H. Stevens, deacon; Arthur Whiting, elder; Kenneth Thompson, priest; Matthew Cleland, priest; J. C. Mabbott, elder; Jesse Smith, priest; John Inman, priest; Perry L. Hiles, priest.

Notes from the Campus

Have you seen the large pine bookcase which stands against the north wall in the office of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences? This handsome piece of workmanship constructed by Brother J. W. Gunsolley is a recent addition to the office equipment. Having a capacity for more than six hundred books, it is rapidly being filled with books donated to the Ruth Lyman Smith Memorial Library—reference books for college and high school. Further donations of worth-while books will be appreciated and put to good use by the students of the Institute.

Several new books have been purchased, among them being

Parents and Their Problems, by Mary Harmon Weeks, a set in eight volumes. Everyone is welcome to take out a library card and make use of this collection of helpful books and magazines.

Faculty and students of the Institute agree that the reception given by the faculty at the Institute building Saturday night was a success. The crowd attending was not large because of the heavy rain which continued during the entire evening, but a merry time was had visiting, playing games, and eating the refreshments.

Interesting Personals

Bishop and Sister Roderick May celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary Tuesday evening, September 27, at their home on North Delaware Street. Half a hundred guests representing England, Canada, Scotland, and several of the States were present. Short talks were made by President Frederick M. Smith, Doctor Joseph Luff, Pastor C. Ed. Miller, Evangelist U. W. Greene, Bishop Ellis Short, Sister A. L. Yingling, William Crick, Thomas Hartnell, and William Ecclestone. Frank Russell led the singing during the evening. A quartet composed of Brother and Sister J. Charles May and Brother and Sister E. C. Harrington sang "Silver threads among the gold," and "When you and I were young, Maggie," Brother Harrington being in charge of the program.

Brother and Sister May were married in London, Ontario, September 27, 1877. Bishop May was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1850. He moved from there to Canada, later to Kansas City, and in 1884 he and Sister May moved to Independence. Brother May was appointed bishop to represent the church in the British Isles Mission from 1901 to 1911, and has spent thirty years in the bishopric. Brother and Sister May have five children, all living in Independence.

Sister Gertrude Copeland took train Sunday evening for her former home at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, called there by the death of her father, Asa Copeland. Sister Copeland expects to remain at Philadelphia for a few weeks, and during her absence Miss Paxton, her assistant, is in charge at the Independence Sanitarium.

Walnut Park

Sacramental Sunday proved to be another day of profit and enjoyment to the large number gathered for the eleven o'clock service. Pastor Howard Andersen, in charge, with twenty of the priesthood about him, felt impressed that the service was beginning in the right spirit and would become better as the time passed, which proved true, the spirit of consecration moving one after another to express his or her determination to put the work of the Lord first hereafter and endeavor to live a life worthy of the promises made to those who overcome.

At the opening of the meeting, Brother and Sister J. G. Clark presented their baby boy, John James, for the ordinance of blessing. B. J. Scott and J. W. Adams officiated.

At six o'clock the first Religio session since last June was held. Brother John A. Taylor was elected superintendent, other officers to be nominated by him next Sunday. Class work was begun, to be more thoroughly organized later. Seventy-six were counted present.

The evening speaker was Evangelist F. A. Smith, refreshing our memories again on the importance and truth of the Book of Mormon record.

The class in home nursing, conducted in the church basement on Friday afternoons, still holds nearly half a hundred interested students. The county nurse was especially pleased last week to see the room so well filled in spite of the rain. Others will be welcome.

Liberty Street

Brother Blodgett made the opening remarks at the sacramental service on Sunday morning. He spoke of the importance and sacredness of the occasion for which we had met, bringing to our minds the beautiful love that Christ has shown to the world and to mankind.

Elder Joseph Luff, one of our oldest residents of Independence, was speaker at the evening service. In his discourse, he spoke of the church in its early day, when it had been persecuted by the world, and compared it with the church today—an institution after which other churches are beginning to pattern. Many were the interesting truths and facts brought to the minds of the congregation by Brother Luff.

A large attendance was had at both services.

East Independence

Several Saints from this district attended the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," given at the Auditorium on Friday evening, September 23. Those who went felt the spirit of the place as they have many times when reading the Book of Mormon, and felt to rejoice that this book had been brought forth by the power of God. They also experienced joy in the fact that God is still speaking to his people in many ways.

On September 25 Brother U. W. Greene was the speaker at the morning hour. He spoke on the subject, "Book of Mormon." The story of the first vision, as published in Autumn Leaves, was read by one of the boys at the Sunday school hour, and Brother Greene had him and another boy come forward. He told of events in Joseph Smith's life referring to our boys as being about the age of Joseph at the time these events happened. His talk was very interesting and inspired the Saints with greater faith in God and in this latter-day work.

Services were not held at East Independence church in the evening, giving all an opportunity to go to the Auditorium.

During the week we believe nearly everyone visited the Harvest Festival and enjoyed the beauties there. God has abundantly blessed us. Why should we not bring of the best of our fruits and thus help in God's work?

Sunday, October 2, was a gloomy morning, but after the gloom and the rain of the past week the sun shone forth and gave cheer and comfort. Not many were at the sacramental service, but some helpful testimonies were borne.

On Sunday evening Evangelist U. W. Greene gave an interesting discourse upon the fulfillment of prophecy in regard to the Jews gathering back to Palestine, relating in an attractive manner many of his experiences while there as a missionary.

Saint Louis, Missouri

(Culled From the Weekly Bulletin)

Tuesday the 13th, President F. M. Smith visited the city and was present at the session. In the course of a few remarks he put stress upon the need of "teamwork."

At the special business meeting last Tuesday, the chief item of business was the decision to hold a series of missionary meetings beginning October 16. It is hoped we shall be able to have as the speaker for this occasion one of the traveling ministers. The services will be held Sunday mornings and evenings, Tuesday and Thursday nights, and if the congregation wishes, Friday nights also. These services will continue for three weeks.

As soon as we can be assured by the First Presidency that the minister chosen is available, we shall advertise and organize the publicity campaign.

We can begin now to prepare for these services: 1st. By each of us making the services a matter of personal thought and prayer. 2d. By deciding to be present at each service ourselves to secure all the good we can, and to begin now to invite some friend to come with us.

Remember October 16, an opportunity to deepen our spiritual life and carry out the instruction: "Let him that is warned warn his neighbor."

September 22, is the centennial of the finding of the metal plates from which was translated the matter composing the Book of Mormon. The general authorities of the church are seeking to arouse special interest in this book by giving this feature of the church's history special notice. To put the membership into more intimate touch with the Book of Mormon, its message and mission, the authorities seek to get as many as possible to pledge themselves to read this book before December 31 of this year.

Kansas City Stake

Wins Recognition With Contralto Voice

The Detroit News of September 20 gives more than a half column to an account of a vocal contest in the city under the auspices of Atwater-Kent Foundation to discover the city's most promising young voices. Out of more than two hundred singers registered, fourteen were chosen for the final contest. A young sister, formerly of Kansas City, Miss Stancey Edwards, now residing at 2542 Calvert Avenue, Detroit, won first place as contralto voice, and was awarded valuable prizes; she soon will go to other contests in the nation-wide search for the most promising young voice. The Saints of Kansas City are glad to know of her success.

Bennington Church

The pageant, "Remember Cumorah," was given at the Bennington Heights Church Sunday, September 25, at 7.45 p. m., under the direction of Sister S. S. Armstrong. The pageant was played by members from the Northeast Mission and Bennington Heights. The church was filled, and a few who could not find standing room inside stood in the yard and looked through the windows until the rain drove them to shelter.

The pageant was rendered well and was very interesting throughout. A goodly number of strangers was present, and the effect must have been equal to that of a series of sermons. To those who had heard of the recovery of the plates of the Book of Mormon from Hill Cumorah, it was a very fitting way to observe the anniversary of Joseph Smith's experience. Velton Goold played the part of young Joseph Smith.

Sister Viola Davidson, Brother Mason Stobaugh, and Brother Lyle Davis assisted with the singing; and Brother Albert Phillips operated the picture slides. These folks were from the Mount Washington Church.

The sisters have been exhibiting displays at the Harvest Festival at the Auditorium in Independence. Sister Pearl Ladd won a first prize ribbon for her doughnuts, Sister Georgia Binninger won a first prize ribbon for her cake, and Sister Mary Helm won a third prize ribbon for her pie.

Milburn Hull and Robert Cross were baptized Sunday, September 25.

Sister Ruby Eckard, Sister Isabel Clark, Brother Mason Stobaugh, and Brother Albert Phillips of Mount Washington gave a Religio program Sunday, September 11.

Quindaro Church

On the 4th of September Elder and Sister Richard Weaver, of Colorado Springs, partook of the sacrament with Quindaro Saints, Brother Weaver occupying the eight o'clock hour, using as his theme, "Am I my brother's keeper?" His sermon was very impressive.

On September 16 the Women's Department served a fish fry dinner which was very much enjoyed. The net proceeds amounted to $18.50. Sunday evening, September 18, they had the pleasure of listening to Bishop F. B. Blair in a very able discourse on "Colaborers with God."

September 19 all officers and teachers of the Sunday school met at a banquet dinner, which was served by the Women's Department stake superintendent. Joseph Ray Lloyd, and his wife who is superintendent of the Women's Department, were present. Many good thoughts were expressed by them and others for the betterment of the school. A home-coming and rally day was arranged for the following Sunday, which was duly observed. Class study was dispensed with, and all gathered in the auditorium, where was featured a splendid program, 132 being present, the offering totaling $38.77, which was turned into the Christmas offering fund. Bishop Blair occupied the 11 o'clock hour, using as a theme "Cumorah." Many beautiful tributes were paid to the Book of Mormon. At two p. m. many pioneers met, long members of the Quindaro Church, in prayer service. A good spirit prevailed. Continuing, after three, the pioneers indulged in some reminiscent talks, Doctor (Sister) Lewis, first Sunday school superintendent at Quindaro, and Elder and Sister John Tucker leading out on the "rise and growth of the Quindaro Church." The Religio study hour was given over to a program consisting of orchestra numbers, readings, and a short talk by Elder Emmett N. Palmer. At 8 o'clock Sister Eola Hawkins played the voluntary and Brother Otis Swart rendered "Largo," by Handel, very beautifully on the violin, accompanied by Sister Hawkins. The choir sang, "At the name of Jesus," followed by a sermon from Elder H. A. Higgins on an "authoritative message," which was presented in an affirmative manner. All went home feeling it was a day well spent in the service of the Master.

Fourth Church

On September 25 rally day was observed, there being 133 present. Elder John Sheehy, of Independence, Missouri, occupied the 11 o'clock hour; subject, "Christian religion," definition, "The Christ's way of living." He used a blackboard, outlining his subject: The dates 1620, 1776, 1827 were used. What do those dates mean to each one? The first, 1620, recalls Pilgrims' landing and freedom; 1776 liberty to worship God as you please; and 1827, Moroni, Joseph Smith, knowledge, and consequent advancement in all lines of endeavor, especially mechanically. Joseph Smith was prayerful and had a willingness to do what God wanted him to do. Sidney Rigdon was humble, honest, and had faith in God. Desire must come first, before we do anything. One can not be successful without prayer. In 1620 the Pilgrim Fathers had faith in God and prayer. In 1776 Washington went alone to pray over the war. In 1827 Joseph Smith prayed over religion. Prayer is communion with God. Let God talk to you. Don't do all the talking yourself. Oliver Cowdery had a qualification lacking in the other two, that of education. We can do only to the extent we are qualified. Saints should study. All can not have high school or college courses. All can read and study the Doctrine and Covenants, Book of Mormon, Church History, Bible, and many good books. Oliver Cowdery, being a school-teacher, was qualified to help finish the translating of the Book of Mormon. After the plates were translated, another thing was lacking—money. Martin Harris had that. He also had faith in God, and a desire to help as the others, so when commanded to help finance the printing, he willingly obeyed. The prophet; school-teacher, and farmer were thus working together to bring about God's purpose. David Whitmer, another witness, up to his dying hour stated that the Book of Mormon was true. Each witness could have had wealth, if only he would deny the divinity of the book.

At 8 p. m. the play, "Remember Cumorah," was rendered by the local members, two hundred being in attendance. God's Spirit was with those having parts. Sister Evelyn Worden directed.

Butler, Missouri

Butler is a very beautiful and progressive little city, the county seat of Bates County, and located sixty-five miles south of Independence on Highway 71. We have a noble band of Saints here who are ever willing to help carry on the gospel work. Our aim as a branch this winter is to help work the ground and be ready for a mighty harvest in the near future, whenever God's servants see fit to harvest. This is the branch that Brothers I. N. White, J. F.

Curtis, E. T. Atwell, F. L. Sawley, and J. I. Young helped to build years ago. We are still alive and working and watching and praying for the redemption of Zion.

The Department of Women has arranged with the library committee to place the Book of Mormon and other books of the church, as we see fit, in the public library of Butler.

MRS. W. A. SEARFUS.

Detroit, Michigan

Sunday afternoon, August 28, was a day long to be remembered by the Saints of Detroit. A joint ordination and sacramental service, comprising the five congregations in the city, was held at the Central Church.

T. S. Williams, city pastor, Louis Richards, Richard Uiman, Wilbert Wood, and Amos Surbrook, pastors of the East Side, Highland Park, River Rouge, and Wyandotte congregations, were in charge of the service.

The meeting opened by the congregation singing, "Blest be the tie that binds." Prayer was then offered by Elder Amos Surbrook. Elder Williams then read from Hebrews fifth chapter, which suggested the responsibility of the priesthood, after which sacrament was served to the people.

Following the administration of the sacrament we immediately entered into the ordination service. The ordination prayer was offered by Elder Louis Richards. Thirteen young men were ordained to the three grades of priesthood in the order of Aaron. Six priests, five teachers, and two deacons.

Walter Simpson, Melvin Russell, William Armstrong, priests; and John M. Garner and Alexander Cadwell, teachers, from Highland Park congregation. Lawrence Belrose, Roy Stark, Gerhart Gustavus, priests; Clinton Peck, teacher, and Benjamin Forsythe, deacon, from the East Side. Thomas Snobelin, of the Central Church, was set apart to the office of teacher. Howard Newman, of River Rouge, to the responsibility of deacon, and Orville Loeding, of Wyandotte, to the office of teacher.

These men were arranged in a half circle on the rostrum of the church, and behind them stood fourteen elders, who took care of the ordinations. Preceding the ordination of each man, Elder Williams would announce the name of the man, his office, and the congregation he was from.

Following the ordinations, Brother Williams called the attention of the audience to the fact that all the elders participating in the ordination service were actively engaged in the work of the church, and that the men ordained had in their submission to this ordinance signified their determination to be so engaged. He then invited all the members of the priesthood sitting in the congregation who were inspired to consecrate their lives to the good cause to come to the rostrum and join together in singing; "Jesus, I my cross have taken." After the brothers in the audience had responded, fifty-one men were counted on the platform.

A beautiful spirit prevailed throughout the meeting, and everyone present felt encouraged to go on with the work. Closing the service, the song of "Consecration" was sung, and prayer was offered by Elder T. S. Williams.

The church work in the city of Detroit is represented in a city-wide organization called the "consolidated branch." This is made up of five "divisions," which means that each division is composed of a certain section of the city. Each division has its place of meeting and the regular corps of officers that go with an organized branch.

It is planned to divide these "divisions" into a number of groups, over which an elder will preside. He will have under his direction other elders and priests, teachers and deacons. These men will see to visiting the Saints and will arrange for cottage meetings in the homes of the Saints or friends. These meetings are to be in the nature of prayer meetings for the Saints, or missionary, to reach the outside people. These services are planned to act as feeders to the meetings held in the churches.

The city or branch organization has a full corps of branch officers, whose duty it is to look after the work as a whole in the city. This makes possible the accomplishment of bigger projects than is possible under separate organizations. Our churches are located as follows: Central, 5858 Fourth Avenue; East Side, Louis and Crane; Highland Park, Louise and Joslyn; River Rouge, Orchard and Alexander. The Wyandotte people are meeting in a hall near First and Maple.

East Syracuse, New York

Syracuse Branch is so small there is not much to write about usually, but since our last writing we have had several visitors. Some we have never met before, others were old friends from the East. Doctor Sinclair, with his wife and son, from Somerville, Massachusetts, stayed one night here; he gave us one of his worth-while talks, and this family kept him busy answering questions until past the time when Latter Day Saints should be in bed.

We were also pleased to meet Brother and Sister D. T. Williams. They were on their way to Onset reunion.

August sacramental service was well attended, and a good feeling manifested. Elder Ulrich with his wife and children met with us on that occasion. They were visiting Brother and Sister Clarke. Some of our members attended Kirtland reunion. They have been telling us many of the good things they heard while there. Some of them have decided that if possible they will go again next year.

Members of the branch planned a surprise birthday party for Brother George Whitehead, father of our branch president. He was surprised all right. He said we "did it up brown that time," and to add to the surprise and pleasure of all, along came Brother George Robley. Ice cream and cake were served. All seemed to enjoy themselves.

With members from other branches our branch enjoyed the picnic held at Sister Elsie Elms's farm. It was a splendid place to go to have a good time.

Each family has a copy of the pamphlet on "Industrial Zion," and we are using them in our study period in Religion. Lay members wanted to know what it is all about, as well as the ministry.

We have had a convention and one institute this month, some of our members attending both.

Book of Mormon reading appeals to our members.

New Haven, Wyoming

September 24.—An all-day meeting, held September 18 at the Little Missouri Schoolhouse, brought together for that season of association about seventy-five Saints. The weather turned quite cool the preceding night, preventing some from coming and keeping others from arriving early, but by noon a goodly crowd was present from Alva, Moorcroft, New Haven, and Stroner, Wyoming. The hour being late, morning meeting was annulled and the first thing on the program was the bountiful basket dinner, to which all did justice.

Following the meal the Little Missouri Sunday School and the Monument Hill Sunday School, of Stroner, had a short session of school study followed by a program. A very good, short sermon on the divinity of the Book of Mormon, and Joseph Smith, by Brother Fred Cousins, of Moorcroft, followed the program.

Altogether we had a splendid day and feel better for the fellowship of being together. We are a little band of Saints up in this part of Wyoming like sheep without a shepherd, but we are trying to hold forth the gospel banner and raise our young people as God would have us do. We have Sunday school, and our great desire is to have preaching and sacramental services.

Brother J. D. Curtis came here two years and held services, baptizing several. He started the work, but it has been two years now since he was here the last time. We hope that he or some other elder may come and carry on the work begun by Brother Curtis.

MRS. T. C. GRAY.

Fall River, Massachusetts

September 25.—The first church service of this fall was held September 11, a sacramental service. Brother Moses Sheehy said that it was good to be home again. Attendance was good, considering the weather, as there were heavy thunderstorms of several hours' duration. The pastor's rheumatism being painful, Brother Alma M. Coombs carried the sacrament to the sick. At this meeting the second child of James D. B. Heap was blessed by its grandfather, James W. Heap, and by Elder John E. Rogerson. The baby was given the name of John Francis.

In the evening of September 11, Pastor James W. Heap spoke on the Book of Mormon. This was the first Sunday that he had an opportunity to urge the people to read the Book of Mormon.

The following Sunday, Pastor Heap was the morning speaker, and Elder John E. Rogerson occupied the hour in the evening. Some of Elder Rogerson's friends attended this service; one came and took part in the midweek prayer service.

The Sunday school is again selling the calendars for the Christmas offering. Next year the offering will probably be sent to the Bishop quarterly.

Fall River Saints were grieved to learn of the death of Edmund Roberts, of Brockton. Edmund was born in Fall River, moving to Brockton a few years later.

Sister Ruth Sheehy Baker and son, Alpha Nickerson Baker, of Boston, were guests of her father, Brother Moses Sheehy. Brother Charles Baker joined them over Labor Day, and they returned to Boston together.

Some of our Sunday school scholars seem interested in athletics. Sister Gertrude Howlett, sixteen years old, has won at least two silver cups for long distance swimming this summer. These cups were on exhibition in a store on Main Street. Brother Robert W. Coombs won one gold medal, two silver, and one bronze medal for different athletic events at the boys' camp he attended. Robert is almost twelve years old.

The writer noticed in the newspaper that Donald and Willard Gilbert won a number of events at the Boy Scout camp.

Sister Marjorie and Brother Charles Pillsbury attended the Baptist Vacation Bible School. They did some fine work in woodwork and reed basket weaving.

Bishop M. C. Fisher and wife called on Sister Halstead September 18. The following Sunday friends took Sister Halstead to their home for the day.

In the sacramental service Brother William Baldwin stated that he drove through Palmyra on his vacation.

Our organist, Sister Elizabeth Jackson, with her mother visited with her brothers in Colorado for one month.

All are urged to attend the young people's convention to be held at Boston in October.

Young People's Convention of Southern New England

The day is rapidly drawing near! Saturday and Sunday, October 8 and 9, will be red-letter days in the history of this district. The first young people's convention ever held in this part of the country will convene in Boston then.

The committee is working hard to make this convention the biggest and best possible, and we want to be sure of the cooperation, support, and attendance of all the young people. One hundred per cent attendance is what we are aiming at.

It has been definitely decided that Brother Floyd M. McDowell, of the First Presidency, will be with us. All of you who had the pleasure of being at Onset a few summers ago when Brother Floyd was there know what that will mean.

Saturday afternoon there will be a special sight-seeing tour to the famous Lexington-Concord battle ground. In the evening a very special entertainment will be given, which will not only be instructive and edifying, but of the highest degree of interest. Following this, the young people will just get together informally for an "acquaintance meeting."

Sunday morning will start with one of our famous prayer meetings. Such meetings as we have had many times at Onset just by ourselves! a chance to get together and "be ourselves in our own way." You all know the spirit of these meetings and the good that each individual can derive from them. Following this will be a round table discussion of our young people's problems, led by President McDowell. The afternoon will be the grand wind-up. Another meeting with Brother McDowell, in which he will tell us of the ideals of the youth of this church and what the youth of today can and should be doing.

As this convention will be the first and biggest thing of its kind that has ever been held here for the young people, we urge you all to plan to be here with us.

Southern Indiana Conference

The annual conference of the Southern Indiana District met September 17 and 18 with the Derby Branch, at 10 a. m. Elder Charles H. Fish, district president, of Indiana, was unable to attend; also Elder H. W. Burwell, of Louisville, Kentucky, counselor, was not present. Counselor J. A. Robinson, of Indianapolis, was present and called the meeting to order. Upon proper motion Brother Robinson was chosen to preside, and J. O. Dutton was associated with him in presiding. The attendance of the conference was very light, for the Saints from Louisville and New Albany failed to come. Several were in attendance from Indianapolis and with the Saints of Derby and some others made up the congregation.

Business was done in a good spirit and orderly manner. Election of officers resulted in the selection of J. A. Robinson for president. He chose as his counselors, Charles H. Fish and H. W. Burwell; secretary, Elder A. W. Gage, of Indianapolis; Bishop's Agent W. O. Robertson was made the custodian of the district funds. In the way of new business, the conference voted for a reunion in 1928, to be held in August, the time in August and the location to be left to a committee of five, the chairman being the district president. The committee also was empowered, in the event it did not find it possible or wise to hold the reunion, to so notify the district through the SAINTS' HERALD. The majority present favored Byrnsville as the place for the reunion of next year. The conference also adjourned to meet at Byrnsville in September, 1928, at the call of the district presidency.

The conference was made comfortable in the Saints' church, and I assure you that the Saints of Derby did to their credit all possible to make the visiting Saints at home. The Derby Saints, with some assistance, put on an entertainment for Friday night before the conference. This was appreciated by all present.

Preaching during the conference was by J. O. Dutton and J. A. Robinson. A real spiritual sacramental meeting was enjoyed by all on Sunday at 10.45. Quite a number of nonmember friends also attended the meetings of the conference.

Elder J. O. Dutton, with his years of experience in the presiding work, was able to assist in more fully coordinating the departments of the church work. He commenced a series of meetings to last eight days. Some friends from Derby asked him to come and hold meetings in the Methodist church at Derby. So he begins a series of meetings at that church Sunday night, to last a week or more. Thus we hope the work may grow as never before and that the Saints will realize they should be the light of the world.

Fanning, Kansas

The work is picking up in the different departments since cooler weather came. Some of our members visited in the Ozarks in Missouri. Others, some two or three carloads, visited old Far West one Sunday, and some expressed the desire to go back at a future date and take more of the membership along. They were impressed with the true effort made by our ancestors of the church in its early history.

Elder Samuel Twombly has been present several Sundays during the last quarter and preached for us each time.

Elder James A. Thomas, wife, and small son, of Lamoni, spent a few days in our branch, attending the midweek prayer meeting and Sunday school on the 18th. Brother Thomas occupied both morning and evening hours. He also assisted Brother Twombly in the ordination of two of our worthy brethren to the priesthood, namely Brother Charles Marsh to the office of priest and David Davies, deacon.

A basket dinner was enjoyed by the membership on the 18th in Tilden's pasture.

Quite a number have brought in fruits raw and canned, grain, and vegetables to be sent to Independence to be used in the Harvest Home Festival. Northeastern Kansas District hopes to have a booth there, and many plan to visit the festival.

A surprise was given Mr. Fred Marsh Friday night, the 23d. A large number was present; games were played and light refreshments served.

In order that they might witness the presentation of the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," several drove to Saint Joseph Sunday, the 25th. It was sacred, impressive, and well given, and was repeated the following Tuesday night for those who could not be admitted the first night and others who desired to come but were hindered on account of muddy roads.

The passing away of our young sister, Beulah Connard Brown, of Hiawatha, Kansas, saddened Saints here. She left a husband and family of small children, the youngest a babe a week old. Brother Samuel Twombly preached the funeral sermon there to a large gathering of Saints, relatives, and friends.

Brother F. G. Hedrick, of Lamoni, Iowa, our former pastor, visited last week a few days at Fanning, Troy, and Atchison, returning home Saturday, the 24th.

A son was born September 13 to Brother and Sister George Johnson, of Moray, Kansas. Sister Johnson before her marriage was Sister Ethel Dittmore.

Sperry, Oklahoma

September 22.—Sperry Branch has not reported for some time, but it has been busy and, we think, progressing during the time since our last report.

During the summer season fifteen have been added to the church by baptism. Meetings were held by Brother Gleazer and Brother Hubert Case.

All departments of our branch are engaged in interesting and profitable work. The Sunday school is maintaining its average attendance of from one to a hundred and fifty to two hundred. It is hoped that this record, and our church attendance also, can be improved now that many families have returned from summer vacations.

Thirty members were present at the meeting of the Department of Women Thursday. The women are serving dinner to the Sperry Commercial Club each Thursday of September.

ized for its winter meetings Sunday evening, September 4, after the summer's vacation. Brother Selma Stevens is the president of this department. Brother Stevens preached his first public sermon Sunday morning, September 18. He was attended by an encouraging portion of the Spirit.

The Temple Builders, under the direction of Sister W. P. Rumsey and Sister Hanthorne, entertained their parents with a reception in the basement of the church on the evening of September 23. They presented to their parents some of their aims for the year.

And that we might be active in all possible branches of work, Brother Rumsey, president of the branch, performed several weddings among the young people of the church this summer. Among the newly married ones are Miss Tressa Lord and Mr. James Magarity, and Miss Merle Tennery, of Tuttle, Oklahoma, and Ellis Rathburn, of Sperry.

Brother Rumsey reports encouragement in all phases of our church work. But he is not the sort of man who is ever satisfied. He keeps his branch pushing ahead for better things. We believe he is truly inspired and richly blessed in his work.

A Prayer

By Nell Weldon

Dear Lord, I do not pray for pomp or power,
But that Thy grace may fill each hour,
That my first aim in life shall be
To keep my soul in touch with Thee,
To grow in faith from day to day,
And ever for my brother pray;
To find my place, then qualify;
When asked to serve, to say, "I'll try."
To keep both mind and body pure,
That questionable things may cease to lure.
And so to live that men shall turn
From empty ways and seek to learn
The source of such great happiness
And shun the life that offers less.

Sister Fred Howe, Horton, Jackson County, Michigan, writes: "We have a seven-year-old boy who has a rupture. Trusses do no good. He was administered to two years ago but was not healed. The doctors advise an operation. But since asking God for aid, it seems wrong to me to ask for an operation. I am asking the prayers of the Saints in his behalf, that he may be healed if God wills it so."

Lest We Forget!

"Am pleased to know that the church appreciates the efforts of the boys during the war. The Nation as a whole seems to have suffered a bad lapse of memory from about the beginning of 1919 on to the present time."

Thus writes one of those to whom the November number of Autumn Leaves is dedicated. Many others have expressed their approval and commendation of such an armistice-memorial number, in which the ex-service men and women of the church will be featured.

Communications and contributions have been received from Canada, England, Germany, and Australia, outside of the United States.

AUTUMN LEAVES

Satisfaction

It is one of the satisfactions of life to have investments that turn out right—that keep every dollar of principal safe and that pay a good income with un-failing regularity.

A church bond has back of it the moral integrity and good will of "a people" in addition to tangible resources of property and money.

Description of Bonds

- $25 Baby Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, payable annually.
- $50 Thrift Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $100 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $200 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $1,000 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.

The $100 bonds may be purchased by paying $10 down and $10 per month until the face value of the bond is paid. On $25 and $50 bonds any amount of $1 or more will be accepted as part payment. The church will allow 5% interest to the purchaser on such installment payments, when full payment of the bond is made. Installment payments will easily and quickly secure a church bond if you do not have the money to pay cash. Government bonds will be accepted at their market value in exchange for church bonds.

Awake and Fearless

Several times in recent months in speaking publicly to the Saints I have used the parable of the ten virgins, emphasizing a point sometimes overlooked, viz, that all were asleep when the alarm was sounded. Many times this parable has been used by our ministers to impress upon the audiences the importance of preparation, and the lesson is one not to be lost to view. But it has occurred to me that mayhap the fact that the parable presents the ten all asleep is a prophetic warning that in the latter days lethargy will creep into the midst of the Saints, and that even those who have been prepared may be caught off guard at a time when alertness should characterize the workers. And it may be said that those not on the alert are more likely to be upset by false alarms.

We have every reason to believe that we live in a day when the forces making away from God and his church are many, and that they will increase in number and power. It behooves us therefore to be awake and careful, and on our guard lest we listen to those who would lead us away from our duty and allegiance; and we become negligent of duty and careless in conduct and attitude.

A brother wrote us from Calgary, as follows: "I have been strongly impressed by a thought I want to tell you about. As I went about my work I found myself possessed with a desire both to whistle and to sing, 'The old, old path.' But I continuously found myself going wrong when I came to the line, 'And I fearless walk with the Nazarene,' for I was using the word careless in place of fearless, and suddenly I was struck with the thought that that is exactly what I had been doing. I was trying to walk with the Nazarene but was very careless. And I wonder if that is about the case with many of us. Let us go on with the Nazarene, and let us be fearless but not careless."

A nice little lesson that! Too many things tend to make us careless as we walk the path of duty, and growing careless we look about for excuses to salve our conscience. Then is when we are prone to say, "Well, Brother X is to blame, for he has done something I don't like," etc.

To walk with a "conscience void of offense," we must stay close to the line of duty, and be alert to the demands of a faith that is a living force and that will not permit us to be lulled into a lethargic condition.

Awake, Saints, and "fearless walk." F. M. S.

Some Things Our Ministers Should Do

Number 2

From a poem a passage is so often quoted that it has almost become a proverb. The line is to the effect that we should count that day lost whose setting sun finds us with no good deed done. This should apply to all, but how much more strongly it applies to those who hold the priesthood! They have taken upon themselves the responsibility of work. They have promised to "magnify their office." And that means to do something for the advancement of the interests of the church. No day should pass without some task accomplished for the cause. And for the ministry we might paraphrase the lines from the poem and say, You may count that day lost to which you must look back and say, On that day I did nothing in my ministry.

And so I would say that something each minister and officer should each day do at its close is to look back and survey the day in the light of his calling, and so deport himself that he can each day lie down for rest with the knowledge that he has done at least one task, and that well.

The foregoing has been suggested by a "remark" in the report of a "district president." He is an elderly man, active, though at an age when he might be superannuated, yet he "feels encouraged to labor." The "remark" he made is as follows:

"It is here as in many branches, the officers have to labor for their support and can not neglect their work, and what time they do have they can call their own they often fail to use wisely, and then do but little work in the church, and some do none."

Terse, that, and too true frequently. Even those who labor for daily sustenance through wages or profits, have time away from their business, and from those who have accepted ordination it can well be expected that to the Lord's business they will give some time of each day. And they can if they will. In choosing that to which they will give time outside their business, they should not forget that they have promised to give service to God in the ministry.

Let each day see some task done for the church and God.

The Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences

It seems only a short time, though several years ago, that a small group of persons in Independence organized a teaching force and gathered around them in improvised classrooms in the basement and various corners of the Stone Church, and later in Bartholomew Hall, groups of students who were desirous of improving their talents by systematic study. Nominal fees were charged the students, and those teaching were giving their services without remuneration other than the satisfaction which comes from the knowledge that others have been helped by the services rendered. There were perhaps a half dozen such teachers, and the number of subjects taught was not large, while the classes ranged in numbers from three or four students in some of the less popular subjects, to forty or fifty in the popular ones. Interest was usually greater at the beginning of the year, dropping off sharply till the numbers in each class were reduced to the "stickers."

But each year saw an increase in numbers both of students and faculty in the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, as it was called, and also in number of subjects taught. When the Campus was bought and the Institute moved into the building on the Campus, the school was duly incorporated, and an expansion in scope of work and interest at once took place.

On a visit to the Institute last week to attend a "faculty reception," I learned some interesting facts which I want to share with my readers. The group of half dozen teachers beginning the work has grown till today there are fifty-three teachers on the faculty, practically all of whom are cheerfully giving their services. By a strange coincidence, there are fifty-three courses or subjects being taught. Exclusive of the music school, there are enrolled three hundred and seventy-six students, one hundred seventy-five of whom are in the religious education department, eighty-six in the high school, twenty-two in the junior college, sixty-three specials, and thirty in the kindergarten. In the music school there are approximately six teachers and seventy-nine students, and a school of expression with one teacher and twelve pupils is on the point of expanding into one of six teachers and a large number of students. This interesting group of workers, students and faculty, make of the Campus and Institute a busy place.

Education of its people with definite ideals always in view is ever of prime interest to the progress of a society towards its goal. It is therefore essential that we who are looking forward to Zion and its improved social organization shall have our educational institutions in which are dominant our spiritual ideals and cultural standards. I am happy, therefore, to see the evidences of the steady progress of the Institute towards the university I hope ultimately to see emerge from it. We need it, and I think I can see where are the elements from which it can be built or formed.

I feel that I can say with certitude that the educational work of the church is onward. May its progress continue steadily and surely.

I appreciate the good work of the devoted workers at the Institute.

A Branch President Moves—and Leaves His Flock

I have on a few occasions spoken of the nomadic proclivities of our people, and I have wondered if we are more inclined as families to move about than are other peoples. Perhaps the matter has come to my attention in a way to emphasize the fact that we do move about a great deal. Official reports as well as personal observations have brought it before me. Does it indicate a restlessness which is characteristic, or does it come from economic pressure and have to do with industrial conditions? And there has arisen before me another question closely allied, Do our families better their conditions by the moves?

If Zion is to be, we must develop habits of stability which will at least keep up in the regions round about, for social and economic progress demand something more than groups of nomads.

There is still another aspect of this disposition to move which has come to the fore on a number of times. Such is the instance I now cite. A district president in reporting says:

"D— Branch is desolate. Elder S— moved to R—. About eight or ten women are trying to hold the Sunday school together. I have been trying to get volunteers from other branches to help them, but the distance and cost are great."

Of course it is probable that the elder mentioned was under the necessity of moving away, and doubtless he felt deeply grieved to leave his flock shepherdless. So what could he do? There have been a number of instances where branch presidents have consulted us concerning moves, even to Zion and the regions round about, where the moves have been postponed because of the apparent needs of the branch, and it has always pleased me to see willingness to put branch needs and service ahead of personal affairs. And why not? Has not our call to the ministry indicated that such would be expected?

As we approach nearer to the consummation of our work, the question of the needs of branches and the branch membership in outlying districts and regions will constantly be coming up for attention, and the moving to Zion by families who are in condition to make the move, must be considered in the light of what will be the effect upon those left behind. In some instances I have advised ministers to remain where they were, in order to help the branch till the time would come for them all to "come to Zion."

And this question of moving of whole branches in the right way and towards Zion must have more attention than we have given it in the past. Let not your gathering be in haste, but let the way be prepared before you, comprehends or includes not individual needs and conditions alone, but the interests of others as well—the greatest good to the greatest number.

And my admonition to the church is: Let the matter of family change of residence be wisely studied, in all cases where possible, with the correlated good of Zion, district, branch, and family in view. We should not be simply shifting nomads, but a people with definite purpose moving with their eyes on Zion and their hearts set on the church and her best interests.

Sunday School Convention in England

There comes to us the printed program of a Sunday school convention recently held at Leicester, England, Midland District. Inasmuch as this is the first convention of its kind in the district, and because of the character of its program, it becomes of interest as a distinct indication of progress.

The convention comes, in the words of its committee, "as the first tangible and cooperative response of the district to this steadily increasing demand for Sunday school workers that are more sincere and more consecrated, for Sunday school training that is more serious and more intelligent, and for Sunday schools that are more vital and living."

The purpose of the convention is centered around a deeper appreciation and understanding of childhood, and the program was planned in a threefold theme: The child, its life, home, Sunday school, social environment, and its church; The Sunday school, its organization, lesson, handwork, and its order of service; The Sunday school workers, their characters, social contacts, qualifications, and their consecration.

Talks based on this theme, demonstrations of lesson work, and devotional and musical services made up the activities of the two-day convention. The entire effort reflects a realization of the vital importance of the formative years in the development of character, and a determination to consecrate intelligent service to the task of understanding and guiding child life.

We shall expect to hear of good results from the Midland District Sunday school convention.

Independence Centennial

Independence celebrated for six days, beginning October 2, her first centennial. The first day of this civic celebration and the last day of the Harvest Festival were the same day, October 2, and many people were interested in these two events and vainly trying to decide to which they should give first attention.

The Senior Editor spoke in our last number of the possible development which lies before Independence, situated favorably and endowed wonderfully with natural wealth, climate, etc., and I am of the opinion that the six days of celebration just closed have demonstrated such strong sentiment, sustained interest, and competent organization and administration as to justify belief that the years just ahead shall disclose an advancement commensurate with the existing opportunities.

Thousands of people from near and far thronged the little city's streets on Monday, and it seemed that they must have found something interesting and satisfying, for they came again and again, each day seeing large attendance, greater effort to put forth and to enjoy, until the climax on Friday, which lasted to the last minute of the day.

Saturday morning the workers commenced taking from buildings and streets the birthday robes, consisting largely of the national colors, but supplemented in several ways, and commerce again rules, and the spirit of progress grows.

Historical and educational features predominated in the celebration, entering largely into the six parades, every one of which was interesting and important, and the pageant, presented to more than six thousand people in four evenings, and which would have been witnessed by four times the number if accommodations could have been provided.

We were shown what has occurred in the first hundred years of Independence life. The presentation suggests our future opportunities, and the Saints should feel their share of the responsibility of improving these. It is not enough for us to be law keepers and merely good citizens. Energy and intelligence must characterize our occupancy and make virile our law keeping.

The lessons of the first hundred years should be pressed into service in making the coming years provide here the best place to live and work and the most favorable place for the development of Christian character.

October 30 Is College Day

Annual observance of College Day comes this year on October 30. Every publication and every officer of the church should be deeply interested in the church institutions, and Graceland College is one of the most important of these.

On this day special speakers, special music, and special features should set before the people the important place our institution of higher learning should occupy in the church, and delineate its condition and special needs.

We of the HERALD staff are fondly anticipating that even though industrial conditions have been unfavorable, the people of the church will increase the amount of money previously raised on College Day, that the young of the church may have a chance to develop the faculties possessed, and fit themselves to be workers either in or for Zion.

Book of Mormon Contest

Before the Department of Publicity begins sending out the special information leaflets and helps to contestants, everyone who contemplates entering the contest should send the information to that department.

Every day's mail is bringing the names of some who have decided to enter the contest, and we know of no method by which one may more surely stabilize his knowledge of the Book of Mormon than by entering and applying one's self to the work of writing upon one of the topics chosen by the authorities.

It is safe to say that seventy-five per cent of the force of ministers now in the active missionary work have never written an article upon the subject of the Book of Mormon. Not one of these should fail to make this contest his attempt to carefully formulate his thought and set it down for the perusal of others.

Surprises may be in store for these men of public experience. Some youth or maiden may claim the laurels and some obscure, isolated church member may be able to demonstrate the fact that ability to understand and present the work does not depend

Valuable Old Prints Found

The Graphic Arts Bureau this week received two very unusual photographs. They are from Julia Farr, of Independence. The pictures are of Sister Farr's grandfather and grandmother. Their name was Napier. The one of Grandmother Napier was taken when she was twenty-four years old, and that of her husband when he was twenty-eight. Brother Napier was the blacksmith who owned the shop at Haun's Hill. He was killed and thrown down the well. They were an unusually fine-looking couple. Both pictures are in profile.

The bureau is delighted to get these, another connecting link with the past. Eventually the bureau will copy these old prints it is receiving and make enlargements from them, and they will be on exhibition at the General Conferences.

upon close touch with those of like faith. The contest is open to all. The rules of the contest are quite simple. The premiums or prizes are worth while. But the greatest good to the contestant will come outside the material reward, and this greatest good each contestant may obtain.

We are looking for some real work to be done by Book of Mormon students within the next three months.

For further information write the Department of Publicity. Very soon leaflets will be sent to the participants, and your name should be on the list. Learn your Book of Mormon and then learn to write of it.

Let reverence for the laws be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap; let it be taught in schools, in seminaries, and in colleges; let it be written in primers, spelling-books, and in almanacs; let it be preached from the pulpit, proclaimed in legislative halls, and enforced in courts of justice. And, in short, let it become the political religion of the nation; and let the old and the young, the rich and the poor, the grave and the gay of all sexes and tongues and colors and conditions, sacrifice unceasingly upon its altars.—Abraham Lincoln.

The Universal Ministry

BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

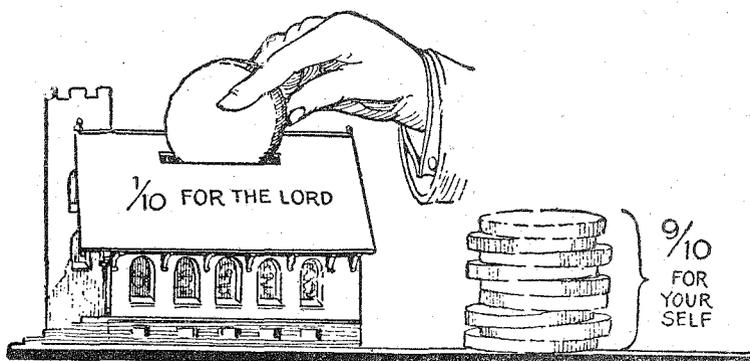

When we speak of the work of the ministry, many people think of the praying and of prayers and the preaching of sermons only. While it is true that these duties belong to the minister, they do not comprise all of his work. The scriptures inform us that we are workers together with God; that is to say, we are to work with the divine and with the human for the bringing about of conditions that shall make for the mutual good of man. We should acquaint ourselves with the definitions of the word ministry. We find that it has to do with one who serves, one who represents a people before a foreign court, one who intercedes, one who transacts business for another. The thing we are concerned about is being able to get our thoughts clothed in words that carry definite ideas. The term ministry is sometimes confined to a very narrow view in the minds of the masses, but I wish to refer to the importance of the universal ministry. The voice of inspiration to this church was: "All are called according to the gifts and callings of God unto them." It is the duty of the farmer or the banker or the business man, as well as the preacher, to minister to the needs of the people. The universal ministry includes and involves the entire membership of the church. The Scriptures say that every man should give according to that which he has and not according to that which he has not. The Christian religion requires that everyone should learn to labor where he is and according to the means and ability possessed by him.

There are many churches in the world, each having its own program and trying to the best of its understanding and ability to put into operation that program. This is a commendable thing and deserves the consideration and respect of mankind. But everything must be measured in the relative sense; that is to say, if we with a program that we hold to be superior to that of any other church do not demonstrate more fully than they the principles of the gospel of Christ as translated in terms of human behavior, we have nothing ahead of them. The manner in which we execute our belief is of much greater importance than that which we claim to believe. To argue that the church believes in the fullness of the gospel spells nothing if my life does not demonstrate to men that I believe it. If I demonstrate to my fellow men that I am applying the principles I profess to believe, it will mean much in the way of convincing them of the superiority of my philosophy.

There has been committed unto this church a great program. We have been placed in trust with a responsible ministry. The supreme issue is: What are we doing with this responsibility, this ministry? Our program is intended to teach the proper relationship between man and man, and between man and God. It is intended to teach man the proper uses of things about him. The same voice that sings praises may also curse both man and God. It is the use of the voice rather than the voice itself that becomes either a blessing or a curse to man. It is not the things I possess or fail to possess, but the uses I make of the things I possess that determine my success or failure. A small amount properly used is of much more value in the redemption of Zion than a great abundance improperly used. The manner in which I employ my time, my means, my talent, is the thing that is to determine whether I am an asset or a liability in the task of building Zion. The widow to whom the Prophet Elijah was sent had but little at her disposal, but every reader of the Bible knows that it was sufficient for the needs of the prophet, herself, and her son until the day that God sent rain upon Israel. She made the proper use of the things at her disposal. The word of the prophet to her was, "Make me a little cake first, and then for thyself and son, and as the Lord God of Israel liveth, the meal shall not waste in the barrel nor the oil in the cruse until the Lord God send rain upon Israel." The divine program provides that the firstlings of the flock and the first fruits of the field are the Lord's. If I will honor the Lord and use the little that I possess in the manner designed of him, then and not until then can I expect to receive his full favor and blessing. The universal ministry requires that each and every one shall do his best to make operative the program committed unto us.

The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, and he is not likely to let us prosper in our efforts if we know the way and fail to walk therein. If we know how he would have us use the things we possess and do not use them in that way, we are retarding the success of our program rather than enhancing it. The manner in which I execute the work intrusted to me determines my place in the completion of the work.

A universal ministry means that each man should be busily engaged first in learning his particular duty, then in doing it. The time of each person should be utilized to accomplish a given purpose. All the fruits of labor should be directed to a given end. All the talent and learning that can be acquired should be directed towards the accomplishment of a worthy cause. All there is in us, all we are able to acquire, all that may be possessed or utilized by us, should be consecrated to the cause of Zion. The success or failure of any man will be determined by the uses he makes of his time. He who is in the habit of killing time is defeating his own best interests, and is a hindrance to our common cause. Time belongs to God, and he is going to hold me responsible for the uses I make of that which he has given me.

Christ came into the world not to be ministered unto but to minister, and if we are to be his followers, his representatives among men, we should be on the same mission. We should be learning daily new and effectual ways in which to perfect this mission. The wonderful thing in the teaching of Christ is that he never asks us to do the impossible thing, nor does he ask us to work with things beyond our reach. He always asks us to use the thing within our reach, that which we possess. He told Moses to use his rod. He told the disciples to feed the multitude with the five barley loaves and the two fishes. His instruction is, "Use the thing you have, but use it as I direct." Here is the great lesson in the feeding of the multitude with the five loaves and two fishes. The men brought what they had to the Master and received his blessing upon it. Then they received it from his hand with his blessing and used it according to his direction. Not only were the multitudes fed, but the disciples gathered up of that which remained more than they had in the first place. This never could have been possible had the disciples used the food in any other way than in keeping with the direction of the Lord. Only as we learn to be obedient to the divine law, only as we come to do the thing that the Lord requires of us, are we able to succeed in our labors. I can do only what I am able to do, and that is all the Lord requires of me, but that much he does require. The universal ministry means everyone doing his individual work in the manner designed of God; performing his task, whether great or small, in cooperation with every other one in the group, the church, and by this means making universal the ministry of helpfulness. This is the program of Zion, for when we learn to do our work, use the means at our disposal, in keeping with the divine instruction, we will have Zion in all her splendor and beauty.

We are told that there is an abundance of all things, that there is plenty and to spare, and that the Lord has purposed to provide for his Saints; but he says, "It must be done in my way." The universal ministry requires every man to become a worker with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all. For years the men of this church have taught that in order to have their sins remitted men must respect the law of faith in God and in his word, repentance and baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the receiving of the Holy Ghost. They have taught that without respecting this law no one could enter the kingdom of God. Now we are confronted with the immensity of the program that is committed unto us in the gospel, and some of us stagger at it. But the program is just the same; it is simple when fully analyzed. When we are willing to do what the Lord requires, we shall be able to build Zion; and until we are willing to do what he has required, we shall not be able to build Zion.

We need land to carry out the program, but the possession of land is not enough. We need people, but the gathering of the people is not sufficient. We need money, but the earning of money is not sufficient. We need education, but education in itself will not do it. We need land, money, and education rightly used by a people who are fully dedicated and consecrated to the cause of Zion. The efforts of the universal ministry must be directed toward social righteousness rather than individual perfection. It matters not how good a man may be, if he is not able to cooperate with his brother for the welfare of the group, he is not prepared to help in the building of Zion. Yes, one must be good in order to have a part in the game of Zion building, but he must be good for something to carry into effect that program. We need educated men and women, but their education must teach them how to work together with God in order to be qualified for making practical the program of Zion. Ministry implies consecration to the task, and in this universal ministry every man should be fully consecrated to his work. With the same sacredness that a prayer is offered, or a sermon is preached, he should perform his work for the glory of God and the blessing of mankind. Everyone must sense his relationship to God and to his fellow men. Doing this, he will see that he is "Slavery"

BY A. B. KLAR

The word slavery has come to my mind so forcefully at various times that I feel it might be of some comfort to those that are not enjoying perfect freedom to read the following:

We think of such great men as Lincoln, who by placing his signature to the Emancipation Proclamation struck the shackles from the arms of over a million people. To what could we attribute this great humanitarian act? Heredity, environment, and contact? Lincoln had clean-cut lineage, a pure, God-fearing father and mother. Close application and contact with nature and the best of books, foremost among them being the Bible. When but a mere boy his heart was touched, no doubt, by the divine Spirit, and a great many things that he saw in life were not pleasing to him. History records that on one of his trips to the South when but a mere boy he witnessed the sale of human beings from the slave block, where fathers, mothers, and children were sold the same as the beasts of the field. He then made a vow that if ever he had the opportunity to strike this fiendish business he would strike it with a blow that would end it for ever. He said he would strike a servant of the Most High and is required to do all in his power for the carrying out of the divine program. He should remember that in his particular place, be it whatsoever it may, he is able to minister to the needs of his fellows and in this way become a true minister standing in the stead of Christ.

Jesus said, "The works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me, that my Father hath sent me." This is the way any matter may be tested. If we are to be able to convince mankind that we have a philosophy superior to that taught by any other religious body, we must do the things that Christ has laid upon us, viz, the redemption of Zion. It means demonstrating to humanity the right uses of the things within our reach. It means carrying into effect the program so completely that the nations will be constrained to say, "Let us go up unto the mountain of the house of the Lord, and he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths." Practice is always better than theory, and when this people is willing to demonstrate the work that has long been believed in theory, the whole world will stand and behold with admiration the things God does for his people.

it hard, and the opportunity came. How proud he must have felt when his hand touched the document that gave so many people their freedom.

This ended the state of slavery in America so far as it refers to keeping the people in bondage, but there are many places where slavery is existing even at the present time. We have something like two million slaves in Abyssinia, two million in China, and over a million in different parts of Africa. A feeling of horror comes over us when we think of such a condition prevailing in the world. How thankful we should be that we are in a land of liberty. Here we can worship God according to the dictates of our individual consciences, we can have a home, loved ones, the pure gospel, which are only a preamble of heaven on earth.

Diverse Kinds of Slavery

There are slaves of illiteracy, slaves of heredity, slaves of environment, slaves of soul-killing amusement, slaves of preventable accidents in industry, slaves of parental disease, and above all, slaves of diseases that are acting upon the human family throughout the world.

In the great land of freedom, we at the present time have over one hundred million people, slaves of the various diseases, over ninety-five million entirely preventable. The promise of the gospel (if we comply with its teachings) will give us freedom. The writer is just foolish enough to believe that it means freedom in every phase of life—not only spiritual, but physical as well. One brother remarked, "The gospel takes in all," and if you are not physically in the pink of health, don't you feel you are not having your full freedom?

After all, is it not a fact that one is only as strong as the weakest part of his body. It is a demonstrated fact that a chain is only as strong as the weakest link. I believe this, to a certain extent, could be applied to the Saints. We are welded together as a great chain by the gospel, and as a people are only as strong as our weakest member. How often we have heard statements during a funeral discourse, that God has taken him or her away. In my younger days this annoyed me very much. I always believed God was a God of love, and why should he take a young mother away from a family of little children and leave them alone in this cold, sin-cursed world, when her protection, care, and love are needed so much. Has this ever come to you? I can almost hear the faint whisper, "Indeed it has." The grim reaper has struck so close to home that sadness is in your heart. God pity the man that has no sympathy for others, whether in the family or out; whether in the church or out. The Lord wants the Saints to be a great family of love; he wants them to be humanitarians. If there is anything that will bring indigestion or gout to a branch, it is selfishness and jealousy. If ever you saw the footprints of ignorance, these two diseases certainly left them.

I Love the Saints

If I love a Saint or a friend, would not my heart go out in sympathy to one that is not enjoying physical freedom as well as spiritual? I believe my field of labor is to help the Saints and the public along the physical line. It has been revealed that I have been raised up for this very purpose.

I believe that you have faith in the statement, "The glory of God is intelligence." Disease, as a rule, can be traced to two conditions, lack of intelligence; or, indifference. I certainly believe that God wants his people to be healthy, as health is a natural condition, and sickness is the opposite.

What Is Disease?

Scientifically speaking, disease is simply a disarrangement of cell matter. The disarrangement of cell matter of the body is through ignorance of the laws of nature, as a rule.

Science and research throughout the world have proved, beyond a shadow of doubt, that ninety-five per cent of our present ailments can be traced to the food problem; diseased, denatured, unnatural, indigestible food. From the very inception of the human family, God tells what was designed and created as their maintenance. God spoke unto man (Genesis 1:31, Inspired), "Behold, I have given you every herb, bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth; and every tree in the which shall be the fruit of a tree, yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat." Genesis 3:24 stated, "Thou shalt eat the herb of the field"; and again, God created wheat for man (not meat); bread (real bread made from the entire grain) should be the staff of life. We are commanded to pray for daily bread, but let it be the real bread.

Then we have that wonderful revelation given to the church in this last dispensation to save his chosen people from pain, disease, and premature death. Every Saint should carefully read the 86th section whenever the opportunity affords. What a striking statement the second verse makes: "All wholesome herbs God hath ordained for the constitution, nature, and use of man." Meat should only be used sparingly. When? In time of winter, cold, or famine.

The Lord makes the statement that if we are obedient it is pleasing to him. Is it not a fact that if we do not do these things it is displeasing to him? Many of the Saints are careless in the use of meat, using practically the same amount whether it is winter or summer, regardless of famine or anything. Don't you think this should be given more serious consideration? I am satisfied you are not willing to willfully or maliciously commit acts (in eating) that are displeasing to God. It makes a feeling of shame come over one when he thinks of this in the proper light.

It is a very common thing for a person to hear the Saints say, "I love God"; but when they do things of this kind it does not look as though they love the Lord as much as they should, for the statement is, "If you love me, keep my commandments."

Notice the great promise God made in the third verse: "All Saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive—" What? A great blessing. Health in the marrow of their bones. And what else will they find? Wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures. And what more? They shall run and not be weary, shall walk and not faint. What more? The greatest and most enjoyed message that has ever reached the hearts of mothers and fathers is the promise that the destroying angel shall pass by their children. Is this not truly marvelous? Think of the dreaded disease that is striking the children through this land of ours. Children are becoming paralyzed, many disabled for life.

Saints of God, how long, oh, how long will it be before we will heed our Father's counsel? Why be a slave to unnatural craving of the appetite? Why not live as God wants us? Too stubborn! and then in the hour of sorrow we cry out in agony, "My God, why hast thou forsaken me and my loved ones?" In many cases this condition could be prevented if we lived as God has designed we should. Use wisdom in selecting your foods, that they may contain the elements to rebuild the body and keep the tabernacle, wherein dwelleth the spirit, in the pink of health. The Lord wants you to be active. No idler is to have part in Zion, and very often we are caused to be idle because we cater to the desires of the appetite for food.

May God give every reader that desire in the heart, that power of mind and body, that he may do only those things that will keep him in freedom, not only physically but spiritually, and in every other way.

There is one thing in the world that people fear more than massacre, even more than death—and that is boredom. . . . They are getting bored with the era of understanding and international reasonableness that we have set up.—M. de Rouvray.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

The Minister's Use of the Press

One of the most influential and least used forces for the spread of the Christian conception of life and for the promotion of social progress is the minister's intelligent use of space in the newspapers of his city. There has probably never been a time in the history of this country when the secular press has been so approachable with a vital religious message from the intelligent clergy as it is today. Newspapers, great and small, daily and weekly, are interested in religion as a subject of news value as they have not been for many decades, if ever before.

There are, however, certain conditions which must be scrupulously met by ministers who would use this potential force before newspapers will be interested in anything they may have to say upon the subject of religion or social progress. It is the purpose of this article to name some of these conditions and make certain suggestions which the minister who would use the secular press in furthering the cause of religion and social service must rigidly observe. Failing to do so, he must inevitably fail to get the recognition of his local press and consequently fail to get his message into its columns.

In the first place, the minister must have something to say which not only he thinks is worth saying, but which impresses the editor as being of value to his reading public. Unless he can say what he has to say in a way to convince the editor of its value to his paper, he need not expect it to find a place there. The next requirement is none the less important: The minister must seek to know and also cultivate the friendship of the newspaper men of his city. He must regard them as being men of like qualities with himself, seeking, as he himself is, to serve the people of the community. A large number of newspaper men, we must believe if we know them, are men of high ideals and honestly desire to serve the best interests of their respective communities. That they differ from the minister at times in what constitutes the best interests of the community is nothing against them. They may be right and the minister wrong. At any rate, newspaper men have as much right to their convictions as the preacher has to his.

There is one point at which too many ministers who want to get their views before the public make a serious mistake. It is the desire which some have for self-publicity. Too many preachers assume that the value of any views which they might express in their local papers is bound up with the use of their own names. In nearly every city there is a minister who is for ever seeking publicity for himself, and who finds fault with the papers if they do not publish everything he submits for publication. Among newspaper men, such ministers are a joke and are distrusted. We do not say that the minister's name should always be withheld. There are times, and no one knows it better than the newspaper man, when his name may well appear in connection with a cause in which he is interested or with views which he expresses. But often the minister, if he has ability and taste and tact, can express himself in an editorial way, particularly in the smaller city papers where the editorial staff is not always particularly well-manned for a public expression on every question because of a lack of financial resources making it possible to have several men in the editorial department who give all their time to editorial work. If the minister knows the editor of one of these papers personally and has impressed him with his ability to say some things well editorially, frequently the editor will appreciate an editorial from his pen on some worth-while subject. The worth of any such statement is all the greater because it is not a signed statement, because it appears as an editorial and not in the editor's "Mail Bag" department. And if the friendship between the minister and editor is close enough and if the minister can express himself acceptably, he will often be able to get a needed message over to a reading public with much more force than if he contented himself with saying the same thing in his pulpit or by writing a signed letter to the editor's "Mail Bag" column.

In these days when there is a news value in religion, many subjects of more than casual interest will suggest themselves to the intelligent minister which might be entirely missed by the newspaper men themselves who are not expected to be experts in the field of religion. This is particularly true of special days and seasons connected with religious observances and subjects which they suggest; for example, Holy Week, Good Friday, Easter, Children's Day, Thanksgiving, and Christmas. One minister suggested to the editor of a paper in his city that, if he desired it, he would gladly prepare an article of about three hundred words each day during Lent under the heading "Lenten Thoughts." One of the gospels was selected for the study, and during the period of Lent a study comprising about twelve thousand words was put down in daily messages, about the same amount of space being used each day under a different subject and text, but always with the same box heading. During the same period he wrote editorials on "Lent," "Palm Sunday," "Holy Week," and "The Spirit of Easter," these editorials appearing on the days most appropriate. Sermons, not delivered from the pulpit, were also published during the period at the appropriate dates on "The meaning of Lent," "Palm Sunday Hosannas," and "The spiritual resurrection." Who, it may be asked, is so well qualified by training and religious interest to interpret Lent, Good Friday, Palm Sunday, and Easter as the Christian minister?

The average minister is inclined, particularly if he has not been accustomed to preparing material for the newspapers, to think that such work requires too much of his time and, after all, is not worth the time and effort. This depends, of course, upon the minister's willingness and ability to make it worth the time and effort put into it. His style must be readable, with something of the newspaper flavor. His subject matter must be interesting to the average reader, and his method of stating what he wishes to say must be clear and to the point. He must not ignore sound scholarship, but he need not, should not, attempt to show great learning. He has a message to get over and may content himself with a popular presentation of his message. Much of it, and this applies particularly to editorials, may not be known as coming from his pen. But it is none the less worth while because of that fact, and very likely will be worth much more because his name is not used. One minister has, over a period of several years, written one and sometimes several editorials for the leading Sunday paper of his city every week. Few people who read the editorials know who is their author, nor is it necessary or desirable that his name should be identified with them to give them value. His editorials give the paper value, and the paper gives him a medium for getting to a large reading public many ideas and ideals which the Christian minister can best set forth. Another minister was asked by the owner and publisher of one of the dailies in his city to prepare a Sunday sermon each week to be published regularly under the heading, "Today's Sermon," followed by the minister's name, subject of the sermon, scripture text in full, and the sermon itself. Though he has received no compensation for this, he has continued to write a sermon of about twelve hundred words each week for more than a year and has no idea of giving up the work. He feels that there is enough compensation in the good which these messages may accomplish, reaching as they do many who would never hear a sermon preached. That these sermons are read is evidenced by the fact that hundreds of people, either by personal word or letter, have commented on them from time to time.

It is the present writer's conviction, after many years of observing such matters, that this type of message through the newspapers when well done is of much greater educational, social, and religious value in the community than the more common type of message reported in the Monday papers by an inexperienced cub reporter who happened to be impressed with some particular remark which the preacher made and exploited it altogether separately from the main theme of the message as a whole. And it is in like manner of more importance than a longer account handed in by the minister himself for publication and which may be garbled in reducing it to the amount of space allowed by the managing editor. Too often such reports consist of a brief introduction or "lead" by the editor and the words "Doctor Blank said in part—" The part Doctor Blank is reported as saying, taken out of its religious and literary setting, more often than otherwise misrepresents the spirit and purpose of his message.

One thing is of particular importance in this method of getting religious truth to the reading public. It succeeds in reaching a public largely untouched by other religious writings. In view of the well-known fact of the decline of reading religious weeklies, even denominational weeklies, in many church families it would seem that this method of presenting religious truth is not to be scorned by the minister who would reach as large a public with his message as this field affords. And it has the further advantage of reaching those who are not church people as well. It may be argued that the public is not interested enough in religious subjects to read what a local minister may at great effort prepare for publication. At any rate, many will be interested, and many will read it who neither go to church nor read religious weeklies. It further serves the important psychological purpose of keeping the subject of religion constantly before the public. If no more than the headlines should be read, something would be gained. The advertiser long ago learned that the value of advertising lay in the matter of keeping his wares or his specialties before the public. And many an article has continued to have enormous sales because it was kept before the public through the medium of the press. So it is with the question of religion. If it can be kept before the public in the light which it deserves and by men who are known in the community as Christian leaders and teachers, more will be accomplished by the power of suggestion than many have seemed to realize.

One more thing, perhaps, needs to be stated, and emphasized. The minister who would thus reach a larger public than his own congregation must observe certain proprieties. He must not attempt to use the press primarily to build up his own church constituency, particularly at the expense of other churches. He must not make his writing controversial. He will not attempt to set Protestantism against Catholicism, nor one particular brand of Protestantism against all others. He must learn to

The Officer and Teacher Meeting for October

The outline for study this month completes the text and rounds out twelve months of work in the office and teacher meeting. We learn that many workers have preserved their HERALDS or have clipped and preserved the outlines for further use. We wish to call special attention of all Sunday school workers to the splendid material being printed each month in The Departments' Journal, our own journal of religious education. We appreciate, however, the courtesy extended us to use the columns of the SAINTS' HERALD, and plan a second series of monthly outlines for workers' meetings beginning the first week in November.

Theme: Effective Methods in the Recitation.

Text: How to Teach Religion, Betts, Chapter Twelve.

The particular method used in the recitation will depend upon (1) the nature of the material chosen; (2) the age of the pupils; and (3) the aim or purpose to be served by the lesson.

The Topical Method, in which the teacher suggests a topic, incident, event, or phase of a question and requires the pupil to go on in his own way and tell what he can about the point under discussion. The pupil should be left free to recall and think out for himself the answer, or make his contribution. This method should stimulate originality of thought and encourage freedom of expression.

The easiest form of the topical method is that of narration. Children enjoy telling "what happened next" and are easily led to discuss causes and results. Older pupils become adept in analyzing the problems of conduct involved and in making the application to present-day life.

Special report topics, if an advance assignment is wisely and helpfully made, will call forth an amount of thought and research. The topics should be suited to the interests and needs of the occasion and be within the thought grasp of the pupil. The teacher should see that exact references are known and available and should give any needed help in organizing the material and in preparing a fairly complete and accurate report. The teachers should be ready to supplement the report, to relate it to the rest of the lesson, and to make desired impressions vivid and lasting.

The Lecture Method, in which the teacher himself discusses the topic of the lesson, presenting the facts, offering speaking the truth in love, to be tolerant of others' religious views, to know what to leave unsaid as well as to know what should be said. Above all, because the paper which carries his message is not his own property, he must have respect for the policy of the paper. No self-respecting editor or publisher would continue to allow the use of his paper for the propagation of views which were against the editorial policies of the paper. But fortunately, the editorial policy of most papers is broad enough and Christian enough to allow the presentation of essential Christianity in their columns. If essential Christianity can have the right of way in the daily paper, at least in the Sunday editions, we need not worry about the unessential theological furbelows.—O. T. Anderson, Fort Meyers, Florida.

explanations, giving illustrations, or making applications as he judges the case may require. By all means a teacher should have a definite and worth-while message for his pupils, which should be well prepared, well organized, and effectively given.

However, the lecture method in all cases should be used sparingly, and not at all with little children. It often demands little or no self-activity on the part of the pupil. Many teachers talk too much. Skillful, well-directed questions would stimulate memory, reason, and choice on the part of the pupil, and he will not only enjoy the lesson in which he has an active part, but he will grow through the exercise.

The Question and Answer Method, in which the teacher leads in a half-formal conversation, asking questions, receiving answers, offering comment to bring out the facts and develop the meanings of the lesson. Very rarely should a teacher ask a question merely to test the pupil's preparation, though if a pupil expects to be called upon to answer questions or to join actively in the discussion, it should stimulate the desire to prepare the lesson beforehand.

Good questions stimulate thought, bring out new meanings, and lead the mind to right conclusions. A successful teacher has the subject matter and the objective of the lesson clearly in mind; he also gauges the range of understanding of his class and interprets their needs. He formulates his questions to lead, step by step, to the desired goal.

Certainly no teacher will slavishly follow a set of printed questions, or require his pupils to follow the exact wording of the text! While the teacher should determine by previous study the important points in the lesson and formulate for himself a series of general questions for use, they should serve only as a general guide. The most vital questions spring spontaneously in the fertile, active mind of the teacher as the lesson proceeds. Only such questions can hold the attention and interest of a wide-awake class.

Effective questions must follow some plan of unity. One must logically follow the other and lead in a definite direction toward an aim or goal which the teacher has in mind.

Clearness and definiteness must characterize good questioning. To be clear, a question must be stated in a simple, direct way. To be definite, there must be no obscure or equivocal interpretation possible. Cloudy, obscure and carelessly worded questions indicate poor thinking on the part of the teacher and discourage ready response on the part of the class.

Questions should be thought-provoking, within the thought range of the pupil, and not usually to be answered by an easy Yes or No. Too often the inflecting of voice, the wording of the question, or its setting in the discussion gives the pupil to know at once the expected answer. Variety in the manner and order of our questioning the class will stimulate alertness. Novelty and expectancy usually foster attention.

The pupil's answer must be received courteously, even if not complete or wholly correct. To repeat it after him is usually a waste of time and disparages his effort. Give a pupil the benefit of your sympathetic interest and attention. Make the most of his answer and turn his effort to good effect.

Our method should encourage freedom of interchange of thought. Relevant questions from the class should receive respectful consideration and discussion directed to purposeful ends.

The Story Method is one in which the teacher uses a story, told either in the words of the writer or in his own words, to convey the desired lesson. The story method is so valuable in religious education that we urge a

REUNION NEWS

NEWS AND LETTERS

Idaho District

Idaho district reunion convened at Hagerman, Idaho, in "Big Tent," August 12, 1927.

District President J. Arthur Davis having charge, it was organized Saturday morning. Apostle M. A. McConley and Bishop J. A. Becker, associated with Elder J. Arthur Davis, were in charge of the reunion. Sister Rena Haas, district chorister, conducted and was in charge of music. Silas Condit was elected secretary. The speakers were Apostle M. A. McConley, who, in addition to his sermons, gave lectures and showed picture slides on Hawaii and Graceland College; Bishop J. A. Becker, who enlightened the Saints considerably on their financial duties to the church, and the financial conditions of the church; Brother Rich, of Salt Lake City, who preached and was in the lead in all recreation; Brother J. Arthur Davis, preacher and general utility man; Sister T. B. Jackson, who lectured on Sunday school management; Doctor Sheldon, who gave an interesting talk on health.

Ours was a busy reunion, something doing all the time. Beginning with the daily dozen at 6.30 a. m., there were young people's prayer meeting, 8 o'clock; general prayer service at 9; preaching or lecture at 10.30; noon—free meals were served at cook house. Sister Alice Parks and Sister Deborah Sherman were cooks and were assisted by volunteer waiters and dishwashers. Afternoon sessions: class work at 2 p. m.; recreation 3 till 5, volley ball, etc; preaching, 8; then games, paper, songs, or a marshmallow roast.

Six were baptized during this gathering, and three ordinations were carried.

Idaho District was well represented.

Reunion and conference closed August 21.

more intensive study by all who would become masters of the art. Many splendid books on story-telling are on the market, one of the best being, How to Tell Stories to Children, by Bryant.

The Story to be effective must be suited to the age, interests, and comprehension of the class. It must have elements of gripping interest, which shall hold attention and compel the thought and imagination of the child. It should wisely stir the emotion, develop wholesome desires, and summon the loyalty of the individual to worthy causes. It must clearly portray the truth we wish to teach, and have a feeling of completeness and satisfaction when the story is over.

The story is used to lead a child into a certain experience helpful in the formation of his character. In imagination a child lives with the characters in the story, if, indeed, he does not take their places. He sees cause and effect in operation and may be led to draw conclusions. A chief function of a story is to substantiate a feeling or to support an attitude which we wish to become firmly fixed in the mind and life of the child.

Jesus was the Master Teacher. His chief objective was to feed the living, growing, expanding, needy soul before him. Jesus' teaching was effective, for it entered at once into the actual thought and conduct of his pupils. Jesus found his illustrations in the life and events common to his hearers. He stirred deeply their souls, he quickened their desire, he awakened their love and devotion to the cause for which he so freely gave himself. He rendered concrete in himself the religion he

Brush Creek

In our last journey together we visited Mount Vernon, to be present at the dedication of a church building. From there I had expected to return to Independence, but among others of the Saints visiting Mount Vernon on Sunday, June 26, were some from near "Brush Creek." This reminded me that I was about as near that point of interest as I had ever been, with a chance to see it. So I determined to prolong my stay away from the office and home and visit the oldest branch in the church, as Brother Fulk said he would take me in his car. So the forenoon of Monday, the 27th, Brothers Fulk and Lentell and I spent in making calls and administering to some of the afflicted Saints, in conferences with some. Then after lunch at the Fulk home, we three started for Brush Creek. There was somewhat of a thrill for me in the thought of visiting the oldest branch in the church. Of course I knew something about what to expect on seeing it, for I had been told that it was "in the country." But it was the historic background which held for me the chief interest.

At last we reached it. The church building is a frame one, painted white, with a cupola on the front end. It faces the north, and stands in an open space in the edge of a grove to the west and south. In appearance from the outside the building is not unlike the one at Mission, Illinois, and may have been built about the same time. The present Brush Creek building is perhaps thirty-five or forty years old. It is quite typical of the country church buildings of that day. High, or rather long windows, set too low, but handy for those who don't want to go in but yet want to see what's "going on," afford lighting and ventilation. Inside it has high ceiling, with conventional platform and pulpit at the south end, opposite the north entrance. Heated by stoves, and lighted by oil lamps, the room in the whole is a pleasant meeting place.

The present building stands to the south of the east and west road, and to the west of the north and south road. Across the road to the north are about two acres owned by the branch, and there stood their first buildings. South and west of the church extends the grove planted some years ago, abounding in fine trees and possibilities if prop-would have his followers adopt. Our teaching to be effective must follow his example.

Topics for Thought and Discussion

1. Discuss the relative merits of the several methods discussed in this chapter. What conditions determine your choice?
2. Discuss the sources of material from which we may draw in our teaching—upon what basis do you choose material?
3. What attitudes should a teacher cultivate to secure the most fruitful response from the class?
4. Explain the use of a story in the Sunday school lesson. How may we secure the highest values in story-telling?
5. Let the class study a book on story-telling in religious education and gain experience in the use of stories.

erly handled from landscaping viewpoint. In this grove the reunion of the district is held; and a fine place it can be made, too.

Leaving the machine, we went on a tour of inspection, through the buildings and grove. Several smaller buildings, such as dining hall, store buildings, etc., have been erected; but not according to a well-devised plan I fear, for the grounds showed lack of systematic work.

In a building on the southwest of the grove, we found one of the old guard, Brother Sawley, who was keeping "bachelor's hall" in the rather commodious building, and commodious for one, at least, and evidences abounded that he knew how to keep house.

The country surrounding the Brush Creek church is flat, and everywhere gives evidence of being a good farming district. Houses are far enough apart to indicate that the farms are large in acreage, while the well-kept buildings show prosperity.

Supper was provided for us at the "Burrows" home, where we found a quiet welcome and enjoyed a pleasant visit. On the way back to the church, I expressed a doubt of having a "crowd," but was assured by Brother Fulk that the branch had a reputation for filling the house; and so we found it; for despite the shortness of the notice, news had been spread by telephone, and the house was over full.

The warm weather permitted open windows, so those standing outside and sitting in nearby cars participated.

I tried to get acquainted with the people by telling of my church experiences, studies, ambitions, hopes. And then I told of my emotions on being in the midst of the oldest congregation in the church, one whose existence and history reaches continuously back to the time of the earliest men of the church. And as I thought of having been in the church for nearly forty-five years, and twenty-five years in the ministry, and yet this was my first visit to this historic spot, I could not but wonder why. And why are not pilgrimages made to it? Well, there may be various reasons. And I wonder if these reasons are to remain.

With proper cooperation between branch, district, and general church officials, there is no reason why this spot shall not be gladly and profitably visited by hundreds of Saints each year. With the fine grove and good plot of ground across the road, a place of beauty can in a few short years be developed, which added to the lure of historic lore and atmosphere will attract many to the reunion each year and at other seasons as well. I was told that the good roads movement has struck that part of the country, too, and that there is a likelihood of a good thoroughfare passing the church grounds there. It is to be hoped so, for rainy weather plays hob with those Illinois dirt roads.

In anticipation of what Brush Creek may yet become as a point of pilgrimage, I felt to urge the Brush Creek Saints to unite on a vigorous and well-laid-out plan of beautification, to be assisted by the church architect and some of our landscape gardeners. For I am sure that at Brush Creek a fine rural church center can and will be developed, and the way the Saints turn out to meetings there is splendid.

I left the church building that night feeling that I should like to make at least one visit a year to that place, to renew because of its historic interest my zeal and devotion. And as I left, my thoughts were busy. I had been busy with questions, too.

That night we drove to Orchardville, where in the home of Brother W. E. Phillips we found a hearty welcome and a comfortable resting place after we had visited till late in the evening.

A name inseparably connected with Brush Creek history is that of Elder I. A. Morris, who seems to have manned the pilot wheel of the branch for many years, and I heard his name mentioned frequently; and on entering the home of Doctor Phillips, I soon learned that Sister Phillips was a daughter of this famous leader of the Brush Creekers.

In response to my many questions for information, I had placed in my hands a copy of a manuscript Elder Morris had a few years previously written, in which he portrayed briefly some of the details of Brush Creek Branch history. From this I glean the following facts:

Sometime in October, 1842, Elder Jefferson Hunt went to Deer Creek, Illinois, in the interests of missionary work of the church. His success there culminated in the organization of a branch in a month after he went there. In December of the same year, he, accompanied by Thomas P. Green and Nathan A. Morris, went to Brush Creek, where their efforts were in the same month crowned by a branch organization. Nathan A. Morris was chosen president of the branch. I understand that he is the father of Isaac A. Morris of whom I have already spoken. Thus began the branch which has maintained unbroken existence down to date. Fourteen years later, on the death of the branch clerk, the records of the branch were scattered, and some were lost.

In October, 1860, the year of the now famous Amboy Conference, Isaac A. Morris by baptism became affiliated with the church, and two years later he was ordained elder and promptly became active in branch and general church affairs.

In 1864 the elders of the Reorganization "put in appearance," and two of them, Elders Anderson and Reynolds, received the Wayne County Saints on original baptism and organized them into a branch, and on September 3 the first district conference of the Reorganization of that section was held at Jeffersonville, Wayne County.

Sister I. A. Morris, who survives her husband by several years, still lives in the neighborhood where his ministrations were given. She is some eighty years of age and has many children and grandchildren, most of whom are interested in church activities.

And so when on the morning of the 28th of June Brothers Fulk and Lentell and I bade good-bye to the genial Philippses, the Hensons, etc., to drive to Xenia, we could not but feel that we had warmed our devotion and renewed our zeal in the cause at what should be a better-known shrine of the church, and we felt to say whole-heartedly, Long live Brush Creek Branch! May it prosper in things spiritual, æsthetic, and material, and become an attraction to which the Saints shall make pilgrimage.

At Xenia, Illinois, we stopped for a pleasant visit with Brother and Sister Mark Holman, Sister Holman, as many of our readers know, being the youngest daughter of the late and well-known Patriarch William Lewis. And when some hours later Brothers Fulk and Lentell deposited me and my baggage at the railway station in Carlisle, there to board the Baltimore and Ohio train for Saint Louis, I felt that through the courtesy of Brother Fulk and the assistance of his Star car I had been permitted the opportunity to augment in an interesting way my knowledge of our own history, and as a consequence found myself with my face once more towards the future with renewed determination to "carry on."

Thanks, Brother Fulk, and thanks, Saints of Brush Creek!

"Remember Cumorah" Rendered at Lansing

I have been longing for some time to see a letter from our branch published in the HERALD and to have Saints in other branches read and know that we are still endeavoring to do our bit with those who are striving to redeem Zion. I feel and know that we could engage in no greater work than the spreading of this latter-day gospel.

Last Sunday, September 25, at eight o'clock in the evening the pageant, "Remember Cumorah" was rendered at the church. Despite the fact that it was not a pleasant evening, owing to rain, the church was filled. The scenes were those which will be remembered. A flashlight photograph was taken of the players in costume.

About one hour before the pageant was rendered we were made to rejoice when seven precious souls from another branch came here and were baptized into the fold.

Next Wednesday evening we expect to have Bishop C. J. Hunt with us.

Graceland Chats

Graceland Home-Coming

"As one comes up the Hill for the first time in many days, the old familiar Ad Building towers first into view, a venerable guardian reared against the placid blue and cottony white of summer sky, hovering motherlike over the companion buildings. And even now these newer halls are taking on something of the wealth of experience and tradition which hallows the turreted red structure, once the lone sentinel on the Hill."

The above words of a visiting alumnus back at Graceland give one an urge to go back to the college on the Hill—back amid those beloved scenes, back mingling with the Gracelanders of today, who will soon be out from her walls, and will be making plans to return at home-coming. Home-coming at Graceland is much like a family reunion. Are you coming back? Are you planning to dwell once again under sway of those rich experiences? Are you going to be one who will fall in line and march to the gridiron? Are you going to be one of the happy alumni who shall recall their golden days at Graceland?

The West Door is always waiting for you—the chapel is waiting the sound of your voice. The gridiron awaits the trampling of your feet. All Graceland expects you here October 14 to 16.

The Herald Angels will begin the program Friday evening with their annual entertainment. Saturday morning there will be social breakfasts and a rousing pep meeting. In the afternoon the Graceland football team will play the team from Chillicothe College, the only team that won from Graceland last year. Saturday night a general Athenian program will be given. Sunday morning a prayer meeting will be held in the chapel, and other interesting meetings will follow at the old Brick Church.

Graceland wants you on the Hill for home-coming October 14 to 16.

Choral Activities

The Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society had its first meeting last Sunday. Brother Prall, the pastor, took charge, and the following officers were elected: President, Roy Cheville; secretary, Floy Roberson; treasurer, Doris Nelson. Of course Miss Carlile was elected director, and the chorus gave her hearty applause as she came forward to take her place.

The enrollment so far this year is one hundred and fifty. The alto and soprano sections are full, but it is hoped that several more tenors and basses will try out.

Miss Carlile says she was never more pleased with a first rehearsal, and that the quality and balance of the chorus is the best ever.

Sunday, October 2, the chorus will sing hymn anthems. Their first real anthem will be given home-coming Sunday, October 16.

As has been the custom for the past several years, the "Elijah" will be given some time next spring. A new objective of the society is to give the "Messiah" some time during the first semester—probably the last of January. The books have been ordered, and practice will begin in about two weeks. The society wants to do all it can to make its plans fit in with the music plans of the church—especially the special plans for the music at the Centennial Conference.

Our other choral society, the A Capella Chorus, is getting ready for the year's work also. A larger percentage of the old members are back than in any previous year. Five new members have been taken in: Doris Waterman, contralto, from Council Bluffs, Iowa; Juanita Nixon, soprano and accompanist, of Lamoni; Merle Johnson, tenor, from Missouri Valley, Missouri; Preston Hinderks, bass, from Stewartville, Missouri, and Cyril Damitz, bass, of Underwood, Iowa. The old members will entertain the new ones with a dinner at Miss Carlile's home next Monday night.

The year's plans are not definitely made, but the chorus expects to make a tour of several days through western Iowa sometime during the year.

Commissary Frolics

"All work and no play" is never a good slogan. In order that we might mix in some of the good old times, we, the Commissary Department of Graceland College, decided to meet and get acquainted. On September 15 a meeting was called at seven forty-five p. m., after the last "kitchen slave" had finished his chores.

George Mesley stated the purpose of the meeting to be that of getting a better understanding of our duties, and becoming better acquainted with each other, so that we might work harmoniously and efficiently. The meeting was to be the first of a year series of informal get-togethers and frolics.

We were told that in College our first duty should be our studies; next to this in importance is our commissary work. We should always be on time, and to aid us in keeping account of this, there is a time sheet posted in the kitchen with a pencil attached, and an old clock hangs on the wall, so that we may set down our time as we enter and sign off as we leave.

Just as our class work is graded, so also is our kitchen work. The merits are speed and accuracy, or quantity and quality. The one who obtains the highest grade receives the highest pay.

While perched upon the corner of one of the tables, George addressed us in this manner. Beside him stood a large stack of plates and forks, and our imaginations began to work. But to our amazement, he began reproving us for leaving dishes out of place, such as these. However, he ended up by saying he would be responsible for them this time if Herman and John would go to the ice box and get the watermelons and cut them. So the paper napkins were passed around, and we were served a large piece of ice cold watermelon. As we finished, we filed into the kitchen and washed our dishes cafeteria style.

We hear that more good times are in store for us, and a picnic is already in the air. Therefore, we hope to make this year a happy and successful one.

Literary Societies Have Interesting Initiations

Society initiations were somewhat different this year from those of previous years. The Niketes met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mortimore. A very fine program was rendered, consisting of musical numbers, short talks, and other features of interest. At this time Mr. Mortimore officially welcomed the new members, after which he gave an illustrated lecture on his travels in South America. As a means of getting acquainted, a number of entertaining games were played, after which a very delicious luncheon was served.

The Victorians held their initiation in the old chapel, and while prospective Victorians busied their "microscopic vestige of intelligence" with "ponderance sagacity" the old

Vics set the stage for fun. The dramas that followed were very touching, in which each member played a very important part. As usual when ice cream and cookies were served, all else was forgotten.

The Alpha Pi's had the pleasure of initiating twenty-five new students into their society. Each candidate was made to feel his unworthiness of becoming a Pi, but after receiving of the "Pi spirits" he was elevated somewhat, up to the Pi standards. In the stunts which followed, many talents were displayed, and each new member proved to be a good sport.

The evening closed by serving the traditional Alpha Pi refreshments—apple pie a la mode.

Thirty-one insignificant individuals were transformed into worthy persons by the old members of the Kappa Delta Society. The program consisted of numbers all the way from tragic grand opera to a three-ring circus. These performances were severely criticized by the old members, but all hard feelings were soon banished when refreshments were served.

Mother-Friends for Graceland Girls

The Lamoni-Graceland-Patroness Ladies' Society gives a great deal of time and thought to the comfort and happiness of our student body.

The very latest project is for our girls, the girls living in the dormitories and in homes down town. Mrs. C. F. Smith is sponsoring this movement, and the plan is to provide a "down town mother-friend" for each girl. Some mothers have one girl, others two, and in some cases three. Mrs. Smith and Mrs. N. R. Carmichael have worked early and late on this plan, at times calling in Mrs. Gates and Miss Woods to assist. It was finally turned over to a committee for the distribution of names. The object of this project is to make a home for homesick girls and those wishing to get away from the dormitory for a few hours for a quiet rest, a party, or a home dinner sometimes. The response from our "down town" friends was very gratifying, and we feel that both mothers and daughters are going to have a very enjoyable school year.

Dormitory Initiations

Marietta

Ten o'clock Friday evening Marietta Hall was the scene of the initiation of the new girls.

The blindfolded girls were led around the campus for five minutes without a word passing between them and their escorts. They were then taken into the room near the rear entrance and left to find their way upstairs to the dean's room. As they came to the door of the room where the old girls awaited their arrival, their blindfolds were removed, and they were greeted by the songs, "For they are jolly good fellows," and "It's a way we have at Graceland."

The election of officers resulted in sustaining Madeline Clark as house president, and in the selection of Ruth Smith as secretary and treasurer.

Banana ice cream with wafers was the next in order. Then, after some motherly advice from "Deannette," the "Merry Girls" scampered off to bed with dreams of a very happy year together.

Bide-a-wee

In compliance with instructions given them, the new inhabitants of Bide-a-wee assembled in the reception room for initiation last Monday night. They were introduced to the officers as they passed into the room. Here various tasks awaited them, which resulted in worlds of fun for the old girls and not a little for the new.

The evening's merriment was concluded by the serving of refreshments, which left everyone feeling happy and good-natured.

Killarney Lake, Alberta

Michigan Branch held its two-day meeting August 6 and 7. It was the first of its nature since the reorganization of the branch, in July, 1925, and as a result a good social and spiritual time was enjoyed by those who were present.

The nature of the meeting was interesting. On Saturday night a delightful program, consisting of education, music, and humor, was very entertaining. On Sunday morning sacrament was served, and the social service bore evidence of the gratitude of the Saints to the God above. The preaching services were timely, and the servants of God spoke to the young as well as to the old, giving advice, and strengthening the Saints in the gospel.

We were unfortunate in not having our district missionary with us, but we were very fortunate in procuring Elder J. W. Davis, who rendered noble service. Elder W. Osler and Elder W. H. Roy, of the district presidency, were with us, and these with others of the priesthood helped to make the meeting a success. Elder Davis and Elder Osler were the main speakers, but Elders Roy L. Gregory and E. L. Mogg assisted and took part in preaching the word.

We appreciated the presence of the visiting Saints from Artland and Ribstone Branches, whose numbers boosted the crowd and bore evidence of an "old-time" gathering.

We are looking forward to the prospective ten-day reunion, which, all being well, will be held about three or four miles north of here next year. However, while contemplating such matters, we are hoping, praying, and working for the best of all concerned.

Our number is not legion, but we are zealously working for the good of all, and the latter-day work.

Southern California Conference

At Central Los Angeles Church, September 24 and 25, 1927.

Favored with lovely weather and a desire to meet with God's people, many Saints, some happy, some sad, but all hopeful, assembled at the Central Los Angeles Church, the appointed gathering place.

The conference opened officially at 10 a. m. on Saturday, with a large crowd in attendance. Many arrived early, though some had come from a great distance. A splendid opportunity was afforded for visiting, and the spirit of good fellowship was evidenced by hearty greetings.

The conference asked the district presidency and the apostles present to preside over the meetings. Brother N. T. Chapman, our faithful president for four years, took the chair. District Secretary Amy Lewis being unable to attend the morning session, a temporary secretary was elected, also a conference press agent. Followed short addresses by Brothers Chapman, Gillen, McConley, and Martin. Each speaker gave words of encouragement and endeavored to impress the need for study, prayer, and service on the part of every individual; all four bore testimony that the Lord had wonderfully blessed them in their ministerial labors during recent months.

Some important features of the business sessions were: Reports of work by district and branch officers; these showed earnest effort and splendid results. It is not always the case that reports make interesting reading, but these held the attention of every auditor. It was voted to have a reunion in 1928, leaving the time and place to be decided by the reunion committee and the district presidency. The names of four brothers from San Diego came up for ordination. Munroe and Kellerby for elders, Weatherby for priest, and Harder for deacon. A motion was made and carried that the ordinations be arranged for at an early date. When it came time for election of district officers, N. T. Chapman was immediately nominated for district president, but declined to accept the nomination because of ill health. The Saints are glad to have had the sincere and efficient services of Brother Chapman for four years and regret to lose his leadership, but, in fairness to him, accepted his refusal to serve again in this capacity. Wilbur D. Gillen and Will Teagarden were nominated, and the vote was 63 to 62 in Brother Teagarden's favor. The newly elected president chose as his associates Wilbur D. Gillen and Glaud Smith.

The new district officers are as follows: President, Will Teagarden, Long Beach; assistant to president, Wilbur Gillen, Los Angeles, and Glaud Smith, Los Angeles; secretary, Amy Lewis, Los Angeles; superintendent Sunday school department, L. L. Sutherland, Los Angeles; assistant to Sunday school superintendent, Sister Cawkins, Santa Ana; superintendent Recreation and Expression, Wilford Burton, Long Beach; superintendent Women's Department, Sister Gregory, Long Beach; superintendent of Music Department, Margaret Wickes Jones, Los Angeles; historian, Jennie Paulsen, Los Angeles.

The women of the Central Los Angeles Branch, assisted by some of the brothers, served home-cooked food, cafeteria style, to those present. The spirit of service was as evident in the kitchen and dining hall as it was in the pulpit and elsewhere, and these sisters are to be highly commended for the wholesome food served during both Saturday and Sunday to the large conference crowd. Several of the sisters worked until near midnight Friday that visitors and home folk might be properly fed, and consequently kept in a good humor, during the two days' gathering. Many Saints opened their homes to visitors remaining over night.

On Saturday evening was given the pageant "Remember Cumorah." This was lovely and impressive. Under the capable leadership of Minnie Mae Lewis, the assembled groups, representing various branches, worked together so well that one would think there had been several rehearsals, when as a matter of fact the cast had practiced together once only. The chief characters and the ones taking their parts are given below:

The historian, John F. Martin; first child, Myron Nicholls; second child, Alice McConley; Joseph, Glaud A. Smith; minister, Harold Motter; first Nephite, L. L. Sutherland; second Nephite, Alfred Crum; third Nephite, S. C. Elliott; Moroni, David Carmichael; The Church, Laura Freie; a blind man, Richard Wagon.

Many others took minor parts, and all together made a wonderful picture and one that is sure to help those present catch the vision of the duties and responsibilities of the church. The auditorium was packed to overflowing.

The Sunday morning prayer service was well attended. Brothers Smith, Chapman, and Martin were in charge. The theme of the service, the Book of Mormon, was given by Brother Martin, and this with all testimonies was in harmony with the Centennial. One person, followed quickly by another, gave evidences of the divinity of the sacred record and related experiences that prove that it is a beacon light on the pathway of those who endeavor to use it as such—through study, prayer, and practice of the lessons contained therein. Time denied many the privilege of testifying. Through Brother Martin, a prophecy was given to Carl Ruoff and this, with songs, prayers, and testimonies made a feast and spiritual uplift. Many remarked that for the first time in their lives they sensed the great purpose and untold value of the Book of Mormon.

Following the prayer service, the Saints gathered for Sunday school service. Brother Sutherland and Brother Pederson were in charge, and Sister Jones directed the orchestra. Doctor Teel offered the opening prayer, and again the Book of Mormon was the theme, but no one seemed to grow tired of it. Brother Lacy related a wonderful incident where he had defended the book before he knew of its existence; Sister Billie Carpender told the beautiful story of Christ's visit to the American Continent, and Theodore Smith told some legends of the American Indians that evidence Christ did visit this land. Brother Pederson then thanked the people for their support during the last year, and Brother

Sutherland, the new district Sunday school superintendent, and his assistant, Sister Cawkins, spoke of hope for cooperation and advancement during the coming year.

Apostle J. A. Gillen was the speaker of the 11 o'clock service. His subject was the needs of the day. With great earnestness he showed the importance of individual duties well performed. During this service the junior church was in session in another room under the direction of Brother Sutherland.

At 2:30 p. m. Sunday, Apostle McConley gave convincing proofs that the Book of Mormon is a divine blessing.

Patriarch J. F. Martin was the speaker in the evening. He called himself the light artillery following up the big guns. His subject was the "Restoration," and no big gun could have more effectively delivered the fire. He gave the significance of the Restoration, using many illustrations.

During the conference three adults were led into the waters of baptism, Doctor Teel officiating. They were Reuben Thomas French, Lillian French, and Louise Drown. We are happy to welcome these friends.

Vocal soloists who favored us were Wallace Farley, Mildred Nesser, and the Crum quartet. Organists were Nell Crum, Mildred Collinge, and Lucille Crawford. Sister Jones directed the choir and also the orchestra.

All attending church officials said they felt more confident regarding the work in Southern California than ever before. They feel that it is going to move forward and that the outlook has never been brighter.

Second San Antonio Branch

912 North Colorado Street

San Antonio's recently reorganized Second Branch, old in years and experience but young in its reconception, is well on its way to discard its swaddling clothes and really begin to walk.

Harmony and Progress in the order of their naming have been our constant watchwords, and all are elated over the accomplishment of each to date. Starting with about nine in attendance at our first meetings, all old members, we now have thirty, with a large percentage of strangers, and all promising to be regular in attendance.

Perhaps the most valued acquisition of our charter members was the return to this city for permanent residence of Brother John O. L. and Sister Minnetta Newton Isaacks and their splendid children, five in number, every one of them enthusiastic workers. What was Independence's loss was San Antonio's material gain, and they have received the warmest welcome of our hearts.

"What a wonderful change!" "How pretty!" are the usual and spontaneous expressions of visitor, stranger, or member of the branch when they step into the newly renovated church building. It is pretty, and we as a whole are proud of the change. We are not now ashamed to say "Come" to all who will, and they are coming.

Perhaps our most valued meetings are our midweek and first Sunday prayer meetings. We have had repeated reason to feel the Spirit of the Lord prevailing, and further, have positive evidence of its influence for the better upon individuals, who, until recently, have not been in regular attendance. Its effect is apparent upon their faces and in their daily lives.

Under the direction of our most efficient and enthusiastic Sunday school superintendent, Sister Gracia Waid Robinson, our Sunday school is leaping forward in a manner surprising and stimulating. Her interest in the school is not for just a few minutes each week, but for twenty-four hours each and every day. She lives and sleeps Sunday school, and it requires just that degree of spiritual enthusiasm to make any church or Sunday school progress. Can you imagine little tots five and six years of age so intensely in love with their Sunday school that they ask mamma every day, "How soon is next Sunday?" and those same tots making personal successful effort to bring other little ones as their particular contribution to the increase in attendance? And to miss being there is equivalent to a broken heart.

Aside from the offerings of our regular elders, Brother T. J. Jett, sr., and R. E. Chrone, sr., our pulpit has been graced with the presence of Elder L. V. Aldridge, a recent newcomer to San Antonio, who on Sunday, September 18, gave us a most instructive, interesting, and inspiring discourse upon the Book of Mormon.

The Book of Mormon, seldom heard of in the past from our pulpits, received an impetus from Brother Aldridge which extended into one of the most delightful and interesting meetings ever held in our branch; and Sunday the 25th, commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the finding of the "plates," but served to stimulate a desire for a more complete knowledge of the book, upon the part of both the regular members and strangers, and as a result our sheep shall be fed by a series of discourses to be rendered by Elder R. E. Chrone, sr., beginning in the near future.

Work—Work—Work, is the constant appeal from every pulpit, and indeed it is the proper and rightful appeal to stimulate us to that degree of spirituality so necessary to all, but work is as essential otherwise as it is spiritually; and work upon the part of some of our vitally interested members—that work which brings the perspiration in rivulets has produced the welcome change from a former wreck of building and grounds to a church building which in itself extends a glad welcome hand through its cheerful brightness. Starting with re-papering and canvassing, the building has been repainted, cleaned, scraped, sandpapered, and varnished, the furniture made practically new, city water and gas connections made, conveniences which we have not before had, and in the near future the street in front of the church is to be paved, so that our members and visitors may soon visit without digging their hubs into the mud.

Again praising our Sunday school—our piano was as much or more of a wreck than the church—it had never been worked on since its birth—but thanks to our Sunday school, it is now to go into the piano garage for a thorough overhauling, and we are promised its return for next Sunday. The expense? All that by and from our enthusiastic Sunday school. Yes, we have a most efficient "driver" for that piano, in Sister Zora Carnes; in her we have one who can not be excelled, either for enthusiasm or accomplishment. It requires an excellent driver to miss every hole along a rough road, but with a broken-down wreck of a piano, it requires still greater efficiency to produce genuine music which thrills and inspires. But we are not alone in receiving a blessing through our excellent organist. Though we appreciate to the fullest extent Sister Zora's wonderful contribution, we could not expect her, with her crippled old wreck of a piano to carry the entire load and provide a musical program which practically reaches out on the street and induces passers-by to enter—which has been the result upon more than one occasion.

The Lord moves in unexpected ways his wonders to perform. We were worried and did not know what on earth to do about our music. We prayed and trusted—and the Lord sent us that which we most needed and doubly appreciate—our chorister, Sister Minnetta Isaacks, whom we had thought we had lost to Independence. We said before that Independence's loss was our gain! Our song of praise can not extol too greatly our appreciation of that particular blessing. Sister Minnetta, upon her first Sunday with us, gave us a thrill from which we have not yet recovered. Neither have the near neighbors—some of whom are Catholics—who are loud in their praise and declare they enjoy our services. Some of them are sending their children to our Sunday school. We have appointed and soon will elect Sister Minnetta Isaacks as assistant Sunday school superintendent and as branch and Sunday school chorister.

Our only regret is that we have not higher honors vacant to offer her.

Also, we have just been assured that we shall have carpet on our floor! Surely the Lord has blessed and is blessing us, and our hearts rejoice that he should feel us worthy. Our prayers have been and always are for all branches and for the progress of the Saints everywhere, and we ask your combined prayers that we may continue to receive the blessings of the Lord and that we may be strengthened in our efforts in his work.

Visitors, to find our church home on Colorado Street, take west end car and get off at Colorado Street. Brother R. E. Chrone, sr., pastor, lives at 1019 North Salado Street. Phone Woodlawn 2099. CORA S. CHRONE, Recorder.

Kirtland District Meeting, etc.

An instructive, educational, and inspirational series of district meetings was concluded in Cleveland last Sunday. These meetings were arranged to celebrate the delivery of the plates of the Book of Mormon to Joseph Smith on September 22, 1827, and also to do something for our youth.

We were fortunate in having the use of the newly acquired home of the Cleveland Branch. This building probably constitutes the finest equipped church plant east of Saint Louis. Some say that the organ is larger than the Stone Church organ at Independence. There are two main auditoriums, and on each floor they are surrounded by many spacious classrooms. This building is something of which the church may well feel proud, and I have often wished to see more such buildings owned by the church so that the ideals of religious education could be made vogue.

The Cleveland Saints are to be complimented in their courage and foresight. Foresight is well said, for this great Western Reserve is the place where the law was given, and while the regions where the Book of Mormon plates were found and where the church was organized are desolated so far as the church is concerned, and likely to remain that way until after the millennium is established, such is not the case in the country where the law was given, for here stands the Temple, the only building in the world still standing which was built by command of the Lord.

It has not fulfilled its purpose, and together with adjoining buildings will help to rehabilitate the old Kirtland Stake and carry it on to a degree of perfection not known before. The Lord has said, "I will rebuild Kirtland." Not all that is going on in the way of growth within Kirtland District is limited to that divine promise. Wise and socially minded men can see wonderful developments in the country which can not help but have a tremendous effect on the fulfillment of the promise made by God concerning Kirtland. Zion will need her stakes, curtains, and "gateways."

And Gentiles shall assist in building Zion. The acquisition of the church building by the Cleveland Saints helps in a tremendous way in the development of the stake which is yet to be. But the Saints of Cleveland have a big financial burden. Any old-time Clevelander and those interested in Cleveland are invited to consider the possibility of helping the branch. If you have donations, Brother John A. McNeil, 3372 Delwood Road, Cleveland Heights, Ohio, will gladly receipt for the same.

The meetings opened on the evening of September 22. About twenty slides were shown of the hill, the stone box and its contents, the author, the scribe, the witnesses, their testimony, and some other interesting places and persons, all of which were connected with the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. After this, Apostle R. S. Budd, who was with us the full period, gave an excellent historical review of the pioneers of the early church. He was followed by Superintendent C. B. Woodstock, who gave an inspiring address. Above all we must mention the five young sisters who dramatized the purpose of the Book of Mormon, its relation to the Bible, etc. The author of this ought to have it written, for it is a very fine thing. This first evening we had quite a large crowd. The following evening the crowd was not quite as large, but quite as interested, as they listened to two talks on the Book of Mormon themes.

On Saturday afternoon, after class work, old and young went to Wade Park, where we had some real guidance in recreation by Brother Woodstock. This whetted our appetites for supper and the wonderful sermon by Brother Budd.

Sunday was packed full of inspirational events. There was a class of seventy-five young people under the guidance of Brother Budd, a priesthood class under the care of Brethren Ellis and Bishop, an adult class on parent problems and officer-teacher problems by Brother Woodstock. These classes met three different sessions. The emphasis during this convention was on teaching, but devotion and recreation and social activities had their share.

A special feature of the convention was the work of Sister Alice Baldwin. She had a fine exhibit of handwork; she held a junior church session, as well as classes for beginners and juniors and their teachers. Such work is concrete and actually shows what can be done for the children. More can be done with such methods than could be done by hundreds of lectures.

Sunday morning we had the pleasure for the first time of hearing Apostle Clyde F. Ellis preach. As we heard him, we silently wished that we might hear more of him. We did on the following Monday evening in Kirtland Temple, and a few minutes the next evening in Painesville. But yet we want to hear him, for it seems to me that, while he is a reasoner and has intellectual appreciation, his chief reliance is on the work of the Spirit. It is refreshing, uplifting, inspiring to the people of God to witness the manifestations of the Spirit; for they give life.

Brother Baldwin preached the closing sermon, and he was in a happy mood and recalled the many happy and strenuous years of labor he had spent in the great city of Cleveland.

We spent many happy hours with Brother Dildine, superintendent of the Department of Recreation; and Brother Odum, superintendent of the district Sunday school, in preparation for this event. I am sure the spirit of cooperation was shared and that we look forward for better district meetings.

We must not forget the work done in the commissary department. Sister Campbell was on duty with her helpers all the time. The meat carver, with his jolly laugh, helped the situation, and it was a treat to hear him laugh as one of the missionaries walked up to the kitchen and shouted the order, "Adam and Eve on a raft" (meaning two eggs on toast).

The music was outstanding. Under the guidance of Sister Haynes, we had solos, duets, choruses, a special session of music and chiefly the organ recital by Sister Kirkendall Colgrove fifteen minutes before the special vocal music. We also had the Kirtland band with us. Brother Frank Webbe spent many hours hunting out transportation for the band boys and their leader, Brother Andy Cox. It was a treat to see those boys get after their music. Brother Cox has done great things for the boys of Kirtland, and by action of the district chorister, supported by the musicians and others interested, he may extend his labors into the district. Brother Tom Baldwin was given charge of the development of the orchestral work.

This district may be proud of the leadership of Sister Haynes, for she is not only an artist but is an organizer, and does not show the temperament that afflicts so many musicians.

The president of the branch, John A. McNeil, and his corps of fine officers were on the job all the time and did all they could for the comfort and pleasure of the convention.

His wife also gave unsparingly of her talent as a singer. It is not too much to say that Kirtland is not far behind the city of Zion in talent. Per capita (excluding general church officers) it may be ahead. This is only another way of saying that Kirtland District need not be less than abreast of the times, for comparisons are odious.

The Saints were happy to have the opportunity of renewing acquaintance with Apostle R. S. Budd. His ministry has been proved to the Saints of this district. We all wish him many years of apostolic service, and when we do we are cognizant of the difficulties and sacrifices that he has passed through and through which he and others will have to pass. There is a great work for such men to do in the church, as well as in purely missionary work. We trust God will bless all such.

The convention ended with everyone in a happy mood and with a greater determination to press on to the consummation of the ideals of the great church—the church of which the Lord said (it was the only church in its organic sense, I suppose), "with which I am well pleased."

With fond anticipation, we are looking forward to the next district meeting, which will be a music convention to be held sometime in November.

Fargo, North Dakota

The Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue, South

The pageant, "Remember Cumorah," was presented by the amateurs of the Fargo Branch on Centennial Anniversary Day, Sunday, September 25. On the evening before, the rain came pattering down, and a chilly north wind made folks feel as if winter was approaching, and the hope of the isolated Saints being able to drive in cars was quite uncertain. But Sunday morning old King Sol was out in full glory. Although a little chilly, the people began to arrive, and soon the Bungalow Church was filled; extra seats had been obtained from Moore's Funeral Home.

A song service was enjoyed by all at 10.30, and the Saints kept singing the songs of Zion until the second Nephite who had "tarried" a little longer at the home in the country had arrived. The curtain arose; there appeared Joseph and the minister, and the Spirit of God was felt by the Saints. Many could not keep back the tears.

Each scene was very interesting and well rendered. At the close of the last scene, while the foreign nations in costume and the church, represented by a woman dressed in white wearing a crown with twelve stars, were still on the stage, a silver offering was taken up by "the two children of today." A sum of eleven dollars and forty-six cents was donated to go to the expense of getting up the pageant.

Actors in the pageant were: Historian, Elder J. A. Gunsolley; the children of today, Doris Peterson and Doris Rotzien; minister, Worth Couey; Joseph, Courtney Rotzien; angel, Avis Walker; church, Mrs. Robert Good; three Nephites (being short of men servants, three sisters were substituted), Minnie Peterson, Irma Walker, Pearl Wilson, wearing black robes; blind man, John Rotzien; foreign nations: Ella Mae Peterson, colonial; Doris Ballard, modern American; Eva Konietzka, Canadian; Hazel Lesh, Hollander; Viola Bentley, Australian; Donald Peterson, Mexican; Vivian Langseth, Japanese; Floyd Blakely, Jew; Worth Couey, an ideal Indian. The committee, consisting of Sister A. H. Thompson, Sister John Rotzien, and Sister Farley, was many times discouraged and had many obstacles to meet in such a small branch. But the heavenly Father came to the rescue, and ways were opened up so that things were worked out through unexpected means.

One of the features in putting the pageant over the top was the arrival of Brother and Sister J. A. Gunsolley, of Lamoni, who cheerfully and faithfully helped in many ways. An electrician of the Catholic Church was kind enough to arrange the lights for the different scenes, and attended the pageant in order to manage the lights properly. A larger stage was built, and curtains were borrowed from the Christian Church and robes from the Lutheran Church. Brother Floyd Whiting, a scenic painter, of Saint Paul, very kindly painted the scenery of Hill Cumorah and the forest, which made a pleasing effect in the scenes. Brother and Sister Gunsolley, Sister A. H. Thompson, and Worth Couey composed the hidden quartet. Sister Virginia Walker was pianist. The windows were darkened so as to give the effect of evening.

The pageant has aroused the interest of the people in the Book of Mormon, and Saints are signing pledges to try to read the book by December 31, 1927. It is surely a wonderful work of God, and what an opportunity it is to be among those who can celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the recovery of these wonderful plates of gold! Saints are very grateful to the kind Father in heaven for his blessings bestowed in this effort here. Our weakness was felt and realized, and the attempt was made with humble hearts and a feeling of dependency upon God for wisdom and strength.

Saints from Mapleton, Straubville, Forman, Valley City, Sheldon, Leonard, Hope, Clifford, North Dakota; and Frazee and Audubon, Minnesota; also quite a few nonmembers from Fargo attended.

The picnic dinner was spread out on the stage in the church, as the weather was too cool to go to the park as had been planned. But all enjoyed the rich repast, even if the fried chicken didn't go clear round.

At 2.30 Elder Swen Swenson gave an interesting sermon, and at eight o'clock Elder J. A. Gunsolley, with his happy smile, appeared in the pulpit. Both brethren spoke on the Book of Mormon. Extracts: No other book like it that fulfills the prophecy in the twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah. The Book of Mormon teaches against infant baptism, against polygamy; it teaches faith, repentance, and the resurrection. This church needs to have faith in the resurrection. Latter Day Saints sometimes lose faith in the resurrection on account of what they study in universities of the belief of some educated men. Science is not friendly to it. There is nothing in the book to be ashamed to read before any company. The Book of Mormon is part of the basis of teaching in this church; it is parallel with the Bible. It is an excellent record to be read.

Elder Swenson preached again Monday evening, giving much good instruction and reviving the faith of the Saints. On Tuesday evening Evangelist J. A. Gunsolley preached again on the Book of Mormon. He also sang a pleasing solo. At the close of the service, the Saints served cake and ice cream and presented Brother and Sister Gunsolley a purse to show the appreciation of their willing efforts here. "O give us a parting blessing" was sung just before leaving the church.

Sister Tom Hunter, of Erhard, Minnesota, and husband and son will now make their home in Fargo.

Sister Barbara Thompson has returned to her home in Clifford. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Annie Hayes, and three children of Oregon, who will stay with her for a couple of months.

Brother George Omans has gone to Frazee to spend the winter.

A farewell party was given Sister Cora Dehn on August 30. Ice cream and cookies were served for refreshments. She was presented a gift by the sisters. Sister Dehn went to Atherton, Missouri, where she has employment. Best wishes go with her to her new home.

Brother Ed. Stowell and family, of Valley City, and Brother Floyd Blakley were visitors in the branch Sunday, September 19. Brother Stowell's little daughter, Florence, is staying here, taking treatment for her eyes.

On August 28, Sunday afternoon, several of the sisters met at the home of Sister Farley to give a farewell party for Sister Farley's sister, Mrs. Carsterton. Dainty refreshments were served.

Sister Clyde Sherman and husband, of Frazee, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Rotzien.

Sunday, September 4, Elder Thomas Leitch took for his text "The gospel as Christ taught it," Mark 1. The gospel Jesus taught was truth that came from God. Let us be watchful that we may be followers of Jesus.

Brother and Sister Ferd Hamel, of Dunn Center, recently visited Saints and expected to attend college here, but have since decided to go to Valley City.

Sister Ella Mae Peterson has returned from Minneapolis, Minnesota, where she visited her sister, Mrs. Marvin Zieck.

Elder William Sparling, who has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Worth Couey, has returned to Minot. He preached Sunday, September 11, on the Book of Mormon and gave us many good thoughts.

Mr. and Mrs. Worth Couey will motor to Duluth September 30 in their new car. They will be accompanied by Elder J. A. Gunsolley and wife, who expect to stay all winter.

The church has been freshly decorated and looks much improved. The long-lost Book of Mormon map has been found, cleaned, and will be hung up for future use.

New subscriptions are coming in for the Book of Mormon. Let us all read the book with new interest and a brighter vision.

Brother Ed. Stowell, of Valley City, received several bad burns from an explosion in the plant where he works and was unable to attend the pageant.

Too many get weary and let the tree die because they do not nourish it, and let it grow. We sing, "Rest by and by," but some Latter Day Saints don't do enough to get tired and need a rest. Who is it that will rest? Those willing to work in the heat of the day and when things are adverse.

Bisbee, Arizona

October 1.—It is some time since your correspondent has taken pen in hand to write of the local happenings here, so I trust the following items may prove of interest to many scattered members who have been in Bisbee in the past.

On September 8 a farewell social was held in honor of Sister Delta Porter, who left the 10th for Phoenix where she and her two daughters expect to reside for the next few months. Games and refreshments of ice cream and cake were enjoyed by the many friends who assembled for the occasion. While here, Sister Porter faithfully served us as teacher of the young people's senior class, by whom she was much loved. She also served as member of our library board and took an active part in various church and Sunday school programs and activities for the benefit of the young. While she will be greatly missed, we trust her sphere of activity will be increased by her move to Phoenix.

Sunday evening, September 18, Brother Perry O. Puckett was the speaker, and we enjoyed a spiritual and encouraging sermon. Brother and Sister Puckett and family left by automobile September 22 for Texas points, where they may locate pending their ultimate destination of Zion, of which they wish to become residents at the opportune time. A farewell gathering was held at the Woman's Club Building the Tuesday evening prior to their departure, where games were enjoyed and refreshments were served to the many friends present. Brother Puckett, who holds the office of deacon, has been faithful in the work here, and he and his family will be greatly missed. We bespeak for him and his family a welcome in such a branch as they may later attend.

A few weeks ago the young people's senior Sunday school class, with assistance of the Women's Department, held a food sale, which resulted in a neat sum for the advancement of the work here.

It is with deepest regret that we mourn the loss of our faithful sister, Mary A. Smith. After submitting to an operation, while at San Diego visiting with her daughter, she lived but a few days. We are glad to learn she was permitted the pleasure of knowing that her two sons and two daughters had joined the Reorganization, being baptized at San Diego recently, her only remaining son without the fold promising to join shortly, thus bringing an answer to lifelong prayers and desires that all her children might be one in the fold. Such is the outcome of a faithful life. The funeral services were held at the Palace Chapel, Bisbee, and interment was in Evergreen Cemetery, it being her wish to be brought back to Bisbee, her husband having died here about six months ago. The funeral sermon by Elder S. D. Condit, branch president of Douglas, was very appropriate for the occasion. The many beautiful flowers showed the esteem in which our beloved sister was held by both members and friends. Mrs. Mabel Saunders, of Warren, is one of Sister Smith's daughters recently baptized, and we welcome her to membership in our Bisbee Branch.

For the information of those who might care to attend our services at any time, we hold all meetings in the Woman's Club Building, Quality Hill, Bisbee, which is about ten minutes' walk in a westerly direction from Bisbee post office. This building is unusually well adapted for our services and would comfortably seat seventy-five or more persons. We were fortunate in obtaining it at a very reasonable rental. The Sunday services are Sunday school, 9.45 a. m.; preaching 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m.; Wednesday prayer service 7.30 p. m.; the 11 o'clock service on the first Sunday of each month is observed as sacramental and prayer service. These services are advertised regularly in both newspapers here, the Bisbee Daily Ore Saturday evening, and The Bisbee Daily Review on Sunday morning. Our average attendance at all Sunday services during the summer has been about thirty, which attendance in view of the total membership we believe compares favorably with the average small branch. Of course we are always glad to welcome visiting brothers and sisters, and hope they will clip this item for reference should they anticipate coming to Bisbee or passing through. We have had a number of spiritual meetings this year, and we feel that the local ministry have been blessed in their efforts to dispense the word by the presence of God's Holy Spirit.

We are also glad to welcome the coming to the Warren District of Brother E. E. Long's family, who are spending a few months here. Miss Doris Long's musical talent has been of help to our Sunday school when our regular organist has been absent, and we are glad to have their presence at our meetings.

The many friends of Brother Gibson will be glad to know that he has improved somewhat in health recently. We are happy to report that Sister Herbert Hall's husband is progressing favorably and has returned to his home after having undergone a serious operation at the hospital. Sister C. F. Rehwald, while not entirely recovered from her serious injuries received in a fall down a flight of steps a few months ago, is able to be out with us occasionally.

Elk Mills, Maryland

Thinking that perhaps you would be pleased to learn of the progress of the good work being accomplished in Elk Mills, I pen these few lines. We celebrated the anniversary of the "coming forth of the stick of Joseph," commonly called the Book of Mormon, Sunday the 17th of September. It began at eleven a. m. with a beautiful sermon by Elder George W. Robley, on the coming forth of the record, after which the Women's Department served all with a lovely dinner, which made it pleasant for the visitors as well as home folks. At 2.30 p. m. Elder E. B. Hull gave us a further digest of the biblical prophecies of its coming, and Elder Thomas Carr at 7.30 continued the subject. They were all good and educational. Many heard what they had never had the opportunity of hearing before.

Several carloads of Saints came down from the City of Brotherly Love and rendered their assistance in making the day one to be remembered for many years.

Brother Robley gave a lecture Tuesday at 7.30 p. m. with slides which Brother Carr operated, and together they made it a wonderful lecture which the children will not forget soon, even if the older ones do.

If every child of God will do his part, the work will take on its beautiful robes of righteousness, and the Zion of God will shine and its power be felt for good by all who come in contact with its integral parts.

Sunday evening, September 25, we put on the pageant written by Brother Elbert A. Smith, and that proved to be a greater success than we had anticipated. It was interesting, even to those who were not members of the church.

First Columbus Branch

Sacramental service was conducted September 4 in charge of Elder Armstrong, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, and Elder F. C. Welsh and High Priest C. W. Clark. Constance, the infant daughter of Brother and Sister Chesser, was blessed by Elders Charles Schafenberg and J. Gabriel. Brother and Sister Ray Dougherty, from Zanesville, also Brother Walters and son and daughter, from Congo, Ohio, and Sister Bohlen from Grove City, Ohio, were present.

Tuesday evening, September 6, was quarterly business meeting.

Prayer service on Wednesday night was in charge of Elder Charles Schafenberg and Priest C. H. Foster. The gift was manifested through Elder Schafenberg. The Saints were spoken to, also Sister Hershbergher and Elder A. E. Anderton.

Religio opened for the winter's work on Friday evening, September 9. About twenty-five were present.

At 10.45 on Sunday morning, September 11, Brother C. H. Foster spoke on "Interdependence." Brother Foster was complimented upon his sermon. Elder A. E. Anderton discoursed upon the subject "To the work" at the evening period, and his instruction was well received.

The following Wednesday prayer service was in charge of Elder Charles Schafenberg and Priest Charles Ferguson. A goodly number was present, though the temperature on that evening was ninety-three.

On the third Sunday in September, the 18th, Brother Haynes, of Cleveland, was the morning preacher, his sermon being enjoyed by all. High Priest C. W. Clark delivered a wholesome discussion upon "Industrial Zion," Sunday evening, in which the present-day duty was plainly set forth.

Three days later the regular midweek prayer meeting was conducted by William M. Grice and Brother Anderton. It was a good meeting.

On Sunday, the 25th, the one hundredth anniversary of the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon, at 10.45 Priest Charles H. Foster spoke on the Book of Mormon. How little understood the book is! How grossly misrepresented the various names it has been given were some of the phases of this discourse! He also sketched a brief history of its beginning, what it purports to be, the virtues it commends, what it supports in a religious way, and what it forbids. That it represents Christ as the Redeemer of the world is Brother Foster's deep conviction. The Saints commended the speaker and expressed their appreciation of his sermon.

In the evening High Priest C. W. Clark preached on the Book of Mormon, clarifying the question of polygamy. He brought forth Jesus Christ both prophetically and as he visited the Western Hemisphere, and made plain the point that the Saints should study the Book of Mormon ethically and not alone historically. First Columbus Branch is fortunate in having such an able authority as Brother Clark. His sermon by all means should have been recorded. It was grand, and that is expressing it mildly. Brother Clark undoubtedly felt repaid for the past efforts when he sat and heard one of his pupils of days that are past propound the Book of Mormon from the pulpit for the first time in his own branch.

Brother and Sister Bell, of Virginia, were present. Jessie Weate and daughter, Mildred, sang "Whispering hope."

Prayer meeting Wednesday, the 28th, was in charge of Elders John Gabriel and Fred C. Welsh. Considering the torrential rain all evening, a good crowd was out. District President William M. Grice was present, and his experience was inspiring. During his brief sojourn with the Columbus Saints, we have already learned to love the spiritual and humble brother. We hope his stay with us will be long.

Oelwein, Iowa

October 2.—Iowa, particularly Oelwein vicinity, has of late been having much rain. The famous mud roads of Iowa more than verify their names. It is quoted from other States: "Out in Iowa where the paved roads end and the mud begins."

We, however, are thankful to say, though few in number our branch has been greatly blessed in the presence of a good spirit. The sacramental meeting today was long to be remembered; it seemed as if a spirit, deep and abiding, were with us. There were four prophecies given, and the holy and divine Spirit we all so love seemed indeed to be among us. Sometimes we have missed that Spirit, and our sacramental service has seemed dull and lifeless. Years ago a good brother, an earnest man, used to speak frequently in prophecy, and his words carried conviction to his hearers; much good was accomplished by them. Some were turned from the world and accepted the gospel. I think sometimes the Prince of Evil is more than pleased when he can really enter the camp of the Saints. Outside, his influence is little felt, but once inside, his ways are many and always very smooth and plausible, and that most unruly member, the tongue, which no man can tame, is one of the best weapons Satan has to carry on his work. Many a poor innocent person has been slandered until it seems life is hardly worth living.

We are sorry to announce the death of Sister Weston, living at Lamont though belonging to this branch. She has been a faithful member of the church for many years and, although blind the last years of her life, has been a patient Saint. Whenever she attended meetings, her voice was raised in praise and thanksgiving to God for the blessing granted her. She leaves to mourn her death a husband, three sons, five sisters, two brothers, and fifteen grandchildren. She was sixty-eight years old and had she lived until October 11 would have celebrated her golden wedding. She is the mother of our efficient deacon, Brother Ervie Weston.

Most of us are busily engaged in reading the Book of Mormon as per the request of the heads of our church. We find it a most inspiring work and one that fills us with thankfulness that we have this wonderful book and can read and understand God's dealing with the ancient Americans.

Sister Blanche McFarlane put on a Book of Mormon program from the play written by our illustrious writer and elder, Elbert A. Smith. We were all too busy to learn all the parts; the principal parts were read by some six or eight persons, and some appropriate songs were sung. This program showed careful arrangement as to the parts and also wise selection of songs. It was a credit to Sister McFarlane, our Religio president.

Sometimes we feel a little discouraged because we do not grow more rapidly, but all are anxious to make a greater effort next year, and we truly know that we may work but God gives the increase.

Elder Weston was present at our meetings today, also a blind sister, Mary Nedreau. She is a wonderful woman and in spite of her condition can do many things that seem almost impossible. She has a cheerful disposition, always happy and smiling, and though much of the time isolated from meetings is always ready to help with God's work. Elder Weston has long been known here as a humble and sincere man, and one may know from his talks and prayers that he has the Holy Spirit with him. All his actions show the fruits of the Spirit.

Last Sunday morning five different persons gave short talks on the Book of Mormon. Its ancient people, its code of morals, proof that it is what it purports to be, that the American Indian descended from the Lamanites, etc., were some of the themes touched upon.

Brother George McFarlane preached a very strong sermon in the evening on the Book of Mormon, proving from the Bible that it should come forth.

We truly wish to plant our feet on higher ground, to follow the footsteps of Christ, and to help build up the church in our city.

Second Columbus Branch

Rinehard Avenue and Twenty-second Street

Vacation time is over, and everyone is ready to work. Our chorister, Sister Hazel Gibben, has recovered from her operation, and the choir has given us some beautiful anthems of late.

Sacramental service, September 11, was in charge of J. E. Matthews and Brother McConnaughy. A peaceful spirit was present throughout the meeting, and many beautiful testimonies were given. We were glad to have Brother McConnaughy, of Barberton, with us at this meeting.

The Women's Department met at the home of Mrs. Letha McMillan, 8943 Whittier Street, Thursday afternoon, September 8, with seventeen members present. Sister Ethel Kirkendall gave us a very interesting talk on home management. Everyone enjoyed the social hour and lunch.

Department of Recreation and Expression on September 23 gave the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," written by Elbert A. Smith. This was beautifully rendered, and each did his part well. It was very impressive and helped us to better appreciate the events of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. We are proud of the work of our young people and glad to see them develop their talents. This was given at Heaton's Hall, 33 East Long Street.

Sunday morning, September 25, at six o'clock a sunrise prayer meeting was held at the church in charge of H. E. French and J. E. Matthews. As the sun rose in all its splendor, the light through the art glass windows illuminated the faces of those in charge, making a striking illustration of the power of the Melchisedec priesthood. As Christ gives his Spirit to the priesthood, they in turn impart it to the members. The Spirit was present in power, and everyone felt edified. There were many beautiful prayers and testimonies. Each felt greatly encouraged, and we feel we can say with the church, "Onward to 1930 and beyond."

At 10.30 J. E. Matthews took for a theme, "Evidence of divinity of the Book of Mormon."

Brother G. H. Kirkendall employed as a theme, "The Restoration," at the evening hour. Both sermons were ably delivered.

The prayer meetings for the month were good and themes very interesting.

Sister Frances Morris, who has been sick for some time, is much improved at this writing. Brother Tom Myers is still in the hospital but is improving, and we hope it will not be long until he will be home.

Young People's Convention at Selden, Kansas

Under the inspiration of our heavenly Father, one of the brothers has set on foot a movement in this the centennial year of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, looking forward to a better understanding of the Book of Mormon, and as a result, hundreds of people are reading and rereading that wonderful book; and now in line with him and these hundreds of people we are attempting as a district to get together at Selden, Kansas, November 5 and 6 in a two-day meeting, one day, November 5, being entirely devoted to the young people in a celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. We want you, young Saints, and your elders should not neglect it, to read your Books of Mormon and bring to us the high lights of your observations, ponder the forecast of the history of the world as foretold by Nephi in his third chapter, the points of doctrine and practice as taught by the prophets Abinadi, Alma, Amulek, Samuel, Moroni, Mormon, etc., the periods of migration from the Old World, number of colonies, routes traveled, length of time of continuance of colonies, etc. Prepare to come. The following will be our mode of procedure:

Tentative Program

Saturday: 6.45 to 7.30 a. m., young people's prayer meeting; 7.30 to 7.45, sandwich breakfast; 7.45 to 9.45, games; 9.45 to 10.45, general prayer meeting; 10.50 to 12, Book of Mormon centennial meeting; 12, dinner; 1 to 2.30, games; 2.30 to 3.30, Book of Mormon meeting; 3.30 to 5.30, games; 7.45, entertainment; 9, wiener roast.

We are looking forward to a good attendance and hope you will begin now to make your plans to be there.

We expect Sister George Kelley, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, to be there.

JOHN A. TEETERS.

Moorhead, Iowa

Our last letter was sent in during the Missouri Valley reunion, at which time our services were dismissed for a couple of weeks.

Meetings are now being held at the regular times. Last Sunday services were poorly attended on account of the rain, which has continued with us for almost two weeks.

During the last few weeks several of our people have made visits to Lamoni. Among these are Brother and Sister David Outhouse and daughter, Ethel; Brother and Sister Arley Toffman, Sister Mark Jensen, and Brother Charles Davis and family. Brother Davis and wife are members of our branch but are now residing at Schleswig. Brother Joseph Wilson and Sister Fern have also visited at Lamoni and other towns near there. Sister Sarah Hoffman, of Lamoni, but for many years one of our number, is at present visiting among her children and friends in this vicinity.

Doctor M. F. Minthorn, of Sioux City, passed away September 17 after a lingering illness and was buried at the Preparation Cemetery, September 19, by the side of his wife, who preceded him about fifteen months. Doctor Minthorn was a practicing physician in our little town for many years and often attended and took part in our services. He was a member of the Unitarian Church; and his minister, Reverend Snyder, of Sioux City, conducted the funeral service, which was held at Castana, where the doctor also practiced for many years just previous to his illness. Brother Mark Jensen had charge of the burial service.

Sister Mary Lewis, of Lamoni, came to attend the funeral and spent the following week visiting among relatives.

Only two of our young people are attending college this year. Sister Frances Strand is attending Ames, and Sister Alice Jensen is at Graceland.

The youngest son of Brother and Sister Clark White, of Le Mars, was buried in Spring Valley Cemetery September

30. Burial was in charge of Brother Mark Jensen. The funeral service at Cherokee was largely attended, where the young man worked and came to his untimely death by the falling of a tree, which struck him across the chest. The family were at one time residents of this vicinity, and Moorhead Saints extend their sympathy in their time of sorrow.

Of late Sister Lon Simpson has been sorely afflicted, but she is hopeful of recovery, having complied with the ordinance of administration. Saints are remembering her in their prayers.

Last week Brother Mark Jensen, accompanied by six of his brothers and sisters, also two nephews and a niece, who conveyed the older people by auto, spent a few days visiting his brother, J. C. Johnson, of Woonsocket, South Dakota. This was the first time since their emigration from Denmark many years ago that the family had all been together, so it is needless to add that the time was fully enjoyed by each of them.

This community was made sad by the passing of Sister Lulu Adams, wife of Brother Ben Adams, at Lord Lister Hospital, Omaha, the last of August. Besides her husband, she leaves three children, all grown, brothers and sisters, other relatives, and many friends. Burial was in the Spring Valley Cemetery.

Brother Perry Mann, accompanied by a couple of friends, recently made a few weeks' trip to the West, which proved quite beneficial to Brother Perry's health. He had not been feeling well of late.

Brother Fred Pellissier recently enjoyed a visit from his brother, from Washington. He accompanied Brother Fred's family on a recent visit to the home of Brother and Sister Jennings Coffman, of Omaha.

Sister Mary Lewis departed for Omaha Wednesday, from whence she expected to soon return to her home in Lamoni.

Persia, Iowa

October 3.—Saints in Persia are busy doing what they think should be done for God's work. Elder George Hansen, living near here, comes and preaches occasionally for us. Elder Joseph Lane, district president, lives in Logan, and was over some two or three weeks ago. Elder W. R. Adams was here some time back. The instruction given to us by Brother Adams was a great help.

On the first Sunday of each month we have arranged to have the sacrament administered to the members of the branch, and we feel that the sacramental service gives us additional spiritual strength. When we sing the songs of Zion, testify of God's goodness to us and his mercy and wonderful kindness, praying for that abiding Spirit to be with us while life shall remain, we are encouraged to push on.

The late reunion at Missouri Valley worked so as to make the reunion a success, a gathering enjoyed by all who attended. The correspondent was present on the two Sundays. Preaching on the first Sunday was by Elder J. A. Gillen, his theme being, "The Lord is calling." The way our brother treated his subject caused us to think of the words of the Prophet Jeremiah, who tells that the Lord "will send for many fishers, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks." (Jeremiah 16: 16.) He assured us that the Lord is calling, asking if those who are being called are ready to go to work when the call is made. When the Lord calls, his children should prepare themselves for service. The emphasis our brother placed upon the necessity of our being ready, and used in connection with the inspired expression of the statement, The Lord is calling, was impressive. Will the Lord continue to call, under all conditions, those who are competent in his work? Let us all be ready for any duty that may be placed upon us.

Sacramento, California

Corner Twenty-fourth and Kay Streets

September 26.—Our branch is resuming its fall activities, with vacation days over and school begun. The state fair, early in the month, brought us some visitors, who worshiped with us on sacramental Sunday. They were Brothers Will Vallem, Brother and Sister George Vallem, and two boys, of Lodi; Brother and Sister W. H. Yoerk and daughter of Chico; and Sister George Dykes, of Yuba City. District President Guy P. Levitt was also with us and has visited once since, preaching for us several times. Sister Minnie Bates, of San Jose, is visiting her niece, Sister W. H. Dawson, now. Brother and Sister J. L. Bussell and family have recently moved here from Placerville.

Our attendance at all services, including the midweek prayer service, keeps up splendidly. The local priesthood is active, visiting the Saints in their homes and humbly officiating in their various offices.

The Women's Department, with Sister Geneva Beebe superintendent, is planning a bazaar uptown in October.

Our united efforts have been directed toward the production of the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," which was given here on the evening of September 22. Sister Bertha Austin was the director, with Sister Hazel Blohm, assistant, and Brother Arlie Austin was the stage manager, assisted by Brothers Edwin Burdick and Ralph Ensley. Thirty-two were in the cast, with the following in the leading parts: Historian, W. H. Dawson (pastor); Joseph Smith, James Lamprey; the minister, Fred Taylor; the angel, James Price; the three Nephites, Brothers T. J. Lawn, John B. Dawson, and Ralph Ensley; The church, Pauline Napier. Over one hundred and fifty attended the performance, and the play was well received. A beautiful spirit accompanied the production, and all are happy over its success and enthusiastic over further efforts along such lines. Twenty-five of our members went by train and auto to attend or take part in the pageant production at the Park-Presidio Branch in San Francisco on Sunday, the 25th.

Mount Vernon, Illinois

Mount Vernon Branch has been moving steadily along during the summer months. The young people seem to be much interested in the work.

Religio is a big feature of interest among the young people. On Friday, September 2, they rendered a nice program. A number was given by a quartet composed of Marie Henson, soprano; Mildred Good, alto; Frank Hargis, tenor; and Ed. Colvin, bass. There was also stringed music by Elder L. C. Moore and Bert Wolfe. Sister Avva Lowry gave an excellent reading.

Brother Eddie Colvin is our superintendent of Religio. He is young but not afraid to take hold of the work; he has a bright future before him. Brothers Lewis Deselm and Arthur Henson are the program committee, and they are alive and alert in this work.

On September 8 one of our sisters, Mrs. John Pigg, passed away, the funeral being at the church Sunday, the 11th. Branch President L. C. Moore delivered the funeral discourse to the large audience present.

Brother and Sister Ivan Casey, Sister Myrtle Choate, and Sister Lentell, of Marion, paid our Religio a visit on Friday evening, September 16. Sister Lentell gave us a splendid talk on "How we should reverence the house of God," which was well received by all.

September 25 being Book of Mormon Day, was well spent. At sunrise we went to Brother Marion Lowry's grove for prayer meeting. The peaceful influence of the Holy Spirit was enjoyed by all. Brother L. C. Moore, Brother R. L. Fulk, and Brother J. M. Henson were in charge. Brother

Moore was the speaker Sunday morning and evening, taking the Book of Mormon for his subject of discourse.

Our Religio was visited on Friday, September 30, by Brother and Sister John R. Lentell, from Marion, Illinois. We were glad to have them with us. Sister Lentell organized the girl work, the Temple Builders, Orioles, and Bluebirds. The leaders also were chosen, the Temple Builders selecting Sister Ida Hargis; the Orioles, Sister Ruby Rockett; the Bluebirds, Sister Grace Burkett.

We are striving to go forward with our aim Zionward.

Cameron, Far West Stake

Since the summer vacation period and the reunion of the stake, Cameron has been enjoying some splendid times.

During the summer the Sunday evening services were "union services" in cooperation with the other churches of the city. During those very warm evenings the services were held out of doors. The ministers of the various denominations would be represented at each service, the preaching being by the different ministers in turn. The beginning of September saw the close of the union services.

Last month (September) was a full one for this branch. A visit from Apostle F. Henry Edwards was much appreciated by the Saints. The people enjoy the association of the leading quorum members. Everybody enjoyed Brother Edward's visit.

The church building has recently been redecorated in the interior, and the lighting system has been changed so that a more diffused light is obtained. The church is comfortable and cozy. You would enjoy a visit to Cameron.

A selected cast presented to a very crowded house on the 25th the pageant "Remember Cumorah." The presentation was given for the Sunday evening service. The wonderful arrangement of the scenes with a very fine lighting effect, and the splendid playing of the cast, with the fine order of service, made a very impressive service. As the congregation stood in the semidarkness, with the players kneeling on the stage, for the benediction, the feeling of sacredness and reverence could be felt.

The evening service last Sunday was in the form of a lecture by Elder Frank Hinderks on "Book of Mormon archaeology." Selected and appropriate hymns were thrown on the screen, and the congregation sang about their beliefs as they remained seated in the dim light reflected from the screen. Again the people stood in the semidarkness while the prayer was offered, thanking God for the wonderful revelations of life.

Cameron will give her visitors a hearty welcome.

Houston, Texas

September 28.—I want to send a word of greeting from the Houston Texas, Saints. We have friends dear to us scattered here and there. We do not forget you, and we hope the Great Comforter abides with you. I am sure it does good to hear from one another and to know God's work is progressing.

Saints from larger branches would be surprised to come to Houston and find us in a small building, a Sunday school room, but we own the property, and we vision a larger church ere long.

Our city is a gateway to the world, owing to our deep-water harbor. It numbers about two hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants. The city is growing rapidly, and with other progress the Latter Day Saint Church should keep pace.

Brother J. E. Vanderwood gave us the pleasure of having him in our midst, and a series of meetings was held recently. Needless to say, Brother Vanderwood told the gospel story in his unique way. Some not of our faith came and appeared interested. But the meeting closed all too soon.

However, our branch president, Brother Charles Tischer, promised another meeting soon, and we trust the seed sown may bear fruit in future meetings. We also hope to have Brother Vanderwood here again soon. His cheery personality has brought sunshine in dark places.

We all pray for the time to come when Zion will be a reality to all. We pray that our dear brother and counselor, President F. M. Smith, may be so guided that he shall be a prophet in very deed. Let's help him along, for we know he travels over many rough highways leading the Saints Zionward.

May God's blessings be with you all.

MRS. MARIETTA SMITH.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, 1615 Vermont Street.

Davidson, Oklahoma

October 3.—This branch has been moving steadily along. Since our district reunion Pastor Z. Z. Renfroe has been to Boswell, Oklahoma, and held a meeting. It was reported a success. Five were baptized.

Little Billy Burks, one of our Sunday school beginners, died August 18, and on September 30 her baby sister, Joanna, three months old, also passed away. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones.

Brother H. E. Winegar has just closed a two-week meeting. Owing to the busy time of year, the crowds were small, but the series of sermons was deeply enjoyed by those who attended. Three were baptized, and two babies were blessed.

September 22 was observed with a Book of Mormon lecture by Brother Winegar. It was fine.

Four girls from this branch are attending school at Grace-land this year. We miss them here but are glad they had the opportunity to go.

Wedding bells have been ringing for Sister Helen Stafford, who was married to Mr. Garland Ridings. We wish these young people much happiness through the coming years of life together.

Brother and Sister Ray Carrow and family, who have been living at Vernon, Texas, have recently moved to Davidson and added great strength to the branch, for they are good workers.

San Antonio, Texas

3522 South Flores Street

The prayer and sacramental meeting which was held on the first Sunday of the month was well attended, and a good spirit was felt throughout the meeting. Brother H. E. Winegar was the speaker at the evening service, using for a text "The restoration of the gospel." He had splendid liberty and good attendance. Other speakers of the month were Pastor R. E. Miller, Brethren T. J. Jett, jr., W. H. Manner-ing, and L. V. Aldridge.

We are glad to have Brother E. L. Henson and wife with us again. They have just returned from Colorado, where they have been for the past year. Brother Henson is going into business near the church.

There has been quite a bit of sickness in the branch since our last writing. Sister Jarvis is still on the sick list, also Brother Arlie Waite and his little daughter, Neva, who was the victim of an accident some time back in which she broke her arm. She has been in the hospital for three weeks; just returning home a day or two ago. Her arm is not yet well. We ask the prayers of the HERALD readers for these afflicted ones.

Sister Emma Jackson, assisted by her chorus of girls and several members of the branch, with several nonmembers, put on a musical comedy last month. It was a Japanese play in three acts and was presented at the Y. M. C. A. The purpose of this effort was the raising of funds for the first payment on a baby grand piano, recently bought for the church. They netted seventy-five dollars from the sale of tickets. One lady, not a member, sold one hundred tickets. The play was prepared in ten days. Participants certainly deserve much credit for their untiring efforts in learning their parts in so short a time. It was a grand success and was very much enjoyed by all who attended.

The Department of Women expects to give a church bazaar about December 15. Anyone wishing to contribute anything may send it to Mrs. John Harp, 116 West Dittmar Avenue.

Ministerial Conference at Rock Island, Illinois

Through the efforts of Brothers F. Henry Edwards and John Garver, the districts of Eastern Iowa and Kewanee, Illinois, experienced their first ministerial conference, which was held Saturday and Sunday, September 17 and 18, at Rock Island, Illinois. Although only a brief notice was given, a goodly number of the priesthood of the two districts were present.

On Saturday afternoon Brother Edwards lectured to the priesthood on a vital subject, "The purpose of our coming." He used the passage of scripture found in Numbers 16:9, which reads as follows: "Seemeth it but a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath separated you from the congregation of Israel, to bring you near to himself, to do the service of the tabernacle of the Lord, and to stand before the congregation to minister unto them?" He very clearly portrayed the purpose of God in having a priesthood, and how it can supply the needs of the church and perform God's work.

Sunday morning, during the Sunday school hour, Brother Edwards again lectured to the priesthood on the subject, "The mind of the minister." Besides many valuable hints in general application of mental energy, he pointed out how a minister can retain in his memory the people he meets day by day by obeying a few simple laws that build up a strong memory, and consequently secure many friendships. It is quite obvious that only through a well-developed mind can one best preach the gospel.

At the eleven o'clock hour, Brother Edwards was in Moline preaching to the Saints there, while Brother Garver was at Rock Island.

Before a large gathering of the priesthood in the afternoon, Brother Garver lectured on the subject of "Shepherding the flock." We could readily sense that the shepherding of the flock is the main duty of the ministry, but the one most often neglected. After all, it depends on the priesthood to feed the sheep, that they hunger not, and to watch over them that none shall be lost, but that they all may be gathered into the sheepfold of God.

Brother Garver preached the closing sermon of the conference Sunday evening, using for his theme, "Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God which is in thee by the putting on of my hands." The discourse was forcefully presented and received with marked attention.

After the Saturday afternoon service, the majority of the men present retired to the Moline Y. M. C. A. and enjoyed an hour of swimming. From there they motored to the Moline Air Port, which is on the Chicago to Dallas Air Mail route. There Brother Edwards experienced the thrills of his first airplane ride, which he seemed to thoroughly enjoy. So far Brother Garver seems to be quite contented to keep both feet on the earth.

It is hoped that at the next meeting of this kind an organization of the priesthood of the two districts will be effected.

JOHN C. STIEGEL.

Independence

Stone Church

"And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance," was the text selected by Associate Sunday School Superintendent Glenn Fairbanks for the opening talk of the Sunday school hour. In accordance with the request of local organizations of the W. C. T. U., the Sunday school observed the theme of temperance in both the beginning remarks and the special program number, a reading by O. J. Kueffer.

One thousand and eighty-seven souls, consisting of seven hundred and fifty-four students, forty-four officers, ninety-eight teachers, one hundred and ninety-one visitors, presented themselves for this meeting. Four classes were perfect. Among the visitors was a young people's class from Grandview, Kansas, come en masse to observe the work of the Stone Church Sunday school.

The last Sunday of the month, October 30, is to be a rally day looking toward the reclaiming of some of our Stone Church Sunday school pupils who have dropped out during the summer, and their reestablishment in the work for the winter, as well as the addition of such other students as can be found in this district. We want our school to grow in numbers and in interest. Every student and former student should plan to be present on that morning and the Sunday mornings following.

The Sermon at Eleven o'Clock

"Everything is governed by law if it is governed at all. Our church is governed by law, and many of us are keeping a portion of this law. I have often wondered why it seems so distasteful when some one is asked to talk about the financial part of the law; it also is a part. Why are we in this church? We are in the church because we believe it is right, the true church of Christ. From Genesis to Revelation in the Bible we find the law of tithing is taught."

So stated Bishop G. W. Eastwood in his sermon from the Stone Church pulpit Sunday morning. Taking his text from Romans 14: "So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God," he continued: "The Bible tells us we are stewards, whether we wish to be or not, and we are held accountable whether we wish to be or not. Before we are baptized, we are asked certain questions concerning our willingness to comply with the law, and by the way we have one missionary who will not baptize until the candidate has filed his inventory. I do not mean by filing your inventory that you have to pay an enormous amount of tithing—only one tenth. 'The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof,' and we are only to pay one tenth."

The necessity of filing one's inventory, even though one's liabilities amount to more than his credits, and the necessity of one's paying his honest debt—squaring himself with God—were then carefully explained by the speaker. Citing the congregation to portions of the law as given to Moses, he proved that tithes are one tenth of our increase, and from statistical data had in the office of the bishopric proceeded to inform his hearers that less than one tenth of the wage earners of the church have this year filed their inventories. The hope was expressed that next year will be a banner year for the filing of inventories and paying of tithes, that the purpose for which tithing is paid—the maintenance of missionaries' families while the missionaries are in the field—may be carried out.

"I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise," Doctrine and Covenants 81:3, was quoted and followed up with this assurance: "God is good, and if we do our part he will bless us."

The musical part of the program at the eleven o'clock broadcasting hour put the congregation in reverential mood for the reception of that which was to follow. "With thankful hearts we meet, O Lord," was the hymn sung by the assembled Saints and directed by Professor Paul N. Craig. The offertory, "Traumerel," by Schubert, was the organ number by Robert Miller, and "O pray for the peace of Jerusalem," was the anthem by the choir, Robert Miller at the organ and George Miller at the piano. "Callest thou thus, O Master?" a soprano solo by Miss Lilly Belle Allen, was beautiful. Elder J. M. Terry offered the invocation and the benediction.

A rare treat was had at the Campus at the eleven o'clock hour. Brother and Sister V. D. Ruch and little Velma gave the program. They sang Norwegian songs and told of the customs in Norway. In the sermonet, Brother Ruch began with the words of Jesus, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," and spoke of the missionary and the tithing that is needed to send the elders into the fields. The service, which was accompanied by the Father's Spirit from the first song, brought to all the realization that people are hungering for the gospel at home and in foreign lands. It was a service that will not soon be forgotten.

An unusually large attendance was had at the afternoon prayer service held on the last Sabbath, and a fine meeting was had. During this hour the confirmation of two little girls, Gertrude Hulmes, and Thelma Betts, was carried out by Elders C. Ed. Miller, J. M. Terry, and Walter Self. The girls were baptized in the Stone Church font at 1.30 in the afternoon, Gertrude by her father, Brother George Hulmes, and Thelma by Pastor Miller. Two ordinations were also had, Brothers Kenneth Thompson and Matthew Cleland being set apart as priests by Elders Miller, Terry, and Self. Also one of the most pleasing ordinances of the church—that of blessing little children—was witnessed, little Kenneth Allen Thompson, son of Brother and Sister Kenneth Thompson, being blessed by those in charge.

The election of Miss Alice Tucker, pianist, to take the place of Miss Delta Friend, whose resignation was accepted by the Religio body Sunday night, was the principal matter of business transacted following the class period last Sunday evening.

Kenneth Curtis, of Kansas City, gave the program, rendering a variety of readings to the evident enjoyment of the audience.

The Y. P. R. class of the Religio—a group of between thirty-five and fifty enthusiastic, young people—is studying comparative religions with Brother Glenn Fairbanks, teacher. A week ago this evening about a dozen of this group attended services at a Jewish synagogue in Kansas City. Much was learned through observation on this visit.

By the hour of half past seven a large crowd had gathered in the Stone Church for the evening meeting, and with Brother Sheehy wielding the baton a spirited song service was had. "Onward, Christian soldiers," "Come, thou Almighty King," and "Stand up, stand up for Jesus" were the songs sung, Brother Sheehy explaining the circumstances under which the verses were written.

The regular meeting was begun with the hymn, "Holy, holy, holy," and Pastor C. Ed. Miller offered prayer. Sister Cyril E. Wight, of Kansas City, Missouri, sang a beautiful song, being accompanied on the piano by Brother Paul Craig. Pastor Miller then in a few words outlined the trend of sermons for the winter as being along the doctrinal and personal testimony line, and introduced Elder John F. Sheehy.

"What is the most valuable asset in life?" was the speaker's question of the congregation, and he proceeded to tell two stories having to do with two "Macs," his friends—Macgregor and McDowell. These stories, told in Brother Sheehy's straightforward, earnest way, were concerned: the first, with a man keeping his word to his wife; the second, the disappointment of a man who was not physically able to keep his word. They brought home to young and old this lesson as the speaker summed it up: "The most valuable asset you have is your word; keep it. It is sacred because it is you. When that is gone, everything is gone. You might have wealth, you might have position, but you, the fine, big, powerful personality you could be, is gone. The greatest, most valuable asset you have is your word. Keep it sacred!"

"Man the social builder" was the title of the moving picture following the sermon, and showed some excellent pictures of the group life of the ancient Aztecs, of present-day inhabitants of South America, of the American Indians, and even of modern American society. "Abram, the friend of God," was the Bible picture.

Sunday School Annual Business Meeting

On Monday evening, October 10, those who are interested in the Sunday school work of the Stone Church district came together in the capacity of a business meeting for the election of officers for another year. The entire corps of present Sunday school officers was sustained. The personnel of the official staff renewed for another year is as follows: General superintendents, G. S. Trowbridge, Glenn Fairbanks, Mary Curtis Cochran; treasurer, G. W. Eastwood; secretary, Orvar Swenson; musical director, Marcine Smith; Christmas offering and tithing secretary, Edith D. Bullard; chairman of reception committee, J. F. Weston; custodian, Edward Darman; superintendents of departments: adult, Robert Hampton; senior, L. W. Rawlings; intermediate, J. E. Kelsey; junior, Lillian Nunamaker; primary, Ruby Williamson and Vada Trask; beginner, Mrs. C. R. Smith. A number of these officers are actively engaged in the work of the School of Religious Education, the courses of which are included in the curriculum of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Lambert Family Reunion

Sunday afternoon there occurred a meeting of the descendants of Elder Richard and Sister Jane Thorner Lambert, at the Campus and Institute Building in Independence. Almost one hundred assembled, which included a few husbands and wives not carrying Lambert family blood, but about seventy-five were of the direct line of decent. A large number of these are resident in Independence, where the heads of the line are Patriarch Joseph R. Lambert, son, and Sister Harriet Lambert Redfield, daughter. One four-generation line, carrying both name and blood, lives in Independence, consisting of Joseph R. Lambert, Richard J. Lambert, Bruce E. Lambert, and Bruce Edward Lambert, junior, a boy baby in his second year.

A Lambert family organization was formed, with Mark H. Siegfried, grandson, as president; Madge Head, granddaughter, vice president; Florence Stevenson, granddaughter, secretary. Annual meetings are in contemplation.

Sunday's meeting had in attendance four from Hancock County, Illinois; at least six from Iowa; seven or more from Saint Joseph, Missouri; two or more from Kansas.

Second Church

Sunday was a very enjoyable day. Thirty-two were present at the eight o'clock meeting and partook of the good Spirit.

Our Sunday school had a good attendance and an interesting lesson.

Elder J. W. A. Bailey instructed us at the eleven o'clock hour.

Regular prayer meeting and priesthood meeting were held in the afternoon.

The Religio is well under way for a profitable winter's work.

In the evening our former pastor, Richard J. Lambert, was the speaker. A large attendance greeted him and enjoyed his talk.

At this hour Brother Arthur Whiting was ordained an elder under the hands of Elders R. J. Lambert and A. K. Dillee.

Liberty Street

We are happy to have Brother John Zion, Sunday school superintendent, back in our midst after an absence due to his illness.

Attendance at Sunday school is improving, and a greater interest is being manifested on the part of the pupils.

At the morning preaching service, we were favored with a vocal solo by Sister Mabel Sellars, "Lead me, Savior," and a number from the choir, "He is calling."

Evangelist U. W. Greene was the speaker for the morning, taking his text from John 12: 20, 21: "And there were certain Greeks among them that came up to worship at the feast: the same came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus."

Religio program was in charge of Assistant Superintendent Erma Peek.

At eight o'clock the choir sang two anthems, "Come to Christ," and "The Master's call," and Sister Leona Robinson contributed a pleasing solo, "Leave it to him."

Elder J. W. A. Bailey presented an interesting illustrated lecture on the theme, "The life of Christ."

Walnut Park

Though the attendance at eight o'clock prayer meeting was only about half that during the summer, the interest was no less. Brothers Ira Burdick, Lurett Whiting, and John Taylor had charge.

Devoted friends of the children had decorated the church beautifully for Sunday school pupils' promotion, and after the lesson the entire school assembled upstairs, where many received promotion certificates and where the school was addressed by Brother A. B. Taylor, the recently appointed assistant of Samuel Thiel, superintendent of Sunday schools in Zion.

Sister Ada Fallon is missed from our services, she being a favorite song leader and Sunday school worker, now having gone to Warrensburg to attend school.

At eleven o'clock F. W. Lanpher presided; prayer by C. K. Green. A violin duet was given by Orlando Nace and Milford Nace, Delta Nace accompanying. The speaker was Elder Howard Andersen, from the scripture 1 John 3: 22, 23, 24. He presented one splendid bit of material after another to impress the lesson upon his hearers that "he that keepeth His commandments dwelleth in Him, and He in him. And hereby we know that He abideth in us by the Spirit which he hath given us." It would seem that none who heard this pastoral sermon can be held blameless if they do not renew their diligence in striving to merit this "abiding Spirit."

At six o'clock a large assembly met for Religio to choose officers for the year. Brother John Taylor, having been chosen superintendent at last Sunday's session, presented nominations, and other nominations were made if desired. Those elected are Earl J. Cox, first assistant superintendent (in charge of programs); K. R. Mosier, second assistant superintendent (to see that classes are supplied with teachers); Ammon Badder, sustained as recreational leader; Lilah Green, secretary; Ruth Lanpher, chorister; Delta Nace, pianist. A lively, interesting discussion was had as to the time for holding Religio, some believing more good could be accomplished by meeting on Friday evening, but the vote prevailed for the usual time, Sunday at six o'clock. Sister E. E. Moorman had prepared a short program, which completed the session.

Following Religio, at 7.30, a half hour's song service was enjoyed, Margaret Gard directing. Opening the evening's service Sister Thelma Vincent sang, "I come to thee," accompanied by Mrs. Howard Andersen. The service consisted of songs and talks by Missionary V. D. Ruch and wife and daughter, recently returned from Norway. This was unique and held the attention of the large audience for an hour and a half. They will doubtless be asked to present this or a similar program in many of our branches.

Enoch Hill

Elder Alvin Knisley spoke Sunday morning to an attractive audience along the line of ministerial experiences.

The Sunday afternoon prayer service proved on last Sabbath to be an exceptionally fine meeting, there being sixty-five souls present who for more than an hour sat under the sweet influence of the Spirit. Pastor Brewer, in charge, took his preliminary remarks from Doctrine and Covenants 86:4-6, and was blessed with inspiration. Divine admonition given to the Saints exhorted the priesthood and the members to work together in unity and good feeling, stirring them up to remembrance of their duties toward the accomplishment of the goal of the church in latter days. Three ordinations provided for by the recent quarterly conference in Zion were had at this time, Brothers V. F. Rogers, Amos Allen, and W. D. Brewer officiating. R. E. Whittsett was ordained an elder, E. V. Rawlins, a priest, and W. H. Stevens, a deacon. With these members of the priesthood added to our local corps of workers, we are sure Enoch Hill congregation will advance to greater heights.

During the same hour that her father was set apart for the duties of priest, Clara Louise, infant daughter of Brother and Sister E. V. Rawlins, was blessed.

Elder E. E. Thomas occupied the evening hour, giving the Saints a splendid discourse, crowded with timely warning and information.

Spring Branch

We are a little slow in getting into form again after interruptions due to summer Campus activities, vacationing, etc., but Sunday's services indicated a healthy reaction toward normalcy.

All who were away on vacations are back at their posts. The Harvest Festival and centennial exposition are written into history. The weather is ideal. Why shouldn't we be glad to respond to the responsibilities of service that beckon us on?

All services were well attended, and a good spirit prevailed throughout the day.

At the eleven o'clock hour Brethren C. Ed. Miller and George A. Gould were present to assist in the ordination of two of the brethren, provided for at the last quarterly conference of Zion. Following the ordinations, Brother Gould occupied the pulpit, using the subject, "God is love," which by coincident happened to be what Brother Alma Tankard had chosen for the evening discourse. But the subject is large and the field is broad; these brethren were in no danger of stealing thoughts or ideas from each other. Their viewpoints taken from different angles brought to us two splendid, helpful messages.

The choir will assemble again for rehearsal next Thursday night. All former members and as many new as are interested are requested to be present.

The local priesthood met at Brother W. F. Smith's residence Sunday afternoon at three o'clock to outline their work for the fall and winter.

On Thursday night, October 20, the ladies will serve a chicken pie supper at the Stone Church dining hall, and when we say chicken pie, we mean plus all the frills that go with it. Remember the date. Save your change and your appetite and come. Spring Branch reputation for good things is your guarantee. Price, fifty cents; proceeds to be applied to church debt.

Kansas City Stake

Central

On Saturday evening, October 1, at 8.30 p. m., a number of friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Swanson to witness the marriage ceremony of their daughter, Katherine, to Mr. Charles Slawson.

Preceding the ceremony, Sister N. B. Baldwin (nee Julia Edwards) sang "Because," and "I love you truly." Brother J. A. Tanner uttered the words that united these young people, and following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Slawson left for a honeymoon trip to Chicago. They will make their home in Wichita, Kansas, and we regret very much to lose Katherine, as she has been a familiar figure in the Sunday school, as well as other departments of the church. We extend our good wishes to these young people and hope that the future holds many good things in store for them.

Friday evening the church was well filled with an attentive audience for the recital of Lucille M. Sandy, of the junior department of the Sunday school. The rostrum was very prettily decorated in asparagus, ferns, and chrysanthemums, and was a very beautiful sight. Lucille was assisted by Marie Tennal, Harriet Drayer, Rebecca Dunn, Vanita Ross, and Margaret Von Engeln, who rendered able assistance in making this program a wonderful success. Also Sisters Elizabeth Hitchcock and Luella Wight rendered two beautiful duets, and the evening was much enjoyed by those present. The efforts of these young people to cultivate their talents was gratifying. A small admission was charged, and the proceeds are to be used for material, furnishings, etc., for the junior department. These are an ever busy body of youngsters and are to be commended for the spirit of activity they maintain. The name of their class is "Watch Us Workers," and they are indeed all their name implies, "workers."

The journey to Palestine ended October 1, the women being the victors. They are assured a very pleasant and agreeable surprise is being prepared for them, as it was the bargain that the losing factor should entertain the winner.

The Punctuality Contest, sponsored along with the race, was won by the Semper-Fidelis. Their average attendance for the quarter was 109 per cent. I. X. L. ranked second, with an average of 91.8 per cent, while the Ladies' Opportunity Class ranked third, their average being 91.5 per cent. The Excelsiors retained the cup for the most efficient work during the contest.

Sunday was a very pleasant day, with the sun shining forth on Mother Nature, clothed in her beautiful colors, and there was a very good attendance at Sunday school, 275 being present. There was a collection of $13.65.

At eleven the main auditorium was filled to capacity, the opening hymn being, "From Greenland's icy mountains." Prayer was offered by Elder A. R. White. The choir very fittingly rendered "The Lord is my light," Brother Clayton Wolfe singing the tenor solo. Elder John Sheehy was the speaker of the hour, delivering a splendid discourse to a very enthusiastic and listening congregation.

At 7.45 p. m. Elder J. A. Tanner continued his missionary sermon, there being a goodly attendance. Following his discourse, in which he endeavored to show the clearness of the gospel taught in our time as it was in the days of Peter and Paul, the usual educational pictures were shown. These services are proving quite interesting, and we are sure are to be far-reaching in their results.

Brother George Bowser, one of the promising young men in the Young Men's Progressive Bible Class, journeyed to Saint Joseph Saturday afternoon, where he took unto himself a companion for life, she being Miss Mabel McKany before their marriage. Only a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Bowser departed for a honeymoon of several weeks in sunny California. They will make their home at 2622 East 34th Street after their return. We welcome Mrs. Bowser in our midst, and although she may not be a member of our faith, we are sure she will prove an interesting worker, as she has been an attendant at many of our services.

The annual young people's meetings of the Kansas City Stake will be held at Central from November 13 to 20. Apostle D. T. Williams has been chosen as the speaker, and preparations are well under way to make them a big success.

Grandview

We have just closed a series of meetings with Elder W. D. Tordoff as speaker. While there is only one to be baptized, the Saints received much good instruction, and the indications are they have been greatly benefited. There are several others who doubtless will make up their minds in the near future.

There has been a growing sentiment for the purchase of a pipe organ, and a fund has been started by popular subscription, with the idea of building the fund as rapidly as possible until it will be great enough to purchase an organ. It was plainly stated that money contributed to this fund should in no way affect the regular tithes, offerings, and contributions. It was also announced that anyone wishing to borrow a small amount from this fund as capital to multiply for the fund might do so. Sister Mildred Swearingen, head of the musical department, has charge of the fund.

The Gleaners' Class has purchased and presented to the church a new outdoor electrical sign for the purpose of announcing the services. Sister Dan Tucker, cradle roll superintendent, has had the pleasure of adding three more babies to the cradle roll. The new parents are Brother and Sister George Hawkins, Brother and Sister George Pierce, and Brother and Sister Jack Miller.

Second Kansas City

The pageant, "Remember Cumorah," was given the evening of Sunday, September 25 and will be remembered by many for a long time. It was beautiful, impressive, and inspiring. The church was filled with an audience that gave attention and seemed to appreciate the truths that were being presented, if one can judge by the perfect order and the quiet solemnity that prevailed during the entire time necessary for rendering the pageant. Much of the credit for the success of the pageant is due Sister W. C. Payne and Sister E. S. Zink, who were in charge of all arrangements, also practice and costumes. At the request of the Armourdale Saints, the pageant was given there on Friday, September 30, and again a good crowd and splendid order showed their appreciation of the Book of Mormon story.

Sister Velma Duzan won first and second prizes for cake and pie at the Harvest Festival held in Independence last month. We are pleased because one of our active members is an expert in her particular line of work.

Our sacramental service was enjoyed because of the sweet and peaceful spirit that was with us. The evening hour was occupied by Brother F. P. Hitchcock. The Book of Mormon was his subject. The sermon was fine and gave us a desire to learn more of this interesting book which the majority of the members here are reading again.

Sunday school and Religio are increasing in numbers and interest. Brother R. J. Crayne visited us last Sunday in the interests of the educational feature of the Religio work, and we expect to work with him that we may continue to grow and develop.

Bennington Heights Church

Sister Emma Baldwin has returned home after being with her sister in Wisconsin for over a year.

Sister Lula Tyrrell, who moved to Detroit last summer, is now here for a month's visit with her parents and friends.

Brother and Sister Lon A. Cantrell, who also moved to Detroit last summer, have moved back to their Kansas City home. They visited Niagara Falls and other places of interest in the East, and they find they prefer to live among their friends in the vicinity of Zion.

Elder R. L. Bishop, pastor of Mount Washington Church, and a number of Saints from Bennington drove to the farm of Brother and Sister James McLanahan last Sunday afternoon and held an open-air preaching service. Several of the neighbors were present and were interested in Brother Bishop's talk. The McLanahan farm is near Greenwood, Missouri.

Sister William Beaman and Sister George Garrett are reported sick this week.

At the eleven o'clock hour last Sunday morning, Brother George Willis preached to the children, while Elder Ralph Farrell, the radio pastor, talked to the older folks. In the evening Elder W. H. Kelley was the speaker.

Argentine

Bennington and Northeast churches' class in dramatics combined to put on the pageant, "Cumorah," at 7.45 p. m., to a crowded house. As presented, it portrayed the coming forth of the Book of Mormon in a most realistic manner. A series of sermons is cut to an hour and a half's duration, but with gratifying results.

Missionary Hunker Writes from Norway

In July, definite word reached me that the church wished me to take a mission to Scandinavia. It was no easy task to decide to accept. It seemed too great a task for my undertaking. Deep concern gave rise to a terrific struggle within the inner man. Had it not been for the advice of my faithful companion, I do not know what the outcome would have been. She urged me to fulfill my mission and to do my duty. Her cheerful willingness to perform her part gave me courage and spurred me on. She is making the greater sacrifice.

On August 18 I bade farewell to those most dear to me. There arose emotions akin to grief, yet mingled with feelings of spiritual gladness and wonderment at the revelation of those qualities of character and principles of life that make love, sacrifice, and life itself worth while.

Stopping at the Kirtland reunion, I met Brother and Sister Ruch. It was indeed a pleasure to greet them again. We spent some profitable time considering the needs of the Norwegian mission. We spent two busy days together at Kirtland.

To visit Kirtland, to visit the Temple, to think of the sacrifice and consecration of the Saints who built that wonderful edifice, was inspiring, but to meet and mingle with the Saints there was better. Meeting former friends there was a genuine pleasure. I responded to the request to speak at the closing service. After the sermon Apostle Budd entirely surprised me by presenting me with a fine collection which the Saints had liberally donated at his private solicitation. Elder J. R. Grice gladly offered his aid in securing a much-desired Portable Corona typewriter.

While at Kirtland there came to me through the influence of the Spirit an assurance that God would take care of my loved ones and preserve them in safety during my absence. The feeling of dread that had troubled me was lifted, and a sweet peace filled my soul. From then until now I have felt the presence of the Spirit to strengthen my faith and hope. No one knows how much this means to me. I hope to prove faithful to my duty in response to this blessing.

From Kirtland to Niagara Falls, Canada, I traveled by car with the family McAninch. I was warmly received by Saints and friends and preached for them in their nice church. From there I proceeded to New York City to make final arrangements incident to sailing.

In New York I looked up a Swedish sister. She lives far from the common centers, and to find her was a real task. No one seemed to know just where the place was. After walking five or six miles I found the place. I also found a real Saint. She had not seen any of our missionaries for over seven years. She can neither speak nor understand English so can not attend our services in Brooklyn. She is crippled and unable to get about. Yet in spite of these handicaps she is faithful, loves the work, and is interested in its development. She was able to understand my Norwegian, so we could converse. Her face was alight with the purity of life and the consecration of a soul to high ideals. Upon leaving I decided that the little visit was worth much more than I thought it would be before I found the place.

On August 27 I boarded the S. S. Stavangerfjord. Not one I knew was at the pier. I felt somewhat alone until the reassurance came to me that all would be well. It was a cool, misty day. We soon left the city behind. All too soon the shores of my native land faded away in the fog and the distance. Many thoughts went flashing across my consciousness.

The voice of a man accosting me as to my interest in returning to Norway awakened me from my reverie. Seeing the color of a clergy fare book in his pocket, I perceived that he was a clergyman. When I stated my mission, he began to assail Mormonism. I made bold to tell him what we believe and that we are not Mormons in the usually accepted meaning of the word. He wanted to know if we accepted the Book of Mormon. Yes. Then the usual tirade about adding to the word of God. But why repeat an old, old story? Earnestly I defended our work. He pitied me for being so deceived, and advised me to give my heart to God in some good cause! After some effort in repressing a smile, I seriously informed him that I had tried to give not only my heart, but my whole life to the greatest cause that God had revealed to man.

Another experience quite different was my meeting a splendid young man of noble ideals and fine intelligence; a student of theology, he was nevertheless liberal and kind in his views. We engaged in many worth-while conversations. We discussed various phases of Christianity. He became very much interested in our teachings and expressed his admiration for our beautiful, practical ideals. He read a number of our tracts. Our social ideals and our program for the building of Zion especially appealed to him. I shall remember him as a man of sterling qualities, and a friend.

The sea voyage, for the most part, was foggy and sometimes rough. For some this roughness caused discomfort, at times followed by unmistakable evidences of a well-known malady. Then contributions to the creatures of the deep were quite liberal.

On September 5, seven a. m., our good ship entered the mouth of the beautiful Bergensfjord, leading to Bergin. The day broke bright and warm. The passengers stormed the decks to gaze at the beautiful scenery. What a welcome sight after nine days on the vast expanse of the mighty deep! We had had a safe journey and were nearing our first destination. As to further experiences, more later.

And now, through the columns of the HERALD, I wish to express my deep appreciation for all the Saints and friends all along my line of travel have done for me. The loyal support and cooperation of the Saints in Southwestern Iowa District, where I labored mostly in missionary capacity, will ever be remembered. I learned to love those good people. The Scandinavian Saints in Independence have been very kind. The help afforded me in Chicago by Brother P. G. Fairbanks and by relatives of my wife are pleasant remembrances. The kindness of the Saints at the Kirtland reunion and in Niagara Falls, Canada, I cherish with the utmost respect. Last, but not least, the welcome home of Brother and Sister Squire in Brooklyn made my last days in America very pleasant. May God bless one and all. May he help us in carrying on the great work intrusted to us.

OSLO, NORWAY, September 23.

E. Y. HUNKER.

MISCELLANEOUS

Notice to Branch Presidents

There are some branch presidents who have not yet returned the small slips which were sent to the branches for the use of the members who desired to declare their intention to read or reread the Book of Mormon this year. Many hundreds of these slips have been returned, and the result thus far has more than exceeded our expectations.

Doubtless every branch president will want to see his congregation represented by those who feel thus inclined. Therefore be prompt in placing this matter before the congregation, distributing these slips for signatures, and returning them to the First Presidency.

Additional slips will be gladly sent on request.
