3. With a consistent and intelligent Sunday missionary service the need for a special missionary effort, once or twice a year will become evident.

Again, as in every worth-while endeavor, a lot of real work is required to make the special series successful. Newspaper advertising, distribution of handbills and lots of visiting by members of the priesthood, women's organizations and young people's groups as well as special prayer services and extra council meetings of the branch officers and other leaders all tend to assure interest and good attendance. Having this all begun well in advance of the time for the special series, the minister upon whom will fall the responsibility of delivering the sermon, will find his task made easier and success more abundant.

Another successful method is the use of the cottage missionary service. This is a very fertile field especially for the local priesthood, and one to which the local priesthood could easily adapt himself.

To function well in this capacity the speaker need not be a pulpiteer, nor an experienced public speaker. He must, however, know his material, he must be able to teach, he must adopt a conversational tone of voice and be able to make a good defense of the work when being attacked. There should shine from his very countenance the Love of God.

Thousands of people can be reached in this way that would not be reached in a special series held at the church. Openings can be made in many various ways chief of which is through some church member who will open his home for these meetings and who will invite his neighbors to attend the services. The writer has found it advantageous, however, to move into the home of a nonmember as soon as possible since this ties the nonmember closer to the church by assuming some of the responsibility for the service. This also has a tendency to increase the attendance since people seem more free to come to the house of a nonmember.

The Law of Love

By Charles H. Arven

CENTURIES ago Jesus gave this great commandment Love Thy Neighbor. The commandment endures as long as humanity inherits the earth. The world then, did not appreciate the commandment and hesitated to receive it. As a commandment it was hard to assimilate—Love thyself was the predominant love, and appears to be today.

But after centuries have passed, we find some of the greatest intelligent minds, beginning to see and understand the value of this commandment. They are beginning to see, a life lived for itself alone, no matter how much wealth it may possess must necessarily be a blank and barren one. Love thy neighbor as thyself is next to the greatest commandment, and rightfully placed.

Many of the most intelligent minds whether religious or not, are seeing clearly the world will never enjoy a permanent foundation of successful economics until the great law is accepted. Many of these great minds are reaching out and striving with might and main to improve conditions of their fellow men, and make humanity a better one. The world is beautiful and would respond generously if man applied the law of love. Little by little events are casting shadows, typical of the coming thousand years.

Jesus knew love was the predominant force of the world, even though it had lain dormant for centuries and the world was not ready, and would not receive it. Jesus knew humanity would never make great spiritual progress, nor its economic foundation be stable without observing the great commandment. The selfishness and greed of humanity must be erased, and the law of love be recognized.

The history of humanity has been a stormy one from the time of disobedience in the garden of Eden. The world has refused to obey God's laws, especially the law of love, and is the reason it has brought misery and sorrow upon itself; the reason it is groaning in the tribulations today. Love thy neighbor said Jesus. Do this and the world shall rest in peace.

Next to selfishness and greed, fear predominates in the lack of love for our neighbor. The disregard of love for humanity might be attributed to instinct of self-preservation, but I believe that selfishness, fear, and especially greed, are the main factors, and the hardest to eliminate. The law of love, and the law of hate and greed, cannot cooperate, they are extremely antagonistic; the law of hate and greed has no mercy but is continually tearing down. But the law of love creates life and sustains it, creates happiness, makes peace and good will to all men, and is continually striving to make a better world. Love is a teacher of spirituality and leads into religious realms of perfect peace and security, creates trust and confidence, and is a maker of great and beautiful characters.

Fear and greed are the greatest obstacles the law of love has to contend with; yet love works quietly is patient and forbearing. Its sweet influence is slowly but surely exerting pressure on many intelligent minds and through their earnest endeavors, love will find its place in the end, and be recognized as a great and supreme law. The universe, and all creation of life is based on the law of love and justice. Greed and hate cannot exist forever, sin must destroy itself in the end, but the law of love is immortal; it cannot die, but will reign supreme when sin exists no more.

If love thy neighbor was properly understood by the world, and it knew the blessings it would bring upon humanity, nations would be friendly; war preparations would cease; brotherly love we talk so much about would be a reality; peace on earth and good will to all men would really exist; mankind would enjoy such peace and contentment as the world has never known. God's laws are immutable and if the law of love is not recognized in this dispensation of time, it will find its place in the great millennium.

Another serious problem confronting the world is our social customs. But to change society, we must first change individualism. The law of love would do this and eliminate vexing problems, for the law would make no mistakes in its function. Rather would it build a stable foundation on which society might rest secure. Jesus was an advocate of love, and taught his disciples they must love one another that they might be one in intent and purpose. He told them of wars, of rumors of war; and the signs that would foretell his second coming. Centuries have passed. Nevertheless, the commandment still stands as a standard law, and only by observing it can humanity hope to live in peace.

And thus the law of love stands patiently waiting to be recognized, waiting for the time when humanity will be free from the curse of greed, fear, and hate; when a child can play on the hill of an asp and receive no hurt; when love has a chance to eliminate the misery, fear, and distrust of the world, then indeed shall there (Continued on page 686)

Saving Our Soils for Future Generations

By Roy H. Mortimore

Professor, Mathematics and Physics

THE ECONOMIC STRESSES of our present and immediate past with all their attendant physical and mental distresses are teaching the human family many lessons of basic and far reaching significance. Paramount among these stands out the thesis that the destiny of future generations cannot be left to blind chance, but that their happiness and security will depend to a large extent upon the wisdom of the plans laid down and the programs launched by the present generation. One phase of this program must surely provide means of curtailing the dissipation of our natural resources. With a filling station at every turn in the road and millions of gallons of gasoline burned every year, it is difficult to get the layman to appreciate the fact that not many generations hence our supply of crude oil will have been exhausted. Yet, economic geologists assure us that this is true. Furthermore, with our markets glutted with the products of the soil, it seems difficult to impress upon the average citizen the significance of the devastating effects of soil erosion. Agricultural engineers realize that over one hundred twenty million people depend for their food solely upon the direct or indirect products of the soil. They have been diligently at work during the past few years accumulating data regarding the causes and the extent of soil losses due to erosion and have carefully developed methods of soil preservation.

IT HAS BEEN ESTIMATED that during the year of 1932 three billion tons of soil were removed from the farms of the United States, representing a loss of four hundred million dollars. About one third of the tillable land of the United States has lost all or nearly all of its top soil. Many of the remaining acres have lost much of their fertility. Our present cropping system, hectic and wasteful though it is, removed only one twentieth as much plant food from the soil as does erosion.

In order that we may more fully appreciate the seriousness of such ruthless dissipation of this valuable natural resource, let us consider the nature of soils and the history of their development.

EACH YEAR throughout the countless ages of our earth's existence as a planet, a complicated set of physical and chemical processes have been at work breaking into fragments and taking into solution the solid rocks of its entire. The rate of these soil building processes is a function of many variables. In regions of relatively steep slopes and large rainfall, streams are ever busy with their grinding tools of rock fragments cutting from their channels bits of rock and depositing them as sand and alluvium farther down the stream where the gradient is lower. Where temperature variations are excessive unequal expansion and contraction cause fragments to shatter from the surfaces of massive rocks. As water freezes in the fissures and cracks in rock surfaces, its expansion splits them into smaller and smaller pieces. Many solid rocks crumble to pieces due to the combining of certain of their chemical compounds with the oxygen or carbon dioxide of the air. Some rocks are attacked by the weak acid formed by the combination of rain water with atmospheric carbon dioxide. Still others contain compounds dissolved in water and carried away by ground water or by streams. Many parts of the earth's surface have been covered by a thick layer of pulverized rock by nature's master rock crusher, the glacier. At least five great ice sheets have pushed over the North American continent from the north, grinding great masses of solid rock into fragments ranging in size from boulders weighing several tons to microscopic particles of rock flour. One of the older glaciers moved into Missouri as far south as the Missouri river. Each of the five extended into Iowa. So you see much of the fertile soil of the corn belt is of glacial origin.

Side by side with these processes of rock weathering, which pulverized solid rocks, transportation is also going on. Principal among these agencies of transportation is running water. When rain falls at a rate too great to be absorbed by the accumulated mantle rock, a portion of it must run off to lower levels, carrying with it at times large quantities of rock particles. The wind under favorable conditions is also an effective agent of transportation, as was evidenced a few days ago by the accumulation of soil drifts along certain Iowa highways to such depth that traffic was blocked.

So you see the rate at which inorganic materials for soil building accumulate is a balance between weathering and transportation. On steep slopes transportation keeps pace with weathering, consequently there is no accumulation, so that even in thousands of years nature's processes leave bare rocks still exposed on the sheer cliffs of mountain regions. On gentler slopes weathering exceeds transportation so that soil materials accumulate.

When a sufficient thickness of finely pulverized rock particles have collected so that rain water is held in storage in form of ground water and is fed up to the surface by capillarity, conditions are favorable for plant growth. As plants grow to maturity they leave to decay portions of their roots, stems, and leaves. This residue of organic material mixed with barren rock particles provides favorable conditions for the growth of thousands of soil bacteria favorable to plant growth. These processes continued for many centuries have developed our fertile soils.

You will readily see from the nature of soil building that any estimate of the rate of accumulations is necessarily unreliable since it varies greatly from time to time and place to place. It is sufficient to say that the soils of our tillable lands have surely required millions of years for their building, and that when they are lost due to the thoughtlessness of our farmers, millions more years will be required for their rebuilding, unless expensive artificial methods are employed. It is now definitely known that a field of twenty percent slope plowed up from blue grass sod or timbered land will completely lose its thick fertile top soil in five years continuous corn cropping if the corn rows are parallel to the slopes. The most unfortunate aspect of the whole problem lies in the fact that an excellent corn crop will be raised during the first year and the yearly decrease will be sufficiently gradual that many farmers today cultivating such slopes do not realize the losses they are suffering and the handicaps they are imposing upon future generations.

Under the supervision of the federal government eight erosion control forms distributed throughout the United States have been operated for the past three years. At these experiment stations precise measurements of the exact amounts of soil and water losses have been measured under varying conditions of field cropping. These experiments have yielded some very gratifying results. They have shown that the causes of the greatest soil losses can easily be corrected and that the crop plans and practices which contribute most to the preserving of soils for future generations also yield greater financial returns for the same amount of labor in relatively short periods of time. They have demonstrated that the greatest soil losses occur on cultivated land when corn is grown for several years in succession: that losses are incredibly less if corn rows follow contour lines than if they run parallel to the direction of the greatest slope; and obviously the steeper the slopes the greater the soil and water loss. They have found that surfaces, although quite steep, well-sodded with blue grass, clover or alfalfa, suffer practically no soil loss and relatively small water loss; that red clover is especially effective as a soil binder; its benefits even carry over to the following year when corn follows clover. In general, it was learned that any crop which covers the surface of the soil fairly completely throughout the rainy months so that the water runs off immediately following a rain, if broken up into very small streams and not allowed to concentrate in larger rivulets, contributes to soil conservation and adds to the soil absorption of water. The water thus absorbed is held in reserve for use in periods of dry weather.

The results of these experiments have been so satisfactory that the federal government has designated a number of experimental areas, of approximately two hundred thousand acres each, distributed throughout the United States, on which government employees will cooperate with the farmers in improving the practices which effect soil erosion.

I shall outline some of the recommended practices. Land areas steeper than twelve percent should be seeded for permanent pasture. Corn should not be planted on areas five to twelve percent slope more than one year out of three. Red clover should be used in rotation with grain crops on cultivated land. Corn rows should follow contour lines and never down slopes. When a hillside is planted to corn, alternate strips of land following contours should be seeded to some grass crop. Where steep land has suffered a large amount of sheet erosion and numerous gullies are starting, terraces and diversion ditches should direct the immediate water run off from these areas so that they may be seeded and further gullying prevented. Larger gullies which are already cut should be plowed in and erosion stopped by sod bog dams, wire dams, brush dams, or rock dams.

The erosion control program does not have as its goal the production of greater quantities of food supplies, but it does aim to produce sufficient amounts to meet the needs of our population and at the same time preserve the remaining fertility of our soils and to gradually rebuild our deleted soils for the use of future generations.

Our Standards for Leisure Time • • •

By L. S. Wight

THE FOLLOWING STORY is told of some Japanese visitors who had an appointment at a lecture hall in New York City. Their hosts whisked them on the subway, into a surface car, and then into a taxicab. One of the guests at the end of the marathon asked, "Couldn't we have reached our destination by any one of these means?" The host replied, "Oh, yes, but we saved eight minutes." Whereupon the oriental gentleman stoically remarked, "Now what shall we do with the eight minutes?"

Leisure time is a serious problem today. We must find the way to turn spare time to profit. Latter Day Saints have a definite goal. That goal is to build Zion. To build a house the builder must know his materials. He must also know how to put those materials into form to create the house. The church membership is Zion building material. For future building the youth is the most important part of our material. To fashion the younger members into Zion building material we must learn how to help them make the most of their leisure time. Is this problem going to be a stumblingblock to prevent our accomplishing our goal, or is it going to be a stepping stone on which we will get a firmer footing on our way to Zion? That is the question Latter Day Saints must answer. Unemployment, part time work, shortened hours have given the American people hours and days of leisure time. "Now what shall we do with it?" As Saints can we use it for Zion building purposes?

THE STARTING POINT in solving the leisure time problem is to learn how to keep a balance in our life habits. To do that we must follow a program, which takes into consideration the individual and family needs of each one. Such a program must recognize both work and play. Time should be budgeted, not wasted. To budget time wisely one must learn early to determine relative values. We must face the fact that the work of building Zion in this generation must be done under circumstances entirely different from those in existence when the church was first organized. Therefore we must be willing to adjust ourselves to these changed conditions. Although it may be hard to get some people to recognize the necessity of teaching individuals how to play, we must have recreation and if we can learn to apportion our time intelligently and engage in those sports or activities which will actually re-create the body, we can learn how to use every minute of time purposefully.

Obviously it is the younger people who will most readily respond to such teaching and therein lies the hope of developing a generation of Zion builders. The place to start that training is in the home. Our first job is to set up standards for home life that will make for constructive use of leisure time. Parents should set the example by organizing their own lives so the children may get the habit of controlling the use of their time. Before deciding how to do this let us see if history can give us a cue for the best way in which to solve this leisure time problem.

IN THE EARLY DAYS of the nation the problem of getting bare necessities such as food and clothing was solved only by long hours of toil. Each family was forced to produce most of what it used. It took ingenuity and creative energy to properly solve all such problems. The people of that day had their recreation problem too, but it was usually limited to finding a little time for recreation. When they did find the time they also found it necessary to create the plan to use that time. They could not push a button to get light for a meeting room. They did not have access to public libraries for books. They could not drop into a picture show to have a couple of hours of entertainment manufactured for them. They were forced by circumstances to create their own entertainment. The weekly literary society meeting in the little town hall or schoolhouse which included debates on current questions furnished the chief entertainment which many enjoyed. That was the principal reason for the high type of statesmanship found in many of our government leaders of the pioneer days. A large percentage of the boys and girls of those days learned to be creative. That is the key to our solution of the leisure time problem today. They learned how to make much out of very little. They learned how to make play of many tasks. They learned how to pool their efforts in solving community problems by organizing "bees" and found that in spite of sore muscles, the completion of such a job left a feeling of exhilaration. They found that social contact in group accomplishment actually re-created the body. Re-creation of the body comes not only from doing something different, but from the spiritual enlightenment which comes with rubbing elbows with a fellow man in working together.

I am not concerned so much about finding things for our youngsters to do as I am about helping them learn how to so plan their time and energy that they will always be able under any circumstances to find something worth while to do. This does not mean that they should be left without direction, but I am merely trying to emphasize the importance of teaching them the lesson of self-reliance. You say this is a mighty hard job. I know it is. I have heard the youngster say, "But Dad, what is there to do?" when he wanted to go to a picture show and couldn't either because he didn't have the price of admission, or because he had seen the number of shows allotted for a given period of time. That situation gave me as a father the chance to drive home to that boy the importance of learning how to plan and to use his spare time. The easy thing for me to have done would have been to reach for a dime and tell him to go to the show. I would have had more rest and peace at the moment, but I would have been only postponing the time of accounting. I also would have increased the size of the problem. Taking the easiest way will not solve the problem.

If I had yielded to the easiest way I would have defeated the patient efforts of a mother who had tried to direct that boy's ideas and energies all through his childhood. She was depending on my cooperation because she knew that the time would come when that boy would apparently turn from his mother to his father. That is a natural condition and can be met by careful planning. Without cooperation a father may upset all the years of tedious effort which are a mother's lot. By fully cooperating a father can insure success to her patient direction.

Nature has endowed nearly all children with boundless energy. That is their only way of developing. That energy must be expended under proper direction if the child is to grow. If it is merely inhibited it will result in the same thing as trying to hold the steam inside a boiling kettle. There will be an explosion.

EVERY CHILD also has constantly changing new interests. Many times parents have chided the child for not being able to stick to any one thing. Such criticism merely exposes the ignorance of the parents. The condition is natural. The thing for the parent to do is to help the child learn how to get the most out of his existing interest. When the child wants to change let him do so, but cooperate with him by helping him learn to plan the use of his energy in doing what he wants to do.

Let me illustrate. Most boys at some time get the fever to be stamp collectors. We have seen this come and go with our boys. When it developed we suggested the way to account for their activity. While they were using all spare time doing the thing they wanted to do they were learning the basic lesson of how to plan for and keep a balance in the use of their time and energy. Instead of permitting them to express their desires in a haphazard way, the expression of those desires became a practical opportunity to teach them to be creative and to control their time. When their interest switched to something else we assured them that what they did was their own affair. We had nothing to say about that, but when they did change we helped them use the new interest as a means to keep in practice on basic principles of control.

REGARDLESS of the children's interests our concern was to see that they learned how to use wisdom in planning their time, and that they learned also how to use it constructively. Our efforts have met with varying degrees of success. Sometimes it is very discouraging but that is only part of the game. Success comes only by recognizing as well as planning and preparing for these natural changes in the life of every child. We have seen one reward in a developed ability to make and execute plans, that is at least far ahead of what I was able to do as a boy of the same age. It is apparent that as maturity comes to the trained child, who has been permitted to develop his own ingenuity and self assurance, his only time problem will be to find enough spare time for the constructive things he wants to do.

If such planning can be tied to church problems, those problems become vital to the growing child. As he develops, his interest in church problems will increase. In that way he will become infused with a desire to help solve problems of church work. In other words he will become a Zion builder in a natural way. The time to start such training is when the child is young. All children like to do things of their own choosing. The junior church is the best avenue for the child to learn how to go to church and to become a part of the church service. Let him use his own initiative. Let him feel that it is his service. He will be doing in a natural way the things he will be called on later to do in a larger way. Having had the chance to do them in a natural environment he can easily go from one to the other.

Let me illustrate with a personal experience. I was permitted to think that taking part in a prayer service was so important that it was a big thing. The more I attended services the more I developed a desire to do this "big" thing. However with the increased desire was an increased awe at doing it. In spite of public speaking training I was older than I care to admit before I was able to force myself to take part. And that was accomplished only by taking hold of the back of the seat ahead and pulling myself to the floor. (Continued on page 685.)

Lesson Eleven—June 10

The Kingdom: A Community of Free Moral Will

This lesson is concerned with the part men must play in building The Kingdom. The Kingdom is the instrument of the moral will of men who will to do the will of God. The Kingdom must be the outcome of man's conversion to the ways of God. The Kingdom will come, therefore, as soon as enough Kingdom-builders choose to establish its righteousness.

PERSONAL EVALUATIONS

Christianity asks men to make their own religious choices with their own eyes open. It laments ignorance and extols intelligence. It says: Come, let us reason together. Be ready to give a reason. The ignorant do not yield themselves to God's service, but go about to establish their own righteousness; which, because it is the choice of ignorance, is not the righteousness of God. The strong meat of The Kingdom belongs to those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. Where there is no vision the people perish. (See Proverbs 29:18; 1 Peter 3:15; Hebrews 5:14; Romans 10:1-3; Doctrine and Covenants 17:17; 102:3, et al.)

Each man of the Church should have his own opinion about Church affairs. If he has an opinion at all, it must be his own. His conclusion that Zion is The Kingdom should rest on adequate reasons. His reason may not be as good as the reason of another, but at least it may be an adequate reason to him. "Till we all come to the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God" means that. Judgment is true. Sufficient date together with true judgment leads to a common ethical standard. An enlightened moral will leads to The Kingdom.

SEEING THE KINGDOM

"Except a man be born again he cannot see The Kingdom." He may see miracles without being born again. He may see the harmony of a church organization that has apostles, prophets, etc., with what is written in the Bible, without being born again; but he cannot see The Kingdom.

Each person must do his own seeing; for how is it possible that another should do his seeing for him? Each man must do his own entering of The Kingdom; for how can another do his entering for him? How can a man choose to be righteous after the manner of Kingdom-building if he himself cannot apprehend what Kingdom-building is?

"Except a man be born again" means that Kingdom builders must come to have new concepts of right; and that, having a new moral sense, they are capable of new moral evaluations. A Kingdom builder must rise above customary morality; his moral code must be higher than the moral code of The World. His righteousness must exceed.

OUR PART

The emphasis that has been put upon the part God is to play in the establishment of his Kingdom has blinded us to the part we are to play. While it is God's business to devise The Kingdom code, and to cause that it shall come to our attention for contemplation, it is none the less our business to evaluate that code, for only if we evaluate it can we have a reason for believing it is of God. Only if we evaluate it can it be our conviction of right. We cannot make moral choices without making moral evaluations. It is we who must choose whom we will serve.

God cannot establish his Kingdom against the will of those who are to be the subjects of that Kingdom. There is only one possibility that Zion may be redeemed before men choose to set up the Zionite mode of government, and that is that men shall first have been reduced to the status of human checkers on a social checker board; that is, having his agency taken away from him. And a society built in that manner by such characters would not be Zion, The Kingdom.

Doctrine and Covenants 36:12 and 77:1 clearly imply such a relationship of man's free moral will to the reign of God. They tell the story of man's moral self-discipline in preparation for the reign of Christ. And they mean that he will come to reign whose right it is to reign when, of his own free moral will, man shall "crown him Lord of all."

That is the reason Zion must be redeemed "before" Christ shall come. It is the act of redeeming Zion; it is the experience in making government godly; it is the preparation that grows out of this exercise that prepares the way for the coming of Christ. And those who wait for Christ to come to redeem Zion will never gain the experience that will fit them for his coming. It is we who must do something about the coming of The Kingdom.

INSPIRED LEADERSHIP

As matters stand, intellectual capacities in men differ. Some have little if any inventive genius. But any normal person can understand the mechanism of an auto and use it for the purposes for which autos are made. There are not many Edisons; but there are many mechanics with intelligence enough to understand, construct, and put to their proper uses the electrical devices invented by that exceptional brain.

Not all men can think their own way unaided through the problem of The Government. But there are many men who can understand what inspired leaders have to say about The Government. All that is necessary is that those who understand shall take the trouble to rightly divide the word of truth that others may have opportunity to contemplate it. It is the business of those who are called to be ministers for God to "teach"; which means to cause men to know. Inspired leadership does not mean that we have no judgment to pass on the messages it brings us. It means our opportunity to understand and to make choices in the light of our own enlightened understandings. If our Zion is to be The Kingdom, it must arise from an appreciation of inspired and Godlike leadership. (See Ephesians 4:11-16; Doctrine and Covenants 44:1; 102:3.)

Leadership sometimes becomes impatient with our slowness in apprehending the truth and with the attitudes of some toward the truth. It seems hard to some to understand why so many men who seem to have more than ordinary intelligence in business matters, or in mechanical affairs, or other situations, are so dull in their perception of the truth of human living together. Is it because they do not hunger and thirst for the truth of human living together?

But, even though we may be dull of perception, it is still the right and duty of each man to make his own moral choices. No one can make a moral choice for another. And we defeat the purposes of God in us when our impatience leads us to bring pressure to bear to bring others into formal alignment with what leadership conceives to be the purposes of God in relation to man.

This impatience has led to several premature and ill-advised "Zionite" attempts in our church. And nothing so far has come out of such attempts except confusion, disappointment, and doubt about the whole Kingdom-building business. When Zion arises it will be from the free moral-choices of Kingdom-building men. And we muss things up when we try to build Zion's towers with untempered mortar. The reason is that The Kingdom must be men of God governing themselves in accordance with the will of God as they understand it.

Sometimes our dullness of perception has led others to compromise the truth in the hope that some basis of action could be arrived at to which all of us could agree. And some have hoped that these attempts to make compromise plans work, (which of course they could not) would pave the way for future Kingdom-building enterprise. But there is little in the experiences of the church to indicate the wisdom of such a course.

What has happened on the one hand is that experiences have been misapprehended to be The Truth itself. Of course, not being the truth, we could not live by them; and the truth has come to be regarded by not a few as being unworkable.

It is better to hew to the line and to test with the plummet and to use only tempered mortar and hewn stones in trying to build The Temple of God: Zion; The Kingdom. That is to say again that Zion must arise from the free moral willing of enlightened men.

Not to observe this rule is like "planting" good seed in foul ground. In fact, the seed of truth cannot be implanted in unapprehending minds. After all, if there is to be a harvest, the soil of the soul must first be prepared for the seed of The Kingdom; the men who are to redeem Zion must first arise to the level of Kingdom-building moral judgments. (Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2, 3, 9; 58: 3; 128: 1.)

PRESENT RATIONAL CHOICES

Initial religious choices are supposed to be rational. (Doctrine and Covenants 17: 18.) A nonmember has both a right and a duty to judge for himself whether or not the message of the Restored Church is divine. Are the choices of later years to be less rational? Does "coming into the light" make us less capable of Kingdom-building choices? Does it take from us rights to choose that were ours before we came into the light?

CULTURE AND MORALITY

Christianity seeks to cause men to know because no people can be highly moral who are low in culture. "Where there is no vision the people perish." It was because Israel was ignorant of God's righteousness that she missed the mark when she aimed at The Kingdom. (Romans 10: 1-3.) "Every one that useth milk is unskillful in the word of righteousness . . ." (Hebrews 5: 13.) It is men who exercise their sense of judgment in relation to The Kingdom who come to be able to discern what is good and what is evil in government.

What rights of property are right in Zion? What particular powers should be vested in the organs of government in Zion? What freedom of industrial action may the individual claim in Zion? Why must stewards be accountable in Zion? Why should the surplus be consecrated? Why this? And why that? in Zion. It is obvious that no rational decision can be made on such questions by men who do not know what principles of truth should guide their judgment—what factors must be taken into consideration. If the principle of free moral will is to operate freely in Zion (and it would not be Zion if it did not) then the governmental set-up must be adjusted to the purpose. So it should be apparent that in redeeming Zion there are highly moral judgments to render on the question of what shall be the form, constitution, and method of government. And, further, it should be obvious that the people who are to render these judgments must be a people who know the truth in the field of government. We might have been well along on the road to that cultural level if we had followed the advice of Doctrine and Covenants 85: 21.

THE WORK ENTRUSTED TO ALL

Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8 says that the building of The Kingdom is entrusted to three classes of men: (1) the men of the ministry; (2) the men of business, and (3) the men of work. Does this mean that all citizens share the responsibility of shaping the life of the group so that Zion shall indeed come to be The Kingdom? Does it mean that there are individual responsibilities as well as collective responsibilities? Does it imply anything with regard to the method of determining what shall be public policy in relation to temporal affairs?

If the men of business and of work as well as the men of the ministry are to share jointly and (or) severally the responsibility of making Zion The Kingdom, is there not a duty resting upon each and all of these classes of men to qualify to render enlightened moral judgments on Zion questions? Are not the absolute rights of the individual in social situations limited by his power to act right in these situations? Does a physician have an absolute right to prescribe medicine for a patient whose needs he is not qualified to judge?

Now Latter Day Saints say that the prophets of God are best qualified to say what is right in economic situations. And on this principle Latter Day Saints look to these prophets to teach them the truths of The Kingdom. I say, Latter Day Saints look to inspired leaders for cultural guidance in moral matters. But Latter Day Saints do not look to their leaders to judge for them whether or not the leadership offered them is inspired or not. And in this matter of deciding what shall be public policy in Industrial Zion the free moral will of men of business and of work, as well as the moral will of men of the ministry, is called into active play. All work together at the task of making Zion The Kingdom.

Because the fate of peoples is decided by what men choose to do about their community behavior, the building of Zion must be postponed to the building of Zion-building men. (See Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2, 3, 9.)

The populace cannot shift the whole responsibility for its unfortunate economic circumstances to its leaders. Leaders cannot lead where their "followers" are unwilling to go. Finally it is the thoughts, the feelings, and the aims of the individuals who make up society that determine the direction in which leaders may lead. Provided that the ministry of the church has done its part in teaching the membership, and in providing the leadership the membership has been willing to accept, the responsibility for the shameful economic circumstances of the membership of the church rests with them. Always when the peoples of God have been desirous and willing, i. e., morally willing, to move toward The Kingdom, God has provided them with leaders to show them the way. The urge to redeem Zion may come from either or both of two directions: either from below (the membership) or from above (the leaders). But only provided the urge comes from below as well as from above, i. e., the "followers" as well as the "leaders," can anything be done effectively about it. The Kingdom is a community of free moral will; and, therefore, it must arise from the free moral willing of those who are to be the subjects of that Kingdom. If that is not true, then the righteousness of God can be established in this world without the righteousness of man. The Kingdom can come whether man wants it or not.

MEN. NOT COMMODITIES

God's plans to set up his Kingdom in order that men may be men. Zion's polity is not shaped by considerations of the production and consumption of commodities; it is shaped by considerations of the fulfillment of personality. Zion's first concern is not economic security; it is personal opportunity. The Kingdom is not meat and drink; it is righteousness (which is the truth of human living together), and joy and peace in the Holy Ghost. If Christianity can perform its most fundamental task, which is to shape us into Kingdom-building men, the setting of men in right relations to each other in industry and to the products of industry is assured. Everything depends upon the free moral will of man.

We keep ourselves in such a hurry, such a rush, that we have no time for Christ. We are like Archimedes, who was so intent on his mathematical schemes that, even though all the city was in alarm, and the enemy had taken it by storm, and the streets of the city were filled with the dead, he knew nothing of it until the soldiers had come into his very house and plucked him by the sleeve. Even so are many men and women so engrossed in business that Christ, the Babe or the Man, is left to shift for himself.—Thomas H. Lawson in "Christ Crowded Out," Christian Standard.

A Call to Junior Stewardship

By Fern Weedmark

(Junior Stewardship Record Books are provided by the Presiding Bishopric for the use of young people, perhaps from eight to twenty years of age. The books may be purchased from the Department of Religious Education for project use under the direction of a Sponsor, at 15 cents each in quantities of three or more. Single copies, 15 cents each.)

" . . . It is expedient that I, the Lord, should make every man accountable, as stewards over earthly blessings, . . ." (Doctrine and Covenants 101: 2.)

WE have heard, read and studied much in recent years about "Stewards and Stewardship." In response to the challenge "What is the church going to do about it?" comes the answer clear and sure, "The Youth will carry on! The hope of the church is in her Youth!" The term "Youth" in this instance applies not only to our young people, but includes the great army of children within the church. If our hope is in our youth, we need not be disappointed. Whether we are or not depends entirely upon us, the leaders and parents of boys and girls.

We have learned long ago that the knowledge of an ideal does not help us if we fail to do something about it. We do not expect to wake up some fine morning and discover we are "stewards" in the fullest sense of the word. Stewardship is not something that just happens. Rather is it a process of growth and development. We first will realize that we hold in our possession that which belongs to God; then we will learn to use it according to the way he wishes. This is where the process of development and training comes in.

"Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it." What a promise! The years between eight and twelve are called the formative years. This is the time when habits of a lifetime are forming, good and bad. If only these children can be led to catch the vision of this ideal, stewardship! and be guided into a satisfying, life-centered partnership with God. What an incentive to work with one's might when one realizes he truly is in business with God!

The junior motto in many churches is "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only." Boys and girls best learn to do by doing. To be doers of the word they will need to know the Word. "Everyone of us shall give account of himself to God." (Romans 14: 12.) Everyone includes boys and girls.

Why must this account be rendered? The answer is in the Word: "Do not all depend upon the same being, even God, for all the substance we have; for both food and raiment and for gold and silver; and for all the riches which we have of every kind?" (Mosiah 2: 32.) Again, the responsibility is ours, to cause the Word to live and shine in the lives of our children.

Our boys and girls may be only "small" citizens; their world may be only a small world, or at least it may seem so to us who are older, but Jesus said, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." (Luke 16:10.) Small gifts and talents administered with faithfulness may accomplish a great task. We remember that a small lad with five barley loaves and two fishes helped Jesus to feed five thousand people!

The junior stewardship plan will work and is working in the church today. Under the junior stewardship movement boys and girls are growing and developing into the kind of characters that will make for consistent, consecrated adult stewards of tomorrow. Reports are coming in from many places telling of junior activities in stewardship. However, there are many children throughout the church who are not participating in the junior stewardship movement. They too should be interested and enlisted as junior stewards.

The strength and extent of the junior stewardship movement will depend much upon the interest and support given it by pastors, leaders and parents throughout the church. It requires, as does any enterprise of worth, much time, work, patience and faith in the rising generation. Is it worth our effort? We think it is.

Leaders, let us wake up to the responsibility and opportunity of our own stewardship, that of guiding and training the lives God has entrusted to our care.

The stewardship program of the church must begin with the boys and girls!

The great hunger of the age in which we live is not to live longer, but to live more happily. Suicide statistics and the general spirit of cynicism and disillusionment indicate that a great many would be better satisfied with few years of life. What they want terrifically is to know how to live significantly. —Frank B. Fagerburg in "The Sin of Being Ordinary."

Training for Teaching and Leadership

By C. B. Woodstock

WHEN JESUS sought out his ministry to teach the gospel of his kingdom, he taught them himself for three years in preparation for the work they must do. By precept and example and then under watchful supervision the great Master bade them go forth. But the crowning work of their training came at Pentecost when under rich spiritual endowment the disciples caught the burning conviction of the Christ as their risen Lord, and they went forth under the power of the Holy Spirit to declare his message to the world.

In the above illustration we have the cue, if not the detail, suggestion of the training that must serve to qualify us for the teaching task of the church in our day. Jesus' ministry was not alone to the Twelve who later were chosen and ordained as special witnesses. We may well conclude that in his day, as in ours, "all are called according to the gifts of God unto them." His ministry was to all who would hear.

An important emphasis must be placed upon the adequate training of teachers and leaders of the church school. In addition to the extensive educational opportunities provided by our public schools and colleges, there must be further organized the best of facilities at our command, that the teaching work of the church, from the nursery and kindergarten up through the elective adult courses, shall be efficiently done. Supplementing the work of the priesthood there must be an army of earnest, consecrated, trained and efficient workers in the church school. We are challenged by the supreme importance of the work before us. Only the best of our ability, trained and made ready for the Master's use, and under divine guidance and blessing, can answer the demands of our day.

IMPROVED PERSONALITY

God chooses to use us to carry his message. Our personality, our habits, ideals, attitudes, enhance that message or detract from it. What we are colors all we do and say. Our own conversion and loyalty to high ideals is a first requisite in our training for service in the leadership of the church.

APPRECIATION OF INDIVIDUAL NEEDS

Our primary objective centers in the building of Christlike persons. We seek to encourage, nurture and instruct the members of our classes and through the varied services and activities of the church and the school to build lives and develop personalities responsive to the will of God. It is highly essential that we understand the nature and needs of human life and the principles under which life responds in its truest and best attitudes. To meet the needs of individuals we must sympathetically understand them, and offer the leadership which will assist them to attain higher ground.

NUMBER TWO

Training for Teaching and Leadership in improved personality, in knowledge of subject matter, in application of principles and methods, in skill in technic and in spiritual vision and vigor.

KNOWLEDGE OF SUBJECT MATTER

It is axiomatic that one must know what he would teach. A stream does not rise higher than its source. A clear, appreciative understanding of the message of the church as contained in the three books, the history of the church and its program, is vital to the work of any leader. An important part of one's preparation must be a consistent, earnest, prayerful study of the standard books of the church. It is useless for one to run without tidings. The basis for every lesson is a real message of light and truth and power which we ourselves must first experience in rich measure if we would share it successfully with others.

THE PRINCIPLES AND METHODS OF TEACHING

The growth of Christian character, the building of worthy ideals and loyalties, the development of a personality motivated by the love of justice, mercy and righteousness, all take place in harmony with the fundamental laws of nature which may be fairly easily understood and controlled. We live and move in a world of cause and effect. The principles involved in teaching lessons of morality and righteousness are not far different from the laws which apply to any other phase of life's activity. If we would make our teaching of religion effective, we must be masters of the methods and technics, the processes already demonstrated by master teachers of the race.

Any amount of earnestness and zeal, alone, will not accomplish the teaching work of the church. It deserves the best directed effort at our command.

SKILL IN PROCEDURE

We learn to do by doing. Even in the field of leadership, mere theory without practice evaporates into thin air. It is practical demonstration which counts. The technic of successful teaching must be mastered under skilled supervision. It is well to study theory and method, but the crowning achievement takes place in the actual classroom where skill is gained by the teacher under the adverse and trying circumstances usually to be met. Skill comes only through repeated effort where constantly better results are sought.

SPIRITUAL VISION AND VIGOR

Above all, in the work of the church school must there be inspired leadership. In addition to the personality, the academic training, the wide study of subject matter, the intensive drill in psychology and the principles of teaching, our effort falls far short of the mark if it lacks the dynamic urge of a soul convinced of the truth and divinity of its message. A salesman must be sold on his own product. The teacher should first feel keenly the message he gives, and teach under the inspiration of a spiritual vision and power which illumines and vitalizes his own life.

And this spiritual growth and confirmation is to be sought by every teacher and leader of the church school. Opportunities for this growth, and participation in the deeper spiritual experiences of the sacraments of the church must become a definite part of the training program through which teachers and leaders are prepared for service in the church.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR TRAINING

To provide for the above training it is necessary that in every stake, district and branch more provision be made for training opportunities. Branch and district directors, in cooperation with pastors and the district presidency, are responsible for such a program. The best facilities possible should be drawn upon.

A plan of certification, by which credits are assigned for standardized training units, has been in operation for about eight years. Over six thousand individuals now are accumulating credits toward the general certificates in religious education and leadership. Some three hundred general certificates have been issued on the basis of required hours in preparation.

Training may be had in one of many ways.

General church institute classes are popular at General Conference time and on other occasions. Stake and district institutes are arranged by general officers in cooperation with local officers. Under special arrangement, where leaders of outstanding training and ability are available, institutes may be held in individual branches.

Institute classes uniformly carry one point of credit per class hour, and the credit fee is ten cents per student for the institute.

There are seven courses now available for individual or group study, to be had by correspondence with the Department of Religious Education. A catalog may be had on request.

Any of the adult or older young people's quarterlies may be carried for credit by correspondence, either by individuals or groups. The fee is twenty-five cents per quarter.

Local classes may be approved for credit where a teacher of training and ability may be secured who is recommended by local authorities for approval, and where preparation measures up to the standard. Local credit classes may use regular quarterly courses or texts which may be agreed upon. In all cases credit is given to those only who make consistent preparation (at least one hour per week), who are regular in attendance and who do acceptable work in personal effort in connection with the course. Local credit classes in all cases must be approved by those in charge of training in the general office. The local credit fee is ten cents per student when credits are reported. Local credit classes carry two points per full class hour.

International Council and similar credits are transferred to our files at the rate of two points per class hour for completed work.

At present some credits are allowed for college credits in education, English and social science. Also a limited amount of credit may be claimed by individuals over forty years of age who have had outstandingly successful teaching experience.

The Boy Joseph

He prays!—the stillness of the forest grove
His Sanctuary;
The green decked boughs on high where breezes rove
His canopy.

Before him, as he kneels, the scented ground
Lies patched with light,
Where, glinting through the shaded aisles around,
The sun comes bright.

No mortal eye beholds him as he bows
Within the glade;
Only the shy, wild woodland creatures rouse,
And watch afraid.

No human ear attends the words that fall
From one who prays;
The listening stillness only hears his call,
And silent stays.

He prays!—Youth's ardent flush upon his brow,
Deep eyes aglow
With Faith's clear light, (yet somewhat troubled now)
And head bent low—

Bent low as surging thoughts his guilelessness
To utterance leads.
In faltering prayer Youth struggles to express
Its urgent need.

"If any man lack wisdom" (thus of old Th' apostles said)
"Then let him ask of Thee, oh God, made bold
By faith and led "By the glad trust that Thou wilt heed and hear,

Respecting not
Of persons, but to all wilt lend Thine ear,
And bless their lot.

"So Father, do I come to Thee, in plea
For counsel kind,
For guiding power—ah! hearken then to me,
So shak'n of mind!"—

The loving Presence heard—Youth's need was told,
And answer found;
While Hell's dark terrors vainly strove to hold
Their victim bound.

The Glory of God's Presence lighted
there,
And woke to birth
The Vision, sent to him who knelt in prayer,
To fill the earth.

On the other hand I have seen many young people stand up to talk in a social service, easily and naturally because they had the privilege of doing the same thing in their own meetings and had been trained to think of such things as being natural. Most important though they had a chance to develop self-reliance and creative ability.

If we are sincere when we say we want to help build Zion we will want to make every effort count toward that goal. We will make the dominating thought behind every action, a desire to see that action result in a step towards Zion. In other words Zion building will become the controlling thought of our lives. We will want to use every available tool to accomplish our purpose. Time is capital and the use of capital determines growth. We can develop our ingenuity in the use of our time-capital, by first planning individually and then by groups.

Priesthood meetings can be profitably spent in first discussing standards for the men of the priesthood. The pastor of every branch should know how much leisure time each member of the priesthood has. He should if possible help each man learn to use that time constructively, and each man in turn should know the available leisure time of every individual member in his group. He should be able and should make every effort to help each member learn to plan the use of his time to best advantage. As a topic of conversation in visiting, it furnishes a fine avenue through which the members of the priesthood can reach the heart of each member and make Zion building a practical thing for each one. If in this way we of the priesthood can bring Zion to each member we can awaken hope and faith which will put unlimited zionic energy into action.

What shall we tell the members to do with their spare time? That depends on what will give the individual a balanced living. The office man should do physical work for recreation and a garden in the summertime will furnish profitable recreation. The sales girl should be encouraged to do some reading which will fill her mind with constructive thoughts for the moments that might be spent in idle chatter. Everyone should be encouraged to develop a hobby. No less an authority than Dr. Charles Mayo says that a hobby will keep mental development apace with physical growth. He says there is no need permitting the brain to die twenty years before the body. Certainly if our social relationship or contact with each other is needed to build zionic conditions, an active mentality to the physical end will increase each one's opportunity of service. Zion building should be the hobby of every Latter Day Saint.

Priesthood visiting can be the means of "getting next" to the life habits of each one including the children. The priest who puts his own life in balance and uses his leisure time to help others do the same will make the biggest possible contribution to Zion building. He can help each one learn to be active in constructive work or play; to plan and to do those things in which he can participate. It is not profitable to spend all sports time watching someone else play. He can discuss plans with his people which will help them get real pleasure out of their play, not merely over stimulation. He can show how play can be used to build a well rounded body physically, mentally and spiritually. And he can help them get social contacts with each other that will insure a well rounded citizenship, a citizenship which can be turned into zionic living.

We should not be frightened at this problem of leisure time. If time is capital, leisure time only increases the capital. Many times we have insisted that we could do "this or that" if we only had the "capital." If we cannot use the reserves we do have how could we successfully use the other forms of capital? Leisure time is giving us a reservoir of capital sufficient to zionize the World! It is opportunity spelled with capital letters, if we will only make the most of it.

be a millennium, and the commandment given centuries ago be recognized.

The story of the good Samaritan is typical of what Jesus had in mind when he said love thy neighbor. The world is sadly in need of good Samaritans. Too little love is given, too little is offered. Through all the trouble, tribulations, and sorrow of the world, an occasional gleam of love breaks through softening and easing the pain and misery, filling its surroundings with radiant joy and happiness. I believe love is inborn in the human heart, for at times it breaks forth in great brilliancy; but is forced back or smothered by the power of greed which was predominant when Jesus gave the great commandment. Thus will tribulations come upon mankind. For disobedience we must pay the price. The stern law of justice is immutable; it is a law of God's and was recognized by the lowly Nazarene who humbly preached the law of love.

Some temptations come to the industrious, but all temptations attack the idle.—Spurgeon.

A sign in the rural cemetery reads: "Persons are prohibited from picking flowers from any but their own graves."

OPPORTUNITIES AND METHODS FOR MISSIONARY WORK

no rule could be laid down except that cold formality should be done away with from the start. To gather around the piano for a short song fest, to be followed by a prayer and then the sermon is a splendid way to break down formality and to get acquainted, but usually the writer opens his cottage meetings by asking the little group to stand for a short prayer then enters at once into the lesson or sermon.

The cottage meeting offers a great opportunity, not only to convert people to the church, but also for the development of the local priesthood. In a large branch where there are many members of the priesthood not all of them can preach in the one pulpit, or if each one takes his turn at preaching their turn comes so seldom that little practical experience is gained. The cottage meeting provides opportunity for every member of the priesthood to preach two or three times a week if he so desires. It is always the lack of time and physical energy rather than the lack of homes in which to preach, that determines the number of sermons the writer preaches each week, for he has discovered many more openings than he has been able to fill.

It is quite evident that when the local priesthood become aware of the thousands of "Open Doors" awaiting them, then are moved with a passion for souls many honest-hearted people will be gathered into the church.

"We Thank Thee, O Lord"

By Alma M. Coombs

For days filled with pleasure,
For help without measure,
For friendships we treasure,
We thank thee, O Lord.

For fathers and mothers,
For sisters and brothers,
For neighbors and others,
We thank thee, O Lord.

In sadness or sorrow,
In troubles we borrow,
What'er comes tomorrow,
We thank thee, O Lord.

Though sighing or crying,
For faith to keep trying,
For courage when dying,
We thank thee, O Lord.

We thank thee, Lord Jesus,
Despair cannot seize us,
Thy sacrifice frees us,
We thank thee, O Lord.

Don't Worry!

What is the solution of the problem I have outlined? It would be easy for me to say that the solution is to stop worrying and to avoid things that cause worry, strife and care. But this is impossible for a busy man or woman with responsibilities on his or her shoulders. First, we must teach ourselves to forget our worries and responsibilities for brief periods at least. A sense of responsibility is acquired and may become a habit. I think it is an excellent habit, unless carried so far that we permit it to interfere with our health and the happiness of others. It is good to take oneself seriously, but not so seriously that it interferes with one's health and sense of humor. Now just as we learn or train ourselves to shoulder responsibilities, we can train ourselves to forget them. Second, we must learn how to relax our body muscles at will. When one is worried, the body muscles become tense and may remain tense even when sitting or lying down. When we sit down to eat and even for a brief period before and after eating, we should forget our worries and relax our muscles. While eating, we should think of pleasant things, enjoy the food and chew it thoroughly. During a day fraught with business worry, wrangling, mental or nervous strain, or at times when it is impossible to forget and to relax, we must either postpone the meal until strong emotion has passed, fatigue has lessened, calm has been restored and appetite has returned, or we must eat lightly of foods that are easily digested and emptied from the stomach such as soups, cereals, puree or masked cooked vegetables, etc., or what physicians call a soft diet. In this connection we must bear in mind the fact that raw milk is changed into a solid in the stomach and that it is better for some people to mix the milk with toast or cereal.

Let us remember that our stomach should be a servant and not a master. We should not spoil it by too much attention, neither should it be ruined by willful neglect and abuse. "Better is a dry morsel and quietness therewith than a house full of feasting with strife."—Doctor A. C. Ivy, in "The Effect of Worry on Digestion," Magazine Digest.

The weakness of many a local church is manifest. It does not always appear to understand the essential nature of religion. Just as the individual never has religion till he gives it away, so the local church has no religion till it wants, and tries, to pass it on to those who have it not. Every local church traced back far enough originated in this missionary instinct. That is why the church which has no missionary spirit has no life. . . . The missionary spirit—the eagerness to give away in prayer and love and money what it has—registers the survival capacity of the average church.—Lyman P. Powell, in The Better Part.

The Great Physician

By F. A. K.

NINETEEN HUNDRED YEARS AGO, the Master bade adieu to this physical world, possibly like a student leaving home to enter some distant institution of higher learning. After His prolonged absence, He was graduated and headed back to earth to set up a professional practice. If His choice were medicine, He would likely hang out a shingle, reading as follows: Jesus Christ, M. D.

With an office set up, ready for business, office hours would of necessity be posted in a conspicuous place. According to some organized forms of faith, the hours would read as follows: "Open on Sunday only, from 8:30 to 12:00 a. m. and 6:00 to 9:30 p. m.; except on special occasions as advertised." About June thirtieth a sign would be hung upon the door saying: "Off on a vacation, will be back September first." Between office hours, all of our pleas and telephone calls into Glory would go unheeded is more than our hope could believe. Limited hours would never satisfy the person who makes his religion a living experience, in contrast to a routine of prayers or masses. If Jesus responded in a similar way to which he did when he was about to enter Jerusalem, He would send someone on ahead to help himself to the illuminated electric sign before a gas station, then have him return and install it before the doctor's office. Under these conditions the sign would read: "Day and Night Service, Open at All Hours."

THE GREATER the expert or executive, the more difficult it becomes for ordinary patrons to gain access to him. Because of rushed business, special work is assigned to the first, second, or third assistants, in many instances. The private secretary often acts for the employer. While calling to see the Great Physician, we might hear Him say He is too busy, consequently, his assistants would listen to our problems; that is, take care of the overflow of patronage. In ordinary interviews, it is difficult to get beyond secretaries and subordinates, but with Christ I rejoice that there is no second-hand acceptance of personal incense and offerings. Yet when we send letters (prayers) to Him, we have no way of knowing what the disposition of our entreaty is. Maybe the receiver answers it in haste, maybe he pigeonholes it for a future date, and maybe it is cast into the waste basket as worthless.

Clients of Christ hail from all walks of life. A nobleman came to Him to secure healing for his son; Nicodemus, a ruler, came to Him by night; the New Testament cites fifteen instances where the poor were recipients of God's love. In the thirty-fourth Psalm, sixth verse, we find, "The poor man cried, and the Lord heard him, and saved him out of all his troubles." At different times the masses brought unto Him all that were diseased, that they might be healed. To be sure not a client is overlooked, the Master said, "Come unto me all ye who labor and are heavy laden." (Matthew 11:28.) He healed the lepers, restored sight to the blind, raised the sick, recalled to life those who died, and cast out evil spirits. Works of this kind were done under a hush policy—shssssss—See thou tell no man. His mission was "... preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people." (Matthew 9:35.) Unto the twelve He relayed the same mission in totality.

JESUS, the Great Physician, is a specialist in healing the sick, raising the dead, comforting the downcast, and administering forgiveness. He told Peter, concerning forgiveness, not only seven times, but seventy times seven were accepted. Insofar as long-suffering counted acceptance to four hundred and ninety times, surely that love is endless in scope and ever ready to bargain with a repentant.

When a patient enters a doctor's office, the first thing in order is a diagnosis. Likely, as not, the person will be asked to strip off his shirt, or her waist, so with instruments the heart beats and breathing can be tested. At this juncture Jesus needs no equipment. He merely listens to our troubles, then prescribes a strong dose of repentance taken three times a day; then He says, as He said to the woman taken in adultery, "Go and sin no more."

Service demands remuneration, if any other than the Great Physician administered it; with Christ, His services are gratis. The twelve were told, "Freely ye have received, freely give." (Matthew 10:8.) I was once away from home and a lady befriended me by giving me lodging for the night and a hearty breakfast. When I offered to pay her, as expected, she refused payment. As I asked for an explanation, she told me just to pass the good deed on to another. In the light of reciprocity, that would mean: I did you a good deed, now you do a good turn to another; conversely, that would mean: if you want Jesus to forgive you, first become reconciled to thy brother before coming to the altar to solicit forgiveness from the Master. Under the above conditions, services are gratis.

Persons of means and those of high standing in world affairs have personal physicians who trail them about from morning to night endeavoring to preserve the physical man. They have experts check and double-check and then apply the treatment. Those of mediocre means have regular check-ups in hopes of thwarting some unknown ailment or curing some known disorder.

There is wisdom in physical examinations. I know of a young lady who, unannounced, had an optical examination and found that one eye was almost totally blind. In knowing the existing danger, she immediately obtained spectacles so as to preserve the other eye. The Soul Diagnostician perceives our errors and He alone possesses the soul's rejuvenation. He hearkens to our pleas, He diagnoses the cause, and He prescribes a strong dose of repentance, taken three times a day and upon retiring. Then he says, "Go and sin no more."

At last, that His mission may be perpetuated, He chose His successors. We have no record of anyone who raised an interrogation saying, "What is there in it, or what do we get for it?" No, the Master had no fame, no wealth, no, not even a promise of recognition to extend unto His representatives. In part they were told, "the birds of the air have their nests, the foxes have their dens, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." Just prior to his death, Paul summed up his earthly heartaches as beating, stoning, shipwreck, hunger, thirst, cold, nakedness, plus the burden of the church. (2 Corinthians 11:23-28.) Though no tangible compensation is forthcoming from above, there is an invisible presence which is close to us, which beckons us on and on.

Right to Preside

In no place where the principle stated by Jesus Christ in the words, "Let him that would be greatest among you, become servant of all," prevails, will there be any difficulty in regard to who shall take charge of the meetings, or who shall preside in an organized branch. We are getting tired of hearing of this factious opposition to the order of the church and think it time it should stop. Until such time as the rule is changed it must be observed.

Wisdom and courtesy both indicate that in every case where it is an officer's right to take charge and preside, if there are other officers of the church present, either of the same grade of office as his own, or higher, who may be perchance more able than he is, or whom he may think more able, he should request such a one to take the chair of office, or to lead the meeting, notwithstanding it is his right to do so. Courtesy as well as scriptural teaching require men in the church to honor the injunction "in honor preferring one another." A man loses neither dignity, nor the respect of his fellows and co-workers by being modest and diffident of his own powers. The man who is covetous to rule and tenacious of his priestly authority does not receive the cordial support of his colleagues or his flock, as a rule.

Relics From My "Whatnot" of Memories

I have in my home a piece of furniture called a "what-not." Sixty years it has stood in its corner, on its five shelves photographs of dear friends and interesting relics admired by many and now coming back "in style." Today this piece of furniture suggests to me that our minds also contain memories and experiences of the past. Most prominent and oldest of these are the memories of childhood and youth.

In my boyhood we were treated to three church services on Sunday. The old-time preacher lacked liberty unless he could preach nearly two hours. If that kind of a preacher was not present, or if he failed to fill the time, the preacher had a right and left support to give us all the old prophecies. Those good old pioneer preachers had a faith and a way of their own. Limited in study and education, they nevertheless had their particular interests. One of these never finished his sermon without reference to "the valley of dry bones."

One Sunday a mischievous lad said to his brother, "Bet you a nickel, Brother ——— forgets his dry bones today—he's nearly through." The other boy replied, "I take the bet." Soon the preacher remarked, "Before closing I call your attention to the prophecy regarding the valley of dry bones." The second boy grew so excited that he spoke out loud, "There give me my nickel!"

Another good brother filled in the time with a conclusion on the return of the Jews to Jerusalem. One hot Sunday a young man in the congregation grew weary and asked his seatmate, "Is he nearly through?" To this his friend replied, "He won't quit till he gets the Jews back to Jerusalem." And it was so.

We had frequent visits in our branch from an old-time missionary. After a forty-five minute talk he would invariably say, "And now in conclusion." The first few times, I as the branch president, and the choir prepared for the closing, but found that his conclusion was at least thirty minutes long.

Brother James C. Crabb, one hundred and one years of age, preached his last sermon at Magnolia when he was eighty-nine years old. He was our guest during conference. As I did not go to church that evening, I became concerned when he failed to return home at 9:30 p. m. Starting out to find him, I met him near the house, and jokingly said, "James, you must have preached from Genesis to Revelation." Quickly he replied, "Wasn't my commission to preach the everlasting gospel?"

In those days elders would report having preached several funeral sermons and having a fine opportunity to get the gospel before the people. To me this seemed an imposition and a cheap way of trying to convert the world, causing tired, grief-stricken mourners, some very old or ill, to listen to a long, long gospel sermon.

Here we have a proof of how some took it. A Mr. Doe died. He was not a church member, nor a churchgoer, but his wife was a member and arrangements for the funeral were made as follows: Methodist Episcopal service in home town 1 p. m., L. D. S. service in another home town at 3 p. m. local lodges of several towns attending. The day was intensely hot and dusty. Many of the lodge members traveled long distances. At the last service which was largely attended, the lodge men were mostly on the church lawn. I was sitting in the shade with a doctor friend. One of the men, a witty fellow, was remarking on the mean advantage taken of the departed one, giving him so much church when he had no use for it while living. Then as our good Latter Day Saint brother discoursed, evidently trying to give an antidote for the first service he became tedious, and our witty friend would listen at the church window and come back to report progress. "Is he near the end?" asked the doctor, and the wit replied, "No, but there is some encouragement. You see he started with Genesis, and he is now quoting Malachi. That is the last book of the Old Testament. So, of course, he will go through the New Testament too. It not being as long as the Old Testament, however, I promise you that he is a little more than half through."

I resolved then and there that sermons and especially funeral sermons, should be made short and replete with meat in due season.

I was ordained an elder at the age of twenty-two, and the next week was chosen president over a branch of two hundred and fifty members. Criticisms and commendations came to me, also suggestions galore. We had a shrewd but unlettered brother who was always trying to get one into a corner. He had a natural ability to preach and yet was constantly trying to start a controversy. He requested a private conversation with me and this was granted. He asked that I go with him out into the district and preach "all things common." The subject was both new and deep to me. He was a ne'er-do-well, and so I thought to give him a "poser." "Let us assume," I said, "that fifteen men join in a plan of all things common as you suggest. Five have ten thousand dollars each, five have five thousand dollars, and five have nothing. We divide and each has five thousand dollars. At the end of a stated period we meet and the first five have made gains, the second five have held their own, and the third five have nothing. What would you say?" "Why, divide again," he replied.

I did not join him on his mission, but he wanted to do local work in western Iowa, and being in business, I fitted him out in a Prince Albert suit, shoes, and hat, and had the promise he would pay when he had the Saints aroused to their duty. The debt has long been legally worthless, and also forgiven.

One reason we fail to exercise charity (God love) is because we judge others from our point of view. If we judge righteously, we judge in the Christ Spirit which is the all-embracing understanding love of God—God is love.

Truth That Helps Us

I want to pass on to others some of the memory gems which I cherish from my own mother and also from other mothers whom I visited in my childhood days at Shabbona, Sanilac County, and from others whom I knew as I grew older and moved to northern Michigan.

Many of these gems I have tried to put into practice, and I find that they enrich us and make the world pleasant and cheerful.

The first memory gem that I remember was, "Do unto others as you would have them do to you." To me this meant that I should not only be kind to and considerate of people but of dumb animals as well.

Other maxims were: "Make the best of everything." "Take everything for the best." "God will take care of you, trust him for all." This came to me in trials and dark hours of need. It has proved a great comfort to be able to cast my care upon Him who loves us all.

"Every cloud has a silver lining." How true I have found that saying.

The Readers Say---

My life's experiences have impressed me with the beauty of the Christ-life and our need of following the Savior. He endured trials and persecutions yet he did not complain or argue. We are happier when we try to follow in his steps.

We must not expect sunshine all the year around. There is the blessing of refreshing rain.

Let us learn to love God and our neighbor as ourselves. Then if we feel inclined to censor others for their faults, let us look into our own hearts and lives to see if we are free from faults.

It is not necessary that we worry about what this one or that one says concerning us. We do not need to say harsh words to those who criticize. If we have not done the things of which they have accused us, God knows our hearts, and he blesses the persecuted. We know that he provides for his own. We must work and show our faith by our works for the time comes soon when we will be called to cease from our strenuous labors.

There is another gem for every house and home-keeper: "Have a place for every article, and keep the article in its place."

During my life I have learned many helpful maxims from the good fathers, brothers, sisters, and friends as well as from the mothers along the way.

My own mother died five years ago last February, being eighty-nine years of age. She was a patient, true woman who obeyed the gospel when I was a little girl. Like her I want to be faithful and a guiding light to others.

A Healing

I have belonged to the church many years, and abundant blessings have been mine. But I wish to write chiefly of a blessing given my oldest son.

For a boy of his age he had been working hard in the harvest. It looked like rain, and the men were stacking wheat when the boy pitched a sheaf over his head and blood poured from his mouth. He had three hemorrhages, and the doctor told me that one of the boy's lungs was gone and the other one was going. A few days later the physician told my sister in town that he would give the boy to live only until the trees leafed out the following spring.

I thought I could not endure the blow. One day Jimmie called me to his bed and said, "Mother, do you know where Brother Mort (J. L. Mortimore who had baptized him) is?" "No," I answered, "I haven't the least idea. We have not heard from him for months." "Well," went on the child, "if he were here and administered to me, I know that I should get well." He reasoned that he had obeyed the law of baptism, he had never done anything wicked, and must be a child of God. He recalled the many healings of Jesus, and declared that if the gospel had not changed, blessings of healing and care were due the children of God today. Then he asked me to try to find Brother Mortimore. I assured the lad that God does not change, that he is the same yesterday, today, and forever, and that the signs and blessings of the gospel are for those who believe.

In about a week's time Brother Mortimore arrived. He had had a dream telling him that we were in trouble and that he should come to us.

Jimmie was administered to and was healed. Some years after, he had his lungs tested, and they were sound. To God be the glory and praise.

Another healing to which I was a witness was that of a little girl who was a cripple from birth. She was baptized and healed. Her name was Sarah Ann Laycock, and if she is living and reads this letter, I should like to hear from her. Her testimony in church was that once she was a cripple and now she could walk; once she was blind and now she could see.

I am getting old and my eyes are growing dim. I shall soon be called to meet my loved ones. Pray for me, dear Saints, that I may hold out faithful until the call comes.

We Need Divine Guidance

I have been a member of the church nearly eleven years, and my deepest regret is that I haven't always lived as God would have us live, and while I have made many blunders and mistakes, He has helped me to see them. I have come to realize how helpless we are without God's guidance. I have also come to the realization that the evil one is continually trying to deceive us. He has tried to deceive me in many ways.

I ask the prayers of the Saints that I may be given the strength to overcome all fear and deception, and endure to the end.

I sometimes long for the companionship of the Saints, as my little daughter and I are the only members of the church in our town, to my knowledge.

At present, I am reading the Book of Mormon, and I am sorry I have not read it before now, and urge all to read it who have not.

Not Alone

I believe my experiences with respect to the Lord's help and answer to prayer will encourage Herald readers. My husband being advanced in years, was laid off his work two years ago. Since then very often when I wanted work to meet expenses of the home, I have prayed, and many times in the course of three hours, I had found work. My employment is mostly in the summer and the winter. I have quilted quilts so that we have not wanted for food or clothes.

I am alone thankful that in our hour of need He has not left us alone.

My husband's pension covered the coal bill, but I have met the rest of the expenses. When people ask me how I stand it, I tell them that strength has been given me for my labors. For this I am grateful.

747 NELSON STREET, LONDON, ONTARIO IDA MCADAMS.

If We Would Live the Gospel

We get much good from reading the Herald. It seems to me to grow more interesting as time goes on. It gives us new courage to press on.

I have found that the gospel gives us an insight into the lives of people around us with whom we frequently come in contact. It teaches us to find the good in people and to nourish that good. It is my prayer that I shall find good in all my neighbors, and God has answered that prayer to a great degree.

What a wonderful thing if we would live the gospel to the utmost! Pray for me that I may be more forgiving.

A. B. PHILLIPS

Is there more than one heaven?

The word heaven, as used in the New Testament, is nearly always from the same Greek term, though two other terms are rarely employed. This word, which is concerned with most of our commonly-used texts on the subject, applies to either the sky above, or to a divine realm and condition, according to the use implied by the context. It does not of itself indicate more than one realm, except as a different meaning may be implied in certain instances. In 2 Corinthians, however, Paul refers directly to the third heaven (12: 2) as a place of glory to which one was taken by divine power.

Both this text and others indicate that there is more than one heaven. One statement, in fact, found in 1 Kings 8: 27, refers to the "heaven of heavens" as though there were a super-heaven over a number of lesser heavens. This is not an unreasonable concept of the majesty of God as the supreme Ruler of the universe. Isaiah 65: 17 also states that the Lord shall "create new heavens," and the heavens as a plural term are spoken of many times. Of Jesus it was said (Ephesians 4: 10) that he "ascended up far above all heavens." I believe this is something more than a figure of speech, which represents degrees of glory and power in the divine realm.

Who was Mary Magdalene?

The name of Mary Magdalene is mentioned two or more times by each of the four gospel writers. Luke (8: 2) is the only one who speaks of her near the beginning of Christ's ministry as one out of whom went "seven devils," but Mark refers to the same occurrence when the resurrection was being narrated (16: 9), though he does not say when it took place, as does Luke. The term Magdalene means that she was of Magdala, a place situated by Lake Gennesaret in Galilee. Little else is known of her aside from her faith and devotion to Christ.

Do those who reject Christ in this life have opportunity in the next?

So far as I know, there is no Scripture that promises salvation to those who in this life refuse the gospel message when presented to them, if by this term is meant celestial glory with God. Rejecters of the gospel must expiate their own sins in the hereafter, for they have refused the terms of forgiveness offered by Christ. For their impenitence they must pay the "uttermost farthing" in penalty for the wrongs they have committed. However, Doctrine and Covenants 76: 7 states that those who receive not the gospel, but do not deny the Holy Spirit, shall not be redeemed until the last resurrection when the Lord shall have finished his work, at which time they may turn to the Lord, if they will, and receive telestial (the least) glory.

If none of the priesthood is present at an appointed prayer meeting, may the members hold the meeting?

When for any reason it is impossible for a branch officer to be present at a regularly appointed meeting, those members who are present need not go home without a season of united prayer, if they so desire. While there is no law permitting a member to take charge of a regular branch meeting, yet a season of prayer and social communion would be entirely consistent with Christian fellowship whenever occasion properly permits, if done in a quiet and orderly manner. But attempt to manifest prophetic gifts when no officer is presiding might lead to confusion and harm, the law providing for one to discern the spirit being manifested in such cases.

When was the last revelation on the Sabbath given?

On April 11, 1887, the late President Joseph Smith gave Section 119, which designated the Lord's day (Sunday) as the day of rest to be observed, though "necessary work" should not be neglected (see paragraph 7).

Plano, Illinois

Carry Forward Zion Program

Work in Plano Branch continues to move forward, and those in charge are striving to put forth a zionic program. A workers' meeting is held once each month to plan the program for the following month. Junior worship services are held two Sundays each month, the young people sponsor the evening service the first Sunday, and the adults sponsor the service the third Sunday evening.

Brother and Sister Henry Stahl celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, April 1. Relatives from Independence, Missouri were here for the occasion.

The funeral of Sister Martha Burr was held in March. She lived in Plano for many months.

Appropriate Easter and Mother's Day programs were given.

Sister Vera Sanderson has been ill for the past five weeks, and is missed from services. Her mother, Sister Cretia Sanderson is still in poor health, and has resigned as supervisor of the adult department. Sister Jennie Wildermuth has been appointed to serve in this office.

Elder L. O. Wildermuth, who is a missionary in Montana and Wyoming, came home on his way to the General Conference, held in Independence. Other Plano people in attendance at conference were Sisters Jennie Wildermuth and Aurilla Moore.

Brother and Sister Jerome F. Wildermuth and sons, who have been making their home at Mansfield, Ohio, stopped at Plano on their way to their new home at Lamoni, Iowa, where Brother Wildermuth has taken up his new work as bishop of Lamoni Stake.

A department conference of Northeastern Illinois District was held at Plano, April 28 and 29. The services included class work, youth forum, prayer service, church school, and talks on vital topics by prominent leaders in several lines of activity.

The Sunday afternoon service was in charge of the music department, the two Chicago choirs and Deselm orchestra giving concerts. This conference was one of the most successful of its kind held in the district in recent years.

Two have recently been added to Plano membership, Sister Bertha Cummings, a young mother, and Sister Viola Reynolds, a member of the Zion Builders Class.

Sister Aurilla Moore has had the misfortune to break her right wrist.

Lorain, Ohio

Priesthood Strengthened by Four New Members

Lorain Branch has been richly blessed during the past few months. Easter Sunday four members were added to the ranks of the priesthood, to assist the presiding officer, Elder C. G. Minkler.

The combined sacrament and ordination service held on Easter Sunday was most impressive. Present at these services, as visiting members of the priesthood, were Patriarch G. W. Robley, Elders F. T. Haynes and J. A. McNeil, and Priest Harvey Spiller, all of Cleveland.

After the administration of the emblems, the ordination service was commenced, Brother J. A. McNeil giving the charge to the candidates. Lee C. Minkler and Earl Crowford were then ordained to the office of priest; Joseph Kochis to the office of teacher, and Ira Lee Clement, to the office of deacon, the officiating brothers being Elders G. W. Robley, J. A. McNeil, F. T. Haynes, and C. G. Minkler.

Following the ordinations, came the testimonies of the Saints. A quartet, consisting of newly-ordained men, then sang "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go."

Portsmouth, Ohio

Fifth and Pool Streets, City View

This congregation held a two-week meeting, beginning April 8, Sunday, with Elder E. E. Williams as the first speaker. Brother Williams used Acts 16:30 for his text.

Monday, April 9, Priest Martin L. Crabtree spoke on "Preparation." Tuesday evening, Elder O. A. Rexroad used for his subject, "The Way of the Cross." James Cheffin, teacher, gave a discourse on "Authority" Wednesday evening. On the following night, Priest Donald Bealor spoke on "The Signs of the Times." Harry Culp, teacher, spoke on "The Gospel of Christ."

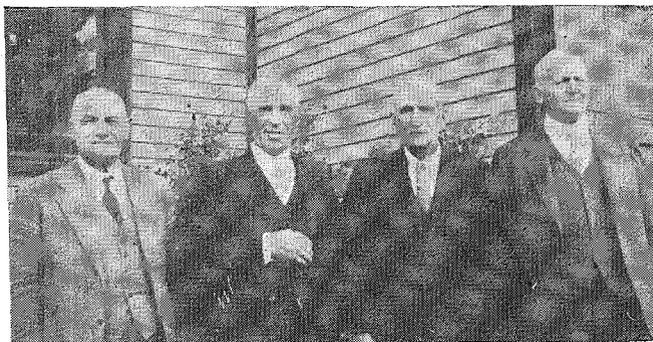

Sunday morning at 10:30, Elder Walter Culp spoke on "Eternal Salvation." Norman Pollock, teacher, was the Sunday evening speaker. Brother Pollock is a member of the Pleasant Valley Branch. April 16, Elder E. E. Williams was the speaker, and was followed on April 17 by James Cheffin. During the entire series the speakers were drawn from the priesthood, and they were allowed to choose their subject. The average attendance at meetings was nearly fifty and there was good interest.

Sunday, May 6, sacrament service was held, and the Spirit of the Master was present.

Portsmouth priesthood are a lively group, and the men are daily preparing to serve the Lord in whatever work they may be called.

A number of this branch have paid their tithing in full, and others are endeavoring to live the letter of the financial law.

Four Michigan Priesthood Members

Six Baptized at Phoenix, Arizona

Six candidates were baptized recently in a swimming pool at Phoenix, according to word received from Brother Howard Miller. At the sacrament service following, they were confirmed members of the church.

Rushtons to Sail on "Leviathan"

The sailing of the S. S. "Minnewaska," June 8, on which Apostle and Mrs. John W. Rushton were booked, has been cancelled. Brother and Sister Rushton will sail for England Saturday, June 9, on the S. S. "Leviathan."

Nothing Easier

Nothing is easier than fault-finding; no talent, no self-denial, no brains, no character is required to set up in the grumbling business.—Earl L. Wolslagel, in "Church Management."

Priesthood Members Aid Presiding Officer

Four young men, who will assist Elder C. G. Minkler, presiding officer at Lorain, Ohio, were ordained to the priesthood Easter Sunday. A combined ordination and sacrament service was held.

Great Men

Great men are those who see that spiritual is stronger than any material force.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Mrs. Charles Cox Returns From Europe

Mrs. Charles Cox, church woman of Independence, has returned from a three months' tour of the British Isles and Continental Europe. She visited all of the western countries with the exception of Spain.

Mrs. Cox made the trip in the interest of her work with children of kindergarten age. She made an intensive study of child development, visiting in the homes, schools, and churches, and bringing back an interesting collection of toys, books, and clothing used by the children of other lands.

Pisgah, Iowa

Services Hold the Interest of Members

Services are held each Sunday with local elders in charge. Occasionally Brother Arnold Adams, of Moorhead, Iowa, is present.

Elder Scott Hough, superintendent, has made the Sunday school hour very interesting. The religio service is an hour of study, followed by a short program, in charge of Sister Cleona Watts.

Saints of this congregation were saddened by the death of Sister Bertha Meggers, a faithful worker among them. In her memory, the women of Pisgah Branch wrote a memorial.

The Mother's Day program, May 13, was appropriate and especially interesting.

The women's department is trying to serve well in its place.

Elder C. B. Woodstock's talk Sunday evening, April 29, was a treat, being filled with good thoughts and instruction.

May 13, Elder E. Y. Hunker delivered the baccalaureate address at Pisgah. A large congregation was present to hear his masterly talk.

Elder Frank Hough was the speaker, May 20, using as his text, Revelation 3: 13-20. Elder Hartnell, of Independence, Missouri, occupied the pulpit the evening of May 20.

Birmingham, Alabama

Central Park Masonic Hall

Birmingham Saints are cooperating to do their best to move Zionward. Sunday school is held each Sunday morning at 9:45 at the Central Park Masonic Hall, under the leadership of Elder M. L. Salter. At eleven o'clock each Sunday, Elder V. R. Chandler or Priest C. A. Guinnand give a lecture. Brother and Sister Guinnand are a valuable addition to this group.

Elder V. R. Chandler baptized Sister Erin White, wife of Horace White. She will be a useful member, having investigated the work about two years before she joined the church.

This group has enjoyed short visits from Patriarch Fred A. Smith, Elder George Hall, and Brother W. H. Burwell.

Brother and Sister Chandler were happy to have the privilege of attending the graduation exercises at Graceland College, in Lamoni, Iowa. Their sons, Wilbur and Elbert received their diplomas, Wilbur from the department of music, and Elbert, in engineering.

Brother and Sister Booker's family motored to McKenzie, Alabama for Mother's Day. Sister Booker's mother, Sister J. R. Harper, celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday, May 13.

The women served a dinner May 3, and the proceeds were turned over to local finances.

This group is expecting a visit from Apostle M. A. McConley soon.

Sioux City, Iowa

All Members Participate in Branch Program

The activities of Sioux City Branch disclose a fairly well-balanced program in which workers of all ages have been given opportunity to participate. A definite spirit of willingness to cooperate is being built up between the various groups.

Pastor C. J. Smith has carried out a well planned course of instruction through the sermons which he and the other members of the priesthood have offered. This group, augmented by the newly-ordained priests, Arthur Walbeck and Lloyd McIntyre, and Elder Arthur Thompson, have given their loyal support to the pastor in his work, and to the branch. During the Lenten season, a series of sermons on "The Resurrection" was presented, which proved to be a source of instruction.

Elder E. Y. Hunker visited this congregation May 2, and presented sermons with an inspiring message. He was present again at the sacrament service, at which time he presented a detailed explanation of President F. M. Smith's message to the priesthood regarding the sacrament. He met with the priesthood at an afternoon session, and occupied again at the evening hour when a large crowd welcomed his splendid efforts.

Elder Amos Berve, superannuated missionary and former pastor here, spent a few days at Sioux City, and on Sunday, April 29, occupied both morning and evening preaching hours.

The music department, under the direction of Sister Ferne Thompson, has provided a beautiful and dignified setting for the various services.

The women's department, reorganized into a more unified group under the supervision of the pastor and the superintendent, Sister Genevieve Sands, has been making real progress toward the ends of unity, profitable study, assistance to the branch financial department, and purposeful social activity. Weekly meetings are held alternately by the two groups long with a general meeting once a month. Two of the social events sponsored by this department, have been a Valentine party, February 14, and a mothers' and daughters' banquet, May 11. About one hundred women and girls attended the banquet. The Mother's Day program was under the direction of this group.

The young people have contributed much to the local. Their monthly third Sunday night services have become events to which these Saints look forward. Included in their recent efforts in drama were "The Governor's Shoes," "While Shepherds Watched," "Half Way to Canaan," "Barrabas," and "The Widow's Mite." In completing one of their projects they sponsored an evening of four one-act plays; a soup supper on another, and a Saint Patrick's hot dog party. Their Sunday morning Book of Mormon Class is well attended, and shows a splendid interest. Sister Ramona Burnett is their sponsor.

Both adult and junior church schools offer courses of study which supply the needs of each particular group. A junior stewardship class has been organized.

Saturday, April 28, an evening of reminiscence and appreciation in honor of the pioneers of this branch was enjoyed in the home of Brother and Sister A. Calhoun. It was the occasion of their forty-sixth wedding anniversary.

This congregation was saddened during the winter months by the death of Sister Leona Connell. She leaves three small daughters.

Two young women of this branch chose March as the month for their marriage. Miss Frances Caverly was united in marriage to George Parley, March 9, while Miss Bonnie DeHarty was married to Keith Davis, March 13.

The infant son of Brother and Sister Lester Buck was blessed Sunday, May 6.

Santa Ana, California More Conscious of Need for Zion Preparation

Three days of special services have recently been enjoyed by Santa Ana Saints. On Friday evening, May 18, Bishop D. B. Carmichael was the speaker; on Saturday evening Elder D. B. Sorden, of Los Angeles Central Branch, preached, and on Sunday three fine services were held.

At the morning preaching hour, Elder Will Teagarden, of San Bernardino, president of Southern California District, spoke on the importance of family life, stressing particularly the marriage covenant. He was preceded by the pastor, Brother Louis J. Ostertag, who gave a brief talk on the lives of three famous women, Clara Barton, Frances Willard, and Emma Smith. He pointed out the fine family lives of these women. Pictured in a life-sized album and dressed in costumes appropriate for the period, were Sister Audra Meyers representing Clara Barton, Sister D. B. Carmichael as Frances Willard, and Sister Mamie Butterfield as Emma Smith.

Brother Teagarden again addressed the Saints in the afternoon after a picnic lunch at the park, many of the members of the Long Beach Branch coming over for this service. In the evening Brother Ostertag gave the last sermon of the series.

Santa Ana Saints paid tribute to all mothers, Sunday evening, May 13, in a beautiful Mother's Day service, which had been arranged by Sister R. P. Mitchell.

The children of the branch have been having their share of good times. On the Saturday before Easter, Sister Charles Calkins, in charge of the junior department of the church school, gave a party for all the children at her home in Orange. Games, favors, home-made ice cream, and cookies, made this an outstanding occasion for all the youngsters. Sister Taressa Koonce recently took her class of boys to Irvine Park for a steak bake, Brother Clarence Mills driving them up to the park.

The women of the branch also had a party at the home of Sister William Kuhn, their leader. As their hostess is soon to leave on an extended automobile trip, each guest brought a handkerchief as a farewell gift. Branch activities are well attended, under Brother Ostertag's direction, the meetings are planned and his spiritual sermons are building up in the Saints a deeper consciousness of the importance of zionic preparation.

Traverse City, Michigan

Going Forward in Every Department

Attendance on Mother's Day was below the average due to many going to visit their mothers. There were a number of family reunions on that day.

Death has of late crossed the threshold of two homes in this branch. Brother William Sayles passed away after a lingering illness and Ambrose Scott, husband of Sister Martha Scott, of Burdickville, died May 2.

Brother Buell Shelly, of Freesoil, Michigan, president of Western Michigan District, visited this branch May 6. Local workers are always glad to have Brother Shelly with them for he brings words of cheer and encouragement.

The younger members of the Christian Legion with some of the older ones who stay young and enjoy sports of various kinds, meet at certain sand lots on Friday nights and play baseball, volley ball and other games. They also have wiener roasts.

B. H. and H. A. Doty, sr., and Ray Dick motored to South Boardman recently after some maple trees which they have transplanted to the front of the Traverse City church lot. In this task they were assisted by Brother James Davis, one of the trees being taken from his farm. The Saints hope that this tree will grow as a living monument to the work of Brother Davis, and that for many years Traverse City members will be permitted to enjoy its beauty in memory of him.

Workers are looking forward to the district conference which will convene at Cadillac, Michigan, June 9 and 10.

At the request of Traverse City Music Club the Saints' choir participated in the annual choir event at the Senior High School during National Music Week. The choir sang "Judge Me, O God" and a male quartet sang "Blue Galilee," which was illustrated by colored slides of that historic sea. This seemed to be an outstanding part of the evening's program. Sister Florence Richardson, superintendent of the music department, directs the choir.

Evangelist Richard Baldwin Honored

Evangelist and Sister Richard Baldwin were honor guests at the home-coming of Baldwin Branch, near New Hamburg, Pennsylvania, May 19 and 20. Thirty years ago Brother Baldwin went into that community taking with him the gospel message. Later he organized the branch which was named in his honor, and witnessed the erection of its chapel.

At this home-coming Elder Lamont McDowell, president of the branch, baptized two of his grandchildren. Elder M. H. Headley, first president of the branch, was there to help in the day's celebration.

Sunday School Pupil Brings Three into Church

Through the missionary efforts of a Sunday school pupil three fine young people were added to the church at West Pullman, Chicago. They are Andrea and Marjorie May and their brother, Clyde May. These are the first of their family to join the church, but others are interested and are attending regularly. The three were baptized by C. E. Evans.

Your Worth

"You are worth the difference between the happiness you bring to the world and the happiness you take out of the world."

Graceland's Peace Essay Contest

Eighty essays expressing the Graceland College students' attitude toward peace and war were entered in the contest sponsored by the Peace Club, and the winning essays have been announced. First place went to Dale Briggs who satirically attacked "Honor, the Infamous Virtue of Every Nation." "War Is Hell" won second place for William Graves, and Elbert Johnson placed third.

Discover the Good

If you go forth to find the faults of humanity you will not be disappointed. They are all there. But why major in faults? Go out to discover the good in the men and women about you, and lo! you will be surprised at what a host of heroes and saints live in your homes and shops and streets.—Frank B. Fagerburg in "The Sin of Being Ordinary."

Participate in National Music Week

The choir of Traverse City Branch, Michigan, accepted the invitation of the local Music Club to participate in the annual choir event at the Senior High School during National Music Week. The choir sang "Judge Me, O God," and the male quartet sang "Blue Galilee" while colored slide pictures of that historic sea were flashed on the screen. Sister Florence Richardson is director of the choir.

True Greatness

Not wealth nor ancestry, but honorable conduct and a noble disposition make men great.—Ovid.

Stake Reporter for Sixteen Years, Resigns

After sixteen year of faithful and continuous service as reporter to the "Herald" for Kansas City Stake, Elder W. S. Brown, the stake historian, finds that his time will not permit him to continue reportorial activities, and so he resigns his office.

During his period of service Brother Brown who is a member of the Argentine, Kansas, congregation, has seen the church thrive and flourish in his stake. From a membership of a few hundred, the number has grown to almost seventy-two hundred Saints who meet in fifteen congregations.

"Herald" editors and readers are grateful to Brother Brown for the service he has rendered as a reporter. Many times he has worked against great odds.

Special Speakers for Santa Ana Branch

During three days of special services for Santa Ana, California, Branch, May 18-20, speakers came from over the district to enlighten and enrich the minds and spirits of the members: Bishop D. B. Carmichael, Elder D. B. Sorden, pastor of Central Church, Los Angeles; Elder Will Teagarden, of San Bernardino, president of Southern California District, and Elder Louis J. Ostertag, pastor at Santa Ana.

Central Church

The marriage of Miss La Rena Mae Bullard and Mr. Glen O. Faler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orra Faler, took place at 8:30 p. m., May 4, at the church. Ferns, palms and large hampers of bridal wreath with pink and blue larkspur decorated the church. Pastor C. E. Wight read the ceremony. Mrs. Hazel Scott Withee gave a short program of organ music before the ceremony and accompanied Mrs. Madge Nesbitt Hoskins who sang "Because" and "Beloved, It Is Morn." Mrs. Withee played the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin." The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. James B. Gunder. Mrs. Helen Louise Scott Harrington was matron of honor. Mrs. Aileen Hutchins Smith and Miss Elizabeth Smith were the bridesmaids. Mr. Neal M. Faler acted as best man for his brother, and the groomsmen were Doctor Edward P. Nelson and Mr. George Bowser.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Gunder were hosts at a reception following the ceremony for their niece and Mr. Faler. Mr. and Mrs. Faler left for a short wedding trip and after May 25, will be at home in Dallas, Texas. Central friends will miss this fine young couple. They wish them many years of happiness.

Quindaro Church

Pastor H. A. Higgins, seeing the necessity of a more thorough program for the young people of this congregation between the ages of thirteen to twenty, has added to his arduous tasks the responsibility of sponsoring and directing, with the assistance of some of the younger leaders, a group that is to function within the O. B. K. organization. The purpose of this organization is to provide a more rounded out field of activities for these young people for the summer in order that their lives might be builded and molded within the church.

Sunday evening, May 6, the O. B. K.'s were in charge of the evening service, assisted by Ernest Hawkins. Otis Swart was in charge of the music. Mona Gross gave a solo. The speaker, B. O. Lungwitz, young people's director at Quindaro, gave an instructive sermon on "Home Building and Responsibilities."

Friday evening, May 4, the men's organization of the church, headed by John Gross, had a get-together in the church basement. Ernest Hawkins, Joe Davis, and Charles Graham were in charge of the entertainment. Rainshine baseball was played with Brothers Gross, Hallier and Luke starring as expert players. Brother Hallier had as his assistant on the refreshment committee, Brother Frank Murrah, who displayed his kitchen skill in making sandwiches and punch.

Sunday evening, May 13, the Orioles, directed by Thelma Carmichael and Dorothy Bland, entertained the congregation with an initiation service. The young ladies initiated were: Nancy Lee Penticuff, Terrill Southerd, Ruth Carmichael, Anna Mae Rider, Dorothy James, Olive Hamilton, and Gladys Hawkins. The guest speaker was Mrs. C. D. Jellings, of Grandview Church. Her topic, "Mothers," was beautifully presented. Duets were sung by Gladys and Marjorie Hawkins, and Mona Gross and Vivian Palmer. Solos were sung by Victor Hill and Vivian Palmer. The choir gave special numbers. Mrs. H. A. Higgins offered prayer.

Argentine Church

The services for Mother's Day, May 13, were well attended. Much was done and said in honor of mother. The church school sermon Sunday morning was by Elder W. S. Brown, and at 7:45 p. m., Elder Leonard Lea, of Independence, discoursed on the theme, "Mother," calling attention to the mothers who are not mentioned in history, yet who have sacrificed and courageously carried on a noble work as good mothers do.

Home-coming for Baldwin Branch

Near New Hamburg, Pennsylvania

Over thirty years ago, Elder Richard Baldwin took the gospel message to a community near New Hamburg, Pennsylvania. He organized a branch and witnessed the erection of the chapel, which is still standing. This branch was named in honor of its founder, and May 19 and 20, at a home-coming held there, Elder and Sister Richard Baldwin were guests of honor, the former preaching two forceful sermons. Sister Baldwin prepared a beautiful program for Sunday morning, at which time several of the children were blessed.

Between services, a basket dinner was served on the picnic grounds.

Elder Lamont McDowell, president of Baldwin Branch, baptized two of his grandchildren, who were confirmed during the afternoon service. Also at that time, speeches were made by Elders James E. Bishop, Richard Baldwin, M. H. Headley, and Lamont McDowell. Elder M. H. Headley was the first president of the branch, officiating in that office faithfully until he moved to Pittsburgh. Special music for this service a solo, was rendered by Sister Amy Glassford, and Donald and Agnes White, a duet. The Youngstown Choir sang two numbers. At the close of this service, Sister Glassford announced her plans for the music for the forthcoming Kirtland reunion.

Elder James E. Bishop preached the closing sermon. All services were well attended by the Saints from the surrounding county.

Myrtle Point, Oregon

Church School Rapidly Increasing

The visit of Elder Harold I. Velt this spring, greatly encouraged members of this congregation. Work was begun with new interest and zeal, and the church school has increased from nine to twenty-eight members. Inducements are offered to the primary and young people's classes to get more members, and these are creating much enthusiasm.

Myrtle Point Saints have caught the spirit of the latter-day work, and under the leadership of Pastor Walter Dancer, who is also busy with Saints at Bandon, Oregon, are anxious to build up their group.

Young Joplin Officer Believes in Goals

Raymond Troyer Active in Branch and District

Ambition colors and gives zest and interest to life. It pays to have a goal toward which to work and climb. These are beliefs of Brother Raymond Troyer, the young deacon who holds a multiplicity of offices in the branch at Joplin, Missouri. He believes—more than that he knows—that if a person wants to attain a certain goal intensely enough that he will work for it night and day, often foregoing some activity that he would greatly enjoy, he will eventually reach that goal. Raymond has proved and is yet proving that.

He now holds a position on the Joplin Globe and News Herald. He is interested in journalism. More than that he has an active and growing interest in the church. He is serving as church school director of the local branch and also as solicitor and bishop's agent. He is, in addition to these offices, the publicity agent of the district.

At the age of twelve years Raymond began to sell papers on the street to help with the family expenses. His father was not physically able to provide for the large family of boys and girls. Because people saw that the boy was a dependable youngster, always on his corner and on the job, they began to give him other work. After a year's time he was working on Saturday night in the mailing room, and sometimes he worked from one to four mornings during the week.

When he finished the eighth grade, Raymond's friends supposed that he would quit school and go to work. They knew that his parents would be unable to help him through high school. But the lad had other ideas. With boyish determination and resolution he entered high school and put himself through the four years, sometimes helping with home expenses. When a junior, he refused a whole-time remunerative job, maintaining that he must finish school.

As he could he was laying aside a small sum each week toward helping him in college. He had a desire to qualify for efficient and trained service.

Raymond graduated from high school in 1927. He was a member of the National Honor Society. At that time he was offered a free trip to Europe, but he remained at home to work in order that in the fall he might enter Graceland.

Three years at Graceland College, all on his own, go also to this young man's credit. He was a diligent worker and student. There he made himself known as a journalist. He served as editor of the Graceland Record now called Graceland Tower, and, using his nickname, "Duke," as a pen name, he contributed several stories to Stepping Stones.

District Officers Visit Marlin, Texas

C. W. Tischer and A. V. Arnold Hold Week-end Services

Elder C. W. Tischer, president of Central Texas District, and A. V. Arnold, district treasurer, of Houston, went to Marlin, Texas, May 19, to visit Saints in that locality.

Preaching services were held by Brother Tischer Saturday evening in the home of Brother J. R. Allen, branch president at Marlin, and there were church school and preaching services Sunday morning. All meetings were well attended, and good interest was shown.

Brother Allen is arranging a harbor in the woods near his home where church school and preaching services can be held. It is difficult, on account of distance, for some of the members to attend when services are held at the schoolhouse. These good people are trying hard to keep up interest and uphold the gospel banner in this vicinity, and were very hospitable to and appreciative of the visit from district officers.

Independence

Stone Church

Apostle John W. Rushton's farewell sermon to the Stone Church congregation Sunday night was a powerful discourse based on the Scripture reading from Luke 12:1-21. Taking the rich man to whom God said: "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?" as an example, the speaker presented a clear analysis of human folly. First, the man measured life's values in terms of the material; second, he forgot that he only held a life's interest in what he had and he was unfaithful to his stewardship; and third, he left God out of the picture.

Speaking to a large congregation of Saints and their neighbors and friends, Brother Rushton applied this man's folly to the folly of the average individual of today. More than that, he named and applied to our nation today the five fundamental causes of Rome's fall as they are given by the historian, Lecky.

Music by the Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, gave the sermon an appropriate setting. Mrs. Hazel Scott Withee was the organist, and Mrs. Jeannette Craig the pianist. There was a baritone solo by Virgil Woodside.

Brother Rushton is a popular speaker in Independence both with church people and with high school boys and girls. All wish him Godspeed as with Mrs. Rushton, he sails for England on the S. S. Leviathan, June 9.

Violin music played by Gomer Cool, and accompanied by Robert Miller, organist, opened the morning service Sunday. The musical program which followed fitted into an inspirational background for the sermon. LeRoy Smith sang "Ave Maria," and the choir, led by Paul N. Craig, sang "The Heavens Are Telling," with piano and organ accompaniment. The soloists of the anthem were Mrs. Nina G. Smith, Albert Brackenbury, and Elbert Dempsey.

Elder J. A. Gillen, the morning speaker, was assisted during the service by Elders H. G. Barto and Israel A. Smith.

Miss Faye Van Trump and Guinn Bronson, a popular young couple of this congregation, were united in marriage May 26, at 3 p. m., by President Elbert A. Smith, in the presence of about forty relatives and close friends at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Van Trump. The bridal pair were attended during the ceremony by Miss Fern Van Trump, sister of the bride, and Clay Bronson, brother of the bridegroom. For several years the bride has been a faithful worker in the junior department. The bridegroom, son of Mrs. W. G. Bronson, is president of both the Y. P. R. and the To-Ko-Lon classes, a dependable helper in the young people's division. Mr. and Mrs. Bronson took a week-end wedding trip to the Ozarks. They will make Independence their home.

The five Independence young people who graduated in the thirty-eighth annual commencement of Graceland College, May 24, have come home laden with honors and happy memories. They are Anita May, public school music, voice, and piano; Vida E. Butterworth, science; Alice Olena Plain, home economics; Cecil Parrish, teacher training, and William Howard Snead, pre-medic. Miss May, Miss Butterworth, and Miss Plain are all members of the Lambda Delta Sigma Honor Society. Miss May received one of the three gold seal Graceland scholarship awards given to members of the graduating class. She gave two graduate recitals, and received three diplomas.

Mrs. H. E. Wilke, of Dallas, Texas, who has been in Research Hospital, Kansas City, Missouri, for some time, returned to her home May 24.

Second Church

Elder A. W. Whiting was the Sunday morning speaker, and his topic was "The Prophetic Mission of Joseph Smith." The choir sang as a special number the hymn "Tenderly, Tenderly, Lead Thou Me On."

"The Value of Prayer," was the theme of Gordon Cable at the junior service. A story, "How Prayer Helped a Sick Child," was told by Geneva Edmunds.

An organ prelude by Mrs. Sam Inman opened the evening service, Pastor Will Inman in charge. Elder T. A. Beck, the speaker, used for his subject, "The Vision of Opportunity." Special music was furnished by the ladies' quartet from the Stone Church.

At two-thirty Sunday afternoon a meeting was held for all the women of Second Church District.

Walnut Park Church

Sunday, May 20, the church school program period was given over to exercised honoring Walnut Park young people who had completed the four-year high school course. Those graduating from William Chrisman High School in Independence were Alice Brown, Leona Hartman, Edgar Lanpher, Louis Herbst, Drexel Mollison, Fae Gordon, Frances Bryant, Clara Reed, Bethene Barnhardt, Vivian Sackman, Robert Wenzholz and Ruth Bricker. In addition to these Lois Barwise completed the course at the Bonner Springs, Kansas, High School, and Jessie Anderson at St. Mary's Academy.

On Sunday, May 27, the assistant superintendent, Odess Athey, read to the church school the history of the hymn, "Rock of Ages," giving a short biography of the composer and the author of the words of the familiar old hymn. Following this the hymn was sung by a mixed quartet composed of Arlon Chapman, Dorothy Phillips, Evelyn Phillips and Milford Nace.

A patriotic program was given at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning, members of the local chapter of Spanish War Veterans and the ladies' auxiliary occupying seats on the platform. The service opened with a march by the orchestra, followed by prayer by Brother W. B. Haskins, a member of the war veterans' organization. The choir sang "America, the Beautiful," and the orchestra played "Faith of Our Fathers." Elder J. W. A. Bailey spoke along patriotic lines, and the service ended with the singing of two verses to the tune of "America." Before the talk by Brother Bailey, Frederick Franklin, infant son of Brother and Sister C. W. Beaver, was blessed by Elders W. T. Gard and Royden Barnhardt.

Pastor Frank McDonald is out of the city for about three weeks, and C. G. Closson, church school superintendent, with the aid of other members of the local priesthood, is taking care of the pastoral work in his absence.

The matter of meetings for the summer was brought up at the morning service and the congregation voted that no meetings should be held at the church on Sunday evenings during the summer but that they would unite with the other churches in Zion in supporting the services to be held on the Campus.

Due to the fact that Margaret Chapman, vice-president of the A. W. Z. Class, has left the city, an election was held to fill the vacancy and Joseph Price was chosen. At this time also Fay Brown was elected captain of the girls' playground ball team for this class.

While attendance at religio is falling off some as usual during the summer months, approximately one hundred are attending classes and many more are present when the program period arrives. Sunday evening numbers on the program were a violin solo by Bethene Barnhardt, a vocal duet by Frances Bullard and Virginia Lee Taylor, and the reading of three poems by Kenneth Morford.

The speaker at seven-thirty Sunday evening was Patriarch Ammon White.

Tuesday evening, May 22, twenty members of the Swastika Class met at the home of Audrey Horn and went in a group to the home of Grace Wille to surprise her on the occasion of her eighteenth birthday. The evening was spent in consuming refreshments and playing games.

Preparations have been made for the formation of a playground ball league in the Walnut Park congregation. Captains have been chosen and the schedule will open with two games on Thursday evenings, May 31.

Enoch Hill Church

The women's department have chosen Elder George Jenkins for their teacher each Thursday afternoon in the study of the Doctrine and Covenants. Their former teacher, Elder William Shakespere, will be at Lamoni, Iowa, for sometime.

The young people have re-surfaced their volley ball court, and are ready to begin their tournament this week, meeting with East Independence.

A troop of Girl Scouts have been organized under the supervision of Sister Alberta Cox, and are making rapid progress.

The deacons meet for a study class each Monday evening.

At the church school worship period, Brother Richard Maloney played a piano solo. Marjory Thomas and Pearl Christensen sang "A Bird With a Broken Pinion." This congregation was happy to have Brother Millard Pace with them once again. Brother Pace is their assistant church school director.

Elder C. A. Kress was the Sunday morning speaker, taking his text from Matthew 21. At the morning service, Sisters Charles Warren and Millard Pace sang "Have You Counted the Cost?"

A quartet composed of Ruth Hayes, Ruby Johnson, Rilla Johnson, and May Worth sang "Grateful, O Lord, Am I." Elder H. E. Winegar was the evening speaker.

J. W. Woods is able to be about again. He hurt his back while at work at the Sanitarium.

Spring Branch Church

Pastor M. C. Jacobsen, the Sunday morning speaker, chose his text from John 10:10 and the theme, "The More Abundant Life." The choir sang "He Came to Redeem the World."

Sister Jalmer Nelson presented the program for the evening church school. There were two numbers by Shirley Good. Wilda Nelson played an organ number. Francis Tankard played "Minuet in G," and Mrs. O. K. Peters played a Russian number.

Elder D. S. McNamara was the evening speaker, and his discourse presented the desirability of righteousness and told the story of some who have given their lives that our nation might live. For a text he chose Proverbs 14:34. Boy Scouts marched to the platform and assisted in the program.

On Monday night there was a farewell party for Arthur Peer and family who are moving soon to East Independence and for Rose Murdock who will make her home in Independence.

Gudgell Park Church

Elder C. K. Green, of Walnut Park, was here for the Sacrament service May 7, and made the opening talk. In the evening Elder A. K. Dillie spoke on "Building Lives."

There was fine attendance at Sunday school on the thirteenth and throughout the day in spite of the rain. Brother M. Cleland gave the Mother's Day address at eleven o'clock. Elder C. A. Kress was the speaker at seven-thirty.

In the morning on May 20, Walter Chapman, pastor, occupied the stand. The burden of his talk was "Awake and prepare yourselves for the tasks of tomorrow." He urged that not one in the congregation should rest until he has obtained for himself those spiritual experiences which will help him at all times to stand steadfastly for the right.

In place of the usual religio program, Brother B. E. Blodgett, from Second Church, used the time in recounting some of the many spiritual experiences he has had during his sixty-eight years of service in the church. They were strengthening to the faith of old and young.

At night Doctor F. J. Lewis brought an inspiring sermon showing the Saints' need of approaching God with a greater degree of sincerity if the church is ever able to go out and convey its message to a dying world.

The morning speaker on the twenty-seventh was Elder J. D. Gault and he announced his subject as "The Church." He spoke of the high ideals for which the church stands, and said that if the members are to stand by the church they must live up to the high ideals for which it stands.

Gomer Wells spoke interestingly to the religio class and also at seven-thirty.

"The Key"

By C. J. Lant

In everything in this life, we have learned to believe that there is a "Key" and unless we have this key or find it in our search for "More Light" we will no doubt struggle on forever without reaching any definite goal; because we do not know what it is that we are searching for.

Christ is the "Key" to the Christian religion, and you and I are the instruments through which Christ is to manifest himself to humankind in spreading his gospel and building his kingdom.

In every walk of life and in every community there are "Key" men and "Key" positions, held by responsible men and women; and it is through these individuals that the success of any given work or promotion of a plan and its development finds its ultimate establishment.

These men and women must be stable individuals; not given to running hither and yon; here today and in New York tomorrow; men and women who are not only willing to give a tenth, but who stand willing and ready to give their all that the cause may be a success.

A true Latter Day Saint family should be just such a family; and the establishment of a home, no matter how humble, should be the chief aim of every church family—a home wherein cleanliness should link arms with the Godliness.

Then like a jewel, though in a crude setting, this or these families; will prove themselves the "Backbone or the Key" that will produce the material that will ultimately establish the Kingdom.

THE WORK OF THE DIRECTOR OF PUBLICITY

By D. T. Williams

We would like first of all to point out what significance attaches to this office through the avenue of an illustration. Just preceding the General Convention held at Saginaw, March 25, the author of these lines sat down to the typewriter and sketched off a news story having to do with the high points of the coming event and sent it out to fifty branch presidents requesting them to get the matter into their local papers.

As far as I have been informed this article, taking ten inches space, was printed full length in almost all these papers. For the sake of the illustration let us say that the fifty newspapers printed the full ten inches. Ten inches, time fifty newspapers, would amount to five hundred inches of space used for this story. Many of the medium size papers charge $1.00 an inch for advertising space. Therefore, because someone took the trouble to write this item and because we had an organization to handle it we were able to get $500 worth of advertising free.

And the advantage we get through this kind of work is that we are allowed to write our own copy. Otherwise the world writes it for us and in the past they have not given us a very fair representation. We find, too, that newspaper men are almost always ready to accept a story when it is well written and when it is backed by the facts.

It is anticipated that the Director of Publicity will have his representatives in every branch and district in this regional territory and that he will get out a story that will attract the public eye at least once a quarter and oftener when possible. Then, too, all district and local directors of publicity will be expected to watch for the opportunity to get news into the local papers having to do with the work of the church as well as with the activities of the Legion.

We are in the act now of creating a credit system in the organization which will indicate when any officer is falling down on the job and through this system every publicity director will be given the privilege of judging his efficiency or lack of efficiency by contrasting his work with that of others. We must have efficiency in service if this organization is to succeed. We will have more to say concerning this matter of credits later.

Today is your opportunity—Tomorrow, some other fellow's.

Branch presidents and members of Rock Island District, greetings: The annual young people's convention and district conference will be held at Rock Island, Illinois, June 15-17. This date has been chosen to accommodate the principal speakers who are to be present. The convention will open with a program Friday night sponsored by the local branch. The usual order of meetings will be had Saturday and Sunday. The conference business session will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday and a district priesthood meeting will be provided for at 2:30 p. m. Sunday. Missionary R. E. Davey will be present to conduct the class work and other activities for the young people, and Apostle J. F. Garver will conduct district activities. It is desired that as many young people and priesthood as possible be present. All district officers are requested to have their written reports in the hands of the secretary in time for the business session. The general officers are asking district presidents to make a personal visit in the home of every member of the priesthood in the district, and every branch president to visit the home of every member of the priesthood in his branch as soon as convenient. The district president will give most of his attention during the summer to the priesthood. Regular priesthood study classes are recommended in every branch where we have the material for such work. We shall perhaps arrange for regional meetings of the priesthood, branch presidents, church school directors, solicitors and branch clerks during the summer.—E. R. Davis, district president.

Conference Notices

New York District will meet in conference with Buffalo Branch, June 2 and 3. The opening meeting will be one for the priesthood at 2 p. m. Saturday, Apostle Paul M. Hanson in charge. Business meeting will come at 3 p. m.; cafeteria supper, served by the women's department, from 5:30 to 6:30; program, 7 p. m. On Sunday the first meeting, sacrament, will be at 9 a. m.; unified service at 10:45; a playlet and program at 2:30 p. m., and vespers and musical program at 4 p. m. All members of the Melchisedec priesthood, please make report to District President P. L. Weegar, 1721 Main Street, Buffalo.—Anna M. Lloyd, secretary, 387 Lafayette Avenue, Buffalo, New York.

Conference-Reunion Notice

The conference and reunion of Central Texas District will convene at Hearne, Texas, at the permanent reunion grounds four miles east of Hearne, July 13 to 22, inclusive. Business meeting Saturday, July 14, and the balance of the time will be spent as profitably as a reunion can be made. It will be well worth the while of the Saints and their friends to attend this meeting throughout the time. Let everyone come duly prepared for a spiritual uplift.—C. M. Mitchell, district secretary, Route 4, Bryan, Texas.

Basket dinner at noon. We expect a general church officer to be with us.—F. T. Mussell, district president; W. H. Gunn, district secretary.

Our Departed Ones

LAMONT.—Stewart Lamont was born at Dunnville, Ontario, September 7, 1860, and moved when a child with his parents, to Strathroy, Ontario. In young manhood he moved to Chatham, where for many years he worked for the Chatham Wagon Workers. Later he worked for the Canadian Government in the Excise Department. From that position he retired four years ago with a pension. He was active in social, temperance, political, and fraternal circles in his home city, and was honored by them on different occasions by being chosen an active officer. He was baptized into the church July 10, 1902. Was ordained a priest October 12, 1902, an elder, October 25, 1903, and a high priest, October 8, 1910. In 1902, Chatham Branch chose him to act as president, an office he held twenty years. For several of those years he also served as vice president of Chatham District. Possibly his greatest activity was as president of Chatham District reunion which office he held a dozen years building the gathering from one of twenty-two small tents in 1911, to one of the largest and best known reunions in the church. The attendance there on one Sunday was estimated to be about ten thousand. He passed away January 15, 1934, quite suddenly. Left to mourn are his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Verilyn Clark, and three grandchildren. The funeral at his late residence was largely attended. Elder A. R. Hewitt was in charge and Elder Robert F. Brown preached the sermon, Elder D. J. Williams assisting. A. R. Hewitt conducted the grave-side service, followed by the Masonic service of which society he was a member for years.

PHILLIPS.—John Phillips, son of Joseph and Martha Phillips, was born near Xenia, Illinois, May 12, 1859. He was united in marriage January 16, 1883 to Lucy Stonecipher. Two children were born to this union. His wife preceded him in death August 17, 1903. He and his wife were baptized into the Latter Day Saint Church in 1900, by Elder F. M. Slover. He was always noted for his punctuality in keeping any promise; he was honest and fair in all his transactions and served in many positions of trust and responsibility. For a number of years he was secretary of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company and more recently was connected with the First National Bank of Xenia, Illinois, where he was supervisor of loans. In all his various trusts he discharged his duties with ability and efficiency. His home was noted for its hospitality and no one who came to claim the hospitality it afforded was ever turned away. On account of failing health he retired from active duties about two years ago and since that time had made his home at Cisne. For the past eight weeks he has been confined to his bed at the home of his son, where he passed peacefully away April 16, 1934. He is survived by his son, Dr. W. E. Phillips, of Cisne; a daughter Mrs. Maud Majors, of near Xenia, five granddaughters, and one great-grandson. Funeral services were conducted from the Saints' church at Brush Creek by Elder R. H. Henson assisted by Elder Wm. Clements Wednesday afternoon. Interment was in the Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

CHEZEM.—Steve Chezem was born near Perrysville, Indiana, April 8, 1852. Passed away at his home April 9, 1934. On October 1, 1871, he married Miss Lydia Snelsow, and to them six children were born. Four preceded him in death. His companion having passed away, he was married to Mrs. Emma Pierson February 23, 1892. Brother Chezem first united with the Christian Church August 9, 1896. Later he united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and was a firm believer of the gospel. In 1903, he and his wife, who also was a member, moved to their farm near Hepler, Kansas, where he died. Always he exerted his influence to bring missionaries to his community. Meetings were held in his home, in the town and in nearby schoolhouses, and some twenty or twenty-five people came into the church. Brother Chezem was an honest and upright man; he paid his tithing and lived the law to the best of his ability. The funeral was conducted from the Methodist Church at Hepler April 11, Elder Lee Quick preaching the sermon. Interment was in the Hepler Cemetery.

DUNCAN.—Mary Maxine Duncan was born March 23, 1923, and departed this life March 31, 1934, at Maryland Heights, Missouri. She became a member of the church June 13, 1933. Left to mourn are her mother, father, one sister, two half-sisters, and two half-brothers. The funeral was held at Overland, Missouri, Elder T. J. Elliott officiating.

SHERRILL.—John William Sherrill was born at Cat Springs, Texas, February 11, 1868. Died April 4, 1934, following a short illness. He moved to the Cooks Point community, near Caldwell, Texas, at the age of three years with his parents, William M. and Elizabeth Sherrill, where his life was spent. He became a member of the church January 14, 1889, and lived his convictions consistently throughout his life. His religion was truly to "do unto others as you would have them do unto you." In November 1889, he married Miss Frances Nunley and to them were born two sons and one daughter: Emery M., of Austin, Texas; Mrs. J. W. Mitchell, and Thomas O., of Caldwell, Texas, all living. Besides his wife and children he is survived by two brothers, Doctor Carl A. Sherrill, of Medina, Texas, and Doctor Ethan A. Sherrill, of Houston, Texas, and numerous other relatives. The funeral service was held from his late residence at four o'clock the afternoon, April 5, Brother Ira L. Snedeker, of Houston, Texas, was in charge. Burial was in the Draper Cemetery, nearby, near his father and mother.

HUGHES.—Julia Hughes was born in Mississippi, June 10, 1869, and departed this life May 7, 1934, at her home near Fisher, Arkansas. She united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints August 2, 1916, and lived a faithful life. She leaves her husband, one son, Wesley Eubanks, three grandchildren, and many relatives and friends. Services were held in Hickory Ridge Baptist Church, the sermon was by Elder A. M. Baker, assisted by A. Ziegenhorn.

DROWN.—Joseph H. Drown, for thirty-five years a resident of Independence, Missouri, and a member of the church since boyhood, died at the Independence Sanitarium, May 15, as the result of a paralytic stroke which he suffered the preceding Saturday night. For many years he engaged in the land development business in Kansas City, but for the past five years he has been inactive because of ill health. He was born at White Rock, Michigan. Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Grace Drown, his daughter, Mariamne Drown, both of the home address; a sister, Mrs. Orpha Snail, of Kansas City; two brothers, George Drown, of Kansas City, and A. H. Drown, of Los Angeles, California. The funeral was conducted from the Stahl Funeral Home, May 17, Elder John F. Sheehy preaching the sermon. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

ROWLAND.—Havord K. Rowland was born January 25, 1860, in Kentucky, and passed away April 25, 1934. He moved to Oklahoma in 1889, taking a homestead at Piedmont, a little town about thirty miles from Oklahoma City. He lived there until last summer, when he moved with his wife to Oklahoma City, there making his home. He became a member of the church August 12, 1894; was ordained a priest February 21, 1895, and an elder, August 30, 1908. He was united in marriage to Anna Ratcliff, March 31, 1897. Left to mourn are his wife; one son Rex; a sister Mrs. W. M. True, of El Reno, Oklahoma, and two grandchildren. The sermon was preached from the Baptist church at Piedmont, to a group of over three hundred friends, by Elder E. L. Kemp, pastor of the Oklahoma City branch, assisted by Elder H. V. Piatt, of El Reno. Interment was in Piedmont, Oklahoma.

HOFSTETTER.—Joseph C. Hofstetter, son of August and Hannah Fuller Hofstetter, was born June 6, 1894, at Peoria, Illinois, and departed this life May 13, 1934, at the Peoria Municipal Tuberculosis Sanatorium, where he had been a month. He united with the church November 8, 1914, and remained a faithful member until his death. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. C. E. Smith, of Buckner, Illinois; three sons, Carl, Robert, and Vincent, of Benton, Illinois; a granddaughter, Betty J. Smith, of Buckner Illinois; three brothers, William A., of Ottumwa, Iowa; and Louis F. Runge and Leonard Hofstetter, of Peoria; three sisters, Mrs. Henry Dozard and Mrs. E. J. Dudden, of Peoria, and Mrs. G. B. Boon, of Berwyn, Illinois. Interment was in the Spring Dale Cemetery, Peoria.

LESLIE.—Isabella McInnis was born March 8, 1862, in Grey County, Ontario, and departed this life in Saint Joseph's hospital, May 20, 1934. She was united in marriage to Albert J. Leslie, December 9, 1891, who died seven years ago. She became a member of the church July 11, 1914, and took real interest in all the activities of the church up to the day of her fatal illness. Her son, Roy, of Walkerville, Ontario, with his wife and daughter, are left to mourn, also her only surviving brother, Donald, of Toronto, and many friends. The largely attended funeral service was held in the Toronto church, in charge of Elder James Pycock. Interment was in Park Lawn Cemetery.

WILLIAMS.—Anna Izatt F. Williams was born at Clonghmanan, Scotland, October 6, 1843, and departed this life May 14, 1934, at her home at Caseyville, Illinois, after an illness of several months. She became a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Scotland, when a child in her father's home, but later in July, 1865, she was rebaptized into the Reorganization at Saint Louis, Missouri. Her long life was one of earnest and devoted service, not only to her faith, but to her family and those with whom she associated. She leaves to mourn, one son, two daughters, seven grandchildren, one great-grandchild, other relatives, and many friends. Funeral services were held from the home at Caseyville, May 16, 1934, Elder George F. Barraclough, officiating. Interment was in the Caseyville Cemetery.

COUEY.—Hazel Viola Lindsey was born May 29, 1902, at Grant Center, Iowa. When a child of six, she moved with her parents to Sentinel Butte, North Dakota, and later graduated from the high school there. In 1919, she with her parents moved to Fargo. April 25, 1923, she was united in marriage to Ralph E. Couey. Theirs was a happy union; four small children are left to mourn the loss of a good mother. She passed away in a Milwaukee, Wisconsin, hospital, May 19, 1934. Funeral services were held at Milwaukee, May 22, the sermon being by Elder Leonard Houghton, assisted by F. V. Dreyer. Interment was in Pinelawn Cemetery, a large number of friends and relatives attending. Besides her husband and children, Mrs. Couey is survived by other relatives and many friends. She was baptized into the church in 1914, near Sentinel Butte. Lived a beautiful Christian life being active in church work, and loved and admired by all who knew her. She filled her years with the best service she was able to render to her parents, husband, children and her Master.

SAUNDERS.—Frances Derschell, daughter of Michael and Sarah Miller Derschell, was born at Elma, Erie County, New York, June 15, 1859, and departed this life April 3, 1934. At the age of nine years, she moved with her parents to Lake County, where the family lived on their homestead two miles north of what later became the village of Chase. She was united in marriage to George W. Saunders, September 12, 1876, and lived on the farm that was her late home for forty-three years. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, October 4, 1888, at Chase, Michigan, by Elder J. J. Cornish, and remained a faithful Saint throughout her life. She leaves to mourn, two children, Howard E. Saunders and Hazel H. Saunders; a foster-son, James Sutherland; one granddaughter; one adopted grandson; four great-grandchildren; other relatives, and friends. Funeral services were held April 6, James Sutherland officiating. Interment was in Chase Township Cemetery.

■ A Parent's Prayer

I have a boy to bring up.

Help me to perform my task with wisdom and kindness and good cheer.

Help me always to see him clearly as he is. Let not my pride in him hide his faults. Let not my fear for him magnify my doubts and fears until I make him doubting and fearful in his turn.

I have a boy to bring up.

Give me great patience and a long memory. Let me remember the hard places in my own youth, so that I may help when I see him struggling as I struggled then.

Let me remember the things that made me glad, lest I sweating in the toil and strain of life, forget a little child's laughter is the light of life.

So guide and direct me that I may do this service to the Glory of God, the service of my country and to my son's happiness. (From the Del Monte radio program.)

■ The New Freedom

The story of one of our own young church men forms an interesting parallel with the paragraphs entitled "Back to the Land" that recently appeared in this column.

Ralph (that is not his real name) just lost his job. At the factory where he worked there has been a fight to unionize the employees, and Ralph stayed faithful to the company, running risk of injuries during the strike. The strikers won, and now Ralph has been let out. Yes, he received a nice letter that will recommend him to an employer, but it won't buy groceries or pay rent.

If he were still living in town in a furnished apartment, the situation would be dangerous; but he doesn't. At an earlier crisis in the Depression he left town and went on a little farm. Since then he has been raising his own food in all spare time, and earning wages whenever he could get a job. When the job failed him, he had his winter's food practically all put up in jars in his cellar, and he had grown it in his own garden.

Some day Ralph is going to own a piece of land, and he will know by that time how best to manage it. He will be able to give up factory slavery entirely, and nobody will be able to fire him or reduce his wages. His break for freedom is a new kind of pioneering and there are many young people starving and hoping for city jobs who might do better in the country.

■ The Other Half

Pigeon (sententiously): "One half the world doesn't know how the other half lives."

Pigeonette: "And the worst of it is, they don't care."

Pigeon: "But they suspect that it is by graft."

Pigeonette: "And they are probably half right."

Pigeon: "I wonder, who are the other half?"

Pigeonette: "The other half includes anybody who drives a cheaper car than you do."

Graceland College Completes Thirty-ninth Year

GRACELAND COLLEGE has just completed its thirty-ninth academic year. In all this time it has been developing in its ability to furnish training under steadily improving conditions for young men and women of the church. Graceland has tied the loyalty of many young people to the church and its program, and has contributed much leadership material through its training of young men for the ministry and young women for other services. Because the emphasis has been equally divided between the building of character and the imparting of instruction, it has performed a superior service for the church not obtainable in any other institution.

A Tribute From its earliest beginnings, Graceland has survived because of the loyalty and service of men and women who believe in the cause of education. The vision of Marietta Walker, the practical support of Bishop E. L. Kelley, and the steady encouragement of President Joseph Smith made Graceland possible. Many other fine men and women of an earlier day contributed generously in both work and money to the growth and security of the college. Presidents, instructors, business managers, and friends have all sacrificed to keep Graceland going in difficult times.

President Briggs It was in the fall of 1915 that George N. Briggs, with a fine record of educational experience, came to be president of the college. He has just completed his nineteenth year as president. Twelve months hence, Graceland will have completed its fortieth year, and President Briggs, his twentieth at the head of the institution. Under his administration, Graceland has obtained her fine new buildings, has received recognition and scholastic standing of which we may be proud, has greatly improved the beautiful campus, and has increased its service to the church. President Briggs will gladly divide credit with the loyal and faithful helpers who have assisted him in these accomplishments. In this issue of the Herald we present one of his articles and a tribute to him by a former Graceland student. We are proud to honor President Briggs for his long years of service.

Graceland Contribution Graceland is better appreciated today than ever before, and I believe there is a growth of affection and understanding among church people for the college. We believe that this understanding has been improved by the fine educational articles contributed to our columns by the Graceland faculty. There is a closer sympathy between the college and the intellectual life of the church.

Where Will They Go? This fall our boys and girls will be choosing a place to go to continue their education. There is no better place than Graceland for parents to send them. There is no place where their moral integrity will be better protected, nor where character and spirituality will receive greater opportunities for growth. Graceland offers splendid advantages for giving to our young people the very best that parents could want for them.

Patriarch W. A. McDowell Passes

In the passing of Patriarch Willis A. McDowell the church suffers again the loss of a stalwart worker in the Cause. His record as a churchman and representative covers many years of active service, always cheerfully given and efficiently rendered. His faithfulness, unswerving devotion and unflinching loyalty, won for him the friendship and love of hundreds of Saints, especially among those to whom his ministry of service was rendered. Those who mourn with the family of our departed brother are legion; but in the midst of our sorrow we feel a sense of pride in our recollection of the saintly life of religious devotion led by our brother, and are thankful that he was permitted of God to have labored among and for us.

The Herald extends greetings of sympathy to the widow and family.

F. M. SMITH

The difference in two men is not so much that one has suffered and the other has not. A certain amount of suffering must come to every man. The difference is rather in the ends for which they suffer. Even the so-called neutrals, who choose no certain end, must bear their load like Simon of Cyrene, who on that day when Jesus was walking to Calvary just happened along and was compelled to help carry the cross. He was neither good nor bad, so far as we know; he had no connection with Jesus; but he had to carry the cross just the same. In fact, most of the suffering I witness is by such people, suffering not for evil or for good, but simply taking their share of the world's pain.—Frank B. Fagerburg, in The Sin of Being Ordinary.

ACROSS THE DESK

By F. M. S.

— Informal Chats From the Office of the President —

THE LETTERS coming to my desk telling of the fine effects from the last General Conference are numerous and we are not likely to be able to use all of them, but we do appreciate the fine attitude manifested by many of the brethren on returning to their fields determined to carry into their own localities the fine spirit and helpful work of the General Conference.

In one recently received from Brother Ray Whiting he says:

"First, I can assure you that the General Conference did tend to enliven the people and increase our activity. A very fine spirit prevails in both of these branches and I am getting the best response from the priesthood I have ever received since laboring in this field. We are attempting to push ourselves forward in both local and missionary work. The men are doing some fine work in visiting among the Saints and at the same time we are holding cottage missionary meetings as opportunity and time will permit. I have one fine opening in Omaha at the present time and there are many other possibilities as soon as we can get to them. In the Bluffs we have two or three services going each week at various places. We have secured Bayliss Park, which is in the heart of the city of Council Bluffs, and will conduct Sunday evening services there during the entire summer. We will use an orchestra, a good choir and plenty of congregational singing and I expect to do most of the preaching, except when I can get help from Independence, which I hope to do occasionally. We want to make this park service lead up to the climax in a joint reunion to be held here by the Northeastern Nebraska and Southwestern Iowa Districts. This reunion will be held the latter part of August."

He goes on to tell of the record of baptisms in Council Bluffs for a number of years past and also makes comments relative to the average age of the ministry both in Omaha and Council Bluffs. Indications are that Brother Whiting is on the job, determined to carry to his people all the good he possibly can.

A FEW DAYS AGO I received a letter from Brother J. A. Morrison of Owen Sound in which he writes:

"Dear Brother Smith: Herald for April 10, in your page 'Across the Desk' you quoted from letter from Brother H. E. C. Muir, Presiding Elder of Valley Center Branch, Michigan, in which he states he was reelected as pastor for the twenty-fourth consecutive year, and you state, 'I am wondering how many presiding elders have had a longer continuous record.' Brother Muir's record is a very creditable one, but he is only an infant of days as compared with some of our veterans of the Cause in the Owen Sound District.

"Elder James McLean, President of Proton Branch, was ordained an elder June 20, 1887, and placed in charge of the branch the same month. He has held office continuously since then, making a service of forty-seven years. Brother McLean states, 'The gospel is the day star of my soul.' Bishop A. F. McLean of Toronto District is a brother. Elder John H. Taylor, a brother-in-law of Elder McLean's, is the veteran pastor of Grand Valley Branch. Brother Taylor has been branch president continuously since 1889, making a record of forty-five years. This is the home branch of the late Sister Ada Clarke Smith, wife of Joseph the Beloved. Elders McLean and Taylor have been faithful pastors and overseers to God's flock. They have not shunned to declare unto them God's counsel and His law. They have been a tower of strength to the Saints in their territory."

We appreciate Brother Morrison's writing us of the long service of Brother James McLean and we congratulate the good brother on the long record he has made in continuous service as branch president. We also congratulate Brother Taylor on his long record of forty-five years as president of the Grand Valley Branch.

J. R. EPPERSON writing from Shenandoah recently says that while he was not able to attend the General Conference in person he did enjoy it very much through the daily Herald and felt the spirit of it to a marked degree. He senses keenly his responsibility as president of the branch and has begun activity among the priesthood looking to improvement of their qualifications. They have been holding services in Clarinda and have recently baptized a number, while the priesthood are planning a more intensive campaign not only in Shenandoah but in nearby towns. He writes that the spirituality of the meetings in Shenandoah is improved and he is alert to his responsibilities and the necessity of doing all he can for the good of the men with whom he is associated.

Patriarch W. A. McDowell Passes

PATRIARCH W. A. MCDOWELL

After a relatively short decline and illness, Patriarch W. A. McDowell passed from this life Thursday, May 31, at 9:45 a. m., just three weeks short of reaching his seventy-eighth birthday. His mental and physical powers were retained till near the end, and he passed quietly and peacefully with all the members of his immediate family around him. He is known to the church for his fifty-two active years in the priesthood as elder, seventy, high priest, member of the Standing High Council, and Patriarch. He is also known as the father of President F. M. McDowell. Superannuated at the conference of 1932, he continued to serve as his strength permitted the cause he loved so well. His end was bravely met, and he has attained the peace and rest so well deserved after a life of labor and sacrifice. His name is honored as that of one who served faithfully and well in the Master's cause.

Letters Wanted

Whether the weather is responsible, we do not know, but of late there has been a scant supply of material for our "Readers Say" department. Many Herald subscribers have expressed their appreciation of this department, and we are sure that they will write when they realize that its continuation depends upon their letters. Much good has been done by this department and we are sorry when those weeks come when there is only sufficient material for one page or less. Have you written lately?

A Career for Young Women

The 1934 Class of the Independence Sanitarium Hospital School for Nurses is now being formed. We are desirous of getting in touch with young women who have had one year of college or its equivalent. For further information communicate with Miss Gertrude E. Copeland, R. N., Superintendent Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, Independence, Missouri.

Order Quarterlies Now

(Please Order by Number)

The new quarterlies will be ready for distribution in a short time. The work of getting them into the mails is becoming increasingly heavy, and our office earnestly requests the schools to get their orders in early.

Early orders are filled first, and those who wait until the last minute are sometimes forced to wait because of the rush.

Please order by number. The right numbers will bring you the right quarterlies. We cannot take the responsibility for mistakes in ordering, although we do our best to correct them.

THE NUMBERS FOR NEXT QUARTER

- Q-724 Adult Grade
- Q-644 Older Young People
- Q-514 Senior Grade
- Q-414 Intermediate Grade
- Q-314 Junior Grade
- Q-214 Primary Grade
- Q-124 Kindergarden Grade

Most schools are finding it a great convenience to "keep in step" with the curriculum, and follow the numbers straight through the courses. Thus nothing is omitted, and nothing is duplicated.

Every great spiritual epoch has been prophesied by conditions which have preceded it.

First, there has come a consciousness of the need.

Second, the realization of the need has crystallized into an actual hunger and thirsting for the things of righteousness.

Third, there has been the casting around to find some agency or individual to whom the task of evangelism could be committed.

Fourth, there has to come a consciousness of a personal task, "Here am I, Lord, send me."

When one reaches this state of mind evangelism becomes a reality.—William H. Leach in Church Management.

Personal Development

Leisure time is only as good as the use we make of it. If all of it is frittered away in having a good time, we can never expect to improve our situation in life.

Every person should look ahead with this determination: "Next year I will be better in every way than I am now, and I will do everything in my power to realize that improvement."

One important use of leisure time is to secure professional advancement. Study your job, or some other job that you want. Learn all about it that you can, both by inquiry and study of books. Thus, you will be able to improve your economic condition, your general information, and your power to purchase and realize the benefits of a civilized existence. Financial prosperity depends upon ability and energy. Nobody can get any where in this life unless he can take care of himself, and have something left over with which to improve his existence and help others.

Another part of leisure time should be used for the extension of one's knowledge of other fields of knowledge, especially those related to your own. One can never know too much, or have too many kinds of skill at his command. The knowledge of one job is not enough. The man who knows only one job is likely to lose it and then be destitute. One's resources should be as wide as possible.

One's efforts at self-improvement should also extend into cultural and religious fields. We should be willing to study and anxious to know something about the church, its history, its doctrine and its program.

For the many young people these days who are employed only part of the time or not at all, the problem of what to do with themselves is a serious one. To such young people we say, do not be idle, for that breeds discouragement. Keep busy at something. Learn, prepare yourself for better things. Lincoln is reported to have said, "I will study and prepare, and someday my chance will come." It did come and he was ready for it. Anybody who studies and prepares will some day find the chance coming to him. Those who quit and give up will always fail. Those who work and train are bound to succeed. No leisure time should be wasted. Recreation is a good thing, but the young person who is working for development and a happy future state must do something besides play baseball, attend parties, and gossip.

Better an open enemy than a false friend.—Selected

Ideals for Young People

1. Personal development.
2. Church service.
3. Creative leisure.
4. Alert citizenship.

The family is the setting in which childhood is spent, in which all the important starts are made, and in which the habits are set and the interests in control are acquired. We are molded for life by our early training. Especially in those important emotional relations that make for happiness does much depend upon finding the happy atmosphere of a well-adjusted family life. That is the real working unit of human nature, the most intimate world we live in. If we could give every child a happy childhood, half the problems of life would be solved—and the other half would assume a less serious form.

But family ties, however strong, must be broken, and the preparation for it must be started long in advance. It is when the break is near that the conflict of parents and children reaches an acute stage. It is hard for a young man or a young girl in this position to know to whom to turn when the natural adviser offers the problem.

Like all human institutions, the family has its great assets and its great liabilities.

Perhaps the most critical test of family psychology is the preparation it gives for leaving its sheltering guidance, unless it be that this sheltering guidance shall never seem a prison.—Joseph Jastrow, in Keeping Mentally Fit.

Can You Answer These?

1. When was Joseph Smith, the founder of the church, born, and where?
2. When and where did he have his first vision?
3. What date was the church organized?
4. How many members were there?
5. Who were they?

(The answers will be given in next week's Herald.)

This is youth's church. It was so established. The dreams, the vitality, the progressiveness, the enthusiasm, and the faith of youth, tempered with inspiration and fortified by the devotion of our forefathers, demands the challenge—we will not fail.—N. Ray Carmichael.

Ideas, Discussion and News for the Young People of the Church

The Summer Job

Some time ago, a young woman was looking for a job. Finally an opportunity came for her to work in one of the places where motorists drive up in their cars and order lunches and refreshments. "But they serve beer there," the young lady said to us, "and I don't know whether I want to handle it or not."

Certainly there was a problem for her. She needed a job, and wanted to take it badly. On the other hand, she knew very well what she would have to submit to in a place where beer was served, the kind of talk she would have to listen to, and the character of many patrons who would come. Should she risk these dangers for the little money that would be involved? Was it worth while? Would working at such a job drag her down so that when the chance came for a better job, would she be able to take it?

It is our opinion that young people gain little by taking jobs such as this. The experience can be of little help to their development of ability. The constant association with liquor and with people who drink it is likely to be bad. While we cannot say absolutely that the young person should not take such work, we would advise strongly against it. Young people should look ahead to something better in life than the cheapest and worst jobs that the world offers.

Let's Go On a Picnic

Nothing is any more fun than calling up your friends or the members of your Sunday school class and asking them to go on a picnic. When you have decided on the place and figured the transportation that is necessary, ask each one to bring something that will contribute to the picnic. A gallon jug of lemonade with plenty of ice in it, a few pounds of frankfurters or some small thin cut steaks to roast over the fire. Buns, butter, pickles, and potato chips—and don't forget to throw in a bat and a soft ball for a game afterwards. Or, if you are near the water, take along your bathing suits for swimming.

On occasions like these, it is a very good thing to invite some young friends along who are not members of the church. When they see the happy time you are having, they will want to come again and you can later invite them to your Sunday school class and to church services. Thus, you will help provide social life for your own young people and also extend the privilege of membership to others. A summer picnic is a great deal of fun, and if it is rightly managed, it can also do some good.

On Contemplating Pain

By Geoffrey Gillard

GEOFFREY GILLARD
Sidney, Australia

THE WORLD we know today exhibits a supreme consciousness of the fact of pain. In hospital and surgery, on battlefield and in the hazardous enterprises of industry, abundant evidence of its actuality exists. And amid all the devices and institutions which recognition of the fact has called into being for the mitigation of human (and animal) suffering, there resounds a questioning "Why?" The modern problem of pain is new only in the magnitude of its scope and the intensity to which latter-day world conditions have concentrated it. With timeless insistence pain-stricken humanity has questioned the surrounding mystery, "Why?"

It was the contemplation of this mystery that gave birth to Buddhism, one of the three great world religions; ancient Greek drama broods continually upon it. It supplies the theme for the Book of Job, the sole great poetic drama that the Hebrews produced.

The Psalmist enunciated perhaps the most telling expression of the problem in the line: "I cried unto Thee, oh Lord, and unto the Lord I made supplication. What profit is there in my blood?" What a poignant utterance in the light of these modern days of warfare, oppression, and chaos, when men are acutely aware of the presence of pain, and are disturbed by it as never before. It was near the middle of the last century that a significant awakening stirred the world as never before to a realization of the fact of pain, and to the horror of it. That school of thought of which Darwin was the first celebrated exponent, promulgated a thesis staggering alike to the heart and the intellect of humanity. It was a startling concept that he propounded; an appalling revelation of misery, through which creation had already struggled for numberless æons of blood and terror!

The whole realm of Nature, from a planet to a drop of pond-water was shown to be a battlefield of struggling, selfish forces. It was given to Huxley to pronounce what seemed almost the ultimate word when he declared that "He could conceive of no sadder story than the history of sentient life upon this earth." Strife seemed the law that governed the world, and suffering the expression of its operation—a sentiment which Tennyson summarized in his phrase: "Nature red in tooth and claw." What the wide-spread declaration of the Darwinian concept meant as a shock to religious faith, we of the present age, to whom such views have become more familiar can scarcely estimate. Fortunately a deeper knowledge of the ways of Nature has largely brought about a happier outlook for the world at large, but even so the shadow cast has not been entirely dispersed, and still looms black, obscuring the vision of many an agnostic, atheist, and free thinker today.

It is generally conceded that the men of today are more highly developed as regards nerve structure, and sensibility, and hence are more responsive to the probings of pain than were the men of earlier day. Even in such comparatively recent times as the Middle Ages the investigator is confronted on every hand by appalling instances of the brutality, insensibility, and callousness of the then civilized (?) races. Should a feudal baron be suspected of having conspired against his liege, or overlord, not he himself, but all his retainers and serfs were seized, and subjected to the most fiendish tortures perverted ingenuity could devise, in the endeavor to extract from them evidence of his guilt. If when the shrieks of the last poor wretch had faded into the merciful oblivion of death no evidence had been obtained, the fortunate baron was joyfully congratulated by his equals in rank, and duly restored in the favor of his liege-lord.

History records that James I of England sat as president on a tribunal which tried a reputed case of witchcraft with tortures too revolting to specify, some of which the King himself devised. Conceive of the attitude that would greet such a procedure today, when nearly all educated minds at least feel somewhat like Mark Twain, who said that "he doubted whether he had (Continued on page 728.)

Is Democracy About to End?

By G. N. Briggs

President of Graceland College

A DISTINGUISHED ENGLISHMAN is quoted as saying: "I believe that in one hundred or two hundred years there will be no more democracies in existence. We do not know enough to govern ourselves."

With Mussolini in Italy, Hitler in Germany, Pilsudski in Poland, Stalin in Russia, Dollfus in Austria, and other so called dictatorships set up throughout the world one may be justified in wondering whether this Englishman may not be right. In the light of events since March, 1933, there is a school of thought even in this country wondering if we are certain as to our own prided Democracy.

Here, there, and everywhere, so far as government is concerned, we see autocratic rule, dictatorial power, supplanting the rule of the people.

A German writer in a book just off the press tells us "The end of a state is chaos if it follows the road of democracy and representative government."

We have always valued democracy as one of our finest institutions and probably the choicest fruit of American civilization.

If Democracy is failing and soon to be a thing of the past there must be some cause for it. Some think it is not difficult to find the cause or causes.

In 2 Timothy 3: 1-5 we read: "But know this, that in the last days greivous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of self, lovers of money, boastful, haughty, railers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, implacable, slanderers, without-self-control, fierce, no lovers of good, traitors, headstrong, puffed up, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God; holding a form of godliness, but having denied the power thereof; from these also turn away."

In these nineteen personal, motivating sins of the world in these last days we may find the individual failure which will cause democracy to fail if and when it does fail.

The history of Rome has great significance for us and if the citizens of our democracy allow themselves to become effeminate, weak, characterless, given to the divorce court and to commercialized amusement including crime and every orgy of sin and iniquity we will go on the rocks as imperial Rome did. The very word democracy means rule of the people and with the people slipping daily from the moral, political and social force and stamina to rule there is but one inevitable result.

A recent survey made among the 550 voters in a small Iowa town just two weeks before a state primary for the nomination of candidates is very typical of our boasted democracy. One question was:

Do you know the names of one or more candidates for the following offices: (a) Secretary of State, (b) State Auditor, (c) State Treasurer, (d) Attorney General, (e) Railroad Commissioner?

Of the 550 voters canvassed only 302 answered this question and the results showed that 55 to 88 percent of the 302 voters did not know even the name of a single candidate for these important state offices—the highest percent not knowing being for Railroad Commissioner, the lowest for Secretary of State.

The second question was:

Can you express a preference from among candidates for these offices based on your knowledge of their qualifications for the duties of the office?

The percentages, of course, were still higher, ranging from 82% to 92% of the voters who knew nothing of the qualifications of the candidates. On the question of their attitude as to some appointive system of selection of subordinate officers rather than election only 25% of the voters favored appointment even in the face of their acknowledged lack of information about candidates and qualifications. One of the astounding results of this survey was that of the voters who admitted they knew not a single name of a candidate much less anything about their qualifications, 95% favored popular election rather than any form of appointment. The selection of county officers under a selective merit system rather than by election was disfavored by a vote of ten to one.

The 550 voters in this typical American town surveyed probably represent a fair cross section of our prided citizenry. Can any one fail to see the significance of these facts for democracy?

We read in Holy Writ: "Who can bring a clean thing of an unclean?" "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?" If democracy has failed it is because the men and women who have trusted it are failures. If we are surrounded by sin and corruption how can we expect a righteous state?

The Problem of the Ages

An Oration

By Berwyn O. Lungwitz

IT IS DIFFICULT for you and me, or for any man, to gain a clear, definite, and comprehensive outlook on the social problem of the entire civilization of the world today. Our own personal world is small; bounded, most generally by the limits of our city, state, or nation. 'Tis true that today distances have been practically done away, due to the marvelous strides made by men of science in the past few years. But even with the radios, telephones, and newspapers, the old adage that "One half the people of the world wonders how the other half lives," is as true today as ever. The peoples of the world are strangely ignorant as to what problems their neighbors must meet in order to eke out an existence. This problem of living together, the problem of the ages, is one that is of tremendous importance. As time has continued its relentless sweep, the problems of man's relations to his fellow men have continued to grow until we are faced with finding a solution to those problems or perish.

The crisis that the world faces today is not primarily a financial or economic one. It is the result of a breakdown in the moral fabric of the people as a whole. Too long have we followed the dictates of our conscience. Too long have we plunged along, heads downward, hands in our pockets, thinking of ourselves and of ourselves alone. The breakdown has been so gradual that it has passed through its various stages without notice. The minds of our scientists have turned out invention after invention, machines that are almost human in their operations, machines that have replaced man in the positions of industry, machines that have speeded man from place to place with but the least degree of exertion on his part, machines for this, machines for that, all designed to make life more simple, easy, and pleasurable. Unfortunately the result has not been as intended. Under the influence of the mechanical age mankind has weakened and softened. With the general let-down in work came also the let-down in morals. The era of recreation and play entered, and with less labor came more leisure, more dissipation, a freer attitude on sex problems, a loosening of the marriage vows, easier divorce, a relaxation on child welfare, more juvenile delinquency, less law enforcement, more crime.

When we pause, in a more serious frame of mind, to weigh the problems that are before us, to reflect on the road we have traveled, our eyes open in wonder at the distance we have come. Civilization has progressed in a multiplicity of endeavors; in government, in science, in knowledge, in health, in religion. Yet today the world is sick. We are dissatisfied, restless, revolting. We are prone to fix the blame on others, on the present generation, on the last generation, on anyone but ourselves. Individuals, cities, corporations, and nations are bankrupt, financially, socially, morally. Corruption, vice, violence, and murder are rampant. One marvels how far downward one can slide when the slope is gradual and prolonged. The curse of the age is the utter disregard for authority and the growing disregard for all law. That such conditions as these cannot continue we will all admit.

Whither are we drifting? What will the end be? What is to be done regarding these conditions involving our social intercourse man to man and nation to nation? Where can we go for information regarding these problems? Has a precedent been established that will furnish light and knowledge? Who will lead the human family out of the present-day wilderness? Who will guide in the work of reconstruction? What body of people will concentrate and consecrate of their time, their energy, their insight, their learning, for the bringing of all peoples into that unity and that perfect social order wherein all are brothers that they may share and share alike?

FOR NINETEEN HUNDRED YEARS the doctrine of "Thy Kingdom Come" has been preached and prayed for, but only during the last one hundred years has that doctrine been so defined, so clarified, made so practical that men have been able to see and realize that it was meant for this earth, this people, when they should qualify. It was through Joseph Smith, then a lad of fifteen, that God chose to work. For nine years he was schooled in the way of the Lord; taught concerning his will; led, counseled, directed, in the work he was to do. Then through him God gave to this dispensation the solution to the perplexing problem that we face today; the problem of living together in peace, harmony, and love. It was through this servant of God that instruction and rules were given to the church of which you and I are members; the church that was organized through divine revelation; the church unique which has but one reason for its existence. That reason is made plain to us by Joseph Smith himself, wherein he states, "The Church of Jesus Christ was founded upon direct revelation, as the true church of God has ever been, according to the Scriptures. And through the will and blessings of God I have been the instrument in his hands, thus far, to move forward the cause of Zion."

The call of the church is to build Zion. "Zion is in very deed, the kingdom of God and his Christ." (Doctrine and Covenants 102: 9.) Zion is in truth the eternal, ideal city, wherein God himself dwells and which is the home of angels and saints. You ask, "What must we do to build Zion?" We must reconstruct our manner of living and shape it to conform to the will of God. "Living and acting honestly and honorably before God and in the sight of all men, using the things of this world in the manner designed of God, so that the place where they occupy may shine as Zion, the redeemed of the Lord." (Doctrine and Covenants 128: 8.) How shall we reconstruct our manner of living? "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment." How truly did the Christ read our hearts! How well he knew we would wander away from our God! Oh!! how urgent is the need that we put away the idols that we worship daily; how great the need that we place ourselves in proper correspondence with God, to know how to approach him, to worship him correctly, intelligently! The Master puts this relationship first. "The second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." "Bear ye one another's burden and so fulfill the law of Christ." (Galatians 6: 2.) "Every man seeking the interest of his neighbor." (Doctrine and Covenants 81: 4.) We have no other way to show our love for God whom we have not seen except by showing our love to our brother whom we have seen. "I am my brother's keeper," must be our new creed. How true it is that on "These two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

Zion is the ideals of Christianity summed up and expressed in the uses made of land, talent, and opportunity. Zion is a life, a divine social order, a Christian civilization. It is God's way of satisfying human needs, of building Christian men. The Kingdom of God, Zion, brought in and established in the earth, is the highest conception of social progress possible to the human mind. This Kingdom holds in it the ideals of individual attainment and the perfection of society. Personal purity, just government, the mutual helpfulness of real brotherhood, are conceptions which are wrapped up in the one thought and aim of the Kingdom realized. Zion is all reforms in one. It is more than Plato's Republic; more than More's Utopia; more than Jefferson's Democracy; it is God dwelling in all hearts and controlling all deeds and laws and customs. It is the rule of heaven followed here on earth. It is the message of Christ—He

"More Travel Notes"

By John W. Rushton
Of the Quorum of Twelve

JOHN W. RUSHTON

ON SATURDAY EVENING, December 2, the special boat-train pulled out of Waterloo station, London, where I said "good-by" to Will Goulee, who had come to see me away. Two hours riding through the murky night brought me to Southampton. Embarking on the waiting tender, after a short stay at the docks we were soon on our way to the S. S. "Westernland" which was lying in the stream. Illuminated from stem to stern, she made a pretty picture. At this season of the year, the number of voyagers being small, the big ship seemed peculiarly quiet and empty. We only had 26 cabin passengers and about the same number in the third class; so were assured of comfort and attention on the voyage. Shortly after midnight the anchor was weighed and through the foggy night we steamed down the English Channel westward for home.

A year and a half had elapsed since I left my home for Europe. The time had passed very quickly being filled with happy experiences and with profit (I hope), to the work in Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Germany and Holland; besides renewing associations with many friends and making new friendships in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland. Though in the almost quarter of a century which had passed between my leaving in 1910 and this visit, many who had been in the forefront of the work are no longer with us, and many of those who are now carrying the responsibility as leaders were but young and unknown in those days. However, while we hold in reverence and esteem the names and contributions of the many noble men and women who have left us and are now in heaven it is encouraging to find that the work is being ably maintained and carried forward by their successors who are filling their places with honor and devotion.

THE CHURCH WORK in England comprises three districts—the Northern, Midland and Southern; the latter includes temporarily what is left of the two Welsh Districts, which we hope some day will be revived and once again the little principality will take her place and resume the happy fellowships which in the past have been associated with it. The contribution to the latter-day work Wales has made cannot be forgotten; in fervid emotionalism, prophetic afflatus, appealing music, contagious enthusiasm, all have made up a rich inheritance. It is our earnest hope that again the hills and valleys of this land shall resound with the songs and testimonies of a happy and faithful church.

In all of these districts the church has a corps of efficient and qualified workers. In the North District Brother W. H. Chandler, of Warrington, assisted by George W. Leggott, of North Manchester, and James Baty, Beresford Road, Manchester, constitutes the presidency. The Midland District is presided over by Joseph Holmes, of Langwith, Notts, and he is assisted by Brethren Will Bailey and Frank Schofield, both of Birmingham. The Southern District is presided over by John A. Judd, assisted by John Worth, of London, and T. Hailstone, of Basingstoke. All of these brethren are tried servants of the church who in my experiences with them have proved capable and loyal in their work. It is a joy to meet with these brethren and renew association in the cause to which we are pledged. While we feel saddened because some are declining in physical power and are not so vigorous as they used to be, their hope, courage and unwaning faith stimulate the younger men and women who are following in their footsteps.

The thinning of the ranks of these good men and women, truly the fathers and mothers in this realm, who are now standing in the westering light of their life's sun, but whose interest and zeal in and for the work strong as of yore, fill us with deep gratitude and stimulate to emulation. Shortly after my arrival two of these veterans were called to go down the "valley of shadows," William Maddox, of the Beresford Road Church in Manchester, and John Austin, of Sheffield. I met Brother Austin in Clay Cross shortly after my arrival, when at a special meeting he was in attendance and enjoyed the spirit of the service and gave me cordial greeting as he had done when I first met him, (forty years ago), attending the mission conference in 1896. Then he carried the burden and responsibility of presiding over the branch in Sheffield. Brother

Maddox, whose emaciated form lay upon the bed, recognized me and called me by name on my entrance in his room. It was very clear that his days were very few; and looking up from the bed my eyes rested upon the photograph in oil painting of our brother dressed in the gorgeous uniform of Queen Victoria's "First Life-guards," and I thought of the long years through which our brother had lived austere, disciplining himself as a soldier of the cross without question or complaint to do what he believed was the will of his Master. Many others "whose names are in the Book of Life" with whom we had worked and ministered and whose kindly hospitality we had enjoyed in past years are enshrined in our heart and were it possible, we would like to have them immortalized by putting them into imperishable letters as Saint Paul did many of his friends.

It was one of the rare joys of ministerial experience which only the multiplying years can bring, to have many come and speak of incidents and messages which had remained in memory through all these years; and it was ample reward for service and sacrifice to witness the talents and educated powers which the rising generation brings to the work of the church in the several departments of service.

Throughout the mission the names of those who had come as missionaries from America are often mentioned with appreciation and gratitude—Gomer Griffiths, William Lewis, F. G. Pitt, J. Caffall, H. C. Smith, W. Newton, G. Thorburn, J. Davis, and others of later years. This speaks well for the church of the future. Truly "A grateful disposition is not associated with that which is vulgar." With Saint Paul we may say, "I have you in my heart always." This reveals the Spiritual dividends of the ministerial service he had invested. One can also sense a deeper meaning to "stewardship"; for, the linking of the yesterdays with today implies how truly we are "our brother's keeper."

WE ARE EACH the guardian of the past, of the reputation and good name of all who have done what they could for the Cause; and the guardians of the future. In Farnworth this was dramatized very effectively. A little group of people representing the oldest branch in the Northern District, children of those whose names must always be included in the history of the work in Great Britain—Spargo, Hope, Harper and Fenney have carried on through the trying years of the war and the economic depression, saving what little money they could in a branch building fund, besides continuing to pay rent for the little hall which for more than forty years had been their church home. Opportunity came to them to purchase one of the landmarks of the town, the Old Grammar school situated on one of the main streets adjoining a public park. It is free-hold property with a six-room house and an auditorium which will seat comfortably one hundred and fifty. This group has saved £300 (approximately $1,500) and supplemented by loans from the North East Manchester and Wigan Branches they secured the necessary amount from one of the Building and Loan Associations to purchase this property. Their payments will not be much more than the rent they had to pay for their old building. After some very hard work by the members themselves, the premises were renovated and the date set for the opening services. From various parts of the district Saints and friends gathered to this place for special services in commemoration of the opening, which was last November. The news received since the opening is encouraging indeed, the services being attended by many friends. We have two fine brick buildings in Manchester, one located in James Street which is a nicely equipped plant, including a sweet-toned pipe organ, housing the congregation over which Brother G. W. Leggott presides.

Last October this congregation celebrated the fortieth year of our brother's pastorate of the North East Manchester Branch and presented to him a beautiful, illuminated address, expressing the affection and gratitude of the congregation. To our brother, now in his seventy-fourth year, this was the joyous event. I remember being present in the infancy of this movement when the few faithful souls were meeting in an attic, very poorly furnished, of a dwelling house in a nearby street, to which we ascended by climbing up some winding, narrow stairs. Then they moved to the wooden tent which occupied the present site and as the years passed, and the congregation grew, this gave place to the present substantial brick structure. Under wise leadership, economic planning, and loyal sacrifice this building has long since been paid for, and always whenever any other congregation in the mission has needed help this branch has been able and willing to cheerfully help further development. The Beresford Road congregation (a union of the South and East Churches), through great trial and sacrifice but undeviating persistence has built one of the most complete places of worship we have anywhere in the mission. One looks upon these efforts with great appreciation when we realize what it means for the loyal few to undertake such an enterprise and carry it through to final achievement. The burden of this branch is still heavy but there is no flagging in the determination of this congregation to win through. Brethren

William R. Armstrong, Samuel F. Mather and George Towers have spent themselves unstintingly for the work's sake and in association with others, of whom not least are Brother and Sister John W. Green (now of Blackpool). This church and school will be a monument to the love and fidelity of many good Saints. The brethren who have carried this burden for many years are happy to see the younger generation coming forward to relieve them, in a measure, and we feel sure that they may be trusted to carry on the struggle to final success under the leadership of James Baty, the new pastor, and his associates. It is a great joy to see these brethren now aged being given the tender regard by the children who "rise up and call them blessed." In Warrington, also, we have a church building of our own, and the debt paid off. Here Brother Chandler presides over a happy and devoted group. It was my pleasure to be present and preach to fine congregations which filled to overflowing the church. With thankfulness we remembered the work of Brother and Sister John Schofield, now of Birmingham, who planted the seed there many years ago, and with others, some now with the "church triumphant," gave their all to build up the work here. In Clay Cross the church group still worships in the sturdy, brick church, which was erected in the beginning of my ministry there and is now the oldest building in possession of our communion in Britain. This also stands as a monument to the fidelity and sacrifice of the Saints in this place. Brother C. Cousins is pastor and is supported by many faithful people. Here also is the home of Brother and Sister Simon Holmes, parents of Frank Holmes, who was a missionary in Los Angeles, California. Not many miles away at Sutton-in-Ashfield, Nottinghamshire, the little band of Saints under the leadership of Brother George Willis is engaged in building a new church. It was my privilege to join with the Saints here in the ceremony of laying one of the foundation stones and watching the development of the dream which they have cherished for many years. In spite of the unemployment and limited means this congregation has the distinction of seeing their church go up with every piece paid for before it is put into the building. The story of this enterprise, with pardonable pride, can be spoken of as a real epic of "faith and works." Then in Enfield, Middlesex, thirteen miles away from London, from whence comes Brother Arthur Oakman, now of the Bay Cities, California, we have another beautiful little church, finely furnished, surrounded by shrubbery, garden plots, fish pool, running fountain and so arranged that in the summer time the tea parties and banquets are held there. Brother John A. Judd, who this year celebrates his thirtieth year as pastor of this congregation, is supported in the faith and esteem of the people for his faithful guidance of this little flock. It was my privilege to witness the organization of this church thirty years ago and to see it develop to its present dimensions. I take pleasure in congratulating them on their laudable achievement, and Brother Judd on completing his long term as pastor.

WE HAVE CONGREGATIONS in other cities and towns where as yet we do not own our church building, but among them the hope of doing so is bright. We mention Wigan where we enjoyed a young people's convention managed by Brother Nephi Dewsnup, at the time supervisor of the Department of Religious Education. This was a revelation of the splendid talent and ability which the youth of this section possesses and will be available in the future. Here the families of the William and James Spargo still carry on the work begun by these good men.

Brother Fawcett is pastor here and Brother F. O. Davies, missionary, makes his home in this town, Stockport, where the seed sown by our friends, the late George and Jane Baty, who recently passed away in Brooklyn, New York, produced fruit. Largely, now, the work is carried on by young people who were boys and girls when I left England in 1910. Brother William Black is president and supported by talented and devoted young men and women, as well as some of those who were valiant twenty-five years ago. In North Manchester the work once so flourishing now is but flickering, being beset with many difficulties. Brother W. H. Greenwood (now deceased), for the present is faithfully trying to hold the little band together. In Eccles, Brother William Heywood is conducting a mission, which it is hoped may some day develop into an organized branch. In the Yorkshire end of this district, we have branches in Leeds and Bradford. The former was organized many years ago as a result of the work of Brother Heywood, a son of one of the most remarkable characters the church in England has had. This man as a result of some accident did not have the use of his legs which were paralyzed from the knees down and he had to shuffle around on specially made boots and for longer journeys he used a specially made tricycle. On joining the church and having faith in the well-known promise recorded by Saint James he was administered to and completely restored. His experience, amazing the many friends and neighbors who had known him became an inspiration to some who joined the church; and, the work in Leeds, through his son's testimony, was the almost direct result of this manifestation of Divine Grace. The shoes which Brother Heywood had worn during the days of his affliction for many years were in the possession of the late Brother and Sister Will Holmes of Clay Cross and were often exhibited and the remarkable story recited. This branch of Leeds was the one into which my mother and father, two sisters and myself, were baptized in 1888 and in which we experienced the joys and sorrows incident to life and from which in the year 1900, responsive to the appointment of the church, I left for the mission in Scotland. Today this branch is presided over by Brother Thomas Taylor whose remarkable ability as a pioneer missionary has made his name famous throughout the British Mission; and, at seventy-one years of age, is holding forth vigorously and triumphantly in Belfast, Ireland, bringing souls into the kingdom. Bradford, which is the center of the woolen industry of Great Britain has a congregation composed of some faithful members including Misses Wormald and Schofield whom I had the privilege of baptising before leaving the mission in 1910. As a result of the fidelity and spiritual quality of the lives of these good women others have responded to the gospel call and the little group under the pastorate of Brother George Aldridge and the faithful support of others (ministry and laity) maintains slow but sure progress.

In the Midland District there are organized branches in Clay Cross, Sutton-in-Ashfield, Leicester, and Birmingham, where Brother Peter Whalley is pastor and the many friends in the United States and Canada will be pleased to know that Brother and Sister Whalley are carrying on their work in their characteristic way and have done splendid service.

It was a great joy to be in Priestly Road Church and see it filled with worshippers and many of the children of the former ministers and members, now sharing in the work and its responsibilities.

DURING MY EARLY YEARS there were those then living who remembered the ministry of Charles Derry and Mark H. Forscutt, whose contributions to the work of this mission are now historic. Many also listened to the late Bishop Thomas Taylor whose thrilling experiences in Utah and testimony gave them strength and encouragement and did much to build up the work in this branch and resulted in the conversion of many who in years past valiantly carried forward the work. Today, the church is fortunate in having a large group of talented young people, children and grandchildren of the pioneers, who bring to the work optimism, cultured service, and the romance of youth to their work, which under the experience of faithful leadership of Brother Whalley and his associates enriches this branch. Birmingham is the home of others whose names are enshrined in the affections of the people, of whom it can be said "they being dead yet speak." Charles Caton, Charles Walton, J. E. Meredith, Ephraim Webb, and others whose names are well known, laid the foundations on which the present generation is now building.

The parents of Brother F. Henry Edwards, secretary of the Quorum of Twelve, and Mrs. Blanche Edwards Mesley, who are well known to the church, are of this city and despite age and infirmity enjoy their church associations. Brother Frank Swan, Brother T. Anderson and Brother Walter Munslow, whose contributions to the work are also remembered with appreciation, though age and ill health have curtailed their active participation in the work they give support in prayers and finance. We cannot overlook the services of Sister J. E. Meredith, who still continues an active interest in the church and serves as the bishop's agent in this branch as she has done for many years.

TO VISIT BIRMINGHAM recalls many famous men and incidents in connection with British history for in politics, industry, religion, and education this city has contributed much. The world-famous physicist, Sir Oliver Lodge, who made the Birmingham University well known as a center of education. The firm of Cadbury, a family of Quakers, established the Cocoa and Chocolate plant which with its beautiful grounds at Bourneville, is an example of what can be done to make industry artistic and industrialists happy in the joy of life. In town planning this is one of several giving a practical interpretation of the Christian ethics to the social, industrial and moral welfare of the people; a real working model of the stewardship of wealth, business, privilege and talent.

Stratford-on-Avon is but a few miles away and soon reached in the swiftly moving, comfortable motor buses which ply between these cities. This, is the shrine of Shakespeare, which is visited by many American tourists. The town is attractive to those who are interested in Shakespearean lore, not only because of the home and museum of the famous bard, the romance of Ann Hathaway and her beautiful cottage, but because of the Memorial Theater to which practically all nations of civilization contributed and the impressive monument built by American admirers of Shakespeare and his genius.

Kennilworth and Warwick Castles, the Worcester Cathedral, and many other historic places of interest are within easy reach and bring to the imagination many famous persons and historic events but we cannot linger too long.

Adjacent to Clay Cross which is close to Chesterfield where the old church going back well into the eleventh century has its spire piercing the heavens and is seen for miles around. It is a curiosity because the spire is peculiarly twisted. No one knows the reason why, but some think that the wood of which it is built was green and through the weight of the lead sheathing it became warped. This neighborhood has many historical places, romances and memories. The Peak District of Derbyshire is regarded by antiquarians as being the cradle of British civilization and is full of historical lore. The famous "Blue-John-mine," the only one known in the world, is still being worked though only for ornamental purposes. Before the Legions of Rome conquered the country Blue John was sent to Italy, and in the ruins of Pompeii a Blue-John vase was found which was afterwards sent to the British museum where it is still on exhibit. Blue John is a beautiful, fibrous variety of Fluor Spar which gets its color from manganese.

Dovedale is a quaint little village in which is found one of the oldest churches in the country still in use for worship, its origin being lost in antiquity but it was in existence in the days of the heptarchy, being built by the Saxons. After King Egbert by defeating the rival kings, had established his supremacy by having the vanquished kings row his barge up the River Dee, the nation was unified and began its real history.

Bertram, a son of one of these vanquished kings, became a missionary and went to Ireand. He died and his tomb is in the chancel of a little chapel in this ancient church and has since been canonized. Altogether there seems to be evidence to show that this church at least goes back to the ninth century. Also, there are two old Saxon crosses, one in a good state of preservation. We were fortunate in having the old vicar (the minister) show us around the church and the yard, and he pointed out many interesting features. The River Dove at this point flows through some of the most beautiful scenery in England and this river is famous because Izaak Walton fished in it. One can see the hotel where he used to lodge; it is still entertaining guests.

Besides the ruins of the old Castles, such as Bolsover and Winfield, in which Mary, the Queen of Scots, stayed on her journey to London as the prisoner of her cousin, Queen Elizabeth of England, there are others still occupied such as Chatsworth House, Haddon Hall and Welbeck Castle, and much of the surrounding lands is owned by some of England's well known aristocracy. The "Dukeries" is a veritable fairyland and no one who would know of England's real beauty should miss this source of romance, history and legends from which immortal treasures in art and literature and music have been produced.

One place which should not be missed is Ashover. From an elevation one looks across a most beautiful valley, where the fields are divided by hedges making the whole like a huge checkerboard. Here again we find a singular blending of the ancient and modern. There stands an old tavern or inn which was the rallying place for the stout bowmen of Ashover who were recruited under the Black Prince, and helped to win the classic battle of Crecy against the French.

Lesson Twelve

Ecclesiastical Institutions in Relation to Economic Institutions

The position taken in this lesson is that there are two sets of related institutions in The Kingdom in this age: first, its ecclesiastical institutions; and second, its economic institutions. The latter are sometimes referred to as Zion; sometimes as the organization of the people; sometimes as associations or colonizations. The belief is that the goal of the ecclesia in this age is to establish these institutions—i. e., to ground its economic behavior in the will of God; to make Zion The Kingdom.

The necessity for the devotion of the ecclesia to this task, as intimated above, grows out of the fact that the Church has a moral code to which it is either impolitic or impracticable or impossible to give governing force in present society without setting up an economic commonwealth which in its very nature is the embodiment of that code.

At least in the present stage of personal development and of social evolution, distinctively economic affairs and distinctively ecclesiastical affairs should be governed somewhat separately. The state is the guardian of the property rights of its citizens. The Church is the guardian of the spiritual interests of its own members. The authority of The State is supreme in the field of economic institutions. The authority of the Church is subordinate and limited (see Doctrine and Covenants 58: 5). And the manner in which The Church separates its economic administrative jurisdictions from its ecclesiastical administrative jurisdictions accords (1) with the laws of The Nation, (2) with the sentiment and customs of the time, and (3) with the distinct uses to which ecclesiastical properties and economic properties severally are put.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION

The foundation of Zion is certain newborn convictions, sentiments, and attitudes of men. The essential function of The Ecclesia is to lay that foundation. Subsequently it employs its offices to build upon that foundation. And in this building the Church is instructed (as it is obliged) not to violate the law of the land. (Doctrine and Covenants 58: 1, 3, 5.)

What the foundation-laying of Zion consists in is determined by the nature of the enterprise. (1) It is the winning of men to the economic code of The Kingdom. (2) It is the gaining of experiences and skills that will fit men for this special task. And (3) it is the employment of the offices of the Church to set up the machinery of Zion's Government. (Doctrine and Covenants 102: 3, 9; 85: 21, et al.)

Social institutions arise from and must be sustained by the spirit of the people. The Church seeks to engender in us a spirit of reverence for God and of devotion to the right, and to inspire us to behavior that is worthy in the sight of God—or which witness our conviction that God is worthy and should be glorified in our behavior touching the well-being and happiness of mankind.

This is the business of The Ecclesia; and it is the most convenient instrument, if not the only effectively usable instrument, for mobilizing The Kingdom-building man power of the world, and for shaping its every-day life into a Zion: The Kingdom of God.

ANTI-ZIONIC TRADITIONS

One of the bad traditions that has taken root in the Latter Day Saint Church is that the Church exists only for the purpose of influencing personal behavior. There are still some who feel that the pulpit is desecrated when it is used to promote right political and industrial relations. They say that when the Church attempts to use its offices to set up An Economic Commonwealth it lowers its dignity, diverts the thoughts of its devotees to "worldly" questions, and robs itself of its spiritual power. On this account we need to elaborate and enforce the argument that our ecclesiastical institutions have a duty to bring forth a set of economic institutions.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL FOR THE SAKE OF THE ECONOMIC

The Ecclesia was set up on April 6, 1830. In 1831 the prediction was made that ecclesiastical activities would result in the conversion of a company of believers so large that "you may be enabled to keep my laws." (Doctrine and Covenants 44: 2.) Certainly this does not refer to what are commonly called ecclesiastical laws.

One month later instruction was given to save moneys with which to purchase lands for an inheritance, "even The City," to which the people were to gather by appointment. (Doctrine and Covenants 48: 2.) And two months later there was given to the Church, Section 51, which can leave no doubt that The Ecclesia exists for the very purpose of bringing into being An Economic Commonwealth; we call it Zion.

Section 51 should be analyzed carefully. Here is work to be done by the bishopric in the field of Economic Organization. The offices of The Ecclesia are to be invoked and honored in organizing the economic life of this people.

Now, don't forget; this people was organized for ecclesiastical purposes on April 6, 1803. And yet, over and over again, until the year 1909, the command given to the Church was, this people must be organized. Another set of institutions, in addition to The Ecclesia, is to be brought into being.

ECONOMIC ORGANIZATION

Section 51 is devoted exclusively to economic organization. It has nothing to do with ecclesiastical organization except to indicate that it is through the functioning of The Ecclesia that the Economic Commonwealth is to be brought into being.

Section 51 deals with the question of property organization; the nature and conditions of the individual's claim to the possession and use of common properties; and such like. Verses 3, 4 and 5 deal with the question of the separate property holdings of the several units of economic organization (or communities), and with the administrative jurisdictions of the several bishops appointed to administer the economic affairs of the several communities. All of which establishes the argument that through the functioning of the ecclesiastical institutions there is to arise a distinct and partially separate set of economic institutions.

The provisions of Section 51 are restated in Section 77, and elsewhere. "It must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse . . ." And then follows this enlightening phrase: "For a permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my Church." That is to say that these economic institutions have to do with the accomplishment of the purposes for which the Church exists—a truth clearly stated in the following phrase and clause: "To advance the cause which you have espoused." And then, as if to make the meaning doubly sure, there follow these commandments: "To prepare and organize yourselves by a bond and everlasting covenant which cannot be broken." And all this in relation to economic concerns.

That "bond and covenant" idea in relation to economic concerns is expressed several times in the revelations to the Church. In Section 81: 4 it is stated twice: "Bound together by a bond and everlasting covenant that cannot be broken . . . in your several stewardships." "I give unto you a commandment, that you bind yourselves together by this covenant." That this refers to economic organization is evident from the instruction concerning property organization which follows.

Bring to bear now upon this question, Section 101. This is "counsel and a commandment concerning the order, which I have commanded to be organized and established. . . ." Here we have an expansive statement of principles in which these economic institutions are to be grounded.

In Section 102, the cause of the miscarriage of our ecclesiastical purposes is said to be the failure to become "united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom." This means what has been stated in other forms in other places, that the ecclesia cannot fulfill its purposes without bringing its peoples into right economic relations. Failing to establish the economic institutions, the ecclesiastical institutions will fail.

And so the story runs throughout the whole book of Doctrine and Covenants. A second set of institutions is to be established. Zion, the economic commonwealth, is to be "redeemed."

THE COMMONWEALTH OF ISRAEL

This idea of economic institutions through which to work out ecclesiastical purposes is not new. It is as old as Jesus, and Isaiah, and Moses. Only the circumstances and the methods of working out these ecclesiastical purposes have changed. Even in the time of Moses, when there was no separation of civil authority from ecclesiastical authority such as there is today, the chief responsibility of the prophet was to establish that economic commonwealth, The Kingdom of Israel.

In the days of Jesus (i. e., in New Testament times), seven men were appointed to look after the business of making distribution of economic goods accord with the ecclesiastical doctrine of "fellowship." That was as far as they could venture in the field of economic institutions under the rule of Rome. But it was a prophecy of what Christian peoples were to do in other times and places.

WHY NO NEW TESTAMENT ZION

Walter Rauschenbusch, in Christianity and the Social Crises, sets out the reasons why Christianity did not undertake to establish a set of economic institutions in New Testament Times, as he apprehended them. They are these: (1) "By the time the Church had gained sufficient power to exercise a controlling influence (in economic life), the process of social decay, like the breakdown of a physical organism in a wasting disease, was beyond remedy.

(2) "The right of public agitation was very limited in the Roman Empire." "Any attempt to arouse the people against the oppression of the government (which allowed no such privileges to the Church as it enjoys today) . . . would have been choked off with relentless promptness." (3) "The expectation of the speedy or early return of the Lord with His Kingdom."

(4) "A clouded atmosphere of fear and distrust through which imperial Rome loomed threatening and detestable." "How could the ideals of life which they carried in their hearts (the governmental implications of which they little understood in their heads) be realized in a world so incompatible with them?"

(5) The limitations of human nature. "The early Christians were subject to the same limitations of human nature to which we are all prone. They, too, (like we Latter Day Saints) were all creatures of custom." The customs and practices which lead to economic slavery were not distasteful to them.

(6) "An intense desire for the future life which obscured the truths of Christianity with respect to the present life.

(7) "The ascetic tendencies of early Christians." Their ascetic piety turned their faces away from the present world of practical problems to a world which was "in the clouds"—so far away as to leave them morally comfortable for the present, even in the midst of all the existing economic evil.

(8) The lack of scientific comprehension of social development. The building of Zion, The Kingdom, required more of a background of studies in the social sciences than was possible in that early day. And so on.

But the whole setting of The Ecclesia has been changed since Jesus' day. Early political prohibitions have been removed. Industrial evolution is making demands upon the Church that were never made before. Today, we find that The Church cannot save its own life, even, if it will not devote its energies to the creation of economic institutions adapted to the demands of this age. It must free its people from the moral limitations of this industrial age if it is to promote its spiritual purposes.

WHY SEPARATE ADMINISTRATIVE JURISDICTIONS

The reason for the Latter Day Saint plan of a partial separation of economic administrative jurisdictions from ecclesiastical jurisdictions should be sought out. One reason is the absolute right of The Church, through the hierarchy (priesthood), to shape its own philosophy of life, as against the equal rights of both persons and peoples to make moral choices in economic situations and to promote their economic interests by their own industry, thrift, ingenuity, etc., unhampered and unrestrained.

Ecclesiastical authority may need to be dogmatic in certain situations. At all hazards, it needs to dominate the spiritual affairs of The Church. A prophet is called of God to deliver a message for God; and to bring together in one body all who are willing to heed the prophetic voice. The principle of prophetic control in ecclesiastical situations is fundamental to Latter Day Saintism. The hierarchy should have the right of way in distinctively and peculiarly ecclesiastical concerns.

On the other hand there is no reason why peoples everywhere should not have control of the economic affairs in which they alone are concerned. To take away this control would be to defeat the central purpose of religion, which is that each person of his own free moral will shall devote himself to the service of God. Both persons and peoples have a right to reap what they sow. So say all the prophets of God. And that means that economic goods belong to the producers for disposal. The principles of the consecration of the surplus and of property organization and of economic organization in general which our prophet has brought to us are a declaration of such rights.

The reasons, then, for the partial separation of economic administrative jurisdictions from ecclesiastical administrative jurisdictions provided for in the plan of social organization of the Latter Day Saint Church, in part, are these:

(1) The right of the hierarchy to dominate purely ecclesiastical situations.

(2) The rights of persons and of peoples (i. e., of individuals and of communities) to pursue their own economic interests unhampered and unrestrained by any imperialistic influence.

(3) The fulfillment of personality that grows out of personal and positive participation in the business of society.

(4) Respect for both civil law and current moral sentiment.

(5) The dependence of economic organization upon the willing and intelligent economic self-discipline of both individuals and groups.

WHY THE TIE-UP

Latter Day Saintism says that some of the authority of the hierarchy should carry over from The Ecclesia to the Economic Commonwealth of Zion—of "Zion," mind—for the following reasons:

(1) Zion is an ecclesiastical goal; it is a representative enterprise; therefore, its development should be guided by men whose official acts represent The Church.

(2) Public control of the common properties of Latter Day Saints should be exercised only by men who are competent to be entrusted with their economic interests.

(3) Any authority in economic "Zion" that is out from under ecclesiastical control would leave the whole government in "Zion" ecclesiastically irresponsible. And

(4) It is common sentiment among Latter Day Saint churchmen that economic duties are duties to God, and that

The Colorful Story of an Old Hymn and Its Author

By L. B. M.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him, all creatures here below;
Praise him above, ye heavenly host;
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

Everyone knows the "Doxology" or "Old Hundred." We have sung it many times. But other than the words what do we actually know about the hymn?

"Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow" is a composition of Thomas Ken who was born at Berkhamstead, Hertfordshire, England, in 1637, and became a prelate in the Church of England. The hymn has been translated into a number of different languages, and is sung the world around. One authority says that it has been printed in more hymnbook than any other hymn written. In our Hymnal we have it and also Ken's "Morning Hymn," ("Awake, My Soul, and With the Sun"). Both were written in 1695.

Ken was educated at Winchester and New College, Oxford, and early served in various offices in the church. In 1675, he visited Rome, and returned to England, after five years' absence, to accompany Mary, Princess of Orange, as her chaplain, to Holland. He was chaplain to Charles II, whom he attended at his last illness.

History tells us that shortly before his death the King nominated Ken to the bishopric of Bath and Wells (1684), but he was not fully invested till James II became King of England. Then for refusing to obey the King's order to read the declaration of indulgence, he and six other bishops were sent to the Tower in 1688. Nevertheless, when the Prince of Orange ascended the throne as William III, Bishop Ken, considering James still his lawful sovereign, refused to transfer his allegiance to the new King. For this refusal his bishopric was taken from him.

Thomas Ken was a man of extensive learning, good tastes, and wide sympathies. He was a zealous churchman and loyal to his King. He wrote voluminously—sermons, treatises, devotional writings. His "Morning Hymn" and "Evening Hymn," are said to be surpassed by none in the language.

The familiar melody to which we sing the "Doxology," is one composed by Louis Bourgeois in 1551.

Grieve not over the past, for the endless future is but past given back, for preparation.—Selected.

Stewardship in the Church

Christian stewardship has come to stay. The wonder is that it has been so long on the way. It is so natural, so logical, so scriptural, so altogether reasonable, that someone should have brought it forward long before this. Likewise, it seems strange that, having now been brought forward, it does not meet with more eager acceptance on the part of honest, earnest-minded Christian men and women. It bears the marks of answered prayer, and offers a solution of many vexing problems in kingdom service.

It is not another organization to divide the energies of the workers, but it is a vitalizing agency that, because it is related to every phase of Christian life, stimulates and greatly increases the efficiency of all.

Tithing is the solution of many problems. When the church once adopts it there is no limit to the working possibilities. The Bible school would become in practice what it is in theory—the whole church at work studying the Bible. The stewardship of possessions would enable the church to carry out its entire program without embarrassment and provide its quota for the larger work of the kingdom. It is easily demonstrable that if the whole church were faithful in the giving of the tithe, then every present call for church and missionary outlay could be easily financed.—Detroit's Beacon Light

Have You Earned Tomorrow?

Is anybody happier because you passed his way? Does anyone remember that you spoke to him today? When this day is over and its toiling time is through, is there anyone to offer a kindly word of you?

Did you give a friendly greeting to the friend who came along or a churlish sort of "Howdy" and then vanish in the throng? Were you selfish, pure and simple, as you rushed along your way, or is some one mighty grateful for a deed you did today?

Can you say tonight in parting with the day that's slipping fast, that you helped a single brother of the many that you passed? Is a single heart rejoicing over what you did or said? Does a man whose hopes were fading, now with courage look ahead?

Did you waste the day or lose it, was it well or poorly spent? Did you leave a trail of kindness or a scar of discontent?

As you close your eyes in slumber do you think that God would say, you have earned one more tomorrow by the works you did today?—(From the Bulletin of the Central Presbyterian Church, Kansas City, Missouri.)

In the Future

By C. J. Lant

When we stop to consider the rapid changes in the social order of the past fifty or one hundred years, and look into the future for the solution of the problem, we cannot help visioning the magnitude of the possibilities of the range of work to be accomplished within the church and the realms of "Latter-day-Saintism."

Yet, should we forget the very thing that this nation has been builded upon, "the sacredness and chastity of the home?" One can scarcely pick up a paper today without reading of a suicide, a murder or a lynching somewhere. But the loss of the person's life has not remedied the cause or causes.

The system, just prior to the collapse of the so-called capitalistic system of government, that was used when boys and girls came into the toils of the law, was to crush the very life and spirit out of them in order to attempt to cure them. But in reality the brutality of the third degree methods used by the law tended to ruin rather than to cure the individual.

The other day I read in a paper where a judge in Canada said, in sentencing a young fellow fifteen years of age for counterfeiting five dollar bills, that if any school would take the young fellow and develop the talent that he had, he would parole him to that institution, rather than send him to jail.

Isn't this the very thing that should be done with adolescence? How much finer would it be to see this young man trained as an asset to his home, his country and to humanity? The criminal is not the result of the stubborn will of an individual so much as it is the result of possibly many years of privation and suffering on the part of his forebears.

A few days ago, I saw in an open vision a scene that should be of interest to every person. I seemed to be standing in the center of a parade ground on a military reservation and all around this beautiful spot there were houses and barracks; but it was not being used for a rendezvous for soldiers for war, but a gathering place for young Latter Day Saint boys and girls.

There were seven or eight thousand of them gathered there and the girls were beautiful and dressed in spotless white and purity; while the boys and young men were tall and strong and handsome; with faces radiant with life and love. What makes me feel that there is something to this vision is the fact that I also had the vision in a dream exactly as I have since witnessed it in a vision.

Everywhere we find men, women, and children crying for bread in a land where food stuffs are ordered to be curtailed in production, homeless in a land that gives every man and woman as a birth right a homestead privilege. But how are they to acquire such a homestead even if they are willing to take advantage of such an opportunity?

Everywhere we find men and women already driven by desperation through want and privation into hysterics, and their children given to the easiest way, the line of least resistance. Home life is all but destroyed. Few are held intact by these old-fashioned sentiments of love and chastity.

Rather we find a camaraderie of free love existing between many of the young people of what were at one time considered the best families; and we know of a surety that some schools and universities are teaching that there is nothing in the old-fashioned union of man and wife, and still other universities are teaching that there is no "God."

We have personally witnessed an exchange of wives by some of our modern youth. And when you remonstrate with them they will tell you to use your imagination, and other things too vulgar to put into print, even if you had a desire to do so.

But are the present day youth to blame for the circumstances in which they find themselves? I would say not, because of the conditions of their early home life. It is there that the seed of chastity and righteousness must be sown if we are ever to have a moral civilization.

Mothers and fathers are the foundation of any civilization and upon them rests the responsibility for the children that they bring into the world; if they produce them they should feel that it is theirs rather than their neighbor's responsibility.

In the gathered condition that I cited in my dream and vision is the solution; not only to the crime situation, but also to the rehabilitation of humanity toward a better race of people, with a gradual elimination of the human suffering present today in every land.

One generation cannot do it, neither will two; but after two or three perhaps there can be such a change in the people that they will truly be free from the taint and blemish of the every-day world; but it will take a gathering of people who are truly converted to this plan of salvation.

It may succeed where every person is willing to live and die for the realization of the plan's success; it cannot be accomplished where we have one family trying to do it and a thousand going in the opposite direction.

How much better would it be for the judge of a court to send boys and girls to a school of some kind if they are delinquent; where they would have the proper love and care which they possibly have never known in their home; perhaps because the father and mother were unable to provide properly for them.

How much better would it be for us as a church and as a people to live in groups of this sort; where we all would be living for the good of humanity and the generations to come, where love and purity would be the foundation upon which their lives were based.

How much better would it be to convert the military reservation into a school for both the aged and the youth to change the cannon into the plowshare and the shovel and the hoe, and the time spent in the idleness and wasted hours at night, where young womanhood is ruined and the young manhood is converted into the future criminal and degenerate.

We Americans seem to be among the most stupid people on earth; I presume, because we do not know how to live. There is much for us to learn from the old world in this respect; we are running a mad race with death and seem to be trying to beat death in the race to the place of burial.

The collapse of the old system was necessary for us all to be made to realize the facts in the case, and out of the tangled web begin to build a new race and a new nation; dedicated to God and humanity.

IS DEMOCRACY ABOUT TO END?

we give ourselves over to the divorce court, to the apparent growing use of liquor, to indulgence in lax and immoral motion pictures and other forms of low commercialized amusements we will continue to renounce our claims to self-governing abilities.

Mark Sullivan, one of America's keenest political analysts, has only recently warned us that, "It would be impossible to overstate the depth of the issue which is being developed by the administration program, or the degree of tension which seems certain to arise over it. It involves not only two directly conflicting philosophies of society. It involves also ultimately a lining up of two types of human nature, on one side those who prize the maximum of individual freedom and self-responsibility and on the other side that large class of human beings who take kindly to authority and to fixed ways of life handed down by authority."

The so-called "authoritarian state" is well recognized in Europe and our very candid Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace in his new book, America Must Choose, clearly sets forth the fact that the United States is now at the crossroads. What the outcome will be depends on the God-fearing and liberty-loving citizenry of this country.

Someone recently has said that we do not so much need an N. R. A. as we do an N. U. A.—a National Uncovery Act—to uncover crime and political corruption, to get rid of the buzzard so that the blue eagle can fly unobstructed.

Graceland College is making her contribution to the lives of many of our future voters in a way which will enable them to see clearly and act conclusively on the questions our complicated modern civilization raises.

THE MOUNTAIN OF THE LORD'S HOUSE

Isaiah 2: 1-4 means that The Ecclesia is to be the source of an economic commonwealth; that is, that a set of economic institutions is to grow out of the activities of The Church in the latter days. The daughters of Zion are to cast up a highway. "The government shall be upon his shoulder." And since it is to be a scheme of economic institutions to which all peoples may make their corporate behavior conform, certainly it must be at once a mode of economic life which the peoples of The Church, too, in their rights as men, may set up for their own government.

AN IMPERATIVE

The Church can enrich its life only by its normal functioning. "If Zion (i. e., the peoples who are called to be Zion) do these things she shall prosper. . . ." (Doctrine and Covenants 94: 5.) If she direct not her energies to this end she shall make herself thenceforth "good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under the foot of men." (Doctrine and Covenants 100: 2.)

Normal functioning. Not condiments. Not stimulants. But just normal functioning. This is an age in which, whether it wants to or not, the Ecclesia can save itself only by building that set of economic institutions Latter Day Saints call "ZION."

"MORE TRAVEL NOTES"

Not far away is Sutton-in-Ashfield in Nottinghamshire, and close at hand is Sherwood Forest the haunt of Robin Hood and his merry men in green.

Brother George Willis took me one evening to Newstead Abbey, the home of Lord Byron. We walked through the grounds and by the black waters of the lake, so foreboding, and were privileged by the caretaker to go through the house and travel along the corridors and cloisters where the strange genius of the poet had been nurtured by his stern and eccentric mother. It was easy to appreciate the lambent fires of this singular man as we became acquainted with these surroundings.

In the city of Leicester a small branch of the church is struggling for its life under the faithful support of some devoted members shepherded by Brother Arthur Norton. The names and services of some who were faithful and are now dead, are remembered among them, Brothers Norton (father and son), Pierce, Dawkins, now passed on, and Brother William Ecclestone and family, now of Independence, Missouri, whose faith and courage in church work in many places, seemed to have reached its peak here.

Close to Leicester, also a rich field for the antiquarian, where many relics of age and beauty are to be seen including some fine specimens of Roman mosaics, is the little town of Luttenworth. In 1903 the late Brethren Joseph Smith and R. C. Evans, and I were there and spent an interesting day looking through John Wycliffe's church. This good and sainted man gave to England the Bible in common tongue, and because of his attempts at reform of church conditions, was known as "the Morning Star of the Reformation." Here are the pulpit, communion table and chair which were used by Wycliffe.

Nuneaton, another old midland town, has a few church people, where Brother F. O. Davies has done some good work, assisted by the excellent families who live there. This town was the home of Mary Ann Evans (George Eliot) and the scene of several of her well-known books, including Scenes in Clerical Life, and The Mill on the Floss.

Along the roads one can travel in comfortable busses as well as by train and every turn in the road brings some new and enchanting view, and the pages of history turn backwards like a reversed movie film. We travel southwards passing through Oxford and many other interesting places, onward to London and the southwest. Of this we write later.

wants individuals—all individuals in all lands of all races—to come into line with Him and acknowledge the Fatherhood of God, the Sonship of Christ, the brotherhood of man. He wants society—reconstructed and placed on a basis of love and righteousness.

The challenge has been sounded! The hour has come! The cry of the downtrodden and oppressed comes ringing to our ears! The world needs what we can bring them! Our God is waiting for us to heed the call! Christ, himself, dealt vigorously and unsparingly with error. His teachings, impregnable in defense, glowed with power and purpose in attack. He never tampered nor qualified the truth. His blows were sledge-hammer blows; his inspiration fearless. The call is for men whose souls are athirst for God, whose hearts are attuned to hear His commands, whose very lives are dedicated to The Cause of Zion. The establishment of Zion is the only possible solution to the problem of the ages. Knowing that the zionic program is the only hope for the salvation of the race, will you catch the vision of this latter day work, and aid in its fulfillment?

Judgment

(Revelation by Saint John)

By Alma M. Coombs

Behold! a great white throne,
And he who sits upon it;
The earth, away has flown,
And Satan, from his pit,
Has tried in vain,
Once more to gain
A victory over heaven.

And now, I see the dead,
They stand before their Lord,
Hoping, yet some with dread;
Look ever heavenward,
As books are brought,
And records sought
Concerning man's probation.

Once more, a book appears,
The Book of Life I see;
For them there are no fears,
Whose name and history,
Within this book,
(This precious book)
Stand out in letters golden.

Yet God, from every eye,
Shall wipe away all tears;
No more shall men's faith die,
For death, and all men's fears
Shall pass away;
A greater day
Shall dawn upon our vision.

No Matter

By Gladys McKim Redding

No matter how hard the task may seem
We do not labor in vain.
No matter how far off the dream
We do not dream in vain.

No matter how distant the goal
We do not strive in vain.
No matter how sinful the soul
It has not lived in vain.

Life is a journey with many turns,
Pitfalls at every bend.
Within us all the desire burns
To make it to the end.

There is an All-seeing Eye
That helps the pilgrims on:
Who guides our footsteps from on high;
Receives us when we're done.

No matter how few the victories
We have not tried in vain.
We count the victories, forget the strife
And onward press again.

Because of One who lived and tried
We must not live in vain;
That loving One who suffered and died
That man might rise again.

Victory!

By Margaret W. Gibson

I.

Mars, thou art doomed! This conflict nearing
For which thou gird'st thyself in armor hideous Shall be thy last. Thou knowest it full well.
And therefore, for the fight, thou callest legions, Rulers and monarchs, captains of the deep,
Engines of war, foul gases, winged death,
Lead, iron, brass and steel, and raw, red fire,
Pestilence, disease and plague—hell following
To fight thy battle.

II.

Mars, thou art doomed! Thy Conquer-or's army
Stands at the gate of heaven in shining armor
Amassed and ready, waiting but the signal.
And He their Leader, God's own Son incarnate,
On white steed mounted, sits, poised in the saddle
Bearing one weapon only—that invincible—
The sword of God, two-edged and flashing.
And in his lifted hand, a trumpet, poised
To herald victory!

III.

Mars, it is over. Earth from your grasp release!
His lips are on the trump! Hail, Prince of Peace!

Memorial Day

By J. F. Sheehy

Every nation, every institution and every family has its memorial day.
True, some have more than one.

It was a day long to be remembered by ancient Israel when they were freed from Egyptian bondage. They had been slaves for several centuries. Now they were free men. Two great memorial days were given to them that they might remember their deliverance. One day to be an annual event, the other to be a weekly reminder.

The passover Feast! To be observed once a year with strict ritual devotion.

The Sabbath Day! A day to remind them once a week of their freedom.

As one reviews the past history of nations and realizes what a terrible price was paid for Memorial Days in death and pain, untold suffering, heartaches, life-long cripples, broken homes and bankrupt nations, we wonder if the day

Sunshine.

Spring.

Violets upspringing in the woods.

Fruit trees in bloom.

Many things to do. Enough to fill one's time and more.

The privilege of riding and rambling over the country-side.

Home—a place to rest and re-create as well as work and plan.

Prospect of a summer vacation.

Friends, a few of them, the comfortable sort that don't have too many complexes, self-centers or troubles.

Sewing to pick up when the impulse strikes one.

Books—a variety; those to laugh with, those to cry over, and some of the very unusual, others deeply thoughtful.

Color—in landscape, in nature, at home, in clothing, and everywhere.

Food, a little now and then.

A chance to think and pray.

Opportunities to serve—opening in every direction.

Dreams.

should not be spent in sackcloth and ashes.

As we remember our heroic dead today—as we recall the gory battle fields of the Civil War, as we are conscious that all the hatred of 1860-1865 is not yet wiped away, let us resolve as never before that "war shall be no more."

As we go from grave to grave this Memorial Day placing beautiful flowers where our loved ones sleep let us not be unmindful of Him who died to make us free from the bondage of sin and death.

The Christian world is not without its Memorial Day. We gather around the Lord's Table each month and eat and drink in remembrance of Him! We remember his betrayal, humiliation, rejection, suffering, pain and death on the cross. Every Sunday is a constant reminder of his resurrection. Let the words of Christ ring in our ears today—
"Put up thy sword!"

It is the ringing challenge of the man of Galilee to all the world to be brothers.
Let us sing with the modern psalmist:

"Let us all be brothers,
Brothers of the world,
With the flag of friendship
From our hearts unfurled.
Smile, and keep on smiling,
Over land and sea,
Make the whole world brothers,
Brothers, you and me."

A Motto

The Elevator to Success is Not Running; Take the Stairs.

Un-Blessings

People that are not honest.

People that are too sanctimonious.

People who will never grow up.

People afflicted with complexes of every sort.

People who want to tend to your business.

People with no ambition.

People with too much ambition.

People with no sense of proportion or appreciation.

Selfish parents.

Ill-reared children.

People that are lazy.

People that are crabby or fussy.

Cushion smotherers.

People that gossip and lie.

Money

Money is power: so said one.

Money is a cushion: so said another.

Money is the root of evil: so said still another.

Money means freedom: so runs an old saying.

And money is all of these—and more.

Money pays for whatever you want—if you have the money.

Money buys food, clothes, houses, lands, guns, jewels, men, women, time to be lazy and listen to music.

Money buys everything except love, personality, freedom, immortality, silence, peace.

Therefore men fight for money.

Therefore men steal, kill, swindle, walk as hypocrites and whited sepulchers.

Therefore men speak softly, carrying plans, poisons, weapons, each in the design: The words of his mouth were as butter but war was in his heart.

Therefore nations lay strangleholds on each other; bombardments open, tanks advance, salients are seized, aviators walk on air; truckloads of amputated arms and legs are hauled away.

Money is power, freedom, a cushion, the root of all evil, the sum of blessings.

Tell us what is money.

For we are ignorant of money, its ways and meanings.

We are children in the dark storm where people cry for money.

—Carl Sandburg, in Today.

Precious Memories of "Uncle Mark" H. Forscutt

May we do our bit in doing honor to the character and work of "Uncle Mark"? True friends, and pleasing memories are two of the most worth-while things this life gives to us. Our first recollection of Uncle Mark was in 1875. He came to Magnolia with President Joseph Smith, the latter to preach the sermon of dedication of the newly built church, and Brother Forscutt to follow up with a series of meetings. He was assigned to our humble three-room home as our guest for the time. Father was in Sweden as first missionary of the Reorganization. We were very poor. Mother and I were timid as our guest appeared so imposing in appearance, talented withal, but the noble man sensed our feelings and soon had us at ease. He got down on "all fours," bid me get astride his back, to play horse, then he playfully dumped the rider, and gleefully clapped his hands.

The church had no organ, but his singing stirred us all into readiness for his eloquent, inspiring sermons. He visited our branch annually for several years and baptized by tens and twenties. One evening we were walking hand in hand from church. He noted old Mother Shaw, eighty-five years of age and deficient in sight, walking some distance ahead. He hurried forward, offered his arm, and tenderly guided her steps, praising her the while. Following a series of meetings here he left on Saturday to begin another at Little Sioux. Mother and I rode in the rear of a lumber wagon, in a bit of hay, with extremely cold weather, assigned to the home of Sister Alice Cobb, where also others of the three wagon loads of Saints were assigned. All were anxious to be with Uncle Mark as long as possible. At Sunday noon, Uncle Mark, my mother and I, with others, were invited to dinner at the home of good Brother Prior L. Stevenson, a brother-in-law of Davis H. Bays. The home was of boards set on end, with slab batts, one room, a long pine home-made table, a large kettle of potatoes with jackets on graced the center, corn bread, and a bit of salt pork. Uncle Mark's tearful "saying grace" made us all one, and the dinner a feast. Then to the Sioux River, and our loved "Uncle" in borrowed overalls, baptized several, and coming up out of the water, his clothing was soon a coating of ice. But happy and unafraid was he in humble service. On one of his visits in Magnolia, he said, "Alma, I expect one of my dear girls to be here for a visit, her name is Ruby Celeste." I said, "Isn't that a pretty name?" He feeling said, "I believe the Lord named her." I never quite understood, until in the present biography by that same daughter, mention is made of how "Uncle Mark" was led. We kept in close touch with him to the last, his appearance and manners, his eloquence, his rare gifts made him outstanding but finely humble and sacrificing withal. On his last visit at our home, broken in health, he spoke feelingly of past work and memories and a hope to go to California for health. We asked him to write in our autograph album. After a brief prayer, he took pen, and composed as he wrote, the following, which we have prized as a gifted word. The penmanship is beautiful, almost perfect.

TO ALMA FROM UNCLE MARK

I knew thee in thy boyhood days, and then I loved thee.
With joy I watched thine upward march, and then approved thee.
I marked thy progress towards the heights above thee,
And thank the Lord for all.

Thy father in meridian life was taken from thee;
Thy mother and the cares of life fell on thee,
And bravely did'st thou bear the burden cast upon thee
And trust the Lord in all.

Thy seniors soon perceived the Lord had qualified thee
For higher than earthly work in which his hand would guide thee,
Then the Holy Spirit's grace and wisdom did decide thee,
To serve the Lord in all.

And now, dear Alma, may the Lord of hosts befriend thee,
His angels as His ministrants most lovingly attend thee,
Remove affliction hence, and from every foe defend thee
To praise the Lord in all.

February 19, 1900, Nebraska City, Nebraska.

Through all the years we have had, and still have, his photograph on a "Whatnot," but best of all, blessed memories of the man, and his noble worth. We give this sketch, as a bit of outside information on his nature, and to awaken memories of those privileged to know him, and information to the younger generation, on the humility of one of the most talented men of the Reorganization.

God Manifests His Marvelous Power

It gives me strength and courage to go on in this work when I read the glorious testimonies of the Saints, telling what God has done for them in various ways. It is like food for the soul when we can speak of the spiritual blessings we have received. We know he is the God of love.

I would that we could read more of these letters of experiences in this true latter-day work; these testimonies are a great help to each of us as we go struggling on in these trying times. We know that we are striving for the building of God's kingdom.

It was through the teaching and guiding power of my father, who passed away thirty-three years ago, that I have learned the truth.

For the benefit of Herald readers I want to relate an experience through which I passed. It was five years ago May 19, since we lost our son-in-law through an accident caused by pouring kerosene on a heating stove fire; it exploded burning him so badly that he died within a few hours. My daughter was so terribly burned on her back by the explosion that for weeks there was little hope for her recovery. While we sat in the funeral home which was crowded with friends and relatives, the thought came to me, "If I only could get in touch with Elder F. T. Mussell, I would ask him to come and administer to my daughter." I felt that only in this manner would she receive a blessing. At this time something prompted me to look up; and there among the rest was Elder Mussell. He had arrived in our city only a few hours before and had read the death notice in one of the local newspapers. After the services were over, Elder Mussell came out to our home and later he went with me to the hospital and administered to my daughter. She received a wonderful blessing through the divine power of administration.

Why shouldn't we Saints be proud to testify to God's goodness, after we have received such marvelous blessings? It is with deep gratitude that I give the above testimony, and my prayer is that we will all be faithful in discharging our duties in the glorious work of God.

A Blessing in Disguise

During the fall of 1908, I was overcome with a serious attack of typhoid fever, which lasted about three weeks. After I was confined to the bed for about two weeks, Patriarch Henry Kemp called at our home to see how I was getting along and to have prayer for me.

I shall always remember this visit, Brother Kemp's encouraging words, his desire to relieve me in every possible way, and his fervent prayer in my behalf. As he arose from his kneeling posture by the bedside, he stretched forth his hands over me, and speaking to me under the influence of the Spirit said that my sickness would prove to be a blessing in disguise, and that it would prepare me physically for a missionary work that I would soon be called upon to do for the church.

During the summer just preceding, I noticed that even swinging to and fro in a swing would create within me sickness,—a dizziness, and a condition of such a nature as I had always thought seasickness to be, and I came to the conclusion that should I ever venture out upon the sea, I would most likely be among the first to get seasick.

I had no thought at the time of Brother Kemp's visit that within a year I would be doing missionary work in the South Sea Islands, following a voyage of twelve days on the sea out of the sight of land.

I had been told by a friend before I left on this long voyage to the southern tropics that if I didn't get seasick it would be an uneventful trip. A message from Brother D. J. Krahl reached me at the wharf just as the boat was about to leave. Among other things, Brother Krahl said, "I wish you a safe trip, and while I do not wish you any ill luck, I do hope that you will have one little 'sign of springtime' at least on your journey to the islands." This puzzled me. I wondered often what he meant by "a sign of spring." After thinking it over time and again, I finally dismissed it from my mind. Upon reaching the islands, however, a letter was handed to me that had been mailed to me by Brother Krahl and among other things, he said, "Did you get it? When I said that I wished you no ill luck, but hoped you would have a little 'sign of springtime' on your way to the islands, I meant by the sign of springtime 'the return of the swallow,' in other words, a little touch of seasickness."

I heard a man say one time while undergoing the experience, "I don't see why they call this seasickness, I am so sick I can't see!" When I told a friend one time that I had traveled something like thirty-thousand miles at sea in voyages to and from the South Sea Islands and the British West Indies, and had never yet had a sign of seasickness, he said, "No wonder! you are of Scotch descent and you know the Scotch are seldom found wanting to 'give anything up.'"

From what I have seen and heard, and the way I have been made to feel for others. I am glad that my voyages upon the sea have been "uneventful!" The natives called me a Mataro Maitai, a good sailor. I would often climb up to the top of the masts while approaching an island in order to be the first to sight land in the distance. There is more motion at the top of the mast than down on deck. While sailing on the small boats with natives and others seasick all around me, I would frequently go down in the cabin or "hold" and get my guitar and sing. I do not say this boastfully for this is one blessing for which I am very thankful, and, according to the blessing received under the hands of Brother Kemp, my illness proved to be a "blessing in disguise."

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

Thankful for Blessings

I very much enjoy reading the letters and sermons in the Herald each week. I have many things for which to be thankful, and while I do not always thank my heavenly Father verbally, I am always thinking my thanks. He has given me health and strength to raise my family, and I am happy that I can say that they all belong to the church I love so well.

I have three sons and three daughters who are married, and one boy and girl at home with me. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may be faithful to them. I lost my husband in December, 1932. I am thankful that I am a Latter Day Saint.

KENNETT, MISSOURI.

MRS. W. A. HAWKINS.

Letters Wanted

If you have enjoyed the letters in these columns, perhaps you should also write a word of testimony for others to enjoy. Through many months there have been sufficient letters to fill the two pages devoted to this department, but in recent weeks the supply has run low, and sometimes there has been barely enough to fill one page. Perhaps the coming of warm weather has affected the desire to write and thus reduced our supply.

Please remember that this is your department, and that it depends in part upon you. Letters of general interest will be very welcome. Remember also that we can now use pictures of those who have a real story to tell.—The Editors.

A Few Short Words of Prayer

By Amanda Freed

When our lives seem sad and lonely
And we feel the weight of care,
We may lighten all our burdens
With a few short words of prayer.

When our plans seem to have failed us,
Hopes have vanished into the air,
Peace may be our dearest portion
Through a few short words of prayer.

We may see the storm clouds gather,
Spreading darkness everywhere,
But may find a joy that's lasting
By a few short words of prayer.

When at last we cross yon river,
And we view the wonders there,
We may have the joy of knowing
That our Father answered prayer.

A. B. PHILLIPS

If I have no net income, should I file an inventory?

To keep an account of income and expenditures is necessary to efficient business procedure. To render an accounting to God, through the church, is a principle of good stewardship,—and we are all stewards of our temporal possessions, which He has entrusted to our use. Therefore the filing of an inventory is not dependent upon the degree of success or lack of success that we have had in any given year. The church has expressed its conviction that one should file his inventory regardless of what the inventory may show as to profits or losses, thus complying with the law concerning the matter.

One reason for this, in addition to that mentioned, is that tithes are to be paid on the annual increase (net), hence the inventory shows each year whether or not tithing is due for the year reported, and it forms the basis of computing the account of the next year.

Is it right to join the Odd Fellows or the Rebekahs?

I believe the church has never expressed itself concerning these societies, but it has disapproved of joining secret societies which require oaths of secrecy to "guard the secrets, purposes, or doings of its organization" (Conference Resolution 593). On the other hand, the church has declared that it has no right to "subvert the liberties of its members by prohibiting" membership in a secret society, unless it shall first be condemned by a General Assembly of the church or by the law of the land. No General Assembly of the church has ever yet expressed itself on this subject, which therefore is a matter left to the conscience and judgment of members to determine.

Some hold that the command of Jesus and the Apostle James to "swear not" by any oath, covers this question. The Quakers have for many years so held. Others do not believe this refers to such matters, but rather to the custom anciently had of taking oaths to perform some act that was often beyond control. An instance of such an oath is recorded of those who bound themselves under a curse to "eat nothing" until they had slain Paul (Acts 23: 14).

Does the church uphold picture shows?

I do not recall any action covering this question directly, but motion pictures have been shown under church auspices at Independence on the "campus" for several years. There is no question that motion pictures might be of great benefit if they should teach correct morals and habits or maintain an influence in this direction. But unfortunately the general trend has not been thus, and many public officials and others of high standing in our nation are greatly concerned because of the low moral tone of the movie business. There is a movement now contemplated to boycott motion picture concerns that cater to low moral standards, and to unite the churches of this country in a movement to express the disapproval of the Christian world, until a decided change for the better takes place.

Why does Revelation 7:1 mention "four corners," if the earth is round?

The term "corner" as used in Scripture and in common usage also has several meanings. Webster's dictionary gives six meanings, one of which is "direction; quarter." Another is "remote or out-of-the-way place", and "the part farthest from the center." The text cited probably means the four directions of the compass far removed from the center, or the four parts of the earth. It does not really concern a question of the shape of the earth, whether round, flat, or otherwise. Too literal renderings of the English terms used to translate the scriptural languages will often mislead and actually misrepresent the meanings intended by the ancient writers, as it is often not possible to express completely or in exactness the whole concept of one who expressed himself in ancient times in another tongue.

Stockton, California

Clay and Sutter Street

Stockton members are grateful to visiting members who have generously assisted in preaching and in other ways. Among these visitors were Elders A. E. Frazier and John C. Howe, of Modesto; W. H. Dawson, E. C. Burdick, Joseph Ensley, J. L. Bussell, and Sister Blohm, of Sacramento.

Sister Gladys Carmichael and others from the Bay Cities have also rendered valuable assistance in the young people's class work. These activities, under the supervision of Sister Petz, are creating a new interest among the young folks.

During the winter and spring the women have conducted what is known as a vanishing dinner. From the proceeds together with a liberal cash contribution from Sister Elva Petz, they purchased a supply of Saints' Hymnals.

These sisters held their first picnic at Lewis Park, May 24, there being a good attendance. Sister Eva Greer, president of the women's group last year, who moved away last spring, was with them, and was surprised with a large birthday cake and cake dish.

A baby girl was born to Victor and Ermina Tinkess, February 23. She is the first grandchild of Sister Estell Tinkess, one of the pillars of Stockton Branch. The baby was blessed Easter Sunday.

During the first week in March the home of Sister Evelyn Delarm was saddened by the loss of her infant son who died at birth.

A few days ago Sister Laura Mallory was called to the bedside of her eldest daughter in Oakland. Death claimed its victim shortly afterwards.

Sister Mae Brokaw who has enjoyed improved health for several months recently suffered a reverse and is now under the doctor's care.

The sympathy of the whole congregation goes out to those who have been overtaken by sickness and sorrow.

Beginning Sunday, May 13, and continuing each night except Saturday through Sunday, May 20, Elders W. H. Dawson and J. L. Bussell, of Sacramento, conducted revival meetings at the church at Stockton.

The choir from Sacramento Branch, directed by Sister Birdie Clark, attended May 18, and gave several beautiful numbers. Not the least of the Friday night program was an ice cream social sponsored by the young people's class, which netted almost nine dollars. This sum is to be turned over to the reunion committee and will be used in cleaning the grounds at Irvington.

While the series of meetings was in progress, Brothers Dawson and Bussell journeyed each night from Sacramento making a one-hundred-mile drive, and worked at their regular jobs during the day. Attendance was good and many friends were made for the cause.

Oldest and Youngest Elders

C. B. Brown and E. E. Crownover

In 1930 Elder E. E. Crownover, of Oklahoma, was an appointee of the church in Des Moines District. At that time he was the youngest elder in the district and Elder C. B. Brown was the oldest. This picture presents them.

Elder C. B. Brown was baptized into the church at Oskaloosa, Iowa, in June, 1862, and was a member of the Oskaloosa Branch, which a few years later was disorganized. In 1893, another branch was organized and Brother Brown was ordained a teacher. He served as branch teacher, then as presiding priest and branch president for a number of years. He was ordained an elder in 1903, and at present is deputy of the Oskaloosa group. Now eighty-six years of age, Brother Brown looks back over a life of sincere and hard work for the Master.

Brother Ernest E. Crownover is one of the church's young men who was ordained an elder in 1930, and appointed to serve as missionary in Des Moines District by the Centennial Conference. Though released from appointment with many other worthy missionaries when the church financial condition became critical, Brother Crownover has continued to serve the church in local and district offices.

Hagerman, Idaho

Prepare Reunion Grounds

Saints of this congregation have done considerable work on the reunion grounds this spring, leveling the ground, planting shade trees, and weeding. Water has been piped to the church lot, and many other improvements have been made. However, they find it hard to get donation help, as all are busy with home work.

An appropriate Mother's Day program was given by the young people on the evening of May 13, to a well-filled house. Mr. and Mrs. Hopinks, from Ruby Valley, Nevada, were in attendance, having motored to Hagerman to spend the day with Mrs. Hopinks' mother, Sister Alice Parks.

These Saints are looking forward to the reunion to be held there in August and the visits and associations of members from various branches.

The church school is progressing, and all departments are functioning. All have the work at heart in this locality and hope for future growth.

Wichita, Kansas

Water and Osie

Saints of Wichita were made to rejoice Sunday morning as Elder Arthur E. Stoft led six young men into the waters of baptism. The font and the entire rostrum were tastefully decorated with bouquets and baskets of spring flowers. Additional beauty and dignity were given this service by short talks, prayer and appropriate music.

The eleven o'clock service period was used for confirmation of the new members; Brothers Ira G. Whipple, R. Melvin Russell, and Arthur E. Stoft officiated. It was a wonderful service, well arranged, and made doubly impressive by the beautiful spirit present.

The boys who were baptized are all between the ages of fourteen and twenty. They are Lindon Robinson, Robert Boltjes, Clare VanBiber, Alfred Shannon, Keith Coplen, and James VanBiber.

Members are looking forward to meeting Brother Tickemyer next Sunday. He is to be Wichita's new pastor, and has been previously laboring in the Fourth

Briefs

Gleazer Family to Northwest

Apostle E. J. Gleazer and family, recently of Independence, stopped at Salt Lake City, Utah, to visit with the Saints of the Reorganized Church the week-end of May 26 and 27. They are on their way to their new home in Seattle, Washington, Brother Gleazer having been assigned to the Pacific Slope Mission by the late General Conference. On their way West, the Gleazers are visiting a number of branches of the church.

With Brother Gleazer go Sister Gleazer, their son, Edmund, who graduated from high school this spring, and their two daughters, Eleanor and Ruth.

Stamp of Greatness

The people are great who have great souls, great sympathies, great hearts, and great characters. It is what you are that stamps you as an asset or a liability in the world of today.—Dr. William H. Mansfield.

Thousands of Miles to Visit Saints

John A. Judd, president of Southern District, England, has planned a year's visiting which will take him some thousands of miles through the countryside of southern England and Wales. According to "The Southern England and Wales District Herald" some of these trips are over four hundred miles but Brother Judd wishes to meet as many Saints as possible, especially the priesthood.

Presiding Bishopric Meet at Independence

The three members of the Presiding Bishopric met at Independence Sunday, May 27, for counsel and consultation regarding business of the church. Presiding Bishop L. F. P. Curry came from his home in Dallas, Texas, and Bishop N. Ray Carmichael, ordained at the late General Conference, came from Lamoni, Iowa, to meet with Bishop G. L. DeLapp at the Auditorium.

"Then Shall Come Power"—

I am persuaded beyond a doubt, that this church will eventually succeed, but I am also persuaded that before that time, we shall pass through trials and difficulties, hard to endure, which shall burn away the dross, the selfish, and the impure. Then shall come power from Jesus Christ our Lord.—J. A. Gillen.

Kansas City Church. They also expect to have present their supervising apostle, R. S. Budd.

Wichita Branch is able to report an increase in attendance at all meetings and is rejoicing over the interest taken by the young people in midweek prayer meeting.

Members of the choir, under the leadership of Sister Hazel Booth, enjoyed an evening of fun in one of the parks, Thursday. Well-filled baskets were quickly disposed of and then a big play was enjoyed by all.

They miss Brother and Sister Paul E. Nelson who have recently moved to Independence. Sister Nelson has been the choir director for four years, and she is especially missed by that group.

The young people's division enjoyed a picnic and treasure hunt for Decoration Day. There are about thirty in this group and under the capable leadership of Sister Lena Curtis, they have many good times and are the source of much inspiration and help in the branch.

Joint Meetings of Douglas and Bisbee Branches

Prospects More Hopeful for Arizona Members

Joint Easter services were held by Douglas and Bisbee Branches. Sunrise services were held halfway between the two places. An egg hunt and picnic lunch were enjoyed in the afternoon at the home of Brother and Sister William Davis.

An Easter program was given by the Sunday school department of Douglas, Sunday evening, under the supervision of Sister Simpson. It was gratifying to see the younger generation take real interest in displaying their talents and helpfulness.

An appropriate Mother's Day program was jointly given by Douglas and Bisbee Branches.

Bisbee Saints regret to lose the following Saints from their midst, Elder R. C. Smith and family, Ira Cunningham, and Elder H. L. Cunningham and family, who have moved to Independence, Missouri. Members of these families occupied in the priesthood.

Elder Raymond Ratterree gave a splendid sermon on "Duty" not long ago. Brother Puckett delivered a timely and instructive talk about Christ and his mission.

Children's Day programs will be enjoyed in the evening.

A joint meeting of Bisbee and Douglas Branches, to include all-day Sunday services up in the mountains, is being considered.

Working conditions have improved at Bisbee of late. Wage earners have been raised about twelve percent in wages.

The Saints hope this fall to arrange a missionary program to arouse much interest in this district.

Progress in New Oklahoma Community

Seven Baptized—Others Interested— Sunday School Organized

Isolated Saints near Bristow, Oklahoma, have had the privilege of hearing the gospel message during the past winter. Due to the kindness of Elder and Sister C. W. Couser, a way was provided for transportation and Brother Falls Cunningham, of Tulsa, held services in a little country schoolhouse five miles east of Bristow.

Elder and Sister Couser, and Elder and Sister Cunningham and children, Iris, Frances, and Roberta, and others from Tulsa drove to Bristow at first every other Sunday, and now they come each week.

Saints from Mounds, Tuskegee, Kellyville, Sapulpa, Depew, Oilton, and Bristow have attended. Much good has been accomplished, seven having been baptized and a Sunday school organized. Other nonmembers are interested.

Elder Lancaster, pastor of the church at Tulsa, has met with these Saints twice bringing them the message of the latter days, as also have Elders O. A. McDowell and Ellis Rathburn.

Work in this community was started in 1929, by Elder T. E. Fitzwater, who held a three-week series of meetings, and baptized several. Since that time no services had been held until Brother Cunningham started his preaching.

Lansing, Michigan

Organize Zion's Christian Legion

Lansing young people are happy to announce that the Zion's Christian Legion has been organized in their branch. It is well on its way to bigger and better things. Elder Albert Stanke has been chosen as legion commander; Eugene Page, director of socialization; Jennie Page, director of solicitation; Alex Dudley, treasurer; Donna Manning, secretary, and Alice Dudley, publicity agent.

Nine captains have been chosen as follows: Earl Premoe, LeRoy Andrews, Emaline Andrews, Paul Baker, Myrtle Mae Brown, Frances Dudley, Helen Weaver, John Malinowsky, and Clarence Dudley. Each group is allowed ten members; captains are to be chosen as needed.

Sunday evening services are to be in charge of the legion, and much interest is being shown.

A wiener roast will be held soon, given by Elder Stanke when the first group is completed and dues for the first month are collected.

It is the desire of the legion to go forward in this endeavor to accomplish the purpose outlined and hoped for by Apostle D. T. Williams, the leader of the Zion's Christian Legion.

Beaverton, Michigan

Local Program Spurs Saints to Many Activities

On the evening of May 23, Elder G. W. Burt was pleasantly surprised with a get-together meeting, celebrating his eighty-second birthday. Light refreshments were served and a few talks were given. He was presented a large cake decorated beautifully and bearing eighty-two lighted candles. Elder Hubert Case made the presentation speech. Tables were set for eighty-two and every place was taken. Ray Rosevear, company commander of the Beaverton Zion's Christian Legion, was master of ceremonies.

The Zion's Christian Legion members of Central Michigan are meeting here for a banquet soon. This banquet and meeting are in honor of the district president, Elder Hubert Case, celebrating the culmination of forty years of missionary work.

The choir rendered an Easter Cantata on the evening of Easter day, and Elder G. W. Burt gave a short talk which made a perfect close to another Easter-tide.

The Mother's Day service was sponsored by Miss Elaine Rosevear. It was a beautiful service; the tones of the sweet-toned reed organ blended with those of the piano in a pretty background for some of the readings.

On the evening of May 27, Pastor Willis Schrock delivered the baccalaureate address to the seniors of the high school. The president of the class, Lorraine McDonald, is one of the Latter Day Saint young people.

Once a month the women's department serves a ten cent supper.

The interior of the church has been redecorated. Young trees have been transplanted on the church grounds and help in beautifying and making the church attractive and inviting.

Elder E. N. Burt, of Onaway, was here May 17, and delivered two instructive sermons to an appreciative audience. He came to Beaverton to visit his father.

Several of our young people play in the high school band and on June 17 this band expects to meet with the other bands of Northeastern Michigan at Mio.

Members are happy to have Miss Edith Rosevear who is a student nurse at the Independence Sanitarium, with them for a short time. She has been ill for the past two months and is home for a rest and to recuperate. She expects to return to Independence and resume her work by July 1.

One of our young men, Leon Methner, who is studying music at a nearby teachers' college, possesses a beautiful tenor voice, and is becoming a capable musical director.

The Saints are glad to have Brother Case back with them again.

Spring River District Enjoys Excellent Conference

Gathering Is Spiritually Blessed

A conference at which the hallowed influence of the Spirit was felt and manifested to a marked degree was held by Spring River District Saints at Miami, Oklahoma, on May 25, 26 and 27. Elder George Harrington said at the closing prayer meeting that he could see the very nature of God growing within the Saints of the district. Others of the leaders expressed themselves as being highly encouraged by the good cheer, fellowship, and humble spirit which was prevalent, and which was used in seeking closer contact with the Holy Spirit.

The Saints rejoiced exceedingly that Elder Amos T. Higdon was again permitted to return to them as district president and that he was called to the office of high priest by the past General Conference. The Saints throughout the entire district felt blessed by the higher office in which their leader now has been called to occupy.

At the Friday night session of the conference a play was given by Miami young people at which time the young people's director, Frank Shanks, of Carthage, Missouri, gave an address of welcome. Following the program a period of recreation was held and refreshments were served.

Brother Higdon, assisted by Ira O. Waldrom, of Webb City, and C. D. Wilson, of Miami, was in charge of the prayer meeting at nine o'clock Saturday morning. The address of the president to the conference was given at the tenthirty o'clock session after which the morning was taken up with short talks by missionaries and branch presidents. Elders Lee Quick, former district missionary and George Harrington, former district president were among the visitors who were given a hearty reception by the conference.

At the business session in the afternoon, recommendations of the following men for ordination were approved: C. D. Wilson, of Miami; Herman Plumb, of Springfield, and Francis Bishop, of Springfield, to the office of elder; Claud Fry, of Webb City, and Glen Yoeman, of Springfield, to the office of priest, and E. H. Campbell, of Carterville, to the office of deacon.

The following officers were elected to serve during the next year: District president, Amos T. Higdon, of Independence; counselors, A. J. Jones, of Columbus, and C. D. Wilson, of Miami; secretary, Mrs. C. E. Wilson, of Springfield; bishop's agent and treasurer, Norman W. Gray, of Parsons; church school director, Doctor Ronald G. Smith, of Pittsburg; publicity agent, Raymond E. Troyer, of Joplin; historian, Mrs. A. M. Hogan, of Carthage; director of adult division, Mrs. C. H. Hobart, of Webb City; director of music, Victor L. Krucker, of Miami. Springfield, Missouri, was chosen as the

California Ministers Drive Long Distance to Conduct Series

Elders W. H. Dawson and J. L. Busseil, of Sacramento, California, conducted a week of missionary services at Stockton in May. Each evening they drove a distance of one hundred miles to present the gospel to members and friends in their neighboring branch, and during the day worked at their regular employment.

Beaverton Remembers Anniversaries

Saints and friends of Beaverton, Michigan, surprised Elder G. W. Burt the evening of May 23, and helped him celebrate his eighty-second birthday. Tables were set for eighty-two and every place was taken. Brother Burt was presented a large cake bearing eighty-two candles.

The Zion's Christian Legion members of Central Michigan will meet soon at Beaverton for a banquet honoring Elder Hubert Case, and celebrating the culmination of his forty years of missionary work.

Six Baptized at Wichita, Kansas

Wichita Saints are happy over the baptism of six young men between the ages of fourteen and twenty, on a recent Sunday. Elder Arthur E. Stoff officiated, and was assisted in the confirmation ceremony by Elders Ira G. Whipple and R. Melvin Russell.

Knowledge

Knowledge is of two kinds. We know a subject ourselves, or we know where we can find information upon it.—Sam Johnson.

place for the next conference which will be held November 24, 25 and 26.

The Sunday morning worship began with an inspiring young people's prayer meeting in charge of Brother Higdon, assisted by Apostle J. F. Garver, Albert Cobb, and Frank Shanks. The Spirit of God, felt in abundance at this meeting, continued in all of the services throughout the day.

After the ordination service in the afternoon, a prayer meeting was held which was the climax to the conference. Admonition and prophecy were delivered by the Holy Spirit through Elder Lee Quick and Apostle Garver. The conference adjourned at five o'clock.

Independence

Memorial Day was observed with family picnics, a baseball game, and other out-door sports at the Campus. The day's intense heat caused many to seek the Campus grounds for entertainment and relaxation in the evening. A movie comedy was the opening screen feature of the summer.

The second movie was shown Friday night, June 1, "The Thundering Herd." This had been scheduled for the previous Friday but the entertainment was called off because of cold weather.

Stone Church

Saints of the Stone Church congregation were saddened by the death of Brother Willis A. McDowell who passed quietly away at his Independence home May 31. Fifty-six years ago Brother and Sister McDowell accepted the restored gospel, and for many years Brother McDowell was a valiant and faithful missionary for Christ's cause. He leaves to mourn, his wife, Sister Elizabeth McDowell; three sons, Oliver A., of Tulsa, Oklahoma; Floyd M., of Lamoni, Iowa, and James A., of Saranac, Michigan; a daughter, Mrs. F. A. Ball, of Los Angeles, grandchildren, other relatives and many friends. The funeral was held from the Stone Church Saturday afternoon, President Elbert A. Smith preaching the sermon. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

A short selection of organ music played by Robert Miller, opened the June sacrament service. Ferns banked around the rostrum furnished a beautiful background for this sacred ordinance.

The following men were in charge of the service, Bishop R. T. Cooper, Pastor John F. Sheehy, Bishop G. Leslie DeLapp, President Elbert A. Smith, Patriarch Frederick A. Smith, Bishop J. S. Kelley and Elder H. L. Barto.

Patriarch F. A. Smith, the father of the church, gave the sacrament talk and President Elbert A. Smith talked briefly preceding the period of silent meditation and prayer. A large congregation was there to enjoy the Spirit present.

In the afternoon the regular sacrament Sunday priesthood meetings were held.

Patriarch Ammon White delivered a sermon Sunday evening which carried with it the faith, assurance, and authority of one who for thirty-three years has served the church as a minister. For a Scripture reading he chose a portion of John 15, and his theme was "The Responsibility of Our Service to Christ."

Music for this service was furnished by the Stone Church Choir, Paul N. Craig directing, Robert Miller at the organ. Nelle Kelley, soprano, was the evening's soloist.

Two weddings of interest to many in this district were solemnized at Liberty Street Church last Friday and Sunday.

Miss Wilma Stafford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Stafford, and Orrin Russell, son of Mrs. Ethel Russell, were married the evening of June 1. Elder John F. Sheehy reading the service. The bride was attended by Miss Martha Jane Mallette as maid of honor, and by Miss Virginia Ruth Winters as bridesmaid. Earl Audet, jr., acted as best man for Mr. Russell. Candles were lighted by Miss La Von Budd, Miss Frances Bryant, and Gene Bandel. Mr. and Mrs. Russell will be at home on the T. C. Lea Road.

The marriage of Miss Frances Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson, of Independence, and Wendell Luff, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Luff, also of Independence, was solemnized in a pretty service at Liberty Street Church Sunday afternoon, June 3, Pastor John F. Sheehy officiating. A large crowd of friends witnessed the ceremony uniting this popular young couple. The bride was attended by her cousin as maid of honor, Miss Marjorie Nelle Butler, and bridesmaids, Miss Dolly Anderson and Miss Ellen McCrory. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Elvin K. Luff, as best man, and Earl Peterson and Bernard Fisher were groomsmen. Little Gloria June Ettenger lighted the candles, and Janet Luff, niece of the bridegroom, was the flower girl. The bridal pair will make their home at 1901 Arlington, South Englewood.

Liberty Street Church

Brother and Sister J. N. Sherwin have moved to the Ozarks, near Thayer, Missouri. Brother Sherwin, with his family, came to Independence in 1930, and has been in the garage business here. He is a priest, and worked in Group 30. Sister Sherwin is just recovering from a severe illness and a major operation. She was confined to her bed for a period of ten weeks. Brother and Sister Sherwin will be greatly missed by their many friends. A farewell party was given in their honor, Friday night, June 1, by the members of the women's department.

A picnic was held at the Campus Tuesday night, May 29, by the members of Group 30. Elder J. E. Cleveland was in charge. Sisters C. J. Bridges and Grace Smith had charge of the basket dinner and a program was given by the young people.

Elder J. A. Gillen has been the evening speaker at this church for the last three Sundays. His sermons are well liked by this congregation and he is popular among the young people. Last Sunday evening, special music was furnished by the choir.

Pastor John R. Lentell has moved from his home at 904 West Van Horn, in the Stone Church district, and now resides at 215 South Osage, in Group 13, of the Liberty Street district. He has sold his grocery business located at Spring Street and 24 Highway.

This congregation has advanced rapidly, since the first of the year as far as good will, fellowship, and cooperation are concerned. There are more friendly greetings, more interest is taken in the ill and the unfortunate, more individual sacrifice by the members. And there seems to be a greater degree of the divine Spirit in the sermons, prayer meetings, sacrament services, and in the many activities of the church school and other departments.

The choir gave a surprise party for its director, Fred Friend, last Thursday night, at his home. The party was given in appreciation of the diligent work and dependable service of Brother Friend. Twenty-five members were present. The Misses Mary Arterburn, Mayble Tignor, and Inez Davis arranged the games and Mrs. Gertrude Davis had charge of the refreshments. A music emblem of gold was given to Brother Friend by the choir. The pin was presented by Joseph Frick, the choir president. Missionary trips to the outlying branches have been planned, and Bernard Hurshman has been elected as business manager of the choir.

Walnut Park Church

For the first time in many months the Saints at Walnut Park celebrated communion service Sunday with their pastor absent. Pastor Frank McDonald being out of town, the meeting was in charge of Elder Royden Barnhardt, assisted by Elders George Jenkins and Amos Berve. The opening remarks were by Brother Jenkins, and following the serving of the emblems, Brother Berve spoke encouragingly to the Saints for a few minutes.

Special music at the church school session was by the orchestra, which played "King Rose Overture," under the direction of Brother Orlando Nace. Four hundred twenty-one were present at the church school.

The funeral of Roy Earl Williams, three-month-old son of Brother and Sister Roy H. Williams, who live near Atherton, was held from the Walnut Park Church at one-thirty Sunday afternoon. The child died Friday at Mercy Hospital in Kansas City.

The local young people's council met at two-thirty Sunday afternoon, and playground ball rules and schedule were discussed. Plans were made for an ice cream social to be held in the near future, proceeds to be divided equally between the council and the local expense fund of the church.

The religio is still meeting at six o'clock each Sunday evening, under the leadership of Duane Fish, president. The program Sunday consisted of a debate on the desirability of card playing, opposing debaters being Ben Kramer and Imal Burke. There were no judges and no decision was rendered. A considerable number of Englewood young people, under the supervision of their leader, Sister Mary Hiles, pleasantly surprised the Walnut Park young people by walking in on them shortly after classes had convened, to visit the local religio.

Elder Thomas Newton spoke to the Saints at the seven-thirty service in the evening.

About two hundred members of the Walnut Park congregation went to Hill Memorial Park Thursday evening, May 31, for an outing and basket dinner. Besides the food, entertainment was furnished in the form of two baseball games, one for the girls and one for the men and boys, and games of other types played later in the evening. The affair was sponsored by the local young people's council for all ages.

Girl Scout Troop No. 10, the local group, the oldest Girl Scout troop in Independence, has recently reorganized under the leadership of Fern Price. Renewed activity is promised for the near future.

Enoch Hill Church

Saints and friends of this congregation will greatly feel the loss of Elder W. J. Brewer, who passed away May 29, after a long illness. Brother Brewer was a high priest, loved and respected by all who knew him for his desire to be of service. Funeral services were held May 31, at 2:30 p. m. at the church. Evangelist Ammon White preached the sermon.

For a number of months, Enoch Hill members, under the supervision of Sister Charles Warren, have been calling on Mrs. Boston, a nonmember, who has been in poor health, singing for her and doing other little deeds of kindness. Mrs. Boston passed away last week, and to show her appreciation for the kind service rendered to her, she asked local members to sing at her funeral, Friday morning, June 1.

The early Sunday morning prayer service was well attended, as were all other meetings during the day.

Pastor E. A. Thomas, and Elders C. E. Beal, and C. S. Warren, were in charge of the sacrament service, June 3. Edmund Allen sang, "Oh Sacred Head."

Elder Chester Constance, the evening speaker Sunday, gave splendid advice to parents and future parents of the church. Hubert Whithead and Richard Maloney sang "Nearer, Still Nearer." Other music was furnished by the Enoch Hill Choir, under the supervision of Sister Amos Allen.

Englewood Church

Sunday, May 27, Elder John Sheehy delivered the eleven o'clock sermon. In the evening, the pastor, Brother R. W. Howery, preached. Also at seven-thirty, about thirty of Englewood's young people attended Bennington Heights where they conducted the evening worship service. They chose as their representative speaker Brother A. G. Hougas.

Communion Sunday was begun with a young people's prayer service, held at eight o'clock. R. W. Howery and Arthur Welch were in charge.

At the sacrament service, Elders R. W. Howery and Thomas Richardson were in charge. The talk on the oblation was given by Elder D. S. McNamara, and the precommunion address was delivered by George Hiles. The speaker at seven-thirty was Elder A. M. Chase.

The membership of Englewood Church extend a welcome to Brother Wallace Fike, who has recently returned from Florida.

Friday night, May 25, Group 35-E, held a social gathering at the home of Brother and Sister D. S. McNamara. Brother James A. Gillen gave a short talk, after which a program was given.

The marriage ceremony of Inez Rothwell and Herbert A. Simmons was solemnized by Elder Arthur Welch at his home Saturday night, June 2. Brother and Sister Simmons will make their home at 323 South Wheeling, Kansas City, Missouri.

The young people have been devoting a part of their time to volley ball practice, and Monday night will mark the start of their schedule games.

Thursday night, June 1, the Y. P. A. gave a skating party at the Wings Rink.

Spring Branch Church

The farewell party the night of May 28, for Rose Murdock and Arthur Peer and family proved to be an attractive social event. Robert and Ethel Fish and Bertha Miller gave talks; Alma Dixon and Evelyn Howe sang solos. Jesse Smith and Leonard Roberts gave talks, then all sang two gesture songs. Evelyn Roberts gave a piano solo; the Oriole Girls sang their song; the Boy Scouts gave a stunt, and Otis and Benson Brown contributed a dialogue. Talks by Ethel and Arthur Peer followed a brief address by Pastor M. C. Jacobsen.

Alma Tankard talked to the Sunday school. The sacrament service was in charge of the pastor, assisted by local priesthood members.

In the evening the second session of church school was concluded with a program of musical numbers and readings.

Elder Swen Swenson, the evening speaker, gave good advice and encouragement to the members. The Saints delight to hear this veteran of the gospel. The choir sang, "There Is a Land."

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Young People Take Prominent Part in Branch

Saturday, May 12, the Latter Day Saint Dramatic Club of Philadelphia Branch presented two plays. The first was called the "Bedtime Story," and the second, "Menfolk." The latter was the play that won the championship in one-act plays for Graceland in the Iowa contest.

On Mother's Day the young people of the branch had a vesper service in which Sister Viola Boerner's Sunday class took a large part. They then gave a Pantomime of the life of one of the sisters.

Sunday, May 20, was set a part as young people's day. The morning sermon was preached by one of the young men of the priesthood, Harley Butler, with Brother Ace Fowler giving the invocation and benediction. Brother Fowler is one of the assistant scoutmasters. The Boy Scouts acted as ushers.

The evening sermon was preached by another of the young men of the priesthood, Brother Louie Kuhn, Brother Henry Shaffer giving the invocation and benediction. The Boy Scouts again acted as ushers. All who attended services were much enthused.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Church—Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

The Spirit of the Master was present at the sacrament service, May 6, and Saints of this congregation feel greatly encouraged to press onward.

The women's department met, May 10, in the social room of the church. Sister Mina Turvey read a splendid paper on "Godliness." A beautiful memorial service was held for these departed sisters, Cora Woods, Frances Turvey, and Metta Bierly.

A mothers' and daughters' banquet, May 11, was sponsored by the Temple Builders, in the social room of the church. A program was given by the girls. Each mother was presented a pink rose. Sister Lucinda Madden is leader of the Temple Builders, and is to be commended for her work.

The primary department gave a Mother's Day program. Each mother was presented a bouquet of flowers.

Apostle D. T. Williams preached an instructive sermon using for a text the latter part of Mark 15: 31.

Other speakers have been Elders G. H. Kirkendall, A. E. Anderton, A. H. Nie-man, Patriarch J. E. Matthews, Bishop H. E. French, and Priest Harry J. Hoffman.

During the month of May the choir rendered several beautiful anthems. Solos were sung by Hazel Gribbon and Lucinda Madden. A duet was sung by Lucinda Madden and Ethel Kirkendall.

Brother and Sister William Standard are the proud parents of twin boys, born May 25.

Holden Stake

Blue Springs, Missouri

The May sacrament service was largely attended by Saints of this congregation. A spiritual meeting was enjoyed.

Elder Gerald G. Philips was the speaker at the evening service, May 6, using for his subject, "Take Heed to What Ye Hear."

On the following Sunday, Elder R. J. Stark occupied the pulpit. As it was Mother's Day, he chose "Mother" for his sermon. Lawrence Martin, of Independence, was the evening speaker, preaching on "Love."

May 14, a priesthood meeting was held. President Floyd M. McDowell and Elder Amos E. Allen, of Independence, met with them.

May 20, Pastor O. W. Sarratt called for a special prayer service. Brother Sarratt was in charge, assisted by Elder R. J. Stark. The evening service was opened with special music by the Blue Springs orchestra, which plays before each Sunday evening service. Alma Campbell was in charge. A special number, "Silver Brooklet," guitar and piano duet, was rendered by Josephine and Helene Stark, also a duet, "Our Yesterdays," was sung by Clarice and Bernice Oglevie, accompanied by Sister H. L. Shippy. Elder Amos Allen was present, and a business meeting was held. O. W. Sarratt resigned as pastor, and J. T. Smith, pastor of Lees Summit Branch, was presented to succeed Brother Sarratt. Gomer Wells preached, following the business meeting, on "Christ's Good-bye."

On the last Sunday of the month, Ed Oglevie was the speaker. His subject was "Tithing, Time and Talent."

George Hathaway, who is with the C. C. C. camp, recently met with an accident. He was taken to Excelsior Springs to the hospital.

T. J. Butler, of Independence, was the evening speaker, May 27, choosing for his subject, "Obedience." Three non-members were present at this service.

Frank Pierce, Andy Oglevie and Levi Gore passed away from this congregation in death. They are missed by all who knew them.

Five Baptized in the Illinois-Mississippi Canal

Much Interest at Rock Falls, Illinois

Elder C. A. Beil, of Clinton, Iowa, has been holding cottage preaching services in the communities of Deer Grove, Tampico, and Rock Falls, Illinois, for the past two years, creating quite an interest among the people in these communities.

May 20, a large congregation gathered at the Illinois-Mississippi Canal near Rock Falls, to witness a baptismal service, at six-thirty o'clock. Five candidates were baptized. Elder Beil officiating.

Immediately following the service at the canal, the Saints went to the home of Brother and Sister Noble Henson, where a congregation of sixty-five members had gathered to witness the confirmation of the candidates. Following the confirmation, Elder Beil preached an inspiring sermon.

Lima, Ohio

Growing in Number and Spirituality

Saints at Lima are earnestly attempting to carry on the work in their branch. Although their number is small, it is rapidly growing. May 19, two candidates were baptized into the church. Harold F. Symonds, and his wife, Mrs. Symonds. Others are near the kingdom.

Regular services are now being held, including Wednesday evening prayer meeting, a class on Friday, and church school and preaching in the morning, and preaching in the evening.

Saints of this congregation have enjoyed rich spiritual blessings which accompany the work of the latter days.

Sunday, May 20, Brother and Sister Vergil Hadsell, and daughters, Helen and Marian, visited this branch.

The fatherly advice of Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths is always appreciated by these Saints, and they are happy to know that he will be working with them and assisting them at times in the future. Elder J. M. Bartley, of Saint Marys, Ohio, has also promised to assist these Saints at various times.

Under the leadership of Pastor Chauncey E. Cottrell, these members are looking forward to many spiritual meetings.

If I had only one sermon to preach it seems that the best I could do with it would be to entreat those who have, not one, but many sermons to preach, to make better use of their opportunities. There is no field in which ignorance is less blissful than the field of religion. Ignorance inevitably means loss. I have been impressed by the fact that every attack on Christianity that I have been able personally to examine has been based on a misconception. Clear teaching would have made it abortive and unnecessary. If only our teachers would abandon the moral and scientific cliches of the newspaper or the complications of Huppim and Muppim and Ard, if only they would give us instruction in the history and philosophy of our religion, in the technique of our art—religious art, the art of our intercourse with the unseen—then there is a chance that we should pass from these vain struggles in the sand to the peace and opportunity of the house built upon the rock.—Sheila Kaye-Smith, in If I Could Preach Just Once.

It is better to receive than do a wrong.—Cicero.

ON CONTEMPLATING PAIN

—AN ESSAY

the ability to see even a vivisector vivisected, because his own feelings would not allow him to get all the joy out of it that he felt he was entitled to."

It is only natural then, that with this increased sensitiveness to pain on the part of the human race, its problems in regard to religious faith have grown proportionately. It was the mystery of suffering, weighing heavily upon sensitive natures that produced much at least of the scepticism of the nineteenth century. The classic example is John Stuart Mill's awful indictment of the "cruelty of nature." It is possible also that here, in the reaction of a deeply feeling heart, we have the source of what has been called, inaccurately perhaps, the "pessimism" of Thomas Hardy. In any event, there are many lives today, where faith has withered at the searing contact of suffering.

If we turn to science, we find that she has something to tell us. For one thing science warns us not to endow the lower forms of life with the highly sensitive attributes we ourselves possess. Again she reminds us that nature's methods are never really wasteful whatever she may do with, or to her materials, so that we may logically assume that pain has a definite purpose in the order of things. Suffering is the birth-pang of progress, and without it the race would have perished æons since.

Nor is that all. Science is emphatic that sensibility to pain is never developed beyond the point where it is needed, and ceases when the end is served. May we not find food for thought in these suggestions? May it not be that the increased sensitiveness to pain found in our age is needful for the development of qualities that can be produced in no other way? James Hinton, an English doctor of the last century, who possessed a seerlike, mystic quality of mind once wrote: "My thought was that all which we feel as painful is really giving something that our fellows are better for, even though we cannot trace it." And indeed there is much evidence to show that suffering does sometimes, at least, possess a value that extends beyond the one who suffers. Much of course depends on the way in which pain is endured, whether selfishly or not, since man has within him the power to transfigure suffering by fortitude, as he will.

When Faith cries out of its sensitiveness to the lives of those who have suffered greatly, wonderful is the answer that comes back. For the world's great sufferers have been, for the most part, the world's great believers in the un-failing law of love. They have learned to interpret pain as a fact that stabilizes faith. George Eliot found a secret un-guessed joy at the heart of pain, and her testimony is echoed by a host of noble souls. Stevenson was one, and his brave, cheerful spirit has made the world braver, and more hopeful by what he has written. Another, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, "never regretted having learned in suffering what she taught in song." Anguish instructed her in joy, and solitude in the value of society. The great sufferers have not desired pain—nor have they sought it—but when it has come their way they have mastered it, and thereby forced it to enrich their souls.

A French thinker, Lacordaine, once used words fraught with an awful depth of meaning, calling the countless suffering ones of the earth the "obscure victims of the Cross that has saved them." Here we touch a tremendous mystery, beyond the grasp of human comprehension, mortal thought may not dwell in that rarefied atmosphere, and farther we cannot penetrate into the problem of pain.

Do we not all realize that the revelation of our religion was made through it, and of that realization is born the consciousness that there is One who knows, One who feels, One who suffers with all who endure the pain He was once charged to bear!

Of this consciousness, this more than faith, was engendered the sublime vision that flashed athwart the barren waste of Patmos' Isle to fill the mind of the exiled Christian seer, and call from his lips the glorious prophecy: "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

We stand, it seems to me, about where Abraham Lincoln stood in the little town of Freeport, Illinois, on the night of August 26, 1858. The Springfield lawyer was next day to meet his rival candidates for the United States Senate in debate, and Lincoln was proposing to propound to Douglas a certain question touching the subject of slavery. This Lincoln made known that night in a council of his party friends. They were unanimously against him. "If you ask Douglas that question," they warned him, "you can never be senator." "But," calmly replied Lincoln, "I am killing larger game; if Douglas answers, he can never be President, and the battle of 1860 is worth a hundred of this."

So the battle of immediate economic recovery, of immediate ecclesiastical rehabilitation, may be worth winning. But there is another battle worth a hundred of these. Shall we, who claim to belong to eternity, sell our birthright for temporalities, or shall we bring into time the meaning of eternity? Shall we allow even a generous concern for those within our immediate reach to tempt us to deal unfaithfully with all who are to come after us?—Jesse S. Dancy, "Contributions Not Controversy," in the Christian Century.

Zion's Christian Legion

SHALL WE STAND OR FALL?

By D. T. Williams

If there is one thing above another that justifies the creation of Zion's Legion in the Great Lakes Regional Territory it is the fact that it sets before our young people an objective of such imposing value as challenges the very best mettle there is in them. An army of such imposing power is not to be inspired to engage itself in a small and unworthy task.

We wonder if some of our difficulties of the past have not risen from the fact that we have tried to inveigle the coming generation into doing something for themselves rather than engaging themselves in the task of unselfish service for others. If so we have ignored one of the fundamentals of our Christian religion as well as one of the important laws of life itself. Our suggestions must not take the form of glittering generalities, but rather a definition of service interpreted in forms of actual accomplishments—or possible achievements.

For this reason we have definitized our program in certain clearly suggested lines of endeavor. This outline has been accepted avidly by the young people of the church in this section of the country and from all quarters comes the encouraging word that the general church income is being markedly increased as a result of its inclusion in the program of the branches where it has been initiated.

The tithing card system which is being sponsored by the organization is proving all that we had hoped for it. Hundreds who previously were paying no tithing are now paying systematically in small sums, thus meeting their obligation to the Lord as well as helping the church in its serious task of paying off the church debt. A like result is shown in the collection of dues through which our young people are making a definite contribution to the elimination of the obligation on the Auditorium.

To the ideal of a church freed from the bondage of the world Zion's Legion applies itself with vitality and vision. To such a program it invites others of the young people of this regional territory in the hope that in a unity of effort we may find the ultimate salvation promised of God to his people. "United we stand, divided we fall." Shall we stand or fall? The answer is one that lies in our power to make. May God help us answer wisely.

We are not tempted where we are weak, but where we are strong

"We commonly deceive ourselves by supposing that we are tempted where we are weak," declares Doctor Fosdick. "The fact is that temptation swirls around power, and, in consequence, the more strength we have, the more we are tempted.

"I have before me a letter from a student. 'This week,' she says, 'has been sensational in the extreme—ending last night with an orgy so bad that I am a wreck today. . . . It's like tearing along on a toboggan, getting up more speed every moment, not knowing if you can ever stop.' . . .

"A generation which must handle more power than any generation ever got within reaching distance of before has no business to run wild in such aimless license."

Full schedule from the opening meeting on Saturday at one-thirty till Sunday evening, including musical program Saturday evening, early morning prayer service, Sunday, children and decision day program, 10:30 a. m., baptism and confirmation, two-thirty o'clock. Sermons by District Missionary L. O. Wildermuth. Special attention to matters of interest to young people. All urged to come. Bring musical instruments, and come prepared to camp if necessary. For further particulars write W. R. Hillman, Fairview, Montana.—A. R. Ritter, district president.

All-day Meetings

Racine Mission, in Southern Ohio, will be the scene of an all-day meeting Sunday, June 17. This mission is very active and its organization was brought about by the consecrated work of Elder J. G. Halb. There will also be preaching Saturday evening, June 16. The services are held at a schoolhouse on a dirt road. In order to reach the meeting place, follow Route 124 from Pomeroy through Racine and Dorcas. Anyone will then direct you to where the services are held. Come and spend a good time with these Saints who will make you welcome. Services on Sunday will commence at 9 a. m. with a prayer service.—A. E. Anderton, district president.

Lancaster, Ohio, Branch invites all who can attend to its all-day meeting to be held June 10. There will be preaching on Saturday evening, June 9, and the services on Sunday will start at 9 a. m. with a prayer service. Lancaster Saints are moving along well, and they ask that you join them and bring your baskets for Sunday.—A. E. Anderton, district president.

An all-day meeting will be held at the Park of the Pines, Sunday, June 17. As this is the first get-together for the district we are expecting a large crowd. No meals will be served; everyone bring a basket dinner. Sunday, June 24, an all-day meeting will be held at the Gladstone Branch, first meeting at nine o'clock. This meeting is held especially for the members in the upper peninsula.—Allen Schreur, Gaylord, Michigan.

Annual Home-coming

Aitchison, Kansas, Branch will hold its annual home-coming, June 17, with a program at the church at 9.30 a. m., a sermon by J. W. A. Bailey, of Independence, at 10:30, and basket dinner in Jackson Park. All former members and friends of the branch are cordially invited to meet with us.—Frank G. Hedrick, pastor.

Two-day Meetings

Azalia Branch, Azalia, Michigan, announces a two-day meeting, June 23 and 24. The visiting speakers will be Elders David Dowker, Kenneth Green, and A. B. Smith. Everyone is invited to attend.—Lewata Helmich, secretary.

Reunion Notice

The Southern California district reunion will be held at Huntington Beach, California, beginning Friday noon, July 6, and continuing until Sunday evening, July 15. A large crowd is expected to attend, and a favorable and comfortable camp ground has been obtained, where tents may be placed, together with a parking space for autos for a nominal cost. Cabins may be had for those not wishing to bring their tent. Numerous activities are being planned for the young people, and the grounds afford a number of fine sports. Brothers E. J. Gleazer, D. B. Sorden, and Arthur Oakman are expected to be in attendance, as well as the local district leaders in all departments. A special appeal is made to the Saints in outlying sections, and information will be given to those interested, if you will write D. B. Carmichael, bishop, 1311 North Garnsey, Santa Ana, California, or to W. A. Teagarden, district president, 595 Third Street, San Bernardino, California.

Our Departed Ones

McDOWELL.—Willis A. McDowell was born at Newark, Wisconsin, June 21, 1856, and lived in that vicinity until young manhood, engaging in farm work with his father. July 4, 1875, he married Miss Elizabeth E. Squire in Crawford County, Wisconsin. They first settled in this unimproved section of Wisconsin, purchasing eighty acres of timbered land and living in a little log house. While clearing this land Brother McDowell and his wife heard some preaching at a neighbor's home, and were baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, January 9, 1878. A short time after this he was ordained to the office of priest, and began a ministry of more than half a century in the cause of Christ, serving loyally and intelligently. To this worthy pair were born three sons and one daughter, Oliver A., Floyd M., James A., and Laura. Brother McDowell was ordained an elder January 20, 1883, at North Freedom, Wisconsin. For a time he labored in the interests of the local church in connection with his secular work. The following years found him under General Conference appointment and associated with such early missionaries to that section as J. W. Peterson, W. S. Pender, A. L. Whitaker, and others. He was ordained a seventy in 1892 at Valley Junction, Wisconsin, and later was called to the office of high priest, being ordained by J. W. Wight and Gomer Griffiths at Lamoni, April 19, 1900. In this office he presided over the Southern Wisconsin District, the Chicago churches, Kewanee, Illinois, branch and district, and other local branches. He opened up the work in new places, using the district tent. In 1893, he moved his family to East Delavan, Wisconsin, then a thriving small branch near Lake Geneva, and continued in his missionary work in Wisconsin. Later appointments took him to Kewanee and Northeastern Illinois Districts, the Pacific Slope Mission, and Far West Stake. He was ordained a patriarch July 3, 1913, at Chetek, Wisconsin, and served in this office for twenty years. He was superannuated April 12, 1932. For the past few months his health has failed rapidly, and he passed away at his Independence home Thursday, May 31, 1934. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth McDowell, three sons: Oliver A., of Tulsa, Oklahoma; Floyd M., Lamoni, Iowa, and James A., Saranac, Michigan; a daughter, Mrs. F. A. Ball, Los Angeles, one sister, Mrs. M. A. Rice, Mount Sterling, Wisconsin, and two brothers, Doctor A. J. McDowell, Soldiers' Grove, Wisconsin, and George McDowell, Spokane, Washington, a number of grandchildren, other relatives, and many friends. The funeral occurred at Independence, June 2, at 2:30 p. m., President Elbert A. Smith delivering the sermon, Pastor John F. Sheehy in charge.

MANTLE.—James W. Mantle was born at Linn, Missouri, January 30, 1862, and departed this life May 16, 1934, spending his entire life in the community where he was born. When a young man he united with the church, being baptized by John Mantle, January 29, 1879. He was ordained to the priesthood June 1, 1902, remaining a faithful worker until his death. He was united in marriage to Mary Kemple, and leaves to mourn, his aged companion; six children, Elizabeth Litton, Mary Smith, Frank T. Mantle, Bertha Lavada Butler, and Flossie Pearl Hicks, all of Linn, Missouri; and Everett James Mantle, of Jefferson City, Missouri; nine brothers and sisters, David and Charles Mantle, of Voshol, Missouri; Mrs. Marie Kemple, of Electra, Texas; John Mantle, of Isabelle Station, Missouri; Mrs. Rebecca Armor, of Belle, Missouri; Mrs. Hary Hout, Linn, Missouri; Mrs. Lucinda Siges and Joseph Mantle, Bonnots Mill, Missouri; besides other relatives and friends. Funeral services and interment were at Linn, Missouri, Elder A. H. Wintermeyer, of Jefferson City, officiating.

COATES.—Helen Coates was born October 22, 1858, at Scrantona, Lacawanna County, Pennsylvania, and departed this life May 7, 1934, at the Youngstown, Ohio, hospital, after a three months' illness. She united with the church May 29, 1910, Elder George Morris officiating. She is survived by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Coates, of Youngstown, Ohio, and two grandchildren, Dora and Clyde Coates, junior. Funeral services were held May 9, at the Schriener Funeral Home, presided over by Elder T. U. Thomas. Interment was in Todd Cemetery. Mrs. Coates was a faithful and devoted member of the church.

BREWER.—William Joseph Brewer, son of John W. and Mary G. Brewer, was born at Brookfield, Missouri, February 11, 1875, and passed from this life May 29, 1934, at Independence, Missouri. He spent about ten years of his early life in Nevada, Missouri, where he received his schooling. October 16, 1900, he was baptized into the church by Elder John Harp, and confirmed by Elder E. D. Bailey. September 5, 1901, he was united in marriage to Miss Minnie M. Harris, and to this union were born nine children, seven sons and two daughters, four of the sons dying in infancy. In 1917, he, with his family came to Independence, and had been a member of the Enoch Hill congregation almost continuously. He was called to the priesthood in 1904. June 14, 1908, he was ordained an elder at Spokane, Washington, under the hands of Elders I. M. Smith and F. J. Chaburn. October 13, 1922, he was ordained a high priest at Independence, under the hands of Apostles Roy S. Budd and J. A. Gillen. During his life in Independence, Brother Brewer served faithfully and diligently as a servant of the Master, ministering to the needs of the Saints of Enoch Hill as pastor, group elder, teacher, counselor and friend, never too tired to answer a call for help. He leaves to mourn, his wife, Mrs. Minnie M. Brewer; three sons, Lawrence L., David H., and Lloyd M., two daughters, Mrs. Mary M. Minton and Wilma J. Brewer; one brother, one sister, three grandchildren, other relatives, and many friends. Funeral services were held Thursday, May 31, Elder C. S. Warren in charge, assisted by J. E. Martin. Elder Ammon White preached the sermon.

OGLEVIE.—Andrew Jackson Oglevie, son of John and Lydia Oglevie, was born at Ballard Grove, Polk County, Iowa, January 7, 1861, and departed this life after an illness of several months, March 3, 1934. He married Charlotte Carry in 1880, at Burr Oak, Kansas, where they united with the church, being baptized March 4, 1888, by Elder George W. Beebe, senior. He was ordained a deacon, October 22, of the same year, and served faithfully in that office during the remainder of his life. He moved to Cedar Springs, Missouri, in 1889, where his wife died November 18, 1904, leaving five sons and six daughters. He then moved with his family to Freedom, Oklahoma, where in 1915, he married Mrs. Edna Sample. While living at this place his youngest child, wife, and stepson united with the church, thus bringing every member of his family into the church of his choice. In 1928, he with his wife moved to Blue Springs, Missouri. His forty-six years of membership in the church were marked by his faithfulness in office and his hospitality. Many times during gatherings of the church people, his house was filled to overflowing. In August, 1933, accompanied by his wife, he went to Oklahoma for a visit with several of his children who live there. A few days following his arrival he was stricken with paralysis. He leaves to mourn, his wife, four sons, five daughters, three brothers, two step-children, thirty-five grandchildren, and fourteen great-grandchildren, besides a host of other relatives and friends. Funeral services were in charge of Elder O. W. Sarratt. Sermon was by Elder George Beebe, of Atherton, Missouri.

FEWELL.—Mariam Rebecca Short was born November 20, 1853, in Jefferson County, Indiana, and died May 4, 1934, at Greenwood, Indiana. She married William H. Fewell, October 21, 1877, and to this union were born ten children, three of whom preceded her in death. She united with the church in early married life, to which she remained faithful to the end. Left to mourn are her husband, five sons; Charles T., of Bloomington, Indiana; Lewis, of Manchester, Iowa; Riley, of Needham, Indiana; George, of Illinois; Chester, of Greenwood, Indiana, and two daughters, Mrs. Erta Judkins, of Hanover, Indiana, and Ivy Waltz, of Greenwood, Indiana. Funeral services were held at the home at Greenwood, Pastor A. W. Gage, of Indianapolis Branch, preaching the sermon.

HEMMERLY.—Clara Howard Winsor was born at Kingston, adjoining Plymouth, Massachusetts, in January, 1855, and departed this life near Boston, February 11, 1934. She was a direct descendant of the Mayflower Pilgrim fathers. She was united in marriage to Henry E. Hemmerly, and they made their home at Plymouth. To this union three children were born, two of whom are living; Helen, with whom she made her home in the declining years of her life, and a son, William, who resides at Plymouth. She was baptized into the church by Elder John Gilbert in 1883, and remained a faithful devoted Saint. Her home was always open to the elders and traveling missionaries. Her husband passed on several years ago. Funeral services were conducted by Bishop M. C. Fisher; burial was at Plymouth. She was a good woman, leaving to her children, grandchildren, and friends a fine example of saintly life.

GERRISH.—Clara Dell Fogg was born in March, 1854, at Bucksport, Maine, and departed this life May 12, 1934. She was united in marriage with Henry D. Gerrish about 1874, and to this union were born two children, Josie, who is now Mrs. A. B. Phillips, of Independence, Missouri, and Mrs. Chester Klavs, who lived with her mother and cared for her in her last illness. She became a member of the church nearly fifty years ago, being baptized by Elder U. W. Greene, and remained a loyal and devoted member. The family removed to Massachusetts soon after uniting with the church, and for many years was actively identified with the Boston Branch. Bishop M. C. Fisher was in charge of her funeral service, assisted by the local Baptist minister who offered prayer. She was laid to rest beside her husband.

Collect for Club Women

Keep us, O God, from pettiness; let us be large in thought, in word, in deed. Let us be done with fault finding, and leave off self-seeking. Let us put away all pretense and meet each other face to face, without self-pity and without prejudice. Let us never be hasty in judgment and always generous. Teach us to put into action our better impulses, to be straight forward and unafraid. Let us take time for all things; make us to grow calm, serene, gentle. Grant that we may realize it is the little things that create differences; that in the big things of life we are as one. And may we strive to touch and to know the great common heart of us all; and O Lord God, let us not forget to be kind.

Attend Reunion

Reunions are the Summer Schools of the Church...

"The big reunions of the church offer our people one of the finest educational opportunities of the year," says Brother Hougas, who has made his own reunion in Far West Stake a fine example of his statement.

"They give to scattered and isolated members the chance to participate in the spiritual blessings of the church, and to brush up on the best ideas and thoughts that the church has to offer.

"For those who have the privileges of regular attendance at branch services, the reunion is a new and reviving experience, with its friendships among church people as well as the opportunity of hearing church officers who never have time to visit the branches.

"The Herald Publishing House desires to do all in its power to aid the realization of the church program by putting into the hand of all members the necessary educational literature. Your cooperation with our reunion representatives is earnestly solicited."

■ A Poor Representative

The other day a man stopped and complained that he had been given very little work during the past year, and that others in the company for which he worked were being favored.

We looked at him, and understood why. He had not shaved for three days at least. His clothes were dirty. Souvenirs of ancient breakfasts remained on his vest; antique grime lay on his shirt, and his other clothing.

No employer wants a filthy worker about his plant. Such people give your business a bad reputation.

It is no sin to wear old or patched clothing. One may be honest in spite of them. But it is bestial to be dirty.

This man is a church member, too. He is one of those who are "not ashamed to tell people what church I belong to." He is a walking advertisement for the church, and a bad one. People judge the church partly by his appearance.

He may have a heart of gold; he may be exceedingly precious in the Lord's sight; he may be intelligent in some ways. But as a citizen and a church member he is a failure.

Every man in the church should carefully attend to the following duties: shave every day, keep his shoes polished, get frequent haircuts, wear clean clothing, especially when on the streets, and take general thought as to his appearance.

The "white collar" is no sign of nobility. Personal tidiness is no sure ticket to earthly goodness or heavenly grace; but it does make a person a more agreeable companion for his fellows and a better representative of his business and his religion. There are some men who need to be told, quite shortly, to "Clean up!"

■ Friendly Robin

The robin had spent the better part of the morning clearing insects out of the garden. Towards noon the sun was beating down unmercifully hot, and he was panting for breath. A happy thought struck him and he went over to the bird bath, but after stirring twice in its depth with his beak, he came up with a disgusted expression, and looked at us in frank disapproval. "Here I've worked for you all morning," he seemed to say, "and you don't even give me a decent drink!" We looked at the bird bath—the water was gone and there was only a little scum in the bottom. Ashamed, we filled the bowl, and the robin returned to drink and indulge in a glorious bath. He visits the garden every little while now to give it his personal attention.

In these times of drouth our bird friends often find it difficult to locate water. We can help them by placing water containers where they can drink without danger of being caught and eaten by the cats—preferably at the top of a post and not too near the shrubs.

Attend Reunion

Summer School Nearly all public school teachers go somewhere each summer to take courses in order to improve their qualifications for their work and secure credit towards their higher degrees. The summer school idea also extends to other lines. Short courses are offered for students of agriculture and for skilled mechanics in the management of complex machines. Large companies are now offering summer courses for their salesmen. Everywhere the idea of training for one's tasks is taking a strong hold. The summer school idea has been found a practical one. Work is slack and business is slow. It is easy to travel. People normally take their vacations in the summer, and many of them devote a part of their time to travel or study of some kind.

And Now The Church The reunion is the summer school of the church. It offers the church workers and the membership all of the advantages that regular summer school offers to other people. It offers to most of us a chance to travel a little, to rest a little, and to learn. The serious purpose of reunion should never be forgotten. It offers improvement as well as enjoyment. If the serious purpose of reunion should be forgotten, the reunion itself would soon be neglected.

Five Purposes The first purpose of a reunion is religious experience or inspiration. To many people who are isolated from church privileges, the reunion is a feast of spiritual blessings at which they gather strength for the life of another year. Most reunions also provide classes and courses of instruction. They help in the training of workers in the understanding of the church program. Not the least important of the benefits of reunions are the friendships that are formed there. No money value can be attached to these, but life is greatly enlarged by contact with other worth-while personalities. Another benefit at the reunion is cultural development. While the opportunity for this is limited, the presentation of good music, of well organized worship, of interest in books and higher things makes a definite addition to the value of reunion. The culmination of every reunion is the act of re-dedication to the service of the church which is an outgrowth of all the other experiences and activities.

Stay Through The Season Those who profit most by a reunion are those who go at the beginning and stay to the end. There is a distressing tendency for many to neglect the reunion in the week and attend the Sunday services only. While the week-end guests are very welcome, they present a problem to the officers and also to those who have been steady in their attendance. In both study and inspiration, those who stay have been making progress all through the week. And then the Sunday crowds come and both speakers and audiences must make an entire readjustment. It is desirable for the effective reunion work to have as many as possible stay through. They receive the most benefit.

Attend Reunion Reunions are meant for those who have the privileges of regular branch membership as well as for those who are isolated. In fact, reunion is for everybody. And everybody who can attend without detriment to his work should do so. In these times of economic stress and difficulty, certainly no one would advise a person to jeopardize his employment to attend reunion, but for those who can, attendance at the reunion is very desirable. It is good for them and it is good for the church. Attend reunion somewhere this summer.

"Check Up"

The Master once said to his disciples, "By their fruits ye shall know them." It is also possible that we can know ourselves better by the fruits that we have produced. When we are testing the world of faith by its practical effectiveness, perhaps we should also look in the mirror and examine our own faith for its effectiveness.

Elsewhere in this issue, Brother Curry, writing for the Presiding Bishopric, asks us to check up on our performances in obedience to the articles of our faith. Have we kept the law? Have we filed our inventories? Have we paid our tithing? Have we contributed to aid the church in facing its financial problems?

There are other obligations, as Brother Curry points out, than the financial ones. Have we maintained the quality of our faith and devotion? Are our homes of a spiritualized character? Every business man takes an inventory of his stock and checks up on his records to ascertain profits and losses, outstanding obligations, and net worth. Without this inventory he could never know whether he is gaining or losing ground. Our religious life is like that. We need to check up and see whether our

Thoughts for Today

ATORNEY GENERAL CUMMINGS recently stated that the criminal army in America is bigger than the combined United States army and navy. This means that our police are endeavoring to combat forces that greatly outnumber them and that are working towards the destruction of our country. Often the police must work with antiquated weapons, insufficient training for their tasks, and defenses that are too weak to protect them against the highly modern arsenals employed by gangsters. Add to these handicaps the fact that police are continually badgered with political interference, and one can understand how difficult it is for even the most conscientious of them to maintain their morale.

THE RESPONSIBILITY for political corruption in America must be placed upon the large number of persons who enjoy the privileges of citizenship and refuse to accept its moral responsibilities. The Tammanys, big and little, the machines both Republican and Democratic, that have made a great industry of pillaging the public treasuries and grafting upon legitimate trade and manufacture, can survive only because they can get enough votes from citizens to keep their henchmen in office. Those votes are purchased, directly and indirectly, with money, the spoils of graft, jobs, favors, and patronage. As long as there are people low enough to sell their votes for these things, there will be the machines that are low enough to buy them, while the purposes of representative government are frustrated, and honest citizens are betrayed. When the majority of citizens become honest and really want clean government, they can get it. As long as they want the personal opportunity for graft and special privilege, no amount of howling against graft in general will do any good.

LOYAL CITIZENS cannot help being concerned for the future of their country. There is a false patriotism being taught in this country which is developing in the hands of a closely organized set of itchy-palmed graft seeking professionals who make patriotism to appear a servile boot-licking approval of all that is done. They leave no room for honest and intelligent criticism, and they make party loyalty more important than citizenship.

THE HIGHEST LOYALTY is not motivated by the purposes of party success, but by the desire for the best and most enduring good of the country. The highest loyalty will criticize when wrongs are detected and fight corruption wherever it is found.

DEMOCRATIC GOVERNMENT has been severely criticized of late years for its clumsiness and incompetence. Some people have looked with favor upon the dictatorships and military governments of Italy and other countries. It was supposed that a dictatorship would be more capable of managing a government than the democratic type. Now it appears that Italy, where Mussolini is supreme, has fared no better in the depression than any other government. It has lost trade, and suffered unemployment and all the other ills to which our democracies have been subjected. The Italian people bargained away their freedom for a dictatorship that promised them great national power. They have lost their freedom, but they have not obtained their coveted objectives.

FREEDOM is too precious a thing to be thrown lightly away, even in a depression. Democratic governments admittedly have many defects, and in them the human faults of avarice, dishonesty, and corruption have been revealed at their worst. For a democracy reflects faults as well as the virtues of its people, and when it becomes honest, its democratic government must be honest. Democracy may appear to cost more than other types of government, but it is worth the price; and let us say in the words of one advertiser recommending his product, "accept no substitute."

RATHER THAN FACE English law against carrying fire arms and the severe penalty for shooting a policeman, an English criminal committed suicide when he was located by the use of blood hounds. In England, the penalty for carrying a pistol is so very severe that it is almost unheard of for criminals to carry them. Contrast the conditions in England with those in America. In America the only man who may not carry a pistol is the ordinary citizen who needs to protect his own person and property. Our laws are so designed that the average citizen does not dare carry fire arms without permission that he finds difficult to secure. But with light penalties, all criminals go fully armed. If criminals are permitted to carry weapons, honest citizens should be permitted to do so. But it would be far better to make laws so strict and penalties so severe that no one would be found bearing a weapon except the police. In England the police do not carry fire arms except on the most hazardous tasks.

"Some men are thrown in the shade and others stand in their light."

The Church "Checks Up"

A mark of greatness is to hold tenaciously the vision of the goal while taking part in the struggle its attainment requires. Edison did this during the long, weary days in which he sought a way to use electricity for light. So the English barons clung to their ideal of human rights in the protracted struggle which gave them the Magna Charta.

The stresses of any struggle, whether about a small or large matter, constantly tend to distract and divert the participants. It is therefore highly necessary that every tendency be studied in the light of the goal, and each deviation instantly be checked. To do otherwise is to invite disaster.

In conformity with these thoughts the "Keep the Law" campaign of last fall was inaugurated, because the reaching of our goal as a church wholly depends upon obedience to God's law. There was instant recognition and approval of this endeavor, and the response was wide-spread. The eager willingness with which our people studied their lives in comparison with the requirements of our goal, and their efforts to make adjustments found to be needed, was evidence of their desire to reach zionic standards.

Now, six months have passed, and we deem it highly expedient to take stock to see whether we are truly keeping the law as we determined last fall to do. We, as officials of the church, whatever our function may be, should review our record to see whether it approximates the standard set by our Lord; likewise, every member should study his life to see whether he has kept the law. For there is a two-fold responsibility for success in the work of the church: one rests upon the ministry, both general and local, to provide an enlightened spiritual leadership in harmony with the law; the other rests upon each member to do the works of godliness for which such a leadership calls.

If your inventory has not been filed, prepare and file it at once; if your tithing in any part remains unpaid, pay it. If you have fallen short in prayer, in the study of the Word of God, or in any of the duties of a churchman and Christian, remedy these defects. If you think that somehow you have lost touch with God, seek Him anew in humility and contrition of heart. To become or remain a sincere, loyal, law-abiding people, we must see to it that the tides of the struggle of everyday life do not sweep us from our goal.

Will you make this "checking up" your serious part in the Lord's business from June 24 to and including July 1?

May God bless you in this task.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By L. F. P. CURRY.

New Herald Story Begins July 3

Our new Herald story, "The Nomads," by May Elliott, will begin in the issue of July 3. The author is the wife of a former missionary and her story embraces scenes and personalities both in the United States and abroad. It represents a development of character and a struggle for the finding of faith. You will want to read it. Be sure that your Herald subscription is paid up so that you get all of the issues.

Quarterlies in the Mail

In the hope of sending out all quarterlies together, the Herald Publishing House has held up the others waiting for the adult quarterly copy.

Now it is impossible to wait any longer and we are mailing all other quarterlies immediately. Up to this writing, no copy for the adult quarterly has been received, and we have no idea when it will be in our hands. We assure our subscribers that we will mail this quarterly as soon as possible after receiving copy.

We print this note to save a great deal of correspondence for our subscribers and for ourselves. It is a situation that we deeply regret but for which we are not responsible.

faith is producing results. The world is measuring us by the fruits we produce. The church, too, can look on the records and see how far we have complied with the law; and God knows our hearts. We cannot keep our lives and works hidden. They are known and recorded. In view of this, it behooves every church member to check up and see how he stands and what he has done.

Worship

Worship is one of the very important experiences in human life. People may live without it, but they do not live their best. One needs to have some sense of relation to the great Creator who made us all, and we attain a sense of this relation through worship.

There are three kinds of worship. Private worship, family worship, and church worship. Each of these has its place, and all of them are indispensable to a spiritual way of living.

Every person's daily program should include private worship. There are sometimes things that we cannot tell to anyone, secrets of the heart that must be shared by us and God, longings and ambitions that spring from the deepest recesses of our souls. Sometimes when we are alone, thoughts come to us which we ought to record and which we ought to pray about. If we could all find some time each day when we could go along to think and pray and plan the day's activities and then our future lives, we would all be better and happier. At such a time we could seriously consider what is best for our careers. Worship is taking God into our confidence and calling upon him for the help that only he can give. It is a source of strength and inspiration for all times, as well as for times of trouble.

Then there is family worship. Almost every family can gather at the table at one time while the blessing is asked upon the food. This is the simplest form of family worship and it ought to be a daily practice. Gratitude for God's love and a petition for his blessing should be in the hearts of each one. If the family can truly have in the home an altar where they gather to worship and to think things out together, they will have a strength that will hold them together in all times of trouble. The family altar is much talked about, much needed, and much neglected. At the family altar all should be equal because they are equal in the sight of God. There should be no domination on the part of anyone, even the head of the family, but they should be unified in the charity and kindness and Christian love which must hold them together. Perfect love and trust depend upon absolute kindness and consideration.

Church worship is the kind most all of us experience. Each should do his part to aid the officers in preserving good decorum in the church during worship services. It should be our aim to make church worship services as beautiful, as dignified, and as reverent as possible. Our own churches are inclined to informality sometimes to excess, and we do

A Wish

By Molly Richmond

When I watch the silvery white moon Rise out of its bed of twilight's soft gloom,
And wend its way across the great blue sky;
Calmly undisturbed by clouds passing by,
But, lulled by the sound of the wind's soft lays,
Serenely sailing through the deep starry blue,
Ere sinking gently from the harbor of view.

Then when my soul rises and sails away,
Rises from out its bed of dust crumbling clay,
And across the infinite space will go;
Across strange skies, whose paths I do not know;
Oh! let me, like the moon, be just as undisturbed,
And leave on earth, the beauty of a deed or word
To thrill the heart with gladness, when skies are gray,
To live in memory, though I've gone away.

Ideas, Discussion and News for the Young People of the Church

"Have a Smoke?"

("No, Thank You.")

"No, thank you," is the perfect answer when in a crowd somebody passes the cigarettes. You don't need to be offensive; you don't need to be priggish or self-righteous; you don't need to try to make the other person feel that he is doing wrong if he is not a member of your church, but you can say simply and quietly, as a matter of your own preference, "No, thank you." Some years ago the writer was surprised when in a crowd of university men somebody passed the cigarettes. None of the others there were church members. They had no religious scruples against smoking, but when the cigarettes were passed some of them said, "No, thank you." They didn't care to smoke because they knew it would interfere with their studies. They did not care for tobacco. It was not that they meant to be censorious towards the others. They simply stated their preference and their preference was respected.

When somebody offers you a cigarette, there is a way to say, "No, thank you." When somebody offers you a drink, there is a way to say, "No, thank you." When somebody asks you to gamble, there is a way to say, "No, thank you." It won't offend, and you have a perfect right to say it. You had better get out of the company that tries to force you against your will when you say, "No, thank you." Why don't more of us say it?

I once read about a man who took a boat trip and during his whole journey lived abstemiously on cheese and crackers. But behold, at the end of his travels he learned that the ticket he had bought and paid for called for three full meals a day, at no extra charge. There we are, living on cheese and crackers when our tickets call for rich, fine food. We are satisfied with a fraction of what is coming to us.

... This is the life-motto of thousands: "Eat, drink and try to be merry." I know a wealthy woman whose days hold no greater attraction than good hotels in which to dine and a fine car in which to ride. Such a life is a cross between a pig at its trough and a squirrel in its revolving cage. It is a cheese-and-cracker existence—when the ticket calls for so much more!—Frank B. Fagerburg, in The Sin of Being Ordinary.

Never take advice from a person who is financially interested in the decision you make. He may be ever so good a man, but he will be human enough that his judgment will be influenced by his desires.

Lesson Thirteen—June 24

The Call of Zion

To reconstruct economic society or to constitute it anew, or to institute a new mode of governing economic life—that is the call of Zion. It is a call to “peoples”; that is to say, to whole masses or bodies of persons who live within given areas and either have or may set up some form of economic self-government; it is a call to “nations.” It is a call to a new economic regime; a new form, constitution, and method of economic self-government.

It is not a call to this Latter Day Saint and that to shift his place of residence from one part of the country to another, however much a certain kind of shift may be necessary in order to bring like-minded people together under circumstances which make economic self-government in accordance with the will of God possible. It is not a call to a new position in space; it is a call to a new mode of community life; a new mode of society; a new mode of corporate behavior.

THE COMING OUT AGE

This is the coming-out-of-Babylon age. It is in the air. Peoples are planning to quit Babylon. More than one hundred attempts have been made in the United States alone in the last hundred and fifty years to come out of Babylon, and to be separate. Every Utopian society that was instituted in America was an attempt to come out of Babylon.

The idea of coming out of Babylon will not down, however her “merchants” may seek to shame her enemies. Technocracy is the latest foe to sound the battle cry: Babylon must fall.

That Utopia after Utopia has risen and passed away; that neither this ism nor that has succeeded in instituting an economic society which fulfills the conditions of peace, prosperity, and happiness for peoples means nothing except, perchance, that we have yet to learn the ways of God; we have yet to envision The Kingdom; the form, constitution and method of government in Zion has yet to be understood.

So far as Latter Day Saints are concerned, what has come out of our attempts to “Redeem Zion” means that more intelligence must be brought to bear upon the question of economic self-government than has yet characterized this people. We have yet to learn the way.

A GLORIOUS ACHIEVEMENT

The task is great that lies before us. The call of Zion is a call to a glorious governmental adventure; A Marvelous and a Wonderful Work; the Sought Out, a city not forsaken. No one can help feeling something of the ecstasy of the prophets, once, with the eye of understanding, he transfixes Zion's towers of glittering truth: What a shame that Latter Day Saints should have imagined their puerile private Babylonian business adventures to be the essence of redeeming Zion. No wonder their souls have not been set on fire by the prophecy of Zion.

CAST UP THE HIGHWAY

The crux of an economic society is property—that is to say, the right of possession, use, enjoyment and (or) disposal of things. The call of Zion, therefore, is a call to a new set of rules governing the possession, use, enjoyment, and (or) disposal of things. It is wrong economic RELATIONS that distress us. The only way out is to institute right economic RELATIONS. And this is the essential nature of the call of Zion. “You are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships. . . .” This, together with the other stipulations of like nature which make up Zion's code, is the only way out. And he who does not apprehend these truths in relation to the needs and problems of man, has not yet heard with hearing ears the call to come out of Babylon.

To “cast up the highway” is to inaugurate a new economic code. It is not to do things the way they have always been done. It is to blaze new trails. It is not to follow the paths which others have trod. Zion-builders do not look backward to make economic behavior conform to precedent. They do look backward to understand what is in store in the future or to explain the present.

That does not mean that there is nothing good in the economic codes of the past or in the isms of the present. The principle of “a planned economy” which is the groundwork of Technocracy, is good, whatever may be said of Technocracy's method of applying it. And so it is with other isms. There is hardly an ism that does not revolve around a principle of truth in which economic government in Zion must be grounded. Carbon and oxygen are the elements, and the only elements, in both carbon monoxide and carbon dioxide. But in one they are combined in one ratio, and in the other in another ratio. And that difference of the ratio in which they are combined determines the fact that one will promote life, whereas the other will destroy life.

An ism is not The Government because it embodies certain features of The Kingdom Code. A mode of behavior does not constitute Latter Day Saints Zion because it is like the Zion way of behaving in some of its particulars. It is The Code; it is the complete system of rules, the whole body of laws by which peoples govern their affairs that determines whether or not their Zion is in very deed The Kingdom. The call of Zion is not a call to do SOME of the things PERSONS should do; it is a call to do all of the things peoples should do.

ONWARD TO ZION

On! On! And we have gone on in one direction or another. But whether or not it has truly been “Zion” which beckoned us on may be judged only by the changes which have taken place in our mode of behavior as a people. What institutional building have we done? And what is the character of the economic institutions we have builded? Have we builded upon Babylon's foundations? or have we builded on Zion's foundation? Has custom been our guide? Or has the new concept of the righteousness of The Kingdom been our guide?

Our coming out of Babylon must be measured by the progress we have made toward the inauguration of a new economic code grounded in the principles set out in Doctrine and Covenants 42, 51, 81, 101, and the rest. For this without doubt is the call of Zion: the call to inaugurate this economic code.

Draw the picture, then, of our economic institutional building. Compare or contrast the economic institutions of our building with the economic institutions others have builded. And if we do this understandingly, we will have the measure of our departure from Babylon. If we do this we will have the answer to the oft-repeated question: How is stewardships progressing? And we will not need to look at land or houses or corn or cribs to see the answer. The answer is not to be seen there; but only in the new social institutions we have builded as a people.

THE GATHERING

"Gather together unto the places which I have appointed." Why? What is the reason for this "gathering" doctrine? Is it not to make possible "the organization" of the economic life of this people in accordance with the will of God? Is it not that they may govern their own economic life in accordance with their own concepts of what is right? How shall we answer the call of Zion unless we gather to centers of a mode of community life of our own instituting?

And is it not forth from such social nuclei that the testimony shall go which will cause The World to confess that "With you God has residence below"?

GOD AND MAMMON

God and Mammon won't mix. "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." There is an interesting admixture of elements in present economic society: pecuniary elements; acquisitive elements, rival elements; elements of personal liberty, and of group control; private property and public property; and all the rest. Some of these elements are introduced to compromise the truth. And the effects of combining these elements in this way, everyone should know.

But there can be no compromising of The Truth by the builders of The Kingdom. The righteousness of Zion can gain no force by mixing in some of the unrighteousness of Babylon.

Let other isms content themselves, if they can, by reducing graft 10% or 50% or 90%; the builders of Zion must tear up this evil by its roots. Let other isms exact 5% or 50% of what some profit by the labors of others, if that is their concept of equity; but builders of Zion must socialize the entire surplus arising from the mixed labors of many men. Let those who will dispense their charities to those who have been denied economic opportunity; the building of Zion must make the economic opportunities of its men equal, and the wages of their labor just. And no people shall have answered the call of Zion until all these and other similar rights of persons and of peoples have been honored in their form, constitution, and method of government.

A HIGH MORAL SENSE

To answer the call of Zion the individual must perceive both the injustices arising from present modes of behavior and the equities which will arise from the code of The Kingdom. And that means that those who answer the call of Zion must arise above the level of customary morality to the Kingdom-building level of reflective morality; they must be capable of high moral discriminations in economic situations. That is to say, they must be "born again." Some things which appear proper to most men must appear improper to them. This is a "personal" change: the first sign that our ears have heard the call of Zion.

The second sign that we have heard the call of Zion is a "social" change; it is the people embodying their spirit in economic institutions of their own building. And the test of "personal" regeneration is "social" reconstruction. The test of the spirit of a people is its social institutions. No Kingdom-building man can be content with an economic set-up that does not positively promote the ends of justice. And the outcome of such discontent must be an endeavor to inaugurate The Kingdom code.

THE GOOD NEWS

The call of Zion is a call to carry the good news, the glad tidings that The Kingdom has come to all the nations of the world. The call of Zion is a call to teach by example the way of truth, that peoples may learn the ways of God, and walk therein, and live. The call of Zion is to establish The Government; to cast up The Highway; to lift up A Standard; to establish the righteousness of The Kingdom.

I SAW JESUS

I close this discussion of The Prophecy of Zion: The Kingdom, with this bit of inspiration that came to me one day as I sat in meditation at an Easter prayer meeting in the Stone Church in Independence, Missouri:

I Saw Jesus

Not Jesus the Man, but Jesus, the Way, the Truth, and the Life, crucified upon a cross of gold.

I saw Jesus lying in a tomb of acquisitive institutions and wrapped in cloths of exploitative customs.

I saw the sepulcher closed with the stone of selfishness and sealed with the authority of private interests.

I saw Saints turning their faces to the world and their backs to The Church—saddened, grief-stricken, and dismayed—for this Jesus had been to them the hope of salvation.

And then I heard a great commotion, and I saw the Angel of God in the person of men of the ministry come to the tomb and roll the stone of selfishness away.

And again I saw Jesus, embodied in institutions of mutual helpfulness, and clothed with the authority of Divine understanding.

I saw The Word made flesh in the City of Zion.

And then I heard THE PROCLAMATION: "He is RISEN!"

And I saw the eyes of the Nations turn toward Zion; and, transfixing her towers of glittering TRUTH, beholding her ramparts of JUSTICE, and marveling at her GLORY,

I heard their Hallelujahs! saying:

"He IS risen!" "He IS risen!"

"And because HE lives, WE TOO shall live!"

Jesus Unchanged

We live in a changing world. There comes seasons when everything seems to be in transition. Old landmarks crumble and fall. Guiding buoys snap their moorings and go floating down the stream. Institutions that promise to outlast the years collapse like stricken tents. Assumptions in which everybody trusted burst like toy balloons. Everything seems to lose its base, and begins to tremble in uncertainty and confusion. Such, in a few words, describes the present hour. Conventional standards which seemed to have the fixedness of the stars have been blown to the four winds. Political and economic safeguards have gone down like wooden fences before the rush of the swollen rivers. We are looking today for things that cannot be shaken, for things that remain unchanged. How reassuring, then, are the words of the text: "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday and today, and forever."

Jesus Christ is the greatest fact in history. Not only is He the greatest fact, but He is the one inescapable fact. He cannot be escaped, no matter in what realm we may search. Go to the realm of art, He is pre-eminent there. Turn to literature, He is the greatest there. In music He is supreme. Turn to the realm of morals, He is the ultimate in all that pertains to that. When we think of purity, of love, of goodness, of mercy, of self-sacrifice, we confront Him who was altogether pure, whose love expressed itself in sacrificing Himself for the life of the world. Down the ages He has marched, and every age has been forced to admit His superiority! This age can be no exception to the rule. Jesus Christ remains unchanged.—M. B. Pringle, in "The Unchanging Christ," Christian Standard.

Our people should be taught that tithing is not giving. Certainly the rich should give more than the poor, but giving comes in after the tithe has been paid. Tithing does not meet the requirements of stewardship. The very poor will pay the tithe, but the wealthy must go far beyond it. The rich man should pay his Lord the debt in acknowledgment of His ownership, and then make gifts.—George F. Bradford, "Tithing and Spiritual Development," in Christian Standard.

Seeking After Truth

By S. A. Burgess
Church Historian

(Author's Note: The vital part of this article for us is the latter half. The first part tries to show very briefly some of the ideas advanced today. But the latter half gives the answers.)

RECENTLY a request was made for one or more articles concerning the Rosicrucians. Not long afterwards someone showed us a pamphlet or quarterly and expressed surprise at it being so much like the teachings of our church.

THREE EXPLANATIONS

Now as to the latter question, there are three possible explanations, any one or more of which may apply. First, Joseph Smith, in 1844 when the suggestion was made that the church be moved to the west, to the Oregon country, wrote Henry Clay, "What, move 250,000 people?" He gave similar figures at different times. The statements of others also agree in making the number of members in 1844 relatively high and this has caused us to reach the conclusion that there were about 200,000 members in the church, and that the larger number included children not yet baptized. Of these, at the most, 10,000 have been claimed as going to Utah. To the Reorganization, W. W. Blair stated in the Temple Lot Suit, a few thousand had come. When allowance is made for all existing groups it still would leave the bulk of the above membership unaccounted for. There are, in other words, many thousands, if not millions, of descendants of former members of the church and other millions who have belonged to their families and learned much of our doctrine.

Further than this, the teachings of the Restoration were preached widely across the country. Addresses were made to leading men and governments. There can be no question but that the restored truth has been a leaven in the world, for there is not a single creed but has been modified more nearly in harmony with the truth. Objectionable ideas held in 1830 are now quite generally rejected. Whatever may be the source, the fact remains, and we rejoice that this is true.

We rejoice also to note the increased teaching in regard to tithing, consecration, modern revelation, and the coming of the Son of Man, which is to be found in other organizations than those immediately connected with the Restoration.

A second source is the sincere desire for a return to the blessings and glory of the New Testament church. Men earnestly seeking the truth have found a larger measure of truth.

A third explanation is the greatly increased interest in the last sixty years in the traditions, stories, and sacred books of ancient times. That brings in the first question with regard to the Rosicrucians.

It is difficult to condense adequately the reading of many hundreds of books into a short article. The general field of research includes Theosophy, Neoplatonism, Mysticism, Free Masonry, Symbolism, Histories of religion and comparative religion, including in that the sacred records of the past. In fact the above is only a part of the initial outline or fields of possible study if we include within them the ancient mysteries: Illuminati, symbolism of numbers, astrology, magic, which includes demonology, vedanta, new thought, and others which could be listed.

THE KERNEL OF TRUTH

To make this approach we need to examine the religion of ancient times with an open mind in an attempt to summarize briefly. It may be stated that in the religions of antiquity there are found many stories of a crucified mediator or savior. The sign of the cross is quite universally found. The religion of the common people and that ordinarily studied as Paganism possess a number of very crass and disagreeable features, of bloody and even human sacrifices, of polytheism, of the actual worship of images. But it is surprising how often a further search will find that there was a group of initiate priests, who claimed to hold the real truth, and that is, There is but one God, that the Son of God would come into the world, that the cross is his sign or symbol, that he would descend into the place of the dead and that he would arise triumphant to sit on the right hand of God on high, that there was an early revelation in primeval days of the will of God and that all the religions in the world are but offshoots of that first divine manifestation.

These writings of modern esotericists would make of Paul an initiate. In fact would make Jesus himself to belong to a secret order among the Jews, the Essenes. They hold that in these secret orders of antiquity is to be found the residue of truth which is given to humanity as often and as rapidly as they are able to receive it.

POSSIBLE ORIGINS

As to the nature of this early religion there is dispute. In "The Signs and Symbols of Primordial Man," Albert Churchward, a thirty-second degree Mason, claims that 250,000 years before Christ Free Masonry was on earth, and that it is the source of all divine revelation or religion, that it has passed through the star, solar, and lunar mythos. Incidentally, other writers, apparently not Masonic, comment that while these secret orders of ancient times made for civilization and were lifting up humanity, yet among the most depraved and lowest class of humanity there are to be found Masonic symbols with a grasp of their meaning.

Other writers, while agreeing on the general fact of a primeval revelation, claim a different origin, of which they claim to possess the key. Some agree in placing this origin in Egypt, others claim to find it in India, still others among the Chaldeans.

The subject is not at all easy for general discussion because of the very clear fact that the common people seem to have worshiped a great variety of images as gods—polytheism, while the inner circle claims to possess the knowledge that these are only the attributes of the one supreme God and the images are only to illustrate his different properties.

There are evident signs of a worship of the stars, again a worship of the moon. Again the worship of the sun was very widely spread, especially in the latter antiquity, so we find the day of the coming of the Son of God placed just at the vernal equinox. It was so with the rites of Bacchus, and there are many things of peculiar interest to be found in considering that ritual and the teaching, among others, that the Master or Lord waits upon the servant, evidently indicating that in the golden age there would be an equality brought about of humanity, and a share and share alike.

Such study is a case of continual seeking without the assurance of finding the truth, where cloud after cloud is thrown over the truth to conceal or mislead not only the outsider but even the sincere neophyte. Thus it is very apparent that whatever may have been the inherent high purpose of the rites of Bacchus of Tammuz, of Mithra, and of Isis, there was a descent into most unseemly immorality in practice in the later days of antiquity.

Now, while we suggest this we do not thereby mean for a moment to conceal or avoid the truth that is to be found if we seek deeply enough. We note that in our time, while we celebrate Christmas, it is not the time of the actual birth of Jesus, for that is the rainy season in Judea, also the Christmas tree and much of the paraphernalia of Christmas and of Easter have their pagan similitude. The days of our week are based upon early astrological observation at a time when the five planets and the sun and moon were worshiped and were held to rule each hour of the day in order.

But many writers claim a still earlier origin, that the source is to be found in either Atlantis or Lemuria. That the great pyramid is really an Atlantlan temple in which neophytes were initiated into the greater truth; also that the earlier initiations were at first very real and that their purpose was to bring men into contact with the divine. It is, in other words, a relic of ancient revelation.

THEOSOPHY

Several years ago three articles were published in the Saints' Herald on Theosophy. These were concerned only with some of the outer aspects of that subject. At this time we intend to go into it more deeply and consider its possible significance and value to us as a people. The reason for this is that a number have been affected and are being by the New Thought, Theosophy, Rosicrucianism and various other aspects which have become apparent within recent years. The purpose in presenting these ancient aspects is not an end in itself, but it is to consider how much we can ascertain of the truth, and what opportunity lies before us as a people, and what progress we can really hope for in these various other organizations. It is a deep and very interesting question and a very wonderful one when we consider some of the things that lie before us as a possibility as a church.

It will be seen that the study of philosophy comes within the scope of our present problem. In fact all human knowledge has its bearing on this particular problem. These various factors claim that the revival of learning after the dark ages, that all of the truth that has been discovered, comes out of these mysteries or from those adepts who are especially so trained.

The Theosophists claim to have the only true link with the truth of these ancient mysteries, that the ancient Neophyte actually went through such severe spiritual experiences, that only the pure could survive. They and others claim to connect up with the magicians and astrologists of ancient times and those of the medieval age, that there is a possibility of coming in contact with divine power, but there is also the danger, if the veil be loosed, of demoniacal power, that there is also a mystery of magic in the control of earth powers. Theosophy claims continuity through the great brethren somewhere in the Himalayas, who do not make themselves manifest to humanity, but who send out and release truth from time to time. They teach the law of transmigration of souls which involves frequent returns to earth, the danger there is in one surrendering to his lowest powers, the necessity that the higher or spiritual and mental powers shall rise supreme over the physical nature.

ROSIKRUCIANISM

As to the Rosicrucians there is no clear history apparent or known that is made public. By its very nature they claim to (Continued on page 744.)

"And Five Were Wise"

By David H. Johnson

One of the most striking characteristics of the parables of Jesus is their adaptability to varied conditions and occasions. While Latter Day Saints usually have one favorite interpretation of each parable there often arise interpretations which though they conform somewhat to the general ideas that are prevalent, yet throw new light on an aspect of the gospel to which they have not generally been applied. A case in point is the parable of the Ten Virgins, found in the 25th chapter of Saint Matthew.

In his dissertation upon his second coming, Jesus likened the church to ten virgins who were awaiting the coming of the bridegroom. His appearance at an unexpected hour found half of them unprepared to receive him, and by the time the necessary preparations were made, it was too late for them to enter into the joys they had anticipated. It is unnecessary in this article to enlarge upon the interpretation which has found currency among Latter Day Saints. However it is the writer's intention to use the salient points in the story in connection with that aspect of our philosophy which treats of the financial law, and kindred topics.

It would probably be tedious to the reader to elaborate upon the necessity for Zion as a place of refuge, but a brief survey of world conditions as they are today and as they appear to be heading will be a background for the points that follow. The crisis through which the world is passing is unprecedented; conditions of life for very many people are almost intolerable. However it seems that in many countries the worst is past and we are gradually returning to times of so-called prosperity when the number of people on the breadline will not be so appalling as at present. But such a parlous "prosperity" cannot long continue. At the risk of incurring the epithet "Jeremiah" we cannot blind ourselves to the fact that there will be another depression, and that worse than any yet experienced. This is the opinion of economists and world-thinkers; it is foretold in Scripture and it is testified today by numbers under Divine inspiration. What the future will bring is beyond our imagination.

One thing is apparent, the need for Zion. For instance, there is the well known statement in Doctrine and Covenants 45:13 "that every man that will not take up his sword against his neighbor must flee to Zion for safety." Today, in Europe, men are forced to take the sword against their neighbors the Jews. Such a state of affairs might seem remote from other countries, but the strongest nations are even now in process of disintegration. It may not be long before the whole fabric of government will collapse, leaving countries and states in a condition of anarchy and civil war and at the mercy of the first autocratic adventurer who happens along. Then again, one's neighbor does not always live in the same town or country, and it is evident that malignant powers are forcing nations to take up the sword against their neighbors on the other side of political boundary-lines or across the seas. We cannot afford to ignore the inspired warnings we have received; we need to face facts.

Thus the need for an "Ark of Refuge" is plain. What is our response? our preparation? Before a person can become part of the zionic order he must comply with certain requirements. Those relating to temporal affairs are summarized in the filing of an annual inventory, payment of tithe and surplus, and if the steward desires, the giving of an offering. These acts must be certificated by the bishopric or its representatives.

Herein is the said application of the parable. The church members today are awaiting the establishment of Zion. We hope to participate in its benefits. At the present moment we cannot tell just how far-off is the crisis which will necessitate the gathering, but we believe that it is imminent. Some few are making the necessary preparations to enter in. They have complied with the requirements of stewardship. They are wise. On the other hand many of us are waiting unprepared. We expect that at the crucial moment the Lord will gather us in his arms irrespective of whether we have squandered our possessions in the past, or whether we have kept the law, and will land us safely in ready-made homes in the Promised Land.

It seems to the writer that the gathering will present difficult problems in organization. One of the biggest, no doubt, will be the selection of stewards. Necessity will drive many to seek the assistance of the church, who in prosperous times gave no thought to assisting it in its need. And for all that we might say concerning the church's duty in assisting everyone who solicits its aid, the fact remains that it can go only so far as resources allow. In that case it is self-evident that those to be assisted, would in all fairness, be those who had supported the church consistently and made the necessary preparations, in short, were wise enough to have "oil in their lamps."

The parable states that the foolish virgins went to buy oil at the last minute and when they came again their opportunity had gone. It may be that those who wait for the last warning before complying with stewardship principles will find that Zion cannot absorb them and the voice of the Bridegroom will sound their doom, "Verily, I say unto you, you know me not."

Notes on Conversation

A first rule for behavior in society is "Try to do and say only that which will be agreeable to others." Yet how many people who really know better, people who would be perfectly capable of intelligent understanding if they didn't let their brains remain asleep or locked tight, go night after night to dinner parties, day after day to other social gatherings, and absent-mindedly chatter about this or that without ever taking the trouble to think what they are saying and to whom they are saying it!

The cynics say that those who take part in social conversation are bound to be either the bores or the bored; and that which you choose to be is a mere matter of selection. And there must be occasions in the life of everyone when the cynics seem to be right.

People who talk too easily are apt to talk too much, and at times imprudently, and those with vivid imagination are often unreliable in their statements. On the other hand the "man of silence," who never speaks except when he has something "worth while" to say, is apt to wear well among his intimates, but is not likely to add much to the gaiety of a party.

Certain subjects, unless you are very sure of the ground upon which you are standing, had best be shunned. One is, the criticism of a religious creed. Also be careful not to let amiable discussion turn into contradiction and argument. The tactful person keeps his prejudices to himself and even when involved in a discussion says quietly, "No. I don't think I agree with you," or, "It seems to me thus and so." One who is well-bred never says, "You are wrong!" or "Nothing of the kind!"

The joy of joys is the person of light but unmalicious humor. If you know anyone who is gay, beguiling and amusing, you will, if you are wise, do everything you can to make him prefer your house and your table to any other; for where he is, the successful party is also.

Conversation is not a race that must be continued at break-neck pace lest the prize be lost. Far, far worse than the longest, most awkward pause, is the tongue which, without a thought to urge it, rattles ceaselessly.—Emily Post, in Etiquette.

SEEKING AFTER TRUTH

hold it all very sacred and that the real initiates were and are never known. Some claim to connect it entirely with the ancient wisdom, and that its modern manifestation was from one Christian Rosenkreuz who visited Arabia in the 15th century and there learned mysteries concerning the healing of the sick and many other wonderful things, that later he called four brethren and then four more and that they formed the first society, but those to whom these secrets were revealed were sworn to keep them for at least one hundred years; that he died when over one hundred years old, and his grave was opened one hundred and twenty years later, about 1704.

Others claim that this story is only a myth or an allegory and Rosicrucianism really originated early in the 18th century and that the Rosenkreuz is doubtless taken from the seal or signia of the real author, as there appears in his family crest a white cross and four red roses. Others claim, as indicated, a very ancient order and that it has continued down to the present time. They suggest that these brethren of the Rosy Cross were the revivers and organizers of Free Masonry. It is scarcely worth while discussing this in detail since frankly there are many false leads given and no true history, though the claim is made that there existed and still exists a secret inner circle of true brethren of the Rosy Cross. Outside of this is the external aspect, for with its popularity in the 18th century and probably with its popularity in the 20th century there arose many factions or false organizations, which have taken the name for financial or other reasons. This is what they themselves have stated. We are informed that in Kansas City there are at least two organizations that are distinctly antagonistic and that one is trying to raise means for a suit against the other, doubtless to enjoin the use of the name.

FREE MASONRY

As to Free Masonry, many books are written and very contradictory. Many will insist that Free Masonry started in 1717 in Great Britain, but Singleton and Mackay in a seven-volume work make reference to Tubal Cain and King Solomon and King Alfred of England, and have lists published of masters leading back to the time of Alfred the Great. Two things appear clear: that the basis for Free Masonry goes very far back, and that similar organizations held forth in most ancient times in Asia and America, in Africa and in Europe. At the same time there was a revival or reorganization, a formation of a grand lodge in England in 1717, that among those so active there were men also active as Rosicrucians. The number of degrees have differed from one to three, and then up to as high as 100 and 150. But the general basis is that of the York rite and also of the Scottish rite which now ends in the thirty-third degree, though all rest on the first three degrees. The York rite adds the chapter of the Royal Arch, Knights Templars and other degrees; the Scottish rite is taken up from the fourth to the thirtieth. Both again unite in the thirty-first to thirty-third degrees.

Some have insisted that Free Masonry is primarily British. However, today there are more Masons of every degree in the United States than in all the rest of the world put together. They possess a number of ancient symbols, though many insist that they have lost the real understanding of these symbols, so that there is only an outer similarity today. There is a dispute as to whether they are a religion or not. Some, like Churchward, Oliver, et al, insist that the sacred mysteries are Masonic and have continued for hundreds or thousands of years and are the source of all religion and the repository of all truth. Others, insist that Masonry is not a religion and object to the inclusion of the Knights Templars degree in the York rite.

The simple facts appear to be that whatever they may have been in antiquity or whatever may have been the ancient mysteries the lodges of today do not possess nor offer any approach to the divine, nor attempt to practice such mysticism. They are fraternal and social. Still the bases or landmarks are: Belief in a supreme being, the open Bible on the altar, non-interference in politics, and non-sectarianism.

Yet this interest in history demands we note that in the Scottish Rite four degrees, the fifteenth to the eighteenth are called Rose Croix Chapter. These are stated to be the most beautiful and religious in that ritual. It is certain at least that each Thursday night before Easter they celebrate Maundy Thursday, the Lord's Supper, in which they partake "The Hallowed Feast of the Paschal Lamb," then listen to an address on the Last Supper. The lights are extinguished, to be relighted at the Easter Service on Sunday. Whatever there may have been of the mysteries of the past, it is also safe to say that the Masonic Order today does not attempt to practice demonology, but it does attempt to be a gathering of brethren for their mutual help. It is, however, related by tradition with many things of the past. Early histories, such as that by Anderson, are frankly admitted today to be misleading and deliberately so. Of recent years the attitude on the part of Masonic historians is to try to present more nearly the truth, without disclosing any peculiar rituals and ceremonies and secrets which have been handed down possibly from remote antiquity.

The subject is not an easy one, because the "landmarks" taken in America and England as fundamental are not accepted in France and other European states, and hence that organization, though Masonic in form, is not recognized. Within the past fifty years we are informed that there have been pseudo-Masonic bodies and two grand lodges to a State in the United States. There have been within one hundred and fifty years many peculiar developments in America. Today in the United States the rite is divided into the two jurisdictions, the Northern and the Southern, but these are no longer antagonistic, but are harmonious, the Southern taking in all south of the Ohio River and west of the Mississippi and having its headquarters at Washington.

MYSTERIES

Now the readers may wonder why we enter into so many ramifications. In fact only a few have been presented. In a book which was strongly recommended to us as presenting the Rosicrucian view, we find a discussion of the Hermetic, the Masonic, and others, as well as the Rosicrucians, and presenting in large part much of what is stated above. This book is by M. P. Hall, is profusely illustrated, and includes a picture of an hierophant raising Mephistopheles.

A study of hundreds of volumes shows in the end no real connection or relation between any modern society and the ancient mysteries, even though the latter are predecessors and may even be prototypes, though not progenitors of the latter societies, as William J. Hughansa suggests in a short article on Free Masonry.

It is only fair to state that many excellent truths are presented in various forms by these various organizations, and the true origin is hidden in mystery and some confusion, even to the extent that they repeatedly present to a neophyte, a mystery and then deny it by claiming to present the true mystery which in turn is found again to be incorrect. A passing illustration might be the Master Mason's word, which is lost and another substituted. Then in the Royal Arch one is presumed to find it, only to learn later that the word has not yet been given. But these mysteries lead one even more astray than their real contradiction at times.

There is much presented to entice and interest those who wish to study and to learn the truth. We have found under several of these headings a promise of approach to the divine, also the power to control the spirits of nature, of land and water and of fire, and that in these earlier initiations one had to go out to sea in an open boat, to pass through a line of fire and through other ordeals to prove his fitness before he became an adept to utilize such supernal forces. There is also present the idea of magic. We have received within the past few months an invitation to join a mystic brotherhood of the western traditions with the affirmation that those in the Himalayas are of a lower status. This promises with the third degree a knowledge of magic. White magic naturally leads to a discussion of black magic and is presented in all seriousness as those who have sold themselves to the

Autobiography of William Lewis

Among the church stalwarts of the generation just gone none stood more valiantly for Christ and his cause than William Lewis. Strong in the faith, and full of good works, this man served the church as missionary at home and abroad for many years. He died March 29, 1919, and his youngest daughter, now Mrs. Ruth L. Holman, of Independence, Missouri, has gathered together and edited the manuscript of his autobiography which she says he began writing in August of 1907. Sister Holman when a little girl accompanied her father and mother to foreign shores on two different missions.—Editors.

MY PROGENITORS IN SOUTH WALES

My father, David M. Lewis, the second son of Joseph and Jane Lewis, was born at Llandovery, South Wales, September 22, 1822. He had four brothers, Lewis, the oldest, Morgan, John, and Daniel; three sisters, Mary, Sarah, and Jane. Two brothers of my grandfather went to Australia when quite young. I was informed by Uncle Daniel that there were more than two hundred descendants on the Lewis side living in that country in 1901. David Lewis, a brother to grandfather, lived and died at Llandovery. For over fifty years he led singing in one of the churches in that little village. Grandmother died when some of the children were young. Grandfather married the second time and had two daughters by this wife. When I was in Wales in 1901, I called on these daughters. They were living at Llandovery, both old maids.

On a little farm five miles from Llandovery, my progenitors had lived for over three hundred years, (prior to 1856). There was a slate quarry on the farm from which part of the country was supplied with slate for roofing. The name of the farm I have forgotten. It was leased by our progenitors. In 1901, there were none of our people on the old homestead.

My mother was the daughter of William and Elizabeth Roberts. She was born at Dowlais, South Wales, in 1823. The day and month I do not know. She was named after her mother, Elizabeth, but called Betsy for short. Grandfather Roberts was a shoemaker by trade, and grandmother was called the "bakery woman." She had a large oven and baked bread for the neighborhood for one cent (half-penny) a loaf, small or large. Some loaves weighed nine pounds and the bread of a good quality. These ovens are still to be found in Wales, but one fault I found with the bread was that the crust was too thick and hard.

Mother had two brothers, Reese and John. Uncle Reese learned the shoe trade. He also taught and led singing for fifty years in Bryn Zion Chapel (Congregational Church) at Dowlais. He was considered one of the leading teachers in sacred music, besides being the composer of some excellent music. During all the years he had charge of the singing he never set a salary for his faithful services. The congregation, however, was good to him. He married and rented a small house in the same yard as the chapel. There he spent all his married life. He had several children. In 1901, when I was in Wales, I called at the old home, and saw on the wall of the small house a neat, framed memorial card: "In memory of one we loved, Reese Roberts." There were some six long verses of poetry which spoke highly of his Christian works. The lady of the house gave me quite a pleasant history of my uncle whom I had not seen for over forty-eight years. She said he had lived in that house for over fifty years. He had then been dead seventeen years. His four children were living, two of them in the United States, one in Southern England, and one in Wales.

A BIT OF "HEAVEN ON EARTH"

In 1845, mother and father were married at Dowlais, South Wales. To this union were born eight children. Mary, the first, died when two years old; Sarah, the seventh, died when about three years old. The other six lived to grow up and have families of their own. Elizabeth, the fourth child, married John J. Morgan, in Brookfield, Ohio, in 1867. She died at Cleveland, Iowa, February 8, 1903, leaving her husband, two sons, John L., and David L., five daughters, Margaret, Mary Jane, Mattie, Sarah Ann, and Elizabeth. In March, 1904, the husband died.

Sarahann, my younger sister, married the nephew to John J. Morgan; his name was John W. Morgan. He died from an accident received in the mines at Bevier, Missouri, 1900. Sarahann died February 8, 1904, in Bevier, Missouri, leaving three children, David John, Thomas, and Lizzie.

My brother, Joseph R., the third child, and second son, married Susann Price in Brookfield, Ohio, and they are at this writing still living in Kansas City, Missouri; they have a large family of children.

My sister Jane, married Howell Price in Brookfield, Ohio. They have a family of five daughters and one son, living.

Brother John, the sixth child and third son, married Mattie Marion at Stewartsville, Missouri. She died within one year at Bevier. He went West to Montana; married the second time and again to a Mattie. He was gone ten years that we did not hear from him. He returned, then left in 1894, and we have not heard from him since.

I was the second child and oldest son, born November 23, 1847, on the old homestead, near Dowlais.

My father and mother united with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Wales at a date early in the forties. At the time they became members, the church in Wales was in good spiritual condition, and using their words, "It was a heaven on earth!" Shortly after the death of Joseph Smith in America, the evils of Brighamism began to appear in Wales, and the Saints became discouraged. Many withdrew from the church.

Father was an elder and active in church work. He was president of the branch at Glen Neath. One of the missionaries from Salt Lake asked him to preach in favor of polygamy. He replied that he could not teach that which the law condemned. From that time on my parents had nothing to do with that faction of the church.

WESTWARD TO THE UNITED STATES

In the latter part of May, 1856, my parents left Wales for the United States. I was in my ninth year, and there were four of us children. We sailed from Swansea to Liverpool and had a very rough passage.

After arriving at Liverpool, my parents became much discouraged and would have returned home if they had not paid their passage to this country. An old sailor encouraged them to go on saying that they would not have another storm as severe as the one encountered on the way from Swansea to Liverpool. So after staying in Liverpool some three days, we took passage on the sailing vessel, "City of Mobile." After a pleasant five weeks' voyage, we arrived at Scranton, Pennsylvania, in July, 1856. My uncles, Morgan and John Lewis, had been here for two years, and they had sent us passes.

There were quite a number of Saints at Scranton and at Hyde Park who had come from Wales and who were still in the faith, not endorsing polygamy but hoping that the dark cloud which had come over the church would soon pass away. Uncle Morgan left shortly for Salt Lake hoping to find conditions there much better than had been reported. He was to meet Uncle Daniel who had been on a mission in North Wales, but who had already started for "Zion of the Mountains" as he called it. They were to meet near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and travel together over the plains. Prior to his leaving, Uncle Morgan had an understanding with father that he would write from Salt Lake and advise father what to do. In due time a letter came advising father to stop where he was, that conditions in "Zion" were at a very low standard. This was in 1857.

HARD TIMES OF 1856 AND '57

Times were very hard at this time: not much work and little pay for what was done. Father had four months' pay coming to him from the Diamond Coal Company. He could not get any cash nor groceries from the stores. Young as I was—ten years old—I well remember going with father from one store to another trying vainly to get someone of them to cash his "due bill" at a discount or to credit him for a barrel of flour. This was in the days of President James Buchanan, the great panic of 1856, 1857. We lived that winter on buckwheat and molasses, a little bread and potatoes; no butter, cheese or meat for months. At last the company paid part of the wages due their men and later on paid all.

I was only a boy of ten years, but I worked the whole winter of 1856 and part of the winter of 1857 for twenty-five cents a day picking slate in the breaker. Not having any shoes, nor money to buy them, I wore a pair of old boots, man size. My mother put two pairs of stockings on my feet and then took straw and filled in so as to keep the boots from falling off. I had to sit on the soft side of a two-inch board in the cold and coal dust from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. for twenty-five cents with the promise of pay. Think of working six days, sixty-six hours, for $1.50 and having a cross old boss who sometimes stood over you with a twelve-foot rod in his hand so that if you let some stone or slate pass you he could hit your almost frozen fingers with that rod!

There would be from fifty to seventy-five boys working in one breaker, picking out the slate and sulphur and stone that would pass in front of them in the coal going down the narrow shoots about eighteen inches wide. These shoots received the various sizes of coal after it was crushed in the breakers or rolls and came out of a large revolving screen; the opening of which were from a half inch to two inches.

Those days are gone forever, and I am glad today that none under the age of fourteen can work in the breakers and that they get sixty-five and eighty-five cents a day and work from 7 to 5 p. m. The ventilation is much improved and in the winter time the rooms are warmer. Besides, fewer boys are needed today as machinery does much of the work. In my time, after the company became able to pay monthly, we were paid on the twentieth for the preceding month. Now they pay every two weeks.

FIRE OF FAITH REKINDLED

At the outbreak of the Civil War the Saints would come together and read the prophecy concerning it by the Prophet Joseph Smith, dated December 25, 1832. This remarkable prophecy seemed to rekindle the love they had once had, but which had now become cold in fulfillment of the Savior's words, "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." (Matthew 24:12.) At this time John W. Jones, editor of the Drich, a Welsh paper, in his editorial, made a special appeal to the Welsh people to volunteer their services in harmony with the call of President Lincoln, for three months' service to put down the Rebellion and prove that the prophecy of Joseph Smith was false, "For he has predicted that the war should terminate in the death and misery of many souls and that the South should call on other nations for help, even Great Britain, and after many days the slaves shall be disciplined for war. "Come," said the editor, "the picture by the false prophet is too dark. In three months we shall have peace."

But it took nearly five years to end that war so plainly foretold by the Prophet Joseph—even the very place where it should begin. This prophecy contains approximately three hundred words and there are about fourteen distinct predictions which had their fulfillment. This brought to the minds of the Saints the angel message to the Prophet and their pleasant experiences in the work before the evils of Brighamism arose.

With the breaking out of the war young Joseph Smith came to take his father's place. My parents were ready to receive him as the lawful successor to the Presidency, for after the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum, my parents, in Wales, had been taught that young Joseph would come and take his father's place. Well do I remember my father speaking of this, and he corresponded with Reese Price of near Council Bluffs, Iowa, about the Reorganized Church.

In April, 1865, my parents moved to Youngstown, Ohio, later to Brookfield, a short distance away. At this mining camp there were several families of Saints. They were like sheep wandering without a shepherd. Elder William Anderson, an elder in the Reorganized Church, came there. Later W. W. Blair arrived, but he stayed only one night. My father found fault with his short visit. Shortly after, Elder J. T. Phillips was sent there by W. W. Blair. He preached much at the firesides, and baptized a number of people. Father and mother gave their names, but prior to their baptism father inquired of Brother Phillips if he could promise the same blessings to them that they had enjoyed in the early days of the church in Wales. Brother Phillips said, "Yes."

At the confirmation meeting the Holy Spirit was enjoyed to a marked degree. Father spoke in tongues, and gave the interpretation. I was informed by mother that they had a Pentecostal shower of the Holy Spirit. In the countenances of my parents I could see true happiness, and in the home also there was a change.

My parents had not drifted into bad habits during the dark and cloudy day, although they had been cold and indifferent. They never attended religious services after our leaving the church in Wales. They said little to us children about religion. I remember one Sunday afternoon one of the neighbors called at our home and urged mother to go with her to hear some noted minister who had come from Wales. I was surprised to hear mother say she had been a member of that church from childhood and heard some of the leading ministers, but that she never had received the Holy Spirit, and that she had been years in the corner trying to console herself with the thought that soon that blessed and happy time, such as she enjoyed with the Saints in Wales, would come again. The good woman replied, "Come, Mrs. Lewis, you can have just as good with us." To this mother said, "No. No; you have nothing there that I can feast on." I thought mother was harsh and mistaken in her statements for I, boylike, was of the opinion that all sects and parties were right. Having said so much about my parents I shall now try to give some of my own experiences.

RELIGIOUS IMPRESSIONS OF MY BOYHOOD

I was born at Rhymney, near Dowlais-Top, in South Wales, November 23, 1847. When my parents moved from Scranton, Pennsylvania, 1863, to Ohio, I was very much disappointed. I was then in my sixteenth year, and I had some dear chums in Scranton. I attended the Baptist Sunday School and went to preaching services at the Congregational Church. I had good company. After reaching Ohio I could not find new friends to take the place of those I had left behind me. I became low spirited, and if I had had the means I would have gone back. I found fault with my parents for moving from such a pleasant, lively town as Scranton to Crab Creek, a little suburb of Youngstown.

I became so despondent it affected my health. We children had not been troubled with poor health, for while mother was not a strong woman her children were all healthy and fat. It was my heart that gave me trouble. I could not breathe as I should. I believe that it was worrying about my playmates and chums which brought this on. My brother, Joseph, two years younger than me, was enjoying the new company and conditions. My two sisters were also enjoying themselves.

The Children's Division

How Parents Can Help

In the Junior Stewardship Movement

By Fern Weedmark

Junior stewardship is planned for the use of all juniors as contrasted with adults in the membership of the church. Record keeping makes a splendid project for all young people in connection with consistent tithe paying. It is an especially good project for juniors in the church school. This series of articles is prepared by one of the supervisors of the children's division.

The Record Books are supplied through the Department of Religious Education for project use at ten cents each in quantities of three or more. Single copies fifteen cents each.

Parents should be interested in the junior stewardship movement. You especially should be interested because it affords your child definite training in Christian living. It is the specific purpose of junior stewardship to develop in your child a church consciousness, a feeling of responsibility, a knowledge of financial ideals, and habits of systematic, unselfish giving. We who are parents share with the church this opportunity of training youth with the object in mind of producing men and women who will be faithful, consecrated stewards.

How may parents help? First, by encouraging your boy or girl to become a junior steward. If the plan is being developed in your branch, encourage your child in the idea that it is truly an important opportunity for him to serve. Encourage the junior stewardship sponsor by helping your child keep his Record Book. Juniors need help in getting started in their record keeping and they will often need to be encouraged and reminded as the weeks pass. Faithful stewardship calls for faithful accounting. Help your child to be faithful and businesslike in his record keeping.

If the junior stewardship plan is not being used in your branch, or if you are an isolated member, your child can and should have the opportunity to practice stewardship. You may write to the Department of Religious Education, Independence, Missouri, in care of The Auditorium, for information and helps. For fifteen cents they will be glad to mail you one of the Junior Stewardship Record Books and with your help and guidance your child may become a busy, happy, junior steward.

Another very important way in which you may help, is by giving your child an allowance. It may be very small, but it should be regular. The junior must have money to handle if he is to keep a Record Book. When you find how nicely the plan works, you will be glad to give him in one special allowance at an expected time, the pennies, nickels and dimes that you give him at odd times for candy, offering, and other pleasures. The child who receives a definite amount of money at a definite time will soon learn that when it is gone there will be no more until the next allowance is due. He will plan his money, remembering his offering and tithing. One child we know receives ten cents each week, another twenty-five cents. Each one keeps a Junior Stewardship Record Book.

If we allow the child to handle no money, he has no way to learn its value. Wise expenditure can be learned only by anticipating one's needs and learning to exercise self-control in spending. A parent may specify certain types of purchases, as school supplies or "extras," which must come out of the allowance. But there should still be some opportunity for choice in making purchases, saving, paying the tithe, offering, etc. We must not rob our children of the chance to grow.

The church of Christ does not necessarily need to be bigger. It is big enough, big enough to lift this country off its feet and change it overnight. There are some who think it is too big, that we have sacrificed spiritual quality for statistical quantity. The church does not need to be bigger, but it needs to be better, nobler, more like the Master, witnessing with his kind of extraordinary life. And the glorious thing is that, when the church gets better it will get bigger; when the quality is improved the quantity will leap up by bounds, for the true Christian life has the same power which it possessed nineteen hundred years ago.

It is a sin to live "like ordinary men" when we have such an extraordinary Christ, and when genuine, extraordinary Christian life has such power for good and for God.—Frank B. Fagerburg, in The Sin of Being Ordinary

Worship Suggestions for July

The Church School

Prepared by Arthur Oakman and Elva T. Sturges

THEME FOR THE MONTH: "THE HOPE OF ZION."

FIRST SUNDAY, JULY 1

Theme: "What Say the Prophets?"

Instrumental Prelude: "We thank thee O God," S. H., 415; old S. H., 353.

Call to Worship: (Revelation 14: 6, 7.)

"... I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice,

The People Respond: (Revelation 14: 7.)

"... Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

(S) Hymn: "I saw a mighty angel fly," S. H., 412, verses 1, 3 and 5; old S. H., 161.

(S) Prayer: A petition that we might see the meaning of the gospel, ending with the Lord's Prayer.

Period of Meditation:

Leader: (Amos 3: 7.)

"Surely the Lord God will do nothing until he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets."

Let us meditate on what certain of the prophets have said about the days in which we live:

On the prophecy of Daniel which says at "the time of the end many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." (12: 4.)

On the prediction of Amos: "Behold, saith the Lord God, . . . I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord; and they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, and shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it." (8: 11, 12.)

On the words of Jesus: "There shall be wars and rumors of wars."

"Eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage."

"And because iniquity shall abound, the love of men shall wax cold."

"And again, this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." (Matthew 24: 22ff.)

Of the promise made through Nephi: "Blessed are they who seek to bring forth my Zion at that day, for they shall have the gift and power of the Holy Ghost." (1 Nephi 3: 187.)

And the Lord, through the latter-day prophet, Joseph Smith, challenges us: "Were it not for the transgressions of my people . . . they might have been redeemed even now." (Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2.)

(S) Hymn: "Let us shake off the coals," S. H., 188; old S. H., 377.

(S) Benediction.

SECOND SUNDAY, JULY 8

Theme: "Hope as the Fathers."

Instrumental Prelude: "Come to Zion," S. H.

Call to Worship: (Church History, volume 1, page 13.)

"Behold, I will reveal unto you the priesthood by the hand of Elijah the prophets before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. And he shall plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers;

(S) Hymn Response: "Father when in love," S. H., 151; old S. H., 135.

Scripture Reading: (Hebrews 11: 8-16, Inspired Version.)

Hymn: "Faith of our Fathers," S. H., 291, verses 1 and 2.

Talk:

The hope of Zion has been shared by countless people who have preceded us. From Adam down through Enoch until Noah—Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Elijah to John the Baptist, until now men have been awakened to their own best possibilities in this endeavor. Zion is the one hope which binds all history together, and makes life worth living. God made definite promises to these men long ago, and confirmed these promises by an oath, swearing by himself because there was no other greater. "As I live, even so will I come in the last days," he says to Enoch. (Genesis 7: 67.) All these promises find their fulfillment in the coming kingdom of God; the hope of Zion.

We are not alone in our task of building Zion, because the hearts of these men are still longing for the kingdom of God. Further than this, without our contribution they cannot be made perfect, because their longing remains unsatisfied. As we apply ourselves with increasing devotion to the building of Zion, so their hearts will be turned more and more toward us, and our love for them will grow as we appreciate the tasks for which they spent themselves. This is not an idle phantasy, it is the only real hope there is. God has moved to plant the promises he made to our fathers, into our hearts also. Our task is to cultivate the spirit of these promises so they will grow and fill our whole lives. Responding to these promises means working for Zion. It means filling our lives with the doing of good. It means ridding our lives of the small and petty loves which characterize most of us.

What hopes fill your life? Are they worthy of your best? Are they worth dying for? Do they bring you lasting happiness as you pursue them?

Commission: (Genesis 9: 21, 23.)

"... remember the everlasting covenant, which I made unto thy father Enoch; that, when men should keep all my commandments, Zion should come again upon the earth, the city of Enoch which I have caught up unto myself. . . ."

"And the general assembly of the church of the firstborn shall come down out of heaven, and possess the earth, and shall have place until the end come. . . ."

(S) Hymn: "Faith of our fathers," S. H., 291, verses 3 and 4.

THIRD SUNDAY, JULY 15

Theme: "Seek That Which Is Lost."

Instrumental Prelude: "We've a story to tell," S. H., 397.

Call to Worship: (Doctrine and Covenants 108: 1, and 2 Nephi 1: 73.)

"Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the Lord your God, and hear the word of the Lord concerning you; the Lord who shall suddenly come to his temple; the Lord who shall come down upon the world with a curse to judgment; yea, upon all the nations that forget God, and upon all the ungodly among you. For he shall make bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations, and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of their God.

"Wherefore, how great the importance to make these things known unto the inhabitants of the earth, that they may know there is no flesh can dwell in the presence of God, save it be through the merits, and mercy, and grace of the Holy Messiah."

(S) Hymn: "Yes, we trust the day is breaking," S. H., 395; old S. H., 211.

Scripture Reading: (Luke 15: 1-7.)

Hymn: "Christ for the world," S. H., 394, verses 1 and 2.

Talk:

It is wrong to suppose that the only people God has chosen or will choose, are in this church. It is equally erroneous to suppose that our membership is composed only of chosen people. There are some of us who may never be chosen, while thousands of others, now outside our communion, will be selected to share in the task of building. The task of seeking these potential Zion-builders, is one in which we all share equally. It is not only the work of the traveling ministry to convert people to Zion, it is our work also. Many of our most devoted and able churchmen were won through the personal evangelism of members of the church.

As a church we are not yet missionary-minded enough. This is because our own message does not mean to us what it should mean. Were we fully converted to the hope of Zion, each of us would be impelled to tell others of what God has done and will do for them. Surely we do not need to apologize for the gospel—neither do we need to keep still about it. The commandment is, “. . . and it cometh every man who hath been warned, to warn his neighbor.” (Doctrine and Covenants 85: 22.)

(S) Hymn: “Christ for the world,” S. H., 394, verses 3 and 4.

(S) Commission: (Doctrine and Covenants 16: 3.)

Beginning “. . . Remember the worth of souls is great in the sight of God. . . .” down to “. . . how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of my Father.”

(S) Prayer.

FOURTH SUNDAY, JULY 22

Theme: “Hasten to Obey.”

Instrumental Prelude: “O reapers of life’s harvest,” S. H., 387; old S. H., 98.

Call to Worship: (Doctrine and Covenants 76: 1.)

(S) Hymn Response: “The Lord Jehovah reigns,” S. H., 120; old S. H., 142.

Scriptural Meditation: (Doctrine and Covenants 56: 1; 49: 5; 4: 1a.)

“Hearken, O ye people who profess my name, saith the Lord your God, for, behold, mine anger is kindled against the rebellious, and they shall know mine arm and mine indignation in the day of visitation and of wrath upon the nations. And he that will not take up his cross and follow me, and keep my commandments, the same shall not be saved.”

“But before the great day of the Lord shall come, Jacob shall flourish in the wilderness; and the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose. Zion shall flourish upon the hills, and rejoice upon the mountains, and shall be assembled together unto the place which I have appointed. Behold, I say unto you, Go forth as I have commanded you; repent of all your sins; ask and ye shall receive; knock and it shall be opened unto you: behold, I will go before you, and and be your rearward; and I will be in your midst, and you shall not be confounded; behold, I am Jesus Christ, and I come quickly.”

“Therefore, O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind, and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day.”

Hymn: “Let us, brothers, let us gladly,” S. H., 287, verse 1.

Scriptural Meditation: (Doctrine and Covenants 45: 1.)

Hymn: “By his mercy, by his bounty,” S. H., 287, verse 2.

“Thus saith the Lord, I, the Lord, am merciful and gracious unto those who fear me, and delight to honor those who serve me in righteousness and in truth unto the end; great shall be their reward, and eternal shall be their glory; and to them will I reveal all mysteries; yea, all the hidden mysteries of my kingdom from days of old; and for ages to come will I make known unto them the good pleasure of my will concerning all things pertaining to my kingdom; yea, even the wonders of eternity shall they know, and things to come will I show them, even the things of many generations; their wisdom shall be great, and their understanding reach to heaven; and before them the wisdom of the wise shall perish, and the understanding of the prudent shall come to naught; for by my Spirit will I enlighten them, and by my power will I make known unto them the secrets of my will; yea, even those things which eye has not seen, nor ear heard, nor yet entered into the heart of men.”

“Continue in steadfastness and faith. Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called; and I will be with you by my Spirit and presence of power unto the end.”

(S) Hymn: “Gracious Lord, accept our service,” S. H., 287, verse 3.

(S) Commission: (Doctrine and Covenants 43: 7, 8.)

(S) Benediction.

FIFTH SUNDAY, JULY 29

Theme: “Pray for the Restitution of All Things.”

Instrumental Prelude: “Come ye yourselves apart,” S. H., 112.

Call to Worship: (Deuteronomy 4: 29, 30, 31, 37.)

“If thou shalt seek the Lord thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul. When thou are in tribulation, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the Lord thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice; he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers, which he sware unto them.

“Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the Lord he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath; there is none else.”

Response: (Deuteronomy 6: 4, 5.)

“Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord; And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.”

Scriptural Injunction: (Acts 3: 19-21.)

(S) Hymn: “Come, O thou King of kings!” S. H., 179; old S. H., 251, verses 1, 2, and 3.

Scriptural Meditation: (Revelation 21: 1-7.)

Period of Silent Meditation.

Prayer: (By any who may desire to pray) for the redemption of Zion, that each of us may find our place in that work, asking for forgiveness of our sins that we may be worthy to abide there.

Admonition: (Doctrine and Covenants 83: 16b, 17, beginning) “I, the Almighty, have laid my hands upon the nations to scourge them for the wickedness,” etc.)

(S) Hymn: “Lord may our hearts be tuned,” S. H., 45; old S. H., 69.

(S) Benediction: (Hebrews 13: 20, 21.)

FIRST SUNDAY, JULY 1

Sacrament Service

SECOND SUNDAY, JULY 8

Theme: “Faithful Stewards Over Our Temples.”

Prelude: “Jesus Calls Us,” S. H., 337, or “God’s Keeping,” (The 121st Psalm adapted and set to music.)*

Call to Worship: “Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits.” (Psalm 103: 2.)

Response: “The earth is the Lord’s, and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.” (Psalm 24: 1.)

Hymn: “For the Beauty of the Earth,” S. H., 18.

Prayer.

Scripture: Acts 17: 24-28, 1 Corinthians 6: 19-20, Philippians 4: 8.

Hymn: “I Would Be True,” S. H., 294.

Sermon Talk: See Sermonette, “Deciding to Become Stewards of Our Lives,” Stepping Stones, June 19, 1932. “Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?” (1 Corinthians 3: 16, 6: 19.) If we wish our bodies to be fit dwelling places for God’s Holy Spirit, we must keep them clean and pure. We can do better work if our bodies are strong and healthy. We can render a better service to God if our bodies are strong and our minds clear and alert. God has told us how to care for our bodies. (Doctrine and Covenants, Section 86.) We should also keep our minds pure by reading good books and thinking beautiful thoughts. (Philippians 4: 8.) We should learn to look for the beautiful things in this world. This will help us to keep our minds clean. See also "Defiling the Temple," by Evan A. Fry, The Saints' Herald, March 4, 1931.

Story: "Tempered Wind," Stepping Stones, September 6, 1931, or "Daniel and His Three Friends," Daniel, chapter 1, or "Theodore Roosevelt's Fight for Strength," page 106, Knights of Service, by Emerson O. Bradshaw.

Closing Hymn: "Take My Life," S. H., 307. (Selected verses.)

"And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel, and marrow to their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and faint not;" (Doctrine and Covenants 86: 3.)

Benediction.

THIRD SUNDAY, JULY 15

Theme: "Faithful Stewards Over Our Time and Talents."

Prelude: "Jesus Calls Us," S. H., 337.

Call to Worship: "Bless the Lord, O my Soul, and forget not all his benefits." (Psalm 103: 2.)

Response: "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." (Psalm 24: 1.)

Hymn: "Take My Life," S. H., 307, (first three verses).

Prayer.

Scripture: 1 Corinthians 4: 2, Romans 14: 12, Luke 16: 10.

Hymn: "Jesus Is Calling Today," Z. P., 111; S. H., 332.

Sermon Talk: Text: Romans 14: 12; also Doctrine and Covenants, 101: 2. A steward is one who takes care of something that belongs to someone else. (Tell about Eliezer, steward of Abraham's house. Genesis 15: 2, 24: 2.) A steward has to give an account or report to his master of the way he takes care of his master's property. We are stewards over our lives, our time and our talents. We should be faithful stewards and learn to use our time and talents in a way that will please our heavenly Father. If we do this, when we give an account or report of our stewardship, God will say to us, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." (Matthew 25: 21, 23.)

Closing Hymn: "I Would Be True," S. H., 294.

Benediction.

FOURTH SUNDAY, JULY 22

Theme: "Faithful Stewards Over Our Money."

Prelude: "Jesus Calls Us," S. H., 337.

Call to Worship: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." (Psalm 103: 2.)

Response: "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." (Psalm 24: 1.)

Hymn: "Blessed be the Name," Z. P., 113, or "Thy Holy Day Returning," S. H., 32.

Prayer.

Scripture: Haggai 2: 8, Mosiah 2: 32, Malachi 3: 10.

Hymn: "We Give Thee But Thine Own," S. H., 347, (first, second and last verse.)

Sermon Talk: Text: Doctrine and Covenants 106: 1. See Sermonette, "Tithing," Stepping Stones, June 12, 1932. See also Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5. A tithe (one tenth) of all we possess is the Lord's. (Leviticus 27: 30.) Abraham paid his tithing. (Genesis 14: 20.) Jacob made a promise to pay his tithing. (Genesis 28: 22.) Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery covenanted to pay their tithing. (Church History, volume 1, page 529.) Explain tithing by using ten objects, such as apples or pennies.

Story: "Try Me Now," Stepping Stones, October 15, 1933, or "Slow to Give; Eager to Receive," Stepping Stones, July 12, 1931, or "Stewardship Garden," Stepping Stones, May 4, 1930.

Special musical number by a junior boy or girl.

Story: "Systematics," Stepping Stones, August 23, 1931, or "Perry Makes His Decision," Zion's Hope, June 12, 1932.

Closing Hymn: "Take My Life," S. H., 307, (first and fourth verses).

Benediction.

FIFTH SUNDAY, JULY 29

Theme: "Stewards in Action."

Prelude: "I Would Be True," S. H., 294.

Call to Worship: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." (Psalm 103: 2.)

Response: "The heavens declare the glory of God; the earth is full of the goodness of the Lord." (Psalms 19: 1a, 33: 5b.)

Hymn: "For the Beauty of the Earth," S. H., 18.

Prayer.

Scripture: Matthew 25: 20-23.

Hymn: "I Would Be True," S. H., 294.

Sermon Talk: The last three Sundays we heard stories about faithful stewards. We have learned that we are stewards over our bodies, our time, our talents and our money. Those of you who have been baptized have taken the first steps to be faithful stewards. Let each one of us do our best to use our time and talents in a way that will please our heavenly Father. Then let us pay our tithing. The church has provided an account book for boys and girls to keep account of their money. Show and explain Junior Stewardship Record Book.

Story: "Oriole's Keep the Law," Stepping Stones, November 12, 1933, or Dramatization: "The Talents." (See the text in other columns of this issue.)

Special musical number by junior boy or girl.

Dramatization: "The Parable of the Talents." (Matthew 25: 14-29. This may be written by the boys and girls, using their own language, or they may use the dramatization given in "Bible Plays and How to Produce Them," by Mary Ellen Whitney or a practical application of "The Parable of the Talents," found in Pilgrim Elementary Teacher, February, 1932.)

Closing Hymn: "Take My Life," S. H., 307, (first four verses).

Benediction: First verse of "We Give Thee But Thine Own," S. H., 347.

** Note: "Junior Stewards of the Bible," by Helen Kingsbury Wallace (75c) contains stories about boys and girls of the Bible.

"Stewardship Stories," by Guy L. Morrill, (50c) contains materials which may be used for sermon talks and stories for the older boys and girls.

The Talents

A Dramatization for Juniors

By Fern Weedmark

Characters: The father, a missionary. His three children, Robert, age 14; Paul, age 12; Doris, age 10. Ted, a friend and playmate of the children.

SCENE I

Paul. I wish father didn't have to go away on a mission again. Seems as if he has been home about a week.

Robert. It really has been three months though, Paul. It's been great to have him home. I shall remember our nice talks and good times together for a long time.

Ted. Why does your father need to go away so soon again? Can't he find a job here?

Paul. He doesn't want a job here! He says he is working for God, and he is willing to go wherever God's church asks him to go.

Ted. Well, I bet if the church asked my father to go away across the ocean to stay for two whole years away from us, he would say, "No, I won't go."

Robert. Father says a good steward goes wherever God calls, and is happy that God trusts him with something so precious as the Gospel.

Doris. And father has asked us to be good stewards while he is away, too. I think it is going to be fun, being a steward over my talent!

Ted. What is she talking about? Stewards—talents—sounds like Greek to me!

Robert. Well, a steward is one who takes care of something precious that belongs to someone else. Father says our lives are really just loaned to us for a short while and our job as stewards is to see how useful we can make them. God gives us all talents so we can make them useful. Now my father believes that I have a talent for public speaking because I like to debate and make talks.

Ted. Oh, I see. Then each of you have a talent?

Paul. Oh, sure, my talent is music. I am going to be a great violinist when I grow up. 9

Doris. And I'm going to learn to play the piano, and some day I'll play beautiful music at General Conferences.

Paul. Whew! That's a large ambition, Doris!

Ted. When does all this being stewards begin?

Paul. You tell him, Bob, you're a good explainer.

Robert. Well, you know father is leaving next week for his mission. He says that God has given each one of us a talent and he plans to give us the opportunity to develop them. He has paid my tuition for one year in a public speaking class at the Y. M. C. A. Ted is to take violin lessons for one year and Doris is to take piano lessons for a year. This has meant a real sacrifice for father, too, because missionaries never have just a lot of money.

Ted. But I thought your father was to be away two years. How come he is just planning for you for one year?

Paul. He will be away two years, but one year is all he can afford to take care of right now.

Robert. Father says he wants us to do the very best we can with our talents for one year and if we are faithful stewards he knows God will provide the way for us to continue our studies. We are not to report a thing to him until he returns again.

Doris. And we are going to be faithful stewards. Just wait and see!

SCENE II

(Two years later. The family is gathering together in the living room, ready for the first real visit in two whole years!)

Father. My, it's nice to be home! And the very first thing I want to know about is "what kind of stewards have my trio made?" What has happened to your talent, Robert? Something interesting I know.

Robert. Oh, it's been great fun. The class at the Y. M. was the finest ever. When it was almost over I began to feel pretty sorry about it and wondered what I could do next. You know a fellow can't learn all he wants to in a year. Then I found out that a night class was starting up at high school and all it cost to enroll was one dollar. Well, I got the dollar by the sweat of my honest brow and joined. It has been fine. I have had a lot of practice helping out at church in Young People's meeting and I'm glad I could help. Now I have a secret ambition, but I may as well wish for the moon.

Father. I'm proud of you, son. I knew God would provide a way for you to go on if you meant business. I wonder—if there is a member of this family who would like to attend the Young People's summer camp at Colesville?

Robert. Oh, father! Do you mean it? How did you know? I can earn a lot of the expense money myself. Maybe I can get on the Young People's debate team. You know the try-outs are to be there.

Father. I thought I knew something about "secret ambitions."

Doris. Oh, please let me be next! I can't wait any longer. Did you hear about me?

Father. I'm completely in the dark. Tell me about it.

Doris. I am substitute pianist at the young people's service on Sunday evening. What do you think of that?

Father. Well, I think that is pretty fine. Now please tell me how you came to have such a big job.

Doris. Well, I learned to play several hymns and when it comes my turn to play they will let me choose the songs, and, of course, I will choose the ones I know.

Father. You surely didn't allow your talent to grow rusty, to learn to play so well in one year!

Doris. Oh, but I didn't learn in one year. You see, Mrs. Allen and I are very good friends and I told her all about our talents. She thought it was a lovely plan and was specially interested about stewards. When my year was most gone she told me that she was looking for someone to take care of her little girl on Saturday afternoons while she attended to her shopping, and if I wanted the job I could take a lesson a week in exchange for my work. So I'm still taking lessons, lucky me!

Father. Plucky you, I would say. Another faithful steward. I see you are using one of the church songbooks to practice from. I wonder how a nice leather "New Hymnal" with the name Doris Powell in gold across the cover would look on our piano?

Doris. Oh, that is just what I have been wanting! A hymnal all my own. I can carry it to church to play out of, too.

Father. Now, let's hear from our other steward. How are you and the violin getting along, Paul?

Paul. (Hesitatingly.) Father, I did take a lot of lessons, and got along pretty good, too. But really that old violin is pretty much of a wreck.

Father. I played on it a good many years. It is better than no violin at all.

Paul. Well, anyway, my lessons were about out and I knew you couldn't afford to give me any more, so I thought I'd just better quit.

Father. (Sadly.) I'm sorry Paul. I was so sure that you really did want to become a fine violinist that I made arrangements with an old friend of mine in England to buy his very rare old violin at a very reasonable price. He said I might pay for it in small payments. Of course, I may as well write to him now and tell him not to bother even packing it.

Paul. Oh, father, I'm sorry! I didn't really intend to be such a poor steward. Please don't write yet; give me until time for you to leave again to show you that I do want to make good. I will take that paper route Mr. Wells has wanted me to take and I will pay for violin lessons myself. I know I have been selfish and unfaithful, but I can and will make good on my old violin.

Father. Well, son, it will mean a lot of hard work, determination and faithfulness. You've lost a lot of time, but I believe you can do it if you will. Yes, I'll wait, and we shall all be happy if you, too, can make good in your stewardship.

On the fifth day of July, 1865, an explosion occurred in the Welsh Company Coal Mines at Scranton which killed nine and crippled two for life. When the men were going in to work with their horses and mules some of them wandered into some old, gas-filled mines where they had no business to go. The horses and mules were killed, together with the drivers. It dawned upon my mind then that in place of finding fault with my parents and being so unpleasant, I had reason to be thankful that they moved from Scranton when they did. The two boys who had taken my horses, and my brother's, were among those killed. After this my condition improved, but still I had bad palpitation of the heart.

We moved again; this time to Mineral Ridge some thirteen miles away. I went to Sunday school, and I got mother to buy me a Bible, the first English Bible we had. I had not been able to work for some months, and several doctors had tried to help me, but none did me any good. One day while reading the fifth chapter of James I stumbled onto this: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick." When I read this I had what I can truly say was faith, and I had always thought that if I could have the privilege of calling upon the elders I would be healed. But I was of the impression that the elders referred to were the various ministers. I made up my mind to go to the minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church where I attended Sunday school and ask him to pray and anoint me with oil. I informed mother what I had read and what I intended to do. "Well, well," she said, "my dear boy, if you do go to one of the ministers of the various churches they will do nothing for you, for they do not believe in that promise, and besides they are not the elders referred to." At this I was very much disappointed, for I had implicit, childlike faith in the promise. I have often wished that I had called on the minister or others and heard for myself what the answer would be. I have no doubt but it would have been as mother said. When I think of the impression the passage had on my mind and read of the many cases of sickness that have been healed in the world, I can understand that it is because of the exceeding faith they have in the promises of the Lord and because their faith is not tinctured with the spirit of unbelief that is in the minds of some who claim to be ministers. I was young then and not acquainted with the various creeds. I supposed that all believed in the Bible as it read, and I was saddened by the discovery that they did not.

devil, and also a warning of the danger of arousing these forces, whether diabolic or of earth. Great emphasis is placed also on the necessity that the neophyte must be clean in body and heart and mind. He must be pure in heart and have kept from the contamination of the world, and only such a one is safe. He must be one who is unselfish, for one who is covetous is bound for destruction. Criticism is made of Christianity on the ground that it proposes to save sinners, while the ancient mysteries are only for the adept, the one who is clean and holy. No sinner could enter therein according to their teachings.

The adept also was of necessity studious and the claim is made that only those who will study persistently can ever become adept, but because there are some who are not clean and not pure in heart the divine knowledge must be kept from them, lest they use it for their own destruction and that of humanity. This is stated to be the reason for secrecy.

It seems more worth while to find that the Rosicrucians published a declaration in the 17th century that the world was on the eve of a great enlightenment and that much truth concerning science and nature was about to be disclosed; that there was to be a spiritual revival. The Theosophist claims the same, that we are entering now a higher race in the return to God and that more persons are now being born who possess high mystic powers.

"Love Is Best"

Our time on the planet is short. By some mystery, from some eternity, we are thrust on this little swinging ball called "earth" and there bidden to try the adventure called "life." In various tasks men may spell out their little tale of days. They may build ugly and expensive cities—but cities moulder and become an antheap. They may make themselves a name—but earth's names are written in sand: the ocean of time rolls up and washes them away. They may write books—but books grow yellow with the years, and the last book-worms are worms in very fact. They may lead armies—but stern silence falls at length upon the shrieks, bleeding, and rotten death of war; and to that silence men of war must give account. They may make comfort and shelter for their fellows—a lamp to light the home, a table spread, a strong roof-tree overhead, a smoother pillow in the time of sickness. In sundry callings men may fill the allotted hand's-breadth of years; but on all man's work falls the curtain of death and it is seen no more. The work of man abides and fructifies only when it is done in love. So history seems to show; so our faith teaches. So Brown-ing sings in "Love Among the Ruins":

Oh heart! oh blood that freezes, blood that burns!

Earth's returns

For whole centuries of folly, noise and sin!

Shut them in,

With their triumphs and their glories and the rest!

Love is best.

In all the tasks of earth, love is best. There was a Man who forsook the making of tables, doors, and oxen-yokes that He might tell mankind of God. Tables, doors, and oxen-yokes—what do they matter now along side His telling of God? Now the whole world says of Him,

"Thou spread'st a Table in my sight. Now the whole world hears Him say, "Take my yoke upon you," and knows that yoke is life. Now the whole world listens as he says, "I am the door," and looking through Him, sees—God! Was He useless? He "came preaching"!—George A. Buttrick, in Jesus Came Preaching.

The Readers Say---

We Are Living in the Present

While we admire, and that properly, too, the splendid progress of the church from 1830, the time of its organization, until 1844, when its first president and prophet was assassinated, I sometimes wonder if we as a church appreciate as we should the great sacrifice and work of its second president, Joseph Smith, who guarded so wisely the interests of the church from 1860 to 1914. And while admiring the work and splendid accomplishment of the church during almost three quarters of a century under the leadership of its two first presidents, I wonder if we as a people appreciate as we should the splendid work and leadership of our present leader, President Frederick M. Smith, of Kansas City, Missouri.

Think, if you please, of the splendid fellowship of the late General Conference and the voluminous and inspirational address of its President, outlining, as it did, the work of the church as at present constituted. Where is the Herald containing that address now? Is it in the attic or loaned to a neighbor never to be returned? Or is it carefully put in a good place for safekeeping where it may be read and re-read, and its contents strictly adhered to by both the priesthood and membership of this, the true church of Jesus Christ.

Brothers and sisters in Christ, let me admonish you in the name of the Master that while we need to look at the church work in the recent past, and anciently, too, as to that, but truly, our special duty is to consider well the present needs of the church. Please remember that we are not living the past but in the present.

Receives Spiritual Help

I feel that I owe much to my heavenly Father for the many blessings he has given me. The Herald has helped me greatly, and I wish to tell in my simple way, of one instance in which the paper has benefited me.

Brother Lacey has been holding meetings at my home. My friends and neighbors told me that they would not come to hear the sermons anymore, so I had almost decided to tell him that it was of no use to continue.

Just before his arrival, however, the Herald came, and it gave me a great uplift. When he came, I told him that we had done our part, and that was all we could do. I very much enjoyed his preaching. It gave me more hope and strength to go on till the end.

Preparing for Central Michigan Reunion

Gospel work in this part of Michigan is going forward with new zeal and consecration. General good will and a desire to work together towards the great objectives of the church are expressed everywhere we go.

Central Michigan is to hold a reunion this year at Eden-ville, on a beautiful river just below the big dam and lake. Mr. Wixom, a wealthy, retired showman, is spending his money and time helping various churches. He offers, free of charge, his new auditorium and dining hall, dishes, stoves, grounds, ball diamonds, and playgrounds to the Saints. He allows no dancing on his grounds nor gambling of any name or nature. This beautiful evergreen and birch grove is surpassed by none.

Everyone is invited to come and enjoy ten days with the crowd of young people of this district. Board is free. All branches are preparing gardens and bringing enough to feed themselves and visitors. They are an alert and active band of Saints. Twenty-one branches and six missions are in Central Michigan district, and the crowds will not be small. Come praying and give the Lord a chance to bless his people. This latter-day work is the greatest thing on earth, and worthy of our efforts, service, humility, and best love.

HUBERT CASE.

Visits Groups in Far West Stake

Since the first of the year, we have visited Guilford, Ross Grove, Fortescue, Stewartville, Richmond, Far West, Cameron and the several groups and churches in Saint Joseph.

Mrs. Bear and I are happy to say we have found many noble and devoted Saints in all of the groups and branches, anxiously awaiting the clarion call to commence to put into practice the zionistic regime from the corner where they are. We also found men and women in every walk of life: the farmer, the banker, the business man, the architect, the engineer, the electrician, the educator, the laborer, the preacher, the musician and the artist.

What more could we ask than that which God has given us to start to build Zion?

SAINT JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

L. J. BEAR.

Let Us Praise God

Let us never cease to praise the Lord. The Scriptures admonish us to praise and thank him always for his wonderful works among the children of men. Let us look beyond man and man-made things to Jesus our risen Lord and the Son of God.

We must remember that our God is a jealous God; he does not want the enemy to be given the praise which is due the divine.

Praise quitters—that is what some of us are. The name came to me in the dark hours of night with a spiritual experience which reminded me that some of His true children are forgetting to praise him. This condition is due to the coming into the fold of wolves in sheep's clothing. It is possible that the very elect may be deceived by these wolves who take away our faith and courage, make us indifferent, and cause us by our very attitudes to offend the Lord who made us.

If we learn to do good for evil, we are not so easily reached by those who would deceive and lead us away from our Savior. As Christian men and women we are to pray for those who offend us and for those who do not know God; we should be kindly, considerate, wise, and true. Let us praise God always for his glorious goodness and his love, and thank him for the gifts he has given us. If we do these things, He will raise us up in time to the likeness of his own dear Son.

G. B. MOORE.

OMAHA, NEBRASKA.

Sister Fay Morris, of Harlingen, Texas, wishes to know if there are any Saints living in the Rio Grande Valley. She hopes they will communicate with her, and that it may be possible to arrange to hold some meetings. Address Sister Morris at 322 West Buchanan Street, Harlingen, Texas.

QUESTION TIME

Note: All inquiries requiring speedy or individual answers should be accompanied by a three-cent stamp, or an envelope stamped and addressed.

A. B. PHILLIPS

Explain the line "between Jew and Gentile", mentioned in Doctrine and Covenants.

The term Jew probably refers to the Indians, whom the Book of Mormon states are descendants of the Jews, which term came to be applied to all of the tribes of Israel, though confined to Judah in the earliest periods. The line running between Jew and Gentile, as mentioned in Doctrine and Covenants 57: 1, was the line of the Indian lands located west of the Missouri River near where Kansas City now stands.

What is the difference between being called of God and recommended to God?

The questioner appears to refer to the language used in Acts 14: 26; 15: 40, which states that the brethren "recommended" certain disciples to the grace of God. To be called of God is to be notified by divine direction that one is desired for a certain work or some designated purpose. To be recommended to God would imply that the person referred to has the confidence of those who recommend him. Some of the recent versions use the word Commended, thus showing that the disciples referred to were commended by the brethren, evidently by the commendable conduct of their lives and their devoted service. The former text says:

"And thence (they) sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled."—Acts 14: 26.

Was the Lord's "bow" placed in the sky the same as our rainbow?

There is nothing known with assurance as to what the bow was which was to be placed in the cloud, unless it was the rainbow. This is the common explanation of the passage, suggested no doubt from the fact that the rainbow is a logical phenomenon of rain, clouds, and sunshine under certain circumstances, and is familiar to us as such. Whether or not it occurred prior to the flood is not certain, though it would naturally do so unless meteorological conditions were different before the flood. Some have thus assumed from the fact that in the beginning, the record tells us:

"There went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground."—Genesis 2: 6.

Those holding that conditions have since changed suppose that moisture had been distributed as a mist, but that with the cooling of certain portions of the earth the changed atmospheric conditions produced a precipitation somewhat differently, thus producing the bow in the cloud. Of course no proof of this seems possible.

Who were the Gentiles of the days of Peter and Paul?

Two Greek terms are used in the New Testament as the sources of the word Gentile. In a few places, such as John 7: 35, Romans 2: 9, 10, and 1 Corinthians 12: 13, it refers to the Greeks, and the same Greek term is so translated in John 12: 20, Acts 14: 1; 19: 10; 20: 21, and various other places. In fact, recent versions have rendered all of these texts by the term Greeks, as evidently should be the case.

Another Greek term is used more frequently for the word Gentiles, of which are Matthew 12: 21, Luke 2: 32; 21: 24, and many other texts. This term is ethnos, and is rendered nation, people, race, or tribe, usually by implication referring to non-Jewish tribes or nations, etc.

Do we still owe a debt that is outlawed?

The fact that a debt becomes outlawed under the laws of certain jurisdictions does not in any way affect the question of owing it, though it affects the power of the creditor to collect it. The law does not attempt to say that the debt is no longer due the creditor, but simply places a time limit within which it may be collected by legal procedure. This is done for the reason, among others, that statutes of limitation are deemed advisable to give relief from prosecution and the incumbrances on property that otherwise might handicap the debtor in his efforts to obtain funds with which to meet his obligations after a long period of effort has not resulted in an adjustment of his affairs in this respect. It gives him a "breathing spell" in which to try again without these legal handicaps.

Musical Career for Paul Deaver Seen by Noted Critic

Tribute to Webb City Boy's Talent

A short time ago the Joplin Globe printed an interesting story of a tribute given fourteen-year-old Paul Deaver, of Webb City, Missouri, by a noted New York critic. The boy is the son of Brother and Sister A. N. Deaver, who expect to do everything within their power to see that Paul is enabled to pursue his musical career. Paul is a brother of Neal Deaver, the new business manager of Graceland College.

Here is the story:

"Paul Deaver, 14-year-old Webb City high school freshman, has possibilities of becoming 'one of America's great pianists,' in the opinion of Duncan McKenzie of New York city, educational director of Carl Fischer, Inc., music publishers.

"McKenzie paid such a tribute to the boy's talent after seeing and hearing him play in the eighteenth annual southwest Missouri music contest at the State Teachers College in Springfield, April 2.

"Paul, youngest entry in the contest and with limited training, competed against older juniors and seniors and won first honors. McKenzie, who judged the contest, unhesitatingly awarded the Webb City boy first place. He was so impressed with the boy's ability that upon his return to New York he wrote a letter to Paul's music teacher, Miss Hil-dred H. Currey, of Webb City, in which he said:

"Though he is intensely musical and an artist to the finger tips, a great deal of credit is due to you for the manner you have taught him to use his hands, as well as his ears, his intelligence and his imagination.

"The way he used his hands at the contest was a picture, even if he had not produced the results he did. His tone was lovely and his playing was equal to that of a mature artist."

"McKenzie suggested that someone should take an interest in the boy's training so that later he might be sent to New York to compete in a contest for a Juilliard Foundation scholarship.

"Your community ought to be proud of such a boy," he wrote. "I think he will make a name for himself."

"Paul's accomplishments at the piano have been achieved in only two years of study, and only six months under a professional music teacher.

"With an apparent 'natural ear' for music, Paul began to play the piano at home two years ago, coached only by his sister, Miss Beatrice Deaver. Although not a professional teacher, the sister had studied music, and she taught her younger brother for a year and a half before he began to take lessons six months ago from Miss Currey.

"His trip to Springfield was his first time to compete in a contest. It amounts to a state-wide contest, because talent from throughout the state competes there each year.

"Unawed by the 'stiff' competition, the diminutive Paul calmly took his place at the piano, played his number and walked off-stage with the honors."

Grand Junction, Colorado

Active Program Fosters Growth

In addition to regular preaching services, a Sunday school is held. This group of Saints is progressing rapidly. Meetings are held once a week for singing practices, and the entire group seems to enjoy their work.

Meetings in a hall now provide more room than when held in a private home. Much progress is expected.

A visit from District President William B. Farley, of Durango, is anxiously being awaited. Plans are being made for attending the district conference, to be held at Durango about midsummer.

Four children were baptized on June 3, Elder E. H. Perkins, officiating. They were confirmed during the morning sacrament service, under the hands of Elder M. L. Schmid. Those making their covenant with the church were William Perkins, son of E. H. Perkins, Violet and Harvey Sell, children of Jacob Sell, and Bearford Sparks, son of Sister Neva Sparks.

All of the young people are taking active interest in their class work, in addition to other activities.

Anyone planning to take a vacation trip near here is cordially invited to attend services with this congregation. Write E. H. Perkins, Box 292, Grand Junction, Colorado.

Los Angeles, California

East Los Angeles Church

Rex Clayton and Romanus Leneve, two young members of East Side church were ordained to the office of deacon, Sunday April 8. The entire eleven o'clock hour was devoted to the ordination service. The following Sunday morning was given to the blessing of little children.

Elder V. L. Lum was the speaker for both morning and evening services on Mother's Day. He delivered instructive and interesting sermons.

During the past three months this congregation has grown. Several fine adult classes have been organized, which are well attended. One is especially outstanding in its aim and purpose. It is called the "Missionary Class." These Saints feel fortunate to have at least six adults who are nonmembers but are interested in and investigating our claim as Latter Day Saints. The "Missionary Class" was organized to take care of the needs of this group. They have an able teacher in Sister James Farley. One of the slogans of the adult department at the beginning of the year was "Every Adult a Student," and from the number of classes and the interest manifested, they feel that their aim is being accomplished.

Thursday Club meetings are well attended. Nearly every woman in the group is there to work all day. Besides quilting and sewing, a "story-telling" class is conducted, under the supervision of Sister Nell Sutherland. May 26, the women sponsored a "Word of Wisdom dinner" with Doctor A. W. Teel, as

President F. M. Smith to Philadelphia

President Frederick M. Smith left Kansas City, June 6, bound for Philadelphia, by way of Saint Louis, to care for matters of church business. He expects to return the middle of the month.

Central Chicago's Sunday Evening Club Holds Spotlight

Apostle J. F. Garver spoke at the first anniversary of the Central Chicago Sunday Evening Club, February 19. This club continues to hold the spotlight in local activities, and its weekly innovations maintain high interest in and bring out good attendance to the Sunday evening service.

Recently the club has had as its guests the choirs of Saint Matthews Episcopal Church, and the Church of the Cross, also a women's chorus of the Parent Teacher Association. Among the speakers it has brought were the pastors of Saint Matthews Episcopal Church and Thoburn Methodist Episcopal Church, Doctor Daniel P. McMillan, of the Chicago Board of Education, and Doctor Campbell of the University of Chicago.

Qualify

We must qualify for discipleship with Jesus Christ.—J. A. Gillen.

Asks Our Prayers

Sister Belva P. Eyler, of Bartlett, Iowa, still has her broken leg in a cast. It will be there four more weeks, and if when the cast is removed, the bone has united, all will be well; if not, there must be a bone graft. She seeks the prayers and faith of all.

Contagious Religion

One night some years ago the Health Officer of Philadelphia discovered a serious case of smallpox in North Philadelphia. Before midnight, ten thousand citizens in that part of the city had been routed out of their beds and vaccinated. Why? For the very good reason there was something in their section of the city which was frightfully contagious! But there are churches which you know and I know where the only thing any human being is in danger of catching is cold from the glacial fridity of the religion they keep in refrigeration!—Church Management.

guest speaker. Plans are being made to organize a "Word of Wisdom" club.

A Church History play is presented each month at the seven o'clock hour, by the adult department.

Last month, the adult group had a "Snipper Snapper" party. Every one came dressed in a snappy costume. Much fun and merriment were enjoyed.

The young people's council met at East Los Angeles, April 21. Nearly all branches in the district were represented. Saturday evening, a workers' banquet was held, and Sunday morning they enjoyed an inspiring prayer service.

A box supper was held April 27, by the young people for the purpose of raising money for pulpit chairs. This same group presented three comedies May 17, which were very successful.

The Ruckabers entertained the young people at their ranch at Altadena, on the night of May 19, with a wiener bake.

Sunday morning, April 28, eight young people were presented honor pins as rewards for outstanding achievements and punctuality in the church school.

The children's department gave a fine program, "Zion Builders We Would Be" on Children's Day.

Mikado, Michigan

All-day Meeting—Renewed Priesthood Activities—Zion's Christian Legion Organized

At the recent election of officers, Elder Richard Steward was chosen pastor to succeed Elder M. J. McGuire, who with his wife is planning to give his full time to traveling and doing missionary work where they feel they can accomplish the most good.

Sunday, May 20, proved to be an enjoyable day, as this branch assembled in an all-day meeting. A group of Saints from Alpena were present, and they are to be commended for the active part they took in helping to make the day successful. Some were made doubly glad at being privileged to meet with those with whom they had gone to school eighteen and twenty years ago.

The ten o'clock hour was occupied with prayer and testimony. The Spirit of the Master was present. Elder McGuire preached at eleven o'clock. Dinner was served at noon, and immediately following, a short time was spent visiting.

At two o'clock, Elder William Martin, of Alpena, gave a discourse on why this gospel is not more readily accepted.

Cottage prayer services, which have been held for some time, have been well attended, and a closer unity is being brought about. The last service was held at the home of Brother and Sister Moore. Sister Moore has been an arthritis invalid for six years, and is seldom able to leave her room. She desires the prayers of all Saints that she may yet be able to walk and meet with God's people.

Sister LaFleur is still bedridden and Grandma Proconior is in very poor health.

Brother Harry Runkle and Sister Engle met with this congregation May 13, and organized a Zion's Christian Legion. A large number of Saints are signing both membership and tithing cards, which in most cases, will mean considerable sacrifice, as there are few wage earners in this community.

Members of this branch are especially glad to see the renewed effort with which the local priesthood are endeavoring to work.

A number of local Saints were able to attend the lecture at Tawas City, given by President F. M. McDowell.

Dahinda, Illinois

Enjoy Improved Spiritual Condition

Saints of Dahinda are happy to know that Elder E. R. Davis will soon be back in his mission field. They have been much concerned about him, and have often remembered him in their prayers. They are also happy to welcome the new missionary, Elder R. E. Davey. Their prayers and best wishes go with missionary L. G. Holloway to his new mission field.

Dahinda Branch is in a much better spiritual condition than ever before, and the Saints are thankful for the unity that prevails.

Visits from the following men have been greatly appreciated, Elders Edward Jones, of Kewanee, Illinois, John Stiegel, of Moline, Illinois, and E. R. Davis, district president, Elder F. C. Bevan, who visits Galesburg congregation each third Sunday, is invited to attend services at Dahinda.

Mother's Day was fittingly observed by this branch on the evening of May 13, with a beautiful program. Several outside friends of the young people helped to make the service successful.

On the morning of May 4, Brother J. H. Lorance, a teacher of the branch, was found dead in his bed. He had been a faithful member of the church for many years. He leaves his daughter, Sister Stella Dawson.

Branch President Ambrose King, of Victoria, with his family, attend services regularly, which shows a good spirit, as they live several miles away.

The young people are a zealous, spiritual, and devoted little band. It is to be regretted that they are not where they can be of more benefit to the church in general, but they are building a foundation for work in the future.

Theda West and Virginia Dawson have returned from Graceland College for their summer vacation.

Sister Eunice Snow, and son, Clifton, have been recently attending services here each Sunday. Their home is in Maquon, Illinois.

A number of this congregation are sick, and desire the prayers of the Saints. Sister Loraine Snow, Jean Dawson, Mrs. Alta Shout, and Mrs. Lucile Haxton.

Kennett, Missouri

Three Organized Groups Working in This Community

Leon Wiggins, newly-elected president of the Z. O. G. club, is carrying on the work, and under his leadership, the club is functioning as it has never done before. Each Saturday night, an interesting program is given. A short lesson is taught from the Doctrine and Covenants by Elder H. H. Wiggins, and the young people seem to enjoy the talks given on "Sociology" by C. E. Larche.

There are three organized groups of Saints near Kennett, two of which were recently organized by Brother W. E. Haden. The three groups are active, and each has its young people's organization.

Brother Leon Wiggins invited the other two groups of young people to a special entertainment his club gave as a result of the losing side in a Bible baseball game. A good time was enjoyed.

An interesting Children's Day program was given, June 10, to an appreciative congregation.

The Central group is proud that Sister Zuber is living among them. She is a talented musician, and all consider her an outstanding addition to the church.

Brother and Sister Ross, from Far West Stake, have rented rooms at Kennett. They plan to buy some of this fertile land and build their home.

The sermons of Elders Walter Christensen and Hayden, recent visitors, were greatly appreciated by this congregation.

Jonesport, Maine

Enjoy Renewed Vigor and Enthusiasm

With the coming of spring, Jonesport Saints showed renewed enthusiasm and vigor. Church attendance at all services is increasing and a more cordial fellowship is shown in the social activities.

Josiah Alley, Sunday school superintendent, recently organized a class for nonmembers for the purpose of having the fundamentals of the gospel once more presented to them in the most effective way. Brother Newman Wilson is conducting the class each Sunday morning.

At the morning service on Mother's Day, Brother Wilson gave an inspiring talk on the "Debt to Motherhood," which was preceded by appropriate music furnished by the young people's choir, under the leadership of Sister E. Davis.

Miss Gertrude Foss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellery Foss, and Marshal Kelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kelly, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, May 10. Brother Wilson performed the ceremony. The young couple are active in church work and they have the best wishes of the Saints of this congregation.

Elder Wilson has, of late, opened up a new field of activity. Each Thursday he preaches an old-time gospel sermon at the home of Sister Mabel Wass, in Machias. The home is filled with eager listeners. This is the first time Latter Day Saint sermons have been preached in this town. Marked interest is shown and a baptismal service is expected during the summer months.

Plans are well under way for the young people's convention, to be held June 23 and 24. Cordial invitations are extended to all young people of Western Maine. Come prepared to reconsecrate your life to God and his church.

This congregation was glad to welcome back into their midst one of the young people, William R. Wilson, who has just completed his three years' course of study at Graceland College.

Eagle City, Oklahoma

Members Gather to Enjoy Rally Day

Eagle City Branch enjoyed a week-end service culminating in a rally day, May 27. District President Z. Z. Renfroe, and family, of Davidson, arrived Friday. Elder B. A. Howard, wife and daughters, of Erick, Elder Lemuel Dyke and family, of Minco, came Saturday. Elder and Mrs. Matthew Crownover, of Hydro, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reed, and family, of Weatherford, and others arrived Sunday morning. Elder J. R. Dyke was also present. The Canton group attended all services.

The Sunday program was: Bible school, 10 a. m.; preaching, 11; basket dinner, noon; ordination services, 2:30 p. m., at which time Frank Anderson was ordained an elder and Tom Allenger was ordained a priest. Both are members of Canton group. Seven elders were present at this service, and Z. Z. Renfroe presided. The charge to the candidates for ordination was given by Brother Renfroe. The ordination was by B. A. Howard and Lemuel Dyke. Branch President Lester Dyke gave the charge to the branches, followed by an appeal for prayers in behalf of the officers and branch by Brother Renfroe. Elder Frank Anderson was then appointed counselor to Brother Lester Dyke.

Elder Z. Z. Renfroe was the speaker Sunday evening, closing a successful and spiritual gathering.

Elder O. W. Okerlind at Gainsborough

Elder O. W. Okerlind, on his return to Canada from General Conference, visited Saints of Gainsborough, May 16, spending a few days in their midst. On Wednesday and Thursday, May 16 and 17, he delivered two spiritual sermons, which were appreciated by these Saints. Friday, May 18, he left for Torquay.

Council Bluffs Has Variety of Entertaining Ideas

Council Bluff members show imagination and variety in their social entertainments. Recent months have brought to them an original Easter play, a Valentine supper, an Irish cottage supper, a family supper, a May Day breakfast, a mothers' and daughters' banquet (attended by 162 guests), and a book review.

Sister T. J. Jett, sr., Wishes Us to Pray for Her

Sister T. J. Jett, sr., a member of Second San Antonio Church, is seriously ill at the home of her daughter at Tyler, Texas. She seems to be losing her eyesight, and requests the Saints to fast and pray for her, that she may be restored.

The Joyless Order

I know men and women for whom I feel the most poignant pity. Their lives are puckered, sour, and unhappy. They live in a terrible world among terrible people. Where others smell the fragrance of roses they feel only the sting of the thorns. Where the poet sees blue-green pines and a rippled lake, they notice only the mosquitoes and gnats. Where the artist beholds God's hand upon the western canvas at sunset-time, they perceive only the dying of another day. God pity them! And God pity us if we belong to their joyless order!—Frank B. Fagerburg in "The Sin of Being Ordinary."

Requests Prayers

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Johnson, of Borger, Texas, ask prayers for their daughter, Lou Ella, who is suffering from toxic thyroid, that she may be saved an operation.

Michigan Missionary Pair to Carry Gospel Word

Elder M. J. McGuire and wife, beloved of the Saints in Michigan, are planning to give their full time to traveling and doing missionary work where they feel that they can do the most good. At the recent branch election at Mikado, Michigan, Elder Richard Steward was chosen pastor to succeed Brother McGuire.

Skiatook Sufferer Asks Prayers

Prayers are requested for the recovery of health of Mrs. Lula B. Woslum, of Skiatook, Oklahoma.

A Trio of Independence Girl Graduates

Joy Harder, La Von Budd, and Margery Sheehy

These three young women of the Stone Church congregation and graduates of the 1934 Class of William Chrisman High School, have distinguished themselves in church and school activities. They plan to enter Graceland College this fall.

Miss Joy Harder, left, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Harder, received the scholarship medal the evening of William Chrisman's commencement exercises. She also won second place in the Mary Sturges Art Memorial contest. She is a member of the National Honor Society, and this spring received her super "M" in physical education. Miss Harder is a finished pianist, a member of the Cantanina Chorus, and one of her hobbies is playing the Stone Church organ.

Miss La Von Budd, center, daughter of Apostle and Mrs. Roy S. Budd, is another outstanding in scholastic ranking. She won second place in the English Essay contest and second place in public speaking in the girls' declamation contest held at Warrensburg this spring, and is a member of the National Honor Society. In the Graceland College Broadcast Contest this spring, Miss Budd won first place in reviewing the radio lectures, and received a sixty-five dollar scholarship to Graceland College. She is known in Independence for her dramatic ability.

Miss Margery Sheehy, right, is another National Honor Society member to go to Graceland from Independence this fall. She is the daughter of Pastor and Mrs. John F. Sheehy, and an active worker among the girls of the center place and a First Class Girl Scout. She received a bronze medal for making a grade of all E's during her fourth year of Latin when she represented William Chrisman High School in the Latin contest at Warrensburg this spring. Throughout her four years of high school Miss Sheehy's scholarship standing has ranked high. During the past year she was a member of the Chrisman girls' basket ball team, and received her State "M."

Far West Stake

O. T. Z. Convention

Another successful convention was added to the lengthening list of quarterly meetings sponsored by the O. T. Z.'s in Far West Stake. The convention, held at Stewartsville, June 2 and 3, was outstanding in many ways. From the opening service Saturday evening (which broke all former records of attendance for Saturday) to the closing session Sunday afternoon, a marvelous spirit was manifest and the convention will go down as one of the high spots of the year.

About three hundred assembled Saturday evening to participate in and enjoy the program. Two plays were given. "The Greatest of These Is Love," was presented by the O. T. Z.'s of Guilford. The Kingston and Oakdale O. T. Z.'s gave "The Prodigal Comes Home." A chorus of young ladies from First Saint Joseph Church rendered a number and Thelma Dwyer, of Cameron, gave a reading. Fourth Saint Joseph Church gave a song-pantomime depicting "A Mother's Prayer for Her Wandering Boy."

At seven-thirty Sunday morning over two hundred young people gathered in the grove on the reunion grounds for a prayer service. Some drove as many as sixty or seventy miles Sunday morning in order to be present at this service. Many remained over Saturday night and the Stewartsville and Maple Grove Saints were gracious hosts to all who stayed.

The morning was ideal and one could not ask for a more perfect background for the prayer service than these grounds made sacred to the memories of young and old alike. Elder Ward A. Hougas was in charge, assisted by Apostle John W. Rushton and Evangelist Milo Burnett. Leonard G. Ehlers led the singing. A wonderful spirit was in evidence throughout the service which will long be remembered by all present.

Breakfast was served from the refreshment stand by Maple Grove young people following the prayer service. At the church school hour Evangelist Milo Burnett lectured to those gathered at the church.

A cantata, "The Light Everlasting," was given by the Maple Grove-Stewartsville Young People's Choir at ten-thirty, preceding the sermon by Apostle John W. Rushton. This service drew the peak attendance of the convention and Apostle Rushton delivered a splendid message in his unique manner. This was Brother Rushton's last Sunday in the United States as he sailed for England the last of the week.

The Stewartsville Women's Department deserve much credit for making the noon hour a success. They served lunch to the large crowd in a commendable manner.

A council meeting was held immediately after lunch at which time a number of important matters were discussed, mainly pertaining to the reunion activities. The O. T. Z. work will be given even more attention than in previous years.

Apostle Rushton gave his last sermon in America at the afternoon service which was the closing session. Congregational singing and special musical numbers preceded the sermon. The young people were very happy to have Brother Rushton with them in this convention and wish him Godspeed in his labors in his far-off mission.

Long Beach, California

Fourteenth Street Near Orange Avenue

About the middle of March it was decided that this branch would have a May-basket, the contents to be money to go to the branch debt. Envelopes were given to each member of every family. All adults were to place at least one dollar in their envelopes and each child at least ten cents. The response was good. Many children raised a dollar or more, and ten-year-old Leona Rolston sold doughnuts to the amount of five dollars.

Mother's Day was commemorated with a fitting program given by the young people. There were many flowers including a large basket of carnations. The closing feature of the entertainment was a surprise to all the mothers. They were asked to come forward and as they filed past the basket of carnations beside which two small girls were stationed, each mother received at least two of the flowers. Two small boys were stationed near by to hand each mother a one-pound box of chocolates.

Southern California young people's rally was held on Memorial Day at Strawberry Flats near Arrowhead Lake. Long Beach young people report a pleasant and profitable day.

Several baptisms have lately been had in this branch.

Long Beach Branch is steadily moving forward. Pastor J. L. Milner and members of the local priesthood have preached some edifying sermons. A goodly number are interested in the gathering. Their aim is "Onward to Zion."

Kansas City Stake

Seven Graceland College students of Kansas City Stake congregation are home for their summer vacation. They are, Jack Burlington and Eleanor Sandy, Central Church; Violet Coakley and Margaret Merrill, Grandview Church Delbert Sears and Gertrude Taylor, Chelsea Church; and Bill Gould, Mount Washington Church.

Bill Gould was graduated from the liberal arts course, and received one of three gold seals given for work done in Journalism. Bill has been editor of the Graceland Tower.

Bill, Delbert, Gertrude and Eleanor are members of the Lamba Delta Sigma Honor Society. Violet Coakley and Eleanor Sandy are members of the Crescent Club.

Central Church

This congregation was happy to have as its Memorial Day speaker Apostle John W. Rushton. Central Church Choir, in keeping with the day sang "Recessional," by De Kover, under the direction of Eugene Christy. The theme of Apostle Rushton's sermon was "Consider the Christ." A large and appreciative congregation was present to hear this outstanding and inspiring speaker. Central church was honored in having Brother Rushton there to make one of his last appearances in this country. He sailed June 9 from New York to his European Mission.

From four to seven in the afternoon, a reception was held at the home of Brother and Sister A. R. White, in honor of Apostle and Sister John W. Rushton. Many of their Kansas City friends enjoyed seeing them and wishing them bon voyage.

The speaker for the evening service was Elder John F. Sheehy, pastor of the Stone Church, in Independence. As is customary one Sunday night each month, the young people were in charge of the service. Mrs. Edith Munden played a trumpet solo, and the Central Girls' Quartet sang a number. In his inimitable manner Brother Sheehy built his sermon about the signs of the times. Fisher Carlile was in charge, and E. P. Nelson directed the singing.

Grandview Church

Reverend Hylton Harmon, pastor of the Church of the Brethren, was guest speaker for a memorial program, May 27. He gave an address on "I Stood at the Grave of the Unknown Soldier," this being his own interpretation of a visit with the unknown soldier. It was a splendid argument against war.

An evening of good fellowship was featured June 4, on the lawn of Brother and Sister J. H. Coakley, in honor of Elder David S. White and family, who have been placed in charge of the Heathwood group. The Whites have been faithful workers with this group since the days of the Armstrong Branch and will be greatly missed.

Pastor C. G. Mesley returned June 9, by airplane, from Los Angeles, California, where he enjoyed a much-needed vacation.

Sister P. J. Brose accompanied Sister M. Marinda Carlson to the home of her sister, Mrs. J. W. Brown, in Wroxeter, Ontario, Canada. Sister Carlson was quite ill; she has the prayers and best wishes of this congregation.

North East Church

This small group of Saints is still trying to carry on the work of the Master. They meet each week for various services. The Sunday school, under the leadership of Brother Merlin Strong, is progressing rapidly. He has a band of faithful teachers to assist him in his work.

Pastor Henry F. Davis works in his garden early and late, but is always ready to respond to any call that comes for help. He has had to fill in a preaching appointment several times on a moment's notice, and did so to his credit.

Elder Orville Helm preached an inspiring sermon Sunday evening, June 3. Brother Helm has lived a faithful life and has won the love of the Saints here.

Sunday, June 17, a basket dinner and rally will be held in the city park of North Kansas City, located on Swift Avenue and Seventeenth Street. All scattered Saints of Clay County are urged to be present. Elders C. E. Wight, J. O. Worden, and H. R. Higdon will be present and deliver sermons. Bring your Hymnals and some time will be spent in congregational singing. The first service will be held at 2:30 p. m., Elder H. R. Higdon, speaker. He will be followed by Elder C. E. Wight, president of Kansas City Stake, and then by Elder J. O. Worden, pastor of Fourth Kansas City Church.

Bristow, Oklahoma

Seven members of the Bristow group recently motored to Tulsa, where they attended the women's meeting, held in Owens Park. A basket dinner was served at noon, followed by a thirty-minute lecture on the Book of Mormon by Elder Lancaster, pastor of the Tulsa church. Many inspiring testimonies were given.

Bristow Saints were visitors in the homes of Tulsa members and attended prayer meeting in the evening. Much good was derived from their visit.

Independence

Next Sunday, evening church services will begin on the Campus. President Elbert A. Smith will be the speaker during the summer and the subject of his first sermon will be "The Old Jerusalem Church." All Independence Saints are invited to attend the services and help to make them a success.

The young people of Zion will gather at the Campus, Sunday morning, June 17, at seven o'clock, for a worship and prayer service. The young men and women are eager to assist President E. A. Smith in his series of gospel sermons this summer, and they wish to take this opportunity to invite all young people of the congregations in Zion to attend.

A daily vacation Bible school will be conducted for a period of six weeks, four days a week. Classes will begin Tuesday, June 19, at the Stone Church, and will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of each week. Mrs. James Moses will be in charge of the Bible stories, Mrs. Frank Jennings, Bible dramatics, Mrs. John R. Lentell, singing, and Mrs. C. B. Woodstock will conduct an Oriole class. Classes will begin at nine-thirty and continue until eleven-forty-five.

Stone Church

Twenty-three children were baptized into the kingdom of God on earth on Children's Day at a service beginning at 1:30 p. m., Elders John F. Sheehy and W. F. Bolinger officiating. The candidates were Betty Alice Peel, John N. Pawley, Kenneth D. Pawley, Paul Albert Brackenbury, James E. Hodges, Carolyn E. Scott, Jeanne Louise Hodges, Maxine Gould, Betty Jane Robinson, Dorothy Eleanor Barnby, William D. Nunamaker, James Daniel Nunamaker, Stanton Thayer Brown, George E. Breeze, Merrell E. Breeze, Marcina Lou Breeze, Earlena Rae Ebeling, Norma Lee Radmall, Mildred W. Resch, Lenora Lee Saiville, Frederick M. Plain, James Lawson, Clair Edwin Burnett, jr. Elder Earl Page and Priest James Moses were in charge of this service.

The confirmations followed at two-thirty, Elder H. L. Barto in charge. The following elders assisted in this ordinance: T. A. Beck, C. C. Koehler, J. Scott Cochran, H. W. Hattey, Charles Chapman, F. O. Wilkinson, S. A. Thiel, W. J. Burton, Ephraim Brown, Evan A. Fry, H. A. Koehler, and A. H. Thompson.

Children's Day exercises in the various departments of the church school began a day devoted to the interests and activities of the children. In the beginner department, superintended by Mrs. Tessie Smith, an effective blessing ceremony occurred when Patricia Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alma Kearns, was blessed by the elders.

A most appropriate Children's Day sermon was preached to an appreciative audience Sunday morning, June 10, at the Stone Church by Pastor John F. Sheehy. He stressed the need of proper recreation for the children at home and in the neighborhood.

Music for the morning service was furnished by the Stone Church Choir, in charge of Paul N. Craig and assisted by Hazel Scott Withee at the organ. Two special numbers were sung by the Midwesterners Male Quartet.

In the evening the widely-announced "Children's Hour" at the Stone Church brought out a large crowd of parents and children. This brief but effective program presented children of the various church school departments, giving an impressive conclusion to Children's Day. The entertainment centered about the theme, "The Children's Hour," and the well-known poem by that title, written by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, was given in pantomime by Frank Jennings, superintendent of the intermediate department, and three little girls, Jane Fairbanks, Mabel Danielson, and Lois Elaine Feldhahn, as Mrs. Olive Moses read the verses.

The program included readings and chorus numbers by the little folks, and the "garden of flowers" was particularly appealing. The Stone Church Boys' Choir, directed by J. Glenn Fairbanks, sang, and R. S. Budd, jr., read from the Scriptures Christ's invitation to little children.

Beginning at 7:30 the entertainment lasted just an hour, and the congregation was given part in singing the hymns, "Fairest Lord Jesus" and "My Jesus, I Love Thee." Elder W. Earl Page, director of religious education, and Priest James Moses, superintendent of the junior department, were in charge. The good work of department superintendents, musical directors, pianists, and all who made this program possible, is appreciated.

Miss Dorothy Demaris Mabbott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Mabbott, of Oak Grove, formerly of Independence, and Louis G. Nebgen, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Nebgen, of Oak Grove, were married Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, June 3, on the lawn at the home of the bride's parents, Elder John Blackmore, of Independence, officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by Mrs. Winogene Boyes, matron of honor. Elmer Nebgen acted as best man for his brother, and little Marjorie Joyce Nebgen, niece of the bridegroom, scattered rose petals. Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Nebgen left for California where they will spend the summer, and Mr. Nebgen will do research work. Mr. Nebgen is biology teacher at William Chrisman High School, Independence. For five years the bride has been a teacher at the Alton School.

The Stone Church was the scene of a pretty wedding Thursday night, June 7, when Miss Helen, Elizabeth Hanson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dahl Newman, of Independence, and Blaine Owens Bender, son of Mrs. George Bender, also of Independence, were married. The service was read by Pastor John F. Sheehy. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by Miss Alexandra Angel as maid of honor, and by Miss Blanche Crabtree, Miss Alice Hacker, Miss Velma Scheperclaus, and Mrs. Fern Daugherty, bridesmaids. William Lundquist acted as best man for Mr. Bender, and groomsmen were J. W. Chapple, Myron Zerr, Edwin Riske, and Walter Brown. Jerry Blaine Miller was the ring bearer, Jimmy and Charles Forbes carried the bride's train, and Florrie Forbes and Daisy Mitchell were flower girls. Mr. and Mrs. Bender will live in Kansas City.

Miss Lillian Eleanor Mayne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Mayne, and Harold Eugene McFarland, were married Saturday, June 2, at 10:30 p. m., by Pastor John F. Sheehy in the presence of a few close relatives and friends. They will make their home in Independence.

Second Church

The primary department furnished the program at the eleven o'clock hour, June 10.

At one-thirty, nineteen children and one adult were baptized, and confirmed at the service following. The young people decorated the font and also the platform upstairs for the confirmation.

The junior and intermediate departments furnished the program in the evening.

Wednesday afternoon, June 6, the group leaders and friendly visitors met at the home of Mrs. Ona Batts.

Friday night, June 8, the choir went on a picnic to Wildwood Lakes.

An organ prelude, played by Mrs. Sam Inman, opened the sacrament service, June 3. Pastor Will Inman was in charge of the evening service, and Elder John F. Sheehy was the evening speaker. He took his text from Matthew 25. The choir, directed by Earl Audet, sang the anthem, "My Soul, Be on Thy Guard." Mrs. Will Inman and Mrs. Lawrence Nave sang a duet.

The wedding of Miss Florence Willard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Willard, and Mr. Ivan Dillee, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Dillee, was performed by Elder John F. Sheehy, Friday, June 1, at his home.

Walnut Park Church

Observance of Children's Day filled the day Sunday. A program was given at the church school session, extending into the eleven o'clock hour, and a cantata was given as the feature of the evening service. In the afternoon a baptismal service was held, sixteen new members being confirmed at a special service at six o'clock in the evening.

During the eight o'clock prayer service Sunday morning two babies were blessed, Robert Dee Long, son of Brother and Sister Cornelius V. Long, and Dwayne Marvin Pettyjohn, son of Brother and Sister Charles Antone Pettyjohn. Elders W. T. Gard, Paul Davis, and Benjamin Bean officiated.

Two more babies were blessed at the church school session, Bobbie Dean Campbell, son of Brother and Sister Arthur B. Campbell, Elders Davis and Barnhardt officiating, and Ernest Denver Coddington, son of Brother and Sister Ernest D. Coddington, by Elders Barnhardt and Bean.

The morning program consisted of a welcome song by the children; a story of an incident in the life of Mozart by Sister Leonard Lea; a piano number, a composition of Mozart's, by Hazel Scott Withee; readings by Nadine Ellis, Laura Eva Bateman, Richard Crawford, Buddy Badder, Bobby Phelps, Elma Dean Coleman, Alice Hart, and Betty Jo Morford; a drill by a group of boys and girls; a pantomime by a group of nine girls, accompanied by the singing of "My Jesus, I Love Thee," by a quartet composed of Helen, Thelma, Alta June, and Melba Moorman; exercises by classes of Jessie Anderson and Joan Douglas, and a benediction reading by Ruth Drigalla. The program was presided over by Sister Erwin Moorman.

The children baptized and confirmed during the afternoon were: Ruth Drigalla, Viola Willoughby, Jacqueline Custead, Helen Watson Butler, Carolyn Elizabeth Barwise, Norma Herman, Robert Martin, Wesley Redfield, Ruth Victoria Manford, Jackson Pettyjohn, Wilbur McLaughlin, William Perry Temple, Bernard Temple, James Blair Taylor, and Elma Dean Coleman. One adult, Mrs. Ida Maywood, also was baptized at this service.

The cantata in the evening, "His Service," was directed by Thelma Moorman and Milford Nace. Drexel Mollison accompanied at the piano. The boys' and girls' choruses cooperated in this presentation.

Three more children were blessed Sunday evening, Jerry, Larry, and Wayne Gilbert Custead, all sons of Brother and Sister Jack Custead. Elders John F. Sheehy and Royden Barnhardt officiated.

Marian Dillee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Dillee, and Orville Harrington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy J. Harrington, were married on Friday evening, June 8, at the home of Elder George Harrington, grandfather of the bridegroom. Elder Harrington officiated.

Two leagues of playground ball are in the midst of their schedules for the summer. Games are played each Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Teams in the girls' league represent the Galilean, Swastika, A. W. Z., and Crusader classes of the church school, and one team represents the intermediate department. Boys' teams are: Crusaders, Intermediates, A. W. Z's., and Galileans.

Enoch Hill Church

Miss Ruby Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson, and George Griffin, son of the late W. L. Griffin, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents Friday evening, June 8, Elder H. L. Barto officiating. The bridal pair were attended by Miss Louise McDonald and Mr. Hubert Kendall, and the simple but effective ceremony was witnessed by the two families and a few close friends. These two young people are active in church work on Enoch Hill and highly respected. They are at home at 201 East Alton, and Saints of this district wish for them much happiness.

Sister Willis Young, friendly visitor of Group 32, and Sister C. S. Warren, friendly visitor of 33 North, gave talks on their work to the Doctrine and Covenants Class last Thursday afternoon. All attending greatly appreciated the lesson taught by Elder George Jenkins.

On Friday the young people visited Spring Branch and played volley ball on their new courts. The Enoch Hill boys' team lost, but the girls won.

The Saints of Group 32 met Saturday at the home of their elder, C. S. Warren, and spent a happy social evening.

The cantata, "In His Kingdom," sung by the boys and girls of the junior department, Sister William Worth in charge, was part of the Children's Day exercises Sunday.

Pastor E. A. Thomas was the morning speaker, and his theme was "The Responsibility of Home Building." The choir sang "Blessed Savior," Sister Zaidie Young and Sister Modena Petre singing the duet.

At two-thirty the Saints went to Second Church where seven children were baptized, Dorothy Cogan, Eugene Larson, Earl Blankenship, Vincent Stowell, Millard Pace, Betty Lou Brownrigg, and Leonard Bernard Cowell.

The choir sang "Let the Children Come" at the beginning of the evening service. A quartet composed of Brother and Sister C. S. Warren, Sister John Jones, and Pastor E. A. Thomas, sang "They Brought Young Children." Then William Russell and Harry J. Cogan, the two children of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Cogan, and Frances Arlene Rogers, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rogers, were blessed.

This was followed by the confirmation of those baptized in the afternoon, these elders officiating: C. S. Warren, Chester Constance, E. E. Thomas, R. E. Whitsitt, J. F. Petre, H. E. Winegar, and J. E. Martin. Before the confirmation prayers Pastor E. A. Thomas talked to the boys and girls, and afterwards extended to them the hand of fellowship.

Miss Quena Shirk and Frederick Heath were united in marriage at the home of the young people's leader, H. E. Winegar, a few days ago.

Spring Branch Church

Wednesday evening prayer service, June 6, was in charge of Elders Robert Fish, E. C. Peer, M. C. Jacobsen, Jesse Smith, and J. Andes.

At the close of the class period Sunday, June 10, Alma Dixon gave a talk on children and their homes. Leland Belk gave a reading, "How We Can All Be Disciples."

The eleven o'clock service was in charge of Elder M. C. Jacobsen. The prelude was played by Sister Jalmer Nelson. The congregation arose and repeated the twenty-third Psalm, after which they sang "The Lord Is My Shepherd." In keeping with Children's Day, Franklyn Jennings, Leo and Junior Peer and Clare Miller, jr., boys, acted as deacons. Helen Louise Epperson, daughter of Sister Epperson, was blessed under the hands of Elders Robert Fish and J. Smith. The young people's double quartet sang, "Oh, Happy Day, That Fixed My Choice."

Nine young members of this congregation were baptized, Shirley Goold, Robert Calhoon, Virginia Teeter, Wallace Epperson, Florence Essig, Richard Calhoon, Patricia Fischel, Gladys Teeter, and Louise Teeter, Elder M. C. Jacobsen officiating. Robert Fish gave a short talk between the baptism and the confirmation. Elders A. J. Tankard, Jesse Smith, M. C. Jacobsen, Robert Fish, Jake Andes, and Leonard White assisted.

The church school program in the evening consisted of talks by Otis Brown, John Weeks, Benson Brown, Earl Robinson, Ira Weeks, Mildred Reynolds, Francis Tankard, and Jake Andes.

The Children's Day program presenting the boys and girls of junior, primary and beginner departments in songs, drills, and recitations, took the place of the Sunday evening sermon. At this time, William Thomas Crum, son of Paul and Verna Crum, was blessed. A program by the children of the church school was presented to an appreciative audience.

The funeral of W. F. Smith was held last Friday, June 8, at Stahl's Funeral Home, in charge of Pastor John F. Sheehy and G. W. Eastwood. This congregation extends their sympathy to the family.

Englewood Church

On Children's Day both services at Englewood were devoted to the interests of the children. After the eleven o'clock service was opened, a young people's quartet, composed of Nora Mae Closson, Dorene Hougas, Delmar Goode, and Ralph Dunlap sang a number, accompanied by Sister Stella Howery. After this the charge to the candidates for baptism was given by Elder D. S. McNamara.

Amid a bank of white lilies, and to the mellow tones of an old organ, nine children and one adult were buried in the waters of baptism. Geraldine Marie Holm, Audrey Marie Richter, Altabelle Daugherty, Breece Ellsworth Curtis, and Sister Opal Reed Payne were immersed by Elder R. W. Howery. Dorothy Dean and Lois Jean Welch, Frederick Eugene Campbell, Everett Lavere and Leonard Gene Wyatt were baptized by Elder Arthur Welch.

For several Sundays the children had met as a class, and had received pre-baptismal instruction from Pastor R. W. Howery.

While the candidates were preparing for confirmation the congregation sang the following songs: "Consecration," "Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken," "My God, How Wonderful Thou Art," and "There's an Old, Old Path." After these numbers the quartet again sang.

In keeping with Children's Day, just before the confirmation service, two babies, James Richard Brewer, and Lyle Dean Payne, were brought to the altar and blessed by Elder D. S. McNamara and Arthur Welch.

The candidates were confirmed by Elders George Hiles, A. G. Hougas, John Ely, Alma Rannie, Thomas Richardson, Arthur Welch, R. W. Howery, and D. S. McNamara.

Englewood is indebted to her young people for the preparation of the baptismal font and also for the beautiful floral decorations which formed an impressive setting for the services.

At seven-thirty a splendid program was given by the primary and junior departments.

A week ago, Sister Rosetta Howery, mother of Pastor R. W. Howery, fell at her home and broke her leg. Her friends hope her confinement at the Sanitarium will be short, and that her complete recovery will be rapid.

■ Chain Letters

A reader has written that he is being annoyed by "chain letters" coming to him quite frequently. He would like to see something printed against this particular form of folly. And we're glad to help.

A chain letter comes to you, generally, unsigned. That puts it in the class of anonymous letters, which are the lowest form of correspondence. It is best to pay no attention to anonymous letters.

The next feature of a chain letter is that it contains a demand that the recipient make ten (or some other number) exact copies of it and send it to that many other people. If this were really followed out with no duplications, all people on the earth would soon be reached. It is a profitable business for the postal service, but an expense and a nuisance to others.

A third feature of the chain letter is a threat of a "curse" or of some kind of "bad luck" in case the recipient does not comply with the above demand. Superstition is still strong enough in the world to force many to comply with the demand.

The real message of a chain letter is often some moral platitude or notion that strikes the mind of the first writer as important; occasionally it is a worthless inanity.

The best thing to do with a chain letter is to discard it and forget it. The sender will never know what you have done about it, nobody else will be annoyed with the letters you would have written, and you will have saved yourself postage, stationery and a case of writer's cramp. You will have no worse luck than you would have had otherwise, unless you let it worry you.

■ Consider the Hammer

"It keeps its head.

"It doesn't fly off the handle.

"It keeps pounding away.

"It finds the point, then drives it home.

"It looks at the other side, too; and thus often clinches the matter.

"It makes mistakes, but when it does, it starts all over.

"It is the only knocker in the world that does any good.

"If you are inclined to lose your head and fly off the handle, just "Consider the Hammer."—Quoted from The Youth's Instructor.

■ Starchy Sayings:

"An optimist is one who sees a light where there is none; and a pessimist comes along and blows it out."

The nations of the earth are talking loudly of peace, but they are preparing for war. How about the old saying: "Actions speak louder than words"?

"Cynicism is sentiment turned sour and trying to counteract its own bitterness with a little humor."

A smile will work wonders on a gloomy day, or when everything seems against you.

A grouch is a human lemon.

There is an old saying to the effect that he who lives with wolves soon howls.

"You cannot lead the world if you do not know the world."

The Church Calls You

"Check Up"—June 24 to July 1

Keeping Faith The church has kept faith with the people. Not that any pledge was ever made to the effect that no more "sacrifice drives" would be made—but it is a simple fact that they are not being used. This is keeping faith with the spirit of the law of the church, and thus keeping faith with the people.

Faith in the People The Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric are staking their faith on the proposition that the financial plans given in the law of the church are sufficient to provide the necessary money to support the proper operations of the church work. They are staking their faith on the people to "Keep the Law" and thus provide that financial support. They feel that if other means are resorted to, even in a time of need, it is a confession that the people are not willing to "Keep the Law," and they are not ready to make such an admission.

Every Year's Duty Filing an inventory is not enough. The willing and loyal church member will file his financial statement each year and pay the tithing that is indicated by his accounts. Even if conditions permit nothing to be paid, he will file a statement to indicate the nature of his operations and to signify to the officers of the church that he is doing all in his power to "Keep the Law."

The Present Need The present need of the church can be adequately met if larger numbers of our church people will obey the financial law. That law is very plainly explained in the late edition of the Priesthood Manual and can be discussed with the proper officer in any branch. It has been stated that the people are complying with the provisions of the financial law in larger numbers than ever before, in spite of the depression, although individual contributions are necessarily smaller; thus the total income is reduced.

A Few Carry the Load There are still large numbers who want to ride in the church vehicle without paying their way. A church officer lately said, "One person in four is complying with the financial law. The rest are contented to sing 'Zion the Beautiful Beckons Us On.'" Not until a good majority of church people have actually set about to "Keep the Law" can we remove the financial load on the church and move towards the building of Zion, which is our goal. Zion has been beckoning us on for a long time, and too many are willing to stand still and let it keep on beckoning. It is only when we move that Zion can be realized.

You Are Called There is a statement in the Scripture to the effect that "Many are called but few are chosen." Many are called into the church and they respond by claiming the privileges of membership without accepting the responsibilities of it. But only a few can demonstrate that they are of the "chosen people" who will obey the law of the Lord. You are called. Are you one of the chosen people?

"Check Up" The period from June 24 to July 1 has been set aside for a "Check Up" for the people of the church. Have you made out your accounts? Have you complied with the law?

The law of the church is not meant in any sense to be confiscatory. The strong compulsion of religious convictions are not being invoked to cause suffering and want. But if all will "Keep the Law" our financial obligations can be met without inconvenience to anybody.

What We Know About God

During the preacher's first year in seminary he sat with a group of young seminary students to whom Doctor Daniel A. Poling was speaking. He told this little incident:

He was seated in his study, writing. His little son came to the door and spoke to him, asking this rather strange question: "Daddy, what do you know about God?"

Doctor Poling did not reply, but continued writing at his desk. Again, the question came:

"Daddy, what do you know about God?"

And even then, the father made no reply.

But the question was not to be denied an answer.

A third time the question was asked:

"Daddy, what do you know about God?"

Slowly the great preacher turned to face his son, and made this reply:

"Not much, son, not much. But what I do know has changed my life."

We may not be able to answer all the questions men may ask us about the nature of God. But certainly, we can know what this great preacher knew—enough to say: "What I do know has changed my life!"—Edwin M. Walker, in Church Management.

Thoughts for Today

THE LIQUOR QUESTION is far from being settled. Liquor, as always, is a lawbreaker and a troublemaker. As it refastens its old habits and evils on thoughtless people, we can see its results: a steadily mounting total of car accidents and deaths, the return of the red-nosed tout and the bar-fly in his dirty overalls to our streets, murder and theft. Any time that queer behavior is observed among people in an accident, liquor will be found as a cause. It comes out in the courts' records with monotonous regularity. Write this in your book: "Liquor is a lawbreaker."

THE PROMISE of great revenues to meet government expenses disappeared almost as soon as it was certain that liquor would be returned. That promise was one of the principal baits used in the campaign to get it back. Now the liquor interests are engaged in a guerilla warfare to drive the taxes as low as they can. No figures are at hand, but it is very doubtful if the taxes actually collected will equal the amounts taken in fines of bootleggers before repeal. We have already lost money on the exchange, and more money was what we were promised. Write this in your book: "Liquor is unfaithful to pledges."

WE WERE TOLD that a great amount of expense could be saved by dismissing the law-enforcement forces made necessary under prohibition. We were told that the bootlegger would disappear. Bootleggers are as plentiful as ever, and the liquor people are clamoring for new and larger forces to protect their "legitimate" business. Write this in your book: "Liquor is a liar."

NONE of the promised benefits of repeal have been realized in any appreciable degree, in spite of the feeble and flimsy arguments that are being made to show that they have. The dries doubted the sincerity of the wets all along, and with good reason. Write this in your book: "Liquor is a hypocrite."

THE LEGALIZING OF LIQUOR does not change its character. Alcohol is a habit-forming poison, and no matter what kind of rare or delightful flavor you give to the beverage that contains it, it can do nothing but harm. It befuddles the brain when steadiness is required, it weakens the hand when strength is required, it overtaxes and breaks down nature's equipment for destroying poisons in the body, it eats at the lining of the stomach, it adds flabby fat, it clouds the judgment in crisis, and on all occasions it makes a person less fit to meet the moral, physical, and intellectual obligation of life. Write this in your book: "Liquor is an enemy."

THE LAST WORD has not been spoken on this question by the civilized people of the country. There will come another day when this great miscreant, liquor, will be brought to the bar of justice and judgment before this nation. New evidence will be accumulated on the new crimes that are being committed. Liquor will again stand with the crowd of public enemies to which it belongs: opium, the bubonic plague, small-pox, diphtheria, graft, racketeering, and war. It will be outlawed like the rest of them, and a civilized people will turn their energies to eliminate it.

FOR that new trial, liquor itself will furnish plenty of evidence. It will accumulate every day. Here are some of the items that will appear in the indictment; babies born defective because of mothers and fathers who drink, auto wrecks caused by liquor soaked brains, jobs lost because of drinking and consequent family suffering, children without food and clothing because of the sprees of irresponsible fathers, women beaten and terrorized by men who are transformed into beasts, and a long list of other items. Liquor will accumulate a heavy collection of evidence against itself. We can be patient.

THE FATE of the Christian message was never more in doubt than at present, and it was never more needed by the world. There is grave concern over the closing of hundreds of small country churches; perhaps there should be even more grave concern about the quality of message that was preached in them and that caused them to die their spiritual death which led to the more noticeable but less important physical death. When a church dies it is because it fails to meet a human need. People do sense a great need, but they do not feel a need for what many churches have to offer. The desertions from their ranks are result of conditions.

ONE FAMOUS man is said to have asserted that "The message of Jesus has enough dynamite in it to blow our corrupt social order into atoms," and yet we find a diluted substitute for that message being preached in many churches, patting the back of capitalism, ignoring its corruption, denying its sins, and furnishing influence to help keep things as they are. Too long, the only remedy the church has had to offer has been patience, personal goodness and resignation. Such a remedy holds no promise and no attraction for a needy generation.

Sermon Suggestions for June 24

"Check Up" Period, June 24 to July 1

(Note: This material is offered to help those who may need it and desire to aid the church in the "Check Up" campaign announced in the communication from the Presiding Bishopric in last week's Herald, and also sent out in the mail accompanied by a letter from the First Presidency. Speakers are invited to use the theme if it suits their convenience, but there is no hint of a requirement. The ten days from June 24 to July 1 are designated "Check Up" days, and this material will serve to remind congregations of the fact.—Editors.)

TEXT

"Set your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe and do, all the words of this law. For it is not a vain thing for you; because it is your life: and through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land, whither ye go over to Jordan to possess it."—Deuteronomy 32: 46, 47.

SUGGESTED HYMNS

(New Saints' Hymnal)

- 344—"Hark! The voice of Jesus calling."
 351—"With my substance I will honor."
 205—"God is marshalling his army."
 214—"Send me forth O blessed Master!"

HELPFUL QUOTATIONS

"Every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property."—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 9.

"It is required of the Lord, at the hand of every steward, to render an account of his stewardship, both in time and in eternity."—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 1.

"Verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people."—Ibid., 64: 5.

REFERENCES ON THE APPLICATION OF THE FINANCIAL LAW

The Financial Law, a pamphlet arranged by authority of the Presiding Bishopric.

Priesthood Manual, second edition, sections 80 to 107 inclusive.

POINTS OF EMPHASIS

1. We have all pledged ourselves in our covenant of baptism to obey the laws of the church. More than that, we are urged to obedience by something stronger than the covenant, for God works with us to provide the means whereby His work shall move forward.

2. Sometimes we forget to carry out the agreements that we have given our covenant to do. Now the church is urging us to "Check Up" and see how we stand.

3. Here is what to do: File your inventory (if you have not yet done so. See Priesthood Manual, section 96.) If you have previously done this, see that your annual financial statement has been made. (Ibid., section 102.)

4. We have received the benefits of the church and the gospel. The Lord has done his part in giving us the spiritual blessings that we have needed. Now it is our turn to do our part.

5. The church does not ask a special sacrifice. It only asks us to "Keep the Law" which is written into the Holy Scriptures. And let us "Check Up" now to see how we stand.

It is ever true that he who does nothing for others, does nothing for himself.—George Sand.

What Are the Children Reading?

During the depression a number of Sunday schools discontinued furnishing copies of Stepping Stones and Zion's Hope to the students. These publications have helped to attract children to the schools, and they are written and edited with definite church ideals in mind.

We wonder what the children have been reading in the schools where these papers have been discontinued. Probably in their homes they are permitted to read the daily papers, the rather doubtful comic strips, and the type of magazines that people buy at the news stands.

With the return of better times these schools should subscribe again for the church literature designed for their children. Some of the money that goes to buy other publications would be better spent on something good for the children.

Photographs of Women Workers Wanted

The response to our request for photographs for use in the Herald has been very gratifying. We are thus enabled, as our readers will have observed, through the aid of our new engraving department to make the Herald better and more interesting.

So far, the pictures that have come in have been predominantly of men workers. There are many capable women in the church who are making good contributions. We shall be glad to have pictures of them also. Please remember that for use in the Herald the pictures should be clear and rather new. Historical photographs tend to become dim, and we find it difficult to make good cuts from them. The historical cuts, however, are of special interest to the Graphic Arts Bureau. Brother C. Ed Miller is glad to preserve them.

Is there not a stretching effect which is good intellectual gymnastics when one listens to that which is somewhat beyond him? Is there not a sort of cultural osmosis that comes to one who is surrounded by better books, better music, better pictures than he is quite ready for? The greatest feat of education, the building of a vocabulary, is not accomplished by baby-talk and by reading Mother Goose, or even by looking words up in a dictionary; but by ambitious reading and by hearing one's elders and one's better talk. Whereupon words at first unintelligible gradually and miraculously take on meanings. Words which are high over our heads find their way, by some unperceived route, into our heads. So with ideas; so with that which is infinitely more important, religious experience.—Abigail Chesley, in "Hungry Sheep," the Christian Century.

Ideas, Discussion and News for the Young People of the Church

Open Air Prayer Meeting an Inspiration to Springfield Young People

Fifty young people of Springfield Branch, Missouri, assembled at Walnut Grove Park for prayer meeting at seven o'clock Sunday morning, June 10, Elders Francis M. Bishop and J. B. Ansley in charge.

The grove made a beautiful setting for this hour of prayer and testimony and seats were arranged on a hillside. A good number of young men and women participated, expressing a desire to prepare for a more consecrated life. Five members of the branch priesthood are of the young people's division.

At the close of this service much enthusiasm was manifested as officers presented plans for work and association during the warm-weather months. They hope to maintain this enthusiasm and to accomplish the things outlined.

How everyone enjoyed the delicious breakfast prepared over the open fire! Can anything equal a meal cooked out of doors, flavored with the smell of wood-smoke, and eaten under the friendly trees? Then everyone journeyed to the church for church school and Children's Day program.

John Learns What "Being Bad" Means

John's mother simply couldn't fathom him at all. Young as he was, he was unmanageable. He was vulgar at the children's parties he attended, in spite of all she could do to teach him manners. When he was host to some other little children, he made others cry because of his conduct. His first term at school gave further opportunity of rascality, and all his despairing mother did seemed of no avail.

But John had a little dog, and John taught the dog tricks, and the dog was very patient, even when John was rough. One day John kicked the dog with his hob-nailed shoe, and the dog's mouth began to bleed. He licked the blood from his mouth and looked at John with a puzzled look in his big brown eyes. Then with difficulty, for his paws are hurt, too, he stands on his hind legs and licks John's hand!

Suddenly John, who can take a licking without a whimper, bursts into tears and runs into the house, and between his sobs something he has never said before, "I've been a bad boy—I did something bad—I did something bad."

John has learned from the look in the dog's eyes and from the touch on his hand of a dog's wounded mouth, what "being bad" really means. Deliberately to hurt someone who loves us, someone who cannot, or who will not, hurt us in return; someone who in spite of our hurting him, will go on loving us still and giving us another chance to hurt him again.—Howard K. Williams, in Young People's Leader.

Do You Carry an Energy Spare?

Do you carry a spare? Probably you do on your auto; but how about the other factors that carry you on your rounds through life? How about your spare energy?

Reserves are all-important. . . . We have to prepare not only for ordinary demands, by keeping in good trim with good food and good sleep and good work, but for extraordinary ones when we need spare energy.

Nature supplies such reserves. There is a "second wind." When apparently you have come to the end of your going, you grit your teeth and keep on, and presently you get a fresh start. You have tapped your reserve energies. You can prove it in the laboratory on a machine that registers fatigue. Our nervous system is equipped by nature with a spare.

A spare is an emergency-meeting device; and that's what an emotion is. Emotion calls out the reserves. A careful man, always on the alert, looks where he is going; yet we need signs on elevators and subway platforms: "Watch your step." Let there be a real danger and your fear sends out an alarm. Fear may release your reserves. People escaping from a burning building have carried loads and scaled walls which would have been beyond their powers under ordinary calm conditions. . . .

Ordinarily we make no use of our spares, but merely carry them. . . . We don't build a bridge near to the actual burden it will carry. The wise man stops before the breakdown comes, before he uses his last spare to the limit. . . . A vacation is a way of putting a spare on your energy wagon. So is riding a hobby and taking time off and getting together and forgetting your job.

For the most part, we want to play safe and keep well within the speed limit, and watch the gauge on the gas tank of our energy. But when an emergency arises we break the routine of our habits and let our emotions go. If we have cultivated the habit of carrying a "spare," we are equal to the occasion. . . . Everything depends on having the spare all ready and set; for the kind of mind that acts wisely in an emergency carries spare ideas. If there weren't such people, we shouldn't move ahead very fast.—Joseph Jastrow, in Keeping Mentally Fit.

Friday Brings Campus Recreation Night in Independence

"Something important always happens on Friday," laughed a young woman last Friday night at the Campus as she received her "identification" card from the hands of an official.

And something very important happened for one hundred and fifty young people of the center place last Friday. This was the opening evening of the summer's program of Campus recreation for the young people of Independence, the kick-off in a variety of activities.

Volley ball teams, both boys and girls, and their loyal and noisy rooters were there. East Independence has two strong teams for a congregation their size, and they were there to grapple with Stone Church teams. The boys team played five games, East Independence winning the first, Stone Church claiming the following four. The girls played two games, both going to the Stone Church.

A ping pong tournament was another of the evening's events, but time passed so swiftly that contestants got no further than singles for boys.

Some chose to play croquet, but the volley ball courts were by far the most popular place during the entire evening.

Campus recreation this year is made possible by the young people themselves. They were given permission to use the Campus grounds for recreational purposes one night a week if they would finance and provide their entertainment. For a month now young men and women have been preparing the grounds. It has been no unusual sight to see young people, bearing hoes, rakes, and shovels, going in groups or singly to the Campus. And now having prepared the courts, they are ready to play.

To be allowed to participate, each person must hold an identification card showing that he or she is an active class member in own church school organization or in the school of a neighbor church. This is done to stimulate participation in class and club membership and to discourage the presence of idlers. Brother Jim Campbell is in charge of Campus recreation, and is assisted by fellow directors and committees.

Popularity

Lasting Popularity comes when one lives the "abundant life." Poise, grace, charm, reserve, sympathy, tenderness—all the things which make up personality are acquired through experience and practice.—Muriel White Dennis in Training School of Popularity.

After Decision Day--What?

By Arthur Oakman

A NINE-YEAR OLD BOY was recently baptized. As he left the font he paused for a minute and stood looking down at the water. Later his mother said to him, "Frank, why did you stop to look at the water?" His answer rather startled her.

"I wanted to see how black the water was."

After a while she discovered that he expected his sins would have darkened it.

Another child, a little girl, debated a long time before she was baptized. Finally she said to her mother, "I want to be baptized, I want to see if it works."

"What do you mean," questioned her mother—but the child would say no more.

When the ordinance was over, and she was dressing, she turned to her mother with a beaming face "It does work. I feel cleaner than I ever did in my life before."

Quite fanciful, these expressions were, yet they show that these children had some idea that baptism was for the purpose of cleansing them.

Baptism ought to make a difference to children who have been baptized. Whether it should be exactly as in the case of these two mentioned or not does not matter. Something like it should be felt, and will be felt, if the children have beforehand been properly taught. The emotional and spiritual experiences which should accompany baptism, should enable the candidates to look back to them as a spiritual birthday, not merely in point of time, but in fact of experience as well.

Baptism is a new beginning, shall we say, which must be followed with a carefully planned program of teaching, worship, play and activity in service, and which will provide opportunity for this new life to be developed and expressed. The question may well be asked then, "After decision day—what?"

THE CHURCH AND THE PROBLEMS OF CHILDHOOD

The ministry of the children's division is not one of implanting ideas, neither is it one of telling stories, nor is it one where children have to be entertained. It is not to make the children sit still long enough to hear a sermon which has no relation to their lives. This ministry is not only to make good children out of bad ones; it is much more. The real task is to integrate the lives of these children into the life of the church so that they become righteous men and women, effective in building the kingdom of God.

Righteousness is no accident, and neither is the process of teaching people to be righteous accidental. Righteousness has to be taught along definite lines of procedure. The process of teaching is governed by the laws of teaching. The need for righteousness is seen most clearly in those problems of life and conduct which confront our children and in which they have to make decisions as to what they must do. The church must minister so that these decisions when made shall be in consonance with the righteousness of the gospel. This means that ministry in the children's division should be most keenly aware of what these problems are. Any ministry not related to them is inefficient.

KNOWING THE PROBLEMS

How shall these problems be known? Many ways of gaining an appreciation of them might be suggested: visiting with the parents of the children and finding out from them where the children are helpful and where they are not; where the parents find difficulty, and what the strong points of the children are; visiting with the friends of the children will often help; a study of the general psychology of that age will most certainly reveal what general tendencies are to be expected; and most clearly will these problems be revealed to the minister or teacher who makes a case-study of each child under his care.

Some of the most frequent manifestations of moral lack are, cheating in school, dislike of teachers, dislike of other children especially those of other races, untidiness at home, unwillingness to obey parents. These are the actual points on which a gospel of repentance should be manifest.

APPROACHING THE PROBLEMS

Class work in the church school must be related to these problems. They may be approached through a story in which the particular problem is revealed. This should be told in such a way as to cause the children to be eager to discuss it. Never moralize on a story or do the thinking of the children for them. When discussion has been evoked it should be led to a point where the children make a decision themselves. It is up to the leader to see that the decision reached is a righteous one.

When this decision is reached, it must be impressed so that what the child has decided to do in his mind, shall be done in his life. This may be done through a drama, a game, or some other means. It is most important that these decisions be related to the child's concept of God, or rather, let us say, to

God. They should be made a part of his religious life. When decisions have been reached by common consent of the class, a prayer asking for help to keep the resolution might be well. Or maybe the singing of a hymn, or the relation to a passage of Scripture might serve to spiritualize the decision.

God-consciousness is the major condition in which righteousness is born. Every available opportunity to make this consciousness a part of the life of the child should be created and used in the teaching methods of the church. It may be that every class period will not follow a definite routine, but somewhere in the class work these principles ought to obtain: there should be a choice of problems definitely related to the life of the children; these problems should be approached with the objective of helping the children reach a righteous decision in regard to them; and then they should be related to God, spiritualized and carried over into the life of the child.

It is imperative that the parents know what is being done in the church school so that they can aid the children in making these decisions part of their life and conduct.

This problem-approach is one part of the duty of the church in teaching repentance and continuous adjustment to the will of God. The other part is related to the constructive work to which the energies of children should be harnessed after they are baptized.

PUTTING CHILDREN TO WORK

We learn by what we do. Everything we do does something to us. In the process of actual life, we do first, feel next, and think last. Knowledge therefore comes from doing. We have to introduce children to a new experience, and sustain them in it. They must feel what it is like to serve God and follow Jesus. They can never get this by merely thinking about it, because as they have done, so they think, and if they have been living crookedly, their thinking also will be distorted. We must teach our children to do right, thinking right will come afterwards. In other words the church is a laboratory in which children are corrected, disciplined and helped in the way of Christ. We must put newly baptized people to work.

This means that we must have some idea of the type of life to be lived. We should teach our children light and truth from the fund of our own church experience, experience which has been in a measure born from Divine Revelation.

Tithing and junior stewardships are part of the law of God. Complying with them will help people so doing to become righteous. Children may also be taught to sacrifice for the church. They should be taught to invite others to come to Sunday school.

They may assist in the family worship at home. They should help in the worship of the church. A hundred ways might be enumerated which would help children feel they are following Christ, and serving the church. Cleaning class rooms, decorating and bringing flowers, visiting other sick children, where possible, are some of these ways. They should participate in this work because they have been taught to love Jesus, and as they do so His Spirit will come to them in an increasing measure, and will be its own reward. We do not have to bribe children to be good.

THE LORD'S SUPPER

With these two phases of church ministry, that of approaching the problems of childhood, and that of putting the children to work constructively in the church, we come to the sacrament service. As it was necessary for the candidates to come to baptism with an appreciation of its significance, so also is it necessary for them to come to the sacrament with a like appreciation. The basis for this appreciation ought to be laid in the actual work of the church school. This we have divided provisionally into the two phases discussed above. The children should come to the sacrament service with a petition for forgiveness, and to state their intention of serving Christ. As the covenant was made in baptism, so it should be renewed in sacrament service. It is absolutely essential that the sacrament comes to mean this to the children. The service must be related to the class work, and to the service activities in the church school. The materials for this service must be related to the lives of those participating.

An appreciation of the sacrament prayer has a definite place in preparation for the sacrament. By this we do not mean a repetition of the words of the prayer, but an appreciation of its meaning, so that when the prayer is read, the children will not be thinking of the word that comes next, but will have the emotional experiences of really "Doing this in remembrance of Thy Son," and dedicating their lives anew to the service of God.

Certain passages of Scripture might also be given meaning and then memorized. It is not a good thing to have these too short, because a longer passage takes longer to learn hence is more deeply impressed. Psalms twenty-three, one, nineteen, ninety-one, etc., the thirteenth of first Corinthians, the sixth of Ephesians, the Beatitudes can be used in worship on appropriate occasions. The Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants are also rich in worship material of this kind.

Throughout the whole service the thread of asking forgiveness and renewing their pledge should run, so that at no time (Continued on page 780.)

Seeking After Truth

PART II

WHY SUCH A STUDY?

Why pursue such a study? The careful student will answer, because he desires to know the truth and to do so he must, by the help of the Spirit of God, consider all that is presented. In the midst of much that is disagreeable and even very obnoxious a great truth may still be gleaned. For example, in demonology, the direct statement is made that no power is given to satanic forces over the man who is pure in heart, who lives righteously and loves his fellow man. No power is given them whatever to harm or affect such. This is not dissimilar to statements in the New Testament according to which the demons recognized the power of Jesus and of Peter and Paul.

There are some aspects which our prejudice will naturally oppose and which we may call in serious question. While the Theosophists present Enoch as one who walked and talked with God, Abraham as the friend of God and one possessing superior powers, they present Jesus as a Savior of the world but claim there are other saviors, each sent in his time by the Lord of life. They published a journal called Lucifer and placed Lucifer in a much higher rank than Jesus. After a very careful study we cannot for a moment accept this assumption. That there is a record of various great teachings, that Moses was sent, and when the children of Israel would not receive the revelations of God he gave them a schoolmaster, makes it easy for us to believe that the Lord of life has sent great teachers to other people to help them return to the time and condition when the truth may be received by them.

WHAT THE CHURCH TEACHES

Now for a moment we may turn to consider what are the teachings of our church on some of these questions. As to primeval revelation that is taught in the Bible. It is even more clearly set forth in the Inspired Version of Holy Scriptures. It is presented in the Book of Mormon and in the Doctrine and Covenants. That the holy priesthood was on earth from the beginning and was lost only when the children of Israel were unwilling to receive it. Doctrine and Covenants 83: 3.)

It is of interest to find that the sacred books of India and of other places in the Orient confirm this story. Herein lies a truth we will consider a little later.

SECRET DOCTRINE

There is the tradition which they assert of great leaders which were not manifest even to the adept. We find them in novels, as the story of The Wandering Jew by Lew Wallace. We find in the Bible that the beloved disciple John desired to tarry until Jesus again comes and win souls to him. The Book of Mormon tells us that the three Nephites expressed a similar desire. Some of these are well worth our reading. These three were not to taste of death. (3 Nephi 13.) It is plainly stated that the prisons could not hold them, that they were able to smite the earth by the power of God, that thrice they were cast into the furnace and suffered no harm; twice were cast into a den of wild beasts and received no harm but played with them; that they were to minister unto the scattered tribes of Israel and unto all nations, kindred, tongues and people. (3 Nephi 13:16-40.) A change had taken place in them so they did not taste death but felt only sorrow for the sins of the world, but it was not the great change which takes place at the last day. It is stated that if they shall pray to the Father in the name of Jesus they can show themselves unto whatsoever man seemeth them good. (3 Nephi 13:42.) It is also stated that they did appear to Mormon and Moroni and ministered unto them, as follows:

"And there are none that do know the true God, save it be the disciples of Jesus, who did tarry in the land until the wickedness of the people was so great that the Lord would not suffer them to remain with the people; and whether they be upon the face of the land, no man knoweth. But behold, my father and I have seen them, and they have ministered unto us. And whoso receiveth this record, and shall not condemn it because of the imperfections which are in it, the same shall know of greater things than these."—Book of Mormon 4: 12-14.

This answers not only the question of great brothers possessing divine power, but also as possessing miraculous powers and a control over the forces of nature. This we do not believe is a control simply of a mysticism but is done through the power of the Highest and through righteousness.

A BOOK OF DIVINE WISDOM

There is much confusion in tradition yet there is a tradition handed down of great and wonderful records preserved from the past. The Book of Mormon plainly teaches that there is such a record. (2 Nephi 11:125-132 and 143-145.) These things are seen and it is stated several times that this record contains a revelation from God from the beginning of the world to the end thereof. That they cannot be delivered in the time of the abomination and wickedness of the world, that they will be kept until the own due time of the Lord. It is clearly indicated that there must first be a holy and a righteous people, those that are pure in heart, before the sealed book can come forth. Reference is also made to it in Ether 2: 98-109.

We are told also in the Book of Mormon of the warning that through their wickedness all that was stored up would be lost unless it was laid up unto the Lord.

"And behold, if a man hide up a treasure in the earth, and the Lord shall say, Let it be accursed, because of the iniquity of him who hath hid it up, behold, it shall be accursed; and if the Lord shall say, Be thou accursed, that no man shall find thee from this time henceforth and for ever, behold, no man getteth it henceforth and forever."—Helaman 4: 65, 66.

"And behold, a curse shall come upon the land, saith the Lord of Hosts, because of the people's sake who are upon the land; yea, because of their wickedness and their abominations. And it shall come to pass saith the Lord of Hosts, yea, our great and true God, that whoso shall hide up treasures in the earth, shall find them again no more, because of the great curse of the land, save he be a righteous man, and shall hide it up unto the Lord, for I will, saith the Lord, that they shall hide up their treasures unto me; and cursed be they who hide not up their treasures unto me; for none hideth up their treasures unto me save it be the righteous; And he that hideth not up his treasure unto me, cursed is he, and also the treasure, and none shall redeem it because of the curse of the land. And the day shall come that they shall hide up their treasures, because they have set their hearts upon riches; and because they have set their hearts upon their riches, and will hide up their treasures when they shall flee before their enemies, because they will not hide them up unto me, cursed be they, and also their treasures; and in that day shall they be smitten, saith the Lord."—Helaman 5: 22-27.

"Yea, behold the anger of the Lord is already kindled against you; behold, he hath cursed the land, because of your iniquity; and behold, the time cometh that he curseth your riches, that it become slippery, that ye cannot hold them; and in the days of your poverty, ye cannot retain them; and in the days of your poverty, ye shall cry unto the Lord; and in vain shall ye cry, for your desolation is already come upon you, and your destruction is made sure; And then shall ye weep and howl in that day, saith the Lord of Hosts. And then shall ye lament, and say, O that I had repented, and had not killed the prophets, and stoned them, and cast them out; Yea, in that day ye shall say, O that we had remembered the Lord our God, in the day that he gave us our riches, and then they would not have become slippery, that we should lose them; for behold, our riches are gone from us. Behold, we lay a tool here, and on the morrow it is gone; and behold, our swords are taken from us in the day we have sought them for battle, Yea, we have hid up our treasures, and they have slipped away from us, because of the curse of the land. O that we had repented in the day that the word of the Lord came unto us; for behold the land is cursed, and all things have become slippery, and we cannot hold them. Behold we are surrounded by demons, yea, we are encircled about by the angels of him who hath sought to destroy our souls. Behold, our iniquities are great. O Lord, canst thou not turn away thine anger from us? And this shall be your language in those days. But behold, your days of probation are past: ye have procrastinated the day of your salvation until it is everlastingly too late, and your destruction is made sure."—Helaman 5: 41-51.

This last contains the distinct statement that if a tool is laid down, on the morrow it is gone; their swords are taken in the day they want them for battle. They have hid up treasures but lost them. They are surrounded by demons and encircled by the angels of him who has sought the destruction of our souls. Again:

"And now there began to be a great curse upon the land, because of the iniquity of the people, in which, if a man should lay his tool or his sword upon the shelf, or upon the place whither he would keep it, and behold, upon the morrow, he could not find it, so great was the curse upon the land. Wherefore every man did cleave unto that which was his own, with his hands, and would not borrow, neither would he lend; and every man kept the hilt of his sword thereof in his right hand, in the defense of his property and his own life, and of his wives and children."—Ether 6: 35, 36.

SHOULD WE JOIN THESE ORDERS?

The question may naturally arise, if true principles are set forth by these mystic orders, why should we not even leave the church to go with them? Those, however, who are entering into these different associations or societies will themselves inform us that there is no conflict. One may belong to any church he desires and still join any secret order, including Theosophy and Rosicrucianism. These latter, however, claim that the time will come that the church will no longer satisfy or be needed.

There is, after all, a clear issue to be made, for every truth that is to be found in any other organization is possible within the church. There is no scientific truth that can contradict divine wisdom and divine truth. These organizations do in the end divide the interest and finally tend to lead away.

We do not deny for a moment the truth therein presented, but it is right to consider how best this truth may be approached and secured.

Of this several parallels or illustrations may be made. Years ago in an adult class the question was asked, "Do men know anything about the human mechanism or how it is that the laying on of hands will heal the sick?" The answer was made by a high priest, "No, we do not know and I am glad we do not, for if we did men would take it and sell it for money." That answer is incorrect in both respects. We do know enough of the physical and psychological life of man to understand how faith may work for the healing of the body. The facts are that this and much more is known and that men have been and are selling it for money.

HEALING THE SICK

In this connection it is interesting to note the warning in theosophical books against going to such healers, that they heal by mental suggestion, an approach to hypnotism, if not fully so. In any event they impress their own mentality upon the sick individual and at times when he is least able to resist. The body may be healed, but the latter end of that man, mentally and spiritually, may be worse than the beginning; so that the healing of the body is really a resulting curse rather than a blessing, because the higher powers of man are so much more important and vital than are the physical. Better disease or even death, than that the soul and higher intelligence of man should be thus infringed and polluted. We are told also that when the divine power heals it cleanses both heart and mind. There is not only the healing of the body but a blessing in mind and spirit.

This appears to us to be a direct and sound warning, that whatever others may do we have that divine approach. No true elder ever seeks to impress his personality upon the sick, but his whole prayer and thought and spiritual power is reaching on high asking that the Spirit of God may be there manifest.

We often note the first part of James 5: 14 and 15 which says:

"Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up";

but how often do we note that closing clause, "and if he have committed any sins they shall be forgiven him."

This may and probably does mean the sin of wrong living which has brought about the condition of illness, but it may and often does mean a blessing to the soul of man, to his spirit and mind, purifying the whole man and not only his body. Those who go aside to seek such healing elsewhere are running into a very grave danger. Those who look at it in a purely material way still recognize that many have thus been led aside from the whole truth of God; for the healing of the sick, though a part of the divine message, is only a part, as nothing that concerns the material and the physical can represent the highest good that our heavenly Father has for us.

MYSTIC POWER

Those who have studied this mysticism of the past, carried forth in part in its modern manifestation, tell us of the time when man possessed a control over the powers of nature, that there is a divine power by which the lesser and lower is dominated and controlled and used, that God will not permit this holy and divine power to be used for selfish ends, that it was because in the remote ages of the past, as men became carnal and selfish and some attempted so to use this divine wisdom and knowledge, that the world was destroyed by a flood. Lemuria was sunk in the deep. Atlantis, which once by tradition possessed the truth of the ages, was likewise sunk in the deep. These are various forms of the story—a story which we find confirmed in Holy Writ.

Now some of those who claim to be adepts would claim that the church gets its truth from this ancient source as handed down through the ages. We deny this, but that these traditions of the past are connected with the real truth we do not deny, as this only confirms that which has been already revealed to us.

They speak of a lesser or black magic, that things became slippery. From the passages in the Book of Mormon above referred to we will see that on the American continent this was quite confirmed. They stated definitely that they were surrounded with demons, with angels of the lowest rank, that a man could not lay down a tool without it becoming slippery, that he had to keep his hand on his sword so as to have it in time of battle. There was, however, an exception: those who laid up treasures to the Lord, who were not seeking a selfish end, their property was safe, while the property of the unrighteous slipped away. It does not take much imagination to see that we may be entering upon a similar period in this day and age.

The Holden Stake Conference

By Clifford Long

The Institute

PRESIDENT F. M. MCDOWELL

One hundred and fifty young people of Holden Stake from fourteen different branches attended every session of the institute held on Saturday, and Sunday morning, June 9 and 10. At the young people's banquet on Friday night there were more than two hundred persons attending.

"This is the best conference I've seen for attendance and interest," said President Floyd M. McDowell. "The attendance on Saturday here is much better than in many of the city groups."

"The biggest gathering of our stake young people I've seen," was the description given by W. S. Macrae, who recently resigned, because of poor health, from the office of president of the stake.

Before President McDowell, in one of the class sessions, could say, "Farming is dead wrong if it is planned with no leisure time provided," the young Holden Stake farmers and "farmerettes," one hundred and fifty strong, had already followed his advice by taking a Saturday off, of all days of the weeks, for some leisure time—and had spent that leisure time in an effort to learn how to make further growth spiritually and with the church.

A fact that may be of considerable significance was that more young people actually attended the class sessions throughout the day than went to the program held at seven-thirty that night.

Throughout the week-end gathering of young people there was a spirit of earnestness and unity; many said that their only purpose in coming to the institute and conference was to find out how, more specifically, they might help the work of the church.

Members of the fourteen branches apparently made no effort to stay together in branch groups, but everyone was a friend, a comrade to everyone else. Joseph Beebe, volley ball coach of Atherton, said he had never seen such an intermingling of the members of different branches.

The institute sessions were conducted by President F. M. McDowell and Elder C. B. Woodstock. These men emphasized a program for the young people of Holden Stake involving five main points:

1. Know your church.
2. Keep the law.
3. Give in service.
4. Make leisure creative.
5. Cultivate the power of sustained righteousness.

Five class periods were held, each one of which was concerned with one of the five points in the program. Mimeographed sheets of definite suggestions for fulfilling each program were passed to each visitor and member.

Max Constance, attending the conference from Warrensburg, received the highest score on a test given as part of the first point, "Know your church." Of twenty-six questions about the history and organization of the church, Brother Constance missed only two.

Nina Amundsen, Atherton, was second in the test with three errors. Ocie Moody, Holden, was next with four, and her sister Opal followed her with five mistakes.

As the institute closed, many young people commented, "I'm awfully glad

Appointments

Amos E. Allen, who has been a counselor to the bishop of the stake, was set apart at the Holden Stake conference Sunday, June 10, as acting president of the stake. He takes the place of W. S. Macrae, who was forced to resign under his doctor's orders.

As counselor to the new president, Elder James A. Thomas, pastor at Atherton, was set apart to assist Brother Allen in the work of the stake. Brother Allen requested more time before suggesting the other counselor.

The young people of the stake came into their own in the work of the stake with the appointment and setting apart of Earl Higdon as a member of the stake bishopric. Brother Higdon was given further responsibility by his appointment as director of religious education for Holden Stake.

Gomer Wells, who has been director of religious education in the stake as well as stake missionary, was relieved of his directorship in order to receive appointment to a new post—pastor to the scattered members of the stake, who are away from branches and from other Saints and need some contact with the church.

Bernice Hampton was appointed chorus director for the stake.

All appointees were approved unanimously by the conference. They all took their appointments and started on their new work in a spirit of consecrated service. With this spirit, and with the attitude of the young people, Holden Stake will forge ahead!

Enlisting Junior Stewards

By Fern Weedmark

The way in which a project or activity is begun is of vast importance to its chance for development and success. It is most essential that the participant's interest be firmly established in the very beginning. Unless this is accomplished, the progress of the activity will be most uncertain. A second point to remember is that most effective learning takes place through practice with satisfaction. Therefore, as we seek to enlist our boys and girls in the junior stewardship movement, let us remember that the idea or plan must be presented to them in an attractive, challenging way; and that in the process of becoming a junior steward the boys and girls must be guided into happy and satisfying experiences. We want them to feel that this business of being a steward is a worth while and joyous experience. We want them to remember God in all they receive by practicing the principle of tithing. The junior stewardship movement affords this opportunity in an interesting, businesslike way.

There will need to be the closest cooperation among those of the branch upon whom the responsibility rests: the pastor, the sponsor, the children's leader and parents.

One way to arouse and develop the children's interest in the project is to have an appropriate story told each Sunday for several weeks. This will create atmosphere and background desirable for a good beginning. Another plan is the building of a worship service around the theme "Stewardship." Scripture, hymns, stories and sermon talks by the pastor will make the service meaningful to the children. (Suggested "Stewardship" worship services will be in the Children's Division Worship Suggestions for July. These have been published in a June number of the Herald and include a number of story suggestions and many other source helps pertaining to the subject.)

The sponsor of the junior stewardship work in the branch should be chosen with much forethought and consideration. The success of the new project will depend much upon the personality of this person. His (or her) enthusiasm, patience and consecration to this important task will be determining factors in the continuous growth of the project. Many times it is not a difficult matter to start a thing, but to keep up the enthusiasm and interest as time goes by is a large task; and this is the specific work of the sponsor.

An Evening Hymn We Like to Sing

By L. B. M.

For outdoor singing there are few hymns more appropriate and more pleasing than Mary A. Lathbury's "Day Is Dying in the West." It is outstandingly an evening hymn by nature of its content and by its restful, almost lullaby-like melody.

"Day is dying in the west:
Heaven is touching earth with rest;
Wait and worship while the night
Sets her evening lamps alight
Through all the sky.

"Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hosts!
Heaven and earth are full of thee,
Heaven and earth are praising thee,
O Lord most high!"

Can't you hear it?—words, music, beauty on the summer air? Worshipfully, reverently, I have heard the summer Campus congregation sing it in Independence as the sun, a glowing, golden disk, sank behind the housetops not far from the Auditorium dome. How our thoughts have lingered on the "Holy, holy, holy—"! We wonder if the author found part of her inspiration for the writing of the hymn from Psalms, "The heavens declare the glory of God," and "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof."

"Day Is Dying in the West" is a popular camp song. Boys and girls, young people, and those not so young find pleasure in singing it as evening draws on. Comfort and new understanding of the Divine come to one in singing, as the woods' shadows darken about the camp-fire circle, this, my favorite verse:

"While the deepening shadows fall,
Heart of Love, enfolding all,
Through the glory and the grace
Of the stars that veil thy face,
Our hearts ascend."

May A. Lathbury, the author, was known as the "Laureate of Chautauqua." She was born at Manchester, New York, the daughter of a Methodist minister. In 1874, she was engaged by Dr. John H. Vincent as assistant in the editorial department of the Methodist Sunday School Union, and through this was able to keep in touch with the chautauqua movement from the beginning. In this connection she wrote for Bible study groups "Break Thou the Bread of Life," and "Day Is Dying in the West" both of which are in our Saints' Hymnal.

The words of this evening hymn were set to music by William F. Sherwin in 1877.

Autobiography of William Lewis

Part Two

WAITING FOR DIVINE CONFIRMATION

Shortly after this we moved to Brookfield, fourteen miles east, where as I have already told you, my parents came into the Reorganized church. On the sixteenth of February, 1866, I, too, was baptized.

The day of my baptism was cold. Several inches of ice had to be cut for the ordinance. After the baptism I had to walk about a quarter of a mile to the house to change my clothes. They were frozen stiff, but, strange as it may seem to the reader, I was warm. Elder W. D. Williams baptized me, and I was confirmed by Elder John J. Morgan and Brother Williams in a meeting of the Saints on Sunday.

I was very anxious to receive the Holy Spirit in my confirmation. While the elders had their hands on my head I was hoping that the good Master would bless me with the gift of prophecy, but I was disappointed. Still my faith in the promise that signs would follow the believer, was unshaken.

Some months passed and I could not say that the doctrine I had accepted was of the Lord. The promise of Jesus found in John 7: 17: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself," gave me courage to continue in my effort to obtain the knowledge.

Several who had come into the church after I had, testified that they knew the work was of God. My brother and two sisters younger than I had received testimony, and still I had not. As I attended the meetings I took part in song and prayer, and heard various ones, young and old, testify that they had received a witness of the truthfulness of the work. Some had enjoyed the gifts of the Spirit, tongues, interpretations of tongues, prophecy. Others had been healed by the anointing of oil and laying on of hands. All of this was encouraging and in harmony with the Scriptures (see 1 Corinthians 12; Mark 16: 12-19).

Still I could not say that I knew the church was of the Lord, neither could I say that there was a God and that Jesus Christ was his Son. No one had stronger faith in the Lord and in his work—it seemed to me—than I had, and still I had not received of the Spirit as others had.

I remarked to father one Sunday morning, "Why is it I cannot testify of the divinity of this work as I have heard others?" At this I could see that father was surprised. He was blessed with the gift of tongues and prophecy. "Have you no testimony?" I said, "No." "Well, is not your understanding enlightened?" he asked, "Can you not see that according to the Bible, this church is right?"

In other words are not the Scriptures much more plain to you than they were before you came into the church and can you not see that it is according to the pattern of the church of the New Testament, that this church is in perfect harmony with it in organization, doctrine, gifts and blessings?" I answered, "Yes, but one reason I understand the Scriptures better is because I have read and studied more." "You believe the Scriptures, do you not?" "Yes." "Then you can see that this church is according to the pattern laid down in them?" All of this was plain to me, but I explained to my father! "I do not know whether the Scriptures are true; neither do I know that there is a God and for months I have been striving to get what is promised to all that believe and obey, a knowledge of the work." Father advised me to continue to be humble, prayerful and faithful, assuring me that I should receive sufficient evidence.

I TALK WITH ONE WHO PREFERS DARKNESS TO LIGHT

In the midst of this trial—for it had become a trial to me—I was invited to come and spend a noon hour with Mr. Levy Lewis who said he wanted to have a talk with me. I wondered what he wanted to talk about, but supposed it would be along religious matters.

Mr. Lewis was one of the leading members in the Welsh Congregational Church and was nearly the age of my father, and I was only a lad of eighteen years. "Well," I thought, "if it is about the church he wishes to talk, I believe that I have more Scripture in support of ours than he has of his," and despite the difference in our ages I did not fear to meet him in private conversation on church matters.

I stored my mind with all the Bible I could in favor of our faith, and was prepared to show that his church had little Scripture in its favor, while ours was supported from all sides.

Mr. Lewis was a miner and I drove mules, hauling the cars of coal from the rooms to the foot of the shaft. This was a slope some five hundred feet from the top to the bottom. This slope pitched at an angle of about twelve inches to the yard. The coal was taken up the slope with a wire rope or cable, two cars at a time; each car had about one ton and a half of coal. The steam engine was on top. The mines were known as the "Brookfield Slope." I am mentioning this for the benefit of those who have had no experience around coal mines. There were seven of us boys who hauled the cars from the mines to the bottom of the slope, and at noon hour we usually went outside to eat our lunch. The miners did not go until they had finished their days work.

According to my promise, I called on Mr. Lewis and as we only had one hour, our conversation commenced at once by his asking me this question: "Can you, William, say that you know that the church you are a member of is approved by the Lord? Do you say as I have heard some of your brethren say, that they know the church of the Latter Day Saints is the Church of Christ?"

At this time I was not prepared to answer in the affirmative, and I inquired why he should ask that question of me knowing that I had not been a member long. Could he not believe the testimony of these men? Were they not, so far as he knew, honest and truthful? Yes, he considered them such, but said, "I know that you led a good moral life before uniting with the Saints, and I have confidence in what you say. Some of these men had for years been addicted to drink, and it has been only about one year that they have lived sober lives. Now the burden of their conversation is the church and what they know. I cannot believe that they have received what they claim. To me it seems inconsistent for them to talk as they do after leading the lives they have for years. I have always lived a good, honest, sober life and have been a member of the Congregational Church from my boyhood, and I cannot say now that I have received what they say they have."

"You seem to think," I said, "that because they made no profession of religion prior to their uniting with the Saints' church it is impossible for you to believe that the Lord has blessed them as they claim?" "That is my position," he affirmed; "now I want you to answer my question. What do you say?"

I wanted to evade answering, for while I believed the testimonies of my brethren were true, I could not testify as they did, so I said, "Do you believe that Paul received visions and revelations from God?" "Oh, yes." "Was he not a wicked man prior to his receiving that vision? Was he not on his way then to persecute the Saints?" "Yes, but he was a chosen vessel afterwards to do the work of the Lord." "True; are these men not doing good work? Are they not supporting their families, living good, honest, upright, sober lives and trying to get you and others to obey the gospel? If Paul was blessed after turning over a new leaf, why cannot the Lord bless these men? Again, did not the Lord give the Holy Spirit to the people in Samaria after they had obeyed the gospel? Did not Peter say on the Day of Pentecost that all who repented and were baptized should receive the Holy Ghost and that the promise was to all, even to as many as the Lord would call? Do you believe the Lord is calling today?" "Oh, yes." "Then why find fault with the Lord for making his promise good to men in our day?"

"But, William, you have not answered my question. Now, tell me what you know." I then tried to answer by asking him a question, but he held me to his request and would not let me wander off. I was forced to tell what I knew, and I would have given the world—if I had had it—if I could have said what some of my brothers had told him. I replied, "Mr. Lewis, I am a young man and young in the church, but I believe with all my heart and soul that this is the church of Christ." I was going to present some Scripture in support of my faith when he said, "Here! I do not question your belief, but what do you know? I have believed all my life that the Congregational Church is approved of the Lord, but I do not know it, and as some of your brethren say they know the Saints' church is right I thought I would ask you. Now answer me."

While I had much light on the subject, still I could not say that I had received a testimony such as I had hoped I would. So I said, "I have heard the gift of tongues, the interpretation of tongues, prophecy; some who say they were sick were prayed for and anointed with oil and they were healed. I have heard and seen this."

"Did you speak in tongues?" "No." "Did you prophesy?" "No. "Have you been healed by the laying on of hands and the anointing with oil by the elders?" "No, but I was in poor health when I came into the church and now I am in good health." "But you were not healed by the laying on of hands?" "No." "So you cannot say that you have received any of the gifts and you do not say that you know the church is the Church of Christ." "I do not say that it is not." "Well, that is not the question!" "I do say that the church I am a member of now is in harmony with the church of the New Testament. You can't say that of yours for you do not believe in the manifestation of spiritual gifts, nor in present-day apostles and prophets, do you?" "I believe that these were in the church in the apostolic age. Now you have not yet answered my question."

So to this I replied, "I cannot at this time say that I know positively that the church is the Church of Christ." At this he seemed to be highly pleased and said, "I thought you would tell me the truth."

Thinking over this matter in years afterwards, I could see that this person preferred darkness to light, for had he been anxious for light, in place of being glad when I said that I could not say I knew the church was the Lord's, he would have been sad.

BLESSED WITH TESTIMONY

The above experience created in me a greater anxiety for a testimony. I lived as close to the Lord as I could and continued much in prayer. I am glad that during this long time my faith was strong in the work, save it be for short periods. I could see that God had a church on the earth; that judging from the Scriptures, it must be the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

In the vicinity of our home there were members of the Brighamite Church, some followers of Sidney Rigdon and others. They all testified that the Lord blessed them in answer to prayer. Still I could see that the Reorganized Church was more in harmony with the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants.

The long-sought testimony came, but not in the way I had thought it would. I had fasted and prayed that the Lord would bless me with the gift of prophecy at the time of my confirmation. I was hoping I would be blessed with the gift of tongues or prophecy, thinking that either of them would be testimony enough to me of the divinity of the work. I had overlooked the saying of Paul that these precious gifts were given not always as man chose, but as he, God, and the Spirit will. (1 Corinthians 12: 11.)

Some months after my baptism, I was down in the coal mines. Why the Lord should commune with me there I cannot say, and I never have found any fault. That dark and lonesome spot, hidden from the sunlight of day, is sacred and dear to me. When I think of the glorious manifestation of the Holy Spirit which came, I believe, by virtue of my continual pleading with the Lord, truly that place, down in the bowels of the earth, was made sacred!

I had been praying and I was sitting down when suddenly without any outward demonstration there came into my soul a heavenly influence such as I never had witnessed. With it came a light, and my understanding was quickened. I could say that which I never had been able to say, that there was a God and that Jesus Christ was his Son. Without the Bible, Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants, I could truthfully say this. I was made conscious of the fact that the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, had come. I know—as well as I know I breathe—that it did come to me and was the means of giving positive assurance that the form of doctrine I had obeyed was the Lord's and that this was his church. From that time I have been able to say truthfully, "Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God."

I do not speak of the glorious message in a boastful way. Often I have thanked the Lord for manifesting himself unto me in the way he did. Paul said, "No man can say that Jesus is the Christ but by the Holy Ghost." I know that I could not have said it.

In a later conversation with Mr. Levy Lewis I testified to him that I could truthfully say that this was the true church of Christ. He replied that he did not believe I would tell a falsehood, but that I had been deceived. Thank God, that over forty-one years have demonstrated to me the truthfulness of the above message. Time and time again has the good Lord confirmed it to me. At the judgment bar I shall meet all to which I have testified, to the condemnation of some.

BEGINNING IN THE PRIESTHOOD

Shortly after this I was ordained a priest and it once entered upon the work. I was requested by the branch president to visit the Saints at least once a month and to report at the meeting of the branch officers which was held every two weeks. The branch had a membership of sixty-five, including twelve elders, three priests, two teachers. Services consisted of prayer meeting at 7 a. m. Sunday; Sunday school at 9 a. m., and preaching at 10:30 a. m.; sacrament meeting at 2 p. m. every Sunday, then preaching at 6 p. m.; prayer meetings every Tuesday at 7 p. m. This was exclusively a prayer hour, and on Thursday at 7 p. m. a prayer and testimony meeting was held. Nearly all the Saints lived within a ten-minute walk of the place of service which was in a log house built for this purpose by my father on our land.

Brothers W. W. Blair and Elijah Banta made us a ten days' visit. Brother Blair said that Elder John T. Phillips had been sent to labor here by direction of the Lord in a night vision. Those who had found fault with Brother Blair for his previous short visit—including my father—had since seen the wisdom in sending Elder Phillips for he could preach in Welsh and did a good work. Brother Blair was highly pleased with the condition of the branch and the prospects for the work in that part of Ohio. Of the twelve elders in the branch some of them were able and spiritual men. Brother Blair said that this was one of the most spiritual branches he had seen in the church, one that seemed to observe the law and order closely. At this time the gifts were enjoyed by many, even little girls of twelve to fifteen years of age prophesied.

I sought the Lord earnestly for the gift of prophecy. I fasted for one week, that is, I ate only dry bread and drank cold water. It was quite a task for me to sit down with my folks to eat and take only bread and water, without their detecting it, but I succeeded in doing so. I can now see that I went too far for one of my age and for one working every day in the mines, but the experience of Daniel in eating no pleasant food for twenty-one days encouraged me to so do. I did not realize that he was a man of experience and that his line of daily

Improvement of Instruction

By C. B. Woodstock

It may well be considered that the three outstanding purposes of the church in our day are these: Evangelism, or the spreading of the gospel of Jesus Christ in all the world; Nurture or the teaching ministry of the church to its membership, providing for spiritual growth and service; and the Building of Zion, or the perfecting of a plan of social life in a "gathered" condition, where the principles of righteousness and truth may be more fully demonstrated and enjoyed. These are closely related and together include the major objectives of the church. While the church school is concerned chiefly with the teaching ministry, church school officers, teachers and leaders also have consciously in mind the necessity of making all the services of the school evangelistic, and every activity a contributing force in the process of Zion building. Thus only may we contribute our part in the important work of the Restoration.

IMPORTANCE OF THE WORK OF INSTRUCTION

Human nature is so constructed that each generation is capable of making the achievements of the race its own, through the learning process. That is, humanity is teachable.

Boys and girls have minds and nervous systems capable of growth and development. They respond not only to instinct, but their minds utilize the powers of perception, imagery, memory, reason and judgment. Each generation faces anew the intricate and perplexing problems incident to human life. Each new generation is venturesome, prompted by nature to test its own powers, but it is folly to disregard the lessons of humanity gained by painful experience. In our schools the valuable experiences of the race are relived in textbook, in laboratory, class discussion and in project. The present is interpreted in terms of the past, and the experiences of the past are brought to bear upon the problems of today. This makes progress possible.

The teaching of religion follows the same natural laws. Teachers and leaders of the church school are responsible for the interpretation of life in terms of religious experiences, and for the building of religious ideals and loyalties in terms of everyday life. And this is a most important responsibility. We must capitalize the experience of the past if we are to maintain the standards of the church and build men and women who shall progressively stand on higher ground and catch an ever-broadening and clearing vision of the purpose and plan of the gospel of Jesus Christ. This is to say that we who teach must have the qualifications of personality, knowledge, conviction and mastery of the technics of teaching that may give us the ability to minister effectively in the teaching task of the church. So important is this teaching task to the progress and development of the church that our lack of efficiency in the recent past may be a chief hindering cause in the way of Zion's redemption. The gospel must be effectively taught.

THE WORK OF SUPERVISION

Under the church school plan, the pastor is made responsible to general church authorities for the administration of the total program within a branch. Of necessity this includes the important work of religious education as carried on through the church school. But the pastor is generally too busy with other duties to give personal attention to the details of organization, administration and supervision of instruction within the school. He is usually permitted, however, as a part of his supervisory function, to nominate his choice of a director of the church school in the branch. It is a happy situation when this choice, made carefully and prayerfully, can be endorsed by a unanimous vote of the branch. It then becomes the chief duty of the church school director to supervise the work of the school, carrying into effect the plan and program of religious education for his branch as provided by the church, with the counsel and direction of the pastor.

The director of the church school, in turn, may nominate the three age group supervisors: children's, young people's, and adults'. With these he works out the details of organization, curriculum, and program for the school. Again, a most important function, either of the director himself, or of each of the supervisors in his division of the school, is the actual supervision of the instruction which takes place. The actual teaching of the lessons must be true, adequate, suited to age, interests and needs of the respective classes. Class work must be interesting, stimulating, convincing, must carry over into the daily lives, and must definitely help achieve the objectives of the church. The teacher must be a master of his subject, must be adept in the use of appropriate classroom method and skilled in the technics of teaching. Above all there must be a spirit of reverent study, inquiry and participation, a mutual sharing of worthwhile experiences and a challenge to high endeavor.

SELECTION OF TEACHERS

The first task of supervision consists in the selection of the teachers to whom we shall commit the teaching work of a certain class. We must be sure that in personality, in initiative, in resourcefulness, in knowledge of subject matter, in principles of teaching, skill in the use of teaching method and in spiritual vision and vigor, he is the one to be chosen. If not qualified now in these points, we must be sure he is willing to make the further effort to qualify. Our plan must include provision for continued and advanced courses in training for these teachers, and adequate supervision of the actual classroom procedure to insure maximum efficiency. We must be sure the teacher will accept and respond to our helpful supervision. Every supervisor should have a waiting list of prospective teachers now in training, who may be called upon to fill emergencies. Many classes should have assistant teachers who are getting ready for more responsible assignments.

CLASS ORGANIZATION

It is part of a supervisor's duty to see that the school is properly classified into convenient classes or groups to serve the best purposes of the entire school. In the lower grades the classes should be small—from six to twelve, in ages four to fifteen. The younger the children the fewer should be assigned to a teacher.

Among young people and adult classes the tendency is toward larger classes with the best possible qualified teachers. In the senior classes and in departments above, personal interest is often increased by the organization of the class with the usual officers and committees chosen from the membership. These may help in sharing responsibility for attendance, program, and social and recreational features. Organized classes, however, should always be recognized as subordinate parts of the department or school unit.

Available space, lighting, ventilation, seating, tables and other equipment should have constant attention and frequent check should be made to be sure a maximum service is being rendered.

SUBJECT MATTER

Directors and supervisors are responsible for the selection of the course of study for the school. In general this is determined by the published quarterly series, the subject matter being distributed over a range of some twenty-four years. Unless there is special reason otherwise, the officers of the school are expected to see that the materials prepared with great care in the quarterly series are used in the various classes. In small schools where there are less than seven classes, choice must be made of the materials best suited to the needs.

Not only should the proper materials be in use in a certain class, as provided in the church school curriculum, but supervisors are responsible to see that the material is taught efficiently. The objective, of course, is the growing, expanding, enriched personalities which result from the class experience. It is assumed that the use of the materials in class presentation, in discussion, in projects and inspiration may result in certain desired outcomes in habits, attitudes and character. The teaching processes must continually be checked against the results achieved.

TESTS OF EFFICIENCY

In the space available we can do little more than indicate the importance of supervision and suggest some of the means available. First of all, the supervisor, be he pastor, director, age group leader, or special supervisor, must realize his responsibility to the school, to the branch, to the church and to God, for the faithful discharge of his duty. Let him study to qualify for the task. He must establish a definite standard by which the teacher and his teaching are to be judged. He must be able to recognize good teaching and be stimulating in his commendation. All his criticism must be constructive. He must be able to point out error and to suggest the remedy. He must be able to do this most kindly and helpfully. He must be able to take the class at any point and demonstrate the improvement he would urge.

The following tests are certain general "outcomes" which we may reasonably expect to follow efficient teaching in the church school. These results are the product of a complex series of causes which include personality of the teacher, spirit of the school, discipline, attitude of supervisors, selection of subject matter, teaching method, home cooperation, community influence, and other personal factors. These tests, however, may serve as a beginning check on the work done, and indicate some of the emphases required for improvement.

1. Sustained regular class attendance.
2. Apparent interest and response of the class.
3. Participation of class members in other services of the church.
4. Interest of the class members in the program, projects and objectives of the church, including active church membership.
5. Improved habits of Christian life and fellowship.
6. Improved attitudes toward moral problems of home, community, nation, and the world.
7. A sharing of responsibility for the ideals of the church.
8. Understanding of the message and program of the church.
9. Familiarity with characters, incidents and teachings of the Three Books, and the history of the Restoration.
10. Appreciation of the present problems in the program of the church, and willingness to share in their solution.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF WILLIAM LEWIS

labor was not down in the coal mine in water and powder smoke from 7 a. m. to 5 p. m. Coming home from the mines, supper on the table, everything in the vegetable line, roast beef or steak, ham and eggs, pies and cakes, it was hard not to eat, but I was true to my vow! I did this three different times, and shortly after this I was remarkably blessed with visions and dreams. Along the forty-one years of my past life I have received valuable information through that precious means. I know that the promise of Joel is true: "I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions." (Continued from page 774.)

THE ELDER BROTHERS

There are traditions of "elder brethren," men who have progressed beyond the human aspect and who continue to live, who possess wisdom and understanding of the divine purpose, more than is now permitted to man. This story agrees with both that of John in the New Testament and of the three Nephites in the Book of Mormon. There is, however, this great difference. In the case of the three Nephites and of John, the beloved disciples, we are dealing with a known quantity; we do not grope in darkness. We are assured that the glory of God is intelligence, or, in other words, light and truth; that as the spirit of God acts with us our minds and spirits are opened to its understanding as we are able to receive, and we go forward only as we see the path before us. We do not enter blindfolded or blindly in a way we know not, to receive husks at the end.

they had these suggestions passed out. I'm going to take these sheets home and study them, and am going to try hard to put some of them into practice in my own home branch."

With a feeling like that on the part of the young people, Holden Stake is on the way to progress, to a higher and glorious future. "Onward to Zion!" is the motto, and that's the way these young folks are going. Let's go with them!

are the children led to think of anything unrelated to this motion upwards, of their spirits toward God.

A SUGGESTED SERVICE

There follows a suggested outline for sacrament service for children. It may be altered to suit the needs of a combined service for children and adults together, but care should be taken when this is done, that what remains is not beyond the range of appreciation children may have of this ordinance.

Theme: "Let Us Be More Like Jesus."

Prelude: Zion's Praises, 128: "Oh, to be more like Jesus."

Call to Worship: John 8: 12. Jesus said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

(S) Song: Zion's Praises, 100: "Stepping in the Light," verses 1 and 2.

Brief Talk: On the opportunity of sharing our lives with Jesus through the oblation. Explain this money is given for the poor.

Oblation.

Brief Talk: On the need of asking forgiveness, and renewing the pledge made in baptism. How this is related to the sacrament.

Administering of emblems:

Song: Zion's Praises, 57: "Prayer."

Scripture Reading: 2 Nephi 3: 61, 64, 65. In the Book of Mormon Nephi says: "O Lord, I have trusted in thee and I will trust in thee forever." What does it mean to trust in the Lord? How many of you children trust in the Lord?

Again Nephi says: "Yea, I know that God will give liberally to him that asketh." What does it mean to give liberally?

"Yea, I know that God will give me if I ask not amiss." What are some of the things which we might ask God about as we pray which would not be amiss? (Suggested by children.)

1. To forgive all our wrongdoings.
2. To help us obey all of God's commandments.
3. To help us obey our parents.
4. To bless those who are out of work.
5. To help the poor.
6. To heal the sick.

Let us all close our eyes for a moment and think about our prayer before we kneel.

Prayers (kneeling): Led by a child who has previously been asked.

Story: Of the building of Kirtland Temple emphasizing the spirit of sacrifice that was there demonstrated, the types of work that were done even by the children, and the joy that came as the people grew into Christ's likeness and were acknowledged by Him.

Song: Zion's Praises, 128: "Oh, to be more like Jesus," verse 1.

Leader: I am sure that each one of us would like to be more like Jesus. Our song says that to become like Him we must be loving, kind, cheerful, good, helpful. Our story told us of other ways that children had found of serving Him. How have you tried to serve Him? And have you thought of any new ways? Who wants to tell us first?

Testimonies:

Leader: Gives brief summarization of ways we can serve.

(S) Closing Song: Zion's Praises, 126: "Have a blessing ready," verse 1.

(S) Prayer (by child):

Father in heaven,
Help thy little children
To please Thee ever
In their work and play
Help them to be truthful
Gentle, kind, and loving
To be like Jesus
Serving him alway. Amen.

(S) Benediction (all): "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my Redeemer. Amen."

(Service compiled by Camilla Collins.)

Denominationalism will not win the world to Christ. It has had its chance, and in part failed. Denominationalism as such has too much to explain to those of world religions for the denominational-minded missionary to get a hearing for the Christ he preaches. Denominationalism at heart is too competition minded, too money-minded, too membership-minded, to clear the way so that

All things grow sweet in Him,
In Him all things are reconciled.
All fierce extremes
That beat along Time's shore
Like chidden waves grow mild,
And creep to kiss His feet.

—Lyman P. Powell, in The Better Part.

God in the Slums

Years ago a young woman wearing the uniform of the Salvation Army approached a young man who sat at the back of a great hall where General William Booth was addressing a meeting. Observing that he looked forlorn she felt moved to say to him, "Is there anything that I can do for you? And may I venture to ask, Are you saved?" "Saved," he retorted, "why should I be saved? I am a reporter." But recently this one-time reporter, now the night editor of a great London daily, has published a book whose sales in Great Britain alone have mounted up to one hundred and twenty thousand copies, a book entitled God in the Slums. As the title itself may suggest, it was born of a thrilling discovery. In early January, 1928, the River Thames went on a rampage and in the very heart of London scores of slum dwellers were drowned. Here was "news" deserving a place on the front page of anybody's newspaper, and the night editor's newspaper managed to get away with a scoop. In a special edition, brought out at four-thirty o'clock in the morning, it published the greatest London news story that had appeared since the War. Needless to say, the night editor was pleased with his reporters and not a little with himself. Presently, however, he began to experience something other than self-satisfaction—a strange, irresistible desire to see what he could do in the way of helping those poor unfortunate devils whose tragic plight had furnished his opportunity to get away with a scoop. So he went down into the muck "where a man's work was to be done and found that women were doing it," women wearing the familiar scarlet and blue of the Salvation Army. And when, confronted with the need of finding some place to sleep for an old, terrible frightened and horribly dirty couple who hysterically pled that they should not be separated, one of the Army's captains said to her lieutenant, "Poor old dears, I am not going to separate them, they can sleep in our beds," the night editor's eyes were opened and he saw something. Here was an old, bedraggled couple who seemed to him to be the dirtiest creatures he had ever seen in this world, dirty not only from the flood but from unwashed days before the flood, and a young woman whose personal appearance suggested the habiliments and nature of an angel of light had turned to her roommate and said, "They can sleep in our beds!" He opened his eyes and saw something; he saw God in the slums. In succeeding days, he saw more and more of the footprints of the divine, and gradually he became aware of something in himself that was new and strange and wonderful, something that released powers which he had never supposed he possessed, powers of thinking and feeling and writing which in all his years on a newspaper he had never been able to employ. Let a man make the discovery that he is a son of God, that there is something divine in him crying for expression, and he may do worth-while and significant things which he never supposed himself capable of doing.—Ernest Fremont Tittle, in We Need Religion.

Industrious Centenarians

We have made investigations in thirteen of the departments of Bulgaria, and find that, in general, our centenarians are people of only moderately strong constitutions. One of the women centenarians, Mother Maria, 104 years old, born in the village of Letnitza, who married when eighty-two years old, lives and works with her husband in the city of Plevna. She is dried up and small, but she retains her vision (she can thread a needle without glasses), her hearing is good, her pulse is regular (seventy-five beats to the minute), her voice is clear and her memory is intact.

She has smoked for fifty years and drinks alcoholic beverages in moderation. There is nothing abnormal about her. Any one going to see her would find her occupied at some task in her garden. He would see her hoe, rake, and water her plants. But she does not work because she has to. She works only for the love of it and so that she may avoid idleness. By it she shortens the long days and keeps in health.

This applies in general to the life of all the centenarians whom we have discovered so far. We have not found one who spent his time doing nothing or who indulged in irregular living. All our centenarians are people who have married only after attaining complete physical maturity, at thirty, thirty-five or even forty years. Most of them have children now sixty or seventy years old.

The food of our centenarians is very simple—beans, orties, onions, pimentoes, vegetable slaws, curds and white cheese. Meat seldom figures in their diet. It is to be noted that whether from shortage of food supplies or a spirit of economy they have in most cases never eaten their full, and that they have also never suffered from indigestion.

Religious feeling, strongly developed, has influenced them to be sober and careful. They have not been tormented with envy. They have known only the love of working in the fields, a noble rivalry and sincere neighborliness.—Ivan Lilof, president of the Bulgarian royal commission to investigate longevity.

We cannot guess how large a debt
We owe to friends we have not met.
We only know from day to day,
That we discover here and there
How one has tried to smooth our way
And ease our heavy load of care,
Then passed along and left behind
His friendly gifts for us to find.

Churches Can Get Money

By William H. Leach, Cleveland, Ohio

Editor, Church Management; author Church Finance, Church Publicity, etc.

DURING the past generation the idea of Christian stewardship as a basis of church finance has persistently and consistently gaining ground. Under its influence church budgets increased, ministers had salary increases and the general material program of the church prospered. The emergencies of the depression have curbed the growth, and financial reverses have cut deeply into church incomes. Puzzled by unprecedented conditions churches usually do one of two things. Some lose their sense of balance, throw all that they have learned about church finances away, and rely on sales schemes and other stunts to secure money to run the church. Others believe that stewardship has definitely proved its worth and they seek to strengthen it, even in the time of financial depression.

This writer feels that one of the great dangers facing the churches today is this willingness to forget the fundamental laws of stewardship. Every week brings its evidence that methods of money raising, which cannot be commended are gaining ground. Bazaars, questionable recreations, raffles, sales schemes make a bid for attention—and get it. "Easy money" offers its lure. If most churches would take time to sit down and think they would find that it is both unwise and unnecessary to yield to such appeals.

THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

The every member canvass is still the very best method of raising money for churches. It has many variations, of course. But in the last analysis it simply means that every member of the church will be given an opportunity of making a pledge to the church. Sometimes churches which have difficulty in meeting their budget needs can find the solution to their problems in a better and more efficient method of making the every member canvass.

One church lacked ten percent of meeting its budget of $5000. The prospect cards used in the last canvass were called for. We went over them very carefully. There were 275 prospects; the visitors had reached but 210. In other words sixty-five of the prospects had not been seen. A supplementary canvass was organized and these prospects reached. Not alone the five hundred dollars lacking were pledged but several hundred dollars more. You have to sell a lot of chocolate to make five hundred dollars profit. Before going off the "Every Member Standard" it is well to see if you have exhausted all of its possibilities.

BETTER COLLECTIONS

Another place for churches to look for money is in the method of collections. We probably lose more through failure to collect pledges made than any other one cause. Every church should send to its subscribers a periodical statement of his pledge and the amount which has been paid. I favor, at present, a quarterly statement. In normal times a monthly statement may have been better. But the best plan now is to use a quarterly statement, with special follow up appeals in between.

We have a new situation in church finance. A stereotyped statement is no longer sufficient. Sometimes it, alone, will work injustice. In other cases it is not strong enough to get results. We have some people who have lost all their possessions. They have no income. Pressure upon them to pay their church pledge may be a very unfair thing. It is more essential that the church seek to maintain their morale than that it get their money. Then we have other people who should pay their pledges promptly.

It stands to reason that we must use different methods in trying to reach these various classes of folks. Deal gently with those who have felt the force of the economic storm. But do not be afraid to press others who have means and should give. Use special letters, telephone calls, personal visitation to press home their obligation to them. A quarterly statement with this kind of follow up work in between will get results.

Of course, in any plan for collections the bookkeeping system plays an important part. Every church, large or small, should install some method of financial bookkeeping, which gives an accurate record of all receipts and expenditures. It should provide some method of double checking so that the membership may be assured that the matter of accounting is not in the hands of one man. In the larger churches with full time secretaries this is provided. For the smaller churches I would recommend that a financial secretary take the Sunday collections, open envelopes, count the money and turn the amount over to a treasurer, receiving from him a receipt for the weekly offerings. In case it is not wise to change the system to elect a financial secretary a committee from the official board can meet at the close of each service to count the money and mark the envelopes. The cash then goes to the treasurer for deposit for which he gives the committee a proper receipt. One cannot over-emphasize the necessity for a church to have a good system of accounting. It will banish evil suspicion and build confidence throughout the organization.

RAISING SPECIAL FUNDS

After the best possible every member canvass and every effort for collection many churches still need money to meet their minimum requirements. Then is the time to look around for some special way of raising money. This is the time that the temptation to "easy money" becomes the greatest. Someone comes along with a sales scheme in which the church will receive a small profit. It looks easy, but it isn't. I have often wondered who the individual was who invented the idea that it is easier to get a person to buy an unneeded article for a quarter than to persuade him to give the money outright. Churches cannot be financed by these various sales schemes.

There are many plans for raising supplementary money which do keep in them the basic principles of Christian stewardship. I will mention a few. One of these is an old and tried method known as "One Cent Per Meal." It is simply a sacrificial scheme wherein all those who cooperate plan to save one cent on each meal, three cents each day, ninety cents each month and turn it over to the special fund. Now most of us can do this. It does not look very large. But if one hundred people, in your church, will follow this program for one month your special fund will have ninety dollars. That is worth while, isn't it? Cardboard coin purses to hold the savings may be provided as a part of the service.

A program very similar to this but having added to it the appeal of novelty is the "Loyalty Stamp Offering." In this plan all those who promise to cooperate receive a little stamp book which will hold fifty loyalty stamps. The stamps are placed on sale at all the services and social activities of the church. They are sold at five cents each. The stamps used are usually very attractive, printed in colors, and have some kind of loyalty appeal implied.

One may buy one stamp at a time, a half dozen, or any number which may appeal to him. One church which has used this plan to try and secure money due on past pledges has, at this writing, an income from these stamps of twenty dollars per week. One big advantage of the stamp plan over similar schemes of saving is that the church begins to receive an income as soon as the first stamp is sold. In the "One Cent Per Meal" plan many things may happen before the money is actually turned over to the church. But when Loyalty Stamps are used the church gets the money beginning with the first sale. It is a practical, workable plan through which a church may raise a special fund of several hundred dollars.

A plan very different in character is the special gifts plan known as "Our Book of Golden Memories." This consists primarily of a beautifully bound book in which are placed pages as memorials to deceased members of the church. It provides something which the average church very much needs. Most of us pay scant respect to the memory of the average man and woman who passes from our fellowship. This book provides that.

Another method which I have seen recently appeals to me as having many possibilities. It is known as the joy tax. Members of the church are given boxes or envelopes for collecting the tax as it is paid. At the close of a tax one is urged to think of the good things which have been his during the twenty-four hours passed. Taxes have been paid on gasoline, medicine and many other things during that time. Why not a few pennies for the blessings from God? This kind of a tax has produced for, at least, one church. It might do as well for yours.

There are many similar plans which an ingenious mind can produce which will keep to giving and avoid commercial schemes. Do not give up the effort until every effort has been made. The collapse of stewardship would be one of the major losses of the depression. We should not permit our churches run after "easy money." At least, not yet. For there are still giving possibilities through the laws of stewardship.

Canadian Combatants Melt Their Medals

Stripping the so-called "victory medals" from their coats and tossing them into a "tin derby" as they filed past, three hundred Canadian veterans at Stamford, Ontario, dramatized their conviction that the war in which they had earned those decorations had not brought victory, and that no war can. Wounds and debts remain, but the anticipated fruits of valor and of victory have not materialized. The chairman of the medal committee of this post of veterans—all that are left of a regiment—put it this way: "They (the medals) stand for victory in the war that was to end war. The whole world is preparing for war right now. Victory is an empty phrase. We, the victors, have as many cripples as the enemy. Our debts are as high, debts our grandchildren will be paying. . . . The victory medal is empty. We have all lost." To carry this message, one medal will be sent to each of the twenty-one combatant countries, as a contribution toward the war debts, with this letter: "The victory emblems we surrender, one to each nation, are to be melted down with all the other rewards of armed conflict." Since the medals are of bronze, the intrinsic value of the medal will not constitute more than a modest "token payment" toward the debts, but the voluntary surrender of them is a token of deep disillusion with war, a complete devaluation of its glories, and a renunciation of it as a means of attaining security or peace or any other good thing. The men who make this declaration are not men who learned about war in Sunday school or from the teachings of pacifists, but men who learned in the hard school of experience. Elderly patriots beyond the draft age will find some difficulty in answering their argument by an appeal to the old catch phrases.—Editorial in The Christian Century.

Crucifying Jesus

The ideal Christian church is not the one with the greatest wealth, with the finest buildings, with the best educated people, or with the most brilliant minister. The ideal church is one in which all its members are consistent followers of Jesus Christ, who put the kingdom of God first in their lives and who are therefore effective soul-winners for Jesus Christ. In the ideal church it is true of each Christian: "He first findeth his own brother."

One reason why Christianity spread all over the then civilized world within the first 300 years is that most Christians were missionaries who felt themselves sent by God to win their relatives and neighbors to Jesus Christ. The great historian Gibbon (not a Christian), assigns as the first cause of the rapid spread of Christianity the fact that it became the most sacred duty of a new convert to diffuse among his friends the inestimable blessing which he has received. The rank and file of the church membership went about proclaiming Christ. Have you spoken to another about becoming a Christian?

Doctor Alexander Whyte tells the story of a man who dreamed that he saw Jesus tied to a whipping post, and a soldier was scourging him. He saw the whip in the soldier's hand with its thick lashes studded here and there with bits of lead, which were intended to cut into the flesh. As the soldier brought the whip down on the bare shoulders of Jesus, the dreamer shuddered when he saw the marks and bloodstains it left behind. When the soldier raised his hand to strike again, the dreamer rushed forward, intending to stop him. As he did so the soldier turned around and the dreamer recognized himself.

We often think how cruel those men must have been who scourged and crucified Jesus. But remember that whenever we do wrong we cause the heart of Jesus to bleed with sorrow and pain. It is doing wrong when we do not all pull together for God and his kingdom, our church.—Detroit's Beacon Light.

The Character of Religion

It is important to insist upon the truth that religion is a personal relation to God, and the Christian religion a personal relation through Christ to God, because other ways of defining it have led to confusion and, it may be feared, to a good deal of unreality among those who have been brought up to be religious, but have never really understood what religion means. Writers who have either lost belief in Christianity altogether or accept only vaguely and in part the full creed of Christendom, often seem unaware of what religion really is and how to seek it. And the whole process of apologetic controversy becomes confused because the disputants begin, so to speak, at the wrong place. They do not start with the relation and expound it, and then discuss whether it is most likely to be a real relation or a delusion of the imagination, and go on to arrange the whole body of Christian apologetics by way of support to the proposition that the experienced relation is a reality and not a dream; they begin, on the contrary, by arguing this or that part of Christian theology as though it were a proposition to be proved, and if proved, to be accepted, and that religion would somehow or another spring out of that intellectual acceptance. But this way of presenting the matter is not the way in which the human mind does, as a matter of fact, commonly become religious. The most that such a way of proceeding can really do is to make a man try after religion, and it very seldom achieves even this. A great sorrow, a vivid sense of the difference between good and evil, and of the appalling power of sin—these things are much more potent to make people try and find religion by actually entering into the religious relation than any intellectual argument. Even mere assertion, if it be obviously sincere and confident, does much more to induce the doubting to make trial of the religious relation than a process of reasoning. And those, again, who are satisfied with a certain standard of godly conduct and suppose that that is all that matters in the religious life, are the enemies of their own happiness. It may well be that such lives, when they are thoroughly lived, are sufficient to make a person have that desire for approach to God which is, I suppose, the essence of salvation. But a merely moral life is certainly not sustained by the comfort, peace, and joy of the true religious relation. Those who are satisfied with what they call a straight and honest life do, in fact, walk in desert places, and, whatever mercies they may hereafter receive from God, do not now know the quenching of the inward thirst which man has for God. They may be righteous, but they are not happy.—Lord Hugh Cecil, in If I Could Preach Just Once.

A Tribute to W. A. McDowell

My heart was indeed made sad when I read in the last Herald of the passing of our dear brother, Willis A. McDowell.

We had the honor of having him present with us during the sessions of the Order of Evangelists at the late General Conference. He seemed to be very feeble, but his mind appeared as bright and active as ever. However, I for one, did not realize that he would be taken from us so soon; he will be greatly missed by his brethren of the Order as well as by many of the Saints.

Brother McDowell was a wise counselor, and was highly appreciated by his associates in the ministry and elsewhere. He was a man of integrity and very dependable, which characteristics count for much with God and man. He was much beloved by his brethren in the ministry.

The writer first made the acquaintance of Brother McDowell about forty-five years ago; there was just a few days difference in our ages, I being born on the second day of June, 1856, and he on the twenty-first of the same year.

On the day of Brother McDowell's funeral I was celebrating my seventy-eighth birthday with a family dinner, having with us my three daughters, their husbands, and six grandchildren. Had I been aware of what was taking place in Independence the happiness of the occasion would have been much marred for me.

The grim reaper has been very busy within the past two or three years, taking from among us quite a number of old-time friends and acquaintances in the ministry, those whom we had learned to love and honor by reason of their integrity and faithfulness as well as the great sacrifices they had so willingly made in the interest of the church of God.

Numbered among these are such men as John Gresty, William H. Greenwood, J. W. Peterson, John M. Terry, O. J. Hawn, Samuel Twombly, and Brother Bailey, as well as others.

As we contemplate all this we are reminded of the saying, "In the midst of life we are in the midst of death." Therefore, it behooves us all to be ready for the change, for come it will, sooner or later. There are very many of us, who, by reason of old age, are standing on the verge of the grave, as it were, waiting for the summons.

May the Lord bless and comfort our dear Sister McDowell and family as well as all others who have been called upon to part with loved ones, with that Spirit that emanates from God which brings peace to the soul in our great sorrows and deep troubles.

Yours in gospel bonds,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

A Boy Is Restored to Health Through Prayer

I receive much pleasure and benefit from the letters in the Herald. I was baptized by Patriarch Richard Baldwin, August 26, 1933. Since that time I have completely changed my outlook on life, and have spent many hours in study and contemplation.

They say a Godlike life will show on a person's features, and to this anyone who has met Brother Baldwin will readily agree. At the time of my baptism, he was dressed from head to foot in spotless white, and he impressed me as something holy.

I wish to relate an experience which happened to an eleven-year-old neighbor boy. He is not a member of the church but of a good family.

Early last fall he had a spell of fever which brought on several complications. At the least excitement or exertion, his fever would go to over one hundred degrees, and he would be in bed sometimes two and three days at a time. Instead of getting better, he grew worse, and early this spring he began having hemorrhages. He was taken to a hospital in Saint Louis, and examinations showed that he had tuberculosis of the lungs.

After a short time, they said there was nothing they could do for him, and advised his parents not to cross him in any way, for the least excitement would hasten his end. He was brought home, and each night someone had to sit up with him, as he had severe coughing spells.

When I heard how bad he was, I decided to write Brother Roy Remington, of Saint Louis Branch, and ask if they would have special prayers for him. On Thursday morning, the boy's mother said to my wife, "Last night was the first time Jimmy has had a good night's rest for weeks. No one had to sit up with him, and not once during the night did he cough." My wife then showed her the letter we had just received from Brother Remington, saying they would have special prayers for him Wednesday evening.

He never again had to have anyone sit up with him, and now he plays his cornet, rides a bicycle and is running and playing with the other boys.

God does hear and answer prayer, and to Him go all praise and glory.

I ask an interest in your prayers that I may remain faithful, and that God will continue his blessings. My prayers are for all who love the Lord and for Zion's early establishment.

Missionaries at Home

The closing work of the conference year in West Virginia, was a conference at Parkersburg, February 25, and one in Wheeling District at Moundsville, March 4. The next day we started west, anxious to see our home again after an absence of almost two years, but saddened at leaving many Saints and friends whom we had learned to love.

The severe weather had moderated, so we made the trip in comfort. Stopped at Peoria, Illinois, to visit our daughter and family, and reached Nevada, Missouri, March 16.

Our home has been rented for almost five years, and we made arrangements to occupy it after General Conference, and spent a while visiting relatives, Saints, and friends.

Tuesday morning, March 20, we were told that there was to be a meeting at the church, and we promised to be there not asking the nature of the service. An unusually large crowd was in attendance, and they put on a splendid program, welcoming us back to our home branch. After the program, light refreshments were served. The evening was enjoyed by all, especially by Brother Silvers and myself.

Since General Conference we have spent the time putting our home in order, and assisting in the work of the branch as we could.

One of the oldest branches of this district having been disorganized branch is at Walker, Missouri, where we made Branch, the officers of our branch hold a sacrament service there the afternoon of the first Sunday of each month. The disorganized Branch is at Walker, Missouri, where we made our home for fourteen years. There are only four members there now, all well along in years, but still faithful to the church they have served so long. They are A. S. Leeper, branch president during the thirty-five or more years of the branch's existence except a little over one year when he was absent; A. Lloyd and wife and Sister Helm.

Walker Branch was never large, but as a mark of their diligence there stands a church building, now unused, and showing the effects of time. While they were all physically able, it was seldom one was missing from a service there. Meeting with them now is an inspiration to do our best.

Nevada Branch is not large, but under the leadership of Elder W. E. Reynolds, president; Elder J. W. Noyes, pastor, and Robert Russell, priest, in charge of the church school, it is holding regular meetings including prayer service Wednesday evening and Religio Friday evening.

The women's department is also making their contribution. Some of the young people, together with a few older members, have a nice orchestra the music being under the direction of Mrs. Mabel Braden.

Last Sunday night (June 3) Elder J. Charles May was with us and delivered a splendid sermon. Other speakers have been Brother Russell, Brother Noyes, and A. C. Silvers. Anyone coming to Nevada, will find a welcome at our chapel, corner Allison and Elm.

Testimony in Brief

May I contribute to the Herald a brief testimony of God's goodness and mercy to me? He has blessed me many times. Even when I have been negligent or careless, he has been near. When perplexities have troubled me, as they do everyone, I have realized that it was time to get closer to my Master.

In these times when we are surrounded by problems and difficulties, I believe that all who profess the name of Jesus our Lord and Christ, should strive to follow him. We should be prayerful and obedient and true to our ideals.

Will you pray for me that I may be found doing the will of the heavenly Father?

When We Learn to Pray

I wonder how many people are lifting their hearts up in prayer to God asking for some special blessing. Perhaps it is in behalf of a loved one or some personal gain. Many are looking to him as the drouth continues over the land. Always, when in need or distress, we know and recognize a supreme power that has cared for us in times past. Some exercise more faith than others because they have more closely observed the blessings given to humanity.

Many times we desire a certain thing and because our prayer is not answered immediately, we become insistent. We demand our own way, forgetting God's will is to be done and not ours.

If we could only have faith to carry on and believe the words of Christ when he said that not even a sparrow falls, but the heavenly Father knows. If God cares so for the birds, surely he cares for us.

I find that I receive a greater blessing when I return thanks for the good things received in the past. Our heavenly Father expects us to pay according to our ability.

Should we wait for a blessing from heaven before we make an offering? If so, Abraham erred when he started to offer his son as a sacrifice. No doubt he prayed that he would be spared the trial, yet with faith in his heavenly Father he proceeded to carry out the command.

When we face some test, I wonder if we are willing to say, "Thy will be done." I believe when we learn to pray, we will then learn how to live as we should. I ask an interest in your prayers.

DENVER, MISSOURI.

A SISTER.

The Holy Spirit, the Common Mark

The indwelling of God's Holy Spirit is the common mark of all believers in Christ. It is the shepherd's mark of the flock of the faithful, distinguishing them from the rest of the world. It is the goldsmith's stamp on the genuine sons of God which separates them from the dross and mass of false professors. It is the king's own seal on those who are his peculiar people, proving them to be his property. It is that which the Redeemer gives his disciples as a pledge of the redemption to come.

The Holy Spirit is not the drapery with which divine truth may be clothed, but it is the truth itself, the truth which is the instrument of the Spirit's power. Truth is the sword of divinity, and it is the sword which does the work, not the scabbard in which the sword is sheathed. The scabbard may be finely fitted and beautifully embellished, bound with the finest gold and glittering with jewels, but it is not the scabbard that brings victory; it is the drawn sword wielded by Him who is powerful and just, which is quick and powerful and pierces even to the dividing of soul and body and the discerning of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

The Holy Ghost is our chamber counselor who advises, instructs, comforts, and gives us courage to address ourselves to God.

Small Group Looks Zionward

The Lord has been very kind to me and my household, and I feel that I owe him my very best. Many times I have fallen short of that, but even in my shortcomings he has cared for me.

Our little group still desires to do what it can in bringing about the redemption of Zion. We have much opposition, and ask the prayers of all in our behalf. The aid of our district officers is much appreciated, and we pray God to bless them.

Apostle M. A. McConley has been doing much good and giving much help and encouragement in his trip through the South. Though I have not been privileged to hear him, I hear good reports of his visits here and there. May the good Lord help us to move Zionward.

In order to put the requests for prayers in the last form of the Herald, and thus to print them as early as possible, we are transferring them to the "Briefs" columns in the News Department. Will our readers kindly look for them there? Thank you.—Editors.

QUESTION TIME

Note: All inquiries requiring speedy or individual answers should be accompanied by a three-cent stamp, or an envelope stamped and addressed.

A. B. PHILLIPS

Does repentance release one from obligation to pay debts previously incurred?

True repentance, the kind that God requires, includes sorrow for the sins done, firm resolve to cease doing them, and the making of restitution for any wrongs committed against another so far as such restitution is possible. If one incurred debt by some dishonest means repentance would require that he ask forgiveness of the one wronged and also pay back in full, including reparation for any damage done. If, however, the debt was honestly incurred, there would of course be no need to ask forgiveness for having done so, though the debtor should pay the amount owed as soon as it becomes due. If impossible to pay when due, he should go to his creditor before it becomes due and make arrangements with him for such extension of time as becomes necessary, but no longer.

A debtor has no legal or moral right to put his creditor at a disadvantage and perhaps a great loss by failing to meet his obligation to him as agreed. But in case unforeseen circumstances have intervened and made it impossible to pay at the time agreed upon, it is his duty to notify his creditor of the fact as soon as he becomes aware of it, and to make such arrangements with him as may be practical. The creditor may be depending upon the amount due him to meet his own obligations, or for some necessary use, but even if he were not it is his right to expect the debtor shall keep his word in making payment. The debtor's standing with business men and with his community depends upon his promptness and reliability.

From the days of Adam, when Abel is declared to have offered the "firstlings of his flock," the first-born lamb was offered in token of the sacrifice and atonement of Christ. The blood "is the life," says the sacred word, and the blood of Jesus symbolized his life, which was pure, holy, and perfectly dedicated to God in the service of mankind. The completion of his work in the yielding of himself as a sacrifice was marked by the shedding of his blood, of which the firstborn lambs offered for ages were symbols. Hence, just as those who came repentant and made sacrifices of the lamb in ancient times were promised remission of sins through this token, so those who come repentant and receive the sacrifice of Jesus obtain forgiveness.

Some of the blood was sprinkled upon the altar when the sacrifice was made, as a token of cleansing from sin, the blood being the life. This is implied in the statement of John as previously cited. But this has a deeply spiritual meaning that should not be overlooked. When one offered a lamb he made a sacrifice of it, aside from the offering of its life, for it must be the firstborn of the flock and without blemish. This indicated an expiation for sins committed, and this expiation principle applies also to repentant believers in Christ, without which the cleansing from sin is not promised.

How old was Mulok when the people of Zarahemla came to America?

So far as I recall, the name of Mulok is mentioned but once in the Book of Mormon (279:78). The record indicates that he and his associates were the ones who colonized the land there mentioned, yet it is distinctly stated (562:129) that the son of Zedekiah, named Mulek, was brought by the Lord into that land. This was the time when it was colonized, as stated elsewhere (201:26), by the people of Zarahemla who came from Jerusalem when Zedekiah was carried a captive into Babylon (cir. 588 B. C.).

These facts appear to show that the spelling of the name Mulok may be an error, in which case it should be Mulek. Of his age we know nothing, though some have suggested more or less uncertain opinions in the matter. The genealogy is said to have been written (202:33), but "not in these plates."

Columbus, Ohio

Third Church, South Wheatland Avenue

This congregation was wonderfully blessed during the month of May.

On February 11, Sunday school officers announced a contest, that all who attended Sunday school regularly for a period of three months would receive a bronze pin, and for each three months thereafter with a new pin for attendance record. At the end of twelve months a gold pin would be presented.

At the sacrament service, May 6, a good spirit prevailed to bless all those present. In the evening, Pastor F. C. Welsh occupied the pulpit.

May 13, Mother's Day, the Sunday school was in charge of the mothers. At the close of the service the young people sang "Mother's Prayers Have Followed Me."

At the morning service four young men of the priesthood gave short talks on the "Value of Mother." Each mother present was given a carnation. In the evening District Missionary John R. Grice talked on "The Value of Motherhood."

The priesthood has been busily engaged in presenting the gospel in various homes. Many sick people have been visited. They are endeavoring to find homes that are open for cottage meetings. The ministry have been instilled with the missionary spirit and this has been of influence in spreading the gospel in many parts of the city.

Speakers during the month have been Elders John R. Grice, F. C. Welsh, William P. Vickeroy and Priest Dougherty.

The slogan of this congregation is "Press onward to our goal, and give a helping hand to others on our way."

Parsons, Kansas

Spring River District Young People Meet

Approximately sixty young people of Spring River District once again enjoyed a monthly get-together. Tuesday evening, June 5, they gathered at Forest Park, for a lawn party. The Parsons young people, assisted by Brother Albert Cobb, district young people's recreational leader, furnished splendid entertainment consisting of a short program and many recreational games. These were followed by a delightful picnic lunch. Inspiring short talks were given by Brothers Amos T. Higdon and Albert Cobb.

The next meeting will be held at Lakeside Park between Webb City and Carthage, Missouri, July 4, and will take the form of an all-day celebration, starting at 9:30 a. m. and adjourning sometime in the late afternoon. Brother Albert Cobb has promised a full day of entertainment. Everyone is invited to attend.

"Brother Shrock has been pastor of Beaverton Branch for a long time, and is loved by all who know him both in and out of the church," writes a fellow worker of Beaverton. And a press story printed in the Gladwin County Record, confirms this opinion. Here is the story:

"Some schools are noted for their athletic teams, and others are noted for other outstanding accomplishments, but the Beaverton Rural Agricultural School is noted for its janitor. The word 'janitor' to the ordinary listener, is a person employed by an organization to sweep the building and look after the heating problems. In Beaverton the word 'janitor' means much more.

"In Beaverton the word means Willis Shrock, a man who has held this position for twelve years in the Beaverton school.

Willis is more than a janitor. He fills the pulpit in the Latter Day Saint Church on Sunday mornings. When time for the collection plate is to be passed, he takes his violin and provides music for the deacons.

"On Monday evenings he appears in the Beaverton Rural Agricultural School Band and occupies the position as the baritone or bass horn player in band practice. On Tuesday evening for P. T. A. Willis is usually depended upon to offer the invocation. Wednesday evening is church evening in Beaverton; and, after the church program the young people do not feel like leaving for home without a few amusing selections from Mr. Shrock—his 'Boom-Boom Song' or some other popular selection.

"Thursday, Friday and Saturday are off days for Willis, except for his regular duties as janitor and chief engineer at the school, taking care of occasional funerals and never missing up on a wedding if the bride has a come-hither look. Willis finds it impossible to leave Beaverton on Saturday, for he is depended upon for the band concerts that are put on every Saturday evening during the summer months.

Tulsa, Oklahoma

Save Money for Church Bonds—Pay on Local Debt—Sponsor Many Activities

As guests come to worship with them, Tulsa members had Apostle Roy S. Budd, Bishop L. F. P. Curry, Bishop G. L. DeLapp, and Elder A. E. Stoff for the sacrament service May 6. This was a spiritual hour, and afterward a short business session was held.

The pastor presented a program from the branch finance board by which, over a period of six months, local Saints are to purchase with weekly savings a church bond as an investment with a small interest. This plan was approved by both of the Bishops who talked in its favor as did many others. Tulsa Saints believe if the members will take up this plan, they will soon be able to carry the church indebtedness, lay up savings for themselves, and the sooner liberate the church from debt.

The young people, too, are glad to do all they can to help. One young woman promised the Lord if he would bless her in her work that week, that she would give all she earned over her salary, to pay on a bond, for she wanted to purchase one. The next Sunday she was

Sacramento Keeps Financial Law

At its first inventory meeting several weeks ago, Sacramento Branch, California, counted fifty-seven inventories deposited on the table. Twenty-three paid tithing at the time. Encouraged by these results, officers decided to make it a statement meeting in the future, and have it an annual affair. Since that time, many more have filed their inventories.

Auburn Mission filed more than one hundred percent as two heads of families, nonmembers, filed their inventories along with the rest.

Elder Harold I. Velt at Silvertown

Elder Harold I. Velt began a new series of lantern lectures, with Australian pictures accompanying his serial story, "Where, Why and How I became a Latter Day Saint," in the Silvertown, Washington, Congregational Church, the middle of May. These pictures were followed each evening by a chart lecture illustrating fundamental principles of church organization, ordinances, and doctrine as specified by the Lord for the salvation of souls.

Brother Velt has made a circle of friends for himself and for the church at Silvertown in his missionary work. His efforts there always win favorable press comment as well as the interest of numbers of townspeople.

happy to hand over to the pastor a sum of $25.40. This she had made above her regular salary. The bonds are twenty-five dollars each.

Those of Tulsa Branch who attended the General Conference in April, returned a more consecrated band, eager to sacrifice and do more than their part if possible. The pastor's first sermon after his return was delivered under the power of divine inspiration to the extent that all present felt the spiritual influence which lifted them to the heights where spirit communes with spirit and peace is found. His closing words were prophetic in utterance: "Have no fear, my people, Zion will be redeemed."

Tulsa members are thankful that Brother Lancaster was returned to Central Oklahoma District.

May 1, the Ojuawa Club sponsored a carnival for the benefit of the local church debt. A marionette show was one of the features. A trio of girls who have been featured on the radio this winter, and the girls' sextet gave a play. Some two hundred attended the carnival and the club made over forty-six dollars.

On Mother's Day this branch had a fine crowd out to hear Pastor J. E. Lancaster's sermon. The first part of this sermon was addressed to those in the congregation who wore the red rose; the second part to those wearing a white flower. At the conclusion the ushers gave to each group of mothers a poem appropriate to the red or the white. The exercises concluded with a scene of the mother of Jesus forgiving the traitor of her son in the presence of the mother of Judas.

A special service for the young people was enjoyed May 20. A white ribbon was pinned on all persons under thirty who promised to remain for the eleven o'clock service. The seats were marked off with white ribbons, and the ushers held them until the young people were seated in the center of the church. Then for twenty-five minutes Brother Levi Skinner talked to these young hearers on "Keeping the Faith."

Commemorating Memorial Day, the pastor called attention on Sunday, May 27, to the joys of the life beyond this mortal realm. He did not speak of those who have gone before us as dead, but as promoted to glory with God and higher life.

That same evening the Temple Builders had a candlelighting service. Two candles burning on the altar, the girls marched forward with lighted candles and pledged allegiance to God and his church. This service was followed by a message from J. L. Lancaster, father of the pastor, who, despite his seventy-six years, teaches a class every Sunday and preaches when called upon.

Sister Hazel Cunningham, head of the women's department, announced and sponsored a dinner and play May 22 for the benefit of the local church debt. The Dramatic Club of Tulsa University furnished a play forty minutes long. As a result of this event the department was happy to present the finance board a sum of forty-seven dollars.

Several new members have been added to this branch, and more are soon to follow.

Pastor Lancaster knows how to keep all departments busy and each member happy at his task. God has blessed Tulsa Branch in more ways than one.

Visiting elders who have preached here lately were Elder A. E. Stoff, the new district president who preached his first sermon in this district at Tulsa, May 6, and John A. Robinson, of San Antonio, Texas, who preached May 13.

Sacramento, California

Active in Good Works

A rummage sale held recently by Brother and Sister S. M. Reiste and others, netted the branch $127.25 to apply on paying for their new church building.

Almost to a man the priesthood of this branch and locality were in attendance to profit from the instructions given by President Floyd M. McDowell in his visit there last winter.

Among the guest speakers at the quarterly Friday evening gatherings have been Rabbi Norman Goldberg; Mrs. Hugh Bradford, National President of the Parent-Teacher Association; John B. Matthew, instructor in arts, Sacramento Junior College; Miss Marjorie I. Graham, art department of the same. Sister Gertrude Bidwell secured the speakers as a part of her work in the field of religious education for the local group.

At the inventory meeting (the first in the branch) fifty-seven inventories were deposited on the table. Twenty-three paid tithing at the time. It was decided to make it a statement meeting in the future and have it an annual affair. Since that time many more have filed their inventories. Auburn Mission filed more than one hundred percent as two heads of families, nonmembers, filed their inventories along with the rest.

On February 4, last, Sister Inez Augusta Honeychurch was united in marriage to Mr. Clarence Leland Quinn. It was a beautiful wedding, the church was full. A lovely spirit present. The pastor officiated. They were attended by the bride's brother Ives and Miss Rose Ida Dawson. After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home.

February 18, the first junior stewardship certificates were awarded by Elder E. C. Burdick to Dorothy and Melvin Sabin and Leroy Burdick.

The branch was made sad by the passing of Sister Wilma Melchoir Beckett on March 4. This sister left her husband and three small children.

On April 1, Marlene Ann Powell was blessed by the pastor and Elder S. M.

Reiste and on the same day Brother Lawrence McDonald baptized Miss Mavis Dungan and Mrs. Ida Dungan her mother. These were very good workers in our branch even before they entered the kingdom. They can now work with a knowledge of God's approval of their efforts.

Elder J. L. Bussell and Pastor W. H. Dawson held a week's series of meetings at Stockton, starting May 13. This required a hundred miles of motoring each evening after the day's work. Friday evening, fifteen of Sacramento Branch Choir, under the direction of Sister Birdie Clark, went to Stockton and sang for the Saints.

Thirty-one Saints from Sacramento motored over to Irvington, one hundred and fifteen miles away, by 8:00 a. m., May 30, to join other Saints in cleaning up the reunion grounds for the reunion to be held July 20 to 29.

Local Saints have missed several workers from their meetings recently. They have been busy in their work in other branches and localities. Elder E. C. Burdick has been visiting branches in the interest of his spiritual ministry regarding finances. Sister Hazel Blohm has been traveling here and there in the interests of religious education. Brother J. L. Bussell and Joseph Ensley have visited Stockton and Auburn; Priest Jabez Elam has been helping at Auburn. The pastor has visited several of the branches in the district and preached for them. Elder Roy C. Barmore and family attended General Conference, and Brother Barmore enthusiastically told Sacramento Branch of his marvelous experiences.

Priest J. B. Dawson has been assisting in looking after obtaining speakers for the services and as superintendent of the adult group.

A lovely spirit prevails here. The congregation has been addressed by the gift of prophecy seven times in the last few months. Many of the sick are healed by administration. Some are near the kingdom.

Houston, Texas

Looking to the Hearne Reunion

Branch and district officers are busily engaged in making arrangements for and stimulating interest among the members in the district conference which will convene at Hearne, July 13 to 22 inclusive. They are looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to this reunion, and are expecting Bishop L. F. P. Curry, Apostle R. S. Budd, and Missionary Howard and Missionary Lee Quick to be present at least part of the time.

Children's Day was observed at Houston with special programs presented by the children, in charge of Mrs. Crete Arnold, supervisor of the children's department. Brother J. V. Suggs, who has been holding junior church services for them gave an interesting talk. His work has been very effective. Following the program a short talk was made by A. V. Arnold.

Sister Jim Hobbs, of near Fairbanks, is very ill in Memorial Hospital, at Houston. Her husband is also in the same hospital with both arms and one leg broken, as a result of his airplane crashing with him last week.

Sister L. Kinsfather, who has been in the hospital recently, has now returned to her home, and is reported as improving rapidly.

Sister Christina Veale, mother of Sisters I. L. Snedeker and R. V. Post, passed away recently and was laid to rest in Forest Park Cemetery.

Kansas City Stake

The bimonthly Sunday afternoon educational meeting was held June 10, at Central Church. The teachers of this class are Elders R. L. Bishop and J. A. Koehler.

The following summary of notes of the Kansas City stake business session, held May 18, is of interest to the general church. Recommendations for ordination to the various offices by the stake high council are as follows: James N. Curtis, of Central Church, elder; Herbert Irvine Luke, of Quindaro, teacher; Charles Graham, of Quindaro, Meredith Mader, Herbert Hepworth, and Lyal Higdon all of Malvern Hill, priests. Appointments for officers in the churches were made and all stake officers were retained by vote. A report of the financial and religious education department was also read.

Central Church

Preliminaries for Central representatives in the coming Stake O. B. K. declamatory contest were held June 14. Rebecca Dunn, senior entry, Lenore Christy, junior entry, Hugh Bland, oration, Kenneth Simms, and Larry Siegel, debate, were chosen. The judge was Miss Elizabeth Sartin, teacher in Kansas City, Kansas.

At the annual election of Central O. B. K. cabinet officers, Genevieve Burgoon was chosen counselor; Kenneth Simms, vice counselor; and Iris Rush, secretary and treasurer.

Children's Day baptisms were taken care of at the worship period June 10, when fourteen boys and girls and one adult joined the church. The service was a beautiful one. Pastor Cyril E. Wight performed the baptisms while the organist played a medley of quiet hymns. Elder J. A. Gardner gave a short explanation about the baptismal ceremony in the church. The congregation was happy to welcome the following candidates, John Pritchard, Billy Rush, George Rush, Patricia Hull, Robert Hull, Charles Denny, Charles Cravens, Betty Bowen, Wilma Jean Bowen, James Stratton, C. A. Shockley, Byron Gates, Charles Blomquist, and Mr. William

Ninety-two Baptisms at Independence

Ninety-two children and adults were baptized on Children's Day, June 10, at Independence. Prebaptismal classes led many to accept the truth of the gospel, and the large majority of the candidates were boys and girls. Baptisms are reported as follows: Stone Church, 23; Second Church, 20; Walnut Park, 16; Enoch Hill, 7; Spring Branch, 9; Englewood, 10; Liberty Street, 5; and Sugar Creek Mission, 2.

Courtesy

"My boy," a father advised his son, "treat everybody with politeness, even those who are rude to you. For remember that you show courtesy to others not because they are gentlemen, but because you are one."—Alabama "Times."

J. Charles May Closes Series at Mount Vernon

Elder J. Charles May recently closed a successful series of missionary services at Mount Vernon, Illinois. Two were baptized May 27, and on Decoration Day, five more were led into the waters of baptism.

Elder May was also busy in this branch in February, holding a sixteen-day series. They appreciate his good help.

"Noise Is Waste"

All noise is waste. So cultivate quietness in your speech, in your thoughts, in your emotions. Speak habitually low. Wait for attention and then your low words will be charged with dynamite.—Elbert Hubbard

C. Ed. Miller Takes Leave of Absence

"We are glad to welcome Elder C. Ed. Miller to this section," writes E. B. Hull, president of Pittsburgh District. "He will be here for a time, making his home at Washington, Pennsylvania." Brother Miller visited Pittsburgh Branch on Children's Day.

Several weeks ago Brother Miller took a leave of absence from his work in the Graphic Arts Bureau, and left Independence to join Sister Miller who is caring for an invalid sister in Pennsylvania. Meanwhile he has left the bureau in the capable hands of Mrs. Rose Paiste.

Grundy. The confirmation took place at the eleven o'clock service.

The evening service, June 10, consisted of a program by the C. W. A. Negro Jubilee Chorus, under the direction of Marie C. S. Lillard, dean of music at Western University, Kansas City, Kansas. Miss Dolly Brown, soprano, sang two delightful solos. The chorus gave a most interesting concert of Negro spirituals, possessing the excellent rhythm and enthusiastic interpretation characteristic of their race. Brother J. A. Gardner, gave a short talk.

The marriage of Miss Lucille May Sandy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lott Sandy, of Kansas City, to Mr. Frank D. White, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. White, of Independence, took place at eight-thirty, Saturday June 16, at Central Church. Pastor Cyril E. Wight read the service. Mrs. Hazel Scott Withee played the organ prelude and Lillian and Lynn Sandy lighted the candles. Mrs. John Isaacks sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly." A trio number, "The Rosary," was rendered by the organist, Mrs. Withee, violinist, Mr. Arthur Storms, and harpist, Miss Elinor Smith. Miss Sandy was attended by Miss Ruth White sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Byrna Sandy, Miss Marguerite Givens, and Miss Meriel Sandy. Paul White acted as best man for his brother. The ushers were Lawrence Sandy, Morris Rodell, and Doctor E. P. Nelson. Little Nora and Norma De Vol, were flower girls, and little Patty Frendenberg was the ring bearer. Mr. and Mrs. White will make their home at Independence.

Quindaro Church

The hot summer months do not seem to hinder the zionic program of this congregation. Every department is taking on added activities in conjunction with H. A. Higgins, not only to supply ample spiritual strength, but also to help meet the immediate financial problem of the Kansas City Stake. The women's department, men's department, and the T. A. D. Organization are considering plans by which they can collectively help care for this added task.

The O. B. K's have recently organized their volley ball activities for the summer months. Martha Gaunce has been selected to captain the young ladies' team, as a result of her past experience and splendid playing on last year's team. Donald Graham has been chosen as captain of the men's team. Due to his experience and ability as a player, the O. B. K's are expecting much of him in leading his team through a successful season.

Joe Davis, recently called to the office of deacon, has accepted the difficult task of caring for all recreational properties and scheduling all forms of recreation that will take place on the church property. Leonard Graham has been selected to assist Brother Davis in conditioning the grounds.

The following young people enjoyed a picnic at Wildwood Lake on Decoration Day: Martha Gaunce, Sophia Van Boskirk, Aileen Pemberton, Alice Baker, Ethel Hicklin, Leonard Graham, Eddie Baker, Donald Graham, Everett Gaunce, Chester Van Boskirk, and Charles Graham.

Mrs. H. A. Higgins is still instructing the Book of Mormon Class which has been meeting weekly the past nine months. As a result of her untiring efforts and her keen understanding of the book, she has made it possible for many of the young people to appreciate and love the church more than ever.

Heathwood Church

Upon arriving at the church Wednesday evening for prayer service, June 6, the former pastor, Brother John Tucker, and his family were greeted by a large group of Saints and friends.

After the prayer service, Brother Frank Freeze conducted an appreciation service for Brother Tucker. Piano numbers were rendered by Edith Quinley and Sister Edith Post dedicated an appropriate reading to him. Brother and Sister Freeze played a medley of sacred selections on the harmonica and guitar. Many of the Saints expressed their appreciation for the service he had rendered to them during the nine years as their pastor. Brother Freeze, for the group, presented to Brother Tucker, a Parker pen and pencil set with his name engraved on it. Refreshments were served and the Saints departed after singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

Sunday morning during the sacrament service, Brother C. D. Jellings introduced the new pastor, Elder David White.

In the evening the group participated in a welcome service for Brother and Sister White and family. Welcome speeches were made by Brothers John Tucker, Clair Green, Frank Freeze, in behalf of the adult division; Clarence Tyree, for the young people; Blanche Green, for the children, and Sister J. L. Johnson for the choir and orchestra. The orchestra played two selections, the choir sang, and the ladies' quartet sang a number. Avis Tyree played a violin selection and Edna Freeze sang a soprano solo. Marjorie Johnson represented the children singing "An Evening Prayer." Brother White made the closing remarks, expressing his appreciation of the service and accepting the challenge to do all in his power for God's work.

Don't drift along in a fool's paradise. Think. Go ahead and think. I dare you to think. Don't be afraid. Think. That is what God gave you a brain for. Think deeply and with all the ability you have. It is only in thinking that we have any hope.—Dr. Harry Rice.

Independence

To a large and appreciative congregation, President Elbert A. Smith preached his first sermon of the series on the Campus Sunday evening. His subject, "The Old Jerusalem Church," proved to be most interesting and educational. The Church of Christ was not built in a short time. Before the construction began, a blueprint had to be made, and after all the details were finished, the building of the old Jerusalem church was started. Brother Smith gave six characteristics of the church as follows: (1) it was an organic form, organized after a certain pattern; (2) it possessed a certain form of doctrine, that of the apostles; (3) it had authority and power; (4) it had certain gifts of blessings; (5) an economic system under which the poor were administered to; (6) it had much joy. In these six ways, we today can help Christ to build his church.

Elder Herbert Barto was in charge of the services, assisted by Elder A. K. Dillee, of Second Church. A cornet quartet and piano accompanied the congregational singing. A special solo was sung by George Anway, accompanied by Mrs. Sunshine Beck at the piano.

Early Sunday morning, a small but consecrated group of young people, representing all of the Latter Day Saint churches in Independence, met at the Campus for an early morning prayer meeting, for the purpose of dedicating their services to President Elbert A. Smith during his summer series of lectures on the Campus. This was a most spiritual meeting.

Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge of the meeting, assisted by Elder D. S. McNamara and Cecil R. Walker. President Elbert A. Smith was also present, and gave a few short remarks. The testimony of one young man summed up that of all present. He wanted to help Brother Smith in three ways: first, to pray constantly for the Campus meetings; second, to attend each one, not alone, but bringing someone with him, and third, to talk about the meetings to strangers.

Stone Church

Using as texts the words of Paul to the Galatian saints: "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free," (Galatians 5: 1), and the words of Mordecai to Esther: "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" (4: 14,) President F. M. McDowell delivered a strong and stirring sermon Sunday morning to the Stone Church congregation.

Graphically he presented the conditions of our times—great political unrest, the paradox of economics, general social confusion, the new deal, the capitalistic system in a state of collapse, unemployment, shortening of labor hours, intemperance, the growing superficiality of the age, the appeal of that which is novel rather than the beautiful and sublime, the growth of collectivism, and the merging of society from a post-war attitude into a pre-war state of feelings. In such times as these a great and grave responsibility rests upon the church which claims to be the Church of Christ. To meet the conditions which surround us, the church needs (1) spiritual vitality; (2) continued allegiance to the truth; (3) sustained righteousness, (4) penetrating intelligence, (5) sacrificial service, (6), a God-revealing manhood, and (7) an increasing, God-revealing fellowship.

Hopeful because of the devotion to Christ manifested by the Saints in the present hour, because of their increasing spirituality, because of the determination of many to keep the law, and because of the advancing host of intelligent, devoted, consecrated young people, Brother McDowell pleaded with his hearers to realize that they have "come to the kingdom for such a time as this."

Music was furnished by the Stone Church choir, led by Paul N. Craig, Miss Elizabeth Smith playing the harp, Robert Miller, the organ. Nelle Atkinson Kelley, soprano, sang an incidental solo, and Miss Smith played a harp number.

More than fifty men of the church in Independence enjoyed a social meeting and a banquet served by the Laurel Club in the lunch room at the Auditorium, Monday night, June 11. This was the opening meeting of a men's club movement designed to promote fraternity and fellowship between priesthood and laymembers. Officers elected to head the club were president, Harold C. Burgess, and secretary-treasurer, Shankland Arnson. The club will meet once a month for a supper and program, and many enthusiastic plans are being considered to carry out the association's purposes. The movement was launched by Pastor Sheehy and a committee of eighteen men.

Miss Ena Mae Woodside, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Woodside, of Independence, and R. W. Kramer, jr., son of R. W. Kramer, of Saint Joseph, Missouri, were married at the Stone Church Sunday, June 10, at 4.30 p. m., Pastor J. F. Sheehy officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Marie Bourman and Miss Ruth Grigsby, the bridesmaids, and Jason and Samuel Woodside, brothers of the bride, were groomsmen. The Misses Joy Harder and Alice Woodside, sister of the bride, lighted the candles. After a short wedding trip to the Ozarks Mr. and Mrs. Kramer will make their home at Saint Joseph.

The marriage of Miss Genevieve Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Williams, of Independence, and Walter Cannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Cannon, also of this city, took place at 4 p. m. Sunday, June 10, at their new home, the service being read by the Reverend F. E. Cary in the presence of the immediate families and a few friends. The bride was attended by Miss Georgia

James, of Buckner, and Ted Snively, of Independence, acted as best man for Mr. Cannon.

Brother Harold Reid returned to Independence June 8, bringing his bride, the former Miss Audrey Sloan, of Bartlett, Nebraska. They were married at the bride's home at Bartlett, Priest Howard Cook, of Independence, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Reid will make their home in Independence.

Miss Helen Irene Layton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Layton, of Independence, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Layton of Nauvoo, Illinois, and Mr. George E. Fender, son of Mr. Ed Fender, of Appleton City, Missouri were married Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock June 17, at the home of the bride's parents in a simple but impressive service. The ceremony preformed by Elder Ammon White, was witnessed by relatives and a few close friends of the bride and bridegroom. Mr. and Mrs. Fender will move into their own home soon, which is located at 1403 West Van Horn.

Second Church

Elder O. W. Sarratt was the Sunday morning speaker for Second Church, and his subject was, "The Power to Substitute Good for Evil." The choir, led by Earl Audet, sang the anthem, "The Lord Is My Salvation," Hazel Clow carrying the solo part.

Lawrence Martin, of Enoch Hill District, spoke to the juniors at the same hour, and his topic was, "Jesus Chooses His Helpers." Alberta Queen told the story, "Timothy, a Follower of Jesus." A vocal number was given by two of the junior girls. The story, "The Boy Who Became a Friend of Jesus," was told by Mrs. B. C. Sarratt.

At two-thirty Sunday afternoon six adults were baptized, the confirmation following immediately.

Tonight Group 15 is having a picnic at the Campus.

Liberty Street Church

Children's Day programs were well presented June 10, and the teachers were pleased with the efforts of the children. In the afternoon five children were baptized in the Spring Branch font. They were James A. McKinney, Beatrice Marie Campbell, Edgar Dan Gard, and Earl Leonard Thompson, baptized by Pastor John R. Lentell, and Betty Louise Walker baptized by her father, Cecil R. Walker.

Following the religio hour in the evening, which was in charge of the young people, the confirmation service was held. Elders John Soderstade, John R. Lentell, J. E. Cleveland and H. J. Thurman officiated.

At the young people's seven-thirty meeting preceding the midweek prayer service an enjoyable program was presented by young members of Gladstone Church, Kansas City.

The Liberty Street Choir, under the direction of Fred Friend, sang at the junior service Sunday morning. Raymond Wrigley was the speaker. After singing there, the choir sang upstairs for the regular eleven o'clock hour. S. S. Smith delivered the sermon.

At three o'clock that afternoon the choir gathered at the church for a short practice session and then went on a missionary trip to Lees Summit. There after a basket supper, they gave a forty-minute program at the church, and Cecil Walker preached an inspiring sermon. Several members of Liberty Street's congregation accompanied the choir on this trip.

Walnut Park Church

Pastor Frank McDonald was welcomed back by Walnut Park Saints Sunday, after an absence of three weeks from the city on a business trip.

A nice attendance was reported at the church school session Sunday morning, four hundred and sixty-eight being counted by the secretary. The program following the church school session was furnished by the Swastika Class. The Scripture reading was by Leona Hartman; a girls' quartet composed of Opal Colebank, Grace Wille, Marybelle Sanders, and Leona Hartman sang "Just for Today," and Jessie Anderson read, "It Isn't the World, It's You."

Elder John F. Sheehy, pastor in Zion, was the speaker at the morning service. Preceding the sermon the choir sang an anthem, "The King of Love My Shepherd Is."

It being the opening Sunday of the summer services on the Campus, there was no service at the Walnut Park Church Sunday evening. The religio met at six o'clock, however, and will continue to do so each Sunday throughout the summer.

Enoch Hill Church

The wedding of Miss Louise McDonald and Hubert Kendall was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Henry Hartman, the bride's mother, Friday night, in the presence of relatives and close friends. The ceremony was read by Elder Arthur Welch, uncle of the bride. Pastor E. A. Thomas offered the prayer. The bridal pair were attended by Mrs. James R. McDonald, matron of honor; Miss Helen Minton, bridesmaid, and two of the bride's brothers, James R. McDonald and Robert McDonald acted as groomsmen. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Jupheena Kendall, of Petersburg, Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Kendall will be at home to their friends at 128 East Walnut, Independence.

On Monday evening eighty-two of the Saints and friends met at the home of Brother and Sister Hartman for a miscellaneous shower on Brother and Sister George Griffin, who were married recently.

A daughter, Patricia Jane, was born to Brother and Sister Gerald Thomas, June 14.

Sister John Jones was chosen to act as historian for the women's department at the study class Thursday afternoon.

The class taught by Elder Chester Constance, was in charge of the church school worship period Sunday morning. Brother W. L. Young gave a talk and several quotations were read by members of the class. "Keep the Law," was the theme. The class sang, "Blessed Are They That Do," the entire school joining in on the chorus.

Elder Joseph Martin was the eleven o'clock speaker, and he read from Malachi 4. His theme was "The Responsibility of Parents in Training Their Children Spiritually." The choir sang, "Let the Gospel Light Shine Out," and a soprano solo, "Alone," was sung by Miss Pearl Chrestensen.

Spring Branch Church

The eight-fifteen prayer meeting Sunday morning was a young people's prayer meeting, the third Sunday of the month having been set aside for the young people. This service was in charge of Leonard Roberts and A. L. McLees. Preceding the service, soft music was played and a solo was sung by Ira Weeks. These meetings are well attended and all take an active part.

Patriarch Ammon White, one of the favorite speakers of this congregation, delivered the Sunday morning sermon.

The young people's department are planning a tour to Far West next Sunday, June 24. They hope to visit historical places and branches, present a program, etc. A number are planning to go.

Spring Branch is proud of its volley Ball teams this year. They have a new court at the home of Lawrence Jones. The ground was donated by Brother Jones.

Southern Ohio Young People's Convention

Many Rededicate Lives and Talents

The young people's convention of Southern Ohio District, held May 25, 26, and 27, was remarkably successful. Expenses incident to the entertainment of visitors and the expenses of Apostles R. S. Budd and D. T. Williams were taken care of by the young people of First and Second Columbus churches. And the response of the district young people and those of surrounding territory is to be commended.

Class work in charge of the apostles was splendid. From the opening service on Friday evening until the close of the convention Sunday evening, there was not an idle moment.

Many of those who attended were prompted to rededicate their lives and talents to the things of God. Close attention marked all services, and a lasting impression was given those who will sometime carry the responsibility of church work. Young men sat in the rostrum with older officers, and assisted in the services.

Visitors came from West Virginia District, a few from Kirtland, and several from Michigan. On Sunday morning approximately three hundred and fifty people were there.

WILLIAM J. BREWER

William J. Brewer, who passed away May 29, at the Independence Sanitarium, was for several years pastor of Enoch Hill Church. Always he was an ardent church worker, honest, and kindly. He had served in the priesthood since 1904. He held the office of high priest at the time of his death.

Council Bluffs, Iowa Benefit From Visits of General Church Officers

Open air Sunday evening services for the summer began June 10, at Bayliss Park.

The Southwestern Iowa and Northeastern Nebraska Reunion will convene here from August 24 to September 2. The use of Dodge Park, centrally located and of easy access to members at Omaha as well as to those in Council Bluffs and the surrounding territory has been secured. It is hoped that a large number will camp on the grounds which are ample and very attractive.

Members of this congregation mourn the death of friends and loved ones. Among those who have passed away recently have been Sister Carrie Soderburg, Sister Laura Larson, of Omaha, and Sister Hans Hemingson, of Crescent. The last two named were daughters of Sister Rasmussen, of Council Bluffs.

Elder E. Y. Hunker, missionary to this congregation, was present not long ago, and delivered some fine sermons. Other leading men of the church who have visited here during the last few weeks have been Apostles F. H. Edwards, John F. Garver, and Paul N. Hanson, and Evangelist J. A. Gunsolley. Brother Gunsolley delivered two sermons. Apostles Garver and Edwards urged the priesthood to recognize their responsibility as missionaries.

At a special conference of the district, Brother J. A. Hansen was released from the office of district president.

Elder Amos Graybill was elected to fill his unexpired term. Brother Hansen has recently been ordained to the office of evangelical minister, and felt that he should be left free to carry on the work pertaining to that office.

Among the activities that have been carried on here in the last few months have been a play, written and presented by Sister Eunice Moser, at Easter; a Valentine supper, by the Busy Bees, under the leadership of Sister Laura Larson; an Irish cottage supper, by the Musical Arts Club, Sister W. T. Spanswick, president; a family supper in April, given by the Willing Workers, Sister Carrie DeBar, leader; a May breakfast given May 1, by the women's department, Sister Amy Thomas, leader; a mothers' and daughters' banquet, sponsored by the women's department, at which one hundred and sixty-two mothers and daughters were present; a book review, sponsored by the Harmony Chapter of Temple Builders, Sister Blanche Currie, leader.

Lakewood, Ohio

Mourn Passing of Musical Director

On May 31, Sister F. T. Haynes of this branch, passed to rest. On Sunday afternoon, June 3, beautiful Kirtland Temple was filled with Saints from Kirtland District who had come to pay loving tribute to one who during the years had comforted them in times of sorrow, made their troubles easier to bear, encouraged them with words of wisdom, and pointed out by her own beautiful example the path of duty in service to the Lord.

From her early life Sister Elenora Whiting Haynes sensed the importance and the seriousness of being a true follower of Christ, and as a young woman, she was called upon to make a decision between a lucrative position in the musical world and that of being a humble follower of Christ. After praying to the Lord to direct her, she dedicated her beautiful voice to the glory of God and to the benefit of the church.

For two years she was musical director of Kirtland District and for many years she was chorister in Lakewood Branch, imparting her knowledge of the history of music to the Saints, to raise the standard of music appreciation in the church.

Her work in the Sunday school was as inspiring as her other activities. She devoted her time to improving her opportunities as a teacher, and was among the few in the church who have earned the gold seal in religious education. By her teaching she inspired many to worship intelligently as well as spiritually. During the past year she conducted a class in the study of Jesus and His Message, written by Sister Christiana Saltyards.

Besides her own many activities, she found time whenever her husband was called to administer to the sick and the dying, to be at his side, giving words of comfort and hope.

"Surely," writes a friend and fellow worker of Sister Haynes in Lakewood Branch, "our heavenly Father had need of her for a greater work when he called her from a life of such activity and devotion."

Dixon's Grove, Tennessee

Joyful Dedication of New Church Building

Sunday I had the pleasure of participating in the dedication of a little church at Dixon's Grove, Tennessee, named after S. E. Dixon, of Lancaster, Ohio.

Thirty years ago Brother Dixon, then an employee in the shops of the L. & N. Railway at Paris, Tennessee, went out to the schoolhouse in this neighborhood and held a preaching service. He had a fair hearing, but was under the necessity of sleeping on the benches in the building for the night which was not a very encouraging introduction. He walked in and he had to walk out.

But on May 20, this year, he came back again as the invited guest of the Dixon Grove Branch, named in his honor, to preach the dedication sermon of their church, recently erected. This time he came in an automobile and many householders were anxious to have him as their guest. As I listened to him earnestly bearing testimony to the same truths he has preached all these years, I discerned that this was a happy occasion both for him and for the congregation. Some of those who heard his first sermon were there now as members of the church.

One sows, another waters, but it is God who giveth the increase. So it was here. Through the years, Brother Dixon came again at times, and the missionaries of that time, gave some attention to the work but without definite results until in the last year or so, Elder O. S. Caldwell, of Paris, a local elder, has been the humble instrument who brought conditions to the stage where a branch was organized January 14, 1934.

In November of 1933, they began their new church, Brother and Sister C. R. Reynolds having donated an acre and a half of land off the southwest corner of their farm for the purpose. It is nicely situated and is going to make quite an adequate church home for this little branch.

It is a frame building 28 by 46 feet with corrugated iron roof, and its twenty-four twelve-foot pews and eighteen folding chairs, were all filled at the services Sunday. The old-fashioned grand piano reminded me of the one we used to have in the mission house in Honolulu.

We opened at nine o'clock with a prayer service and followed at ten-thirty with the dedication service. Elder C. B. Gallimore, district president and bishop's agent, Elder Dan Dortsch, his counselor, and Elder O. S. Caldwell, the pastor, assisted in the service. The sermon was by Elder S. E. Dixon, and the prayer by your humble servant.

The weather was ideal though perhaps just a little on the warm side, and to swell the local group came Saints from nearby branches.

At noon one would never have suspected a depression judging from the ample repast provided. Good food accompanied by good fellowship was enjoyed by all. In the afternoon I was permitted to witness again through the spoken word the truth of the latter-day work and also in the evening.

We rode back to Paris after the day's services with the pastor and his family. It was a beautiful night. I still enjoy singing "'Tis a Glorious Thing to Be in the Light," with the assurance that the light is still shining if men will only give it an opportunity to brighten up their dreary lives.

After a week spent in the Kentucky-Tennessee District, I am now en route for the districts further south. I feel encouraged over what I have seen and felt during the past week; I believe there is a good future ahead of the work in this field.

Grateful for All Blessings

Saints of this congregation feel grateful for God's blessings to them individually and to the church. News of the late conference was eagerly awaited and received. There is a newer determination to be loyal and true to the faith of our fathers. The responsibilities of the gospel rest on every member.

The pastor, accompanied by twenty-four members of this congregation, started at 8:00 a. m. by motorbus to the district conference at Clay Cross, April 29. They reached their destination in time for the eleven o'clock preaching hour. It was a beautiful day which will stay in the memory of all those present.

On the first Sunday of May, the young ladies handcraft class made a presentation. They each had made little knitted garments, socks, and bed jackets. These were given to each baby and little child personally by the pastor, who made a suitable speech to each recipient. It was a pleasing sight, and the mothers of the babies were surprised when they saw the gifts. Sister Whalley, the leader of this class, arranged a program for a concert and social which was a success. A small charge was made, and a fund for the benefit of the class was raised.

March 11, Brother Fred Schofield was ordained to the office of priest.

The women meet fortnightly to study the Book of Mormon. These Saints are looking forward to the coming visit of Apostle John W. Rushton and wife, and trust that they will have a safe and happy voyage.

May 20, Elder Charles Cousins, of Clay Cross, and son, Herman, visited Birmingham. The son preached in the morning, and his father occupied the pulpit in the evening.

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

Variety of Events Hold Interest

Last March the district conference was held in Pittsburgh church. E. B. Hull, Pittsburgh's pastor, was again elected district president. One brother was baptized and Leroy S. Eschrich, the bishop's agent, was ordained an elder.

Mother's Day was observed with a special program, sponsored by the young people of the branch. The program was very effective in character.

Children's Day exercises was enjoyed on June 10, with appropriate program by the children. At this time five of the Sunday school members were baptized. Elder C. Ed. Miller, of Independence, Missouri, was present and gave the charge to the candidates.

On May 19, a number of Pittsburgh members went to New Hamburg, Pennsylvania, to the home-coming held in the church in that place, and to hear Elder Richard Baldwin, who was instrumental in the organization of that branch. Among those present was Elder M. H. Headley and family, of Pittsburgh. Brother Headley was the first president of this branch.

They have had some sick in our branch here lately. Sister Mary G. Conway fell Brother William Y. Stroh died on June 7. He had been a sufferer for many months. He was the president of a company that manufactured hard steel in Pittsburgh. He was baptized in Coldwater, Michigan, when a child. The funeral service was held June 10 and interment was at Coldwater, Michigan, where his mother, Mrs. Alta Stroh and his sister, Mrs. Ethel Gallagher live.

ZION'S CHRISTIAN LEGION CONCERNING THE COMING CONVENTION

By D. T. Williams

On Saturday, June 30, and Sunday, July 1, a convention of Zion's Legion will meet at Windsor, Ontario, at the Latter Day Saint church, corner Pierre Avenue, and Assumption Street. Every officer of the Legion is urged to be present. At this convention we will attempt the further perfecting of the organization and the education of all concerned with regard to the successful operation of the institution in reaching the objectives we have set before ourselves.

We are hereby requesting that every divisional commander set himself the task of organizing his forces in order to have at this meeting practically every officer under his direction. All interested are invited to come, but we feel that we should lay special stress on the need of all officers being present for the responsibility will be theirs to set the machinery of the institution in intelligent operation; they cannot do this if they are not acquainted with the responsibility under which they should labor.

We make bold therefore to suggest that the car space be so organized as to bring the officers from every company and division. We are not working for a large crowd, but for a select congregation. The convention will take note of the division most successful in reaching the objective of all officers present. Divisional commanders please take notice. The time is not long, therefore let us make our period of preparation one of intensiveness.

This convention is being taken to Canada to give all the young people of Ontario a like privilege with the young people of Michigan to familiarize themselves with the activities of Zion's Legion. We hope, therefore, that young people's leaders all through the province will stimulate the attendance of their followers at this educational and inspirational assembly. Dominion Day being observed this year on Monday will give those coming the opportunity to spend the full day Sunday at Windsor. We therefore urgently invite all young people between the age of thirteen and

Conference Notices

The annual conference of Southern Indiana District will convene August 18 and 19, with Derby Branch. The first meeting will be a prayer service at 10 a. m., and the business session will take place at 2 p. m., thus giving opportunity to all present to attend. The date has been chosen as one suitable to all in the district, and we hope will make possible Apostle M. A. McConley's being present. We urge all branch officers to see that the statistical reports are made out by August 1, and sent to the district secretary, Nita R. Ferguson, 4619 Cliff Avenue, Louisville, Kentucky. We would especially urge that every ordained man thirty-five to make every effort to be present.

In order that all may be provided for we are asking those who will be staying over night to inform by post card or otherwise one of the following brethren: Mr. L. D. Campbell, 1401 Niagara Street, Windsor, Ontario, or Mr. Lloyd Heaviland, in care of Loyd's Texico Gas Station, corner Indiana and Grand River, Detroit, Michigan. Your cooperation in this matter will be highly appreciated, and if you fail to notify these brethren you may find yourself embarrassed when bed time comes. Let us work together and we will have a very successful time.

Watch the Herald for further announcements. The Herald editors are very kindly cooperating with us in all these matters and we appreciate it very much.

in the district fill out the ministerial blank and mail to J. O. Dutton, district president, at Rome, Indiana, care J. Leonard Glenn. These reports to cover the period from August 1, 1933, to August 1, 1934. If there are any who desire to be met at the train, please notify Elder J. Leonard Glenn, Rome, Indiana. Let us pray to the end that the good Spirit will put it into the hearts of all who can possibly make the sacrifice to be at the conference, bringing a good Spirit with you that we may indeed have an enjoyable and profitable time.—J. O. Dutton, district president; Nita R. Ferguson, district secretary.

The annual conference of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District will convene at the Saints' church, West Saint Joseph Street, Lansing, Michigan, Saturday and Sunday, July 7 and 8, and the following program will be carried out: Saturday, 9:30 a. m., prayer service, ending with conference organization; 11 a. m., sermon; 2 p. m., business; 4, priesthood meeting; 8, educational institute. Sunday: 8:30 a. m., prayer service; 10, school; 11, sermon; 2 p. m., sermon; 3:30, ministerial institute; 7:30, sermon.—A. C. Barmore, district president; Myrtle Perry, secretary.

Southern Missouri District will hold its conference at Thayer, Missouri, July 7 and 8. All branch and priesthood reports should be in by July 1. The regular routine of business will be had at the conference, and the annual election of officers will take place. A play will be given the night of July 7. We hope to have a good representation present. Apostle John F. Garver and Elder J. Charles May will be with us.—W. E. Haden, district president.

Our Departed Ones

SHALLBETTER.—Charles Ignatius Shallbetter was born October 25, 1853, in Carver County, Minnesota, and departed this life at Minneapolis, May 26, 1934. Brother Shallbetter was the first pastor of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints at Minneapolis. In 1883, on August 10, he was united in marriage to Josephine Sue Smith, and to this union were born seven children, one daughter dying in infancy. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder A. E. Curtis, of Independence, Missouri. He was laid to rest in Crystal Lake Cemetery. He leaves to mourn his children, Mrs. Alene Snuggnis, of Minneapolis; Mrs. Flossie Hanson, of Flaxville; Mrs. Beulah Anderson, of Kansas, Washington; Edwin Shallbetter, of Flaxville, Mrs. Montrose Clawson, of Quetook, Montana, Eli Shallbetter, of Plentywood, Montana; his sister, Mrs. Ernest Leubner, of Minneapolis, and two brothers, Joseph Shallbetter and B. W. Shallbetter, both of Minneapolis.

JOHNSON.—Jennie Leland Johnson was born June 15, 1864, at Pecatonica, Illinois, and departed this life May 5, 1934, at DeKalb, Illinois. She united with the church July 9, 1882, at Pecatonica, Elder Henry A. Stebbins officiating. She was the daughter of James M. and Elizabeth Leland, both of whom preceded her in death. She was married to Edward Johnson, of DeKalb, Illinois, October 15, 1913, who is now left to mourn a faithful and devoted companion. Sister Jennie as she was so well known to the church, was a talented and beautiful character, a faithful and devoted Saint. A short service was held May 8 in the home in DeKalb, and at Pecatonica, in the home of friends. Many neighbors and Saints gathered to pay their last respects to this devoted sister. She was laid to rest in the family plot at Pecatonica. Both services were conducted by Evangelist Frederick G. Pitt.

■ The Spider Goes Modern

The spider one day noticed that the fly was avoiding him, although he had spun some lovely webs in which to entangle his foolish and errant prey. So the spider called the literary art to his aid and wrote a letter to the fly. It was full of fair phrases, and friendship. The letter invited the fly to visit the spider; it was quite urgent and there was an R. S. V. P. at the end. But one thing gave it away—more eloquent than all the spider's fair words. The fly noticed, in opening the letter, that the spider had accidentally got a bit of his web on the paper. The fly had his phone taken out, moved to another part of the city, and lived under another name for a while.

■ Sucker Lists

The above story would be foolish, if it weren't so exactly like what happens in human society.

The "sucker lists" are being repaired again for the coming return of prosperity. Don't be surprised if a stranger calls you by phone from New York or Chicago, tells you he is a broker, and announces his firm intention of doing you, personally, a great favor by letting you have a choice block of stocks that have been quietly offered for sale. The chances are 999 out of a thousand that it is no good.

Remember, you can always buy groceries with money, but there are billions of dollars worth of stocks that won't buy anything. Some of Insull's "friends" in Chicago have papered the walls of their club rooms with his worthless stocks.

A neighbor bought some stocks from a big company, nationally advertised. Good dividends were paid as long as the company wanted to sell stocks to new dupes. Then abruptly the dividends ceased, and none have been paid for two years. The principal has not even been heard of for a long time.

Notice that at the bottom of the "tipster" sheets that come to you from the brokerage houses there is usually a line in very small type that reads like this: "We take no responsibility for the accuracy of any predictions contained in this letter." This is the most important sentence in the letter, and the only one to pay any attention to. The rest is bait.

A loan company sent agents to our plant to solicit our employees for deposits in their business. We refused them permission to solicit in the plant. Two months later they shut their doors and went out of business. Merely another effort to take in all possible suckers before escaping with the cash box.

Another company wants to lend us some money on our car, our furniture, our house—anything. We are one of a thousand "new accounts" that they hope to have opened in their business. In their last letter they intimate that their feelings are hurt because we have ignored two previous letters. Won't we write to them, please? No, thank you! There are spider webs on all their letters.

■ Starchy Sayings:

Less lecturing and more honest living will help us solve our problems.

An old, old story: "Nobody understands me but you, darling!"

"The best laid plans o' mice and men gang aft aglie," said Robert Burns. "And how!" ejaculates the modernist.

A Modern Church

A Pioneer Church This church came into existence as a pioneer—a pioneer that pointed the way back to an old gospel and forward to a new social order. As the years have passed since its organization in 1830, its people have seen their liberal doctrines and ideas appear one after another among the beliefs and ideals of the larger and more popular churches. Stewardship, tithing, moral responsibility for the use of property, the church's role in the rebuilding of society, are all items that were radical in 1830, but that by 1934 have become the commonplaces of Christian thought.

We do not claim credit for this change. We merely note that it has happened. Because of the small sphere of our influence and the limited range of our publicity we must regard this progress as a result of the conjunction of general Christian idealism and the social sciences. So far as we know the churches made the change as a result of the natural process of development.

Ideals and Action These social ideals were a part of our doctrine rather early. But what did we do with them? Confident in the possession of the "restored" gospel, we did not live up to its implications. We hugged the prize of a perfect New Testament organization to our bosoms and sat quiet. Our ideals remained more a preachment than a practice. Today we function less in the character of prophetic leadership than in the capacity of priestly conservatism. Only at this late date do we find the church in possession of a group of members who are less concerned about the signs and wonders of the gospel than they are about its challenge to action and a new way of living. This may be seen in the decreasing popularity of the "hoofs and horns" type of sermon and the growing interest in tithing, stewardship, and the plans for an economic and industrial Zion.

Prophetic Leadership A prophet must always run the risk of persecution, and a church with a prophetic message will bring upon itself the censure and opposition of those who seek safety in maintaining things as they are against the church's effort to recreate them as they ought to be. If this church would hold today the advanced position that it held in 1830, it must resolutely keep itself in the prophetic way of thinking, believing, and living. Its prophetic ministry cannot be sustained by word of mouth alone, nor by the printed word, but only by a way of life. Its people must envision new conditions, new ideals, new causes, and depart from the security of following habitually in the old ways.

A Modern Church We ought to be a modern church. We ought to be modern in every good sense of the word. In view of our message and our responsibility we ought to be the most modern church in the world, though obviously we are not. It is not easy to maintain a position of both intellectual and spiritual leadership, and yet we must in the future attempt to do that very difficult thing or resign our claim to be the authorized church of Christ. We must be modern in science, in education, in culture, in spirituality, and in good works.

True Greatness It does not take millions of followers nor millions in money to make a great church. The largest and richest churches have usually been conservative, and the world owes them little for its progress. The great churches, in amount of force exerted in behalf of human progress, have been the small and courageous groups challenging the established order of things, and going forward under leaders inspired by great ideals. Such a church was ours in 1830, and such a leader was Joseph Smith.

This church can only succeed in its objectives by the possession of the tremendous egotism to undertake for itself a role of greatness. It is the same egotism that led Jesus to declare himself to be the Son of God. By that same divinely inspired egotism we must declare and prove by our works that we are The Church of Christ. Inevitable mediocrity and failure will be the result of any less course.

Responsibility and Destiny Such a career of greatness entails heavy responsibilities. Indeed they are so heavy that we are not at present sufficiently strong to bear them. But we can bear some of the responsibilities now, and we can bear all of them if we resolutely prepare to do so. We must give real meaning to the motto: "Our Creed—All Truth." We must adjust ourselves to the deepest implications of science, and at the same time make ourselves more worthy to understand the real spiritual power in our religion.

Thoughts for Today

IT BEGINS TO APPEAR even to the chronically optimistic American people that the war debts will never be paid by those who contracted them. On the fifteenth day of this month there was a parade of ambassadors at Washington which headed up towards the Department of State, not bearing the installments due on the war debts, but bearing statements that they could not pay. Only Finland paid.

The repudiation of war debts had to come sometime, and it should just as well be now. We may as well face the fact that the war debts cannot be paid under existing conditions. We have had some indications that the collection of war debts would end like this. The American faith that they would be paid goes along with the belief in Santa Claus, Cinderella, and the story of Aladdin.

IN ALL FAIRNESS, we should state here that a great deal of the accumulated debt owed the United States was not for money lent, but for commodities supplied at prices higher than ever before known to the modern world. In desperation they had to buy at any price, and we charged them enough, to say the least. The money they must use if they pay the debts is twice as dear as that with which they bought: It amounts to a doubling of the debt by a gradual deflation of money. That is one factor which makes it impossible to pay the debts.

Another item to be noted is that not all of the amounts owed were spent for war—some was spent for rehabilitation of the war stricken areas; and so may be considered only indirectly spent for war.

However, the real collector of the war debts is Wall Street. This load of debt, thrown off by European nations, will fall upon the American taxpayers. Wall Street lent the money for the war. Wall Street will collect its interest and principal to the last penny, unless the American government goes into bankruptcy. It is to be hoped that we will learn our lesson and refuse to listen to the financiers when they try to get us into another situation of this kind.

MORE THAN TWO YEARS AGO, Apostle John F. Garver wrote a prophetic editorial for the Ensign predicting that the war debts would not be paid. As a reminder, we reprint a part of that editorial here.

"Let the world learn and be forced to recognize that war comes at so high a cost it can't be paid for. That when the cost even of wanton devastation is assessed upon those who have perpetrated it, it comes so high it can't be met. Let men and nations learn that war is waged these days on such a colossal scale that when they make loans for the sake of carrying on war, they cannot collect. . . .

"These debts are not going to be paid. Germany's children for sixty-two years are not going to pay for the folly of their fathers. Nor are the nations owing the United States going to pay in full under the shifts of this killing depression, when the basis of a payment as agreed upon is ability to pay. Let the nations default, then.

"Let them default for a clarification of the international atmosphere; and let them default in the interest of world peace. For without any question, when men and nations find they cannot collect on loans made to carry on war, they will not be so ready to rush into war as was the case in 1914."—John F. Garver, "Let the Nations Default," in Zion's Ensign, January 14, 1932.

The italics are ours.

WE LIKE our wars pretty well. We did not care greatly so long as the war was merely robbing millions of men of their lives in the trenches and our danger was limited to the risk of getting a sore throat from shouting and a stiff arm from flag-waving. But now that the war has begun to rob us of money we send up a universal cry of rage and complaint. Let us, the people, learn that wars cannot be paid for. Let us sign no more notes for war debts. Let us under-write no more loans for wars. Let us learn that money for wars is tossed irretrievably into the abyss.

Men's hearts and consciences have proved unexpectedly tough, and we have found the obstacles of selfishness and hate interposed between us and the desired objective of peace. If war cannot be outlawed on moral grounds, if the ideals of humanity are not sufficiently strong to make them see the horror and barbarity of war, if men have not sufficient mercy and pity in their hearts for those who must die in every war, we must attack humanity's war lust at a more vulnerable spot. It would appear that we have found that spot in the universal love for money. Now that the war debts are on the way to complete repudiation, let it be known to bankers and financiers, statesmen and money-lenders, and even down to the humble taxpayers, that a plunge into war is a plunge into some kind of bankruptcy. Let it be known that money lent for war cannot be collected. Let it be known that notes signed to underwrite wars will come back upon the signers.

The financiers of the world could stop all wars. The governments of the world could so restrict the financiers as to stop all wars, for after all, wars are created and pushed forward by the munition makers who manufacture the weapons and the bankers who lend the money to carry on war.

THE PARADE of ambassadors at Washington announcing the repudiation of war debts in 1934 was forecasted in the parade of nations into war in 1914. Only a span of twenty years—we thought we could escape the consequences, but they were inevitable.

Nobody wins in a modern war. Everybody loses: the combatants—victor and vanquished, neighboring and neutral nations, those who finance the war—the whole world loses in the war.

And how does America stand before the world today for her participation in the war? An angry and defeated Shylock, his money bags torn and empty around him, mocked and hated by the Antonios and Bassanios who have defeated his effort to get a pound of flesh, and pillaged as a punishment for insisting on it.

Blue Pencil Notes

Deacon Goodentart says: "Too often the 'better half' has never yet been told."

Brother U. W. Greene thinks that wise men may have come from the East in the winter; but he is sure they like to go East in the summer. When summer draws near each year Brother Greene begins to think of his many friends along the Atlantic coast, from Provincetown to Jonesport; and, though this is not to be repeated, he begins to think of the cool breezes, the clam "chowdahs," the "lobstahs," and the blueberry pies. So that is where he is now. Have a good time, Brother Greene; and we know that while you are having a good time, you will help many others to have a good and profitable time in your own dignified and friendly way.

A country clergyman was examining a class at the village school. "Now, Jones," he said, "can you tell me what we must do before we can expect forgiveness of sin?"

"Yes, sir," replied the boy, "we must sin."

Some years ago two of our missionaries as a practical joke tried out the power of suggestion on Elder Hubert Case. They took turns one day telling Hubert how very ill he looked, that he should see a physician, etc., etc. That night both of the missionaries were very ill with a sort of ptomaine poison, while Brother Case slept peacefully through the night not even aware of their misery. Perhaps suggestion has a "kick back." It should be used with caution. Better suggest something nice to the other fellow and then if it really does have a reverse action you will be the beneficiary.

One of our young sisters was about to leave her place of employment and get married. She remarked to her older sister: "I almost hate to give up my job; I may never earn a hundred and forty-five dollars a month again." The sister replied, grimly, "You may earn it but probably you will not get it." That some years ago, and it is only fair to say that the girl now has a home and a family that means more to her than any salary. Like thousands of wives and mothers she earns a princely salary—but does not get it—not these times.

At a time when the general church offices were in the Clinton Block on North Main Street a man came into the office of Bishop E. L. Kelley and told such a story of dire family need that Bishop Kelley gave him five dollars and promised further help. It happened a few minutes later that the Bishop was looking out of the window of his office. In those days a saloon stood diagonally across the street from his office, and he saw his recent visitor go in at the open door of that saloon. Bishop Kelley was a deliberate man, but he could act plenty quick when he chose to do so; he got down the stairs and across the street and met the man at the bar and took away his five dollars. There may have been some "moaning at the bar" but the money went back into the church till and not into the dram seller's till. That man rendered an abrupt accounting "for the things entrusted to his care."

God gives us spiritual blessings, gifts, and endowments. When they are misused or put to wrong purposes the accounting may not be so sudden as was the case in the foregoing little story; but it is just as certain; the gift is taken from us, our ministry goes to pieces and we are found bankrupt. The Lord has made an investment in us and he watches it as jealously as Bishop Kelley did the money of the church.

Maine Reunion Dates Changed

The Maine reunion will begin on August 11, instead of August 18 as previously announced. The change is due to working conditions in the district. The officers desire that everybody in the district shall be informed, and members can help by telling others.

What shall I tell you about prayer? Shall I explain how cold water slakes the thirst, how food quenches the hunger, how fire warms the chills? Take and see that the Lord is good. Pray and find out.—Spurgeon.

A Friend of Young People

Elder D. S. McNamara has for two years represented the pastorate on the Independence Council of Young People of the church, supervising their activities. This council represents more than 2,000 young men and women in ten congregations of the church.

D. S. McNAMARA

He has labored in Independence as an elder since January 20, 1929. Was pastor of Englewood Church, one of the congregations in Independence, for two years.

He has charge of the Latter Day Saint sponsored Boy Scout troops in Independence of which there are five or six, and is a great lover of boys.

Perhaps this is because he has two young sons of his own, Tom, seven, and Dick, almost six. These little men accompanied their daddy to the KMBC broadcast studio in Kansas City the morning of June 18, and enjoyed the privilege of greeting the listeners-in of the 6:30 to 6:45 radio worship Latter Day Saint service, with "hello." Brother McNamara frequently finds an opportunity to give his fine tenor voice to the service of the church—twice a week, Monday and Thursday, he is on hand with John F. Sheehy, to sing for this worship program.

Brother McNamara has been asked by the First Presidency to be the "daddy" of a young brotherhood of amateur radio broadcasters. During General Conference these boys and young men broadcast messages, free of charge, from conference visitors to friends and relatives in the United States and its possessions. One of these messages reached a boat 700 miles at sea from Panama.

On Growing Up

"We sow a thought, we reap a deed;
We sow a deed, we reap an action;
We sow an action, we reap a habit;
We sow a habit, we reap a character;
We sow a character, we reap a destiny."

Notice the pronoun We, not You nor They nor Them, but WE. We are responsible for what we are. Oh, yes, certain circumstances have influenced our development, certain people have helped or hindered us. But if we are honest in our heart of hearts we, the children of this modern era, dare not excuse our immaturity or weaknesses because we had no educational opportunities, because our health was poor, because our families did not understand us, or because we worked too hard. Too many people around us have surmounted such obstacles, and made the most of poverty and seeming other disadvantages. Be we climber or drifter we are largely responsible for what we are. William Ernest Henley, the poet, brings it right home when he declares:

"I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul."

Society cries out today for its members, whether young or old, male or female, to grow up to be more than emotional six-year-olds, intellectual weaklings, and spiritual babes. It needs individuals who realize that self-control is the very essence of character; people who are going somewhere, headed for a goal, not just drifting; people who are not afraid in the midst of contempt and jeering, to cling stoutly to ideals, the noblest ideals.

Society has too few members who are playing the game of life fairly and cleanly. It must have leaders in every field of life, people who are mentally grown up—awake, thoughtful, just, loyal, unselfish. How very much it needs those leaders! Society challenges us to such leadership.

As young people of his church, let us remember that one's social life is a reflection of one's spiritual life. Let us remember that time belongs to God, and he has given it to us for a purpose, a sacred loan for every minute of which we must answer.

What are we doing about this business of growing up? Have we yet arrived at the age when we can help rather than be helped, when we can make a worthy contribution to the church and society? There is a growing host of young people in the church who are thinking, who are preparing for greater service and contributing while they prepare, who know the value of study and of prayer and consecration. Such a band of young people rapidly growing up is a joy to the world. On the other hand, there are young people in our midst who are not yet grown-up in temporalities or in spirit—they are wasters, selfish, self-centered, drifters. Indifference has taken possession of them. Something must be done about this group.

Now is the time for us to awake, to rise up in our strength, to grow upward toward God, and as Paul says, to come "unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

"Hear Ye Him"

By President Elbert A. Smith

(A sermon delivered at the General Conference, Sunday morning, April 15, 1934.)

PART I

"We cannot read the words of Jesus with mental reservation," he said. "Only slowly have we come to see that this young Jew, untutored as far as we can see and untraveled except in that little strip of territory 120 or 130 miles long by thirty or forty broad, had the genius somehow to pierce to the heart of the most difficult and intricate sciences of this modern time. He shows himself a psychologist, a sociologist, an economist of rare insight, when he gives us the formulas by which to build our social and governmental system."—Doctor Burris Jenkins.

ELBERT A. SMITH

THE PROPHET JOSEPH SMITH in relating his first vision, given early in the spring of 1820, said that after he had prayed he was surrounded by a shaft of light and in that shaft there were two personages. One of them, indicating the other, said, "This is my beloved Son, hear ye him." That is my text this morning, "Hear ye him."

PROPHETIC WARNING

It is my belief, increasingly so in the light of modern events, that Joseph Smith was a major prophet of God. Sometimes it is the province of the prophet to foretell future events; it is a more important function for him to declare the will and word of God. The Prophet Joseph not only foretold future events but also declared to his generation the will and purposes of God. He gave a warning to the world of events to come. We pick up the Doctrine and Covenants and we only read a little way in the first revelation, section 1, when we find this statement made, "I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world." And a little further in the same revelation the statement is made, "The time is not yet but is near at hand when peace shall be taken from the earth."

Brother Edwards brings back from England a story about our former patriarch, James Baty, a very splendid man. It seems that he had an affliction. He was deaf in one ear, stone deaf, and it was his custom when he went to bed at night to bury his good ear in his pillow so he could shut out all sound and have a good night's sleep. So his affliction was not without some compensation. At a time just before the World War when other Englishmen were saying, "This war scare will pass over like others have done" and when the whole world was secure in its belief that the dawn of peace had come, this man went to bed one night and buried his good ear in his pillow and went to sleep. He was awakened by a voice which he could hear with his deaf ear. He sat up in bed. There was a personage in the room who said to him, "The time is very near at hand when section one of the Doctrine and Covenants will be vindicated in a very startling manner."

THE WILL OF GOD

Joseph also declared the will of God to his generation, not only to the church but also to the world. We were reminded Friday that one hundred years ago in August there came through him the revelation saying, "Renounce war and proclaim peace," and I think that not only did our missionaries carry that revelation to most of the civilized nations, but thousands of other good men, moved by the same spirit, gave themselves through different associations to the promotion of peace, and just one hundred years after he gave the revelation fifteen of the major nations met in Paris and signed the Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact renouncing war, and proclaiming peace but it was too late.

There came through him to the ministry the revelation, "Cry nothing but repentance to this generation," and in the light of the over-whelming deluge of crime, of violence, of dishonesty and of immorality we can well believe that it was the will and the voice of God to that generation that they should repent.

He declared the will of God concerning the use of material things. He gave the renowned law of stewardships, which, had it been heeded, would have changed the history of the world, and we need not have suffered as millions have done during this depression. Just a month ago the Minister of Trade and Commerce of Canada, the Honorable C. H. Stephens, addressing a large gathering of business men of Canada set forth the doctrine of stewardships as a cure for our present economic ills, and he said, as reported in the Toronto Globe, "In the economics of Christ there is the principle of stewardships—all wealth a trust to be used in the interest of humanity. While this may sound revolutionary it is not unconstitutional with democracy and capitalism."

A hundred years after Joseph had given to the world the doctrine of stewardships, that business man, addressing a gathering of business men in Canada, sets up that doctrine and says that it sounds revolutionary. One hundred years after it was given it still sounds revolutionary. And it is true it would revolutionize conditions. We have solved the problem of production so that we have over-production. The problem of distribution we have scarcely attempted to solve, and though it may be temporarily necessary to plow up fields of cotton and slaughter milk cows and reduce the production of wheat, that policy is fundamentally wrong. We should develop the good things God places within our reach and attack the problem of distribution so that the hungry and poor and disinherited millions on earth may sit down at the table and eat and rise up and clothe themselves adequately and live in decent houses instead of the dog kennels and hovels in which many live at the present time.

THE KEYNOTE

So Joseph did declare the will and mind of God—and he was slaughtered, as prophets have been before. I think that in that first vision and revelation there was sounded the keynote of his message and of our message when Jesus Christ was presented and the commandment was given, "Hear ye him." That counsel is especially addressed to the church. It is particularly important that we should hear it ourselves and heed it. As Brother Fred M. remarked on Friday, it is useless for us to proclaim peace to the world if we do not have it within our own ranks. It is necessary that we shall hear him individually and that we should heed his voice in the midst of conflicting conditions in the world. I will give you a few examples.

TOBACCO AND STRONG DRINK

Constantly we hear advertised over the radio and we see advertised on billboards the merits of the cigarette. They have been popularized, and the women folks, to whom we formerly looked for an example, are now setting us a bad example in that regard. One of our brothers in Chicago told me he attended a banquet of business men and women, with men and women about equally divided. He said there were a number of men who neither drank nor smoked, but not one woman in the whole crowd but did both. The counsel of Christ comes to us and says tobacco is not for human use, excepting perhaps for bruises and for sick cattle, and I have sometimes thought that if the cattle were not sick before it was administered they would be afterward. The same billboard propaganda is now being used to popularize the use of strong drinks, and we heard all around, before prohibition was repealed, statements to the effect that prohibition increased drunk-ness, that there would be less after prohibition was repealed, but Chief of Police Cato tells me that we have had twice as many arrests for drunkenness in Independence over the same given time as we had during prohibition. Now, no matter what the counsels of the advertisements may be, the voice of Christ comes to us and tells us that strong drink is not for us to use. "Hear ye Him."

IMMORALITY

In the world the counsel seems to be freely given that a man may flit from love to love and change from wife to wife and that a woman has the same privilege, but the voice of Jesus Christ comes to this church saying to the man, "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart and shalt cleave unto her and none else," and that is equally true as applied to the woman, in a little different language. "Hear ye Him." From the statistics given us from the statistician on divorce the other day our righteousness still exceeds the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees in that respect. The ratio in the United States generally is about one divorce to every six marriages and in the church it is one to every sixteen marriages. But if we go back ten years we find the statistics better than they are now. The voice of Jesus Christ is affirmative. It is constructive. His is not a negative commandment. It is a beautiful, affirmative commandment: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart and shalt cleave unto her and none else." It is too bad that in this church of Jesus Christ there are found so many families who do not apply to their own family life the gospel of Jesus Christ so that the man and woman are able to live together in peace and raise children without a shifting and changing parentage. Malachi says, "Why did he give one wife? That he might seek a goodly seed." It is difficult to raise up a family of good children in a home that is changing its integral partners from time to time.

THE LAW TO THE CHURCH

In Section 42 we have the law that the Lord said should be given to guide the church. They were told to gather to the Ohio and there the Lord would give them his law, and it used to surprise me when I started to read that law and found him saying, "Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not lie. Thou shalt not commit adultery." I wondered why it was that the Lord should repeat the law that we already had in the Ten Commandments. But I have long since concluded that he knew exactly the condition coming on the earth and that would confront the church. He knew the reign of violence and of murder, of organized violence that was ahead of us, and it (Continued on page 815)

Resurrection

By Edith Swain

*Time passes into eternity;
Life with all its brilliancy flares across the open sky
Lighting mortality with its many hues,
Then fades before the black of night and is seen no more.
Earth is still;
Shadows reach and capture every light,
Carrying them away to be forgotten;
Death's form is lost forever in its shroud,
Yet all life shrinks before its sealing touch.
Silence lost within silence
Gropes blindly in a world of nothingness,
And hope is drowned within a lurid sea.*

*Softly a sound awakens from the depths of immortality,
It quivers upon stifled lips of souls long lost to life.
It gathers strength—another sound is added,
They blend and rise through deep grey mists
Gathering tone on tone, voice on voice—
Their cries breaking through the rigid silence,
Mounting chord on chord, harmony within harmony
Until the darkness is forgotten and all earth answers
With its muted exaltation, all exclaiming
The song of life and light.
A supplication of music for freedom from transgression.
From the deep recesses of the darkness their colors swell,
Unfolding on wings of music,
Colors of deepest hues change and change again
As on their upward way, dispersing the vapors of the night
Grow brighter, until the heavens open
Blinding the eyes of darkness which shrinks before
The whitened glory of the Lamb of God.
Descending unto his own.*

*"I am the light
Which shineth into darkness, and
I the Lord God shall disperse the powers of darkness
From before you."*

*Hosannah! Hosannah!
Hosannah to the Lord the Most High God—
For he is God over all the earth,
Yea—even all unto the end!*

An Early American Hymn Tune Writer

By Ethel M. Thomas

The study of music in the churches both in England and in early America is intensely interesting. The music of the Puritans, we are told, was entirely religious in its character, and it is in their psalmody that we find the commencement of our musical development. The American History and Encyclopedia of Music tells us that it is probable the early Puritans used both Ainsworth's and Sternhold and Hopkins' version of the psalms. The tunes which they sang were taken from a collection published in England by Thomas Ravenscroft, in 1621.

In the preface to the Ravenscroft Psalter, the author gives the following instructions: "(1) That psalms of tribulation be sung with a low voice and in long measure. (2) That psalms of thanksgiving be sung with an indifferent voice, neither too loud nor too slow. (3) That psalms of rejoicing be sung with a loud voice and in a swift and jocund measure."

The few psalm tunes, the encyclopedia goes on to tell us, used by the Puritans, were of the simplest character. They were stripped of everything suggestive of the design of the Devil in entrapping the worshiper into worldly thoughts. The singer sang according to his own idea of propriety. The congregations were unacquainted with harmonic psalmody and the use of instruments, and Puritan influence for many years threatened the growth of musical art in New England.

Much could be said of the reluctance and slowness with which early American congregations took up the "sinful" practices of learning to sing by note, of using instruments in church services of worship, and of organizing choirs.

To three men, Thomas Hastings, Nathaniel Gould, and Lowell Mason, we owe chief credit for placing church music on its proper basis. They instituted the first real reform in church music in America.

In the little town of Washington, Connecticut, in 1784, a lusty son, Thomas, was born to Seth Hastings, a country doctor. Very early the lad began to show unusual musical ability. Though such education as he could obtain from a country school was his soul preparation for life's work, young Thomas's interest in music was carefully guarded by his parents. When but eighteen years old, he began to lead the village choir, at Clinton, New York.

He began his musical career as a singing master. While directing a country musical society, the young man felt the need of a collection of tunes for his work, and set to work to compose music for that purpose. This, "The Utica Collection," was a pamphlet of only a few pages.

Thomas Hastings's popularity increased. In 1832, he went to New York City at the request of twelve churches which combined to secure his services in the leadership of their choirs. Mr. Hastings was a Presbyterian by faith, and was for several years, choir master in the Bleeker Street Church.

Hastings is said to have written six hundred hymns, composed one thousand hymn tunes, issued fifty volumes of music, and published many articles on music.*

Though the scope of this man's usefulness was limited by his extreme views as to the place of music in religious devotion, some of his music was very popular, and many of his compositions have place in our hymnals of today. An examination of a dozen hymnals, both denominational and undenominational, shows that each book has from one to eight of Hastings's tunes. "Toplady," the tune to which we sing "Rock of Ages" and "Earth with Her Ten Thousand Flowers," is in every one of these books. "Ortonville," the tune to which we sing "O Happy Is the Man Who Hears," is in ten of them. "Retreat," to which we sing "Another Six Days' Work Is Done," in nine, and "Zion," to which we sing, "Book of Mormon, Hid for Ages" and "In Thy Name, O Lord, Assembling," in eight.

Hastings's son, Thomas S., once president of the Union Theological Seminary, said of him, "He was a devout and earnest Christian, a hard student and a resolute worker, not laying aside his pen until three days before his death."

To his credit are many collections of psalm tunes and books of elementary instruction. He was also the author of versification which indicates more than ordinary talent in literary musical endeavor.

*See American Writers and Compilers of Sacred Music.

There seems to be an underlying theory that if a large number of people are assembled under the church roof for any purpose, good has been accomplished and the church is holding its own. I think it may come from a deep and panicky sense of powerlessness, perhaps unconscious but motivating.—Abigail Chesley, in "Hungry Sheep," The Christian Century.

Administration Building

The Small College

By G. N. Briggs

President of Graceland College

Briggs Hall

A RECENT STATEMENT of the aims and objectives of Graceland College opens as follows:

"To develop men and women whose lives are activated by Christian principles.

"To develop a growing acquaintance with the thought and program of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; to encourage participation in its corporate activities; and to promote the disposition to share in the development of its spiritual and social program.

"To engender a philosophy of life based upon social co-operation."

For over a third of a century it has been the purpose of Graceland so to administer her affairs as to create a religious atmosphere which would result in a quiet, normal life; not something apart from life, something forced in from the outside, but something as normal as health and happiness. The service to be rendered to the world and for the church should be such as to result from faith arising from that kind of religious life.

The small church affiliated college can render service of a particular kind beyond that of any other form of college organization. Its primary purpose is the development of personality based on sound character and spiritual enlightenment.

The spiritual influences at work in the small church related college bring about a condition of practical morality, making for a notable contribution to American college life. Drunkenness, gambling, and other petty vices are practically unknown, not so much because of formal rules and prohibitions, as because of the positive influence and spiritual forces making for the good life. The graduates carry on and exemplify the good life in their world contacts as working citizens in the community.

The great universities with present day enrollments of from 5,000 to 25,000 are like large factories turning out graduates supplied with specified facts on certain subjects, but they lack the advantages of intimate contacts between teachers and students and the congenial community life which develops character and fosters culture.

One of America's leading educators is quoted as follows:

"There is also a social threat which is more dangerous in hugh crowds than in smaller companies. It is the danger of bolshevism and atheism. It is an easy matter in these crowded educational centers to couple up disbelief in God with disbelief in government.

"One dollar expended at Hanover, a small college in Indiana, gives as much culture as five at Harvard. As a graduate of both institutions I can truly make this statement."

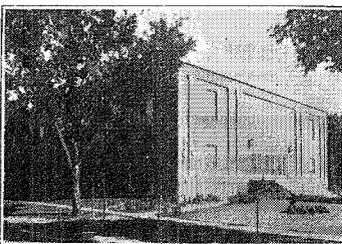

One of the real specific benefits of the small college is that its students are individuals. They know the instructors; the instructors know them. They are not simply a number in a huge herd, without recognition or individuality.

A recent survey shows that in some of our State universities they have classes with as many as four hundred students. Under such conditions there is no opportunity for individual contacts, for personal and sympathetic attention and interest.

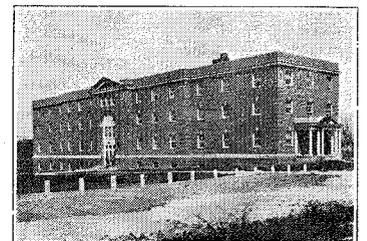

The safety of the future, the purity of learning and the efficiency of teaching are all intimately bound up with the small educational unit.

Like the church itself, the college must come to grips with modern American civilization. It must somehow bring order into the chaos and confusion of the modern mind. The tempo of our lives is steadily accelerated. We sometimes confuse truth and propaganda. In many of the vital concerns of life we depend no longer directly and implicitly upon God, but upon the scientist who has worked marvels on the plane where we live. We must so order our lives that we can see how science supports God, not that science supplants Him. The small church related college, by taking full advantage of its opportunity, may retain its leadership over the restless spirit of modern youth.

Religious Education in Practice . . . .

By Elva T. Sturges

"What is religious education?" asked the Sage. And the child who was old in experience answered, "It is learning the books of the Bible, and the names of the Twelve Apostles, and listening to the teacher tell us what we ought to do." And the Sage smiled wisely and went on, for the child was wrong—he was only learning a few of the words in the vocabulary of religious education.

Some years ago I visited a class of young people. The lesson for the day was on the soul of man. The teacher described, analyzed, separated and restored the soul for forty minutes while the class yawned and whispered. Then he reproved them for their inattention and joined the adults with a smile of satisfaction. To them he was a religious educator of standing, for he knew many of the words and few there were who could compete with him. But the souls of these youth were growing faint from inattention—he had talked about their souls, not ministered to them.

Our religion consists not in talking about the life of Jesus Christ. It is a matter of living like him for seven days of every week. And the only way that we can teach living is to live. That is the reason that our system of religious education will be complete only when Zion has been established and we can live and work together constantly. Our present system is adequate to the extent that it ministers to us daily. Our Sunday sessions should offer opportunity for exchange of confidences, a relating of our failure to live at our best, a suggestion of the means wherein we have found help. When we leave the church our souls should have been cleansed. We should be refreshed by the Spirit of God, having a new vision of the heights to which we can climb, filled with a passion for reaching them. To what extent is your branch religiously educating those who come to it for light?

About a year ago the teachers and officers of the children's division of the East Bay Branch held a meeting to determine how they should observe Christmas. "It is a time of giving," said one, "we usually give the children some kind of treats." "That isn't right though," said another, "They should give to Jesus, not receive from him. After all, it is his birthday." And so it was agreed that they would suggest to the children that they buy a gift for Jesus, and that that gift be a piano which was badly needed by the department.

The children were enthusiastic. Surely in three months they could raise money for a piano. One suggested that they give an entertainment and have an offering taken, another that they earn money, another that they sacrifice. All of these things were agreed upon. With the help of their supervisor, Sister Collins, they built up a Christmas story—getting material from the Bible and the Book of Mormon. They sang, they recited and they dramatized the life of Jesus. And when the program was given the adults said, "The Spirit of God is with the children, they are getting religious education drilled into them," but they were really living his life and he could not help sending his Spirit to be among them. And they prayed, not prayers that had been given them to learn, but prayers that came from hearts that were touched by his presence.

Each Sunday morning they came with their offerings. Some told of earning their money, others told of having given up ice cream cones, and chewing gum, and candy, and movies. On the Sunday before Christmas they said, "How much do we lack, for next Sunday we must have our gift ready for Jesus?" And when the money was counted it was enough.

On Christmas Sunday they came in eagerly and there was the lovely shiny piano in its place and they were very happy. But nobody touched it, for it had not yet been given to him. During the first part of the service the old organ was used. When the piano had been accepted by his representative, Brother Oakman, the pastor, it was played and they sang with it. Then the birthday cake was lighted and one of the primary girls offered this blessing over it, "Dear God, We thank you for this cake and ask you to bless it. And we will keep the candles burning brightly that we may see the good that Jesus has done in the nineteen hundred years that he has lived. Amen." The cake was cut and each piece placed in a napkin and given to them that they might take it home and eat it with their dinner in remembrance of him. While this was being done Brother Oakman sang for them, and they scarcely moved for the joy that was in their souls, for the Spirit of God was among them. And when they went out they said, "It has been a lovely Christmas, we must try harder to be like him."

And that is religious education.

The Junior Department

Junior Stewardship Clubs . . . . .

By Fern Weedmark

FERN WEEDMARK

The "gang" instinct is at its height during the junior age. Juniors are gregarious by nature. This characteristic can be fruitfully used in Christian education. Why not take advantage of the junior's keen interest in clubs, cliques and gangs in promoting the junior stewardship movement?

In some branches the junior stewards are organizing into clubs. We think this is a fine plan. A group of children working together, sharing their experiences and problems, all striving for the same ideal, binds the entire group in a larger fellowship and brings satisfaction and joy.

The junior stewardship club may plan to meet with their sponsor one afternoon or evening each week, or every other week. At this time the sponsor will give special attention to the juniors' Record Books, checking them, answering questions, and helping in every way possible. Happy projects and activities of service may be planned at these meetings. Perhaps a group will enjoy making a series of stewardship posters, using choice verses of Scripture as their special message. A beautiful poster can be built around Psalm 24:1. The juniors can collect pictures and will enjoy doing so. Later these posters may be placed one at a time, on the church bulletin board that others may enjoy their message also. Simple dramatizations may be worked out by the children expressing stewardship ideals. The parable of the "Talents" can be given a modern interpretation by the juniors. A good story told by the leader occasionally and also stories told by the juniors will strengthen interest and bring joy. Favorite songs may be sung, games played, and of course refreshments have their place.

For those branches which have young people and adult study groups on Sunday evening, your problem of what to do with the children may be solved by having your junior stewards meet together at that time. This may be more convenient for you than the week day meetings and will afford an excellent opportunity for the pastor to meet occasionally with the children, giving helpful talks and kindly counsel.

We are anxious to know what junior stewardship clubs are doing in various branches. We would like for a junior member of your club to write us a letter telling us about the things you have done, are doing and expect to do in your group. Arrangement will be made to have these letters published in Stepping Stones so that others may become interested and encouraged. Address letters to, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

A Junior Stewardship "Slogan and Song" Contest

A slogan or a song will add interest to any worthwhile enterprise. We would like a slogan and a song for the junior stewardship movement.

Who has a good idea for a slogan? Who can write a song? These may be sent in by individual junior stewards, groups, clubs or leaders.

Send your slogans and songs to The Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, by August 15, 1934. The winning slogan and song will be chosen and published in the Herald and Stepping Stones, to be used by our junior stewards throughout the church.

There is such a thing as ambition for growth, a hot scorn of "taking people where you find them"—and leaving them there. Most children like Zane Grey better than Conrad on first acquaintance and Eddie Guest than Robert Frost, but that fact does not daunt their teachers into a fatalistic and lethargic surrender. Those ladies do not give their pupils exclusively what their uncultivated taste takes to without guidance; their chief task is to give that taste conditions in which it can become more inclusive as well as more discriminating. Of course, "Ancient of Days" is harder to sing than "I Need Thee Every Hour." Of course, Isaiah is a difficult book. Of course, chatting informality has a more immediate appeal to the "young people." Thus the hungry but easy going sheep will stray away where the browsing is easier. Milton was not blaming the sheep, however. His stern admonition was for the shepherds—shepherds who should have been busy studying grazing possibilities and adroitly leading the sheep into fresh fields and pastures new—raising soul-alfalfa, say, for sheep who never knew before that they liked it.—Abigail Chesley, in The Christian Century.

Be Diligent

By C. W. Butterworth

All nature groaned under the fierce rays of that midday sun.

The monotonous song of the cicada filled the air, and in an undertone the soft creaking and crackling of leaves and plants could be heard, as they writhed in the heat of the fire that burned, yet consumed not.

The weary trees stood with their leaves limply hanging.

The lean sheep and cattle huddled listlessly under the meager shade.

Thus it was this summer's day when the whole land lay locked in the grip of a dreadful drought.

In the shade of his humble cottage, the good man mopped his furrowed brow.

Eagerly, for now unnumbered days, he had scanned the waterless heavens for rain that did not come.

Day after day his store of water had grown less and less.

He had just returned from a visit to his last surviving waterhole, and his heart was heavy, and his mind perplexed.

Nothing remained but a small churned up patch of wet mud, where the cattle in their eager haste had wasted the last trace of water.

Long he sat and pondered. His mind went back over the vicissitudes of his past. More plainly than ever before, he saw that He who is mindful of the sparrows, had been very mindful of him.

His heart rejoiced in the knowledge of his Creator, which he had acquired through obedience to the everlasting gospel, and he reverently gave thanks for this and the accompanying prophetic gift which had been bestowed upon him.

Slowly he turned and bowed his head.

"Dead Lord," he said, "What shall I do? The streams are all dried up. My dams are now empty, and my sheep and cattle are likely to perish. In thee, O Lord, do I put my trust. Tell me, I pray Thee, what shall I do?"

Like a flash the answer came, and burned itself upon his brain.

"Be diligent."

Wonderingly he studied this enigmatical reply.

"I cannot bring rain down out of the cloudless sky."

"I cannot dig water up out of the barren earth," he mused.

"Be diligent."

Protestingly he exclaimed aloud, "But no one has ever dug for water around here."

"Be diligent."

He debated no longer, but arose, and selecting his tools, proceeded to a likely spot, where he worked long into the night by the rays of a kindly moon.

In the morning he was early at the place, and, at the bottom of his hole he found—water! It was not much, but it was enough. It was not very good, but it was good enough.

It did not just drop from the skies, neither did an angel bring it. All unsuspected it lay there as a gift for the man who would dig.

All lives contain some kind of buried treasure, and every treasure of the world, and every source of wealth that we today possess, have been passed by and trodden upon by countless throngs, until finally someone was diligent and dug.

What a tragedy that misery runs through many lives, where happiness might have flowed, and that many droop and die of thirst for things that lie within their reach below their own surfaces.

Fortunate indeed is the man whose tribulations compel him to dig, for he shall not dig in vain.

How splendid it is that the truly rich things, the worth while things, the imperishable things, are not material.

How wonderful that they cannot be cornered by some monopolizing trust or combine.

How comforting that he who is richest in such things, has made no one poorer thereby.

Even for you there awaits true happiness, and you can gain the true riches, and can discover your hidden potentialities and uncover your buried treasures, if, like the good man in this true story, you also will "Be diligent."

Every great invention is a testimony to self-denial. Somebody spent long weary days and sleepless nights while his friends were making "whoopee." Somebody saved his pennies when others were having a good time with theirs. Any book worth reading is a monument to self-denial. George Eliot says of her masterpiece, Romola, that she was a young woman when she began it and an old one when she finished it. Every great machine, every great book, every great picture, every great surgical operation is a witness to the sovereignty of self-denial.—Frank B. Fagerburg, in The Sin of Being Ordinary

Seeking After Truth . . . . .

By S. A. Burgess
Church Historian

Part III

All of these books we have picked up warn us against the pseudo, the false, and the fake. Many readers will say superficially that it is all a fake. With this we cannot entirely agree. There are other powers, but there are those who do take financial advantage of this fact and offer only a husk, an outward form, the shell of the truth, and perhaps not even that. There remains, however, the truth, that the best of all is possible and is offered within the kingdom of God and within his church. Some may say, The church does not today possess these powers. That is true, but neither do those who enter into these other ways secure these powers. They are promised only by entering "in the path." The question is, where is the path of truth, the path of light, the direct path to the divine knowledge?

We note plainly set forth in the Book of Mormon the fact that there is a record of divine wisdom that is to come forth, that is to come to a people who are pure in heart, who have risen above the selfishness of this world. It is a divine offer, a divine assurance, when there is a people ready and able to receive, a record of the purposes of God from the beginning of the world to the end thereof. Here we find a certainty, a clearness that we do not find elsewhere.

This is confirmed as we search further. For example in the Inspired Version, the 14th chapter of Genesis, we note:

"Now Melchisedek was a man of faith, who wrought righteousness; and when a child he feared God, and stopped the mouths of lions, and quenched the violence of fire. And thus, having been approved of God, he was ordained an high priest after the order of the covenant which God made with Enoch, it being after the order of the Son of God; which order came; not by man, nor the will of man; neither by father nor mother; neither by beginning of days nor end of years; but of God; and it was delivered unto men by the calling of his own voice, according to his own will, unto as many as believed on his name. For God having sworn unto Enoch and unto his seed with an oath by himself; that every one being ordained after this order and calling should have power, by faith, to break mountains, to divide the seas, to dry up waters, to turn them out of their courses; to put at defiance the armies of nations, to divide the earth, to break every band, to stand in the presence of God; to do all things according to his will, according to his command, subdue principalities and powers; and this by the will of the Son of God which was from before the foundation of the world. And men having this faith, coming up unto this order of God, were translated and taken up into heaven. And now, Melchisedek was a priest of this order; therefore he obtained peace in Salem, and was called the Prince of peace."—Genesis 14: 26-33, Inspired Version.

This is indeed a remarkable promise, that to this priesthood belongs such miraculous power and that such powers were once possessed and may be again. We find this confirmed in the New Testament in any edition of the Bible, that Jesus told his disciples if they had faith as a grain of mustard seed they might say to yon mountain, "Be thou removed and cast into the deep," and it would be done. There is the incident of the fig tree and the assurance that with faith the sycamore tree could be removed and planted in the deep.

Now, we respectfully submit that such powers were never given for empty show. There is a great divine purpose back of them. They should be used for the blessing of humanity. Jesus permitted the cursing of the fig tree to teach a great lesson. Such things never should be exercised idly and never for purely selfish ends, but may that not give us some insight as to why Zion will be great and terrible, when it is a pure-hearted, a devoted, a spiritual people, who truly love one another?

TO SEE GOD

We read in the book of Doctrine and Covenants, 67: 3:

"And again, verily I say unto you, that it is your privilege, and a promise I give unto you that have been ordained unto this ministry, that inasmuch as you strip yourselves from jealousies and fears, and humble yourselves before me, for ye are not sufficiently humble, the veil shall be rent, and you shall see me and know that I am; not with the carnal, neither natural mind, but with the spiritual; for no man has seen God at any time in the flesh, except quickened by the Spirit of God; neither can any natural man abide the presence of God; neither after the carnal mind; ye are not able to abide the presence of God now, neither the ministering of angels; wherefore continue in patience until ye are perfected."

Here is the direct statement that a man may see God and enter his presence but not in the carnal mind, but with the spiritual. The church was then told they were not yet ready for the visitation of angels. In Doctrine and Covenants 83: 4 we are told plainly that the Lord took Moses out of their midst and the Holy Priesthood also; and the lesser priesthood continued, "which priesthood holds the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel." The visits of angels then belongs to the fullness of the Aaronic priesthood. It is a step first to be achieved before we proceed to receive the fullness of the Melchisedec priesthood.

John, the beloved, wrote in Revelation 3: 20:

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

This is a wonderful promise of the Master, that he will come in and sup with us, but even this is not so great as the direct assurance given the disciples before his crucifixion, when Judas asked how he would manifest himself to his people and not to the world, and Jesus promised (John 14:23) that he would come and make his abode with them, not merely sup with them.

That a man can see God is abundantly witnessed in the Holy Scriptures. Not only do traditions but the Bible also, call Abraham the friend of God, and speaks of Enoch having walked with God. Stephen, when he was stoned, saw the Son on the right hand of the Father. Even a reasonable search of the Bible will find not only such instances but other promises. Some passages say that no man has seen God, but that only agrees with our text that no man can see God with the physical or the natural eye and mind, but only with the spiritual.

As we read these passages we see a beauty, a truth, and an assurance that exceeds that which is found in any other literature. It is a clear path which offers all that any others have ever claimed or asserted as ever possible, but with an assurance, a clear and certain path on which we may enter, not one beset by clouds to mislead even the brethren of the fraternity.

It is not only our warning, but the warning we find in all those who appear to have any knowledge of the truth; that the path they offer is beset with a multitude of dangers, with many falsehoods and many clouds, and that few can continue because of these misleading aspects.

THE PURE IN HEART AND THE SINNER

Here we may note a point misconstrued. Only the pure in heart, only the clean in body, who have preserved themselves from the world, only the close student who earnestly desires the truth, can ever hope to enter into the fullness of knowledge and of truth. But when one possesses that at all in any degree he turns to bless humanity and blesses them in calling the sinner to that which is better; even though the sinner cannot approach and stand in the divine presence, he can be blessed physically, yes, and mentally and spiritually, and brought to a higher plane. That is the great purpose of Christianity, and Christianity did not and does not offer to the impure the possibility of entrance to the divine. We see this even in the story of the hereafter as set forth in the various glories in the 76th section of the book of Doctrine and Covenants. It is wonderful to consider that even the great sinners who have committed murder and whoredoms may yet be forgiven and helped in the mercy of God to enter the telestial glory, a glory which is beyond human understanding, but only those who have taken upon them the name of Jesus and kept his commandments and have lived holy lives—only those who have possessed the priesthood which is after the order of Melchisedec, which is after the order of Enoch, which is after the order of the Son of God, may stand in the presence of the Father and Son. This possession of the Melchisedec Priesthood does not mean alone, in our humble judgment, those who are ordained, but those who have received the blessing of that priesthood which is bestowed upon all the true in heart in the church of God. Here our feet stand firmly. Here we have a certain path and way into righteousness and truth. Here is the most direct route for the return to that eternal truth and light which dwells in the presence of the Highest. Here is the way to gain the control over the powers of nature, that these powers may be used for the blessing of humanity.

Because of the age in which we live there has been within the past one hundred years a wonderful increase in man's control over the powers of nature, but there is very much that yet remains to be gained, and very much yet to be revealed through the Spirit of God. It does not seem to us untoward that this righteous power has worked in the world for these material blessings and for this restoration, which takes the form of invention and the development of science.

We will go farther and merely state in passing that in our humble belief the endowment of the Holy Spirit when received by a man is not for his glory and exaltation, but that his joy and blessing comes in being able to render a better service before God to humanity. His power for good is increased.

There remains yet another phase to be considered, the distinct warnings in Holy Writ. We know that those who have gone after these other ways find themselves turned from the church of God. They have a sense of superiority. It is well that they are learning truth, but they should realize that the best and purest of that truth lies along the way that God himself has ordained and they should not be led away by a partial truth and by the lesser aspects.

Now it is noteworthy that in these ancient mysteries there is found so often some form of the caduceus, a winged staff with entwined serpents. It is not only in Mexico but all over the world that this symbol of the serpent of Lucifer is to be found. The Bible tells us that it was into the serpent that Lucifer entered in the Garden of Eden. We do find much of truth on both continents and so note the use of the name Quetzal Coatl, the winged serpent of the American continent. Some, taking the Authorized or King James Version will quote: "wise as serpents," as though the (Continued on page 815)

Autobiography of William Lewis

Part Three

SPIRITUAL BLESSINGS TO ASSURE AND COMFORT

The first dream that I can call to mind and which impressed me with the assurance that it was spiritual was the following. I saw the Savior wearing a beautiful white robe. At the breast it was open. There was a halo of light which came out from him, and especially was it very bright above his head. I thought he was making a circle in the heavens, moving with perfect ease. He spoke aloud with a voice that was not harsh, but very convincing and all the earth heard and understood. "The Latter Day Saints are my people!" At this I saw that the inhabitants of the earth were greatly surprised and very sorry they had ignored the Saints.

A very comforting piece of information was given in another dream. Brother and Sister George Moore, near neighbors to us were expecting the arrival of their fifth child. At the birth of each of the children, Sister Moore came near dying, and they feared for her life. I had heard Brother Moore speak about the matter. I said to my oldest sister, Lizzie, one morning after getting up. "You can tell Brother and Sister Moore that everything will be all right at their home." I had seen mother holding in her arms some valuable parcel. I could not see just what it was for it was covered with a white cloth or sheet, but mother was looking very pleasant and asked what time it was. Someone answered, "Nine o' clock." I remarked to my sister, "You will see that at 9 a. m. the child will be born." My mother at the time was at Sister Moore's and had been there since 2 a. m. The dream was received as good tidings, and all were cheered, notwithstanding it was received by one inexperienced and young in years. The dream was literally fulfilled, and Sister Moore's illness and recovery were unusual, and mother's countenance was pleasant, as I had seen in the dream.

Shortly after this, my mother saw her father in a vision. He was living in Dowlais, South Wales, about four thousand five hundred miles from us. He appeared at her bedside one Saturday night in the month of May, year, 1867.

Grandfather was a deacon in the Baptist Church. When the various religious sects had agreed that they would not permit the elders of the Saints' church to hold services in their chapels and had also given notice to all their members that they must not attend the preaching services of the Saints nor open their doors for their elders to preach in their homes, grandfather did not approve of such harsh measures. Still being an officer of the Baptist Church he did not wish to be contrary to the orders. He had, prior to this, let the elders preach in his house, but when the above measure was adopted, my father did not ask for the house any more.

One day grandfather said to mother, "I wish you and David would rent part of our house. It is too large for us. You can have the large front room and then if you wish you can have the elders hold preaching services there." So they rented part of the house and at once had preaching. Grandfather was called before his church officers for violating the rule of the church. He stated that his son-in-law had rented part of the house and that he could not prevent his holding preaching there if he wished. During the preaching grandfather would sit in his own rooms, but he would open the door and listen very attentively.

On the night he appeared at my mother's bed, he called her by name, "Betsy, how long is it since Joseph Smith received the gospel by the hand of an angel?" Mother was somewhat surprised to hear him ask the question. She said she was not asleep, and that she recognized that it was her father. While she was figuring just how many years it was, her father answered the question and said, "You know that when my brethren of the Baptist forbade me to open my door for the elders to preach, I arranged it so they could, and had it not been for the wickedness that came into the church referring to polygamy I would have been a Latter Day Saint. But when I saw that, I concluded that I had better stop where I was. Now, some of you will have to be baptized for me." Then he departed.

Sunday morning at the breakfast table mother related the vision or dream. I said, "Grandfather is dead." In the course of a few weeks a letter was received giving the account of his death. There was only about twelve hours' time between his death and the time he was at her bedside.

I had faith in the doctrine of baptizing for the dead and this vision strengthened it and gave added testimony that the Reorganized Church was approved of by the Lord.

At the time of this vision, one George P. Dikes was sending weekly letters to numbers of the Saints at this place denouncing the claims of the church. There were also some of the followers of Rigdon, Young, and others, each claiming to be the legal successors, but the request of my grandfather was that some of us, our family, should be baptized into the Reorganization for him. At this time we were members of this church, and, thank the Lord, we are still living in the faith, so are our children and grandchilddren, and we hope to be worthy to be instruments for good in it.

AN OPEN VISION

For nearly two years Brookfield Branch had been wonderfully blessed. Some remarkable manifestations of the Spirit were given, and we were admonished to be prayerful and to live upright lives or we should be rejected and scattered like chaff before the wind.

I attended the young people's prayer meeting of that branch; we had been warned by the gift of prophecy to be very careful; that Satan was striving to get a foothold, and unless we were very watchful and humble and prayerful, we would be scattered. Mark you, a body of people whom God had recognized, who had enjoyed the blessings of God to a marvelous extent, whom the Lord in his loving-kindness had warned that the adversary of our souls was at work, and that they would go into barren and unfruitful fields if not careful!

This was not good news, and it was in one of these prayer services that I had the first open vision, while some were praying.

I saw two pools or ponds filled with fish. In one was large fish, but there were only one or two that were fully alive. There was no water in that pool, and some of the fish were so far decayed that there was nothing but the bone or skeleton; others were just gasping for breath. On the left side of that pond, there was another pool about the same size. This one was full of small fish and plenty of water, and the fish were lively. That was all of the vision.

I arose and said to the brother in charge, who was acting teacher of that branch, "Brother James, I have had an open vision," and I told it fearless of consequences, and gave the interpretation. "The pool of large fish represents the priesthood; the little fish represent the membership, and in particular the young Saints." There were quite a number of young people in that branch.

BRANCH PRESIDENT AT TWENTY YEARS OF AGE

The branch had by this time built a small church and had it nearly all paid for. Later on some of the priesthood gave way to drinking, jealousy, and the spirit of fault-finding. There was marked change in the spirit of the meetings. I was ordained to the eldership and chosen to preside over the branch. I entered a strong protest against taking the presidency as there were eleven other elders, but they could not agree on one to preside.

Brother W. W. Blair was present on this occasion, and he advised me to accept and I consented. Brother Blair said that as I was so young, only twenty years of age, he was impressed to lay hands on me and set me apart for that work which he did.

I have often thought of that meeting. Here were eleven elders, all experienced men in the work who could not agree on which one of their number was to preside! They had been unable to agree all along. Brother William D. Williams had been sustained right along. He was a good man but had taken sides with others against the ruling of the president of the district, my father, on the drink question. Father had silenced some of the elders for drinking. Brother Williams thought he was too hasty. Brother Blair supported father in the steps he had taken, so a boy was chosen to take charge of that spiritually sick branch.

I LEARN THE MEANING OF TRUE FAITH

Suddenly my dear mother was taken deathly sick, and in about two weeks she died. I had an experience then that has been very helpful to me since that time. When the doctor informed us that she could live only a few days, I was not alarmed for I believed that she would yet be restored to health. I would not permit the thought of her dying in my mind. When she would get worse, father, a man of great faith, with others of the elders, would administer to her and invariably she would get up and be much better for hours at a time, then become worse again. One day word came to the mines for me to come home, mother was dying! This did not cause me to give up. I thought the victory would soon be ours and I would not permit the thought of dying to enter my mind. Upon reaching home I found mother very low. Father and I administered to her with no other motive in view than to contend for the blessing of health to be given to her. This time she arose from the bed and asked for something to eat. I could have shouted aloud, "Thanks to the Lord!" This was about 2 p. m. That evening, about nine o'clock, she again was taken very sick. Brother William D. Williams called father and me into the bedroom and said he believed it was the will of the Lord that we should give up our dear one. At this I wished Brother Williams would leave the house for I did not want anyone in the house who had any doubt about her recovery. I said, "I think it is the power of darkness that is determined to rob us of the blessing, for if it is the Lord's will she should die. He would not answer our prayers so often in her behalf."

Brother Williams replied that it was the earnest prayers and exceeding great faith that had raised her from the bed so often. I then said, "I am willing to be submissive to the will of the Lord, but I have never given her up." Father asked Brother Williams to call all the Saints who were in the house to order (there were several present) and for him to offer prayer and to ask the Lord if it was his will to take her home to do so. As Brother Williams said, "Amen," she breathed her last!

When all was over, there came to our minds a prophecy that was delivered a few months before by my own father, one Sunday in Saints' meeting. There were at least fifty present. The prophecy was that shortly the Lord would call from our midst one of his handmaidens. This had, for some reason, passed from father's mind and mine also, and not until mother had died did it return to us. Many of the Saints had not forgotten it while I was pleading with the Lord for him to spare our dear mother, not permitting the thought of her death to enter my mind. It was not because I was not willing to be submissive to the will of the Lord. No. But it was because I had the wrong understanding of true faith, which is, when asking the Lord for anything, to be willing to say, "Thy will be done." We are so short-sighted that we may ask and plead with the Lord for that which would not be the best for us.

OTHER REMARKABLE PROPHECIES

Another remarkable prophecy was given prior to the death of Brother William Byron who lived near Mineral Ridge at a place called "Old Town." Just three weeks from the Sunday the prophecy was given, he was buried. It was then I preached my first funeral sermon. In the prophecy we were informed that one of the priesthood would soon be called and that he would preach in the Spirit world to those who had not the privilege to hear the gospel in the flesh. Brother Byron was an elder and a very faithful man.

Sister George Masters, mother of Sister H. O. Smith, of Independence, was very ill. Six elders went to the house from the church on Sunday evening. She had been administered to several times, but she had received only temporary relief. Father was asked to take charge of the administration. "Now," he said, "we want to be united, and if there are any here who for some cause do not believe the sister will be blessed, I ask that they stop in this room, and those who believe she will get the blessing, come into the room with me and assist in the administration." I was present and I entered the room with father and one more elder. So three stayed out and three went into the sick-room. Sister Masters had been confined, giving birth to twins, and she was very weak. During the administration the Spirit of the Lord was present in the gift of tongues and interpretation and healing. As soon as the three brothers who were in the other room, heard the voice of the Spirit, they came in, and the sister was wonderfully blessed and soon was up and around.

CHOOSING A LIFE COMPANION

On March 16, 1868, I married Mary, the oldest daughter of Brother and Sister Robert Jones. Both of us were young. I was only twenty; my wife was seventeen. When anyone would mention about our age our neighbors would say, "Yes, they are young in years, but old in experiences and in their ways."

Nearly forty years have passed, and I can truthfully say that I made no mistake in the choosing of my companion for life. True and faithful has she been all along, as a wife and a mother. The matrimonial voyage began not too early in life, and if I had my life to live over again, I do not see that I could improve as to the time or a helpmate. Into the harbor of everlasting rest may we anchor with our cargo of loved ones, as an unbroken family, is my earnest prayer.

CALL TO ELDERSHIP CONFIRMED

At the time I was ordained to the eldership I had received no light, and as I have already stated I did not consent as willingly as I did to the ordination of priest. To the latter ordination I had received satisfaction that it was timely. Having confidence, however, in the brother who recommended my ordination to the eldership, with the unanimous support of all the priesthood of the branch and district, I consented to accept the office. The call came through the same brother each time. William D. Williams, president of the branch.

After the ordination I wondered why I did not get some light on this important matter. With this came a feeling of doubt and fear to move out in the work of that office. When called upon to administer to the sick I would ask to be excused until I could get some other elder to assist. Often I would walk a considerable distance in search of one to come to help. I had evidence that the angel brought to earth the Melchisedec priesthood and conferred it upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. From them it was given to others such as the Lord, by the spirit of wisdom and revelation called. Thus the holy priesthood had come down. I had reasons to believe that these men who recommended my ordination held the Melchisedec priesthood. Notwithstanding this fact, I did not have the confidence in my call that I should.

One morning on my way to attend a mass meeting of the miners at Hubbard some six miles from my home, I called at the home of Sister Jane Thomas, wife of Brother John Thomas. "I am glad you called," she said. "I am very sick and want you to administer to me." I promised her I would try to get some of the elders to come and assist me. She said nothing more.

On my way to Hubbard, when about half a mile from her home, going through a beautiful grove and pasture, I heard a voice above my head, saying, "William, go back and administer to Jane." I stopped and for a moment I did not know just what to do. I heard the voice and understood the message. Strange as it may seem, I went on.

Upon reaching Hubbard, I began to think how disobedient I had been, and I returned over the road that I had come as fast as I could, pleading with the Lord to forgive me for my unwise and disobedient conduct. On my way I called on Sister Thomas' father, Brother Morgan. He accompanied me.

We found her very sick, and she said, "William, I wished you had administered to me when I asked." I apologized to her and related what my experience had been, and again I pleaded with the Lord to forgive me and to bless Sister Jane with health. This he did in the administration.

Not until after the administration did it occur to me that that was evidence my ordination was approved of by the Lord, or he would not have said, "Go back and administer to Jane." Even to this day I feel that I was very disobedient and have not mentioned the circumstances much, for it seems incredible that a man would not do as he was told upon hearing an audible voice, when not another soul was around, commanding him to do something for the benefit of those in need. One consolation, however, was that not much time elapsed from the time I was spoken to—though I did not go back then—until I was at the bedside, and I am grateful that the Lord has forgiven me.

One pleasant Sunday morning I accompanied Elder George Moore to Middlesex, some five miles from our home, where he and Elder John McMullen had an appointment at eleven o'clock in the Presbyterian Church, which Brother Samuel McBurney had secured for them. Only one person was present besides us. The brothers concluded they would not hold any service.

"There is one nonmember," I observed, "why not preach for his benefit?"

"No we will not speak to only one person."

I offered to open the meeting, but they thought it unwise to speak to empty seats. I again urged them. Although I had done little preaching I said, "Rather than go home, and not speak even to this one person, I will make a few remarks." One of the brothers opened the meeting, and I spoke about thirty minutes. Later on, Joseph Parsons, then living in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and president of that district, held some meetings in this same church and baptized this one person who was at our meeting and who said the first time he had ever heard of our faith was when a boy preached at his church. It will not always do to judge what is accomplished by the number present.

was his will that his people should have no part in it, so he reiterated the command, "Thou shalt not kill." He knew the reign of dishonesty coming, the graft and rackets and robberies, and the dishonesty among the highest apostles of finance whom we have trusted and who have robbed the citizens of America of untold millions of dollars. He knew what was coming and he reiterated to us the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal." And he knew the wave of immorality and of loose concepts that was to come, so he reiterated the command, "Thou shalt not commit adultery." We are to have nothing to do with any of these things. ## SEEKING AFTER TRUTH serpent was wise or experienced. However the Inspired Version reads "wise servants."

SOME DANGERS

Revelation 16: 13 and 14 warns us that there will be unclean spirits in the latter days, the spirits of devils working miracles. Also Revelation 13: 13 and 14, and Revelation 19: 20 warns us against the false prophet and the miracles wrought by him. Jesus in the sermon on the mount warned them that in the last days there would arise false Christs and false prophets who would show great signs and wonders inasmuch, if it were possible, they would deceive the very elect according to the covenant. Surely that is fulfilled today. In the days of Jesus there were these magicians. (See Acts 8: 9-11; 13-23 and Acts 19: 13-16)

The Bible plainly teaches that some were possessed of devils. This is also taught from these ancient mysteries, renewed in modern times. Psychology only confirms this under other terms and names, as it recognizes this dominance of the lower aspects working toward psychosis. The name matters but little. The facts seem reasonably clear. (Matthew 8: 23-32; Acts 16: 16-18; 19: 13-16)

It is hardly necessary to quote Scripture to prove that there is a spirit in man and that a clear distinction is made repeatedly between the higher and the lower nature. Nor is it necessary to refer to the fact that the sick were healed and that Jesus and his followers were able to cast out devils. A few texts to the latter effect have already been given. The power of faith is well set forth in the 11th chapter of Hebrews, but note in the Inspired Version that faith is not a blind faith, but that faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. This denotes clearly an inner or spiritual knowledge. There are many texts in the Bible that these lower powers should be kept under subjection, and we are warned concerning seducing spirits. Magic is repeatedly condemned, (2 Kings 23: 24), workers with familiar spirits, wizards, etc. Isaiah 8: 19 and 20 says:

"And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God? for the living to the dead? To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

There is a dispute over the above as to whether the statement, "should not a people seek unto their God?" is spoken by the prophet or by "they." In other words when "they" ask you to seek those that have familiar spirits, unto wizards, they say, "should not a people seek unto their God? for the living to the dead?" Then, "To the law and the testimony: if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them." In any event it points us to the safe course, that we must work only with God and under the direction of his Spirit and then it is a clear way according to the law and testimony.

1 Chronicles 10: 13, 14 tells us that Saul died because he sought one that had a familiar spirit. The above is the testimony, but turn to the law (Leviticus 19: 31) which reads:

"Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards, to be defiled by them: I am the Lord your God."

Of special significance is Deuteronomy 18: 9-12:

"And when thou art come into the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations. There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord: and because of these abominations the Lord thy God doth drive them out from before thee."

The significance of this is that when we go far enough we find in these mystic orders reference to such teaching, that one must pass through a ring of fire in order to gain control over the fire spirits. That is not the divine method and is here plainly condemned.

Turning to the New Testament, 2 Thessalonians 2: 9-12, we find:

"Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

Again we refer you to Revelation 13: 11 to 14, and 16: 13-14.

There are many other texts which might be quoted of miracles and power that reside in the church of God and which will be with that church in the latter day according to the Holy Scripture, as well as the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. There also remains the plain statements of the Master:

"In secret have I said nothing."—John 18: 20.

"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."—Amos 3:7.

There are many passages which declare that all secret things shall be exposed. Concerning the latter days Jesus distinctly warned us (Matthew 24:26, 27) that the way to find him is not through the secret chambers. Also we are warned to "swear not at all." (Matthew 5:34-36; James 5:12.)

The Book of Mormon of course adds to these warnings against secret combinations. (2 Nephi 11:14; Helaman 2:30; Ether 3:12, etc., etc., and the Inspired Version, Genesis 5.)

In the Doctrine and Covenants 67:3, we note the statement, "The veil shall be rent and we shall see him and know that he is." Joseph Smith states in his history not only his vision as a youth, but also that the veil was taken from their minds and that they saw many personages in Kirtland Temple, Elijah and Moses and the Lord. The Lord designs that in the right way the veil may be moved aside: But we find in secular literature, in books of the mystic orders, again and again the warning against those who seek to penetrate the veil and are not worthy or those who weakening the protection against the other world are made subject to unclean spirits. It is a perpetual and a continual danger except in the way of God.

The spirit of God, as we have already shown also gives warning.

These conclusions are not lightly reached but only after reading hundreds of books. But there appears before us but one clear path of safety, whether it is for the healing of the sick, whether it is for the enlargement of our intellectual powers, whether it is for the growth of the soul and spirit in man for that divine approach—there is but the one path of safety and way to the truth and that is the path that He has pointed out. Within that way is to be found all the truth and beauty of this world and the world to come, all the mystic and spiritual powers that are worth receiving. Any other way leads sooner or later into darkness, however fair it may appear at the start. The glory of God is intelligence or in other words light and truth. When his spirit leads us the way is a light before our feet.

THE SMALL COLLEGE

Horace Mann, America's leading educator of all times, said:

"I beseech you to treasure up in your hearts these my parting words: 'Be ashamed to die until you have won some victory for humanity.'"

It is said that the oncoming generation is destined to ruin, that it is expending its time in drinking, dancing, and joy riding. They are mistaken. It is only the cheap that drift to ruin by such devious ways. There never was a time when young men and young women have aimed so high. The world is full of youth with purpose and high ideals.

Vash Young's Religion

Religion to me is getting up in the morning and saying gratefully, "Thank you, God, for what I have," instead of, "Please, God, give me a lot more." Gratitude is one of the finest qualities of all. If you think you haven't anything to be grateful for yourself, try to be grateful to God for his goodness to others.

It is trying to make somebody happier for the day before leaving home in the morning. For years I got my wife's breakfast instead of having her get breakfast for me. If this does not appeal to you, try something else that will add to the happiness of some member of your family.

It is pausing long enough in the morning to telephone to some friend or acquaintance who may need a word of encouragement. In doing this, you develop the habit of thinking of others more than of yourself, and the result will surprise anyone who gives the plan an honest trial.

It is planning for the day more constructive work than we can possibly do, and the trying earnestly to do it. Keeping busy is an important part of my religion.

It is the exercise of constant dominion over harmful emotions and false appetites. According to the Bible, God intended man to have dominion over the whole earth. While you may not want to undertake dominion on such a big scale, try having dominion over fear and self, and see what happens.

Religion is the true development of the "giving" habit instead of the "getting" habit. If you don't know what to give, try giving a good wholesome account of yourself each day.

It is eating prudently, playing occasionally, resting sufficiently and keeping in good condition.

It is being tolerant toward the other fellow, no matter what his opinions may be. Religious intolerance is the most regrettable thing I know of.

It is being thrifty in order that upon occasion we may be able to help others and run no risk of becoming a burden to anyone else. The more religion is practiced along this line the better off we will all be.

It is telling other people of the things they have done which merit praise. If we praised as easily as we condemn, what a grand difference it would make in human relationship.

It is common sense applied to all the problems of life. We dream of the things we would like to have instead of doing the things necessary to produce the things we would like to have.

It is the realization that genuine happiness is not only our right but our duty. Any one can possess it through right thinking and right acting.

Finally, religion to me is living now, on this earth, as nearly as possible the life we imagine the next one to be. Are we waiting for a heavenly state of existence beyond the grave? In my opinion, there is no reason to wait, for we can enjoy heaven now. Heaven is not a locality, but rather a state of being or consciousness. Let's say we died and went to heaven. Would it do us any good just to see it? No! The only good we will ever get out of heaven is to live it in our daily lives—here and hereafter.

QUESTION TIME

Note: All inquiries requiring speedy or individual answers should be accompanied by a three-cent stamp, or an envelope stamped and addressed.

A. B. PHILLIPS

Are the Ten Commandments part of the gospel?

In the Scriptures the Ten Commandments are commonly termed "the law," meaning the law as given by Moses. Paul tells us that the law was added because of transgressions. The text reads:

"Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; . . .

Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under the schoolmaster."—Galatians 3: 19, 24, 25.

This makes it clear that, had it not been for transgressions, the law would not have been needed. Before the law the gospel had been preached to the Jews, but they did not receive it, being so carnally minded that it became necessary for the Ten Commandments—the law—to be given in order to enforce obedience of such conduct as would make society safe. In speaking of the Jews of the Mosaic era, we are informed that they did not receive the gospel, though it was preached to them:

"For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them, but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it."—Hebrews 4: 2.

The gospel contained the only eternal rule of conduct: to love God with all the heart, and our neighbor as ourselves. Those who do this need no law saying "Thou shalt not kill," or "Thou shalt not steal." He who loves man will have no desire to steal from him or kill him; hence such a law is superfluous to him. But such as do not keep the gospel rule of life as the cherished way of God must have such other restraining laws as they need. To such the Ten Commandments are still needed as a "schoolmaster." But to those who in faith receive the gospel, Paul declares:

"But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster."—Galatians 3: 25.

Who decreed what books should compose the Bible?

The earliest formal acceptance of any part of the Scriptures took place, so far as history shows, when Israel pledged themselves formally to accept the law of Moses (Exodus 19: 7, 8; 24: 3, 4.) The Inspired Version (Genesis 6: 5) shows that Adam and his successors recorded the inspired messages then received, to be handed down to future generations. When the other books were added by official act is not known, as to the Old Testament. About 400 A. D., however, the Jewish rabbis had accepted twenty-four books, the same number now acknowledged by Protestants as the official canon. But a formal limiting of the Old Testament Hebrew canon is known to have occurred at the Council of Jamnia (90 A. D.).

No certain date can be given for determining the New Testament canon. Various lists were prepared by early Christian writers, but they did not always agree. The claims of the Montanists to divine inspiration (cir. 180 A. D.) hastened action by the church to declare that the canon of Scripture was full and no more could be added. The Synod of Damascus (382 A. D.) is thought to have been the first official council to indorse the New Testament canon as it now is. Eleven years later the Synod of Hippo adopted it and also the Old Testament, including the Apocrypha, which Roman Catholics still accept as inspired.

What is the difference between the Holy Ghost and the Holy Spirit?

There is no difference in the original text. The modern versions use the word "Spirit" instead of "Ghost," usually. The King James version used Ghost almost exclusively, though the "Holy Spirit" is found in Luke 11: 13 and 1 Thessalonians 4: 8. The change is due mostly to modern usage of the terms, as ghost commonly means an apparition, specter, or phantom. The Greek term for Ghost, and for Spirit, as used in the foregoing relationship, is pneuma, and Holy Spirit refers to the same as does Spirit of God. It is the divine Spirit, in the texts thus used.

Missionary Activities in Sweden and Norway

Now Holding Open-Air Meetings at Oslo

May 1, found me in Stockholm where I had been since April 13. I held two public meetings a week there in a rented hall and had fairly good attendance at the eight meetings conducted. I spent considerable time visiting in the homes of the Saints in and around this city, doing all I could to encourage them. They have no regular meetings to attend and often feel that they are neglected. I try to visit them twice a year. They had not held a meeting since October until I arrived in April.

I returned to Oslo, Norway, May 7, and labored there until the sixteenth when I with my family went to Porsgrunn to attend and assist with preparations for a two-day meeting at Whitsuntide, May 20 and 21.

We had an exceptionally good two-day meeting this year. It was well attended by Saints from the various places in this part of the mission. Members came from Oslo, Kragerø, Arendal, Grimstad, and Larvik. These annual meetings have always been a blessing to those who have attended, but this year we had the greatest outpouring of the Spirit we have had in recent years. It was a real Pentecost for us, and a treat for the isolated Saints who have no regular meetings to attend.

A married woman from Stathelle, thirty-six years old, was baptized early Sunday morning by Brother Nilsen, from Kragerø. She is Brother Nilsen's oldest daughter. He has nine children and six of them are now members of the church. This daughter seems to be thoroughly converted, very enthusiastic, and I believe will make a good member. A young man, Thorlief Nilsen, from Kragerø, was called and ordained to the office of priest. The inspiration of the Spirit was very definite to me concerning his call, and I was pleased that he also and two other brothers had received evidence of the call.

My family and I returned to Oslo, May 24, and took up our work again here. The evening of May 26, we held our first open-air meeting for this summer. We petitioned the police department for the use of a park in the city on Saturday evening each week. Several other churches use the park on other evenings. We consider ourselves fortunate in getting one evening a week because so many other churches desire to use the park for meetings. Hundreds of people gather there every evening to hear the sermons. This is a fine opportunity for us to present our message to hundreds of people who would not attend our meetings in a hall. Recently I baptized one lady who heard our message first last summer in these park meetings, so the meetings last year were not entirely in vain. We hope for even better results this year.

Dayton, Ohio

Outstanding Young People's Activities

The activities for the young people have stood out during the past two months. April 28, several cars of young men and women visited at Saint Marys, the Northwestern Ohio young people's convention being held there. During the month of May, the members of the C. S. M. Club gave a program at Middletown, Ohio. May 25 to 27, a large delegation attended the Southern Ohio young people's conference, at Columbus. Apostles D. T. Williams and R. S. Budd were present.

Outstanding sermons of the past were given by Elder George Stephens, on "Financial Law," and two by Apostle R. S. Budd. Other elders who assisted in the work were A. E. Anderton, of Columbus; Elder Grey, of Springfield; S. E. Dickson, of Lancaster; F. Rockwell, E. L. Ulrich, and F. Rieske.

On Mother's Day an appropriate program was presented. A number of the Saints were visiting out of town on that day.

A picnic was enjoyed May 30, by a large number of Saints. Games and a ball game were the entertainments of the day.

A sacrament service, long to be remembered as an outstanding meeting, was held June 3. After the opening of the service Elder Miller was assisted in a wheel chair into the room. His testimony is to the goodness of God, and though he is handicapped by the loss of both legs, he is desirous of seeing the work go forward. Elder Grey and family, of Springfield, were present.

Dayton is proud to have played a part in furthering the work in Southern Ohio during the past year. The news that their district was first last year, warmed their hearts. They are desirous of gaining new heights.

Tacoma, Washington

Study and Recreation Help These Members Forward

District President M. E. Lasater visited Tacoma Branch the first Sunday in May. He preached during the evening hour, bringing to these Saints the news of the General Conference.

May 20, Elder C. E. Wheeler, of Puyallup, preached at the eleven o'clock hour on his trip to General Conference. He told of the many historic places he and his family visited.

The Mother's Day program was furnished by the junior department, under the leadership of Sister Leta Eaton, superintendent of the junior division. A program of musical numbers and readings was enjoyed. Little Betty Jean Stewart, four years old, sang "That Dear Old Mother of Mine," with her grandmother Sister Meeham, sitting in the background.

This congregation was saddened by the death of Sister Bogle. She was a faithful member of the branch, and will be greatly missed.

Children's Day, June 10, was appropriately observed. Four babies were blessed. Flowers banked around the rostrum made a beautiful background for this sacred ordinance. Two children of Mr. and Mrs. Sprague, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cox, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stonehouse were blessed. An appropriate program was given.

This branch is losing two fine leaders in Brother and Sister Harold Rolfe. Brother Rolfe was superintendent of the young people's department and Sister Rolfe was church school director. The former left for Graeagle, California, where he had work. Sister Rolfe and Lucille followed him a month later. A farewell party was held in their honor, twenty friends being present. Sister Rolfe was presented a silver cold-meat fork. They have the best wishes of their friends.

The young people meet every two weeks for a Book of Mormon Class. They enjoy an hour of study, followed by recreation.

The adults have a special study class. They meet once each month at the home of Doctor and Sister Arnold. They are studying the Bible, so as to be better able to present the teachings of the church to nonmember friends.

A KINGSTON, MISSOURI, PLAY CAST

These young people of Kingston Branch, Far West Stake, presented the play, "The Prodigal Son Returns," the evening of June 2, for the entertainment of the O. T. Z. convention crowd gathered at Stewartsville. They are part of a large group of stake young people who are intensely interested in dramatics.

By request the cast repeated the play Sunday night at Kingston church, before a combined gathering of Kingston and Oakdale branches.

Woodbine, Iowa

A Wedding of Interest

Miss Marie Nelson, sister of Mrs. K. C. Harder, and Clifford L. Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Green, of Rembrandt, Iowa, were married Thursday, June 7, at high noon in the Latter Day Saints church. The single ring ceremony was read by Apostle F. Henry Edwards. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Doris Nelson, of Des Moines, as maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Lois Brockway, of Wichita, Kansas, cousin of the bride, and Miss Katherine Peterson, of Greenville, Iowa, cousin of the bridegroom. Little Doris Elaine Harder was flower girl and scattered rose petals in the path of the bride. Nolan Green, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Waldo Pingel and Raymond Brekke, of Greenville, cousins of Mr. Green.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Irene Johnson, of Plano, Illinois, sang, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" and "The Bells of Saint Mary." She was accompanied by Miss Vivian Castings, of Des Moines, who also played the wedding march.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Harder where a two-course breakfast was served informally to relatives and close friends. Occupying a place of honor among the guests was Mrs. S. L. Weed, grandmother of the bride, who had come from Phoenix, Arizona, to be present at the wedding. After the reception, the bridal couple left on a short wedding trip and will be at home at Rembrandt after June 20.

Chicago, Illinois

Central Church, Sixty-sixth and Honore

The past six months have been eventful for the Central Chicago church, with well attended services administered by priesthood of this congregation, as well as of other Chicago groups.

The Sunday Evening Club continues to hold the spotlight as far as local activity is concerned, and the weekly innovations in its service are maintaining a high interest. In the recent past the club has had as its guests the choirs of Saint Matthews Episcopal Church, the Church of the Cross (Lutheran), as well as a women's chorus of the local parent teacher association.

Instructive sermons have been preached by the pastors of the Saint Matthews Episcopal Church and of Thoburn Methodist Episcopal Church. A lecture on "Behavior and Training" was delivered by Doctor Daniel P. McMillan, of the Chicago Board of Education. Doctor Campbell, of the University of Chicago, presented some of his experiences during ten years residence in India.

Apostle John F. Garver spoke at the first anniversary of the Sunday Evening Club, February 19.

Six carloads of young people, composed mostly of choir members, drove to Plano, Illinois, early on the Sunday morning of the departmental institute, and enjoyed a day with the Saints of Northeastern Illinois District. They returned home in time for their own evening service.

At a recent business meeting, it was voted to make further alterations on the church building, and within the next few weeks, this work will be completed. Permanent improvements to the foundation supports have been made. A new entrance and complete re-covering of the building will soon be finished. It is hoped that the efforts and sacrifice necessary to pay for this work will result in a greater devotion and appreciation of the church building and services.

Elder H. P. W. Keir, pastor of this congregation for seventeen years, preached the Mother's Day sermon. The Saints feel that he should have postponed his retirement as pastor for at least seventeen years to come.

Brother and Sister W. K. Keir are the parents of a daughter, born May 15, as are also Sister Evelyn McGee and husband, whose daughter was born the following day.

Members of Central Church were happily surprised at the appearance in Chicago, May 27, of Apostle Paul M. Hanson, who spoke for the Sunday Evening Club.

Central Chicago will make a sacrifice to Graceland College next month when they say au revoir to Brother Neal Deaver, who will leave for Lamoni, to take up his new duties there.

Brother Hammett, a faithful member and supporter of the colored mission here, passed away early Sunday morning, May 27. He is survived by his wife and several children, all members of the church.

Central Chicago church invites everyone visiting in Chicago this summer to attend services. They would be happy to have visiting members of the priesthood occupy their pulpit, and advance notice would be appreciated. Address Ray Hurst, 1274 West Seventy-fourth Street, Chicago, pastor of this congregation.

First Church, 4416 West Gladys Avenue

Some of the members of this congregation attended the district conference at Mission, Illinois, Branch, June 3, but local attendance was good, and F. E. Bone was in charge of the services of the day.

On Children's Day they enjoyed a splendid program by primary and junior departments, assisted by several not of those groups. Much talent is found among the children, and their elders are proud of them. F. E. Bone is the children's superintendent, and their teachers are Sisters Myrtle Gautchier, Violet

Bone, Grace Edstrom, Zella Thompson, and Brother Aaron Coonce.

Gloria Fisher and Helen Skinner, both eight years old, were baptized by Brother K. Thompson and confirmed by C. A. Edstrom and A. O. Skinner.

J. A. Jacques was the morning speaker on Children's Day, and Sister Margaret Bullard sang a solo. The evening speaker was C. A. Edstrom.

Miss Hope Randall and John Court were recently united in marriage by F. Almond. Hope has been a life-time member of First Chicago Church. She received many lovely gifts at her shower given by the congregation and sponsored by the young people.

Velva Trowbridge graduated from Oak Park High School June 14.

The church basement has been cleaned and redecorated in cream and green. Brother Wesley Ballinger, branch deacon, has been busy out of doors. Because of his untiring efforts, they have a beautiful lawn, trees along the rear and side fence, and flower boxes in the windows.

This congregation welcomes visitors. Brother H. T. McCaig is the pastor. Church school opens at 10 a. m. Sunday; preaching services at 11:15 a. m. and 7:45 p. m.; prayer meeting Wednesday at 7:45 p. m.

Mount Vernon, Illinois

Seven Baptized in Missionary Series

Missionary J. Charles May recently closed a successful series of revival services here. Sunday afternoon, May 27, two people were baptized, and on Decoration Day, five more were led into the waters of baptism. During his series of meetings, the evening programs consisted of special music, singing, picture slides of the South Sea Islands and the life of Christ, and a sermon.

Much interest was manifested, and the Saints feel that good has been accomplished. Tuesday evening, May 29, a social meeting was held at the church. At the close of the program, Brother May was presented some gifts from this branch, Brother Deselms making a speech appropriate for the occasion. Brother May was then invited to the basement of the church, where a surprise ice cream supper awaited him.

The young people's class, taught by John Deselms, and the older young people's class, taught by Lewis Deselms, hold special gatherings about twice a month. Games are played and refreshments are served.

Appropriate services were held on Mother's Day and Children's Day.

Several members of this congregation had the privilege of attending General Conference. They came back with greater determination than ever to carry on.

Brother Westner, of Centralia, Illinois, preached at the Sunday evening service recently.

Elder J. Charles May was also in Mount Vernon in February and held a sixteen-day series of meetings. There were no baptisms at that time, but the services were not in vain. His sermons were inspiring and the crowds were large, even though the weather was cold. The members of this congregation greatly appreciate his help, and pray that he may be successful in his other missions.

Omaha, Nebraska

Building Numerically and Spiritually

Omaha Branch is trying to build up its attendance and the spirituality of its members. The untiring efforts of the pastor, Elder Ray Whiting, and his associates, R. W. Scott and Guy Riley as well as of other members of the priesthood, are to be commended. These men are diligently striving that they might assure spiritual growth and complete unity to this branch of God's people.

More than ninety mothers and daughters found their places at beautifully decorated tables May 18, at the church and enjoyed a banquet given in their honor and sponsored by the church. Mrs. Jessie Watkins acted as toastmistress, and speeches were given by Anna Kinney, Lillian Wrenn, Elma Hicks, and Cecil Stark. Little Barbara Albright recited a poem tribute to mothers. Vocal numbers were given by Anne Hicks, Mrs. Watkins and Miss Margaret Watkins. Charlotte McDonnell accompanied at the piano. A piano solo was played by Lois Scott Burton. Group singing was also a part of the program. A lovely bouquet of carnations was presented Mother Micky, who is eighty-seven years old, and was the oldest mother there. She is the mother of Mrs. W. T. Wellman. The men served the dinner making splendid chefs and waiters. Apostle John F. Garver was there and helped in the kitchen.

The dramatic club, under the direction of George Gates, presented one-act plays on Sunday nights through the winter and spring. They also gave a three-act play the night of June 22, which was exceptional.

The young people's group, organized as the O. T. Z Class, are very active. They crowd their class room to the walls every Sunday as they now have over forty members enrolled. Doctor H. A. Merchant, their teacher, is doing a splendid piece of work with this group. Most of his leisure time is spent planning activities for them. The boys have a soft ball team. They belong to the church league and play each Wednesday evening with other churches throughout the city. So far they have managed to win their share of the games. May 27, the class journeyed to the Indian mission near Decatur, Nebraska, where they attended the morning church services. They then hiked over the hills to the timber where they ate lunch. Following this, they had a program and historical stories of the mission and surrounding country were told. The night of June 8, found the entire group with their friends indulging in a strawberry social at the Lloyd Wallace home. Outdoor games were played on the lawn until a much-needed rain forced them indoors. While there, Brother and Sister F. Henry Edwards dropped in for a brief visit as they were passing through the city.

There are more than one hundred and fifty members regularly enrolled in the church school. The director and her assistants are trying hard to keep Mr. Summer Slump away from the school, and so far they have been successful.

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church—1423 First Avenue South

Refreshing rains have recently come to revive this part of the country. Saints here are very thankful.

Children's Day was most successful. A spirit of peace and joy was not only felt by the children in their activities, but by all present. Church school session was held at ten o'clock, followed by a program given by the children.

The program opened with a worship service in charge of Courtney Rotzien. Pastor H. E. Ratcliffe took his place for the opening prayer, with a junior boy on each side who followed with Bible readings. During the piano prelude as a prayer response, a picture of Christ blessing the children was placed on the platform. Bobby Henneman told the story of the first Children's Day, and Glen Wiedling told how Jemima Luke wrote the words of the song, "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old." A short play, "Beautiful Gardens," was then presented by the children. Sister Pearl Stowell gave a sermon-story, "The Deserted Garden." A song, "A Little Garden in My Heart," was sung by the intermediates. Ina Peterson and Virginia Walker sang "God Has a Wonderful Garden," and Mrs. J. E. Henneman sang, "Summer's Beauty." The children gave exercises, songs, and recitations, the final number being a play entitled, "In the Garden of Queen Summer."

Elder P. T. Andersen gave a sermonet to the children who were baptized, and also a charge to the parents. The Saints then went to the river where eight children were baptized, Elder H. E. Ratcliffe officiating. The candidates for baptism were Irene Wiedling, Max Stowell, Vincent Rife, Edward Rife, Eugene Rife, Loretta Rife, Clarence Stowell, and Guy Elibee. They were confirmed by Elders P. T. Andersen and H. E. Ratcliffe. Brother Charles Young, of La Moure, preached.

A picnic dinner was enjoyed at the Oak Grove Park, sponsored by the young people.

Elder P. T. Anderson preached in the evening. His subject was, "Remember Now Thy Creator in the Days of Thy Youth." The services were well attended, and many isolated Saints were present.

At a recent young people's business meeting, Sister Ammon Stowell was elected assistant supervisor to Francis Stowell. It was decided to meet twice a month on Friday evenings for recreation, expression and study. Sister Arlie Peterson was appointed as leader of the girl's Club. The young people held a chicken supper at Frank Stowell's home. The proceeds were used for the paving tax.

George Gayheart, infant son of Brother and Sister George Christensen was blessed by Pastor H. E. Ratcliffe, at the sacrament service.

Mother's Day was celebrated by the children's department. They gave a program in the main room of the church. The children came marching in singing "Praise Him." One of the tiny tots presented a pretty plant to Sister Samuel Trombly, wife of the late patriarch, who took the part of the honored mother in the program.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Brand, of Kansas City, have recently located at Fargo, and they are welcome in the branch.

Sister Ferne Shackow is faithfully serving as chorister, and is adding hymnology appreciation to the choir rehearsals.

The midweek prayer services are now held at the church. Recent themes have been "Preparedness," "Willingness to Serve," "Watchfulness of Deeds and Words."

The flower gardens and lawn around the church are being artistically improved and arranged.

A Bible vacation school, in charge of the children's supervisor, will be held during the next two weeks for the children, including the intermediates.

Those who were privileged to attend General Conference returned feeling a stronger faith in the gospel and a greater determination to serve.

The ladies' aid met recently at Sister H. E. Ratcliffe's home to celebrate the birthday of her mother, Sister S. Twombly, of Kansas.

Several from this congregation are expecting to attend the North Dakota reunion, to be held at Minot, this month.

Calumet, Oklahoma

Decision day was kept at Calumet Branch, Sunday, June 10. The eleven o'clock service was preached by Pastor A. G. Owings. His theme was "Lo, I Come."

Three candidates were baptized in the afternoon, one adult, Mrs. Melvin Walbaum, and two children, Kelley Crownover and Anna Lee Crownover. The evening hour was given to the confirmation service, followed by a short but enjoyable program rendered by the children.

Independence

An old-fashioned fourth of July will be observed at the Campus this year, and all Independence people and visitors are invited to picnic on the grounds and take part in the day's entertainment. There will be contests for children and adults, with prizes, and a number of concessions will be operated by the young people, groups of the church, and some of the business organizations of the city. The day's program will include also archery contests, ponies for the children, a guest speaker, Earl A. Blackman, chaplain of the 110th Engineers, and in the evening a picture show and fireworks. Meals will be served all day by a restaurant on the grounds, and the refreshment stands will be open for business. The evening's moving picture will be Will Rogers in "State Fair." Funds raised from all stands and concessions will be applied by the women to the renovation of the Institute Building for use as a club center.

In his subject, "The Apostasy," President Elbert A. Smith discussed the decline and the fall of the old Jerusalem church, Sunday evening, June 24, on the campus. A large congregation was present to hear President Smith on his second sermon of the summer series. Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder William Inman, pastor of the Second Church. Members of the Second Church congregation and choir were guests of the evening. A solo was sung by Albert Brackenbury.

The first week of the daily vacation Bible school has successfully been conducted under the leadership of the teachers, Mrs. James Moses, Mrs. Frank Jennings, Mrs. John R. Lentell, and Mrs. C. B. Woodstock. About one hundred children participated in the worship programs, group singing, and enjoyed the Bible stories and the supervised recreation on the campus. Leaders in charge of the movement feel that the interest is good, and many more are expected to be in attendance before the classes are concluded. Today will begin the second week of the six-weeks course.

Stone Church

The sermon of Elder A. B. Phillips Sunday morning at the Stone Church called the attention of the congregation to the fact that Sunday opened what has been officially designated by the church as "Check Up" week, June 24 to July 1. His discourse was an invitation to the Saints to look into their lives and their observance of the financial law to see if they have done all they actually can to observe the law. His presentation of the fundamental principle of honoring law in its spiritual aspects was most interesting.

Music was supplied by the Stone Church Choir and by the male chorus of the choir. A solo was sung by Mrs. Josephine Ebeling, contralto, and Mrs.

Nina Smith sang the soprano solo in one of the anthems.

A wedding of considerable interest to Stone Church Saints as well as to members in neighboring states and in Canada, was that of Miss Vera Gamet and George Njeim at Stone Church Sunday at 6 p. m. Pastor J. F. Sheehy officiating in the double-ring ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father, A. W. Gamet, of Omaha, Nebraska, and attended by her cousin, Miss Florence Gamet, of Lamoni, as bridesmaid. Mr. Njeim was attended by D. S. McNamara; little Helen Robertson was flower girl and Heber Cannon carried the rings. A reception followed in the dining hall of the church. The bride is a graduate of the Independence Sanitarium School of Nursing, and Elder Njeim is missionary under General Conference appointment to Chatham District.

Miss Audrey Juliff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Juliff, of Independence, and Eugene O'Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Neill, of Joplin, Missouri, were married June 18, at 8:30 p. m., on the lawn of the bride's home, Pastor John F. Sheehy officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by Miss Opal Lee Newcomb as bridesmaid. Laryard Smith acted as best man for Mr. O'Neill. This wedding was solemnized on the wedding anniversary of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hardey, of London, Canada, on the twentieth wedding anniversary of her parents, and on the bridegroom's birthday. Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill are at home at 132 East Kansas Street, Independence.

Funeral services for Mrs. Emma E. Rehwald, seventy-seven years old, who died Sunday morning, June 17, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Davis, were conducted at the Latta Funeral Home, and interment was in Mound Grove cemetery. Mrs. Rehwald had been an invalid for three years, and was tenderly cared for by Mrs. Davis. She was born in Utah September 28, 1856, and came to Independence from Bisbee, Arizona, about five years ago. She is survived by a nephew who lives in Chicago.

Walnut Park Church

The extremely hot weather of the past few days had little effect on attendance Sunday, four hundred forty-four being present at the church school session. Following the class period Marian Campbell and Helen Moorman sang a duet, "Blessed Are They That Do."

Pastor Frank McDonald spoke at the eleven o'clock hour, taking his text from 2 Peter 3: 11: "What manner of persons ought ye to be?" In his presentation of the text he changed the "ye" to "we," stating that he too wanted to be included.

The regular monthly priesthood meeting was held Sunday afternoon. There were no evening services with the exception of the religio, which met at six o'clock under the direction of its president, Duane Fish.

Briefs

Twelve Baptized in Saint Louis, Missouri

Children's Day was very enjoyable for workers of Saint Louis District. Twelve were baptized in the font of the Saint Louis Church—three from Saint Louis Branch; three from Brentwood Branch, and six from Maryland Heights Branch where Elder T. J. Elliott has just conducted a two weeks' series of meetings.

Devotion to Work

Exclusive devotion to work has the result that amusements fail to please, and when relaxation becomes imperative, life becomes dreary from lack of its sole interest—the interest in business. Life is not for learning, nor is life for working, but learning and working are for life.—Herbert Spencer

Sufferer Needs Prayers

Special prayers are asked for Mrs. Charles McLaren, of Pathlow, Saskatchewan, who is suffering from pernicious anemia on Sunday, July 8. Mrs. McLaren, though a nonmember, is a woman of faith and trusts God for his help.

Grand Island Women Concentrate Efforts on Christmas Offering

For two months the women of Grand Island Branch, Nebraska, have been making friends for the church and raising a sum for their Christmas Offering contribution. Over this period the women have entertained ninety-two guests, representing nearly all of the churches at Grand Island.

The afternoons were spent socially with vocal and instrumental music, and readings followed by a dainty lunch. At the close of the afternoon each guest or member gave what silver offering she chose. The women, under the chairmanship of Sister Mae Lindgren, have sent in a sum of more than twenty dollars as Christmas Offering.

Fifty Years for Ridgetown Branch

Saints came from branches all over Chatham District June 3, to help members of Ridgetown Branch, Ontario, celebrate their fiftieth branch anniversary. Speakers of the day were Bishop John C. Dent, Elder John Shields, and Elder D. J. Williams.

Second Church

Elder B. C. Sarratt was in charge of the eleven o'clock hour, Sunday. Elder A. K. Dillee was the speaker and used for his subject "Exceed all in Righteousness." The choir, under the direction of Earl Audet, sang an anthem, "There Is a Green Hill Far Away," assisted by Mrs. Sam Inman.

The juniors went to the Campus and held their service there. They enjoyed a basket dinner after the meeting.

The Girl Scouts gave an ice cream social on the playground Monday evening.

Englewood Church

Elder Swen Swenson spoke at eleven o'clock, Sunday, June 17. Brother James A. Gillen preached during the morning worship period the twenty-fourth.

The group gatherings that have been held in the different homes of each group have been quite successful. Friday evening, June 22, all four groups of Englewood met together at Hill Park for a picnic supper.

The young people have developed quite an interest in volley ball, and have been competing with other teams. They recently prepared a volley ball court on the grounds of the church.

Sister Rosetta Howery, who was injured quite seriously and for a time confined to the Independence Sanitarium, is now recuperating at the home of her son.

Enoch Hill Church

Members of the priesthood met with the Saints in a union prayer service Sunday morning, at eight o'clock.

The Dorcas Class was in charge of the worship period at the church school, and gave a program. Their theme was "Music." Quotations on music were read by the various members, and Richard Maloney played an instrumental number. Mrs. Claude Beal and Mrs. Charles Warren sang, "In My Heart There Rings a Melody."

Bishop J. Stanley Kelley was the morning speaker. The choir contributed special music, assisted by Richard Maloney who sang, "Oh, Lord, Forgive."

The priesthood met in the evening for their special study class, Pastor E. A. Thomas, teacher.

Kenneth Ballinger, son of Brother and Sister Sam Ballinger, was baptized Sunday afternoon by Pastor E. A. Thomas, at the Mount Washington Church. He will be confirmed next Sunday afternoon.

A project of Group 33, South, under the direction of Sister Charles Warren, was pleasingly carried out last Thursday at the home of Sister Russel Minton. All of the groups helped to make this a double surprise party on Sister Ivy Chrestensen and Sister Mary Minton. A short program was given and refreshments were served. About sixty-five guests were present.

A son, Jerry Joe, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Merton Cadwell, June 8.

Leota and Billie Blankenship have returned to their home after a year's visit with their aunts, Mrs. Laura Yager, of Logan, Iowa, and Mrs. Adkins, of Woodbine, Iowa.

A shower was given Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Kendall, by Mrs. George Griffin and her mother, Sister John Johnson, Monday, June 17.

Southern Wisconsin Conference

Saints Receive New Courage in Gathering at Lancaster

Southern Wisconsin district conference convened at Lancaster, June 9 and 10. A rain had fallen the night before, which made the weather ideal. All three members of the district presidency were present.

The first service began at 2 p. m. District President H. W. Woodstock gave an encouraging talk in regard to the work of the district, and urged the Saints to do their part to help in the furthering of the church.

Elder Roscoe Davey conducted a class on "What Latter Day Saints Believe." At the close of the class, the business was taken care of.

The report of the bishop's agent showed the amount of tithes and offerings sent to the Bishop last year to be $1,758.14. At the close of the service all those who wished to recreate went to the school grounds and indulged in playing baseball.

A large crowd was present for the first day of the conference. At 8 p. m. Brother Davey delivered one of his forceful sermons.

At nine fifteen Sunday morning, a prayer meeting was held, in charge of Brother Lee Root and John Maas. Church school at eleven o'clock, was in charge of Harry Wasson, director of religious education for the district.

The congregation was divided into three groups. The adults were taught by Elder Davey, the young people, by Lee Root, and the children, by Leda Colbert. At 11 a. m. Elder Davey preached, his subject being "Our Consciousness of God." Solos were sung by Sisters Ern Edwards and Irene Walker.

Immediately following this service, a picnic dinner was served by Lancaster Saints.

The priesthood meeting was held at 2 p. m., Elder Roscoe Davey giving the talk. A symposium meeting following. Elder Lee Root talked on the bishop's agent's work and financial program.

Sister Irene Walker, director of music, talked on the place of music in the church. Brother Woodstock talked on the general work of the district.

The benedictory service, in charge of Paul Utenhemer and Herbert Dutton, was held at 3.15 p. m. The service consisted of congregational singing, young people's choruses, and quartet numbers.

Every branch was represented at the conference, as well as the president of each branch.

Far West Stake

First Church

The O. T. Z.'s gave a beautiful pageant for Memorial Day at the vesper service. Elder H. C. Timm gave a sermonet. The sacrament service, June 3, was well attended, although many of the young people were attending the stake convention.

Wednesday, June 6, a special fast and prayer service was called and the other city groups joined in this effort. A large group of Saints gathered, and the service was given over entirely to prayers. Attendance at the midweek prayer service has been unusually high for the following Wednesday evenings.

Children's Day was observed on June 10. In the morning, five children were baptized by the associate pastor, Elder H. C. Timm. The church school director, John Ruoff, conducted an instruction class previous to the baptism service. The candidates were confirmed at the eleven o'clock hour. The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Ross was blessed at this time under the hands of Evangelist Milo Burnett and Elder L. A. Keck. These beautiful ordinances were very fitting for Children's Day.

At the vesper service the children's division gave a pageant, "Language of the Flowers." The church was simply decorated with flowers and the colorful costumes of the children made a pretty scene.

At the culmination of much hard work by some of the men, a playground has been outfitted. It was officially opened Tuesday evening, June 12, when quite a large group gathered to enjoy the various types of recreation. The playground will be open two nights a week throughout the summer months.

First Church was glad to welcome their pastor, Elder Ward A. Hougas, back on June 17, after a period of absence due to illness. They also welcomed Bishop and Mrs. H. L. Livingston, who arrived from Philadelphia to take up their new duties in Far West Stake. Brother Livingston made a short talk at the morning service and Elder Hougas preached at both the morning and evening hours.

The dramatic club had a picnic at Bartlett Park, June 21. After the picnic supper was served, the evening was spent in recreation.

Second Church

The priesthood of Second Church are very active. Special priesthood meetings are called each month by the pastor. The church school has very good attendance with A. J. Moffet in charge. Junior church services are held in the lower auditorium every Sunday. Vern P. Goodenough and A. J. Moffet were the speakers for the month of May. Special numbers are given each Sunday by the children.

The Girls' Chorus enjoyed a trip to Stewartville recently and rendered a program in the morning. After the services, they enjoyed a basket dinner on the reunion grounds.

A special program was given Memorial Day with a sermonet by Pastor O. Salisbury. On the same day a baptismal service was held, Martin Snyder being baptized by Brother Salisbury and confirmed by A. J. Moffet.

Fourth Church

In the absence of the pastor, the sacrament service on June 3, was in charge of Elders O. J. Barr and J. L. Bear. Brother H. H. McLean, city director of church schools, has been lecturing at the morning hour for several Sundays, taking up the various phases of church school work.

On June 10, a play, "The Good Samaritan," was given by a cast of First Church young people, directed by Mrs. McLean. Dramatics was given as one of the methods of teaching.

A Children's Day program was given to an appreciative audience the evening of June 10. Evening speakers have included Brother T. E. Hale and Brother O. Salisbury.

An ice cream social was sponsored Tuesday evening, June 19. An outdoor program was given and volley ball was played during the evening. Ice cream and cake and pop were sold to a large number.

Arthur, Ontario

District Workers Assist in All-day Services

The all-day service of Arthur Branch, in the Owen Sound district, was successful in points of weather, attendance, and interest. The Niagra Falls, New York, Choir, under the leadership of Miss Catherine Lambert made its second annual appearance, providing special music for the day. They also presented a concert from two until three o'clock.

Prayer meeting at 9 a. m. found the town hall well filled with members and local ministry from near by branches.

Elder Landes, pastor of Niagara Falls, New York, Branch, occupied the pulpit during the morning services. Elder Landes joined the church in this place thirty-six years ago. The morning and afternoon attendance showed about four hundred present.

Preaching in the afternoon and evening was by District Missionary William I. Fligg. The confirmation of two candidates was cared for, under the hands of Elder McLean.

The evening service was attended by many of the townspeople. After a busy and happy day in the joys of Zion, nine carloads of people started their journey homeward, one hundred and ten miles.

Briefs

G. J. Waller Returns to Hawaii

Patriarch Gilbert J. Waller returned to Honolulu, Hawaii, the middle of May, after several weeks' stay on the mainland of the United States. He reported to Honolulu papers that he had noticed a definite upturn in business conditions on the coast and a decided tendency of the people to speak with optimism of business matters.

While in the United States, Brother Waller met with members of the church in San Francisco and at other points. He is known and respected to all the church for the many years of service he has given in the islands.

During his time on the coast Brother Waller, who is treasurer and manager of the Hawaii Meat Company, completed arrangements with a mainland packer to handle the Hawaii end of the United States army meat contracts.

Asks Prayers for Two

Sister Bridget Marlin, of Wilburton, Oklahoma, requests prayers for her mother in California, who is very low with heart trouble. She also desires prayers for the husband of a friend of hers in Texas, that the Lord will restore him.

Eight Baptized at Fargo, North Dakota

Eight children were baptized in the river at Fargo on Children's Day, Elder H. E. Ratcliffe officiating. Children's Day was a happy occasion for local members with a program in the morning, a sermonet by Elder P. T. Anderson to the children to be baptized, the baptismal service itself, a picnic dinner, and a good sermon by Brother Anderson in the evening.

Senseless Mental Work

Worry is the most senseless and insane form of mental work.—George Wharton James in "Quit Your Wor-rying!"

Branch Organized at Newton, Iowa

Henry Castings, president of Des Moines District, organized a branch of the church at Newton, Iowa, June 16, with forty charter members. Following the organization which occurred at 7:45 p. m., twenty spiritual testimonies were given by young and old.

On Sunday an all-day meeting celebrated the organization of the branch, the district presidency, Elders Castings, Clyde McDonald, and Stephen Robinson, being the speakers.

Holden Stake

Atherton, Missouri

The young people of this congregation who were able to attend the Holden stake convention report that it was outstanding. Many expressed the opinion that earlier conventions or institutes provided the foundation, directing the interests and the thinking of the youth towards the great goal of the church. They are determined to do their part in carrying on the work.

The various divisions of the church school cooperated in the observance of Mother's Day at Atherton. The children presented their tribute with appropriate readings, drills, and songs. Other divisions furnished special music, and the young people presented a short play.

This congregation is happy to welcome again into their midst Clifford Long, one of Holden Stake's recently ordained ministry, who has just completed a course in journalism at the University of Missouri. He delivered the morning sermon June 17.

President F. M. McDowell recently visited every member of the priesthood in this branch. An effort is being made for each priesthood member to work in his office and calling. Brother McDowell addressed the priesthood in a body Sunday, June 17, and in the evening he preached to the entire congregation.

Strasburg Mission

This congregation is happy to welcome into its midst a new family. Elder Charles T. Pooler, and his family and mother, have moved to Pleasant Hill, and are now worshipping with these Saints.

Since General Conference, several changes have been made in Holden Stake. The members regret that it was necessary for Elder W. S. Macrae to be relieved of his work as stake president because of his physical condition.

These Saints are well acquainted with Elder McCrae's successor, Amos E. Allen and his family, and feel confident that he is starting a fine work in Holden Stake. They pledge their support to him, to help him carry on the work. Another new officer in the stake whom they have learned to love is Elder Earl Higdon, stake supervisor of religious education and a member of the stake bishopric.

Holden Stake conference and youth's institute was held June 8-10. Friday night, June 8, a banquet was held at the Saints' Home at Holden for the young people. Two hundred were present, ten of whom were from the Strasburg Mission. The following day, twenty-two of this mission boarded a large truck for Holden, and spent an enjoyable day there. They returned home feeling greatly encouraged to carry on.

Services Sunday proved to be most enjoyable. President Floyd M. McDowell and Elder C. B. Woodstock conducted classes on the young people's program. Many who attended received credits. The business meeting, which was the closing session of the conference found everyone ready to do his best for the Master's cause.

Having disbanded the Sunday morning service in order to attend the conference, Strasburg Saints assembled at the schoolhouse for preaching in the evening. Elder Amos Allen and family, and Earl Higdon were visitors. Brothers Allen and Higdon both occupied the pulpit. Elder Charles T. Pooler was appointed to succeed Elder Roy Kleckler as pastor of this mission. Brother Higdon appointed Bert Essex to be solicitor for the mission. This was Brother Higdon's first official act as a member of the stake bishopric. The work of Elder Kleckler was spoken of highly by Elder Allen.

Earl Higdon was the evening speaker, using the "Lord's Prayer" as his subject. At the close of the sermon, Elder Kleckler gave a short farewell talk. These Saints have learned to love him and will miss him greatly.

Members of Strasburg mission feel that this week-end has been very profitably spent. They are encouraged to carry on the good work of the stake.

Waters and Osie Streets

The month of June opened with a well-attended sacrament service in charge of Elder A. E. Stoff and Apostle Roy S. Budd. At the close of this beautiful service Brother Stoff's resignation was accepted and Elder Garland Tickemyer was elected as the new pastor.

Elder Stoff will leave Wichita to take up his work as a missionary in the Oklahoma district. He has been with this congregation for five years, and during that time has become very dear to the members here. He has the best wishes of these Saints.

The evening meeting was an installation service in charge of Apostle Roy S. Budd. Sister Margaret Williams sang a lovely solo. Elder Stoff took for his theme "Talents," and at the close of his address he prayed God's blessings on Brother Tickemyer and his work here. Brother Melvin Russell extended to the new pastor a welcome from the adult group, and Sister Lena Curtis spoke for the young people. The charge given to the group from Brother Budd will long be remembered by those who were present.

June 9, services opened with an exceptionally fine membership present. The rostrum was banked high with baskets of daisies and larkspur. The Children's Day program was presented at the eleven o'clock service. It consisted of a pageant "Under the Open Sky," given under the direction of Sister Francis Balman.

In spite of the unusually warm day, a fine crowd met at three o'clock for baptism and confirmation services. The Scripture reading for this service was taken from the Book of Mormon. After giving the charge to the seven candidates, Brother Tickemyer led them into the waters of baptism, Paul, Ruth, and Opal Dunham, Leroy Bradford, Roy Andrew Hall, Evelyn Cathey and J. W. Soule. The confirmation service was held immediately following. Brother Russell gave a talk to the candidates and after the confirmation, Brother Tickemyer impressed upon the congregation their responsibilities toward these children and charged them that they watch themselves in setting a good example.

Assisting Brother Tickemyer in the afternoon services were Elders J. W. Wooten, Ira G. Whipple, E. Melvin Russell and O. L. Bradford.

As a fitting close for this beautiful Children's Day, Brother Tickemyer chose for his evening discussion the passage from Proverbs, "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Among recent visitors at this branch have been Sister Stella Brockway Omohundro, of Los Angeles, and Sister Savage, of Long Beach.

June 4, a group of one hundred thirty-five gathered in the church basement in a reception for the new pastor. Brother Tickemyer has already found a place in the hearts of this group and especially is he welcomed by the young people.

Two marriages have recently taken place. Neva Lee was united in marriage to Kenneth Hittinger, and Virginia Blodsoe, to Carl Soule.

Gladstone Church

An enjoyable evening was spent May 19, at the home of William Barham, four miles east of Independence, when Gladstone members took a basket lunch and spent the evening visiting this family. Games and a program followed the supper.

An ice cream social, sponsored by the O. B. K. young people of this group, was held on Connelly's lawn, the evening of June 6.

The Sunday morning service, June 10, was in charge of the O. B. K's. Elder Richard J. Lambert, of Independence, was the speaker.

Father's Day, June 17, was observed with a splendid program, arranged by Sister R. H. Carver. During the program Mrs. Rhodes sang a solo for the preaching service. Guest speaker, Elder C. E. Wight, proved to be most interesting.

The women of Gladstone congregation, have been making wash ties for men, and orders are coming in faster than they can make them.

Zion's Christian Legion
THE KNIGHT OF THE KINGDOM

By D. T. Williams

Zion's Christian Legion is making its bow in Canada. The first unit of the organization was organized at Guelph, Ontario, Tuesday night, June 12. The young people as well as many who are older are taking to the objectives with zest. One cannot mingle with the Canadian Saints and not admire their deep seated desire for the spread of the gospel. The triumph of the church and the hope of a Zion redeemed is held high in the hearts of thousands on this side of the international border.

These holy aspirations have been vividly manifested when we have presented the needs of the church and the means through which the necessities may be supplied. As we have set up for consideration the Legion and the goals it hopes to realize there has been in almost every place an enthusiastic response to the appeal. Already the young people of the Toronto District have held a convention in which there was demonstrated a remarkable degree of the spirit of consecration to the church and its high ideals. This splendid group of young Latter Day Saints only await the coming of their district conference to complete their arrangements to become a progressive division of the Legion.

And now comes a call from the London District, "Come over and help us." Their convention will meet July 15 at Saint Thomas. From London, from Stratford, from Delhi, and other points, young Latter Day Saints will gather to the place of meeting. The district president and other district officers are in full sympathy with this movement of the young to render fuller measure of service to the church they have learned from their earliest youth to reverence.

What a pleasant thing it is to see the old and young thus work together in the common cause of Zion. Everywhere the spirit of conquest is in the air. "Let us give battle to this worldly creditor which holds our church in bondage," is the cry of all to whom we talk concerning the plans of eliminating the church debt. So, the Legion is moving along in the successful attempt to organize the members of the church in Ontario. The task of conquering the giants that stand guard against our entering into the Land Zion is a challenge to every knight of the

Conference Program Postponed

Elder A. C. Barmore, our district president, notified our branch president that the district conference scheduled to convene at Lansing, June 23 and 24, had been postponed until July 7 and 8. The musical program, as the opening service of the conference will be held the evening of July 6, at 8:15. All other plans concerning this program remain the same.—Mrs. Tressa Baker, publicity department, Lansing.

Reunion Postponed

Due to a scourge of infantile paralysis in Southern California, district officers after consultation with the health officials of Orange County, California, in which is located Huntington Beach, where the reunion will be held, and with Doctor A. W. Teel, have decided to postpone the reunion from July 6 to 15, to August 17 to 26. This last date, too, will depend on the condition of the disease at that time. Reunion officials will take no unnecessary risks in the matter. The condition looks serious, and I would advise all our people to remain out of Southern California until we are sure the disease is under control.—W. A. Teagarden, president Southern California District.

PHILLIPS.—Floyd H. Phillips, eldest child of Elias and Estella Phillips, was born at Seymour, Missouri, March 23, 1900, and departed this life March 31, 1934, at Bristow, Oklahoma, following a minor operation. He received his education and grew to manhood in Idaho. In 1918, his father died and left the full responsibility of a mother and four little girls in his care. In 1918, the family moved to Oklahoma, and in 1921, Floyd married Ada Allen. To them was born one girl, Grace. He became a member of the church at Boise, Idaho, in 1912, being baptized by Elder Robert Owen. His was a united family in the church at the time of his death. He had been employed for the last ten years by the Olean Oil Company, on a lease near Depew, Oklahoma. Owing to the nature of his work, his church privileges were limited, but he did not forget his promise to his father years ago, "I will take care of the girls and mother." He was a believer in God and kept his law both spiritually and temporally. He was also a believer in his fellow men. The testimony of those with whom he worked was that they had never known a man who lived as clean, upright and honest a life as this boy did. He lived a life worthy of a true Latter Day Saint. Funeral services were in charge of O. A. McDowell, and J. E. Lancaster, of Tulsa.

WILLIAMSON.—Sally O. Sampson was born May 2, 1857, in La Salle County, Illinois, and passed away June 12, 1934. She was united in marriage to William E. Williamson in December, 1879, and to this union were born the following children: Silas, dying in infancy; Mamie C. Hayer, of Urbana, Illinois; Edith Grace, who died when four years of age; Silas E., of Miller Township; Charlotte A. Hartshorn, who passed away September 22, 1919, and Ethel H., and Ernest C., both of Miller Township. Her husband preceded her in death in October, 1914. She also leaves to mourn, two brothers, Knute Sampson, of Norway, Iowa, and Ira Sampson, of Humbolt, Iowa; a sister, Mrs. Bertha Anderson, eleven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. She became a member of the church in June, 1894, being baptized by Elder John B. Rousch. She lived a life of faithfulness to her church, her family, and her community. Funeral services were held from the Mission Church, Elder Hall in charge. The sermon was by Elder R. E. Davey. Burial was in the Section Cemetery.

O'CONNOR.—Edna E. Peat, daughter of the late Sister J. Peat, was born in 1889, and passed away at her home in Oakland, California, March 28, 1934. She was the wife of Edward W. O'Connor, the mother of Edna Marie O'Connor, and sister of J. Hawley and Lillian Hess. The funeral services were held at the Cathedral Chapel, in Oakland. Interment was in Sunset View Cemetery, overlooking the beautiful Golden Gate of San Francisco Bay. Elder J. B. Carmichael was in charge of the services.

PETERS.—Mary Emily Barnt was born in Tucarois County, Ohio, March 1, 1857, and departed from this life May 19, 1934. At the age of ten years she removed to Tama County, Iowa, with her mother and brothers and sisters, where she lived until the age of twenty-two. January 15, 1880, she was united in marriage to Cyrus J. Peters. To this union was born one son, Otis L. D., now living at New London, Missouri, who with his wife, son and family were present at the funeral. She was baptized into the church, November 24, 1896, and remained a faithful member until the end. She leaves to mourn her husband, one son, three grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. Funeral services were held at the White Funeral Home, Monday afternoon, Elder Blair Jensen preaching the sermon, and G. W. Blair assisting. Interment was in Rose Hill Cemetery.

NESTER.—Martha Curtis was born March 29, 1898, at El Paso, Colorado, and departed this life May 18, 1934, at Kansas City, Missouri. She joined the church in June, 1906, being baptized by Apostle J. F. Curtis. September 3, 1916, she was united in marriage to E. J. Nester, and to this union three children were born, Emory Wayne, now dead, and two daughters, Anabel and Jacqueline. She is also survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Curtis; two sisters, Gertrude Clark, and Lacey Cantebury; five brothers, Elmer, Ray Joseph, William, and Glen. Services were held in the Stone Church, in charge of Elder Ammon White. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

McGEE.—Catherine McGee was born May 2, 1843, near Liberty, Adams County, Illinois, and passed peacefully away April 15, 1934. She was baptized into the church August 28, 1867. In 1863 she crossed the plains in a covered wagon to Nevada. In the following year she was united in marriage to William Sides, and to this union were born four children, Oliver, who preceded his mother in death in March, 1906; Irwin A., Rosa S., and Albert R., all of Potter Valley, California. Her husband, William Sides, passed away in 1879, and she was married to H. P. McGee in 1885. The many friends who attended her funeral attested to the high esteem in which she was held in her home town. Funeral services were conducted by Elder J. B. Carmichael, assisted by the local minister of the Methodist Church. Interment was in the cemetery, a few miles from where she had so long lived.

OGARD.—James Peter Ogard was born in Aarhus, Denmark, July 6, 1853, and quietly departed this life Sunday, March 18, 1934, displaying a strong faith and looking forward with confidence in his heavenly Father. He came to America with his parents in 1865, to settle in Utah. Experiencing disappointment and hardship, they moved to Dodge County, Nebraska, in January, 1869, and settled on a farm where he lived until six years ago when he retired and moved to Nickerson, Nebraska. He was baptized into the church September 17, 1876, by Elder Thomas J. Smith, and had been a reader of the Saints' Herald since 1878, when it was published at Plano, Illinois. His marriage to Miss Mary Anderson took place in Fremont, Nebraska, June 10, 1880. Brother Ogard enjoyed the friendship and respect of all who knew him. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Ogard; two sons, Chris J. and Andrew E.; three daughters, Mrs. Emma Hoover, Mrs. Kate Moffet and Mrs. May Stoll; eleven grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren; a sister, Mrs. A. P. Peterson and a brother, P. A. Ogard. Two daughters preceded their father in death. Funeral services were conducted March 21, 1934, by Elder George L. Fowler, at Fremont, Nebraska.

HANSEN.—Char Les Mae Hansen was born at Woodbine, Iowa, April 26, 1912. Died May 29, 1934. She was the daughter of Charles M. and Ida Pickard Hansen, who with a sister, Bernice, preceded her to the other side. In 1919, with her sister and brother, Bernard Hansen, who now lives at Colorado Springs, Colorado, she moved to Logan, Iowa, and made her home with Doctor and Mrs. C. S. Kennedy until her death. After her graduation from high school she entered the Jennie Edmundson Memorial Hospital for the course in nurse training, but after two years she was compelled to return home because of illness. She was baptized into the Pro-ganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at Logan, January 23, 1921, and remained a faithful member till death. She leaves Doctor Kennedy and wife, one brother, with other relatives, and a large following of friends. She was a very fine character with a strong desire to help others. She was buried in the Woodbine Cemetery beside her father whom she had never seen. The funeral sermon was by Elder Frederick A. Smith, assisted by Elder Gerald Gunsoiley.

The dismissal at the grave was by the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, where she attended Sunday school when she was a small child.

WILSON.—Matilda Ellen Wilson was born December 2, 1873, in Bruce County, Ontario. Died May 23, 1934, following a protracted illness. She was baptized into the church February 21, 1904, and her life was devoted to the church and to her family and friends. Her death is mourned by the Saints of Winnipeg Branch of which she had been a member for many years. Her husband, Wellington Wilson, a teacher in the branch, passed away last December. Of her family there remain, two daughters, Mrs. G. W. Panting and Mrs. E. Hargrave, both of Winnipeg; two sisters, Mrs. K. Fachaure, of Trecheerne, Manitoba; Mrs. J. A. Ralph, of Nut Mountain, Saskatchewan, and three brothers, Wesley Morgan, Nut Mountain, and William and Roy Morgan, of Trecheerne. The service was in charge of Elder W. Pratt and Elder W. J. Fisher. Interment was in Bethel Cemetery, Trecheerne.

MILLER.—Blakie Sheldon Miller was born at Middle Branch, Isabella County, Michigan, July 27, 1891, and departed this life in the Mercy Hospital at Cadillac, June 9, 1934, after a lingering illness which terminated in cancer. He was united in marriage to Nellie Gilbert, of Cadillac, July 18, 1915, and has since made his home there. To this union were born seven children, Marguerita, Floyd, Clifford, Florence, Loren, Esther, and Lavern. Mr. Miller became a member of the church, March 1, 1931, being baptized by Elder Ernest Burt. He was a man of abiding convictions and strong faith. Surviving besides the immediate family are five brothers, Sam, of Detroit; William, of Mendon; Oscar, of Elkhart, Indiana; Lem, of Lansing, Michigan; Fred, of Cadillac, and one sister, Lydia Olmstead, of Bellingham, Washington. Funeral services were held in the Saints' church in Cadillac, the sermon by Elder Jones Sotherland. Leonard Houghton was in charge of the service. Interment was made in Greenwood Township Cemetery.

FREEZE.—Charles Curtis Freeze, son of Philip and Elizabeth Freeze, was born at Herman, Illinois, September 17, 1872. Died at Saint Anthony's Hospital at Rock Island, Illinois, June 10, after residing at Rock Island for about thirty-two years. He leaves to mourn, his wife, four sons and four daughters. Elmer, Merlyn, Lyle, Donald, Carrol, and Ayre at home; Effie, of Philadelphia, and Melvadeen, of Rock Island. Mr. Freeze was an active member in the Cooperative Labor League of Rock Island. He was baptized into the church May 6, 1928, at Rock Island, by Missionary Leonard Houghton. The funeral was held from the Knox Undertaking Parlor at Rock Island. Interment was in Riverside Cemetery at Moline; sermon by E. R. Davis.

■ The Mission Field

A story comes to us of an unnamed young brother who was laboring in a branch, doing very good work with a class of boys, and bringing them up to an understanding and appreciation of good church membership.

But he was not satisfied with his surroundings. He longed to be sent out on a mission. After some effort, he managed to get an appointment. He felt very happy in his escape from the hum-drum at home to the larger and greener fields of travel.

Six months of experience in the field was sufficient to convince him that he did not like missionary work and that he was not "cut out" for it. How easy it is to persuade ourselves that the Lord did not intend us to do the work we do not like!

Leaving the field, he went back home. The class of boys, neglected, had become scattered, many of them lost to the church. It was impossible to gather them again. It occurred to the young man after a while that he had abandoned two fields that the Lord had given him, and that he had lost souls in both of them.

The most important mission field that any of us can work in lies near at hand. That is where the Lord needs us. He has other servants located in the other fields who can conveniently take care of His work there.

■ A New Weed, Probably

Tommy McNamara, seven years old, was riding with his mother in Kansas City a few days ago.

Tommy: "Look, mamma, there's a man back there planting beer! I wouldn't plant beer for a million dollars, would you?"

Mrs. McNamara: "Why, Tommy, nobody plants beer. What makes you think they do?"

Tommy: "Well, we just passed a sign back there that said 'Beer Garden'!"

■ Finance

A friend sends a clipping from another publication which advocates calling in all government bonds, and issuing instead a lot of new currency backed by the same national wealth, thus saving the enormous amounts of interest that are paid each year.

The plan looks easy and attractive. It always bobs up when times are hard and money is scarce. Yet it is inflation, pure and simple. It was inflation of this kind that reduced the German mark from 23.8 to nothing and wrecked Germany financially, that pulled the franc from approximately a quarter in value to less than five cents. World finances are still rocking and plunging as a result.

■ Starchy Sayings

Pigeonnette says, "In all this talk about building Zion, you ought to remember that you can't build strong castles out of cornstalks!"

■ Exercise

Pigeon says: "A person can get almost enough exercise in this hot weather just twiddling his thumbs. A lot of us hot-weather Christians operate on that kind of code, too."

What Gospel Shall We Teach?

A Distinctive Message We have heard much insistence both from the pulpit and in private conversation that it is our duty to teach a distinctively Latter Day Saint message and that we should preach a gospel that would be recognized anywhere as something different from the message taught in other churches. These statements are no doubt prompted by good motives and good intentions, but there are difficulties and dangers in a course prescribed exclusively by these specifications.

Dangers The first danger is that such a course would lead us to emphasize our peculiarities rather than our great objectives. It is not so much our duty to be peculiar as it is to be right. It is not so important to tell the difference as it is to tell the truth. It is not so much our duty to teach a distinctive gospel as it is to teach a representative gospel. We must not allow the demand for a unique message to force us to teach a limited or circumscribed message. Our message is the gospel that Jesus taught. Christ is the great figure in our religion. It is not our purpose here to promote the fame or exalt the name of any man, but rather the glory of God.

The Whole Gospel The fact that other churches teach certain of the principles of the gospel does not mean that we may not teach them. The fact that other churches preach Christ does not mean that we must subordinate Him and exalt others. It is our highest duty and our most valuable privilege to preach the gospel of Christ and the whole gospel of Christ.

A Teaching Program Our total teaching program has been set down in various ways according to the limitations of language and the inspiration under which the writer arranged his thoughts. Perhaps no statement will ever include it all, yet there are some important things to be named, and we make our list as follows:

1. God as the universal Father.
2. Jesus Christ, His son, and our Savior.
3. The plan of redemption.
4. The brotherhood of man.
5. The stewardship of property.
6. The sacredness of marriage and the home.
7. The rights of the children.
8. The law of liberty.
9. The law of responsibility.
10. The laws of health.
11. The necessity of personal development.
12. The rule of righteousness.
13. The immortal destiny of the soul.
14. The hope of Zion.
15. The Kingdom of God.

Christ Saves

Such a program will keep us busy for a long time to come. It includes provisions for the spiritual, the physical, the social, the economic, and the cultural welfare of man. It is a program for a modern church in the best sense of the word.

Knowledge alone will not save us; organization alone will not save us; doctrine alone will not save us. We cannot be saved by any single religious hobby. Our ultimate salvation, as a people, must come from a way of living and that way of living must be characterized by the ideals of Christ.

How to Be Different

If we really desire to be unique, if it is our unquenchable ambition to be different from all the rest of the world, if we want to stand out apart from all other churches, we have one splendid opportunity to do so. That opportunity lies in believing our message enough to live it. That opportunity lies in wanting Zion with a sufficient intensity that will lead us to build it. That opportunity lies in seeking the Kingdom of God in a way that shall bring it to earth. It is hard to be unique in preaching, but it will be very easy for us to be different by simply deciding to put the gospel into practice.

There are many good churches in the world that confer large benefits upon those who attend them and upon those who receive charity from them, but we know from the history of churches in general that they have been contented to keep right on living in the world as it is. Our religion should give us the divine discontent and the determination to remodel our own section of society along Christian principles.

L. L.

The Christian is also a worker, a soldier, a savior. He must be a profitable servant, an effective soldier, a loving savior. Group strength is the only form of strength sufficient to solve the problems or overcome the evils of this world. An isolated man is impotent. A detached Christian is unprofitable. Soldiers who really mean to fight, march with the army. Workers who want their work to count, work together. If the church is indeed the body of Christ, the organ through which he speaks, the instrument by which he works, then it is certainly the duty of every soul desiring to fulfill its destiny to become an integral part of that body.—Charles E. Jefferson.

In the Work of the Church

E. Y. HUNKER

Brother Hunker's faithful and systematic work has brought him to the position of one of the seven presidents of seventies. He is now laboring under Apostle J. F. Garver in the Des Moines, Western Iowa, and Northeastern Nebraska Districts. He and his family spent some years in the Scandinavian Mission, where Brother V. D. Ruch is now working. Brother Hunker's home is now in Independence.

Old Age Pensions in Ohio

Brother John L. Cooper calls attention to the old age pension law in the State of Ohio and says that there may be some elderly members there who come within its provisions.

To be eligible for benefit under the law, one must be at least sixty-five years of age, a resident of the state at least fifteen years and of the county at least one year, without adult relatives capable of supporting him, not possessed of yearly income more than $300, and not possessed of real or personal property more than $3,000 for one or $4,000 for husband and wife. Application should be made to the County Board for the Aged.

A celebrated English scientist of more than a generation ago, who surrendered his faith in God, wrote this: "I am not ashamed to confess that with this negation of God the universe to me has lost its soul of loveliness. When at times I think, as think at times I must, of the appalling contrast between the hallowed glory of that creed that once was mine, and the lonely mystery of existence as now I find it, it is impossible for me to escape the sharpest pains of which my nature is susceptible."—Church Management.

Two New Church Books

President Elbert A. Smith has written a new booklet on Marriage and the Home for the "What Latter Day Saints Believe" series. This fine little book presents a vigorous defense of our ideals on the subject of marriage, and should be read by members of the ministry and all young people who are seriously interested in the work of the church.

The Riddle of American Origins, an archaeological study in support of the Book of Mormon, is by Harold I. Velt, who has been a careful student and an able lecturer on this subject for several years past. This study was first presented as a series of articles in the Ensign and there was a large demand at the time for its publication in pamphlet form. Now we are glad to announce its publication, in revised form, as a booklet. It is sure to arouse interest, and it will meet a real need.

Marriage and the Home is priced at twenty-five cents, The Riddle of American Origins, at thirty-five cents. For a limited time we are offering these two fine new books together for fifty cents. Send cash with order. No agent's commission can be allowed on this special offer. Offer expires September 1.

A Christian is a person who launches out into an element where he cannot drop anchor. The one thing we are always wanting is security and it is the one thing we never get. The only security we can get is the security that Christ himself had, the security of God.

"Launch out into the deep," said Jesus, and they did. Peter went to Rome; Paul to all the world. Andrew somewhere to Ethiopia; Thomas away to India; they all launched out into the deep, they all lifted anchors and sailed for the open seas with their only security, God; their only leader and friend, Christ; and the wind in their sails and their steam, the great mechanism of their souls, the Holy Ghost which God has promised to give without measure.—John A. Hutton in "Launch Out Into the Deep," Church Management.

A good "sister" who had dropped a dime in the offering plate or basket when it was passed was heard to criticize the preacher, the sermon, the pulpit flowers and decorations, and also the choir and song leader upon leaving the church. A nephew who had accompanied her listened indifferently for a few moments and then took her to task in the rebuking remark or question, "Well, Aunty, what do you expect for ten cents?"—Earl L. Wolslagel, Church Management.

ACROSS THE DESK

By F. M. S.

Informal Chats From the Office of the President

J. L. VERHEI, writing on his return to Portland from his visit to the conference said a pleasant surprise waited him to find that in his absence the Saints had painted the church and greatly improved its appearance.

Concerning the conference he says:

"Since coming home I have, of course, had time to reflect again on all that I both saw and heard at conference, and I cannot tell you how much strength and joy it brings me. Surely there has been no greater thing happen to my life than the instructions received in the classes, preaching services, and business sessions. Above all, of course, were the instructions we received in your opening message to the conference and your early morning classes for the Melchisedec Priesthood. In all my life I have never been so privileged as during those hours and the experiences remain a beautiful green spot in my memory. I am so hopeful that I shall be able to pass on to the people in this district and to the priesthood some of the marvelous things I received. President Smith, I am determined as never before to fully represent the cause of Christ under your leadership and give expression only to those finer qualities that come as a result of faithful service."

He and Brother Velt seem to be working together on a joint program on which both missionary and local priesthood can unite with prospects good for an advancement in the work.

W. J. NUCKLES, in charge of the mission in Los Angeles recently wrote expressing his appreciation of the help received at General Conference and his enjoyment of the various meetings. He returned to his branch determined to do all he could to help answer a prayer which had been somewhat continuous with him, that the spirit of the conference might permeate the entire church, by doing what he could to carry the spirit of the conference into the mission over which he presides. He expressed appreciation of the early morning talks to the priesthood and feels the need of further instruction. He adds:

"We have set as our goal before next conference one new member per member and praying that this may be accomplished throughout the church. We are looking forward, and forward is our watchword."

A MEMBER of the priesthood writes that in a place he was visiting the prayer meeting (mid-week) were at a low ebb in interest and attendance. In effort to raise the tone and increase the attendance he states that he "programmed the meetings," introducing each night some "element of surprise." He says:

"At the first meeting there were nine present; the next fifteen; the next twenty-nine, and at the last there were forty present."

From nine to forty is a goodly growth and shows what planning will do at times. It is worth while, too, for prayer meetings are a source of spiritual strength, and to increase the numbers of those desiring such benefit is to promote the interests of the church.

ONE of my little namesakes, Frederick Madison Remington of Webster Groves, Missouri, has recently written me that he has just been baptized on Children's Day and that he is very happy to belong to the church. He reminds me that it was I who blessed him as a babe and tells that he is in the third grade and hopes to grow "good and strong" so that he can work for the Master and the church. He signs himself "Your little friend."

I am happy to know this little namesake of mine is determined to work for the church. It gives him a goal that will be an anchor of defense and in this we pray the blessings of the Lord may follow him and that he may bring joy to the hearts of his parents and to the church by an exemplary life.

When I hear good music in any church I form a good opinion of the spiritual life of that church. Poor singing too frequently indicates a heartless service and music in the average church worship is deplorable. . . . In some churches music is treated as a rather necessary sort of pest and the choir is occasionally referred to as the "war department."—Earl L. Wolslagel in "Music—A Human Necessity," Church Management.

The Magic House

A great home building company of Kansas City recently opened a "magic house" to public inspection, and many hundreds of people responded to their invitation to visit it. The company is great not only for the number of homes it builds, but also for the fine quality of the homes.

This magic house contained everything for the comfort and convenience of its occupants that could be imagined. It had insulation against heat and cold, air conditioning, dual intensity lighting systems with switches so that you could turn the lights on ahead of you wherever you went, a recreation room in the basement, and everything that you could possibly want. These were all very interesting.

But a more remarkable asset of the company were the young man and young woman who represented the company. Their English was perfect, their manners flawless, their dress in the best of taste. They were quite obviously a product of a long course of education. The best that a college could offer was indelibly written into all that they said and did. They represented a great company in a fine way.

Competition is becoming very severe in getting jobs. The best qualified in both technical training and in ability to meet the public will win the best positions. Untrained people will have to take what is left or go without. You, young friend, will need a college education for the competition of life. Grace-land opens this fall. Are you planning to go? Better write and find out what the possibilities are for you.

Martha was a model housewife. When Jesus crossed her threshold Martha's hospitality was complete. Every comfort was in waiting for him. The meal was ready for the serving. Jesus was appreciative. But his intuition was—as usual—unerring. He realized that Martha had lost herself in things. Her head was working while her heart was idle. Mary, on the other hand, was no such expert in housekeeping as was Martha. She gave time to "being" as well as "doing." She put first things first. She chose the better part, convinced that only thus could she do well the work appointed her in life; and Jesus said: "Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her."

"Being" and "Doing" must be blended by the churches; and in these days they must begin by choosing THE BETTER PART.—Lyman P. Powell, in The Better Part.

Toronto Convention Is Triumph

The annual convention of Toronto district young people, June 9 and 10, at Hamilton, proved a triumph in every way—program, attendance, weather conditions, the spirit of the occasion, the good help of Apostle D. T. Williams and Missionary George Njeim, and meals served to more than a hundred young Latter Day Saints at Robert's Restaurant.

"We must move forward to Zion," was the convention's slogan. The Sunday morning prayer service was one of the high-lights. At eleven o'clock Sunday Apostle Williams talked interestingly on the work of the church's young peoples, presenting the objectives and purposes of Zion's Christian Legion.

The Saturday night entertainment also proved a real attraction. Following a musical program, Elder George Njeim, in native costume, gave a lecture on "The Twenty-third Psalm."

Ideas, Discussion and News for the Young People of the Church

Central Los Angeles Has Herald Discussion Class

From sixteen to twenty-five young people of Central Branch, Los Angeles, are participating in the Herald Discussion Class conducted by Pastor D. B. Sorden. "So many of us have been in the habit of giving the Herald such a cursory reading that we have had but little good from it," says the Central Branch Bulletin. "By using it as a quarterly, we gain much. This publication of the church has a wealth of good material. From passages, letters and articles chosen by members of the class or the teacher, an open forum is conducted. The entire class period may be given to one subject, or some half dozen subjects may be considered during the hour."

This class has had some profitable sessions, and is now endeavoring to increase its number. This is the only class conducted on Sunday evening.

Building the World Society

A Radio Address by F. Henry Edwards

EVERY THINKING MAN who has read the final chapter of Mr. H. G. Wells' Outline of History has been deeply stirred by the picture it presents of the coming world state. If I could do so, I would have every teacher, every preacher, every statesman, every man and every woman having a part in the building of our social order, read this chapter again and again and again till its realities and its prophecies were burned deep into his consciousness.

Following Mr. Wells, and summarizing some of his suggestions most pertinent to my present purpose, let me say that in the present social and economic order, as in international affairs, we are in the dawn of a great constructive effort. The story of life is rising to a crisis in the immense possibilities and opportunities of today. The drama has become ourselves. It is you; it is I. What is happening to us and what we are doing will supply the next chapter of this continually expanding adventure of mankind.

History has watched a steady growth of the social and political units into which men have combined. In the brief period of a comparatively few years these units have grown from the small family tribe to the vast united realms of the present times. Moreover there have been profound changes in the nature of our relationships. Compulsion and servitude have given way to ideas of associated freedom, and the will to brotherhood has been reinforced with the multiplied means of communication.

In the midst of this quickening movement toward larger relationships the loyalties and allegiances of today are at best provisional loyalties and allegiances. The true state, the state that is already beginning, the state to which every man and every present social grouping owes its utmost political effort, must be the coming federal world state to which human necessities point. Nationalism as a god must follow the other tribal gods into the past. Our true nationalism is mankind.

THERE ARE two sets of reasons why every truly patriotic individual must see his particular citizenship as the prelude to a larger citizenship. The first of these is the tremendous cost of our present divided world order. The possibility of war, for example, is in direct proportion to the number of lesser loyalties which divide mankind, and war has become a greater menace than any enemy can possibly be.

The second set of reasons are more affirmative. To quote Mr. Wells directly: "There can be little question that the attainment of a federation of all humanity, together with a sufficient measure of social justice to assure health, education, and a rough equality of opportunity to most of the children born into the world, would mean such a release and increase of human energy as to open a new page in human history.

"There will be a vast increase in the supply of human necessities, a rise in the standards of life and in what is considered a necessity, a development of transport and every kind of convenience; and a multitude of people will be transferred from low grade production to such higher work as art of all kinds, teaching, scientific research, and the like.

"A world with something like secure international peace and something like social justice will fish for persons of capacity with a fine net of universal education, and may expect to yield beyond comparison greater than any yield of able and brilliant men that the world has known hitherto.

"The strongest incentive to constructive political and social work for an imaginative spirit lies not so much in the mere hope of escaping evils as in the opportunity for great adventures that their suppression will open to our race. We want to get rid of the militarist not simply because he hurts us, but also because he is an intolerable thick-voiced blockhead who stands hectoring and blustering in our way to achievement. We want to abolish any extravagances of private ownership just as we would want to abolish some idiot guardian who refused us admission to a studio in which there were fine things to do."

IN THE WORLD of such undreamed possibilities responsible persons dare not submit to the easy domination of the slogans and catchwords of yesterday. We are under obligation to be intelligent, to think and to feel deeply in terms of the newer and the better world. This thing is not idle dreaming. It will determine the quality and direction and freedom of the life which our children will live.

Some gains have already been made. All the advances of science and invention from the time of the first printing press onward have made more easily possible the extension of brotherhood and the community of understanding. Even the nitrate of ammonia used in the manufacture of high explosives can be used by men of good will as the basic constituent of a fertilizer which will make our farm lands richly productive.

Then, too, we must take heart because of the improvement of our technique of international cooperation. Willingness to arbitrate and to confer and to share, is merging into a growing ability to do these things effectively. Recent years have seen the growth of such international organizations as the League of Nations, the World Bank, the World Court, etc. And, while the functioning of these instruments of cooperation, especially some of them, appears to be weak and ineffective at times, definite progress is being made.

IT IS THE CUSTOM in some quarters to scoff at the League of Nations, remembering only its inadequacies. An enlightened and world-visioned public press could correct this by giving greater notice to the achievements of the League. Take, for example, the settlement of the Saar Valley difficulty in 1927. A political question arose between France and Germany over the number of military police needed for the protection of this valley. The French claimed that they needed eight hundred men; the Germans asserted that five hundred men were sufficient to keep order. The material issue was merely whether three hundred men could be retained or not, but the political issue which arose from this was something of an entirely different nature, for the national press of Berlin had headlines "Germany must not permit the continuance of a disguised French military occupation in the Saar Valley," and the French national press replied, "France must not yield to German threats the first time the German foreign minister presides over the Council of the League." Had there been nothing but the old diplomacy to fall back on, with the government in Berlin writing a secret but formal note to the government in Paris, delivering it with rigid etiquette and carrying through the whole transaction with unreal but hostile formula, such an incident would have supplied the fuel for the kind of dispute which leads to war. But the debate in the League Council brought about a settlement and when the grim consequences of a possible disagreement no longer menaced the work of European reconstruction, Herr Stressemann turned to Monsieur Briand, the foreign minister of Germany to that of France, and said in a voice not unshaken by emotion, that if such a conference of responsible statesmen had existed as a known and recognized instrument of policy in 1914, the World War would not have taken place.

Nor is the works of the League confined to the settlement of disputes which might lead to war. The first speech made by a woman in the Assembly of the League dealt with the question of traffic in women and children. Following this speech a permanent advisory committee on this subject was created. Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau of the United States, and a member of this committee, led the way in revolutionizing methods in the investigation of such social problems and as the result of the work initiated by her tremendously significant international advances have been made in the fight against this menace to human well-being and happiness.

THERE ARE of course certain impediments and difficulties which stand athwart the way toward better understanding. There is, for example, the antiquated notion of national sovereignty, by which we mean that the state may do all things which it has the power, but not necessarily the moral right to do. Under the theory of sovereignty the relation of the nations to each other is similar to that of individuals living in a community in which each person is entirely free to act as he chooses, and to settle his differences with his neighbor by personal attack upon him. No more rude and savage type of social organization can be imagined, and yet this is the legal situation which prevails today in the relationship of nations.

Then there is the idea that the State is a legal person, an idea which is very useful in many ways but which is very easily distorted and misused. As the State is so viewed we conceive it as a larger entity existing outside and above the individuals who comprise it, and we forget that behind these personified institutions called states there are individual human beings who are responsible for whatever is done. Professor Sidney Fay's work on the Origins of the World War reveals from the original documents that the war broke out at that particular time because

PART 2

THE COMMANDMENT TO THE MINISTRY

WE have certain commandments that the Lord has given to the church as a whole, (though of course they have also an individual application). I notice that in this section 42, in which was included the "constitutional law" of the church, the very first commandment that he gave to the elders—(he is talking now to the elders)—was, "Behold, I give unto you this first commandment that ye shall go forth in my name, every one of you, excepting my servants Joseph Smith, jr., and Sidney Rigdon. . . . and ye shall go forth in the power of my Spirit, preaching my gospel, two by two, in my name, lifting up your voices as with the voice of a trump, declaring my word like unto angels of God; and ye shall go forth baptizing with water, saying, Repent ye, repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

In that constitutional law the first commandment given the elders was to go out and preach—preach the gospel and cry repentance. We all know too well that the missionary force of the church has been sadly depleted during the business depression, but I want to remind you that God was not talking alone to men under conference appointment. He was talking to all the elders of the church. I want to remind you that any two elders in any branch anywhere, who are in good standing and are qualified, after conference with the proper authorities, may go forth two by two into the regions immediately at their own door and preach the gospel. They do not have to wait for conference appointment. They do not have to go on a foreign mission. But right in their own neighborhood any two of them can go out into cottages or schoolhouses, or churches and preach as they were told to do, and I want to say to you by the voice of the Spirit that that burden is again placed upon you ordained men now. "Hear ye him."

FEED MY SHEEP

Again he enjoined especially upon the ministry how that the Saints should be gathered together in branches and in districts and in stakes and that they should be taught by the ministry, they should be ministered to, he said, under the supervision of the Presidency and Twelve; the "standing ministers of the church," high priests, elders, priests, teachers, deacons, should watch over the church, be with them always, minister to them, visit in their homes, teach them, sustain them, and raise them up to be men and women of God. That was his concern. "Hear ye him." It has been neglected. Too many of our local ministry have accepted their ordination and their call and then they have not even known when the sheep under their shepherding were in trouble. They have not gone into their homes. They have not known when they were in temptation. They have not known when homes were about to be dissolved by contention. They have not known when there was heartbreak and poverty and sickness. They have stood by like men of the world without any calling and without any responsibility. This does not apply to all by any means, because many, after a hard day's work, have gone out in the evening or on Sunday diligently to minister to the Saints, and their blessing has been as great as that given to the missionary who has gone over seas.

RE GATHERING

He has also said to the church that this gathering into branches and stakes is preparatory to the gathering to Zion. I think we all accept that. I do not think the doctrine of gathering has ever been challenged since the days of Zenas H. Gurley. At least it never has in my ministry. We accept that. We are willing to "hear him" regarding the gathering. But he also told us that we should gather wisely, not in haste, but should have counsel, should have "all things prepared before us." Have we heard him in this matter? Family after family has gathered up hastily and come to Zion without counsel, without a job, without means of support, and then has reported to the Presiding Bishopric, "Here we are."

LEARN TO LIVE TOGETHER IN PEACE

Furthermore, I think that it is quite clear that he has counseled us that when we come we should come in the spirit of Zion. I have had people say to me, Why does not the Presidency give us people out in the branches a concrete program that will prepare us for the gathering? Well, you at least have this concrete program in the outlying branches to learn to live together where you are in the Spirit of Christ so that when you come to Zion you will be able to come with his Spirit and be able to live together in peace here. There are some entire branches that would come here as a body if they were encouraged to do so, who have never learned to live in peace with each other where they are. There they meet together briefly perhaps once or twice a week, but here they will be thrown together rather constantly in the very intricate problem of living together in Zion. Many years ago in one of our western branches I assisted Apostle F. M. Sheehy to settle a quarrel between two sisters who never had lived together in peace. We got them together in the church building and they shook hands and forgave each other. Brother Sheehy showed one out one door and the other out the other door and then said to me, "See that these two sisters never meet again,"—it was good counsel if I wished to avoid trouble. How can Zion absorb people who have not yet learned to live together where they are? "Hear ye Him" in that respect.

THE OUTLOOK

Now concerning the outlook of the church I feel hopeful. The Presiding Bishopric is again organized fully and we have the assurance that all three of the men presently will be giving all of their time. They have in mind a program of attacking the church debt, which is the obstacle we run up against at every turn, so that it may be paid at an opportune time, or at least reduced to proportions that we can manage. The Twelve and Seventy are enthused with the missionary spirit. They have their program which was explained to you yesterday. The Presidency has not said much about it, but they have unfolded to the Joint Council a program of work among the local priesthood. Brother McDowell, as you know, has done a rather wonderful work during recent months among the local ministry and it is planned that this work shall be pushed, especially in the central branches, that we may not only have additions to the local priesthood but that those we have may be inspired and revived and trained and organized for their work.

I am reminded, however, that it is rather human to make plans and we are told by the Scotch poet that the "plans of men and mice gang aft a-glee." We are rather prone to come together at General Conference and set up objectives and lay plans and mark out ambitious programs. Then we do not realize them in all their details and some get discouraged. It seems to be human nature to want to make plans. Russia has a five-year program; and Mussolini, not to be outdone, has a sixty-year program. There is no man on earth wise enough under present conditions to map out a plan for a nation for ten years. Italy may not be in existence ten years from now. And in the church, while it is well to make plans, we must remember that Jesus Christ said, "I will build my church." Our objectives were set up before we were born. They were set up by the Divine will. We may remind ourselves periodically of those objectives, but the major outlines of our plan and program were laid down for us long before we were born. They were conceived in the Divine mind. Any program of the Presidency of the church or the Twelve that they put down on paper can only relate to the details of our operations; and as we move out this year and next year in an endeavor to harmonize ourselves with the divine plan and with our own elaboration of its details, let us not be discouraged if presently some of us find ourselves alone and not surrounded by this great body of helpful fellow servants, whose presence gives us courage, and not under the spirit of this immediate conference we shall begin to feel that the plans we have laid are not bearing fruit. Jesus said, "I will build my church." All that we can do is to assist him.

THIS IS HIS WORK

Early in our council meetings I went home one night from the meetings very much discouraged, very despondent. It has been my policy when down and out physically and discouraged mentally to go off by myself and keep my mouth shut and not infect others with my discontent until I could return with a smile and a word of encouragement to those who needed it. But my poor wife cannot help seeing when I am discouraged and she has been a wise counsellor. This night she said to me, "Why get discouraged? After all this is the Lord's work and he will look after it. Why should you be so anxious?" And so I went to bed and went to sleep and the next morning things looked very much better. Let us remember this is His work and hear His voice. Let us open our minds to his counsel.

CLIMBING THE MOUNTAIN

Years ago when my older son was a little boy he and I were in the west, we started to climb a mountain. It used to be that whenever I saw a mountain I wanted to get to the top of it. I do not try that so often any more. We saw the top of the mountain very clearly. It was plainly visible against the sky, and was beautiful, and we started up. We could see the trail up when we started but before very long we found ourselves among trees and rocks and in canyons where it was dark and we could not see the trail ahead. It was hard climbing. All we had was the remembrance of the vision we caught when we first saw the top of the mountain. If you find yourself in the valley during the coming year, remember the vision you caught at this conference. When you are discouraged, remember the vision you had when you were at your best and remember the resolution you made then and adhere to the plan you started out to execute. Presently the boy became very tired and thirsty—it was a hot day—and could only think about a drink of water or getting in the shade. I took him by the hand and led him on; and when he became too dis-

A Providential Happening

In the winter of 1869, an experience came to me that I have called providential. I was still driving a mule in the Brookfield Slope and had to be at work at seven o'clock in the morning. My wife's folks were staying with us. They had sold their home and were going West the next spring.

Next door to us lived Mr. Richard Richards. Father Jones left the house at six o'clock every morning, and he called us before going. If we were not up soon after he left, our good neighbor, Mrs. Richards, called us.

One morning neither called, and we slept until eight o'clock. Mrs. Richards apologized for not calling, saying that she thought I was up and had gone to work. It was too late then, so I sent word that I would be on hand next morning.

Then the question arose in my mind, "What is going to happen?" Surely there was some reason why I had not been called by one or the other of our two faithful guardians, for such they had been to Mary and me. On retiring at night we were not uneasy about oversleeping, for they had invariably called us. I was not superstitious, but I believed that before the day was gone, I would see some reason for my being at home. Some workers, I knew, had overslept, and had thereby been saved from mine accidents.

About eleven o'clock there came to our house an old pedlar whose name was Underwood. He laid his bundle down, picked up a tract that lay on the table, and at once became deeply interested in its contents, so much in fact, that he forgot about his wares.

For an hour the man read. At last he asked if we had the Bible called the Inspired Translation. I was in another room reading, and my wife gave him the book.

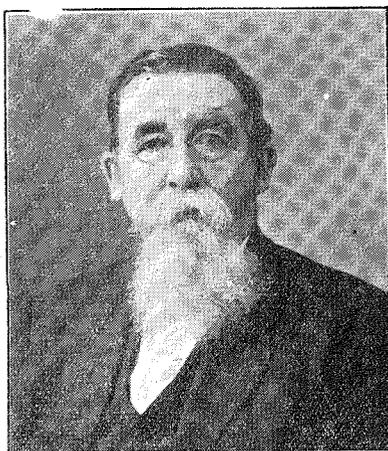

For another hour he was in deep study. When at last he quit reading, he wanted to buy the Bible. I said, "It is not for sale," and gave him the address of the Herald Office where I told him he could purchase one. But nothing else would do, he must have that one, so I sold it at cost price. The tract he had been reading was the "Contrast of the Two Bibles," by Elder Isaac Sheen.

"Well," he said, "I have gained more light in the little while I have been reading this Inspired Bible than I received from a life of study. I used to preach in the Christian Church, but my lungs became weak, and I had to give up public speaking. Now I am peddling for the good of my health. I have two brothers who are ministers in the Christian Church, and often we have been up until midnight trying to study out some of the errors that are in the King James Version. We did not wish to disbelieve. To me this Bible is truly a Godsend, and I am grateful for it." I was then prepared to say that my stay at home was providential.

Call of the West

In the winter of 1868, Elders T. J. Smith and George W. Martin came on a mission to Ohio, and made their home with us for seven weeks. During this time they advised us to go West to Nebraska and take up a homestead. So in the spring of 1869, in company with Brother George Masters, I was appointed by four other families to go to see the country and report to them. I was gone about two weeks. I met Brother Smith and Brother Martin at Desota, Nebraska, and they made us quite welcome and showed us the country. We were up in Elk Horn Valley. Claims were nearly all taken. I returned to Ohio, leaving Brother Masters there after making arrangements with him and Brother Smith and Brother Martin to look up a location where we could get homesteads for six families.

On my return home, John Jones, the boss over the mines where I worked, gave the contract of hauling out the coal to the foot of the slope, to one John Evans and me. We were to be paid seven cents per ton. We were to hire all the help and the company was to furnish the mules. The average day's work when we could get the cars to put coal in, was about three hundred tons. We hired five men at $2.25 a day, so our expenses were $11.25 a day. This was a good paying contract. We made about five dollars a day each, on the average, every day we worked during the summer of 1869. The demand for coal was not good, but the following winter we had about all we could do.

Then we received word from G. W. Martin that he had filed on six claims, one hundred and sixty acres each; but in order to hold them until we came the next spring, there would have to be a small shanty, twelve by twelve feet, put on each claim. They would cost one hundred dollars each. We sent him six hundred dollars, and he was to buy the lumber, just boards, and put up the shanties or rooms on each of the six claims.

I was at this time making good money in the mines and the boss said, "William, you had better not go West. Stop here, and in a few years you will have enough money to buy a farm in Ohio." I would have heeded the advice, but I had promised these families I would go on to the homestead with them, as they insisted I should. So I informed Mr. Jones, the boss, that I would have to go with them, and he replied, "After you have located, then you come back. Your wife's folks will be there with her, and you can do well here."

To this proposition my wife would not consent, and I did not favor the idea very much, although I believed that financially it would have been the best. The best month I worked was very tempting to me, too (March, 1870), for I made $120.00, and the prospects were flattering for the coming year. I was presented a seventy-five dollar cash purse from the miners as a token of respect which I appreciated. I had worked there for seven years, and although young I was highly respected. (At the time of my marriage, the Coal Company, through their boss, Mr. Jones, had sent me word to go to the jewelry store, select a good clock, and they would pay for it. I thanked them for their kindness, and suggested that Mr. Jones made the purchase which he did and presented us a good Seth Thomas clock.)

Brookfield Branch at this time, March, 1870, was in a very low spiritual condition. There was a balance due on the church building, and the curse of drink and spirit of contention were such that like the fish presented in my open vision many who once had the Spirit had lost it and were dead and some others were dying. The building was sold, and out of the twelve elders, only two or three remained alive in the work. The branch of sixty-five members was scattered, only one family, Brother and Sister Jones remaining firm in the faith. How true had been the warning voice that we should be scattered like chaff before the wind!

Homesteading in Nebraska

In April, five families of us, consisting of about thirty persons, young and old, left for Nebraska. Nine of us were Saints. We arrived at Columbus, Nebraska, the county seat of Platt County. Our claims were thirty-five miles north and west, at the head of Shell Creek, near Newman's Grove, in Madison County. Columbus was the nearest railroad point, and we had to drive with teams and wagons to our claims. Upon arriving there we learned for the first time that only a few boards had been placed on each claim. G. W. Martin had bought only one thousand feet of lumber. He returned home to Desote, a distance of about one hundred miles, but he never made any apology nor gave any explanation why he had not done as he had agreed.

It was about dark when we arrived to find no place of shelter. We heard of an old log stable nearby, and to it we all went for the night.

Next morning father Jones and I started on foot to Columbus to see if we could not get homesteads nearer market. On our way down Shell Creek, about fifteen miles, we heard of a new farmhouse, sixteen by twenty-four feet, and twelve feet high, for sale. The house was on railroad land, and there was homestead land joining it. On reaching Columbus that night we were tired and hungry, having had nothing to eat except some sour lightbread and sour butter that we had bought at noon for fifty cents from an old lady who had taken a homestead and was living in a dug-out. Father Jones bought the house and we took a homestead of eighty acres each, all we could get as that was all the government allowed within the twenty-mile zone on either side of the railroad. The government had given to the Union Pacific Railroad Company ten miles of land on either side. They were to take every other mile. We had a good eighty acres of land.

After buying the house, the next thing to do was to go up for the families. In the meantime, two more of our company, Mr. David Joseph and Robert Lewis, his son-in-law, concluded to locate near us. After arriving in Columbus and taking out our homestead papers, we met a Mr. David Carige who lived on Shell Creek, about ten miles nearer town than our claims were. He had two good yoke of oxen for sale for which he wanted $400. So the four of us went out with him to see them. We arrived at his home about sundown. He unhitched his horses and then we looked at the cattle. They were extra fine. That night the four of us had to sleep in a straw stack for the unhospitable Irishman did not ask us into the house, so we burrowed as far into the straw as we could. Still we were cold for the night air was chilly.

We thought if this man was a fair sample of the Irish settlement, the sooner we got away from them the better; but we found he was an exception, for when the neighbors heard that he had taken us all out to see his cattle and left us outdoors all night, they were enraged and talked of mobbing him.

Next morning he came to feed his stock and found us four in a very bad frame of mind. We got our Welsh up and talked plain. He blamed his wife, saying she had said there was no room. He acknowledged it was very unkind and then asked us in for breakfast. We accepted, for we were very hungry and had another hard day ahead of us.

I went on up the Creek some seven miles on foot, where I met a Mr. George Lamb who took his team and went to get my wife and her folks. We had been gone nearly three days and they were very anxious to see me and I was anxious to see them. Those three days in the wilds seemed like months. But we were soon in the new house and we were very glad.

We commenced farming with our two yoke of cattle. They knew as much about that line of work as we did. We were coal miners who knew more what to do and how to do it in the mines than on the wild, open prairie. Soon, however, we learned how to drive the good, faithful oxen and we began to turn over the sod that had not been disturbed since the Nephites and Lamanites had tilled the soil in America, if ever they had in this region. Our homesteads were right in the valley of Shell Creek. The soil was black, and fifteen to twenty inches deep. It was very productive. After the first year, prairie life agreed with us and we were always hungry. By fall we had plenty of squash, pumpkins, and potatoes. They did well in that sod. But we were starving for some kind of meat. There were plenty of prairie chickens, quail, geese and jack rabbits, some deer and antelope, but none of us were hunters. Father Jones had bought a long distance rifle, but it did us no good for I had never fired a shot in my life. One day I bought an old government musket from one of the Indians for three dollars, but I did not use it for some months.

A Dream Directs Me

Soon after we moved into the new house I dreamed I saw three cakes, one dark, one light red, and the third cream color, one of which was for me. I chose the cream color. Next day Father Jones said, "We ought to go and buy a few cows." He wanted two and we could get one. He offered, "I'll loan you the money." We went down to the Irish settlement and called on one Mr. Rays who had a large herd of cows. We could get our choice at fifty dollars a head. Father Jones bought two that in color were like the two first cakes I had seen, and by this time the dream was strongly impressed on my mind. I concluded that if there was a cow in the herd that was cream color, I would take her. After our looking for some time, Mr. Rays said he had one other cow that he would show us, but she had one bad trait. If it were not for that, he would not sell her, for she would give as much milk as two ordinary cows.

As soon as I saw the animal, I said to myself, "That is the cream cake," and told her owner that I would like to buy her if she could be milked. Mr. Rays informed me that it was not safe for one to milk her alone. He suggested that my wife and I do it together, one tying her legs with a rope and holding it firmly, the other milking. He said that she might not lift her foot for weeks, and again, she might do it any time.

On the strength of my dream, I bought the cow, and she proved to be one of the best in the valley. On grass she would give twelve quarts of milk morning and evening, and in the winter she gave eight and ten. To us she was a blessing. We sold a two-gallon jar of butter every week all fall and winter, besides having all the butter we needed for our own use. She was known for miles around as the best milk and cream cow in that part. I have not seen her equal since. While it was true that she was troublesome at times, she was the means of supplying us money with which to buy flour, sugar, and other things. Often I have thought that we did not appreciate her nor the direction given which encouraged me to buy her.

In our second year in Nebraska, we found her dead. We had moved to our own homestead, and we staked her out with a long rope where she could get to the creek. Somehow she got one of her front feet tangled in the rope and we found her lying in the creek, her nose in six inches of water. She was the only cow we had and we had not the money with which to buy another.

The law required us to move to our own homestead. The house had one room, sixteen by sixteen feet, dug into the ground, three feet at one end and four feet at the other. The log walls were six feet above the ground. There was one window, a dirt floor and a board roof with sod on the top of the boards.

We were twenty miles from the nearest branch, Columbus, and our only means of conveyance was the ox team.

In this humble home our third child, Martha, was born May 21, 1873. This was a wet spring; the earth was full of water. When the child was two days old, water came up out of the dirt floor and in a few hours it was several inches deep.

We carried wife and the baby out into the wagon, wrapped them up so that they could not see the light and took them to my wife's mother. For this experience they were none the worse.

We had built a cave in one end of the house and put a loft over the main room.

Commencement Dreams

LOUISA MILLER stood behind one of the curtains of the little theater and glanced cautiously about over the gathering audience. It was a large crowd, and she knew most of the people. Laboriously Aunt Bashy was settling her two hundred pounds of flesh beside thin old Uncle Alex. According to previous plans, Louisa's mother, grandfather, and younger brothers and sisters should have come in with them. She frowned. Perhaps grandfather was having another bad spell with his heart.

Suddenly she was conscious that she was not alone in the little curtained alcove.

"Do you know," a man's voice said softly, "you are like a Vestal Virgin in that snowy dress."

She laughed. "I wish you wouldn't steal up on me and say such startling things, Robert. You see, I—"

"And I wish you wouldn't laugh at me, Louisa." He seized her hand and ardently held it in both his hands.

"You can't know how much more deeply my heart feels than my mouth can speak. Words cannot tell all the depths of feeling I have for you! Your face is before me always in imagination—all my ambitions, desires, and hopes are centered on you."

She studied him a moment. He was tall, dark, handsome, and his black eyes glowed with a worship that proved his words true. Why could she not respond to his love? Surely there was never a more perfect lover, never one whose voice and actions could more nearly satisfy the romantic longings of a girl's soul. But there was something about him—

"Now that we are through school, Louisa, and neither of us can go to college, can't we come to an understanding? I have a position, Louisa—one I think you'd like—I mean you'd like to share it with me. I was in Chicago last summer, working during the holidays—do you remember?"

LOUISA NODDED.

"Well, while I was there I became acquainted with a very interesting and rich old gentleman who seemed to take a fancy to me. He has been doing research work in psychology, and wants to continue his studies in a more practical manner. He wants two or three young couples to associate with him in the project. His idea is to study human relationships and emotions, the primitive as contrasted with the modern. He wants me to get married and go with him to the Society Islands. Wouldn't that be wonderful for a honeymoon trip? It also gives me a chance to become famous, perhaps even wealthy. The old man says our discoveries might revolutionize things. That's just what I want—a big thing to work for—to give my life to. Remember that song my mother used to sing before she died?"

She nodded again. In imagination she could see again distinctly—a little thin woman, with unsatisfied, questioning eyes like her son's. She could hear once more the words of that oft-repeated song that was somehow beautiful in spite of the huskiness of the singer's voice. Perhaps it was impregnated with beauty because of the intensity of the faith and hope she had for her son. Robert quoted it now, softly:

"Speed, bonnie boat, like a bird on the wing,

Onward,' the sailors cry;
Carry the lad that's born to be king,
Over the sea to Skye."

"You can be a king, too, Robert, if you only try,' she would say to me, again and again. 'You must make something big of your life.' And that's what I want to do, Louisa. Something big and fine that will make my name famous and for which people will want always to remember me. There is something inspiring about you—something that makes me want to do my best in everything. With you near me, loving me, I could beat the whole world if it were against me. I could accomplish—"

"Please, Robert—I can't let you go on like this. We've been good friends, and I like you—I don't want to hurt you—but I'm afraid I can never fulfill your dream. You will find someone else—"

"Is it—is it because my mother died of tuberculosis? Dearest, I could have a physical examination every once in a while—I promise not to endanger you in any way."

She laughed wildly. "No, no. It's nothing like that! I'm not in love with you, Robert. I'm sorry, but you made me say it."

He spoke in a low, tense voice: "Tell me please, won't you—answer this question—do you care for anyone? Or is it just that you have not thought of love? Dear, tell me—"

A BLAST FROM A HORN, violins scraping tentatively, then the first strains of the number calling the classes to line up for marching to their places on the stage. Much relieved, Louisa seized upon this interruption as an excuse to escape quickly from the emotional interview.

The theater was brilliantly lighted, and had been decorated with flowers from gardens, wild flowers from the woods, and ferns from Monroe's only greenhouse until it was a bit of fairyland come true. The people, too, were in gala attire. There was a breathless expectancy in the air. At one side of the stage, behind a great bank of lilies of the valley, the class flower of the high school graduates, sat the orchestras of college and high school. Above in huge letters made of pasteboard and twined about with waxy blossoms, swung the motto of the college:

"You can if you think you can."

The school-board members and the mayor and Baptist minister occupied a row of seats near the front of the stage; behind a small table sat Professor Laird, the superintendent of schools, and Professor Stow, the speaker of the evening.

But Louisa saw all this only dreamily, for in all that crowd of people only one seemed real to her. Was there not something occultly prophetic in the fact that they were seated together, and that their names had been printed together in the little program?

"First honors in scholarship: High school—Louisa Velora Miller. College—Daniel John Eldon."

The high school quartet sang the song beginning: "Winds of night around us sighing, in the elm trees murmur low, in the elm trees murmur low—"

They inserted the name of their own town, Monroe, instead of the "Yale," and although the word of two syllables seemed strange in places through the song, it gave Louisa a shivery feeling of sorrow that something beautiful was finished, dead; the whole past of her seventeen years of life seemed full of a corpse-like loveliness about to be buried under a great mound of fragrant lilies. The future she contemplated with a sigh. If only Dan could love her! She had loved him for a long time, but no one else knew that. For a long while she had continued attending the little Latter Day Saint Sunday School, not because religion of any kind appealed to her, but because Dan went, and she wanted to be near him.

DAN was tall, not so good-looking as Robert in some ways, but he had a strength, both physical and spiritual, that Robert would never have—that few ever attain. His clear blue eyes were honest, his speech and actions rather slow and careful. She recalled the words the class put under his picture in the high school yearbook: "Quiet, reserved, and faithful to his work." Faithful? Dan would always be faithful, she felt, to what he believed was right. But she must quit thinking of Dan, and listen to the speaker. If one of grandfather's sick spells had kept him and her mother from coming they would want her to tell them what this learned professor said. She forced her mind to dwell upon his words:

"... Why I took this class motto for a sort of text tonight. For, my dear young people, you actually can if you think you can. Not a young graduate under the sound of my voice but can make a success of his life if he but has the proper mental attitude and stick-to-it-iveness to win over obstacles. Are you satisfied with a five-thousand-dollar income? You will doubtless be a five-thousand-dollar-a-year man. But you might just as well set your mark higher. You might just as well—"

Louisa glanced at Dan. How was he taking this materialistic view of success? Not very well, she feared. Dan was too much of an idealist. That was his one fault—too much religion. Well, she could soon cure him of that, once she was his wife. She would show him such a good time, be so jolly—life would be one long dream of happiness, one great—but where were her thoughts again?

"... And I tell you, young people, we in 1919 must rise above the superstitions and traditions of the past. Don't be afraid to pioneer, to reach out for new things. Don't be afraid to let go of old things. Just because—"

COULD she listen to this all evening? Would the man never get through? But the hour finally passed, and Professor Laird gave the class a brief word of farewell. There was some advice about making friends of good books, and making noble thoughts their companions. "There is a great deal of truth in yon motto," he said, "but if some unforeseen circumstance prevents any one of you from accomplishing the thing he thinks he can do, I hope you will be successful in this thing anyway: I hope you will at least have achieved a good character. If you have that, you will find success is possible even without much money. You will find—"

"Oh, well," mused Louisa, "of course Professor Laird would talk that way. He is a remnant of the past himself, and full of old traditions and superstitions. Dear old Laird!" But it really mattered very little to her what anyone said. All she wanted was to get through and go home. She had a feeling that something big and important was going to happen to her yet tonight. Dan had smiled at her twice and she was quite sure there was an extraordinary amount of something akin to tenderness in his eyes.

It was finally all over and Dan had whispered, just as she had felt he would: "May I walk home with you tonight, Louisa?"

"Surely, Dan," she answered casually, "and let's go quickly." They escaped through a rear door before the crowd had begun to congratulate the young graduates, and Louisa breathed deeply of the fresh, cool air.

"You'll wonder why I wanted to go so soon, Dan," she said, "but it really was hot in there, and so many flowers made the air almost too heavy with perfume—it made me feel faint."

If Robert had been walking with her, he would have said: "That's the way it affects me to be with you. Your sweetness simply engulfs me—" but Dan, a bit awkward and shy, walked silently beside her.

"I'll just have to ask her, that's all," he was thinking. "I simply can't go through life without her. To be sure, she doesn't belong to the church, but she must be interested or she wouldn't go so much. I think I can soon convert her to the advisability of joining. She is so good—"

Aloud, he said: "Louisa, how does one—I mean, I wonder how a young chap goes about it to ask a girl to marry him?"

"Never having been in the situation of wanting to ask a girl to marry me. I'm sure I can't give you any sage advice. Who is the lucky girl, Dan?"

"Please, Louisa—don't joke with me—it's, it's—"

There was a brief silence.

"How did you like the speech tonight, Dan?" Louisa tried to keep her voice from betraying the tremulous state of her feelings.

"Oh," the young fellow spoke stiffly, "I liked Professor Laird's talk best."

Laughing a little, Louisa returned, "You would, Dan. But you have to remember he's old, and has been brought up under old-fashioned superstitions and traditions. It's like the other man said, we have to let go of those old things. You take religion, now—you simply can't let yourself take it too seriously—a little may be all right, but to specialize in it would spoil your life. I want a little fun in my life. I want happiness," she passionately declared. "Is that too much to ask of life, Dan? Why shouldn't I be happy?"

"I hope you will be, Louisa," Dan said it solemnly. They had passed a bright street light and were quite hidden in the shadows of a big oak tree, at the corner of Louisa's home. "You asked me who the girl was I had in mind. I don't know whether I ought to tell you or not—we seem to feel so differently about things, and maybe even if you do love me, I couldn't—couldn't make you happy."

"You mean—I am the one, Dan?"

SOMETHING in her tone gave him the answer he wanted, for he took her gently in his arms and kissed her forehead.

"I am glad that you love me," he said, but there was a hesitancy in both word and act, an air of abstraction, as though his real thoughts were elsewhere. Louisa drew back, and they stood silently looking at each other.

"I think—think we can make a success of life together," Dan said finally. "You are so beautifully good, and so reasonable, and I'll try to do my part—I'll always be true to you, Louisa." He kissed her forehead again, and then slipped away down the street, head bowed, a something gone out of his step, a something in his whole attitude that seemed to tell her he had just made a great sacrifice. There was no use to deceive herself; Dan was not very happy—or maybe it was just his peculiar unexpressiveness asserting itself. She encouraged herself to think so for a moment and then leaned up against the great oak and burst into tears.

"To think of the nice, interesting boys that have fallen in love with me, and were delighted if I'd even talk with them—then I have to fall in love with an old lunatic like Dan—" She fought her tears, brushing them away fiercely. She must let the wind cool her face before she went into the house. She did not want to talk to her mother tonight, and her mother would be sure to notice if she appeared the least bit unnatural.

SHE FORCED HERSELF to think of other things. The evening had really been a glorious climax to the four years of study she had just completed. She had felt the admiring glances of many in the audience and knew that some people were talking of how rare a thing it was for so much beauty and brains to be bestowed upon one person. She knew that her features were lovely even when she arranged her hair very simply; that her eyes were brown and clear with soft, alluring shadows in them. Her school record indicated that she possessed more than average intelligence. The thought comforted her. Could not a person so liberally endowed with good gifts, have what she wanted from life? She tossed her head, smiled, and started briskly up the long path, to the house.

"Wait, Lou," a voice called. It was Aunt Bashy, struggling up the little hill, poor old Uncle Alex trying with all his feeble strength to assist her. Louisa ran back and offered her young, strong arm gladly. She didn't especially like Aunt Bashy, but she was sorry for her.

"Oh, dear—dear me," panted the old lady, "let me rest just a minute. It takes me a long time to climb a hill. What was you doin', Lou, leaning against that oak? Cryin'? I have an idee that life seems kind of confused like, jist now, don't it? But don't you

"Greeters Committee"

By C. J. Lant

C. J. LANT

AN EASTERN RAILROAD has seen fit to select young men who have the personality and the spirit of helpfulness, at least, and has created positions for them in their large railroad stations in the various cities. Waiting between trains becomes quite tiresome, especially for elderly people and women with children, and it is the duty of these young men to see that they have every comfort, that they get their train on time, that their baggage is taken care of, and above all else made to feel that someone is interested in them and that they are welcome and wanted to return. In addition they are assured that "Service with a Smile" is a part of the desire as well as the contract of the company.

The Hotel Men's Association held a convention in our city some time ago, and we learned that they have a club within the association, called the "Greeters Club" and the members are made up of the room-clerks and service managers. They are selected young men who have the qualifications mentioned above. Their kindness must be genuine and from the heart; otherwise the public would detect a sham and the purpose fail.

How many times have we heard the remark in the church that some of our membership have grown careless and do not appear to notice a stranger within the fold, nor offer a smile or a friendly greeting. Visitors from smaller branches going 'a-visitin' where they know they should be welcomed with open arms by their brothers and sisters, only to find that not even one has the time to inquire whether they are members of the church or not, or if perchance they may be interested in the gospel and may be wanting some member of the priesthood to call on them, perhaps the pastor.

Further inquiry into these matters, has revealed that not only have members grown careless in this matter, but they also fail to find time to read the Herald or any of the other church publications. Just a day or so ago we happened to call on a sister living a few miles from our branch and she took us to meet another sister who has lived away from the church most of her life, yet the seed sown at the time of the baptism is still fertile.

We found a Book of Mormon in her home the only connection with the church; immediately we saw an opportunity for the branch bundle to start with at least five Heralds in this vicinity; and called attention to the fact to the first sister; who perhaps has lived across the street from this party for a year or more, but not once has the sister been urged to attend the church.

And when and if she does attend now that she has been asked to visit us, will there be someone interested enough in her to see that she is made welcome and wanted to come again? It is sad but never-the-less true; that we sometimes find more of the love and fellowship in the hotel lobby or the waiting room of a railway station, than we do in the house of God.

Is it any wonder then the seats in either of these places are filled more often than those of our churches?

If you are to live in a universe where hundreds and thousands of stars the size of our sun blaze unseen in the space of light no larger than a pinhead, you need a God as big as your universe. You cannot believe that the God who is taking care of Andromeda and all those stars, who is upholding a cosmos that stretches into abysses imagination itself cannot fathom, will tolerate a dishonest or lawless man; you cannot believe that a God by whom the sun and the moon, the stars and the planets are ranged in order will permit us to substitute artistic technique for fundamental agreement with his law; you cannot believe that a God whose purposes run unchallenged through countless ages will allow human misery to conquer his great will. Here is the real alternative religion thrusts straight at our souls: Shall we trust such a God or turn to some god of our own manufacture?—Shailer Mathews.

A Tribute

of Appreciation to a Veteran Hymn Writer

Many of the most precious contributions to our hymnology have been made by George C. Stebbins. Perhaps no other composer has been more surely used of God in sending forth messages of hope and salvation, than has this veteran writer of hymn music. He is probably best known for his long association with the famous Moody and Sankey evangelistic movement. During these years he did much good in sending out on the wings of song many of the great truths concerning this present life of Christian warfare and the blessed hope of the future, which were then being preached with nation-wide emphasis.

Many and varied are the beautiful poems, by different writers, which Mr. Stebbins has set to music. Only as an artist loses himself in his work, submerging in his subject all personal pride, will he be successful. He must be totally unconscious of self and selfish desires. Such is the true inspiration of the hymns written by this godly man.

We cannot doubt that all self was forgotten by him as we listen to the tender melody coupled with those inspired words of Adelaide A. Pollard:

"Have Thine own way, Lord! Have Thine own way!
Thou art the Potter; I am the clay.
Mold me and make me after Thy will,
While I am waiting yielded and still."

Again the pleasing rhythm and soft and mellow strains mingle with the fervor and confidence of a longing after God in the song, "Jesus is tenderly calling thee home." Surely this also manifests only a desire to show forth its ministry of heavenly inspiration.

Probably there is no Christian home in which the English language is spoken where faith has not been strengthened and hope quickened by the sweet strains of the hymn:

"I've found a Friend; oh, such a Friend!
He loved me ere I knew Him:
He drew me with the cords of love,
And thus He bound me to Him."

Mr. Stebbin's music has won its way into our hymnals, by first winning its way into the hearts of praying men and women. Surely the angels bend an ear to catch the strains of such melody. Only God can know how many lives have been touched and cheered by its ministry, and it will go on singing in the hearts of men and women until the trump of God shall sound. And then I think some of these songs will mount up to the very presence of God, where in the courts of heaven we will join the angelic choir of more than ten thousand

Familiar Melodies in Our Saints' Hymnal

Three hymn tunes of George C. Stebbins, rich with melody and beauty, are to be found in our Saints' Hymnal. Two of these are familiar to all of us, the music of "Ye Must Be Born Again" and "Take Time to Be Holy." The third is "'Come Ye Apart! It is the Lord Who Calls Us."

times ten thousand, in singing praises to Him that sitteth upon the throne and to the Lamb, forever and ever.

Although eighty-eight years of age, Mr. Stebbins still composes a large amount of music.

On his last birthday, February 26, 1934, he was invited by the National Hymn Sing Association to take part in a radio broadcast given in his honor. The music furnished by Dr. Arthur Billings Hunt, musical director of the Hymn Sing Association, consisted entirely of hymns composed by Mr. Stebbins. During the program, Uncle George, as the composer is familiarly known by his "Hymn Sing" friends, gave this greeting to the radio audience:

"It is a great pleasure to greet my many friends who are listening in this evening. And while so doing, I wish to express my grateful appreciation to Mr. Hunt and the artists assisting him, for the honor they are doing me by singing to you these songs, the music for which bears my name. It is my wish that some strain may carry on its wings of melody a message that will bring both comfort and pleasure to your hearts and homes. I have been told that ships as they pass in the night, salute each other with 'Hail' and 'Farewell.' May I use this impressive salutation in bidding you Godspeed to your desired haven, and good night and farewell?"

At the conclusion of the program, a number of us went with Mr. Stebbins to the home of Doctor Hunt, where a birthday dinner was served to a few of his relatives and friends, including an only aged sister, with whom Mr. Stebbins is to make his home in the future. At the close of the dinner, a birthday cake was brought in, bearing its eighty-eight lighted candles, each representing the light radiated from one year's service to God and humanity.

On account of almost total deafness, Mr. Stebbins had never heard a large number of his more recent compositions, and it was a great joy for him to sit by the piano while Doctor Hunt in his full, melodious voice sang some of them in his ear.

We spent the evening in singing hymns set to music by our guest of honor, and listening to him as, with face radiant with happiness, he graciously related many incidents connected with the writing of them.

When we at last reluctantly arose to leave, we joined hands and sang:

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love!
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

Then we reverently bowed our heads while Mr. Stebbins thanked God for his gracious gifts to man, and besought his blessing that each one present might be guided until at last we should meet around the great white throne to sing praises to our Redeemer.

As the "good-bys" were said, we felt it had been a priceless privilege to shake the hand of this aged man, whose unwearied ministrations have been of such great worth in the uplifting of his fellow men.

May God continue to bless his servant through these twilight years, and crown his life of usefulness with the satisfaction which comes from a knowledge of talents consecrated to God and the service of humanity.—June B. Perryman, in The Youth's Instructor.

Do the things you are afraid of; dare the men who make cowards of you; say the things you fear to say; and be the things you know you ought to be, and it will surprise you how the petty devils of worry will slink away from you. You will walk in new life, in new strength, in new joy, in new freedom. For he who lives a life free from worries of this nature, has a spontaneity, a freedom, an exuberance, an enthusiasm, a boldness, that not only are winsome in themselves, make friends, open the doors of opportunity, attract the moving elements of life, but that give to their possessor an entirely new outlook, a wider survey, a more comprehensive grasp. Life itself becomes bigger, grander, more majestic, more worth while, the whole horizon expands, and from being a creature of petty affairs, dabbling in a small way in the stuff of which events are made, he becomes a potent factor, a man, a creator, a god, though in the germ.—George Wharton James, in Quit Your Worrying!

couraged to go any farther, I went on a few hundred feet and then I would call him and he would hear my voice and would come to where I was. Then I would go on a little farther and again he would hear my voice and come, and so presently we reached the top of the mountain, both of us.

"HEAR YE HIM"

Now, remember, no matter how dark the day may become or how hedged about with obstacles in the road we must traverse, if we will stop and pray and listen we will hear the voice of our Master and it always calls us to higher ground, and if we seek higher ground always, eventually we will reach our goal.

It is my fortune to preach the last sermon of the conference and I take this occasion to bid you all God speed as you go to your homes and to put upon you the admonition to carry with joy to those who were not so fortunate as to be here the spirit of this conference, and to learn, wherever you are, the Godly task of living together. You can have the spirit of Zion wherever you live. May God speed the time when we shall not need to part and go to distant homes, but may be a gathered people under his light, and all of us hearing his voice.

fret, honey; when you've been all through the mill and gotten where I am, you'll be satisfied and thankful if you can get three good meals a day. You won't worry—"

"Oh, but modern women don't give way to old age as they used to, Aunt Bashy. I don't intend to let the years take away my beauty and—"

"You can't help it very well, Lou," chuckled Aunt Bashy; "the years go whether we want them to or not." She sighed. "Jist this afternoon your grandfather was sayin', he says, 'Lou is a perfect beauty—jist the image of what you used to be, Bashy.' I've come a long way, but we all go the same road."

Louisa shivered. Could life possibly hold such an inglorious finale for her? She shook her head as though to rid herself of the terrible idea. Science was continually making new and startling discoveries; there would be something to prolong her youth; it would last a long time—

They heard the door of the house swing violently open, a long stream of light from the doorway shot down toward them, illuminating the little flower-bordered path, and Dave, one of the younger boys, came running wildly, crying.

"It's grandfather!" he gasped. "I'm going for the doctor. He hasn't been feeling well all evening, you know, and he just suddenly fell from his chair! Mama thinks he's dead!"

We had to enter the loft from the top of the cave on the outside.

During the wet spell, I carried all the clothing up to the loft and slept there. In the meantime I dug a ditch to let the water out of the place.

One night after I had gone to bed, I heard a strange noise between the box and side of the house. I got the lamp and looked. A big bull-snake was trying to get through the narrow space between the box and wall. I killed it, threw it out, and again retired. After lying down a few minutes, I heard another noise similar to the first. "Well, well," I thought, "has that snake come to life and come back?" Soon I found that it was not the same but a second snake, about the size of the other, its mate, no doubt.

of the misunderstandings and fatigue of a very human group of men then in charge of foreign affairs in every country, men paralyzed by fear and by a lack of adequate information about happenings in other countries.

But learned discussions about the rights of sovereignty, etc., will not do much for the average man. This building for world understanding and world cooperation affects every one of us. It is the process which will control the lives of our children. Without becoming experts on international procedure we must nevertheless do all in our power to aid the movement toward common understanding and wider freedom. What can we do?

FIRST, we must accept responsibility for our part of the total movement.

We shall not drift into the millennium. Deity will not compel us to build Utopia. We ourselves must learn to live with discrimination, following the good and combating the evil. International ideals, whether expressed in law or lying fluid in public sentiment, says John M. Mecklin, are the result of the slow habituation of the thought of the average man under the discipline of his own national institutions. Men who love peace and pursue it are the products of social institutions which encourage peace, and we must build such institutions. We must accept our share of responsibility by surrounding ourselves by stable inducements to larger thought and action. Pulpit, press, and platform must combine to encourage the international attitude, and they must do it because of the will-to-peace which they find meeting their message.

All this means the participation of decent and clear-visioned men and women in the business of government. The world state is not likely to spring into being through neglect of the national or local governmental processes. Our immediate concerns must be conducted in the spirit and hope of the larger goal. From these smaller units must come the leaders of the international groups. In these smaller units, justice and equity must become realities, and from them they must stretch across the seas which now divide.

And, finally, we must learn to feel this thing deeply. Most of us lack capacity for sustained eagerness for the best. We pursue our own immediate ends, catch a momentary glimpse of a better order and are deeply stirred, then we turn again to the pettiness of selfish individualism. We are likely to continue this unless somehow we can be made to feel the overwhelming importance of the coming age of cooperation. God grant us the inspired imagination to see the World State at our doors, and the courage to work that our vision may come true.

The Camouflage of Words

By H. E. Depew

So many people who profess
To live fine lives, that they may bless
The hopes of others with some light,
Are often far from being right;
They make long speeches, so sincere,
For all the other folks to hear—
But down beneath that surface coat
Are many things they fail to note.

How oft in solemn meetings these Proclaim aloud from bended knees
Such long, and weighty, prayers that we Forget, perhaps, to look to see
The life that truly these display
While doing tasks from day to day.
Fine speech, just now, may hide dark sins,—

Until the Judgment Day begins.

'Tis not the voice that's raised in songs
That should be taken by the throngs
To indicate the life one lives,
Or what one thinks, or does, or gives;
For wealth of words can be obtained
Regardless of the progress gained:
And so it's well to wait and see
How near one's words his life will be.

I've found that many good, true souls,
Whose lives are nearest to the goals
That must be gained to earn a crown,
Are apt to be without renown;
Because these quiet, earnest ones
Won't seek their places in the sun's Bright rays, but choose to sow their seeds
Of good by ever doing deeds.

So, next time someone starts a song,
Or speaks, or prays, too loud and long,
Just look beyond to see how far Astray that life's real actions are.
'Tis nice to voice one's feelings real,
But never should that oral zeal
Become so false, and far astray,
As to condemn that soul some day.

Rejoices in the Church

Having been given knowledge of the divinity of the church, I was baptized early in the year, 1931. I had never been inside a Latter Day Saint church, had never heard a sermon by its preachers, yet at the time I was baptized, I knew beyond all doubt that this was the authorized church of Jesus Christ.

Since that time I have had cause to marvel greatly at the goodness of our heavenly Father and to understand more and more the mission of the church and the sacred duty of Saints.

Have been a subscriber to the Herald since I entered the church, and I find it a valuable help in many ways. I study the three standard books of the church regularly and advise all Saints to do this, accompanying it with much prayer and fasting.

Now as director of church school in Cedar Rapids Mission, I am trying to serve the Lord as a trusted servant. I ask the Saints to pray that I may be faithful to God our Father, to the Savior, and to his people.

Last year at a young people's convention in Rock Island, Illinois, I was privileged to meet Brother Frederick M. Smith. This was my first opportunity to mingle with many Saints. I believe in and trust with all my power the leaders of the church as the chosen servants of the Lord, and I will follow their leadership.

Fulfillment of a Prophetic Dream

Carthage, Missouri, is the nearest branch, and it is thirty-six miles from our home. We attend services there on sacrament Sunday when it is possible.

In looking over the Herald and reading the accounts of the local priesthood awakening to the call to lead the Saints to Zion, I am reminded of a dream given to me some time ago. I believe the awakening of the priesthood is the fulfillment of this dream.

I seemed to be lifted up high in the air so that I could see beautiful woodlands, green pasturelands, and fertile acres waiting for the plow. Entering this land from as far as eye could see was a great highway. It looked like a long ribbon as it topped the hills and swept the valleys. From the highway I could see roads that led to lands which were dark and wasted. I saw standing at each place where a road led off, a group of men. Pressing toward the beautiful land were caravans of cars of every description, and if any turned into the byways, a group of men would stop them and direct them back to the highway, that led to the beautiful land. As I looked on this picture, I could hear them singing:

"Lead, kindly Light, amid th' encircling gloom,
Lead thou me on.
The night is dark, and I am far from home—
Lead thou me on.
Keep thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene, one step enough for me.

"I was not ever thus, nor prayed that thou Shouldst lead me on;
I loved to choose and see my path; but now
Lead thou me on.

I loved the garish day, and, spite of fears,
Pride ruled my will; remember not past years.

"So long thy power hath blest me, sure it still Will lead me on;
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone;
And with the morn those angel faces smile
Which I have loved long since, and lost a-while."

The interpretation of the dream is very clear to me. The beautiful land is Zion. The highway is the straight and narrow way that leads to life eternal. The groups of men are the priesthood of the different branches leading the Saints to Zion.

Thankful for Life's Blessings

In today's daily paper I read that representatives of Christian churches throughout Great Britain yesterday (May 27) held a great mass meeting in Trafalgar Square and swore a solemn covenant against war and traffic in arms. "We covenant together to renounce war and all its ways and works now and always God being our helper." Doctor Albert Belden counseled the audience to think well before taking the oath. The voices of the crowd as they repeated the oath, drowned the roar of the traffic. People of all branches of the churches marched beneath banners of peace. With them marched blinded and crippled men, living testimonies to the horror of war. To the tune of "God Save the King," they sang:

"God grant us now thy peace;
Bid all dissensions cease,
God send us peace.
Peace in true liberty,
Peace in equality,
Peace in fraternity;
God send us peace."

Then they prayed that a more just distribution of the substance and wealth which He has provided in such abundance in our day, may swiftly come to pass, so that the impulse to violence born of economic desperation may die away.

In the same paper is the first of a series of articles, "Through the Land of the Bible," by H. V. Morton. His opening remarks say: "I address my articles to . . . those who have always longed to walk beside the Sea of Galilee and to know what Bethlehem and Nazareth are really like, and to those young people who influenced, although they do not realize it, by the scepticism of the nineteenth century belief that the Old Testament is a collection of ancient fables and that the New Testament is not as historical as it might be, I would tell these out-of-date young people that the Bible has emerged like a rock from the critical fogs of the last decades. . . ."

Christianity is going forward. Is it not inspiring and stimulating to every believing soul? There is great faith in the world in spite of all the opposing forces. Truth must triumph. The church of Jesus Christ is firm as a rock with the power of God behind it.

We claim that the divine plan of which we talk so much, will solve all the troubles of the world. Do we realize the weighty responsibility such a claim puts on every individual who makes it?

When Zion is established she shall be as an ensign. Then will the nations look to her and say, "Let us go up to Zion and learn of her ways." The Scriptures tell us that. She shall also be a city of refuge, and we can see quite easily and without any stretch of imagination that soon, very soon, there will be a great need of such a city.

Separated from Christ and those things which we have had revealed to us and without faith in God and his word, what kind of creatures would we become? "I am the Light of the World," Jesus says, and how true it is. As he goes quickly by, we realize indeed that "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Without his guidance, his utterances, how great would be that darkness. We who follow him need to testify by our daily lives to the truth and the power of God.

I feel when I look upon the beauty of nature at this time of year especially, a great response. What beauty the Creator has bestowed upon us! Look at the trees with their foliage. Just now so many are in bloom—chestnut and lilac and laburnum and hawthorn, all giving their wealth of beauty and perfume. I wish that I had the power to put into words the feelings of my heart as I look upon these great gifts to men. Truly our England is a garden and a very beautiful one with the song of birds to cheer and gladden and all the flowers radiant with color and design.

Life is altogether wonderful and amazing. There are so many startling discoveries for man. And when we think of man and his own capabilities, his achievements, the perfection of his works, and all that which his brain can conceive and execute, we should thank God. Then let us think of the arts, the perfect sculptures, the exquisite paintings, the music, and the song, and words become weak and puny as we try to express our appreciation.

But what of the mystery of life and death? the staggering blows that we receive and still carry on? At times we seem to be living in a dream. Life is not real. We see dimly and grope for light. Let us remember: "He that followeth after me shall not walk in darkness." No, for Jesus is beside us, bidding us have faith. Why do we doubt when he invites, "Come unto me."

Let us consider prayer. When I read the testimonies of the Saints I feel to say, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." We know that the windows of heaven are open to prayer. Through prayer we experience from time to time spiritual and physical blessings, healings of the mind as well as of the body; guidance in the affairs of life, and consolation. Some of my experiences in life have been sharp and bitter; my brain has reeled under the frightful strain. But my God has been able to save. He has carried me over the rough stones. He has been near at hand; so please God, I hope to be faithful to the end of my days and to testify of his power.

There are many things to be glad and happy about, the green grass at my feet, the sunshine and the rain.

"For the beauty of the earth,
For the beauty of the skies,
For the love which from our birth
Over and around us lies,
Christ our God, to Thee we raise,
This, our sacrifice of praise."

"Too Prone to Judge"

Last summer one of our older missionaries was here in our home, and early one morning we were talking about his former mission field in Ontario, where the church sent him to trail R. C. Evans. In the course of our conversation I told him of a question a young brother had written to me at one time: "Do you think R. C. Evans committed the unpardonable sin?" This was my answer: "When I think of the depth of sin from which the Master lifted me, I cannot add my condemnation to the one already given by a just God to one whom he loved."

In a tear-choked voice the missionary said: "Sister, you couldn't have written a better answer. We are all too prone to judge our brothers."

His words have made me reflect more deeply on our own standards of living. When we find that we have done something wrong we are apt to excuse ourselves: "The Devil tempted me." But is this always true? When God gave us his commandments, the Devil also set his nefarious ones. Then God whose children we are, gave us our free agency to choose which master we would serve. I think the Devil is often blamed for what is not really his fault.

In our class work the question came up, "What is sin, and how can we combat it?" There are some things at which some people hold up hands of holy horror; other people simply tolerate these same things, and still another class connect no sin with them at all. This is the way I like to think of sin: When we learn that deceit is sin and fight to overcome it, that we deceive no more, then God will show us another sin, perhaps drinking intoxicants, and to fight, and so on whatever our besetting weakness or sin may be. Life is like a great school—we graduate from one class to another and on unto perfection.

I live out on a ranch and am sometimes lonely for the fellowship of Saints. But my life is full of the marvelous love of God, and I wonder at his patience. I am intensely interested in how I may firmly establish my own family in the church, and in our soul-absorbing mission among the American Indians.

Alone—Asks for Letters

I have had many blessings for which to be thankful, and also many of my prayers have been answered. For these I truly thank my heavenly Father.

A few years ago I lost my husband and also my home. Since that time I have been wandering from place to place working. I am now past forty years of age, and do not know anyone near here.

I was unable to attend church services, but love the work of the Master. I hope I may hear from Saints who like to write.

The name, Patriarch W. A. McDowell, who passed away May 31, is honored as that of one who served faithfully and well in the Master's cause.

Sister McDowell has received letters from all over the United States and Canada, and deeply appreciates the loving remembrance of friends of the departed one.

A. B. PHILLIPS

Was Peter the first pope of the Catholic Church?

The word pope is from the Latin papa, meaning father. By later usage it was applied distinctively to the bishop of Rome, as the superior bishop of the Roman church, hence head of the church. In a secondary sense it was also used of priests of parishes, hence local priests are usually addressed as "Father" by their adherents. No such title was ever applied to Peter during his lifetime or to his associates. In fact, such a title applied to religious leaders was strictly forbidden by Christ himself, who in discussing the titles loved by the Jewish scribes and Pharisees, commanded his disciples:

"But be not ye called Rabbi (a term meaning master): for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven."—Matthew 23, 8, 9.

This command of Jesus applied specifically to the title when used of his ministers, and we have no official application of this forbidden title as such until the second century, when the bishop Hygenus dared to use it for himself. However, as late as the third century, says Mosheim:

"The bishops of Rome, Antioch, and Alexandria, as presiding over the primitive and apostolic churches in the greater divisions of the empire, had precedence of all others."—Book I, Century III, Part II, Chapter II.

After this there arose a terrific contention among the bishops of the chief cities as to who should be supreme, and the bishop of Rome finally became the victor. Siricius, bishop of Rome, appears to have been the first to obtain sole recognition of the title of pope for himself. (385-398 A. D.)

What is sinning against the Holy Ghost?

The Holy Ghost, or Holy Spirit, as used in later versions, is the divine enlightener and guide of the Christian, leading him in the ways of truth and righteousness. To sin against the Spirit is to refuse to give place to the divine light and influence thus imparted. It is a most dangerous sin, for God declares: "My Spirit shall not always strive with man." This means that one who persists in refusing place to the Holy Spirit will eventually be left desolate, and must expiate his sins in the punishment which is his due. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is promised the faithful, and it is a witness of the divine love and guidance, and should be most sacredly cherished and obeyed.

Is the Spirit to be received at any specified time?

This is beyond the power and even the knowledge of man. Paul says concerning the ways in which the Spirit manifests the divine power and will, such as faith, healing, prophecy, discerning of spirits, etc.:

"But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as He will."—1 Corinthians 12: 11.

The influences of the Spirit come in unnumbered ways and at unforeseen times to one who cherishes and follows the divine way of life. Jesus himself said:

"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit."—John 3: 8.

By confirmation through the laying on of hands the obedient believer is set apart to the service of God and becomes his adopted child, the Holy Spirit's confirming witness being promised to "testify" of Christ (John 15: 26.) It bears witness that we are the children of God (Romans 8: 16), but I do not know of any Scripture that informs us when these promises are to be realized. They are subject to the divine wisdom and love, as may be determined.

What are the religions having the most members?

They are Christianity, Buddhism, Mohammedism (Islam), and Brahminism. Some also include the Confusians, said to number eighty millions or more; but strictly it is more of a philosophy than a religion. Christianity is the greatest in number.

New Philadelphia, Ohio

Eight Are Baptized

Children's Day was appropriately carried out June 10, when eight young people were baptized at eight o'clock in the morning. Following the church school, the confirmation service was held and the candidates were confirmed by Elders John Carlisle, the pastor, Charles Cramer and William L. Goudy. Seven children were also blessed at this time by the same elders. Those baptized were Otis Briggs, Inez Briggs, Mildred Briggs, Helen Carlisle, James Carlisle, Faye Carlisle, Elva Hobart and Veneta Briggs. A generous portion of the Spirit was present to bless the occasion.

At the evening service a Children's Day program was enjoyed. Special music was furnished by the choir. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers for the day.

Jane Robson, Vida Angus, Pauline Goudy, Paul Carlisle and Wayne Thomas were among the graduates who participated in the annual commencement exercises of the New Philadelphia High School, May 22. This congregation extends to them their congratulations on their achievements.

Pastor John Carlisle has been called upon recently to conduct four funerals for nonmembers.

Brother Roscoe Bailey, of Chillicothe, Ohio, is a member of one of the C. C. C. camps, located at Dover, Ohio.

Friday, April 27, the women of the church were entertained by members of the Excelsior Club, of which Sister Charlene Hansel is advisor. The program was opened by singing "One Day When Fell the Spirit's Whisper." The invocation was by June Goudy. Two clever one-act plays were presented and the remainder of the evening was spent in a social manner. Refreshments were served by the girls, and the program concluded with the singing of "Consecration." A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the hostesses.

Mother's Day program was opened with a piano solo, "That Wonderful Mother of Mine," by Sister Veneta Warner, and Richard Watkins sang "Mother." The pastor delivered a brief message, and then presented each mother with a carnation.

Elder and Sister James E. Bishop, of Steubenville, Ohio, were guests May 6, and Brother Bishop assisted with the sacrament service. In the afternoon, Elder Bishop gave the Saints a descriptive account of the recent General Conference. He also occupied the pulpit in the evening.

Sunday, May 27, was again in charge of the young people. The theme of the morning service was "Baptism." This is a preparatory service for those intending to become members of the church.

All departments of the branch are working in splendid order, and the attendance is gratifying.

Indianapolis, Indiana

Corner of Chester and Ninth Streets

Under the leadership of Thomas Taylor, superintendent, the church school is progressing rapidly.

The young people have organized a meeting which they hold each Sunday evening, at seven o'clock. The adults conduct their Doctrine and Covenants Class in the basement of the church.

On the evening of March 17, Indianapolis members met at Anderson with the Saints to share a social evening in honor of Saint Patrick, also the birthday of Pastor A. W. Gage.

W. O. Robertson, of Louisville, Kentucky, finance solicitor for the district, gave an instructive talk, April 10.

The Re La Da Sa Association held regular business meeting at the beginning of the year. Bills for the year were all paid, and the new year was started with a clean slate.

The women's department, Sister Burch, president, report that during the year 1933 they paid into the church treasury $281 to help with church expense. They also held suppers in March and April, which netted a profitable sum.

A Mother's Day pageant was presented the second Sunday in May. Sister Rebecca Nolan was in charge.

Elder J. O. Dutton, district missionary, held a series of meetings in May. Good interest was manifested.

Apostle D. T. Williams passed through this city May 20, and preached an interesting sermon. A supper was held in the church basement to welcome his arrival.

Elder Glenn Tice, of Anderson, preached two sermons on "Zion." He and his family were permitted to attend the General Conference.

Elder A. H. Nieman, of Columbus, Ohio, preached a sermon February 11, also one in May. Brother Nieman is a welcome visitor in this branch.

Brother John Kinnear, who has been ill for several months, is improving in health.

Winnipeg, Manitoba

Priesthood Members Extend Their Missionary Efforts

Elder O. W. Okerlind stopped at Winnipeg on his way West from Independence, and preached some inspiring sermons to the Saints. He then continued his journey to Cypress River, where two families of Saints, the Angsts and Campbells, are holding a Sunday school and telling the gospel story.

Brother Nelson Henery was successful in organizing a Sunday school at Rosendale, and by cooperating with the branch in Winnipeg, Brother William Hadath, has been able to go out and preach to them every other Sunday; some are deeply interested in baptism. Brother Nelson Henery secured employment in Regina, and was forced to leave Rosendale, but his father will continue the Sunday school with Brother Hadath's assistance. Workers are happy about this arrangement as it leaves Brother Henery free to help in other fields.

Elder Alvin Fisher who has been laboring at Kenville, Manitoba, reports wonderful interest and more openings to preach than he can care for. Three have asked for baptism there and are waiting until the river slackens its speed.

William Hadath has been holding services at Spy Hill with good, steady crowds and deep interest. The hall was secured for a Sunday service and forty were out to hear Elder Hadath.

Elder W. J. Fisher and Priest W. A. Fisher have been laboring with success at Blackdale, Manitoba, and expect some baptisms there. They hold Sunday school and preaching every Sunday, good crowds attending.

Elder V. H. Fisher left Winnipeg June 14, for Scotch Bay, where Sister Mary Watson has arranged for a series of services. They hope to effect an opening there that will make converts.

With their hearts set on preparing themselves for Zion, Winnipeg Branch decided to secure an acre of ground and make a garden for the church. Even in such a small project as this there were many obstacles to overcome, but with faith they secured the lots, and planted seeds in the dry earth. No sooner were they finished than there came three days of rain. Now the garden stuff is up, and even though they do not succeed in getting a big price for the produce this fall, think how many needy people they can help next winter. Working on this project has taught many of them how much they have to overcome before they will be desirable builders in Zion.

A service was held June 6, in the Saints' church at Winnipeg for Mrs. Leonard Callow who died June 3. Mrs. Callow is not a member of the church, but her three brothers, Thomas, Cecil, and William are members and her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Panting, of Blackdale, have been friendly to the church and have assisted wonderfully in helping to hold Sunday school there. The deceased had many friends in Winnipeg, and the church was not large enough to seat any more than were present. Besides her friends she leaves to mourn, her husband, Leonard Callow; a son, Frank; a newborn infant; five brothers: Thomas, Cecil, Ernie, Frank, and William Panting; three sisters, Mrs. Nellie Patterson, Mrs. Alice Drew, and Mrs. G. McPhee, her parents and other relatives. She was born March 25, 1907, and was married in 1927. Funeral services were in charge of Elder V. H. Fisher and Elder W. J. Fisher. Interment was in Saint James Cemetery.

Race Track, Montana

Saints of Montana Branches Have Enjoyable Service

A most enjoyable meeting was held at Race Track pavilion with Saints from Great Falls, Polson, Anaconda, Deer Lodge, and Race Track in attendance. Church school convened at ten-thirty, and a most timely and instructive talk was delivered by Elder F. L. Casey, of Polson, at eleven-thirty. He pointed out the responsibility of the older members of the church in safe-guarding the youth. Just before his address, Brother Casey blessed the son of Elder and Sister Harley Lorange, assisted by Brother E. E. Eliason, of Great Falls.

At noon a basket lunch was enjoyed by all. At two-thirty, District President N. P. Coleman called the reunion committee to order, and ways and means were discussed to make the 1934 reunion a bigger success than ever before.

The Children's Day worship program was in charge of the children, and was greatly appreciated by the older members. After the church school a picnic dinner was served.

The Deer Lodge, Anaconda and Race Track women's group held their annual meeting at Anaconda, June 14. Each group contributed special numbers for the program which was held in the church. After the program, all were invited to the home of Sister Jessie Kendall, where refreshments were served.

Sylvia Larson, of Anaconda, and Kenneth Eliason, son of Brother and Sister Eliason, of Race Track, were united in marriage, June 6, at the bride's home at Anaconda. Elder G. W. Thorburn officiated. Saints of the two districts wish them much happiness.

Portland, Oregon

Saints Are Enthusiastic

Since General Conference, Portland has shown a great spiritual growth, due, to a large extent, to the enthusiasm of church officials who attended conference and returned to urge the membership to a more sincere consecration to service.

The new officers who were chosen by election and appointment at the regular annual election, Tuesday, June 5, also show a marked spirit of enthusiasm for their work. They are as follows: Elder J. L. Verhei, pastor; Elders W. H. Barker, A. Livingston, A. Nelson, and Mark Yeoman, associates; Paul Hardy, secretary; Verna Laird, director of religious education; Fay Buchanan, musical director; Ardene Byers, superintendent of junior church school; Harley Morris, pastor of the junior church school; Elmer Larson, young people's leader; Lila Livingston, dramatic leader; Effie Verhei, leaders of women's group; Fred Hawes, auditor; Mark Yeoman, business manager; Ardath Young, librarian; and Leslie Hunt, publicity agent.

Missionary work has continued steadily in Portland Branch and throughout the district, Elder Harold I. Velt being the missionary in charge and Elder Cook assisting by visiting in many places and even conducting series of meetings. Also the pastor and his associates make periodic visits throughout the district, encouraging the membership, meeting with nonmembers, organizing new missions and branches wherever advisable.

Elder Velt has just concluded a three weeks' mission at Silverton, Oregon, where he met with a great deal of favorable interest; Sister Fay Buchanan added much to these meetings by furnishing special choir music during the whole time.

Elder Cook has just set out on a trip through the eastern part of the district; he expects to be gone some weeks and hold services in Hood River, Bend, The Dalles, Condon, and Winlock.

Elder Clark Livingston and his wife continue to have charge of the Sherwood Mission, seventeen miles from Portland. They are making progress and directing a very active work.

Another couple who live in Portland but have church work which regularly takes them into the district are Elder and Sister Nelson who conduct services in Vancouver every Sunday; Elder Nelson also directs the work at Camas.

Elder Verhei, pastor and district president, has released the following men from local responsibilities so that they may be of greater help in the district, Elders Mark Yeoman, W. H. Barker, A. Livingston, and Albert Nelson. Also Sister Effie Verhei who formerly had charge of the children's department in the branch has been released to work up the women's department throughout the district and the district junior work.

Since Sister Lila Livingston has been made director of the new field of dramatics, many entertaining and educational programs have been given. Several plays depicting early church history were given last winter and were very effective in portraying the struggles of the first members of our church. Probably the most impressive program Mrs. Livingston has directed this year was given last Mother's Day. It was a very simple, short play, showing the two mothers at a well—the mother of Judas talking to the mother of Jesus. A hush settled over the congregation as the women, Sister Barker and Sister Hardy, told the old story of Judas' betrayal with a new understanding. One listened to the sermon by Elder Livingston afterward with a deeper feeling of reverence for mothers. The sermon, itself, was a plea to the mothers of Zion to stand forth and help to build Zion by building zion homes.

Another department that has contributed many beautiful programs in the past year is the music department, under the direction of Sister Fay Buchanan. Not only does the choir offer special numbers for church services, but during national music week, they provided an evening of song, and no entertainment would be complete without their music, either solo or ensemble.

Sister Frances L. Sheeder passed away on June 4, and was buried from the Miller and Tracy Funeral Parlors, Elder Verhei delivering the address.

Kalamazoo, Michigan

Maple Street at Westridge

Church work in Kalamazoo is going steadily forward. Since moving into their new location, these Saints are expecting to progress rapidly.

The pastor of this congregation has been kept away because of the illness of his aged mother, who passed away June 14, at the home of her son, George Goodenough.

Sister Goodenough was ninety-three years of age, and has been a member of the church for fifty-five years. Elder Pannes, of Battle Creek, preached the sermon, assisted by Elder David Young, also of that district.

Elder D. T. Williams was here April 25, and delivered a lecture to an appreciative audience. At that time the Christian Legion was organized with the following officers: Glenn Myers, company commander; Lucreta McCormick, director of solicitation; Rachel Dunn, social director; Elsie Robinson, secretary, and Kenneth Wilson, treasurer.

The young people, under the supervision of their leader, Sister Lucreta McCormick, are doing a commendable work. They meet each Thursday night for study and social work. Other evenings have been spent socially.

Many Saints of this congregation are planning to attend the district conference at Lansing, July 7 and 8.

Davidson, Oklahoma

Appreciate Visits and Counsel of Church Officials

It has been some time since Davidson has reported its activities. This has not been because there was little or nothing to report, but because the branch has been very busy in many ways.

Through the invitation of Pastor Z. Z. Renfroe, President F. M. Smith met with this group of Saints at their annual district conference, held in May, 1934. Saints here very much enjoyed meeting with President Smith, and it is their hope that he may be with them again soon. This congregation also has enjoyed the visits of the Father of the Church, Patriarch Frederick A. Smith, Bishop L. F. P. Curry, and Apostle Roy S. Budd. The branch, as a whole, appreciated having the counsel of these men of God.

Elder Z. Z. Renfroe was very busy just before the closing of the school year. The second Sunday in May he preached the Baccalaureate sermon, and the following Friday night, he gave the commencement address at the Consolidated School Number Two. The following week he gave the commencement address at the Consolidated Number Eleven, and was asked to preach the Baccalaureate sermon at another school.

Thursday, May 31, the different missionary societies met at the church. A program was enjoyed, followed by refreshments served by the women.

Phoenix, Arizona

Tenth Street and Moreland

An all-day assembly was held on Sunday, May 6. Services started at eight o'clock, with the baptism of six candidates, J. Samuel Cadman, Elva Winifred Barrington, and Mrs. Kious, of Phoenix, and Lillian, Donald and John Basil Higgenbotham, of Mesa, Arizona. A swimming pool was generously loaned for this occasion. Sunday school and sacrament services followed, many out-of-town guests being present.

Confirmation of the candidates was attended by an exceptional spirit. A fine message was given to eight-year-old Elva Winifred, namesake of the loyal church worker, Elva Sturges and granddaughter of F. C. Coberly. Baptisms and confirmations were administered by Elder H. F. Miller.

Dinner was served to fifty people in the church at noon. A lively business meeting in the afternoon was followed by a supper at the unique Desert Park, built by C. C. C. workers in the hills south of Phoenix. Evening services were conducted by Elder Miller at the church.

After a long, active day the members were reluctant to go home, so they continued after the meeting in an hour of song, directed by Fred Reynolds, of Independence. He is visiting Arizona because of his wife's health.

At the business meeting the Saints of this district voted to sustain the efforts of Phoenix Branch to hold the church buildings against indebtedness. With the aid of the out-of-town contributors, a sum of three hundred and twenty dollars has been raised to this end since January.

With the goal of a "mile of pennies," the Sunday school has raised $40.44 in feet of twelve cents each. A strawberry social netted $4.25; a five and ten cent bazaar, $7.45; and a box social, $1.50, toward this debt.

Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Mast have returned to Indianapolis after spending the winter in Phoenix.

Brother Foster, of Glendale, Arizona, passed away May 27, at the home of his daughter, Auntie, in Glendale. Members of his death. Brother Foster was a faithful member.

Growth in New York District

Recent Conference Inspires Workers

The June conference of New York District, held at Buffalo, was well attended and an inspiration to many. Starting with a priesthood meeting Saturday afternoon followed by a business meeting which included the reelection of all district officers and the transaction of other matters important to the district, the conference program was of interest to all.

The report of the bishop's agent did not roll up the figures of some other years, and workers hardly expected that it would, but it is safe to say that there were never so many tithe payers listed. By means of the card system the children are more and more establishing the fine habit of paying their tithing. The largest on the list is Buffalo Branch with ninety-four tithe payers.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson was there and was consulted on various matters. Everyone was glad to see him again, and wished that Sister Hanson might have been present also.

The Saturday evening session of debate on current questions was made more attractive by musical numbers. Among others the questions of larger attendance at midweek services and the pleasure problem were freely discussed. Some of the Graceland students present had rather settled ideas on one or more of the subjects, and Brother Burrell Landes expressed himself.

The Sunday morning sacrament service was well attended and a good meeting. The church school unified service was carried on upstairs and in the lower auditorium the children and youth met, as the upper room would not seat them all. The number present made it apparent that Buffalo must have an addition to their church. A movement in this direction has been started. The branch held a May festival in the Masonic Temple at Kensington, and combined music and dramatics. This was well supported.

In the upper room of the building the Saints listened to Brother Paul M. Hanson preach.

A second priesthood meeting was held after lunch, and followed by a three-act play written by Brother Walter Simpson, of Buffalo. This was presented by four of the Buffalo membership.

The closing session at four o'clock was one of music prepared by Sister Catharine Lambert, district chorister, and her assistants.

Previous to the conference there had been institutes or special sessions through the district the last two being held at Syracuse, May 26, and at Sherrill, May 27, Doctor Weegar, the untiring district president, being with them. Sister Weegar was with him and from Sherrill they went to Massena in the afternoon, where they expected to meet some church people.

On May 20, Brother George Landes, one of the doctor's counselors, visited Rochester. Brother Landes was also responsible for the institute April 28 and 29, in his own branch. Doctor Weegar visited the group at Greenwood May 5 and 6. Brother F. C. Mesle, the doctor's other helper, had charge of a special day at Fulton. On April 8, Buffalo, held a "birthday" program in charge of the eldership of the branch.

Johnson City now has a hall pleasantly located and fitted for their use, and they plan some sessions soon for more enthusiastic effort. Brother Floyd Rathbun and wife, formerly indentified with Sherrill Branch, are now located at Union, near Johnson City, and as usual stand ready to help all they can.

After a long-continued drouth in these parts, people are rejoicing because of occasional showers which are doing untold good to crops and gardens. Business is improving. Saints should be thankful for their blessings and stand in holy places.

Grand Island, Nebraska

Women's Program Is Full

For the past two months the women of this branch have successfully given a series of silver teas. The idea was instigated by Sister Mae Lindgren, and the purpose was to raise money for the Christmas Offering.

Over that period of time, the ladies entertained ninety-two guests, representing nearly all of the churches at Grand Island. The afternoons were spent socially, enjoying instrumental music, readings and vocal music from some of the best talent of the city. A dainty lunch finished each afternoon's entertainment. Such cooperation is commendable and the newly-made friendships are valuable to the group.

Each guest or member gave what silver offering she chose at the close of the afternoon. The offering has grown

Briefs

Eight Baptized at Wilber, Nebraska

Eight candidates, two adults and six young people, were baptized June 17. To them comes a heritage of staunch faith and good service, for the town of Wilber has seen church history in the making.

The church at Wilber was built forty-six years ago, and many old-time missionaries have stood behind its sacred pulpit. Here for many years Elder Samuel Broliar has been president of the branch. The restored gospel was first preached at Wilber by Elder R. J. Anthony. This was formerly the home of such stalwarts as Elder Charles H. Porter and Brother and Sister Christy. The first public discussion between E. L. Kelley and Clark Braden was held in the courthouse many years ago.

Climbing the Ladder of the Known

The higher you climb the ladder of the Known the wider becomes the horizon of the Unknown.—Doctor Harry Ice.

Los Angeles Choir Gives Concert in Costume

Central Choir presented a Sunday evening concert not long ago, patterned after an old-fashioned song fest. The singers were in costume, and they sang many old-time favorites that appealed to the congregation.

William Mannering Combines Missionary and Pastoral Work

For a year Elder William Mannering has been a member of the group at Breckenridge, Texas. He formerly lived in San Antonio. Faithfully each week he manages to combine the work of local pastor and of missionary in the community. Always he is eager to serve the church and to tell the gospel story.

Brother Mannering has been holding meetings at New Castle, fifty miles from Breckenridge, making the trip each way on the bus. He returns home to preside at regular Sunday meetings and to conduct the thirty-minute radio sermonet and program each Tuesday at noon from Station BENX in which he is assisted by members of the mission choir. He also conducts cottage meetings each week in the local vicinity.

until the ladies are happy to send $20.61 as their contribution.

Each woman in the group has contributed to the success of the project. Under the able chairmanship of Sister Lingren, a number of other projects have been planned for the fall and winter months.

During the month of May a successful mothers' and daughters' banquet was sponsored by the women's organization, under the leadership of Sister Mayme Black. Covers were laid for thirty-two guests. Bowls of pink roses graced the table. The place-cards in the form of gilt-framed pictures of a mother and a daughter added to the attractiveness of the long table. The program, in charge of Sister Wona Black, included group singing of familiar mother songs, instrumental music, vocal duets, readings, and pledges from the daughters with responses from the mothers. One of the interesting features of the evening was the recognition of the various groups, grandmothers, mothers, and daughters. Three generations were represented in the family of Sister Cora Corgrove.

The boys of the branch, with the enlisted aid of some of their friends enjoyed serving the banquet. After the formal dismissal, the group was again called together by Sister Corgrove, and Sister Lindgren gave the beautiful musical reading "Wedding Bells." At this time a lovely party-size Irish linen tablecloth was presented to Sister Wona Black as a token of the group's friendship and best wishes. Her marriage to Loren L. McDole will take place soon.

The women's organization plans to make the mothers' and daughters' banquet an annual feature of their activities.

Preparing for Reunion in North Dakota

The rains have come and vegetation is trying to spring up. The drouth of a year or more has been broken, perhaps the worst drouth in the history of the State. It is not too late for forage crops to save some of the live stock.

The Saints are making preparations for their annual reunion to be held between Minot and Logan on the old reunion grounds, June 23 to July 1. We expect Apostle J. Frank Curtis and Missionary P. T. Andersen to be present during these services.

You who doubt your ability to attend, should make up your minds to come for you will be richer in every way if you do. These are uncertain times, and we hold to a very definite theology. Will you keep on holding it? Or will you let go and drift with the tide of uncertain things? Come prepared to camp the entire time.

WARREN MCELWAIN
LANSFORD, NORTH DAKOTA.

Chatham District Conference

D. J. Williams Resigns Office of District President Before Going to New Field of Labor

Chatham District met in conference at Chatham May 26 and 27, under the leadership of the district presidency, Elders D. J. Williams, R. T. Brown, and S. E. Mifflin.

At the Saturday afternoon session, business moved along rapidly. Among items of interest were the recommendations from different branches of names of men to occupy in various offices of the priesthood.

The Saints regretted to accept the resignation of District President D. J. Williams who has been transferred to another district of labor. The work of Brother and Sister Williams has been greatly appreciated by Chatham Saints. District work has been left in the hands of Elders R. T. Brown and S. E. Mifflin until the fall conference. These men have had years of experience in church work, and under their leadership, all are assured that the gospel will continue to move forward in this district.

The evening service was in the form of a program under the direction of Sister Edith Moore, of Windsor, the music department leader, and the various artists are to be congratulated for their part in the brilliant and entertaining program.

Sunday morning found the church almost filled with Saints waiting to take part in the devotional service, and as hymns, prayers, and testimonies ascended on high a sweet Spirit filled each heart.

The eleven o'clock hour was taken up with church school work. Elder S. E. Mifflin, the supervisor addressed the adult department, while the other departments retired to their various class rooms.

In the afternoon there was an ordination service in which the following men were ordained: William O. Garnier, elder; Warner J. Taylor, priest; Irving Jones, priest; James C. Phillips, priest; Basil Freer, teacher, and Percy Miller, deacon. The charge was given the candidates by Bishop Dent, and the pledge was read to each one by Elder D. J. Williams, each in turn answering. Officiating in the ordinance were Elders W. R. Leverton, L. D. Campbell, J. C. Dent, S. E. Mifflin, R. T. Brown, and John Shields. Then Elder L. D. Campbell addressed the Saints, impressing them with the thought that they have an obligation to the men selected of God, and if this obligation is not observed God cannot recognize them, as he works through his ordained priesthood.

Bishop Dent addressed the conference in the evening.

Meals were served in the church basement by members of the group of women, and thanks are due to these workers for their excellent help in many lines.

Nauvoo, Illinois

Historic City Proves to Be Travelers' Crossroads

The Nauvoo district conference, which was held at Fort Madison June 16 and 17, was a time of spiritual uplift. Bishop J. F. Wildermuth, of Lamoni, was the principal speaker and he brought a message of cheer to the Saints concerning the definite steps that are being taken in the establishment of Zion. On Sunday afternoon, District President F. T. Mussell at the close of an inspiring sermon, delivered a message to the people warning them of the necessity of living up to their opportunities and promising a greater endowment of the Spirit to the membership if they continued faithful.

The District Sunday School Convention of the Latter Day Saint, Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday Schools was held at the Methodist Church Sunday afternoon and evening, June 24. Several good speakers were present and an interesting round-table discussion was enjoyed. Florence Sanford Ourth was in charge of the children's division, and her mother gave a sandtable demonstration. A vocal trio was also given by the Sanfords and prayer was offered by J. C. Page. Jack Sanford was elected president of the association for the coming year and Florence Ourth was reelected superintendent of the children's division.

On Children's Day the service in the morning centered about the blessing of three babies, the twin sons, Lyonal Lee and Lester Lynn, of Brother and Sister Arnold Ourth and Pearl Irene, daughter of Brother and Sister Albert Nehring, whose wedding was attended by the Nauvoo Camp a year ago. Elder F. T. Mussell was in charge of the service. In the afternoon a baptismal service was held at the river and the three sons of Brother and Sister Hubert Thomas, of Rock Creek, Lloyd, Vernon and Wayne, were baptized by Brother Mussell. A splendid confirmation service was held at the church following the baptism, Elders F. T. Mussell, A. L. Sanford, Elmer Sherman and Elbert Lambert officiating. Brother Mussell was the speaker again in the evening, the Rock Creek Branch uniting its service with Nauvoo throughout the day.

On June 14, the first excursion of tourists from Utah and Idaho sponsored by Mrs. Vida Clawson, of Salt Lake City, arrived at Nauvoo and were served dinner and supper in the Nauvoo House by the women's department under the direction of Sister Sophie Lee. The visitors spent the morning sightseeing and in the afternoon were taken in cars to Carthage. They expressed themselves as well pleased with their visit and the consideration shown them. Mrs. Clawson plans to conduct four or five excursions during the summer.

A party of thirty-one professors and students from the Brigham Young University, Salt Lake City, spent Saturday and Sunday at the Nauvoo House on their return from a visit to the Century of Progress in Chicago.

Many visitors pass through Nauvoo on their way to and from the Fair and Brother and Sister Page are kept very busy showing them through the historic buildings and telling them the gospel story. They report five hundred visitors the past week, a record number.

Nauvoo Branch is fortunately situated in that it benefits by the visits of Saints going to and from conference. Brother and Sister E. F. Robertson, of Maine, are always welcomed, and Brother and Sister Amos Berve, who were in charge of the historic buildings several years ago, spent several days renewing old acquaintances, and preaching here. Elder and Sister Arthur W. Ferrett, of Australia, were also here for a week-end with their son, Colin. Brother Ferrett taught the senior class on Sunday morning and preached in the evening. Colin gave the talk at the worship service and sang. Their visit was much enjoyed. Brother and Sister Dave Williams arrived the same day and Brother Williams preached in the morning. Brother Williams was formerly district president, so has many friends throughout the district and is warmly welcomed.

Sister Dorothy Fusselman was among the high school graduates, winning second honors in scholarship. Her sister, Mildred, graduated from grade school.

Brother L. H. Lewis is missed from among the Saints, having accepted a position with E. L. Traver, of Boston, for the summer. Sister Lewis is very faithful in keeping the church supplied with baskets of beautiful flowers.

The young people of the branch have organized under the direction of Sister Irene Layton, and meet by the river every other week for an evening of recreation. Mildred Sanford was elected president, Nettie Mae Pifer secretary and treasurer, and Jack Sanford recreational leader. Baseball, volley ball and swimming have been the principal activities thus far. Sister Irene Layton is teacher of the young people's Book of Mormon Class on Sunday evenings.

Nettie Mae Pifer, a Graceland student, is spending the summer with Brother and Sister Page, and is proving a valuable assistant not only to them but to the branch.

Atherton

Miss Gladys Beebe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Beebe, was married to Ammon Andes, of Warrensburg, at the Atherton church Saturday night, June 30. Amos E. Allen, acting president of Holden Stake, performed the ceremony. About three hundred friends and relatives from Atherton and Warrensburg, attended the ceremony and the reception held afterward. President Floyd M. Mc-

Briefs

Nauvoo Has Record Number of Visitors

Five hundred visitors in a recent week were shown Nauvoo's historic buildings and told the gospel story by Brother and Sister James C. Page. Many visitors pass through Nauvoo on their way to and from the Century of Progress at Chicago. Also, on June 14, the first excursion of tourists from Utah and Idaho arrived to visit Nauvoo and Carthage. Three or four more of these excursions are expected during the summer season.

Making Friends

Wise old Sam Johnson was never wiser than when he told Boswell: "If a man does not make new acquaintances as he passes through life, he will soon find himself alone. A man should keep his friendships in constant repair.—"Rotarian"

Winnipeg, Manitoba

A Strong Missionary Center

Winnipeg, Manitoba, ranks high as a missionary center among the branches of the church. Its ministry are alert to the missionary needs of that region. Here are a few of the things they are doing:

Elder W. J. Fisher and Priest W. A. Fisher have been laboring at Blackdale, Manitoba, where they expect some baptisms soon.

Elder Alvin Fisher who has been laboring at Kenville, reports good interest and more openings to preach than he can care for. Three have asked for baptism.

Elder William Hadath has been holding services at Spy Hill.

Nelson Henery organized a Sunday school at Rosendale, and by cooperating with Winnipeg Branch, William Hadath has been able to preach to this group every other Sunday.

Elder V. H. Fisher left for Scotch Bay June 14, to hold a series of services.

Ten Baptized at Onaway, Michigan

Ten were baptized into Onaway Branch by Missionary J. J. Ledsworth during a series of meetings there. Members and nonmembers were happy to see Brother and Sister Ledsworth return to Northern Michigan District, where they are greatly loved and respected.

Banish Misfortune

"To reflect deliberately on present blessings puts to rout thoughts of past misfortunes."

Dowell offered prayer at the ceremony. Elsie Andes played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" as the couple entered, and played the Mendelssohn Wedding March at the close of the service. Gomer Cool played a violin solo. Nina Amundsen sang "I Love You Truly," and "Oh, Perfect Love." Mary Beebe was maid of honor at the wedding, and Ralph Andes was the best man. Miss Ruth Alice Staley was flower girl. Ushers were Joseph Beebe, John Beebe, Ammon Beebe, Lloyd Kaufman, and Sammy Andes. The bridal couple will spend a week or more at New Orleans, Louisiana, and other places, and will then return to make their home at Warrensburg.

"This is the last night of my old life. Tomorrow I start a new life, don't I?" This was the comment of one girl the night before she and five other girls were baptized at Atherton in the Children's Day exercises. The six new members of the church are Marjorie Brush, June Long, Alberta King, Betty Clark, June Ferkin, and Lovel Ferkin.

The girls were baptized in the Little Blue River, near Atherton, in the afternoon by Elders G. W. Beebe and Otho Clark. At the eight o'clock service that night the new members received the laying on of hands from Elders D. R. Hughes, Otho Clark, G. W. Beebe, and Myron Holman. Pastor James A. Thomas, was in charge of both services.

Dwight Davis, of Seattle, Washington, is visiting in Atherton this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Beebe.

Knobnoster, Missouri

A number of Knobnoster Saints attended the Holden stake conference, June 10, going in a truck which was hired and driven by Brother C. A. Kramer.

The spiritual advice given by President F. M. McDowell and Elder C. B. Woodstock proved to be helpful and encouraging. Immediately following the church school session June 17, cars were provided and the Saints were taken to Clear Fork, where Pastor J. T. Nutt baptized eight into the church. The candidates are Mrs. Zella Brendell, Clara Odle, Dorothy Odle, Mary Alice Ray, Gloyd Kramer, Sidney Nutt, Paul Hansen and Lotus Bugbee. Following this service a basket dinner was enjoyed.

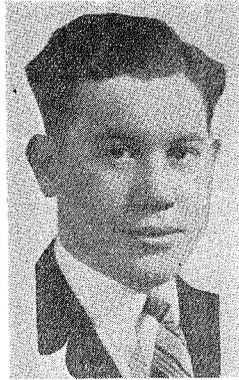

An appropriate Children's Day program and the confirmation service were held in the evening.

Recent visitors to this congregation have been Brother and Sister James McHarness and Sister Tressa Weeks, of Chelsea Park, and Brother Clarence Martin and family, of Independence. Brother Martin preached an encouraging sermon at the eleven o'clock hour.

Other recent speakers have been J. T. Nutt, E. E. Petre, E. L. Moorman, and R. E. Burgess.

Experience is the long name we all give to our own mistakes.—Oscar Wilde.

Far West Stake

H. L. Livingston Installed Stake Bishop

A special stake conference was called for Sunday, June 24, for the purpose of installing a new bishop. Apostle F. Henry Edwards represented the First Presidency and Apostle J. F. Garver was also present as minister in charge of the mission. Apostle Garver lectured at the church school hour using the "check-up" period as the basis of his talk. At the 10.45 hour Apostle Edwards was the speaker. First Church choir sang "Fear Not, O Israel," Spicker, and Leonard G. Ehlers, of Stewartsville, sang a solo.

The women of First Church served a lunch at noon. The high council held an important session at one o'clock and the business and ordination meeting was held at two-thirty. Apostle Garver presented the recommendation that Bishop H. L. Livingston, formerly of Philadelphia, be set apart as bishop of Far West Stake. Brother Garver expressed for the general church the appreciation of the splendid work of Brother Milo Burnett who was bishop of the stake for a number of years and the conference extended him a vote of appreciation. The conference approved Brother Livingston's appointment as bishop and also approved the recommendation of the stake president that Elders J. E. Hovenga and Mose Hinderks, both of Stewartsville, be set apart to membership in the stake high council. The selection of Sister Eunice Livingston as stake director of religious education was approved. The service continued in the form of an ordination meeting with a vocal duet, "Comfort Ye My People" by Mrs. C. E. Haden and Miss Pearl Kinnaman. Apostle Edwards delivered a charge to the men and to the membership. Bishop Livingston was set apart by Apostle F. H. Edwards and J. F. Garver. Elder Hovenga was set apart by Apostle J. F. Garver and Elder Ward A. Hougas and Elder Hinderks was set apart by Apostle J. F. Edwards and Elder F. L. Hinderks. All joined in singing "Consecration," and the conference was officially closed.

Although the weather was extremely hot, a fine representation from all branches was present and an excellent spirit prevailed throughout the day.

Baltimore, Maryland

Observe Special Days

A special Children's Day program was enjoyed by the Baltimore branch, Sunday, June 10. The children took active part in the exercises, and the young people were in charge of the meetings. The program was sponsored by Brother James Edwards. An interesting talk was given by the pastor, Elder Adolphus Edwards. Brother Ralph Hardy, of Washington, District of Columbia, was the speaker at the morning service. Elder Clarence W. Germon gave an interesting talk during the evening.

June 17, this congregation enjoyed a special Father's and Son's Day program, sponsored by Elder Clarence W. Germon. Both the young people and the adults took active part. Several interesting talks were given. Edward Goetz gave a short talk on "A Son's Duty to Parents," and Elder Adolphus Edwards responded with "A Parent's Duty to His Child." The young people's organization, in which are several talented singers, sang two beautiful selections, "Onward to Zion," and "Zion," a song written by Elder Clarence W. Germon.

The women's department gave a luncheon, June 30. The proceeds went to the building fund.

Columbus, Ohio

Third Church, South Wheatland Tabernacle

The sacrament service, June 3, was a source of joy to the minds of those present. There were many new faces in the congregation. Sister Chesser, of First Church, who some few years ago was a regular worker with Saints of this congregation, was present. A good spirit was felt in this service.

Elder J. E. Mathews, of Second Church, was the speaker at the evening service.

June 10, Elder Welsh and his wife and daughter, Edna, accompanied by Robert Albright, made a visit to Jackson, Ohio, where Elder Welsh was the speaker. During Brother Welsh's absence, Elder Vickroy was in charge of the congregation. Priest Robert Bohley talked in the morning, and Elder Vickroy occupied in the evening.

The Zion's Service Club, the women's organization, held a lawn fete, June 15. An entertainment was given, and a good time was enjoyed.

Elder Scharfenberg spoke on the morning of June 17, and Elder Welsh, in the evening. The following Sunday, Elders Vickroy and L. C. Lewis, of the First Columbus Church occupied the pulpit.

Elder Welsh has secured the Township Hall, at Galloway, Ohio, for meetings each Sunday afternoon. The first service was held June 24, with quite a few strangers present. Priests T. B. Dougherty and Lewis Walters are assisting him. This is the first time the gospel has been preached in this village and Elder Welsh has expressed the thought that there is a great work to be accomplished in this part of the vineyard.

A number of baptisms will be cared for soon, and it is hoped that others will answer the call of Christ.

Independence

President Elbert A. Smith presented a splendid sermon on "The Restoration," Sunday night to a large congregation gathered at the Campus. Accompanied by several instrumentalists on the platform, the congregation, led by Elder J. F. Sheehy, sang such old hymn favorites as "There's an Old, Old Path," "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet," "The Morning Breaks, the Shadows Flee," "When Earth in Bondage Long Had Lain," and "'Tis a Glorious Thing to Be." Mrs. Alice M. Burgess, contralto, sang as a solo, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain Are the Feet." Englewood congregation were guests of this service, and their pastor, Elder Roy Howery, was in charge of the hour.

Walnut Park Church

The first Sunday and the first day of July saw the attendance at the church school pass the five hundred mark for the second time this year. Five hundred and six were present.

The large church school attendance was reflected in the communion service which followed, the emblems being served to a near capacity audience. Pastor Frank McDonald was in charge, assisted by Elders George Bullard and John Taylor. Brother Taylor spoke prior to the taking of the oblation and read instructions from the Doctrine and Covenants in regard to the care of the poor of the church. In view of the protracted drought in this section of the country, Elder Benjamin Bean was called upon following the serving of the emblems to offer a special prayer in behalf of those who are suffering for lack of rain. A few remarks by the pastor brought to a close a splendid and inspiring service.

At a short priesthood meeting immediately following the communion service, the names of three men of the Walnut Park congregation were presented by the pastor for ordination to be submitted to the conference in Zion. In each case the priesthood unanimously approved the recommendation of the pastor.

The Walnut Park Young People's Council met at two-thirty Sunday afternoon and reviewed the summer activity work being carried out under its sponsorship. Reports of the progress of the playground ball leagues were received, together with a financial report of the receipts from the sale of soda pop at these games. More than seventy young people of the congregation are engaged in this recreation project. Competition is keen and both spectators and participants enjoy the games.

At the religio session Sunday evening the regular quarterly election of officers was held, the following being chosen for the next three months. President, Duane Fish; vice president, Vernon Sackman; secretary-treasurer, Fern Price; pianist, Margaret Chapman; chorister, Melba Moorman. The program consisted of a cornet solo by Joe Countryman and a piano solo by Margaret Chapman.

A council composed of representatives of the intermediate classes of the church school met at the home of Violet Chase Thursday evening, and plans were made for the coming quarter. A social was decided upon, and plans for a contest among the classes for the quarter were discussed. Jack Green is president of this council.

Liberty Street Church

The Doctrine and Covenants Class which has been meeting at the religio hour, on Sunday evening, now meets on Tuesday night at eight o'clock. Besides the regular class work conducted by Pastor John R. Lentell, debates are being held. The next class night will be July 10, at which time James Nunnamaker and Lucien Amos will debate Miss Mayble Tignor and Mrs. Gertrude Davis on the question, "Resolved, That the Gospel of Christ Today Is Free."

Liberty Street's choir, accompanied by a number of other Saints, went on a missionary trip Sunday to the Milton Thompson Goodwill Industries Camp, located on Lake Lotawana. About eighty girls were in this camp and their ages ranged from six to sixteen. These girls were chosen from destitute families in Kansas City and Independence, given a new outfit of clothing, and taken to camp for a week where they may enjoy out-of-door life. The children sang several songs for the visitors and then listened attentively while the choir sang three anthems. Arlie Zion played a trombone solo, and Miss Mary Arterburn told a Bible story. Then Cecil Walker gave a talk. A color ceremony by the youthful campers followed this program, and the day's services were closed with prayer by Doctor Lewis who with his wife directs the activities of the camp.

This was the first session of the camp this summer and Liberty Street Church feels much honored at being the first chosen to represent Christ there. This choice was largely the result of efforts made by Brother E. D. Briggs who lives at the lake and Hubert Mills.

East Independence Church

The Sunday morning worship service was in charge of Elder Clare Austin. The choir sang preceding the worship service, "I Saw a Mighty Angel Fly."

The sacrament service was well attended. Elder Harry Friend was assisted in the stand by Pastor Frank Minton and Clare Austin.

Last Thursday night the branch held a shower on Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stowell, who were recently married. Mrs. Stowell was formerly Miss Gertrude Dutton.

The women of this congregation held a surprise party on Sister Michael Friend last Monday night. The women plan to study the Doctrine and Covenants beginning this Thursday, Elder Robert Fish, of Spring Branch Church, teacher.

Last Friday evening an ice cream social was held on the church lawn.

Spring Branch Church

A short selection of piano music played by Winnogene Boise opened the sacrament service Sunday morning.

The following were in charge of the service: Pastor M. C. Jacobsen, Leonard White, F. A. Cool, and J. C. Andes.

The Scripture reading was by F. A. Cool followed by a talk on the oblation by Leonard White, after which Winnogene Boise sang a solo. The sacrament talk was by the pastor, M. C. Jacobsen. This talk was followed by a season of silent meditation and a spoken prayer by Brother Jacobsen.

June 24, the young people's department sponsored a historical trip to Far West. About forty went on this trip which was greatly enjoyed by all. They visited Far West Branch for the eleven o'clock service furnishing the speaker and the program. At three-thirty they met with Cameron Saints and there also furnished the speaker and program. Spring Branch is proud of their young people and their willingness to help whenever called upon. They are preparing themselves for the task that they will have to carry on in the near future.

Sister Alma Dixon gave a short talk about this trip at the church school hour.

Spring Branch has an Oriole circle of twenty-four members. They have two monitors, Laurel Goid and Velma Jones. They had a supper for their mothers, each girl preparing her favorite vegetable. Three judges were selected from the mothers present to decide on the best prepared dish. The mothers are hoping they can enjoy another such meal soon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ross left Thursday for Saint Louis to attend the wedding of their youngest son, John Ross, an attorney of Saint Louis.

The choir is working hard on the harvest festival music under the direction of the chorister, Sister Nelson. Quite a number have signed up for this work.

This congregation has grown rapidly in the past year. The prayer meetings are well attended both on Sunday morning and Wednesday evening. There is a good fellowship and cooperation in all departments. All seem to have a great desire to move forward and help all they can.

The men have been busy the past week cleaning and decorating the church on the inside.

Enoch Hill Church

Before the communion service Sister Hubert Kendall played hymns and the young women's quartet sang a selection. Pastor E. A. Thomas was in charge of the communion service, Elders H. L. Barto, Joseph Martin and C. E. Beal assisting. Brother Martin in his talk warned the Saints to see that they held nothing against anyone before partaking of the sacrament lest they drink to their own condemnation.

Jerry Joe Cadwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merton Cadwell, was blessed by Elder H. L. Barto and E. A. Thomas. Gerald Lee Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas, was blessed by Elders C. S. Warren and Robert Whitsitt.

Kenneth Ballinger, son of Brother and Sister Sam Ballinger, who was baptized at Walnut Park Church Sunday, June 24, instead of Mount Washington as erroneously reported, was confirmed by Pastor E. A. Thomas and E. E. Thomas.

Monday night, June 25, the Saints met on the church lawn for an evening of recreation. Games were played by different age groups. Lemonade and orangeade were served. On this evening, too, the women's department presented Sister Chaney a card and handkerchief shower.

A spiritual prayer meeting was enjoyed Wednesday evening. Elder H. E. Winegar, supervisor of the young people, was assisted in charge by Elders Robert Whitsitt and C. S. Warren.

A pretty lawn wedding was solemnized Saturday night, June 30, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hartman when their daughter, Ruth, was married to Mr. David Shirk. In the presence of the families and close friends Elder Harold W. Hattey read the ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Esther Shirk, sister of the groom, and Miss Naomi Chrestensen. Mr. Shirk was attended by Harry Hartman and Russel Hardy. The bride's two little sisters were in the bridal company, too, Elsie Lee carrying the ring, and Bernice Hartman and Dannie Shirk carrying the bride's train. Richard Maloney played the wedding march.

Owendale Branch

Five Miles South of Elkton, Michigan

Through the cooperation of Saints and friends, together with the Spirit of the Master, this small group is carrying on as best it can.

An all-day meeting was held November 5, 1933, the building being filled to capacity. Those attending from other districts were Elder Kenneth Green, president of Detroit District; Elders B. Smith, Louis Richards, and Ben McGeachy, all of Detroit; Elder Otto Summerville and family, of Prescott, Central Michigan District; Elder William Grice, president of Eastern Michigan District; Elders Myron Carr and Henry Scheffer, besides a number of the priesthood and members from nearby branches. The prayer service at nine o'clock in the morning was followed by the sacrament hour.

Following dinner, Elders Blakesly Smith and Kenneth Green each gave a wonderful sermon.

June 17, after Sunday school, ninety-one members and friends gathered at the river where Elder Abby led three candidates into the waters of baptism. Confirmation service followed at the church. The church was again filled for the evening service.

One of the opening features of the Children's Day program was the ordinance of blessing little children.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Betty Jane Biechele and Juold F. Hitchcock were united in marriage Saturday evening, June 16, at the Southeast Presbyterian Church. The service was read by the Reverend Doctor Frank May. Mrs. Elizabeth Hitchcock sang, "All for You," and "Joy." The couple will make their home in Ohio.

At the eleven o'clock hour, June 17, Elder George Mesley, stake counselor, gave a very interesting travelogue of his recent trip to California. In the evening the young people were in charge, this being their monthly program.

Mount Washington Church

Services during the month of June were quite well attended, the attendance of June 24 almost equalling that of Easter Sunday. The theme for the church school during the month was "Revelation." Brother Earl Ross was in charge of the worship service at the church school hour, with Pastor W. F. Bolinger and Elder R. L. Bishop occupying, alternately at the morning service.

Elder George Winegar gave some fine talks in the evenings, using as his subjects, "Faith," "Repentance," and "Baptism."

The O. B. K.'s were in charge both morning and evening June 24. In the morning Elder R. L. Bishop reviewed many early historical events in Missouri. In the evening, a play, "Millport," written by Roy A. Cheville, of the Graceland College faculty, was presented under the direction of William Gould.

The women's department sponsored a picnic at Douth's Lake, Thursday, June 28, which was followed by games and swimming.

Pastor W. F. Bolinger and his family attended the annual home-coming of the Atchison, Kansas Saints, June 17.

Apostle J. F. Curtis was the speaker at Mount Washington at the morning service, June 17.

An appropriate Children's Day program was given at the church.

Wheeling, West Virginia

Actively at Work in Ministering to Their Friends

A Children's Day program was given by the Sunday school June 10, and it was gratifying to see the children take so active an interest in displaying their talents.

Brothers C. W. Clark and William Welsh, of Columbus, Ohio, stopped recently while passing through Wheeling.

District President O. J. Tary is conducting a summer Bible school at Moundsville which will continue for a period of two weeks.

Several have been baptized here by L. A. Serig. Previous to General Conference Horace Blaksley, a young man, was baptized. Since then Forest Ross and wife, formerly of Goose Creek, West Virginia, and on Children's Day the daughter of Sister Mary Barcalow were baptized, making a total of four in the last few months.

The Sunday School Soft Ball League of this city and vicinity is being led by the Latter Day Saint team. The boys have not yet lost a game. George Criswell is manager and Walter Freeze, captain.

A little daughter came to gladden the home of George and Sister Leah Ries June 1, and has been named Katheryn June.

Sunday, June 17, Sister Haydee Bumgardner and Brother John Wolf, of Washburn, West Virginia, motored to Wheeling, accompanied by Sister Haydee's mother and father, and were quietly married at the home of Elder L. A. Serig.

Sperry, Oklahoma

Young People Prominent in Activities

The young people figure largely in news of branch activities at Sperry. Children's Day was observed June 10, with a program given by the young folks, after baptism and confirmation services. Six children were baptized into the church.

A group of twenty girls, led by Miss Sadie Inman, are preparing to organize an Oriole Club. They expect to hold a candle-lighting service soon.

Several of the young adults are busy rehearsing a play for presentation in the next few weeks.

Two young members of this congregation won special honors in school, which recently closed, Dwight Rumsey, son of Elder and Sister Ward Rumsey, was awarded the all-around medal at high school, a trophy given each year to the outstanding pupil of the graduating class. This is presented by the Women's Federated Club, of Sperry, in recognition of high rank in citizenship, leadership, scholarship, and church work. Dwight was president of the senior class and rated second in the congressional district debating tournament, at Claremore, Oklahoma, last winter. He also won honors in football, being one of the outstanding players on an undefeated eleven last year.

Miss Helen Harper was also presented a beautiful medal, honoring her for outstanding work in the sophomore year. She is the eldest daughter of Brother and Sister Alonzo Harper. These Saints are proud of the two young people, and wish for them many more honors and achievements in the future.

A group of Sperry women attended a picnic at a Tulsa park, given by the women's department of Tulsa Branch. They reported an enjoyable time. An inspiring talk was given by Elder Emmett Lancaster.

Members of this congregation were saddened by the death of Ishmael Cryder, nineteen-year-old son of Brother and Sister Lewis Cryder, May 20. He was stricken with appendicitis, and submitted to an operation. He was recovering from the operation and doing fine, when complications set in, from which he did not recover. Ishmael was well known here and loved by all.

Elder A. E. Stoft, missionary under appointment to this district, visited this branch early in May. Most of the Saints had not had the privilege of meeting Elder Stoft before, and were glad to make his acquaintance. He preached one sermon, and all were impressed by his cheerful manner and zeal for the church.

Oshoto, Wyoming

Appreciate Visit of Elder L. O. Wildermuth

Elder L. O. Wildermuth has been with this branch for the past two weeks, holding services and visiting with the Saints of this community. Arriving June 2, Elders Wildermuth and H. S. Hartshorn took charge of the Sunday morning prayer services. The rest of the week was spent visiting and holding evening services at Oshoto and Stroner.

An all-day meeting was held June 10, beginning with Sunday school and a short Children's Day program in the forenoon. Immediately following the basket dinner, Brother Wildermuth preached a wonderful sermon, after which H. L. Hartshorn was ordained to the office of elder. Several children were also blessed by Elder Wildermuth, Elders Cousins and Hartshorn assisting.

Visitors for the all-day meeting included the DeBarthe family, of Arvada, the W. R. Beck family, of Sheridan, and Sister Newcomer, of Lamoni, Iowa. This congregation appreciates the efforts of Elder L. O. Wildermuth, and looks forward to the time when he will be here again.

Oshoto Saints will meet with the Alva and Spearfish Saints, July 14 and 15, at a two-day meeting at the Devil's Lowe, Wyoming.

Reunion Notices

Kirtland reunion, at Kirtland, Ohio, August 9 to 19. Those who have once availed themselves of the blessing and privilege of Kirtland reunion, look forward with happy anticipation of attending again. The committee have tried to keep the sermons, classes, and recreation, at Kirtland, of a high order and thus far have succeeded. The reunion owns its own equipment, hence can offer tents, etc., at more reasonable rates than those who have to depend upon outside sources and have the added expense of transportation as well. Our tent rental for the entire period of ten days is: 10x12, $2; 12x14, $2.50. Steel and canvas cots, 50c—mattresses 50c and straw for ticks at a reasonable price. Campers must supply their own bedding. Rooms may be secured at a reasonable price, by those not desiring to camp on the grounds. A large tent is provided free of charge, for girls who are accompanied by their monitor or leader, the only cost being rental of cots, and the mattresses, if they desire them. Those who desire tents, cots, mattresses, rooms, etc., send orders as early as possible to John L. Cooper, Route No. 2, Willoughby, Ohio. Those who desire to cook their own meals should be sure to specify when ordering tents, because those who do this must be located on back rows away from the Temple. We are expecting that three of our classes will be accredited, as they were last year, giving those who are working for certificates, opportunity to secure credits for attendance. If the number who are working and planning, especially among our young people, to attend Kirtland this year, is any criterion to judge by, we will have even a larger attendance than last year. Let us keep in mind, however, that it is not the number in attendance, but the spirit with which they come, that counts. Meals will be served in the dining hall, cafeteria style, at the same reasonable rates as last year, while lunches may be procured any time at the refreshment tent on the grounds. Kirtland may be reached from any point in the United States or Canada, via good paved roads, and is only three miles southeast of Willoughby. Come, and bring the Good Spirit with you.—The Committee, by J. R. Grice.

Western Montana district reunion will convene at the reunion grounds at Race Track, Montana, beginning July 27 and continuing until August 5. Sleeping quarters will be available, but bring your own bedding. Meals will be served at a low cost. A well-balanced program is being planned for all groups and a spe-

Our Departed Ones

HAYNES.—Elenora Whiting was born at Fall River, Massachusetts, in March, 1881, and departed this life after an illness of ten days at the home of her sister, Mrs. Raymond Clough, of Willoughby, Ohio, May 31, 1934. She was baptized a member of the church in her early youth, and became one of the sweet singers of Israel, joining with her three sisters in what was known throughout church circles in the East as the Whiting Quartet. Later in life she was united in marriage to Elder Fred T. Haynes, of Cleveland, Ohio, and made a valuable contribution to the musical interests of Kirtland District, going about constantly over the district with her husband in the spirit of love and devotion by which they were endeared to the hearts of all. She leaves to cherish the beautiful memory of her life her devoted husband, Elder Fred T. Haynes, of Cleveland; two sisters, Mrs. Raymond Clough, of Willoughby, and Mrs. George D. Sinclair, of Boston; a brother, Oscar R. Whiting, of Brocton, Massachusetts, together with a host of devoted friends. Funeral services were held in Kirtland Temple, Sunday, June 3, in charge of Pastor John L. Cooper, assisted by Elders John Lewis and C. G. Minkler. The sermon was by Elder E. G. Hammond.

HAMMETT.—John Henry Hammett was born at Huntsville, Missouri, January 2, 1859, and died May 27, 1934, in Chicago, Illinois. He was united in marriage to Nellie Brown, October 6, 1898, and to them three sons and two daughters were born, John Arthur, Charles, Jesse Alma, Mrs. Isabel Lee, and Deborah. He also leaves another daughter, Mrs. Irene Eads, a child by his first wife, who preceded him in death. He is survived by his wife, Nellie Brown, the above-mentioned sons and daughters, three grandchildren, a sister, and a large number of other relatives.

besides many friends. Brother Hammett was a faithful Saint of the colored group in Chicago. He accepted the gospel November 29, 1903, and for many years he and his companion have kept the latter-day work alive among the colored people there, by offering their home as a place of worship. He was a God-fearing man and worthy citizen. The funeral was conducted by Elder Ray L. Hurst, assisted by Elder J. J. Oliver. Interment was in Restvale Cemetery, Chicago.

JOICE.—Alta Nancy Whitehead, daughter of Ezra T. and Rhoda Whitehead was born September 22, 1854, at Mexico, New York. She was married to Charles Benson Joice in March, 1876. To them were born seven children, four sons and three daughters, two sons and one daughter dying in infancy. The family moved to northern Michigan in 1880, where most of the children were born. She accepted the gospel in 1884, while visiting her parents in New York. Returning to her Michigan home, she labored faithfully to help her neighbors to understand the gospel. She realized her wish to a large extent. When, at her earnest request, Elder John Cornish opened the work in South Boardman, she was the only member there. Her husband was not very friendly as he believed the stories circulated about the church, yet he was kind enough to secure the schoolhouse. When the elder arrived, the teacher refused to surrender the key and the elder, Sister Joice and her husband went home much depressed. With this state of mind ruling, a power suddenly came over Brother Cornish and he rose and prophesied thus: "Mr. Joice, it is all right. We'll get the house and have a large congregation. We shall raise up a branch here. You'll be in it." The next day they did secure the house, many meetings were held and a large branch organized, a neat building was erected and was for years the leading church of the town. Mr. Joice was baptized and served as a local officer and for years was secretary of the district. He died in February, 1905. Three years later Sister Joice moved to Missouri, finally making her home in Independence, in 1912. For several years she lived with her children. Although health was failing, she was always at church services if possible. She leaves two sons, R. E. Joice, of Valley Junction, Iowa; C. A. Joice, of Blue Springs, Missouri; two daughters, Mrs. H. J. Friend, of East Independence, and Mrs. A. E. Campbell, of Blue Springs, Missouri; seventeen grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren; two brothers, G. A. Whitehead, of Phoenix, New York, and J. S. Whitehead, of Syracuse, New York; one sister, Mrs. Alice Minthorn, of Lamoni, Iowa; besides many friends. The funeral was in charge of Elder Samuel Smith in the East Independence church, Elder Gomer R. Wells preaching the sermon. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

HUNTLEY.—Martha Louise Byer was born in Germany, a daughter of Charles and Bertha Byer. She accompanied her parents to Canada while an infant. In 1889, the family moved to Clinton, Iowa, where Miss Byer received her education. She moved to Rock Island, Illinois, when a young woman. She was married to George Roy Huntley at Rock Island, March 14, 1904, and the family has resided there since. Sister Huntley and her family were the first to be baptized in the font of the Rock Island Church several years ago. She was an active, faithful member in the church, a loving wife and mother in the home, and a highly respected citizen in the community, and will be missed by all who knew her, especially in the church circles. Sister Huntley was fifty years of age when she passed away early on Sunday morning, June 24, and leaves to mourn her passing, her husband who is a deacon at the Rock Island church; two sons, Clifford E. Huntley, of Chicago, and Floyd L. Huntley, of Ottumwa, Iowa; a daughter, Marcella Huntley, of Rock Island; three sisters, Mrs. Edith Kettiehut, Mrs. August Jensen and Miss Genevieve Byer, all of Clinton, Iowa; two brothers, August and Otto Byer, both of Clinton, Iowa, and four grandchildren, besides a host of friends. The funeral was held from Rock Island Church, June 26; sermon by E. R. Davis. Burial was in Memorial Park Cemetery.

HOBBIE.—Rudolph Elmer Hobbie, only son of Charles and Hermiene Hobbie, was born on a farm in Bloom Township, Osborne County, near Tipton, Kansas. He grew to manhood on the farm homesteaded by his father, and resided there thirty-seven years. He was educated in the schools of Osborne County and later at the Agricultural College at Manhattan, Kansas. April 21, 1910, he was united in marriage to Laura May Ehlers, of Stewartville, Missouri. To this union were born three daughters and one son, the son dying in infancy. When the daughters had completed the grade school studies, he moved with his family to Osborne, Kansas, to complete their educations in the high school of that city. His decline in health began about three years ago, and he was physically helpless during the last sixteen months of his life. He passed away June 13, 1934. He was devoted to his family, and from first to last he made every provision within his power for their security and welfare. He was a loyal citizen, active in his support of community interests, assisting in all worthy projects. In all the suffering he endured in his final illness, when he was cared for by his family, he continued to show the kindness and patience that had characterized his whole life. Surviving are his wife, Laura May Hobbie; three daughters, Mildred Lucille, of Great Bend, Kansas, Harriet May and Dorothy Marie, of the home; his step-mother, Mrs. Rosa Hobbie, of Tipton, Kansas; two half-sisters, Mrs. Elsie Ritz, of Cawker City, Kansas, and Mrs. Alice Albrecht, of Downs; six half-brothers, Ed, Louis, and Warren, of Tipton, Walter, of Kansas City, Missouri; Ernest, of Petaluma, California, and Harry, of Denver, Colorado, and many other relatives. The funeral service was held June 15, at the Congregational Church in Osborne, the speaker being Elder Leonard Lea, of Independence, Missouri.

THOMAS.—Raymond Walter Thomas, son of Josephine and John M. Thomas was born at Weir, near Pittsburg, Kansas, February 1, 1914, and passed away June 11, 1934, just a few hours after receiving an accidental wound while hunting. When he was five years of age he moved with his family to Independence, Missouri, where he lived until March, 1933, at which time he moved to Nevada, Missouri. He became a member of the church September 18, 1923, at the East Independence Church, Elder J. J. Teeters officiating. He attended the Sunnyvale Public School and William Chrisman High School, at Independence. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Thomas, of the home in Nevada, Missouri; three brothers, Vaughn H. Thomas and James F., both of Independence, and John W., of the home; five sisters, Mrs. Verna Crum, Independence; Mrs. Lulu Pryor, Sacramento, California; Mrs. Pearl Cutshall and Mrs. Elizabeth Cutshall, of Blue Springs, Missouri, and Mrs. Clarence Mason, of Weir, Kansas. Funeral services were held at Independence in charge of J. J. Teeters, assisted by George Jenkins. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

ROSS.—Mary Ann Dorris was born April 10, 1860, near Nashville, Tennessee. She removed to near Pittsburg, Kansas, about 1880. She married E. L. Ross in March, 1882, and to this union five children were born, three of whom died in infancy; the two living are William B., of Arcadia, and Arminta Kauble, of Fort Scott, Kansas. She also has eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild. She chose the way of the Christian and decided upon a religious life when comparatively young in years. She united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints about 1880, and remained a faithful member to the end. Besides the relatives mentioned she leaves a large circle of friends and acquaintances to cherish the memory of one who lived her allotted time and filled the measure of her creation. Elder C. C. Martin was in charge of the funeral at the Saints' church at Fort Scott, and Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley preached the sermon. The burial was in the cemetery at Arcadia, Kansas.

LUKE.—John Luke, son of Elizabeth and John Luke, departed this life, June 23, 1934. He was born December 9, 1853, in North England. He came to this country with his parents when just a small lad. They first resided in Pennsylvania, where he grew to manhood. He was united in marriage to Miss Kate Shreeve, October 17, 1872, of Ottumwa, Iowa. To this union ten children were born, seven daughters and three sons, nine of whom are living. They are, John W. Luke, Mrs. Bert Myers and Mrs. Albert Lane, all of Chariton, Iowa; Jacob R. Luke and Edward Luke, of Melcher, Iowa; Mrs. Emma Giles, of Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. Fred Potter, of Ottumwa, Iowa; Mrs. H. L. Wickline, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Mrs. A. Whalley, of Lincoln, Nebraska. One daughter, Katherine, preceded him in death. He leaves to mourn, besides his wife and children, twenty-two grandchildren, thirty-one great-grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. Lizzie Huff, of British Columbia, and many other relatives and friends. He joined the Latter Day Saints Church, May 22, 1898, at Oskaloosa, Iowa. Funeral services were at the Saints' church at Chariton, Iowa; sermon by Brother William Wilson, assisted by Parley Batten and J. C. Cackler.

■ The Glorious Fourth

America ministered to her spiritual and physical wants, this Fourth of July, with fire crackers. Families that cannot buy their children enough food and clothing gave them money for fire crackers. America, ground under the heel of a depression, parched with drought, burdened with debt, in full view of the suffering and want of her poor, tossed away a few million dollars this day for fire crackers.

The explosion of a fire cracker produces the ugliest and most unmusical of sounds; it is concussion and nothing else. It gives satisfaction to the most primitive of appreciations. America that needs good music and good orchestras, America that needs culture, spends its money for fire crackers.

The poor savage in deepest Africa with his hand-made drum can produce rhythm and tone, which are among the qualities of music; and he can send and receive signals. In these activities his culture and intelligence are above the fire cracker level.

It is said that the Chinese invented fire crackers to frighten away devils, and if anything earthly could frighten away evil spirits, fire crackers are as good an invention as can be imagined. The Chinese never used fire crackers for aesthetic enjoyment. A Chinamen's taste is too well cultivated, his love for beauty too refined, for that.

This year in Kansas City the depression apparently saved many lives and trips to the hospital, because people had less money to spend for fire crackers than last year. Looking over the list of forty injured one sees that most of the victims are children. If there is any argument to justify the fireworks that cause these injuries, we should like to hear it.

■ This is My Day

By E. A. Thomas

Until 1920 the church grew and expanded in numbers and in material wealth.

In 1921 began the period of depression spiritually, growing and culminating in 1925.

In 1925 we passed through our Gethsemane, emerging slowly but surely in spiritual matters.

Then came the world-wide financial depression to harass the church, bringing retrenchments intended to prevent losses.

Today, the sun of prosperity begins again to shine, and today is mine.

I cannot bring back financial prosperity but I can and will help speed the return of spiritual prosperity. I will help to restore confidence lost.

I will assist in the erection of homes, not merely houses or dwellings.

I will not falter in my duty if the battle waxes fierce and hot.

I will help to tear down prejudices and destroy hatred.

In their place I will sow the good seed of love and confidence.

I will be a friend to those who need friends, a counselor to those who need counsel.

I will realize how my church and my God depend on me.

I accept the challenge not as my duty but as my opportunity.

I am a member—I am the church.

"This Ministry"

I—Too Many Slack Traces

When I was a boy on the farm, using horses for this and that purpose, riding and driving, we had some horses that could always be depended on to do their fair share of work. In the field and on the road their traces were taut. They were pulling the load. We had some others whose traces were often slack. They were "willing workers," in the sense the old farmer had in mind when he said he had a willing team—one horse was willing to do all the work and the other horse was willing to let him.

Most adult Americans have read David Harum at least once, many of them have read the book several times. David Harum helped me through one trying General Conference. Brother Joseph had passed to his reward; Brother Frederick M. Smith was ill in the east with pneumonia and not able to come to the conference and receive his ordination. A great deal of long-brewing trouble came to a head at the conference. Brother Mark Siegfried roomed at my home, and every evening, late, after a very long and wearying day in council, committee meetings, and business sessions he would read me a chapter or two from David Harum. The homely humor of the book brought relaxation.

Those who have seen the motion picture based on David Harum have seen one thoroughly delightful and wholesome motion picture and will remember the famous story of the balky horse that David traded to the Deacon under solemn promise that it would "stand without hitching." It did. In the play the girl who finally obtained the balky horse discovered that he would go fine so long as some one sang to him. What song shall we sing to our ordained men who are inclined to "stand without hitching?" and to those who work with "slack traces?"

There are always too many of our ordained men who do not work. They leave others to do the work. When we had a horse that was old, he was given shorter hours and lighter tasks. When we had one that was sick, he was turned into pasture and given treatment. When we had one who was sound and able but not willing or perhaps not interested—there was a real problem. The whip did not solve the problem—excepting for a fleeting moment. One trouble was that one cannot reason with a horse. Horses do not speak our language. With men it should be different.

We have ordained men who are doing more than their share—sometimes more than they are able to do. We have some who are hampered by age or infirmity or by secular work that gives them little liberty. But we have far too many men who are abundantly able to work who are doing very little of the work that should fall to them under their call and ordination. There are too many slack traces in too many branches, districts and stakes.

A determined effort is being made to arouse all the ministry to activity and to help them become more efficient in their activity. At the late General Conference, priesthood and its duties were stressed all the way through. Helps in the way of study pamphlets and other matter are being published and distributed. President McDowell is doing an outstanding piece of work among the local priesthood. We urge all truly thoughtful men of the ministry who are not doing their fair share of local ministerial work to tighten up their traces and help pull the load. If, like the Deacon's horse, they respond to song, the song that we would sing to them is—

Rise up, O men of God!
Have done with lesser things!
Give heart and soul and mind and strength,
To serve the king of kings.

Rise up, O men of God!
The church for you doth wait,
Her strength unequal to her task;
Rise up, and make her great!

Elbert A. Smith.

The Mantle of Elijah

Young men aspire to power though they lack experience to control it, and old men unwillingly give it up, in spite of their failing strength. Men live their lives and complete their careers, then pass on to their rewards, and younger men are always needed to fill the places made vacant by their going. When a strong and aged servant of the church steps out of his place of power and resigns the functions of his office, people mourn and they wonder how the work will be carried on without him. But the Almighty has a way of finding young hands to do His work, and new shoulders on which to place the burdens of responsibility.

The story of the passing of Elijah's mantle to Elisha shows the old prophet's unwillingness to commit his sacred trust to a younger man, and that younger man's determination, in obedience to the divine imperative, to be conducted to the same fountain of grace and power from which the older one had drawn his strength. A part of the story follows:

"And it came to pass, when the Lord would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind, that Elijah went with Elisha from Gilgal. And Elijah said unto Elisha, Tarry here, I pray thee; for the Lord hath sent me to Bethel. And Elisha said unto him, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they went down to Bethel."

Two other times Elijah tried to leave Elisha behind so that the ascent to heaven could be accomplished without his presence. But Elisha was not to be shaken off. At last, desiring to help his young comrade, he said,

"Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee."

Elisha's answer contained the full desire of his heart:

"I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me."

When Elijah replied "Thou hast asked a hard thing" he realized that the young man was asking something that could be given only by the great Source of that power, and he said, in guarded words, "If thou see me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so."

In thus speaking he relieved himself of the responsibility for the outcome and put it in two other places: on Elisha who required the diligence to want to see, and on the Lord who only could permit him to see.

Elisha did have the will to see, and the Lord permitted him to see. Catching the mantle after Elijah's ascent he went back, smote the waters of Jordan as Elijah had, and they parted, permitting him to pass and witnessing to the sons of the prophets that he had inherited the authority, for they said, "The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha."

As in this case, the transfer of spiritual power and authority will always depend upon two things: the determination of the young men to qualify and the Lord's willingness to endow them with the vision to see and seize the opportunity. Older men can do no better than Elijah did—to leave the outcome to the will of the Lord and the diligence of the young men. They should not bar the way. They should rather permit the young men to keep them company on the sacred paths and learn the ways of the spiritual life.

One of the most important trusts of the ministry is to do their part in training young men for carrying on the work that they must sometime lay down.

Probably the greatest need of the church at the present time is a large number of young people who shall be fit for the reception of the call to the work of the church. The work lags for the lack of them. Of men who have been ordained to office, there are many. Of those who have qualified for their work and grown in their office, fulfilling the obligations implied in their call, there are all too few. It is our task to prepare young workers from whose ranks the Lord shall be pleased to call the good and the sincere to his work.

L. L.

A Word to "Junior Stewardship" Sponsors

Have you interested your junior stewards in the junior stewardship "Slogan and Song" contest? Are your boys and girls thinking about an interesting slogan for the junior stewardship movement? Can they, with your help, write words for a stewardship song which may be sung to some familiar tune?

If you are planning to organize your group of boys and girls into a junior stewardship club, now is a good time to begin with enthusiasm and interest by encouraging them to enter the contest. The slogan and song sent in by your group may be the ones chosen to be used by junior stewards throughout the church.

Send slogans and songs to the Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, by August 15, 1934.

Things to Remember and Study

Elder W. Earl Page, director of religious education in Zion, has prepared a most helpful set of church school record sheets for the use of the director of each local congregation. It requires a careful and continuous check-up on the administration of the total church school program. Frequent reports made to the director in Zion are entered on a large master sheet in the pastor's office, thus giving a continuous cumulative picture of all phases of church school endeavor.

The following is a copy of one of the pages of the record. Its suggestions will be helpful to all church school workers:

1. Study the attendance of your school.
2. Does each student give strict attention?
3. What can you do to improve the reverence?
4. How many unbaptized class members in your school?
5. Make your school friendly to all people.
6. Have regular teacher's meetings.
7. Know the curriculum of your school.
8. Keep the collection up to meet the needs.
9. Encourage a spirit of generosity that will provide all needed equipment and supplies.
10. Have an adequate realization of the possibilities of your church school.
11. What is your spiritual attitude in the opening exercises of your church school?
12. Keep up your church school activities outside of the school hour.
13. Do you have a willingness to cooperate with other schools and the department of religious education?
14. Do you have a strong desire to make your school thoroughly efficient and effective by every possible means?
15. Are you aiming at a distinct Latter Day Saint Church School?
16. Have a determination, by God's help, to win every member for Christ and train him for the Kingdom?

Thoughts for Today

Minorities

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, according to a recent statement in our national weekly straw ballot, the Literary Digest, has the approval of 61.15 percent of those who voted in the poll. This gives the President a little better than a 5 to 3 ratio of support, which is a safe margin. At the same time it will make him realize that there is a large body of citizens who are watching his movements critically, and whose numbers are likely to be increased if he makes serious errors. The presence of a vigorous minority in any administration is a safety factor.

IN the United States minorities have performed a valuable service in championing unpopular causes and in restraining waves of unbridled legislative enthusiasm. Occasionally obstructive, selfish, and sectional, they have brought criticism upon themselves; but on the whole they have been beneficial.

A SPEAKER recently declared that the masses, the great body of citizens, are too ignorant to govern themselves, and complained that the vote of the scholar and the philosopher counts for no more than that of the illiterate city sewer digger or the hillbilly of the woods. Judging from the way voters support corrupt political machines, the Tammanys and such, one admits there is some truth in the charge; but objections to any change in the basis of suffrage immediately come to mind. The ignorant man has as big a stake in the government as the learned one—his welfare and happiness. No one can have any more or any less, for properties are only incidental to these main items. More than this—no group of intelligentsia has ever been found sufficiently trustworthy to deal honestly with power over their fellow men. Between an honest but ignorant majority and a corrupt but intelligent minority there is something to choose: ignorance is curable, dishonesty has not yet been cured on any impressive scale.

DEMOCRACY failed in Germany despite the fact that the Germans were the most thoroughly schooled citizenry in Europe, yet it would be hard to say that the contending factions, parties, and blocs that wrecked German democracy gave evidence of intelligence. The minorities at present have been subdued, but it is easy to predict that when the occasion comes they may rise again.

WHATEVER his faults may be, Hitler deserves credit for taking the heel of France off the neck of Germany. That is a great service not only to Germany, but to the whole world. It should not be forgotten when the next crisis comes, Hitler's present great necessity is to unify the discordant elements in Germany, especially the extremists—the monarchists and the communists. The strongest and most constant minority is the Reichswehr, a survival of Emperor Wilhelm's imperial army, naturally monarchistic in sympathy. Though smaller in numbers than the Nazi brown shirt army, it is older and presents an enduring minority. It is Hitler's great misfortune that he alienated a powerful home minority, as well as foreign sympathy, by his persecution of the Jews. A mistake like that is hard to overcome.

IN ALL THIS it can be seen that a strong, closely knit and enduring minority can survive and overpower a popular but temporary majority. That is what gives small churches, small parties and little organizations the hope to go on.

The great majorities are not always right. They are not always permanent. They are often stupid and intolerant. Sometimes they blindly follow a wrong-headed leader to disaster. But there comes a day of awakening and they fall away. The minorities wait and pray for that day of awakening. They sing, "Not to the strong is the battle, not to the swift is the race."

After the war, a distinguished chaplain of the British Army declared that he was no longer afraid of hell, the kind of hell of which a materialistic theology has made so much. "But," he added, "I am horribly afraid that a day will come when someone will look me in the eye and say, Well, what did you make of it?" Many more times than once that question appears in a human life. Your chance to secure an education, what did you make of it? Your chance to build a happy home, what did you make of it? Your chance to contribute something of value to the enduring wealth of the world, what did you make of it? The question appears and reappears and then one day when, at least so far as this world is concerned, you have reached the end of the trail it becomes the tremendous, all-inclusive question, What did you make of life?—Ernest Fremont Tittle, in We Need Religion.

Short Wave Radio Provides Amateur Communication

Numbers of young men in the church are interested in short-wave radio communication. Some have proposed that they get in touch with each other and establish a means of communication for the church. As a step to help that purpose forward, we are making tentative plans to give space to the radio work on this page.

As a start we are suggesting that every short-wave radio operator register with us. Send name, postal address, and call letters. We shall publish these and other operators can enter them in their records for purposes of communication. A central bureau will be established at Independence which will aid in furnishing publicity material. Send all registrations for the present to The Editors, Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. Further information and instructions will appear on this page.

A Novel Idea for Entertaining Your Group

The young adult group of Central Church, Los Angeles, California, have tried out a unique way of entertaining which worked beautifully and appealed to all the guests. This Sunday school class of Brother Lewis Shippey took a "Cruise to South American Waters." Guests "came on board" when they arrived at the party, and were assigned deck games to play. Decorations and food were in keeping with the nautical trend of the entertainment. When the guests "landed," they were given a lecture about the country they were "visiting."

"Be Ye Doers" at Duluth

Duluth, Minnesota, young people were organized last October at the B. Y. D. Club, their motto being "Be Ye Doers." They meet on the first Friday of each month for a social time, and average attendance is fifteen. Several nonmembers attend from time to time.

These young members are taking an active part in church services. Four of the group hold offices in the church school. They sponsored three vesper services during the year. Moreover they are mightily interested in raising money to assist in preparing their church for dedication this fall. They presented a three-act play, "Pilgrims of the Way," in May, and on rally day their theme was "Keep the Law." On that day one hundred percent of the young people filed their inventories. Several have been paying tithing for some time.

A Young People's Worker

MRS. J. THOMAS BENTON

Mrs. J. Thomas Benton, who before her recent marriage was Miss Inus Sheppard, daughter of Elder and Sister Charles Thomas Sheppard, of Joplin, Missouri.

Sister Benton is a loyal church worker in the Zion Builders Class at Joplin, where she has been a member since moving from Tulsa, Oklahoma nine years ago. Soon after the Sheppard family moved to Joplin, an orchestra was formed, and through the effort of Sister Inus and her sister, Miss Margurite Sheppard, this group of musicians has rendered the branch a helpful service. At times there have been fifteen orchestra members.

Sister Benton is a granddaughter of the late T. J. Sheppard, a lifetime pioneer missionary of the church after its Reorganization. She comes of a family of faithful, law-abiding, tithe-paying Latter Day Saints.

Inus and Jack, as she and her husband are known in the home branch, were married by Brother C. H. Hobart, of Webb City.

Former Graceland College Student Wins Honors

At Fashion School Exhibition in New York

New York—Miss Emily McCormick of Albin, Wyoming, a former student of Graceland College at Lamoni, Iowa, achieved the unusual distinction of gaining honors in seven groups at the exhibition marking the close of the semester at the Traphagen School of Fashion in New York.

She was awarded first prize for her work in rendering of material as well as taking top honors for textile designs. In addition to these prizes, Miss McCormick won honorable mention for her exhibits of museum costumes of the Prince of Wales Ball of 1860; period heads; life class work; period silhouettes and for her brown book of notes on the fashion course for the term.

Miss McCormick will spend the summer with her mother, Mrs. Avid Anderson at Albin, Wyoming, and is expected to resume her studies at the Traphagen School in the fall.

Utah Young People Make Friends With Elder and Sister Ward L. Christy

The young people of Utah District assembled in convention June 22 to 24, and soon made friends with two of their honor guests, Elder and Sister Ward L. Christy, recently from Saskatoon, Saskatchewan and now appointed to labor as missionaries in Utah District.

Brother Christy delivered the opening address Friday evening, "Get Under the Cross," and from that service until the last on Sunday evening, the program was full for these young men and women gathered from Provo, Salt Lake City, Ogden, and Malad. The convention theme, "Zion," was most effectively carried out in the services including the Saturday evening banquet.

Outstanding events of this week-end were Brother Christy's initial sermon; prayer services both Saturday and Sunday mornings; the banquet; a one-act play contest Saturday night; the young people's council meeting at 1:30 p. m. Sunday; the educational session at 3:15, and the evening sermon, "The Old Jerusalem and Zion," by Elder Edward Moe.

The Constitution-- Will it Stand the Strain?

By G. N. Briggs

President of Graceland College

G. N. BRIGGS

THE editor of the Herald has profounded the above question—than which there is no more important in the field of government in this most critical period of American history since 1860.

The editor further asks: "Is it flexible enough to meet the needs of new conditions? Is it strong enough to withstand the assaults that are made upon its fundamental provisions,"

It should never be forgotten that the constitution was born of an economic crisis which was far more grave than that through which we are now passing, and it was the men of character and property in this country who assembled in the great constitutional convention of 1787 to protect their property rights by the creation of a form of government which while recognizing the principle of democracy would nevertheless prevent its excesses.

In a democracy the only real salvation of the Constitution lies in the people themselves.

If and when the constitution fails it will be because the people are unworthy of it for it is a truth as old as Aristotle that a constitution cannot survive unless the people are worthy of it. "These are the times that try men's souls," was written at a time which has been recorded as "the critical period of American history."

The following incident in the life of Lincoln has only recently been related. He had arrived in Washington as the President-elect early in 1861. A peace conference was then in session and its delegates called upon Mr. Lincoln. They represented to him the great danger in the country in any attempt to enforce the constitution, even though seven states had already defied its authority by seceding from the Union. One of these delegates is reported to have said to Mr. Lincoln, "It is for you, sir, to say whether the grass shall grow in the streets of our commercial cities." To which Mr. Lincoln replied:

"If I shall ever come to the great office of President of the United States, I shall take the oath that I will faithfully execute the office of President, that I will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the constitution. It will not be preserved and defended until it is enforced and obeyed in every part of every one of the United States. It must be so respected, obeyed, enforced and defended, let the grass grow where it may."

He was inaugurated, the country entered into the greatest civil war of all times and a little more than two years later on the field of Gettysburg with the new-made graves of the dead about him he invoked in immortal phrases, his countrymen to "highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this Nation under God shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth." Less than two years later Lincoln sealed his devotion to the constitution with his life's blood.

Gladstone said of the constitution; "It is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."

If then there is danger that the constitution will perish among the forty-eight states we must agree that this is even a more critical period than that of 1860 when there was danger that it was to perish in only a part of the Union.

The essential question now is, then, shall the constitution be abandoned, not in the few states, but in the entire forty-eight or "is it flexible enough to meet the needs of new conditions!" "Is it strong enough to withstand the assaults that are made upon its fundamental provisions?" The so-called elastic clause of the constitution in enumerating the powers of Congress in paragraph 18, section 7 of Article 1 provides that Congress shall have power "To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or offices thereof."

The now famous Minnesota Mortgage case and the New York Milk case only recently decided by the United States Supreme Court in five to four decisions seem to indicate the possible trend of thinking of that court in the many cases which are likely to be presented for decision as an outgrowth of recent state and national legislation in attempts to meet present day conditions. # Pay to Almighty God, or Order

By Evan A. Fry

FROM every pulpit in Christendom, every Sunday morning, a minister acting in God's stead preaches what we choose to call the "word of God." And it is a strange church that does not during some portion of the service make a plea to "give to the Lord"—to "support the work of God." Yet how many people ever give a thought to the problem of determining who has authority to speak for God—who has authority to collect money for him—who has authority to act for him in the carrying out of his work?

With my liking for the bizarre and unusual, I've been wondering recently just what consternation would be created, if in some obscure village church or metropolitan cathedral, the usher should find in his collection plate a bona fide, certified check for one million dollars, made payable to Almighty God, or order. What would happen? Would each of the nation's self-styled representatives of Deity rush forward to claim it? How would the banker go about checking the identity and the authority of the one who sought to cash it? And if the case should be taken into court—what a tangle for some sharp-witted lawyer to unravel!

PERHAPS we should even have to settle the question in the manner suggested by a recent Ripley "Believe It or Not" cartoon, in which Ripley makes the startling assertion that once upon a time a check was actually drawn payable to Almighty God, and was actually endorsed, and cashed by a reputable banker. But—the denouement to this surprising story comes with the additional information that Almighty God was in this case an inmate of an asylum for the insane!

Who does have the right to represent God? This should prove a puzzling enough question to any official of any church which purports to represent God, but it should prove more puzzling and momentous to those of our own faith, believing as we do in an authoritative priesthood, and a somewhat strict legal succession of the priestly function and power.

With the strictly legal or mechanical aspects of the problem, I do not think we need to be deeply concerned. We have a habit of being willing to listen to any preacher who has something vital to say, regardless of where his license to preach may be at the moment. But with the moral and spiritual aspects of this problem of authority, we should all be deeply concerned. Who—among all our priesthood—would be so bold as to act for him by endorsing a check for a million dollars made payable to his name? Who is so certain of his acceptability before God? And yet how lightly at times we consider that much more vital—much more important authority—the authority to represent God in spiritual affairs!

So far as I know, God has never placed a signature or seal on any power of attorney authorizing man to represent him in business affairs. Neither has he ever affixed his seal or signature to any document licensing a man to represent him in spiritual affairs. The problem of who is authorized to represent God cannot, in fact, be solved in any such simplified legal terms. A mere license to preach, no matter who signs it, carries no authority from God. Neither a call nor an ordination can guarantee a perpetual right and authority to represent God. Titles, be they those of apostle, elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, carry no inherent authority within themselves. The authority accompanying these licensed—called—ordained—and titled ministers, is dependent upon their lives, and upon the way they meet these four tests:

1. Are they performing the works of God?
2. Are they doing them after the manner prescribed by God?
3. Are they unwaveringly loyal to God?
4. Are they acting with the power of God?

The owner of an estate who hired an agent, and gave him jurisdiction over the management of the properties of that estate, would expect the agent to carry out his wishes. If the owner said, "Invest in government bonds," and the agent invested in the Sink Sank Sunk oil company instead, he would lose the moral and legal right to act as agent, for he has not done the works of his master. If the owner said, "Build me a house of native stone," and the agent erected instead a house of frame or brick veneer, he has violated his trust. He has not built after the manner prescribed by his master, and he is no true servant. If the agent promised to devote his whole time, exclusively, to the interests of his employer, and then divided his time with an enemy or a competitor, he could no longer be a trusted servant; he is disloyal.

But our fourth requirement says that representatives of God must act with the power of God. And to carry our parable a little further, the people with whom the agent dealt would have a right to demand proof of his authority to deal with the properties of his employer. They would probably ask for his power of attorney, (Continued on page 878.)

After Death---What?

By Paul M. Hanson

Of the Quorum of Twelve

(A sermon delivered at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, January 10, 1934; reported by Belle Robinson James.)

PAUL M. HANSON

OUR TEXT is selected from the book of Ecclesiastes, the twelfth chapter and seventh verse "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it."

We all have loved ones and friends who have journeyed to the country on the other side of death. It is appointed unto man once to die, and one cannot but wonder about the realm to which one so journeys. One believing in and conversant with the Holy Scriptures has no disposition to look to futurity as an unknown country to which one sooner or later will travel.

What does death mean? Where do we go at death? What changes take place? Can the dead be called back to the living? Is there a second opportunity—a chance on the other side of the grave to accept Christ?

These features of our subject we wish to discuss. There is no satisfactory explanation of life or death or the future, outside of Christ, from whom we learn of these things as set forth in the Holy Scriptures. So it is refreshing to turn from the guesses of men and learn about life and death and futurity as made known by the Lord and his accredited ministers.

WE can hardly know what life and death are without first knowing what man is. Man is not merely dust. I cannot conceive of mere inanimate matter being so highly organized as to love, exercise volition, sense loyalty, or compose an oratorio like the "Messiah." If man were composed of dust alone, then bread alone would satisfy his every need. But there is something else to man besides the body, and that is the spirit of man which constitutes a spiritual entity.

There are some remarkably definite and clear expressions that should leave one in no doubt as to the constitution of man. For instance, the Apostle Paul said: "For I delight in the law of God after the inward man." (Romans 7: 22.) Why? For the reason that the outside part, or body of man, is not capable of delighting in the law of the Lord. The "inward man," the spiritual man only, is capable of such pleasure.

The same authority further says: "For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is revived day by day." (2 Corinthians 4: 16.) These significant expressions: the "inward man" and the "outward man" suggest that we live in our bodies much like a house is inhabited. So closely associated are the spirit and body that what affects the body reacts upon the spirit and what disturbs the spirit has its effect upon the body.

A number of biblical texts will be presented. Note this language: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." (2 Corinthians 5: 1.) And in the fourth verse: "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." Who are the "we"? What is "our earthly house of this tabernacle?" It is clear that the writer refers to the "inward man," or spirit in man, and the "outward man," or body that is transferred to the grave at death.

Death is a separation of the body and spirit. James says: "The body without the spirit in dead." (2: 26.)

We read of a case where it is shown that the spirit may actually live outside the body and return to the body, and the one who testifies is no less than the Apostle Paul, whose recital is as follows. "I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth;) how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter." (2 Corinthians 12: 2-4.) From this it is evident that Paul, a chosen instrument of the Lord, believed a man "in the body" or "out of the body" could be "caught up into paradise" and hear words too great for human expression.

JESUS at the time of his death addressed the following words to the Father: "Into thy hands I commend my spirit." His body at this time was on the cross and was soon to be placed in the sepulcher. But there was more to Jesus, one of the Godhead, who had to do with the creation of all things that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible, than just his body that was laid in the tomb.

It was the same in the case of Stephen, the first martyr, when he said, as he saw the curtain of death descending: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." From this we learn that man is composed of spirit and body, and death is a separation of these component parts.

Where do the dead go? With clarity it is revealed where they go. We can turn to an enlightening occurrence narrated by Jesus: "There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day: and there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his sores. And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom."

A PECULAIR REFORMATION was wrought in the rich man in hell, for he "cried out and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented." (Luke 16: 20-25.)

The beggar was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom—a place of rest—the paradise of God. The rich man lifted up his eyes in hell, in torments. Here we have, if there were nothing more, a very clear presentation of where man goes at death. The poor man was carried to the paradise of God not because he was living in poverty nor because he was diseased, but evidently for the reason that he was filling his life as best he knew how. He fain would have had some of the crumbs from the rich man's table come his way, and even the dogs licked his sores. There is nothing said that he resented his lot, but rather is the thought present that he pondered upon the great opportunities within the reach of the rich man, and felt that if he possessed health and material wealth, what a great opportunity would be his to help souls that were handicapped. But the rich man was of a different type. He gave a good deal of his time to feasting, was self-centered, and indulged in no self-denial. He was not interested in anyone that was handicapped, though he may have intended to be generous at the last. We learn in the one case that at death the good go to a place of happiness and in the other that the wicked lift up their eyes in a place of torments.

In the recital of what occurred to the rich man and Lazarus, it appears that about as soon as they arrived in the intermediate state of the dead the rich man was inclined to be reflective as he never was in earth life; it seems he had been highly emotional in earth life, looking for something spectacular. This characteristic remained with him. Death does not change character. Death is marked by a transfer of the spirit of man from one place to another. There is continued consciousness. The wicked rich man cried and said: "Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame." That is not the right kind of a place to get into. Abraham's answer discloses consciousness: "Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented." The rich man goes on to say: "I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldst send him to my father's house: for I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come unto this place of torment." This reveals a disposition to be satisfied with a series of thrills and something spectacular. He desired someone from the other side of the grave to be sent to his brothers. But Abraham knew such would not have any lasting effect and said: "They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them." The rich man said, "Nay, father Abraham, if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent." To this Abraham answered: "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead."

Heaven and hell are not figments of the imagination. Right remains right and wrong remains wrong until the judgment day, and after. The more clearly good and evil are distinguished the more necessary it is to separate heaven and hell. There is a gulf between good and evil—they stand out in contrast as do light and darkness.

THE LORD said to the churches in Asia: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." (Revelation 2: 7.) Paradise is about as close as it can be, if it is not the actual place where Christ resides. Confirmatory of this are the words of Paul respecting the "man in Christ" who was "caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words." A malefactor on the cross at the time of the crucifixion of Christ, addressed him: "Lord remember me when thou comest into thy (Continued on page 878)

"A Peculiar People"

By E. J. Hayden

E. J. HAYDEN

FOR SOME REASON, when we hear the word "peculiar" we think of that which is strange, or ridiculous. And it may be that it is for this reason that some, who declare themselves to be the people of God, adopt unusual and distinctive habits of life and dress, thereby setting themselves apart from the rest of the world, and affirming that while they may be required to live in the world, they are not of it, and raising the claim that, because the world laughs at their oddities, they are being persecuted for righteousness' sake.

It is indeed true that Paul tells us that Christ gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. (Titus 2: 14.) And Peter, in writing to the saints, affirms: "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people." (1 Peter 2: 9.) But it is also true that, when instructing his followers as to how they might acceptably seek special favor of God, Jesus told them to avoid those things which would mark them, in the eyes of the world, as seeking such blessings: that their seeking might be apparent unto God, and not unto men. (See Matthew 6: 16-18.)

It is therefore evident that Peter and Paul are not striving to induce the saints of their time to become a conspicuous laughing stock, because of their refusal to conform to the prevailing customs of dress, or social procedure. We must look beyond the superficial matters of clothing, hair dressing, or even codes of community life, if we are to discover that in which the people of God are to be a peculiar people. This deeper look is accorded us as we search the context of those Scriptures which we have quoted, and learn more fully the meaning of the terms employed.

First of all, we must realize that to say that anything is peculiar does not necessarily imply that it is outlandish in appearance. And more than this: if the early Christians had made themselves unnecessarily conspicuous, by uniformly adopting striking, and unpopular habits of life and dress, they would have fallen even more easily victims to the persecuting powers which were seeking to exterminate them. Then too, we notice that "singular" is the second, and not the first definition given by Webster, to the word "peculiar." And that the first, and therefore preferable meaning is: "Appropriate, belonging to a person, and to him alone."

Therefore we may read the above quotations in this manner, without doing violence to the intent of the authors: "Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a most suitable people, belonging exclusively unto himself, zealous of good works." And: "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a people belonging to Christ and to him alone." But we are a peculiar people also in the sense of being different: not in those external things which the world may simulate: but by reason of our close, and recognized relationship to our Lord and Master, is there implanted within us that which we cannot hide, nor can the world assume?

Truly we are, and must be, a people zealous of good works. But many who do not even profess to accept Christ, nor His mission of atonement, are also zealous of good works. And it is sometimes charged, and it is to be feared with good reason, that they actually demonstrate their zeal more effectually than do those who profess to be the children of light. Therefore we discover that good works alone can no more be regarded as a safe criterion than can physical eccentricities. There must be that which will mark us as the one and only people whom Jesus Christ claims: and this not by reason of lineage, but because of loyalty; neither by reason of alms, but acceptability; nor yet for oblations, but obedience. For with what obedient son will the Father not communicate? And to what loyal servant will the Master not make known His will?

Church Physician's Health Letter

A Suggested Cure for Alcoholism

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

Church Physician

A. W. TEEL, M. D.
Church Physician

SINCE the articles on "Alcohol" was published in the Herald, I have been receiving quite a number of inquiries about the treatment of this disease. As there is an increasing interest throughout the whole world in the ever present liquor question and its relation to a cure and to social economics, our attention centers more and more actively on the evils of intemperance and the use of intoxicating beverages and other forms of narcoticism. Some of the letters I have been receiving are indeed pathetic. There are also some of the church membership making confidential inquiries either for some of their immediate families or neighbors. My own investigations and that of others has led me to the conclusion that sugar plays an important role in the treatment of alcoholism.

I have observed that men who are addicted to this habit scarcely eat any sugar while those who do not, consume large quantities. It is a noticeable fact that drunkards, when they leave alcohol alone, begin to take an interest in sweet things. One authority says that, "There is a marked falling off in the consumption of alcoholic beverages in the higher classes and a remarkable calling for the various confections and drinks in which sugar is a component part."

J. Leonard Corning says "I have a patient who cured himself by the use of ice cream. Every time he felt the craving for alcohol, he would eat a dish of ice cream. After two weeks of this resume, he would find that he had lost the craving for the old stimulant. Another patient who was a heavy drinker for years and who now has sworn off, takes strained honey at each meal, particularly at breakfast. He says that it quiets his craving for alcohol." I would say the reason for this is that sugar, being a highly concentrated food, becomes immediately available upon absorption into the system and thus supplies energy. If a man cannot use alcohol in moderation and if he finds it difficult to quit its use, then he may find a substitute so far as physical craving is concerned in the use of sugar.

However, I wish to enter here a word of caution concerning the excessive use of sugar. The excessive use, no doubt, is the cause of many diseases of the liver, obesity and diabetes. As a substitute for the ordinary sugar, I would suggest the use of strained honey in the diet, with some of the sweet fruits such as dried currants, raisins and other fruits that contain quite a percentage of sugar in its natural state. In a treatment of this unfortunate condition, it is agreed that certain temperaments seem to crave an artificial stimulation.

Failure is not always due to methods of cure but often to the human element of weakness. Will power is always essential. Cure may be reasonably expected if the subject retains enough mental and moral stamina. One authority says "Try religion," but I say not only try religion but practice it and this alone is sufficient for a cure for those who have faith to be healed. Religion is one of the remedies that I always prescribe and then if the individual really wants to be cured, he is told to get maple syrup or honey, and have them accessible at all meals. Marshmallows have frequently been prescribed and advised to have some in his pocket and to eat them freely, as the case requires it and when he feels that he needs an "eye opener," to take three or four lumps of sugar, dissolved in a glass of water before breakfast. This, I have observed, often helps him "beware of the first drink." All patients must remember that they are fighting a weakness and, therefore, the human element must be taken care of by the man himself. I wish the Herald readers to not consider sugar as a specific for this rapidly increasing disease, but a remedy well worth a trial by those who sincerely wish to extricate themselves from one of the worst of curses of mankind.

The Bible is the songbook of humanity. Its opening chapter is a song of creation and its closing one a song of redemption. There is no doubt but that singing will be one of the occupations of heaven. We will be out of place, out of tune and harmony in the gloryland if we do not sing, so I say that here on earth is a fine place to do the preliminary practicing.—Earl L. ### Time of Choosing LOUISA would have been quite comforted concerning Dan could she have heard the conversation between him and his parents when he arrived at his home that night.

His father was reading the Bible near the table in the big kitchen and his mother was stirring up yeast sponge for the morrow's baking. Mr. Eldon looked up as Dan entered, and closed the book. He seemed worried.

"Someone said you'd gone home with Louisa Miller, Dan."

"That was true."

"I didn't know you were even interested in girls, Dan," put in his mother. "Your father and I were intending to send you to the University of Chicago if some of his business deals turn out right. Only two years and you'd have your B. A. degree."

"Yes, mother, I know. But we aren't at all sure those deals will turn out right. Father spoke to me once, some time ago—said I could make a pretty good living by helping him. I—Louisa is a fine girl—the best there is."

"I know, my boy, she is a fine girl. But have you thought of this? She doesn't belong to the church—"

"I haven't thought of anything else all evening," Dan laughed a bit ruefully. "It rather spoiled things for me. I'd start to say something and it seemed like my mind would continually think on that statement that Brother Teasdale made when he confirmed me a member of the church: 'You have a work to do, if you are humble and faithful.' And I kept wondering whether she would be willing to let me do it or not. But I finally let her know how I feel—I can't live without her. She loves me, too—and I really should be very happy. Everybody thinks she's wonderful and I feel, for my part, that there never will be anybody quite so fine."

"She is fine, too, Dan," his father huskily answered, "and I'm sure we want you to be happy. But you're both pretty young—"

"I know I love her, father. I never will feel differently. It seems queer she couldn't have been a member. Her folks belong to the church. And she—"

"And she would have belonged," interrupted his mother, "if it hadn't been for a statement her own mother made. Mrs. Miller and I were talking together one time—it was when Louisa was only nine years old, and we mentioned that someone was going to be baptized the next Sunday. Louisa spoke up and said: 'I'd like to be baptized myself if I wasn't just a little afraid of the water.' And Mrs. Miller, busy all the time with her sewing, said briskly: 'Well, I'm not very anxious to have my children baptized when they're so little. They really don't know what they're doing when they're so small. Louisa only needed a bit of encouragement, and Mrs. Miller turned events in the wrong direction. She works too hard—puts her whole mind on things of this earth. If she'd take a little time to read the church books—'

"But you see, mother," Dan said, smiling, "Louisa can't be much prejudiced against the church. She is so good—"

"Yes—but I've taught her in Sunday school for the last few months and I know her mind isn't on religion. She steels herself against believing in anything. Of course it may be just a youthful pose. I don't know. It's hard to tell sometimes, just how a young person really feels." She paused, set the crock of sponge on the warming oven, and then continued, grimly: "Mrs. Miller probably sees she's made a mistake by this time—"

"Well, mother," Dan's father interrupted, with a sigh, "We've not much right to criticize Sister Miller. We've made our own mistakes. Remember when Brother Teasdale came back from Lamoni seven years ago? He said there was a good opportunity there for a man in my line of work, but I investigated and found I couldn't make quite so much money, so I stayed here." His voice betrayed deep emotion as he continued: "Dan could have graduated from Grace-land tonight, mother. He could have grown up among Latter Day Saint young people. Sister Miller didn't believe firmly enough in the gospel to have the children baptized, and I didn't believe firmly enough in the gathering to move my family to one of the center places when I had a chance. My mistake was as great as hers, perhaps. The gathering—baptism—they're both in the law, mother, and so I think—"

THE TELEPHONE rang loudly. Mrs. Eldon took down the receiver.

"Hello. Yes, this is Mrs. Eldon. He—what? When? Now, Louisa, don't you worry—we'll be right over."

"Old Brother Larson passed away tonight," she told them. "Louisa, that poor child—sounded like she'd been crying herself sick—she wants us to come over if we can—says her mother sits so quiet and white, she's afraid—and Aunt Bashy—we all know what a total loss she is in an emergency—"

Dan was already out of the door, Mr. Eldon went to get his hat and coat, and his wife got a cake from the pantry and some other supplies to lighten the work of the other home during the period of stress before it.

When they arrived at the Millers, Louisa was crying on Dan's shoulder. Her mother simply sat by the old man's side, absolutely immobile, her face white and expressionless. Mrs. Eldon knew now why Louisa had been so worried about her mother. It was not altogether the fact that she had the peculiar vacant expression on her face, nor that she sat so still; it was because she was not working. In all the years Mrs. Eldon had known her, she had never seen those hands quiet until now. Even in church she resorted to crochet or tatting. The people were used to her and did not consider shocking what in another world had seemed a serious misdemeanor.

MRS. ELDON was one of those efficient, motherly women who naturally take charge of difficult situations and rejoice in helping others, and Louisa found herself upstairs in her own room almost before she was aware of it. But she couldn't go to bed. She had to pace the floor, to think. Her grief about her grandfather was deep and sincere; but all the stress of the evening taken together had been almost too much for her. Youth, romance, disappointment, old age and death. Joys, thrills, gossamerlike dreams, vague regrets, sorrow. She felt smothered under the series of conflicting emotions.

Opening the window she leaned far out in the starlight breathing deeply of the spring freshness. Below on the little well-kept lawn, flowers blossomed, and the dark spots nearest the white wall she knew were half-opened roses, velvety and blood red. Above, were infinity and the stars. Was there a God up there, somewhere, ordering the wonderfully timed march of the planets and the earth? She recalled a poem they had memorized while in the second year of high school:

"He who from zone to zone,

Guides through the boundless air thy certain flight,

In the long way that I must tread alone,

Will guide my steps aright."

Impatiently she slammed the window tightly shut as if to exclude infinity. She might as well be honest with herself. She didn't really want to believe in God. Because if you really believed in him you would have to give up everything in this world and follow where he led you, and if you weren't gifted with dreams and visions of your own you'd have to take somebody else's word for the mind of that God. Passionately she shook her head.

PICKING UP the little hand mirror on her dresser she studied her face carefully. Was she more like Venus or Psyche? She laid the small mirror down and gyrated slowly before the larger one. In her softly clinging nightgown all the lovely curves of her body were alluringly visible. She had the strength of Venus, she decided, but her face was more softly feminine in its beauty—more soulful, like Psyche's.

She remembered overhearing one of the teachers say once: "That Louisa Miller could be an empress, with her beauty her queenly poise, and her quick wit." And yet she was not particularly proud of her gifts, only rejoiced in them. These things meant she could have what she wanted in life. She had tried their power before; what she had accomplished with a well directed glance of her expressive eyes, a well-taken pose of her body, a bit of judicious acting, she could accomplish again. She wanted her life to be rich, and full of contrast—like the red velvet rose against the white wall of the cottage, scarlet wine in an earthen beer stein, or blood on snow. Her life must be thrilling, full of action and graceful movement.

But these weapons of hers belonged to youth. Would she grow old? Sometime in the dim future would death come? She could remember her grandfather before old age settled upon him, his step brisk, his voice lively and gay. But science really was doing such marvelous things—you could expect almost any miracle now. Certain terrible diseases had been conquered, new inventions—why, there was that wonderful new thing called radio, where people could actually talk over the air. Sometime in her own life someone of these wonderful men would find the mysterious reason for life—bring back the mischievous Loki who had stolen the golden apples of youth away from this beautiful Valhala of a world.

She paced the room nervously, and felt she could never sleep. Should she read? Nothing to read in her room, and she couldn't bear to go downstairs again; her loneliness would be too intolerable with all the sorrow down there. Wait. Those old books her mother had put in a box in her closet, perhaps—

THE BOX was soon dragged forth and the lid opened revealing its contents. She loved the musty smell of old books and her fingers lifted them almost reverently. There was an ancient, battered diary that had been grandfather's—she couldn't bear to look at that; a book of poetry—

She opened that. You often found inspiration and courage in poems.

"Does the journey take the livelong day?"

From morning till night, my friend.

Does the road wind up-hill all the way?

Yes, to the very end."

"Good grief!" she flipped the page over.

"This life is full of numbness, and of balk."

She threw the book down in disgust. "No wonder mama junked that."

Here was an interesting book with one flexible cover gone. The Book of Mormon. She opened it idly. Dan believed in this. And just to think, if she hadn't had such a sensible mother, she would have been baptized, too, in which case she would have owed it to herself to read that book. Just how firmly did Dan believe it? She had forgotten what it was all about, but she had heard quite often that there was no evil in it. No harm to read a bit.

"But behold, this my joy was vain, for their sorrowing was not unto repentance, because of the goodness of God, but it was rather the sorrowing of the damned, because the Lord would not always suffer them to take happiness in sin."

"Good grief!" she said to herself again and chucked the book back into the box. Then, suddenly feeling very small and tired and alone, she crept between the sheets and cried herself to sleep.

Morning, however, found her brightly rested, and there was much for her to do. Her mother was still engulfed in that trancelike sorrow that had held her so quiet the night before. Louisa, with the help of Mrs. Eldon and Dan, did all the necessary work and attended to all the funeral arrangements. Robert Garfield came too, along with many others, expressing his sympathy in a few well-chosen words. He had called to her as she had stepped out on the lawn for a moment of rest. But he was not thinking so much upon her sorrow as upon himself, of that Louisa felt sure. For he launched right out in a discussion of his plans. He showed her a letter he had just received from Professor Hunt.

She took it, feigning an interest she did not feel.

"Mr. Robert Garfield, Esquire,
"Monroe, Iowa.

"Dear Robert: Well, my boy, I have almost completed arrangements for our futures. I mean, I have them thought out in my own mind, and that is half the battle, you know. Money and a little effort will do the rest. Now can you marry that little girl you said you thought so much of, and be ready to sail about the end of the month? It will not take long for me to finish my work here. I have even had a very encouraging talk with a big publisher here who will publish the results of our combined researches gladly if we can make them interesting enough. And we can—we can! For we are hunting for truth, my boy—we are going to leave all our legends and traditions behind us, and there is no doubt but that we will succeed in doing a great work.

"The Society Islands are beautifully romantic—you will be asked to do no hard work I am told—the climate is delightful, and I think it should appeal to that sweetheart about whom you told me. I am in haste now. Please answer by return mail.

"Sincerely yours,

"Darwin W. Hunt."

"Well, you know who the girl is," Robert said when she had finished reading.

"Yes—but I'm afraid I shall have to disappoint you. I am already engaged."

"To Dan Eldon? That moving petrified rock! I thought so. But he'll never move far away from his old home town. And you'll simply be another Mrs. Eldon like his mother—sort of second class leader of small town society. Dan isn't the type to do anything big and startling."

"He thinks of somebody besides himself, anyway," Louisa blazed. "He's not a bit selfish!"

"Meaning I am. You have me sized up wrongly, but I suppose it makes little difference now. You're not the only girl in the world. I am bitterly disappointed of course, because I really—you are the only girl I ever can love. You are so queenly in your bearing, and so beautiful—and I mean to be a king among men—a new kind of king to be sure, but still a king. There is another girl I can get—met her in Chicago. She's sort of beautiful, too, but cheap, an imitation. Not a very good reputation, but old Hunt wanted me to marry her in the first place. She's a type he wants to study."

"But—but that would be terrible, Robert. You—you don't love her. I—it seems—"

He laughed darkly. "What's the difference? I can't have the one I love."

"Ah, but you will get over loving me. You will meet someone else sometime, and then you'll feel you should have waited, your life will be a tragedy. Oh, Robert—"

"If that ever happens, I can get a divorce, can't I? The idea that marriage is for life is just based on old traditions which in turn were based on the Bible and things like that. And what's the Bible? Just a bunch of old legends. We're going to get away from all that. We're going to build up a new code of ethics based on natural scientific living and common sense. Louisa! What if you do love Dan? He has no ambitions, to speak of. He'll never give you the beautiful things you ought to have. You'll never have any of the thrills that come from doing big things. You could

Part Five

BITTEN BY A RATTLESNAKE

On a very warm day in September, 1870, with John Jones, my wife's twelve-year-old brother, I was getting wood out of a gulley some two miles from home. As I was climbing up the bank with one hand holding the wood, I reached to take hold of the grass in order to pull myself up. A rattlesnake bit me on the wrist. I called to John to hand me the axe and I killed the snake. It was two years of age, having one rattle and the button.

My arm began to swell, and we started home. As soon as we reached the house, he ran in and excitedly informed them that I had been bitten by a rattlesnake.

My wife bandaged my arm tightly above the swelling which had reached near the elbow, in an endeavor to keep the swelling and poison from going up into my body.

News of my accident spread swiftly, and the neighbors came in each one with his own remedy. After trying several without any relief, I was urged to drink whisky. To this I objected for in the Irish settlement one boy (son of the family where we had the straw-stack experience) was given whisky and the effect of the snake bite and whisky left him bloated like one having dropsy. I had also read the statement of Doctor Chase that the "drink of the 'Devil's tea' was as bad as the bite."

It was Thursday afternoon that I was bitten and on Saturday evening Brother George Masters came to our house. The bandage was nearly covered with my swollen flesh. He asked if I had anointed my arm, and I replied that I had put olive oil on it freely, but that the oil had not been blessed. He was a priest and advised me that as an elder I should bless the oil, then anoint my own arm and pray that the good Master would heal me. He offered prayer, then I presented the oil to the Lord, asking that he bless it. I anointed the arm freely. We all retired for the night, and next morning the swelling was entirely gone and the skin was loose as if there was no flesh under it; it hung in loose wrinkles.

To me and to all in the house this was a great blessing. I noticed the difference in the effect of the oil before and after it was blessed. I believe, however, that the oil helped me before, for I suffered no pain.

James Walker, one of my neighbors and a Catholic by faith, called to see me, and he remarked: "I heard that you were bitten by a rattlesnake."

I answered, "Yes."

"What did you do?"

I said that I had tried several things.

"Take any whisky?"

"No, I did not."

"Let me see where you were bitten." But he could not see any sign of the bite and remarked, "Why, man, I don't believe you were bitten by a rattlesnake, for if you were and did not take any whisky nor have the doctor, you would be a dead man."

I answered that John Jones, my brother-in-law, was with me; we killed the snake, and he could see it if he would go to the place, telling him where it was. He went off saying that it was not a rattlesnake. I did not feel like telling him how I was healed. If I had said that I had sent for the Catholic priest and that he had placed some holy oil on me and prayed for me, he would have believed, but if I had stated the true facts, he would have treated them lightly. I have since thought, however, that I should have told him everything. Here was evidence to show that I had been poisoned by the snake bite and had been miraculously healed.

THE FIRST GRAIN HARVEST

In the fall of 1871, we harvested our first crop of wheat and oats. Having no granary, we secured sixteen-foot, twelve-inch boards, and made a bin in the house. There we put the grain. We had only the one room in which to cook, eat, sleep, and store our grain. Sometimes someone would stop for the night. We had room for three beds and we were always glad to have our friends visit us. Brother Charles Derry stopped with us several times.

The house was small but after we put in a good pine floor, lined the sides and had a loft, we were happy, because we were trying to serve the Lord, and often I thought of the blessings the Saints of former days received when worshipping the Lord in caves. He also blessed us. We were poor and had little means when we arrived in Nebraska, and nearly two years had gone since I had earned any money. In the summer we went barefooted.

HARD TIMES

Late in the fall Brother Charles Derry sent me word to meet him at Newman's Grove, to help him with a two-day meeting. That was fifteen miles up the creek. It was too cold to go barefooted and I had only one shoe. I wanted to attend the meeting, and the old saying is, "Where there is a will, there is a way." My wife had one good shoe, and as it was more for comfort than appearance, being large, I started to the meeting wearing my one shoe and Mary's one shoe.

On arriving at the grounds, Brother Derry called my attention to his feet. One of his big toes was beginning to come through the end of the shoe. He remarked that it was too bad he had to preach in such poor shoes.

As misery likes company, I said, "Notice the shoes I am wearing."

He turned away and said, "William, you have done well to come."

Brother Derry at this time was on a homestead. He had left the active ministry for a season. I wondered when I heard him preach if he had not made a mistake in leaving the ministry. Still circumstances were such that he had to do it for the sake of his family.

At this time, too, my wife washed and dyed flour sacks to make clothes for the children and for me.

In the year, 1872, we had bright prospects before us. The small grain was good and the corn was better. But in the forepart of August, as the corn began to form its ears, the grasshoppers came. Like a black cloud they swarmed in upon us! The next morning there was no corn. Throughout the whole State the crops were destroyed!

BACK TO OHIO FOR WORK

Leaving my wife and my three small children I went back to Ohio to work for the fall and winter months. My wife's folks were about a quarter of a mile from our house. I arranged with a boy of twelve to come to my home and do the chores. I was promised work before leaving home. I had to borrow money to pay my fare.

Upon arriving in Ohio I made arrangements to purchase a double harness costing forty dollars, for which I was to pay before returning home the coming spring. Soon the public works began to close down putting thousands of men out of employment. This was the beginning of the great panic of 1872 and 1873.

My family was in need of money to buy both food and fuel. I was working at the Woods Coal Mines near Church Hill. Brother William D. Williams was the boss. He was the man who baptized me, and president of the Brookfield Branch. It was he who had promised me work before I had left my home in Nebraska.

After working a few weeks, I came to the conclusion that I had better change my place of work because the mine in which I was working might run out as it had a small vein of coal. It was called the "Pumpkin" because of its thinness. Many said there were places where a large pumpkin would not go into the mine. I wanted to go to work in what was called the Sodom. It was new and had a much thicker vein of coal. While a number of mines were closing down, owing to the great money panic of '72 and '73, this mine was working steadily.

I was boarding with my sister, Mrs. John J. Morgan, who lived near this mine, and I was offered work there. Making the change would make it much more convenient for me as I had to walk about a mile to the Pumpkin. I said to Brother Williams that I was thinking of going to work at the Sodom. He did not like me to do so; he argued that he had kept this work for me and that he preferred my staying with him. I was driving a mule that was very high spirited, one which he had had much trouble in getting men to drive. I was doing so well with her that he did not like to change drivers.

I wanted to do what was right and again mentioned the matter to him saying that I would be going home in April and that I thought it was best for me to make the change. He became a little vexed and said that if I left and the Sodom should stop he would not give me work. He thought his mine would run just as steady as the other. I then dismissed the matter from my mind for a few weeks.

Again I was thinking on the matter, thinking of the thousands of men out of work and of my own wife and three children a thousand miles away from me in a dug-out with nothing but flour to live on since the grasshoppers had eaten up everything that was green. As I lay upon my bed at night I said, "Oh, Lord, thou knowest my condition. What shall I do?" That night I dreamed that two boys, one from each mine, stood before me; one holding in his hand a piece of dry bread without any butter, cheese, jam, jelly, or meat. The other boy from the Sodom mine held in his hand a piece of apple pie. A voice spoke saying, "Take your choice." I awoke and with feelings of gratitude in my heart I knew what to do. Had an angel of the Lord stood by my bed and told me what to do it would not have had a greater impression.

I called on Brother Williams and told him I had concluded to make a change and that I would give him a week's notice. He replied that I could go then if I wanted to but never to ask him for work again. I did not mention the dream.

The next day I went to work at Sodom and in a few days Brother Williams informed me that I had made a wise move, that their mine was only going to work one or two days a week and how long he did not know.

I worked every day for about four months and left for home in April with a box of dry goods I had bought and the set of harness. I had sent money home and had some when I reached the family. How true the dream! How good the Lord had been to me!

MORE GRASSHOPPER INVASIONS

One time more, the season of 1873, we put out a large acreage of wheat and oats and corn. The grasshoppers came again and left us only the small grain. It was beyond their power to hurt all in the stalk or shock. We had a large garden. My wife thought she would save some of it by covering the beets and onions with straw. But after the grasshoppers were gone and she went to uncover her garden, she found everything had been destroyed. The grasshoppers had eaten even the strong onions. They were a sore pest and covered hundreds of miles. Men who had the most stock were the worst sufferers as they had nothing to feed their cattle except straw, wheat and oats and did not have enough of that. That winter, however, I stayed home. We had plenty of flour, potatoes and butter, and game.

The year, 1874, was a repetition of the former two years. That fall I went to Carbon, Wyoming Territory, to work. The Government and the Eastern States sent supplies to the grasshopper sufferers. We were entitled to our share, but I was making three and a half and four dollars a day in the mines so I wrote home to my wife not to take any, but to let others have it. While I was away, our fourth child was born whom my wife named "William Thomas." I worked seven months in Carbon. The fare from Columbus to Carbon was ten cents a mile on the Union Pacific; the distance was four hundred miles which made the cost of the trip forty dollars each way. As I was thinking of returning home the news came that the grasshoppers had deposited their eggs in Missouri and southern Kansas after leaving us in the fall and summer and that now in March and April they were hatching and eating everything that was green. It looked as though there would be a famine in that part of the country. When the hoppers grew large enough to fly there was no telling in which direction they would go.

I was very anxious to return home after my seven long months in Carbon. It was a wicked place, a typical mining town of the early West. I lived alone and it was decidedly unpleasant for me, a married man, to work hard all day in the mines and then come home to a dug-out and get my own meals. But to go home and put in a crop, and then have the grasshoppers destroy it was not wise.

IN THE MIDST OF PERPLEXITIES

What was to be done? Some said, "The grasshoppers will not go back West; you will be safe in going home and putting in your crop." Others advised me not to go home, but to wait and see which way the grasshoppers would go. But it would be too late then to put in the crop. To send for my family to come to me was too expensive. Besides if there was no one on the homestead for six months, we would lose it. On the other hand, to stay in this place under the existing conditions for another year was more than I could make up my mind to do. I was making good money though, and the superintendent said if I would stay he would promise me steady work at four dollars a day. I was driving and hauling out the coal to the foot of the shaft. They had much trouble in getting practical drivers. I had broken some mules to the work after others had failed. One span of mules for which the company had paid five hundred dollars (mules were cheap then) had been taken down into the mines, but the drivers were as inexperienced as the mules, and they could do nothing with them. Miners were calling for cars and the company was calling for coal. The miners would not let the company put on more men as they were not getting the cars they ought to have. The conditions were perplexing to all. The drivers had never been in a coal mine before and they did not know how to do the work. Some parts of the mines were very steep, and they could bring only one car at a time from these places. When another experienced driver and I came in, we brought from four to six cars out at once. It was only a few days until the miners could not supply us with coal, and the company had to hire more miners. We were very well thought of by both the miners and the company.

The young man who was with me was a brother to Sister H. O. Smith, William Masters.

I have simply mentioned the above to show that "knowledge is power." The drivers who were there really worked hard, but they had had no experience.

The work was agreeable, and I was kindly treated by all notwithstanding it was a wicked place. But I was in such a frame of mind that if there had been any fortune tellers in the place I would have been strongly tempted to ask their advice, for I was very homesick!

THE GUIDING HAND POINTS THE WAY

I needed light and under the circumstances I sought the guiding hand of Him who never makes mistakes and I was permitted in a dream to see myself at home with a fine prospect for crops, when suddenly I heard the unpleasant noise in the distance of the grasshoppers. At last they came down, a black cloud of them. The earth, I thought, was covered with them. At last I saw them rise and go northwest. To my surprise, there remained a beautiful crop of small grain and corn. I was satisfied after I awoke that it would be safe for me to return home. Still I said, "It doesn't seem possible that the crop can be any good if they come down as thick as I saw them, for they were so numerous that in a few hours they could have eaten everything green." My brother, John, had come to Nebraska. With his assistance and that of my wife's folks I put in the spring wheat and oats although I did not come home until the ninth of May. It was snowing then, while the earth was green with vegetation. But it was not long before the snow disappeared. We put in our corn and had an excellent stand which grew nicely.

About the middle of June the grasshoppers came, just as I had seen them in the dream. I was standing in the potato patch with hoe in hand when I heard the familiar and unpleasant sound. Shortly after they came down so thick they darkened the sun. Fortunately for us, rain commenced to fall and the weather turned cooler causing a heavy damp mist which prevented the grasshoppers from doing much damage. The next morning, aided by a strong breeze, they all left. The only damage of any importance was to the corn that had not yet made over six inches of growth. Had it not been for the cool, heavy mist all the crops would have been ruined. We harvested sixty-five and seventy-five bushels of corn that fall.

There were several other interesting incidents that occurred while we were in Nebraska. One was the baptizing of Grandma Stow, who had been an old-time Saint in the lifetime of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. She had been faithful through dark and cloudy days of the church. She sent me word to come and baptize her. She could have been received on her former baptism, but she requested me to baptize her. She entered the water with a very sore and painful limb. It had troubled her for years. In answer to her prayers for fifteen years she was healed of that long standing complaint. Just a few years before her death the affliction returned she being over-taxed with work in her extreme old age.

One late Easter Sunday, about the thirteenth of April, my wife and I and the children went to visit Sister Stow. She lived thirteen miles above us on the creek. That night there came a terrible storm, a blizzard which continued for nearly three days and nights. We had a young ox team, splendid travelers, but there were deep ravines to cross and no bridges, and we had considerable anxiety as to whether or not we could get through to our home. Imagine our surprise when we found the snow packed so hard that it held up the oxen and wagon. Soon we arrived home to find our few hogs all safe although they had been covered with the snow. One yearling heifer was gone with the storm. She was found a week later some thirteen miles from home. Strange as it may seem to the reader, the knowledge of the whereabouts of the lost animal was revealed in a dream.

Music strengthens hearts courageous, it urges men along,
The tide of battle often has been altered by a song;
No race can live without it, it is heard from pole to pole,
For music is the utterance and expression of the soul.

Clean Food, Clean Hands, Clean Dishes

(Editorial from American Journal of Public Health, February, 1934.)

The recent outbreak of amebic dysentery, which has caused more than twenty deaths, and which has spread to more than one hundred communities throughout the country during the past few months, points to a task demanding the serious attention of all health departments; that of eliminating insanitary practices in the dispensing of food and drinks.

Amebic dysentery first broke out in a Chicago hotel, where it was traced to food handlers. The disease spread rapidly to other food handlers and thence to guests of the hotel, many of whom were visiting the Century of Progress Exposition, and it was carried back to more than a hundred widely scattered communities.

This is one example of what can happen when purveyors of food and drinks are not required to uphold high standards of sanitation, and when there is inadequate medical examination and supervision.

It is well known that in most restaurants, soda fountains and other public eating places, the basic principles of sanitation are not generally observed. No food handler, without first washing his hands thoroughly with soap and water, should serve a customer. How many do it? No dish should be used for serving food or drinks without first being thoroughly cleaned "in a solution of soap or soda or suitable cleaning powder in hot water followed by a thorough rinsing or spraying or immersion in clean, boiling (212 F.) water for a period of one minute, or in hot water of a temperature of not less than 180 F. at all times when used for purposes of sterilization, for a period of two minutes; by sterilization with live steam, or by some other equally effective method approved by the Department of Health." What proportion of utensils used in public eating places, especially soda fountains, are washed in this way?

About ninety-two percent of all communicable diseases are transmitted through the mouth and nose. Surely there is no better place to break the chain of saliva-borne and food-borne infections than at eating and drinking places. Transmission of disease by food and drink dispensers will end when the public demands that all food and drinks be served by healthy attendants with clean hands, in clean dishes, and health departments take vigorous action to enforce sanitary codes.

Years ago the public accepted the common drinking cup. We believe that unnecessary sickness and death was the result, but the public did not seem to care. The public did not understand; that was the real reason it tolerated this deadly disease carrier. When health departments convinced the public of the awful price of the common drinking cup, action was demanded for its abolishment.

However, the common drinking cup has never really been abolished. We still have it, though not in the same form as before. Now it is in the form of glasses, dishes, and tableware inadequately cleaned between servings. Go to almost any soda fountain, in any city; watch the attendant pluck a glass from the counter, swish it about hastily in a basin of muddy-looking tepid water, rinse it quickly in cold water, then use it to serve another customer.

That glass is worse than the common drinking cup! Its superficial washing has served only to bring it into contact with germs from many other glasses "washed" in the same water.

Influenza, the common cold, tuberculosis, pneumonia, scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, and Vincent's angina, are among the principal diseases that can be transmitted by unclean eating utensils. Pathogenic organisms are not removed by common methods of washing. After they are used and hand washed, more than twenty percent of the organisms remain adhering to eating and drinking utensils.

Clean food, clean hands, clean dishes: These three hold great hope for the control of saliva-borne infections.

To educate the public, to demand sanitary practices in the dispensing of food and drink in restaurants, soda fountains, and other public eating places, there has been organized in New York City The Committee for the Study and Promotion of the Sanitary Dispensing of Food and Drinks.

This committee is urging the public, in its own interest, to follow four courses of action when eating in public:

1. Decline dishes, cups or glasses that are obviously unclean.
2. Quietly protest to the management against all insanitary practices observed.
3. Commend the management of public eating places that uphold high sanitary standards.
4. Report by name and address to the Board of Health, all public eating and drinking places violating high sanitary standards.

Endorsement of the purposes of the committee has already been given by many leaders in civic, industrial and public health fields.

THE CONSTITUTION—WILL IT STAND THE STRAIN?

"Aye, tear the wrinkl'd parchment down!
Has it not held a place
Close to the human hearts that throb
In breast of noble race!
For it recites those principles
Of freedom for mankind
On which our Nation great has thriv'd
And whereby States we bind!

'Hold! There are those among us who Say God's hand held the pen
That wrote that sacred document
And guided those wise men.
Aye! Millions now arise in might
Who will not be denied:
'The Constitution! Hope of all Shall not be crucified.'"

PAY TO ALMIGHTY GOD OR ORDER

or some proof of his agency. And even if the documents were in good order, and they found the agent doing that which was directly contrary to the known attributes and rules and habits of his master, would they not be certain to doubt the validity of his authority? And just so surely as they did, his power would be curtailed, for people would not trust him.

Perhaps the membership, as well as the priesthood of this church, can afford to think well on the questions "Am I a bona fide representative of God? Would I be known as such even if I had lost my baptismal certificate or license to preach? Am I doing God's works—in his way—with loyalty—and with God's power?"

"Pay to Almighty God or order, one million dollars." Who will dare to step forward and prove to the world his right to endorse such a check and present it to the bank for payment? There will be many such checks, and many honest souls dedicated to the work of the Lord, as soon as he has a people who will prove their right to represent him in legal, financial, and spiritual affairs by doing his works, in his way, with loyalty and diligence, and under the blessing of his power.

AFTER DEATH—WHAT?

kingdom." Jesus replied: "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." (Luke 23: 43.)

Jesus said: "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. And before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them from one another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats." To those on his right hand, who had ministered to the needs of the hungry, thirsty, naked, sick, imprisoned, and disconsolate of even the least of his brethren, he will say: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." But to those on the left hand, who failed to do that, he will say: "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." And these "shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." (Matthew 25: 31-46.)

"Everlasting fire" means something terrible, but whatever it is—and it appears to be remorse—no one can afford to choose the course in life that will bring him to such an end.

Some say there is no hell! Who is it that has never seen such in this life? For instance, in the home of a drunkard, when drunkenness is advanced. A concomitant of the suffering in hell will be "weeping and gnashing of teeth." Profound remorse will be expressed because of there having been no collaboration with Christ, the Son of God, in achieving his purposes, life's unique, wondrous, and divine opportunities not worthily utilized, a sensing that Almighty God has been rejected with all his grace!

"The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God," says the psalmist. Even in our order of society we find it necessary to have prisons, and in the world to come there is a prison. To it the wicked go at death, and the righteous into paradise.

A change of character is not effected at death. The undertaker's shroud of the rich man was not changed by death into a robe of Christ's righteousness. Death is but the vestibule through which we pass from this life into another conscious state of existence—if we have done the right thing, into fair fields of immortality.

Can the dead be called back to the living? This question has stirred in the minds of many people. It has never been my impression that the claim was well founded; that one's mother or sister or brother or father or any other relative or friend could be called into some dark room in a house facing on some alley, at the behest of someone having no faith in God or Christ or the Holy Spirit, to a place they would not frequent in earth life. It has been a source of wonderment to me how anyone could think such a thing is done. So far as I know, none of the spirits that it is asserted appear has ever claimed contact with Christ on the other side. They must have gotten into the wrong place.

Often there is subtle fraud connected with these doings. Then, too, all rogues are not on this side of the grave. Satan, we are informed can well nigh transform himself into the appearance of an angel of light. And imagine one being controlled by an Indian or some other mortal. Rather would I have confidence if there was guidance by the Holy Spirit.

And yet it is thought in claiming that spirits are called back to this life, that a great discovery has been made of continuity of life. Have such folks never read the Bible? Do they not know that the appearance of Jesus Christ after he rose from the grave is an authenticated and fundamental truth of Christianity? Have these folks no sense of humor? Asking us to accept a candlelight for the noon-day light of Christianity—and in superlative form we have the whole recital as set forth in the Scriptures.

How strange is the fact that some believe a departed spirit of man can reveal himself to man, but do not believe that God reveals himself. Hear from the spirits of men, but not God!

What is most important is not proof of a mere survival of life beyond the grave, but possession of a fitness of character—eternal life—to dwell with Christ forevermore. In other words, what is important is a possession of the life exemplified by the Lord Jesus, plus immortality.

If I were asked for one text why I believe spirits of the dead cannot by persons be called among the living, it would be this: In the book of Revelation, we read that John the Revelator upon Christ's appearance to him, fell as one dead; and Jesus laid his right hand upon him and said: "Fear not; I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." (1: 17, 18.) I do not believe the inhabitants of hell can be got out as easily as some imagine. If there is easy access to the spirits in hell and to the point of conducting them to their relatives and friends on earth, why did Jesus talk about the "keys of hell" being in his possession? The "keys" are in the right place—in the custody of Jesus Christ. Nor are the rest of the dead, in paradise, subject to the whimsical calls of persons on earth.

Angels of God serve as ministering spirits to the heirs of salvation, and good men departed from this life sometimes execute missions delegated to them by the Lord, as in the ministering of the angel to John the Revelator, one of his fellow servants and of his brethren the prophets, and Moses and Elias who "appeared in glory," and spoke to Jesus of his "deceased which he should accomplish at Jerusalem." (Luke 9: 30, 31; Revelation 22: 8, 9.)

Is there an opportunity beyond the grave for mankind to accept the gospel of Christ? Note Peter's remarkable words bearing on this subject: "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water." (1 Peter 3: 18-20.) In the next chapter we read: "For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." (4: 6.) I am reading from the regular Authorized Version of the Bible. Now observe particularly the language: "Christ after being put to death in the flesh and quickened by the Spirit, went and preached to the spirits in prison." It is stated who these were: "Which sometime were disobedient when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water." The language is explicit relating to Christ: "he went and preached unto the spirits in prison." The word "preach" in the Scriptures is associated with the gospel—what Christ preached to the spirits in prison was the gospel.

I do not wish to be understood as teaching or suggesting that in the spirit world there is a second chance to accept the gospel and be saved in celestial glory for those who after a full opportunity have refused the gospel in this life. There will be degrees of glory among the resurrected dead, for it is written: "There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead." (1 Corinthians 15: 41, 42.)

It would seem that due to the advance iniquitous environments of the antediluvian world, affecting the children and all, nothing remained to be done but remove them by the flood, as nothing could be made out of them in this life. To the spirits of these was the gospel preached by Christ, himself, that they "might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit."

The day is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God and shall come forth, "they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." (John 5: 28, 29.) Such is the marvelous, divinely ordained experience that yet awaits man. An interval of one thousand years separates these two resurrections. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." But the "rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." (Revelation 20: 5, 6.)

The body, subject to decay, will in the resurrection be clothed upon with immortality. For "this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." (1 Corinthians 15: 53.) No more death or tears or pain—for the "former things are passed away." Then the mind will be qualified to learn the origin of things, even to know God himself. What abundant fruitage is associated with the triumph of the Lamb of God! These things we learn from Christianity.

Everybody is going to stand before the great throne of God, and receive a square deal. That which in this life in this respect is a rather rare experience will there be the rule. In the book of Revelation, Saint John writes: "And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things that were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their works." (20: 12, 13.)

A person carries within himself a record of his life. Conduct stamps every person with its mark. A judgment day for all men looms ahead. Right and wrong cannot merge at the same place, until God changes. A study of God's laws and his working in human affairs, makes great the contrasts of human responses to his rule. His judgment is not arbitrary—there will not be two long lines of humanity, one by an arbitrary act assigned to everlasting life and the other to everlasting punishment. Each person will receive according to his works.

The fact of God—the greatest fact in the universe—calls for a recognition of his reign, decision which makes people that can be relied upon, thorough and clean thought, untrammelled recognition of human brotherhood the spirit and doctrine of Christ receiving primary consideration.

The Holy Scriptures—what a rich storehouse, to which we can turn and receive a trustworthy answer to all important questions of this life and future.

A PECULIAR PEOPLE

peculiar people, if at all, not because of strange or unseemly manners and customs, but because of the full realization of that close relationship between the Master and ourselves which makes us, of all people, His and His alone. Because we do sense this kinship with the Divine, we make the stupendous, and unparalleled claim that "we have the mind of Christ," being in constant communication with Him, and that as He reveals His will unto us, His power is manifest through us, in all the gifts and blessings which heaven has to bestow, even as it has ever been manifested through those whom He has chosen; and that of all the children of Adam, this is a chosen generation, and His church a holy nation, to whom, and through whom the glory of God shall be revealed, in the coming of Him whose right it is to reign.

break with Dan—you could learn to love me, dear, if you only thought so. I'd be good to you. I'm not a villain, really." He paused imagining he saw signs of yielding in her eyes.

"Marriage is simply an institution foisted upon us by mankind in the historical past. There is a vast prehistoric era, Louisa, and we can guess, from our present knowledge of primitive peoples, that marriage is only a comparatively recent experiment. It's like the speaker said last night—we have to leave all those old things—we must not be afraid to pioneer—to explore new fields, to—"

"Oh, but he didn't mean—he didn't mean marriage, and things like that, Robert," she drew away from him, and felt she could talk with him no longer. She knew now why she could not respond to this man's ardent advances. There was something unstable about him. He was right about Dan. He was a sort of rock, firm, unyielding. She not only loved Dan—she needed him.

"I'm sorry, Robert. I can't deny I'd like the adventure more than I can tell, but I feel toward Dan just like you say you feel toward me. I can never love anyone else. I can't help it, even though—"

They were silent a moment, the young man making an evident effort to control the violent emotions he felt. Finally he began to speak, but hesitated as the figure of Aunt Bashy ambled painfully toward them. Her face was uglier than ever, her eyes swollen nearly shut with the tears she had shed, her mouth turned solemnly down at the corners.

"Lou, you ought to be ashamed of yourself, standin' out here flirtin' when you're engaged to that fine young fellow that was here last night, and your grandfather lyin' in there cold and dead—"

"Aunt Bashy, listen." Louisa was very gentle with her. "I am just saying good-bye to Robert. He is going away across the ocean soon. I'll be in the house right away."

Aunt Bashy turned away, mumbling to herself.

"Why does it have to be good-bye, Louisa? I have an idea. It just seems I can't let you go out of my life entirely. Why can't you and Dan come with us? Hunt wants another couple. Can't you persuade Dan? He loves you, you know."

Louisa recalled the image she had studied so many times in the mirror. A sense of power swept over her.

"Yes," she said, "I believe I can."

Looks Forward to Her Baptism

Although I am not one of your number yet, I hope to be as soon as circumstances permit. I am the friend referred to by Sister Hughes in this sanatorium. I have been reared a Roman Catholic, and after meeting people of other faiths and questioning them, I decided their beliefs lacked even more than my own, consequently I was not looking for something better in a spiritual way when I came in contact with the restored gospel. After Sister Hughes told me about the Latter Day Saints, I became interested and read all the church literature she had on hand, also other books I had given me by members of the church who visited here.

Elder James Wilson was a regular visitor and in his administrations to me made several statements which convinced me that this was the true church. I received a great blessing from these administrations, and in a few months made a miraculous recovery after having been seriously ill. This unusual recovery was a surprise to my doctor and relatives, and this blessing in itself was evidence to me that God does heal through prayer and administration.

At first I was skeptical as to the truth of the Book of Mormon and the method of its coming forth. One night, however, I had a dream which fully convinced me of the divinity of this book.

I give this testimony in the hope that others reading it will believe that God still watches over us and will bestow all His blessings upon us if we have faith and pray. Although I have had no promise of healing, I feel that I will be and I am looking forward to being baptized and associating with the Saints.

Grateful for the Gospel

Thank God for his wonderful blessings to me, and especially for the opportunity to accept his gospel! I was a wanderer when Christ took me in. I was born into the Roman Catholic Church, but when I was old enough to think for myself, I became dissatisfied with that form of doctrine. I wandered here and there hoping to find something that would give my soul rest, but no man-made doctrine satisfied me.

Then I left England for Canada, and at Guelph I heard two Latter Day Saint elders preach. They were Elders St. John and King Cooper. Classing them as Mormons, I took little notice of them. After one year at Guelph, I moved up country to Grand Valley, and there to my surprise I was surrounded by Latter Day Saints. Still I had nothing to do with them. Leaving Grand Valley a year later, I moved to a place about seventy miles north, namely, Ravenna, and there I found some more Saints. I had little to do with them until one day I decided that I would like to find out for myself what these people believed. I went to their services to find fault and criticize, but what a surprise I received at the preaching I heard. Elder A. Brown, the branch president, preached on the Lord's Prayer and his sermon was decidedly different from what I expected to hear.

It was some months, however, before I went again. Then I heard that a missionary was coming to hold services, and I was at the first service and every one following for three weeks. I was made during this period to see that God works among men in the way he did in olden times and that he talks and leads his present-day church. He is the same God yesterday, today, and forever.

I realized then that my only hope of salvation was to do as he commanded me—to repent, believe, and be baptized for the remission of my sins. I was baptized August 14, 1932, by Elder D. Cameron, of Toronto, at Ravenna, and confirmed on the same day by Elders C. Cameron and A. Brown. God has blessed me in many ways since I came into his church, and I pray that I may be a blessing to others.

Let Us Work and Study Together

I feel that our women need encouragement, more especially those with small children, the ones just beginning the great task of training their little ones. We often hear our workers of the women's department say: "Of course the mothers with a number of little ones cannot come to the meetings of our department." Who is it that needs the help of this department? Is it not the mother with the tiny baby who needs the counsel of the older sisters? And has not the Lord told the older women to counsel with the younger women and teach them to love their husbands and families? Who then should meet with our women's department?

How much easier life would seem, and happier, too, if each one of us realized that those who have passed over the road of life ahead of us are yearning to help us, that we may be able to live a little higher and do a little better than they have done. When young people realize this and young and old study more how to live and work together, we will not have some of the deplorable conditions which exist today. It is a pity that fine mothers and grandmothers are told that their counsel and advice are not needed, and new friends, sometimes uninformed and many times untrue, are sought for advice.

Human relationships compose a vast field of study for all of us. Both officers of the church and laymembers should know something about social adjustments, cooperation, and the exercise of brotherly love and helpfulness.

Young children are not capable of knowing what they should do or where they should go. This surely is why our heavenly Father in his wisdom, has said that they should be subject to their parents. This places a grave responsibility on the father and mother. Their duties are many. Not only is it their privilege to provide for the physical needs of the child, but it is their responsibility to train the child for life, to foster in him or her spirituality, ambition, self-reliance. The duty of the parent is to present the son or daughter to the world as a good, dependable, and efficient citizen of the kingdom of God.

As parents we should always be kind and considerate of that which is for our children's good. Because we are human we often make mistakes, and though at times we cross a child's desires and will, that does not mean that we do not love him.

Our young cannot grow and develop as they should until we come to the place where we can all work together for the good of everyone.

Often I think what a wonderful thing is charity, and its exercise among us. For instance, if we older ones see that a young worker, especially a young priesthood member, uses some method in his work which we think is not just the thing, how helpful if we exercise charity and are careful what we say or do. Often if we wait, we will see that the young worker grows older and learns little by little so that he need not be told of the minor mistakes. A young tree can be bent to grow in the way we would have it grow; so also can a young life be shaped and molded by its training and environment. Accordingly, we cannot be too careful concerning the training and the surroundings and examples we give our boys and girls.

I very much appreciate the help of church associates, and words cannot express my gratitude to the heavenly Father for the help he is giving his people.

Growing Understanding of God's Purposes

"I learn as the years roll onward
And I leave the past behind
That much I had counted sorrow
But proves that God is kind;
That many a flower that I longed for
Had hidden a thorn of pain
And many a rugged by-path
Led to fields of ripened grain."

Four years of life as a patient in this hospital have been sufficient to prove to me the truths contained in the verse above. Like all who are told they have tuberculosis and must spend a period of time in a sanatorium, the information came as a blow to me. It was not long, however, until I realized that much good was to come of this seeming calamity, for aside from the opportunity to develop my own character, I was led in rather a peculiar way to room with one who, unknown to me, was seeking the church of God. There were several circumstances that convinced us both that God was directing our steps. This proved to be true for after investigating our teachings, she knew she had found the truth and is now a member of the church.

Because of the promise of healing in my patriarchal blessing, which I received just four months before I came here, I fully expected to be healed of this disease right away. I am now sincerely thankful that my prayers in this respect were not answered at that time, for other blessings have been given to me that have made up for the promise that is yet to be fulfilled. I have learned many things that I could never have learned any other way.

Elder James Wilson has been very kind in coming out to administer to me whenever he could, and his spiritual talks have done untold good.

After two years or so "on exercise" in what is called the pavilions, I became quite ill and had to be moved back into the building again. This was quite a disappointment to me, although I should have known through previous experiences that there was some purpose in this. I was again led to room with one who, after inquiring what church I belonged to, became interested in the things Elder Wilson and I told her of our organization. She is writing a testimony for the Herald also.

The past year and more has been a series of blessings. In times of need I have received spiritual peace and strength to encourage and help me. Friends, Saints, and relatives have been kinder than I thought they could be. The Herald I enjoy each week was a Christmas gift which has lasted throughout the whole four years I have been here.

Several of the church officials and missionaries have added to my happiness by coming with local Saints to see me when they had an opportunity.

Isolated Pair Write Their Desires and Blessings

Wife and I were baptized into the church last August by Elder Mettlin at Hutchinson, Kansas, and have been isolated most of the time since. There is only one other family of Saints living near us of whom we know. We would like any priesthood members or others of the Saints passing through this section, to look us up and visit with us. We get hungry for the company of our brothers and sisters of the faith. We live two miles south of the Round-top Schoolhouse.

EARL TYSON.

I should like to tell of the healing of our little four-year-old son. Last June he was very ill. The doctors did not know what the disease was. In the latter part of July we took him to Hutchinson, Kansas, and Elder Mettlin administered to him on Saturday. Sunday he was much better, so we took him to church and Elders Mettlin and Madden administered to him again. Soon the soreness and swelling left him, and today the child is in perfect health. Indeed we are grateful to God for his goodness.

Brothers and sisters, pray for my parents that they may be led to accept the gospel.

Preparing for Zion

Conditions here in Winnipeg keep the Saints mindful of the need for the redemption of Zion, and we are looking to it soon. But we realize that it would be a shame to dump ourselves at the Bishop's feet like an army of untrained, raw soldiers, and expect the church to prepare us at the last moment when we have wasted years of good time that might have been used in preparing ourselves for the task. Trained men and women are in demand everywhere, but "green hands" are simply not wanted, and I doubt if there will be many who do not prepare themselves for the building of God's city, that will be permitted to see it.

At any rate, we feel that the proper thing for us to do here is to prepare for Zion, to learn to work together, and to learn to love and to work for God. We feel if we can accomplish that, that we shall have something worth while to offer when we come up to Zion. This spring the branch secured an acre of ground and made a garden for the church. Even this small project represents hours of labor for each member of the branch, and there were many difficulties to be overcome. It took faith to plant seeds in the earth that was so dry and dusty, and besides we had only a few cents to lose in actual cash. But spiritually we had everything to gain, and so we went ahead. No sooner had we finished the planting than there came up a three-day rain! Now our garden stuff is up, and even if we don't get a big price for it this fall, think how many needy people we can help next winter. Next year and probably this winter, too, Winnipeg Saints will be trying to discover even a larger project to set their hearts on.

QUESTION TIME

Note: All inquiries requiring speedy or individual answers should be accompanied by a three-cent stamp, or an envelope stamped and addressed.

A. B. PHILLIPS

Is Egyptian knowledge shown in the remains of ancient America?

Archæologists differ considerably as to the sources of knowledge shown in aboriginal American remains. Certain features have suggested to some writers that prehistoric American peoples may have had contact with Egypt ages ago, but others have not been inclined to concur in this opinion. One who is not an expert in such matters is liable to form untenable conclusions, particularly when superficial indications are relied on, hence the question can hardly be decided in the affirmative without careful scrutiny of objections urged, if we are to deal with it from a scientific viewpoint. From a neutral basis it does not seem unlikely that these ancients may have had Egyptian contacts before coming here.

Nadillac's Prehistoric America notes "singular resemblance" to the temples and palaces of Egypt "in some particulars," and that "certain characteristics" of the architecture recalls that of Egypt. Jones' History of Ancient America is more bold, and says "Egypt claims at once the general character of the architecture," but this is not admitted by most authorities on the subject. Perhaps the moderate way to conclude would be that while there is nothing conclusive to show this, yet enough exists to suggest Egyptian contact at some remote time. Some have noted that the inscriptions of America in some instances contain characters similar to some found in ancient Egypt. This would agree with the Book of Mormon claim that they used a reconstructed system known among them as "reformed Egyptian."

Who are those that shall obtain celestial glory?

In a revelation given to the church in 1832 those who are to have celestial glory are described, in part, as follows:

"They are they who received the testimony of Jesus, and believed on his name, and were baptized after the manner of his burial, . . . that by keeping the commandments they might be washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power; and who overcome by faith, and are sealed by that Holy Spirit of promise, . . . these are they who shall have part in the first resurrection; . . . these are they who are just men made perfect through Jesus the mediator of the new covenant."—Doctrine and Covenants 76: 5.

This seems to clearly indicate that celestial glory is for those who receive the gospel and keep the commandments and overcome. Some have supposed that those who do not receive the gospel in this life but afterward receive it shall have celestial glory, but I do not find any proof that one who hears the gospel in this life can neglect to obey it and yet obtain celestial glory hereafter. The same revelation refers to terrestrial glory when it says:

"Behold, these are they who died without law; and also they who are the spirits of men kept in prison, whom the Son visited, and preached the gospel unto them, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterwards received it; these are they who are the honorable men of the earth, who were blinded by the craftiness of men";—Ibid., 76: 6.

The reason why some do not receive the gospel in this life is a matter between them and God, of which we are incompetent to fully judge at present. Some have concluded that they are of those who in their preexistent state did not measure up to the requirements that others did, but of course this is speculation. There is meaning in the words of Jesus: "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; and he that believeth not, shall be damned." Also Paul says: "now is the day of salvation." The heart of faith and love will obey the gospel when that time comes to him.

Should one in giving testimony boast of his former wickedness?

Wickedness is a thing to be ashamed of, and one who is repentant will not seek to exploit his past evil deeds. However, on repentance it is proper that he should make confession in a proper place and proper time, seeking forgiveness. After this true repentance he should leave his past behind him and think of holy life.

The Banquet Which Marked the Close of a Year of Sacrifice

The banquet which marked the end of a year's work and sacrifice by the women in Zion during which time they raised a sum of more than seventy-six hundred dollars for the church. Approximately five hundred women sat down to this delightful repast served by the Laurel Club in the basement of the Auditorium. The meal was followed by a program of music and by addresses by President F. M. Smith and Bishop G. L. DeLapp.

Responding to the appeal of the Presiding Bishopric in October, 1932, that the women of the church accept the responsibility of sharing the load of its financial obligations, Independence women recruited their forces and undertook to raise the amount named as their quota, $6,000.

By personal sacrifice and with donations from time to time from clubs, societies and sales, the women in seven and one-half months raised $6,052.14. After an interim of two weeks, they again rallied their forces at the suggestion of the local bishop, J. S. Kelley, and by the same method raised $1,562.58 to apply on various church budgets in Zion. This was completed in four and one-half months and rounded out a year's work.

Missionary Busy in Indiana A Profitable Season Since General Conference

I arrived in Indianapolis, May 10, and held services there during the week. The scattered condition of the Saints in this city makes a continuous meeting very hard to carry on, and especially as the working conditions are so bad for many. We were able to hold seven preaching services, along with other meetings. The many other activities carried on by the branch, under the direction of the untiring and wise direction of Pastor A. W. Gage and his two assisting elders, give them plenty to do.

From Indianapolis, May 21, I went to Anderson, where we have a very active group of about thirteen Saints. I was able to hold five preaching services at a home. Priest Glenn Tice, lately ordained, is doing a nice piece of work for this group, having regular preaching on Sundays and church school. These services are held at the home of Brother and Sister E. P. Frandson, who welcome the meetings. I visited Centerton May 26, and with the help of Priest A. G. Bennett, who used his auto freely, was able to take meetings to different homes.

I was called to Washington for a funeral June 3. We began meeting there in the new cottage church, seven miles north of Washington, where a few Saints and some friends were able to erect a building thirty-four by twenty-six feet. The meetings continued over three Sundays, and June 17, four young married folks were baptized. Sunday, June 24, two more asked for baptism, making an addition of six members to the group.

The young converts at Washington have laid aside card playing, and say that cards do not look good to them now that they see the light of the gospel.

June 17 and 24, a basket dinner was enjoyed by all, in the front yard of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Harbstreit. A church school was organized, which held its first session July 1, with J. D. Harbstreit, junior, as superintendent. His brother, Z. M. Harbstreit was called to the office of elder, and will be ordained soon. Some

After Forty Years

Forty years ago June 30, Saturday, Elder Wilbur Paul, of Independence, pastor of Sugar Creek Mission, was baptized at a district conference at South Boardman, Michigan, by Elder F. C. Smith. He was confirmed Sunday, the following day.

Last Sunday, forty years to a day, Brother Paul was assisted in the pulpit at Sugar Creek by the veteran minister who baptized him. Brother F. C. Smith is known to many in the church for his missionary spirit and fervor.

Needs Our Prayers

Sister Myrtle Yates, of Lansing, Michigan, asks the Saints to remember in prayer her daughter, Mrs. Thelma Brooks, that a growth which resembles a tumor cancer may be removed.

Shortcut to Happiness

"A shortcut to happiness for oneself is to serve as a channel of the happiness of others."

Breckenridge Women Are Enterprising Group

The women's department has just bought new seats for the mission hall at Breckenridge, raising the money in a variety of ways. An ice cream booth erected on a busy corner during the recent two-day celebration brought in a substantial sum. They are now raising funds to purchase Saints' Hymnals.

Eleven Baptized at Sarnia, Ontario

Eleven children were baptized at Sarnia on Children's Day, Elder E. Stanley Phillips officiating. They were confirmed the following Sunday by Elder E. Stanley Phillips and Elder James W. Phillips.

Worry

Worry is a purely Western product, the outgrowth of our materialism, our eager striving after place and position, power and wealth, our determination to be housed, clothed, and jeweled as well as our neighbors, and a little better if possible; in fact, it comes from our failure to know that life is spiritual not material; that all these outward things are the mere "passing show," the tinsel, the gawds, the tissue-paper, the blue and red lights of the theater, the painted scenery, the mock heroes and heroines of the stage, rather than the real settings of the real life of real men and women.—George Wharton James in "Quit Your Worrying!"

twenty-five years ago, there was a branch here, but the elders and many of the members moved away, and so for over twenty years, no services were held in the neighborhood. Old Grandma and Grandpa Harbstreit were members, and while their four sons are nonmembers, the second generation is accepting the work.

Monday, June 25, I came here to Terre Haute, Indiana, where we have a few members, Sister Ann Tempist, a long-time member of the church, and now quite old, and Sister Viola Williamson, and her eight children. Six of them are members, the youngest boy, Melvin N. was just baptized yesterday, and the two youngest girls are not old enough to obey. I hold the meetings on the lawn of Sister's Williamson's home, using the porch to preach from. Brother Jake Williamson died a little over two years ago, and Sister Williamson has her hands full.

I feel that I have had a very busy and profitable time since the General Conference.

Wilber, Nebraska Eight Recently Baptized at This Historic Place

Children's Day was observed Sunday, June 17, at Wilber, Nebraska, with a program given at the eleven o'clock hour, sponsored by Sisters Gertie White, Mabel Oyler and Gladys Savage. The children did their parts well, and many feel that the work in Wilber will not fail for want of helpers in the future.

A basket dinner was arranged and served at noon, in Brother Walter Broliar's grove on the banks of the Big Blue River. Equipment is installed there for picnic purposes by the Rotary Club, and the Saints enjoyed themselves in recreation immediately following lunch.

At two-thirty an impressive baptism service took place. Eight souls were conducted into the kingdom, two adults and six young people of Wilber Sunday school. Elder Samuel Broliar, who has been president of Wilbur Branch for a number of years, and Elder O. L. D'Arcy, president of the Southern Nebraska District, officiated.

The confirmation service was held on the banks of the river following the baptismal ceremony, with a marked degree of the Spirit present to bless the occasion. The new candidates are as follows: Mrs. Lillian Franta, Mrs. Rossella Alberts, Leroy Alberts, Donald W. Savage, Shirley Rose Savage, Betty Marie Oyler, Leon Anthony, and Betty Anthony.

Members of this congregation have been working on improvements on their church building, and when it is completed, it will be in a splendid condition. They cordially invite any of the priesthood passing through to stop and visit them. This church was built forty-six years ago, and many of the old-time missionaries have stood behind its sacred pulpit. Brother Broliar says in all those years there are not over twenty services that he missed.

The restored gospel was first preached at Wilber, by Elder R. J. Anthony, an old-time missionary, well known to the church in the late seventies and early eighties. Wilber, Nebraska, was the home of Elder Charles H. Porter for many years, and he was a faithful missionary in this district for twenty-four years; it was also the home of Brother and Sister Christy, when they first came into the church. The first public discussion was held between E. L. Kelley and Clark Braden in the courthouse in the early eighties.

An all-day meeting was held June 10, in a grove on the farm of Sister George Everett, Near Union, Nebraska. Saints were present from De Witt, Auburn, Plattsmouth, Union, and Nebraska City. Apostle Roy S. Budd, missionary in charge of this district, and Elder O. L. D'Arcy had charge of the meetings. Apostle Budd spoke at the eleven o'clock hour and again in the afternoon to an attentive group of Saints and friends. These meetings are being held quite frequently throughout Southern Nebraska District during the summer months. Much good is being accomplished.

Wellsburg, West Virginia

Branch Moves Forward

A commendable activity on the part of the majority of Wellsburg Branch is moving the work onward and increasing their number. Regular visiting by priests of the branch has, during recent months, increased church attendance and given new spiritual life to the members. I. J. McVay and R. E. Rodgers have been quite active in this line of work, although Brother McVay has been working at Warren, Ohio, for sometime, which prevents him from giving regular attention to branch work here. The church school is doing nicely under the superintendency of Brother John Treibert.

On June 17, three young men were baptized by Brother R. E. Rodgers, and confirmed by O. J. Tary and Willard Allen. Brother Allen has been faithful as branch president almost the entire time since the branch was organized. On June 19 Sister Helen Allen was married to Mr. Kenneth Phillips. The bride recently graduated from the Wellsburg high school. The bridegroom holds a position with the Weirton Steel Company. The wedding ceremony was in the church, and was witnessed by a large assembly of friends. The rostrum was tastefully decorated with flowers, making an appropriate setting for the occasion. The bride was attended by her cousin Miss McMahan and the bridegroom by Clarence Allen, brother of the bride. O. J. Tary was the officiating minister. The young couple have the good wishes of a host of friends.

Los Angeles, California

Central Church

One of the busiest days here during the very active month of May, was Sunday, May 13. At the morning service, which was a district meeting, Brother Frank Van Fleet was ordained to the office of Patriarch, under the hands of Apostle J. W. Rushton. It was an impressive sacrament, and all who witnessed it were moved.

In the afternoon, a Mother's Day tea was given for mothers and daughters by the Mizpah girls. A musical program was given, after which tea was served to about eighty.

Los Angeles members have been happy to welcome numerous visitors, including Elder and Sister Arthur Ferrett, Brother and Sister Colin Ferret, George Mesley and Garland Tickemyer. Apostle M. A. McConley is to pay them a short visit soon. All of these people have contributed to the welfare of local services. They were especially happy to have the opportunity of hearing Brother Colin Ferrett and his wife in a Sunday evening concert of vocal numbers and piano solos.

The local choir presented a Sunday evening concert on May 28. The program was given in costume, and was patterned after an old-fashioned song fest. Many old-time hymn favorites were used and the program seemed to make a hit with the congregation. The choir is at present working on some Negro spirituals to be given as a special group on a coming Sunday evening.

We have lost two members of long standing in this branch, just lately. Sister Barbara Klein passed away after a short illness, on June 11. Brother Charles Crayne succumbed in Kansas City on June 14, shortly after going there for treatment. Sister Mabel Crayne made a hurried trip East for the funeral services.

The young people's division have been particularly active now that school is out. They joined the young people of the district in an all-day outing to Lake Arrowhead on Memorial Day, in which over one hundred and twenty-five participated. They have been publishing a mimeographed paper, three issues of which have appeared and been mailed to the entire membership. It is a fine little paper and has created such a favorable reaction that it is expected to continue the good work, with bi-weekly issues.

They have been serving Sunday night suppers at the church for the past several weeks. The suppers are attracting considerable patronage, and they create further opportunity for fellowship.

At present, the young people are hard at work on three one-act plays which are to be presented at the church on the evening of June 29.

The Children's Day program was presented on Sunday morning, June 17, under the direction of Sister D. B. Sorden, supervisor of religious education, and Sister Mayme McFarlin, children's supervisor. The service was beautifully arranged and aimed to show the teachings of the church in regard to children. During the course of the service, three babies were blessed and two young boys baptized.

Including four baptisms of members at Lennox Mission, they have had a total of nine in the last few weeks.

The Sunday School Class of Brother Lewis Shippey, which is the young adult group, held a unique and enjoyable party at the church on June 12. The party took the form of a cruise to South American waters; deck games were played and when they landed, they were given a lecture about the country.

Southern California district reunion has been postponed from its July date to August 17 to 26 at the same place, Huntington Beach. This action seemed advisable in view of the epidemic of infantile paralysis in this section. So far the Saints have escaped. Pastor D. B. Sorden is quarantined from his home at present, as his daughter, Marilyn, is suffering with scarlet fever.

The local chapter of the Graceland Alumni Association sponsored a banquet at the church on June 10, in honor of the three students who returned from Lamoni this year, Harmon Crum, Valaria Crum, and Warren Mackaye. They each spoke to the assembly about their experiences at the college. Graceland songs were sung and it seemed that a real Graceland spirit was felt by this group so far away from their Alma Mater.

Saint Marys, Ohio

All-day Meeting a Help to These Saints

An all-day meeting was held June 17, with Saints from Lima, Bradner, Toledo, and Uniopolis in attendance. In keeping with the spirit of Children's Day, two children of Brother and Sister Albert Preters were baptized, Junior and Cecil. Little Marvelee Felver was blessed under the hands of Gomer T. Griffiths, and the confirmation of the candidates was cared for by Elders Walter Weirbaugh, of Bradner, Gomer T. Griffiths, of Uniopolis, and J. M. Bartley, of Saint Marys.

Robert A. Galusha was ordained to the office of elder, and Philip Johnston, to the office of priest during the afternoon service. Elders who were present were R. F. Slye and W. Weirbaugh, of Bradner, Albert Preter, of Defiance, Chancy Cortrell, of Lima, Gomer T. Griffiths, of Uniopolis, and others of the Aaronic order. Special music was furnished by Enid and Evelyn Johnson and also by Sister Smith, district chorister.

Elder Slye preached at the eleven o'clock service, delivering a fine sermon. In the afternoon, Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths preached, presenting a special message to the priesthood.

The evening was given over to the children, who gave a most enjoyable program.

Southern New England Centers Interest in Onset

With the coming of summer months local branch activities throughout Southern New England District are transferred to beautiful Onset reunion grounds. And the major part of these activities will not be resumed in the branches until September.

The Onset reunion is scheduled for July 28 to August 12.

Webb City Celebrates Fifty-sixth Branch Anniversary

Webb City, Missouri, Saints celebrated on July 17, the fifty-sixth anniversary of their branch. Apostle F. Henry Edwards and District President Amos T. Higdon were there to help carry through a fine day's program.

Sister Florinda Bradford, the only charter member of the branch present at the celebration, gave an interesting talk along with other older members who related interesting experiences of early history.

Things That Wreck

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

Say Farewell to Brother and Sister Ward L. Christy

Approximately one hundred and twenty-five Saints gathered at Saskatoon, Sunday, May 27, for the farewell services for Brother and Sister Ward L. Christy, who have since left for their mission in Utah. Brother Christy preached at the eleven o'clock hour to a capacity audience, after which the photographer took a picture of the entire group. The Saints were then conveyed by auto to Buena Vista Park, where a feast was spread on the grass under the maples. It was a delightfully cool spot and the restful quiet added to the pleasure of the day.

Following the picnic lunch a program was enjoyed. After readings and musical numbers, Brother Henry Peidt, Saskatoon branch president, spoke of the work and sacrifice of Brother Christy during the years he had labored in this community, to which Brother Christy feelingly replied, expressing his regret in leaving. Brother Frank Peidt voiced his appreciation of the influence which Sister Christy had exerted over his life, and spoke of her zeal and enthusiasm in the gospel work. Sister Christy, in her reply, dwelt on the happy associations which she has enjoyed during her sojourn in this mission.

Saints were crowded into cars, following the program, and were driven to the river's edge, where Mrs. Boland, Mrs. Evelyn Bryce, and Jimmie Cunningham were baptized into the kingdom of God by Brother Christy. They were confirmed under the hands of Elders Christy and Diggle preceding the evening service.

A large congregation was present to hear Brother Christy's farewell sermon. By special request he and Sister Christy sang "The Old Rugged Cross," and the choir contributed "Loving Good Night." The service closed with the singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Because of the Saskatchewan plebiscite on "beer by the glass," a special temperance service was arranged for Sunday evening, June 10. Brother Arthur Gendron, the speaker, preached on the evils of intemperance, stressing the pitfalls which beset youth. A duet, "Don't Step There," was sung by Paul Cruce and Marvin Diggle. Ray Anderson and Frank Ward followed with readings. Violet Cruce then told a temperance story, and little Barbara Reid sang a solo, "The Drunkard's Child." Other music for the service was furnished by the choir.

Children's Day in Saskatoon, was held Sunday, June 17. The church was beautifully decorated with June roses and other flowers. The children, who occupied the platform, sang "Child of Galilee." Earl Cruce recited the Scripture lesson, Matthew 18: 1-6, and Sister Ethel Cruce, superintendent of the children's department, gave a talk on the significance of Children's Day. The program consisted of musical selections, readings, and drills. Certificates were presented to each little one by Sister Few.

On the second Sunday in June, the young people planned a sunrise prayer service. They met at the church, but because of the inclemency of the weather were obliged to meet in the home of Brother and Sister Peidt. Following the service they enjoyed a breakfast of oranges, wieners and buns. Last month the young people hiked several miles to the river, and after playing games built a fire and cooked a scrumptuous meal.

Do not fear to do or dare,
If you want a field of labor,
You can find it anywhere.

Fort Collins, Colorado

Outstanding Children's Day

Children's Day was observed June 10, and was one long to be remembered. The Spirit of the Master was present to a marked degree. Mrs. T. S. Moore, supervisor of the children's department, and Mrs. M. P. Tilton, planned the day's program.

The church school assembled at 10 a. m. The children were seated on the beautifully decorated platform, and took part in the exercises of the hour, which included the blessing of four children, Donald Gordon and Dorothy Marie, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hanawalt, under the hands of Elder K. G. Broliar, and Edgar B., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Seaworth and William Loven, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Broliar, were blessed by Elder Fred M. Shumate.

Immediately following, the congregation drove six miles to Bingham Hill where the ordinance of baptism took place. The following were baptized by Elder K. G. Broliar: Maynard Boyd and Barbara, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Broliar; Lucy Jane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Temple, and Betty Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. G. Broliar. Dorothy Elaine, daughter of Mrs. Gladys Bell and Letha Elaine, were baptized by Letha's father, C. C. Cable, priest of the branch.

Immediately following the basket dinner, the confirmation service was held, Elders K. G. Broliar and Fred M. Shumate officiating.

Five of the candidates baptized, and two of those who were blessed were grandchildren of the late William Broliar, who lived at Lamoni about thirty years ago and will be remembered by many who lived there at that time. Still another item of interest, Betty Grace and Letha Elaine each complete their respective family's membership in the church.

Apostle M. A. McConley visited the branch early in May, and inspired the Saints with one of his characteristically good sermons and cheered them with his fireside talks.

This congregation is happy that Glaude A. Smith was sent back to Eastern Colorado District. He was at Fort Collins a few weeks ago and preached two inspiring sermons.

The attendance at church services is increasing. The women of the branch have class work in the form of discussions of articles selected from current Heralds.

The prayer meetings are quite well attended. Regular rehearsals of music are held under the direction of Miss Lois Cable.

Holden Stake

Priesthood Ranks Augmented by Ordinations of Young Men

A most impressive ordination service took place Sunday evening, July 1, at Knobnoster, Missouri. Before the ordinations, President F. M. McDowell, Elders Amos E. Allen and J. A. Thomas, of the stake presidency, and Earl Higdon, director of religious education and a member of the stake bishopric, met at the country schoolhouse, south of Knobnoster, with the five young men to be ordained, and were served supper by Miss Burdine Raschke and Miss Jewell Johnson. Several talks were made, and the group was dismissed by prayer.

In the evening, the men of the priesthood marched into the church and up to the platform, while the congregation sang the hymn, "God Send Us Men." After the invocation by C. F. Scarcliff, a member of the stake bishopric, a reading by Earl Higdon about the restoration of the priesthood, and the singing of "Savior Teach Us," by a quartet of Holden girls, Brother McDowell delivered the charge to the congregation and the candidates. Following this the congregation sang, "Rise Up, O Men of God," to which the priesthood sang a response. J. A. Thomas offered the prayer of dedication, and Robert Kittenger, of Holden, sang, "Behold, Thy Servants, Lord."

T. J. Smith, of Blue Springs, was ordained to the office of high priest, by President F. M. McDowell. Clyde Johnson, of Warrensburg, Robert Thistlethwaite, of Sedalia, and Max Constance, of Warrensburg, were ordained to the office of Aaronic priest. Ordinations were by Amos E. Allen, J. A. Thomas, and J. A. Koehler. Elmer Moody, of Holden, and Charles Johnson, of Warrensburg, were ordained to the office of deacon, by C. F. Scarcliff and Earl T. Higdon. The ages of the men ordained are all between twenty-one and twenty-five.

Brother McDowell then presented

Priesthood Manuals to the men, following which the congregation sang, "O Master Workman of the Race." The benediction was by J. A. Koehler.

News From Norway

Two-day Meeting at Porsgrunn, Norway

Our annual Whitsundtide two-day meeting was held this year at Porsgrunn, Norway, May 20 and 21, and I am glad to report that it was one of the most spiritual that we have ever held in this mission. We were pleased with the attendance of visiting Saints and friends from Oslo, Kragerø, Arendal, Grimstad, Larvik, and Stathelle. Several of these members are isolated and do not have the privilege of attending regular meetings of the church, so it was quite an encouragement to them to meet with us on these two days.

Four meetings were held each day, the first being a baptismal service at nine o'clock Sunday morning, when a married lady, thirty-six years old, united with the church. She is the oldest daughter of Brother Nilsen, of Kragerø. He has nine children and six of them are now members of the church. God revealed to him, some years ago, that the time would come when all of his children would be members of the church. They are coming one after the other.

Sacrament service held at ten-thirty was a real Pentecost for us. The good Spirit was present from the singing of the opening song until the close of the meeting. The sister who had been baptized was confirmed at this meeting, and a young brother was ordained to the office of priest. The Saints will not soon forget the blessings enjoyed at this service.

At four o'clock in the afternoon, I preached the opening sermon of the two days. In the evening at eight o'clock, Brother Nilsen, of Kragerø, preached a good sermon. The four meetings on Monday were a priesthood hour at nine o'clock' preaching by two of our young brothers of the Aaronic priesthood at ten-thirty, a lecture by Sister Ruch on behalf of women's work in the church, at four o'clock, and then a sermon by the writer at eight o'clock in the evening. All of the speakers were blessed in their efforts and the Saints were encouraged and strengthened. Much special music and singing was enjoyed. We had a little orchestra consisting of two guitars, two harps, and a piano. Sister Ruch and some of the Porsgrunn sisters sang several special numbers at the various meetings. A pleasant and profitable two days were spent together.

Open Air Meetings in Oslo

We have this year, again, obtained the privilege of the use of one of the city parks on Saturday evenings for open air meetings. This is a wonderful privilege for us to get our message before a number of people who otherwise might never hear it.

Each Saturday night that the weather permits, Sister Ruch and I, accompanied by a number of Saints assemble in the bandstand and with our little folding organ as music we have a song service and then one of the local brothers makes a few introductory remarks after which I make the main address of the evening.

In April of this year I baptized a lady who heard our message first during our open air meetings last summer. She discovered that we had more of the gospel than she had received before, and she continued to attend our meetings all winter and was baptized this spring. She seems to be a sincere spiritual woman and will no doubt be a good member. We trust that also this year, at least one honest soul may hear the voice of the Good Shepherd and follow him.

At the recent General Conference, the appointing powers saw fit to reappoint us to this mission for another conference period. While this was more or less of a disappointment to us after our spending so many years in this mission, still we want to be of service wherever God and the church want us to labor. So we ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints in all the world that this conference period may be the most fruitful and profitable time we have spent in Scandinavia. V. D. RUCH.

Ridgetown, Ontario

Celebrate Fifty Years as a Branch

Ridgetown Saints celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the formation of their branch Sunday, June 3. Branches from all over Chatham District were represented, and special speakers for the day were Bishop John C. Dent, Elder John Shields, and Elder D. J. Williams. Elder Williams for four and a half years has been president of Chatham District, and Ridgetown Saints greatly regret that he is leaving, but they wish him further success in his new field.

Special numbers by the choir under the leadership of Brother Lavern Perritt, were greatly appreciated. At the morning service Sister Ethel St. John was heard in a pleasing solo. At the afternoon service the male quartet consisting of Brothers Lavern, Arthur, and Clarence Perritt and Tom Newman, was heard, and in the evening a duet by Sister Dora Perritt and Tom Newman, was enjoyed by a large congregation.

The early morning prayer and sacrament service was in charge of Elder Shields assisted by the pastor, Elder George Perritt, and Brother Thorpe, of Chatham.

On the evening of June 4, Bothwell Saints presented a splendid program in the Ridgetown Church, and a large attendance was recorded. Lunch was served.

The prayers of the Saints are requested for Brother George Crouchman who is seriously ill in the hospital.

Independence

Approximately four hundred singers of the Harvest Festival Chorus met at the Stone Church Sunday afternoon for the first general rehearsal of Harvest Festival music, Paul N. Craig directing. Though the day was warm, the singers spent two hours practicing the program of music which will entertain guests of the 1934 Harvest Home Festival the afternoon of October 7. Seven hundred are enrolled in the chorus this year, and many singers from neighboring cities and towns were present Sunday. The next general rehearsal of this choir will be held early in September. In the meantime local choirs are giving weekly attention to festival numbers.

President Elbert A. Smith delivered the fourth sermon of his series at the Campus, Sunday evening, using for his theme, "Faith." He informed the Saints that a most wonderful sermon could be found in the four words of Christ, "Have Faith in God."

The unusually large congregation gave close attention to Brother Smith's discourse. Guests for the evening were the Liberty Street congregation, and Pastor John R. Lentell, of that district, assisted in the stand. A special solo was sung by Mrs. Nina G. Smith.

The quarterly conference in Independence, which assembled at the Stone Church the evening of July 2, approved without a dissenting vote, four names submitted for ordination by the pastors and supervisors of the city. The candidates and their offices are Shankland S. Arnson, elder; C. G. Closson, elder; Odess Athey, priest, and Ammon Badder, deacon.

A mammoth crowd participated in the old-fashioned July 4 celebration at the Campus sponsored by the women's department. Though the day was intensely hot, many were present to enjoy the features of entertainment throughout the daylight and evening hours—two baseball games, races, contests, picnic meals, a speech in the evening by the Reverend Earl A. Blackman, the movie, and fireworks.

Stone Church

"Zion in Prospect," was the theme of a stirring and thought-provoking sermon by Elder J. A. Koehler Sunday morning. Music for the morning service was by the Stone Church Choir, Paul N. Craig directing, Robert Miller at the organ. Mrs. Pauline Arnson and Albert Brackenbury sang solo parts in one of the anthems.

Many Stone Church singers were present at the rehearsal of the Harvest Festival Chorus at three-thirty in the afternoon.

The young women's club of Group 18 entertained about ninety of their friends the evening of June 26, with a fellowship supper on the lawn of the S. A. Johnson home in Independence. Following a plate lunch, an attractive program of musical numbers, readings, and humorous plays was enjoyed. Miss Gladys Elliott is president of the club.

This event was the concluding feature of a two-week series of evening services and missionary sermons by Elder A. M. Chase conducted on the lawn. The average attendance at these out-door services mounted to more than one hundred and thirty. Each night the sermon was preceded by a half hour of music in charge of Brother Chase's daughter, Sister Alice M. Burgess.

During the summer months out-door missionary services on week nights are popular in this and in other districts. Among the speakers are Elders A. M. Chase, J. W. A. Bailey, Ammon White, R. D. Weaver, and others.

Second Church

The speaker Sunday morning to adults and to children at the eleven o'clock hour, was Pastor William Inman, and his theme was "Our Church Associations and Privileges." At this hour the junior church came upstairs and met with the adult congregation. The choir sang the hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy."

Pastor Inman is in charge of the sacrament hour July 1, and W. A. Whiting gave the oblation talk. Patriarch T. C. Kelley delivered the communion talk, and after a season of meditation and prayer, special prayer was offered by Elder Caleb Blodgett. Earl Audet led the congregational singing.

Walnut Park Church

About twenty members of the Swastika Class of the church school went early Sunday morning to Adair Park, where they cooked their breakfast and held their class session following. Fred Horn is teacher of this class.

A special number following the class period of the school at the church was "The Church in the Wildwood," by a male quartet composed of Erwin Moorman, Arlon Chapman, Clairice Closson, and Kenneth Morford.

Pastor Frank McDonald was the speaker at eleven o'clock Sunday morning, reading a Scripture lesson from the thirteenth chapter of Numbers regarding the choosing of the spies that went forth into the land of Canaan and the report which they brought back, and taking his text from James: "I will show thee my faith by my works." He called upon the Saints to have the faith to "go forward and possess the land."

The junior service, in charge of Elder Welton Wood, heard a story by Sister Arthur Koehler. Violet Chase led the singing for the children.

Gudgell Park Church

The regular sacrament service was held June 3, with a large congregation present. In the evening, the last religious and preaching service prior to the Sunday evening Campus services, were held.

Elder George Jenkins was the speaker, June 19, using for his text, "I Will Build My Church."

The Children's Day exercises were delayed until June 17, when the eleven o'clock hour was used by the children in charge of Sister Margeret Myers.

Elder John H. Miller, of Second Church congregation, was the morning speaker June 25. In the afternoon, a baptismal service was held by this congregation at Walnut Park Church. Brother Alvin Wilburn and his little step son, Everette Stone, were baptized by Pastor Walter Chapman.

Enoch Hill Church

Enoch Hill was well represented at the quarterly conference in Independence Monday night, July 2.

Last Thursday afternoon the women held their usual study class, and on Thursday night the weekly prayer meeting was held since Wednesday was July 4, a holiday.

On Sunday the priesthood met with the rest of the congregation at the early morning prayer service, and all attending felt richly repaid.

The intermediate girls, taught by Sister Dorothy Harter, furnished the program for the worship period at the church school. Helen Larson gave a talk; Jean Thomas played a solo, and Frances Constance told a story.

"You Can Depend On Me," is the name the older young people, a group of almost forty individuals, have chosen for their class which is taught by Elder Chester Constance. They chose Clarence Petre, president of the class; E. H. McKean, vice president; Sister Florence Tanner, secretary, and Sister Dorothy Smith, treasurer.

Pastor John F. Sheehy was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service Sunday. For a text he used the question, "Will a Man Rob God?" Alice Constance and Jean Thomas sang, "Have You Seen the Vision?" and the choir sang, "The Captain Is Calling."

The Saints and their friends and neighbors meet on the church lawn each Sunday evening at seven o'clock and go to the Campus in a body.

Spring Branch Church

All Sunday morning services were well attended. At the close of the Sunday school lesson period, Sister Jalmer Nelson gave an interesting review of Paul's life. Elder Morris Jacobsen, pastor, had charge of the preaching service. The choir sang as a response, "Hear My Cry." They also sang the anthem, "He That Dwelleth in the Secret Place." Elder Robert Fish was the speaker.

Boy Scout Troop 222, Leonard E. Roberts, scoutmaster, had a father and son overnight camp at Butcher's Lake. After an interesting ceremony around the Council Fire, Elder Morris Jacobsen was named chaplain of the troop and presented a Boy Scout chaplain pin.

Windsor, Ontario

Five Are Baptized

Sunday, June 17, was Children's Day in this branch. There were five candidates baptized in the font, surrounded by baskets of flowers. The baptism and confirmation choruses were sung by six young people, from thirteen to sixteen years of age, and a short pageant was presented by the boys and girls. "Along the Life Way."

This was the first time this ordinance had been administered by Elder William Garnier, who baptized the candidates, and by Elder Earl V. Hill, who took part in the confirmations. They were both highly commended upon the fine way in which they performed their duty. Others assisting in the confirmations were Elder L. D. Campbell, Bishop J. C. Dent, Elder James Winegarden, and Elder R. J. Shute.

J. C. Dent, district bishop, and Elder James Winegarden, of London, gave timely advice in their remarks to the Saints and to the candidates regarding their responsibilities.

The faithful service of the orchestra and the whole-hearted cooperation of the children, parents, priesthood, and officers made possible this enjoyable day.

West Branch, Michigan

Cooperation the Watchword Here

These Saints have cooperated heartily with each other and one of the results is the appearance in the new church building, which is well on the way to completion. Having held meetings in a private home for the past five years, this group of loyal Saints is looking forward to enjoying the added privileges the church will afford.

The average attendance for this branch is about twenty, and in the past year $109.34 have been reported as tithing and offerings. The church building is also free from debt.

Mother's Day was observed May 13, with an all-day meeting, there being sacrament, prayer services, a program, and discourses from Matthew Umphrey, Nate Carrick, and George Bailey, guest speakers.

Children's Day, June 10, was observed with three baptisms, and an interesting program. Those baptized were James Wiltse, Dean Atherton, and Helen Jane Valley. After the confirmation service Elder Umphrey occupied as guest speaker.

The women's department meets every two weeks and is studying the Book of Mormon.

This congregation regrets the departure of Elder Hubert Case. He will be greatly missed by West Branch Saints.

Prayers are requested for Sister Fannie Hyslop, who is suffering with sciatic trouble, and for Sister Libbie Twining, who is suffering from a chronic ailment of ten years' duration.

Zion's Christian Legion

To District Solicitors:

The Christian Legion is meeting success on every hand. Wherever this organization is accepted, reports come in of renewed activity, both financially and spiritually.

Its ultimate aim, that of paying off the Auditorium debt with moneys collected from membership dues and that of making every member a tithe payer can only be accomplished by the tireless and persistent activity on the part of every Legion officer. In this only can we expect to succeed.

As district solicitor you should (if you haven't already) have a complete list of names and addresses of all branch solicitors in the Legion companies. It would be well to have that of the branch solicitors, as you need to keep in close contact with said officers so that, working together, the most good can be accomplished. You will find him to be of valuable assistance.

I would advise that you write at least once a month to every solicitor and by all means be prompt in your correspondence with them. In this busy work-a-day world our minds grow tired and it is to our advantage to ever urge our workers on to renewed efforts.

Make a survey of your territory, checking where each Latter Day Saint is located, and making persistent visits, thus creating a personal contact which is beneficial to all parties.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the necessity of the closest cooperation between all solicitors either in the Legion or branch, in the distribution of the tithing cards. If you have not an adequate supply of these cards, kindly advise promptly.

It is well to explain to every family the reasons for this method of applying tithing, at the same time leaving a card for every member of the family which is suited to his or her particular financial standing at their request. Kindly advise them that someone will call every week to make collections and that the branch solicitor will give a receipt once a month for all money paid.

If this system be thoroughly understood by yourself and explained satisfactorily to the Saints, there will be no misunderstanding regarding the work. The aim is that of helpfulness and the hastening of a work long delayed—the payment of the Auditorium debt and that of making every member a tithe payer. Experience teaches that it is easier to collect small amounts often rather than large contributions at longer intervals. The Lord recognized this and urged that his Saints bring their offerings on the first day of the week.

The Christian Legion will not fail as it has a definite objective. Those with clear vision and sincere ambitions are rallying to its support.—S. Gordon Brown, General Director of Solicitation.

Special Meetings for Rock Island District

The district president will meet with the Cedar Rapids Mission, July 15 to 18, and will preach for the Saints at eleven o'clock on Sunday, July 15, at Sokol Hall, 415 Third Street, Southeast; will conduct a priesthood meeting at 2:30 p. m. (place to be announced at the morning service), and will visit in the homes of the Saints during his stay in the city.

July 19 to 22, will be spent with Anamosa Branch, with a special meeting at Fairview on Sunday morning, July 22. Basket lunch at noon. It is expected that there will be baptism in the afternoon with confirmation and sacrament following. We would be pleased to have Iowa City Saints meet with us at either, or both of the above places.

July 23 to 26, will be spent at Savanna visiting the Saints, and conducting a meeting at the church on Thursday night, July 26. If agreeable to the above mentioned groups, we trust that the local officers will make all necessary arrangements for the proposed meetings. If because of local conditions it becomes necessary to change any of the above dates, will the officers please notify me as early as possible? I trust all members of the local priesthood will make it possible for me to meet them while I am in their respective communities. July 28 and 29, I would like to spend at the Nauvoo reunion. Other branches not yet visited this year please watch for publication of August program.—E. R. Davis, district president, 11121 Fifteenth Street, A., Moline, Illinois.

Attention, Members of Bristow, Oklahoma

All Saints living in or near Bristow, Oklahoma, are invited to attend the Saints' Sunday school held each Sunday at 10 a. m. in the Lovett Schoolhouse, five miles east of Bristow on the Okmulgee Highway. Elder F. H. Cunningham is with us on the second and fourth Sundays of each month to preach at the eleven o'clock hour. Three more were baptized here the first Sunday in July, making a total of ten baptized by Brother Cunningham since he started visiting here from Tulsa, last August. For further information write the undersigned.—D. B. Biggs, Sunday school superintendent, Bristow, Oklahoma, Rural Route 4.

Attention, Alberta Saints!

This is to inform you of the special meetings to be held in Alberta District. The reunion will be held at Calgary, July 13 to 15, at the Saints' church, 1507 Fourteenth Avenue, West. Those desiring to attend, please write to C. B. Gibson, of the committee, 1911 Thirty-fourth Avenue, South West, or telephone S 0753 or M 1102. Reduced rates on train and bus on account of Calgary Stampede.

District conference will be held at the Saints' church at Edmonton, Alberta, July 20 to 22. All branch and priesthood reports should be in immediately. The regular routine of business will be held at the conference, and annual election of officers will take place. We hope to have a good representation present. Rates will be in effect on all lines of transportation on account of Edmonton Exhibition.

A special three-day meeting will be held at Ribstone, Alberta, July 27, 28, and 29, and Saints living within a reasonable distance are requested to be present. Bed and breakfast will be provided visiting Saints and friends at the above three places. Apostle J. F. Curtis will be present at these meetings.—Ira I. Benham, district president.

District Institute

An institute will be held at Saint Thomas, Ontario, July 15, in the interests of the Christian Legion. The following services will be held: 9:30 a. m., prayer in charge of district officers and Elder John Shields; 11, lecture by Apostle D. T. Williams at which time he will map out the policy of the Christian Legion; 2:30 p. m., business session; 3:15, preaching by Elder Percy Farrow; 7, preaching by Apostle D. T. Williams.—James Winegarden, district president; Clara Schlotzhauer, district secretary.

Young People's Convention

The young people of Rich Hill Branch invite the young people of the district to meet with them in a two-day convention, July 21 and 22. Elder George Mesley and wife are to meet with the young people at this time. The convention will open with a prayer service, at 9 a. m. Saturday. At ten o'clock Saturday, Elder Mesley will begin classes on the subject, "A Practical Program for the Young People's Division." The concluding class will be conducted at nine-thirty Sunday morning. Saturday evening will be given to a concert, all the branches of the district participating. A special prayer meeting will be held Sunday morning, at eight-fifteen. Sister Mesley is expected to address the convention at ten-thirty. A round-table discussion will be held at two o'clock, followed by a vesper service. Young people of Rich Hill Branch will serve meals free Saturday. Sunday, all are invited to bring baskets for a basket dinner. District President Birch Whiting, with the fatherly guidance of Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley, will be there to see that things go well.—C. C. Martin, district director of religious education.

Reunion Notices

Nauvoo reunion, at Nauvoo, Illinois, will be held July 27 to August 5. Nauvoo is rich in historic church interest, and is located on one of the earth's beauty spots. Rooms either in the Nauvoo House or in the homes of the Saints will be three dollars per couple for ten days. Cots with straw ticks with quarters in the Nauvoo House or camp cottages will cost $1 per person for the ten days. Bring your own bedding for the cots. Meals will be served in the Nauvoo House at as low a cost as possible. Lovely camping grounds are free for those that want to come and provide for themselves. Patriarch Richard Baldwin and wife, District President F. T. Mussell, and the district ministry will conduct classes and services. Saints not only of Nauvoo District but from everywhere are invited to attend this reunion, and make it one of the largest and best reunions in the church. There is much of interest and spiritual uplift to be had there.—James C. Page, Nauvoo, Illinois.

Western Oklahoma reunion will meet August 3 to 12, at Canton, Oklahoma, in the city park. This park was praised by the reunion visitors last year, for its

FAR WEST STAKE REUNION

Stewartville, Missouri
(On Highway 36)

August 16-26

Conference Minutes

WESTERN MAINE.—The district conference for Western Maine convened at Stonington, June 2 and 3, with Elder E. F. Robertson in charge. Associated with the district presidency were Apostle Paul M. Hanson, Bishop E. L. Traver, and Patriarch U. W. Greene. The business session began June 2, at two o'clock. Minutes of the last conference were read and approved. Ministerial reports were read, six elders and two priests reporting. Statistical reports were read from the following branches, Little Deer Isle, Stonington, Mountainville, Vinalhaven, Dixfield, and Rockland, and the nonresident list. The recommendation of Brother Cecil Billings to the office of elder was accepted and his ordination was provided for. Officers for the ensuing year were chosen as follows, district president, Elder E. F. Robertson, associated with H. R. Eaton and A. Begg; clerk, Louise Eaton; treasurer, Pearl Billings; director of music, B. B. Holland; organist, Jennie Carter; superintendent of religious education, B. B. Holland. Sunday morning a prayer meeting was held in charge of presidency of the conference. Religious education hour followed in charge of B. B. Holland. Bishop E. L. Traver was the morning speaker. A priesthood meeting was held at one-thirty in charge of Paul M. Hanson. At two-thirty an impressive service was held, at which time Patriarch U. W. Greene spoke of how the gospel first came to this location, after which Cecil Billings was ordained an elder, under the hands of Apostle Paul M. Hanson, Elder E. F. Robertson and Harlan Billings. The weather was fine and attendance was good. Moved to adjourn until the call of the presidency in the fall.

Our Departed Ones

FREEMAN.—Lenora J. Freeman was born at Attica, New York, July 7, 1854. At the age of nineteen she went to Nebraska, where she married Charles R. Freeman. Three children were born to them. She moved to Montebello, California, twenty-two years ago from Downey, where she had lived for twenty years. She was one of the first members of the Montebello Woman's Club, and always had a keen interest in local, civic, and national affairs. Her ministrations in her home and among her friends will be greatly missed. She passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jennie Paulson, Potrero Heights, San Gabriel, California, March 7, 1934, having been in poor health for a year and a half. Surviving are her children: Mrs. Jennie Paulson; Mrs. Clara Blumfield, of Sunland, and Robert C. Freeman; two grandchildren, one great-grandchild, other relatives, and many friends. The funeral was held March 9, from the Moritz Funeral Home, in charge of Elders D. B. Sorden and L. L. Sutherland. Interment was in the family lot in Downey Cemetery.

PEARSON.—Charlotte Pearson was born February 11, 1861, and departed this life at the home of her sister, Mrs. C. W. Turnbull, of Corinth, New York, May 30, 1934. She had been in ill health for some time and had been living with her son, Mahlon, but had gone to Corinth, May 27, to visit her sister. She was taken suddenly ill with a heart attack, and passed away Wednesday night. She became a member of the church August 3, 1879, at Corinth, and is survived by one son, Mahlon, and three grandchildren. Funeral services were held from Lifton Funeral Home, Elder Frank Gray, of London, officiating. Sister Pearson will be remembered throughout the entire church for her writings to the church papers in past years. Those who are left behind do not mourn as those without hope, having the blessed assurance of meeting again.

CRAYNE.—Charles Edwin Crayne was born February 5, 1877, at Racine, Newton County, Missouri. Died June 14, 1934 at Kansas City, Missouri. When he was two years of age, his parents moved to Lowry City, Missouri at which place he grew to manhood. He was baptized in the church, July 10, 1892, and remained faithful to the cause. He enlisted with the 3d Missouri Volunteer Infantry at the outbreak of the Spanish American War. He re-enlisted in the 32nd United States Volunteer Infantry, August 9, 1899 and served his country for two years in the Philippine Islands. September 26, 1903 he was united in marriage to Mabel Pearl Williams and to this union were born five children, three sons and two daughters, one son and one daughter dying in infancy. In 1921, he with his family moved to Los Angeles, California. Five weeks ago he went to Kansas City to visit his aged mother, and on June 11, he met with the accident that caused his death. Although suffering ill health during recent years, he was known and loved for his cheerful and friendly disposition, which won for him many friends in all walks of life. He leaves to mourn, his wife, Mrs. Mabel Crayne, two sons, Bruce A. and Lloyd, of Los Angeles; a daughter, Mrs. Murray Gardner, of Long Beach California; his mother, Mrs. M. E. Crayne, Kansas City; two brothers, William P. Crayne, Kansas City, Missouri; R. J. Crayne, Kansas City, Kansas; four sisters, Mrs. F. C. Coberly, Phoenix, Arizona, Mrs. A. W. Sears, Kansas City, Kansas; Mrs. Glen F. Liddel, Kansas City, Missouri; Mrs. J. A. Rooney, Tonganoxie, Kansas, and three grandchildren besides a host of other relatives and friends. Military services were conducted at Elmwood Cemetery. The body was taken to Los Angeles for interment. Regular services at Foster Funeral Chapel in Kansas City and sermon by Elder Ammon White, June 16, 1934.

*"There were giants in the earth in those days."
Genesis 6: 4.*

"Guard well your post until we return,"
His tall commander said,
And led away his gallant band
To a battle dark and dread.

They never came back, though he waited years
So old-time legends tell,
And kindly Nature cast a charm
O'er the lonely sentinel.

Still stands the ancient warrior,
The last of a noble clan;
Transformed by Time, and wounded too
By the works of modern man.

Faithful he holds with a solemn trust
A fort that crumbles with age,
And seeks on the horizon's misty rim
His chief's bright equipage.

More Good Men

This last Sunday six men were ordained in Independence to various offices in the ministry; a deacon, a priest, two elders, and two high priests. It was a privilege to look at each man, knowing him from many personal contacts, appreciating the fine contributions of character and ability that he was bringing to his office. It is encouraging to note that this same thing is going on all over the church. Fine and devoted men are being called into a service that will be given for the love of the gospel and a desire to help people, but not for selfish reasons. As long as the church can continue to call to service in the priesthood the best of its man power, its future and its success is assured.

Leadership

Apostle F. Henry Edwards, in delivering the charge to the men about to be ordained, gave utterance to a significant thought on leadership. In effect, he said that while experience in the world had served to confirm the belief in the democratic principle of government, it had also shown that the success of a democratic form of government depends upon the ability of a people to choose and call to their service a high type of men to represent and act for them. Without men of integrity and ability, democracy will fail.

The church is a democratic form of government with a spiritual leadership. It must call to its service men who are qualified to be leaders by their character, their ability, their morality and spirituality.

Retirement

One man lives in Independence who has taken his retirement gracefully. He was long a valiant defender of the faith and a strong exponent of the gospel. His years of service wore him down and wearied his body. When he retired he settled down still serving wherever asked, but in general accepting quietly the fact that the major part of his work was done. He pursues his studies, writes occasionally, cultivates his garden, and enjoys a well-earned rest. He is content to leave to younger men the work that younger men can do. He has done his work, and it was well done. Another man cannot understand how he can take his retirement so quietly. He anticipates that he will suffer some pain when he has to quit.

Men and Problems

Every age has its own problems. And, fortunately, it is usually able to produce the men who can handle the problems. These problems cannot be met with traditions. Life has a way of changing its conditions, and the old formulas do not apply. We embalm the past, put it in a museum, and write up its history. If we then adore the past we soon begin to practice ancestor worship. When that happens all progress ceases. The disparity between current problems and the social and economic instruments of society widens into a breach, and it takes a revolution to bring government up abreast of the march of society. New men must serve the new day.

"Without Purse or Scrip"

A favorite Scripture passage of those who think the traveling missionaries ought to be self-sustaining is the following:

"Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses, nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves; for the workman is worthy of his hire."—Matthew 10: 9, 10.

This was the instruction Jesus gave to the twelve apostles when he first sent them out on their missions. Jesus had no financial resources. He was a poor man. There was no bishopric. There was no fund and no system of tithes and contributions to give support. He had to send out men as best he could, and let them depend on what was given them. Life was simple and inexpensive. Nobody wore starched collars or clean white shirts. The diet of common people consisted of grapes, figs, barley cakes, and fish and few other things. When they traveled they walked; journeys were short and there were no train fares.

The Scripture passage above has been quoted frequently in referring to our own system of providing support from general church funds for the traveling ministry.

To obey this Scripture today, the missionary would have to "travel light"—very light. He could take no bag or suitcase (scrip) for his toothbrush, his extra socks, his clean shirt, or his safety razor. All these things would have to be left at home. He would have to leave behind his brief case, his note and reference books, and his supply of spare tracts. He could not take a portable typewriter or notepaper as many missionaries do. He would go barefooted, and he would ignore the trains and buses. He would be a hitchhiker thumbling his way on the highways; and he might have to pick pockets for money to buy his hamburgers and hot dogs.

I have heard few of the men who have been long in the mission field argue very enthusiastically for the "without purse or scrip" theory. Those who most ardently support it are people who stay securely at home and who would like to see money saved at somebody else's expense. Few missionaries can be self-sustaining in the field.

The instructions above are not the final word recorded from the lips of Jesus in the New Testament. Near the close of his career he gave another set of instructions more in conformity with the dignity of a religious movement that was establishing itself on a permanent basis.

"And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye anything? And they said Nothing. Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip; and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one."—Luke 22: 35, 36.

No doubt some of our readers will refer us to the Doctrine and Covenants (23: 7; 83: 13, 15) as being later instruction. True; but we submit that the conditions that existed in 1830 and 1832, when these instructions were given, more closely resembled the conditions at the beginning of Jesus' organized work than those that existed at the close of his career.

In established fields where there are many friends and members of the church, a worker can sometimes be maintained on offerings and contributions picked up as he goes along. It is even then a precarious and humiliating experience, disruptive of family life, and demoralizing in a degree to the worker. Only the strong natures can stand it long. But in new fields where friends are few and none feel any obligation towards the worker, such an existence is impossible today.

The case of the volunteer worker connected with the local church is quite different, and must be given separate treatment at a later time. L. L.

Blue Pencil Notes

It is a great game that man plays with Nature. Often Nature scores quite unexpectedly. The fat man exercises violently to reduce—becomes very, very hungry, eats heartily—gains two pounds. The skinny man eats heartily to gain weight, upsets his digestion—and loses two pounds.

Last summer in Iowa I drove across what was once the bottom of a sizable lake. Brother LeRoy Hartshorn who was with me said: "This highway was not here some years ago." I replied, "Where was it?" He answered, "I never did hear where they got it." All of which was as much to the point as the average conversation. That fine lake was drained at considerable expense, like thousands of other tracts of swamp, lake, and slough, and was planted so that our surplus of grains might be increased and the government spend more money hiring farmers to let their acres stand idle in order to reduce production.

Then came along a great army of chinch bugs, millions of them, also grasshoppers, and offered to reduce crop production free of charge; and the government spent a lot of money to kill the kind bugs that offered to help. In the midst of the crop reduction program drought set in and we have had week after week of torrid weather without rain. The damage has been widespread in America and abroad. It is as though Nature (or Nature's God) had said: "Is man weary of my bounteous generosity? Is he weary of plenty? That is easy. Turn off the water and presently he will be hungry and his cupboard empty and he will be happy."

It is all very confusing, but we emerge with the conviction that man's course is in cooperation with Nature to produce of her bounties to the uttermost. Our problem is to promote equitable distribution and generous consumption so that the hungry may eat, the naked be clothed, and the homeless be sheltered. The task assigned by the Book of Mormon (Jacob 2: 24.) is a wiser and better task than that of plowing up cotton and limiting wheat production.

Another thing seems strange; for thousands of years man fought endlessly to win individual freedom and the right to participate in government. These rights he wrested in bloody combat from kings and emperors. Now he turns about and hands them all back to dictators. Confused and weary he looks about for a superman to do his thinking and solve all his problems—reserving only the privilege to salute and cheer.

Constitutions are torn into gunwads.
Parliaments make their bow and retire.
He turns in his grave who once said:
"We make the world safe for Democracy!"
Hail Hitler! Hail Stalin!
Hail Dolfuss! Hail Mussolini!
Hail to all of the dictators!
The press rumbles its Master's voice;
The pulpit roars its Master's spirit.
Machine guns liquidate dissenters.
. . . Has America borne such an one?
Who will emerge from encroaching shadows
To stand over Faneuil Hall and Mt. Vernon?
Will he bid us to stifle and swallow
The brave words that our fathers shouted:
That men are born free and equal—
And entitled to life and liberty!
Is there a tailor somewhere sewing
Black shirts or brown shirts for our sons to wear?
. . . Has British mother borne such an one?
Who shall turn the keys on Parliament?
And draw a sword through Magna Charta?
And collar and dog-muzzle the old lion?
. . . Stranger things than that shall happen in the Dispensation of the fullness of times,
Ere He comes whose right it is to reign,
And men shall shout, "Hail Jesus! Prince of Peace!"

Why One Year of College Is Required for Students Entering the Independence Sanitarium School for Nurses

In writing this short article I hope to be able to make clear to our church members why the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital Board of Directors considered it advisable to require all of our students for the past two years and in the future to have at least one year of college work preparatory to entering our School of Nursing.

For the past twelve years there has been a tendency among the nursing educators to broaden the nurses' scholastic education along with the practical experience. Each year requirements have been increased and it was necessary for hospitals to meet them or close their schools. We who had charge of these schools, when attending the meetings of the American Hospital Association, the American Nursing Association and the State Associations, realized that in time our schools of nursing would be run as an educational department entirely separate from the hospital instead of in connection with it; the hospital being used only for the clinical and practical experience the nurses would receive in their three years of training. The hospital would then employ additional graduate nurses to give the general nursing care to our patients.

For the past five years the trend has been to discontinue a great many of the small schools throughout the country and to admit smaller classes into the hospital so that fewer nurses would be graduated each year but those that were graduated would be a superior group. The Independence Sanitarium has always been proud of its School of Nursing as the students entering this school do receive a very fine and thorough training. We want to continue this high type of training and want our graduates to be in a position to continue their theoretical training if they so desire. We want to be a leader in the nursing field rather than a follower and it was for this reason that the Board decided if the young women entering our school of nursing would have a year of college first and then their three years of nursing experience, they would upon graduation be better fitted for the work ahead of them.

The Board of the Independence Sanitarium and Board of Graceland College entered into an arrangement whereby students spending the first year at Graceland, then three years at the Independence Sanitarium, will receive a title of Associate in Arts as well as Registered Nurse. This gives them two years college credit and then if they desire further education they will only have to spend two years at a University to receive a B. S. degree.

ACROSS THE DESK

By F. M. S.

Informal Chats From the Office of the President

RECENTLY there came to my desk a letter which brings up a matter not for the first time by a long way, but yet one of considerable importance. A brother writes in to say that if we do not have a printed direction of branches, with address of pastors and location of church buildings, he thinks we should have one.

His reason for feeling sure of this are set out in his letter. He says: "I lay at death's door in the Hamilton Hotel in Washington, District of Columbia, for two days, and tried in every way possible to locate an elder, but failed. I know that through our ministrations I would have been healed. I do not know that we have a branch in Washington, but I have noticed in my travels that the address and location of our church is often not found in the city church directory. What is the reason for this? Are our pastors too busy to see to it? No, that is not it, I think it is just overlooked, and it is too important to be overlooked."

Then he goes on to say that we should be better advertised, so that people, especially those we want to know or should know will be able to distinguish between us and our "ecclesiastical cousins" of the Utah Mountains. He finds many people who do not know the differences.

Our pastors and presiding elders should see to it that proper entry is made in city directories, church directories, etc., so that inquiring persons or visiting Saints may know where to find our church buildings and local representatives, and we trust the above quoted incident will stimulate them to do so.

A SISTER who had been interested for some years in religious dramatics recently moved into a town where there are no members of the church; but associating herself with members of another church who were interested in biblical plays, she organized them and led them to win a State contest. In writing me modestly telling of her success and speaking of her studies for improvement, she says:-

"But I want you to know that I'm doing it because it is an opportunity here and I'm eager to progress so that I may be of some service once again to my own church. My consuming ambition is to be able to serve you faithfully, intelligently, and capably in your far-seeing program of progress for our beloved church."

It is encouraging to know there are those who having caught the visions are earnestly striving to prepare for greater service in carrying on toward our goals. There are many who are doing so, and a knowledge of it helps me to "carry on" even when smarting under rebuffs and chaffing under the slowness with which we approach the achievement of our goals. So keep at it, sister, and others who are toiling with their eyes towards the future and on our goals!

We know that there are many hospitals in the United States still admitting High School graduates but we feel that the one year our students will spend at Graceland College before coming to us will more than repay them for the extra time spent.

Our next class of students will enter the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital September, 1934. We are desirous of getting in touch with young women who have had one year of college or its equivalent. If interested write for application blanks.

Eastern Montana Young People Hold Convention

The young people's convention of Eastern Montana was held at Fairview Saturday evening and Sunday, June 23 and 24, under the direction of District President A. R. Ritter and Branch Pastor W. R. Hillman.

Much commendation is due Brother Hillman for his work and patience as choir and orchestra leader in his training of young and older members in preparation for these meetings. Much credit and praise also go to those who took part and cooperated in the orchestral work. The programs were well rendered and much appreciated by a good attendance of Saints and friends.

Sister Mary Dittan gave an interesting talk concerning her recent vacation in Eastern States. Missionary L. O. Wildermuth gave talks following two of the programs.

Springfield Young People Entertained at a Lawn Party

The senior class, of Springfield, Missouri, was entertained by members of two other classes in the young people's division, with a picnic supper and a lawn party at the Pump Station Park, June 26. They were honored for having won first place in the ticket selling contest for an ice cream social.

Fifty young people compose the membership of the three classes. Tickets were sold on a percentage basis and double credit was given for those sold to nonmembers. The tables, decorated with summer bouquets, were placed on the church lawn, under colored lights. After the supper was served, an entertainment was given. Mary Plumb, secretary of the young people, announced total receipts for three hundred tickets, one hundred and sixty being sold to nonmembers. The senior class had the highest percentage per class member. An investigation showed that one industrious young woman, Theora Lindenmuth, sold seventy-seven tickets, seventy of which were to nonmembers.

These active young people are planning to hold an institute in the late summer, and they are working hard to be prepared for the event.

It is a thrilling experience to bring up our children in the way they should go, for it is everlastingly true that when they are old they do not depart from it.—Jessica G. Cosgrave, in Mothers and Daughters.

Sperry Young People Prominent in Young People's Activities

DWIGHT RUMSEY

These two members of the Sperry High School won high honors during the past year.

Dwight Rumsey, son of Elder and Sister Ward Rumsey, was awarded the all-around medal at high school, a trophy given each year to the outstanding pupil of the graduating class. This is presented by the Women's Federated Club of Sperry, in recognition of high rank in citizenship, leadership, scholarship, and church work. Dwight was president of the senior class and rated second in the Congressional District Debating Tournament, at Claremore, Oklahoma, last winter. He also won honors in football, being one of the outstanding players on an undefeated eleven last year, and won three first prizes in his county for cornet solo contests.

Miss Helen Harper, on the evening of commencement, was also presented a beautiful medal, honoring her for outstanding work in the sophomore class, of which she was a member. Helen is also a member of the State Honor Society. She is the eldest daughter of Brother and Sister Alonzo Harper.

Friday Is Legion Night for Grand Rapids Young People

Zion's Christian Legion is progressing rapidly at Grand Rapids, Michigan. They have six group captains, and each week one group has charge of the meeting. Friday has been set aside as Legion night. At their last swimming party young people of Alta, McCordis, and Belding were their guests.

The Legion, assisted by the women's department, gave a banquet June 29, which was attended by about one hundred and twenty. Apostle D. T. Williams was the guest of honor and principal speaker.

"I'd Pass Out!"

The small group stood just outside the basement door of the church. "I don't know what I'd have done if it had been me they had asked," confided James to his friends. "I never could have stood up there and offered that prayer as Edmund did. I would have passed out!"

"But why don't you ask Virginia to do it?" implored Mary, of her mother. "Why, I'll pass out if I have to sit there all day and read to old Mrs. Scott. She's too cross for me!"

"Look, there goes John! I wouldn't want his job for a million dollars. In fact, I wouldn't work if I had to do that! His truck looks like it were about to fall to pieces," remarked Jim, the banker's son. "I'd pass out if Dad ever mentioned a job like that to me."

Have you ever noticed any boys and girls, who like these three just mentioned, are frequently "passing out"? They would probably resent it if you hinted that they were "yellow" or "softies."

What a pity it is that we do not all of us realize the real significance of the words, "I'd pass out!" To be pointed at on the street as "He can't do that! Why, he would 'pass out!'"

How about it? Are you one of those who "pass out," or are you, like a dependable fellow, able to "pass up."

No education is too thorough for any man and especially a man who would teach religion. I have never been afraid of subjecting the Bible and faith to the scrutiny of scientific criticism. But I am sure of this, that when all the evidence is in, when all the scientific facts are known, there is a great area of life that remains yet unknown and unknowable except by the guidance of love.—Frank B. Fagerburg, in "The Sin of Being Ordinary."

"Gleanings From European News"

By John W. Rushton

JOHN W. RUSHTON

ALL OVER Britain one sees large posters which are advertizing the achievements of the National Government, and catalogue the following: 700,000 more people in work; 370,000 more acres under wheat; 500,000 new houses built; the "five-year" plan started to clear the slums; British exports going up; Foreign imports cut by approximately $535,000,000 (£187,000,000); adverse trade balance of about £100,000,000 (about $500,000,000) wiped out and the best budget for years.

THE REPORT of the Commissioners of Prisons for 1932 for Great Britain is significant and disturbing. There is a serious increase in the number of youths sentenced to imprisonment, and in the number between 16 and 21 years found guilty of indictable offences. An analysis shows unemployment to be the main cause of this increase. To meet this menace the Government is considering keeping the children in school one year longer; making the age for leaving 15 instead of 14 as at present.

STANLEY BALDWIN in the Foreword to the first number of the "Politics in Review" writes on political education, and says some striking things. If Great Britain is resolved to resist violent attacks on her democracy, she must fortify democracy by educating it, and strengthen the ladder by which the naturally ablest children can pass through all the stages of primary, secondary and university education. Democracy cannot dispense with the key persons. They are those who spring to the fore in every national group, who are respected by the rank and file, and can speak their language. Thus the vote is only one element of power in a democratic community. The real life of democracy depends on the circulation of strong currents of ideas which pass from top to bottom, and from the bottom to the top again, quickening and vitalizing as it moves. In a democratic state all is open, widely public, free.

THE BRITISH Commonwealth is having some knotty problems to deal with in Palestine. The two peoples (Jews and Arabs), packed into the small country seem unwilling to unify. Since the war the Jewish population has increased from 80,000 to 250,000. Jewish leaders of finance and industry have poured money into Palestine. The organizing ability of their race together with British Administration has created a Post-war Palestine. There are 800,000 Arabs there and they look upon the Jews as the "usurpers of their country." While the difficulties are great yet it is conceivable that there can be a Palestinian state in which both Arab and Jew will be united.

UNDER Sir Oswald Moseley British Fascism is growing some, but not alarmingly. Recently mass meetings have been held in the Albert Hall and the Olympia London and considerable rough-house work indulged in. The matter has been sufficiently serious to come up in the form of questions in the House of Commons. Mostly, English people are inclined to be tolerant towards this group of "uniformed politicians." The opposition comes mainly from the Communists and radical Socialists.

THE HEALTH Insurance, known as the "Panel System" has been in operation in Great Britain about twenty years and about fifteen millions of working men and women receive medical attention through this means. In reviewing the benefits and defects of the system in a recent number of the Spectator the writer calls attention to some things which he believes can be easily remedied. This writer, a doctor himself, says that the insurance scheme represents a tremendous advance in that it puts at the disposal of every man and woman actually working for wages, a gratuitous medical service, with freedom to select the practitioner in whom the patient has the most confidence. And, though making no provision for specialist forms of medical and surgical treatment, this can be secured through the generosity of the profession. Among some matters which should be remedied is mentioned; only wage earners are benefited, the families are left as before, and if the wage earner becomes unemployed (continuously), he loses all claim to the services of the "panel doctor." This regardless of the doctor's own feeling of sympathy and desire to help. The present way of administering this form of service prevents the development of the long established relationship of confidence and friendship, according to this critic.

SPeAKING about health, this week in the House of Commons, Sir E. Hilton Young, the Minister of Health, gave his review of the Health of the Nation. The general death-rate shown and encouraging downward tendency, in comparison with five years ago, it was ten percent lower. During the last ten years owing to the improvement in the infant death-rate 40,000 infants under one year, had been saved every year, contrasted with the beginning of the century. There are 1,300 ante-nata clinics in the country, and 2,800 infant welfare centers and thousands of health visitors and nurses who visit the homes of the people. In the last fifteen years the death rate of children under five in the three diseases most fatal to them; bronchitis, diarrhea and measles had been brought down by one half. Where one person in 1932 died from whooping cough, diphtheria, scarlet fever and typhoid, the figures at the beginning of the century were respectively; 4, 4, 7 and 22. Compared with ten years ago the death rate from tuberculosis had declined by no less than 22 percent. While there had been a decrease in the maternity death rate, the position was not as favorable as it should be. The report on the Slum clearance was also encouraging. During 1933-4 some 2,250 slum areas had been declared, covering 37,000 houses and 172,000 people. Progress had been multiplied by five and the rate was increasing.

Among those honored at the Inaugural Encaenia at Oxford this week was Mr. Arthur Henderson the President of the Disarmament Conference who received the degree of Doctor of Civil Law. The Public Orator, Mr. Cyril Bailey, said of him: "No one is more worthy to preside over the council, whose object it is that arms should yield to the toga forever."

THIS YEAR the one hundredth anniversary of the death of William Carey, the first and greatest English missionary to India is being celebrated. Carey was the son of a Northamptonshire weaver, he himself being a "cobbler" and a Baptist. During the intervals in his shoe-making he found time before he was twenty-five years of age to learn Latin, Greek, Italian and Hebrew, and had made a start on Dutch and French. His mottoes were: "Expect great things from God," and "Attempt great things" (Continued on page 921.)

FAITH

A Short Radio Talk

By L. L.

Isn't it strange how we allow ourselves to drift into a habit of saying something that we really do not mean, something that we have not thought out seriously? I read a story a few days ago which gave me some new light on a common saying.

Young Dan Barton was riding on a street car with his uncle, Henry Barton, who was General Manager of a wholesale hardware firm in the city. Young Dan was employed in his uncle's office. "You know, Uncle Henry, I've just about reached the point where I have no faith left in anything." Uncle Henry made no comment at the moment, and they left the car at the next stop. "I think I'll mail this letter right here," said young Dan. "Wait a minute," said Uncle Henry. "Surely you won't bother to mail it. You aren't sure it will get there, you know." "Oh, I think it will get there all right," answered Dan easily. "Uncle Sam doesn't often fail." In a few steps they had entered the building and stood in front of the elevator. "Of course you'll walk up," said Uncle Henry. "Not on your life!" answered Dan. "I wouldn't climb ten flights of stairs for anything!" "But you said you had lost faith in everything," Uncle Henry insisted. "That includes elevators and their operators." But young Dan rode up in the elevator beside his uncle. When they had entered the office, Uncle Henry said, "I have been thinking a little about what you said of not having any faith left in anything. You ought to know, Dan, that the whole world depends to a great extent on faith. Our business here depends on it, and hardly a minute of the day goes by but that we perform some act of faith. We mail letters believing that they will be carried to their destinations; we place our lives in the hands of street car motormen and elevator operators; we send out orders in confidence that they will be filled; we accept checks at full value in place of money, and ship out consignments of goods before we have investigated the banks on which they are drawn. I have believed that you have faith in me, or you would not waste your time working here under my management. And I have too much faith in you to think that you believe what you told me a few minutes ago on the street car." Young Dan laughed heartily. "Well, I guess you have me bested, Uncle Henry. After the way you put it, I believe I do have faith in a lot of things."

And the two went about their separate tasks for the day. Young Dan never again repeated that statement about having lost faith in everything. (By Lora E. Clement, in Youth's Instructor.)

Nothing really worthy asks us to have blind faith, not even religion. You are quite right in questioning anything and anybody that demands faith without investigation. That would be mere credulity or superstition. Faith does not try to browbeat you into submission. It will stand the test of experience, just as any other principle of life must do. And faith is a principle of life as the story demonstrates.

You have heard people praise the blind faith of little children: their faith in their parents, and their unquestioning, sweet faith in God when they are properly taught. Yet that is not the ideal of mature faith. A man's faith is a faith that can turn on the whole world and life itself all the light that education and his critical intelligence can offer, and still retain for the individual his faith in the eternal verities. There is such a thing as truth, there is such a thing as honor, there is such a thing as virtue; and these things are as real as the sunshine and as everlasting as the stars. There is such a thing as sin, there is such a thing as pain, and there is such a thing as degradation; and these things are as real as prison, and disease and death. And all these things so intimately and vitally concern the spirit and mind of man that none of us can afford to be indifferent to them. Indeed, they concern not alone the body, but the spirit of man as well.

We have no desire to quarrel with those who say that they have no faith in anything. But our faith is challenged, and we must reply with the best reason we have to give for the hope that is within us.

You who find it hard to have faith in anything would do well to consider what happened to one young man who went to visit the famous president of his college. The young man went to the president one day in a troubled state of mind, and he began the conversation by unburdening his heart about all of the things that he found it impossible to believe. The president listened to him patiently until he had finished. The young man, expecting a storm of disapproval, looked up. The president was watching him kindly and quietly. "Young man," he said gently, "you have given me a long list of the things you do not believe. Now I would like to have you go out and make a list of the things you do believe; and when you have made it, bring it back to me." And the young man was greatly surprised to find how many things in life still retained his faith and confidence.

Jesus said: "Have faith in God." That message comes to men today. God is the greatest reality in the universe. Unless there is a God, a supreme Being, nothing would have any significance. Indeed nothing would have any existence. Our first best opportunity in life is to become acquainted with Him. We can understand him through a search of the words of Jesus, who can bring new light, peace, and beauty into our troubled lives.

The Book of Mormon in the Light of Bible Prophecies

John 10:16. Jesus said He had "other sheep" not of the fold at Jerusalem, who were to hear His voice.

Matthew 15:24. Shows the above could not have referred to the Gentiles, for the commission of Jesus, as far as his personal ministry was concerned was only "unto the lost sheep of Israel."

It would be as natural for those "other sheep" to keep a record of His visit and teaching as for those at Jerusalem. That this was to be so is indicated in Ezekiel 37:15-22, where "the stick of Joseph" is referred to. It was to be joined together "with the stick of Judah" (The Bible is almost entirely the record of the Jews or Judah.)

Joseph being of Israel, and his record of such importance as to be put together with the Bible or "stick of Judah" the assumption would be that Joseph's descendants were those referred to by Jesus as His "other sheep" who were to hear His voice. The record kept by them would naturally be expected to include the history of Jesus' visit to them, otherwise these interpretations would not harmonize. The Book of Mormon is the only book claiming to have been written by descendants of Joseph, and giving the history of the visit of Jesus to their country, and His works and teachings among them.

No stretch of imagination is required to suppose descendants of Joseph to have colonized America, for America is the only land that answers the description of certain Bible prophecies; some of which are mentioned especially in connection with Joseph's posterity.

Genesis 49:22. Joseph is a fruitful bough . . . whose branches Run Over The Wall. Rich blessings were to be his, (verse 25) richer blessings than those of Palestine. (verse 26.) The geographic description given by Jacob was "unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills."

Deuteronomy 33:13-17. Gives a description of "his" (Joseph's) land. From a standpoint of both mineral and vegetable productiveness, America fits this prophecy as no other country could do. That they would have heavenly blessings as well as those of the riches of the earth is indicated by verse 13. "For the precious things of heaven." These would be as worthy of sacred record as would similar heavenly blessings of Bible lands.

According to the Book of Mormon, the migration of Lehi, (pure descendant of Joseph through Manasseh) with his colony occurred about 600 B. C. They were commanded to flee because the inhabitants of Jerusalem were about to be carried captive. This harmonizes with Jeremiah 49:30 which shows that about that date God did actually command some to flee from Palestine to a country of great wealth, whose inhabitants were about to be swept off by calamity.

The date 613 B. C. is now fixed by scientists who have succeeded in interpreting the chronological hieroglyphics of Central America, as the beginning of the great Nahua civilization whose remains are to be found there. This proves that the date 600 B. C. could not have been taken by the translator of the Book of Mormon as by one writing fiction, or even as taking it from the Bible without some foundation in fact.

Not only is the Book of Mormon the only record that claims to be "the stick" nection with the "marvelous work" He was to perform. (verse 14.)

"The book" was to come forth just before Lebanon should be "turned into a fruitful field." This has already been accomplished and more than 200,000 Jews are now successfully farming 300,000 acres of land in Palestine. (A recent report stated there was virtually no unemployment among the Jews there.) It is too late then, for any book of the future to claim to be that "sealed book" of Isaiah's prophecy.

Its coming forth was to cause the "meek" and the "poor" to rejoice in the Lord, while the "terrible one" and the "scorner" and "that turn aside the just for a thing of naught" would have a very different experience. (verse 19-21.) By the very nature of the Book of Mormon, with its outspoken plainness against selfishness, inequality, injustice, class distinction and deceptions of every kind, together with its promises of better conditions soon to prevail for the poor, the meek and the lowly, when sin and wickedness shall have been destroyed, there has been a very literal fulfillment of those verses of Scripture.

The book was to cause "those who erred in spirit" to "come to understanding" and "they that murmured" to "learn doctrine." (verse 24.) This has been true of the Book of Mormon, for many who had thought that such doctrine as baptism, the laying on of hands etc., were not essential to salvation, cannot escape the emphasis that book lays on the need of such.

The time of its coming forth was to mark a new era for the Jews and people of Israel for "Jacob would not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale," (verse 22). After hundreds of years of persecutions, the last hundred years have witnessed better conditions for the Jews than they had known since their scattering. Psalm 85:12 indicates the same prosperous conditions to be restored to Palestine, in the words, "Yea, the Lord shall give that which is good; and our land shall yield her increase." That condition is made to follow verses 10 and 11 which state, "Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other. Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven."

Judging by what follows in each case, "truth springing out of the earth," (Psalm 85) and "the book speaking out of the ground," (Isaiah 29) seems to have the same bearing. This is to be noticed also in Ezekiel 37:15-28 for following the coming together of the two "sticks" or records, great blessings are to flow to Israel.

This is true also of the setting up of or record of Joseph, but its coming forth fulfilled even to detail! Isaiah 29, which speaks of such a book. (verses 11, 12, and 18) It was to "speak out of the ground" (verse 4.) The Book of Mormon plates had long lain where safely deposited in a stone box in the earth, hence did "speak out of the ground." Its translation was to be by miraculous power, for in this connection the Lord was to "proceed to do a marvelous work among this people" (verse 14) for the learned man would say "I cannot read it" for "it is sealed" when words of "the book" were to be delivered to him (verse 11). This was literally fulfilled when Martin Harris took a transcript of characters from the plates to Professor Anthon in 1827. The book was to be "delivered" to one that was "not learned" (verse 12) hence the need of "a marvelous work and a wonder" in bringing it forth into modern language. This miraculous power of God was to constitute a challenge to the religions of the time whose worship would not be acceptable to God (see verse 13) and whose fear toward Him was "taught by the precept of men." The "wise" and "prudent" men of these unacceptable religious systems would not be recognized of God in con-

David J. Krahl

DAVID J. KRAHL

DAVID J. KRAHL was in his lifetime contemporary with many of the church workers of today. He began his career of full-time activity in the church in 1900 which was about the time President F. M. Smith became assistant editor of the Saints' Herald. In that year the call of the church came to Brother Krahl through Bishop E. L. Kelley, to take charge of the accountancy department of his office. He was the first professional book keeper employed by the church and continued in that position for sixteen years, seven years in Lamoni, and nine years in Independence.

It is quite remarkable that until the last three or four years of that period the entire clerical work of the Presiding Bishop's office was cared for by Brother Krahl and a stenographer. In the last few years of his occupancy in the office at Independence, Brother W. H. Bartholomew took over the bookkeeping work, Brother Krahl assisted Bishop Kelley in a secretarial way. Contrasting the number of the office force at that time, and that of today shows how the church has grown.

While in Lamoni, in addition to his office work, he was elected superintendent of the Sunday school and served in that capacity until the headquarters of the church were moved to Independence, which necessitated his removal also.

At Independence, he again was elected superintendent of the Sunday school until 1916. In this year he was made president of Holden Stake, which was just organized. This caused another removal with his family to Holden, Missouri, where he served Holden Stake until his last illness, which occurred in 1922. In a year's time he recovered sufficiently to give partial attention to his duties but in a few months, found he would have to retire completely from his responsibilities.

Brother Krahl received his business training in Shenandoah College, Shenandoah, Iowa, which was attended at the same time by Audentia (Smith) Anderson, Frances (Walker) Davis, and John Hitchcock. All of these names are familiar to Saints and branches, especially around Lamoni, Independence, and Saint Louis.

After leaving college he secured a position with Englehart Winning and Company, at Saint Joseph, Missouri as assistant bookkeeper, and soon after as bookkeeper and cashier for the Johnson Fife Hat Company, and following this position he took charge of the office work for the Tootle Weakley Millinery Company. The dissolution of this firm and the call of the church came simultaneously.

The offer of the church was one half the salary he had been receiving and of course, one could not expect "advances" in the church in a material way, such as is the custom in the world of business. This naturally became a family problem. However, after much thought and prayer, the matter was settled in favor of the church.

A dream which Brother Krahl had about this time had considerable influence in making his decision. In the dream he saw the busy marts of life where men were at work industriously, but in a valley. None looked above or beyond his special task. The dreamer saw himself apart from the men of business, standing upon higher ground than where they were working. "Higher ground" seemed to be the dominating thought in the dream. He believed from this dream that he would stand upon higher ground if he went with the church, and was thoroughly and always satisfied with the choice he made.

Brother Krahl was at that time twenty-eight year of age. The following years of association with Bishop Kelley and Elder George H. Hilliard, his counselor, two stalwarts of the faith, had a very stabilizing influence over him as a young man. He saw the church under stress many times and witnessed the attitude of those whose years of experience and unbounded faith in God brought the church through trying scenes and difficulties.

There were also times when embarrassing financial situations arose in the Bishop's office which caused deep concerns to Brother Krahl, as he had full knowledge of them.

He related that on one occasion an obligation of large amount had become due and there was not sufficient means on hand to meet it (which is probably not an unfamiliar experience of today). The days of grace had almost expired. On this particular day, Brother Krahl upon entering Brother Kelley's office discovered him in prayer beside his office chair. Brother Krahl quietly withdrew. Before the bank closed that day the necessary means, from an unexpected source came to hand in time to meet the emergency.

Such instances as this of the Father's care over his work on earth gave Brother Krahl courage and confidence and had an important place in his preparation for still another work he was soon to be called upon to perform, the responsibilities attached to the office of president of Holden Stake.

These, I believe it will be attested, he discharged faithfully and honorably.

His natural qualifications, a genial and courteous personality, poise, judgment, and counsel together with his dependence upon the Lord made him an effective administrator of the trust imposed in him.

After four years of illness he passed away July 5, 1926, leaving his companion, Grace L. Krahl, four sons and one daughter. The daughter Grace Frances Richardson, twenty-five years of age, joined him in the beyond five months later.

A man slow to condemn, patient with the erring, wise in counsel, may be said of Brother Krahl as one other said of his friend, "There was something so much finer in the man than anything he said."

Diversity of Labor

There are many truths which go to make up the unity of the truth; and some of them are very strong; but are not strange truths; the corner stone of a building is neither the threshold, lintel, nor keystone of its arched doorway; nor the pediment, nor capital of its principal pillars; but all may be of one kind of material, hewn from the same quarry. So it is with those who may erect the building. He who quarries the marble slab is not he who carves the elaborate arch; nor is he who lays the stone in the cemented bed the one who paints the exquisite designs on the frescoed walls and ceiling, yet these may all be members of one family, bearing one name, or be those bound together for the accomplishment of one common object.

So in the church there will be diversities of labor, and in that diversity of labor there is now supposed to be an unaccountable and reprehensible inequality, that must be abolished—if needs be—by power. There is no power that will ever do this but the power of truth, the unity of the truth; unless—and the alternative is fearful to contemplate—there be a complete destruction of all and singular the properties of the Saints. But the work which is to be done cannot be done if the alternate occurs; hence we must conclude that the lines of inequality must be voluntarily thrown down by those having the privilege abasing themselves, thus assisting others to be elevated.

We shall be glad to take by the hand in fraternal regard the men who will now begin to work practically for Zion's good; helping each other, thus by concentration and unity, forming a bank mighty and strong. So shall we be spiritually one as we are now legally one.—The Saints' Herald, volume 20, pages 144-146; Church History, volume 3, pages 714-718.

Yvonne's Futile Sacrifice

THE FLOWER WREATHS were withered on old Mr. Larson's grave. Aunt Bashy was becoming reconciled to the fact that he had willed her only a small portion of his property. And Mrs. Miller was working with her old speed.

"It's funny about life," Louisa said to her mother, "Folks seem to get the things they don't want and won't appreciate. Not that I don't appreciate Grandfather's thought for me, but what do I want of a fifty acre farm in the Ozarks? And you don't really appreciate that money you're getting—you won't give up working, that's sure."

"Foolish child,—of course I shall not stop working. Why should I? We owe life that much—to do something useful to justify our existence. Anyway, it isn't a fortune, though it may seem so to you. I shall go on with my interesting experiments with asters and roses, aside from the other work of the home. A person would go crazy if he didn't interest himself in something useful." She shook out a garment, smoothed it on the ironing board, and tested the sizzling iron with an expert finger.

LOUISA GAZED moodily out of the window. "If I could only sell it, it would be different. But Grandfather made the special request that I keep it and pass it on to my children. I suppose I'll have to pay taxes on it all my life—it'll just be a drag."

"Oh, I don't know, Louisa. You may find some use for it." She smiled grimly. "When you get rich you can have it for a summer resort. It's the home place, you know, and grandfather always was attached to the scenes of his boyhood. You'll find some use for it, I expect—it may fit in with some of Dan's plans—or have you and he made plans definitely for the future yet?"

"We haven't had much chance to talk things over—or rather—" she laughed lightly, "I have steered the conversation away from that until I have thought out just what I want to do."

Her mother paused the fraction of a second from her brisk work and eyed her daughter severely. "Don't start out by being selfish, Louisa. It won't get you anything but sorrow."

Louisa shrugged. "Oh, I'm not selfish. But I do believe I can see something a bit clearer than Dan. I think I know a real opportunity to get fame and fortune when I see it better than he does. You know, mama, I'd just sicken and die if I had to live all my life in Monroe. Honestly I would. And Dan would never get anywhere in a business way. He would follow in the same old track his father has made."

"What of that? I think Eldons have done fairly well. They have a nice home and a paying business—"

"Yes, and Mrs. Eldon had to pinch pennies a whole year in order to buy that rug for the front room. And it's not a rug I'd want at that. I want real beauty and refinement around me, and I don't want to have to wait a whole year to get them."

THE TELEPHONE rang. Mrs. Miller sighed. "You answer it, will you please, Lou? I must get this ironing done. I have to take care of those chickens pretty soon."

A few minutes later Louisa came through the kitchen singing gaily. "Dan wants me to go for a ride, mother. Mr. Eldon has let him have the car, so it'll probably be awhile before I'm back."

"Where you going Lou?" asked Mildred and Hildred, the twins, almost simultaneously. "May we go?"

"No, of course you can't go," laughed her mother. "Now you twins run and play because there'll be work for you to do soon."

"When I get big," Louisa heard Hildred say, as she tripped upstairs, "I'm going to have seven lovers—one for each day in the week. Then I'll ride and ride and ride in their cars—"

"If she has one like Dan, she won't want any more," thought Louisa. She felt so full of life and joy that she skipped about the room like a small child. She seized Dan's picture and kissed it; but her eyes, chancing to fall on the black veil she had worn at the funeral, sobered, then brightened again. Grandfather's flame of life had burned itself out; was that any reason why hers should burn less brightly? Grandfather wouldn't want her to be sad forever. What dress should she wear? She wanted to be brilliant to-day, dazzling. That red silk. Grandfather had never liked it; he said too much color cheapened a girl.

"Well, after all, it's my life," she thought, as she slipped into it, and surveyed her reflection with satisfaction. She picked up a letter from the dresser and slipped it in the front of her dress.

"This was nice of you Dan," she said as she settled herself in the seat beside him, and gave him one of her most brilliant smiles.

"I'd like always to do nice things for you, Louisa."

"Would you honestly?"

"Just ask me anything you want—" that's at all possible for me to perform. See how quickly I'll act on it."

"All right. Here goes. See that shady place yonder? All still and quiet and lonesome like? Stop the car there for a minute."

"All right, Princess. And what are your further orders?"

"Here's the order." She giggled. "Kiss me."

"Sweetheart!" For a few precious moments it seemed to them both that earth was blended with heaven. She was breathless at it and a little afraid. They were both almost tearful in the intensity of their joy.

SHE DREW FORTH the letter. "I have something else to talk about, too," she said softly, "and though it is not an order, it is a request that I hope you'll grant to make me very, very happy. I hope—"

"Anything I can do to make you happy—" he began when she handed him the letter. He frowned.

"Mr. Robert Garfield, Esq., Monroe, Iowa."

"That letter is only to explain things a little. Mr. Hunt is making us a proposition too, I—well—read the letter first, Dan, then I'll explain."

When he had finished he looked at her thoughtfully.

"You mean you want us to go on a wild goose chase like this?" he asked. "I couldn't conscientiously be a party to a thing like this, dear. You know I don't believe in all this maudling talk about all the past being no good and all that. The past has given us lots of good things. Take the Bible, now—"

She smothered his words with another kiss that caused them to forget all else for the time being. "I explained that you would be rather upset by their proposition," she said. "And Mr. Hunt said that would be just fine—he wants contrast in his book—and he said all you'd have to do would be to act natural. And here is the nice part of it. He'll deposit two thousand dollars to each of us in the local bank, to be given to us with interest when he discharges us. In the meantime he pays all our expenses. And the big thing that will be required is that we waste all the time possible. Dear, wouldn't that be the loveliest honeymoon in the world? Two years with no worries, and nothing to do but love each other. Do you think you could endure that? How does it sound, anyway?"

"It sounds like folly to me—perfect craziness! I know enough about business and such things to know that when you get money you usually give up something valuable in return. They'd get the pound of flesh from us in one way or another." He gazed at her tenderly. "And that Robert Garfield isn't fit for you to associate with, dear. Everybody knows he isn't a very good boy. And this Mr. Hunt doesn't ring true to me—"

"He really is a very courtly old gentleman, Dan. I met him yesterday. He's at the hotel. Dan, will you consider it?"

"I'll go and call on the old man, surely. And if I was sure that everything was honest about it, and that we wouldn't have to compromise our principles—"

"You'd go? Oh Dan! Just think of the long dream of happiness it would give us—and all that money to start with when we came back!—you will consider it seriously, won't you?"

Next day they drove to the hotel to interview their prospective employer. Dan, although the idea behind the expedition was repellent to him, had a youthful yearning for adventure, especially if he could be convinced that nothing would be expected of him that a Latter Day Saint need consider wrong. To his disappointment, however, he did not like Mr. Hunt at all—he could scarcely force himself to speak with ordinary politeness. Mr. Hunt, on the other hand, was almost excruciatingly polite, and seemed the more anxious to obtain Dan's consent.

HE gave Dan several references, and that night Dan told his father the whole story and asked his advice. Mr. Eldon made a trip to Chicago and investigated Mr. Hunt's reputation. The most he could secure against him was that he was queer, but harmless. His uncle had died leaving him over a million dollars, and Darwin Hunt immediately made up his mind to accomplish some great thing for science. That seemed to be the whole story behind the unusual proposition, and Mr. Eldon reluctantly admitted he could see nothing wrong about Dan and Louisa joining the expedition except that he felt they would be in poor company. He was not at all favorably impressed with Mr. Hunt's ideals.

"If you need help, and want to come home, remember me," he said as he placed his hand affectionately on Dan's shoulder. He did not believe in forcing his will upon the children, anyway. They would have to acquire experience, find out life for themselves.

And so Louisa and Dan were quietly married in the little Saints' Chapel; and almost before they knew it, they were nearly ready to begin their wanderings. Robert had gone to Chicago, and returned with his bride, Yvonne.

Mr. Hunt proved himself a rare entertainer, and all their spare moments were taken up in some way by his delightful plans. He didn't seem to realize they wished some time to themselves. But they had signed a contract of peculiar nature. Each one was to do exactly as their leader ordered unless the order conflicted with the conscience of the one concerned. The old man carried a small book in which he took notes. He explained that he took notes on everything—the way the atmosphere affected people, for instance: or how different temperments reacted to a thunderstorm, just who of them noticed the bird songs, etc.

They were having a picnic in the woods one day and Mr. Hunt strolled away for a few moments forgetting to take with him the treasured small book. Robert thoughtlessly picked it up and began to read it when Mr. Hunt chanced to turn his head and see what he was doing. He was at the boy's side in a moment, demanding possession of the book.

"Why, why—of course. But I thought this was to be a joint affair—I mean—it was my impression that we are all doing research work. I didn't think about your caring—"

"What do you think I'm paying you for?" cried the old man excitedly. "Tell me now—tell me truthfully; how much did you read?—what did you see?"

"Why—just all our names in the front, and after each name 'Case number so and so,' as if we were patients in a hospital. Then on the next page I just saw the title: 'Jealousy.' That's all. I didn't know you would care."

"It's all right for this time, and I'm really sorry I had such an outburst of temper, my children. But I am all wrapped up in my subject and don't you see? If you could see exactly what I'm trying to do, you'd be inclined to act abnormally, and that would defeat the purpose."

BUT EVERY ONE of the four young people seemed nervous after that.

Yvonne suggested going home and everyone including Mr. Hunt seemed relieved at the suggestion.

"Come, Yvonne," suggested Louisa, "Let's you and I clear away our picnic table. I guess carrying these few dishes to the car is about all there is to do."

"No, let's clean it all up—I do hate to think of leaving any kind of a mess. Here, you take these cans and I'll take these scraps of food. We'll take 'em to the stream yonder and let the water carry them away." Louisa noticed that Mr. Hunt immediately began to write something in the little book, and yet he seemed to be able to watch them, too. They paused awhile watching the swift little stream carry away the remains of the picnic lunch.

"You're a kind, good girl," said Yvonne, unexpectedly. "I am sorry for you."

"Why?" asked Louisa, much surprised. Why should anyone be sorry for her, when she had such great happiness?

"Because you have sold yourself to Satan," with a grim smile.

"Why—you mean—you can't mean Mr. Hunt? He seems—so gentle and kind. I don't think he'd hurt anyone. He wouldn't—"

"No," sighed the other, "he will never do you any physical harm. I have known him for years. But he has ways—he is a very good hypnotist and he can—"

"Oh, I think that is interesting, really! Haven't you found it exciting?"

"Very. It's been so exciting at times that I've felt I could stand it no longer. I've threatened several desperate things, but he only laughs at me. He says that people who take their own lives very seldom talk about it; that people who talk about it are usually simply trying to frighten folks into giving them their own way. Some day, when I've had all I can bear, I'll show him!"

"Oh, no—you mustn't—indeed you mustn't! Why, I've learned to like you, and I want you with us."

"You do, really? You dear little kid. Well, I'm not thinking of ending everything right now, but I will the next time the mood strikes me. You'll see. After all, since there's nothing on the other side of life, as some folks think, what does it matter when you die, or how? Really, this life is such a blank as far as joy and happiness goes, the quicker one passes out the better! Oh, I know, you think you're happy now—I can see it in your face—but how long will it last, do you suppose? Everything changes in this sordid world, and passes away into nothing, like the dying of a flame."

"I suppose that's true all right. But I—can't bear to hear you talk like that—as though you meant all those solemn things."

"But I do mean them, child. The next time the mood comes I shall give way to it. Why not? Can you give me even one good reason why one should keep living on in this old world, when there's nothing to be gained by it, and there's no God or Devil to fear when you go out into nothing? It would be a joke on me though if I'd wake up actually and find I really had a soul all the time and there was a God after all. Wouldn't it? I'm going to find out! Old Hunt isn't going to follow me around forever. He gives me such a cold shivery feeling today. I can't stand him! Did you notice the venom in his voice when he scolded that good boy for taking a peep at his book?"

"Robert, you mean? Why I noticed he seemed sort of put out—"

"Put out! Oh, dear. And that poor boy talks so pitifully hopeful. Thinks he'll be somebody great. Huh! If there's any fame in it it'll go to the old man!"

"He's coming this way, I'm afraid. We'd better talk of something else. Isn't it funny the cleansing effect water has? See how clear the little stream is now?"

"Filth passes away the same as beauty," said Yvonne. "We can be thankful for that."

"You seem rather—ah—moody, today, my dear Yvonne," the old man said, kindly, "it seems strange for a bride to be so unhappy. Now when I was first married—"

"You know very well how little happiness I am going to have—also you know how little the boy will have. I am sorry

Worship Suggestions for August . . . . .

The Church School

Prepared by Arthur Oakman and Elva T. Sturges

THEME FOR MONTH: "THE CITIZENS OF THE KINGDOM."

FIRST SUNDAY, AUGUST 5.

Theme: "Thy Kingdom Come."

Instrumental Prelude: "Our Father Who Is in Heaven," S. H., 315; old S. H., 111.

Call to Worship: Isaiah 44: 6-8.

(S) Hymn Response: "Guide Us O Thou Great Jehovah," S. H., 175; old S. H., 1.

Reading: Doctrine and Covenants 65.

Hymn: "Jesus Shall Reign," S. H., 177, verses one and two.
Talk: On the Hope of the Kingdom of God.

The heart of a citizen of the Kingdom of God is turned toward the future. He believes invincibly that the best is yet before him, and before his brethren. He believes this way because of the kind of Father-king he worships. "Eye hath not seen," he says with Paul, "ear hath not heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Godly men find that God is even better than they expected him to be, and hence it is for them unthinkable that anything that is past, can excel the glory of the Kingdom which is to come.

There is no greater blessing than working as a citizen for the Kingdom of God. People who hark back to the "good old days," and sigh, "we shall never see them again," have lost hope. They have lost the hope of God. They are jeopardizing their spiritual standing as citizens of the Kingdom.

It is not only the fact of "hope springing eternal in the human breast" that we should care about. Everyone hopes for something. Rather, it is what we hope for which makes us what we are. If we really hope for the Kingdom, then we will accept the Ruler of that Kingdom as our Ruler—and do His will.

(S) Hymn: 177, verses three, four and five.

(S) Commission: Doctrine and Covenants 98: 4 and 97: 4.

"Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered, they that remain and are pure in heart shall return and come to their inheritances. . . . Therefore, let your hearts be comforted, for all things shall work together for good to them that walk uprightly, . . . and all that call on the name of the Lord and keep his commandments, shall be saved. Even so. Amen."

(S) The Lord's Prayer.

SECOND SUNDAY, AUGUST 12

Theme: "The Assurance of Things Hoped For."

Instrumental Prelude: "O for a Faith," S. H., 240; old S. H., 104.

Call to Worship: Isaiah 45: 18, 22.

"Thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited; I am the Lord, and there is none else.

"Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God, and there is none else."

Response by Congregation: Isaiah 45: 24.

"In the Lord have I righteousness and strength; even to him shall men come; and all that are incensed against him shall be ashamed."

(S) Hymn: "The Morning Breaks," S. H., 411; old S. H., 35.

(S) Prayer.

Hymn: "Once More We Come," S. H., 75, verse one; old S. H., 29.

Leader reads Alma 16: 138-146.

Hymn: "May We Receive," S. H., 75, verse two.

Leader continues, Alma 16: 149-162.

Hymn: "Awake O Heavenly Wind," S. H., 75, verse three.

Leader concludes, Alma 16: 163-172.

Hymn: "Revive the Parched," S. H., 75, verse four.

Period of Meditation.

(S) Benediction.

Note: The success of this service will depend on how well the leader knows the sermon quoted from Alma 16. Whoever leads should take plenty of time before hand to appreciate both the words and the spirit of this wonderful discourse.

THIRD SUNDAY, AUGUST 19.

Theme: "Obey His Commandments."

Instrumental Prelude: "When we walk with the Lord," Z. P., 4.

Call to Worship: (Doctrine and Covenants 12: 1-2, 64: 7.)

"Behold, I am God, and give heed to my word, which is quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword, to the dividing asunder of both joints and marrow; therefore, give heed unto my word. Behold, the field is white already to harvest, therefore, whoso desireth to reap, let him thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God; yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God; therefore, if you will ask of me you shall receive, if you will knock it shall be opened unto you."

"Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind; and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days."

(S) Hymn: "Hark, the voice of Jesus calling," S. H., 344.

Scripture Reading: Matthew 21: 26-30.

(S) Hymn: "O Lord of light, and love, and power," S. H., 299.

Talk: The thing that most concerns our heavenly Father is the work necessary in the building of His Kingdom. No matter what we may say about being willing to work, the only thing that counts is the work we do. God doesn't need people who merely sympathize with the task, who say they will work and do not. He wants people who will work with him, no matter what they may say about it.

Many of us may feel the uplift of a fine prayer service, and have created within us the resolution to do the will of God. If we go away telling ourselves we will work, and then do not, we are condemned. The man of God is concerned about the work of God. He does not hesitate because of what he will have to personally sacrifice. He works. The spiritual stature of a Joseph Smith was acquired through prayer, diligence, confession, and work. (Doctrine and Covenants 19: 2.)

The Lord is concerned about what we say. But, what we say is only a small part of what we do. Citizens of the kingdom must do the will of God. We must give our lives to seeking His way, and to the practice of it. Happiness can come through no other activity.

(S) Hymn: "Unto God, who knows our every weakness," S. H., 293.

(S) Commission: Proverbs 3: 1-6.

(S) Benediction.

FOURTH SUNDAY, AUGUST 26.

Theme: "Have You Fulfilled the Law?"

Instrumental Prelude: "Father, in thy mysterious presence kneeling," S. H., 101.

(S) Hymn Call to Worship: "Awake! Ye Saints of God," S. H., 204; old S. H., 34.

(S) Prayer: A petition for forgiveness, and understanding of His will.

Scripture Reading: Doctrine and Covenants 102: 1, 2.

(S) Hymn: "God send us men," S. H., 223.

Talk: John 6: 65, 66. "And he said, Therefore said I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except he doeth the will of my Father who hath sent me. From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him."

Evidently the test of discipleship is obedience to the law of God. The people who "walked with him no more," lost Jesus' companionship because they had little in common with him. Great friendships are the richest things there are. They can only come as we share great things with each other. The tragedy of these forsaking ones is that they lost a great friendship by being unwilling to share their lives in a great cause. They might have become like Him as they worked with him. They forsook what they themselves might have been, for what they wanted to be. They were their own enemies.

In exactly the same measure, we today forsake our own best possibilities if we do not fulfill the law of God. The spirit of the kingdom of God is the companionship of Jesus. It is for those of us who are willing to be what we can be in Him. It is not for those who are what they want to be, by doing their own will.

Commission: Isaiah 55: 1-3.

(S) Hymn: "Be with me Lord," S. H., 305; old S. H., 172.

(S) Benediction.

The Children's Division

Prepared by Fern Weedmark and Mildred Goodfellow

FIRST SUNDAY, AUGUST 5.
Sacrament Service

SECOND SUNDAY, AUGUST 12.

Theme: "Reverence for God's House."

Prelude: "Open the Gates of the Temple," by Mrs. Joseph F. Knapp, or "Let Us Go to the House of the Lord," S. H., 67; Z. P., 119.

Call to Worship: "... Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths, . . ." (Isaiah 2: 3, Micah 4: 2.)

Response: "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." (Psalm 122: 1.)

Hymn: "Let Us Go to the House of the Lord," S. H., 67; Z. P., 119.

Prayer.

Scripture: Habakkuk 2: 20, Mark 11: 17a.

Hymn: "Father, Once Again We Come," S. H., 80; Z. P., 168.

Sermon Talk: Text: "My house is the house of prayer." (Matthew 21: 13, Mark 11: 17, Luke 19: 46.) First explain to the children what "reverence" means. Did you hear what Brother _____ said in his prayer? Did you hear him ask God to be with us this morning? Do you think God heard his prayer? Sometimes we do not act like we believed God was with us. Jesus has promised that where two or three gather together in his name, he will be with them. (Matthew 18: 20.) We come to church to worship God. If we remember this and also remember that He is with us, we will be reverent in his house. Mention other ways we can show our reverence for God's house, such as taking care of Bibles, songbooks and furniture; keeping paper off the floor, and other ways.

Story: "When Solomon Built the House of the Lord." (1 Kings, chapters 5, 6, 7 and 8; 2 Chronicles, chapters 5, 6 and 7.) "When Hezekiah cleansed the house of the Lord." (2 Chronicles 29.) "When a Boy King Repaired the Temple." (2 Kings 22.) Told by juniors.

Hymn: "You May Sing of the Beauty of Mountain and Dale," S. H., 109; old S. H., 168, or "Chime On, Sweet Bells," Z. P., 50, by congregation or junior choir.

Story: "Building a Temple in the Latter Days." (Kirtland Church History, volume 1, page 518; volume 2, chapter 2;

Departments' Journal, December, 1927; Autumn Leaves, July, 1927; Vision, April, 1929; pamphlet, "Kirtland Temple." "At the King's Table," Stepping Stones, February 7, 1932. (Sacrament service.)

Closing Hymn: "Oh, Give Us a Parting Blessing," S. H., 95; Z. P., 90.

Benediction.

Note: It is suggested that a picture of Kirtland Temple be used with this service. One may be obtained from the Graphic Arts Bureau, size 16 x 20 inches, for $1.50.

THIRD SUNDAY, AUGUST 19.

Theme: "Reverence for God's Word."
(The Bible)

Prelude: "Glad Tidings," Z. P., 149, or "Tenderly Lead Thou Me On," S. H., 267; Z. P., 5.

Call to Worship: "Lead me in thy truth, and teach me: for thou art the God of my salvation; on thee do I wait all the day." (Psalm 25: 5.)

Hymn: "Tenderly Lead Thou Me On," S. H., 267; Z. P., 5.

Prayer.

Scripture: Psalm 119: 105, Isaiah 40: 8, James 1: 22.

Hymn: "Glad Tidings," Z. P., 149, or "O Jesus, Our Lord," S. H., 92.

Sermon Talk: The purpose of this service is to help the children have a deeper appreciation and reverence for the Bible. Help the children to understand what it has cost to preserve the Bible for us. Tell about the men who spent their lives in the effort to make the Bible available to us, so we might have it in our homes and read it. For suggestions, see Sermonette, "How the Bible Came to Us," Stepping Stones, September 11, 1932; "How We Got Our Bible," by J. Paterson Smyth; "The Bible Through the Ages," (booklet) 10c, American Baptist Publication Society. Tell about the Inspired Translation and give a few examples of the corrections which appear in it. If desired, the Scripture may be omitted at the beginning of the service; arrangements made for the children to bring their Bibles to the service, and the sermon talk concluded by asking the children to find in their Bibles what Jesus and some of the writers in the Bible said about God's word. What Jesus said: Mark 13: 31, Luke 11: 28; What David said: Psalm 119: 105, 19: 7-8. What Isaiah said: Isaiah 40: 8. What Paul said: 2 Timothy 3: 16. What James said: James 1: 22.

Story: "How the Bible Came to Us." Told by juniors. (See pages 32 to 42, junior quarterly, "The Junior and His Bible," by Lucie H. Sears, October, November, December, 1930.)

Special musical number by junior choir. Suggestions:

"Light of Life," Z. P., 163.

"Thy Word Is Like a Garden, Lord," Living Hymns, 25.

"My Precious Bible," A Junior Hymnal, compiled by J. E. Sturgis and W. S. Martin, 144.

Story: "A Bible Hidden in a Pillow," (Adoniram Judson in Burma), pages 44 and 45 of junior quarterly described above, or "Mary Jones and Her Bible," Pilgrim Elementary Teacher, April, 1927, or "The Queerest Place to Keep a Bible," page 11 of book, Jewels the Giant Dropped, by Edith Eberle and Grace McGavran.

Closing Hymn: "Never Be Discouraged," S. H., 236; Z. P., 96.

Benediction.

FOURTH SUNDAY, AUGUST 26.

Theme: "Reverence for God's Word."

(The Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants.)

Prelude: "Wonderful Words," S. H., 335, Z. P., 69.

Call to Worship: "I will delight myself in thy statutes: 'I will not forget thy word.'" (Psalm 119: 16.)

Response: "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand forever." (Isaiah 40: 8.)

Hymn: "With a Steadfast Faith," Z. P., 21, or "I Love to Tell the Story," S. H., 306.

Prayer.

Scripture: Psalm 85:11, Doctrine and Covenants 1: 7.

Hymn: "Wonderful Words," S. H., 335; Z. P., 69.

Sermon Talk: Text: Doctrine and Covenants 1: 8. The purpose of this service is to help the children become better acquainted with God's word as it is found in our own books, the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. See Sermonettes, "How the Book of Mormon Came to Us," Stepping Stones, September 18, 1932, and "How the Doctrine and Covenants Came to Us," Stepping Stones, September 25, 1932. Help the children to understand how wonderful it is that God preserved the plates and sent an angel to deliver them to Joseph Smith. Tell about the Urim and Thummim and how Joseph Smith used them in translating the plates. Some people believe that God has never spoken to people since the books of the Bible were written, but we believe that God does not change (Malachi 3: 6, Hebrews 13: 8 and that he still speaks to his people. We should be very thankful that we are permitted to be members of God's church.

Story: "The Book of Mormon Story." This may be one story, as found in lesson six, junior quarterly, "The New Testament and Its Writers," by Hallie M. Gould, July, August, September, 1933, or two short stories told by juniors: "How the Book of Mormon Was Written," (Include in this story the facts about the different plates mentioned in the Book of Mormon, the men who engraved them, especially Nephi and Moroni, and other interesting things.) and "What Joseph Smith Found in the Hill Cumorah." (This story may have a beginning a little different than usual, such as: "What would you think if an angel should give you a book, the words of which were written on pages of gold?" etc.)

Special musical number by a junior boy or girl, or Hymn: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," S. H., 397.

Story: "A Book of Messages From Our Heavenly Father."

(Doctrine and Covenants. This may be told in a way that will be interesting to the boys and girls. See lesson eight, junior quarterly, "The New Testament and its Writers," referred to above.)

Closing Hymn:

(Tune: Z. P., 53.)

"For giving us these books so true,

We're thankful to our Father;

For telling us what we should do,

We're thankful to our Father;

For all God's word to you and me

Found in these books—not one but three,

For helping us to reverent be,

We're thankful to our Father."

Benediction.

THE BOOK OF MORMON IN THE LIGHT OF BIBLE PROPHECIES

the "ensign" on "the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia" from which "swift messengers" were to be sent to "a nation scattered and peeled . . . a nation meted out and trodden down." America is the only land beyond the Rivers of Ethiopia from Palestine. Following the sending of this "ensign" message we read in verse 7, "In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord of Hosts of a people scattered and peeled."

We cannot escape notice of the interesting fact, in light of the above, that in September, 1823, when the angel Moroni made known to the young man Joseph Smith the whereabouts of the plates containing Joseph's record, that the same angel three times repeated to the young man, among others things, that the eleventh chapter of Isaiah was about to be fulfilled. (See Church History.) This gave one more testimony to the fact, for the last time before its fulfillment, that the coming forth of this sacred record was to witness the beginning of the gathering of the Jews and of Israel from their long dispersion, never again to be scattered. It cannot be overlooked either, that the same angel upon the same occasion stated of the Gentiles, "That the fulness of the Gentiles was soon to come in." (Church History.)

As a witness then, one hundred and four years following its publication have seen a remarkable fulfillment of those conditions associated with "the book" in prophecy.

To sum up: The Book of Mormon is the only book that gives the account of Jesus and His visit to His "other sheep."—the only book that fulfills the prophecy of "the stick of Joseph" being brought forth and "put with the stick of Judah" (Ezekiel 37) the only book that gives account of Joseph's migration "over the wall" and of his being blessed as Genesis 49 and Deuteronomy 33 would indicate—the only book that accounts for a people of the Lord being directed 600 B. C. to a wealthy nation whose remains were found after their calamity had come upon them. Jeremiah 49: 30:32—the only book that came to light "out of the ground" just before "Lebanon became a fruitful field"—whose "words were delivered to a learned man," the book itself being "delivered to an unlearned man," the translation being "a marvelous work and a wonder" performed by the Lord, (Isaiah 29), and the only book that came forth in "the land shadowing with wings" as a sign of long-looked-for blessings of emancipation for Judah and Israel.

THE NOMADS

for that boy, I think you should—"

"I think you should shake off these dark moods, my girl. They are not good for you—for anyone. And we have been waiting on you—have been ready to go for quite a while."

"I would rather walk, if you don't mind, Mr. Hunt," Yvonne requested rather than stated. "I feel rather nervous and a walk would do me good."

"I will walk, too, Mr. Hunt, if you please." Louisa felt she would like to win more of this strange girl's confidence.

"But I don't please, as it happens, my dear young ladies. So you will kindly get in, as I have some questions I wish to ask you when we get back to town."

They obeyed, silently. Louisa shrank from the tight-lipped Yvonne and was glad she could climb in the back seat with Dan and Mr. Hunt. Yvonne's eyes had the strangest look she had even seen, a blend of despair, grief, intense anger, and glaring hate. Robert sat at the wheel apparently oblivious to his young wife's pain.

"Stop the car, Robert, and let me out," finally said Yvonne, "I just feel I must walk awhile."

"Don't stop, Robert," said Mr. Hunt calmly. "I am the leader of this expedition. Drive on."

"I may be able to put a stop to this foolishness and save all three of you kids a lot of trouble" cried Yvonne—"or maybe it will stop long enough so that you can find out just what you're in for and pull out before it's too late! It's the chance of a lifetime for me to do a good deed—I think I'd better take it! I think—"

Mr. Hunt leaned forward. "What are you raving about now?"

"I want out of this car!"

"You are going to ride in this car until we reach the town."

"Robert," fiercely she turned to the young man at the wheel. "If you don't stop and let me out, I shall jump out! Do you hear? I'll do it!"

"Nonsense." Mr. Hunt laughed. "She won't do it, Robert. You don't know how many times she has threatened such things. Drive on."

"No—stop! Robert, oh, stop!" Louisa shrieked excitedly.

It was too late. Yvonne had made good her threat, and lay unconscious by the side of the road.

"You said she wouldn't," Robert said, unsteadily. "I've killed her. I'm a murderer."

Young People in Religious Education

By C. B. Woodstock

THE CHURCH needs its youth. "In such a time as this," a time when industrial, financial, moral and spiritual interests of the world are in upheaval, the church needs the vision, the ambition, the initiative, the vitality and the faith of its youth. Probably more than we can now realize the program of our church is being weighed in the balance of the world's supreme need. It is being weighed together with other religious faiths. It must provide a theology that is at once biblical, practical and sufficient unto the needs of the day. It must produce a program that is wholly consonant with the revealed will and purposes of God and which meets the social and economic needs of a sadly suffering world. It must produce a people, healthy, industrious, intelligent, imbued with the conviction of a divine mission in life and willing to devote itself sacrificially to accomplish divine purposes.

If the church is to succeed "in such a time as this" it must have the best of our young manhood and womanhood giving its splendid strength unreservedly to promote the interests of righteousness in all the walks of life; in industry, in government, in social life and in religion. The welfare of the whole world is at stake. The work of the church is the establishment of the kingdom of God. That kingdom will be builded under divine endowment by men and women who have found the secret of divine love and service. Of course we can count always on the effort, the influence and the example of many who now are mature, but their day is soon passing. The great tasks before the church in the next quarter century will be performed by the young people of today who are now seeking to qualify in efficient service for the additional endowment which is promised.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE NEED THE CHURCH

The church needs its young people. "In times such as these," economic uncertainty, the invasion of banditry, vice and crime, an evident lowering of moral standards, the prevalence of broken homes, the increase of want, our youth need the stabilizing influence of high ideals and noble purposes expressed in a cause which challenges their allegiance, and which promises security. This cause is found only in the revelation of Christ and the salvation he came to bring to the world.

"In times such as these," all Christian churches are demanding a demonstration of the philosophy of Christ. Indeed, a practical solution of the ills of our social, economic and civil life can come only through a people who are inspired with the spirit of Christian brotherhood and

Emphases in Religious Education—Number Four

The use of local and district organizations of the Young People's Division to encourage initiative, to develop leadership and to enlist all the young people in the creative work of the church.

whose lives are motivated by the pure love of Christ, which is only saying we must look to a thoroughly practical Christian social order to meet the needs of our day. Latter Day Saints look forward to Zion as this solution. And the Zion that is to be will be the product largely of the consecrated devotion and the sacrificial service of men and women who are now in the ranks of our young people.

Our young people need the church. Their future happiness and success is secured only in the triumph of the righteous principles of its faith. It is our firm conviction that they were raised up "for such a day as this." The church not only brings to them a supreme challenge, but it offers them the opportunity under divine leadership to labor together and with God, in this latter day, for the salvation of all the world. They may lead the way, under divine guidance and power, to cure the ills and right the wrongs of a sin cursed world.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

It may be significant that in the church school plan a most important place is assigned to the young people's division. Not a division for young people, merely, but of young people, with special emphasis upon opportunity for the exercise of initiative, vision, energy, judgment and service. Young people stand in the momentous present, with the supreme challenge of an unparalleled opportunity before them. To make provision for the education, the training, the inspiration and the active enlistment of the young people of the church in carrying forward the work of the church, is the objective and purpose of the young people's division.

This has been given very definite expression in a statement of objectives prepared recently by a group of leaders called by the First Presidency. In this group were Elders George Mesley and E. E. Closson, associate directors of the young people's division of the church, who submit the following as a guide for the two inter-conference years:

OBJECTIVES OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S DIVISION

The purpose of the young people's division is caught up in the general spirit and mission of the work of Christ. It will be interpreted in terms of the program of the church as it seeks to carry out this task.

Stated as a general objective of religious education, the aim may be phrased as follows:

To develop personalities imbued with the spirit and practicing the principles of Christ;

To promote participation and fellowship in the church as the agency through which Christ is to be revealed to the world.

This purpose of developing such personalities is not achieved in isolation; it is a cooperative undertaking. Viewed from this angle the problem is that of developing an environment in which youth shall be able:

1. To learn the heritage and program of Latter Day Saintism.
2. To share its spiritual fellowship.
3. To participate in its creative work.
4. To witness of its power.

A program of more specific activities is required that will provide channels for realizing this general objective. For the next two years the youth will look toward these points of emphasis:

1. Creative leisure time activities.
2. Study of Latter Day Saints' history and practice.
3. Participation in the financial program.
4. Evangelistic endeavors.
5. Participation in movements for World Welfare.

Means for assisting to carry out these projects are required. The following list will be generally applicable:

1. Courses of study, especially the quarterlies.
2. Oriole Movement and Girl Scouts.
3. Boy Scouts.
4. The Tenth Legion (as an objective for attainment, not an organization).
5. Stake and district gatherings of youth.
6. The Nauvoo Camp.
7. The Youth Page in the Saints' Herald.
8. Young People's Convention, Lamoni, 1935.

It is understood that local areas will need to formulate more specific objectives, to definitize projects, and to develop agencies for helping to realize their goals.

It is assumed that the Youth's Division is a grouping of the church, for the placement of educational emphasis and for the development of an age level with certain common interests and needs, not a separate organization. It is simply a division of the church school program—the church active in the endeavor of Christian education.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S PROGRAM

The above "objectives" will serve as a guide in locals and districts as well as in the general church, in planning an activity program for and by its young people, which shall enable them effectively to accomplish their part of the objectives of the church. This they will do locally under the direction of a mature leader who is not only young in spirit and sympathetic with the needs of youth in this day, but who is consciously responsible to the pastor and to the branch for the conduct of his division as an integral part of the total program of the branch, contributing its due share in all ways in the work of the local church.

Much of the success of a local young people's division depends upon the vision, the spirit, the initiative, the sound judgment, the tact, and the spiritual development of the one chosen as young people's supervisor.

While there are developing some projects of a church-wide nature, in which young people everywhere may participate, in branches and in districts, each group is free to select from these and to discover others which shall give greatest promise of meeting their particular need.

YOUNG PEOPLE MAY ORGANIZE

It is everywhere conceded that young people's work is best carried out as an organized unit. The very organization and its work become a fine project in religious education. It is unthinkable that this should be independent of and apart from the constituted authorities of the branch, and outside of its regular program. It is equally unthinkable that "constituted authorities" would fail to appreciate the value of an active, earnest young people's division or fail to give them sympathetic encouragement and direction. Often its young people's group is its one greatest single asset in branch or district.

The organization advised for a branch is simple and democratic in nature, such officers, council and committees being chosen as are needed for its work. The term of office should be relatively short, to provide wider opportunity for experience and training in administrative responsibility. Some simple rules or regulations may be adopted, but a cumbersome constitution is frequently a source of irritation and contention. It is most essential that young people learn to govern themselves and to render service in the spirit and manner exemplified by the Christ.

Within a district or stake a young people's council is recommended, composed of young people's supervisors and presidents of local groups, thus representing the young people of each branch. It has been found advisable for the young people of the district to choose district officers from among the members of this council. District officers and council work under the direction of the district presidency and the district director of religious education. They formulate and carry out a program for young people of the district. (See Church School Handbook, pages 24-27, 53-66.)

A number of experimental organizations have received encouragement to try out their proposed form and program in specified areas. The progress of these will be watched with concern, for we are all anxious to discover the way of success and greatest usefulness.

A Scriptural Interpretation of the Present Age

(Notes on a sermon preached by Apostle Paul M. Hanson, at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri.)

Text: "Ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" (Matthew 16: 3.)

We cannot know too much about anything. We should know as much as possible about everything to have opinions worthy of being possessed by Saints of latter days.

No one ever made a success of running into collision with the Almighty. Whenever there is such an impact, the results are never to be found damaging to Divinity.

God is the greatest word that we can employ or think about, the name we give to the Eternal, Infinite Being, Creator of all things, who is true, good, just, and merciful, and who preserves and governs everything by his almighty power and wisdom. When a mariner goes to sea without proper instruments or chart, or having these, pays no attention to them, he is without knowledge of latitude or longitude—he is lost. Any person without God in this world is lost.

No one but the Lord can accurately interpret the age in which man lives. The work of a prophet is to bring such an interpretation. The church is to assist in this interpretation. It is the duty of each one of us to study, pray, and take heed so that we may understand the age in which we live.

A general crisis in the last days is forecast in the words of Paul to Timothy: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof."

Whenever I see the word "know" or "shall" used by the Lord, or by one of his accredited servants, or by an angel, how vastly more it means than when coming from an ordinary man!

The present is an age with God largely left out of consideration. Someone has said, "He who has God has all; he who has Him not has less than nothing."

Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream gives us to understand that there is to be an end of Gentile dominion. The "times of the Gentiles" are closing. Isaiah says: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end."

It is important to see the hand of God moving in the establishing of his kingdom.

Make your investment in that which is of everlasting character—the prophecies all focus on the glorious consummation of the work of God in the latter days.

Happy Conclusion

By W. H. Deam

"... for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."—2 Corinthians 4: 18.

Gloomingly I ponder all alone,
Thinking of life and death soon to come;
With old age creeping on fast and sure—

Life's span 'most spent, cannot long endure.

Footsteps less steady, eyes growing dim,

Fighting with death, with chances slim.
Voice growing weaker, on a low scale,
Tell the same story, the same grim tale.

We're only like the grass and flowers
"Temporal," limit to days and hours.
"Eternal" things time does not impair,
The wise man, Paul, is said to declare.

Wondering about my future home—
Is this world all, or another to come?
When I throw off the mortal in death
Is all ended in my last long breath?

Thoughts like these lead to confusion,
They're guiding the mind in delusion.
I must believe in the "eternal" things,
Which gives one hope and happiness brings.

Hope we have as an anchor to the soul,
That endureth in the veil, we are told.
With no hope we are left on the tide
Of a raging sea, no place to abide.

"Think of the beautiful," is in song,
We are here at best not very long.
Make life happy, whether long or short,
Make it joyous through all, I exhort.

The Readers Say---

Her First Blessings

I sometimes wonder why the Saints do not tell more about God's goodness to them. I am sure that everyone has something for which to praise his heavenly Father. I have received many blessings in my life. In anything I do, as long as I am serving my Master, he blesses me.

I once heard a man say "if we keep a prayer within the heart, we will not go far wrong." How true that is. If we stay in close communion with God, he will watch over us and bless us. When we cease to go to him, he cannot help us because we do not leave room for him in our hearts.

I wish to relate the first blessing I received, as far as I am able to remember. When five years of age, I ran a thorn in my foot. As it had gone in rather deep, they found it would be necessary to cut away some of the skin in order to remove it. My mother decided to put a poultice on it, to see if it would draw out the thorn. We did that for several days, but to no avail.

One day my grandmother was sick, and Elder Henry Stebbins came to administer to her. Seeing me limp around he asked me what the trouble was, and I told him. He said "you take that poultice off and I'll put some oil on it." I did as he told me, and as he put the oil on it, he offered a beautiful prayer to our Father in heaven. "Now in the morning when you take your poultice off, the thorn will be out," he promised.

I fully believed him, and went to bed with the assurance that I would be able to run and play the next morning. When I awoke, I hurriedly removed the poultice and there lay the thorn. I ran to my mother to show her, and she was pleased.

That was my first experience of God's work, and it still stays with me. I find that if I go to God in humble prayer, he is always ready to help me.

Assurance From Spiritual Experience

I have read many interesting letters in the Herald, and mere words will not express the encouragement they have given me. I am thankful that I can say that I have received many blessings, and it is my desire to so live that I may be worthy of them. If the Saints would pray more often for God's help, there would not be so many straying away from the fold. I know from experience what regret we feel when we have wasted years that should have been spent in serving our Lord and obeying his commandments. If I were only able to re-live those years, I would be happier today.

Our heavenly Father is ready to forgive and help us if we will only try to live as he would have us live. I wish to tell of one experience I had not long ago. I am a widow and have eight children to care for. Life has been dark at times, and without the help I have received from prayer, I know that I would have been unable to carry on. One night I had a dream. I saw two horrible looking people coming toward me, and at first I was afraid. However, as they came closer, they changed and I was not afraid of them. I said, "they are God's apostles." It seems as though one of them answered me saying "God will take care of his people." Peace has been mine since that dream. I think that it was God's way of answering my prayers. May God bless his people all over the world.

Our Lives Should Accord With Our Testimonies

It is important that our lives be in accordance with the testimonies we bear so that we be not likened to the fig tree which bore no fruit. We have many noble Saints like Uncle Mark H. Forscutt who have departed from this life leaving sweet memories to be cherished like precious jewels.

I have had the privilege of seeing the fifth generation in my family, and all are strong defenders of the restored gospel. Many experiences have come with these generations. The gifts of the gospel have been enjoyed. Prophecies have been fulfilled; the sick have been restored to health. The leadings of the Holy Spirit have been manifested in many ways, bringing joy and comfort.

My grandparents were loyal to the church, walking three and four miles over hills and through valleys to attend services. The Saints in those days could always be depended on to be found at their post of duty. The Master's services found first place in their lives. Opportunities in those days were not so plentiful as they are today, but the attitude of those Saints reflected their great love for the church. They delighted to sing and one of their favorites was the hymn, "O for a Faith That Will Not Shrink."

I rejoice that I have had the privilege of meeting the Prophet Frederick M. Smith, and Presidents Elbert A. Smith and F. M. McDowell, men whom God has chosen and set apart to lead the latter-day work. I also have fond memories of pleasant associations with and the labors of such noble men as Paul M. Hanson, L. F. P. Curry, Richard Baldwin, Roy S. Budd, Gomer T. Griffiths and many others who have been a strength and encouragement. The influence of their good lives inspires others to carry on.

My prayer is that God will abundantly bless his Saints, that his church may triumph to victory.

Herald Brings Comfort

This is to let you know that Mrs. Mary M. Thomas passed away at the Petoskey Hospital from an operation for cancer December 23, 1933. Her husband who is my son, went north after her death and let me have her Herald to read. Tongue cannot express the comfort it has brought me. I used to take it for many years. I love to read it and try to pass it on to others.

My husband was killed in Grand Rapids twelve years ago last March. Now I am almost eighty-four years of age. May the Lord bless the Herald and all who read it.

Receives Many Gifts of God

I enjoy reading the letters of the Saints, and feel that I should bear my testimony. The Lord has given me several wonderful experiences which prove to me beyond a doubt that this is the true church of God. I have been spoken to by the Holy Spirit, and have been relieved of intense suffering immediately through administration by our branch president, Irving Bowen, as well as by traveling missionaries.

I have distributed several hundred church papers and tracts. Paul says to feed babes on milk and not on meat, as that would kill them, and so I try to follow this advice in distributing our literature.

The Readers Say---

Answer an Urgent Call

May 31, Sister Robinson and I received an urgent call through Doctor and Mrs. Sherrill, of Medina City, Texas, to go some two hundred miles to a community near Paint Rock to hold a series of meetings.

It seems that on the previous Sunday the pastor of the dominant Protestant church in that community, running out of constructive preaching material, fell back on the moth-eaten pastime of "Mormon baiting," and took a crack at the Latter Day Saints. He was fully advised that the wife of one of his staunch members and a man of high standing in the community, was a member of the "branches" of the Latter Day Saints. His action being uncalculated for and his story so garbled that one could scarcely find a trace of truth in it. Sister Mabel Lightsey, with her husband's consent, sent for us to come up and help her out.

Sister Robinson and I, being always ready and willing to answer such calls, left the next day for Medina City, sixty-five miles away, where we stayed all night with the Sherrills, going on to the Lightsey ranch June 2, Sister Sherrill accompanying us.

Arriving there in the mid-afternoon (called "evening" in Texas), we found a hearty welcome. Arrangements had been made for us to hold a series of meetings at the schoolhouse of which Mr. Lightsey, our host, is a trustee. Sunday night a "singing school" gave way to me for preaching, and a good crowd was present. I was blessed with liberty in my efforts and those present were apparently interested.

Of the opposition that developed, of the "grapevine" telegraph working to keep members away and out of touch of this "Mormon elder," who had come among them, I can't take the space to tell in detail, but to those of missionary experience, it is the old, old story.

We did not confine our work to sermons alone, but were constantly talking on gospel topics as we visited many homes in the community. Early we discerned the honesty of heart of our host though because of his early training and past church affiliation, he could not see and believe as we did. We had the impression, however, that God was leading him toward greater light and understanding.

Sister Robinson had taken Naomi Doris, the eight-year-old daughter, and Hilliard, the ten-year-old son, under her wing, and was instructing them, or rather, adding to the instruction already given them by their mother. So they came to me on Thursday night and asked for baptism.

On Friday morning, after explaining many things to the family assembled at the breakfast table, and suggesting that for confirmation of the thoughts advanced, they follow the admonition of James? "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God," (James 1:5), we prepared to go to a large crystal-clear pool in one of the streams which runs through the Lightsey ranch for the baptismal ceremony of the children.

We were overjoyed as our host sat beside us in the car on the way to the pool, manifested a desire to unite with us, and asked for baptism. God has again answered the prayer of the sincere petitioner.

The Spirit of God was present when the ordinance of baptism was administered, and in the confirmation service which followed at the home, the Master poured out his holy influence on those who that morning had been obedient to the law of the gospel, giving them many promises.

On Sunday morning we served the sacrament of the Lord's Supper to the members, and Sister Lightsey was enabled to take part in this ordinance for the first time in ten years. All members bore their testimony in this meeting.

Sunday afternoon the pastor was scheduled to preach his semi-monthly sermon. Brother Lightsey and I went over to hear what he had to say, but after we had waited past the scheduled time, word came that he could not fill the appointment. There was a fine crowd present, so one of those in charge who had heard me speak, asked if I would not preach for them in order that the congregation might not be disappointed. This I gladly did.

The Lightsey family circle is not complete, there being three fine boys yet to see the necessity of obedience, but we hope and pray that with the seed sowed and the uniting of the interests of the parents and younger children, the seed may be cultivated and bear much fruit.

I am sure that our new brother will become a power for good in his community in the interests of the church. May God help them all to do his work.

JOHN A. ROBINSON.

Rich Blessings for a Unified People

Those who contribute and help to make the Herald possible will never know in this life how much good they are doing. The paper comes to us as a cherished friend and a friend in need. Never before have we appreciated it as we do now—it is full of helpful suggestions and encouragement.

We have received many blessings but sometimes have not passed them on as we should. In 1925 my mother was spoken to and told that if she would exercise greater faith in God and in the gifts of the gospel, she would be healed of afflictions that were preying on her. She then declared: "Well, if the Lord is going to heal me, I am not going to take any more medicine. At that time she had what the doctors said were seeds of cancer and also rheumatic poisoning. Since 1926 she has been free of both these diseases and has enjoyed good health for a woman of seventy-five years who has worked hard most of her life.

I wish to say experience has taught me that if we as officers and members of the church will put forth a greater effort, Zion can be. I started out to visit the members of the branch about the fifteenth, and covered all the ground as nearly as I could. Never before have I been blessed as I was then in visiting the Saints, and the blessings that followed were wonderful.

I have been given many splendid testimonies of the truthfulness of this work, and I know that Zion can and will be redeemed when we are willing to lay all on the altar of sacrifice, and be united.

New Member Writes of Faith

I am a new member of the church, having been baptized last August. But I wish to say that I know this is the true church of God, and by believing in Jesus Christ is the only way we can obtain eternal life.

My sister and I are the only members of the family who belong to the church. May God help the others to see the light of his precious truth.

I look forward to the Herald each week, and enjoy reading every bit of it. Will the Saints pray for me that I may be faithful?

A. B. PHILLIPS

Shall we know each other in paradise as we do in this life?

Whether or not we shall meet in paradise those whom we knew here, is not stated directly in the sacred word. But that paradise is a state of consciousness is clearly indicated in many texts. John saw under the altar the souls of those who had suffered martyrdom, and they were conscious (Revelation 6: 9). Alma declared it had been made known to him that at death all went home to God, and then he said of the righteous:

"The spirits of those who are righteous, are received into a state of happiness, which is called paradise; a state of rest; a state of peace."—Book of Mormon 448: 44.

He calls the state of the dead "a state of the soul in happiness or in misery," and this indicates consciousness of both the good and the evil souls. Paul also indicates the conscious state of those in paradise when he says of one he knew:

"He was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter."—2 Corinthians 12: 4.

Again, consciousness is proved by the Lord's own words:

"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God."—Revelation 2: 7.

This proves activity there, and the words of Jesus to the thief on the cross indicates companionship: "Verily, I say unto thee; Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

Explain Paul's words, that "flesh and blood" cannot enter heaven.

While some have taken this technically, as distinguishing it from the words of Jesus after his resurrection declaring that he had "flesh and bones," and have concluded that flesh and bones can inherit the kingdom of heaven; this idea is not intended in the text itself. It does not even say that flesh and blood cannot enter heaven, but it does say that they cannot inherit it. Whether or not blood will be excluded from the body in the resurrection is beside the point intended. It states:

"Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. . . . For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."—1 Corinthians 15: 50, 53.

The word neither, used in this text, is rendered even in various places, such as Matthew 6:29; "even Solomon in all his glory," etc., and is intended to emphasize the meaning of that which precedes it. The words "flesh and blood" are to be taken as indicating the mortal person, the carnal man. In fact the same word here given as flesh is rendered carnal in other places, such as Romans 8: 7, which says "the carnal mind is enmity against God." The text is not an attempt to deal with the chemical elements composing man, but with the moral qualities of mortal beings, and to show that "they that are in the flesh (i. e. carnal state) cannot please God," for "if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die," (Romans 8: 8, 13).

Is the thousand years with Christ on earth to be before its destruction?

In a revelation given to the church early in 1831 this question appears to be answered in the affirmative. It says:

"My people shall be redeemed and shall reign with me on earth; for the great millennial (millennium?), which I have spoken by the mouth of my servants, shall come; for Satan shall be bound; and when he is loosed again, he shall only reign for a little season, and then cometh the end of the earth;"—Doctrine and Covenants 43: 7.

This recalls the scene portrayed by John, who states that after the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed, and shall be overcome. Following this the final judgment shall sit, with God on the throne, before whom "the earth and the heaven" shall flee away and no place be found for them. Then shall follow the new heaven and new earth, of which Peter speaks (2 Peter 3: 13), as well as Isaiah (65: 17) and various texts. Evidently the change to occur at the beginning of this reign will not be equal to the complete destruction of the earth which is to follow Satan's acts of desecration.

Breckenridge, Texas

Progress for This Mission

The mission at Breckenridge is progressing under the guidance of Elder William Mannering, formerly of San Antonio. Brother Mannering has been with this group of Saints for about one year.

This congregation, composed of thirty members and about twice that number of nonmembers, has worked faithfully and sacrificed much to establish and improve its place of meeting.

At the close of the church school service June 10, these Saints drove ten miles to the creek to witness the baptism of Betty Jean Andes, daughter of Brother and Sister J. D. Andes. Elder Mannering officiated.

In the evening a Children's Day program was given under the direction of Mrs. Nancy Root and Sister Georgia Ritchie. Each child in the department had a part in the program, which consisted of readings, songs, and drills.

The women's department has just bought new seats for the hall. Money was raised in various ways, one being from an ice cream booth erected on a busy corner during the recent two-day pioneer celebration in the city. Money is now being raised for the purchase of Saints' Hymnals for the mission.

Elder Mannering has been holding meetings at New Castle, about fifty miles from Breckenridge, making the trip each way on the bus. Good interest is manifested in that community. Brother Mannering returns to preside at the regular Sunday meetings here and to conduct the thirty-minute radio sermonet and program each Tuesday at noon from the local station, BENX. In this endeavor he is assisted by members of the mission choir.

Cottage meetings each week are being conducted by Elder Mannering in the local vicinity.

This mission is looking forward to a visit from Apostle Roy S. Budd in the near future.

Sarnia, Ontario

Three Men Ordained—Eleven Children Baptized

At the district conference held at Chatham, Ontario, May 27 and 28, three brothers from this branch were ordained: Basil Freer to the office of teacher; Brother Percy Miller to the office of deacon, and Brother James C. Phillips, priest. The Saints feel that these young men will make good.

Mother's Day was commemorated with a fitting program given by the junior young people. Flowers decorated the church, and carnations were given to each mother.

Children's Day was one to be long remembered. Eleven children were baptized. Services began at 9:30 a. m., Elder E. Stanley Phillips officiating. The candidates were: Ethel Freer, Ileen Darrach, Douglas Clatworthy, Douglas Kinsman, Jack Miller, Lyle Phillips, Eric Belrose, Raymond and Kenneth Everingham, Arthur and Earl Everingham. The confirmations followed the next Sunday, Elder E. Stanley Phillips in charge assisted by Elder James W. Phillips.

The little son of Brother and Sister Howard Belrose was blessed and given the name, Howard Leslie.

Two short addresses were given on "Responsibility of Parents to Their Children," by William Smith, and "Responsibility of Children to the Church" by Basil Freer.

The women's department has been doing a good work. Besides making the payment on the church debt, they presented one tray of an individual sacrament set to the branch and the local bought another. They are now planning to help with some repairs inside the church.

Apostle D. T. Williams paid Sarnia a visit June 20, and delivered a good sermon.

The women's department members and their husbands gave a surprise party May 28, in the church parlor, the occasion being the thirty-third birthday of Pastor Stanley Phillips. They presented him a dictionary.

On the evening of June 29, Chatham young people visited Sarnia entertaining the members with a program.

Northeastern Illinois Conference

Blessed With Spirit—Continue Educational Program

Northeastern Illinois district conference closed another series of interesting meetings June 1, 2, 3. The weather was fine and attendance was quite gratifying. The hospitality of Mission Saints is always cordial.

Preceding the business of Saturday afternoon, a short memorial service was held in honor of Elder W. A. McDowell who had for some years past labored in their midst. Then business of the conference was quickly disposed of to make way for the classwork to follow. One of the items of this session was approving the ordinations of four young men, three to the office of elder and one to the office of teacher.

Two classes of instruction were held late in the afternoon, one in "Financial Administration" by O. A. Skinner, and another in "Local Church Administration" by C. A. Edstrom. Both of these classes were helpful in getting across to the people the importance of these two arms of church administration.

In the evening Elder H. P. W. Keir preached a wonderful sermon pointing out the many conditions of maladjustment and evil widespread in the world today. He also referred to the important part the Saints should be filling in the present social adjustment which must surely come.

A meeting of the branch presidents who were in attendance was also held and two important points were discussed. One of these was the necessity for growing out of a condition of "branch consciousness" into one of "district and general church consciousness." The other touched upon the matter presented to the district president and seventy in charge by Apostle J. A. Garver. This pertained to the necessity of heeding the request of the First Presidency to "Clean up" the work of the priesthood. The branch presidents were urged to do all within their power to encourage the local men to fill their office.

They began Sunday morning with a good, well attended prayer meeting in which many took part. This spiritual atmosphere prepared them to enjoy fully the services to follow.

At the church school hour, arrangements were made for classes in three special subjects—"Religious Education" by J. A. Jaques; "The Pastor and His Work" by H. P. W. Keir; "Instructing Children" by Lillian Nelson. These classes have proved interesting and educational. It is their intention to continue the work started at the fall conference of 1933.

The sacrament service was a quiet, beautiful one, permeated by the peaceful influence of the Spirit of God. All were blessed by the solemnity of the occasion.

At 2 p. m. a joint priesthood meeting and ordination service was held. Apostle Garver delivered a challenging charge to the congregation and the priesthood present after which the ordination of Elder C. A. Edstrom to the office of high priest took place. Brother Edstrom closed the conference with a short address, expressing his appreciation of their loyal support and requesting an interest in the Saints' prayers in behalf of the Lord's work.

Central Illinois Conference Propose to Stimulate Young People's Activities

A very enjoyable conference was held at Decatur, Illinois, June 2 and 3. The purpose of the conference was to stimulate and promote the work of the young people in the district, as plans have been made for some form of organization in the young people's meeting, to be held at Beardstown, August 26. Apostle D. T. Williams is to be present at this meeting.

Apostle D. T. Williams spoke concerning the young people's organizations and the work they are accomplishing. This was followed by a period of discussion. Brother Williams was present only one day of the conference, as he was on his way to his home at Lamoni.

This congregation was happy to welcome another missionary to their conference, Elder L. G. Holloway, who spoke to them on "Our Heritage." The young people were made to feel proud of their heritage, and they departed from this service feeling a keener desire to be of service.

At the regular business session Saturday afternoon, recommendations of the following men for ordination were approved, Delmar Jones, of Taylorville, and Elzie A. Kratzer, of Beardstown, priest, and Windsor Griffith, of Taylorville, deacon. During the business session, District President Arthur Henson appointed Delmar Jones as leader of the young people of the district, to be assisted by Lena E. Fusselman.

Priesthood meetings were held both Saturday and Sunday afternoons, and were well attended.

Saturday evening Apostle D. T. Williams spoke to the congregation on "The Conditions of Life." Elder Joe Williams sang "Somebody's Praying for You."

The Sunday morning worship began with an inspiring prayer service in charge of Elder L. G. Holloway, followed by ordination and sacrament services. Special numbers were given, a solo, "God's Way Is the Best Way," by Sister E. E. Thomas, and a duet by Sisters E. E. Thomas and Leah Denton.

The conference was well attended and every branch of the district was represented.

Ontario, California

Eventful Branch Program Interests All

A fine Mother's Day program was given in honor of the mothers Sunday, June 10. At the close of the program a small bouquet of ferns and carnations was given to each mother. The services on Children's Day and Father's Day were equally appropriate.

The Tamalia Girls Club gave a food sale in town, which earned them the sum of $5.50. As it was their first attempt of this kind they were much encouraged by the response.

Pastor F. J. Lacey gave a talk on Children's Day, explaining that we are God's children and should strive to live as such in the home as well as in the church.

Brother Lacey has preached several times at Riverside in answer to their call, and has found a loyal, faithful group there. At their last meeting, forty-five were present, ten of whom were non-members. Riverside is a fairly large city and has need of our church organization.

The Tamalia Club gave a banquet for their mothers at the South Euclid School Cafeteria. Carnations were used for decorations. A short program was given by the girls.

Sister Harriet Peterson has offered a New Testament as a reward to the Sunday school scholar bringing the most new members over a period of four months.

Services on the morning of June 17, were given over to a wedding. Katherine Adamson was united in marriage to Frank Enix, pastor of Fresno Branch. The bride was given away by her father, E. S. Adamson. Mrs. Eloise Duffy, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Kathleen Adamson, Muriel Sthiles, Frances Sanderson and Fern Bruce. The bridegroom was attended by Ralph Enix, of Fresno. Pastor F. J. Lacey read the ceremony. The bride has been active in church work here, having been a member of the branch since early youth. She taught several classes, played in the orchestra, and was willing to help in any way she could. This couple have the best wishes of this congregation.

Rockland, Maine

Three Are Baptized

This congregation was greatly encouraged on decision day when three young girls, Winifred Heath, Rosalie Harvey, and Charlotte Woodward, were led into the waters of baptism at Camden, Maine. Priest Bernard B. Holland and Elder James Clark officiated. The following Wednesday evening a number of Saints gathered at the home of Mrs. Pearl Billings when Elder Clark confirmed them.

Brother Holland gave a fine admonition to them, which all could make use of, "God doesn't want girls to be just good, but good for something."

Eight members of this congregation were able to attend the conference at Stonington, Maine, June 17 to 19. These members hope that the time will come when the conference can be entertained at Rockland.

Saints of this branch were pleased to have with them for the June sacrament Brother and Sister E. F. Robertson, who were returning to their missionary duties in Western Maine District. The message delivered that evening by Brother Robertson was most inspiring as were the experiences told by him and his wife the following evening when the Saints were gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Ernest Heath, of Camden, Maine.

Many blessings have been received from the Wednesday evening prayer services which are held each week in the homes of the Saints.

It is the earnest prayer of this little group that it may soon have a church in which to hold services.

Toronto Young People's Convention

Annual Youth Gathering a Triumph in Every Way

The Toronto district young people held their annual convention at Hamilton, Ontario, Saturday and Sunday, June 9 and 10, under perfect weather conditions. This was thought to be the most successful convention of its kind ever held in Toronto District.

The convention opened Saturday afternoon at four, and due to the late arrival of Apostle D. T. Williams, Elder James Pycoc took charge and gave an interesting address in place of the proposed class work in charge of Brother Williams.

At 8 p. m. a musical program was followed by an interesting lecture by Elder George Njeim, of Chatham District, on "The Twenty-third Psalm," in native costume. This was enjoyed by a crowd which taxed the capacity of Hamilton church.

At nine Sunday morning, prayer service convened with Apostle D. T. Williams in charge, assisted by Elder Njeim. The meeting proved to be the high-light of the whole convention. A beautiful spirit existed. Many young folk took the opportunity and testified of their love for the Master and his work, and their desire to continue to serve him, and bring about the consummation of the convention slogan, "We Must Move Forward to Zion." At the close of the meeting Apostle Williams stated that the Spirit had been present in great measure and that God had been pleased with the effort made by the young people, and that many young men of the district present in the meeting would stand in high and holy places in the discharging of the Lord's work.

At 11 a. m. Apostle Williams gave an interesting talk on the work of the young people in the church, and the aims, objectives and purposes of Zion's Christian Legion. This meeting was the largest of the convention, and although crowded to the doors, everyone was seated, and was repaid for his attention to Apostle Williams' discourse, which gave one a greater incentive to press onward, and a keener consciousness of his individual responsibilities as a young person in the church.

Apostle Williams again spoke at 3 p. m. and outlined more thoroughly the work of the Zion's Christian Legion, which has progressed so rapidly among the young folks in Michigan.

Elder George Njeim preached a powerful sermon at 7 p. m., outlining the need for the young folks to consolidate their efforts, cooperate and press on in the preparation they must make before this zionic ideal can be attained.

In place of serving meals in the basement of the church, the committee devised the novel idea of having the young folks go en masse to Robert's Restaurant, who had agreed to cater to the individual wants of all, at a very reasonable figure. This met with immediate approval by all the visitors, and it was a wonderful sight to see over one hundred young folks with little red cards and church color ribbons attached to their coats parading two blocks to the restaurant. The cards were inscribed: "R. L. D. S. Toronto District Young People's Convention, Hamilton, Ontario, June 9 and 10, 1934."

Taking the convention from every angle, it was an immense success, and although the church can only accommodate approximately one hundred, at one service it was found that one hundred and sixty-three people were seated, and no complaints were made, which tends to tell that all were happy even to get in the building and help make the convention a success. The efforts of Apostle Williams and Elder Njeim did not fall on stony ground, as everyone left with that renewed vigor to press forward, and help do their part. Visitors came from every part of Ontario, New York, and Michigan, states, and from Lamoni, Iowa.

Young People's Activities in Minnesota District

Duluth Has "Be Ye Doers"

The first attempt to organize Minnesota young people was when leaders were chosen at the district conference, held last September. Questionnaires were mailed to all young people, the purpose being to find out the names of those interested in serving the church and to become acquainted with their interests.

A young people's convention was held March 9 to 11, in connection with the district conference. The average attendance was fifty. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was present and confined his activities to the interests of the young people. As a result of this convention several expressed a greater desire to help.

A special day was set for filing inventories in the district. The results were not up to the standard desired, but since the convention, twelve or fourteen young people have filed their inventories.

Duluth young people were organized last October. The motto chosen was "Be Ye Doers." The organization, known as the B. Y. D. Club, met the first Friday each month for a social time. The average attendance was fifteen, and the range of age was from ten to twenty years. Several nonmembers attend from time to time. After a short business session the Young People's Church History was read and discussed. The remainder of the evening was spent in playing games.

The young members of the branch have taken an active part in church services. Four of the group hold offices in the church school. Three vesper services were sponsored during the year. The quiet, reverent way in which they participated made the service a beautiful occasion. Each service was held at sunset, followed by a lunch served in the church basement.

A bake sale was held May 5. Several went from house to house soliciting orders previous to the sale, also selling in that manner on the day of the sale. The proceeds were set aside for the purpose of preparing the church for dedication this fall.

"Pilgrims of the Way," a three-act play, was presented May 13. The young people chose for their theme on rally day, May 20, "Keep the Law." On that day one hundred percent of the young people of the branch filed their inventories. Several have been paying tithing for some time.

The group is small and young, but there has been a fine spirit of cooperation manifested since organization last fall. With the foundation of the past nine months, there is great possibility that much can be accomplished in the future.

Bay City, Michigan

Women's Department Entertains Representative Gathering

The women's department of Bay City Branch entertained seventy members in a get-together meeting June 14. Sister Emma Beebe, president of the department, was in charge. Visiting groups represented were Midland with twenty-two present; Saginaw with eight; Bentley, three; Beaverton, one; Crosswell, two, and Detroit, one.

The meeting opened with the singing of "What Fruit Have You Gathered for Jesus," and prayer by Elder Hubert Case. Sister Emma Beebe gave a short talk of welcome. Then Midland's department opened the program with a duet by Sister Ash and Sister Sweetman. Sister Johnson, also of Midland, gave a talk on "Preparation."

Saginaw's women sang a song, Sister Fouver gave a reading, and Sisters Northrup and Grice added a bit of comedy in a dialogue entitled, "Tillie's and Millie's Arrival in New York."

Other talks on the program were by Elder E. S. White, of Bay City; Elder Hubert Case, district president; Sister Winnie Hulbert, district superintendent of the women's department, of Bentley, and Elder G. A. Burt, of Beaverton.

Bay City women served refreshments after the program.

Webb City, Missouri

Oronogo and Second Streets

Children's Day morning found a group of Saints assembled at Lakeside Park for a baptismal service. After appropriate hymns, Nelvita Cowen gave the Scripture reading, and Pastor Ira O. Waldron delivered the charge to the candidates. Elder James M. Jones led the following children into the waters of baptism, Ester Hildreth, Hubert Hildreth, Leslie Galbraith, William Miller, and Wayne Miller. The Saints then returned to the church where, after a short session of church school, the confirmation service was held. Immediately following, a Children's Day program was given by the children, under the direction of their superintendent, Nelvita Cowen and her teacher.

The women of the adult division meet and quilt one day of each week, and they do not neglect to pay their tithing on all they make. They also hold a social meeting once a month, clean the interior of the church building, and each month they have a birthday dinner at one of the homes in honor of all the Saints having birthdays in that month.

Recent visitors to Webb City have been: Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Rauh, of Independence, Missouri; Beatrice Deaver, of Pittsburg, Kansas; Estle Weaver, of Pittsburg, and Mrs. Sam Landrun, of Kansas City, Missouri.

Sunday, June 17, Webb City Branch celebrated its fifty-sixth anniversary, this branch having been organized June 16, 1878. Apostle F. Henry Edwards and District President Amos T. Higdon were present. The services of the day were as follows: prayer service, 8:15 a. m., church school, 9:30 a. m., and preaching, 10:45, by Apostle Edwards. At noon, a basket dinner, in charge of Sister Clara Stokes, was served. At 2 p. m., a meeting was held in charge of Pastor Ira O. Waldron. The history of Webb City Branch was read by Albert A. Cobb. The history was written by Nelvita Cowen, who is the branch historian. Following this some of the older members of the branch made talks, stating many interesting experiences. Sister Florinda Bradford, the only charter member of the branch present, gave an interesting talk. Another charter member, Sister Agnes Heins, of Kansas City, Kansas, was unable to be present on account of ill health.

Brother Neal Deaver, of Lamoni, Iowa, who has been visiting his parents, Brother and Sister A. N. Deaver, preached Sunday night, July 1.

June 22, the Willing Workers Class held an ice cream social for the benefit of the building fund.

General Smuts (at the end of the World War): "Humanity has struck its tents and is on the move."

Briefs

Apostle M. A. McConley and Mrs. Emma McDole Are Wed

Wedding bells rang at Seattle, Washington, when Apostle M. A. McConley and Mrs. Emma McDole were wed July 7. The bridal couple are now enjoying a trip to the Olympic Peninsula, Estes Park in Colorado, Nauvoo, the Century of Progress at Chicago, and the Kirtland reunion. Brother and Sister McConley will make their home at Mobile, Alabama.

First Reunion of 1934 Season

The North Dakota reunion, the first of the 1934 season, held at Minot, June 23 to July 1, was characterized by spiritual uplift and genuine good feeling. It was a great help to Saints in that State who went home resolving to serve God more faithfully, more efficiently. Already officers are laying plans for the next reunion season when they hope to have two reunions in their State.

Growing to His Stature

Only as we appreciate and use the program given by Jesus Christ can we continue to grow to His stature.—J. A. Gillen

Eleven Baptized into Deselm Branch

Eleven candidates were baptized June 17, in Rock Creek by Elders William Cochran and Earl D. Rogers, of Deselm Branch, near Manteno, Illinois.

Hubert Case Missionary for Forty Years

Central Michigan District honored the culmination of forty years in the missionary field for Elder Hubert Case with a gathering at Beaverton, June 30 and July 1. The program included a banquet, good sermons and music, sacrament and ordination services. Brother Case is leaving this field in August.

On this occasion also special honors were conferred upon Elder G. W. Burt who recently celebrated his eighty-second birthday and who has served thirty years in the missionary field.

Social Responsibility

Social responsibility must become a sturdy virtue. At present the profit value is more important than the human value.—Charles H. Heimsath in "The Christian Century."

Fall River, Massachusetts

Local Activities Transferred to Onset

The close of the month of June in Southern New England District, in general, sees the transfer of major branch activities to Onset for the summer. Naturally Fall River Branch joins in this move, and will not resume its activities until September with the exception of midweek prayer services which continue throughout the summer, and are now receiving considerable emphasis.

There has been more activity than usual at the church of late, due to improvements being made on the church building and lawn each week.

A good entertainment was given not long ago by the Attleboro Choir which pleased the entire audience.

June 18, the semiannual branch and Sunday school business meetings were held and much interest seemed to be evidenced. The branch sanctioned the ordination of Donald Chesworth to the office of priest after the pastor had presented his name. At the Sunday school meeting action was taken to initiate the church school system of religious education when the branch reopens in the fall.

Preaching in the recent past has been done by local priesthood including Pastor J. W. Heap, Alma Coombs, William Baldwin, and Donald Chesworth. In the fall they intend to have a number of district speakers lined up to help keep interest growing. Furthermore they are preparing for another branch homecoming. This branch is in reality the home of many church people now scattered throughout the district.

The City of Fall River for years has had two mottoes: "We'll try," and "Fall River Looms Up." In the branch they hope to work to the end that they will try to make Latter Day Saintism "loom up."

Shabbona, Michigan

Branch Maintains Fine Record of the Past

Shabbona Branch, which was first called Cass River Branch, deriving its name from the Cass River where many of the members were baptized, was the result of Elder William Davis' preaching. He came to this place in the early nineties, and with others carried on meetings in the schoolhouse near Shabbona.

Among the first members were the Chases, Lormuses, Dunlaps, Pangburns, Bonneyes, Parrots, Browns, Sister Phillips and Sister Jones, many of whom have gone to their reward.

The membership grew until some were called to the priesthood. Meetings were then held in the home of Brother Brown, and the small branch was organized. Brother Gilbert, of Cass City, was chosen president. John Henry, priest, and John Simmons, teacher.

The membership grew until finally a church was needed. A committee was chosen. In time the church was completed, and dedicated in June, 1903. At that time a district conference convened, and President Joseph Smith preached the dedication sermon, and Bishop Kelley offered the dedication prayer.

Other presidents of the branch since that time have been William Cargill, B. F. Phittuplace, and James Gombrige. At one time the membership totalled one hundred and eleven.

At present, a group of fifty-six members meets in the small brick church on Wednesday night for prayer meeting, and Sundays for prayer meeting, Sunday school, and preaching. Elder William Sheffer is acting as president of this branch and also of the McGregor Branch. He serves sacrament and preaches once, making two Sundays for each branch.

Many discussions are held in the adult Sunday school class. It is a court of appeals where each one says what he feels.

Although few in number, these Saints feel that they are doing their share. At the last conference they reported the sum of $369, which was the third largest sum of the Eastern Michigan District. This branch paid the most per capita of any in the district, $6.58 for each member.

Their motto is "Onward to Zion."

Bristow, Oklahoma

Growing and Organizing

Bristow Saints were happy to have Elder and Sister Falice Cunningham, and Brother and Sister W. J. Couser, of Tulsa, in their homes Saturday night.

These Saints rose early Sunday morning, June 24, and with twenty-four of their members motored to Oklahoma City to attend the dedication services there. Both the sermons and the dinner served were greatly enjoyed.

Although there is no branch organization at Bristow, these Saints have a great desire to add to their own lives the standards as presented to them by Apostle Roy S. Budd and President F. M. Smith.

July 1, forty persons were present at the Sunday school, which has recently been organized. Elder Falice Cunningham delivered a convincing sermon at eleven o'clock.

Three children were baptized at 2:30 p. m., and received a wonderful confirmation. Two babies were blessed, and an afflicted girl, nonmember, was administered to. These Saints also had the privilege of partaking of the sacrament. People were present at this meeting from Tuskegee, Mounds, Kellyville, Tulsa, and Bristow.

Sunday's baptisms made a total of ten who have been baptized as a result of the efforts put forth by Elder Cunningham and W. J. Couser. There are three others who feel sure that they will unite with the church later.

These services are being held in the Lovett Schoolhouse on the second and fourth Sundays each month. Anyone wishing to visit is welcome.

Youth Convention of Utah District

Memorable Occasion for Sixty Young People and Their Honor Guests

Sixty young people from the four branches of Utah District, Provo, Salt Lake City, Ogden, and Malad, met at Ogden June 22 to 24 for a convention and their theme was "Zion."

The opening address of the convention was delivered by Elder Ward L. Christy, from Canada, whose topic was "Get Under the Cross." This was given on Friday evening.

Saturday started appropriately with a prayer service in charge of Brother Christy. This was followed by class work on special subjects and classes taught by Brother and Sister Christy. The afternoon session was devoted to recreation at Lorin Farr Park, Edward Moe in charge.

The young people's banquet began at 5:30 p. m., and guests were Brother and Sister Robertson, of Salt Lake City, and Brother and Sister Christy, of Canada. Brother Christy acted as toastmaster. A three-course meal was served. The theme, "Zion," was carried out in speeches, songs, and table decorations. The color scheme was purple and gold. A gold "Z" printed on purple formed a modernistic placecard. The third course of the meal was composed of special brick ice cream with a purple "Z" in the center and gold butter cookies of "Z" shape. At the close, everyone stood and sang "Onward to Zion."

A one-act play contest was enjoyed beginning at 7:30 p. m., with special numbers between each play. The plays were "Ticket Office" given by Salt Lake City Branch; "Rooms to Let," by Provo Branch; and "On The Air," by Ogden Branch. The honors went to Provo.

Sunday morning at eight o'clock prayer service was held for adults in the parsonage, Brothers Christy and Robertson in charge. The young people met at the church with Elder Edward Moe, of Provo, in charge, assisted by Priests Gerald Winholtz, of Ogden, and Sillas Egan, of Salt Lake City. Both meetings were blessed with the Spirit.

Church school convened at 10 a. m. with local officers in charge, and a short program was given. At 11 a. m. Brother Christy spoke on "The Church in Distinction." Lunch was served by the women's department.

The young people's council meeting was called to order by the president, Miriam Winholtz, at 1:30 p. m. Business was discussed and plans were formulated for the next young people's meeting in Provo, the latter part of July.

An educational session was held at 3:15 p. m. opening with the hymn, "Consecration." The program was: A reading by Goldie Egan, of Salt Lake City; piano solo by Beulah Madsen, of Provo; solo by Ann Thomas, of Malad; musical reading, "A Youth," by Genevieve Chase, accompanied by the author, Sister Jennie Winholtz, of Ogden; solo by Martha Alice Eichenberger, of Provo; chorus by Salt Lake City Branch; a talk, "Church School Program," by Sister Christy; an organ solo by Lawrence Leavitt, of Ogden; a duet by Brother and Sister Christy, and extemporaneous talks by Gerald Winholtz, Sillas Egan, and Brother Robertson.

Elder Edward Moe spoke at the evening service on "The Old Jerusalem and Zion."

A spirit of good fellowship prevailed throughout all meetings and much good was accomplished. A vote of thanks was extended to the women's department Lawrence Leavitt, district officers, and all others who helped to make the convention a success.

Spring River Has Special District Priesthood Meeting Emphasizes Ministerial Visits

The priesthood of the Spring River District met Sunday, June 24, at Independence, Kansas. Elder Norman W. Gray, of Parsons, was in charge.

The opening hymns were sung, after which Brother Guy Cadwell, of Independence, led the congregation in the opening prayer. The meeting was turned over to District President Amos T. Higdon.

Elder Andy Jones, of Columbus, Kansas, gave an interesting discourse on the subject of visiting. He emphasized the need of priesthood visits, so that the membership may be strengthened and encouraged in the work. He also spoke regarding the duties of the priesthood in the various offices which they occupy in the church organization.

Elder Higdon then called upon the various branch presidents to explain the branch activity in visiting and the methods which they employ.

Brother Higdon then followed with a talk, speaking of the standards of the ministry being raised to a higher plane, and of the necessity of the priesthood rising to meet these standards as set forth by the church.

Brother Higdon talked also of the need of a converted membership, the necessity of an absolute conversion to the fundamentals of the church the divinity of the Restoration, the authoritative priesthood, the divinity of the Book of Mormon and the revelations as recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants.

The number of baptisms in comparison with the number of the priesthood of the entire church, as well as the district, was given for the past several years. The goal in baptisms for this year is one baptism for each of the priesthood in the district. About twenty of the priesthood were present, including six branch presidents.

Briefs

Greetings From Apostle and Mrs. J. W. Rushton

Apostle and Mrs. John W. Rushton, now located at 9 Milan Road, Harehills, Leeds, England, send cordial greetings to their friends in America and thanks for their good wishes and kindnesses which helped to make enjoyable the trip across the Atlantic.

Their boat, the "Leviathan," made the voyage of 3,093 miles in 5 days, 14 hours, and 9 minutes, carrying six hundred passengers. Our travelers landed at Plymouth, spent a few days in London where they met with the Saints at Enfield, and have established themselves at the above address for their stay in this mission.

Michigan Women Have Get-together Meeting

Bay City women entertained seventy in a get-together session, June 14, Sister Emma Beebe, president of the department, in charge. Visiting groups represented Midland, Saginaw, Bentley, Beaverton, Crosswell, and Detroit. Besides musical and reading numbers, the program included talks by Elder E. S. White, of Bay City; District President Hubert Case; Sister Winnie Hulbert, district superintendent of women, and Elder G. A. Burt, of Beaverton.

Gomer R. Wells Is Recuperating in the West

Being threatened with serious maladies, Brother Gomer R. Wells, at the advice of his doctor, is spending July and August with his sister who lives in the Gallatin Valley, Montana.

The Gallatin Valley is known as the "Egypt of the Northwest." Here Brother Wells was born. He will probably spend his sixty-seventh anniversary visiting his birthplace and scenes of boyhood days where Brother J. Arthur Gillen and he went to primary school together. His grandparents and parents are buried there. Before returning to Missouri he plans also to visit Yellowstone Park.

By the middle of September he hopes to return with new strength and vitality to his new assignment of "pastor to the scattered members of Holden Stake."

Two Seek Prayers

Sister Laura Curtis, of Weir City, Kansas, who has been afflicted for three years, asks the Saints to fast and pray for her, that God will restore her health.

Sister Sarah Headrick, of Tulare, California, also wishes remembrance in prayer.

Fort Wayne, Indiana

New Members in This Group

Fort Wayne Saints are happy to have two new members added to their group, Sister Estella Waikel, having been baptized by Elder A. H. Neiman during his recent visit here, and Sister Lillie MacVay, who was baptized by Elder George Cassell, at Clear Lake, Indiana. They are also happy to welcome Brother and Sister Nunn and family, who have recently moved there from Mishawaka, Indiana.

For the past six months, Fort Wayne Saints have been holding Sunday morning services in a hall at 1021 South Calhoun Street, and the usual midweek prayer meetings are held in various homes.

A children's Bible study class has been organized, which meets each Thursday evening, and is conducted by Sister Waikel. These meetings are arousing much interest among the children of non-members. A Children's Day program was given Sunday evening, June 17.

The ladies' aid, under the leadership of Sister Mae Crandell, meet every other Thursday for an all-day session. The dinners are in the form of a pot-luck luncheon and they realize a good profit by auctioning off the food that is left. For the past six weeks they have been holding bake sales every Friday evening, at a downtown market, and find it is well worth their efforts.

Everyone is doing his part to help promote the gospel work there, and it is their desire that Zion may soon be redeemed.

Anyone visiting or passing through Fort Wayne may get in touch with the Saints by calling R. C. Crandell, 518 East State Street.

Good Results From North Dakota Reunion

Fired With New Resolution and Purpose Members Return to Work

The North Dakota reunion for 1934 is now a matter of history in a sense, but it is more. For uplift, for spirituality, for a genuine good feeling present, workers doubt if the district ever had a better reunion.

Apostle J. F. Curtis and Missionary P. T. Anderson were present, and did most of the preaching. Missionary L. O. Wildermuth, of Montana, was over and helped, too.

The gathering was well attended. In these days of uncertainty God can be found, and he seems as willing now as ever to help his people when they come before him in the right way.

North Dakota Saints are beginning preparations for a better reunion, or reunions, next year. They are thinking of two for the district, one in the east side as well as the western gathering.

Much good has been done by the reunion. New resolutions have been made as a result of the power of God manifested to his people.

Brother and Sister F. G. Spaulding celebrated their golden wedding anniversary during the reunion week, and many of their guests from California, Independence, Missouri, and Minneapolis, attended reunion, too. Sister Miller, from Columbus, Ohio, visiting her parents. Brother and Sister J. F. Bailey, was in attendance.

The younger men of the priesthood seem to be imbued with a desire for bigger and better things to be accomplished by them for the church. Doctor Charles Young, of Lamour; Lester Anderson, of Dunn Center; Ralph Darling, of Thorne; W. K. and L. V. McElwain, of Lansford, were in attendance and of the aforementioned class.

Missionary Day in Lamoni Stake

"Busy People Are Happy People, Especially When About the Lord's Business"

Sunday, June 24, was Children's Day at Downey, where we have a group of faithful, energetic, missionary-minded members. We had a big day, and a good day. It was not the quality of the singing and reciting of the children, nor the profundity nor eloquence of the preaching, that made it a big day and a happy day, but it was the spirit of the people. Everybody worked and did his bit to make it a happy day and an instructive day.

Brethren Jim Snethen and Norm Boswell had been watching the prospect list for new members. They brought one young man to the river at nine o'clock Sunday morning and he was baptized. Later in the week, as a result of their patient watching and care, another young man came to Lamoni and was baptized.

Sister Vera Boswell had charge of the women's committee which selected the program and trained the children. Mrs. Doc Boswell and Mary Snethen assisted in this work as well as a number of others. Mr. Oscar Osborne with his cornet gave much help in harmonizing the singing of a group of young men and women.

The school building was far too small to hold the congregation that assembled at eleven o'clock; one hundred and fifty were inside and many stood around outside. At twelve-thirty Sister Jim Snethen took charge and had long tables set up and spread with all kinds of good food which had been prepared and brought for the occasion by friends. More than two hundred people ate and visited together.

At two-fifteen seats were arranged in the shade of the old hickory and oak trees and after the customary opening exercises, Mrs. Hilda Loving talked for ten minutes and told us how she heard the message of the Restoration of the gospel, and how after careful investigation she had found the doctrines and customs of the Latter Day Saint Church more biblically correct than the doctrines and customs of her own church. This talk took us back to the little Latter Day Saint church in Swan Street, Richmond, Melbourne, Australia, at a time when Brother C. Ed. Miller was pastor there.

In sweet and gentle tones "Suffer Little Children to Come Unto Me" was then sung by a group of boys and girls who had been taught by Miss Hope Mattox. Rising from the congregation Brother Doc Boswell and wife and Brother Otis Snethen and wife brought their baby boy and girl forward and these babies were blessed by the laying on of hands and prayer by Elders Ellis Bedwell and George Johnson.

After Misses Mildred Hagen and Madolin Hatcher had sung "Trust and Obey," the congregation stood and sang "Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken" as a hymn of covenant and dedication, and the newly-baptized brother was confirmed a member of the church by the laying on of hands with prayer for the bestowal of the Holy Spirit by the elders present. Following the confirmation, Brother Bedwell preached an encouraging sermon.

At the evening service the building was again too small for the congregation. Brother Bedwell was the speaker on this occasion also.

By this type of activity we are caused to know that a busy people are a happy people, and more so when those people realize that they are engaged in the Lord's business.

ALBERT L. LOVING.

Far West Stake

Stewartsville Branch

The O. T. Z. stake convention held here June 2 and 3, was one of the best in services and attendance. The local young people with those of Maple Grove worked hard during the extremely hot weather preparing for the beautiful cantata, "The Light Everlasting," which was given on Sunday morning with Leonard G. Ehlers directing.

Recent guest speakers have been L. A. Keck, of Saint Joseph, and Frank L. Hinderks. Both gave timely and inspirational sermons. All were sorry that Brother Burnett was not able to fill his appointment for June 10. J. L. Hidy substituted with a good sermon on "Sacrifice." Pastor Z. J. Lewis presented a timely sermon on June 17. The congregation joins each Sunday night with the other churches in a union service held in the city park.

The Wednesday night prayer services seem to have created a greater interest for a larger number, as the attendance has materially increased in more recent weeks, and helpful and inspirational meetings are enjoyed.

The women are carrying on their usual activities with the continuance of the weekly sacrifice offering. They served dinner for the O. T. Z. Convention. Sister Jeanette Lewis has charge of the July educational meeting with Sister Anna McCord as teacher of the Book of Mormon study. Brother McCord has been helping her with the work until recently and interesting discussions are enjoyed. Brother McCord is ill again and not able to leave his home. All hope for a swift recovery to his usual health, that he may continue in his helpful activities in the branch.

A large number attended the special stake conference held in Saint Joseph on June 24. Stewartsville, with Far West Stake, welcomes Brother and Sister H. L. Livingston in their new field of labor.

On May 31, a number of the young people met with their president, Miss Mona Armstrong, and gave the church a general cleaning.

There have been two weddings here recently in the young people's group. Emerson McCord and LaVerla Daniel, of Cameron, were married June 1. Miss Cathryn Christy and Harris Whiteman were married on June 27. Both Emerson and Cathryn have been active in church work and the branch extends to them hearty and sincere wishes for happy and successful lives.

Miss Cathryn Lewis, of Hays, Kansas, visited her aunts, Misses Carrie and Emma Lewis, and other relatives here recently. Brother J. E. Powell is enjoying an extended visit with his daughter, Mrs. T. A. Wilkie, in Los Angeles, California.

First Saint Joseph Church

First Church was host to the special stake conference on June 24. The evening service was in charge of the O. T. Z.'s and Bishop H. L. Livingston was the guest speaker. The prelude was furnished by the Dulciana Chorus under the direction of Mrs. C. E. Haden.

The adult division together with the children's division held their annual picnic in Bartlett Park the evening of June 28. The children gathered in the afternoon and played games. A picnic supper was spread and the evening was pleasantly spent by a large crowd.

The first Sunday in July was the occasion for another early morning prayer service for the young people. A beneficial service was held in Hyde Park. Elder H. C. Timm was in charge, assisted by Bishop H. L. Livingston who gave the opening remarks.

The quarterly amalgamated communion service held at First Church was well attended by Saints from all four churches in the city. An impressive service was carried out, Bishop Livingston giving the theme talk.

Pastor Ward A. Hougas was the speaker at the evening service on July 1. On July 8, Bishop Livingston gave two interesting and profitable sermons.

The priesthood meetings are continuing each Monday evening with good interest. They are now taking up the study of the pamphlet, "What Latter Day Saints Believe About Marriage and the Home," by Elbert A. Smith.

Deselm Branch

Near Manteno, Illinois

Under the efficient leadership of Brother William I. Cochran, with Sister Beatrice Rogers, as assistant, the church school is progressing rapidly.

Easter Sunday, Mother's Day, Children's Day, and Father's Day were all appropriately celebrated with interesting programs.

The high school boys' class have been helping with special song numbers which are appreciated.

A number of young people of this congregation were graduated from the high school this summer, Russell Rogers, and Paul Shreffler, from the Manteno High School, and Reginald Jones and Paul Kahler, from the Wilmington High School.

Sister Lucile Faulkner also graduated from the Saint Mary's hospital as a trained nurse, June 14.

Brother and Sister F. G. Pitt visited this branch, May 27, and Elder Pitt preached a fine spiritual sermon in the morning. A basket lunch was served at noon, and in the afternoon, Brother and Sister Pitt talked of their travels in the Holy Land and Australia, singing several beautiful songs. They remained here until the following Tuesday, Brother Pitt having been invited to participate in the G. A. R. exercises and parade at Joliet on Decoration Day.

Sunday, June 17, eleven candidates were baptized in Rock Creek, a stream nearby. They are as follows: Grace Cochran, Frederick, Jacque, and Howard Pement, Bernice Shreffler Pement, John Pement, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Leasure, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strohm, and Myrna Vickers. Elders William Cochran and Earl D. Rogers were the officiating ministers.

Mabel Lorene Shreffler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shreffler, and Harold Pement, son of Elder Philemon Pement, were united in marriage January 11, 1934. These young people have the best wishes of the community.

Deselm Branch suffered a severe loss in the death of Mr. O. C. Shreffler, father of Arthur Shreffler and Sister Bernice Pement. While Mr. Shreffler was not a member of the church, he, with his faithful wife have always been loyal and true friends. He owned the hall where the congregation meets, and was quite a regular attendant, especially during missionary series of meetings.

These Saints were saddened to read in the Herald of the death of Sister Williamson, of the little Mission Church. She and her family entertained many of these Saints at various conferences and she was loved by all.

The women's department, under the leadership of Sister Pearl Pement, are planning to visit isolated members during the summer. Last Thursday, a meeting was held with Sister Lemere, of Bradley.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Church services have been held regularly with large attendance. Sunday, July 8, at the worship period, the talk was given by Harold C. Burgess. At the eleven o'clock hour, Pastor C. E. Wight gave the sermon and the choir sang "Praise Ye the Father," under the direction of Eugene Christy. In the evening, Elder John Blackmore delivered the sermon.

The Central Women's Club held their annual banquet, June 29, marking the close of a successful year's work, under the direction of Mrs. Harry Paxton. At the beginning of the year, the club adopted the weekly sacrifice envelope system, in which many old friends were called on, new ones made, and good will and cheer taken to many homes. In all, the friendly visitors made over six thousand calls during the year. The attendance committee was alert and consistent, resulting in an average attendance of ninety at the regular club meetings.

The club served the fathers' and sons' banquet, the mothers' and daughters' banquet, twenty-eight dinners on prayer meeting nights, and the semiannual stake conference dinners. The ladies also held a reception for Brother and Sister John W. Rushton before they sailed for England, had a gift chest and turkey dinner at Thanksgiving, sponsored a southern lawn fete on the church lawn, and many other minor activities.

The hospitality committee kept everyone well posted, making about five thousand telephone calls and the philanthropic committee assisted the bishop in caring for twenty needy families. While many of the activities consisted of a more educational, missionary, and social nature, the club spent considerable time in collecting and earning money. At the closing dinner, they presented to the bishop, $1,346.66 to apply on Central Church debt. All have worked and contributed in a splendid way. The business women's circle has done its bit, and the girls' circle has been an inspiration and a great help.

At the closing banquet, a copy of the summary of the years' work and a receipt of the money given the bishop, were presented by the president of the club to Pastor C. E. Wight. The newly-elected officers were also presented as follows: Mrs. T. B. Dunn, president;

Mrs. Allan Rush, first vice president and social chairman; Miss Harriet Benedict, chairman of the business women's circle; Mrs. Ross Moore, chairman of the program committee; Mrs. Walter Criley, chairman of the philanthropic committee; Mrs. J. E. Wickham, recording secretary; Miss Velma Lewis, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Lott Sandy, treasurer. A beautiful table lamp was presented by Brother Wight to the retiring president, Mrs. Paxton, from the women.

God has been with these women in their untiring efforts, and has blessed them abundantly for their labor. The congregation is proud of them and hope that in the year to come their achievements will exceed those of the past.

Second Church

Recent speakers have been Elders E. W. Lloyd, Thomas Newton, W. B. Richards, John Nanny, Berwyn Lungwitz, John Siebert, and Pastor P. J. Raw.

This congregation is happy to have its former pastor, P. J. Raw, for their pastor the coming year. They pledge their support to him and will try to make his efforts a success.

Sister Mildred Lungwitz is the church school director, and Sister P. J. Raw is the young people's director. Both are to be commended for their efforts.

Elder E. S. Zink has been holding cottage preaching services for some time with good interest.

John Siebert's Book of Mormon Class is also showing good interest.

Appropriate Easter, Mother's Day and Children's Day programs have been enjoyed.

The plans of the O. B. K.'s are being carried out, in an endeavor to keep the young people busy with church work.

Miss Margie Purdy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Purdy, of Kansas City, and James Francis Evans, also of Kansas City, were united in marriage June 19, with the single ring ceremony read by Elder E. W. Lloyd. Miss Purdy was attended by Miss Ida Belle Smith, cousin of the bridegroom. Mr. Henry Kramer acted as best man.

North East Church

The rally in the park at North Kansas City, June 17, was a happy gathering. Elder H. R. Higdon gave a review of the work in North Kansas City during his time as pastor. Elder J. O. Worden then gave a spiritual sermon.

The Saints brought their dinner, and a picnic was enjoyed on the grounds. The children enjoyed themselves singing and playing between services.

Pastor Henry F. Davis has been giving a series of sermons that have had a cheering influence.

Elder J. E. Vanderwood was the speaker for this congregation, July 8. His sermon was inspiring and spiritual.

Independence

The Sunday evening Campus service was well attended, and Enoch Hill church members were special guests. A large and appreciative congregation enjoyed President Elbert A. Smith's forceful sermon on "Repentance." Associated with President Smith in the stand were Pastor John F. Sheehy and Elder E. A. Thomas, pastor of the Enoch Hill Church.

A special solo, "Home, Sweet Home," was sung by Albert Brackenbury, accompanied at the piano by Richard Maloney. Mr. Maloney also accompanied the congregational singing.

The Independence young people each summer make missionary trips to outlying branches. Their first trip of the season was made Sunday. A group of forty-two young people, from the Stone Church and Sugar Creek Mission congregations, visited Lexington, Missouri. Young people from Enoch Hill and Liberty Street, went to Bates City, Missouri; Walnut Park and Spring Branch young people went to Lees Summit, and Englewood and Gudgell Park young people visited Blue Springs, Missouri. An enjoyable afternoon was spent by all groups.

Walnut Park Church

Members of the Crusader Class of the church school had charge of devotionals and program Sunday morning. The invocation was by Harold Dillee; Scripture reading by Leonard Curtis; vocal solo by Melba Moorman; reading, Ruth Barwise; and benediction by Marion Wille. This is the youngest class of senior young people, and is taught by Fred Fish.

Bishop J. Stanley Kelley was the speaker at eleven o'clock, his sermon being preceded by an anthem, "What Are These Arrayed in White?" by the choir, directed by Minnie Scott Dobson. The junior service in the lower auditorium was in charge of Elder Welton Wood, the story being told by Paula Ballantyne.

Several carloads of Walnut Park young people, in charge of Vernon Sackman, assistant young people's leader, joined with the young people of Spring Branch congregation in a trip to Lees Summit, Sunday afternoon. They left immediately after the eleven o'clock service and returned in time for religious in the evening. A basket dinner was served and a program given. The speaker at the afternoon service with the Lees Summit young people was Elder Frank McDonald, pastor at Walnut Park.

At two-thirty Sunday afternoon an ordination service was held at the Walnut Park Church in charge of the pastor in Zion, Elder John F. Sheehy. The order of service was: Invocation, Brother Sheehy; organ, "Take Time to Be Holy;" Scripture reading, Brother Sheehy; prayer of consecration, President Elbert A. Smith; charge to the candidates, Apostle F. Henry Edwards; ordinations:

Odess Athey to the office of priest by Bishops George W. Eastwood and J. Stanley Kelley; Ammon Badder to the office of deacon, by Bishops Eastwood and Kelley; Shankland Arnsen and Clairice Closson to the office of elder, by Elders Herbert L. Barto and A. K. Dillee; and Ted Beck and Earl Hoisington to the office of high priest, by Elders Harry Barto and Leonard Lea. Following the ordinations an organ number, "Come, Sweet Comforter," was played, and the benediction was by President Elbert A. Smith. Three of the men ordained, Odess Athey, Clairice Closson and Ammon Badder are members of the Walnut Park congregation.

Liberty Street Church

Wynona Leantha, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ryder, was blessed at the eleven o'clock service July 8, by Pastor Lentell.

At the same service Sisters Ola Davidson, Mary Helm, Edna Ladd, and Effie Humber, all daughters of Brother Joseph Stobaugh, sang a beautiful number.

Immediately following the sermon by Ray Wrigley Sunday morning the young people and choir made a trip to Bates City where a basket dinner was enjoyed. An afternoon program was given by Liberty Street and Enoch Hill young people and after the program Liberty Street folk went with Brother and Sister Perry Hiles to their farm home, where a song service and picnic supper were enjoyed. The visitors returned to Independence in the cool of the evening uplifted by the missionary trip and by knowledge of friends made at Bates City. Bernard Hurshman was in charge of the trip.

Last Thursday night the choir went to the home of Brother and Sister Wilson on Enoch Hill, to help Sister Wilson celebrate her seventy-ninth birthday. A number of Enoch Hill members were present and their pastor, E. A. Thomas, was in charge of the reception. Brother and Sister Wilson moved there from Liberty Street district.

A party of sixteen young men, members of Bernard Hurshman's Boy Scout troop and Hubert Mills' Sunday school class, returned July 8, from a week's outing in the Missouri Ozarks. They left Independence July 2, in a big truck and camped first at a spot on Big Beaver River, east of Forsythe. On the return trip they stopped at Rockaway Beach for a swim. At Warsaw, they fished in the Lake of the Ozarks.

Second Church

Elder A. K. Dillee was in charge of the eleven o'clock service Sunday. Elder John F. Sheehy was the speaker, choosing for his theme, "The Church, A House of Worship." The choir, under the leadership of Earl Audet, sang "Fairrest Lord Jesus," assisted by Mrs. Sam Inman, soloist. Miss Hazel Clow and Edward Stowell carried solo parts in the anthem, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain."

Fred Burrows was in charge of the junior service. A short song service preceded the sermon by Gordon Calile, "Keeping Yourselves Clean." A song was sung by three girls, and Edith Campbell told a story.

Enoch Hill Church

Through the kindness of one of the lumber companies of this city and of Brother and Sister M. A. Larson, this congregation has a new table added to its picnic equipment.

On Wednesday evening the young people meet at the home of Sister Iva Christensen for prayer service. On the last Wednesday of the month, however, they join the adults in union prayer hour.

Brother Willis Young took the intermediate boys on a hike out to the river last week.

The Dorcas Class wishes to express appreciation of the help of Apostle F. Henry Edwards at the class session July 15. He explained the lesson on the gifts of the gospel.

The class taught by Elder C. S. Warren was in charge of the worship period of the church school Sunday, July 15. The subject of music was continued, Elder Warren giving a talk on "The Benefits of Music." Sister Clara Frick sang a solo, and several members read quotations from the Scriptures.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards was the eleven o'clock speaker Sunday, Herbert Whitehead sang "Come, Sweet Comforter," and the choir sang "One is Missing."

Englewood Church

July 1, sacrament Sunday, Pastor R. W. Hovery was in charge of the service. Bishop C. J. Hunt gave the pre-communion address, and Elder Arthur Welch talked on the oblation.

Elder Leonard White was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday, July 8. Elder John Ely delivered the sermon Sunday morning, July 15.

Englewood was saddened by the bereavement of Sister Lanham. The funeral of her son, Floyd Lanham, was held, Monday, July 9.

Friday evening, July 13, all four groups of Englewood met at Hills' Park for a family picnic supper. These social picnics have been planned for every Friday night during the summer months.

East Independence Church

Doctor Charles F. Grabske was the morning speaker, July 8, taking his text from 2 Timothy 3. Special music was furnished by the choir, "I Love the Lord." Jennie Butler and Nina Austin sang a duet.

The morning worship service was in charge of Brothers Stowell and Wagoner. Carlos Smith sang, "Faith of Our Fathers."

The choir, under the leadership of Sister Joseph Friend, is working hard on the harvest festival music.

The women's department met at the church to study the Doctrine and Covenants last Thursday, Robert Fish teacher. Sister Madge Thatcher gave a reading, and Sister Geneva Smith a piano solo.

The church school Sunday was in charge of Clare Austin and James Stowell. Thomas Thatcher, jr., played a cornet solo, "Jesus, My Shepherd."

Elder H. E. Winegar was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, and his Scripture reading was Deuteronomy 32: 1-12. Two children gave the morning musical number, Veda Minton singing, "I Would Be True," accompanied by Mildred Minton.

East Independence members are happy to have several new families of Saints moving into this district. Attendance is increasing.

Spring Branch Church

The eight-fifteen prayer meeting Sunday morning was young people's prayer service and the opening talk was given by Almer Sheehy.

The eleven o'clock service was in charge of A. J. Tankard, and a ladies' quartet from Enoch Hill sang. Bishop G. Leslie DeLapp was the speaker, and the theme was "Zion."

The young people's department sponsored a missionary trip to Lees Summit, leaving after the eleven o'clock meeting with young people from Walnut Park and taking their lunch. They met with Lees Summit members in the afternoon service.

Boy Scout Troop 222, Leonard E. Roberts, scoutmaster, had a father and son overnight camp at Butcher's Lake. Camp was pitched at 2 p. m. Saturday, July 7. Elder Morris Jacobsen, pastor of Spring Branch congregation, was named chaplain of the troop and presented a Boy Scout chaplain pin.

GLEANINGS FROM EUROPEAN NEWS

for God." When Carey first tried to get his brother Baptist ministers interested in foreign missions, the President told him: "Young man, sit down; when God pleases to convert the heathen, He will do it without your aid or mine." Another great Baptist is being honored in England this year. It is the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Charles Haddon Spurgeon, the famous preacher of the Newington Temple, London. Spurgeon first preached in London December 11, 1853, and settled in the metropolis in 1891.

ANOTHER item of interesting news is, the King has been pleased to approve the appointment of the Very Reverend Walter Robert Matthews, D. D. Dean of Exeter, to the deanery of Saint Paul's in London, in succession to the Very Reverend William Ralph Inge, K. C. V. O., D. D. The appointment will take effect on the resignation of Doctor Inge, October 2, next. The British Weekly in commenting on this says of Doctor Matthews (whom American radio listeners will remember was one of the speakers on the "Whither Britain" series last spring): "This is an appointment which will be approved where the name of Doctor Matthews, his scholarship, his pulpit power, and his personal qualities are known."

DOCTOR ALBERT SCHWEITZER, doctor, missionary, musician, and scholar, of Switzerland and Africa, will deliver a course of four Hibbert Lectures at University College, London, and in Arlosh Hall of Manchester College, Oxford, in October. His subject will be "The Religious Factor in Modern Civilization." In November he will proceed to Edinburgh to deliver there his Gifford lectures.

The summer session of the Church Assembly (Church of England) has been in session last week, presided over by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Doctor Cosmos Lang. Among the matters discussed were: voting two thousand pounds ($10,000) for Religious Education support of the Christian Social Council, to whose work the Bishop of London referred in the fight over the Betting bill in the House of Lords; and the question of sex teaching. The Bishop of Saint Alban's in discussing this matter said, "There was an immense amount of muddled thinking with regard to modesty, reticence and prudery. There seemed to be a fashion in some quarters of thinking that if one was to be honest one must undress oneself in public morally, physically and spiritually. There was far too much emphasis on the physical side of sex and marriage, and the question of sex was too much isolated from the general question of morality. The need today was a clear Christian standpoint put before the world."

Zion's Christian Legion

THE USE OF LEISURE TIME

We realize that environment means much in shaping the lives of individuals. The good that might be derived from heredity and early training in the home can soon be dissolved in the dizzy swirl of modern entertainment. The environment offered to the youth of today is far from ideal. Zion must be redeemed!

Because of the evidences of these conditions within and without the church, it has seemed necessary to bring to notice the stand that the church has taken against some of the evils of today.

On the evening of May 18, 1934, the members and friends of the Zion's Christian Legion, of the Galewood Mission, of the Grand Rapids Branch, met to organize and set forth the principles of the Legion as presented in the constitution and by-laws.

Here was presented the Resolution of "The Use of Leisure Time," as drawn up by their leader, Charles Dodds. With very little debate the resolution was adopted unanimously, as it is recorded below, and added to the rest of the many good features of the Legion.

The resolution now tends to become a standing one throughout the Legion. That is the hope of the Galewood Club and its leader.

THE USE OF LEISURE TIME

Acting in accordance with General Conference Resolutions: 92, 217, 235, 329, 362, 377, and 463, we, the members of Zion's Christian Legion, do hereby make known our approval of the above numbered resolutions in-as-much as they pertain to the use of leisure time;

Therefore be it resolved: That we, as members of the Zion's Christian Legion, will be active in discouraging participation in any activity which is not approved of by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Whereas, the above named church has taken a definite stand against the use of tobacco in any form, the participation of card games in any manner, the attendance of dances in any place, activities or amusements and uses of leisure time which in anyway tend to break down our moral standards or which would hinder our spiritual development.

We further resolve that any group or member of the Zion's Christian Legion not abiding by said General Conference Resolutions or the standard of morals generally accepted by the above named church, will be subject to the action of the body of the Zion's Christian Legion met to enforce the principles of this resolution.

Whereas we, as members of said Legion, are endeavoring to promote higher standards of Christian living and a greater efficiency in the service of Christ among the Young People of the Church, we ask the cooperation of the Priesthood and of the parenthood of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of

Appointment of District President

Elder Charles Fry has been appointed president of the Northwestern Kansas District, this appointment to become effective immediately and to be subject to the approval of the next district conference.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By F. M. SMITH.

Midsummer Young People's Rally

The midsummer rally meeting of the young people in Minnesota District will be held at "Hazelglade Beach," located half-way between Waukon and Isle, Minnesota, at the southeast corner of Mille Lacs. The date is Saturday and Sunday, July 28 and 29. Each branch is making its own arrangements for transportation and food. A charge of 75 cents per car will cover use of the grounds, facilities and ice. Cabins with cots will be available at 50 cents per person for those who desire them. Every young person in the district and others who can attend are invited. The planned program is from 4 p. m. Saturday to 4 p. m. Sunday and includes recreation, campfire, sunrise prayer meeting, class work and problems discussion. In the absence of Sister Adah Carlson, district young people's supervisor; the program is under the supervision of Mrs. L. S. Wight, district director of religious education, 2717 Girard Avenue South, Minneapolis, Minnesota. All inquiries should be addressed to her.—L. S. Wight.

All-day Meeting

An all-day meeting and basket dinner will be held at Tawas City, Michigan, July 29. The first services of the day will be the general prayer service. Other meetings will be arranged by the district president and the pastor of the branch. Bring your baskets and enjoy the day.—M. A. Sommerfield, pastor.

The Jackson, Michigan, group will hold an all-day meeting Sunday, July 29, at the farm home of Brother and Sister Tong, beginning at 8:30 a. m. with a prayer meeting. Church school will convene at 9:45 and preaching, at eleven o'clock. A feature of the day's program will be the visit of Elders A. C. Barmore, of Battle Creek, and James Davis, of Detroit, who have labored many years as missionaries in Australia and the Islands. Services will be held also in the afternoon and in the evening. Potluck dinner and supper will be served by the women. The Tong farm is located about eleven miles north of Jackson and is reached as follows: Proceed north about ten miles from Jackson on United States Latter Day Saints in directing the young Saints in more creative education and uses of leisure time.

Highway 127, to the first road south of concrete bridge; turn west, proceed about one and a quarter mile to guide signs which indicate destination.

An all-day meeting will be held in Juniata, Michigan, July 22. Elder William Grice will be in charge of the services, and good speakers will be on hand. A basket dinner will be served. All are invited to attend.—E. S. Grinnell.

Reunion Notices

Northwestern reunion, at Silver Lake, Washington, August 3 to 12. Those who have once attended the Northwestern reunion look forward with happy anticipation to attending again. ### ■ Your Value

You are valuable for your positive virtues, not for your negative ones. It is not enough for you to be good: you should be good for something.

Some lives are like a clean house: Their only furniture consists of a few signs: "No Smoking," "No Drinking," "No Swearing," "No Bad Stories." You could write over the doorway of such a house this legend: "Nothing Doing."

Of course, the house must be clean before you can bring in the new furniture. The clean house is only half of the job. The other half consists in making it useful for some positive good.

Can you find such ideals as these in the house of your life—"Service," "Self-improvement," "Self-support," "Kindness," "Charity," "Good Will," "Practical Religion." If you can, you are worth something to the world.

■ A Prayer

I wish that, O, my soul might be
A pool, of sweet serenity
So deep, so cooling, as to ease
All troubled hearts; or to appease
Those souls that yearn, that cheated feel,
Seeking my soul-pool, thirsted kneel.

I wish that, O, my soul might be
A well of strength, tranquillity,
That those whose wells have long since dried
May drink long draughts, till satisfied;
And sense, refreshed, their own soul-wells
Relieved of doubt that hope dispels.

But when souls come, my pool to seek,
I pray Thee, Lord, to keep me meek—
To feel no pride in my rich store
To only pray to Thee for more
That I may have that I may share
With all, dear Lord, Thou sendest there.

—The Gleaner.

■ A Question of Money

"What scares men with property is the large number of people sitting around on the fences waiting for somebody to support them.

"We talk disrespectfully of money. And it is our folly in handling it that has put us into the deep hole where we are. We can never get out of the hole until we learn how to get enough money properly, and what to do with it when we get it."

"Rich men have the satisfaction of being the slaves of their own money. Poor men are the slaves of other people's money.

"It is all a question of who is going to be boss—the man or his money."

■ A Good Swap

"You have a dollar; I have a dollar. We swap. Now you have my dollar, I have your dollar. We are no better off. You have an idea. I have an idea. We swap. Now you have two ideas, and I have two ideas; both are richer. What you gave you have. What I got, you did not lose."—Selected.

"This Ministry"

II—THE SOLOIST

YEARS AGO one of the apostles made this criticism of a missionary under appointment "That man is a soloist." I did not see the force of the criticism at the time. I did later. That man could seldom work with the administration of the church or with any of its departments. He seldom took direction from anyone or really and truly cooperated with anyone. Finally, unable longer to endure the obstinacy of us all, he left the church and cast in with a group of like-minded men. Very soon it became obvious that scarce two of them could work together even in the environment of their own creation and choosing. They were nearly all soloists. They divided and subdivided and scattered their own forces.

The "soloist" has his place when he willingly fits into the general program; but a chorus of soloists, each pitching his own tune for himself and beating his own time, would be most distressing—it is most distressing when carried over in principle to other lines of church work.

There was a tendency at one time in the church to idolize the man who would take the conference floor and meet all and sundry in debate. That was thought to be and often was an evidence of courage and independence. There were very fine and great men of that class. Today there is a tendency to admire the man who can patiently and wisely adjust his differences with his brethren in council and move forward with them in constructive work. In unmistakable tones the people say to the ministry, "Learn to work together among yourselves, as men of God should, that you may show us the way by example rather than by declamation. It takes courage and character to do that, no less, perhaps more, than to take the conference floor in debate.

These observations apply quite as much to the local ministry in a branch or district as they do to the general ministry. No branch goes forward under a ministry that is "fussing" all the time. The thoughtful membership admire men who will subordinate their own ambitions and notions to the good of the common cause. Almost any branch anywhere will respond to the united and enlightened leadership of a consecrated local priesthood. Almost any branch anywhere may be divided and ruined by a divided and contentious priesthood. Let the brethren take that thought to heart. Which shall determine your course, love of your own will, or love for the present and ultimate good of the work?

Often the local man must lay aside his own favorite "plan" or "program," at least temporarily, and throw in with the man who happens to be branch president or head of a department in the execution of plans that he may think not so good as his own. A united local ministry will succeed with a second rate "program" where a divided ministry will fail with a first rate "program." This does not mean that one shall forswear any principle of truth or surrender his manhood or give support to anything dishonest or immoral or heretical. But at least ninety-nine times out of a hundred our differences and contentions arise over secondary matters having to do with methods or policies, or even purely personal prejudices and peculiarities. As examples, in the old brick church in Independence (forerunner of the Stone Church) men threatened to surrender their church membership when an organ was purchased. They would have no "wooden worship." Under Lyman Wight it was legitimate to sing soprano but wrong to sing "the parts," soprano, bass, alto, tenor. Some have refused to commune with their brethren at the sacrament if individual cups were used. At one service which I attended a priest resolutely refused to take part because the priesthood were requested to sit together on the platform, —making room for a crowded congregation in the body of the church.

It takes patience and self-discipline for people to learn to sing together in a chorus. Early in his ministry the ordained man may well set himself the task to learn the art of working harmoniously with others. Let him acquire the patience, the humility, the tolerance and kindness, the "give and take" that go with teamwork. The commandment, "You must be one" was addressed first to ordained men.

This strikes at the root of our zionic problem. Zion must be built by a people who can work together harmoniously under the most intimate and exacting conditions. It is very nearly always true that "as the priesthood go, so goes the church." The ministry must set the example of team work if they expect the Saints to work together in peace toward Zion. Suppose we test ourselves with the following questions:

Do I work easily and harmoniously with other men?

Have I had "too much trouble with too many people?"

Do I always demand the spotlight for myself?
Can I whole-heartedly support another who has the leading role?

Do I quibble over small matters?

Can I throw in and help put across a worthy project, even though I think it might "be better done some other way?"

Do I have the spirit of Zion in my heart?

Or have I the theory of Zion in my head—and nothing more?

Do I use the other man's faults and peculiarities as my alibi for not working?

Am I willing to impose the self-discipline and rigid control of my feelings that will enable me to cooperate with others?

A Friend of Missionaries

MARY H. JORDAN

For over fifty years a Latter Day Saint in the true sense of the word, many old-time Ontario members will remember her, especially those of the London District. Sister Jordan is one of the pioneers of the work. She was baptized over fifty years ago by Elder McIntosh and was for years a member of the Egremont Branch near Holstein, Ontario, the same branch that produced Elder James Morrison of the Owen Sound District. It was in the home of this sister, then living in Riverview, Ontario, that Patriarch John Shields first heard the gospel. She has entertained in her home and at various times has cared for many of the old-time and present missionaries of the church. John H. Lake, R. C. Evans, R. B.

Howlett, Joseph Luff, their names are legion. M. A. McConley, J. F. Curtis, Albert Carmichael, J. A. Gillen, one could go on for a long time, all have at one time or another found a home in their labors here. Sister Jordan now lives at Viceroy, Saskatchewan. She is well advanced in years but she is still a steadfast believer in the gospel which she embraced in her younger days. Her testimony remains as it has ever been, "I know that the Latter Day Gospel is true."

G. A. J.

"The person who gets 'rattled' easily never earns much respect, nor can he, or she, ever become a leader of others, for to get rattled indicates that you have not yet acquired much mastery of yourself. The girl or fellow who keeps his head, who does not get 'hot and bothered' has acquired that precious quality of self-control or poise."—Youth.

Corrections for the Adult Quarterly

The current adult quarterly entitled "Zion: The Economic Commonwealth" contains a number of errors that should be corrected. The copy was received late, and a very hasty printing was necessary to get it to subscribers, making it impossible to give it proper attention. The author has sent a list of corrections and says, "In addition to the errors noted there are some which are not likely to cause confusion."

We urge every person who has a copy of this quarterly to clip the list of errata below and paste it inside the cover, or make the changes in the text.

The Priesthood Journal

"The Church Program for Priesthood" is the subject of the first number of the newly established Priesthood Journal. This material has been prepared by President F. M. McDowell with the assistance of a number of other church officers.

This number of the new magazine contains the basic material that President McDowell has been using in his tours of the churches for stimulating the work of the priesthood. All members of the priesthood will want this material to keep abreast of the progress of the work.

Other subjects will be given thorough treatment in succeeding issues of the magazine. Each issue contains sixty-four pages of useful material. The subscription price is one dollar a year. Address:

Thoughts for Today

Cleansing the Movies

WHETHER to commend it with the name of tolerance or to condemn it with the name of indifference we are not certain, but the American public has been very patient for a long time with the movie industry and its producers. They have blasphemed the most sacred institutions of life; they have laughed at morals, made a mockery of marriage and the home, corrupted ideals, and polluted the innocence of children and young people. Every human value has been made to appear in the movies in the exact opposite of its real worth. Evil has been made to appear good, and good has been made to appear evil. And not only the young people have been affected, for the adult world has begun taking its standards from the movies too. The whole nation appears to be substituting alley-cat standards for the old ideals of righteousness and honor. The country has been deluged with a flood of smut that has done much to break down the moral stamina of the whole population.

WHEN one moral crusade rose against the movies, the producers were frightened into promising reform, and they appointed Will Hays as movie "czar" to regulate the industry. The reform did not live beyond the glare of publicity on the front pages of newspapers. It did not reach the producing lots at all. Hays has done nothing to improve conditions. All he has tried to do is to reconcile us to the sort of things his employers want to put out. Repeated pledges of cleaner films have been repeatedly broken, until people negotiating with the movie offices have lost all faith in their honesty and integrity.

THOUGH appeals and agreements have been in vain, there is a vulnerable spot yet to be attacked. Though the producers may be exceedingly tough and calloused of conscience, they are tender in the pocketbook. Greed with them is stronger than honor. Money talks to them, and it is the only thing that talks. They will destroy souls to garner dimes. One thing frightens them and that is a dwindling box office return.

THE TIME FOR PATIENCE has come to an end. Now is the time for action. The Catholics of America have realized the hopelessness of negotiations and promises, and they are taking action to free the country of this corrupting and evil educational influence. On a nation-wide scale they are organizing the League of Decency as a means of direct action against dirty movies. Some archbishops have pledged members to attend no movies at all, making a complete boycott until a settlement is reached. Other church officials are publishing lists of approved places for those who like to attend.

THE PROTESTANT CHURCHES, incompetent to cope with the situation alone, and with no positive authority over their members, are nevertheless throwing their influence into the movement. They, too, are urging members to boycott dirty films.

THE PUBLIC should not vent their wrath on the local theatre owners and managers. These men have to buy blindly by the block-booking system imposed upon them by Hollywood if they want films at all. They are forced, in order to get films for operation, to sign for a series of pictures whose names they do not know and whose qualities they cannot foretell. As long as this vicious practice persists the producers themselves must be held morally responsible because they produce what they want and force the public to buy it. When this practice is abolished, local managers can again exercise their freedom of choice and select films according to the demands of their patrons. At present the block-booking system is the great stumblingblock on the path to improvement. It is a strategic point for attack.

THE MOVIE MAGNATES always allege, in defense of dirty films, that "the public demands it," and that the "box office" supports it. This is a smug and hypocritical lie. The dirty films have short runs. Like vulgar theatre plays they live but a short time. But they are cheap and easy to produce, and they involve little originality. The films that have made long runs and brought big returns have been good ones. The crowds will come out for a good clean show. But it takes brains to produce such a show, and the stories for them are hard to find. And sometimes, looking at the terrible output, one must pause to observe in the language of the mountaineer, that "brains is what Hollywood has everything else but."

MEMBERS of the church would do well to cooperate in every way possible with this effort to improve the movies by keeping their young people from attending undesirable shows, by being informed as to the qualities of good shows, and by protesting wherever possible against bad ones.

Two Young Men Ordained

Two young men were ordained to the ministry at the Owen Sound reunion, under the hands of Apostle D. T. Williams and Elder W. I. Fligg. They are Arthur Dunn, of Fergus, priest, and Allan Mortimer, of Elora, teacher. Allen is a grandson of Elder J. L. Mortimer, an old-time missionary.

Mississippi Youth Are Alert

Away down South in Mississippi, at Vancleave, the young people are awake and active. Their Oriole Club is fully organized, and gave a Mother Goose social in June.

Led by Bessie Mae McMillan, the young people have organized three classes to study the three standard books of the church. They have a lively volley ball team. Each Saturday they meet for forty-five minutes of study, a program, and recreation. The programs are sponsored by leaders of the adult, young people and women's departments.

H. Franklin Rhodes Peyton Wins National Music Honor and Medal

Recently the town of Logan, Iowa, opened her arms to one of her sons who had journeyed away and returned with honors—not very far nor for a long time but long enough to win for himself enviable laurels in the world of music. In the National High School Contest, held at Ottawa, Kansas, May 24, 25 and 26, of this year, he was one of ten to receive the highest award offered by the national organization and to be the recipient of a gold medal.

H. Franklin Rhodes Peyton is but fifteen years of age, a sophomore in high school, and his success has come after much good, hard, and persistent work. Added to this, or perhaps with this added, is the heritage handed down from his parents, who are both musicians of no mean ability and who have given him the background and sympathetic encouragement that has aided him so much in his work.

He began by winning in the district contest piano event. Next he went over in the State contest, much to the delight of his friends and schoolmates. When he won in the National event, something had to be done about it, so they held a reception for him, during which he played the winning selection, Chopin's "Polonaise in A Flat Major." He has been a student of Mrs. R. P. Booher of Logan and is now studying with Professor Jean Duffield, Omaha.

Franklin is a likable, unspoiled lad, who takes his victories humbly and has a decided dislike for people who acquire the ego. He is always willing to do his part in a musical way, however small, in church, school and community. During the summer vacation he delivers groceries for dad and is not above helping mother with the housework when she needs it. Between times he finds time to put in four hours daily at the piano, which by the way is a new one, a gift from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Peyton.

H. FRANKLIN RHODES PEYTON

He declares that his experience at the piano, from middle C to the "Polonaise in A Flat Major" has been great sport. He is a Latter Day Saint lad, a great-grandson of our well-known and beloved Elder Joseph Lane. He is also a potential Gracelander, his parents having been students at that institution. May he continue to improve and cultivate his gift for the benefit of mankind and the glory of Him who bestowed it!

Provide Fun for Everyone

Rock Island, Illinois, young people sponsored an all-day picnic Memorial Day, for all members of the district.

The young men and women of Joy, Illinois, held a similar meeting at the Aledo Fair Grounds, July 4, which proved equally enjoyable.

Zionic Order of Noblemen Brings Hearty Response From Illinois Youth

Rock Island District, Illinois, now has a young people's council composed of the president of the young people and their supervisor from each branch. The district president and district supervisor of religious education are ex officio members. This council was provided the young people's organization at the recent very largely attended district young people's convention.

The Zionic Order of Noblemen was given prominent place in this convention, and held a court of honor, or graduation service, on Sunday. Members of this organization have been diligent in their preparation for graduation into higher grades or degrees representing definite courses of study and social activities. Noblemen from Millersburg, Rock Island, Savanna, and Joy were present. Sixteen new members were presented to the court; twelve were graduated into the Student Nobleman degree, and four were honored with the Branch Nobleman degree. Diplomas of achievement were presented and sponsors were chosen for the new noblemen. This movement among the young people was designed to stimulate intensive study and active participation in the service of the church, and it has met with hearty response from the youth.

Hazel-Dell Young People Help Others

This group of lively young Iowans gave a play two evenings at Weston Hall, and turned the proceeds over to the church school for the purchase of small chairs, papers, and other equipment for the children's classes in the basement.

Lately a carnival on the church grounds yielded them a sum which is to buy music for the choir.

Keep an Anger Diary

Discussing the desirability of self-control, Lora E. Clement in her paper, The Youth's Instructor, makes the following suggestion:

"Try keeping an anger diary, and conscientiously write down on its pages a record of every time you allow anger to get the best of you—even the exact words you have spoken. As you look at this pen picture of yourself, you will without doubt be so ashamed of such out-breaks and so disgusted with yourself that you will put forth strenuous efforts, and with the help of your heavenly Father, see that they do not recur."

LOOKING AHEAD

By A. B. Phillips

The central thought of what I would like to convey to you in the consideration of my subject is rather concretely expressed in the words of Paul to the saints at Galatia when he said:

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. . . . And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."—Galatians 6: 7, 9.

The advancement of modern science has added to our assurance, born of experience, that there is a law of compensation which returns to us in value, if not in kind, the results of the things we do. If our time is spent in doing well, we build into our own lives something of priceless value that will never be taken away from us, either in this world or in the world to come. If, unfortunately, we choose to do evil and yield to selfish desires that injure our own character and harm others also, we become demoralized until even the desire to do better fades from our lives, and soon or late we are compelled to reap what we have sown.

THE SOUL THAT FAINTS

In a broad sense there are two kinds of people in the world; those who persevere and those who faint. The word faint as used by Paul does not refer to fainting in a physical or material sense. It is from the Greek term ekluo, which is derived from two other Greek words that taken together mean a putting off, a failure to make complete, or relaxing an effort. In fact, the Emphatic Diaglott, uses the word relax in translating it. The meaning is quite clear to us, therefore, that those who will do good shall be rewarded in God's due time, if they do not abandon their purpose or permit themselves to put off the good work by failing to complete it.

The fainting soul should not expect to be rewarded with something that he did not earn. He is promised the reaping of nothing except what he shall sow, and the law of compensation therefore is equitable and just to him. If he has any complaint, he must complain only of himself. Our reaping must necessarily be in the future, for no man can obtain a harvest until the crop has been planted and cultivated a sufficient time. We must look ahead with faith and patience for the results which we desire to enjoy.

The prophets of past ages obtained a vision of the great things to be done, and they have left their inspired record for us, supported by precepts, promises, and warnings, in order that we may understand and may be encouraged to undertake the task which God desires us to perform. We are equipped so far as He may be expected to equip us until we proceed to employ the means at our command. It is only by use of our talents that we shall be able to increase them and go forward to the success that awaits the faithful.

THE USE OF OUR RESOURCES

The physical powers which we possess are valueless unless we use them, and it is by their use that they become greater until they are equal to the tasks of life. God has provided for us marvelous laws governing our temporal surroundings, our social environment, our educational possessions, and our spiritual resources with which we may reach the great goal of our righteous desire. What a rich heritage is ours, if only we will appreciate and employ it to the desired end? It is in the use of these resources that our deepest joy and grandest achievements are to be found.

In the use of our possessions, both temporal and spiritual, the same divine law must govern. It is the law of equity, of reason, and justice. We vol-

Which Are You?

By A. B. Phillips

Some men are weak, and some are strong;
Some love the right, and some the wrong;
Some seek to praise, and some to scold;
Some hearts are warm, and some are cold;
Some strive to build, while some destroy;
Some are pure gold,—some, pure alloy;
Some men are false, and some are true:
Which do you choose?—and which are you?

Some men are quiet, some will shout;
Some keep in step, and some keep out;
Some choose the night, and some the day;
Some gather sheaves, some throw away;
Some men oppose, while others aid;
Some men uplift, and some degrade;
Some give you cheer, some make you blue:
Which are your friends?—and which are you?

Some men are quick, and some are slow;
Some men respond, and some say "No!"
Some rise in faith, some sink in doubt;
Some look within, some look without;
Some men have lost, and some have won;
Some hunt the shade, some brave the sun;
Some men will say, and some will do;
Which can you trust?—and which are you?

untarily have united with the church because we approved of its principles, its obligations, and the goal which it sets before us, and which we are asked to endeavor to reach. But God desires that each shall perform his own part in a united purpose to which the whole church is committed. We are not asked to sacrifice beyond reason or that which is equitable and just, and it should not be necessary for anyone to do so. There have been many who have sacrificed beyond the bounds of justice, and when this is done, it becomes injustice and is to be deplored. We are all at times called to sacrifice for the right, but God never requires of anyone a sacrifice that becomes unjust to the individual, so far as the use of his temporal resources is concerned. Personally, I could not ask it of any person, nor could the church.

But what of those who are abundantly able to support the divine work which they have made covenant with God to maintain? The sacrifice made by those who were not able becomes a serious reflection upon those who have disregarded their just and voluntary covenant obligations toward the work of God. An examination of the record as revealed by the inventories filed with the church points to a situation that ought not to exist. If all those who owe tithing to the church were to pay the amounts due, it would pay the entire indebtedness of the church, and leave quite a sum for increase of missionary workers.

RELIGION MUST BE APPLIED

While some have done more than they should be asked to do, others have not tried to live the religion they profess to that practical extent that means obedience to the law of God. To become a law to ourselves is anarchy, and the result must be ultimate loss and misery and remorse. Jesus himself warned his disciples against the religion that consists only in profession. This was the condemnation of the scribes and Pharisees, of which he said:

"But do not ye after their works; for they say, and do not."—Matthew 23: 3.

"And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"—Luke 6: 46.

We do not plead for more sacrifice by those who already have done more than they should be asked to do, but we ask those who by carelessness or neglect have failed to do their part to keep the covenant they made with God. During the depression through which we have been passing some have followed the example of the poor widow that Jesus so highly commended because she had given into the treasury of the Lord two mites, which make a farthing. Of her penury she had given all that she had, while some had given sparingly of their abundance, or not at all.

Others have shown net increase above their required expenditures year after year without the payment of a tithe. Many probably have done this unintentionally, or have simply neglected their duty. But the material result is the same to the church. Our situation is illustrated somewhat by something I read not long ago about a boatman seeking to cross a river during a tempest with two passengers aboard. One of them in alarm proposed that they pray the Lord to save them. But the boatman replied: "Let the little fellow pray, if he wants to; but the big fellow will have to take an oar and help row, or we shall never get across."

RELIGION MUST BE DYNAMIC

It is true that God wants us to have faith, and we are admonished in the good book: "Have faith in God." But almost in the same breath we are admonished that "faith without works is dead." When there is nothing for us to do is the only time that we may be quiescent or passive and remain on safe ground. Religion is dynamic, and not static; it is progressive, not retrogressive; it moves forward, not backward. The goal lies ahead, not behind us, and what we see in vision is to be realized only by our own efforts, led by the divine will. It means faith, plus labor, plus a reasonable sacrifice and a united purpose.

Our resources are always greater than we make use of, and one reason for this is found in the fact that many seek God in full sincerity only when adversity threatens their material welfare. Even then, a selfish motivation is all too often dominant with people of this type. Some members of a certain church were once discussing their deacon and wondering why he did not assist more often in its work. But one of the deacon's neighbors explained it by saying: "He's so busy that he spends all of his time with his orchards and his crops; but when the caterpillars are thick and dry weather is bad, the good deacon can make powerful prayers." It is easy to say: "Lord, Lord," but Jesus promises that he who shall do the will of his Father shall inherit the kingdom of heaven.

God has given us every right incentive to perform our part in the work before us. In doing this we look ahead with confidence and zeal that bring action and success. We need to view ourselves as we are, and to be brave and wise enough to face the facts of our own weaknesses and shortcomings, that we may correct them and press onward towards the divinely appointed goal. It has been said by one of the great sages of the past, that the greatest of all knowledge is for man to know himself. To know ourselves and to apply that knowledge to the duties of life is our supreme and our divinely given work.

The Women's Work

Women's Group Activities

By Eunice Livingston

ONE of the primary purposes of the church is the development of Christlike persons who will devote themselves and their talents to transforming this world into the kingdom of God as Jesus conceived it. The development of Christlike persons, in so far as it is subject to human control, is an educational process. Growth in character and personality takes place through experience in living.

The recent emphasis on adult education has presented a new challenge to religious leaders and has brought with it great opportunities for the men and women of the church. Recognizing that religious growth should be life-long and that such growth takes place through every day experience the leaders of the religious world are increasingly realizing the need for a comprehensive and well unified program of religious experience for all the men and women reached by the church. The unified program of religious education as adopted by our church has placed it foremost in this field. The church's educational program for adults includes whatever experiences are provided by the church or influenced by it to help men and women solve their religious and social problems in a Christlike way. It includes, therefore, not only study courses but also such experiences as worship and activities of service, fellowship, recreation, and general church work, including efforts to bring about a more Christian social order.

THE WOMEN'S WORK

As the church has moved forward the work of the women has advanced through successive stages of growth until in 1930 it was recognized as a part of the total adult program of the church and the special activities of the women were thought of as projects of the adult division of the church school. This brought no radical change in the work of the women except that it became a more closely allied part of the adult program.

In many branches the former leader of the department of women was made the leader of the adult division or the adult division superintendent placed a capable, consecrated woman as leader of the women's activities. Where this has been done the women have found their work amply provided for and are enthusiastic over their increased opportunities for service. Many classes have welcomed fathers as well as mothers and have thus become studies in parentcraft, home building, and religious education in the home. Those classes and activities meeting the particular needs of the women function as a more closely coordinated unit of the whole. The encouragement of those activities which are of especial interest to women either because of subject matter or time of meeting is one of the specific emphases of the church school for 1934.

AN ADEQUATE PROGRAM

Christian living is best learned through activities and experiences into which individuals enter whole-heartedly. These experiences must grow out of real needs of the group, they must be worthwhile, they must be provided under conditions so attractive and under such capable leadership that they will be deliberately chosen in spite of the competition of other activities and experiences which may be available.

There is need to build up a greater sense of value in the women's work. A definite, challenging program of activities should be prepared for the year—yet it should be sufficiently tentative to provide for the introduction of additional activities as special needs may arise. Make your women's program interesting, make it valuable and at once it appeals.

CLASSIFICATION BY INTERESTS AND NEEDS

One of the first steps in building an adequate program of local women's activities is to classify the women of your branch. No two people are alike. Native abilities vary and acquired abilities are not equally distributed. Up to date the church has done little more than classify its constituency on the age group plan. Adulthood has been divided into four stages; early adulthood, twenty-four to forty years; middle adulthood, forty to sixty years; older adulthood, sixty to seventy-five years, senility, seventy-five years up. With the increasing emphasis upon comradeship between parent and child, upon fraternity among young and old and aged this classification is proving inadequate. Wise leaders will largely ignore age differences and look at women for what they are and not what they are supposed to be under a rigid age-grouping.

It is imperative that local leaders build a program that will minister to the natural interest groups of the women. These interest groups depend upon such factors as spiritual maturity, marriage status, occupation, physical needs and mental maturity. In some activities such as worship and fellowship all the women can meet as one but in discussion groups, service activities, clubs, and projects there must be the recognition of interests and individual needs. In smaller branches these groups may be small but there is no fairer method of classification or surer way of stimulating activity than to discover the fundamental interests of the women and give those of like interest the opportunity of working together in a real fellowship of Christian living.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

The local women as a whole should discuss and definitely state their general aims and purposes, then each interest group should define its own part of this larger purpose. Each group should be encouraged to formulate a statement of their aims in terms of a month, three months, and a year ahead. This definition will function in guiding and controlling the program. A central purpose must be well established so that all activities and experiences will grow out of that purpose and be related to it. The policies and program of the women should be worked out in conference with the pastor, director of religious education or a council of branch officers so that they will be in harmony with the best interests of the church and of the religious life of the women.

SUGGESTED ACTIVITIES

The following are some of the aspects of experience which should be sponsored by local women's groups:

Study, investigation, and discussion that will provide guidance in meeting the problems of daily living in a Christlike manner.

Worship will need to be so carefully planned and so wisely led that it will bring the worshipers into the consciousness of God's presence and the desire to know and do his will. Definite and informal times of family worship help to interpret all of life in terms of religion.

Social reconstruction in which the women join with other forces in the local community in an effort to correct abuses in society, to remove moral hazards, and bring about a more Christian social order.

Activities of service that are planned and carried out as means of sharing with others with genuine good will and mutual respect. These activities should grow out of an appreciation of real needs to be met rather than to merely provide expressional work.

Home stewardship in its richest meaning will develop as a result of such related activities as home building, child nurture and care, family budgeting, and a sincere effort to "keep the law" in all of its phases.

Hobbies offer fields of absorbing interest which should be utilized by the women's groups' leaders.

Each of these major experiences contain a rich listing of specific activities. It is not assumed that every group should deal with every type of experience each year. There is a danger of dividing our activities too much and not sufficiently concentrating on one or two types.

TEST OF EFFECTIVENESS

Women's groups should be studied carefully to discover the effectiveness of various program elements. In evaluating these account should be taken of such factors as: effect on attendance, result in service rendered, results in effecting changes in attitudes and relationships, results in effecting changes toward a more Christian community, etc. In short, the final test of effectiveness of the work of the women is whether their lives are changed and enriched continually. There should be specific evidence that the program is actually making a desirable difference in what they do and say in every day situations.

AVAILABLE MATERIAL

Any of the current adult courses provided for the church school as well as back courses such as "Religion in the Home," "Jesus and His Message" numbers 1 and 2 of volume 5 which discuss "The Financial Law" and "Stewardship," "Message of Book of Mormon," and "A Study of the Doctrine and Covenants" are available for women's use. Periodical literature is a splendid source of information on special subjects of interest. Some exceptionally good material which can be adapted to our specific need is to be found in such magazines as "International Journal of Religious Education," "Junior Home," "The Children's Magazine," "Mother's Golden Now," "Good Housekeeping" and "Better Homes and Gardens." These are only a few of the splendid magazines to be recommended for reading and discussion. If you are fortunate to have copies of the "Departments' Journal" do not fail to use the many good articles to be found there.

Through the efforts of the general council of women and the department of religious education it is hoped that material that will prove helpful to the women will appear in the future columns of the Herald.

The Shadow of a Mysterious Box

LOUISA'S part at the inquest was one of the most disagreeable experiences of her life. She tried to answer all questions truthfully, but was painfully conscious of Mr. Hunt's eyes that seemed to look into her soul. Several people from Chicago who knew Mr. Hunt had appeared in time to testify to his impeccable character, and to tell the story of Yvonne's life.

She had been a lonely waif when Mr. Hunt had taken her into his home six years before. He had been a kind father to her, befriending her in numerous ways. In return, she had been willful, hard to manage, and slow to learn both in school and out. Her school records were produced. They showed rather low marks in deportment and industry. She had always been sullen, morose, melancholy. Several had heard her threaten to end the "useless grind commonly known as life."

Mr. Hunt's own testimony, however, would have been sufficient to win the sympathy of his hearers. He was very evidently much moved by the death of his dear child, and especially did he regret that it should have happened just as they were entering upon such an important project.

"I had planned so strongly upon her enjoyment of the voyage which was to benefit her, bring her out of those moods of despondency—" He did not proceed further; he was overcome.

SEVERAL LISTENERS also were seen with tears in their eyes. It was well known how solicitous had been this man's care of the girl who had fractured her skull in that wild plunge to the roadside. He had secured the services of a specialist and trained nurse all to no avail. She had never regained consciousness. There was to be a costly funeral. A great mound of flowers were waiting to decorate her grave; and Mr. Hunt had ordered a magnificent tombstone.

Louisa and Dan could not imagine how it happened, but somehow the testimonies became twisted, or a wrong impression was gained. People went home remarking that Mr. Hunt certainly was fine to defend Robert Garfield, and some even predicted that though the lad had gotten off this time he would most certainly come to a bad end some day.

Robert also condemned himself severely.

"No matter what the verdict was up there," he remarked shudderingly, as he walked with Dan and Louisa through the town, "it doesn't alter the fact that I was to blame. Mr. Hunt blames me too—I can tell it. Oh, I know—he has been kindness personified in his treatment of me, but he made several pauses when he was talking to me—and I just know what he was thinking. The way he worded things—"

"You are just sensitive, Robert, really you are. You couldn't know but what she was just joking—like you said you thought she was. You couldn't know—"

"I might have looked at her; I might have tried to find out whether she was in earnest—"

"It all happened so quickly—"

Robert shook his head gloomily, and the three walked together silently until Dan left them to do an errand for his mother.

"I don't see why you should take it so seriously, Robert, even if you do persist in thinking it was your fault. The folks back there have acquitted you of any criminal intent in regard to it, have branded it an accident; and you do not believe in God—"

"That's just it, Louisa. You see—don't breathe this to a soul, will you?—I was rather in hopes—I wanted to find a God! Oh, you'll never know how much I've wanted to do that! You see, so many people who really think and have brains have begun to doubt there is a God. But we still need him—any fool will admit that. There must be some other approach to him than through working oneself up to a high pitch of excitement through hymns and prayers—a sort of laboratory method is what I mean. I thought—I hoped I might be the one to find God and point him out to other folks who have sense enough to want him."

THE GIRL was puzzled. "How can you hope to do anything like that, Robert, in company with an old atheist like Hunt?"

"Oh, but he is after the truth—he has a keen mind, I tell you. He would never hinder me in trying to find out things that were true."

"Perhaps not," she admitted. But she looked at him doubtfully as though seeing him for the first time. He was a sort of fanatic, she decided, something like Hunt himself, only infinitely better in character.

"And you see, if and when I find this God, I'll not be able to be at ease with him, because of this dark blot on my soul. For I'll know and he'll know. What people think will not matter."

"You children must be greatly engrossed in conversation. I have been trying to catch up with you—even called to you twice in as loud a manner as I dared without calling undue attention to myself. Well, Robert—honestly, you look so doleful, I could almost imagine Yvonne's dark spirit was haunting you. You mustn't let the thing worry you. Of course, there will be some who will blame you—because you happened to be the man at the wheel when the—er—accident occurred. But the rabble have no brains. What do you care what they think?"

"It's not what they think—it's what I know," disconsolately answered the young man. "I married her, knowing I'd never love her. If I had loved her, I probably would have looked at her when she made that awful threat, to see whether she meant it. The whole thing was—"

"Well, you were honest with her. You never told her any untruth. I know because she confided in me to the extent of telling me she loved you anyway, whether you could ever love her or not."

"She told me," said Robert, surprised, "that she didn't love me either, but was marrying me because you wished her to, and that after all you'd done she could not help wanting to do your bidding."

"Oh, well," Hunt waved his hand as though to dismiss the whole subject, "women always lie about such things, but why should we waste our time discussing them?"

"The whole thing was sin, I guess. It's like Louisa said, one should not marry without love—it is trifling with something sacred."

HUNT gazed at Louisa with a queer expression in his eyes. Then he turned once more to Robert.

"Sin?" sarcastically, "I thought you and I were agreed on this: 'There is no sin just because the popular mind has thought it was sin for several hundreds of years.' I thought—"

"Good-bye, Mr. Hunt—Robert," said Louisa, "I must turn here. I have an errand." Her "errand" was to escape from their deadening conversation. She had been shocked and saddened by Yvonne's death; though she knew, too, that sooner or later, barring some miracle, we all must meet the grim specter and answer his summons.

"All the more reason why we should enjoy life while we may," she thought wrathfully, as she pursued her course homeward to finish the packing. For Mr. Hunt had decided they would start for the coast tomorrow.

Louisa's mother felt she must talk with Mr. and Mrs. Eldon. She had strange fears concerning the outcome of the adventure her daughter was so intent on pursuing. At the inquest she had taken a sudden violent dislike to Mr. Hunt.

Mrs. Eldon opened the door and invited her in. Mr. Eldon was working over some account books, but put his work aside as Mrs. Miller seated herself, and, as was her wont, took from her handbag a bit of work. This time it was a linen handkerchief square and she proceeded to start a tiny rolled hem on one of the raw edges.

"Well—I don't know what you think, but I don't know—I can't seem to keep from worrying about Dan and Louisa and this absurd trip with that old sinner."

Dan's father laughed. Mrs. Miller had such an emphatic way of expressing herself. "I don't like him any better than you do, Sister Miller, but I don't see how he can hurt our children. You see, Dan has taken many trips with me around to some of the large cities—he knows how to take care of himself, and most certainly he will take care of Louisa—"

"Oh, I know. But somehow I am afraid." She sighed and worked with her needle as though it were the absorbing purpose of her life to finish that handkerchief.

"I'll tell you what I told Dan, Sister Miller. I told him if things got bad he was to write or telegraph home and I'd see he had a chance to get back—and that applies to Louisa, too, as a matter of course. I know some people in San Francisco and I shall have the young folks protected as best I can. At present your daughter's mind is not centered in her old home town—"

Mrs. Miller sighed again, then smiled. "Hardly."

Mr. Eldon smiled also, and continued: "And sometimes I have had an inkling that Dan felt this little world of affairs here was too narrow for him. It will be good for them to get away and have a little taste of homesickness. Don't you worry, Sister Miller, they'll be all right. And when they find out that distant fields aren't always so green as they look, and that all is not gold that glitters, they'll be back and ready to settle down at something. You'll see. And I personally know that when they come back, they will actually get that money he has promised, and that is really quite a nest egg for a young couple to start life with, even if it does mean only a pittance to that wealthy old atheist. I have investigated and I know that at least in a financial way the old chap is on the square. . . . Dan will be safe—if I were not sure of that I should never consent to his going—and if Dan is safe, Louisa will be, you can depend upon it. For my son loves your daughter, Sister Miller."

Yes. Dan would be safe—quite. Every morning and evening since he could remember, he had taken his worries, cares, and desires to the Refuge who is eternal and whose everlasting arms are always stretched out to help and to heal. The habits of younger days would cling to him; what Dan had always done, he would continue to do, even though he had to seek solitary places and moments for the sacred duty, and might not share it with his bride.

But Louisa's home had never known such things as Scripture reading and prayer. Dan would help her all he could, but he was limited as are all frail things of clay.

Even Mr. Hunt could feel that in Dan he had tackled a new kind of problem. At the moment he was in his room at the hotel alone, writing in a ponderous book.

"I cannot quite make out why I cannot seem to 'get at' this young chap, Dan Eldon, Case No. 3. There is something like an armor about him, something I cannot seem to pierce to reach him. Can it be because he prays? Is there a psychological something in prayer that actually does shield one according to his desires? No—the shield would be merely an illusion of the one who prayed—not distinguished by anyone else, as it is in this case. If it were recognized by another, especially by one who does not believe, it would almost be a foregone conclusion that his prayer had actually brought to him protection from an outside force. This I am not willing to admit. Very interesting, I am sure this case will be. Must use subtle methods."

Almost reverently he turned the pages until he came to one labeled: "Remorse of soul."

Under this heading he wrote feverishly: "Things have worked out—are working out—beautifully. I never expected a death of course, but I knew this boy, Robert Garfield, Case No. 1, had a conscience that would work overtime if given a little encouragement. This death will give a wonderful impetus to my experiments in this direction. I shall miss Yvonne, somewhat, but it is better for my work that she should not be with us. She knew too much; also she was growing too confidential with the other girl. Too many women can make no end of trouble. When I add any more to this expedition it will be one that has no education or learning."

He turned to the back of the book: "Notes on Women."

"I am more and more convinced that the less training, in a mental way, women have, the better it is for the happiness of the home and for the race in general. Their duties require a minimum of intelligence. Their primitive feelings are easily aroused; indeed their entire course of actions rise from these primitive sources. (See Case No. 4, page 15.)"

He turned rapidly to page fifteen, and wrote:

"Case No. 4. Louisa Miller Eldon. See page 1, for age, description, etc. Classified as brilliant by teachers and associates. High school education. Knows too much for her own good or comfort. Inclined to argue at times. Main characteristic: Thinks she has great power over the masculine half of humanity, her own husband in particular. Believes 'love' and allied things are sacred. Her husband is coming for appointment soon. (He is Case No. 3, page 25.) His great weakness at present is his pride in his new wife. By thinking through to the vulnerable spots in people, we can work some very interesting experiments and arrive at same conclusions."

"Experiment No. 1.—The small black casket.—(Leave blank space here for short report)."

He closed the book and almost immediately thereafter he heard a knock at his door. It opened to admit Dan, a not very gracious Dan, it must be conceded, for although he had come to look forward to the trip almost as much as Louisa, he dreaded these interviews with his employer. Mr. Hunt had a way of making him seem small, unintelligent, insignificant.

"That's a mighty fine little wife of yours, Dan," he remarked by way of opening the conversation.

Dan glowed. "You're right, Mr. Hunt, she is. The very best. In fact, no faults at all according to my opinion."

Mr. Hunt smiled tolerantly. "Oh, that is natural for a new husband to feel that way. I remember when I was first married—but no matter. You'll soon find that Louisa has the little failings common to all women. For instance, no woman is absolutely trustworthy and honest."

"Louisa is," announced Dan belligerently.

"Well, now. I know she is quite above average, but I am interested to find out if even an extraordinary woman like she is cannot be tempted to satisfy her curiosity in a secret and rather dishonest way. This is to be one of my experiments."

"Will it hurt her in any way?"

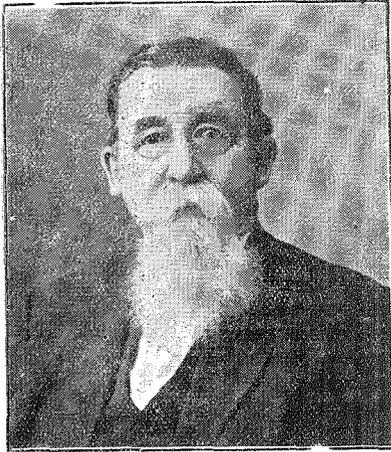

"How could it? I merely want you to take this box, this black box that used to belong to my wife, and ask Louisa please to find room for it in the steamer trunk. She will question you as to its contents. You are simply to answer: 'Please do not ask me, nor say anything about it again. Just pack it up and forget it.' Tell her you do not wish her to open it. Then refuse to talk about it. Be sure not to connect the box up with me, because she is such a bright girl, she would be sure to 'catch on' that it is just an experiment and our time would be wasted. I can tell if she has tried to open the box. There is a spring, and if the box is once opened you cannot shut it tightly again until you apply a little contrivance I have with me. Will you do that?"

It was a command, rather than a request and Dan cheerfully complied. He knew Louisa was trustworthy, and he paid no attention to the gilt letters on

Part Six

WILLIAM LEWIS

To the Land of Missouri

During the five years and some months that we lived on the homestead in Nebraska I did much preaching in my humble way, but I baptized only two as I now recall. Some others were friends to the faith.

We concluded to move to Stewartville, Missouri, in order to be with the Saints. I sought counsel from the brothers in conference at Columbus as to the advisability of our going, but no one had anything to say. Brother Charles Derry said if he were to advise, it would be only Charles Derry speaking; so he would not counsel me. However, he disliked seeing us go even though he hoped such a movement would be for the best.

December 5, 1875, we left the old home where three of our children had been born, and one was laid to rest, little two-year-old Martha had died about two weeks before we left.

We sold everything and had about one thousand dollars when we started to Missouri. We received only five hundred dollars for our eighty acres of land. The buying and selling of land at that time was exceedingly slow. Before leaving Nebraska I dreamed that I saw a Catholic Church on the side of the bluff fronting our house. Eighteen years later when I was visiting there, I saw the building on the spot.

From a financial standpoint we lost by moving, for the eighty acres we sold for five hundred dollars were worth five thousand dollars eighteen years later; but due to the change, our children have married those believing in the church. The chances are that if we had remained in Nebraska the children would have married those antagonistic to the work, so we are perfectly satisfied with the change and grateful for it. Gold and silver are not all for which we should labor. That has been a serious mistake made by man. The human family has, and is, making great efforts to obtain the material things of this world at the expense of the spiritual!

We were favorably impressed with the country around Stewartville, after having lived on the prairie where timber was scarce, where none of the farms, not even the gardens, were fenced, where there was no fruit, and where the closest post office and market were eighteen miles away. Good, well-improved farms could be bought in DeKalb and Clinton Counties at prices ranging from fifteen to twenty-five dollars an acre, and today, (1907), they are worth from fifty to one hundred dollars an acre. If we had had the means we could have bought some good farm land cheap.

There was a small branch four miles north of Stewartville known as the DeKalb Branch. There was also one at Saint Joseph, at Cameron, and at Starfield. Those were all the branches in the Far West District: and the total membership about seventy-five.

We Reverse a Decision

We made our home for about three weeks with Brother Albert Bishop. The spirit of contention and fault-finding was rampant in DeKalb Branch. We became so much discouraged with the unpleasant condition that I had decided to leave and go to Lamoni to see if I should find peace and unity there. My wife and I talked the matter over and made the decision before retiring one night that I would leave the next morning. That night I saw in a dream the Saints coming from all quarters: east, west, north, and south, and locating near Stewartville. Besides that I saw quite a number of people coming into the church, northwest of Stewartville. Next morning we reversed our decision, and bargained for forty acres joining what was known as the Ace Mann farm about one mile north of Father L. W. Babbitt's farm.

At our Wednesday evening prayer meeting Father Wood related a vision which he had since the last time we had met. He saw the surrounding country dotted with new houses, and he saw also a few of the old ones crumbled down to the ground. He said, "The new houses represent the homes of Saints coming in; the old crumbled houses are the homes of those who were contentious and fault-finding. They will leave the country." I also related my dream. Thus, by visions, dreams, and prophecies, we were given to understand that conditions would change.

Promises Fulfilled

How true were the promises! Not long after this a branch was organized at Stewartville, at Pleasant Grove, and at German Stewartville. Now in 1907 Far West District has fourteen branches, some thirteen church buildings, about all paid for, with a total membership of nearly two thousand. The country is prosperous and the Saints are in the faith.

In the fall of 1875 the grasshoppers that had done so much damage in Nebraska and other parts reached Missouri too late to do any damage to crops. But they deposited their eggs and the next spring, 1876, they hatched so that the ground was covered with them, and for about eight weeks they ate all the vegetation.

The prospect for crops was dark. It was getting late and the pests were still with us. Many were of the opinion that there would be a famine. The Saints were encouraged by the voice of the Spirit not to fear for there would yet be an abundance. Through good, old Father Wood, by the gift of tongues and interpretation, the Saints were promised a bountiful harvest. Some believed and some like Thomas doubted. Sometime late in June, the grasshoppers had matured sufficiently to fly and to the joy of all in Northwestern Missouri they left the country.

Many thought it too late to plant corn, potatoes, and millet, but some, hoping that they might raise corn, planted, and according to the Lord's promise, there was an abundance.

That was the year we came to Missouri. There was plenty of hay, potatoes, and corn. The latter was not fully ripe but it made great feed for stock. The season was extraordinary, plenty of rain and no frost until late.

The winter of 1875-6 was an open one, really one of the most pleasant winters I have ever seen. Birds made nests in February, 1876, and not until the twenty-first of March did we have any snow. On this date we had a very heavy snow-storm, but it was not cold. Thus it was that out of darkness, gloom, and discouragement the good Master brought sunshine, comfort, and happiness.

As I have already stated we had bought forty acres of land, but we could move into only part of the house. Mr. Levi Quick, who sold us the place, could not give us full possession until March 1, but permitted us to occupy two rooms. Mr. Quick, his wife, four children, and two brothers of Mr. Quick—eight persons in all—occupied the one room, and my wife and I and three children lived in the other room. We were very cramped, but for three months we put up with the inconvenience. We found Mr. and Mrs. Quick very agreeable and by the time they moved to their own farm, we really thought as much of them as if they had been members of our church. They were somewhat interested in the church, especially Mrs. Quick who died a few years later.

I Learn a Lesson From My Neighbor

We stayed on this place for three years. While we were living here, one of our neighbors sold out to a family of Saints, and although we thought much of our older neighbor, we were pleased at the prospect of having a new one of our own faith. But, we soon became very much dissatisfied with our new neighbors. We were poor people, living mostly on cornbread, sorghum, and potatoes. We kept a little flour on hand so that if any visitor should come to see us, we could make a pie or a cake or some biscuits. We had plenty of good butter. The new neighbors had bought a farm of two hundred acres and paid for it, but they lived a bit too economically. They formed the habit of visiting their neighbors at meal time, also of borrowing butter, sugar, lard, flour and paying back with a much less quantity. We became so provoked at their miserly, overbearing conduct that I permitted an unkind feeling to develop in me towards them. I wished they had not come into the church for there were, in my judgment, many better neighbors who were not church members. It would have been much better both for them and for the church if they had kept some of their money to live on rather than putting it all into the farm and then imposing on their poor neighbors for their livelihood.

I got out of patience with them and had very little use for them. I thought that the Lord certainly did not recognize them, that they were beneath his notice. Really I do not know of anything over which I ever became more wrought up and disgusted. It is true I was young and had not seen much of the world and had not yet come in contact with stingy, covetous people in the church—people who impose on those who do not have much to give.

I dreamed one night that I was traveling in a railway car. I was in the front and this neighbor was in the rear on the last seat. I remarked to myself, "He has no right to be on this train. When the conductor comes in he will have to get off." To my surprise he handed the conductor a ticket and I could do no more. He had as much right to occupy the coach as I had. These words came to me, "To him that much is given, much is required. He that has five talents should do more than he that has only one."

From this I began to reason and concluded that if I had more talent than they I should do more good in the world.

From this experience I learned not to be too hasty in condemning any one if he lacks along certain lines, for he always has some good traits. Still I must say that any person who will pay out all the cash he has for a farm and then half starve his family and impose on his neighbors is not entitled to anything better than a back-seat—if that!

"Oats for the Horse"

We rented a farm near Dayton City, Kansas, known as the Selix Farm. This was a fine farming region, and we were all soon busy.

Let me here relate a little incident which wrote indelibly into my mind that part of the Word of Wisdom which says "oats for the horse." I had been working my horses in the field day after day. Harvest came on, and the weather was intensely hot, so hot indeed, that we took advantage of the cooler hours of evening and night and worked in the field.

A neighbor was helping me, driving one of his own horses with one of mine. Soon it was evident that the horses were not evenly matched.

"Your horse is letting mine do the work," my neighbor charged.

"No," I answered, "see, he is pulling just as much as your horse."

"What is wrong, then? Look at my horse sweat!" And indeed the sweat was dripping from the animal's flanks.

"What do you feed your horses?" I demanded after examining the horse.

"Corn—that's all I have to feed them."

"I feed mine oats. Oats are not so heating and fattening as corn, and they build energy. That's the difference between the two horses."

Back to Missouri

Some time after that we returned to Missouri, where I went into the butter business. I made the acquaintance of farmers in the vicinity of my home, and began, on a modest scale at first, buying their butter to sell it in neighboring towns, to stores, and also to private customers. Soon I found a ready sale for all I could buy, and I drove out to Maysville, Osborn, and all the country stores. For about the first six weeks I cleared from twenty to twenty-five dollars a week on my sales. Though I had to go in all kinds of weather, I was encouraged, for the business paid. I had several good customers in Saint Joseph whom I supplied with butter every week and I thought I could depend on them so long as I could furnish good butter at market price. In this I was sorely disappointed. One week I bought up twice my usual amount and after reaching my customers who had all along been so anxious to see me, learned that they would not need butter this week and gave me no encouragement for the next.

Farmers were now making more butter. They sold it to the merchants and took trade in pay for it. I was not posted along that line, consequently I lost about forty dollars on that trip as I had to sell my entire load to packers. This was a crushing blow. It was not only that I lost on that lot, but that I had no market in sight for the next week or the week after that! If it had not been too late I would have gone back to the farm or have done team work. What to do was indeed a hard problem.

At last I decided to seek out the best butter makers in the country and to sell directly to the residents of the city. I took up a small amount, about one hundred pounds, and some fresh eggs. My oldest daughter went with me to hold the team while I canvassed from house to house for customers. Sometimes she would call at the houses until at one house a large dog rushed out at her. Becoming frightened, she turned and ran, but the dog ran over her. I do not know which of us was the more frightened. She was only nine years old.

To everyone who bought from us I promised that on a certain day I would be back with fresh butter, eggs, and poultry. Thus I worked up a good retail and wholesale trade, and for five years had a thriving business. During that time I never failed to be on hand at the promised time. My patrons had implicit confidence in me and I never disappointed them.

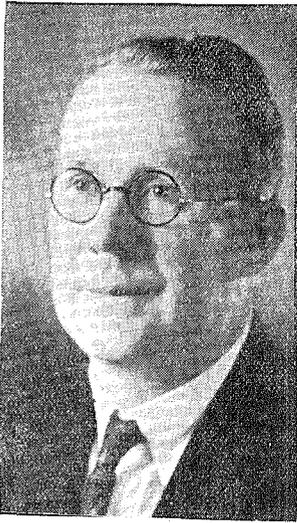

For the Tuesday before Christmas (which came on Thursday) I got my load ready Monday night, mostly poultry. During the night it turned very cold. My wife begged me not to go as the wind would be in my face and the thermometer registered twenty-two below zero. It seemed to me I must go for my patrons would be looking for their Christmas turkey. I started but except for my having read that persons traveling in extreme cold have a tendency to drop off to sleep and freeze to death, I would have perished. After walking a few miles I would ride and get terribly cold. One time I had a hard struggle to arouse myself and get out to walk. The awareness that I would soon be too numb to get out helped me, and I walked the rest of the way—about ten miles. The distance from Stewartville to Saint Joseph is about twenty-two miles. This was a trip long to be remembered; very few people were on the roads. My patrons had not been expecting me, but they were highly pleased that I did come.

More lonely year by year becomes the man who lives an aimless life, who is not conscious that any one is dependent upon him, who does not feel that he is a vital force, who neither lives for humanity in time of peace, nor dies for his country in time of war, who has squandered his life, and as he nears its close, looks back over the profitless years and realizes that he has wasted the only life he had.—The Youth's Instructor.

A Missionary Church

By Amos T. Higdon

AMOS T. HIGDON

THE angel's message (Revelation 14:6) is to go to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. We are the bearers of that message; therefore, it is our duty to do everything within our power that the peoples of the world may be given an opportunity to hear it.

If we keep the admonition to warn our neighbor (Doctrine and Covenants 85:22), we shall see an addition in the number of baptisms, and receive great spiritual encouragement. In fact, we shall realize more than ever the true meaning of the song that says: "The pebble has dropped in the water, and the waves circle round with the shock." I know of no better way for the work of God to grow both spiritually and numerically than for each one to warn his neighbor.

How anxious are we that our friends and neighbors may have an opportunity to hear the Message of Life? What are we doing or what have we done in order that they may hear it? What will we do in order that they may hear it? We should realize that we are going to be held accountable both in time and in eternity for conduct our stewardship; hence, we should see to it that we keep the commands of God. Let us make a demonstration of our faith by our works, and not be satisfied in the thought that we have no responsibility toward warning our neighbor, or that the duty to warn him rests with the priesthood only.

There are many people today who are anxious to find the "Pearl of Great Price"; and it is our duty to use our energy, time, talent, and means that they may be directed how to find it. Do we really sense our responsibility as the holders of this great Pearl? Do you think if we did we would be satisfied to do as little as we have been doing to place our friends and neighbors in a position so that they could come in possession of it?

The early converts of the Restored Gospel were fired with the message that they accepted, and did what they could that their friends and neighbors might be warned. And because of this they were instrumental in the hands of God of bringing many people into a knowledge of the truth. In fourteen short years the membership of the church grew to more than one hundred thousand people. If we were to manifest some of the old time zeal they had there is no doubt there would be many additions to the church.

Think of it! There are nearly seven thousand members of the priesthood in the church today. We ought to set as our goal: As many baptisms yearly as there are members of the priesthood. This is not an impossible task if each congregation will determine to do its full share. We have been instructed to teach our children the principles of the gospel and to walk uprightly before God (Doctrine and Covenants 68:4), and to have them baptized when they are eight years old. Have we been faithful in the keeping of this commandment? It has been our observation that if children are taught in accordance with the above instruction that they will be ready for baptism at the age the Lord has said they should be. Have we done what we could to intelligently inform our companions, who do not belong to the church, of the opportunities, beauties, and grandeur of the gospel to those who are obedient? Are they able to see in us a demonstration of the Christ-life; or do we do those things that are questionable for a Christian, hoping that in due time they will be persuaded to unite with the church? Whenever we compromise with sin, we lose. Have we told our friends and neighbors of the joy, peace, and happiness that has been ours, and of the promise to all who will obey the gospel? We are to be Witnesses for our Master, and we should ever remember our responsibility in this regard. May we do more witnessing than we have been doing here of late.

The bringing in of new members is vital to any organization. Clubs, fraternal, and insurance societies are working continually to get new recruits for their organizations. Should we not be more concerned about getting new members into the church of Jesus Christ which has to do with our happiness both in time and in eternity than those organizations that have to do with time only? Should we not manifest as much zeal as they do to get new members?

Of course we are not interested only in getting people baptized into the church. We are greatly concerned with the quality of life that they bring. To baptize people who are not converted is to add to our problems. A person who is not converted is a liability rather than an asset. Those who are brought into the church should have a firm conviction in the fundamentals of Latter Day Saintism, such as: The restoration of the gospel, The authority of the priesthood, The divinity of the Book of Mormon, continued revelation, Zion—a new social and economic order, and a demonstration of the Christ life.

Before Zion can be a reality, the army of the Lord must become very great and sanctified before Him (Doctrine and Covenants 102:9). Therefore, in our missionary endeavor we must impress it upon the minds of the people that we want them converted to the gospel in its fullness; that we are not interested only in getting a large membership, but that we are anxious to get that type of people that will make possible the building of a new social and economic order.

As we look around us today and see the turmoil and strife, the sin and wickedness there is in the world we are made conscious of the fact that there is a great need for the gospel to be presented unto the children of men in such a way that will cause them to sit up and take notice. If the men of the priesthood will practice the spiritual discipline that is necessary there is no doubt that the messages they deliver will move the people to action.

I trust there may come to us a baptism of the missionary spirit so that we will do what we can in bringing others to a knowledge of the truth, and revive those who have grown cold and indifferent; and thus move forward to accomplish the task of a real missionary church.

Labor Pay "Kick-Backs" Widespread

The "kick-backs" on Government projects, which were first brought to the attention of the country by Representative Louis T. McFadden (Rep., Pa.) and now being investigated by a Senate committee, of which Senator David I. Walsh (Dem., Mass.) is chairman, is found to be widespread.

Learning that more than $500,000 had been illegally diverted from wage earners to the pockets of alleged unscrupulous contractors working on some of the $100,000,000 federal building projects in the District of Columbia. Mr. McFadden presented a resolution in the House as far back as April 19th for an immediate investigation of the activities of all the local contractors engaged in federal construction. Among the charges made were: (a) Dummy corporations were created in the form of subcontractors who require workmen to accept lower pay than the Bacon-Davis Bill allowed, thus illegally increasing the profits of the original contractor who based his contracts on the union wage scale; (b) many hundreds of employees were forced to accept worthless ownership stock in lieu of wages; (c) employees who threatened to disclose these illegal practices of the subcontractors were told that their services would be discontinued and that they would be blacklisted by other contractors; (d) every legal art was used to divert public money from the pockets of the wage earner for which the public building program was devised by Congress.

Declaring that evidence was available to show that wage rates prevailing in Washington have been ignored in violation of law, Mr. McFadden stated then that the investigation is not in any way partisan as he was informed that the alleged subversive practices began as far back as 1928. He also said that information was coming to him which indicated that the abuses were national.

Within the past two weeks federal agents investigating complaints on necessary Government projects have reported to Secretary of the Interior Ickes that they have found dozens of instances of "kick-backs." This data was sent to Senator Walsh, Senate investigating committee chairman, by the Secretary of the Interior.

Examples of "kick-backs" were found thus far in five instances on work done on postoffice buildings in New York City. In one case a total of $4,262.15 was alleged to have been taken in "kick-backs" from wage earners by a paint subcontractor on the New York Postoffice a year ago. The subcontractor paid the painters $11.20 per day but forced them to "kick-back" $5.20, it was stated.

This and many other schemes are alleged to be in progress in many of the large industrial centers. In some instances, it is pointed out, contractors force their employees to live in an apartment building owned by the contractor and at higher rental rate than that prevailing in like accommodations. This, said Mr. Ickes, is a means of receiving "kick-backs."

The whole question is receiving the study of higher governmental officials, it is said, to determine what new legislation or executive order within the power of the President is needed to remedy the situation. Collection of data to this end will be continued, it was stated by Senator Walsh.

Though the executive order suspending provisions of the Bacon-Davis wage law threw the situation into confusion, the P. W. A. rules now in vogue on P. W. A. and other emergency construction projects, are more stringent and effective than were the provisions of the Bacon-Davis law, it is said by Senator Walsh.—Scottish Rite News Bureau.

There are many varieties of cowardice, all tracing their ancestry back to fear. Fear truly makes cowards of us all. There are the physical cowards, the social cowards, the business cowards, the hang-on-to-your-job cowards, the political cowards, the moral cowards, the religious cowards, and fifty-seven, nay, a hundred and one other varieties. Each and all of these have their own attendant demons of worry. Every barking dog becomes a lion ready to tear one to pieces, and no bridge is strong enough to allow us to pass over in safety. No cloud has a silver lining, and every rain-storm is sure to work injury to the crops rather than bring the needful moisture for their vivification.—George Wharton James, in Quit Your Worrying!

the box nor gave any heed to what they spelled. He whistled cheerfully. If this were the worst of old Hunt's experiments he could stand them. Louisa would measure up. Why, perhaps her honesty, her absolute goodness would even bring back Mr. Hunt's faith in people and in God.

"Hello! Right at the packing, are you?" he called to her as he came into the room. "Can you find room for something else? It's something—" He held out the box awkwardly. This was going to be harder than he thought. Somehow he didn't feel just right about it, but he would have to go through with it now.

"What is it," she asked brightly and then as she saw the words in gilt on the small black casket, she gasped, and suddenly dropped into a chair.

"What's the matter? You look—so funny—"

"What is that? Dan, tell me, what's in it—what does it mean?"

Dan looked down at the floor. He felt foolish. If he had known she would make such a fuss—

"I can't talk about it, dear. Just don't think about what's in it—don't open it, just pack it up and forget it."

She said nothing, simply looked at him in an odd, rather lost way.

"Dear, can't you trust me? It's nothing, really—nothing you'd—"

He stopped. He was intrinsically honest himself, and remembered his contract in time.

"Let's just love each other, dear, and forget all this." He advanced awkwardly toward her, arms outstretched, as though he would kiss her.

"No, no," she said, nervously, hurriedly, "we really—I—I should be working every minute. We—I guess I'm tired, that's all. But tomorrow we'll be all ready—we'll feel more—more rested. And if you don't mind—I wonder if we couldn't spend this last night in our parents'—in our old homes? I feel I'd so like to be alone awhile—to collect my thoughts a little—"

"Why, why—surely—but I—"

"Good night then. I think I'll run up to my room now, just as soon as I've crowded this in." She placed the box carefully in the corner of the trunk on top of his three church books which she had laughingly packed up for him. There was no suggestion of laughter about her now, as she folded the clothes back in place and slammed the lid of the trunk shut. She eluded him and dashed upstairs out of his sight.

"Who could it be?" she was thinking. "What souvenirs of someone has he in that black coffinlike box?" She could see those small gilt letters plainly—they floated before her eyes whether she kept them open, or whether she shut them tightly in a futile attempt to dispel the shadow they cast upon her spirit.

Can those who did not hear the gospel in this life obtain celestial glory?

So far as I am able to determine, this will depend upon the state of the person concerned. If he lived according to the light he had, there appears to be evidence that he will have the opportunity hereafter. For instance, we are informed that those who are in the first resurrection shall receive celestial glory (Doctrine and Covenants 76:5), which is indicated also in other places (see Revelation 20:6). Yet another text distinctly declares that at a certain period the "heathen" nations shall be redeemed, and they "that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection" (Doctrine and Covenants 45:10.)

This could hardly mean all persons of the heathen nations, for among them must doubtless be just as evil characters as among those not termed heathen. If not, it would be an incentive to remain a heathen. What the language means appears to be that simply because one did not have the opportunity to hear the gospel in this life will not prevent him from attaining the higher glory hereafter, if he will but accept his opportunity when it comes. But I do not understand that this text applies to those who heard and rejected the gospel in this life.

How may we distinguish affliction from sickness in asking elders to administer?

I presume the questioner refers to James 5:13, 14, which tells those afflicted to pray, and those who are sick to call the elders for administration. The word afflicted as used here is from the Greek kakopatheo, and means to suffer hardships or be in trouble, and is distinct from sickness in that it implies troubles of a different character not concerned with physical diseases, etc. Administration by anointing and laying on of hands is specially provided for those who are sick, but if they are well except that they are in hardships or similar trouble, they should follow the injunction to pray, and might, doubtless very properly, request others to pray with and for them.

Is Luke 23:43, to the thief, a statement or a question?

The peculiar form of speech used by the early translators of the Testament is employed in this text, as in many others. It reads:

"And Jesus said unto him, Verily, I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

The last phrase is so formed that it might be mistaken for a question, were it not that the rest of the sentence plainly denotes a statement. Let us note: "Jesus said unto him." The word said is from the Greek epo, a primitive verb that means to answer, bid, command, grant, speak, tell, etc. The thing Jesus said: "Verily, I say unto thee," is significant of the telling, not asking. The word say is from the Greek lego, a primitive verb that means to relate, as in a set discourse. The whole text in its Greek arrangement is given in the Emphatic Diaglott, a word for word translation, as follows:

"And said to him the Jesus, Indeed I say to thee, to-day with me thou shalt be in the paradise."—Luke 23:43, interlinear rendering.

Recognizing that the word verily means truly or in truth, we have the Moffatt Version saying:

"I tell you truly, said Jesus, you will be in paradise with me this very day."

Comparing this with the Weymouth Version, we have:

"I tell you in solemn truth, replied Jesus, that this very day you shall be with me in Paradise."

There is therefore no reasonable question of the meaning. It informed the thief, who clearly had repented, that he should that very day enter into paradise and be with Jesus.

What is the mark promised in the foreheads of the saints?

While it is not specifically so stated, it is probably the mark of the divine impress and character, the holiness of the just.

Veteran Missionary Pair Arrive in Tucson

We are taking this means of letting our friends know of our success in reaching Tucson. Our long journey from Independence to Arizona is over, and we are comfortably settled at 534 Second Street. We arrived here June 9, at the home of Elder W. A. Brooner, who received us kindly and bade us remain in his home until we could find suitable rooms.

Sunday, June 10, we had the pleasure of meeting the Saints of Tucson, who made us feel at home. Though we are far from old friends, we found the same spirit of friendliness and the "kindred tie that binds" making us feel that we are among God's people. This has been our experience in every field into which we have gone in the service of the Lord. We trust the Lord who never fails us but prepares the way before us.

On this Children's Day a splendid program had been arranged by the church supervisor, Sister Robert McDole, and those assisting her. Immediately after the program we repaired to the home of Brother Kramer where Elder W. A. Brooner baptized two boys. Confirmation took place in the evening after which I preached to an attentive audience.

The meetings are held in a hall on the fourth floor of the Consolidated Bank Building.

The following Sunday at eleven o'clock there was a business meeting at which Elder W. A. Brooner resigned after being branch president for five years. Again I am actively engaged as a branch president.

Although we may not be able to write to all our friends, we hope to receive letters from them. May God help us all to sense the responsibility that is ours as Saints of latter days. May we be the light set on a hill, and may we be faithful.

Counts Her Blessings

At the request of our pastor, Elder Ebeling, I write this experience with the sincere desire that some discouraged Saints may take hope in their times of affliction.

Two years ago, I was ill with the flu and did not seem to regain my strength. For months I lingered this way, discouraged not from fear of passing on, but while I live I want to be up and doing work for my heavenly Father.

During that time I received spiritual help that made my soul praise God. It gave me much comfort. Whenever Brother Ebeling would call, he would say "I always feel the Spirit of God here, and I don't understand why you don't receive the blessing you are so in need of." Day after day went by, and conditions remained much the same.

One morning I got up before the woman came to do my housework, and got my own breakfast, thinking I would surprise her. I realized I was still very weak, and for the second time that morning I went to God in prayer. This time I only said "Dear Lord, help me."

It was a cold morning. Snow was on the roofs of the houses next door, and as I looked, the scene passed away. I was in the front yard—the grass was green, the trees were in leaf, and flowers were growing at the foot of the rose arbor. The birds were singing and the sky was of a beautiful hue. Peace filled my soul and I stood praising my heavenly Father, realizing I had been ill, and was finally healed. A voice spoke to me, directing me what to do and I knew it was the voice of my God. The scene passed away, and I was again alone in my own little kitchen. The snow was on the roofs, but my heart was filled with the divine gift of God's Holy Spirit. I knew that when spring came my vision would be fulfilled and I would be healed. The time of this experience, was March 28, and I knew I would have to wait at least until July, as our seasons are very late. Why I had to wait only God knows. Our heavenly Father foresees and allows things to work out in his own plan.

I sincerely hope that if these lines catch the eye of some discouraged Saint, be his affliction sickness or otherwise, that he will feel renewed and start again, realizing a spiritual development for after all, that is all that counts.

God Remembers His Promises

Several years ago I was very, very ill, and I greatly desired to have the benefit of the administration of elders. The nearest elder, Brother G. W. Thorburn, lives about one hundred miles from my home, and, before he arrived, I endeavored to prepare myself for this ordinance.

I was at peace with all my neighbors except one woman who had made trouble in our home because of my being a Latter Day Saint. As I lay on the bed of affliction and meditated upon her unkind acts, I wondered if I would be able to forgive her. I was convinced that unless I forgave her, I should not expect a blessing from the elder's administration. By prayer and meditation, I at last reached the mental condition of complete forgiveness, then I sank into a restful sleep.

When Brother Thorburn administered, I was healed.

I am grateful for the Word of Wisdom and by carefully following its teachings, I find my health excellent. I consider it as great a blessing to remain well as it is to be healed of sickness.

It has been a severe trial to me to be isolated from the Saints; but my loneliness is brightened by the weekly visit of the Herald, and (during the winter) by the daily radio devotional service over KMBC.

One cold, dark morning, after listening to a very comforting service, I wrote the following verses:

Scattered are we, and far away
From the place where we long to be,
But each morning our souls unite
When we bow at the altar to pray.

The sound of music sweet and full
Fills the confines of our room,
And comforting strains sweep o'er the soul
Like a cheering message from home.

Through hundreds and hundreds of miles 'of space
Through storm and wind and cloud
Floats the organ's music to this place,
Each note sounding clear and loud.

Inspiring words of sacred song
By singers are wafted this way;
In triumphant voices, sweet and strong,
They sing how God loves alway.

Then in a loving, encouraging voice
The minister's lesson is heard,

The Readers Say---

Causing our minds and hearts to rejoice
As he reads God's Holy Word.

How gladly we bow for the morning prayer
While he asks for God's direction;
And we feel new strength for each daily care,
And rejoice in Divine protection.

May blessings rest on this man, kind and good;
Traveling ten miles at the dawn of day,
Through rain and snow, and o'er slippery road,
That he may help us to worship and pray.

Many Saints are at home in Zion,
And many are far away,
Yet our hearts are daily united
When we bow at the altar to pray.

My experience is that the gospel is true, and that if we are faithful to the covenant which we made with God when we joined the church, he will fulfill every promise of his Scriptures, and that all things will work together for our good. How thankful I am that it was my good fortune to become converted to the teachings of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. God grant that I may hold out faithful to the end of life's journey.

A Case of Instant Healing

I want to add my testimony to the goodness of God and the efficacy of the sacred oil. I would that every Saint might hear it for his encouragement and the strengthening of his faith.

I am not very old in the church, having been baptized in April, 1930, but since that time I have received many blessings by the administration of the elders and the use of the oil. One blessing in particular, which I received just recently, I want to relate.

For ten years I have been troubled with unusual sick spells which no doctor had been able to diagnose. Some have said that my trouble was indigestion, others that I had gall stones and one suggested that it might be a nerve in my stomach that caused the difficulty. These spells usually last about forty-eight hours, and I suffer sometimes until I think I cannot live; when they are over I look as if I had been sick for weeks.

During the depression my husband lost his position of employment, and he and my son felt that they would like to go out and see if they could find a location to farm, while I would remain and care for our property here. When I decided to remain, my son said, "Mother, we cannot leave you here alone. What if you should have one of those spells?" "Don't worry, son, I'll be all right," was my reply; "God will take care of me."

A niece, a school girl, has been staying nights with me and going to school in the day-time.

One afternoon I felt one of these spells coming on, and just about that time Anna May came in from school. "What is the matter auntie, are you sick?" she asked. Shortly after, I went to my room and knelt in prayer, asking my heavenly Father to help me and if possible to prevent the spell, as I was so alone except for this young girl. It seemed as if I heard a voice say: "Take the oil." I arose and immediately got my bottle of consecrated oil and took a teaspoon full, and was healed instantly. The pain was gone as soon as the oil reached my stomach.

I cannot tell you how happy and thankful I was, and Anna May says that she will never forget what prayer and the oil did for me. This is the only time that I was ever healed instantly.

"Let Us All Be Zion Builders"

Ever since I came into the church, which will be four years this August, we Clinton Saints have prayed God to send us a leader and pastor to preach the gospel to our small group that we might be able to reach the honest in heart here. Now God has answered that prayer and has added eleven to this group. Brother Elvin Hixon, of Munising, Michigan, a priest, and his family, are now with us. We cannot express our thanks to God for this blessing.

Brother Hixon has the gift of delivering the gospel in truth and in a plain way so that even little children can understand him. May each one of us heed the lessons he is presenting, and may God bless him so that he will receive more and more of the Spirit and never grow weary of his efforts here in Clinton. May he and his family be blessed spiritually and financially.

I received a letter from Sister Stark, of Oak Grove, Missouri, a short time ago, which greatly encouraged me. She had had a dream and when the interpretation of it was given, she was told that in three days she would receive a letter from one who is spiritually alive. And a letter that I had written her, she said, arrived at the appointed time. In the beginning of her letter to me, she counseled me that at times when all seems dark and difficult, I must keep walking right ahead and to go on and on until I reached the heights, and the crown of life is mine. "Though all others prove untrue," she wrote, "you must be ever true and loyal, a soldier of the King."

I do want my vessel to be filled with oil, and I want my lamp burning brightly so that the light can be seen from a distance. I am weak in many ways and need your prayers daily. My prayers are for each member that his lamp will be well filled and trimmed, with the light shining brightly.

Let us all be Zion builders. Let us pay our tithing and obey all the financial law. Let us remember God's mercy and blessings and serve him faithfully. Let us pray wholeheartedly, sincerely for each other. I love the hymn:

"Let us pray for another,
For the day is fading fast
And the night is growing darker,
While the scourge goes flaming past;
We can see it in the darkness
Closing round our narrow way,
And the snares are growing thicker;
For each other let us pray.

"Pray in faith, and pray unceasing,
To the God we love and trust,
For our prayers are much availing
If we walk upright and just.
Be not weary of exhorting,
Heed the lesson of each day;
And that we may be unwavering,
For each other let us pray."

Southeastern Illinois Priesthood Conference

Discussion of Ministerial Duties Has Big Place in Program

One of the most outstanding events of recent years took place at Mount Vernon, Illinois, Sunday, June 24, in the form of a priesthood conference. The conference was presided over by District President Ernest Roberson, who was assisted by his counselors, Charles Wesner and Louis DeSelms. Missionary L. G. Holloway was a guest of the conference and contributed some fine sermons.

The conference opened with the song, "Great and Marvelous Are Thy Works." Brother Ernest Roberson extended greetings to those assembled and read the names of all the priesthood members in Southeastern Illinois District. Every man present answered roll call by standing until the entire list was read. Although some were absent, the percentage of those in attendance was high.

A tribute to those members of the priesthood who have died during the last few years was made by Elder Hillard Henson. This was followed by a silent prayer which was closed by a few audible words from Elder Charles Wesner, after which Ammon Roberson sang, "He Gave His Life for Me."

After these preliminaries the district president arose and with precision and force set forth the objectives of the conference. Brother Roberson has but recently accepted the responsibility of the presidency of this district.

Ammon Roberson then discussed the duties and responsibilities that attend the office of deacon. He handled his subject in an original and wholly efficient manner.

The work of the teacher was ably outlined by Arthur Mills, who attempts to teach by example as well as precept.

Brother Harry Henson, a young and zealous priest, discussed the duties and possibilities that attend that order of the priesthood to which he belongs.

Brother Charles Wesner talked of the varied duties and grave responsibilities of the branch president.

After the singing of "Consecration," prayer was offered by Brother Louis DeSelms, and the congregation was dismissed to be called together again at 2 p. m.

Following an excellent lunch, the afternoon session was opened by the singing of "Let Us Shake Off the Coals From Our Garments," which was followed by prayer and a special solo, sung by Sister Cora Brown.

The next forty minutes was occupied by Brother L. G. Holloway, whose address was directed especially to the young people. He has but recently come among these Saints, and already has made a definite place for himself in the hearts of all.

The group was then dismissed, to be reassembled in two separate groups. The members of the priesthood gathered in the basement where they enjoyed an address by Brother Holloway. The other group remained in the upper auditorium where they enjoyed a song festival, directed by Ammon Roberson, who was in charge of the music during the conference.

Brother Holloway was again the speaker in the evening, and his sermon was joyously received. A message written from the First Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric, especially for this conference, was read and much appreciated.

The conference was in every way a success and marks a high point in the experience of each person who attended.

Gladstone, Michigan

GLADSTONE, MICHIGAN, CHURCH

Sunday, June 17, was a memorable day for Saints of this congregation. Priest Edward R. Carter baptized seven candidates of Little Bay DeNoc. One of the candidates was a woman, eighty-three years old. Five of the number were the result of Brother Carter's preaching in the schoolhouse at Ford River every other Sunday during the winter, and the untiring efforts of Brother and Sister Wellman, of that community. This congregation is happy to welcome them to the branch.

An all-day service, June 24, proved to be most enjoyable, with District President Allen Schreur, present. Elders J. J. Ledsworth and Elmer Parks, of Lower Michigan, were also there.

Brother Schreur, in the unavoidable absence of Brother Heeton McKinnon, district commander, organized the Zion's Christian Legion there Saturday evening. The following officers were elected: Edward R. Carter, company commander; Gertrude Carter, secretary; Jessie Stowe, treasurer; Rex Stowe, director of solicitation; Orval King, director of socialization; Marian Rasmusson, director of publicity.

Sunday morning, the young people's prayer service at seven-thirty, which was well attended, was in charge of Brothers Ledsworth and Parks. The general prayer service at nine o'clock, was in charge of Brothers Schreur and Asker.

District President Allen Schreur was the morning speaker, and chose as his subject, "Checking Up." Immediately following the song service in the afternoon, Brother J. J. Ledsworth spoke on "Building." The confirmation service was then held, at which time the candidates baptized the preceding Sunday, were confirmed. A special musical number sung by Sisters Genevieve Rhode and Gertrude Carter, added much to the success of the day's activities.

San Bernardino, California

Sixteenth and G. Streets

This congregation was again saddened during the month of March by two deaths. Sister Elsie Wilson passed away on March 4, and on March 21, Brother Earl T. Draper, one of the members of the priesthood, passed away.

The home visiting director sponsored a visiting program during the month of March. The branch membership was divided in half with a member of the priesthood appointed as leader over each group. The first half of the membership would call on the other half under the direction of their leader and then the following week the first half would stay at home and receive visitors. This continued over a period of one month and the side making the most visits was treated to a supper by the losing side. A good time was had and many homes were visited that had never before been visited.

On Easter Sunday, following the Easter program, two were baptized by Elder Scannell. In the evening, an Easter cantata was presented by the choir.

The D. O. U. Class was in charge of our Mother's Day program and the sermon for the day was given by Pastor W. A. Teagarden. This D. O. U. Class, the organized young people's class, was invited to a wiener bake at the home of Sister Ina Warren, in Riverside, during the month of March and a few weeks later, they went over to Cucamonga, to the home of Brother Frank Van Fleet, for a social evening. The members of the class are a great help to the church school in their work of teaching and also in taking care of the worship programs once a month for the church school hour.

On May Day, the Blue Bird Girls with their leader, Sister Milla Ferguson, distributed baskets of flowers to the sick and shutins of our branch.

Saturday, May 19, the annual church school picnic was held at Lyle Creek Park. Games were enjoyed until about 5:30 p. m. when a basket lunch was served. About one hundred thirty were seated at the picnic tables.

On Sunday, May 20, D. B. Sorden, pastor of Central Los Angeles Branch, visited these Saints, bringing them news of the General Conference.

On Memorial Day, the young people met with the other young people of the district at Strawberry Flats, in the San Bernardino mountains, for an early morning prayer meeting and a picnic dinner and social time later.

Friday evening, June 1, and again on Sunday evening, June 3, the D. O. U. Class presented the play, "Whatever You Sow." A nice sum was realized by the class from the proceeds of this play which was applied towards their pledge made on the building fund.

The Oriole girls, under the supervision of their leader, Sister Dorothy Elkins have been very busy and are often joined by the intermediate boys classes in their social activities. The children's division also continues to increase in their attendance.

The women's departments is very busy preparing for the Harvest Festival to be held this fall, and under the supervision of Sister Olive Draper they look after the welfare of the unfortunate ones of the branch.

On Children's Day, five more were baptized following the worship service for the church school. This makes a total of thirteen baptized for the year to date.

More than three hundred railroad workers gathered at the Saints' church recently in the annual memorial services conducted by the "Big Four" brother-hoods. Brother W. A. Teagarden, pastor, gave the memorial address. Music both instrumental and vocal, was presented under the direction of Mrs. Stella Hodges; a quartet from the Saints' church at Los Angeles sang, and Mrs. Stearns gave a reading.

Summer Activities Keep Saints Busy

The La Da Sa Club met with Sisters Mary Slover, Nettie Kurtz, and Roxie Allen at the home of Sister Allen, May 1. A short Mother's Day program was given, and a basket of pink and white carnations was presented to Sister Clements, who was the oldest mother present, eighty-one years of age.

The men and children gathered in a grove near the house and enjoyed an old-fashioned wiener roast.

A surprise social was given at the home of Pastor O. C. Henson, May 5, in his honor, as he and his family were moving to their new home, at Owaneco, Illinois. A short program was held, after which refreshments were served.

Brother Henson preached his farewell sermon Sunday night, May 6. He and his family will be greatly missed by this congregation.

Elder William Clements has been chosen to fill the place as pastor, until the branch election.

Recent speakers have been Elders William Clements and Halleck Milner, and Priest Ancil Burroughs.

The women meet each Thursday for their weekly session. They have raked the church lawn, planted flowers, and bulbs, and are trying in many other ways to beautify the grounds.

The La Da Sa Club met June 5, with Sisters Rosetta Morris, Faye Burgess, and Marjorie Galbraith, at the home of Sister Galbraith. A play, "Mrs. Jenkins' Brilliant Idea," was given. A club song, composed by Sister Lizzie Burroughs, entitled, "Our Club Is Marching On," was sung. A duet by Sisters Agnes Vaughn and Roxie Allen, and a solo by Sister Clara Fleharty were sung. Five new members were added to the club membership.

A few Saints and friends gathered at the home of Brother and Sister T. J. Thompson, Wednesday evening, June 6. Several prayers were offered in behalf of Sister Thompson, who suffered a stroke of paralysis, about eight months ago. She has been confined to her home since that time.

A short memorial service was held Sunday, June 10, in honor of the old Caudle Schoolhouse, where this branch was first organized, ninety-one years ago. Elder Hilliard Henson gave the memorial address.

Priest Harry Henson preached an instructive sermon June 10, his subject being, "What Are You Giving in Exchange for Your Soul?"

An ice cream social was held June 26, to raise funds to help paint the church and buy lumber to lay out a new porch floor.

Several of the Saints gathered at the home of Sister Evaline Jones, June 27, and held prayer meeting. She has been confined to her home for two years or longer, and most of that time, to her bed.

June 21, the women's department gave a birthday dinner for Jennie Henson. An enjoyable time was spent.

Alva, Oklahoma

Rejoice Over Visit of Z. Z. Renfroe

Saints of this congregation were happy to have District President Z. Z. Renfroe, as their guest speaker on Children's Day. At the eleven o'clock hour he gave one of his splendid sermons.

A basket dinner was held at Hatfield Park where all had a wonderful time.

A baptismal service was held at two-thirty at the river. V. O. Campbell, the only candidate was baptized by Elder Renfroe. The confirmation service was held at the water's edge, by Elders B. F. Creal and Z. Z. Renfroe.

Elder Renfroe, the evening speaker, chose for his theme, "The Mystery of Godliness."

A number of the young people are planning to attend the district reunion, to be held at Canton, August 3 to 12.

Grand Rapids, Michigan

Zion's Christian Legion Progressing There

The Zion's Christian Legion, assisted by the women's department, gave a banquet at the church Friday, June 29. About one hundred and twenty were present, and helped to make the evening a success. Apostle D. T. Williams was the guest of honor, and principal speaker of the evening.

Bishop E. C. Evans gave a short talk and introduced Apostle Williams. Clyde Shotwell was the toastmaster. Other speakers were Elder W. F. Ryder, who gave the welcome address; Miss Louise Evans, who gave the toast to the local legion; Vern Waite, the local commander, who gave the response and Mrs. S. M. Neumon, who spoke for the women's department.

Two solos were sung by Blanche Cavanaugh and Gertrude Evans. The congregation joined in singing the legion song, and the closing prayer was offered by Brother A. F. Shotwell.

The Zion's Christian Legion in Grand Rapids, is progressing rapidly. There are six group captains, and each week one group has charge of the meeting. Friday has been set aside as legion night. At their last swimming party, the young people of Alto, McCords, and Belding were their guests.

Miss Elizabeth Howell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Howell, and Clyde Shotwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Shotwell, of Grand Rapids, were united in marriage, Sunday, June 3, at the church. Elder W. F. Ryder officiated. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Beatrice Howell, as maid of honor. Orville Shotwell attended his brother as best man.

Portsmouth-Nauvoo Branch

Nauvoo, Ohio

The summer months find the women's department of this branch most active. They have been sewing. A few weeks ago they cleared twenty-one dollars with an ice cream social. A three-act comedy presented at Nauvoo School, added to the money they are collecting, and on July 5, they entertained at the Lucasville Community Hall. These women are working to make a good payment on a lot on which this branch hopes to erect a church home. The lot has already been selected and a down payment made. Sister Nellie Rexroad is the women's leader.

Midweek prayer meetings have been dispensed with for a time, also a Friday night Bible class. Instead the men gather at the church lot where they are digging a basement thirty by forty feet. Elder Walter Culp is in charge and he and Elder O. A. Rexroad are making cement blocks with which to build the basement.

This lot is located on Russell Street and Columbia Avenue at Nauvoo. It measures 150 feet long, 82 feet front, and 36 foot rear, and is about three blocks from the State Highway and the same distance from the Old Town Church.

Houston, Texas

Sunday, July 1, was observed as rally day by the young people of Houston Branch. Baskets of lunch were brought along and immediately after church services, several cars of young people went out into the woods near town and spent a very pleasant afternoon.

A large group of Saints and friends held a picnic July 4 in the woods near the end of Fifteenth Street. The younger children greatly enjoyed wading in the bayou, while the others worked up an appetite playing volley ball. In the middle of the afternoon several ice cold watermelons appeared on the scene, and were immediately served.

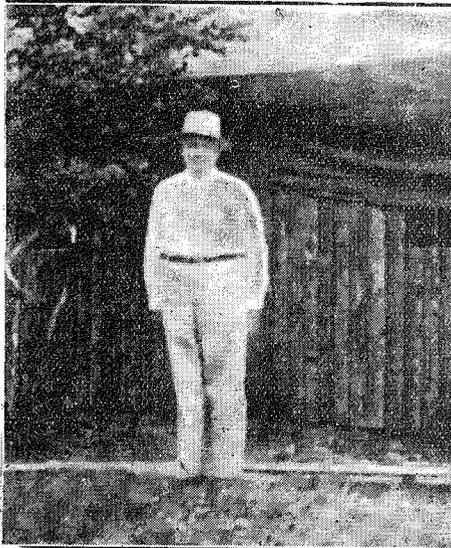

Brother C. R. DuBose has returned home from the Missouri Pacific Hospital, where he underwent an operation. He expects to resume his work before long.

Brother L. L. Hobbs is still in the hospital as a result of an airplane accident several weeks ago, in which he suffered fracture of both arms and one leg. He is improving satisfactorily, but will remain in the hospital for some time.

Many of the members are planning to attend the reunion at Hearne, commencing July 13.

Mr. Frank Wixsom

Mr. Wixsom is a figure closely associated with the approaching reunion at Edenville, Michigan, August 10 to 19. He has donated the use of his new auditorium to Central Michigan District for the reunion. A public-spirited man and friend, Mr. Wixsom is giving the use of the new buildings, the grounds, the grove, and playground to the Saints, who are asked to keep in mind the date of the reunion and to order their tents at once from Otto Bartlett, Midland, Michigan. Mr. Wixsom will hold his big log rolling contest on the same grounds August 28. The grounds and grove are eighteen miles northwest of Midland and eight miles southeast of Beaverton on M-30.

New Westminster, British Columbia

Union All-day Meeting With Vancouver Branch

Children's Day, June 10, was a day long to be remembered by the Saints of New Westminster and Vancouver Branches, when they assembled in a union all-day meeting at the church, corner of London and Tenth Streets.

Present for the ten o'clock session of the church school were Apostle and Sister E. J. Gleazer, who have recently taken up residence in Seattle, and District President and Sister Monte Lasater. Brother Norman Morrison, of Vancouver, presided and a splendid program was given by the children.

At eleven o'clock, Brother Miller, pastor of Vancouver Branch, baptized five children and two adults. Brother Gleazer delivered the charge to all church members, as well as to those who were at this time taking upon themselves the name of Christ.

The afternoon confirmation service was in charge of Brother Morrison, pastor of this congregation, and Elders Pope, Miller, Johnson, and McMullen. Donna, the infant daughter of Brother and Sister Theodore Wood, was blessed by Brothers Pope and Gleazer.

Supper, served by the women, was followed by a program sponsored by the young people of Vancouver Branch. Brother Edwin Spargo was the speaker of the hour.

At seven-thirty, Brother Gleazer spoke to an interested congregation on "Zion, the Need for Zion and Zion's Principles in the World Today."

As the Saints dispersed to their homes, one and all felt it was good to be "in the light" and experienced a stronger urge to walk humbly and faithfully before God.

Central Michigan Honors Elder Hubert Case

District Gathering Observes Culmination of Forty Years of Missionary Service

Members of Central Michigan District met at Beaverton, Saturday and Sunday, June 30, and July 1, in honor of the culmination of Elder Hubert Case's forty years in the missionary field.

He began his missionary work when he was but twenty-four years old. At this time he and his bride of a week went to the South Sea Islands for four years. He spent twenty-five years in Oklahoma, mostly among the Indians, and considerable time in Nebraska, Iowa, and Minnesota. Previous to his coming to Central Michigan he had spent two years in Detroit District. He has labored in this district for three years and has accomplished much in his quiet way. He has served faithfully and uncomplainingly in his many times of sacrifice. He carries the Spirit of God within his heart to spread to all who will accept.

Elder Case is leaving this district in August and although the Saints do not like to see him go, they rejoice with him that he can be nearer his companion who has sustained him through his many years of service.

Saturday night a banquet was held in the basement of the church, as the first meeting in Brother Case's honor. About one hundred and twenty were present. Harry Runkle, of Midland, acted as toastmaster for the occasion. The program consisted of talks given by Elder L. E. Grice, of Saginaw, Elder G. W. Burt, of Beaverton, and Elder Willis Schrock, of Beaverton. Also favorite songs were sung during the evening.

A large anniversary cake, bearing forty lighted candles was presented to Brother Case, and he was asked to talk concerning his work. In his talk he stressed the pleasure of service for the church, no sacrifice having been too great. However he feels that his wife has made the greater sacrifice in the many weeks and months she has spent alone while he has traveled in his work. As an urge to all present he expressed the wish that he had the strength to spend another forty years in the same work. His closing thought was that this meeting was not in his honor, but in honor of the work of the Lord.

This body sent a night letter to Sister Case, at Independence, Missouri, expressing its appreciation for her assistance in making his life a success.

Special honors were also conferred upon Elder G. W. Burt who has just recently celebrated his eighty-second birthday and who has served about thirty years in the missionary field.

The banquet was served by six young men and six young women dressed in white.

The peaceful spirit of the evening continued through the services on Sunday. The Spirit of the Lord was there in power making it an occasion to be long remembered as a day of peace and unity.

Sunday, at 9 a. m., the Saints of the district assembled in a prayer and testimony meeting which was dominated by the spirit of unity. About two hundred were in attendance, the theme being, "Make personal contributions." The Spirit of the Master was manifest throughout the service.

At eleven o'clock all were greatly pleased to have Brother Case as the speaker. His subject was, "Send Out Thy Light." At this meeting the district choir, directed by Harry Runkle, rendered two appropriate selections, "Send Out Thy Light," and "Remember Now Thy Creator."

At 1:30 p. m., the district orchestra played a variety of selections. Following this part of the program there were short talks concerning Zion's Christian Legion, by William Ash, divisional director of socialization, and Otto Bartlett, divisional treasurer for Central Michigan District. Elder Case gave a short talk about the reunion in Central Michigan which is to be held August 10 to 19 at Edenville.

At 3 p. m., a special sacrament service was held with about three hundred present. Elder Case was in charge, assisted by members of the district priesthood.

Following this was an ordination service at which time the following recommendations to the priesthood were approved by the district gathering: Leon Methner to the office of priest, Alvin Pendleton, priest, and Ray Rosevear, teacher.

Skiatook, Oklahoma

Cut Down Local Debt

With ninety members enrolled in the church school, this congregation is hoping to carry on. Good attendance is had at each meeting.

Children's Day, June 10, was appropriately celebrated. Brother Emmett Lancaster, under the direction of the Spirit, felt urged to visit Skiatook, and as Brother T. P. Greenwood was closing the church school, he stepped in the back door. Elder Lancaster was immediately announced as the morning speaker, and delivered a spiritual and inspiring sermon.

A nonmember family here attends the meetings, and is studying the church books. Brother Lancaster did not lack in words to tell them about the church.

Children's Day baptismal services were held in a joint meeting with Tulsa and Sperry branches, at Sperry. Two little girls, Myrtle Petty and Betty Staniford, were baptized. Elder Lancaster gave an interesting talk at this service.

This congregation is happy that its church debt is cut down to little over one hundred dollars, and members hope to have that wiped out soon.

Essex Dedicates Church

Ontario Saints Gather for Special Services

A day long looked forward to by the Saints of Essex, Ontario, arrived June 17, the day for the dedication of their attractive church home. A prayer service at 9:30 a. m. opened the day's activities, and this meeting, many affirmed, was the most spiritual they had ever witnessed. The gifts of the Spirit, prophecy, tongues, and interpretation of tongues, brought joy and the satisfaction that God still recognizes his people.

Bishop J. C. Dent, of London, officiated in the dedication service held at 2:30 in the afternoon, and other officials of the church and district together with numerous members from London and Detroit districts, gathered at the church home on Talbot Street to participate in the services.

The Essex Free Press prints a lengthy account of this service, and from it we take excerpts: "Promptly at two o'clock the pastor, Elder S. E. Mifflin, engaged the congregation in a song-fest of favorite hymns. The room was filled with the spirit of devotion and reverence when such soul-inspiring hymns as 'I Would Be True,' and 'Onward to Zion,' were sung. . . .

"A brief history of the branch at Essex and events leading up to it was read by Mrs. F. A. Smith, one of the charter members of the branch and a member of the church for a quarter of a century.

"To Bishop J. C. Dent was presented a large basket of cut flowers, a token of love and fellowship from the Windsor Branch, which he in turn presented to the pastor of Essex Church."

With Brother Dent in the stand were District Missionary George Njeim, Patriarch John Shields, and Pastor S. E. Mifflin. After the invocation, the pastor of the branch requested all members of Essex congregation to stand, and in their behalf presented to Bishop Dent the deed of the property and the key to the building. To this presentation Bishop Dent replied most fittingly. The dedicatory prayer was offered by Patriarch John Shields. Then Charles Robinson, custodian of the church property, was asked to come forward, and was presented the key with the charge to keep this place the house of God, clean and beautiful within and without and free from anything that will prevent the peace of God from being felt within its walls.

Musical numbers, according to the Essex Free Press, were vocal selections by Miss Nellie Andrew, of Windsor, and Miss Jones, of Amherstburg; duets by Miss Fern Wismer and Mrs. S. Trimble; a duet by two children, June Andrew and Lela Kendrick, and numbers by the Ridgetown quartet.

Basket lunch was served to all in a nearby park, and at seven-thirty Bishop J. C. Dent occupied the pulpit, challenging the Saints to keep the whole law of God.

Coldwater, Florida

Sacrament service each first Sunday of the month, Sunday school, and morning and evening preaching services are held regularly here with good attendance.

Members of this congregation were happy to have with them, June 14 and 15, Apostle M. A. McConley and Elder J. G. Halb, of Ohio. At six o'clock, Friday, four young people were baptized. The confirmation service was held later in the evening, Elders J. G. Halb, J. H. Barnes, C. T. West, and Apostle M. A. McConley officiating. Those baptized were Raymond Barnes, Janette Barnes, Frammel Wolfe, and Junior Willis.

Bishop E. N. McCall preached June 24, at the eleven o'clock hour, and also in the afternoon. Dinner was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calos Willis.

Independence, Kansas

Enjoy Visit of Amos T. Higdon

The Saints of this congregation have recently had the pleasure of having District President Amos T. Higdon with them. He joined them Wednesday evening in prayer meeting and stayed over Sunday evening, giving a series of priesthood lectures that were open to all.

Sunday they held an all-day meeting for the priesthood of the district. The young people and the adults were given a lecture on Church School Program by Brother Frank Kyser, at the ten o'clock

Eleven Baptized at Chetek Reunion

At two baptismal services eleven candidates were baptized during the Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota reunion held at Chetek, Wisconsin, June 30 to July 4.

Many were made happy by the splendid program of worship and class work of the reunion, and especially by the two-day visit of President F. M. Smith there.

Foes

"Refreshing sleep and vexing thoughts are deadly foes."

Humber Bay Celebrates Thirty-seventh Anniversary

Humber Bay Branch, Toronto District, celebrated its thirty-seventh anniversary with all-day services July 8. The day's program included short speeches by pioneer church workers in the community including Elder George Whitworth, first branch president, and Edward Whitworth. Patriarch John Shields, early missionary, was there and preached the evening sermon. He baptized Elder George Virgin, the first minister to carry the gospel message to Humber Bay.

On Being Saved

A great many people have been taught to believe that they can be saved in the Kingdom of God and only take fifty percent of what Jesus taught.—J. F. Curtis.

Oklahoma City Dedicates Church Building

Oklahoma City Branch, now numbering more than two hundred members, dedicated their church building with appropriate ceremonies the last Sunday of June, President F. M. Smith delivering the dedicatory sermon. Apostle R. S. Budd was there, also Elder A. E. Stoff, the new district president. Saints from many parts of the State went to Oklahoma City for the day. This branch was organized in 1916.

Imprisoned Possibilities

I am firmly convinced that there are frozen Niagaras today, that there are imprisoned possibilities today, that there are wonderful opportunities for that person, or those persons, who can make for himself—and he can make for himself—a place in the present day as men have in the past.—Doctor William H. Mansfield.

hour, the younger children going to the park for their regular classes.

Brother Higdon then preached a fine sermon, after which the congregation went to the Riverside park for a basket dinner. At two-thirty they went to the church for a priesthood meeting in charge of Brother Jones and Brother Higdon. This meeting was well attended, twenty-six of the priesthood of the district being present besides others of the Saints.

Independence Saints are trying to carry on. Though their number is small, it is their desire to go forward that they might be of service in building Zion.

Akron, Ohio

77 West Crozier Street

The Saints of Akron meet in their chapel each Sunday morning at nine-thirty, under the leadership of Elder E. M. Knight, branch president, and Brother J. C. Kriebel, church school director. Brother Knight has served as president of this congregation for the past nine years, and is true and faithful to his office. Brother Kriebel has served in his office for two and one half years, and has been absent only one Sunday.

Sunday morning, June 10, after the church school, a baptismal service was held. Sister Frances Stewart, branch chorister, opened the service with piano music. The candidates were Miles Lemerrick, Mrs. Capinger, and Otis Capinger. Immediately following, Elder Knight gave a charge to the candidates as well as to the congregation.

Confirmation service then took place and the candidates were confirmed under the hands of Elders E. G. Hammond, John McCoy, A. R. Manchester, and E. M. Knight.

Wednesday evening, Brother Clark, of Columbus, Ohio, was with this group of Saints, and delivered a fine talk.

This congregation was made sad to hear of the death of Sister Elenora Haynes, of Kirtland, Ohio. Several attended her funeral.

Grandma Kelsey is suffering with rheumatism and desires the prayers of the Saints in her behalf.

Azalia, Michigan

Ira B. Ferguson was ordained to the office of deacon, April 29, under the hands of District President Kenneth Green and Elder A. B. Smith.

Ralph Baisch was baptized June 10, by Brother Jesse Masten. The candidate was celebrating his twenty-second birthday.

A two-day meeting was held by the Azalia Saints, June 23 and 24. Brother David Dowker occupied the pulpit in the morning, and Brother A. B. Smith was the afternoon speaker, after which the Saints met on the river bank to witness the baptism of six young candidates.

Following this, the confirmation service was held and the candidates were confirmed by Elders Kenneth Green, A. B. Smith, William Leland, Clarence Holmes, and Clyde Gault. A generous portion of the Spirit was present to bless the occasion.

This congregation was saddened to hear of the death of Sister Mary K. Simkiss, who passed to her reward June 17.

Brother John McCrea, a member of the C. C. C. Camp, was home to visit his father and brother, July 1. Brother John walks six miles to attend church services at Pontiac.

Dunn Center, North Dakota

Peter Anderson Baptizes Twenty There in Two Years

Activities of Dunn Center Branch during the first half of the year have been confined mostly to church school, supervised by Chester Moffit, and preaching services each Sunday forenoon except the first Sunday of each month when communion service is held. The preaching has been done by Elder G. C. Adams, Chester Moffit, branch deacon, and Branch President Lester H. Anderson.

During the winter the young people sponsored a sewing club which accomplished much good. They also provided for a program for Mother's Day.

The missionary to North Dakota, Elder P. T. Anderson, visited the branch during June. On June 17 he baptized two children, Elmo Dinehart and Violet Odren. This makes twenty baptisms that have been performed by Elder Anderson at Dunn Center in two years. His instructive sermons were enjoyed by both Saints and friends.

About eighteen members from Dunn Center attended the North Dakota Reunion near Minot. Brother Lewis Dinehart took his truck which made it possible for many to go. Everyone reported a spiritual reunion, and was greatly strengthened.

Vancleave, Mississippi

In addition to the church school, preaching services in the morning and evening are now held. Regular prayer meetings are held on Wednesday evenings. Choir practice comes once a week, two young men accompanying with violin and guitar.

The Oriole Club is fully organized and are doing fine work. They gave a Mother Goose social Saturday evening, June 13, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Jennings, which proved to be a success.

The young people, under the leadership of Bessie Mae McMillan, are pressing forward. They have organized three classes, the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. They also have a lively volley ball team. They meet each Saturday, and after spending forty-five minutes in study, they have a program, which is followed by recreation. The programs are sponsored by the leaders of the adult department, the young people's department, and the women's department.

Several young members are planning to attend the young people's convention, which will be held at Mobile.

Moline, Illinois

Six Young People Baptized

An interesting Children's Day program was held June 24, at the church, with a large congregation present. The younger children were in charge and gave the program. Elder E. R. Davis was present and occupied during the morning preaching hour. At this service, little Marilyn Joyce Boynton, daughter of John and Gladys Boynton, was blessed.

In the afternoon and evening, a baptismal and confirmation service was held. Six young people, Dorothy Martens, Lahoma Davis, Doris Cox, Kenneth and Keith Lane, and Bobby Giles were baptized in the waters of the Mississippi River by E. R. Davis.

Elders H. R. Cady, J. W. Gilbert, H. H. Martens and A. C. Needham officiated at the confirmation service at the church.

A fine district conference was held at Rock Island in June. These Saints met for the first time their new missionary, Elder R. E. Davey, and enjoyed his convincing sermons and class work.

The Rock Island young people sponsored an all-day picnic on Memorial Day, for all members of the district who cared to attend.

The young people of Joy, sponsored a similar meeting at the Aledo Fair grounds, July 4, which proved equally enjoyable.

Miss Phyllis Nelson and Fritz Stiegel, a priest of this congregation, were united in marriage, May 5, at the home of the bride's mother. This couple has the best wishes of the Saints.

Miss Rose Everetts and Hale Cady were married April 22, at the church, following the Sunday morning preaching hour.

A shower was given these young people by the members of the branch.

At the sacrament service, July 1, little Flora Gay, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Coffman, was blessed.

Brother and Sister W. S. Woodward are new members of this branch. A newly organized women's class appreciates the opportunity of having Sister Bertha for their teacher. They are studying "Jesus and His Message," by Christiana Salyards.

The women's department met each Thursday, until the extreme heat caused them to discontinue their gatherings for a short time. They, with Sister Florence

Cady, as their teacher, have just completed an interesting study of "What Latter Day Saints Believe About God," by President Elbert A. Smith. Their next book will be "What Latter Day Saints Believe About Immortality," also by Brother Smith.

Humber Bay Branch Observes Thirty-seventh Anniversary

Former Workers There—Early Day Experiences Are Re-told

On Sunday, July 8, Humber Bay Branch, of Toronto District, held all-day services in celebration of the thirty-seventh anniversary of its organization. Prayer service convened from 9:30 a. m. to 11 in charge of Elders Ernest Rowett, the pastor, John Shields, one of the early missionaries in this vicinity, and Bishop A. F. McLean, of Toronto.

During the regular Sunday school hour at eleven, the juniors attended class work in the Sunday school room at the rear of the building while the adults listened to several short speeches by those who have had charge of the Sunday school activities in this branch since its inception.

Elder James Pycoc, former missionary and member of this congregation, had charge of the 3 p. m. service. A short history of Humber Bay Branch was read by Elsie Whitworth Seed. Several short speeches were also given by pioneer church workers in this community including Elder George Whitworth and Edward Whitworth, two of the original six members of this branch. Elder George Whitworth, the first branch president, served in this office for seventeen years.

Patriarch John Shields was the speaker at the 7 p. m. service. He repeated the story of his conversion to the Latter Day Saint faith and of the numerous persecutions endured by the Saints in the early days. However, the heavenly Father protected the Saints when they humbled themselves and served him faithfully. Brother Shields had the unique distinction of baptizing Elder George Virgin, the first minister to carry the gospel message to Humber Bay. While the oblation was being received, Myrtle Whitworth and Cyril Armstrong sang an appropriate duet.

A resolution was passed during the day that a letter of thanks be sent to Mary Quarrie, of Guelph, Ontario, (formerly Mary Stevens, of Humber Bay). This young woman introduced Brother Virgin in this community which resulted in the organization of the Humber Bay Branch. The Saints deeply regretted her inability, through ill health, to attend the anniversary services.

Visiting Saints attended the services from Toronto, Woodbridge, Warton, Harriston, and Port Elgin. The weather was ideal and much spiritual help was received by those in attendance.

Seventy Years in the Church

Lewis M. Walters, now a member of the Tabernacle Branch, Columbus, Ohio, has belonged to the church for seventy years. He celebrated his eightieth birthday July 16, by writing to the Herald a strong testimony to the truthfulness of the gospel. "As the years have come and gone," he says, "my testimony to the truthfulness of the church and gospel grows stronger."

Brother Walters was baptized in September, 1864, by Elder Henry Green at Syracuse, Ohio, and was ordained a priest in 1876. For thirty years he lived in isolation, but always God has blessed him wonderfully. He has been a Herald subscriber since 1875.

Light of the World

I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.—Jesus.

Isolated Ones Seek Prayers

Brother and Sister Gus H. Richards, of Bourbon, Missouri, Star Route, ask the prayers of the Saints. For fifteen years they have been isolated, and they would like to communicate with members of the church, especially those in Bates County and Springfield.

Sister Estella Thomas, of Copen, West Virginia, wishes us to remember in prayer her son, Harry Godfrey.

Sister Hilda Wilson, of Goodridge, Minnesota, asks prayers for herself and her family.

Attitude of Criticism

If we are not careful we become more interested in ferreting out ugliness than in appropriating beauty. The tenor of our age is critical. We have been trying to "debunk" our great men. We have been tracing down the mistakes and wrongs of yesterday. We like to pick things and people to pieces. Someone has said that the disease of our day is "the paralysis of analysis." And the tragedy is this, that we see life as travelers see our American cities from a railroad train, at their worst, because railroads usually go through the ugliest districts of the city. Just so the attitude of criticism ends up with a total vision of side streets, alleys and dirty back yards.—Frank B. Fagerburg in "The Sin of Being Ordinary."

Independence

Outdoor missionary services on week nights are combining with the Sunday night service at the Campus to sound the gospel call among the friends and neighbors of Saints. Friday night marked the close of a highly helpful series conducted for two weeks on the lawn of H. Gunion. Patriarch Ammon White and Elder J. W. A. Bailey spoke on alternate nights. Average attendance was eighty. By request Brother Bailey's subject was the Book of Mormon. Other missionary speakers of the summer months include Elder A. M. Chase and Elder R. D. Weaver.

Last Sunday night at the Campus, President Elbert A. Smith continued his series of sermons, speaking on "Baptism." Walnut Park congregation were guests of the evening, and with Brother Smith in the stand were John F. Sheehy, pastor in Zion, and Frank McDonald, pastor at Walnut Park. Special music was furnished by a quartet, Mrs. Nina G. Smith, Mrs. Velma Brocaw Nunn, George Anway, and John Sheehy.

Stone Church

Elder Leonard Lea is in the midst of a series of three Sunday morning sermons at the Stone Church. Last Sunday his subject was "James." On the previous Sunday he presented "Peter," and next Sunday morning he will conclude with "John." These three disciples composed the inner circle of Jesus' friends. To them were given special experiences in and testimony of the work of the Master.

In spite of intensely warm weather Brother Lea's listeners are giving interested attention. Music is furnished by the Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig. The choir is faithfully furnishing the musical program each Sunday morning, and its contribution to the service is broadcast over KMBC.

The Stone Church Boys' Choir, directed by J. Glenn Fairbanks, will give a concert Friday night, July 27, in the Stone Church. A collection will be taken to help defray expenses on their proposed visit to the World's Fair.

"Civic Problems as They Relate to the City of Independence" is the discussion theme now being considered by the I. X. L. Class, Elder Ammon White acting as teacher. This unit of the church school meets at Bartholomew Hall Sunday morning at 9:30.

The Stone Church boys' volley ball team won the boys' volley ball tournament at the Campus last Tuesday night, and the Stone Church girls team were also victors in the girls' tournament.

Second Church

Pastor Will Inman was in charge of the eleven o'clock hour Sunday. Ivan Dillee, a Graceland graduate, was the speaker, choosing for his subject, "Our Ways of Worship Compared With Those of Ancient Times." To special numbers were sung by the quartet.

Gordon Cable was in charge of the junior service. The speaker, Kenneth Morford, chose for his subject, "God Given Gifts and How We Should Use Them." A vocal duet was sung by Frances Freeman and Alberta Queen, after which a two-act play was presented. The young people are giving an ice cream social Monday evening, July 30.

Enoch Hill Church

Monday evening, July 16, forty young people went to Lake Lotawana and spent a pleasant evening. Tuesday, they participated in the volley ball tournament. An encouraging report has come from their Wednesday evening prayer services. Attendance and interest are increasing.

Services Sunday were well attended. Elder H. E. Winegar's class was in charge of the worship period during the church school. Jewell Allen played a piano solo. Elder Joseph Martin gave a talk, and a quartet sang, "O, for a Faith."

Elder A. M. Chase was the morning speaker, and the young ladies' quartet furnished special music.

Spring Branch Church

The theme of the church school hour Sunday morning was "The Church in Early Days." The pastor, M. C. Jacobsen, read the twenty-fourth chapter of the Young People's Church History. At the close of the class study, Brother Jesse Smith gave a review of important events that took place in the early church in the month of July.

The choir furnished special numbers at the morning preaching hour. Elder Leonard White was in charge, and Apostle J. F. Curtis was the speaker.

At the South Group meeting Wednesday evening, a preaching service was held. Brother Robert Fish was the speaker.

The young people are active. They have organized a girls' and boys' volley ball team. In order to be members of the team they must attend at least three Sundays out of four and be a member of the church school.

East Independence Church

At the women's department meeting last week Bessie VanDyke gave a piano solo and Doris and Ona Piper contributed a musical reading, accompanied by Nina Austin.

The Sunday school, Sunday morning, was in charge of Clare Austin and Vern Spease.

Elders Frank Minton and Harry Friend were in charge of the eleven o'clock hour. The choir sang "Hark, the Voice of Jesus Calling." The speaker was Elder Gerald G. Phillips, of Blue Springs, Missouri. He read Proverbs 14: 23 for his Scripture reading, and his talk was mostly for the parents concerning the rearing of their children.

Santa Rosa, California

The Saints met at 9:15 a. m., Sunday, June 9, Children's Day, and drove out about a mile east of the city to the Santa Rosa Creek. There Pastor Herbert E. Walker baptized Walter and Frederick Budworth and Darrell and Lorraine Butts. Elder and Sister E. C. Burdick and Mr. and Sister Duncan and daughter, drove over from Sacramento and assisted in the services. After the baptismal service, all drove back to the hall, and the children were confirmed by Elders E. C. Burdick and Herbert E. Walker. The Tenth Legion also took part in this meeting, receiving their cards of membership.

Elder Burdick preached an inspiring sermon at 2 p. m. Sister Burdick sang a special solo.

Brother and Sister Ben Budworth, of Sebastopol, drove to Los Angeles, June 12, at the death of Sister Budworth's mother, Sister Klein. Sister Klein has visited this branch every summer for a number of years, and was loved by all.

Brother Ben Taylor, who has been dangerously ill for several weeks, is now on the way to recovery and able to sit up each day.

Sister Helen Fisher, aged eighty-five, who lives at Windsor, fell and fractured her ribs a week ago, and is now confined in the hospital. Sister Fisher has been active and well up to this time.

Sister Bell Wheeler and Sister Minnie Misener celebrated their birthdays together this week at a picnic at Armstrong Woods.

Tacoma, Washington

Three Family Circles Complete in the Gospel

Tacoma Branch was recently granted another spiritual feast. On Tuesday morning, June 26, at six-thirty, they had the privilege of witnessing the baptism of three men, all fathers, and all completing family circles. One of these the members had been praying for years, that he might decide to become one of them. These brothers are: Ray Stewart, Walter Sprague, and Alvin Cox.

The following Sunday morning being July 1, and communion Sunday, all came fasting and praying and God in his great goodness, granted them a Pentecostal shower such as those experienced in the early days of the church.

In the evening the confirmation of the three candidates took place, intermingled with appropriate songs and music, given by the capable young people's department, with a charge to the new members by Pastor J. B. Snyder; the charge to the congregation by Brother P. P. Reed, of Puyallup. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers. Through this service also, the Spirit of God was present with power and all felt like new members in Christ Jesus.

Holden Stake

Blue Springs, Missouri

Saints of this congregation assembled at the church, June 3, to renew their covenant with the Master. In the evening there was a special number sung by the girl's quartet, "Throw Out the Life Line," also a piano solo by Anna Shippy. Pastor J. T. Smith was the speaker. He chose for his theme, "A Well of Living Water."

A large group of the young people went to Holden, on the second Sunday, to attend the conference.

At this time R. J. Stark was the speaker, choosing for his subject, "Examine Yourselves Whether You Are in the Faith." In the evening a special piano solo was rendered by Louise Sarratt, also a number by the quartet, "What Can You Do for Jesus?" C. A. Joice was the speaker, choosing his text from Job 31:6.

Elder Gerald G. Phillips was the speaker June 17, choosing as his subject, "Father," in honor of Father's Day. At this time a duet, "The Lord Is Thy Light," was sung by Alice Campbell and Bessie Joice.

Children's Day was observed the last Sunday of the month. The Nace family, and the Sarratt family, of Independence, were guests for the day. Brother Orlando Nace directed the orchestra. Brother Sarratt was the speaker, and he spoke especially to the children on "Right and Wrong Thinking." Immediately following the services, two children were baptized by Elder Gerald G. Phillips. The candidates were Alleta Story and Donald Grubb. They were confirmed under the hands of J. T. Smith and R. J. Stark.

Stake President Amos E. Allen and Elder Earl Higdon attended the Wednesday evening prayer service.

Elder R. J. Stark was the evening speaker recently. His theme was, "Will Sincerity Save Humanity?" A clarinet and piano duet was given by Dorothy Hershman and Juanita Campbell.

Francis Williamson, superintendent of the primary department, has been confined to her bed for over a month. She is much improved. Her father, who was severely injured by a mad bull, is also much improved.

Grandview, Missouri

Brother P. May gave his first lecture, showing slides, May 6, which were both educational and entertaining. His efforts are appreciated by the Saints.

Mother's Day was well carried out with appropriate programs. Mrs. Jane Martin was in charge of the children's performance. Excellent services were held Children's Day. There were no baptisms, but the Spirit of God was manifest throughout the day.

Charles Martin and family, are motoring to Michigan, with Brother Martin's mother. She has been visiting her two sons, Charles and Ben, in this congregation with also other relatives in Kansas City.

Sister Charles Taylor is again able to attend church services. She has been confined to her home most of the winter.

The young people enjoyed the convention at Blue Springs, spending almost the entire day there.

A large group from this congregation attended the Holden stake conference. Grandview extends hearty invitation to all officers of the stake.

An ice cream social was sponsored by the young people, June 21. They are trying to help the women's department raise funds for buying Hymnals for church use.

Home-coming services, July 22, brought together a crowd of old friends who enjoyed all meetings of the day and a basket dinner at noon.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Growing Branch Dedicates Church Building

Sunday, June 24, the church building at Oklahoma City was dedicated. President F. M. Smith was present and delivered the dedicatory sermon. Apostle R. S. Budd, missionary in charge, and Elder A. E. Stoff, the new district president, were also present and took part in the services of the day. Many Saints from all over the State made the trip to Oklahoma City to attend the dedicatory service and hear the words of counsel and comfort from our President and Prophet.

In order that the most good might be derived from the visit of President Smith, Apostle Budd and Elder Stoff, the entire day was spent at the church in the different services. At eight o'clock in the morning there was a prayer meeting for both young and old in charge of Brother Stoff. Apostle R. S. Budd preached at nine-forty-five o'clock. The dedicatory service was at eleven o'clock, President F. M. Smith delivering the sermon. Luncheon was served at noon by the women's department. At two-thirty o'clock in the afternoon there was an ordination service, in charge of President F. M. Smith, at which time Elder E. L. Kemp, pastor of our branch, was ordained a high priest and Brother Ralph Vickery, one of the young men of our branch, was ordained a priest by Apostle Budd and Elder Stoff. President F. M. Smith delivered the night sermon.

The Oklahoma City Branch has made remarkable progress since its organization February 20, 1916, at which time there were only a very few members. The Saints purchased a church on the corner of Lottie and Seventh Streets, which was dedicated November 12, 1916. Brother R. M. Maloney was the first branch president.

Due to the need for a larger building because of the growth in membership and the need for a more desirable location, a building was purchased located at the corner of Shartel and Eleventh Streets.

The membership of the branch has continued to grow until they now have over two hundred members. The purchasing of the new church was made possible through the consecrated efforts of individual members, the different departments and especially the operation of a large dining hall at the State Fairs in previous years, sponsored by the women's department and assisted by the entire branch membership.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Church, Rinehard and Twenty-second Street

A splendid spirit was present at the sacrament service, June 3, and all who attended felt encouraged to press onward.

Visitors during the month were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wigton and daughter, of Roseville, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Burke, of Circleville, Ohio, Mrs. William George, of Kirtland, and District President A. E. Anderton.

An appropriate Children's Day program was held at the church June 10.

The women's department met June 14, in the social room of the church. The meeting was opened with the singing of "Consecration." A paper, "Brotherly Kindness," was written by Nelle Swanson and read by Vassie Sheets.

Three young members of this congregation graduated from high school this year. They are Marie Wemlinger, Eloise Brush, and Kathleen Swisher. They have the best wishes of the members of their branch.

Miss Norma Anne Kirkendall won a scholarship for a summer term of music at Capital University.

Recent sermons have been very instructive and the following men were speakers, Bishop H. E. French, Elders G. H. Kirkendall, A. H. Nieman, and R. E. Madden, Patriarch J. E. Matthews, and Priest Harry J. Hoffman.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington Streets

Children's Day in Ottumwa, was celebrated in a novel way, the children being guests of honor instead of participating in the program as usual. The adults wore flowers in their honor, and the guests were ushered into reserved seats. They were then entertained by special numbers suitable to the occasion. Dorothy Goodwin and William Davis were presented Bibles and Lucille Potter and Janice Santee, New Testaments, from their teacher, Sister Alice Goodwin, as rewards for a year's record attendance.

Brother Myron Lapoint made the presentation. Brother and Sister E. R. Davis were present for part of the day. Brother Davis, district president, brought the morning message which was very fitting.

An impressive ordination service was held here last spring, when Alfred Goodwin was ordained to the office of priest and Will Williams, to the office of deacon, by Elder F. T. Mussell, president of Nauvoo District. This followed a two-week series of labor and effective prayer and preaching services by Brother Mussell.

Two years ago, the attendance at this branch was from twelve to fifteen members, but now they have had an average attendance of forty-four for the last five consecutive Sundays.

Rock Island District Convention

Program Gives Attention to Young People, Priesthood, and Women's Department

Nearly four hundred people attended the annual district young people's convention held at Rock Island, Illinois, June 15 to 17. Apostle J. F. Garver, and Missionary R. E. Davey were the visiting speakers. Members were very happy to become acquainted with the new missionary, and anticipate more lengthy visits later in the year.

The convention opened Friday evening with a program to which numbers were contributed from several branches. Matherville girls presented a pantomime, "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning," which was especially appreciated. A piano duet by Dick and Dorothy Martins, and a reading by Evelyn Eckright were enjoyable contributions from Moline branch. Ruth Benson, of Davenport, also gave a pleasing reading. In the interests of Nauvoo camp they had splendid talks by Myrna Jane and Mark Holmes, of Joy, Thomas Beil, of Clinton, and Helen Martens, of Moline. Thomas Beil also gave an excellent piano number. Rock Island orchestra rendered several good numbers under the direction of Leo Murphy, and the Rock Island Dramatic Club presented a two-act play, "The Discovery," by Winifred Stiegel.

On Saturday morning a prayer service was followed by a study hour in which Brother R. E. Davey led in the discussion of the "Fundamentals of Our Belief."

Saturday afternoon a short business session was held. More than thirty baptisms have been reported since last conference, and the present district membership is approximately 1,735. For the first five months of 1934, they have contributed $1,225.46 in tithes and offerings which amount is an increase of $536.52 over this period for last year. In the district fund they have a total of $472.36, including $376.28 in the building and loan fund.

For the young people's organization a council was provided which consists of the president of the young people and their supervisor from each branch, with the district president and district supervisor of religious education sitting as ex officio members. This council may meet at each conference and elect their own officers.

After the conference session the young people enjoyed a period of recreation, Thomas Beil, president of the young people's organization, in charge.

Saturday evening they were addressed by Apostle J. F. Garver who gave a lecture on the "Unused Talent," with the text: "To him who hath shall be given, and to him who hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

Sunday morning the young people met for early morning prayer service at Long View Park with Brother Davey, and Brother Thomas Beil in charge. The adults met at the Masonic hall, for the church was not large enough to accommodate the number attending the Sunday services. At the close of the prayer service an impressive ordination was witnessed by a large congregation. Brother Russel Shippy, of Oelwein, Iowa, was ordained to the office of priest under the hands of Missionary R. E. Davey and Elder George McFarlane. Howard L. Grapes, of Waterloo, Iowa, was ordained to the office of deacon by Elders C. A. Beil and William Wood. The charge was presented by Apostle Garver.

Following the ordinations a court of honor or graduation service was held by the Zion Order of Noblemen. Members of this young people's organization have been diligent in their preparation for this graduation into the higher grades, or degrees, which represent a definite course of study and social activities required for the promotion. Noblemen from Millersburg, Rock Island, Savanna, and Joy were present, and sixteen new members were presented to the court; twelve were graduated into the Student Nobleman degree, and four were honored with the Branch Nobleman degree. Diplomas of achievement were presented and sponsors were chosen for the new noblemen. Elders L. A. White, director of church school at Rock Island; F. C. Bevan, former missionary, and John C. Stiegel, district supervisor of religious education, presided at the court of honor. This movement among the young people was designed to stimulate intensive study and active participation in the service of the church. It has met with hearty response from the young people.

Apostle Garver presented a stirring sermon at the eleven o'clock hour. "God's word must be fulfilled," was the theme upon which he based his remarks.

The young people enjoyed a basket dinner in the lower auditorium of the church, and many of the adults congregated at Long View Park for their noon lunch since no meals were served at the church on Sunday.

Sunday afternoon a priesthood meeting was held with Apostle Garver addressing the priesthood on topics of general interest to them in their work. At the same hour Sister Bertha Constance Woodward conducted a class which was much enjoyed by the women.

Sunday evening they enjoyed hearing the first lecture by Missionary R. E. Davey. "The Need of Zion," was his theme.

Borger, Texas

Borger Saints drove to Pampa, Texas, and held their first Wednesday night prayer service at the home of Brother and Sister R. E. Phillips. The group plans to continue these prayer services every Wednesday night.

This group is to hold an all-day baptismal service at Amarillo, July 25, when Sam Chestnut will unite with the church. An elder from a Colorado branch is to officiate in this ordination.

Isolated Saints living in or near Amarillo, Panhandle, Pampa, White Deer, Sterrett, or Dumas, who wish to visit or become one with this group of Saints, may get in touch with them through L. A. Johnson, Box 162, Borger, Texas.

Owen Sound District Reunion

Large Attendance—Full Program—Good Interest

The annual reunion and conference of Owen Sound District were held at Port Elgin July 1 to 8. Attendance was much larger than in other years, which augurs well for the interest district officers have taken in the reunion. There were members from Independence, Missouri, Detroit, Sarnia, Akron, Stratford, Manitoulin Island, Sault Ste Marie, Ontario, and various other points.

The reunion commenced each morning with prayer service. Two young people's prayer meetings were held, the first in the grove a short distance from the dining hall, in charge of Elder H. A. Dayton and Elder Ben Hewitt. There was a good degree of the Spirit felt at this meeting and many testimonies were given. The second young people's prayer service was held 7 a. m. Sunday, in the church, in charge of Elder Ben Hewitt and Apostle D. T. Williams.

Two young men were ordained to the ministry under the hands of Apostle D. T. Williams and Elder W. I. Fligg. Arthur Dunn, of Fergus, was ordained to the office of priest and Allan Mortimer, of Elora, a grandson of Elder J. L. Mortimer one of the old-time missionaries, to the office of teacher.

Following the prayer services, class work commenced. The first class was taken by Apostle Williams on "Aims and Object of Zion's Christian Legion." The second period by Elder Hewitt, B. A.,

Toronto, was on "Stewardship." The third period by Elder J. C. Mottashed, of Detroit, was on financial law as related to the building of Zion. While the adult class periods were in progress, the children's class work was ably conducted by Sister B. Hewitt, assisted by Sisters R. J. Farthing, Lela May, and E. Brechin. Attendance at all classes was excellent.

The afternoons of the reunion were spent playing soft ball, volley ball and swimming. Some of the older folks enjoyed pitching horse-shoes.

Every evening preaching services were held, the following speakers being used, Apostle Williams, Elders W. I. Fligg, J. C. Mottashed, and Percy Farrow. Other speakers that were used on the two Sundays of reunion were Elders James Morrison, of Owen Sound, and G. C. Thomlinson, of Saint Marys.

Sister J. C. Mottashed, of Detroit, conducted a meeting for the women present, in connection with the activities of the women's work group. On the last Sunday of the reunion much pleasure was created by the attendance of Sister Agnes McPhail, M. P., for South East Grey. Sister McPhail was asked to give an address to which she consented, and at 4 p. m. a large number assembled in the church to listen to her talk on world conditions. Her address was much appreciated by all as she gave a better understanding to those present of some of the outstanding conditions in the world, and what she considered, to be the solution of the same.

On Saturday, July 7, the annual district conference convened. Several problems were brought before the body. Much discussion was entered into in regard to the dividing of the district. This matter was eventually laid over for consideration to be given by the branches in the northern part of the district. Another point of interest was the reaffirming of a district resolution with regard to the silencing of men in the ministry who may be using tobacco and strong drink.

At the election of the officers, Elder H. A. Dayton was returned as district president, with Elders Benson Belrose and Fred McLean as counselors. The remaining officers of the district were returned to office with the exception of Elder R. J. Wilcox, district secretary, who stated that he would prefer to see some of the young people placed in this office. This resulted in the election of Sister E. Brechin of Sault Ste Marie, Ontario, who is quite capable of successfully filling this office. Owing to the district deciding to organize the Zion's Christian Legion, they find themselves the first district in Canada to create such an organization. This will mean that eventually all branches of the district will be organized in this worthy cause.

A new venture with regard to this reunion was the instituting of free meals. This proved a success, in that it was the means of doubling the attendance throughout the whole period of the reunion. Provision for these free meals were made by the donating of money and provisions by the branches of the district, and while some did not help, other branches responded nobly. This same venture will be carried on next year.

A concert was held Saturday evening, in charge of the district chorister, George Furniss. At this program the children showed wonderful results from the work of Sister Hewitt and her helpers.

North Star Branch

Underwood, Iowa

The month of June was eventful for this branch. First came an exceptionally fine representation at the Children's Day program, June 10. The program at eleven o'clock had as main features a sermon by Elder E. Y. Hunker and a pageant, "The Children's Hour," directed by various class leaders. The junior choir uniformed in white capes, formed the background for the younger performers and sang the songs of the pageant.

The last Sunday of the month was set aside by district officers for an all-day meeting. Officers and speakers present were Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith; Bishop W. T. Wellman, of Omaha; Patriarch J. A. Hansen, and Elders Peter Larsen, Carl Self, George Beatty, and O. A. Currie. The morning worship hour was led by Elder O. A. Currie.

At the eleven o'clock service the junior choir marched in singing, "Israel, Israel, God Is Calling," and taking the platform, sang with the congregation the opening hymn. Their special number was "Come Unto Me," and they were directed by Mrs. David Damitz.

All who could remained for a basket dinner on the church lawn, and in spite of unusually warm weather, many stayed for the afternoon service. Patriarch F. A. Smith spoke on the essentials of Zion building, and music was furnished by local musicians.

The last few days of June were saddened by the passing of a loved and honored worker in the branch, Brother Karl Klopping, who served as a teacher. His patience and kindly deeds will long be remembered by those to whom he ministered. Elder E. Y. Hunker delivered the funeral sermon July 1, to a crowd of five hundred relatives and friends. Brother Klopping's grand niece, Ardis Scott, sang, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and was assisted by Elmer Johnson in the remaining songs of the service.

Recently the Junior League consisting of the junior and intermediate classes, were organized under the leadership of Mrs. David Damitz. Junior choir work is their specialty, and they have been busy making their white cape uniforms for which they helped to pay by selling cold drinks. There are fifteen regular members. Their activities for the summer include a church lawn party to which they will invite friends outside the church, kitten ball games with juniors of neighboring branches. At Christmas they will present a sacred play. Their leader is preparing a set-up in junior stewardships which will soon be presented to the group for adoption.

Different groups within the branch have been endeavoring to raise money for a church basement. The women's department gave a waffle supper which was patronized by the community. The young people assisted in the project by presenting a play, "Two Days to Marry," under the direction of Helen Carr, a teacher in the local schools. Attendance was large and a fine sum was cleared. Sister Carr plans to present another play this fall with the help of the young people.

Kennett, Missouri

The three groups of Saints in this community assembled with the central group at an outdoor meeting place for special services on recent Monday and Tuesday nights. With them met Elders J. Charles May, Walter Christensen, W. E. Haden, and Apostle John F. Garver. On both nights an outpouring of God's Holy Spirit was witnessed, and everyone rejoiced. Apostle Garver was the Monday speaker.

A splendid spirit was manifested by the building committee and the entire membership when Brother Garver presented his recommendation with regard to the building site. Votes throughout the meeting were unanimous.

Those who know Brother J. Charles May can readily understand how his music was enjoyed. Each elder added to the success of the meetings.

The three groups met July 4, for a union picnic. The young people from each group presented a program and games were played.

Chatham, Ontario

Welcome Elder George Njeim and Bride

Sunday, June 17, Elder D. J. Williams preached his farewell sermon, which brought to a close over four years of successful labor in this city. He has been assisted throughout his term by his faithful companion, who has served as leader of the women. Sister Williams is convalescing from a serious operation, which left her in a weakened condition. This couple have the best wishes of the Saints.

Apostle D. T. Williams gave a very inspiring sermon, Sunday morning, June 24.

Children's Day was observed June 24. Apostle D. T. Williams gave an impressive challenge to the candidates for baptism, who with the congregation were assembled around the font. Those baptized were Billie Boyde, Erwin Chand-lier, Marion Mack, Elsie Stenton, Maurice Gurney, and Jessie Gurney. Elders R. Wood and R. H. Jones officiated. The confirmation service was in the evening. Elder V. E. Pritchard, R. Wood, and R. H. Jones assisted in the confirmation.

Monday evening, July 9, the Saints met at the church to welcome their missionary, Elder George Njeim and his bride. Following the remarks of the chairman, Elder V. E. Pritchard, an address of welcome was read by Brother Ivan Pritchard, in behalf of Brother and Sister Njeim. The pleasing manner in which both made reply won favor for them and many admirers among their newly-found friends. Contests and stunts took up the greater part of the evening, and the program was a one-act play featured by Ivan Jones, Jimmy Dent and Jim Kelly. Refreshments were served.

Chicago, Illinois

First Church 4416 West Gladys Avenue

There have been eight baptisms in this congregation since the first of the year.

Excellent services and speakers have been the lot of this church in the past month. Harry Passman was the morning speaker June 17, A. O. Skinner, the evening.

On the following Sunday J. W. Pettersson talked on the text, "I have forces at work that ye know not of." At this service a duet number, "All the Way," was sung by Ruby Newman and Frank Almond, and under the influence of this song inspiration was given and through Brother Victor A. Hall, a "Confirmation" was received in the form of words to accompany that tune. Frank Almond was the speaker in the evening.

At the sacrament service July 1, Brother H. T. McCaig in charge, J. W. Pettersson sang to the tune, "All the Way," the words given on the previous Sunday to Victor A. Hall. It was announced on that day that no more Sunday evening services would be held until further notice.

July 8, stood out in the record of this group for its helpful talks and sermons. At the church school session J. A. Jaques, who has charge, used the theme, "Success Comes in Cans—Failure Comes in Can'ts." Sister Ruby Newman, Frank Almond, C. E. Huntley, and A. O. Skinner talked on "Service." H. T. McCaig was the eleven o'clock speaker.

The junior church is progressing under the leadership of Sister Myrtle Gauthier.

Saints extend sympathy to Brother C. E. Huntley and family. Brother Huntley's mother passed away at Rock Island June 24.

Brother and Sister Charles VanAlsten are the parents of an infant son born June 17.

The young people enjoyed an outing July 14, at the Zoological Gardens, Brookfield, Illinois, opened to the public for the first time July 1.

The Bulletin Board

Attention, All Musicians!

The musical work for the Park of the Pines reunion, August 3 to 12, will be as a training school for the Michigan Choir Movement (we expect to change this name as soon as the Canadian musicians join with us) as well as a preparation for the two hundred-voice choir which we hope to take to the 1936 General Conference. That we might accomplish the maximum results with the minimum of labor, it is necessary that we have sufficient copies of all music. We suggest that you borrow from your local choir. Bring all they have. If this is impossible, at least bring your own copies of the following anthems: "The Heavens Are Declaring," by Beethoven, arranged by D. Buck; "Psalm 150," by Cesar Franck; Gounod's "Lead Kindly Light"; "New Every Morning Is Thy Love," Bullard. These will receive special attention. If time permits we will also use Theodore Presser's Favorite Songs of the People; "Send Out Thy Light," by Gounod; and Nevin's "Twilight." All the above anthems can be ordered C. O. D. from Lyon Healy, Chicago, Illinois. Kindly bring as many copies of the New Hymnal as you can. It is planned that we more closely study our grand old Latter Day Saints' hymns. Those that play instruments are urged to come prepared to help in the orchestra. All soloists can greatly assist by offering their services. We are not acquainted with all and it will make the work easy and pleasant if you do not hesitate in informing those in charge of your willingness to give of your talents, that all together we may cooperate not only in making the reunion a success but in stimulating the growth of the choir movement. Suggestions will be appreciated.—Louise Evans, director, 240 Travis Street, Northeast, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Reunion Notices

The Northwest Iowa reunion will convene at Woodbine, Iowa, in the city park, August 10 to 19. This is an ideal camping ground, good city water, well lighted and splendid grounds adjacent to the camp for recreational activities. Apostle J. F. Garver will be in charge of the reunion. Elder Ray Whiting, Missionary Howard Harpham and Bishop C. A. Skinner of Kansas City Stake, will contribute to the success of the reunion. President F. M. McDowell will be present at the latter part of the reunion. Arrangements for Patriarch John A. Hansen to be present at most of the reunion have been made. Here is a good place and time to check up as to your standing and accomplishments for the church in its great task and program. Tent rentals: 8x10, 3-foot wall, $3.00; 10x12, 3-foot wall, $3.50; 10x12, 6-foot wall, $6.25; 12x14, 3½-foot wall, $4.00, and 12x14, 6-foot wall, $7.25. Add one dollar for floor lights, 25 cents for cooking, and heating 75 cents Spring cots rental price 25 cents each. Dining hall in basement of church, two blocks from grounds; meals at reasonable prices. Send all orders for tents to H. A. Reynolds, Woodbine, Iowa. Send money with order, and all orders must be in not later than August 7. Those desiring rooms, please write to Fred A. Fry, Woodbine, Iowa.—W. R. Adams.

Des Moines district reunion will be held August 10 to 19, inclusive, at the camp ground, Iowa State Fair Ground, Des Moines, Iowa. We are fortunate in having a beautiful spot on a hill with large trees which give shade all day, and we will have the use of bathhouse, swings, slides, ball grounds, and electric lights. Classes will be conducted for the primary, kindergarten and junior age by Sister Richard Baldwin and assistants in worship and handcraft. Patriarch Richard Baldwin will have a special class each morning as well as Elder Stephen Robinson. Elder E. Y. Hunker will hold a special missionary campaign during the reunion. We desire the reunion prayer service, which will be held each morning at 8.45, to be of high spiritual order. We will have recreation each

■ A Layman's Ministry

Today we read the following illuminating passage in another religious periodical concerning the life of a man who takes his religion seriously:

"Mr. C—— is a layman. His position, to all intents, is a business one. Yet he has had a radiating ministry. In every quarter of the world there are men, and women, who will assure you that their residence in Chicago was happier because of a friendship with him. He belongs in the inner circle of those who are trying to express through their own lives the meaning of Christian brotherhood and service."

What a splendid thing to be said of an unordained man! One who wants to do good does not have to wait for a commission to begin. He carries the authority in his own soul, and his work is rewarded with gratitude in the hearts of those he serves.

■ "Can I Help You?"

We will try to repeat this story as it was told to us by a friend:

"I was deeply absorbed in a problem that seemed too tangled for me to solve, and was pretty near to the verge of despair. Things looked dark and discouraging, and so I didn't notice her when she came in. I don't know how long she stood there waiting and watching the worry on my face, but soon I felt the pressure of her little hand on my arm and her voice asking, 'Mother, can I help you?' Even when I looked into her five-year-old eyes and saw the love and anxiety there, it took me several seconds to realize that she understood I was in trouble and felt sorry for me. 'You certainly can,' I told her as I took her up on my lap, and I can't describe the feeling of gratitude that came over me. Somehow it seemed to make my burden lighter, and my skies clearer as my little girl sat on my lap and gave me her moral support in solving my problem."

Older persons, of course, can't have the innocent charm of a little child offering to help. But they can always give somebody else a lift in a time of trouble.

■ Visitors Bring Cool Weather

Brother and Sister A. T. Gordon, of Plymouth, Massachusetts, were piloted into the office by Pastor J. F. Sheehy to get acquainted with the staff. Arrived yesterday, and brought rains and cool weather with them. After thirty-six days of temperature ranging well above the one hundred mark, this was a very welcome relief. We wish the visitors had come sooner!

"Bad weather shows where the roof leaks," says Pigeonette, "and that's the time to get a piece of chalk and mark where the repairs are needed." Has the depression put a strain on your church finances? Perhaps this is the time to examine and change your system.

Signs of the Times

The American opens his morning paper and reads with horror that poor little Engelbert Dollfus, pint-sized chancellor of Austria, has been assassinated by his political enemies. The American closes his paper, shakes his head and sighs, thinking that Austria must be a terrible place to live. The Englishman opens his morning paper and reads of the general strike on the Pacific Coast threatening starvation to thousands of American citizens. He reads of the strikes in Milwaukee and in Chicago; he reads of the depredations of Dillinger and of the long time it took the large forces of federal agents to catch up with this desperado. He shakes his head and sighs, and thinks that America must be a terrible place to live. The Austrian opens his morning paper and reads about the unemployed and suffering textile workers in England, about the strikes in the coal and steel mines and about the terrible tax burden on the English citizens. The Austrian closes his paper, shakes his head, and sighs, and thinks that England must be a terrible place to live.

Americans, Englishmen, Austrians, and Frenchmen all open their morning papers and read how Paraguay and Bolivia, the fighting cock little nations of South America, are busy cutting each other throats over a strip of wilderness that neither of them wants to settle and that neither of them can use at present. And all of these polite and civilized gentlemen exclaim at the imbecility of the citizens of Paraguay and Bolivia. They do not stop to reflect that their respective civilized countries and other civilized countries furnish the knives with which the South American fighters are cutting each other's throats and furnish the guns with which they shoot each other. If these civilized nations would refuse to furnish the arms and ammunition there could be no very bad wars in South America.

All these considerations lead us to reflect solemnly upon the statement that "terrible things shall come upon the earth in the last days." And one may exclaim with a certain older writer, " 'Tis a mad world, my masters! "

Certainly the world is afflicted with several kinds of potent and destructive madness at the present time: the madness of hate, the madness of suspicion, the madness of rampant nationalism, the madness of greed for land, for power and for prestige. Observing this madness one recalls the statement of the ancient Greek dramatist: "Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad." It appears that the world is determined to destroy itself. There is too large a percentage of the human race in a state of blind rage against their fellow men for the safety of the world.

The great mistake in the minds of so many people is that anger and power combined can accomplish something. Somehow men have fallen into the delusion that if they can grow angry enough they will be more powerful, and that with this added power they will overwhelm their enemies. They forget that in this state reason, sight, and judgment are suspended and that they make mistakes with fatal results.

It would do us no harm to reflect on one statement in the Sermon on the Mount, in which Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." History is full of proofs of the truth of the statement. Attila and his Huns soon perished, but the peaceful farmers whose lands they harried lived on. Caesar conquered Europe in vain, and the lands he brought under the dominion of the sword belong to their original peoples again; the culture he brought could have been carried more cheaply and effectively by missionaries, teachers, and engineers. Napoleon and his brief empire passed away, and his country became a republic. Those who "rattled the sabre" in the World War died by the sabre. The man who guides a plow over the soil will hold it longer than the one who shakes a sword over it.

It is no credit to the great nations of the earth that they are renewing the costly and futile race of competitive armaments on land and sea and in the air. It will be no credit to us and very little security either, though we have the greatest fleet of fighting aircraft in the world, if in gaining it we have forced other great nations to spend a hundred years of future income to protect themselves in the present.

Jesus said, "And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars." When has the world been in a more warlike state than at present? When has hate done a more deadly work? When have nations entered into such carefully prepared conspiracies for the economic and military extermination of sister nations? Jesus said, "Except those days be shortened, there should no flesh be saved." Unless nations can agree on peace, unless they can stop the race of armaments, we face an economic collapse which will be quite as bad as any war could possibly be. For people cannot much longer stand the strain and expense, and may anytime throw off the oppressive yoke in sanguinary revolution.

Blue Pencil Notes

Some years ago after Brother and Sister X— had returned from their mission to the islands Sister X— was giving a public talk about the islands. She was telling about the mosquitoes, and said, "Many of them will weigh a pound." Bishop E. L. Kelley was generally as quick as the quickest to see a joke, but for some reason he did not get that one, and he took me to one side and complained that Sister X— ought not to tell such a big story. I replied, "But you see, Brother Kelley, she said, many of the mosquitoes will weigh a pound." He persisted, "Yes, according to that there are many of them there that big." I gave it up; after all it was not my joke, and I have had trouble enough explaining my own jokes.

Our native Brother Matuore got into trouble at about the same time at the other end of the line. Returning to the Island from a visit to General Conference he told his native brethren about the wonders of America. Among other things he had seen chickens "as tall as men." He nearly lost his reputation for veracity among his brethren and sisters. In reality he was thinking about the ostrich farm that he had visited near Los Angeles.

One of our Independence judges tells about some patients who were being examined as to their sanity, in a hospital in Kansas City. One test was to require them to repeat certain words. To one elderly man the doctor said, "Now let me hear you say 'Methodist Episcopal.'" (It seems that in some types of mental trouble certain combinations of words cannot be pronounced.) This man was not dismayed, he retorted, "Not by a long shot, I am a Hard Shell Baptist." The doctor may not have known it but the reaction was perfectly normal for a Hard Shell Baptist.

Deacon Goodentart says: "It is impossible any more to tell whether the neighbors are really having a quarrel or if it is only a program on their radio."

Elder Holmes J. Davidson used to tell about a sermon that he once preached on tithing. He talked for an hour, explaining carefully that tithing robbed no one, that it was a tenth of the increase annually. An old gentleman listened intently to all of the sermon, and at the close remarked to Brother Davidson, "Tithing would be a nice thing all right—if a man could afford it."

"I remember only one long sermon that I really enjoyed," remarked one of the apostles recently. "I enjoyed that one thoroughly all the way through.

Brother Luff preached for over an hour. It was the first time I had taken the girl who became my wife to church. We sat away up in the gallery of the old brick church in Lamoni, clear back against the wall; and Minnie seemed to think that every thing I did was just about right. She even let me hold her hand. I enjoyed that sermon all the way through."

Well, I remember some sermons that I enjoyed very much, and for similar reasons. So today when I see a young couple back under the gallery looking happy, I do not flatter myself that they are absorbed in my sermon. Some day, however, they may come out from under the gallery and stand before the altar, and then it will be fine for them to remember their early love as associated with the church.

The Strike Turns Eyes Zionward

A sister who lives at Salinas, California, not far south of the San Francisco strike area writes a stirring letter of the feelings of those who are near the peril. Her letter might be written by people living in the area of other strikes, too. The condition is not temporary or local. We present the letter of Gertrude Bardin, of Salinas:

We've been studying about Zion—out here on the edge of the continent, with the salt breezes blowing in from the Pacific. One hundred miles to the north the great general strike of San Francisco rages on—and, a few hundred miles to the south, that devastating disease, infantile paralysis, brings terror to Los Angeles. A few scattered cases break out around us, and mothers call their children into their own yards.

From the north dreadful tales are carried, and the stores grow bare of food—and we all wonder, and fear a little, and groups gather on the streets to talk. Cars go by loaded with food for the pantry and women go by with their arms full of groceries. They laugh a little louder than usual with that hysterical catch in their throats. And there are some who go by with their arms empty, no doubt their purses, too. For their eyes and their grim faces have a look of haunted fear—and something else.

Morning, noon, and night the cry goes through the streets, "Extra! Extra!" And one's mind is brought again to the water front in San Francisco, where soldiers patrol the blocked streets and the war tanks of our nation stand ready—waiting—for what? The whole world is looking for an answer.

Yes, we've been studying about Zion; and it sounds good to us, here on the "firing line." It sounds more real, more desirable than ever. And we are so thankful that we have the answer. We realize there is much to be done—and done quickly—and so few to do it.

I have friends and neighbors who have never heard of the wonderful plan. Have you? Let's tell them!

Success is to be measured not so much by the position that one has reached in life as by the obstacles which he has overcome while trying to succeed.—Booker T. Washington.

The Invisible Government

JOHAN DILLINGER, notorious bandit, murderer, bank robber, and fugitive from justice, is dead. The whole country is glad to have him dead. Bank officers in little towns, traffic policemen, innocent bystanders, women and children who might have been sprayed by the slugs from his machine gun can now rest in peace—until the next bandit comes along. Dillinger is dead because he tried to be a lone wolf in a career of crime. He was a clever man, but he was not smart enough to know that a criminal career cannot succeed that exists without political affiliations. A criminal needs many friends in high places to keep him out of trouble. Had Dillinger elected to throw his lot with some grafting city political organization, he might be alive today, though just as bad as he was. Undoubtedly, the political organizations of many of our big cities are protecting many men who are just as bad as Dillinger.

KILLING a single bandit is like mowing off the heads of dandelions. I once tried to kill the dandelions in my front lawn by cutting their heads off. Next day, there were more dandelions than ever. Getting down on my knees and examining their roots, I discovered that each plant had from ten to fifteen buds ready to send up new flowers, each of which would produce several thousand seeds. These little gangsters of the flower world were plotting to take my place. After several years of experience, I found that one has to work with the dandelions every day for many weeks in order to eradicate them. No living plant can stand being pulled up by the roots, thrown away and burned every day for months without getting discouraged.

KILLING a Dillinger means nothing at all so long as the big city politicians continue to protect the creatures of crime who make them rich. The only way to abolish crime is for the public to vote the political machines out of existence, to strike against the grafters great and small. As long as the voters continue to support the political machines that have fastened themselves upon the cities, they will continue to be endangered and harassed by criminals. When these criminals get into the courts, they get light sentences and are paroled quickly, or are let off entirely free.

The prevalence of crime and the tyranny of political organization in this country raises another very serious problem for the citizens and the taxpayers, and that is the mounting cost of government. The only limit to taxation seems to be the one question in the mind of officials. How much can property owners be forced to pay? It is not that the legitimate functions of government are so very expensive, although they cost enough. The greatest and almost unbearable cost of government is the price of supporting the hirelings of political machines. The dead head employees, the holders of sinecures, the long lists of names on the government rolls of men who do not exist but whose names draw salaries that go into the pockets of political chieftains—these are the things that cost too heavily for the taxpayer to bear.

It is a great pity and misfortune that no national administration can get into power without truckling to these political organizations. The administration must depend upon votes, and in return must grant concessions, make appointments, allot federal funds for various projects and submit to their domination. It is a part of the price that the administration must pay for winning.

A GRAFTING POLITICAL ORGANIZATION always defeats itself in the end because its greed knows no moderation and it never knows when to stop. But it usually robs the city of millions of dollars before it is ousted, and its criminals are never given anything like adequate punishment. John F. Curry, who rode Tammany to ruin and nearly wrecked the city of New York, merely got defeated in the Tammany club elections. Jimmy Walker, erstwhile play-boy mayor, nurses his wounded vanity with his new wife in France. Both these men have had their feelings hurt, which, to their friends, is very cruel indeed.

THE POLITICAL CHIEFTANS never run for office. They select the candidates, support them, and tell them what to do when elected. Carrying out their orders, the man becomes unpopular and they toss him aside for a new puppet to strut and mutter the usual platitudes. No man who accepts the support of a corrupt political machine can ever be trusted in office to serve the interests of the people. He will betray them in various ways. He is more loyal to his invisible party government than he is to his country. The only thing that can be done is to vote for other candidates.

Young People of the Church

Organize Amateur Radio Operators' Club

Amateur radio engineers of the church are invited to join the Amateur Radio Operators' Club organized at Independence July 16, under the leadership of D. S. McNamara. Applicants for membership should write to D. S. McNamara, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and photographs will be appreciated.

The new club meets on Monday and Thursday nights of each week for study purposes. With a little study more than half of the charter members will be able to pass the tests for their amateur license. They meet in the radio room of the Stone Church, and are anxious to see their club movement grow.

An application for membership in the club arrived this week from Paul R. Smith, of Bradner, Ohio. Paul is twenty-one years old and a student engineer of radio with three years' experience as an amateur operator and commercial service man. He offers his services to the newly-organized club. Paul's station is W8FHB and he operates on 3500 kc. code exclusively, with a transmitting range of approximately 800 to 1,000 miles. This young man is the teacher of a young people's class in Bradner Branch, and much interested in church work. He believes radio to be a splendid opportunity for service in our modern age.

Nauvoo Young People's Camp Quota Nearly Filled

Only Ten Vacancies Left

The Nauvoo young people's camp, August 6 to 17, promises to be a success this year because the attendance quota is nearly filled. More than sixty have registered for camping, representing twenty different branches and seven states. Twenty-two are going from Lamoni alone. E. E. Closson, who is in charge, writes on July 26 that only ten vacancies are left, and it is probable that no more than this number can be accommodated. Those who want to get in will have to act quickly.

The stars were still shining in the frosty February sky when the devoted family of Horace Bushnell gathered around his bedside, as he was evidently passing on to "where beyond these voices there is peace." These were his last tender words to those he loved: "Well, now, we are all going home together; and I say, the Lord be with you—and in grace—and peace—and love—and that is the way I have come along home."—Lyman P. Powell, in The Better Part.

Honors for Dwight Davis

ELDER DWIGHT D. W. DAVIS

Honor has come to Elder Dwight Davis, one of the progressive young men of Seattle Branch, Washington. Brother Davis is a graduate student of the University of Washington, and a former Graceland student.

Recently he entered the international typing contest at A Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago. There were six hundred contestants from all parts of the world, and Brother Davis won second place.

With three other Seattle students Dwight was sent to Chicago by Doctor August Dvorak, of the University of Washington School of Education. All four used the new keyboard designed by Doctor Dvorak and Doctor W. L. Dealy, also of the School of Education.

The other contestants were Miss Nellie Merrick, also a graduate student of the University of Washington; Ralph Kuvshinoff, who will enter the university next fall, and Constance Fox, a thirteen-year-old high school student.

Miss Merrick won first place, Brother Davis second, and Ralph Kuvshinoff third. Miss Fox took fourth place in the high school novice typing contest. The typing was from dictaphone dictation.

The three Seattle entrants won the first three places in the unlimited class. Miss Merrick had had nine months' experience. The others from Seattle, six months' experience.

Seattle Branch is proud of Brother Davis who is the president of the district young people's organization.

Christian Legion Organized at St. Thomas, Ontario

(Press dispatch.)

St. Thomas, July 17—The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints of the London District met at 3 o'clock Sunday when Apostle D. T. Williams told the members concerning the inception of Zion's Christian Legion and its successful operation in various parts of Canada and the United States.

The Legion will link together 20,000 young Christian workers between the ages of 13 and 35.

The members decided to organize under the direction of Apostle Williams the following executives being appointed: Divisional commander, Elder P. Farrow, Sarnia; secretary, Mrs. P. Farrow, Sarnia; treasurer, Miss Loretta Lingard, St. Mary's; director of solicitation, C. L. Duesling, London; director of socialization, Miss G. Perry, London; director of publicity, Mrs. Fred Lipsitt, St. Thomas.

Spring River Young Members Celebrate Holiday

Young people representing every branch in Spring River District met at Lakeside Park, July 4, for the most outstanding event of the year's activities. More than one hundred and fifty were there, and Albert Cobb, district recreational leader had planned a full day of recreation.

The early part of the day was spent in recreation of each individual's choosing. Keen competition was staged in games of baseball, volley ball, tennis, horseshoe pitching, and boat racing. Picnic lunch was enjoyed at noon.

Older members as well as the young joined in the afternoon's contests, and at two-thirty a baseball game was played between east and west sides of the district, the east side being victors. Then came a refreshing swim in Spring River.

This was the first young people's meeting Brother Amos T. Higdon has missed, and his absence was regretted by all. He was unable to be present because of illness in his home.

Now the young people look forward to the district reunion, August 3 to 13, to be held at Columbus, Kansas. Last year the young members composed three-fourths of the reunion attendance.

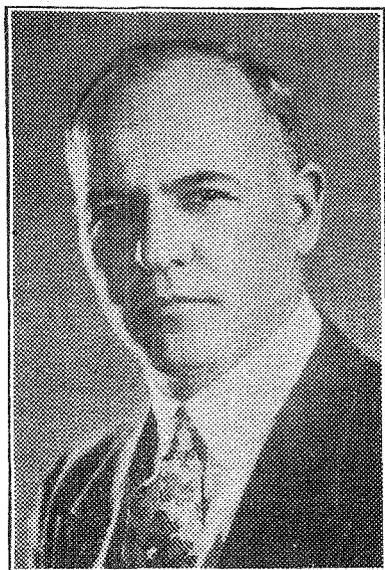

The work you can do best and love the doing. It's not always the easiest work, as labor goes, nor the work that brings the most money, but if that is the thing you love to do, and can work the prettiest pattern into it, do that."—Margaret Hill McCarter.

Zionic Missionary Work

By D. T. Williams

Of the Quorum of Twelve

IF THE PHRASE "zionic missionary work" is new to us certainly the elements that make up the phrase are not. Zion has long been the hope of our people, and missionary work has been accepted from the beginning of our institutional life as one of our most distinctive tasks. If we have been in error in the past as to the manner in which these two great works should be achieved, the error has come chiefly as a result of our failure to recognize that they must go hand in hand. To give them divergent paths will spell disaster for us.

If there is one criticism above another to offer on the missionary work of the past it is that our missionaries did not go out with the distinctive intent of bringing into the church only—and I mean only—such material as might assist later in the building of Zion. We have baptized anyone who felt the impulse to join the church. In our accretions to the membership of the institution we should have had in mind constantly the future needs which would manifest themselves when the time would come to build the City of Zion. Thus we might have collected the kind of material with which the great task might now be done.

But the past is now gone and we must look forward to the future with the hope that we may have learned something from the experiences of our forefathers which will prove advantageous to our further development. The task is now ours and we should determine that the lessons that might be learned from past mistakes will not go unheeded. What about the future? It is to be hoped that we may have learned that it will not pay to add to the church people who are not capable of making a contribution to the Zion of our God. Such accretions are futile encumbrances which will prove in the end serious embarrassments to our progress toward any worth-while achievement.

I am conscious of the fact that there are those who will accuse us of selfishness in assuming this attitude. If such an indictment is brought forward we would answer by pleading guilty to the charge. However, we would insist that since it is to be designated as selfishness that it be denominated "intelligent self-interest." It is, in fact, the kind of selfishness that will in the end save the world. It is to my self-interest, and to yours as well, that the world be saved and it is to this character of selfishness that God is calling all the people. This was the selfishness in the mind of God when he said, "I am a jealous God." He was jealous not for himself but through himself for His people.

THE ACHIEVEMENT OF THE PAST

One great contribution the church of the past has made to the present in this matter of world salvation is that a partially worth-while nucleus was gathered as a result of the missionary endeavor of those who preceded us. But before the building of the New Jerusalem could be begun there was need that material be gathered out of which building operations could be started.

To this end the Quorum of Twelve in the "Old Church" went to Europe. As a result of their work thousands were added to the great Restoration Movement. Thousands gathered to Nauvoo and Zion's children had hope that the time had come when the Kingdom of God would be realized in all its glory. But then came the "dark and cloudy day" and put an end to all the fond dreams and aspirations of a church dedicated to the greatest task the world has ever conceived—the building of a Christianized society through which the spirit of Christ might be demonstrated to the world.

Then came the Reorganization upon the scene of action only to discover that much of the work of the church preceding it had been wiped out by the great disaster of apostasy. So the task had to be undertaken anew. Yet it is not for us to fail of courage as we look at the mistakes and disasters of the past but with a full measure of devotion move on toward the accomplishment of an end which is worthy of any generation.

The missionaries of this church moved out to collect a body of people to compose the center of the future building operations in making a reality of the coming kingdom. I say this with the thought still in mind that the missionaries of the Reorganization, the writer of these lines included, had no more consciousness of converting people with the distinctive needs of Zion in mind than the missionaries of the "Old Church." We have now a hundred and twelve thousand members with whom to work. It is, however, a fact that too large a proportion of the number is dead timber and will automatically be eliminated as we move on toward Zion.

Nevertheless, here we are! What are we going to do about it? Shall we wring our hands and weep? No! Certainly not. But we will wring from the past the necessary lessons for the future and set ourselves to the business in hand. The one great achievement up to the present in preparation for Zion is that a mass of material has been collected. What next shall we undertake in the process of realizing our institutional dream?

BUY THE LAND

A hundred years ago the Lord said, "buy the land." But that is a hundred years in the past. What would the Lord say if he were speaking today on that subject? Some will perhaps suggest that He would say the same thing for the Lord never changes. That is well enough, but conditions change and had the conditions been different a hundred years ago the Lord might not have given such a command at all.

When the command was given so long ago to buy the land, the land was selling for one dollar an acre but now some of that same land that we were told to buy so cheaply is selling at ten thousand dollars an acre. Does it not seem that such a change in price values might modify a message from the Lord if he were to speak on this same subject now?

May I express it as an opinion that if the Lord were to reveal his will on this matter today his revelation would have quite a different complexion than the one given a century ago? Today He might advise us to buy the land where we could get it at reasonable prices but I am confident that there would be added to this command and perhaps preceding it, the command, "convert the land."

ZIONIC MISSIONARY WORK

Now the time has come as never before for the missionary to work hand in hand with those whose grave responsibility it is to bring to pass the Zion of God. Some time ago we paid $80,000 for a farm of something over four hundred acres. I wonder how many farmers who now own the land could we convert with $80,000? Is this a fair question? Assuming that it is, I went to the bishop's office some months ago and said, "I would like to know how much it costs, per person, to convert people to the church."

The bishop was kindly disposed toward the question and got to the task of figuring it out. Well, we discovered that the cost was about $147 a convert. Accepting this as a basis let us do a little more figuring on our own account. We will assume that the Missouri farmer is exceptionally hard to convert, that such a difficult task cannot be done with the same ease as that usually undertaken in the conversion of other people. Let us assume then that it will cost $1,000 to convert one of the men owning the land we need in our zionic development. The results are self-evident and the advantage manifest. It were better to spend $80,000 converting eighty farmers with their eighty farms than it is to spend $80,000 buying one farm.

Here, then, is one of the chief tasks of our zionic missionary work—converting the land. I would suggest the appointment of men who have the ability to contact the men who own Missouri land and try to convert them to this church and its program of social betterment. If one missionary would baptize but one man a year who owns his farm he has thereby done a big piece of missionary work and would deserve great credit for the accomplishment.

Again, when we speak of zionic missionary work we do not have in mind just the conversion of the farmer who owns the land but we think too of the thousands of business men who live in the borders of Zion. These if vitally interested in the movement toward a Christianized society would prove a powerful asset in realizing the end toward which we are tending. Is it not better, I ask you in all candor, to convert men and women with all their interests already in the land of Zion than to spend our money converting hundreds of people in the distant islands of the sea who are in no position to make a real contribution toward the big task confronting us?

A CONCENTRATED MISSIONARY EFFORT

Why should we not use business wisdom in the matter of our work as ministers for Christ? The Master himself said, "I must be about my Father's business." The logical conclusion is that he intended to go about his Father's business in a businesslike manner. Why should not the same conclusion hold good with us? We have the greatest piece of business of any institution in the world—the business of world-salvation. This, then, is the "Fathers' business." How should we go about it?

In the past we have scattered our forces all over the world in our attempt to win the world for Christ. We have spread the butter so thin that the bread has not been conscious of its presence. So our foreign missionary force has been allocated one to an island, two to a continent (Continued on page 970.)

WILLIAM LEWIS

A DREAM WHICH HELPED US FINANCIALLY

After five years I turned exclusively to wholesale trade and to huckstering for another two years. One remarkable event I shall relate.

We were overstocked with turkeys. All markets were glutted, but we kept on buying from the farmers. We did not like to turn them away for fear they would go to other towns to trade. We were hoping that soon the market would open. We had every place on our home lot covered with turkeys, and our bank account was about run out. Every week I would take some poultry to market only to find it full and the price low. Turkeys dressed and ready for the oven were worth only five or six cents a pound. I became discouraged.

One night I dreamed that I went to Saint Joseph and found the market bare. One man asked me if I had any turkeys. I replied that I was tired bringing them to town. "Well," he told me, "you could sell all you could bring and at a good price."

There was no telephone by which I could call to find out the condition of the market. But having implicit confidence in my dream, we dressed all the poultry on the place. While we were getting them ready—I was doing the scalding, my wife and Lizzie picking, and Dannie opening—Sister J. M. Terry came by.

"You are getting a lot of them off," she observed, knowing that we were overstocked.

"Yes," was my answer, "and we are doing it on the strength of a dream.

"I hope you will not be disappointed."

Such a feeling of assurance had accompanied the dream, that I thought it safe to give heed to it. No doubt or fears troubled us. This is a characteristic of the dreams given by the Holy Spirit as promised in Joel 2: 28.

I found the market just as foretold, and I unloaded all that I had in a short time at a good, fair price.

When I came home, Sister Terry was anxious to know the success I had, and when I informed her that it was just as it had been foretold I could see that she too partook of the feeling of gratitude that had already found place in our hearts. The dream was to us a blessing as well as to others who needed that line of goods for they could not have had it if it had not been for my dream. There was plenty of poultry in the country, but people had grown tired of sending it to market; so this week, as it happened, all were of one mind to let the city go without. The information came to me and I gave heed to it—thanking the Giver of all that is good.

CASES OF BLESSING THROUGH ADMINISTRATION

On June 15, 1881, our seventh child, third daughter, was born whom we named Ann after her aunt, my wife's sister. When the child was seven weeks old, wife went to Netawaka, Kansas, to visit her uncle, William Hopkins. There she fell sick. A telegram called me there. I went and in a few days we came home. Mary was very weak and grew much worse. She was administered to and a blessing was pronounced on her with the promise that she would live to see many more years. Brother J. M. Terry was present and assisted in the administration. From that time on she gained in health.

When Ann was nearly two years old she was dangerously ill with spinal meningitis. Her eyes were so turned that only the whites were to be seen. She lost the use of her limbs, and her head was helpless. The child was indeed a pitiful sight. She was administered to by Brother J. T. Kinnaman and Brother J. M. Terry at a Wednesday evening prayer meeting. I assisted. There was no visible change in the child. She was administered to again the next evening by the same brethren. From that on she began to get better and was fully restored. It was a strong testimony to all the Saints of that branch of the wonderful power of God.

A singular operation of the Spirit would be of interest here. In company with Elder John T. Kinnaman, I administered to Sister Betty Smith, who was very sick with measles. After anointing her, Brother Kinnaman offered prayer. During the prayer there was a power manifested which was so uplifting that I could hardly hold my hands on her head. It was with much effort on my part that I did so. I could with ease have taken hold of the sister and lifted her out of the low bed in which she was lying. Brother Kinnaman had good liberty in prayer, and the sister was blessed.

Another time in company with Elder J. M. Terry we administered to Sister Anna Smith, a sister to the woman mentioned above. She had been sick for weeks. While we had our hands on her head, the Spirit came and I was prompted to speak to her, but I hesitated and while thus quenching the Spirit I felt as if it were a hand pressing on my left side. Brother Terry was standing on my right. Brother Jacob Smith sat in a chair some six feet from me. Twice I felt the pressure of the hand, and with it came the strong impression to speak the following: "I say unto thee, my handmaiden, Satan has sought to destroy thy mind. Fear not, I shall deliver and protect thee."

After the administration I related the above experience and inquired if anyone had touched me. All answered, "No." Sister Anna said, "Something unusual has caused me much worry. I have been so discouraged and despondent that life to me has not been worth striving for." The message was short, but it brought peace, comfort, and sunshine to that home, and the probabilities are if I had not been urged by the gentle pressure of what seemed to me a hand, the consoling words would not have been given, at least, not by me, for I believe that I was overly cautious at times. Paul at one time said, "Quench not the spirit; despite not prophesying." There are two extremes we can take; one is to be overly cautious, and one overly anxious. In this attitude we are apt to be deceived either by our own spirit of enthusiasm or by an evil spirit.

Another case of healing that was marvelous, and caused many to speak of it, many of whom were not members of the church, was that of George Brown. He lived north of Stewartsville about ten miles. He was the son of Eliza Brown, a widow, and was not in the church at the time. He was about twenty-one years of age. He had been suffering with intense pain in the right side. One of the leading doctors from Maysville attended him. The case was considered a hopeless one. Brother A. H. Smith, then living at Stewartsville and I were sent for. George said if the Lord would spare him that as soon as he got able he would be baptized. He was administered to, and to the surprise of the doctors and neighbors he was healed. True to his promise he was shortly afterward baptized.

A STRUGGLE WITH THE POWER OF UNBELIEF

Another case of healing was that of Brother George Ross. He had been in poor health for months. Doctor Richie said that his liver was decaying. One Sunday afternoon he was taken much worse—some thought he was dying. We had no church in Stewartsville at the time, but the meetings on Sunday were held two and a half miles north and west of town. My wife was sick at the time so I was at home. About four o'clock in the afternoon one of the neighbors came over after me saying that Mr. Ross was dying and that Mrs. Ross wanted me to come at once. On my way over I saw a wagon load of our people coming down the road from the church. We arrived at the house and found Brother Ross unconscious. Brother Kinman, Brother D. J. and Brother D. E. Powell and I administered to him. He awoke, shook hands with us, and said that he had seen a beautiful light in the far distance and that he was trying to go to it when he heard the prayer. He was able shortly to be up and around although not entirely free from pain and distress.

Then he was taken down again and for weeks Sister Ross did not take off her clothes, nor turn out the light. Night after night she would send for me saying, "George is worse; come over." There were at this time no elders living in Stewartsville. Brother Terry had gone to Nebraska City and Brother Alexander H. Smith had moved away. In the administration Brother Ross would get temporary relief. Our faith and patience were taxed, and one night several of the Saints were over at the house. We were much discouraged and the burden of our evening chat was, why was the blessing not retained? What was the cause? We had prayer and bade the family goodnight, each one returning to his own home. That night the following remarkable dream was given to me:

I saw Sister Ross and myself inside of a lawn that was fenced. We were looking for the tail part of a snake. I thought the grass was thick and several inches high so it was quite difficult to find the snake. I suggested that she take hold of the end of a strong rod I had, and we would stretch it across the grass and then drag it. When the cord or rod would come in contact with the tail part we could see it move. No sooner had we stretched the cord than we found the tail part. Then there appeared a wild, cunning looking animal like a ground hog. He had a hole in the ground and had it covered so that it could not be easily seen. I said to Sister Ross, "Here is the old animal that has been stealing our chickens." With that I seemed to have in my hand a large baseball bat, and with it I struck the tail part of the animal a blow and drove the creature away.

The dream left a pleasant impression on my mind and before breakfast I called at Brother and Sister Smith's and Brother Ross' homes and told them the dream. They were encouraged, but they could not give the interpretation. The day went by, that night, Brother Moses Holmes, Brother and Sister Smith, James, and Betty, and some others met at Brother Ross' home where we talked about the mystery connected with Brother Ross' sickness and about the dream I had had. I then administered to Brother Ross and the Spirit promised that he should be healed. So powerful was the Spirit that it changed the tone of my voice, and Brother James Smith, who was asleep at the time, awoke and heard what I said. This brother was quite deaf and when in company would almost always sleep.

As I turned from the bed and walked a few steps, the spirit of unbelief came like a flash to me and said, "Man, you said that he should be healed; what if he dies?" With that I dropped on my knees and with all the strength and faith I had asked the Lord not to let the power of unbelief rob us of this blessing that He had promised. With that we felt the victory was won by the goodness of the Lord. The dream and the interpretation came forcibly to my mind. The tail part of the snake represented the lingering part of the disease; the cord or rod was faith; the animal was the power of unbelief; the chickens were the blessings. The club was the prayer of faith and authority. Truly we had a struggle, but thanks to God the blessing was retained.

Some few weeks after this, Brother Ross said to me, "If what Doctor Richie stated is correct and that the liver is decaying, then I cannot live." At once I was reminded of the hard fight we had had with the animal of unbelief and I discerned that still it was at work.

I replied, not in a boasting way as the reader may think, "George, liver or no liver, the Lord said that you shall live. Why trouble about what the doctor said? Believe in God." Since that time I have never heard the brother refer to the statement of the doctor.

A PROPHECY THAT WAS FULFILLED

Many, many blessings we received in the Stewartsville Branch. Still we became careless and forgot in a measure the hand that fed us. At one meeting we were spoken to by the Spirit through Sister I. N. Roberts, and we were told that many of us should move away until the branch should become very weak, but that the branch should again become strong and some of those who were scattered should return. That has literally come to pass. May the work never go down!

I GO INTO THE CREAMERY BUSINESS

While at Stewartsville I went into the creamery business. Later on we moved the plant to Amity ten miles northeast. In the mean time I had located my family in Saint Joseph, in October, 1886. This same year the bank at Stewartsville failed and some few of our patrons suffered by it.

One man had in his possession at the time the bank closed its door, the checks we had paid him the last three months. He came up to Saint Joseph and presented the checks to me and demanded that I cash them. I informed him that I would not do so, that he was to blame for holding the checks so long. He said that he had a note that would soon be due and that he was keeping the checks to apply on it. He insisted that I take up the checks saying that I had never paid him for three months of cream. He said he did not consider the checks money and would see that I paid him the cash. I inquired if he had not cashed some checks. He said, "Yes."

"And is it not a fact that I have always paid with checks yourself included?" I asked, but to satisfy him I said, "Let us go to the Commercial Bank. You present your claim to the cashier, and if after hearing the facts in the case, he says I shall cash the checks I will do so." To this he consented.

The cashier looked at the date of the three checks. The last one was then twenty-one days old. The cashier said, "You cannot look to Mr. Lewis for cash on these checks. You should have presented them to the bank and if there were no funds to the credit of Mr. Lewis then you could hold him for payment." In answer to my question as to what the law was on the matter, that is, how long a person had to cash the check if any stated time. He said, "No certain time. The law says sufficient time." In his opinion this man had had ample time.

Still the man was not satisfied. I said, "Suppose you buy a horse from me and in payment thereof you give me a check for $125 on the Stewartsville Bank. Your money is there, and I carry the check for a month, then the bank closes its door. Would you not consider that you had paid the $125? Or would you be willing to give me back the horse for the check, or to cash the check yourself?" He left murmuring that I had cheated him. I have forgotten now the exact amount—about fifty dollars. I am mentioning this matter in full because this party has since accused me of refusing to pay him for his hard-earned labor. I am pleased to say that only a few held their checks out, of possibly more than one hundred that were sent out on the fifteenth of the month. The bank failed the sixth of the following month. None would have lost a dollar if they had presented their checks to the bank when they should have.

Shortly after locating in Saint Joseph, I added the milk, cream and ice cream trade to my business, wholesale and retail. I was now located at 1101-1103-1105 Frederick Avenue. If I had my life to live over I would not go into any business that would need my attention and presence on Sunday. For nearly twenty-one years I had to work every Sunday for at least part of the day. I often would go from the creamery to the church on Sunday mornings to preach.

The Shadows Lengthen

LOUISA awakened in the morning after a long night full of ghastly dreams. She lay there listening to the sounds of breakfast preparation and the work of her mother that drifted up from the kitchen. Ordinarily she would have hurried down to assist, but she knew it would not be expected on this day of leave-taking. She felt suddenly that she was growing old. She mustn't let herself feel this way. She must think this out—she must face it.

Who was this Elaine? Had Dan met some beautiful girl on one of those many business trips he had taken for his father? Had they been engaged to be married and had she died or deserted him leaving him so inarticulate with grief he could not even talk of her? She remembered Dan's hesitancy and lack of ardor on that night he had first spoken to her of marriage.

She choked back a sob and whispered fiercely: "If there had been someone else—if you couldn't really love me with all your heart you should have told me! It wasn't honest, it wasn't square, not to!"

She sat up suddenly, eyes wide with cold terror. "Oh, no! no, no!" If Dan had not been honest he hadn't meant to do wrong. He had not intended to hurt her. Perhaps he had seen that she loved him, and, knowing he could never love anyone like he had loved Elaine, he had thought—oh, she must believe in him—she must trust him! She must push the idea of his being dishonest into the background of her mind and never think of it again. She loved him so! She must believe in him—trust him.

HER MOTHER met her at the foot of the stairs. "I've been worrying about you a little, Louisa. Did you and Dan quarrel last night? He seemed so funny, his going off home that way—"

"Oh, no," answered the girl, with a bright laugh, "there was no quarrel. We just decided each of us would spend this last night in our own home."

"I must say I'm relieved. Louisa, I want you to stay close beside Dan. He loves you and will protect you against—well I don't know what it is I'm afraid of exactly, but I don't like that Mr. Hunt at all. I told Mr. Eldon that yesterday and he said: 'My son loves your daughter, Mrs. Miller. He will take care of her, don't you worry.' And I know, too, that Dan does love you." She smiled. "It doesn't take any great insight to notice that. But I'm just afraid—you will forgive me for being frank with you, Louisa, but you are sometimes just a little silly and shallow about some things. I'm afraid you'll let some little thing come up to separate you from Dan, and then you'll fall a victim to that awful man's cunning. I just feel—"

"Now mother. Mr. Hunt really isn't so bad. He shocks people because he admits frankly that he doesn't believe in God and the Bible. Why even Yvonne told me he'd never harm anyone physically—"

"Nevertheless," her mother continued emphatically, "I am afraid for you. That poor girl that was buried yesterday was a victim of his, I'm sure of it." She flipped the smoking pancakes on the griddle to brown on the other side, called the twins to go and finish their work, poured a little water on the frying meat which sent forth a great hiss of steam, and turned again to Louisa.

"Promise me, whatever happens, you'll stay with Dan."

Turning carefully to the window, as if to gaze absently on the garden of flowers outside, Louisa finally managed to say, in a steady voice:

"Suppose, mother, something happened that I found he didn't love me? He certainly doesn't act like it sometimes. Sometimes of late I've been wondering. It seems—seems like I've been the one to do most of the loving. Dan is so—"

Her mother laughed. "I suppose you have been comparing him with that silly Robert Garfield that's been trailing you around for so long. You shouldn't do that. Dan is a different type. He simply couldn't be so gushy and silly as that. And I must say I'm glad of it. He doesn't talk much, Dan doesn't but I know from the way he looks at you that he worships you. And just because he doesn't keep doing and saying little silly sentimental things is no sign he won't be always helping you when you need help most. Your father was like Dan—" She whisked a plate of pancakes to the table, wiped a few crumbs swiftly into her hand from the tablecloth and began dropping more pancake batter by spoonfuls on the smoking griddle.

"Then—your father died and I was alone. I felt I could never forget him—that I could never be happy again. But time has a funny way of doing things to your mind, and sometime later I met Harold. He had lost his wife and baby and we were sorry for each other, at first, but a little later we knew it was not altogether sorrow that so often drew us into each other's society. We were married and he was as good and kind in a stalwart silent way as your father had been. He died, you remember, just as you were finishing the sixth grade. Then I brought all the children here to your grandfather's, and here I have learned one of the most important lessons of life. That is what worries me so about this trip of yours, Louisa—you are expected to be idle, you said. And idleness is bad for anyone. I know you can find happiness only in work well done—that is the great lesson I've learned. Everything else is imperfect, unsatisfactory, in this world. At least it becomes so sooner or later. And that is all the more reason I want you to stick to Dan. I know his type—and he's a man who'll not leave you to endure things alone. Promise me, Louisa, that no silly whim of yours will make you part from him—promise me!"

Louisa stared at her mother. She had never seen her like this. She felt that strange feeling of fear she had sensed when her mother had stopped working and sat by her grandfather's bed. It wasn't like her mother to talk so much.

"I promise," she faltered, then smiled. "Small danger of my ever leaving him. I think too much of him. There can never be anyone else take his place in my life." Should she tell her mother about that black box, ask her opinion and advice? Her mother was so sensible about things. In all her life she had never known her mother to invite her confidence before this.

But at this moment the younger children trooped noisily in for breakfast and their conversation was cut off. Perhaps it was just as well. Since it was quite sure that there had been some other girl in Dan's life, wouldn't it be better not to know all the details? Wouldn't it be worse to know exactly how things stood, perhaps, than to simply imagine things that might not be true at all? Perhaps her fears were all groundless; perhaps the box was simply a weird joke—but no—Dan wouldn't do anything like that—oh, well—she would put it out of her mind. There was an interesting trip ahead of them, and whatever was in Dan's past life should not cast too large a cloud upon the present. She knew he had never done anything dishonorable, anyway, and found comfort in that thought. Elaine! Who cared who she was, or what she looked like? She felt her old sense of power come back to her. She could win Dan's love, if she didn't have it already. She had some power and influence over him—she would exert herself to be pleasant.

SHE MANAGED to eat a hearty breakfast in spite of her half-sad state of mind, for she had had no supper the night before. The train they were to board was due at eleven, and a number of their classmates were planning to meet at the station to say good-bye and wish them luck. Yvonne's death had advertised their venture widely and there would doubtless be a large crowd of other people from nearby towns. Louisa found herself aflutter as she thought of all the half-envious glances she anticipated. Most of the town young people had gained their ideas of the expedition from Robert, and they felt sure that these fellow classmates would return famous and wealthy.

It was as she had foreseen. The crowd was so dense she had difficulty in seeing her best girl friend, Helen Martin, among them. Newspaper reporters were there also with cameras. They had their pictures taken several times; friends gave them flowers; the recently graduated senior class shouted one of its yells of triumph. The college boys presented Dan and Louisa and Robert pennants with the words: "You can," in gold letters against a blue background. The train steamed in and they were in the midst of hurried good-byes.

"We're never going to forget one another," Helen said to Mr. Laird. "We were talking last night, some of the other class members and I, and we're going to be different from other classes that have graduated from old Monroe. We are going to do big things in the world; we are going to remember the old school and each other forever and forever."

"Forever is a long, long time, my children," the old superintendent said, sadly. "But I'm glad you feel as you do."

Louisa felt greatly irritated at the old man. He seemed to feel their leave taking was something sorrowful, and even shameful—or did she imagine that? No, for hadn't he said: "I wish you were going for a nobler purpose?"

Almost before they knew it they were on the train and the last farewell waving hand was hidden from sight as they sped around the hill.

Mr. Hunt sat beside Robert, facing Louisa and Dan. He rubbed his hands together and smiled.

"Well, we're on our way at last, and I'm sure I want you all to be jolly and have a happy time. Our ship is not due until the end of the month and we'll stop at Denver and Salt Lake City and other interesting places, and see all there is to be seen. We'll see Pike's Peak; and in Utah, the Mormon buildings and perhaps attend the Mormon church. I guess you're a Mormon, aren't you, Dan?"

Dan leaned forward eagerly. He was always ready to explain things about the church.

"No, we're not the same," he said, "Our church has a similar name and we are often confused—"

"I talked with a Mormon once in Chicago," Mr. Hunt did not appear to listen to Dan at all, "He was a very interesting man, and he explained how they believed in polygamy, when he found I was not prejudiced against it. In some respects their church is more near the truth than any other—I mean I could come nearer accepting it. You see, most primitive races are polygamous and it is probably the natural way—"

"If you are going to prove things by primitive peoples"; broke in Dan, animatedly, "You have to take in consideration the fact that in some wild tribes the women have more than one husband. Do you think that is natural, too?"

MR. HUNT made an impatient gesture with his hand, and ignored Dan's statement. "This Mormon showed me the Book of Mormon, but of course I would never read a church book. All folly. But he told me it taught polygamy, and I am very anxious to arrive at Salt Lake City and visit some of their buildings and see one of their meetings. I'd like to look at some of the Mormon women and see whether they seem happy or not. You know, this man told me he had been sealed for eternity to one woman, who had died during their engagement, and now was happily married to another. His wife believes, too, that in the next world they'll all be together. She is quite happy about it, he said. It is all a matter of education, you see. Of course, it is all foolishness about marriage for eternity, because there is no afterlife, but it is interesting to see how natural ways of living will sometimes come to the surface, even in a modern world. If they'd just leave out the mummerly of the marriage ceremony they'd be still nearer the truth."

"But we believe, in our church, that a belief like that of polygamy is ungodly, carnal, and totally a wrong thing. You see, our church believes—"

An interruption to Dan's heated speech came when Mr. Hunt shook his fist angrily in his face.

"We'll have no long drawn out discussions on religion," he cried, "Oh, of course," he added, lamely, "I'll admit I started it, but I only spoke of something which interested us because of the nature of our project. You will kindly not discuss church. We do not want to introduce any superstitious ideas."

Louisa watched Dan. He had been excited, wrought up to a high pitch trying to defend the Latter Day Saint Church, but he was in complete control of himself. He had signed a contract to obey Mr. Hunt; and he had the strength of will to do it, even in the present difficult situation. A great strength seemed to emanate from Dan and envelop her. She was thankful for Dan.

"Now, you children will have to forgive my little outbursts. I am full of my subject, you see. Now—there is one thing more I wish to find out, that I need to jot down in my little book. You see, I know what is in all of Robert's trunks and suitcases, also I know what is in your large trunk. I didn't get around to see your steamer trunk last night. Louisa, I'd appreciate it if you'd give me a list, as nearly as you can remember, of the things you packed in that."

A COLD SHIVER passed over Louisa. She'd have to tell him about that box of Dan's. Because if she didn't "remember" it, Dan would. He was so very truthful. Numbly she tried to recollect all the articles of clothing and books she had put in.

"Is that all?" asked Mr. Hunt, seeming to be absorbed in his little book and the list of things he was writing down.

"No, there are some of Dan's church books."

Mr. Hunt looked up quickly. "Church books? Why are you taking them along? Didn't you know—"

"Because I read them daily. I've been in the habit of it since I can remember almost."

"You'll have to stop—throw them away—"

"I can't do that," Dan answered doggedly. "You said anything that went against my conscience, I wouldn't have to do. And those books—"

"Oh, all right," conceded Mr. Hunt, unpleasantly, "Anything else you remember, Louisa?"

"There was a black box that belongs to Dan."

"A black box." Mr. Hunt looked at her curiously. "What's in it?"

"Oh, I don't know. He didn't tell me. I suppose just a few little keepsakes." Louisa spoke lightly, but her lips felt cold and stiff.

Mr. Hunt sought another empty seat wrote for a long time in his little book.

It seemed to Louisa that they would never arrive at San Francisco; and after they had boarded the steamship it seemed that their voyage was interminable. Mr. Hunt seemed to be able to keep her constantly reminded of that mysterious box. He never mentioned it again, but he talked of his own first love in a tender cooing tone, about the memories he would cherish forever of her dear face and form, and of how her spirit would seem to come to him sometimes with soft ghostlike hands. One was forced to conclude that if she had lived and they could have married, the old man's life would have been a great well of everlasting happiness. He knew and quoted a number of poems, also, about first love and the effects it leaves indelibly upon one's nature. Once, when they were nearing Papeete harbor, he watched Dan and Louisa intently, sadly, wistfully, and said:

"You know, when I see you two seemingly so happy together, it almost makes me envious, for I know that such an experience comes to a person but once in a lifetime. It reminds me of that poem: 'There's nothing half so sweet in life as love's young dream.' You remember it I expect? It is quite commonly known."

Dan left them abruptly and said he would get the suitcases ready to take

San Francisco Strike Justified?

By C. J. Long

C. J. LONG

In San Francisco last week more than 80,000 union workers went on strike. What for? "In sympathy" with about 20,000 longshoremen and teamsters who wanted union recognition and "better working conditions."

More than a million persons had to go without food or go with very scanty supplies. Fresh meat was practically forbidden for a time.

Peaceful citizens having nothing to do with unions and their troubles had to walk to work, if they were allowed to work. Restaurants, hotels, business houses were forced to close. Neutrals, innocents were thrown out of work, sending a new horde to relief agencies. A great modern city was turned into a crude, medieval battleground for the sake of a small group.

Was all this justified? Of the 1,300,000 people in the area affected, only 20,000 were directly concerned with a total of 80,000 or more taking part. Yet all of the million and more residents were made to suffer—and they had nothing to do with working conditions or union troubles in recognition. Is it right, is anybody justified to make innocent men, women and children suffer for the supposed or actual benefit of a few of the people? Isn't it the height of selfishness to seek greater benefits for oneself or one group at the expense and suffering of a large group of persons who have nothing to do with the difficulties it is sought to remove?

Possibly the first twenty thousand men had reason to strike. Under our present laws these workers are entitled to collective bargaining rights—which usually means membership in and cooperation with unions. If the employers failed to observe these rights, and the workers whole-heartedly tried to reach an agreement with their companies but without avail, the strike remains the only weapon the workers can use.

But what about the 60,000 others? What business of theirs was it to strike, when they had no concern about the longshoremen's strike—other than to show their power? No report appeared that these "sympathy" strikers made any effort whatever to bring about a peaceful settlement of the dispute before they used force. Wouldn't it have been more thoughtful, more gentlemanly, more Christlike first to have tried to force peaceful arbitration of the issue?

Even if the strike were justified, the strikers had no right, according to Christ's way of life, to make unconcerned, innocent men, women and children suffer. That is not applying the presumably desirable Christian principle of proper regard for one's brother.

Where, indeed, is Christ in all this trouble? Probably the employers claim His principles support them, while the workers just as vehemently protest that He favors them. It is doubtful if He favored either side in such a situation, and He certainly would not have advocated the display of utter selfishness and disregard for others shown by these strikers, especially those "in sympathy."

As for gains of the strike, it is too soon to say definitely what was gained, if anything. We know certainly that there was much unnecessary suffering and inconveniencing, and that there was a great loss of time, effort, and money. We know too that the union leaders and workers certainly did not gain anything in the way of Christian respect or prestige through their action, though they did salvage some respect for themselves by returning to work and accepting the pleas for arbitration when they did.

While the strike was on, Paris and London newspapers were quoted as telephoning San Francisco officials to know if a revolution or civil war had started. How is that for an interpretation of the way a great, intelligent, civilized people of a nation conduct themselves? We as a nation claim to desire peace, and to be leading the way toward peace; but how can we talk peace, or the brotherhood of man—better, brotherly love—with such an example of brotherly kindness, if you can call it that, as the strike affair in San Francisco?

To one in San Francisco, especially to one involved in the strike, last week's troubles may appear in quite a different light; but to those of us farther inland this strike, especially by the 60,000 "sympathizers," does not appear justified, or to be in anyway the Christian, Christlike way to settle an argument or a demand or request. These disputants, both employers and workers, need a touch of the Christian love we are supposed to teach; and we, as members of God's church, ought to be able to show them how this love works. Are we justified in claiming we do?

Mark H. Forscutt, Music Lover and Hymn Tune Writer

Incidents Told by His Daughter
Mrs. Ruby C. Faunce

Throughout my father's ministry in the church the young people were very near and dear to him, and his greatest pleasure was to work with them.

In 1892, he had gathered around him quite a large circle of young people at Saint Joseph. Some of these were David Krahl, Russell Archibald, John and Grace Gardner, Belle and Maggie Burlington, Ida Pierson, and a number of others. To these he taught music, the appreciation of literature and many things not so generally taught then as they are now.

I can remember how we always joyed at home when a letter came from father in the mission field. Sometimes he would write entirely in poetry. Often he would start in the ordinary way, writing prose, and finish in verse. His descriptions of places and things which he saw were beautiful and sometimes wonderful because of his clear delineations.

In the year 1885 or 1886, Father was holding meetings at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. It was when he was alone in his room one night about ten o'clock, that he heard beautiful music. His room opened into the hall which led past the room where an hour before he had conducted a preaching service. And as he listened he thought sure the lady of the house was playing on the piano in the church room.

The music continuing, plainly, clearly, a few moments, father decided to go to the room and see who was playing. On his way he met the sister at whose house he was staying and who offered shelter for the meetings.

"I thought that was you playing, Brother Forscutt," she gasped.

"And I thought it was you."

Realizing that heavenly influences were about them, they entered the room, and father played the melody from memory, the sister verifying that this was what she had heard. This tune father named "Norman," and to it we sing in our Hymnal the words, "Blest Be Thou, O God of Israel."

Father was at home when another well known hymn tune came to him, the tune he named "Blair." One morning mother said to him at breakfast: "Father what was the tune you played in your sleep last night?" while asleep the night before father had risen from his bed and written and played the lovely hymn.

I remember hearing father tell many times of the divine manifestations given him at the time of his mother's death. Just after conference while he was yet at home, he and mother had retired. Mother was asleep, but father lay reading when a heavenly experience was given him.

The door opened and his mother and mother's mother entered. They walked arm in arm and upon reaching the foot of the bed smiled. Then his mother raised her hand as if in blessing. Again the visitors smiled and then left the room. Immediately father arose and wrote down the time of this happening. Mother awakened, and father said to her: "My mother is dead."

MARK H. FORSCUTT

Several days later a letter came from his sister announcing the time of grandmother's passing. It was at the hour that she appeared to father. She was ninety-six year old June 12, 1892.

The Influence of an Ideal

Scripture lesson, Genesis 17: 1-8 (King James Version). Text: "And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God."

For centuries it has been the ideal of the Jews to return to the land of their fathers, and today they are gathering back to Canaan. It has been my good fortune to visit Palestine two times. The first visit was in 1906, when I found the Turks in complete control. My second visit was after the close of the World War. Within a few years, what a change! The Jews were returning home, establishing themselves and their crafts, and building up their Zion. The Jewish ideal works.

At the Century of Progress in Chicago last year was a gigantic pageant, attended by one hundred and fifty thousand people. This immense throng heard the story, now tragic, now triumphant, of the nation's march down forty centuries to the new Palestine of today.

They heard the tale of days when Israel was a great power, and when Israel walked desolate and despised among nations. There was presented in panoramic review Israel's bondage in Egypt, their exodus, giving of the law at Sinai, occupation of Canaan, their shames of idolatry, the release of the voices of long-gone prophets, their triumph in temple building, the overwhelming catastrophe of its destruction and the bitterness of their defeat and desolation at the hands of the legions of Rome, the woes of long years of exile, and their liberation expressed in the new Palestine of today.

As a church we have our zionic ideal. How does it work? Our church was organized in 1830, and soon after, the land of Missouri was designated as the place where God's people would gather in latter days. It was to be called Zion, and there the kingdom of God would be among men. Toward this goal—this ideal—the church has worked for more than a hundred years. With the fulness of the gospel restored and in the custody of the church, its members looked forward to the building of Zion. The gathering began. Persecutions were many. The members of the church were driven out of Missouri, but in their hearts they retained the great asset of a belief in Zion, a place of the pure in heart. Like the Jews in their captivity centuries ago, Latter Day Saints whispered into the ears of their children the great things vouchsafed to them in the promises of the Lord. The ideal has lived and is working in the hearts of a rising generation.

And now we live in days foretold in the Holy Scriptures, an age when there are wars and rumors of wars and when men's hearts are failing them for fear for the things coming on the earth. It is not more talent or more gifts we need so much as it is the inspiration of our great Ideal. What a great thing is an ideal! We move toward the thing we hold in mind. Therein lies the advantage to the person who believes in Christ and Zion. As we sincerely hold in mind our ideal we find our ideal working out as literally and completely as has the pledge God gave to Abraham.

Emerson says, "As soon as another person enters our presence we begin to act." And don't we? You're at home. The bell rings. Immediately you look in the mirror. You powder your nose. You straighten your tie!

Are we concerned as much with what we are as we are with what we appear to others to be? Are we more anxious that our character be unsullied, than that our reputation be clear?

Jesus warns against make-believe, and we need this warning even as they to whom he spoke, though our acting may take a different form. Read what Jesus has to say, Matthew 23: 1-39.—Young People's Leader.

The Lord Helps His Servants to Present the Truth

By P. T. Anderson

May 30, 1905, wife and I and our two children left this country for our first Scandinavian mission. Taken right from the plow and sent over there, it was very hard for me, because I had had but little schooling in my time, and none at all in this country. I had never preached a sermon before I was sent over, although I had tried to talk a few times. I was ordained an elder in February, and sent over in April.

We settled in my home town, Hundslund, among my own people, but they did not receive me kindly. I met much opposition from them, as well as from others. We rented a house right across the street from the preacher, and I guess he did not like that very well. A month later, Apostle Peter Anderson and J. J. Christiansen came over, and we began holding open-air meetings in my home town, and other surrounding towns.

Brother Christiansen went to his home town, Moeu, and preached there, while Apostle Anderson preached at Hundslund. I did all of the advertising for the meetings, talked to the people, and invited them to come out. I knew nearly everybody in the whole country, and most of them treated me with respect. We had many out for our first meeting, but my preacher neighbor did not like it, and gave us several threats, both from the pulpit and in private. Some people heeded his warning and stayed at home, but I can say for the preacher that he acted in most cases like a gentleman. He followed our services up, and each evening as Brother Anderson was finished, he was allowed to say what he wanted. However, Brother Anderson was too much for him, and one night he told the crowd it was no use for him to follow us up, because he could not convince us anyway.

As Brother Anderson had to visit other parts of the mission, I was soon left alone, and I had to do the preaching. I studied hard. Acting on Brother Anderson's advice, I advertised my subjects. I worked my sermons out the best I could, and the Lord blessed me wonderfully and helped me when I presented them. I rented the Temperance Hall during the winter every Sunday night, and held meetings in private homes and other places during the week. Handbills were printed with my subjects, and each evening my crowds grew. After Brother Anderson's departure, the old preacher came again, but I never let him get the best of me. I studied hard, prayed much, and the Lord helped me.

One Sunday night I had advertised that I would talk on the "Second Coming of Christ, and His Thousand Years Reign on Earth." I knew it was not the belief of the Lutheran Church, as their second article of faith in the Lutheran Catechism read like this: "I believe in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord, who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of Virgin Mary; suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead and buried. He descended into Hell; the third day he rose again from the dead; He ascended into heaven and sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead."

I knew this would draw a large crowd, and I worked hard all week. I wanted to do my very best, and I trusted in the Lord. On Friday night of that week, a voice spoke to me and woke me up, saying, "Arise, put a mark in your Book of Mormon, on page 86, you will need that Sunday night." The first time the voice spoke, I did not understand what it was. I thought I had been dreaming. I knew it was not my wife speaking to me for she was asleep. As I lay there thinking, the voice spoke again the same words, but added this, "Take your Book of Mormon with you Sunday night. You will need it." I got up, lit the lamp, got my Book of Mormon, found the page, and on the top lines I found these words: "Adam fell that man might be; and man are, that they may have joy." I could not understand why I should have need of that, as I did not intend to bring in anything along that line, but I knew the warning was from God, and I heeded and I heeded it.

Sunday night when I arrived at the hall I found it filled and people still coming. When I started my meeting every seat was taken, and as yet, the preacher was not present. However, the way my pulpit was situated, everybody had to pass me when they passed to their seats, and when the preacher came in, and passed me, I saw that he carried a book or paper in his hand. It was evident that he did not want me to see what he carried. I knew I was in for trouble, but a voice said to me, "Don't fear."

I was wonderfully blessed and held my congregation for an hour and thirty minutes. When I finished, I said that if anyone objected to anything I said, I would be glad to listen to them. The preacher got up and started to talk. I asked him to come to the stand, but he would not do so. He started out something like this: "I have no objections to offer as to what has been said here tonight. I am sure we all know Mr. Anderson to be an honest and good man, but I am here tonight to warn you against his religion. Friends, he believes in the Book of Mormon, and in it it says, 'Man is here on earth that he might have pleasure.' Is that not ridiculous? That is what the Book of Mormon teaches. It also teaches that it is solemn mockery to baptize little children. That is what I want to warn you against, my people." He said many other things, but the above was his main point.

I got up to give a reply. First, I thanked him for the compliment as to my character, and then went on to say: "Do you know, Mr. Preacher, it is my religion that has made me just what I am, the religion you are warning the people against now? I should like to ask you a question before I answer you. Did you not read your statement from the Book of Mormon, as a man being here just for pleasure?" He did not want to answer, but I put the question to him again, and he answered that it was not from the Book of Mormon, but a book written against the Mormons. "I thought so. Now, Mr. Preacher, will you come up here in the presence of this intelligent congregation, and read a statement from my Book of Mormon?" In reply to the negative answer from the preacher, I continued: "I shall read it for you, then, and prove to this intelligent congregation, that you misrepresent that book either by will or by ignorance. 'Adam fell that man might be; and man is that they may have joy.'" I asked him if he could translate from English to Danish, and he answered that he could. "Well then, you ought to know that joy can never be translated to mean pleasure. Joy is one thing, pleasure is another." He wanted to leave, but I told him that I was not through, and for him to keep his seat. I then continued. "Now, as to baptizing little children. I am going to read in your hearing just what that 'terrible' Book of Mormon has to say about it, and I will let the congregation be the judge. On page 769, I read: 'Behold, I come unto the world not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance; the whole need no physician, but they that are sick; wherefore little children are whole, for they are not capable of committing sin; wherefore the curse of Adam is taken from them in me, that it hath no power over them; and the law of circumcision is done away in me. And after this manner did the Holy Ghost manifest the word of God unto me; wherefore my beloved son, I know that it is solemn mockery before God, that ye should baptize little children. Behold I say unto you, that this thing shall ye teach, repentance and baptism unto those who are accountable and capable of committing sin; yea, teach parents and humble themselves as their little children, and they shall all be saved with their little children: and their little children need no repentance, neither baptism.' Behold, baptism is unto repentance to the fulfilling the commandments unto the remission of sins. But little children are alive in Christ, even from the foundation of the world; if not so, God is a partial God, and also a changeable God, and a respecter to persons; for how many little children have died without baptism. Wherefore, if little children could not be saved without baptism, these must have gone to an endless hell. Behold I say unto you, that he that supposeth that little children need baptism, is in the gall of bitterness, and in the bonds of iniquity; for he hath neither faith, hope, nor charity; wherefore, should he be cut off while in the thought, he must go down to hell. For awful is the wickedness to suppose that God saveth one child because of baptism, and the other must perish because he hath no baptism."

You could have heard a pin drop, and I turned to the preacher and said: "Will you, in the face of what I have read to you out of the Book of Mormon, tell this intelligent congregation what becomes of the children that die without baptism?" He got up and took his hat and went out. I do not remember ever seeing him again in my meetings.

Many people came to me at the close and told me that it was the best sermon they had ever heard. I told them that the preacher could not and would not expose himself. If he had said, As the Lutherans believe, that they could not be saved, without baptism, I would have referred him to Mark 10: 13-16, and if he had said they would be saved without baptism, why baptize them then? Jesus took the little children up in his arms and blessed them.

I made many friends that night for this great latter-day work. I give God the glory. He gave me warning when the enemy was near.

until we have spread ourselves all over the earth and have almost become lost in the shuffle.

The point of strategy in the activities of this church is not on some distant island but at the point of which the Lord said, "The New Jerusalem shall be built up beginning at this place." If this be true it is high time that we began to concentrate on the distinctive task the Almighty has allotted us. It is for us to begin at the center and work out. The church in prior years has performed the part required of her in that she has gathered together the nucleus, imperfect though it may be, for us to work with and from.

I, therefore, suggest that we begin such operations as a church as will convert the "Gentile" in Zion to the facts of this gospel and invite him to be one with us in the realization of that ideal society which will show the world the way out of its present distressing situation. To this end we should concentrate the major portion of the missionary force of the church in and about Zion with the hope that we might win thousands in this region to the gospel of the Son of God.

It has long been agreed that this church has a distinctive mission among the children of earth. That being conceded it follows as a logical sequence that we must approach our task in a distinctive manner. To approach a task that is fundamentally different through the avenue of old conventionalities is to spell failure on the very face of the attempt.

ashore. He had a peculiar look on his face. Louisa felt that she must follow him. She did so, without answering Mr. Hunt. Was Dan down there in their cabin, weeping over something in that mysterious box That Elaine's picture, or one of her old letters?

Dan was doing anything but that. He was jamming something into a suitcase with rather more vigor than was required.

Louisa sat down weakly and looked at him dazedly.

"You're not well, dear," he said kindly. "I've seen it for some time. You're nervous, jump at every unusual thing. I think it's that man up there. He makes me want to fly back home, myself. I wish we'd never come. I wish—"

"I almost wish it myself. But I guess we'll have to make the best of it now."

Dan went on grimly. "Of all the maudlin, sentimental things he can't think of! I thought Robert was bad enough, but he can't hold a candle to this crazy professor we've got here. I just had to get away when he tried to quote that last poem—"

Louisa laughed hysterically, then burst into tears. Dan's arms were around her; he was trying to comfort her.

"We'll be on land soon—and he can't stick so close to us—things will be better—"

"Yes—but—leave me alone now, Dan, please. I—I want to pull myself together—to—" she pushed him away almost impatiently.

He clung to her hand. "Dear, sometimes it seems there is a feeling of coldness growing between us. We must not let that happen—we must not—"

"No—no! It's just nerves, Dan. Really." With a troubled glance he turned and left her. He couldn't know that it wasn't his young wife's hands that had pushed him away; but that a phantom had come between them; a shimmering dream of loveliness with hair as golden as the gilt letters on the black box. If she had been flesh and blood, Louisa's sense of power might have remained with her. But how could she win her husband from a wraith?

The Jews' Creed

In the Eleventh Century, Moses Maimonides compiled a summary of the religious views of the Jews, and it has since then been the confession of the orthodox Hebrews. Maimonides holds a most exalted position among the Jews. In the thirteenth century they said: "From Moses (the Lawgiver) to Moses (Mendelssohn) there is none like Moses (Maimonides)."

This is the Jews' creed, as given in the Danskeren, Copenhagen:—

"I believe, with a true and perfect faith, that God is the Creator, Governor, and Maker of all things; and that he hath wrought all things, worketh now, and will work forever.

"I believe, with perfect faith, that the Creator is one, and that such a unity as is in him can be found in no other, and that he alone hath been our God, is, and forever shall be.

"I believe, with perfect faith, that the Creator is not corporeal, nor to be comprehended with any bodily faculties, and that there is no bodily essence that can be likened unto him.

"I believe, with a perfect faith, the Creator to be the first and the Last; that nothing was before him and that nothing which now is shall last forever.

"I believe, with a perfect faith, that the Creator alone—whose name be blessed—is to be worshiped, and none else beside him.

"I believe, with a perfect faith, that the words of the prophets are true.

"I believe, with a perfect faith, that the prophecies of Moses, our Master—may he rest in peace—are true; and that he was the father and chief of all wise men that lived before him or ever shall live.

"I believe, with a perfect faith, that all the Law which we now possess was delivered by God himself to Moses, our Master.

"I believe, with a perfect faith, that that Law will never be changed nor substituted by another from God.

"I believe, with a perfect faith, that God understandeth all the works and thoughts of men, as it is written in the prophets. He fashioned our hearts and understandeth our works.

"I believe, with a perfect faith, that God will recompense all that do good and keep his commandments, and that he will punish those that transgress them.

"I believe, with a perfect faith, that the Messiah is to come. Though he retard his coming, I will wait till he come.

"I believe, with perfect faith, that the dead shall be restored to life when it shall seem good for the Creator, our God, to do so."—Translated for the Literary Digest.

Church Physician's Health Letter

MUMPS

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

Church Physician

A. W. TEEL, M. D.
Church Physician

PAROTITIS or what is commonly known by the laity as "mumps" is usually classed as a children's disease but quite often adults become infected. It is a great source of worry in asylums, hospitals, boarding schools, academies and children's homes. As its name implies it is an inflammation of the parotid gland but other glands may be infected at the same time. It is one of the salivary glands situated in front of and below the ear. This gland is one of the principal salivary glands which is very important as an aid to digestion and may become inflamed from other causes. I have known quite a number of cases to become abscessed or lapse into a state of chronic inflammation but when it becomes inflamed from that strange mump germ that has never been isolated, then it is "mumps." Other inflammatory diseases described, may in the beginning be mistaken for that disease. It is highly contagious and frequently spreads from one child to another in quick succession and is thought to be appropriately classed with the "spray borne diseases" and these discharges are expelled from the nose and mouth of the sufferer. The word "sufferer" is a proper term as the patient presents the appearance of being extremely ill.

This high state of inflammation produces a greatly swollen face and neck on the affected side, causing a great inconvenience and pain in the act of swallowing. Even in talking or chewing it is decidedly uncomfortable. The hearing is often very greatly impaired but this is not usually a dangerous symptom, for as soon as the height of the inflammation has subsided the hearing returns to normal. It is of much more serious nature in adults and adolescents. When a child becomes infected, as a rule, it is best to call your family physician and get advice as to its care, etc. All cases should be isolated and the attendants should be careful that they do not become infected from the mouth of the patient when he is coughing, talking, sneezing or spitting.

All patients should be kept in bed and a light and nutritious diet should be instituted. Antiseptic mouth washes should be used frequently. A complete and rapid recovery usually follows if careful nursing and hygienic measures are obeyed yet its seriousness must not be forgotten, especially in adults, as the sex glands may become involved resulting in sterility. Physicians who make a specialty of the ear often trace severe cases of impaired hearing to the improper treatment of "mumps." Likewise, nervous conditions and kidney involvements are frequently traceable to this disease.

Serious complications in young girls are a somewhat frequent occurrence especially when it attacks the breast. Careful isolation from the rest of the family is imperatively necessary and rest in bed at least two or three days after the fever has subsided and the swelling of the gland has disappeared.

"In the Beginning God"

People who deny the existence of the Eternal God at the very beginning of things have a difficult time explaining how life ever got started, and how this complicated universe ever was planned and projected. A few days ago I heard of a smart college boy who laughed at his astronomy professor for still believing in God. One day this student found in the laboratory a mechanical model of the solar system that ran by electric motor, reproducing the relative motions of all the planets and their satellites. The boy was much interested and asked, "Why, who made this?" "Oh, nobody," casually replied the teacher. "It just happened; made itself, I guess." "Do you mean to tell me—" then he caught the twinkle in the professor's eye! The teacher laughed. The student blushed in some confusion, and finally said, "Guess you're right Doc. This universe is too complicated not to have some great Mind back of it, isn't it?"—George Walter Fiske in Studies in Spiritual Energy; Fleming H. Revell Company.

It is not enough for us to say, "Business is business," in justification of everything we do, but it is required of us if we shall be the children of light, to manifest that light in the dealings we have with our neighbors.—Detroit's Beacon Light.

If Only We Do Our Part

If only we will live for the Lord, he will bless us with everything there is in life for us to enjoy. We are living in a time when it is necessary for us to decide whom we shall serve; we must live for the Lord, or be dropped out into the world. Let us all get busy and apply ourselves with all our powers to move every good thing Zionward.

I feel like working harder each day of my life to put things forward, and with His help I know that I can accomplish that which is pleasing to my Master.

I have had many experiences which help me to hold on to the Lord's work. At one time I was almost ready to give up and never try to work any more, but in the midst of my trial the Lord plainly showed me that I was endeavoring to do that which is right. I felt ashamed of the thoughts I had entertained.

If only we could be as good to our Master as he is to us, Zion would be redeemed. We have been blessed many times and in sickness we have been healed.

About a month ago my daughter, Dorothy, was very ill with tonsillitis, so ill that she could hardly breathe. Her throat was almost closed and was swollen so badly that she could scarcely swallow. She grew very weak, and was scarcely conscious part of the time. After coming out of a hard chill, she said, "Mother, go and get Brother Emmitt McCall to administer to me, and I will get well." Just as soon as Brother Emmitt administered, she began to get better. That was at eight in the morning and at noon she was able to walk about the house; by night she could go anywhere she wanted to.

I think sometimes we do not know how to be thankful enough for the blessings we receive. The Lord is always ready to do his part and more. Will the Saints pray that I may be faithful all my life.

Thankful for Wonderful Blessings

I love to tell of the wonderful blessings God has given me.

A few Sundays ago I attended church at Oklahoma City. They have a fine branch of Saints there who seem to be active and spiritual. May God bless them.

I have been considering various reasons for joining the church. Did we come into the church of our own free will to serve God, or did some trouble or fright bring us in? For one I can say that I voluntarily entered. My parents taught me the gospel when I was a little child. When I grew old enough to be baptized, I came into the church without anyone persuading me to join. That, I believe, is why I am still with the truth—it was not fear that induced me to spend my life for the Lord. I want to spend the rest of my life in this glorious gospel.

When I think of the way in which my father and mother taught me the glorious truth, I often wonder if you Saints, you mothers and fathers, are teaching your children the gospel. Can your children trust you? Do they want to follow in our footsteps? Put yourselves honestly to the test. Do your children have real reason to trust you? Are you truthful always? Is your home free from hypocrisy and sham? If they do not want to follow in your footsteps, Saints, there is something wrong.

The people in this part of the world need to have the old Jerusalem gospel preached to them. God has blessed us; he has not forgotten us during the time of want and distress.

I visited a good sister at Poteau, Oklahoma, not long ago, and believe that if the church had many like her, it would be greatly blessed.

I feel that I can never thank God for the many blessings he has given me. My testimony is that he is merciful and loving and that he will not forsake us if we remember him. I know that he will reveal himself now as he always did. When we do not feel him near, it is ourselves who are to blame. We do not pray and study his laws; we forget him and his goodness; we lose ourselves in selfishness. Let us come back to him, believe his word, obey his commandments, and serve him faithfully.

Trial Brings Understanding of God and His Ways

We have recently passed through a trying time. Our little girl has been ill, and it was necessary for her to undergo a serious operation. She was taken sick on Easter morning while we were at prayer meeting with a fever which the doctor pronounced pneumonia. Five weeks later (on the following sacrament Sunday) found us at the hospital where our child had been operated on the night before for pus in her side. Another sacrament Sunday has passed and we were able to attend the service, taking the girl with us. Though not completely recovered, she is steadily improving and is up and playing.

During her illness my husband received many spiritual assurances of her recovery, but it was not my privilege to be given these things. Those of you who have had sickness in your family and administrations know some of the anguish through which I passed as I saw the child grow gradually worse. Often I have wondered if my own weakness was one of the causes for her not being healed. It was in such a state of wonder and weakness that I with Sister Hazel Byrns started for the operating room. I had little hope.

Saints, this experience has caused me to ask myself: Am I careless as to the covenant I made at the water's edge? Have I really taken up my cross to follow Jesus gladly? During this trial I have learned that true happiness comes when we trust God for all, for God's ways are much higher and better than ours. We should rejoice when his will is done. Whatever he permits to happen, he does for our good. It took me many years to realize that truth, but now I rejoice that he has been so kind and forgiving to his children. His love is greater than I could comprehend. It is a wonderful thing to so live that we can be instruments for good in his hands, spending our lives in his cause.

My testimony to you is that if we do our part, I know God will do his part. Pray for me that I may have his Spirit to guide and protect me through the trials of life, that I may grow strong in his work.

Appreciates Herald Photographs

I want to thank you for the pictures of leaders and members of the church which you have been printing in the Herald. It is a pleasure, especially for those of us who are more or less isolated, to be able to look upon the faces of these men whom God has chosen to lead this great latter-day work, and to get a picture acquaintance of our fellow workers.

The Readers Say---

I believe that the Herald readers would appreciate it if you would run the pictures of the missionaries of the church or the evangelists, or district presidents, or some of the other leaders. It strengthens me, and I believe that it helps others also to see the pictures of those who have given their all for the promulgation of the gospel. To me the articles in the Herald are greatly enhanced when the author's pictures accompany them.

Now Is the Time to Demonstrate What We Believe

Although we have been isolated now for over three years, God has been very close and has blessed us in many ways.

I have been reading many articles of late by political leaders and leaders of other churches, and I notice with pleasure that they are searching more than ever before for a better economic system for the nations, and the churches are approaching the stewardship plan.

It seems to me that there never was a better time for us to demonstrate the true system of stewardships and the zionic form of government. With the world in such confusion and the signs pointing to more disturbances, it behooves the Saints to put into practice what they have been preaching for so many years.

I have great faith in the church and its ideals and am striving to do what little I can for the great cause intrusted to us. May God bless and prosper his people and lead us to Zion.

God Hears Our Prayers

We are living something near three hundred miles from Independence, and so far from the nearest Latter Day Saint branch that I don't know anything about it. To say it is lonely is putting it mildly, as I am not able these times to take the church papers. But I was surprised and delighted not long ago at receiving a copy of the Herald, the first I had seen for some time. May God's blessings rest upon the one who sent this.

I have lived in this community about fourteen years and though isolated, I have been wonderfully blessed. I have passed my seventy-fifth birthday and though I feel my age to a great extent, I am raising a big truck patch and a yardful of chickens, and I do my own housework; so I think I have something for which to be thankful. I have been blessed spiritually also.

We have been needing rain badly for three weeks, and I remembered the Book of Mormon admonition to pray over our crops and our stock. I did so, and have not had a sick chicken or lost one this year. My garden has continued to look fine in most ways, and of course I kept praying for rain, as did many others.

Yesterday we had a good shower but not as much as we needed; I kept praying for more, and in the night I woke up and the rain was falling hard and the wind blowing. Then I thought of the wheat that was almost ready to cut and wondered if I had selfishly asked amiss. I begged the Lord to forgive me if I had and to save the wheat which is so badly needed. Next morning I went to my son's home and asked him if his wheat had blown down. His reply was that the wheat was standing up all right, but that the cheat growing around the edge of the field was lying flat. The field is on a high ridge.

The Lord still blesses us in different ways. We should always trust and love the one from whom all blessings flow.

I certainly enjoyed the poem of Amanda Freed. My Herald is spoken for as soon as I am through reading it.

Grateful for Blessing of Restored Health

I wish to express my thanks and best wishes to all those who remembered me in my recent illness. At the time of my request, about a month ago, I was not expected to live. The doctors had given up hope. I am now up doing my house work, laundry, and sewing.

I have received so many blessings, that I know this is the true church of God. I love God's work and his people, and I hope always to be able to make his work a success.

My prayers are for the Saints, and I wish you would pray for me, that I may be a light rather than a stumblingblock.

AVA, MISSOURI.

MRS. LORRAINE FULLER.

Rejoices in the Gospel

Never in my life have I enjoyed reading as I do the Saints' Herald. I can hardly wait for its coming each week. I am new in the gospel, but no one enjoys God's blessings more than I.

I lived as a member of a popular denomination for thirty-five years, and was in darkness regarding the true gospel. At last I was called by my Savior who said he had a work for me to do, and I know that his wonderful teachings are true.

We drive fifteen miles to church twice every Sunday, morning and evening. I love to meet with the Saints. We are like one family, a devoted little group meeting at Modesto.

With a heart that's filled with brother love
From God who reigns supreme above,
I feel his power from day to day
Since I have found this gospel way;
I'd love to spread this glorious plan
To every creature in the land.

TURLOCK, CALIFORNIA.

Would Be a More Worthy Follower

It is four years since I have been privileged to attend church services. During this time the Herald has been my only contact with the church. It has always been a comfort and an inspiration.

I became a member of the Reorganized Church in 1920, at Seattle, Washington, during the time Elder J. M. Terry was pastor. I had become acquainted with the latter-day work two or three years previous to this and on a trip to the west coast had the opportunity of entering the waters of baptism.

I am thankful to God for the blessings that have been mine. I have four children whom I am endeavoring to rear in the fear of the Lord, I pray that I may have the faith, wisdom, and courage to guide them aright. Please pray for me that I may be faithful to this great cause and that I may become a more worthy follower in the footsteps of the Master.

A. B. PHILLIPS

Did the prophet Joseph Smith approve of secret oaths and societies?

What may have been his views in his latest years are not so clearly expressed, but as late as the close of 1839 or early in 1840 he wrote an epistle from Liberty prison in which he expressed himself decidedly otherwise. This epistle was published in Times and Seasons for July, 1840. It was signed by himself, Hyrum Smith, and three other church officials. He states:

"We further caution our brethren against the impropriety of the organization of bands or companies by covenants, oaths, penalties, or secrecies; but let the time past of our experience and sufferings by the wickedness of Doctor Avarad suffice, and let our covenants be that of the everlasting covenant, as it is contained in the holy writ, and the things which God has revealed unto us; pure friendship always becomes weakened the very moment you undertake to make it stronger by penal oaths and secrecy."—Church History, volume 2, pages 324, 325.

Are angels people who died and were resurrected; or are they spirits?

The ways in which the term angel is used in the Bible might include both kinds as angels. The reason for this is, that the Hebrew word, mal'ak, means angel, deputy, messenger, or ambassador, the context determining largely the sense intended. The Greek word, aggelos, also means either angel or messenger, as indicated by the text. Hence what kind of a messenger is not fully implied by the word itself when used alone. But that some angels are spirits is clearly stated in the Scriptures. Thus the Psalmist refers to the Creator:

"Who walketh upon the wings of the wind: who maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire."—Psalm 104: 3, 4.

The New Testament quotes this text also when referring to Christ, saying:

"Let all the angels of God worship him. And of the angels he saith, Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire."—Hebrews 1: 6, 7.

It seems clear that this is intended to be understood without ambiguity, and the Inspired Version is even more specific, if possible, for it renders the last text quoted as follows: "And of the angels he saith, Angels are ministering spirits." Several texts show that angels go to the place of departed spirits. Jesus declares of little children: "their angels do always behold the face of my Father in heaven" (Matthew 18: 10), and in his parable of the rich man he states that the beggar was "carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom." Peter says the angels which kept not their first estate were thrust "down to hell" (2 Peter 2: 4), and Jude says they were reserved in chains "under darkness unto judgment." It is evident that a spirit does not have the substance of a resurrected person, for Jesus states after his resurrection:

"A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have."—Luke 24: 39.

It appears impossible to recognize these angels referred to as persons who had been resurrected, as there were many angels long before the resurrection of Christ, and we are distinctly informed that Christ was the "first fruits of them that slept" (1 Corinthians 15: 20, 23), "the first born from the dead" (Colossians 1: 18), "the first begotten of the dead" (Revelation 1: 5), and "that he should be the first that should rise from the dead" (Acts 26: 23).

Who are the 144,000 with the Lamb, mentioned in Revelation 14; 1?

LL

The Scriptures do not state specifically in this chapter, but it is generally thought they are the same as those referred to in chapter 7 who were sealed as the servants of God from the twelve tribes of Israel. This is borne out somewhat by the statement in chapter 14 that they had "his Father's name written in their foreheads," which was where the servants were sealed, according to chapter 7. Very little more of their relationship is mentioned there.

Have the Chinese a more ancient history than the Bible?

Historians tell us that the Chinese are the oldest nation in the world, and it has been claimed that Noah in person settled there and founded it. For this no proof exists. Tiki, son of Emperor Yu, is said to have founded its first dynasty about 2197 B. C. But its more ancient history is of uncertain duration.

From California to England A Trip "All Like a Dream"

Leaving home on the evening of May 15, after Mrs. Rushton and I bade farewell to our family and little group of friends who had met to say good-bye and wish us "Bon Voyage," we traveled over the Sante Fe Railway to Burlingame, Kansas. There we spent a few hours with our old friends Brother and Sister Robert Munro who used to live at Hamilton, Scotland, and through whose generosity and cooperation the mission in Scotland was undertaken. Then to Kansas City, Independence, Lamoni, Stewartville and Saint Louis. At all of these places we met old-time friends and enjoyed the pleasant reunion of fellowship which the passing years have enriched. At Kansas City, (Central Church), Independence (Stone Church) I preached, and also in Lamoni, where I gave the baccalaureate sermon and spent a happy day among the college people, students and faculty. I spoke also at the Young People's Convention at Stewartville, Missouri, which was a very uplifting experience. Perhaps the feature which made the most abiding impression on my mind was the early prayer service in a grove close to town when over two hundred young people gathered for prayer service and occupied every moment in devotional exercise.

In Saint Louis we enjoyed a pleasant renewal of old associations and through the kindness of Brother Gomer Evans drove from Saint Louis to Stewartville and back in his new auto, an Oldsmobile Eight. Then, on Tuesday evening, June 5, we left Saint Louis, traveling over the Pennsylvania Railway for New York. This was the first time I had been in an "air-conditioned" train, and it was a great relief after the excessively hot weather we had been having. For a few days we were the guests of Brother and Sister Charles Harris and had the pleasure of meeting with Brooklyn church on Friday evening and preached. There we met Brother P. M. Hanson.

Saturday, the ninth, was the day of our departure across the ocean, and after the packing, we went to the docks and soon were on board the Leviathan. We were pleasantly surprised to find a large group of friends including President F. M. Smith and P. M. Hanson, who had come to see us off and wave the last farewell. It was comforting to have so many out of the very large crowd who were interested in us and assuring us of their good wishes.

Our cabin was decorated nicely with flowers; also there was some candy for the lady together with a large budget of letters from many friends over the country including some from England. We were delighted also to have a nice bouquet from Sister Fisher and Brother Hugh McNutt and other members of the family, from Saint Joseph, Missouri. All of these tokens remained with us across the water, and their persistent fragrance reminded us of the friends we had left behind.

Our ship is one of the largest afloat and is beautifully appointed, the accommodations we had were equal to any first class hotel. The dining room contained individual tables, so we had a table for two. Every evening for "dinner" the ladies wore evening gowns and the gentlemen full dinner dress. A fine orchestra played during the meal and afterwards in a hall set apart for dancing, played the dance music. There is no hardship these days in taking an ocean voyage, and I thought of Columbus, and even others since his day who found "going down to the sea in ships" a high adventure full of tremendous hazards. Through the thoughtfulness of Brother Robert A. Lloyd, of Saint Louis, I was introduced to Rabbi Thurman, who is the popular minister of one of the largest temples of that city. I found the companionship of this gentleman very enjoyable, and we had several interesting conversations during which he told me that he was on his way to Russia to observe conditions, and hoped to report in some lectures to his own people his findings. This was interesting to me as I was reading Duranty Reports Russia during the voyage.

The journey across the sea was dull and wet most of the way over, and a reference to the "log" shows that the five days after leaving Ambrose Light are registered as "overcast, cloudy, fresh breeze, and rough or moderate seas." The entire distance covered was 3,093 miles. The steaming time 5 days, 14 hours, 9 minutes. The average speed 23.06 knots per hour.

As we steamed slowly into beautiful

Plymouth harbor, we passed the two American cruisers which were lying at anchor there and had just preceded us a few hours. These monsters looked pretty in their new white paint and scrupulously clean equipment, and the American flag bellying in the wind was a refreshing sight to the six hundred passengers for whose benefit the warships "dipped" the flags. As we looked seawards from the "tender" which was taking us to the docks the giant liner which had been our home, was heading out to sea on her way to Havre in France. She made an impressive sight, her three funnels belching smoke; she was speeding through the waters so rapidly that before we had landed she was almost lost in the haze.

After the usual waiting and anxiety of passing through the customs we boarded the Great Western Train and at 6 p. m. were rushing through the glorious county of Devon. All the way from Plymouth to London we passed through one continual garden. Though the country had been without rain for two months, and the drought was so serious that conditions had not been so bad for over one hundred years, the landscape was entrancing. Which ever way one looked, it seemed as though we were looking upon the paintings of Constable and Turner all the time. And the twilight which in this country lingers so long, still filled the sky with light as we reached London about ten-fifteen at night. Our train traveled the distance of 237 miles without stopping and it had only taken four hours and twenty-five minutes.

Mrs. Rushton and myself were very happy to see Brother Goullee waiting for us and soon after sundry journeyings through the tubes, and over the streets by busses we were finally safely housed in their hospitable home. Truly, to echo the language of my traveling companion, "it is all like a dream!" We spent a few days in London during which we met the Saints in Enfield, and Bishop and Mrs. Trapp, and then traveled north to Leeds. Here, we were met by our relatives and given a hearty welcome. We are now settling down and getting ourselves established for the stay in this mission and look forward under Divine favor to a happy and profitable time for the work's sake.

To all the friends who so kindly and generously thought of us we send our sincere thanks and cordial greetings.

JOHN W. RUSHTON.

HAREHILLS, LEEDS, ENGLAND. 9 Milan Road.

Members of the Laurel Club of Philadelphia Branch gave Sister D. J. Williams a surprise kitchen shower at her home, July 10. The evening was spent playing games, and refreshments were served. Philadelphia members wish Brother and Sister Williams success in their new field of labor.

Hazel-Dell Branch

Weston, Iowa

This branch is presided over by Brother James C. Jensen who is assisted by two fellow priests, one elder, and two teachers. For friendly advice these workers often seek and rely on Patriarch John A. Hansen, ordained to that office last conference. Several men from neighbor branches occupy this pulpit from time to time.

It was a joy to all to see six young people enter the waters of baptism in June. These were confirmed July 8, at a special meeting.

They have a well-organized Sunday school in charge of Earl Jensen. Three classes meet upstairs in the church, and there are three in the basement besides a sand table class for the small children.

The women's department meets once a month with some member, doing work of different kinds. They gave a picnic for the branch in the grove of Harry Olsen not long ago.

The young people have been active this year, and indications are that for some time to come they will be kept busy. In the spring they gave a play two evenings at Weston hall. The proceeds of this entertainment were devoted to the needs of the Sunday school classes in the basement, small chairs, papers, and other materials for the children. Lately a carnival on the church grounds yielded them a good little sum which is to buy music for the choir now being promoted by Sisters Leona Handlen and Edna Handlen.

Valley Center, Michigan

Growing Spiritually and Numerically

The young people, assisted by the divisional commander, A. E. Ledsworth, organized a company of the Zion's Legion, with the following officers: Company commander, Leila Green; director of solicitation, Harold Muir; director of socialization, Isabel Murray; director of publicity, Dorothy Muir; secretary, Virginia Murray, and treasurer, Edward Gardner. The group commanders have not yet been appointed. These Saints are looking forward to the work of this organization.

A spiritual meeting was enjoyed, Sunday, July 8, by the Saints in the morning social service. District President William Grice, Pastor H. E. C. Muir, and Elders E. D. Finken and W. A. Murray were in charge. Elder Grice gave a very interesting and spiritual exhortation. Much interest was manifest by those in attendance. The Spirit was in evidence from the opening of the service. The Lord spoke encouraging and comforting words of instruction through Sister Harold Muir.

The good spirit of the morning continued its manifestations, resting in power upon Pastor H. E. C. Muir, who delivered a gift of prophecy, in which Brother Floyd Silverthorn was called to the office of priest, Carver Isles, teacher, and the pastor's son, Thomas Muir, deacon. Words of comfort and instruction were given others.

In the afternoon, the members of the branch met at the banks of Black River on the R. J. McLane property to witness a baptismal ceremony. After an impressive ceremony, consisting of an address by Elder William Grice, and a charge to the candidates by the pastor, Elder Harold Muir, the five candidates were baptized. Those officiating in the baptisms were Elder Harold Muir, who baptized Harold Barr, Robert Muir, and Gladys Silverthorn; Elder Ardrey Murray, who baptized his son, John Murray, and Elder Everett Finken, who baptized his son, Scott Finken.

In the evening, the confirmation service was held. Elders Grice, Muir, Finken, and Murray officiated. After the confirmation, Elder Grice preached on the "Signs of the Times."

On Wednesday evening, July 11, the members of the branch met at the home of Pastor Muir for a surprise birthday party. The evening was spent pleasantly in visiting. After lunch, Willard Green, in behalf of the branch, presented Elder Muir a gift.

Special days of the year have been observed with appropriate programs.

Decatur, Illinois

Host to Inspirational Conference

Central Illinois district conference, held at Decatur, June 2 and 3, was an inspiration to many. A large attendance was had from each branch of the district, and also from Belleville, Casey, and Xenia. It was Missionary L. G. Holloway's first appearance in his new mission field.

At the Saturday afternoon business session, the names of three men were recommended to occupy in offices of the priesthood. Apostle D. T. Williams spoke on the organization and work of the young people. Delmer Jones, of Taylorville, and Sister Lena Fusselman, of Hull, were appointed district leaders of the young people.

The church was filled at the Sunday morning prayer service, and an abundance of God's Spirit was enjoyed.

Preceding the sacrament service Delmer Jones, of Taylorville, and Elza Kratzer, of Beardstown, were ordained priests and Brother Griffiths, of Taylorville, a deacon.

In the afternoon, Beardstown Choir rendered special numbers, and L. G. Holloway delivered an inspiring message to the young people on "Our Heritage."

Decatur Saints were happy to have Apostle D. T. Williams with them the evenings of May 30 and June 2.

A special Children's Day program was given by the junior department, Sunday, June 10.

Through the efforts of an isolated Bloomington member, Herbert A. Vielhak, wife, and children, Lois and Mabel, of Bloomington, were baptized July 1, in Decatur Lake, by Elder O. C. Johnson. Confirmation service was held preceding the sacrament service.

Decatur Saints celebrated July 4, with a picnic, sponsored by the young people, at the home of Brother and Sister Henry Atkinson, near Lovington.

Seattle, Washington

Enjoy Special Occasion

The young women and girls of this branch sponsored a mother and daughter banquet in tribute to their mothers May 11. Fifty-two women gathered for the event, and mothers and daughters were seated together. The tables were beautifully decorated in pastel colors, pale pink predominating. Miss Frances Holman and Mrs. Edith Earl King, both of the young people's department, deserve special mention for the delicious dinner they set before the guests. The commendable part of the event was that no mother was allowed to work in the kitchen. Under the supervision of Dwight Davis; David Emslie, Marvin McDole and Riley Gilmore served the meal.

The attractiveness of that banquet program will long be remembered. It opened with a Mother's Day song by Sylvia Martin. Then a toast to "Mother" was read by the toastmistress, Miss Grace Emslie, supervisor of the young people's department, who was assisted by a number of young girls. A talk on "Mother," was given by Sister Emma McDole, supervisor of religious education, and the girls' glee club sang "That Beautiful Mother of Mine," followed by a benediction by the toastmistress and the reading of a prayer entitled, "My Mother."

One of the prettiest weddings to be held at the church in a long time took place June 19, when Wana Black and Loren McDole were married by District President Monte E. Lasater. The young couple are making their home at Mount Vernon, Washington, where Brother McDole is employed. This was another Graceland College romance, the bride coming from Iowa. The best wishes of Seattle Branch go with this splendid young couple.

Another wedding of interest took place on Saturday evening, July 7, when Sister Emma McDole and Apostle Myron McConley were joined in wedlock by President Frederick M. Smith, who came from Independence, Missouri, for the occasion. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few relatives and close friends. Sister McConley will accompany Apostle McConley to his mission field in Southeastern United States. The many friends of Sister McConley will miss her greatly as she is widely and lovingly known throughout the Seattle-British Columbia District, where she was director of religious education. It will be difficult to find someone to fill her place. They wish for Brother and Sister McConley a great portion of joy and happiness and the blessing of God on their new missionary activities.

President Smith preached two powerful sermons Sunday, morning and evening. He chose as his subject on both occasions, "What the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper Means to Latter Day Saints." Many members came in from the neighboring branches for the day.

Apostle Edmund Gleazer has recently moved his family to Seattle, where they will occupy the McDole residence. Seattle Saints welcome them.

On Wednesday evening, July 11, the following branch officers were elected to take office in October. They are: branch president, Elder Alma Johnson, and his counselors, Elder A. C. Martin and Dave Colman; branch secretary, Earlita Emslie; treasurer, Harold Watkins; chorister, Beulah Wright; auditor, Irene Emslie; publicity agent, Julius Abegg; trustee, A. C. Martin; pastor of junior church, Charles Powers; director of religious education, A. C. Martin; supervisor adult department, Elba Crum; supervisor young people's department, Grace Emslie; supervisor children's department, Mary Jane Johnson, and secretary church school, Eileen Sylvester.

Santa Ana, California

Disease Epidemic Has Limited Branch Activities Here

"What do we need to make Zion a reality? Willingness and obedience! And in all things we must be obedient if we are to be a saved people. . . . Any branch that fails to function in a manner that makes the gathering a reality has not made its contribution to salvation." Thus in a logical and positive manner Apostle E. J. Gleazer addressed Santa Ana Saints in a recent sermon on the function of the branch in the plan of gathering to Zion. D. B. Sorden and wife drove down from Los Angeles and Saints from Long Beach were also present at the service. Brother Gleazer and family are making a short visit in Southern California, and are planning to leave this week for the north.

The young people's division under direction of Sister L. J. Ostertag showed a continued improvement in attendance during the spring and early summer months. Meetings in the homes of the young people and frequent outings and good times together have helped to keep them interested and eighteen members from Santa Ana attended the all-day rally at Arrowhead Lake on Memorial Day.

A number of the Santa Ana Saints have been ill, Sister Charles Calkins, in charge of the junior church school, is recovering from a serious illness that has kept her at home for over a month, Sister Stella Best, branch chorister, is just home from the hospital where she underwent an operation, and Sister Emma Kohl is at present in the hospital very ill from gangrene. Then the epidemic of infantile paralysis in Orange County made it advisable to discontinue the church school for a few weeks so the branch has, as a group, suffered because of the sickness of others. Now, however, the sick are recovering and the church school will begin to function again next Sunday.

Louis J. Ostertag, pastor, has been constantly visiting and administering to the sick while the women of the church, under the direction of Sister Muriel Cliff, have held a special prayer service each Thursday morning, remembering those in especial need of God's help.

Thayer, Missouri

Host to District Conference

An evening service was held at Thayer, Friday, July 6, preparatory to the opening of the district conference. Missionary J. Charles May, District President W. E. Haden, and Apostle John F. Garver were present to welcome the Saints. All enjoyed the stereopticon slides and music furnished by Brother May. A part of the evening was spent in class study, conducted by E. C. Shelley.

The conference opened the following morning at nine o'clock, with a prayer service. The business session was held the following afternoon, and the work of the priesthood and lay members was noted with deep gratitude.

Officers selected for the district during the coming year are as follows: W. E. Haden, district president; George Davis, bishop's agent; W. W. Chrestensen, church school superintendent; Bertha McLain, secretary, and Clarence Mayo, publicity agent.

The program in the evening, consisting of songs, recitations, and dialogues, in charge of Sister Agie Adams, was greatly appreciated.

The opening prayer service Sunday morning was well attended. The Spirit of God was present in great abundance, and all were made to rejoice. Brother Garver, through a prophecy, gave much encouragement to the Saints. Talks were given in the afternoon by Brothers Simmons, Baker, and Wiggins, and also by Sister Bronson on church school work. Brothers May and Jim Malone favored the congregation with selections on their guitars.

J. Charles May occupied in the evening, closing the conference with a fine sermon. Monday morning Brothers Haden, Garver, May and Chrestensen left for Kennett, Missouri. They returned to Thayer the following day, and games, songs and a program furnished the

Sylvania Has All-day Priesthood Gathering

Saints from six branches in North-western Ohio District, Toledo, Bradner, Saint Marys, Oak Harbor, Lima, and Sylvania, enjoyed a priesthood all-day meeting July 15. Fourteen of the Melchisedec priesthood were on the rostrum during the 9 a. m. prayer meeting, a service which began a busy and spiritual day.

Former Oelwein Member Keeps in Touch With Branch

Charles McKusker, a former member of Oelwein Branch, Iowa, sends his birthday offering each year. He sends also a letter telling of his faith and his desire for righteousness. Now seventy-six years of age, Brother McKusker is an isolated Saint.

Do Good

Do good by stealth, and blush to find it fame.—Pope.

Mrs. Deal Six Directs Group at State Meet

Mrs. Deal Six, formerly of Independence, Missouri, directed the group of dramatic players which represented the Presbyterian Church of Vinland, Kansas, last month, at the annual meeting of the Kansas Council of Religious Education at Hutchinson.

Last year this group of players, coached by Mrs. Six, won the silver cup for the best biblical dramatic performance in the State. The play given this year was "The Gate Beautiful."

Mrs. Six has been connected with the directing of several General Conference pageants, and associated with the White Masque Players. She is a dramatist of known ability.

Central Illinois Saints Meet Missionary L. G. Holloway

Members of Central Illinois District met their new district missionary, Elder L. G. Holloway, at their inspirational conference early in June, held at Decatur. Brother Holloway delivered a message to the young people, "Our Heritage," Sunday afternoon.

Making His Way

The individual who can do something that the world wants done will, in the end, make his way regardless of his race.—Booker T. Washington.

events of the day, which culminated in an ice cream social in the evening.

This branch is proud of their group of young people. Recently they installed a volley ball court. The young people meet in class each Sunday and are doing a fine work.

At this time Brother Garver bade the Saints good-bye and left to go north. Brother Haden drove him to his destination along with Brothers May and Christensen. Upon their return Friday the missionary tent was put up, and a series of meetings was begun.

Clinton, Missouri

This congregation was happy to make the acquaintance of a priesthood member, who came in June with his family for a short stay at Clinton. Much good was derived from their visit.

Regular Sunday school services are held at the home of Brother and Sister Roy Payne, 115 North Second Street. Sacrament services are also held in this home, with Elder Duffey, of Post Oak, in charge. Weekly prayer meetings are also held.

Clinton Saints were happy to be the guests of the Post Oak congregation, June 17. All-day services were enjoyed with a basket lunch at noon. In the afternoon, three children were baptized, Wilma and Maxine Bath, of Clinton, and a little boy, of Post Oak.

Brother and Sister Cecil Dibble and family were guests here July 8. They left for their home in Kansas, with hope of making their home in Clinton in the near future, if possible. Brother Dibble was forced to resign from his work in the coal mines because an explosion crippled his hand.

All Saints passing near or through Clinton, are cordially invited to attend services here.

Colorado Springs, Colorado

Under the leadership of an earnest worker, Floyd Engstrom, this group of young people held a prayer meeting in the mountains. A spiritual hour was enjoyed.

Three young men of this congregation were called to the priesthood recently. Brother Cummings, priest, Ray Eberling, priest, and Harold DaCorta, teacher.

Pastor Eberling has been carrying a heavy burden, trying to act in every capacity, and will greatly appreciate the services of the young priesthood members.

J. D. Curtis conducts a Bible Class every Sunday night. A number of strangers are interested.

This group of Saints enjoyed the meetings held during President F. M. McDowell's visit.

The women are busy getting ready for the coming reunion, to be held in an ideal spot at the foot of the mountains.

One sister, recently baptized, said to Brother Eberling: "I have no money to give the church, but am willing to keep the building clean." The appearance of the meeting place is a credit to her.

Oelwein, Iowa

A group of twenty Saints drove to the district conference at Rock Island, Illinois. They were happy to renew old acquaintances and to make new friends. Especially were the Saints happy to become acquainted with R. E. Davey, who is laboring in Rock Island District.

The church is represented in the local kitten ball league. Eight church teams form the league and games are played almost every evening. Quite a bit of interest has been created.

Sister Mary Nedreau and Sister Hulda Westendorf were visitors during the month of July. They are isolated from the church, and were happy for this opportunity.

Charles McKusker, a former member of Oelwein Branch, sends his birthday offering each year. He always sends a letter telling of his faith and his desire to do right. Brother McKusker is seventy-six years of age, and is an isolated member.

Brother Russell Shippy, who was ordained a deacon at the recent conference, preached his first sermon July 8.

The Emma Burton Circle, under the leadership of Sister Ruby McFarlane has been enjoying good meetings in spite of the heat. They are using Religion in the Home as a course of study.

Glenwood, Iowa

Mother's Day was observed Sunday, May 13. In the morning Sunday school, and preaching services were held. A basket dinner was served at noon. In the evening, a three-act play, "An Old-fashioned Mother," was presented by the young people. This same play was given two weeks later at Council Bluffs.

Two children were baptized Children's Day, by Elder Ray Whiting and confirmed by Elder D. D. Smith and Patriarch John Hanson. Those baptized were Patricia Sandell and Gene Wells.

The Saints of this congregation met at the home of an aged couple, Brother and Sister Ettleman, Sunday, June 24, to hold services. A basket dinner was enjoyed at noon. In the afternoon a song and testimony service was held out of doors. The Spirit of the Master was present.

The women's department are meeting each Thursday afternoon and making articles to be sold at a bazaar this fall.

An all-day meeting was held Sunday, July 22, with a basket dinner at noon. A large crowd was in attendance, and an enjoyable day was spent.

Beloit, Wisconsin

236 Saint Lawrence Avenue

Elder John Maas, of Watertown, was the speaker Sunday morning, July 15. Following the service a lunch was served at the church.

William Johnson spoke to this congregation July 8.

The communion service, July 1, was in charge of Brothers Cleo Heide, Noah Johnson, and Wilber Johnson.

The speaker on June 24, was Harry A. Wasson. At this service the infant son of Sister Lola Phieffer was blessed and given the name of Philip Arnold.

Noah Johnson was the speaker June 10 and 17.

This congregation was represented at the district conference, June 10, at Lancaster, Wisconsin, by Brother Alvin West and Pastor Harry A. Wasson.

Two prayer services have been held recently at the home of Sisters Townsend and Witheral, who are unable to attend services because of advanced years.

An ice cream social was held the evening of July 7, at the home of Brother and Sister A. E. Martin.

The classes of Zelma Martin and Jack Rawson, had a picnic at Big Hill Park, July 1.

Wednesday, July 11, Sister Zelma Martin's class spent the day cleaning the church.

In spite of small attendance, the women's department has been holding regular meetings.

Adelaide, South Australia

Although this small and isolated branch is the only one in the State, the Saints are loyal, and they are endeavoring to carry on the work of the Master.

Elder J. C. Cornish, pastor, is to be commended for his work and sacrifice. His wife, who also shoulders the responsibility, is loved and respected by these members.

The church school, under the capable supervision of G. B. Turner, is functioning well. The Temple Builders and women's circle are working harmoniously and satisfactorily, and the Orioles are adopting the new Oriole program. The branch also has a scout troop and a wolf cub pack.

The young people are taking an active stand, capable, enthusiastic, and loyal.

Apart from the regular social gatherings conducted by the May Flower Club, many other successful and varied functions have taken place.

Earlier in the year a "Girl Week" was conducted. This was the first time the idea has been carried out, and its success was gratifying. On Thursday night, of that week, the parents and friends of the girls were presented a fine program by the girls, and Elder Cornish spoke on the theme of the evening. A display of work by the girls was shown, and there was competition in cookery, needlework, knitting, and handcraft. In the arrangement of afternoon tea tables, cut flowers, and bowls of fruit added color and attractiveness. The judges commended the girls on the high standard of their work.

These Saints are eagerly looking forward to visits later in the year, from Apostle George G. Lewis and Patriarch J. H. N. Jones.

Union Branch

Clitherall, Minnesota

Under the leadership of Sister Mabel Stabnow, the young people of this branch organized themselves into the Onward and Upward League in May. They hold regular meetings twice a month on Saturday nights. The meetings include business, programs, games and lunch. Much interest is manifested in their activities. Miss Norma Whiting is secretary-treasurer of this organization.

The young people are faithful in attendance at all church services, and have leveled and seeded the church lawn and marked the boundary between it and the schoolyard with a neat row of stones. A number of the young men and women were able to attend the young people's rally at Mille Lac, July 28 and 29.

The women's department, besides their sewing, are now taking up the study of the Book of Mormon, with Sister Ethel Tucker as teacher. They served a waffle supper in June, and netted about thirteen dollars from the supper and the sale of a few pieces of fancywork.

United prayers were offered by the members of this branch in June for rain, and the following Wednesday, the first rain for almost a month came. The rains continued during the rest of June and the first part of July.

The two attractions of Clitherall, its location in the "park region" of Minnesota, and its historic interest to the church, bring a number of summer visitors to the services. Among them are: Brother and Sister Wilson, two children; and Miss Essex, of Miami, Oklahoma; Horace Darby, of Minneapolis; Floyd Whiting, of Saint Paul; Sister Beil, son and daughter and Betty Brown, of Iowa; and Sister Ann Barnhart and daughter, Bonnie, of Independence. The Kellar family, of Wadena, who have not been able to attend for several months, have met with these Saints twice; Harry Trowbridge and family, of Frazee, spent one Sunday here; also, a Brother Owens and family, of Detroit Lakes, and Sister Adah Carlson, district young people's leader.

Pastor Lester Whiting has made several trips to Frazee, Bemidji, Bagley, and Fisher in the interests of the church, and finds the need for workers greater than the supply.

Sister Macre Peek, who has returned to her former home in Kentucky, is greatly missed by this congregation.

C. G. Mesley Meets With Rich Hill Young People

Elder C. George Mesley, of Kansas City Stake, conducted five class periods during the young people's convention of Rich Hill District, Missouri, July 21 and 22. The theme of study was "A Program for the Young People's Division," and topics discussed were "Know Your Church," "Appreciate Character Growth," "Have a Well-rounded Program," "Make Leisure Creative," and "Keep God's Laws." Brother Mesley's frankness and sincerity gave to his message a power which inspired all his young hearers.

Other church officers and friends of young people to help in the convention were District President Birch Whiting, Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley, and Esmond Crown, of Hitman, Iowa.

Saints Pray for Rain

Word comes that in many places throughout the church stricken with drouth and water shortage, the Saints and their neighbors are praying for rain.

At Atherton, Missouri, Holden Stake, a recent Sunday evening service was devoted to prayers for moisture to save the crops. Stone Church young people, Independence, on one Wednesday night dedicated their service to prayers for help.

Missionary Meetings for Thayer, Missouri

Thayer Saints find themselves in the midst of a series of tent meetings since the close of their late district conference. Elders W. E. Haden, J. Charles May, and Walter Chrestensen are in charge. Crowds are increasing, and two were baptized last Sunday.

Young People to District Reunions

In a number of districts in the church young people are planning to attend reunion in a group, and throughout the warm weather months have been busy adding to their reunion expense fund.

Among these groups of workers can be counted Vinalhaven, Maine. There the whole branch works on this project, sponsoring Thursday evening suppers. They hope to send a fine group of young men and women to the Brooksville reunion, August 11 to 19.

Independence

The closing session of the daily vacation Bible school was held Friday, July 20. Classes were conducted under the successful leadership of the teachers, Mrs. James Moses, Mrs. Frank Jennings, Mrs. John R. Lentell, and Mrs. C. B. Woodstock. An average attendance of one hundred young people met four days each week, for six weeks, receiving instruction in class study, and participating in group singing and supervised recreation. Leaders in charge of this movement feel that much has been accomplished, and it is their desire to make the Bible school an annual event for all young people in Independence.

President Elbert A. Smith delivered his sermon, "The Laying on of Hands." to a large and interested congregation, Sunday night. Saints of Spring Branch were special guests for the evening, and Elder Morris Jacobsen, pastor of the Spring Branch congregation, assisted President Smith and Pastor John F. Sheehy throughout the service.

Stone Church

Elder Leonard Lea concluded his series of sermons at the Stone Church, Sunday morning, July 29, using as his subject "John." The two preceding Sundays he discoursed on "Peter" and "James." A large and interested congregation listened to the various characteristics of John.

The Stone Church choir, under the leadership of Paul N. Craig, furnished special music during the preaching hour. The choir was assisted by Hazel Scott Withee, at the organ, and Albert Brackebury and Mrs. Paul Nelson, soloists.

The Fellowship Group, led by Pastor John F. Sheehy, held their regular devotional service at the auditorium, last Thursday night. Elder C. G. Mesley, of Kansas City Stake, was the speaker. This group, composed of about forty young men, was organized last fall. Their motto is taken from the Book of Mormon: "And they were all young men, and they were exceeding valiant for courage, and also for strength and activity; but behold, this was not all: they were men who were true at all times in whatsoever thing they were entrusted; yea, they were men of truth and soberness, for they had been taught to keep the commandments of God, and to walk uprightly before him."—Alma 24: 76, 77. Each member carries a copy in his pocket and tries to organize his life according to the group motto.

Members of the Stone Church congregation were saddened by the death of three women. Mrs. Nellie Moore, forty-nine years old, died at the Independence Sanitarium, July 24. Funeral services were conducted from the Stahl Funeral Home, Elder B. R. McGuire preaching the sermon. Burial was in Floral Hills Cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Fern Crandell Johnson, forty-seven years old, who died July 20, at her home in Boone, Iowa, were conducted from the Latta Funeral Home, Elder John F. Sheehy in charge. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Mrs. Beulah Dittmore Webster, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. and Cora Mae Dittmore, passed away July 26, at her home, after a brief illness. Funeral services were conducted from the Stahl Funeral Home, after which the remains were taken to Troy, Kansas, where a short service was held. Elder J. E. Vanderwood was the speaker at both services.

The Stone Church Boys' Choir, directed by J. Glenn Fairbanks, gave a concert Friday night, July 27, in the Stone Church. The choir was assisted throughout their concert by several of their number, Warren Cannon, Billie McPherson, and Wayne Cannon. Mr. Paul N. Craig comments that its permanency is well established as an organization to build up talent among the young boys of Independence. Brother Craig has extended an invitation to the boys to sing Sunday morning, August 12, at the Stone Church, and to have their music broadcast at eleven o'clock.

Walnut Park Church

Sunday, July 22, the program of the church school was in charge of the orchestra, under the direction of Brother Orlando Nace. A special number by this group following the class period was very much enjoyed by the members of the school. At eleven o'clock, Pastor Frank McDonald was the speaker.

Sunday, July 29, Brother Odess Athey presented another of the series of programs in "Favorite Hymns," "Abide With Me" being the hymn of the morning. It was sung by Melba Moorman and Margaret Chapman, and Brother Athey gave a history of the hymn and its composer.

Elder R. D. Weaver, the speaker at eleven o'clock Sunday morning, was greeted by a full church. Special music at this service was furnished by the girls' chorus. No junior service was held at this hour, many of the children singing in the chorus and most of the others attending the service in the upper auditorium.

A special officers' and teachers' meeting was held at five o'clock Sunday afternoon, at which time reports of the work in the various departments were received and discussed.

At a picnic of the intermediate department held recently at the home of Brother and Sister Benjamin Bean, winning classes in a contest covering church attendance for the last quarter, were announced, those taught by Sister Fern Price, first, and the class of Sister Jesse Hart, second. The prize was to be a church history trip, which will be staged in the near future.

The program of summer activities is drawing to a close. The playground ball season reaches the end of its schedule this week. Interest has been good and both players and spectators have thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

Liberty Street Church

A decided improvement has been made upon the outside appearance of the Liberty Street church building. When outside repair work was finished, two young men repainted all the doors, woodwork, and floor. The services on the work were donated.

Brother and Sister S. D. Wilson have sent word that they are happy to be with the Saints on Enoch Hill. Their friends at Liberty Street sincerely wish the old couple a pleasant residence in their new home. Sister Wilson recently celebrated her sixty-seventh birthday.

Second Church

An organ prelude, played by Mrs. Sam Inman, opened the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning. Elder Sam Inman was in charge, and the speaker, Elder Frank Veenstra, chose for his subject, "By Their Fruits Ye Shall Know Them." Special numbers were sung by Edward Stowell, accompanied by Louise Sarratt, and by Mrs. Paul Wheeler, accompanied by Mary Okerlind.

Gordon Cable was in charge of the junior service. Fred Pinson, the speaker, chose for his subject, "Faithful Stewards." Geraldine Fields told a story and a special number was a song by the girls' chorus. Geneva Edmunds plans the programs for each Sunday service.

Miss Ethel Carbaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Carbaugh, and Melton A. White, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. White, were united in marriage Sunday afternoon, July 29, at the home of Pastor Will Inman, in the presence of immediate families. The ceremony was read by Brother Inman.

Enoch Hill Church

Elder O. W. Sarratt, a former pastor of Enoch Hill church, was in charge of the early morning prayer service, Sunday, assisted by Elders C. E. Beal and Dick Bullard.

The intermediate girls taught by Sister Chester Constance, and Sister E. A. Thomas, were in charge of the worship period at the church school hour. A program of songs, readings, and recitations was greatly enjoyed by the congregation. Miss Alice Constance assisted the girls at the piano throughout their program.

Elder Joseph Martin was the morning speaker, using as his subject, "The Laying on of Hands." Special music was furnished by the choir, directed by Mrs. Amos Allen.

Brother and Sister Lancelot Heath are happy to announce the birth of a son, Nelson Lancelot, born Wednesday, July 25.

East Independence Church

Recreation at the volley ball courts each Tuesday evening, draws large crowds of young people. Much interest is manifest in their activities.

The prayer service, Wednesday evening, in charge of Pastor Frank Minton and Arthur Peer, was largely attended.

The women's department met Thursday at the church, under the leadership of Sister Frank Minton. The program consisted of a reading by Leland Belk and a piano solo by Junior Minton. Brother Robert Fish was the teacher of the Doctrine and Covenants class.

The church school, Sunday morning, was in charge of Clare Austin, assisted by Guy Hanson. The orchestra played three numbers.

Pastor Frank Minton and Elder G. W. Eastwood were in charge of the morning preaching hour. The choir, under the direction of Sister J. Friend, sang "Fairest Lord Jesus." Sister Meadows singing the second verse as a solo. The speaker, Elder J. W. A. Bailey, delivered an inspirational sermon.

Englewood Church

Two candidates were baptized into the kingdom of God, Tuesday evening, July 24. Barbara La Rue, of Le Fois, Texas, was baptized by Brother R. W. Howery, and confirmed by Elders Earl Moore and Arthur Welch. Barbara is a granddaughter of Sister Lanham. At the church school hour, July 29, Sister Amy Stoker, wife of Brother Harry Stoker, was baptized by Brother Ralph Goold. At the eleven o'clock service she was confirmed by Elders R. W. Howery and Ralph Goold.

The speakers for the past two Sundays have been Pastor R. W. Howery and Elder A. G. Hougas. Also at the eleven o'clock hour, a quartet composed of Sister Addie Stowell, Sister Marie Budd, Brother Mat Taylor, and Brother Corliss McConnell, sang a number.

A daughter was born to Brother and Sister Walter E. Wyatt, Friday, July 20. She has been given the name Donna Lee.

An ice cream social, sponsored by the women's department, was held Friday night, August 3. The proceeds were used for purchasing materials for renovating the church.

Crescent, Iowa

On Sunday, June 3, Brother Howard C. Harpham, of Oklahoma, began a series of missionary services at Crescent Branch and continued for two weeks. There was a good attendance each evening, and a fine spirit prevailed. The series closed with a special meeting of which the young people of the district were in charge. The following evening, Friday the 15th, an ice cream social was enjoyed by Saints and friends of Crescent and vicinity.

The young people have expressed a desire to have a midweek round-table class, where they can assemble to discuss problems that are vital to them.

The basement of the church, much needed for the junior church school, is near completion. This is the result of the cooperation of the women's work and other Saints and friends who contributed freely of their time and means toward the endeavor.

In the past year a number of the Saints have felt more keenly the need of complying with the financial law, and some have filed their inventories. Others feel that they should, and it is hoped they will comply soon.

Although Crescent has been blessed to a great extent and has appreciated those blessings, yet it has been made sad by the passing of two faithful and devoted Saints, Sister Christina Hemmingsen and Brother Abner Pratt.

It is believed the Spirit is among the people of this branch, causing them to move forward and giving them a keen desire to learn more of God and the building of his church and kingdom.

The Cake That Helped to Celebrate Forty Years in the Missionary Field

Central Michigan Saints observed the consummation of forty years of service by Elder Hubert Case as missionary for the church, at Beaverton, June 30. The Saturday night banquet was attended by 125 guests, and a most entertaining and profitable program was enjoyed.

A large "anniversary" cake on which were forty candles was placed before Elder Case.

Calumet, Oklahoma

District President Z. Z. Renfroe just closed a series of meetings at Calumet. Though no candidates were baptized, workers believe there will be baptisms soon, and feel spiritually strengthened and encouraged.

The young people plan to attend the district reunion in a group again this year. All are praying for the success of the reunion.

Kansas City Stake

The study classes held bi-weekly, under the leadership of Brothers J. A. Koehler and R. L. Bishop, have been concluded and the regular priesthood meetings resumed.

In the recent declamatory contest, which is a part of the O. B. K. Forensics, the cup was won by the Chelsea group. Entries in all classes were of a high quality. In connection with the contest a hobby exhibit was held, and many types of workmanship and collections were displayed. These contests stimulate cultivation of the talents of the young people and have been very successful.

Central Church

Central young people were in charge of the Sunday evening service, July 15, and were delighted to have as their speaker, Elder Roy A. Cheville, head of the religious education department at Graceland College. Kenneth Simms was in charge of the program; Jack Burlington led the congregational singing, and Jeannette Dunn sang, "Thanks Be to God." Brother Cheville gave an inspiring sermon, using as his theme the words, "Enlarging Vision," and charging his listeners to an ever-growing life of service. Those who heard him went away filled with new hope and strength, and the young people received valuable experience in church service participation. Miss Genevieve Burgoon plans these monthly Sunday night services.

At the recent morning service this congregation has appreciated the inspiring sermons by Pastor C. E. Wight. Evening services have been discontinued until August 5, due to the extreme heat.

Picnic suppers have been sponsored by the Women's club on prayer meeting nights, and a large group have enjoyed the visiting and the prayer meeting following.

Second Church

This congregation is happy to have its superintendent, Miss Mildred Lungwitz, back again after her visit to Colorado. Miss Lungwitz, with Miss Esther Lungwitz and Miss Edith Driver, motored to Colorado Springs and Denver. The young people at Denver gave a picnic in their honor. They also enjoyed meeting the group at Fort Collins, Colorado.

Recent speakers for this congregation have been Elders Harry Givens, Thomas Newton, and Pastor P. J. Raw. A contest which is being held in the church school has kept interest alive.

Grandview Church

President Floyd M. McDowell addressed this group the evening of June 24, using as his subject, "For Such a Day as This."

The Laurel Club held their semiannual bazaar and dinner the last of June and cleared about thirty dollars.

The Stone Church Boys' Choir, directed by J. Glenn Fairbanks, gave a concert the evening of July 8.

Miss Vera Curtis and John Crimmins were united in marriage July 2, at Lexington, Missouri. They are now at home in Kansas City, Kansas.

Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana Conference

Activities Include Two Wedding Ceremonies

The annual conference of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District, held at Lansing, Michigan, opened Friday evening, July 6, with a musical program presented by the choir of Lansing Branch. And while the concert was of excellent quality, and all felt that the evening had been well spent, these things were all but forgotten when Elder John Luce announced a wedding, and to the strains of the wedding march, Elder S. A. Barss and the happy couple, together with those attending, advanced to the platform. There Brother Barss united Brother Donald DeLong, of Owasso, Michigan, and Sister Verla Eileen Primoe, of Lansing, in marriage. The happy couple were attended by Virgil Fisher, of Williamston, Michigan, and Sister Helen Primoe, of Lansing.

The Spirit of God was manifest in both prayer service and business session, and all of the district officers were sustained.

Again Cupid scored, as without previous announcement, at the close of the business session, Saturday afternoon, another happy group advanced to the front of the church, and Elder S. A. Barss officiated as Brother Edward Knoch, of Hazel Park, Michigan, and Sister Helen Robinson, of Battle Creek, plighted their vows. They were attended by Gregory Masseur, and Helen Primoe, of Lansing.

The conference is regarded as one of the most successful and harmonious this district has enjoyed.

Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota Reunion

Eleven Candidates Baptized

The Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota reunion opened at Chetek, Wisconsin, Saturday afternoon, June 30, and closed Wednesday, July 4. The attendance was fair, but because the reunion draws its major numbers, from a farming community, many could not attend the whole time.

These Saints were especially favored by having President Frederick M. Smith present two days. He evidenced his usual enthusiasm in regard to stewardships and Zion, and stimulated the Saints with the desire to qualify themselves that they might make their contribution when gathered. He was kept busy both in the services and on the grounds during his brief stay, imparting his wise counsel and timely advice. His visit was deeply appreciated.

Class work was conducted every day by Elder Roscoe Davey, district missionary, on the beliefs of the church in their relationship to our zionic ideals, and by Elder Wesley Elvin, of Minneapolis, on the subject, "Physical Zion." Classes were well attended by all those on the grounds.

Preaching services were held every evening by Brother Davey, his theme being "Zionic Qualities and Attitudes." The prayer services were of a high spiritual order, and the Saints expressed themselves as determined to live up to the ideals brought to them by the reunion.

Two baptismal services were held, eleven souls being inducted into the kingdom, and six children were blessed.

Holden Stake

Atherton, Missouri

Prayers for rain were offered by Atherton Saints at the regular Sunday evening service two weeks ago. The entire service was turned over to these requests for moisture, not only for local crops, but for crops and farmers throughout the land. Led by the pastor and members of the priesthood, the Saints one by one stood and prayed for blessings of rain. Participation in the devotions was nearly eighty percent, with deepest faith and humility shown.

At the morning service that Sunday, July 15, Elder D. R. Hughes spoke on "Restoration of the Holy Spirit."

Marguerite Long was brought home Wednesday from a hospital where she underwent an operation for appendicitis. She was administered to several times by Elders G. W. Beebe and J. A. Thomas, with Brother Amos E. Allen leading them at one time. She spent only a week in the hospital, and has surprised her doctor with her rapid recovery.

Mrs. Mildred Lundeen has organized an Oriole group there. The president of the new girls' club is June Long, with Neldalee Hancock elected recorder and Muriel Hughes treasurer. Other charter members are Donna Faye Curtis, Zelpha Aleta Sumners, Mildred Sumners, Judith Bilquist, Virginia Carter, Marjory and Lola Brush. The group is completed at present by Elizabeth White, Elizabeth Murdock, and Lovena and Ruthella Newberry. These girls celebrated their organization, with the class of juniors, taught by Anna Lou Hawes, as guests, by a picnic and boat ride at the home of Brother and Sister Ira Curtis.

Nearly thirty members and visitors met at the church for the regular Wednesday evening prayer service last week.

"How Far Away Is God?" was the theme of the young people's prayer service the morning of July 22. Wendell Van Tuyt and Clifford Long were in charge, and the young people themselves made a good response.

Elder Otho Clark, in his sermon Sunday morning, July 22, emphasized the need of righteousness in everyday living before Zion can truly be established.

Elder J. A. Thomas, pastor of this congregation, was the speaker Sunday evening, and he chose for his subject, "The Modest Authority of Jesus."

Five members are now ready to take the final examination for the course, "How to Teach Religion." The class taught by the pastor has finished its study and review, and the five who want credit will soon be taking the examinations.

Atherton young people are outstanding in their various activities. The girls virtually won first place in volley ball, by winning from Holden Friday night at Lees Summit. The boys lost to Holden, however, putting Holden first in the boys' schedule. This was the last regularly scheduled game for the stake.

Alexander, Kansas

Saints of this small branch greatly enjoy their class work. They understand the financial law better, and think the last year's quarterlies are wonderful. They feel that the whole church owes Brother J. A. Koehler a vote of thanks for his hard work in making the present quarterlies. These books of instruction leave all church members without the excuse that they have had no chance to understand the economic law of Zion. One student has asked for an inventory blank.

On June 10, Brother Reed baptized four candidates, Esther, Leslie and Naomi Kueffer and Laverne Boese. A week later the branch observed Children's Day with a program and basket dinner.

Last week the young people sponsored an ice cream social on the church lawn. It was free to everyone and a good time was enjoyed.

This community has suffered from the depression and the almost unbearable drouth. If rain does not come soon, all stock will have to be sold, as there are no fields, and water in places is gone. The last rain was in May. For the farmers about here cows are the only means of support and the pasture is dried up; so the cows must be sold, too.

Missionary meetings began at Alexander July 29, Elder Charles Fry the speaker. This is a great treat to the Saints who have had no missionary help for more than three years. They hunger and thirst for the word of God.

One of the local young man, Harvey Moore, was married recently.

Little Johnny Boyd and Neleta Bourdant were blessed not long ago by John Teeters.

If you have knowledge, let others light their candles at it.—Margaret Fuller.

Young People's Convention for Rich Hill District

Helpful Program of Study, Worship, and Discussion—New Talent Discovered

A young people's convention for Rich Hill District was held at Rich Hill, Missouri, July 21 and 22. The newly-arranged church with its spacious grounds formed an ideal setting for an inspirational convention.

The convention was opened with a prayer meeting at nine o'clock, Saturday morning. Elder Martin, of Fort Scott, Kansas, was assisted during this service by District President Birch Whiting, of Rich Hill, Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley, Elder George Mesley, of Kansas City Stake, and Esmond Crown, of Hiteman, Iowa.

The class work began at ten o'clock. Brother Mesley devoted five class periods to the study of "A Program for the Young People's Division." The topics discussed were "Know Your Church," "Appreciate Character Growth," "Have a Well-rounded Program," "Make Leisure Creative," and "Keep God's Laws." Brother Mesley's frankness, sincerity, and informal style gave his message a power which inspired his hearers with a desire to carry home to their branches the good received at the convention.

At eight o'clock Saturday evening, a program was given by four of the branches of the district, consisting of songs, instrumental music, and readings. The program was concluded by an inspirational talk by Esmond Crown, who took as his theme, "Giving God Room in Our Everyday Lives."

A fellowship service Sunday morning, in charge of Brothers Mesley, Gunsolley, and Crown, proved to be an inspiring hour. A number of the young people expressed their desires to prepare themselves to render service to the church.

At 9:15, the young people of Rich Hill Branch, gave a worship program built around the theme "Youth in the Church." Immediately following the program, Brother Mesley concluded the last of his five class periods.

At the eleven o'clock hour, Patriarch Gunsolley preached on the subject, "Christian Efficiency." At noon a basket dinner was served cafeteria style from the church dining room.

The vesper service, the climax to the convention, was held at two o'clock. Brother George Mesley presided over this meeting, which proved to be most inspirational.

At three o'clock, a round table discussion was held. On the platform were seated the members of the district presidency, Brothers Whiting, Murdock, and Martin; Elder George Mesley, Patriarch Gunsolley, and Bishop's Agent Arlie D. Allen.

The young people of the district wish to thank the Rich Hill members who so ably took care of the physical needs of the convention.

Reunion Canceled

The reunion of Southwestern Iowa and Northeastern Nebraska, which was to have been held at Council Bluffs, August 24 to September 4, has been canceled. This action was made necessary by the present drouth and economic conditions in this territory.—E. M. Oehring, president Northeastern Nebraska District.

Reunion Notices

Southern California district officers are planning for the largest crowd for many years past at their reunion to be held August 17 to 26. Saints from Arizona, Nevada, and as far away as Utah and Idaho, are expected to attend. The speaking program will be outstanding; some of the best speakers in the church will be available. Classes in various subjects will be taught by E. J. Gleazer, Arthur Oakman, Daniel B. Sorden, and J. A. Koehler. Young people's activities will be superintended by J. L. Milner, district director of religious education, and District President L. L. Sutherland. Children's activities will be under the supervision of Sister D. B. Sorden, of Los Angeles, and several others of the trained district and branch officials. Doctor A. W. Teel, church physician, is also expected to be in attendance part of the time, and will deliver several lectures. The reunion was postponed on account of the infantile paralysis epidemic, but the disease has cleared up and health officials are of the opinion that those attending will have no cause for further alarm.—W. A. Teagarden.

Far West Stake Reunion

The forty-fifth annual reunion of Far West Stake will be held at Stewartville, Missouri August 16-26. The program this year includes both President F. M. Smith and Bishop L. F. P. Curry. President Smith will speak both morning and afternoon the first Sunday, August 19, and Bishop Curry will occupy at similar hours the second and closing Sunday. The daily program also is outstanding. Elder E. Y. Hunker will be the evening speaker throughout the reunion. Class work for all ages will be taught by experienced and capable teachers and will be accredited. Prayer services, special music and drama, recreational and pleasure hours will add to the enjoyment of each day. The order of the services for both Sundays is as follows: Young people's prayer service, 8 to 8:45; general prayer service, 9 to 10:15; children's service, 10 to 12; morning preaching 10:30 to 12; afternoon preaching, 2:30 to 4; evening sermon, 7:30 to 9; O. T. Z. hour 9 to 10; The closing service on August 26, however, will be held at 5 p. m. instead of 7:30. Detailed program will be furnished by addressing The Stake Office, 513 Ballinger Building, St. Joseph, Missouri.

Central Michigan district reunion will be held August 10 to 20, at Edenville. We have a beautiful spot and accommodations include a new auditorium, 35 by 90 feet, a new kitchen, dining room, and running water. Brother Harry Runkle asks all musicians to bring their instruments. He is planning for a large orchestra and choir this year. Everything is planned for a good time spiritually and recreationally. Tents may be obtained for the ten days at the following prices: 9x9, $3.75; 10x12, $4.25; 12x14, $5.75, and 12x16, $6.25. Please send all orders for tents to Otto Bartlett, 615 Carpenter Street, Midland, Michigan. All orders must be in by August 6.—Otto Bartlett.

Our Departed Ones

KLEIN.—Barbara Nitschelm was born at Alsace-Lorraine, Germany, January 9, 1866, and departed this life June 11, 1934, at Pasadena, California. Her husband preceded her in death fourteen months. She came to America when fourteen years old and settled with her people in Chicago, where she married Frederick Wilhelm Klein in October, 1886. They moved to the West living in turn at Portland, Oregon, San Francisco, California, and then at Honolulu, Hawaii, where they heard the gospel message, and were baptized by G. J. Waller in 1901. Sister Klein loved the church and was eager to help in whatever way she could. Her hands were always doing kind things for someone, and her life was made beautiful by faith. Surviving are a son, Walter W. Klein, Santa Monica, California; two daughters, Mrs. Ben H. Budworth, of Sebastopol, California, and Mrs. Lawrence Brockway, Pasadena; eight grandchildren; a sister, Mrs. L. Mueller, of Hollywood; and a brother, Fred Nitschelm, Klamath Falls, Oregon. Funeral services were held at Pierce's Undertaking Parlors, Los Angeles, D. B. Sorden officiating. Interment was in Englewood Park Cemetery.

WEBBE.—Rosa Bonheur Webbe was born to William H. and Ruth Webbe, July 14, 1860, in the city of London, England. With her parents and younger sister she came to America in 1894 to join with others of her brothers and sisters who had preceded them. Rosa Webbe's life was one of Christian service. Always she set a worthy example of worship, activity and fellowship in church circles. She was the first of the family to obey the gospel as she heard it from Elder A. H. Parsons. She united with the church in 1897, and later several of her family followed her example. An elder, a priest, and a teacher in the priesthood are the results of her initiative. She never married, but found the greatest satisfaction in a service of devotion to Sunday school work among the children of her fellow members in several churches. Of her immediate family two brothers survive her passing, Frank C. and Earnest A. Webbe, of Kirtland. She passed peacefully away, June 21, at Lorain, Ohio, where services were conducted by her pastor, Clifford Minkler and later in Kirtland Temple by Elder J. A. McNeil. Interment was in the family burial lot at Euclid Village, Ohio, where her father, mother, one brother and three sisters rest.

JOHNSON.—Fern Crandell, youngest daughter of David C. and Ellen Crandell, was born July 22, 1887, in Shelby County, Iowa, where she grew to womanhood. She was baptized into the church July 12, 1899, at Gallands Grove, Iowa, by Elder John Young. On October 8, 1919, at Sioux City, Iowa, she was united in marriage to Milton Johnson, of Deloit, Iowa, by Elder C. J. Smith, of that city. They lived at Denison for four years when they moved to Boone, where they have since lived. Mrs. Johnson passed peacefully away at her home, after an extended illness. She leaves to mourn her departure, her husband, four sisters, two brothers, other relatives, and a host of friends. Funeral services were held in the Boone church, Wednesday, July 18, in charge of Pastor O. W. Tesdahl, Elder Clyde McDonald, of Des Moines, preaching the sermon. Her body was sent to Independence, Missouri, for burial.

KLOPPING.—Karl W. Klopping was born December 15, 1863, at Freeport, Illinois. He accompanied his parents to Pottawattomie County, Iowa, while he was yet an infant. There he spent the remainder of his life. He succeeded his father as one of the leading stockmen in the county and in this occupation enjoyed a good livelihood. Married Miss Mary Geise, of Council Bluffs, April 25, 1888, and to them were born three boys and three girls all of whom made their home near him. They are Fred Klopping, Mrs. Anna Ross, Walter Klopping, Ella Klopping, and Donald Klopping, of Underwood, Iowa, and Mrs. Erna Fehr, of Oakland, Iowa. He also leaves nine grandchildren and many friends. United with the church in 1916, and remained a faithful member to the end. He was ordained a teacher in 1919, and served in this capacity the remainder of his life. He was devoted to his family and made every provision for their welfare and security. His health began to decline about two years ago. He passed away June 29, 1934, and will be missed greatly, especially in church circles. Funeral services were held July 1, at the Underwood Church, E. Y. Hunker, speaker. Interment was in Walnut Hill Cemetery, Council Bluffs.

CRISWELL.—Alma Irene Criswell was born at Roseby's Rock, West Virginia, October 1, 1897. Departed this life July 2, after an automobile accident a few days before. Surviving are her husband, John Criswell; four children, Harold, Madyin, Clara, and Beulah; her mother, Mrs. Samuel Hall, of Nauvoo; one sister, three brothers, and many friends. She was baptized by Elder Richard Baldwin in 1912, at Nauvoo. Funeral services were held in Nauvoo chapel near Glen Easton by Elder Louis A. Serig. Interment at Nauvoo Cemetery.

SIBURT.—James Sylvester Siburt was born December 28, 1891, at Boman Run, Marshall County, West Virginia. Died July 9, at Moundsville, West Virginia. His wife preceded him in death a few years ago. Surviving are six children: Bernard, Madlyn, Wanda, Flossie, Margaret, and Mary; one brother, Arch, a half-brother, George Criswell, of Wheeling, a half-sister, and Mary Davidson, of Grafton, West Virginia. He was baptized by Elder Thomas Newton several years ago. Funeral services were held at Moundsville, West Virginia, Elder Louis A. Serig officiating. Interment was at Kausooth, West Virginia.

CARLSON.—Ida Rose Nonamaker, daughter of Wilson Nonamaker, was born in Osborne County, Kansas, January 31, 1888, and moved in 1908, with her parents to Manhattan, where she graduated from the home economics course at the State College in 1913. She was married September 21, 1912, to Walter William Carlson, professor in the engineering department. She died July 8, 1934, of cerebral hemorrhage after a few minutes' illness, leaving her husband; one son, Glenn Alvin; two daughters Bula May and Ruth Elaine, two brothers, Joseph and Howard, and one sister, Mrs. J. W. McCullough. She had been a faithful member of the church since the age of fourteen and was influential in holding the small group of Saints together at Manhattan, and was highly respected in the community. Services were conducted by Charles Fry.

CRESE.—Herbert Gardner Cresse was born at Green Creek, New Jersey, April 2, 1860, and died in East Chicago, Indiana, April 19, 1934. He was united in marriage to Anna Cramer, who preceded him in death on November 7, 1900. To this union were born four children: Elsie Stephenson, of Laramie, Wyoming; Geneva Hayward, of Hammond, Indiana; Normand Cresse, of Decatur, Illinois, and Ella Hults, of Hillsboro, Illinois, all of whom survive him, as well as thirteen grandchildren. He was married to Nola Myers in 1903, and she also survives him. He was baptized a member of the church in 1901, at Argentine, Kansas, by Elder J. D. White and ordained to the office of priest at the same place. He was a member of Hammond, Indiana Branch since its organization, and labored faithfully in its upbuilding. At the time of his death he held the positions of branch clerk, bishop's agent and solicitor, teacher of the Bible class in the Sunday school, and teacher of the Book of Mormon class in the religio. The entire membership of the branch mourn the passing of Brother Cresse and miss his presence at the services of the church.

HENDERSON.—Louisa Anetta Henderson was born May 6, 1865, at Rush Valley, Utah, and departed this life June 14, 1934, at Shaunavon, Saskatchewan. She joined the church, June 11, 1933, being baptized by Elder Anson A. Miller. She leaves four children, Alfred Henderson, Bracken, Saskatchewan; Mitchell Henderson, Seattle, Washington; Blanche Milan, Spokane, Washington; Tinterella Bartlett, Shaunavon, Saskatchewan, also eight grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted by Elder Anson A. Miller, and interment was in Hill Crest Cemetery.

JENSEN.—Mary Jensen was born August 27, 1911, near Brooking, Saskatchewan, Canada, and passed from earthly life July 1, 1934, in the Sanatorium at Fort San, Saskatchewan, where she had been a lung patient for three years. Mary was baptized into the church at the age of eight. During her lingering illness she manifest wonderful faith and patience. Left to mourn her departure are a host of relatives and friends, her parents, two sisters and a brother, Elder J. R. Neill, Weyburn, was in charge of the funeral services. Elder C. Bruder, Regina, delivered the funeral sermon. Interment was in Weyburn Cemetery.

LONG.—Ernest William Long was born at Kincardine, Ontario, December 6, 1874. He was united in wedlock to Sarah Powell at Chatham, Ontario, January 13, 1897. He was baptized into the church shortly after his marriage, and was called and ordained to the office of elder. For a number of years Brother Long occupied in his office at Chatham and was instrumental in assisting in the upbuilding of the work at that place. In his early years he had been a school teacher, but he discontinued that line of labor in 1897, and entered the field of accounting and auditing. He was later engaged in business as a retail merchant at Nokomis, Saskatchewan, and still later gave his entire attention to farming, in which pursuit he was more than ordinarily successful. Brother Long departed this life very suddenly at his home at Nokomis, June 29, 1934. He had been out of doors attending to his duties around the farm when he was suddenly stricken, and passed away a few minutes later. The funeral was held Sunday, July 1, from the home, and was in charge of Elder George A. Jordan, of Prince Albert, Saskatchewan. A large gathering of friends and neighbors was present. Brother Long leaves his wife, Mrs. Sarah Long and one sister, Mrs. Bell, of Regina, to mourn his passing.

The Pigeonhole

■ How Swen Baptized Ole

This story reached us by a circuitous route, but it finally arrived. It concerns Brother Swen Swenson, now an aged and retired missionary.

In his more vigorous days, Brother Swenson had gone to a certain place to hold a series of missionary meetings. There was opposition, but that only whetted his appetite for ultimate victory. During the series one man named Ole was particularly active in opposing the work.

When the series of services was over, someone asked him if he would return later. He said, "Yes, I will be back. I must baptize Ole."

When Ole heard it he shouted, "You'll never do it!"

Two more years Brother Swenson returned to hold a series of missionary services, and each time he replied, when asked if he would come again, that he would, since he had to baptize Ole. But Ole never came near the water.

The fourth year, Brother Swenson was baptizing eight people in the neighboring stream. About to conclude the ceremony, for some reason he looked up to the bank where the people stood and asked if there were any more who wished to take the covenant.

There was a stir in the back of the crowd as one man made his way forward.

"Wait for me, Swen!" a voice called. "I'm coming, too!"

It was Ole, at last, coming to be baptized.

■ Pigeonquips

The Pigeon's claim to being literary is based upon his ability to litter up things on the editorial desk. Saturday morning he scattered a lot of small papers around with sentences scratched on them:

"I'm just about ready to hate the person who wrote 'In the Good Old Summer Time.'"

"I see where the Tammany Tiger is fawning around and saying Al Smith is a nice boy again. That is the worst black eye poor Al ever got."

"Whenever Tammany endorses a candidate for office, it is because he will do what it says, and take orders. And that holds for the other Tammanys and corrupt political machines too."

"When two political enemies bury the hatchet, let the public beware."

"No matter what the weather dishes up, it is too much. Our fair weather is a drouth, our breeze is a tornado, our rain is a cloudburst, our warm day burns us to a crisp. Everything is too much."

"I am too hot and tired to get angry now. Almost anybody could pick on me."

■ God's Justice

A newspaper item the other day mentioned "French justice," which reminds us that we have frequently heard "English justice" very highly praised. "American justice" is somewhat in doubt now and our cartoonists frequently label it "injustice."

Pigeon pauses to remark that all these are imitations of and substitutes for the fine old original, which is God's justice, and Pigeon expresses the pious hope that this good though scarce commodity may be found in the judicial dispensaries again sometime.

"The Ministry"

III—JUST TABLE TALK

Some years ago the wife of an ordained man, a pastor, said to me: "In our house we have church troubles for breakfast, for dinner, and for supper." She said it in a sad and discouraged tone. And what she said was true. The husband talked constantly about church troubles, church difficulties, church mistakes, and the faults and foibles of church officials. Particularly was that the conversation at the table. They had church troubles "for breakfast, for dinner, and for supper."

There was a rather large family of children in that home listening with wide open ears. Today they are grown and apparently not one of them has the slightest interest in or respect for the church. Why should they have? The seed planted in young minds grew and developed. To them the church is something to avoid, to regard with suspicion.

Strangely enough that man was at considerable trouble to convert nonmembers to the church. Yet members of the church, and particularly his own children, he converted away from the church by his table talk and street corner talk—just the informal conversation that he habitually indulged in when off guard and when not preaching from the pulpit or arguing points of doctrine with a nonmember.

I am very glad that I grew up in a home where the church was always reverently spoken of. I formed the opinion that it must be a very worth-while institution in which one would find God; and in which he would find many noble men and women. I always heard the men of the church spoken of respectfully—affectionately. I never heard their characters and reputation picked at and picked to pieces. I felt that Brother Joseph, and W. W. Blair, Joseph Lambert, Bishop Blakeslee, those men of whom the family talked, must be men of God. They were. What my life would have been had the church always been under the hammer in my boyhood home I do not know.

Presently as I grew older I discovered for myself that the church had made mistakes, that it was making mistakes, that it would make mistakes in the future. I was old enough then to assimilate that discovery and appraise it for what it was worth and no more; to adjust myself to that conclusion and make the best of it. It is the church in process of development, with many immature members in process of development and making mistakes as they go. If it were not so there would be no place in the church for you and me.

Presently I grew old enough to find out for myself that Brother Joseph and Brother Blair and all the rest of them were at times under the hammer of adverse criticism. I myself heard Brother Joseph in General Conference say that he had been the subject of constant fault-finding and untrue rumors during the entire year until he was heart sick. I even discovered for myself that those men at times made mistakes which served to furnish some material for the criticisms leveled at them and for the rumors that, based on small, perhaps insignificant occurrences, grew and grew and grew as they ran from mouth to ear through the community. But I was old enough then to bear those discoveries with equanimity for what they were worth and no more. I learned, particularly after my own ordination, to reckon with the truth of the old statement that there is no high priest taken from among men who is without fault. Still, what fine and good men they are, many of them.

So I determined that in my own home my own children should not be poisoned against the church or the men of the church by my table talk; that my acquaintances should not be poisoned in mind by my street corner talk. I would try to pass on the inheritance that had helped me. If this resolution will help any others of the ministry it is theirs freely to put in practice in their own homes and among their own friends.

Across the Desk of the Editor in Chief

I RECENTLY had a letter from Brother G. J. Waller who is always active in church work and deeply interested in the affairs of our organization and who rejoices to see young men ordained. He told of an ordination meeting had instead of the prayer meeting at the Chinese church in Honolulu at which time Brother Peter Ahuna was ordained a deacon, and another Chinese brother, Brother Samuel Lee, was in charge of the ordination meeting under Brother Waller's supervision. Brother Waller felt this was something in which I would be interested. I am, as you well know; and I trust that this is an indication that the Chinese Branch of Honolulu is moving steadily forward and that the little branch may soon become a power for good. We wish Brother Ahuna and other brethren of the priesthood in the Chinese branch abundant success under the blessing and direction of the Holy Spirit.

TO ONE who has consecrated his life to the prosecution of the work of the church in an effort to carry forth to completion its spiritual program, and especially when that one has a position of heavy responsibility as executive, it is always pleasing to know that groups of people are bound together by a covenant to assist him in carrying on this work. It was therefore pleasing to me to receive recently a letter from Brother George E. Carter, Jr., who signs the letter as president of the young people's council of the Southern New England District, in which he conveys to me a resolution adopted by the young people of that district in which they pledge themselves to whole-heartedly support the general church in its complete program and pledge their participation in the the activities of the church.

The consecration and devotion manifested by these young people of the New England District, in my opinion, are being matched in other districts and it is heartening and encouraging to know that these young people are lining up in support of the program of the church, for upon our youth we must depend to carry on our labors as our responsibilities slip from sinking shoulders.

IN A RECENT LETTER from Brother Joseph H. Yager, Papeete, a postscript to the letter says: "Ronald Joseph, fine nine-pound boy, called at our home July 16 and said that he had come to stay. All fine. When you need a new preacher to take my place, just call around."

We congratulate Brother and Sister Yager on the arrival of the new son.

A New Independence Paper

The Editors of the Herald are glad to welcome a new weekly paper to Independence, the Independence Tribune. Actually it is not a new paper, for it incorporates the Jackson Democrat which has been printed here for a number of years; but it is new in form, content, and editorial policy.

This paper gives a fair and comprehensive report of the Independence news each week. It is nonpartisan in its political attitude.

Ward A. Hougas and Arthur Taylor of Independence and G. T. Richards of Bunceton, Missouri, are the publishers. Carl Ru'off is editor and Henry Weltmer, Jr., is in charge of advertising.

Quotation Marks

Bishop J. A. Koehler
on "The Work
at Hand"

"To be saviors it is not necessary that we should do spectacular stunts. To lay the foundation for the social structure of tomorrow is quite as important as to put on the cap-stone. Unless I get my spindle and distaff ready for the kind of thing that needs to be done, unless I sharpen my sickle, I shall not be counted among those who have garnered the grain of The Kingdom. If I use my powers in such manner as to give myself a place in the background of the picture of the lives of those who ten years from now will be the redeemers of Zion, I was made for such a day as this."

Information, Please!

A letter for our news department should give us full information concerning names, dates, towns, and persons concerned. Many times we are unable to print adequate accounts of events in churches because of lack of information. This week the editors received a letter in which date, the name of the town, the date for the baptism, and other important facts were entirely missing. The letter was not signed. The postmark indicated that the letter came from Michigan, but the name of the town was blurred. So far, the editors believe that somewhere in the large and beautiful state of Michigan, a certain brother baptized fourteen people at some time that we do not know. We should be glad to have our unknown correspondent furnish us with more information, and may we drop the hint right here that other correspondents can help by seeing that their letters contain the important facts.

Financial Report

First Half 1934

The continued "hard times," accentuated in numerous agricultural areas by the lack of rain, has doubtless caused numerous individuals in the church anxiety relative to income. This may be said of us in connection with the income of the general church. However, some information is submitted herewith which will be of interest to our people and certainly should be encouraging.

Those who read the Annual Financial Report presented at last General Conference and published in the columns of the Saints' Herald, both daily and weekly, will recall the deficit in income for 1933 of $17,761.36. Half of this deficit to June 30, as the figures below will show, has now been made up.

Contributions for 6 months ending June 30, 1934	$117,104.71
Expenses for the same period	109,173.88

Net income over expenses	$ 7,930.83
--------------------------	-------------

Income for the first 6 months of this year amounted to approximately $11,000 more than for the same period of 1933.

The average expenditure permitted by our budget per month is $21,750.00. Instead we spent $18,190.00 and received an average income of $19,500.00 per month. This explains the origin of the net income mentioned above. At the same time it points out very clearly the continued cramping necessary in the conduct of the work of the church.

Present problems continue to be pressing, among them being the necessity of requesting our General Church Debenture bondholders to renew their agreement for the remaining life of these bonds (they mature in 1936) and accept an interest rate of 3% per annum instead of 5%. It is with great regret that this request has been renewed, but holders of the Auditorium and Graceland Foundation Bonds have substantially agreed to a similar reduction of interest for a longer period, together with entire absence of principal payments. Thus our own people are not alone in the sacrifices being asked, which are necessary to permit the church to maintain a minimum amount of activity.

Because of the need for unremitting effort on the part of the church representatives and membership the "Check Up" as to compliance with the financial law was carried out in June. Everyone must feel that this compliance is a matter of continued necessity, for obstacles are steadily being encountered by the church in its attempt to improve its financial situation, and yet the work of the church must go on.

Our membership in some places has been affected adversely more than have those residing elsewhere, and thus upon those more blessed rests a greater responsibility to doing everything they can to maintain the church in this trying period. The times test our faith. The need for continued clear thinking and warm-heartedness is as great as it ever was, so that the work each of us must do in behalf of the church we all love may be well done.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By L. F. P. CURRY

More Pictures Wanted

The experiment with pictures in the Herald is, from all reports, giving both pleasure and satisfaction to many of our readers. The response to invitations to send pictures has been generous, and many of them have already been printed. Persons in some branches have kindly sent pictures of persons and places to accompany their news stories, which have been appreciated.

More pictures are needed: pictures of the pastors, workers, and local and district officers, with stories of what they have done, pictures of women's leaders, and of young people who have attained distinction and honors in the church and in the communities, pictures of church buildings with some history of them. In fact, we can use nearly all good clear pictures concerning the people of the church, when accompanied with some account that may be printed.

Amateur photography sometimes produces pictures that cannot be handled by the engraver, because of the exposure or the development. Photos taken in a good clear light, but without glare or blurs, are needed.

The chief end of "good manners" is to oil the wheels of social converse. Hence, the first and most important principle to learn is a due and proper consideration for the rights, opinions, and comforts of others. In other words, don't think of yourself so much as of the other fellow. Let your question be, not: How can I secure my own pleasure and comfort? but, How can I best secure his? It is a self-evident proposition that you cannot make him feel comfortable and happy if you are uncomfortable and unhappy. Hence, the first thing to do is to quit worrying and be comfortable.—George Wharton James in Quit Your Worrying!

"Many a man never does anything worth while because he thinks it isn't worth while."

School or Jail?

By G. N. Briggs

President of Graceland College

PRESIDENT HUTCHINS of the University of Chicago is quoted as saying that society provides only two places for its youth, school and jail. It is a case of being idle or going to school. Within the next month thousands of young men and women, who have not already done so, will have to reach definite conclusions as to their activities for this college year.

No educational movement in this country has equaled the unprecedented development of the Junior College.

The church related Junior College, because of its special schedule of studies, its controlled program of student activities and its smaller classes can give its young people a most excellent preparation for the junior year at the University or for those professions requiring two years of college education as a basis for admission.

The church related Junior College is especially well organized to have the student in mind rather than the subject, to offer those student activities and other forms of student self-expression so essential to the development of personality and because of the smaller classes to make possible that degree of personnel guidance so helpful in the difficult transition period from youth to manhood and womanhood.

In many respects the first two years after high school graduation are the most critical of all. As boys and girls they graduate from high school and two years later they graduate from Junior College with a remarkable change in development—mature young men and women with character and purpose well formed and ready for the next step—whether it be the University or the professional school or the avenues of trade and commerce.

The Junior College prepares not only for the University, the professional school, or for the business world, but it regards one of its main functions to be that of preparation for citizenship and for life.

Many find it impossible or inadvisable to enter upon a full four year college course.

They can, however, if they are to play their part in the affairs of the church, the community, or the State, spend two most profitable years in one of the several courses at Graceland College having for its purpose the completion of a definite preparation for one of the many avenues of life activities.

The Junior College, with its practical, vitalized and well developed two year courses can give the young man or woman that scholastic guidance required for a wise choice and necessary preparation for a vocation. Students are finding it increasingly possible to take courses in the Junior College that mean more to them now and will mean more in the future, stimulative to both the scholastic type of mind and the more practical type as well.

There is no question in the educational world as to the place of the Junior College in our educational program.

It functions both as a preparatory institution for the University and the professional school as well as offering various terminal courses ending with two years of vocational training.

Our own church college is a pioneer as a Junior College. For twenty years Graceland has functioned in the Junior College field with its two year courses from which many graduates have entered the leading Universities and professional schools of the country.

Its two year terminal courses in Business, Teacher Training, Home Economics, Secretarial work and Religion with the preparatory courses in Liberal Arts, Science, Music, Engineering, Pre-Nursing, Pre-Law, Pre-Dental, and Pre-Medical, make a variety of choice to meet the needs of most young men and women.

The old west door will swing open again this fall to the youth of the church from many states and several foreign countries.

It is not a question of "How can I afford it?" but of "How can I afford not to go?"

A distinguished leader of youth recently said, "There is probably no other economic or social group that has gone so far as college students in meeting and solving problems incident to conditions prevailing since 1929. Their efforts have been tremendously effective and they have been marked for renewed enthusiasm for more purposeful living and for real progress in higher education."

Graceland is prepared as never before to serve the youth of the church in their enlarged vision of their part in the New Deal which is to open the avenues of service to them as it has not heretofore existed.

The only amaranthine flower is virtue.—Cowper.

"I Have Fought a Good Fight"

Funeral Sermon of Patriarch W. A. McDowell

By President Elbert A. Smith,

Independence, Missouri

June 2, 1934

"But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry. For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Timothy 4: 5-8.

I BELIEVE that this is one of the finest declarations of triumph that I have ever read. I think perhaps it is one of the finest that was ever written in any language, and of course it has been translated into about every known language and has been read by millions of people. There have been a great many conquerors since the world began who have been praised for their victory and they have boasted themselves of their triumphs and how they have overcome others, defeated them, overthrown them; but this man, Paul, who wrote the words we have just read, says that "we are more than conquerors through Christ." We are more than conquerors in that it is not our work to defeat and tear down others, but rather to lift them up. Even those who may be overcome in their position are lifted up, and for that reason this man was more than a conqueror when he used this language and stated that he had fought a good fight and had kept the faith. That is the reason it is a good fight, because it does lift people up.

Occasionally we know of a man today for whom Paul's words might have been written. Once in a great while we know of one who at the end of his life's work might use these words himself. I think that I have never met any man, any where, any time, who could have used these words more appropriately than Brother W. A. McDowell could have used them at the end of his ministry. There are some ministers who in preaching funeral sermons will not eulogize. Perhaps they think we should reserve all our praise for God. I do not agree with their philosophy. Paul says that we are "living epistles, known and read of all men," and when we have known a man for many years and read his life and find that it is a revelation of the Christian religion, an epistle in flesh and blood, it is just as proper to read that epistle as it is to read from the Bible. We are told of Christ that in him the word became flesh and blood and dwelt among men full of grace and truth. When we see an exhibition of a life of that sort it behooves us to pause for a time and talk about it. We are also advised that if there is anything beautiful, anything true, anything lovely and honorable, and just, and of good report, that we should think about those things. We are altogether too much inclined to think about the faults and mistakes of others and the mistakes of the church and to talk about them when we might be thinking of that which is of "good report."

That is the sort of life our brother has led for very many years in the church, one of the greatest evidences of the truth of the gospel. It is an evidence that the gospel really works, that it really does the things it claims to do, that it produces the type of men and women which the church says it will produce. Such a life is one of the greatest of miracles. Christ taught us of the signs that should follow the believer, that they should heal the sick and so on, but to me the greatest sign that follows the believer is the change in his own life. As one man said, "When the gospel came to me it showed me a new way to live." The living of that new way is the greatest testimony that can be borne.

We naturally think of this miracle when an unbeliever is converted and takes up a new course of life, but to my mind it has its finest revelation in sustained righteousness, day after day, year after year, through a long period of life. The finest demonstration of the gospel of Christ that I know anything about is of that type. That way of life brings sacrifice. It brought sacrifice to Brother McDowell and to his companion, Sister McDowell. But did it bring happiness? It certainly did. They have lived a rich and full life in spite of its sacrifices, rather because of them. If all the men and women and children who have been benefited by the ministry of this man, which was made possible by his companion, could enter this door today and pay their tribute to him, what a congregation there would be; all those whom he has actually converted and baptized, those whom he has blessed, those whom he has administered to, those whom he has counseled and advised and strengthened—what a great gathering that would be. Now, at the end he has friends without number who rise up and call him and his companion blessed. I wonder what pleasure seeker there is in the world who has given all his years to the pursuit of pleasure who can bring anything at all to compare with that.

"I have fought a good fight." There is no question that the Christian warfare is worthy to bear the title of warfare in the highest and best sense of the word. Our own early Latter Day Saints were required to lay down their lives and die. This would not refer to Brother McDowell, but if it had been required of him he would not have been found shrinking. It was rather required of him to give his life over a long period of rather strenuous active service. "I have fought a good fight," Paul says, and we know he did not fight with flesh and blood. He did not fight with man, but with principalities and powers of spiritual wickedness. There is a statement made somewhere in the Old Testament, that early in the history of creation, "When the sons of God came together Satan came also."

A great many people no longer believe in an actual personal spirit of evil, but anyone who keeps his eyes open must have noticed that there are forces of evil at work in the world and wherever there is a community trying to do good in any capacity, politically, socially, religiously, these forces of evil are made manifest, trying to overthrow it. Whenever the sons of God get together Satan comes also. Even in the history of America there was a body of men and women who came to the then unhospitable shores, dedicating their lives to human freedom and the thought that all men are created equal and should be free, and yet, somehow, slavery crept in under the Constitution. Satan came also. When Christ began his ministry and went out into the wilderness to fast and pray, the statement is made that Satan came and tempted him. When Joseph Smith went out to the forest to pray, the moment he knelt down to offer up a petition the powers of the adversary were manifested, and so it is that any man who has given himself to the ministry more than fifty years, as this man did, has certainly encountered the forces of evil in many forms, and yet I think he could truly say, "I have fought a good fight," not a fight in which we use carnal weapons for this is another kind of warfare. We have to use a different sort of weapons. We cannot fight the adversary with anything but our own weapons.

We all know that in years gone by, particularly when the sons of God have come together in gatherings and councils and endeavored to move the church forward, the forces of evil have sometimes been present, bringing contention and confusion, and we have seen this our brother stand in the forefront of those who were waging war against that which is wrong with a careful, kindly spirit, which is the only kind of spirit which can prevail in that sort of struggle.

I can give you a little personal experience that will illustrate what I have in mind. I think it was during the fall of 1925 that Brother McDowell and I attended a district conference in one of the larger districts, a district that was in turmoil and confusion over some questions that were troubling the whole church. That Saturday afternoon we began a business session at 2:30 o'clock and it ran right through without even stopping for luncheon until about 10:00 o'clock that night. It was the longest business session I have ever presided over or taken part in, but in the end patience and kindness prevailed and a wise and just piece of legislation was adopted with only one dissenting vote. And then, at that late hour, when we adjourned the business session, the Saints wanted someone to preach to them and Brother McDowell took the stand and preached, serene, cheerful, kindly, fatherly. He took the loose cords that had been frayed in the conflict and bound them up, healed the wounds, and the Saints went home sometime after 11:00 o'clock, and when they returned the next morning for early prayer service the spirit of God was there to begin a day of refreshing for the Saints. I think that was about the end of the trouble in that district.

Brother McDowell fought a good fight and fought it in the Lord's way, and we are told that if we are to fight, and fight we must, to put on the robe of righteousness and the shield of faith and the sword of the spirit, and our feet should be shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace.

During the fifty years of our brother's active ministry there were times of great stress and strain in the church when some were uprooted and overthrown, when some went away and left the church, but no man ever knew this man to waver. He was always upright, steadfast, serene, and kept the faith. He did not keep the faith merely in a theological sense, he kept it in his own life and in his manner of life. It would be foolish to believe that a big, strong full-blooded, upstanding man could pass through fifty years of ministry without meeting personal temptation. We sometimes deceive ourselves. When a man lives a straight, clean, steadfast life, we think that it is easy for him. We say to him, "It is easy for you."

A Hobby Exposition

By C. G. Mesley

THESE are many benefits that can be derived from devoting some of our leisure time to a hobby and following it through until we become proficient in the field of our selected interest.

Hobbies are constructive. They enrich our understanding of the world around us and increase our range of skills and abilities to do things with our hands. Through mutual hobbies many lasting and enjoyable friendships are formed. Hobbies may be self-supporting and often become a source of income. Two young men in Independence are paying their way through medical school and one young church member associated with them in their hobby business of manufacturing fire-lighting outfits and bow and arrow sets, has already completed his education from the proceeds of this boy scout fire-lighting hobby.

Hobbies add color to life and are a release from the hum drum of every day work and routine. Many of them can be carried through without a large expenditure of money and where money is spent in a hobby it is oftentimes in the form of an investment. This is particularly true of stamp purchases and antique art objects.

TO ENCOURAGE YOUNG PEOPLE to take up valuable hobbies and to demonstrate the good work already being done in this field, the Kansas City Stake O. B. K.'s recently sponsored a hobby exposition.

The exhibits of the young people were supplemented by those of guest exhibitors who had been invited to display and demonstrate their hobby collections.

Forty hobbies were represented and they proved quite stimulating and interesting to the large number of people who view them.

A similar project could be carried out at any district gathering of young people and even nonmembers in the city where the display is being held could be invited to exhibit.

Here is a list of some of the interesting displays at the Kansas City hobby exposition.

Botany specimens of Missouri wildflowers, beautifully mounted in folders with full descriptive write-ups.

Stamp books and mounted sheets of uncanceled current commemoration stamps.

A framed collection of historic stamped envelopes.

Three exhibits of oil painting.

A collection of posters and charts suitable for church school use.

Babies dresses designed and made by a young lady.

A spring coat representing the hobby of a high school girl who makes her own clothes.

A budget book designed by a young people's supervisor whose hobby is budgeting, and the financial law.

Exquisite needle work pictures, pillow cases and hand-made handkerchiefs.

Quilts, blocked and quilted by a young business woman;

Snapshot albums and wall display of two hundred snaps; part of a collection of 8,000 snapshots.

Bow and arrows with scout lanyards.

Architectural sketches and advertising posters.

Soap sculptures.

Scrap books.

A complete radio transmitter that broadcast a debate in an adjoining room.

A splendidly classified and mounted coin collection.

A display of typical world newspapers exhibited by a student of journalism.

A collection of original poems.

A lamp and shade

A beautiful arrangement of garden flowers and another of wildflowers suitable for church decoration.

Among the guest exhibits was a collection of incense burners and a wood turned table (courtesy President F. M. Smith); some finely carved linoleum block pictures and plaques (Marion Woodstock); some beautiful stencil printing on silk and linen (Mrs. C. B. Woodstock); a collection of landscape and studies in oil, (Mrs. C. D. Jellings); a collection of historic family church books and home bound quarterlies (J. O. Wordon); a fine collection of geology specimens gathered from all over the United States (Lyle Woodstock); some beautiful pottery, a landscape, and chalk talk sketches (Bishop C. A. Skinner) and a complete bulletin board designed and executed by Simon Gress and donated to the Grandview church.

Boy Scouts were on guard and protected the exhibits from thoughtless handlers and possible kleptomania.

Try a hobby exposition for your next district gathering of young people, or sponsor it in your local church and invite your friends to participate. It is an enjoyable and educational project.

I think to have known one good old man—one man who, through the chances and mischances of a long life, has carried his heart in his hand, like a palm branch, waving all discords into peace—helps our faith in God, in ourselves, and in each other more than many sermons.—G. W. Curtis.

Ideas, Discussion and News for the Young People of the Church

Oriole News

Since last reported, five new Oriole circles have been registered with the Headquarters Committee:

Port Huron, Michigan, Mrs. Claude H. Lewis, Monitor.

Belleville, Illinois, Miss Ardell Schneider, Monitor.

Piano, Illinois, "Golden Rule" circle, Miss Vera A. Sanderson, Monitor.

Fisher, Arkansas, "Help Other People" (H. O. P.) circle, Mrs. George Gordon, Monitor.

Vancleave, Mississippi, "True Blue" circle, Mrs. Howard Jennings, Monitor.

This makes twenty-four registered circles. We have correspondence with fully as many more circles in process of building. Registered circles receive the quarterly bulletin of program helps and suggestions sent out by the Headquarters Committee. A registered circle is fully organized and its members are entitled to secure insignia and merit awards from headquarters.

Independence Oriole girls are having an active summer. Late in May a Mother's Tea and initiation ceremony was held on the Stone church lawn. Early in June the Zion Builders circle held a birthday dinner in the lunch room at the Auditorium. This circle also had a candlelighting service on Mother's day at Spring Branch church.

An over-night and one-day camp was held at the Campus on June 20 and 21 by sixty-one Independence girls and their leaders. The first evening a worship service was held under the direction of pastor John F. Sheehy.

The program of the next day included an early worship service, a "cave-man" breakfast cooked on flat rocks, flag raising, a nature ramble, blue-printing specimens, and first aid, an hour's discussion of personal hygiene under a graduate nurse, lunch, a rest period, a water frolic, games and races, dinner with potatoes baked in clay. In the evening a treasure hunt discovered a generous supply of ice cream prepared by members of circle committees. The day closed with a program of stunts, a book review by Mrs. Leonard Lea, a short ceremonial service and the sharing of the ice-cream "treasure." A similar camp is planned for later in the summer.

Port Huron girls are planning to attend the Eastern Michigan reunion in a body. A Mother's day program and lunch netted them $10.00 and they have other plans to help raise the necessary funds so all may go.

Tea and Coffee as Beverages

By Harold I. Velt

About twenty years ago, soon after the writer had united with the church, missionaries to Australia from U. S. A., two of them holding the office of apostle and one high priest, taught us the value of "The Word of Wisdom," explaining that the term "hot drinks" in the revelation had reference to tea and coffee.

Since then from time to time, it has been a cause for regret, that in branches and districts where people have been taught the wisdom of eliminating tea and coffee from the daily menu, that some officer of the church would occasionally come along and undo what had been taught, by himself using tea or coffee and affirming that the term "hot drinks" in Doctrine and Covenants 86 perhaps does not refer at all to tea and coffee, or that it is so vague anyway, that we need not pay any attention to it. Usually it is stated—referring to some higher church official—"Well, Elder ——— drinks tea or coffee, and if it is no harm for him it is no harm for me." Others have expressed the opinion that the term "hot drinks" refers only to the temperature and not to any particular beverage, while still others are quite positive in their minds that the term should be understood principally if not altogether in the light of the statement preceding it: "Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarned you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom . . ." They proceed to speak of how conspiring men have adulterated their products while preparing them for the market. This argument is used usually to prove that postum, figco, cocoa and other mild drinks would be banned by the term "hot drinks" as well as tea and coffee, and that therefore others are disregarding the law as well as they. There is one thing that seemingly has been overlooked by some in this regard. They take it for granted that the warning given against conspiring men would presuppose only adulterations of foods or beverages. As a matter of fact conspiring men have conspired to do vastly more than adulterate. They have conspired to deceive millions of people into believing some of their products which are really baneful to health and happiness, to be not only harmless but of health-giving and energy-creating values.

It should be noticed that after the preliminary statement, "In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days" is the counsel that strong drink should not be used except for washing the body, and that tobacco should be avoided except for bruises and for sick cattle. Can it be argued from this that strong drink and tobacco might be used without harm to us, were it not for the adulterations by conspiring men? Would it not be logical to suppose that if adulterations were the only thing to be emphasized there, that tobacco might even be banned for the use of bruises or for sick cattle? It would surely seem so, especially if the adulterations were sufficiently strong. It must be clear to all that "conspiring men" have insidiously conspired for mercenary reasons, to teach the whole populace that benefits would follow the consuming of liquor, and that their particular brands of tobacco are of real value to health, strength and vigor. Thus we have seen the Eighteenth Amendment defeated, and as to the use of tobacco, some of the largest firms of "conspiring men" have had phenomenal success in influencing men and women to smoke. It reminds us of a sign we saw in a certain restaurant, "Eat here if it kills you, we need your money," except that these "conspiring men" whisper inaudibly, "Drink our liquor, smoke our tobacco, drink our tea and coffee if it kills you and injures your children after you, for we want your money." In their outward advertising, however, they use every conceivable means to persuade the multitudes of the benefits to be derived. On billboards, pictures of the most beautiful women are used in the advertising of liquor, tobacco, tea and coffee. Over the radio, the nefarious advertising is associated with beautiful music. "Conspiring men" know how to associate these evils with the beautiful in art and music, if the unsuspecting are to be beguiled; and to keep these associations so constantly before the eyes and ears of the public, too, that perchance the whole populace may yield and in time become addicts.

"HOT DRINKS" SPICES AND IRRITANTS

Some aver that "hot drinks" refer to beverages made hot with spices, chillies, ginger, peppers, etc. One brother who loved his coffee made a plausible argument along this line. It sounded fine. He asked me what I thought of his argument. I replied that there was just one thing radically wrong with it. It was not in harmony with the interpretation placed upon the revelation by those upon whom rests the responsibility of interpreting and teaching the revelation.

VITAL PRINCIPLES OVERLOOKED

This brings us to the principle upon which we desire to place the greatest emphasis. Competent physicians, including those at the head of the health department of the church, have convinced us that theine, caffeine, and tannin in tea and coffee are decidedly injurious to health in proportion to their uses, but the thing about which we are chiefly concerned is the unjustifiable disunity among some of our people as to the interpretation of the term "hot drinks" in the Word of Wisdom given to the church. We regret to hear as we sometimes have done, the lightness of manner associated with jocular references to "hot drinks" during the imbibing of tea or coffee. Even if there be "not very much harm" in tea and coffee, we cannot but remember the rebuke given by the Lord to his people for "treating lightly the things they had received" (Doctrine and Covenants 3: 8). Now this is the point. There is no excuse for disunity upon this subject for those who are acquainted with the word of the Lord as given in Doctrine and Covenants 122: 1, 2. It reads: "My servants have been harsh one with another; and some have not been sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations which my church has already received. Until my people shall hear and heed those who are set in the church to teach the revelations there will be misunderstanding and confusion among the members." The burden of the care of the church is laid upon him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation from time to time." Now the question of vital importance then becomes, What has been the interpretation by the presidents of the church and those who have been called to be counselors to the presidents relative to the term "hot drinks"? If they have expressed doubt or uncertainty, then we might be excused for our differing interpretations; if they have expressed certainty on the subject, then our "misunderstanding and confusion" has come as a result of our "not being sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations."

Let us note well the following:

In the Saints' Herald of November 22, 1921, under the heading, "Hot Drinks and Cancer," the editors, F. M. Smith and E. A. Smith, members of the presidency of the high priesthood who are to teach the revelations, wrote the following note as preface to an article by J. R. Lambert: "The writer points out that hot drinks were clearly understood to mean tea and coffee at the time the Word of Wisdom was given. The other hot drinks of today including hot water were not then in general use. The taking of anything hot, either solid or liquid, is probably injurious. The same is true of anything extremely cold. ## Junior Stewardship

By C. B. Woodstock

Junior stewardship is a practical, churchwide project in teaching and observance of the financial law. It had its beginning in 1927 with the printing of a first issue of junior budget books by the Presiding Bishopric, for distribution in the church schools by the Sunday school department. In the seven years which have passed the books have seen considerable revision in the four or five editions which have been necessary to supply the demand. In the nine months following November 1, last, eight hundred thirty Junior Stewardship Record Books have been sent out on one hundred four orders going into all parts of the church.

The plan of junior stewardship is not difficult to understand nor to carry out. It provides a convenient record page—or, rather, a double page, in a securely bound book, for individual financial record keeping. There are twelve of these double pages, one for each month of the year, ruled for daily entry of all receipts and expenditures. Monthly totals are carried to a summary and a tithing account at the side of the page. Monthly totals are also carried to an annual summary on the last page, where there is also a simplified form of a junior's annual financial statement.

Junior stewardship records may be kept by children in isolated families under the direction of an interested parent, but the project is designed for class, group or club use. There is added inspiration in group endeavor, especially under the leadership of an enthusiastic sponsor. In many places the project is undertaken by junior or intermediate classes of the church school with the teacher as sponsor, or the class or a group from several classes may form a junior stewardship club, under the branch financial agent or some one chosen to serve.

In Rockford, Illinois, the pastor is the sponsor, and the club carries out many practical projects in addition to their individual record keeping. They have regular meetings, study and discuss stewardship principles, operate a club garden as a stewardship on which they keep careful financial records, pay tithing, carry a reserve, and make surplus payment.

In Hilo, Hawaii, record books are supplied by the branch to groups of newly baptized boys and girls, and they are instructed and encouraged to enter at once upon their stewardship responsibility. A similar plan is in operation at Vancouver, British Columbia, and in several places in the States. At McKenzie, Alabama, a group of older young people find the record books well adapted to their use. The term "Junior Stewardship" means only younger than adult business or family stewardship.

Junior Stewardship Record Books are prepared for the use of boys and girls by the Presiding Bishopric and sold through the department of religious education. With each order for books is inclosed a set of mimeographed directions for the use of each sponsor, together with two report forms due at the close of the record year. One of these gives in detail a report of the activities of the sponsor and the group in carrying out the project for the year. The second report calls for a list of all junior stewards whose records have been well kept and who can be recommended to the Presiding Bishopric by the sponsor and the branch financial agent, for the Certificate of Commendation to be signed and sent to them by the Presiding Bishop.

Present emphasis is put on junior stewardship because it is considered vital in our educational program. Children and young people can readily understand all the principles involved. They are at an age when the keeping of such a record is a novel and interesting experience. A consciousness of partnership with God, in which we are local managers and bookkeepers, adds a sense of duty and responsibility that serves as a powerful motive to keep the record accurately and continuously. Under wise leadership and with encouragement in the home, juniors may feel all the urge of adult stewardship. They may learn, too, correct methods of simple bookkeeping and the satisfaction of having been diligent and frugal in earning and spending, in paying the tithe and making further offering for local and general church support. It shall mean much in the future of the church if the coming generation may go into their business and professional lives, fully informed, trained in the method and convinced of the value of ready and consistent compliance with the financial law of the church.

There is distinct need for young people to early learn the value of money. It cannot be learned except by experience. Fortunate, indeed is that young person who in early youth shares in the earning and spending of money. One cannot learn to be industrious until by his own effort he earns that which satisfies his wants. He cannot learn to be frugal until some careful saving and wise spending brings satisfaction in his ability to do what otherwise could not have been done. Boys and girls should be encouraged to earn and permitted to spend some money of their own. Parents may suggest or advise, but no valuable lesson is learned when parents make every decision. Often children are given a weekly or monthly allowance from the family income, perhaps only fifty cents or a dollar or two as the situation may justify, from which certain personal necessities must be supplied and the rest spent at the discretion of the child. An accounting system, especially with stewardship responsibility, helps one to consider well his expenditures and gives a splendid feeling of self-confidence when, at the end of the month or the year, a full and consistent account can be given of all one's receipt and expenditure.

Much of the success of the project depends upon the wisdom, tact, initiative and perseverance of the sponsor. But it is a wonderful ministry to perform. The sponsor should vision the whole project in terms of its present and future effect in the lives of juniors. His talks with them should make the method plain and the plan highly desirable. Visits to the homes of juniors should secure cooperation and encouragement. Often parents may need this suggestion to encourage them to keep a similar record, and to make consistent payment of a tithe of their income above actual necessary expenses. The help they will give their children in junior stewardship may be just the inspiration they need to fulfill their own larger obligations in adult stewardships.

Junior Stewardship Record Books may be ordered for project use at ten cents each. A sponsor for the project should be appointed jointly by the pastor, church school director and the branch financial agent. Individual copies may be purchased at fifteen cents each. Send orders to the Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

America began to find her voice during the late World War. Patriotic songs, folk songs and songs of home and kindred were brought to the fore and millions were stirred to loyalty and duty as never before in several generations.—Earl L. Wolslael, Church Management.

Force

An article written by a Lieutenant-Colonel in the United States Army contains this assertion: “In this world of ours force is the ultimate power.” The context makes it abundantly clear that by force the author means physical force. Well, if in this world or in any world physical force is the ultimate power we may just as well close our churches and stop talking about God.

But is it true that in this world of ours physical force is the ultimate power? Even in the sub-human world it is not. Even there the wit and will to cooperate have proved to be more than a match for sheer brute force. Pacific creatures practicing mutual aid have outlived belligerent creatures armed to the teeth. And what appears to be true in the world of men? When Socrates drank his cup of poison, which proved to be the ultimate power, the arms of Athens or the ideas of the sage? When St. Paul placed his head on a block in a Roman prison, which proved to be the ultimate power, the legions of Caesar or the faith of the missionary? When Martin Luther stood trial for his life at Worms, which proved to be the ultimate power, the sword of the emperor or the spirit of the monk? The mightiest empire “this world of ours” has ever known once laid rough hands upon a Jewish radical, dragged him to a skull-shaped hill outside the city gates and there, amid hisses and catcalls, nailed him to a cross. But the pierced hands of that crucified Jew lifted the Roman Empire off its hinges!

To say that in this world of ours physical force is the ultimate power is not only to deny the existence of God but to disregard the teaching of history. There is in the human soul a power with which bullets and bayonets are unable to cope, as the British Empire has discovered in India. In this world of ours the ultimate power is not physical force but something which Mahatma Gandhi has aptly called “soul force.”—Ernest Fremont Tittle, in “We Need Religion.”

“You remember the woman who broke the alabaster box for the feet of the Savior while He was living—the most beautiful of all appreciations? And you know what we do? Let our fellow-beings carry their crosses to their Calvarys, and after each has suffered his agony and entered his peace, we go to Him and break our alabaster box above his stiff cold feet. I have always hoped that my religion might enable me to break my alabaster box for the living who alone can need it—and who always do need it.”—A speech of the old minister in The Choir Invisible by James Lane Allen.

Wanderers of a Strange Race

MR. HUNT secured the services of a native girl to teach them the language. Her name was Lucy, and Louisa marvelled at her beauty of person and grace of body. She had expected to find all the natives extremely dark and quite ugly, but this girl was nearly as fair as anyone she had ever known. Lucy had attended a French school and understood her task quite well. Mr. Hunt found the language very difficult to learn, but the three young people were soon conversing quite freely; so the older man made up his mind to discontinue his efforts and trust to them for interpretations when necessary.

After they had finished studying the Tahitian Grammar, Lucy said it would be a good thing if they read some book. She had two books, "Te Bibilia, and Te Buka a Moromona." Dan explained that that meant, "The Bible and the Book of Mormon." Mr. Hunt said for them to go ahead and read the Book of Mormon. He felt sure its teachings would not conflict with his beliefs in natural living; but he did not want them to read the Bible.

To her surprise Louisa found the Book of Mormon very interesting, especially after they had finished the first few books. She had heard of course, many times in the little Latter Day Saint Sunday school back in Monroe, that the book contained nothing that condoned polygamy or any other wicked practice; but she was pleased in spite of herself, as they read it slowly, word by word, to find that it contained only the very highest teachings in morality and that there was nothing in it to offend.

After each would read aloud for a long while, by turns, Lucy would retell the stories in her own way; she believed ardently that the book was true, and put her whole soul into the soft words she uttered.

"What do you think of the book," asked Dan, anxiously, as they returned one evening from the hotel where they had been in the habit of taking their meals.

"Oh, I don't know," she answered, with studied carelessness. "It is very lovely in spots, and also interesting."

"But about it's truth—you know, dear, it says if one really wishes to know it is true, there is a test—a way to find out."

"Yes, I remember. You told me before." She gazed absently toward the sea. "Dan, how pretty those harbor lights are reflected in the water. And how lovely the moonlight is on the palms. It seems I can't think of anything else but the scenery. It is so beautiful."

SMALL CHANCE of her asking God to let her know of the truth of that book, she thought. She had to fight with herself all the time to keep from believing it, as it was. If she once conceded a belief in it she would be led into paths and manner of living that she did not want to follow. Why, if you took the church books literally you couldn't even let yourself become extremely rich; and she wanted to be rich. To have everything about her beautiful.

Should she admit it? She wanted things nicer and more beautiful than others had. She wanted to be envied, "looked up to."

Dan sighed. It was always like this. He had thought it would be so easy to convert her to the necessity of being baptized into the church, but now he could not even find what it was she had against the church. She would not accompany him to the native services in Taurona. Lucy had told them where the church was. Dan went every Sunday and was delighted with the native members. The men of the native priesthood were, for the most part, strong, large of stature, straight standing, and absolutely sincere in their belief in the gospel. Dan felt thrilled as he watched them conduct the services and officiate in the church ordinances. In their clean white suits, with their quiet dignity and Christianlike actions, he need never be ashamed to own them as members of his church. Were the faithful Ammonites of the Book of Mormon story Lamanites such as these?

But the most blessed part of the experience was that he could feel the same peaceful, calm spirit he had learned to associate with the Reorganized Church back in America. In spite of all the sin and wickedness of the place, these people as a whole lived as Christians should.

Meanwhile Mr. Hunt had been getting acquainted with another class of people. A class that never had known the message of Christ in the latter days. Partly with the aid of Robert's interpretation, and partly by his own faltering and scant knowledge of the tongue, he invited a crowd of them to a party at the large house which he had leased for a half-year period.

They were given all the watermelon they could eat; generous amounts of candy were being consumed, and the atmosphere was very convivial and friendly. They sang some of their old chants and songs, their bodies weaving back and forth in perfect time to the rhythm of their voices. Two young women, with faces which perhaps once had been more than ordinarily pretty, but were now hard and unlovely, discarded all clothing except the red loin-cloth, and danced. Mr. Hunt, almost breathless with excitement as the dance ended, turned to his young employees.

"Isn't that a perfect example of what I've been telling you about the lack of inhibition among primitive people? They let themselves go; they make of dancing something more meaningful and beautiful than civilized races do; although of course all dancing, with the exception of war dances and the like, are based upon the same primitive sex appeal. Um—let's see. Robert, bring me that large book over there on the table. I'm going to ask them some questions and you must interpret for me."

Then followed for Dan and Louisa some of the most distasteful moments they had ever experienced. Mr. Hunt asked the natives questions which concerned their most private lives, their most intimate thoughts and actions; and though some wondered audibly what his reasons were for wishing to know such things, none refused to answer. The entire proceeding would have been shameful in the extreme had there not been, about most of the natives, an air of straightforward innocence as they talked.

Mr. Hunt's pencil flew over the pages of the large book; but now and then he paused and made a note or two in the small one he usually carried in his pocket.

"A wonderful day's work," he beamed, as they saw the last of the natives out of the house. "A fine day's work. It will make a most interesting chapter in my book."

"And even at that," he went on thoughtfully, "These people who were here this evening are not really typical of the most primitive races. They have many of the remnants of primitive times, of course, but I want to get away from the influence of the moving pictures, and so on. Papeete is too civilized. Today I booked passage for us all on board a little boat and we will set sail for Tikehau. It is not so far away but that we can make it without a disagreeably long time on the boat, and still I think the people will be more to my liking. We'll start tomorrow afternoon."

Louisa was intensely irritated. "You don't give us much time for packing, Mr. Hunt."

"Oh, don't worry about that, Louisa," replied Mr. Hunt pleasantly, "You remember the two girls who danced here tonight—well—I'm taking them with me. They will attend to all the packing. I don't want you to work—there must be little reading or study or work in our lives from now on. If I find these girls as interesting as I think they will be, I'll include them in the project. In the meantime," he paused and chuckled, "they will be pleasant companions for me."

IT WAS perhaps the emphasis he placed upon the word "me" that caused Louisa to start up so angrily. They had been in Papeete long enough that she was not ordinarily shocked when she found that certain people were openly "living in sin." But she had never dreamed that this refined appearing, intelligent old man could also yield himself to such abhorrent conditions. Perhaps her anger would have led her to voice the contempt she felt had not Robert said, in a low tone:

"Lucy is going, too. You know, Dan, her parents live in Tikehau."

Mr. Hunt chuckled again. "I imagine, Robert, that her parents are not the only attraction. I saw you and her down by the sea yesterday. You surely have a way about you that attracts the women. I congratulate you on your conquest."

Robert blushed and stammered some sort of reply, then straightened his shoulders.

"But you see, Mr. Hunt, it is not a conquest. Lucy and I—we love each other. I asked her to marry me but she said that was out of the question—it seems that the way the laws are here you have to have the consent of your relatives before you marry, and her folks are intent upon having her marry a native named Paipai who lives in Hikuero. She doesn't love him—she loves me. And I love her dearly. I think—it seems to me—love sort of sanctifies things—"

"And it is all right to yield to love here," put in Mr. Hunt blithely, "because these native women consider it no disgrace—I mean there is no double standard, nor anything like that. I still think you are to be congratulated. Lucy is beautiful, and I am sure also that she has always been innocent and pure—in other words this affair is probably what people up home would call 'her first misstep.' She will think nothing of it; the only possible suffering that can come of it, as I see it, is the suffering you will have in your mind. You may be tempted to think continually that you are doing wrong."

Robert said slowly: "The thought is already there, Mr. Hunt. I—in fact I feel already that I—I should have more character—"

"Bah! Forget it, my boy, and be happy. I tell you, I know—"

"If you will excuse us, Mr. Hunt, I am very tired," interrupted Louisa. Her whole soul was sick at the turn events had taken, and she knew Dan felt the same way. She felt nearer to Dan than she had ever felt before. Robert had been right away back there—how many ages ago had it been?—when he had said that Dan was a rock. One could depend upon him to be always the same—strong, steady, unyielding to wrong. Could she ever live so that people would want to be near her to gain strength from her? For the moment she felt that if she could attain real strength of character, it would give her more thrills than she had ever known. And the nice thing about it was that goodness and character did not end when youth did. One could have them until old age—and on after death—if there was a "Great Beyond" of some kind. They were quiet as they crept under the blankets to gain what remained to them of a night's rest.

What was it that brought happiness to people, anyway? Louisa's thoughts ran on, doing as one pleased certainly did not bring joy. Mr. Hunt did as he pleased; he recognized no restraints; he bought everything he wanted; and she had seen him when he appeared crushed beneath a load of unhappiness. But could character and goodness bring happiness without yielding oneself to religion?

"Dear me," she thought exasperatedly, "why must I always think of things like that? I have a good husband; he has the ability to make a living and a nice home for me; we are earning a big salary right now and will have a good start when we get back home; we can give our children every advantage the world offers—why can't I just be happy with my own blessings? Everybody else is seeking his own or her own happiness. Lucy. Poor little Lucy. She probably thinks she is on the road to happiness. And Robert—poor, weak Robert, who wanted so badly to do wonderful things."

"Dan."

He turned his face slowly.

"You asleep?"

"No, Louisa. Just watching the play of moonlight on the palm trees out the window here, and thinking how beautiful the world is and how ugly the sin is that we see all about us. How like heaven the earth could be if people and all their deeds were as beautiful as all these other things God has made!"

"I was just wondering though, Dan, if everybody isn't trying to do just about the same thing—trying to find happiness. And they don't know how. They reach that way and this way in a sort of trial and error method."

"Yes," broke in Dan with an undue amount of feeling in his voice, "the Lord has said: 'Man is, that he might have joy,' and there seems to be an instinct in us to want joy at any price. Then Satan comes along and says: 'Why, surely man is that he might have joy. Come with me and I'll show you the way to have joy.' And they go after him, because his voice is soft and alluring and the pictures he paints are attractive. They do all sorts of strange things and enter many strange places. They find nothing but emptiness and misery at the end of their journey. But there is one on whose word they could rely if they would only listen. One who said: 'I am the way—'

Louisa laughed nervously, and Dan paused embarrassed. "You should be a preacher, Dan," she said lightly. She didn't want to think too much of these things. And yet, how surprisingly pleasant and lighthearted it made you feel if you gave way to those religious feelings even a little. Was it possible? No. She would simply crowd out these thoughts with others less unwelcome to an ambitious heart. She fell asleep amid pleasant dreams of the future.

She was surprised to find how small the boat was upon which they were to sail. But at that it was not so small as some of the others.

"Let's go right to our cabin, Dan. I just know I'm going to be seasick."

Dan laughed. "Have you any idea as to how many cabins there are on this boat? It is "our" cabin, all right, but it is to tatou, and not to taua."

"You mean there is only one cabin for everybody on this ship?"

"That's about it."

"Let's go take a look at it, anyway."

WITH THE AID of some of the natives they made their unsteady way through the throng of people and finally found themselves in the cabin. It was full of boxes, baskets, rolls of bedding and sundry other articles. Besides offering anything but an enticing appearance from the standpoint of physical comfort, the air was unbearably close. The fumes from the engine mingled themselves nauseatingly with stale tobacco smoke, and the acrid odor of copra.

They decided to spend their time on deck. There at least they would have fresh air.

The sun beat down with intolerable severity, and there was little wind until toward evening. Then a shower beat upon them, making things sticky and more miserable until the sun had dipped out of sight. Then it became almost too cool.

New life awoke on the little ship with the cool of evening. Supper was disposed of, and conversation flowed more freely. Many of the natives on board were Latter Day Saints; their conversation was generally centered about some gospel topic. Louisa marveled. At home religion had seemed more of an incidental thing, a sort of insurance for salvation in the next world, so to speak. But it seemed to be the whole of life for these people.

They were greatly interested in Dan, Louisa, and Robert. Curious as to the reason for the desire of these foreigners to live in their land, they were much astonished when told that Mr. Hunt was there in an effort to prove there was neither God nor devil. They frankly considered him crazy.

Part Eight

MORE BLESSINGS OF HEALING

For over twenty-five years I did much church work here. For fifteen years I was bishop's agent, and part of the time I was president and vice president of Far West District. I also presided over the Saint Joseph Branch part of the time.

Some more very remarkable cases of healing occurred during this time, some of which I shall mention:

Brother Charles Hubacker, a young man, who had recently united with the church, was suffering from lung trouble. He suffered much and was quite weak. He was administered to in prayer meeting on Wednesday night in the Brick Church, was entirely healed, and became a strong, healthy man. Brother Charlie often spoke to me about the great blessing and remarked that whether he remained faithful to the church or not, he knew that the Lord had blessed him with health in answer to prayer, and by the anointing of oil and the laying on of the elders' hands. I hope he will never go back to the world and its follies.

Another case was that of Sister Uphoff, wife of Brother Fred Uphoff, who lived north of Stewartville six miles and was a member of the Pleasant Grove Branch. She had a sore limb and for a number of years there had been a running sore just above the ankle on the shin. During the district conference held in that branch, with T. T. Hinderks I anointed the sore, and we laid our hands on the limb as we were impressed to do and the blessing for which we sought the good Master, came. The sore part has healed and she has not been troubled since.

A LOSING BUSINESS VENTURE

One business venture that proved to be of much worry, and an eventual loss was the creamery at Ray, Andrew County, Missouri. The citizens of Guilford, next town north of Ray, were very eager for a creamery and offered a bonus of six hundred dollars. The people of Ray partook of the same spirit and offered the same amount. At this time there were no creameries within fifty miles and the prospect at either point was flattering. I borrowed $2,500 from Thomas Evans, my wife's first cousin, and put up a plant at Ray, a two-story brick, thirty by fifty-two feet, equipped it fully with machinery, installing also a mill to grind feed and meal at a total cost of $4,200.

Within a year after I started this creamery, there was one put up at Savannah, six miles south and also one at Rosendale, four miles southwest. With these two plants so close, our business began to go down. One creamery could have taken care of all the milk and cream that could be had.

The three creameries were running at a loss and to make matters worse, a Mr. Morton started one at Whitesville, two miles east of our plant. As soon as I heard that he intended to do so, I sent him word that I would like to see him. He called upon me, and I explained that there were already too many in that section and if he wanted to go into the business, I would sell my plant for $2,500, or $1,700 less than cost. I wanted to pay back the $2,500 to Mr. Evans. Mr. Morton said he did not have the money and I then offered to sell on payments, one hundred dollars down and fifty dollars per month in milk, cream and buttermilk. Still he declined, and rented an old store room in Whitesville, put in a churn and started to gather cream.

To make matters worse one of our cream gatherers made arrangements with Mr. Morton, that when he started up, he, Fisher by name, would try to get the farmers to sell their cream to Morton and that he would bring it to him instead of to us. This was all arranged without my knowledge. I was at Saint Joseph in charge of our creamery there, and of course, was not personally acquainted with our patrons near and in Ray. Therefore, it was a very easy matter for Fisher and Morton to get the trade to come to them, regardless of the damage it did to me.

The last day of the month Fisher sent me word that he was going to gather cream for the Whitesville Creamery. This was such low trickery that I made up my mind I would try to hold my trade by offering more for the cream than it was really worth, but whatever price I made Morton would meet it. He was known to most of the farmers as he had made cheese in that neighborhood for a few years; so the majority of them sold their cream to him. To the credit of some I can say that they would not sell as long as I was in the market. They said I had put up a good plant and at their request and was paying market prices and that it was a shame the way Fisher had treated us. Even his own brothers would not sell to him.

At last I closed the creamery and Morton had full control. He left within two days for parts unknown with a large sum of money due the farmers for their cream and owing his friend, Fisher, some for wages.

WE LEARN BY OUR MISTAKES

I advertised our plant there for sale or trade. As a result I traded it for two hundred and eighty-five acres of land in Morgan County, Missouri, twenty-five miles from Versailles, the county seat. The farm was rough, only about twenty-five acres of tillable land, the rest in rock and timber. After making the trade, we found an error in the deed. At the time when we sent it for correction a survey was being made for a railroad that was going through near the farm. The man I had traded with, heard of this and would not make us a deed. Our attorney, Mr. E. B. Randolph, said, "Well you can, by going to law, make him furnish a deed." But as he lived in Saint Paul, Minnesota, it would have been too expensive to go to law. We live and learn by our mistakes. We should have kept the deed and made out the other, then forwarded it to him to sign. The error was not very serious, and if we had known that we were dealing with a man who had no regard for his word nor honesty, we would have kept the first deed. One of his near relatives I knew to be an honorable person.

I finally traded the creamery for one hundred and sixty acres, on mile west of Columbus, Kansas, one of the best pieces of land in the county. Although there was no house, there was a good barn and all the ground was under cultivation. It was heavily mortgaged, about $1,800, but I thought I could hold it until I could sell it for a good price.

One of our sons went down to farm it, and as I had been appointed to labor in Far West district, we decided we would make this farm our home. We chartered a car and moved our household goods, horses, wagons, and farm implements to Columbus. We tried to rent a house there, but there was none to be had, so we went out to a small house near the farm: just three small low ceilinged rooms. An old lady had been sick there for several months and the odor of medicine was still in the house; she had died and the house had been closed up for sometime.

When we went in, my wife became ill. Our car load of stock was still on the track and the boys, Dave and Rob, were anxious to have us stay there, but my wife and Ann were feeling poorly. I was hoping they would make up their minds to stay, but I could not persuade them. I was supposed to return shortly to my field of labor, Far West, but I offered to stay on the farm and if the authorities would permit, I would labor in Kansas. My wife was so sick though, that it seemed folly to stay.

I was strongly tempted to say, "Well, we have come to stay and let us all make up our minds to that end." It seemed child's play to spend money to come all this way, then turn around and go back.

The boys urged, "Mother will be better in a few days; pay no attention to her and Ann." Some of our goods had been unloaded from the car. Some we could not get into that little house, the ceiling was too low.

THE GOLDEN RULE AT HOME

I made the matter a subject of prayer. I did not wish to be harsh and have things all my way. I told my wife that she could have her choice. Although it would cost a hundred dollars to come and go back, if she preferred, we would go. I would not insist on stopping there, and neither would I say, "Let's go back."

Her choice was to return. It was too late to go that day so the next morning I sent our daughter, Mrs. D. C. Kinman, a telegram to meet mother at the station, "Coming on first train." This was something strange! What could be the matter? When they reached Saint Joseph, Sister Terry said that my wife looked as though she had just come through a month's illness.

I returned in a few days and found that all was going well. My wife was still of the opinion that while the move had been an expensive one, and an experience, still it had been best to return. I have never found fault with my wife for wanting to return since I had left it with her and I considered that she was entitled to her way under the circumstances. If we had stayed in Kansas and her illness—and home-sickness—had caused either her's or my daughter's death the balance of my days would have been very unpleasant.

"The Golden Rule will work in the home as well as outside," I concluded, and I am glad that this time I applied it. It is true that the husband should be the head and that the wife and children should give heed to his advice, but here was a time when I could not assert patriarchal authority for I could not say which was the best course to pursue. Besides I am a believer in the idea that it is possible for the wife to be right frequently in her judgments, and that as we are one she ought to have her way at times. I wish now that I had listened more often to my wife's advice. Is it not true that obedience to the gospel brought back to Mother Eve and her daughters equal rights with her sons? If not, then that which was lost by disobedience is not restored by obedience to the gospel, and the gospel has not done its work. I favor the statement, "Man shall leave his father and mother and shall take unto himself a wife and they, too, shall be one," co-equal.

FINANCIAL REVERSES

I labored in the active ministry for a few months, but the money I had borrowed from Mr. Evans troubled me and I had no prospect of paying my debt.

Just prior to going to Kansas and after selling what interest I had in the creamery, I had taken stock in what was known as the North Saint Joseph Brick Yard Company. I was one of five stockholders. I had also bought a fourth share in coal mines near Cincinnati, Iowa, and I had opened up a wholesale and retail coal office at 512 South Eighth Street, Saint Joseph. Later I bought out all the stock in the mines and went to much expense in opening up the mines. I furnished the brick-yard with coal and wood. Business was generally good. The Hyatt Coal Company wrote to buy my coal mines. I offered to sell for $10,000 cash. They wanted to buy on the partial payment plan; offered ten thousand dollars in ten annual payments. I then offered to take five thousand dollars cash and five years to pay the balance in five equal payments. But their first offer was their last.

Shortly after this our main entry in the mines struck a fault. Rock cut the coal completely out. After putting down several drill holes to try to locate the coal, we discovered that it would take over twenty-five thousand dollars to go through the fault, even then we could not be sure of what the prospects on the other would be. I sold out for eight hundred dollars. The party I sold to sold in turn for $400. Later the mines were closed.

The brick business was also giving us trouble. Notes were due and the company owed me nine hundred dollars for coal and wood. One of the stockholders who was reported to be worth fifty thousand dollars, and who was considered good bonds for thousands, placed everything out of his hands. I had to pay over $2,200 on their debts out of my own slight resources.

I wrote Mr. Thomas Evans offering him four houses I owned in payment for what I owed him. But he was very angry and blamed me in bitter terms for not having paid his money back. If he had done as I requested and had taken the houses, he would have had his money. As it was, I lost them.

I went to Kansas City and made arrangements to sell butter for the Newton Creamery Company of Kansas. I was building up a good trade when they began to adulterate by mixing in country butter. Whether they made a practice of this generally, or whether it was only for my trade I cannot say. However, I could not hold my trade and good butter was hard to get, so I had to give up the Kansas City business. Then I returned to Stewartsville to try to form a stock company and start up a creamery. Several had promised to support me. After trying to organize and failing, the town offered me five hundred dollars if I would put up a plant. I borrowed sixteen hundred dollars from Sister Sally Worrell and twelve hundred dollars from Grandpa Jones, my wife's father. I had the promise from over one hundred farmers that they would supply me with cream. The first year, 1897, we did a good business; but in 1898, business was only fair. The roads were bad, and cut down our business over half during the spring. Farmers were behind with their work, and promised to send their milk, but this year closed with much loss. I am sorry to say that many of the Saints who had promised to send their milk if I started the creamery did not do so after the first year. True the price of butterfat was low, but those who kept sending their cream did much better than those who kept their cream in order to make butter at home. In the spring of 1899 the supply of milk was very low. I had put every dollar I owned into the plant and I had borrowed $2,800 on the strength of promises made by some friends.

I had to close down. I turned the property over to Sister Worrell with the one hundred and sixty acres of land in Kansas which Mr. Worrell bought, giving me five hundred dollars on it. This I paid to Brother Frank Mauzey from whom I had borrowed when I traded the Ray Creamery. I was penniless and very much discouraged by this time. Furthermore I had lost confidence in some whom I thought I could depend on.

This experience brought us down to bed rock; twelve hundred dollars in debt to Grandpa Jones and twenty-five hundred dollars in debt to Mr. Evans.

BACK IN BUSINESS AT SAINT JOSEPH

Having failed in Stewartsville, I said to my wife, "I shall go to Saint Joseph and see what I can get to do. When we sold out the milk and ice cream business, I had said that I would never go into that again, so I had no idea of doing so. After reaching Saint Joseph and looking around, however, I took a walk up to the old corner on eleventh and Frederick Avenue.

I found that business had left that once busy place and that the proprietor was sitting down doing nothing. He said to me, "Mr. Lewis you had better come back and take up this business."

I replied, "There is none here."

"Not much, but if you'll come, the trade will return." He was quite complimentary. Notwithstanding I had said I would not take up that line of work again I was strongly impressed to do so and called on the owner of the building, Mr. Hubbard, who was glad to see me for he had been having much trouble to get his rent. I arranged to take the place.

Returning home, I said to my wife, "What do you think I have done?"

She replied, "You have rented the old stand."

"What makes you think that?"

"I was told so."

"Who told you so?"

"I was thinking what you would do and the impression came that you would do that."

"Well, I have."

It was quite an undertaking. No money and the business gone. The good Master knew I had done all I could do and that friends had forsaken me in the hour of my need. It was everybody for himself. In this condition I dreamed that I was in the cellar of the old building and I saw a very fat fish. The floor was covered with crumbs. "Well," I said, "good reason why he is so fat; see the food he has." The dream was encouraging.

After we moved into the apartment upstairs and prepared to open the business, Sister J. M. Terry called and made the remark, "I feel you will have a good business."

The first thing I did was to clean out the store room, and made arrangements for the best of milk which tested six percent. Then I had a large sign printed which read: "Home Again, Lewis Creamery." I hung it on the corner where it could be seen from a long distance. This sign seemed to catch everyone's attention. Many came in and complimented me upon the sign. That together with good milk and cream soon gave us all we could do, and like the fat fish we were surrounded with plenty. It was an evidence that the impression and the dream had been divine, and I had cause to be grateful.

This was in the fall of 1899. Two years later I had a chance to sell out. The church had mentioned to me about going to Wales on a mission, and I was anxious to go. But my debt was still in the way. I had been paying Mr. Evans what I could spare, sending as little as five dollars at one time. I had paid only five hundred dollars. Now the question was, "Should I keep on in business, paying what I could, or should I sell out and pay Grandpa Jones part and the balance to Mr. Evans. I wrote to Mr. Evans that the church had requested me to go to Wales if I possibly could, but that I would not go as long as I was in his debt. I was willing to sell and send him one thousand dollars if he preferred to take that then, or I would keep on and send him some as I could. He replied that he preferred my selling out and sending him the thousand dollars. He also bid me Godspeed on my mission.

I sold out in September, 1901, and paid Grandpa Jones six hundred dollars and Mr. Evans the thousand dollars.

"I HAVE FOUGHT A GOOD FIGHT"

You are naturally religious. I wish I did not have temptations to meet." I say that we deceive ourselves and misjudge the man. We are all of one flesh and blood. This man met with temptations common to us all. There is no question about it. Even Christ was tempted. But no man that I have ever encountered in my travels and conversations in any field where this man has lived and labored has ever reported or seems to have had knowledge of the slightest deviation in conversation and conduct from the path of rectitude or any appearance of evil or iniquity of any sort in the life of Brother McDowell. He met the issues and temptations fairly and squarely and lived his religion and left a record that his family and the church may well be proud of.

"I have finished my course." There seems to come a time when a man's work is done, and a man is fortunate who continues active until his work is done, and a man is fortunate who continues active until his work is done and he can say in the language of the Master, "It is finished." After many years of service Brother McDowell's work was obviously done. In a way he was fortunate. He was active and continued to give service almost to the end of his life and then passed rather quickly away.

There is consolation in the further statement, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness." He was sure of that, and the beautiful part is that it was not for him alone; but for all those who love and keep his commandments this crown is secure.

This afternoon we are sad about the broken fellowship, for there are some men who have been with us so long that when we meet in General Conference and they are not there it seems like something is wrong; when we fail to encounter them on the street and do not have their support any longer, there is a feeling that something has gone out of life—but in spite of all this there are so many things we can be thankful for in a life of this sort that we may rejoice even in the midst of our sorrow. It is often deplored that the young people are drifting away from Christian influences and losing interest not only in the doctrine of the church but in moral ideals, and men and women who are older are oftentimes to blame for this, but when a man like Brother McDowell lives the kind of life that he lived before young people, it is the greatest demonstration and argument that can be presented for their consideration.

In conclusion, on behalf of the whole church, I pay tribute to this good man, because I am sure that wherever there is a Latter Day Saint in touch with this work he would have me do that, and on behalf of the whole church I extend the sympathy of the church to Sister McDowell and her children, because I believe wherever there is a good Latter Day Saint in touch with this work he would want me to do just that thing. I pray that peace and consolation and the blessing of the Spirit may be with them and abide with them.

THE NOMADS

"Do you all believe there is a God?"

"Yes."

"Mr. Hunt," said Louisa, "I am afraid we shall have to go still farther away in order to find our primitive people who have not been influenced by religion. Perhaps it will be impossible to find—"

Mr. Hunt waved an impatient hand. "Oh, we shall move on by and by. This trip is long enough for the time being. I do not like the water—nor these small boats. I think we'll be able to discover some things of interest, anyway. Someone back in Papeete told me all the people in these islands believe in ghosts and spirits. We can get some data on that, and I can observe some other things." He turned interestedly to Robert: "Ask that big fat man over there if he believes in spirits. Looks like a rather practical fellow to me—not easily deceived."

The "practical fellow" answered with a short, shuddering laugh. Yes, he believed in spirits. He had seen some. One had come at him one evening with a breath like a puff of hot wind.

"What did you do?" questioned another native, "did you run?"

"No," boasted the other. "I turned, grabbed him by the coat collar, shook him, and threw him to the ground."

"Haavaare! That's a lie!" Whereupon everybody chuckled a little.

It was quite dark save for the feeble light of lanterns, and someone started a hymn, "Zion, Zion, Zion the pure in heart!"

Louisa sat beside Dan and gave herself over to the enjoyment of the pleasant spirit that seemed to envelop the little group. The stars had never seemed so bright nor so near. They had stopped the engine, and the wind made soft music in the sails; the boat rocked rhythmically; and a strange people sang songs about Zion, and a Savior who would soon come again to earth. Then a native man prayed. It was the first time Louisa had ever heard one of them play. He was darker in color than the average native; she could see his face quite clearly by the light of a lantern. There was something almost attractive about his features. His whole bearing was one betokening quiet dignity. But it was not altogether the soft vowel sounds of the Tahitian language that made his prayer effective. It was because of his utter sincerity. He was actually talking to God, and he knew that he was being heard.

When the prayer had finished, Louisa turned to the quiet, dark-eyed young woman who sat beside her with a baby in her arms.

"Do you believe in Zion also?" she asked.

"Yes. Zion is the only true home we have in this whole earth. Until we arrive there, we are strangers and wanderers."

Louisa was full of pity for these people. She had not heard much about the gathering in the little branch back in Monroe. She did not see how Zion could ever be a reality for these people whose hearts were so set upon it.

"Do you think it will come soon, this gathering that you talk of?" she asked.

"Ah, as to that, I do not know. I say in the words of Alma: 'Would God it may be in my day—but be it sooner or later, in it I will rejoice.'" and coffee are injurious in themselves, and taken very hot or very cold there is the possibility of additional injury from temperature."

TEA AND COFFEE AS BEVERAGES

Here is a plain statement by two members of the presidency that hot drinks were clearly understood to mean tea and coffee at the time the Word of Wisdom was given.

Brother Lambert's article proceeds: ". . . First: Tea and coffee were about the only hot drinks known to the masses (with possibly a few substitutes) and they knew little or nothing about the use of hot water as a beverage, when this revelation was received. Second: At the time the Word of Wisdom was given to the church it seems to have been generally understood that the phrase applied only to tea and coffee. At that time and afterwards, Joseph Smith, jr., and his brother Hyrum both testified that 'hot drinks' meant tea and coffee."

In an article by E. A. Smith on The Word of Wisdom, published in the Herald in 1914 and reprinted by request in Herald of November 29, 1922, we read, "There is no doubt in our mind that the term 'hot drinks' was intended to include tea and coffee. True the words tea and coffee do not appear, yet they are covered by the general term. . . . In a sermon in Nauvoo, May, 1842, Hyrum Smith who at that time was presiding patriarch, formerly member of the first presidency, said: And again, hot drinks are not for the body or belly; there are many who wonder what this can mean, whether it refers to tea and coffee or not. I say it does refer to tea and coffee. (Times and Seasons, volume 3, page 800.) So far as we know, this interpretation was never challenged by the early church or by any quorum or prominent leader of the church. President Joseph Smith who was to teach those revelations which you have received is on record as follows: Tea and coffee are not named in the word, but they are included in the sentence, 'Hot drinks are not for the body or belly!' (Saints' Herald, volume 49, page 1170.) So far as we are aware, no quorum or leading church officer in the Reorganization has ever challenged this decision by President Smith. . . . Chocolate and cocoa are of a different nature. . . . They are very nutritious, and according to one authority nine tenths of their entire bulk is absorbed by the digestive tract. Tea and coffee have no food value whatever; they are stimulants."

The positive testimony by Presidents F. M. Smith and E. A. Smith that hot drinks were clearly understood to mean tea and coffee when the Word of Wisdom was given, and the equally positive testimony of President Joseph Smith as quoted above by President E. A. Smith, find support in the fact that the minutes of a conference at Far West, November 7, 1837, contain the following item: The congregation after a few remarks from Sidney Rigdon unanimously voted not to support stores and shops selling spirituous liquors, tea, coffee, and tobacco (Church History, volume 2, page 120. Also quoted on page 154 of Angel Message Tracts, chapter 10, entitled "The Latter-day Glory," written by E. A. Smith.)

Suppose, for argument's sake, that other drinks now in use, might, because of injurious properties, be included in the term "hot drinks" along with tea and coffee, is that any justification for the continuance of the beverage use of tea and coffee, and the treating lightly of the revelation?

Even if we are not particular as to whether we do our bodies a little harm or not, or as to whether we miss some of the promised treasures of wisdom and knowledge, why not for the sake of unity accept the interpretation of those, who according to the law of the church, have the responsibility of interpreting the revelations for the church?

And how can we expect others to forsake the habits of using liquor, tobacco, or other vices, if we ourselves are not willing to forsake the smaller habits which are so much easier to overcome? And above all, let us not confuse our members with our private interpretations on the Word of Wisdom, when the lawful interpretation is stated in certain and positive terms.

The Oriole club of third St. Joseph branch plan to attend the Stake reunion at Stewartsville in August. A cookie sale netted them $5.10. They have other plans to complete their expense fund. An Oriole sun-rise prayer meeting was held recently attended by O. T. Z.'s, Boy Scouts and other young people. Swimming parties and picnics are frequently provided under the direction of the Oriole Monitor.

The "H. O. P." circle at Fisher, Ark-

Justice for the Poor

Today, as a practical matter, in many American communities there is no court for the man without means. To him justice is a luxury, the entrance fees of the courts prohibitive, their procedure a mystery. The money involved may be needed for necessities of life. If the owner of such a claim must wait a year or even a month for the court to reach his case and then longer still to collect his judgment, the law is of little value to him.

The first practical attempt in the United States to meet this need was in 1913. . . . the Topeka Small Debtors' Court. Similar courts now exist on a state-wide basis in Kansas, Massachusetts, California, South Dakota, Idaho, Nevada, and Oregon. They have been set up also in Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, and Spokane. The use of these courts is optional. It is only an alternative to a regular trial. There are no juries. . . . Lawyers are not usually present, their services are quite unnecessary.

Let us visit a typical small-claims court in action, the conciliation branch of the Cleveland Municipal Court. It handles nearly all types of cases under $50. Where the plaintiff is destitute and has a meritorious claim, the court also hears cases under $100.

When a person brings a grievance to this court he first talks with the clerk, who tries to arrange the matter amicably by telephoning or writing to the defendant. If he fails, the plaintiff signs a brief statement of his claim. A date is set for immediate hearing, and the defendant summoned by mail.

When the case is reached the judge calls the parties to the bench and tries to bring about a friendly settlement. If he does not succeed, he hears both sides and then enters judgment. The parties tell their stories in their own way and question each others. The atmosphere is dignified.

There is no delay; most cases are heard and determined within a week after their filing. The average costs paid by the litigants in the cases handled in 1933 was approximately $1.50 per case.

These courts were never more necessary than today. The depression has complicated the problems of litigation for all, and by the same measure it has increased responsibilities of those who guide our administration of justice.—Harry D. Nims, Member of the New York State Committee on the Administration of Justice, in The Forum.

Church Physician's Health Letter

Sinuitis

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

I have had a good many inquiries recently about sinuitis. It is a very common affliction and a very serious one unless properly treated. It is very unfortunate that few realize that it is classed among the preventable diseases. Serious complications are likely to occur when neglected. Treatment should begin as early as possible by a physician who understands the treatment of such cases. As its name implies it is an inflammation of the sinuses or cavities located in the bony structures of the head. They communicate with the nose by small passageways or openings. Anything that will produce an inflammation in the nasal chambers, is quite likely to carry up the infection through these communicating passageways into these cavities or sinuses. As soon as the bacteria thus have reached their destination they set up an inflammation and unless proper drainage is obtained pus forms rapidly, causing the sufferer to have a severe headache with pain, varying in severity, in the face. The accumulated pus will finally push its way out through the opening into the nose and throat; and unless the patient consults a physician and is careful about blowing his nose, the infection may be carried to the ears which may further complicate matters by causing deafness or a mastoiditis, either one or both. The general inflammation of these parts makes breathing through the nose very difficult. I know of no disease that becomes chronic so rapidly as acute sinuitis. This is because of their often being neglected and their inaccessibility. Unfortunately so many persons depend upon patent medicines or home treatments before consulting a physician. This delay may result in general systemic poisoning which may result in inflammation of the mastoid, rheumatism, heart disease or some other serious complication. If the pus breaks through the walls of the sinuses serious injury may be done to the eye or brain and if neglected too long, may result fatally. In extreme neglected cases or where the infection is unusually virulent, the only recourse the physician may have will be to operate. Many cases, however, can be treated successfully at the physician's office, if he has the proper equipment. Internal medication is quite often necessary to cure the disease and prevent complications. When the physician decided to operate, he finds the X-ray an aid to enable him to determine the extent of the infection. Diseased tonsils should be treated or removed to lessen the severity of the systemic poisoning. In children that have infected tonsils and adenoids, in order to prevent further trouble, they should be removed.

Playing With God

In one of the essays of The Will to Believe, William James pictures the relation of man to God in a striking figure. Man may be like a novice at chess playing against an expert. The novice is eager and confident; he may by chance make some good moves; he will surely make some poor ones. The expert does not know what move the novice will make, but he does not need to know. He understands how to meet every possible move, and the issue of the game is certain. The expert will win.

This is an exceedingly suggestive analogy. But it is in one respect misleading. In the chess game one player must lose. If the expert wins, the novice loses; if the novice wins, the expert loses. It is not so in the game of life. God is not our opponent; He is no enemy to be outplayed or outwitted. Life is a game where both players win or lose. If we win, God wins; if we lose, He suffers defeat. We must play with Him, not against Him.—Luther Allen Weigle in Contemporary American Theology, Second Series; Edited by Vergilius Ferm; Round Table Press, Incorporated.

While a nation is hard at work at its making, and every citizen is engaged in arduous labor of one kind or another for the upbuilding of his own or the national power, worry is scarcely known. The builders of our American civilization were too busy conquering the wilderness of New England, the prairies of the Middle West, the savannahs and lush growth of the South, the arid deserts of the West to have much time for worry. Such men and women were gifted with energy and the power of initiative and executive ability; they were forceful, daring, courageous and active, and in their very working had neither time nor thought for worry.

But just as soon as a reasonable amount of success attended their efforts, and they had amassed wealth, their children began and continued to worry. Not occupied with work that demands our unceasing energy, we find ourselves occupied with trifles, worrying over our health, our investments, our luxuries, our lap-dogs and our frivolous occupations.—George Wharton James in Quit Your Worrying!

The Readers Say---

Experiences of Healing and Blessing

Times being slack the last of November, 1921, I was laid off from my work at Muskegon, Michigan, and so we decided to go to Munising. My wife and two youngest sons, Hershel and Lionell, and I went on the train, arriving at the home of Brother and Sister William Acker on Saturday evening.

On Sunday evening I preached in their home, enjoying a good degree of the Holy Spirit, and was immediately engaged as a colaborer of Elder Charles O. Howe in building up the branch there.

Our youngest son, Lionell, fell ill December 24, and on the twenty-sixth the doctor placed a sign at our door, "Smallpox." This was not removed for many days. We were all sick, and with me the secondary fever set in and my head swelled up so that I did not look like a human being. The doctor said that I could not live. Elder Howe came every night at midnight and administered to me. One night feeling that my time to depart had come, I called my family and admonished them to trust in the Lord. I desired to live for two reasons only—that I might see my sons grow to manhood and that I might provide for my wife.

Soon, however, a peculiar feeling came over me, and after I had asked to be left alone, I was given a wonderful spiritual experience, in which I was divinely administered to and given the assurance that my trials and burdens would not be more than I could bear, and that I would be raised up and would preach Christ's gospel to the children of men.

In the morning the swelling had nearly left, and in a short time I was well. The doctor had said that I would be pitted beyond recognition, but when he took the sign down from our door, he put his hands on my shoulders, squared me around, and looking into my face said, "Smith, I never saw anything like it! In three months' time no one will know you had the smallpox."

I firmly believe that the heavenly messengers who came to me that night and administered to me, were the three Nephites spoken of in the Book of Nephi, chapter 13, Book of Mormon.

In September of 1922, we returned to Muskegon, but work was not good, so I went to do job carpentering at Grand Rapids. On March 11, 1923, I was taken at church with a severe pain above my left hip. Elder E. F. Evans administered to me and I was taken home. A doctor diagnosed my case as stones in the kidney, and I suffered several attacks. I was taken to the hospital and X-rayed, but the stone could not be located. It began to look as though I might not recover. I was administered to many times.

Then Apostle Paul M. Hanson arrived for conference, and gave some stereopticon views of the ruins in Central America. As soon as I heard that he was there, I expressed a wish that he would administer to me. He came in company with Elders E. K. Evans and Alex LaLone. After the administration I went to sleep and had a dream which was a great blessing to me.

Next morning I sat up and that evening before church, Brother and Sister Quay called to see me, and were greatly surprised to see me up. That night I attended the lecture although I used two crutches to get there. Next morning, however, I walked a block and a half and got on the street car and attended the whole conference. At the close I did not need a cane.

In 1930, through administration and prayer, when I was ill with this same trouble, I was given the divine blessing of complete healing.
