I find it takes much work in this part to get the truth before even a few. The people here are afraid to let us have the use of their church and school-houses. Failing to get either the M. E. or the Baptist church in the neighborhood of Bro. Hesters, in Stoddard county, we began meetings in yard, but few came out to hear so these meetings were of short duration. We next began service at the residence of Bro. Hills in the open air, but as the thresher was to be in the neighborhood soon, we only preached three times, but had fair crowds. Sr. Asa, from Illinois, had obtained the consent of the trustees of the Methodist church in her neighborhood for us to hold services there. Accordingly we next expected to begin service on Sunday night, but when we arrived the preacher had been there and the people decided we could not use the church. Sr. Asa, finding such decision had been reached by the people, announced that meeting would be held at her house. Prejudice or something else kept the people away as only a very few were out, and two sermons was the sum total of our preaching there.

Having received a letter from Sr. Stricklin, at Moorehouse, stating that she desired to have us hold services at that place we went over a long dusty road to get there. Again we failed to obtain the use of the church as our purse was too light to pay the price desired by the W. C. T. U. who held it. We preached two sermons at the residence of Mr. Stricklin, but as few came out to hear we closed and left. We found Sr. Stricklin strong in the faith but poor in health. We hope she will improve and that her faith and zeal will never grow less. The day we left we stopped at Bloomfield, the county seat of Stoddard county, and finding many people in town I took occasion to preach on the streets. Quite a crowd of interested listeners heard the word. At the close of my remarks I asked if any of them could tell us where we could get a church or school-house in which to hold service. A preacher spoke out and said we could get the use of the school-house where he lived. We went on Sunday to get our appointment published. This same preacher was there and also another one with him. The other man preached to a large crowd and the congregation was dismissed, nothing being said about our appointment. At the close of service I arose and took liberty to call the congregation to order and told them what the preacher had said to us in Bloomfield, whereupon he arose and tried to explain his action in refusing to publish our appointment, but it was not satisfactory to us. But this was not all. No one invited us to stop over night with them, and when we got to our buggy we found one tug and one flea out. To make a long story short I'll say we did not sleep out. Pioneer work in southeast Missouri is not altogether lovely.

But to continue, we next went to what is known as the brick school-house. Got it? O yes, no trouble. The first night I preached to five persons including Bro. Thomas. The next night three came out, but as Bro. Hally was just getting ready to preach, two left, so no preaching was had that night. Not being entirely discouraged we went the next day to Bro. Hills, telling the people along the road that we expected to begin meetings at his house that night. Accordingly, meeting began and I truly rejoice to say thus far we have had fair crowds and some interest. Not only so, but on Sunday we had a noted Primitive Baptist preacher out to hear us; I mean he is noted in this county. At the close of the sermon I gave opportunity for remarks, when he arose and to the astonishment of the people, endorsed the sermon, which was on church organization.

Bro. Thomas being young, thinks our experience a little tough, but yet he takes it quite well. We aim to do what we can in the work we do not expect to sail to heaven "on downy beds of ease." Hope you ministers in other fields are getting on better than we. It's dry and dusty, mosquitoes and big flies about all dead. May God speed the right and may we all valiently fight for the right to the end is my prayer in Jesus name. Amen.

BOONESBORO, Ia., Aug. 9.

Editor Ensign—I have just read last Herald and feel prompted to write with relation to the thought of not holding week-night meetings in the hot weather. Will not write of the localities individually visited, as that has been done for the Herald, and I deprecate the fact of burdening both papers with the same composition.

Let it be understood that the items to follow are in no sense in the way of boasting, but by way of encouragement to others, and especially to such as feel they can do nothing during the heated nights of the week.

During the month of June the writer preached twenty-four times, and in July twenty-eight times, attending enough other services to swell the total of services attended to 101 in the two months. Of course the Minn. reunion was attended during that time. Hot weather? Well, yes! The hottest day of all—110 in the shade—three sermons were preached. Per-spired? Why, yes, of course, freely. So does the farmer, and every other laborer. In all places thus far visited the laboring class has made up the congregations as a rule. Such congregations have numbered from possibly as low as fifteen up to one hundred. But the rule was adopted the first year of my public ministry of preaching, no difference how small the audience. In fact memory goes back to an occasion when on two nights the congregation numbered but four, and during most of the sermon on both occasions one entire fourth of those audiences was fast asleep. The preacher took it for granted that such portion of his audience had confidence in what was being said!

But some may argue that such work will wear out the ministry unnecessarily. Well, it seems to me that it will be better to wear out than to rust out. Beside, while drinking neither tea nor coffee, nor any kind of stimulant, for that matter, eating no meat, and yet a gain of three pounds in the hot weather for the writer, does not indicate a wearing out, physically. My voice has not been impaired in the least. The Word of Wisdom is true, brethren, and the way to receive its benefits is to keep it.

My understanding has been that spiritualism started with the Fox sisters in 1848, instead of 1840, as Bro. Boelling has it in the last Herald.

From here I expect to go to reunion at Rhodes, next Thursday, thence to Tabor reunion, thence home to "rest" in preparing for winter; thence to Dow City reunion, thence to Eagle Grove, for an eight nights debate with Elder Will Ellmore, of the Disciple church on church propositions. Thence to Minn. for their October conference, and a preaching tour extending through November and possibly December. Then will likely preach till our quorum convenes, March 20th, as per our adjournment. Hope to be able to spend my time during the winter in western Iowa.

Hopefully,
J. W. WIGHT.

Editor Ensign—Bro. R. T. Walters and the writer came to this field (central Illinois district) early in May. Our first work was at Taylorville, where we found a noble band of Saints, earnestly working to clear off the indebtedness on their church, and keep the work before the people. June first found us at Boardstown, where we enjoyed meeting with the Saints in conference. Bro. Stead and E. K. Evans met with us. The Saints at Boardstown are also burdened with debt, but are making every possible effort to obey the injunction of Paul, "owe no man anything." They have a neat little edifice well furnished.

This is a new field, or most of it is, and prejudice grows rank in this well cultivated country. Churches are hard to get, and hall rent is out of our reach, so we just find a natural temple (grove) and seat it with the people of the saw-mill. This way we have been able to reach the people and allay considerable prejudice.

The 8th of July Bro. Walters went to Charleston, where some of his relatives live. Mr. Rhoads kindly rendered the use of his lawn where services were held three weeks. The 19th I joined our genial brother, and when evening came was introduced as the speaker of the hour. All went well until I heard something go spat on the ground. I thought it was a walnut dropped from a tree, but the general stir it caused in the crowd assured me it was something else. A very light shower of eggs followed which did no good to any one, and but very little harm, no one being hit. Egg argument is very poor, and does not meet the demands of good thinking people.

Rev. Dudley (Christian minister) took it upon himself to review us. We gave way and listened to him one night and answered him the next. The Lord stood by us in the effort; even his own members said he was not able to meet us. And all his great effort to show that God did not bless man now as anciently, went helpless to the ground. He made one more attempt at reviewing, but it was a complete failure. The people are still anxious to hear both sides discussed fair, and are trying to get a man to meet us. We hope they will succeed; we have nothing to fear if we are humble and studious. We expect to begin meetings here soon. We would be pleased to hear from any of the scattered Saints in this district who want preaching in their locality. Our field address is Taylorville, Illinois, Box 238. Any mail sent to the above address will reach us promptly.

Yours for the spread of truth,
R. W. DAVIS.

CHILLICOTHE, Mo., Aug. 7.

Dear Ensign—I am still toiling away; have had the tent in one place for four weeks, and spoke two weeks in a building before we erected the tent. Have preached in all thirty-eight sermons. None of the brethren have been here to assist me; most of the time have a great interest. The last four nights we have been showing up some of the errors of one of the popular churches. Have been blessed with splendid liberty. I used a chart showing what was in the primitive church and what is in this popular church. Several are ready for baptism. Expect to move the tent to another part of the city and continue on, perhaps all summer. I want to warn the people of the city so they will be left without excuse when we all appear before the judgment bar of God. We have preached thirty nine sermons here since we came in June. I think we will be able to raise up a branch before the year is gone. There are many honest people and if it was not for the hireling they would accept the gospel much more readily; and others have been turned against us by some of the Saints having more zeal than wisdom in trying to force their ideas on them, and by stepping in before others that have the work in charge here. Hope we may all learn our duty and be able to do good and undo what others have done. The calls in the district are many; in the last few days I have received word to come to three different places as soon as I can, but I think I will not leave Chillicothe for some time. B. J. Dice is with me now; he spoke last night and did well. We have three more to baptize in a day or two, and three that belong to the Christian church said they were coming in soon; so we think the work is onward and God is verifying his promise to me that he would bless me, and that I should be the means of bringing many in the church, and strengthen the Saints, and sinners should tremble beneath the sound of my voice. Some here of the outsiders said they did tremble under my voice. God's word never fails if we will do our part.

The friends prepared to have an ice cream social for the benefit of the missionary and asked for the use of the tent. Of course they got it, and they cleared $13.10, which came in very handy for our funds were very low, and it costs something to run a tent in this place. The friends donated twenty cakes and they sold about eight gallons of cream. The Lord said they will feed and clothe you and give you money. May he abundantly reward them.

We have started a Sunday School and it is prospering nicely, though small. Last night after preaching a man came to me and said he heard I was a healer and he wanted to be healed; I told him I made no such claims but we claimed that the Lord was a healer to those who would obey him. He said it was good doctrine anyway. People are very anxious for temporal blessing but they do not live for them. I hope the time will soon come when God's will shall be done on earth as in heaven.

Your brother in the one faith,
J. W. ADAMS.

BELLEVILLE, K.

Editor Ensign—Bro. L. C. Gurvell and J. C. Vaughn have just closed a short series of meetings at this place. As they were refused the use of a church or any other building to preach in, they were compelled to speak in the court house park. Congregations were small but attentive. Babylon crumbled before the forceful arguments Bro. Gurvell produced by the aid of his wonderful chart. One lady has asked for baptism, others interested. May God speed such able defenders of his truth. They have gone to the Washington school-house, fourteen miles northwest of Belleville, by invitation of the people in that neighborhood.

Your brother in Christ,
D. S. MARPLE.

RHODES, Ia., Aug. 28.

Editor Ensign—The quarterly conference of the Des Moines district convened here August 17th, district president, H. A. McCoy, presiding, and Elder J. W. Wight assisting. Branches reporting were: Boonesboro, Perry, Richland, Oskaloosa, Des Moines, Grinnell and Runnels. Elders reporting were: J. W. Wight, Geo. Shimmel, H. A. McCoy, E. J. Clarke, C. J. Peters, W. C. Nirk, W. C. Earhart, N. Stamm, and S. K. Sorensen. The bishop's agent's report for the quarter showed $273.00 received. Three sermons were delivered on Sunday August 18th, the speakers being Elders J. W. Wight, D. C. White and John D. White.

On Saturday morning the reunion organization was perfected, and J. W. Wight was chosen to preside, and H. A. McCoy and D. C. White to assist. Following the close of the conference the reunion and camp meeting continued during the week and over Sunday, August 25th. The attendance of the Saints throughout the session was good, most of them remaining the ten days. To the Saints the reunion was a great success. The Religio and Sunday School work was all that could be hoped for. The prayer service daily was deeply impressive to all, and nearly all present took an active part in these meetings. Some of these sessions were the most spiritual ever witnessed in the district. Special promises were given to a number through the elders. The sermons delivered were especially interesting and instructive to the Saints; and on some occasions special inspiration was manifest, giving added light and evidence in regard to the restoration of the gospel.

From the standpoint of presenting the gospel to the world, the reunion was a grand success. The large tent was filled to a crowded condition at each Sunday and evening service, and on some occasions more were standing around the tent than could be seated on the inside. No better interest could be hoped for than was manifested by the people of Rhodes and the surrounding community, and everything seemed to indicate a desire to hear. The best of feeling prevailed between the Saints and the people of the town. The Saints attended some of the church services and some of the sweet singers of Rhodes sang at the tent.

The singing during the reunion was in charge of Elder John D. White, of Independence, Missouri (this was his former home, also that of his wife), and the Saints of the Des Moines district are justly proud of the musical talent in the district. All very much appreciated having Bro. White present, and his efforts in behalf of the reunion and his unceasing desire to lead the Saints on will long be remembered by those who attended the reunion.

Elder D. C. White and wife, of Lamoni, former residents here, were very kindly received by the Saints, and a goodly number were present who had come into the church through his labors, and these received him with a glad hand. Elder J. W. Wight in his further acquaintance with the Saints of the district only endears himself to the membership in every way. His every sermon was especially strong and helpful to the Saints; his counsel and prayers were strengthening, and in his special intercourse all were instructed.

The conference adjourned to meet at Grinnell December 23, 1901, and the Sunday School to meet the day previous. On the question of holding another reunion all were in favor of the same, and the time and place of holding same was left in the hands of a committee. The service last Sunday consisted of Sunday School at 8 a. m., prayer meeting at 9 a. m., and preaching at 10:30, by Elder J. D. White. Basket dinner and preaching at 2:30 p. m., by Elder J. C. Crab, and at 8 p. m. by Elder J. W. Wight.

Editor Ensign—Our meeting at this place is now drawing to a close. The attendance of outsiders has been equal to our expectations, and good liberty has been given to the speakers, and Saints have been cheered and encouraged. A Sunday School was organized with Sr. Beulah Johnson, superintendent; Sr. Sands, assistant; Sr. Will Edwards, secretary; Bro. Edwards, chorister; Sr. Mary Sands, organist; Eunice Miller, treasurer. They manifest considerable interest in the start, which, if continued, will win a place for them.

Bro. and Sr. Will Rootman, from Hope, and Sr. Judkins and daughter-in-law, from Midway, are present, and add no little to the interest of the meetings. Bro. H. O. Smith has rendered valuable assistance in the song service, as well as preaching.

We close here tomorrow night, and leave Wednesday a. m. for Martin's Creek, where we begin a similar meeting. These meetings are proving of great benefit to the work.

Hastily,
W. S. MACRAE.

Dear Ensign—Your face is the only one of all your church companions I have had the pleasure of looking upon since I came to this field, and only occasionally do I get to study your sweet countenance; but when I do, I take occasion to study every lineament (line it has sent) for trace of sorrow or of joy since last we met. The article "Cause and Its Effect," in issue of August 15th, strikes me as being well written and opportune.

While at Buffalo City last week two young men were arrested with a peace warrant, and the constable brought them in the house and held them till the services were finished, so they got to hear about one half hour of gospel story that I hope may be profitable to them when the law gets through with them.

Trusting all is well in Zion and her stakes for which she shall ever have my prayers, I am

THE BOOK OF MORMON.

Evidences of Its Divinity.

BY ELDER R. C. EVANS.

Permit me to draw your attention to the 85th Psalm, 11th and 12th verses, where you will find these words:

Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven. Yea, the Lord shall give that which is good; and our land shall yield her increase.

The world has claimed, ever since the introduction of the work known as the Book of Mormon, that Joseph Smith and others have palmed upon the people an imposition; that as the Book of Mormon claims to be a revelation of God's will to the children of men, therefore it must be false because the Bible is all we need; and that the Bible states very plainly God's anathema would rest upon any man who would add to, or take from the words that he had already given. Now, I propose to answer a few of the objections urged by our friends in this regard before entering into the main thread of the argument relative to the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon.

Permit me to draw your attention to the passage referred to. It is found in the 22d chapter of Revelation, 18th and 19th verses, and reads as follows:

"For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book: and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

The argument is made from this that there is to be no more revelation, and Mr. Smith rests under the curse of God, because he has assumed to add to the word of God. Let me show you, dear friends, that this statement of Holy Writ is no argument, whatever, against the position held by Mr. Smith and his co-adjutors in this latter day work. In the first place, this passage forbids MAN to add to this Book, John's Revelation, but it does not say that God will never reveal his mind and will to the children of men again; it does not say the people are to be guilty in the latter days as they were in the meridian of time, of worshipping dumb idols, that is, worshipping a god that could not speak, but it forbids man to tamper with the prophecies already given, by adding to them or diminishing from them. It is remarkable that the very men who would hurl this anathema upon Joseph Smith, have themselves added to these very verses above cited, and this afternoon in looking over this chapter, I discover nineteen words that have been added by the translators of King James' Translation of the Bible. You will discover them in italic letters, showing the translators themselves were honest enough to put the words they added, as they affirm, to make better grammar, in italics, yet it is a truth that nineteen words have been added to this very chapter by the men who want to place the curse of God upon Joseph Smith for adding to or taking from the word of God.

Now, if this be a correct rendering, that God is to reveal nothing more, because he has forbidden man to add to or take from, we draw your attention to the 4th and 12th chapters of Deuteronomy, and you will find these words, in effect, showing that God would punish the men that added to or diminished from the words that he had already given. In their wild frenzy to accuse Joseph Smith of being guilty, and of being worthy of the curse herein pronounced, they have not only placed the anathema upon Smith, but upon Moses, for he wrote after the language just cited in Deuteronomy. Not only does Moses come under the curse with Smith, but every other writer of the Old and New Testament after God said, "Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it." Well, there is an axiom in life that, "what proves too much does not prove anything," and if their opinion is correct, not only Smith rests under the curse, but Moses and every man who has written one single statement claiming to come from God, from Moses until the present time. You see at once, that the objection urged is faulty.

But they tell us that the Bible or New Testament is sufficient for the salvation of the race, and therefore there is no necessity for the Book of Mormon. Let me ask the objectors, Was the Old Testament Scriptures, or law revealed therein, sufficient to save the sons of men? If you answer in the negative, then what will you do with the race from Adam until after the resurrection of Jesus Christ? for they had no New Testament then. If you answer in the affirmative, I will become an objector for the moment and say if the Old Testament contained sufficient for the salvation of the race, what need of the New? And you will discover I will be in the very same place as the man is who says there is enough in the New Testament to save us, and therefore where is the need of the Book of Mormon? Now, we have no hesitancy in making the statement that there is not a single doctrine taught in the New Testament that we cannot preach and prove from the Old Testament. The divinity of Christ, the power of God, faith and repentance, baptism, and the laying on of hands, the resurrection of the dead, eternal judgment and the millennial reign. All the doctrines as taught in the New Testament may be found in the Old. Therefore you discover that the person who urges there is enough in the New Testament to save a man, and we have no need of the Book of Mormon, stands upon the same footing as the man who would say, whereas there is enough in the Old Testament to save a man, we have no necessity for the New.

But what is the object of the Book of Mormon? Perhaps we had better read the book itself. Permit me to read a clause from the title page of the book, reflecting its real object. It is as follows: "An abridgment taken from the Book of Ether; also, which is a record of the people of Jared; who were scattered at the time the Lord confounded the language of the people when they were building a tower to get to heaven: which is to show unto the remnant of the house of Israel what great things the Lord hath done for their fathers; and that they may know the covenants of the Lord, that they are not cast off forever; and also to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the eternal God." I quote also from the 490th page of this work as follows: "And behold they [that is the writings of this record] shall go unto the unbelieving of the Jews; and for this intent shall they go; that they may be persuaded that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God; that the Father may bring about, through his most beloved, his great and eternal purpose, in restoring the Jews, or all the house of Israel, to the land of their inheritance."

Now, friends, let us reason together. If this is the object of the book, to convince the Jew and the gentile that Jesus is the Christ; so, an instrument in the hands of God of restoring the Jews to their promised land, I ask, in the name of christianity, why do we find men all over this world, professedly loving Jesus Christ, who oppose this work, whose every object is amelioration of the Jews and gentiles by the presentation of the gospel of Jesus Christ to them. "Well," says one, "but then we have the New Testament, that will do." Has the New Testament yet convinced the Jew that Jesus is the Christ? Go with the New Testament in your hand and make an argument before a Jew and he will laugh at you. He will tell you, quoting from the historians of the time, that Jesus was an illegitimate child, that he was born of fornication. Some of them claim that he was an impostor, and they knew him better than the gentiles, and he was a blasphemer, and they killed him because he claimed to be that which he was not. "Oh, but," say the christians, "you know that after you killed him he arose from the dead," and they laugh at you a second time and say, "No, sir, he never rose from the dead at all, but the ten or eleven publicans and sinners that you call his disciples, were the very ones who stole his body while the guards were asleep." And they will turn to you and say, "The only evidence that you have that Jesus arose from the dead is the New Testament, and the writers of the New Testament are the very men whom the Jews claim were guilty of stealing his body away, and it is no evidence to us."

Mark you, while this is a fact concerning the Jew's belief with reference to the New Testament, yet the facts stare us in the face that the Book of Mormon comes to the world with the avowed object of convincing the Jew and the gentile that Jesus is the Christ; and before we get through tonight we will endeavor to show you how that work of convincing will be carried on through the instrumentality of God's sacred law. The Jew and gentile have made the same mistake in they both believed God would never reveal his will to any person outside of Palestine. Now you know they used to think that over in the New Testament times, but I want to draw your attention to the 17th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, where Paul forever buries the thought that God had only some favored spot where he would reveal his mind and will. Paul says, God "Hath made of one blood all nations of men * * * and hath determined * * * the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek the Lord * * * though he be not very far from every one of us;" Peter takes up the glad refrain in the 10th of Acts, and he declares there: "I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him."

Whatever your preconceived ideas may have been with reference to this, let me say the light is turned on, the revelation comes to us that we may hope for God's power and blessings and Spirit, and revelation to come to any man, anywhere in all the wide, wide world, if he will only fear God and work righteousness before him.

Jesus supports the statement made by Paul and Peter when he declares, in the 10th of John, 16th verse: "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice." Now, isn't it remarkably strange that the disciples who read that, never asked Jesus—so far as the revelation comes to us—to whom he referred? But taking up this work under consideration, I turn to the 451st page, and I read as follows: "And behold, this is the land of your inheritance; * * * And not at any time hath the Father given me commandment that I shall tell it unto your brethren at Jerusalem; neither at any time hath the Father given me commandment that I should tell unto them concerning the other tribes of the house of Israel, whom the Father hath led away out of the land. This much did the Father command me, that I should tell unto them, that other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." Mark the thought, friends, the very language that occurs in that chapter of John, in the revelations that Jesus gave to the people over there in Palestine, occurs here, with the claim following it that it fell from the lips of the same individual, and gives the interpretation to the thought as expressed in Palestine, that they were the sheep referred to by him over there.

Now, that these sheep were of Israelitish descent may be proven beyond a doubt. You remember in the 10th of Matthew, Jesus spoke to them and said: "Go not into the way of the gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." Now, where can we find these lost sheep? Ezekiel is informed by God, and records the fact in the 34th chapter of his prophecy, 6th verse, that "My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill; yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth." Here, then we may expect to find the sheep of Israel, the descendants of the house of Jacob upon every hill, or over in some far off lands and they were to hear his voice. Now the Book of Mormon comes up and declares that some of his sheep came here, and that Jesus visited them; but I am going to try and show you from the Bible that Israel did come over here, or one branch of the house of Israel. You know Jacob had twelve sons, and it will not be expected that I will follow all of them in their rambles throughout the land, but I shall follow a favorite one; his name is Joseph. You know that Latter Day Saints have a great liking for that name, Joseph, and I will give you a few reasons why we think the name Joseph is favored of the Lord.

Turn with me to the 48th chapter of the book of Genesis, and we find there that Joseph brings his two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, to be blessed of his father, Jacob: "And Israel stretched out his right hand, and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, guiding his hands wittingly; for Manasseh was the first born. And he blessed Joseph, and said, God before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day, the angel which redeemed me from all evil, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers, Abraham and Isaac; and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth." (Verses 14-16). Now, hunt up your geographies, friends, and find where the "midst of the earth" is, and you will find where they were to dwell and grow into a multitude of nations. Come with me to the 49th chapter, 22d and 23d verses, and we find a further blessing of this tribe of Joseph. "Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall." Now, the wall here, I understand to be the sea. The branches, the posterity of Joseph, that is Ephraim and Manasseh, are to go over the sea. "Well," some one will say, "it does not say the sea." We will claim that it means the sea and we will try and prove that it is the sea—you see if we do not. He goes on here and says, verse 26: "The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors, unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills; they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren." Now, he declares here that his posterity was to receive a greater blessing than his progenitors. Who were Jacob's progenitors? Why Abraham and Isaac. What was the blessing pronounced upon them? That they were to have that holy land over there lying east and south of the Mediterranean sea; and the little land over there, that perhaps, generally speaking, is about one hundred and eighty-five miles long, and somewhere in the neighborhood of forty-five miles broad. But Joseph's posterity was to receive an inheritance afar off to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills; and the blessings were to be above the blessings of his progenitors. Says one, "You want to give Joseph's posterity a land of their own?" That is what I am striving to do, friends, and we will see if I cannot find it in just so many words.

Go with me to the 22d chapter of Deuteronomy, and we will try to find just those words, that Joseph is to get a land of his own over here (verses 13 to 16), "And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land [Joseph is going to get a land, you perceive], for the precious things of heaven." What are the most precious things of heaves? The revelations of God. Mark you, the land of Joseph is to produce the revelations of God. "For the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath." The land of Joseph is to be so blessed in its abundance of wealth that go through its waters, that the blessings of the deep will be pronounced upon it, and you know that the fisheries question has been agitating all this country for 10, these many years. "And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills." What are the chief things of the lasting hills and the ancient mountains? Gold and silver, and you will find it in abundance in Joseph's land. The Black Hills and the Rocky Mountains have drawn out hundreds and thousands of men looking for the precious things of the lasting hills and ancient mountains. "And for the precious things of the earth and fullness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren."

Here we find God is going to give Joseph the land. His posterity is to grow into a multitude of nations in that land, and is to enjoy the precious things of heaven. Now, where is that land? Go with me to the 18th chapter of Isaiah, 8th verse, and we read concerning the same people under the similitude of a vine with branches or boughs: "For the fields of Heshbon languish, and the vine of Sibmah: the lords of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof, they are come even unto Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness: her branches are stretched out, they are GONE OVER THE SEA." I promised that I would find that they were to go over the sea; I told you it said a wall over there in Genesis; the reason it was called a wall is, that it was thought in those days that it was impossible to cross the briny deep, but the time came that they did go over; they were to go over the sea.

Now, friends, we turn to the 36th page of the Book of Mormon, and we read how they did come over the sea just exactly as the prophet Isaiah said they would: "And we did sojourn for many years, yea, even eight years in the wilderness." You remember the Bible says they were to go through the wilderness and over the sea: "And we did come to the land which we called Bountiful, because of its much fruit, and also wild honey; and all these things were prepared of the Lord, that we might not perish. And we beheld the sea, which we called Irreantum, which being interpreted, is, many waters."

I want you to notice this thought, friends, that the Bible declares they were to go over the sea, and it describes the land and how they would travel; and the Book of Mormon takes up the thread and shows that they fulfilled the prophecy and were in the wilderness eight years, and came over the sea. A little further upon this thought; the 48th chapter of Jeremiah, 13th verse: "Oh vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer: thy plants are gone over the sea, they reach even unto the sea of Jazer." You know where the sea of Jazer is over there. Now, stand there on that part of Africa, and look, if you please, over the sea, and what land will you come to? The land of America. There is a further description of this land given in the 18th chapter of Isaiah; it is there described as a land shadowing with wings which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia, and look over the sea and find a land shadowing with wings, and you will find America, lying geographically as two great wings, North and South America, and the Isthmus of Darien between. This land's great symbol is the eagle's wings.

We now have brought them over the sea. Now turn to the 34th and 36th pages of Wiston's edition of Josephus, and you will find that some went over the sea; that at a certain time there was an emigration from Jerusalem over the sea to a strange land. Now I take up the Book of Mormon and I read on page 137 that the people of Nephi came from Jerusalem six hundred years before Christ, in the reign of Zedekiah, and also that Mulek came upon the land in the north country about the same time. Pages 304 and 401 of the Book of Mormon tells us that Mulek was a son of Zedekiah, that they came and peopled this continent. I want now to turn your attention to Jeremiah again, and read that they left Jerusalem just exactly the time that the Book of Mormon stated they would leave. The book tells us, the first page, that they left Jerusalem six hundred years before Christ, that is, at the commencement of the first year of the reign of Zedekiah, king of Judea. Now, the Bible declares, in the 49th chapter of Jeremiah, verses 30-32, that they were commanded just six hundred years before Christ, according to the margin here, to leave Jerusalem, and here is the language: "Flee, get you far off, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazer, saith the Lord; for Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, hath taken counsel against you, and hath conceived a purpose against you. Arise, get you up unto the wealthy nation, that dwelleth without care, saith the Lord, which have neither gates nor bars, which dwell alone. And their camels shall be a booty, and the multitude of their cattle a spoil." Now, here they are commanded to dwell deep, that is to go unobserved, and to hasten out of the country in order to save their lives, and they were to find a wealthy nation which dwell without care, whose cattle were uncared for, and whose gold and silver could be had for the coming for it. I turn to the Book of Mormon, page 43, and read that they came to that very land, and here is the description they give of it: "And it came to pass that we did find upon the land of promise, as we journeyed in the wilderness, that there were beasts in the forests, of every kind, both the cow, and the ox, and the ass, and the horse, and the goat, and the wild goat, and all manner of wild animals, which were for the use of men. And we did find all manner of ore, both of gold, and of silver, and of copper." The very thing, mark you, that Jeremiah says they would find.

Now, the question arises, where did the people come from who preceded this migration from Jerusalem six hundred years before Christ? And I turn to the Bible, the 11th chapter of Genesis, for the answer, and we read that the people were of one accord building a tower to get to heaven, and that God came down, and seeing the tower, confounded their language, and they were scattered over all the face of the earth. Now I take up the Book of Mormon and the fly leaf tells the great story. I have read it before, tonight, that the people of Jared were scattered at the time the Lord confounded the language of the people when they were building a tower to get to heaven. Mark the similarity: the Bible declares that when they were building that tower, God confounded their language and scattered them over all the face of the earth; and the Book of Mormon comes right up and says that some of them were scattered to this land; and turning to the Book of Mormon, pages 500 to 533, called the Book of Ether, we read a very good account of how they left the plains of Shinar; how they built eight barges, and Jared, with his brethren and others, came over to this continent and settled upon this land shadowing with wings which is beyond the rivers of Ebbiopia; and they tell us how they worshiped God; how they built large cities and inhabited them; and in process of time they became a wicked and disobedient people, and that God declared, through the mouth of their prophets, that if they would not repent, that he would destroy them. And we find that that was all fulfilled as prophesied in the Bible, and referred to in the former part of our service tonight, as the descendants of Lehi came six hundred years before Christ, and entered into the very cities that were depopulated by reason of sin; the very ones whose people came from the plains of Shinar. These are thoughts that are worthy of your consideration; and we now draw your attention further to a few notes that we have selected from the Archaeological discoveries, all over the land, by such men as Baldwin, who wrote his wonderful work entitled, "Ancient America," and I believe it was published in 1876—forty years after the Book of Mormon.

I want to give you just a few thoughts from Baldwin, and show that he and others had discovered just what the Book of Mormon revealed forty years before they ever dreamed that there were people upon this continent. Baldwin, page 155, declares that there were two different periods of the past, in which people, who were enlightened, inhabited this continent. I have shown you from the Bible and Book of Mormon that this is a fact. Baldwin, page 264, says that there were over a thousand years between the two people. The Book of Mormon shows there were sixteen hundred years between the two people.

Baldwin, page 271, says they were not one people. The Book of Mormon, page 157, declares they were the people of Jared that came from the tower which has been spoken of, and the people of Nephi, who came from Jerusalem six hundred years before Christ.

Baldwin, page 271, declares that they were of different speech. The Book of Mormon, page 137, shows how the people of Nephi came and found the sons of Mosiah and educated them in their language, and both people merged into one great body.

Baldwin, page 264 (and I want to draw your special attention to this thought), has discovered by the monumental evidences that are still extant in Peru and Yucatan, that the last people who came, were led by four brothers, the youngest of whom became the head of a long line of kings. The Book of Mormon, pages 3 and 4, tells us who these four boys were, and who was the youngest of them, and just what he accomplished. Nephi was the youngest, who ruled his brethren, and the names of the other three boys were Laman, Lemuel, and Sam. Friends, you cannot get anything in all the wide world that proves the divine authenticity of the Bible any more plainly than the monumental evidences of Yucatan and Peru prove the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon.

I want to read just one little sketch here that I took from a newspaper a little while ago. It reads as follows:

"A DEAD NATION. Remarkable Discoveries Made in the State of Chiapas, Mexico. Recently returned explorers from the state of Chiapas, confirm and add to the remarkable reports concerning important archaeological discoveries. A fine, broad, paved road, built by prehistoric inhabitants, has been traced from Tonala down into Guatemala, and thence in a curve up into Mexico, terminating at Palenque. All along the road are still to be seen the remains of ruined cities, and a careful estimate of the population of these places is about 30,000,000. On that part of the road near Palenque the ruins are of great magnitude. Houses four, and often five stories high, have been found in the depth of the forest. Many of these houses are pyramidal in form, and so covered are some of them with vegetable mold that large trees are growing from the roofs. In some of the houses, great employment has been made of stone beams of tremendous weight, and the architecture indicates a high degree of scientific attainments," etc.

Here, upon one road, we find cities have been built and are still existing in their dilapidated state, covered by the forest of years, that have accommodated, in these happy homes, over thirty million sons and daughters. Do you think Joseph Smith built these cities and planted these trees and shrubs and forests over there in order to prove that a people lived there, and that the Book of Mormon was true? I have heard of Smith performing many miracles, but none so great as this. Mark you, friends, these were discovered forty, and some fifty, years after the Book of Mormon was in print; and we have been informed by good authority that Stevens and Catherwood took that Book of Mormon in hand and discovered some sixteen cities by its descriptive powers as contained in its pages. Whether it is a fact or not, I am not prepared to say, but I give it to you as I have received it from others; but it is still a truth that all through the years since the introduction of the Book of Mormon, the world has been discovering evidences that prove its divine authenticity.

Now, having brought a people to this continent and divided them, and given them history in their different periods of time and existence, shown from the archaeological discoveries and from those not connected with this latter day work; and the evidence we have here in favor of this continent once being peopled, is it a thing incredible to you that these people who were so highly intelligent should have written history, should have had a mode, a plan, a system of religion? And if they were a religious people, as the monumental evidences prove they were, why not have a written history? Why not God reveal to them his mind and will on this continent, as he did to their brethren on the other continent? We have every reason to believe that he would, from the evidences already adduced, that "he is no respecter of persons," but that out of every nation those that fear him and work righteousness are accepted with him, and that "he has made of one blood all the nations of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation," and those that seek him shall find him. Now if these people sought after him, the promise is, they would find him; and how would they find him, only as he revealed himself to them? Says one, "There is no objection to be urged from a reasonable standpoint that these people would have a record."

But now we draw your attention to the 8th chapter of Hosea, and we find there that God spoke: "I have written unto him [Ephraim] the great things of my law, but they were counted as a strange thing." Now where are the great things that God wrote to Ephraim, in the Bible? Look for them and when you find them, let me know. But here comes great things that God wrote to Ephraim upon this continent, and they are counted as a strange thing, just as the prophet said they would. I appeal to this audience tonight—how many of you, having listened to the recital of evidence presented upon this occasion, have thought in your mind, "Well, I tell you, that Book of Mormon is really a strange thing; I never thought there was evidence in the Bible that proves its divinity so clearly. It is certainly a strange matter." Well, that was what the prophet said you would say, when the great things written to Ephraim would be revealed.

Ezekiel, in the 87th chapter, tells us that God was going to do a great work in bringing out this very record—the Book of Mormon—that I present for your consideration. I read a few verses, beginning at the 15th verse of the 87th chapter of Ezekiel's prophecy: "The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel, his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel, his companions; and join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Will thou not shew us what thou meanest by these? Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand. And the sticks wherewith thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land; and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all."

Here you discover that God shows the prophet that he is to take two sticks and write upon them. Naturally the people will say, "Well, what do you mean by writing on those sticks, Ezekiel?" and when they ask in this regard, say to them, "Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah," and after these are joined together, he declares, by their power and force, he will gather Israel to their promised land. Now, that is one of the things—one reason by which the Jews are going to be convinced that Jesus is the Christ—it is by the putting of these two sticks together—the testimony of Judah and the testimony of Joseph—that in the mouth of two or three witnesses the word of God may be established. Now, what is this stick? When I was in the city of Chicago a year ago, I went up to the Jewish synagogue and watched the Jewish Rabbi come out from behind the pavilion and walk up to the sacred altar, and behind him followed two men bearing the holy stick of the law, on silver instruments, for they were not worthy to touch it with their hands. They laid that law before the Rabbi and it was called a stick, wound up on two sticks, and he would unroll until he found just what he wanted. He called it the stick of Judah. Now, the Bible says it was the stick of Judah. Judah was to hold the scepter and be a lawgiver until Shiloh come, then shall they be gathered home. (Gen. 49: 10).

But, where is the stick of Joseph? We have followed Joseph's posterity to this land; we have followed Ephraim and Manasseh to a land shadowing with wings; we have followed him to a land that was beyond the sea of Jazer; in other words, to the land of America. Now, where is his stick? Where is the law that is to be joined with the law of Judah, and the two witnesses which are to go together to bring Israel home in the latter times? We remark, it is the Book of Mormon. Says one, "It does seem kind of strange, but then, the story that Joseph Smith got the book out of the ground, and all that, I can't believe that!" I am going to give you some reasons for believing it. Turn with me, friends, to the 29th chapter of Isaiah, and we will read some there. We will briefly note it. We find that God, in speaking, says: "Woe to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt! [that is Jerusalem] add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices. Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow: and it shall be unto me as Ariel." (CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

"OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS."
DAUGHTERS OF ZION
MRS. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

What Attitude Toward Young Men Should Our Girls Maintain?

Many in this mundane sphere try earnestly to demonstrate that there are two standards of morality. One, demanding more purity of a young lady than a young man; the other, condemning in a young lady what would be overlooked in a young man. In the divine economy of God there is found no such distinction between male and female; but what He requires of one to do, He requires of the other, with the same promises and rewards attached to each. It is apparent from the surrounding evidence which is accessible, that the heavenly Father designed a young woman to have a restraining, elevating influence; in other words, "a refiner" of souls. Is it right to lower this standard? No; a young lady should maintain her high plane and demand that her masculine friends come up to it. It has often been a wonderment whether a young lady fully appreciated the respect and reverence shown her by her masculine friends. Or if she reflected upon the opportunities which are afforded her to inspire them to a more genuine, nobler and grander manhood.

But, sad as it may seem, it is too often the reverse, and how painful and humiliating it is to see a young lady of high station, education and accomplishment, value the elevation of her womanhood no higher than instead of trying to exert an influence to correct the existing wrong that predominates the world over, she condescends to encourage it in numerous ways, permitting a young man to think that it makes no difference whether he tries to make himself better in order to gain access to her society. Here a grand mistake is made. For a young man values a genuine, independent young lady more than is often realized. This is the kind to whom he will show the highest respect, not those that humor him for the sake of gaining his attention for the time being. For he regards a young lady as having finer feelings. Now, as the young men are largely at the mercy of the young ladies, why may she not reach forth, and with the ability that lies in the reach of every young lady, uplift and inspire, so that all coming in contact with her may see the need of reaching a higher plane. For one man said, "Women have exerted more influence over us, they may do more with us than they think."

Right here may be said that the deportment of a young lady has a great deal to do with the influence she exerts. She should act, speak and look as if cheerfulness was a part of her being. For cheerfulness is a radiating focus of reform. Feel kindly toward those whom she knows are unfriendly. Having a pleasant countenance, a sympathetic inquiry, as regards one's welfare, and always saying genial things. For in this way enemies may be brought in closer communion than in wrestling in an uncharitable feeling. Her manner should be such that will do away with that stiff, haughty air which makes a shy person feel uncomfortable, causing him to have any but a good opinion of her; thus showing always respect for all, no matter what station in life they may be. Extravagance in speech is one of the greatest sins of the age, whose influence is being felt more day by day. In this regard thoughtfulness should be given, in order that the trivial happenings of the day may not be made dramatic, but be kept within their limits. Closely following the heels of extravagance of speech is its twin sister "dress." All that the divine Creator has required of each is neatness, cleanliness, and not overstepping the bounds of being too plain as to make one's self conspicuous, or too extravagant as to cause herself to be held aloof.

But every young lady should take such an attitude toward a young man, at all times and in all places, that he may feel that it is imprudent to act otherwise than manly. For well does he know if he makes a trifling remark of her who has held her position properly, it will be betraying his character to those of his fellowmen in whom he wishes full confidence. Therefore, each young lady should strive to take such a stand that those who associate with her may say they have a better prospect in life because they have known her, and her ambitions gave them incentives toward higher aims. But what should a young lady require of young men to be her friends? Is it simply seeing them? Hearing compliments that people are passing upon them that makes them her friends? If this was all, there would be nothing but momentary enjoyment. But it is being able to believe in them, to depend on them, and to be assured they are true, noble, good to the core. Now what is the key of success to this influence? It is having a lovely spirit, which shows its beauty, strength, and grandeur from being natural, and not affected that causes young men to want to leave that which is impure and strive to reach a higher plane.—LaJune Howard in St. Louis Word and Works, April, 1901.

Horse Originated Here.

WHAT SCIENTIFIC INVESTIGATION IN BRISTOL COUNTY, TEXAS, HAS DEVELOPED.

The Texas fossil expedition recently sent out by the American Museum of Natural History, has made a valuable and startling find by unearthing the remains of a prehistoric horse. This fossil animal is a remarkable discovery, as it proves the origin of the horse to have been in America, says the New York Herald.

It was generally believed that the horse originated in Europe, especially as the aboriginal Indian tribes first encountered by the white men on this continent had no horses.

The fossil horse now discovered has been mounted and placed on exhibition in the tertiary mammal hall of the museum. The skeleton was found by Mr. J. W. Gidley in a bed of sand, about one hundred feet in thickness, in Bristol county, Texas.

It is an entirely new species of pleistocene horse, and the only one so far found. A new name was necessary to designate it from other types, so the term, Equus Scotti, was selected, in honor of Prof. W. D. Scott, of Princeton, a well known paleontologist. Science can hardly calculate the exact time when this fossil horse roamed the marshes of primeval earth and was smothered up and embedded by the first great dust shower.

Comparing the skeleton of the fossil horse with that of an ordinary horse of the present day, there are some striking differences. Thus the skeleton of the fossil horse represents an animal with a head about the size of that of a large draft horse, but with a height of body and length of limb of an ordinary western pony, and with a length of body very similar to that of the zebra. —The Independence Sentinel, August 23, 1901.

F. P. SCAROLIFF, Broker and Commission Merchant. Mobile, Alabama.

TO THE BROTHERS AND FRIENDS IN THE NORTH AND WEST: I can sell Corn, Oats, Hay, Bran, Flour, Potatoes, Apples, Cabbage etc. in car load lots to wholesale and retail dealers here. Will also purchase for brethren and friends in Alabama, Mississippi and Florida, supplies of all kinds at wholesale prices, plus a reasonable commission. Correspondence solicited.

I would like to receive shipments of Hens, Chickens and Eggs from Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi and near points in Florida. I am in a situation to dispose of them to advantage.

Mobile is a port from which produce and goods are shipped to foreign countries, as well as a distributing point for surrounding country, hence special freight rates are made to this point.

To not ship anything without corresponding. Write and I will give you probable prices and freight rates. Brethren and friends, let us work for our mutual benefit; we can save, in many instances, several middlemen's profits. Where special rates can be obtained, farmers can load a car themselves, or two or more unite and do so.

Prospects are brighter for the work in the district and time for action opportune, so let us commune and work "together for the accomplishment of the work entrusted to all."

S. D. CONDIT, Dist. Pres.

The London, Ontario, district conference will meet with the Saints of the Ellis branch, at Rostock, Ontario, commencing Saturday, September 28th, at 10 a. m., and continuing throughout Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Independence Stake.

The first semi-annual conference of the Independence Stake will be held at Holden, Missouri, beginning at 10 o'clock a. m., Saturday, September 21st, and continuing over the 22d. ALL reports should be in the hands of the Stake Secretary, Bro. D. Robert Winn, 2306 Bellefontaine Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, not later than September 10th, for tabulation and arrangement, ready to be presented to the conference. No work of this kind should be forced upon the secretary during conference, by the neglect of any one to send his report as herein requested. The following from the epistle of the Stake presidency published in the Ensign for May 30, 1901, will refresh the memory of those interested:

"We hereby give notice that a report will be expected from every one holding license to act in any ministerial capacity (except those laboring under missionary appointment, who are required to report to the missionary in charge) at each Stake conference."

Let everyone remember their duty and send written report to the Stake secretary as above, whether or not they can be in attendance at conference. Verbal reports are, as a rule, unsatisfactory, and burdensome to the secretary.

Ministerial reports should include number of sermons preached, number of services attended, number of baptisms—if any—and in what capacity labor has been performed. We will endeavor to have blank forms for reports furnished in the future; but no one should neglect to send his report to the secretary in time designated on account of not having them now.

We confidently expect a large representation and attendance at this conference.

Northwest Kansas Reunion.

The Saints of the above district gathered for their annual camp meeting services at Blue Rapids, August 22d and continued till Sunday night, September 1st, coming from Clay, Washington, Republic, Cloud, Smith, Marshall and Rooks counties of this district, and from Nemaha and Jackson counties of the eastern district. The weather was very dry and the soil very dusty, two little showers settling the dust somewhat on the days they fell. However, all inconveniences and discomforts were borne not only patiently but cheerfully.

Of the Kansas missionary force there were present: Brn. M. T. Short, L. G. Gurwell, J. O. Vaughn, J. V. Roberts and G. W. Beebe, Jr.; also Samuel Twombly, president of the Northeast Kansas district, besides Brn. Hilliard and H. A. Stebbins, who had been invited from Independence and Lamoni to assist in the work of preaching and otherwise as might be needed.

The little camp was pleasantly located close to the Blue River on sandy soil, near the spot on which like gatherings have been had in some previous years. The drought prevented the abundance of fruit and vegetables heretofore had this season, but no one lacked for wholesome food and all were content so far as the writer witnessed.

Some who have helped the reunions of past years to be successful were present, such as J. Fern Smith, Edwin Sandy, Jr., F. McClure and Mrs. Ella Landers and Christiana Scott. Brn. Wm. Landers, Alma Kent, Otto Nelson, V. E. Rogers and Sr. Zelona Smith and others who aided in the past were unable to be present this year.

Those taking part in the preaching have been Brn. Hilliard, Stebbins, Short, Gurwell, Vaughn, Roberts, Beebe, McClure, Twombly and A. Smith. The prayer meetings were all spiritual, comforting and full of peace.

It was resolved to have a reunion next year, as drought conditions have not discouraged them, as appears to have been the case in some larger districts. Few Saints dwell throughout these regions comparatively and some have to travel far by team or train to enjoy the annual association with each other, and to have the benefits of the religious services of which they are otherwise largely deprived.

Hence those who come appreciate the yearly gathering as being a feast in a spiritual way. None of them are really well off in temporal things, but they are struggling hopefully for the necessary things of this life and seeking for eternal good at the same time. September 2. S.

Reunion Notices.

We desire to say to the Saints expecting to attend the Southern Wisconsin district reunion five miles north of the city of Janesville, Wis., September 21-30, 1901, that tents can be rented cheap so you can cook and eat in your own tent if you desire; and we will also have a large tent equipped with stove and tables, so if any desire to club together they may have a place in which to cook and eat; it will be free to all. Barn room for horses; room for men to sleep in the barn on the hay; bring your blankets. Those expecting to come on the cars or those wanting a tent, drop a card to J. O. Dutton, R. F. D. No. 1, Milton Junction, Wisconsin. Come one and all.

W. A. McDOWELL, Dist. Pres. Williams Bay, Wis., Aug. 29.

Reunion Recalled.

Notice is hereby given that for good and sufficient reasons, and on account of the drought, the reunion of the Southeastern Illinois district has been recalled for this year. It has been deemed best to dispense with the reunion for this year.

F. M. SLOVER, } DAVID HOOVER, } Com. F. M. DAVIS, } September 2.

A MARCHING SONG.

ALICE R. CONSON.

Come, comrades, gird your armor on, Get ready for the fray, Our Master calls to every one, Wait not another day. Then forward still, 'tis the Master's will, His call we will obey, Gird on the sword, in the name of the Lord, And we'll surely gain the day. Though fierce and numerous the foe, And our forces seem but small, At His command we will onward go, And obey His every call. Then forward still, 'tis the Master's will, His call we will obey, In His strength alone, we'll go marching on, And we'll surely gain the day.

Though hidden foes on every side, Shoot forth the poisoned dart, We need not fear while we're here, Nor march with fainting heart; But forward still, 'tis the Master's will,

His call we will obey, With the shield of faith and the sword of truth, We will surely gain the day.

Our Captain marches on before, His banner holds on high, Let us keep in sight the colors bright, And list the battle cry. And forward still, 'tis the Master's will,

His call we will obey, Gird on the sword, and obey each word, And we'll surely gain the day.

Should mountains rise across our path, Backward we need not go, If our faith is strong, with shout and song

We will lay the mountain low. Then forward still, 'tis the Master's will,

His call we will obey, Just the strength we need, He will give indeed, We will surely gain the day.

Or should a Jordan intervene, Or a deep sea bar the way, As He did for Israel long ago, He will do for us today.

Then forward still, 'tis the Master's will, His call we will obey, We will march ahead, nor the deep seas dread, And we'll surely gain the day.

And should our strength begin to fail, Our hearts grow faint and weak, With wine and oil He will cheer each soul,

And give the aid we seek. Then forward still, 'tis the Master's will,

His call we will obey, He will hear each cry, and each need supply, We will surely gain the day.

And if, by chance, we should drop our shield, And our armor lay aside; And we wounded are, yet we need not fear,

For a balm He doth provide. Then forward still, 'tis the Master's will,

His call we will obey, If we stand our ground, He will heal each wound, And we'll surely gain the day.

Then courage, comrades, one and all, Our foes are unprepared, They have no shield or armor on, And know not what they're dreading.

Then forward still, 'tis the Master's will, His call we will obey, We'll wield the sword in the strength of the Lord, And we'll surely gain the day.

"THY WILL BE DONE."

How easily and smoothly do those words fall from the lips of the worshiper; and how often do we hear the prayer expressed in song:

Nearer my God to thee,
Nearer to thee,
E'en though it be a cross
That raiseth me.

Yet when the will of God is that our pathway lie among the rocks and the thorns, and his human nature shrinks, and is not satisfied at all that God's will be done. When the cross that is to raise us nearer to Him is presented for us to carry, we would fain turn from it and have the uplifting assisted by our way, something more agreeable to us; and often there are murmurings and rebellion because there are trials to be endured, and the cross to be often borne. What poor soldiers we often prove ourselves to be when we shrink from hardships and seek rather the "Flowery Beds of Ease," forgetful that "others fought to win the prize." It requires a great deal more than mere sentiment to be a faithful soldier of the cross; a brave, undaunted spirit, a firmness of character, a disposition to cheerfully submit to and obey the instructions and directions of the commander, are all necessary qualities in the making of a good soldier. It is inconceivable to think of a regiment, brigade, or division of an army, when an order is issued by the general in charge, to hesitate to obey it because to do so would be certain to subject them to discomfort, suffering, or even loss of life; neither could we conceive of a thorough soldier stopping to suggest to his commander that he would rather do the work some other way more pleasant to him, and more in harmony with his ideas as to how the campaign should be conducted; the thought would be absurd.

A good soldier is obedient to the orders of his commander though it should cost him his life.

And yet, good people often complain of the trials they are forced to undergo in their spiritual warfare. They fail to be impressed with the thought that it is a necessary part of the discipline by which they are fitted for the higher and better experience to come. In a time of emergency every one feels confidence in the "regulars," those tried and seasoned veterans whose hard experiences have made them strong and capable as defenders of the country; and it is just as needful that the child of God should learn by what he suffers, so that firmness and fortitude may be leading characteristics in his development in the Lord's army. There is still another strong factor in the success of an army of good soldiers and that is found in the fact that they are all a unit in doing the will of the commander, whatever they may individually think with regard to the wisdom of the order they are carrying out; they know that for one man to hesitate at such a time would be treason, and he would be liable to forfeit his life if he rebelled. Christians can take a lesson from this thought; the will of the Lord should be paramount in all things, and when it is so plainly expressed as it is in His Word, there should not be the slightest hesitation in carrying out the orders given, doing it too, cheerfully and as a unit. What a force and power for good in all the world would the great army of professing Christians be if all were united in carrying out to the very utmost the spirit of the instructions of the great King. Truly the Lord has a rebellious set to work with, so many of whom continually misinterpret his commands, and thus weaken their force for good in the world.

We never seem to find this condition in Satan's hosts. They all seem to be working together for a common end and do it with cheerful alacrity apparently, for they keep a faithful servant of the Lord continually in the conflict; no rest is permitted, the engagement is steady and constant; and because the adversary's forces are united and constantly re-inforced, there is a gradual increase of evil and of his power in the world; who does not see it is blind indeed. The apostle's testimony was that "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." (2 Tim. 3: 13), and he warns us in this manner:

This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God.—2 Tim. 3: 1-4.

Could any language more clearly or more explicitly express the condition existing in this age? Every one must acknowledge that there was inspiration in this prediction—all brought about by unity of action on the part of the forces of the adversary in carrying out the plans and designs of their leader; and it so much can thus be accomplished on the side of sin and evil, how much more might have been realized on the side of righteousness had there been an equal unity of purpose and action in doing the Father's will. We need to learn obedience by the things we suffer; it seems hard for us to learn any other way. We are always ready to acknowledge that our heavenly Father knows best; but when we are made to experience sorrow we somehow, at times, think some injustice has been done us. Sometimes, though we may not express it in words, the thought will suggest itself to our minds that our faithful service to God and His work ought to have shielded us from some heavy affliction; that on account of what we had tried to do for God, He should have protected us from the dreadful blow. We forget then that all the service we ever have given, or ever can give, in the work of the Lord, is solely to our own benefit. God is not in any way increased by our poor service; that service simply perfects our own character and enables us to enjoy Him in all the grandeur He has prepared for those who abide the conditions.

When word was brought to Job of the destruction of his children, his wealth and his power, he humbly submitted to the wisdom of the Lord, and it was not until his three friends began to worry him with their misguided attempts to make it appear that he must have been secretly a very unrighteous man, that he complained of his heavy and sore afflictions. Where is the individual today, under the same circumstances in which Job was placed, when calamity followed fast upon disaster, that would say, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, Blessed be the name of the Lord?" It requires a great deal of faith, a large amount of fortitude, and patience to "endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," to be submissive to the judgment and will of our heavenly Father; but every follower of Christ should seek these traits; it is the best thing he can do, and they who possess them are rich indeed, though, like the Savior, they have not where to lay their heads, that they may call their own, in this world.

But this excellence is not all acquired at once; it must be a gradual increase, as the great oak results from the small acorn, its seed; and thus trial, affliction and distress educate us to greater dependence on the Lord; loosens the hold of our affections for the things of this world, and teaches us that the better things lie in the beauties of the life to come. Some one has beautifully expressed the thought of the peculiarity of the Saints' warfare, in saying that in the armies of this world, when a soldier is wounded and worn and faint, he is removed out of the conflict to the hospital; but in the great army of the Lord, the battle-scarred, the weary and the weak, are constantly called into farther action and some are falling in the conflict every day, and their rest is glorious. But the rest press on, assured of final triumph and victory. Let us not faint by the way; there can be no defeat of the army of the Lord, and though the conflict is growing sharper, the battle fiercer, the end will not long be delayed, and with the armies of heaven we shall join in the shout of victory; and of praises to our God, under whose power and guidance we have overcome. Let us to this end, fervently work and pray, that the will of our heavenly Father may "be done in earth, as it is in heaven."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

If Sr. "M. F. S." of Morehouse, Missouri, will send her full address to "The Literary Exchange," No. 117 Bowen St., Independence, Mo., her request for church literature will be granted.

ELDER M. H. BOND, in a note from Providence, Rhode Island, September 3d, advises that Elder F. M. Sheehy was to leave on that date for New York and Chicago. Bro. Bond was to go to Fall River to engage in tent service, where he says the interest is fair.

BRO. AND SR. J. F. BURTON expected to leave San Jose, California, August 26th for San Francisco to join Bro. and Sr. Gilbert and make their final preparation for departure to their mission field, the Society Islands. They were in good health.

BRN. BARMORE AND KNISLEY were at Glencoe, Ontario, September 2d, with the tent. The outlook is good just now. They came there with the tent indirectly from Forest, where about forty sermons were preached, two baptized. In last few weeks Bro. Knisley has sold nearly $15.00 dollars worth of church publications, and was still selling at the above writing.

BRO. W. H. GARRETT will attend the Dow City reunion this month in the interest of the ENSIGN Publishing House. Those who may be present should not fail to see him and do their part in sustaining the publishing department. Those who cannot attend the reunion could send by some one who will attend. Be sure that the ENSIGN is authorized to visit the home of every Saint in the section of country represented at the reunion this year, and supply yourselves with our excellent books and sermon tracts for missionary duty the ensuing year. Do not neglect this important matter.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. JAMES COOP, Downs, Osborne county, Kansas:

We are of the scattered numbers. Have no branch here, but like to have the Saints and elders call and see us when they can. We live two miles south of Downs.

ELDER J. J. CORNISH, Reed City, Michigan, says, August 26th, that:

Everything seems to be moving on fairly well in Michigan. The missionaries are busy; some are coming into the church occasionally, and we are being better understood by the people.

ELDER M. H. BOND, Providence, Rhode Island, August 26th:

Bro. Sheehy was here Saturday from Connecticut, goes back to Chicago field next week, is feeling well in the work. Matters looking up here, fine day yesterday. Will go to Fall River tomorrow; fair prospects for tent work there.

ELDER J. W. ADAMS, Chillicothe, Missouri, September 6th: I am still toiling away; have preached for ten weeks here, and will move the tent to another part of the city tomorrow and continue. It pays to stay in one place for some time I think.

SR. (Mrs.) M. E. MCGRAW, Eagle Ford, Texas:

Prejudice and the adversary reign supreme in our neighborhood. We are among the isolated ones, but firm in the faith. We were made to rejoice by the visit of two of God's servants this spring and summer. My husband was inducted into the kingdom last May. We would be glad to have Bro. A. C. Hart, or any of the Mayville Saints visit us.

BRO. JERRY HAGER, Shattuck, Oklahoma:

We live thirty miles west of Woodward on the Santa Fe R. R. There are about eight members here and Elder James H. Baker is at present preaching here. The most of our neighbors are Germans who cannot speak our language; so if there are any German elders in this country, please come and see us.

BRO. H. G. SAMSON, Big Otter, Clay County, West Virginia, August 30:

There is another call today for preaching in Rone county. I would be happy to see some brother come to the help of the cause. I believe there can be good done here. I am still seeking to subdue prejudice and build up the true church. I have conversed with many preachers and they are compelled to say we are on safe ground.

A CALL TO DUTY.

It has been my privilege to attend several tent meetings in Kansas City, Missouri, and Kansas City, Kansas, recently. I have been astonished at the meager interest the Saints seem to have been taking in those services.

A crowd draws a crowd, and if those devoted brethren who are giving their life's efforts to the work of the Master are permitted to struggle on alone night after night, with very few of our own people to assist, can we expect the world to take interest where we show so little?

To our young Saints, brothers and sisters, let me suggest, if you wish to do effective missionary work, here is your chance. If you desire to stand close by our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ here is your chance night after night. Remember, in more ways than one in the great future it may be said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

I feel safe in saying the missionary in charge, the brethren who have so patiently, week after week, labored, preaching often to very few—yes, and the Lord and his angels—have appreciated the presence of every one of our people, young or old, who have lent their presence and voices in singing, to the meetings. May God bless them, and add to the number of those who shall accept this shining opportunity to assist in the Master's work, feeling thankful to God that under so peaceful and pleasant conditions effectual work may be done for now and eternity.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS

INDEPENDENCE.

Last Friday afternoon a goodly number of the Gleaners met to improve the time as did Dorcas of old.

The prayer meeting of the Religio on Friday night was made interesting and strengthening by the interest the young Saints showed by offering their testimonies and prayers. Bro. Ammon White and Frank Resch conducted the meeting.

Twenty-seven were elected delegates to the Independence Stake Sunday School convention to be held at Holden on the 20th inst. They were empowered to select others who are interested in Sunday School work who may be present, also were instructed as a whole or in part to cast the entire vote of the school which is allowed forty-three votes.

Robert Earle, son of Bro. Ira O. and Sr. Della Burdick, was blessed Sunday, September 1st by Elders W. H. Garrett and George Hawley.

Elder Alfred White will be the speaker next Sunday morning at the Saints' church, and President G. H. Hulmes at night.

The Religio entertainment last week was both an enjoyable and successful affair. Many fine numbers were given in solos, duets and recitations. We have not space for details. We did not learn the sum realized from the collection taken for the benefit of the society.

Those who intend using electric lights in their houses or places of business should not fail to see or correspond with the superintendent of the city plant, and have their work done under his supervision. Do not trust your wiring to irresponsible parties who offer to do it "cheap," it may prove the most costly mistake you ever made. The proper wiring of a house is an important matter and should not be done in a haphazard manner. The city will furnish good workmen, the best of material, and do the work practically at cost, so that the best results may be obtained at a minimum cost by having them do this work.

Bro. John Joseph Luff and Sr. Carrie Eversole were married Thursday evening of last week, at the home of Bro. and Sr. Joseph Luff, Bro. R. J. Parker, uncle of the groom, officiating. They have gone to housekeeping in the house formerly occupied by Sr. Shaver, on Fuller avenue. May peace and happiness abide with them.

The superintendent of the new electric light plant is finding "a plenty" to do these days in looking after the city's interests. The first consignment of poles do not even approach the contract specifications by about 95 per cent. Nothing that does not meet the specifications will be accepted or passed, and a close inspection will be given all material tendered for the plant. It will be necessary to do this, for in these days it is not impossible for an erecting engineer and the manufacturing companies to have an understanding for their mutual benefit, which would not be to the advantage of the plant. While this may not be the case in this instance, it will be well to be prepared to reject anything that would not be satisfactory when put to the test.

Sr. Nellie R. Madison, wife of Ralph Madison, second daughter of Sr. Mary Nesbitt, died at her home on the South Side at 10:45 last Friday morning, from tumor. She united with the church Children's Day, 1890, being baptized by Elder F. G. Pitt. She was married to Mr. Ralph Madison January, 1898, and was a faithful, loving wife. The funeral took place from the home Saturday at 3 p. m., Elder G. H. Hulmes preaching the sermon. The floral offerings were beautiful and abundant. She was highly esteemed by a large circle of acquaintances who deplore her early demise.

Srs. Emma Hendrickson and Nella Garrett went to New Conception, Missouri, Friday morning of last week, to enjoy country life awhile. They will be guests of Bro. and Sr. Andrew Jensen, and daughter, Rebecca, relatives of Sr. Hendrickson.

There were 816 at Sunday School last Sunday, with $8.64 collection. Pres. J. D. White preached the morning, and Bro. B. J. Scott, the evening discourse, both were well received. The anthems were especially good. Mr. J. W. Davis, manager of the Western Union Telegraph office, this city, kindly and thoughtfully sent a copy of the morning bulletin concerning the condition of President McKinley, which was read to the congregation and thanks were offered for the encouragement it contained, with supplication for his speedy recovery.

Bro. and Sr. W. N. Robinson and Sr. Orville James, with their children, returned home Thursday of last week, from Wisconsin, where they have been "summering" the past few weeks. Bro. and Sr. J. A. Robinson, Jr., and family, returned from Colorado about the first of the week. Bro. and Sr. J. A. Robinson, Sr., arrived home later, and all report a very enjoyable outing. They worshipped with the Delevan Saints, Bro. Southwick in charge, and Bro. J. A. preached for them two Sundays. The singing of our brethren and sisters, with some Kansas City singers, was a feature much enjoyed by the audiences, as well as the discourses. We are glad to have them all back again safely.

Elder Charles J. Clark, an old time Saint, for some years a resident of Keokuk, Iowa, was received as member of the Independence branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, on his original baptism, Sunday, September 1st, and has rejoiced much in Spirit in so doing, though physically so badly afflicted. His many friends here were glad to have him cast his lot with them, and his hosts of friends elsewhere will also be glad to know of it.

The Ensign force took a vacation Wednesday afternoon about three o'clock while they discussed and dissected a fifty pound watermelon with which Bro. Geo. O. Adkins, of Courtney, Missouri, kindly presented them as a sample of the product of good Missouri soil. It was luscious, sweet and juicy, and the unanimous judgment of the entire force was that Bro. Adkins knows a good melon when he sees it. His courtesy was appreciated and they won't grumble if he repeats it next season.

Word was received Wednesday of the serious illness of our aged brother, Dr. A. B. Herman, of Atherton. Himself and companion were present at the morning and afternoon services here the past two Sundays and bore earnest testimonies. President Hulmes and Bishop May drove out to his home Wednesday afternoon to administer to him.

Tuesday and Wednesday mornings this week nice showers of rain visited our city laying the dust and refreshing vegetation.

Bro. Joseph Westwood, Sr., is confined to his home on the Southside, and has been for some weeks past. He thinks it possible that he will not long survive. He is quite aged and has been a very active, zealous soldier of the cross in his time. He was widely known in England in his early ministry, presiding over several conferences at different times. He and our widely known Bro. Chas. Derry, of Woodbine, Iowa, are old acquaintances and labored in the same missions, we understand, in those early days. The faith of these aged veterans shines brightly, and the gospel is a theme dear to their souls.

Bro. Henry Holdsworth, Jr., a young man 27 years old, engaged in the plumbing business in Kansas City, Missouri, was instantly killed at the Missouri Pacific Ry. station in this city about 1:30 Sunday afternoon. He was on his way to Kansas City at the time, and as it was the most direct route, was walking along the track to the station. At the end of the station platform there is a mail bag catching device for a mail train which does not stop here. To pass around this, places one close to the rail and Bro. Henry in stepping up from the track upon the platform unfortunately happened to do so just as a rapidly running switch engine was passing that point. He was struck by the platform end of the pilot and thrown in such a manner as to be dragged several yards, crushing in the upper part of his face, causing instantaneous death. His funeral took place from the church, which was well filled with sympathizing friends and Saints, Tuesday at 3 p. m., Pres. Hulmes preaching the sermon. The services were very impressive, the comforting Spirit of peace being manifest. The local lodge of Knights and Ladies of Security, a fraternal insurance order, of which the deceased was a member, attended in a body, ranging themselves on each side of the walk as the casket was borne to and from the hearse at the church. They passed the following resolutions of condolence:

WHEREAS it has pleased the Almighty in His infinite wisdom to remove from our midst by death Knight Henry Holdsworth, Jr., and

Resolved, That we, his brothers and sisters in fraternity offer our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones, imploring our Heavenly Father to bless and comfort them in their affliction. Be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the order and a copy presented to the bereaved family, and a copy each to the Letter, News and Ensign for publication.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Elder G. H. Hilliard arrived Monday and will be the speaker here at the morning hour next Sunday.

Students for Graceland have been gathering in during the past week. The college opened Monday and Tuesday of this week.

The bazaar to be held for the benefit of Graceland will open Saturday next. Those having it in charge report a goodly supply of useful and ornamental articles already contributed besides expecting many more to come in before the opening. They promise a good time.

Two were baptized here last Friday by Elder J. W. Wight, and confirmed at the Sunday afternoon prayer service by Elders C. Scott and J. W. Wight, making the present membership of the branch 1337.

Elder J. W. Wight, who returned last week was the speaker here at the morning hour Sunday, and Elder Heman C. Smith continued the Historical lectures in the evening. The afternoon prayer service was in charge of Elders R. J. and J. R. Lambert.

Elder R. S. Salyards occupied the Sunday morning hour at the two day meeting at Lone Rock. The attendance was good and the interest excellent.

Elder F. E. Cochran occupied at Surprise school house, and Elder J. C. Clapp at Davis City on Sunday.

Elders R. M. Elvin and F. M. Weld came home from their fields Monday, Bro. Weld suffering from an attack of tonsillitis.

There are some indications of rain again, which is sorely needed.

Elder H. A. Stebbins returned from Blue Rapids, Kansas, reunion Monday evening. He held services at St. Joseph over Sunday.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Places of worship: Rock Church, Glasgow avenue and Dickson street. Services, Wednesday evening, prayer service. Sunday, Sabbath School 9:30 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m.; social service at 2:30 p. m.; preaching at 8 p. m. Cheltenham, 5731 Manchester Ave., services, Sunday School 10 a. m.; social meeting 2:30 p. m.; preaching 7:30 p. m. Oak Hill, Sunday School 9:30 a. m., and services at 2:30 and 8 p. m.

We arrived home last Tuesday evening, in time to shake hands with Bro. I. N. White, wishing him good-by, just prior to his departure for Kentucky, to meet Braden, we believe, who is opposing the work, in the section where our people are being subjected to indignities because of the gospel. The evening was being made a gala night, the Building Committee giving a reception, and serving ice cream refreshment. An excellent program was rendered in the auditorium, after which the "body" en masse adjourned to our spacious lawn, which was decorated with Japanese lanterns, and presented quite a pretty picture. The Building committee social was a success.

Sorrow doth often tread upon the heels of pleasure, and while many of us were making merry at the social, at the home of Bro. John S. Parrish, anxiety and anguish were keeping stern vigil; Sr. Lilly Parrish departed from this life Wednesday morning, and with her the little life that was to have gladdened and made happy the fireside. Nothing sadder has come under our notice for some little while, for there are a number of children remaining, and the care of them will devolve upon our young sister, Maude. Truly, are our numbers being lessened one by one.

Friday, of this same week, and while friends were gathering at the home of Bro. Parrish, to pay the last sad rites to his beloved, Bro. Wm. O. Thomas, at his home in Cheltenham, passed peacefully and quietly away, to the better life beyond. Bro. Thomas has been ailing for months, but the end came all unexpectedly and suddenly. He was laid to rest today in beautiful Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Bro. F. A. Smith was in charge of the funeral service of Sr. Parrish; we understand Bro. John White was to be in charge at today's service.

Friday night, the regular religio prayer service was dispensed with for the nonce, and Elder F. A. Smith lectured on Stake organization. A splendid attendance, and some questioning afterwards.

Mite Society was postponed until Monday next, September 16th.

Priesthood meeting, Tuesday evening, the 17th.

Conference was postponed until September 28th.

Preaching service Sunday morning in charge of Bro. R. Archibald, Elder Smith occupying the sacred desk. Good attention given him. Bro. Smith also addressed the evening congregation, which was moderately large. Understand there were twenty-six strangers last Sunday night; a number last evening. The 6 o'clock social service was in charge of Brn. F. A. Smith and N. N. Cook. At its conclusion Bro. Smith asked all to kneel with him while he fervently and humbly plead with the Father for the betterment of the condition of our president, Wm. McKinley.

Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Sunday evening at 6 p. m. E. F. Shupe, pastor, 3635 Clayton St.

The weather is decidedly cooler leading us to think that winter is not far away.

The Sunday School gave a trolly party last Thursday night instead of a picnic. A very pleasant time was had and the children enjoyed it very much.

With the rest of this great nation we are made to mourn on account of the attempted assassination of the president.

The attendance at the church Sunday was quite large, especially at Sunday School and the morning preaching service; quite a number of strangers were present.

Among the Saints present from a distance Sunday were Bro. E. C. Harrington and Bro. Sandy, of Kansas City, Bro. John L. Williams, agent for the H. & St. Joe R. R., at Osborn, Missouri, and Bro. Alex. Black, of Dunlap, Iowa, who is visiting his son Fred and daughter Rena of this city.

Bro. Ola White visited a week in our city recently.

Elder Pickering gave us a call on his way home from the west, and preached for us Sunday, the 25th ult.

Bro. and Sr. James Kemp, of Conifer, were in the city last week. Sr. Kemp has gone on a visit to Salt Lake.

Bro. Sam Brannon has returned to Graceland.

Born to the wife of Bro. I. C. Edwards, a daughter.

The Seventh Day Adventists are holding their annual camp meeting in the city and drawing large crowds.

Sr. J. Floy Lewis, graduate of Graceland, is making rapid strides in the literary line. Several of her compositions have appeared in the Denver papers, and are said to be very good.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA. Services at "David's Temple," Cor. 14th and Folsom Sts. Sunday School 9:45 a. m.; preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sacrament meeting on first Sunday of each month at 12:15 p. m. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

At 11 a. m. sermon by Elder Gilbert. He is on his way to Tahiti, but manages to make his voice heard at the various stopping places on the way.

At 7:45 President Joseph Smith was our speaker. All were much pleased with his remarks. He set forth his belief in the latter day work very clearly and plainly. Quite a number of the Utah Mormons were out to hear him. We had a full house at both the services today.

Patriarch A. H. Smith held forth at Oakland in the evening, where a goodly number of listeners greeted him.

Wednesday we had a very spiritual prayer meeting at the residence of J. A. Saxe. Brn. Joseph, Alexander and Gilbert were among the visitors. Bro. Joseph had charge of the meeting. Quite a number bore their testimony to the truth of the great work in which we are engaged.

Our reunion will be held at Oakland, beginning next Friday morning. Quite a large gathering is expected. It will continue some ten days.

There is no change in the strike here as yet. Business is growing duller on account of it. Many disturbances are arising among the men; a number of fights and some shooting. Times are becoming quite serious. All well with the Saints.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 27.

Dear Ensign:—I have been very busy since Conference (last spring) going into the field of labor in a few days after returning home, and since that time have not lost much time. Bro. Ebeling and I have labored together nearly all summer. We have opened up some new places where the gospel has never been heard.

Last winter I went up to Titusville, in company with Bro. Hollibaugh, to make an opening there, if possible. We tried every place we knew of, or could hear of, to get to preach in, but our efforts proved in vain, because the other preachers worked their influence against us, and so my brothers, the servants of God, can realize what that is. Last July I returned to that city to try to present the gospel, and behold, I had the same obstacle to meet. I did not feel discouraged, however, for I was blessed with the Holy Spirit in the time of need, and I was impressed that a work should be done in that city, so I went to the mayor and got permission to hold forth on the street corner. It was a new experience, but I was glad I made the effort. The crowd averaged from one to three hundred every night, and good order prevailed throughout the two week's meeting. We also distributed almost three hundred Heralds and Ensigns, and almost that many tracts. Bro. Childs, who lives in that city, worked very faithfully with me.

When I asked the mayor for the privilege to preach on the street, he wanted to know what church I represented, and I told him, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He said, "Mormons?" I said, "No, sir, we are in no way connected with those people." I explained the difference. He said if that is the case, you go ahead." Many are interested there, and I had many callers during the day who wanted to know more about the gospel. Bro. Ebeling came the second week and gave valuable help. I believe the Lord has a gathering there before long.

The Saints and friends in Warren and Forest county have not forgotten the work of Brn. R. Etzenhouser, I. M. Smith, G. Robley, and F. C. Smith. The lady at Eugundus who thought the pond was not large enough, and made Brn. I. M. Smith and Robley walk two miles to the Alleghany river to baptize her, should have taken a journey to the lake; she has returned to the Methodists.

Bro. Ebeling and I have just got through holding a grove meeting at Blyestown, Pennsylvania, where Bro. Ebeling held his debate last spring. Although the weather was not so favorable, we had good meetings; when it rained we held meeting in the school-house near by. Although we did not baptize any, we left some near the fold. The discussion held between Bro. Ebeling and Mr. Biggle of The Church of God, is now on sale. This book will prove valuable to all those who may invest in it, and especially to the ministry.

For five nights the nature, the extent, the time of establishment, and the final location of the kingdom of God was discussed. In support of the millenium reign much important history, aside from the Biblical proofs, was quoted, giving name of book, chapter and page, which can only be found in the leading libraries. Four nights were occupied on the questions of the punishment of the wicked and the final redemption of the human race. Some valuable statistics, showing the rapid increase of deaths among the heathen over their conversion to christianity, were read in this proposition, which will be found valuable evidence of God's redemption work beyond this life. Two nights on the authority and origin of the so-called Church of God. Under this proposition Elder Biggle labored hard to trace his church back to Pentecost, but by their own history we showed they could trace their beginning no farther back than 1870. Two nights on the identity of the Reorganized with that of the Bible. The book contains over five hundred pages. Yours in the faith,

COUNCIL, Idaho, Aug. 20.

Dear Ensign:—Sitting under a shady plum tree of the wild goose variety, my thoughts seemed prone to wander southward and eastward. Whether that family of the geese fraternity are meditating their southern visit this early or not, I cannot testify. However, as I look in vain for fruit among the branches of this particular tree, I hope it is no sample of the fruitfulness of the wild goose for this year, for if it is there will not be a very large emigration southward later in the season. Still, with me, the wild goose plum tree, as a fruit tree, is not a success. But what put my thoughts to wandering southward was scanning the pages of the dear old ENSIGN, far more fruitful, and of better quality and variety than this tree whose shade I enjoy. Sr. Abbie Horton's reference to the condition of vegetation during the "dry spell" was a reminder to the Saints of "Him from whom all blessings flow." "Praying for rain." Well, when we are sorely in need we turn our thoughts more earnestly to the source of life. When he calls we are often slow to listen. Then it is soon our turn to call, and he is slow to hear some times.

Out here, there is not so much praying for rain, but a general cry, Where is the water? Who has all the water? And the irrigation water-master is hurrying hither and thither. This is stating the case mildly, without reference to the names neighbors call each other, or to what may be read between the lines. Some say friendship ceases at the waterline in the dry time. However, I have had experience whereby I know a nice stream of sparkling mountain water is a joy to the heart, about equal to a well filled purse when clothing and food are needed. After all, with most people there is close affinity between the stomach and the affections, or the heart. We have had warm weather out here lately and sometimes I have thanked the Master for the privilege to sit down in the Weiser river for a refreshing. I was in Council last week one day, and as I stepped into the postoffice the postmaster said, "pretty warm today," and pointed to the barometer, registering 103 in the shade. Somseshovers since then have fallen, warm and pleasant as though the Lord was trying to awaken gratitude in the stony hearts of many who forget God, and turn deaf ears to his message and call to repent and obey the gospel.

After posting notices for meetings and getting a notice in the Council Journal for the same, last Friday, Saturday evening found about a dozen out in the school-house in Council to hear what I had to say; but Sunday evening the house was well filled. The singers expected to come, and I gave an invitation to the Congregational minister (Mr. Foster) to attend but he had previous engagements, and although the principal singer, Mrs. Hancock, promised to attend, she told me on Monday morning she expected the singers at her place for practice on Saturday evening and she would propose that they all attend meeting together Sunday evening. She said she went to Dr. Browns, expecting to come with them to church, but Mr. Browns did not care to come out, so she did not come.

However, as surely as the Lord liveth, the heaven of the restored "gospel of the kingdom" is slowly but surely shedding its radiance far and wide, over land and sea. The more I visit about among the people, and listen to the sermons of the day, the signs are plain that light is growing brighter. The day is dawning. "Let us pray for one another," and that the light of the "gospel of the kingdom" may go forth as the morning light. By our good works let our light shine all around us by day and by night. May we never forget that we have an errand from the Lord of glory. If we are "the light of the world," "the salt of the earth," "among the people as a dew from the Lord," let us prove our own work, that we may all have joy in the same. In reading the church papers it is clear that many are coming up higher, and that no one person has a monopoly of the words of the Lord—one is taught on one topic, another on another, just as He wills, and his Saints are receptive.

While at Malad conference, in June last, I was greatly pleased with the changed conditions, over three years ago. The chapel was neatly fitted up, showing more zeal, for the house of devotion should be tidy and orderly. Their young people were coming forward to assist. I thank the Lord every time I think of the change for the better. The sisters are stepping up to the work most commendably. As a happy home is the result of peace and harmony, as well as the wise industry of its members, so the church is built up permanently, and "maketh increase of itself in love," by the hearty co-operation of both sexes, laity and officers full of love, humility and zeal, in wisdom. Saints of the Lord, remember it is the workers among the bees which gather the sweets and store it up for use. Let us all be workers together in the unity of the Spirit for Zion's weal, wherever we are, on land or the sea. Never, no never, forget we represent the church of Jesus Christ, "the army of the Lord." The Lord is waiting for us to loose the bands which bind us to the world, the flesh and the devil. Will we get ready to meet our Lord? The Spirit bids us break away from every appearance of sin.

Ever yours for Zion's weal,

Editor Ensign—The work of the Lord is moving along in this place fairly well. We do not desire a spasmodic success, but wish to build wisely, and grow steadily, and most surely. We have a number of Saints here whose hearts are in the work, who are doing much for the advancement of the cause we all adore. Our new church is being completed rapidly, a fine building it will be indeed; of late we have been well represented in the papers of this city, and most every day something can be heard of the results of it. At present I am corresponding with an associated press reporter. He intends to prepare an illustrated article for several leading papers. He desires his article to be strictly authoritative and asks me to furnish him with the facts, etc. 'Tis pleasant indeed to note the liberality of the press, and we will not below to avail ourselves of all opportunities.

I am invited to give a lecture before a society here who are organized for the purpose of combating infidelity, on the subject, "What Constitutes the True Teaching of the L. D. S. Church?" They also want me to speak on other subjects. If nothing more it may break down some prejudice and advertise us a little. You can find anything in the shape of religion in Philadelphia; the streets are full of fakirs, Divine Healers, etc. Last eve, as I was walking along the street, I noticed a crowd and a man speaking; as I drew near I heard, "We have the whole gospel." Indeed, thought I, and then the trumpet blew an uncertain blast, "Repentance is the first principle of the gospel." I waited till they got through, and learning they were "Dowieites," I thought to obtain a little light on the scriptures, on such as repentance before faith; trine immersion, etc. The man tried to explain but said, "I have lost my train of thought," so I did not learn much after all, but I proceeded to give him a few points to think on, as well as the crowd who surrounded us. When he run out of anything else to say he called the people liars, adulterers, hypocrites, sorcerers, etc. We suppose he learned this from "Elijah" the Restorer. Some of Dowie's dissenters have started up here also. So the dividing and planting of plants goes on, but the gospel is yet as immovable as the Rock of Gibraltar, and as mighty against man-made doctrines as the battering rams of Troy. May the good Lord keep us humble and faithful I pray.

Editor Ensign:—Just a line to say that self and family are off for Australia on ship "Moana," with all well. We left Montana, however, with two pretty sick children and the trouble, worry and hurry incidents thereto, was an experience we will not soon forget. It seemed a test to us, but I felt I must push on to my field. As soon as I stepped off the train at Vancouver to see a hotel porter, and was about engaged, Elder Daniel McGregor, who now lives in Vancouver, came up boldly and asked if my name was not Wells; and when assured on the matter, cordially invited us to go home and stay with himself and wife till our boat sailed. Not knowing that any of our people lived here, this was a very pleasant surprise, and as we were tired, dirt-begrimed and sleepy, with two sick, fretful children in arms, their hospitality seemed like heaven to us. It was also a pleasure to make the acquaintance of other young Saints there, whose names memory refuses to bring forward at this instant of hasty scribbling.

Our visit in Montana with parents, relatives and friends was made very pleasant, and all did their best to make us regret we were leaving that state.

Subscriptions to our Australian paper continued to reach me till I left. My future address is at the close of this letter. We are hopeful of being able to purchase a small press for about $250.00, that will serve us in starting. We will soon have nearly enough, thanks to the splendid response American brethren are making to our call for help. The power of printer's ink can hardly be over-estimated in gospel work. We often wished that Zion's ENSIGN were in Sydney.

To you, brethren Editor and staff, also ENSIGN readers, "good by," "Hill we meet again."

Evidences of Its Divinity.

BY ELDER R. C. EVANS.

[CONCLUDED.]

What shall be unto God as Ariel? Why, the other parts of Israel who have wandered away. He declares that they shall go into apostasy, that they shall be brought down, he is to raise forts against them, etc. Now, note this 4th verse. It is wonderfully strange: "And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust." Four times in the 4th verse do we find that that people are to speak out of the ground, whisper out of the dust; and what is spoken from the ground, and whispered from the dust, hath a familiar spirit. How, do nations speak out of the ground? How could they? The only way, we reply, is, they would bury their history, and it would be exhumed in other times, and by this they would speak. Their history was to be deposited in the earth and was to come forth and speak out of the ground and it would be "as of one that hath a familiar spirit." Now, there are two forms of objections urged against the Book of Mormon in this regard. Some do not like the Book of Mormon because it is not good grammar. Some say that it is all stolen from the Bible. "You read the Book of Mormon and it teaches the very same doctrine that the Bible does." Well, that is what it does; it will have a familiar spirit, you will have heard the same truths before. Some claim that it contradicts the Bible, and condemn it by reason of that; while the others claim that it agrees with the Bible, and say it has been copied from the Bible. You see, they will grumble anyway. Is it a thing incredible with you that God will always speak like himself, and teach one people as he taught others? The Spirit of God is to guide into all truth, and when the prophets were instructing the people of God on this continent, they would teach just the same as the others did on the other continent. Therefore, why would this book not teach the doctrine that is taught in the Bible? If it taught anything else you would pronounce your anathema upon it at once.

"Well," says one, "it doesn't say a book." That is just what it does say, a book to come forth out of the ground. Let us read it, "It shall even be as when an hungry man dreameth, and, behold, he eateth; but he awaketh, and his soul is empty; or as when a thirsty man dreameth, and, behold, he drinketh; but he awaketh, and, behold, he is faint, and his soul hath appetite: so shall the multitude of all the nations be, that fight against Mount Zion." In the day that they are going to speak out of the ground, in the age that this book is to come forth, they are going to have a system of religion that reminds one of a dream that he had that he was filled, but he awoke, and he was hungry. Do we live in that age, friends? Pardon me if I draw a few pictures here. Let us go to the revival meetings, and we think we are all full of the Holy Ghost and we have the greatest meal that has ever been spread before the face of mortals; and we think we have salvation all around us; but when the revival has gone, and the special meetings have ended, you will find out you are not so full after all, and somebody wakes up to the idea that it was only excitement; there was nothing lasting, there was nothing real about it; and he woke up to the sad reality that he had not been in heaven at all; that he was down here among us mortals yet, and by and by he concludes that he had nothing to eat at all, it was all imagination. A little further, "Stay yourselves, and wonder; cry ye out, and cry; they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink." If you have attended revival meetings as I have sometimes, you would feel and know that they were intoxicated by some spirit: for I have seen actions in revival services that if manifested in a hotel bar-room, the police would burst the door and have them all arrested; so drunken with excitement, that they acted so that they would have to be carried off the stage, and they said it was the power of God; and even the very manipulators themselves were ashamed of it; they had to take the people away until they came from under the power. They were drunken, but not with wine. Enough on this, the picture is a dark one, we pass it by.

"For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered." In the age when this book was to come forth, remember, the world was to declare that there were to be no more prophets, no more seers. All that was done away. Do we live in that age, friends? Now notice: "And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book,"—now notice, I didn't put those words in there; it is to find form in time, and come to you as—"the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed: and the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned." Did that meet with literal fulfillment? When the angel delivered to Joseph Smith the golden plates which contained the sealed language, the translation of which we have in the Book of Mormon, Mr. Smith transcribed a few of the hieroglyphics and sent them to Professor Anthon, of New York, by Martin Harris; and when Harris presented them to the professor, he told him they were characters that were Egyptian, etc., and he says, It is a sealed language, I cannot read it. But mark, the book itself is to be delivered to the unlearned man. He didn't say he could not read it, but he says, I am not learned; and the whole world has been saying amen to the statement that Joseph Smith was unlearned; that was the kind of a character that was to get the book itself; and when he acknowledges with humility, his ignorance in this regard, the God of heaven is then to speak and say: "Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people [those living in the day and age in which this book shall come forth] draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men: therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder: the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." Did God proceed to do the marvelous work and a wonder?

In 1832 I held a course of lectures with the Rev. L. W. Winchell, and when making light of the Book of Mormon, he said: "Really, friends, this Book of Mormon is a marvelous work and a wonder," and when it came my turn to speak, I thanked him for fulfilling the prophecy of the 29th of Isaiah, which says that God would proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder when this book would come forth. And they were to draw near with their lips and with their mouths they were to honor him in the time of the coming forth of this book. Did the religious world fill that bill? How often have I gone into the sanctuary of religion, and have seen people look around to see whether this dress was cut on the bias, and see what kind of a feather sister So and So had on her hat, and all the time they were counting their beads! Fire and brimstone has been heaped up to the people until they have been taught to fear God from that standpoint. We are living just in the very age when that book was to come forth.

But we proceed: "Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay: for shall the work say of him that made it, He made me not? Or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, He had no understanding?" Are we living in that day and age when the world shall say of him that framed it, he framed me not and had no understanding? Let us see. What kind of a god do you believe in, friends? Were I to quote from the Catholic catechisms, the Presbyterian Confession of Faith, and the Methodist Discipline, etc., we would learn that they worship a god who has neither body nor parts, and some of them say he has no passions; one of them says he hath no form, and one says he has none of the senses. A god that has no body, has no head; one that has no head, has no brains; a god that has no brains has no understanding. Who framed us? We say, God. "Shall the thing framed [man] say of him that framed it [God] he hath no understanding?" That is just what they have stated. They have said he has no body, no parts, no passions; that he cannot fall under the senses. I want to know if that god has any understanding. That is the kind of a god that they were to worship in the age when this book was to come forth. Well might the angel say, as recorded in the 14th chapter of Revelation and the 7th verse, "Worship him that made heaven and earth, the sea, and the fountains of water." That god who has neither body, parts nor passions, never created anything, not even so much as a flea; for you would realize that a flea has a body, and has parts too, that make it quite interesting sometimes.

"Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest?" Remember my text says, "Truth shall spring out of the earth, and our land shall yield her increase." Now, what is truth? Jesus tells us in the 17th chapter of John, "Thy word is truth." Then God's word is to spring out of the earth, and when it does, "our land"—David's home—was to yield her increase. This says that this book was to speak out of the ground and whisper out of the dust; is it not a very little while after this takes place that Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field? Some have said, "Well, that book, that truth, certainly is God's word, but it refers to the New Testament, and when it came, that Palestine was to be made fruitful." Why, bless your dear hearts, friends, don't you know that then was just the time that Palestine began to be cursed as a land? And that Jesus declares that because they rejected him they would be led captive into all the world; that the land should be cursed, and that they would not see him again until they had properly repented? Don't you know that soon after Jesus went away the Jews were cursed and robbed, plundered and murdered, and led captive in all the world; and the former and latter rains ceased to come upon that land, causing it to become a barren waste, and no one lived there but the roaming Arabs; and for centuries no rain fell upon that land and nothing grew, to speak of? Says one, "It cannot mean the New Testament." Now, what was to take place after the coming forth of the work that we claim is the Book of Mormon? A very little while after the truth was to spring out of the earth, the land was to yield her increase. The book came forth in 1829-30, and in 1852 the former and latter rains returned, and we are informed that today that land is yielding her increase to such an extent that they have three harvests a year. What is the result? The Jews are going home again. Is that so? Mark, the 25th chapter of Isaiah says that after the land yields her increase, "Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale." Why? What made Jacob's face wax pale; why was he ashamed? Jeremiah, 30th chapter, declares the reason his face waxed pale, was because of his long exile and his sore captivity; but remember, he is to be restored to his land a little while after this book comes forth, and the land is to be prepared for the reception of its owners, and in 1852, as I have remarked, the former and latter rains were restored. Immediately after the Crimean war, England, France, Sardinia, Russia and other nations signed a treaty to remove the disability of the Jews, permitting them to return again.

I have a little jotting of history here I will read to you: "In 1812 there were only eight hundred Jews in Palestine. In 1852 the former and the latter rains returned. In 1856 one bunch of grapes, taken from Mount Olives, weighed 19½ pounds. In 1890 there were 180,000 Jews in Palestine." Friends, that speaks louder than thunder. This book was to come forth; in a little while afterward, Jacob was not to be ashamed, because he was to be permitted to return, and the former and latter rains were to return; the curse was to be removed and the land was to become a fruitful field. This has all been fulfilled, and the book has come forth.

One thought more: In 1840, Rothschild loaned forty-four millions of dollars to the Turkish government, and took a mortgage on the land of Palestine. In 1844 he loaned them forty millions more, and took a mortgage on mines along the Black Sea, thus opening a highway for the Jews to return to their promised land. Practically speaking tonight, Baron Rothschild is in legal possession of all the land of Palestine, and Rothschild is a Jew. Now, Jacob's face need wax pale no longer; he need not be ashamed; the nations are being poverty stricken, and are being compelled to call upon the Jews for assistance, and they are the moneyed men of the world today. Soon after the introduction of the Book of Mormon these disabilities were being removed. Beaconsfield, the grocer, by strength of mind and natural ability, rose to power and splendor, and standing in the House of Commons, dictated to all Europe; and Beaconsfield was a Jew. The financiers of Italy today are Jews; the moneyed men of the world today are Jews.

Now, friends, will you tell me that Joseph Smith, the poor, illiterate boy, born in the Green Mountains of Vermont, could build all these cities in Yucatan and Peru, in order to prove that a people dwelt here who wrote this record? Will you tell me that Joseph Smith, as a man, influenced all the European nations to sign a treaty removing the disability of the Jews, permitting them to return a little while after this book comes forth? That Joseph Smith influenced the heavens to shed forth the rain, and the earth to bring forth her fruit in order to prove that this Book of Mormon is true? That Joseph Smith has influenced the nations of the earth to favor the Jews, agreeing to permit them to return and to inhabit the waste places again, as the Book of Mormon and the Bible say they would, when the record of Joseph would come forth through the hands of Ephraim, out of the bowels of the earth? What, then, shall we say? That God Almighty had his hand in this "marvelous work and a wonder."

Says one, "It seems so strange though, that the book would come out of the earth." Let me read you another little thought, and see if this is strange: "At Yale College, in the possession of Theodore Dwight, is a stone on which is written the Ten Commandments in Hebrew of the days before Ezra. This relic was found in a stone box, which was cemented and was discovered in the earth." Now, that can be seen at Yale College, showing that the people were educated, understood something about the old laws, could write on stone, and that their method was to hide their records in stone boxes and deposit them in the earth. Remember, this was discovered in 1879, and the Book of Mormon story was told in 1827. In 1843, Mr. Wiley and some others were digging a well on this continent, in Pike county, Illinois, and discovered six brass plates with four lines of characters or hieroglyphics on each plate. These were in the ground about thirteen feet below the surface. This was found thirteen years after the Book of Mormon was in print.

Here are evidences, friends, that we cannot get over. Now, how did Joseph Smith come into possession of this information? He informs us that an angel from God revealed to him that the time had come for the gospel to be restored in all its splendor and power and purity; and that for the benefit of the people, he was to receive the book that was then deposited in the earth, that would throw light upon many things, and that would better prepare them to evangelize the people.

Says one, "Is there anything in the Bible about an angel coming in this day?" Yes, friends, there is. The 14th chapter of Revelation and 6th verse says, that in the hour of God's judgment an angel would come and bring back the everlasting gospel, and the New Testament is very specific on the statement that "at the eleventh hour," "just before the end of the world," "at the harvest time," "in the hour of God's judgment," the gospel would be restored again; that the authority would be re-committed to the sons of men, and the pure gospel, as taught by the Stainless One, would again be presented for the consideration of the world. And, friends, when we come to consider the doctrine as taught in this work, the facts which are revealed in this wonderful work, we find that it contradicts nowhere a single truth presented in all the Bible. Therefore, we present for your consideration this "wonderful work" this "marvelous work," this "strange work" that comes as a witness with the Bible, to "convince the Jew and gentile that Jesus is the Christ."

May the Lord help you to see, believe, and obey the truth, in my prayer, in Jesus' name. Amen.

What Happens in Hades.
 "Our Life After Death," or, "The Teaching of the Bible Concerning the Unseen World." By the Rev. Arthur Chambers, (Philadelphia, George W. Jacobs & Co., cloth, 16mo., 50 cents net).

"Our Life After Death" is a simple, earnest, orthodox little work by an English country clergyman, which has run through some fifty editions in England since its first publication in 1894. It is one of those unpretentious, and apparently insignificant tracts which, in theological literature, imperceptibly attain to the rank of a popular classic. It is, therefore, a book which should not be overlooked by Americans, now that it is published on this side.

Mr. Chambers' thesis is startling when we reduce it to its lowest terms. He proves out of Holy Writ that Christ adopted virtually intact the pagan theory of purgatory. The word "hell" in the New Testament, he points out, is in many cases a mistranslation, the Greek word being either Gehenna (the place of bonfires, where the sewerage refuse of Jerusalem was burnt) or Hades. Since the word Hades is always employed without comment, we are bound to accept it in the literal meaning current at the time. This meaning was identical with the pagan "Elysium" and the Jews' "Paradise"—a place where disembodied souls waited final resurrection or the judgment day. Christ never asserted that when we die we go straight to heaven or to hell, and (we are, of course, quoting Mr. Chambers) the statement in the creed that "He descended into hell" is sacrilege. Again, when our Lord, in his last moment of agony, could find in His divine spirit the strength to spare pity on his fellow sufferers, saying to the robber, "Today thou shalt be with Me in paradise," He did not mean that the robber would go straight to heaven. It was only in accordance with His creed that all disembodied souls congregate in one intermediate abiding place immediately after death.

This is really a novel and inspiring theory to the Christian who has so long groaned under the pulpit hammerings of immediate and eternal damnation. Repetition has caused him to forget the antiquity of the idea of an intermediate place. It must be left to the theologians to decide whether Mr. Chambers establishes his argument, but the layman is already half convinced a priori by learning that half the thunders of the church about hell fire had been founded on a palpable mistranslation. When Christ meant hell He used the word Gehenna, but the translators have ignored His distinction between Gehenna and Hades.

There is also new hope, both for the believer and the skeptic, in two remarkable "deductions." One is:

"That there is a preaching of Christ's gospel in the intermediate life, which warrants us in hoping that many who do not leave the earth life in a state of salvation, may, there, be brought into that condition." In other words, that our spiritual probation, which is severe enough on earth, does not cease with the accident of death. This thesis, so bitterly disputed, removes one of the strongest arguments of the skeptic. One man is cut down in his sin; he goes straight to hell. The other commits the same sin, but lives to repent; he goes to heaven. God's justice is haphazard; therefore, Christianity is false. Now, if we adopt Mr. Chambers' view, that argument is wiped away. The accident of death doesn't count; the man serves his regular probation in any case and is given a fair chance. It is true that this creed carries a certain danger. The reckless may continue to sin until he dies, retorting to the priest, "Time enough to reform in Hades." But, then, Hades is really continuous from the day of our birth. Punishment finds us out as relentlessly on earth as in hell; sin is not a pleasure when thoughtfully calculated.

The other hope is for the pessimist. Mr. Chambers nowhere includes it in his table of deductions, but he certainly asserts it. (See page 139). The immortality of the soul is a myth. If we do not repent, we are liable to be destroyed utterly. There is comfort in this to the pessimist, but he is speedily deprived of it. If he misses his chance in Hades he goes to hell first, and his destruction is accomplished with prolonged torments. Perhaps those whose life on earth is a prolonged torment, may hope for annihilation; perhaps the poor suicide may attain his rest after all. The anti-universalism theory removes another argument of the skeptic. He says that eternal punishment is inconceivable. It is. The brain cannot conceive it and therefore the threat is without significance. Endurance, both mental and physical, has its limits. The man on the rack faints. The man in despair kills himself or goes mad. One who has suffered to the limit laughs sadly at the pulpit theory of hell. He knows that the most fiendish torture ceases to hurt when the sensations are dulled. But offer him the menace of torture a l'outrance—death by burning, for instance—and he may take it seriously.

The book is immensely interesting. Skeptics will be able to read it seriously, as well as believer, because it is straight talk without cant. If only it could convince the skeptic! But it will not do that, because the author starts as an orthodox believer in the inspiration of the Bible. He proves his first proposition by quotations which the niggling doubter dubs "no evidence." This proposition is: "That a person, although dissociated from his earthly body by death, still continues to live as a conscious personality." As proof he adduces three Scriptural instances. One is that "Moses stepped forth from the unseen world to hold converse with Christ on the Mount of Transfiguration." While we who believe may accept St. Peter's statement, the skeptic requires proof, such as a photograph, to show that it was not an hallucination. Faith is indeed the most valuable asset in the struggle with life's sorrows. Given faith, there is hope; hope in such a discovery as this, of an intelligible after life. But without faith—what? Despair.—Brooklyn (N. Y.) Daily Eagle, Aug. 5.

He Feared The Gate.

Late one stormy evening the old doctor was summoned to see a man who had been attacked with sudden illness on the cars and had stopped at a little inn near the railway-station, about three miles from the village. The patient proved to be Squire Joyce from the neighboring county, whom the doctor slightly knew. He examined him carefully and gave him medicines taken from his saddle bags. Then he rose to go, smiling cheerfully down at the anxious face of the sufferer. "You will, I think, find yourself better in the morning; able, I hope, to go on your journey," he said.

"Yes. Stay a minute, doctor. I want you to be honest with me. I have had seizures like this before. Shall I have them again?"

"It is probable."

"I want the truth—all of it."

"Yes, they will return."

"I may die in one of them—tomorrow?"

"Yes; or it may not be for years; it is uncertain. Do not waste your life in anticipating them. We all must go through the same gate some day."

"The gate—yes! But beyond the gate—what is there?"

His eyes were on the doctor's face, full of doubt, almost of pain.

The two men were silent a moment.

"What is there?" Joyce repeated harshly, "You are a member of a church—a Christian. I have no religious belief. Tell me, for the love God, what is there beyond? If I may go tomorrow, what shall I find?"

"I do not know."

Joyce did not speak for a while, and then gave a forced laugh.

"I need your help more for this than for my disease. I'd rather talk to you than to a clergyman. You are a shrewd man of the world and a good man. Some times I am greatly depressed, thinking of this darkness into which I am going. For thousands of years men have gone out into it, leaving their loved ones behind, and not one has sent back a word to say how it fares with him—not one."

In the silence which followed the rain beat against the windows. There came a slight whimpering cry from without.

"You are an old man, doctor," said Joyce, turning quickly on him. "You are not far from the gate yourself. Are you not afraid of what may be beyond?"

"No," said the old man. "No, I am not afraid. May I ask you to look here?"

He rose and opened the door. Outside, in the dark hall, lay a little fox terrier, drenched with rain. He was crouched on the floor, his eyes fixed on the closed door.

"This is my dog, a bright, affectionate, little fellow. He has followed me through the storm and has been lying outside the door, knowing that I am in this closed chamber. He never was here before. He did not know what was in this room. He did not care to know. I was in it, his master, whom he loves, who has cared for him. He was not afraid."

"You mean——"

"I mean that I am like poor Punch. I am not afraid of the dark room to which I am going. I do not ask to know what is there. I believe that my Lord and Master is there. In all these latter years of my life I have felt that He cared for me. My confidence has been such that I have been assured that in my hours of trial he has never failed me here. I sincerely believe he will not fail me yonder."

"But I—I do not know him."

"He knows you. I think I am authorized by the declaration of the Bible to say that His hand is stretched out to you. I think, too, that I can reverently ask you to take it. You can accept Him as your guide and teacher, if you will. That done in sincerity, you will not fear the gate, nor all that lies beyond."—The Youth's Companion.

Salaries of Kings.

"How much do a king get?" asked one of Mark Twain's odd characters, and the answer was not very satisfactory. If we apply the title "king" to each of the chief executives of the great nations, there is no wonder an answer was difficult, for the pay of rulers varies greatly and is governed by no apparent rule of proportion, unless it is that the pay increases with the liability to assassination. The extremes of salary are illustrated by the pay of the Czar of Russia and the President of Switzerland. The former gets $24,000 a day, while the latter is happy and satisfied with $7.92 each twenty-four hours. These figures are based on 365 working days in the year, for monarchs are supposed to be always working.

Now, these executives—of Russia and Switzerland—are at the extremes of the rulers' pay roll, the first getting $3,786,000 a year and the other $3,000. Between these extremes the other eleven nations considered are scattered in a haphazard manner, with no uniform relation between the amount of yearly salary and the number of persons who must pay it. The emperor of Austria, with his $4,380,000 annually, comes under the Czar of Russia, while President McKinley, with his $50,000, comes next above the President of little Switzerland. After Austria comes Germany, which pays Emperor William $3,400,000; then the king of Italy, $2,435,000; Shah of Persia, $2,335,000; Queen Victoria, $1,875,000; King of Belgium, $692,000; King of Norway and Sweden, $560,000; Queen of the Netherlands, $292,000; King of Greece, $253,000, and the President of France, $239,000. President Faure receives but little more regular salary than President McKinley, but he has fixed perquisites that bring his income from the State to the amount given.

The amounts of the salaries of these honored men and women bear very odd relations to the number of persons for whose benefit they are supposed to administer laws of their own or the people's making. Now, each subject of the Czar has to annually pay seven and four-fifths cents to his ruler, and stands eight on the list; while the Persians, each of whom must yearly pay to the Shah thirty and three-quarters cents, head it. Switzerland, with the smallest population and salary, does not pay the least per capita, for the United States, with seven one hundredths of a cent for each inhabitant, is at the bottom of the list, Switzerland being next above, with eight one-hundredths of a cent. Turkey, with twenty cents for each subject, naturally comes next below Persia, and Greece, with eleven and two-fifths cents, comes next. Then in the descending scale, come Austria, with ten and two-fifths cents for each subject to pay to the ruler; Belgium, ten and one-fifth cents; Italy, nine cent; Norway and Sweden, eight cents; then Russia; then Germany, six and three-fifths cents; Holland, six and one fifth; France, six; Great Britain, four and three-fifths; and then Switzerland and the United States.

Figures alone hardly convey to ordinary mortals an idea of the amounts of some of these salaries. Take, for instance, the $8,766,000 received annually by the Czar. Put that amount in silver dollars, and perhaps it will carry more of a meaning. It would mean 274 tons of silver, and if the dollars were piled in a single column they would reach thirteen miles, or if placed edge to edge would extend 207 miles, one-half the distance from St. Petersburg to Moscow.

Put the annual salary of the President of Switzerland into silver dollars, place them edge to edge in a single line, and they would reach over 362 feet; while President McKinley's yearly pay, treated in the same manner, would form a silver band a little less than one mile and a fifth in length.—New York Herald.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

Dear Ensign.—Not until I received from Independence copy of ENSIGN of August 6th, did I know of the "injustice" the Jots had done Dr. Dowie. I am indeed amused rather than disturbed. A. J. K. surely needs a bottle of hair restorative. He kicks hard, then says he does not know which report is true, how strange.

The facts are I heard the Dr. and while I was far back in the great audience, could not hear all he uttered, but from my own notes, aided by the stenographers' published report in the morning, the Jots were made up. The "Leaves" from which my critic quotes is Dowie's own organ, and the sermon referred to was not published for some days after, and no doubt was thoroughly revised before publishing. The doctor used no manuscript, and in his turbulent, rushing, electrifying, hypnotic manner, it should not be expected otherwise than under severe censorship the rough edges would be smoothed down before appearing in his own paper. And yet the two reports are substantially the same.

From a Latter Day Saint standpoint Dowie is a real phenomenon which can be easily explained. Born in Edinburgh, Scotland, he is a hard headed Scotchman endowed with a superabundance of egotism and will power, says many good things with lots of scriptural force, in a spirit of bravado instead of that of Christ. Trained in the ranks of one of the "harlots" for twenty years, he then emigrated to Australia. Not visited there he came to Chicago via Salt Lake City, where, no doubt, he gained much concerning his "Zion" dogma, which later was to be launched when opportunity afforded. His fierce war in Chicago made him notorious and brought him success. And with a rapidly growing sense of his ability as an "over-seer" of men, with a great love for exercising his gifts, with possibly strange powers for affecting the conditions of weaker natures, have led him to believe, whether honestly or otherwise, that his old nature and personality had given way to that of Elijah. But one fails to see in him that lofty spirituality such as would lead to the belief that Elijah had come in him. He is a man of signs and wonders, a born leader, no doubt, but nothing more, and may have powers to deceive the very elect if possible. A. J., take notice, and "look a little out."

In my opinion Dowie is the smoothest counterfeit that the devil has yet devised; and with his apostolic arrangement, his Zion city, together with the gifts of healings, will lead his thousands astray, and so soon as they quit contributing to "Zion's Bank" Dowie will have no further use for them, as the croppings already appear. He is seventy years too late—his dogma is wrong end up—God set in the church first apostles, secondarily prophets. Dowie set in the church first deacons, secondary deaconesses, then elders and seventies. I heard him say he would soon ordain "my apostles." Mrs. Jane Dowie was ordained to be the doctor's legal successor in case of his "taking off," and thus it is provided for the church to come under a petticoat government, and put on women's rights in Zion.

The Lord, through Joseph the seer, appointed a Zion in Missouri, in 1831, that should never be moved. The devil, through Dowie, in 1901, appointed a Zion on the banks of Lake Michigan in Illinois. The command to "come up higher," could not apply to Dowie's dogma, it's wrong end down, and will continue to go on below.

We are taking a much needed rest at the quiet home of our Bro. Robinson. Nearly four months of incessant work has made it necessary. Will work on toward our reunion grounds where we hope to meet with all the Southern Wisconsin Saints on the 21st of September. Let us all come with the spirit of the latter day work and we shall have a time of refreshing from the presence of our Lord.

OUR AIM, BLESSED TO BLESS! DAUGHTERS OF ZION Mrs. E. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general and local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "blessed to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

- Mrs. Mary E. Hulmes, President, Independence, Mo. Mrs. H. H. Robinson, Corresponding Secretary, No. 910 West Electric Street, Independence, Mo. Mrs. B. C. Smith, 214 So. Spring St., Independence, Mo. Mrs. Lucia Etzenhouser, 515 Main St., Kansas City, Mo. Mrs. Clara Cook, 208 So. Fuller Ave., Independence, Mo. Mrs. Calie B. Stebbins, Recording Secretary, Lamoni, Iowa. Mrs. Anna Murphy, Treasurer, Independence, Mo.

Editor's Address, 1910 West Short St., Independence, Mo.

I have lately heard the thought put forth that Jesus' success in his mission was due, not so much to the fact of His miraculous conception, as to the teachings and example of his mother, she having pondered all the Lord told her, and taught them to her little one; and while I would not belittle the teachings of Mary, nor the idea of her having so perfectly reared her Son—for I believe that on a woman rests a great responsibility in rearing little ones—yet I would give to the father some of the credit in the training of noble characters. While I would teach our girls to follow Mary's fine example, and study the word of the Lord, yet, when they have done all this, should not our boys equally be taught the same standard of purity, and the same pondering of the word and teachings of the Lord? Why should not our boys be taught to lift themselves to the same plane of purity that they expect of their brides? We read that Christ having taken on flesh, was in all things tempted, even as we are, and he came forth unspotted, and when he claims his bride think you he will not be even purer than she?

When a wife can look upon the father of her children and know that he, too, is pure as she herself, then is the task of rearing children an easier one. And what pleasant homes would fill this fair land of ours were all men the head of the house, as Christ is the head of the church. Think of the loving tenderness toward his whole family, inasmuch as he even gave his life for us, ruling with a love from which there is no turning away. On the other hand the family doing all in its power to live as he would have them to live, doing all that he asks in the same spirit of love, knowing that he (even as our Father in heaven) would ask nothing but what is for our good. Think of this, young men, and try to prepare yourselves for this great responsibility, for it must be shared equally with the mother. They fathers of today can assist much in forming the characters of their children by living pure lives themselves.

Yours for the truth, Mrs. E. L. PRINGLE. McIVOR, Michigan. Happiness In Work.

Some people dream of happiness as something they will come to by and by, at the end of a course of toil and struggle. But the true way to find happiness is as we go on in our work. Every day has its own cup of sweetness. In every duty is a pot of hidden manna. In every sorrow is a blessing of comfort. In every burden is rolled up a gift of God. In all life Christ is with us if we are true to him.

"The work which we count so hard to do, He makes it easy, for He works too. The days that are long to live are His, A bit of His bright eternities, And close to our need His helping is."

If we have learned this secret, even the things that seem unpleasant and disagreeable yield joy in the doing. A traveler in South Africa saw some boys playing marbles, using pebbles. One of these rolled to the traveler's feet and, picking it up, it seemed to him only a rough stone, without beauty or worth. But as he turned it over a gleam of light flashed from one spot of it. It was a diamond. Duties seem dull and dreary to us, unattractive, hard, but they unfold secrets of happiness which we find when we accept them with love and do them cheerfully. Each day should show its new line in every life and character. We should be better men and women at the end of the year than we were at the beginning. Yet we must remember that mere largeness is not always growth. One may be richer in estate and yet be poorer in mind and heart. Ruskin says: "He only is advancing in life whose heart is growing softer, whose blood warmer, whose brain quicker, whose spirit is entering into living peace."

"The glory of our life Comes not from what we do or what we know, But dwells forevermore in what we are." —Selected.

"I Jest Keep A-Livin' Along."

Some folks they keep huntin' for sorrow; They sigh if they're right or they're wrong; But this day's as good as tomorrow, So I jest keep a-livin' along. I jest keep a-livin' along, I jest keep a-singin' a song: There's no use to sigh While the sun's in the sky, So I jest keep a-livin' along. When the Lord made the world, was I in it To give him directions? He knowed I wouldn't know how to begin it, Bein' nothin' but dust by the road. So I jest keep a-livin' along, And I can't say the Lord's work is wrong: I never will sigh While he's runnin' the sky: I jest keep a-livin' along. I'm thankful for sun and for showers; The Lord makes the winter an' May; And he'd hide all the graves with his flowers. If folks didn't weed 'em away! So I jest keep a-livin' along, Still thankful for sunlight and song: I know, when it's snowin', God's roses are growin'! So I jest keep a-livin' along! —Frank L. Stanton.

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED!

By the GREAT SPECIALIST in TREATING WEAK AND DISORDERED HEARTS, FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., E. C.

Will Send $250 WORTH OF HIS SPECIAL TREATMENT FREE AS A TRIAL.

To demonstrate the unusual curative powers of his new and complete special treatments by mail for heart disease, short breath, high blood pressure, oppression in the chest, irregular pulse, palpitation, smothering spells, puffing of the ankles, or dropsy, Dr. Miles will send two dollars and a half worth free, as a trial, to all who mention this paper.

His treatments are the result of twenty-five years of careful study, extensive research and remarkable experience in treating the various ailments of the heart, stomach and nerves, which so often complicate each case. So astonishing are the results of his complete special treatments that he does not hesitate to offer all persons a trial free.

Nothing could be more generous. Few physicians have such confidence in their remedies. There is no reason why every afflicted person should not avail themselves of this exceedingly liberal offer, as they may never have another such opportunity. No death comes as suddenly as that from heart disease.

Mrs. J. Krueck of Huntington, Ind., was cured after thirty physicians failed; Mrs. Flora Grator of Hillsville, O., after twenty-two; Jas. R. Wain, Jr., after a severe case had pronounced him incurable; Mrs. Frank Smith of Chicago, after five leading physicians had given her up; Mr. Julius Reister of Chicago, after ten; Mrs. R. Parker after sixteen failed. A thousand references to, and testimonials from, clergymen, bankers, farmers and their wives, will be sent free upon request. Send at once to Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., 200 State St., Chicago, Ill., for free examination, special pamphlets and free treatment before it is too late.

Show Individuality.

I have been particularly struck lately with the lack of courage among young girls in doing things independently and according to their own convictions of duty and good taste. It is far from my intention to show approval of arrogant, self-assertion, or for a moment to be supposed to encourage a young life in opposing itself to home rule, and that obedience to parental guidance and authority, which is a cornerstone to all building up of noble womanhood. The honor due to father and mother is of sufficient importance in God's sight for him to include it in the divine law, and it is the only commandment to which a promise is added.

No; what I mean by the independent living of one's own life is the freedom from fear of not being "like other girls" in dress, in ways of living, choice of occupation, or any similar way in which your lives develop themselves, says a writer in the Ledger Monthly.

For instance, if nine girls out of ten are wearing feathers and buckles in their hats, and yours look very far removed from the fashion, with only a plain scarf or a ribbon, I would rejoice that any of my girls should count this a matter not only of very little consequence, but even a source of just pride, if the price of the feather and buckle had been used unselfishly for the comfort of the family, or bestowed upon some needy persons. I could not hope nor even wish that any healthy-minded, wholesome-hearted young girl should be indifferent as to whether her hat was becoming; a girl who does not care how her hat looks is unnatural in some way. She must be utterly broken-hearted if she is indifferent on that point. But neither feather nor buckle is needed to insure just the right style and color and shape, and what I mean is the being above copying and striving after the predominating fashion at the cost of better things.

Servile—it is servile—imitation of what is the last new thing in what makes our streets full of cheap finery and shabby ornaments.

The things a girl should take great pride in are sufficient supply of good underclothing—not cheap lace-and-ribbon things, but well-made, neatly trimmed, entirely whole snow-white garments, good shoes, spotless collars, and a gown that fits and is unsoiled.

There are many young women sick at heart over deprivations which they see their parents bearing—

Peddle Sunlight If You Can.

Though you deal in liquid blacking, Dismal bluing and such things. When you have a sale to manage. Do it as the robins sing. Put some cheer-up in your business— Be a chipper sort of man. And with other lines of notions, Peddle sunshine if you can. There's an awful deal of meanness In this busy world of ours; But, mixed in with weeds the rankest, Ofttimes grow the finest flowers. Wear a pony on your lapel— It won't hurt the trade you plan, And along with other samples, Peddle sunshine if you can.

OUR MOTHERS.

The entrance to the great Philadelphia station of the Pennsylvania Railway is a long bridge elevated above the tops of the houses. Hundreds of incoming and outgoing trains pass and re-pass upon this bridge every day, trailing white clouds of smoke like banners as they fly to every state in the Union. So incessant is their passage in and out that sometimes there is hardly more than the fraction of a minute between the rush of the arriving and departing trains.

A stranger, after watching the scene for some time, expressed to an officer of the road his amazement at the skill of the conductors of the countless trains in escaping collision.

"They are not responsible," was the reply. "All the trains upon this bridge move at the direction of one man, who sits up in yonder white tower. He controls them absolutely. Every passenger in them thinks, 'I am going to California, or Boston, or Europe.' But his going and his coming, his very life, depend upon the thoughtfulness and intelligence of that unseen little man of whom he has never heard, and whose name he never will know."

"What if this man should grow careless or forget his work for an hour?" the stranger asked himself.

He, too, boarded a train and sped away across the hill, but the idea of this unknown, lonely watcher and his terrible responsibility had taken hold of him. He had traveled more or less during the past years of his life; had suffered great temptations and some changes of fortune. Several years had sometimes passed in which he had not seen his home. Yet the thought came to him now with a sudden shock how in that home, a poor, obscure farmhouse in Virginia, there was a quiet, little woman, who, by her prayers, had hoped to guide his life. She never had seen the cities in which he briefly sojourned and struggled. She knew but little of those struggles. Two or more years had sometimes passed in which she never heard his name, yet by her faith she sought to keep a firm hold upon that Hand which controlled his life. He thought, as he rushed on his way, of the countless mothers in lonely chambers, who kept this subtle spiritual hold upon the lives of their children wandering over the earth, hoping to save them from ruin, bringing them up to happiness and to God.

"And we forget them! We never think of them!" The eyes of the rough man grew dim. "What if they forgot us? What if they let go their hold upon us?" he said.—Sci.

Clinton District Reunion.

The Wheatland reunion of the Clinton, Missouri, district, began its sessions August 23d. Elder James Moler, president of the district and sub-missionary in charge, in connection with I. N. White, were chosen to preside over the reunion. F. L. Sawley was chosen secretary and chorister, Pearl Kennicut, organist; Henry Wilgus, marshal.

The order of services during the day was, prayer service at 9, and preaching at 10:15 a. m. Sunday School, in charge of Sr. Kearney, at 2:30, and preaching at 8 p. m. Apostle I. N. White, high priests James Moler and Alfred White with T. R. White, F. L. Sawley, W. H. Manuring, Bro. Williams and Joseph Stephenson, of the missionary force were present as speakers.

The reunion closed last Sunday night. Nine were baptized, seven by Bro. Moler and two by F. L. Sawley. The meetings have been largely attended by the surrounding neighborhood, not many of the Saints being present from a distance. The best of order prevailed throughout; the prayer services were very spiritual and the preaching excellent. This reunion is considered a grand success by all in attendance.

This morning the camp broke up, some going by wagons to their homes, while two large loads were hauled to Gerster, the railroad station on the Frisco line, twelve or fifteen miles away, to take trains to their respective homes, Bro. I. N. White going to old Kentucky to engage in debate with Clark Braden once more.

It was decided to hold another reunion next year, and the president of the district with the missionary in charge, and Bro. Jacob Andes, Sharrock, T. R. White and Joseph N. Stephenson were elected as a committee to decide on time and place for holding it, and to make arrangements for the same. The missionary in charge to be president of the committee.

The Sunday Schools each day were enjoyed and well attended. Thursday afternoon was given for special work in this department. A very pleasant and profitable time was spent in the reading of papers, and a round table discussion. Elder F. L. Sawley was requested to make a talk in behalf of the Religo work. We selected as our theme the object of the Religo and what it is doing for our young people. This was listened to and much interest was manifested for this line of work.

May the Lord bless the noble Saints and friends who labored, sacrificed and prayed so earnestly for the success of this, the Wheatland reunion.

ANARCHY.

From the beginning of time evil influences have been at work in the world in the effort to inspire the mind of man with the thought that subservance to law and order is a species of slavery; and that to act as one's own inclinations led him, without any restraint other than the exercise of one's own will, was freedom, which every one should possess as a right. This has led to misery and degradation, whose depths language, so far as we know, is incapable of making understood. This principle was advanced in the Garden of Eden when Satan insinuated that obedience to law was depriving our first parents of benefits to which they were rightly entitled; when he accused the great Author of law and justice of lying, in stating that if they transgressed law, they must suffer the consequences. That thought of injustice has been kept alive through the ages following; and the Lamanites on this continent were so thoroughly imbued with the idea that because the Nephites, in their faithfulness, were favored of the Lord, they had deprived the Lamanites of inheritances which by right belonged to them. The record shows this to have been untrue, but until the last Nephite passed away or became identified with them their hatred was not appeased.

In this age the same principle is working in the hearts of men; and today a great nation is made to mourn the death of a noble man, whom his most intimate acquaintances of whatever political belief, loved and admired most for his generous, sympathetic nature, and the broadness of his soul. A man of immense brain power, and of a statesmanship commanding the respect of the entire civilized world. Standing with generous and loving impulses, in the midst of a vast concourse of people, and extending his hand in friendly greeting to all alike, Wm. McKinley, chief magistrate of the great free land of America, was shot down in cold blood by a poor, insignificant creature, whose intellect was not of sufficient scope to enable him to see that the sacrifice of one life, however good, noble and great, could not change the policy of a nation like the United States, nor effect the slightest reform in laws, however oppressive he deemed them. A creature committing a murder for which some of the misguided followers of his own ideas declare there was no cause; for in the short space of a little less than four years a change would come, and the people would have the opportunity to again select their rulers. But he could not understand this provision, and having his diseased mind fired with the wicked and unholy writings of Emma Goldman, a rampant anarchist, he could see nothing but to take the life of the president of the United States, in the hopes of achieving fame and making himself a hero (?) in the sight of others as wicked and depraved as himself.

Anarchy is never merciful nor just; whatever stands in the way of the accomplishment of its purposes, must be swept out of the way. Innocence, virtue, age or condition finds no friends there. Whatever the misguided and depraved minds of those who accept the teachings of the anarchists deem proper, that must be done. It matters not if millions are opposed to their theories, the millions are wrong, and must be made to see it even if they must suffer; and the innocent must alike suffer with those whom they deem guilty, or who may in any way oppose their theories and plans. The police force and armies, conservators of the peace, are special objects of hatred to this class, for because of a wholesome fear which their presence inspires in the minds of assassins, they are much hindered in their work.

One would think that in the United States, where every four years the people have the opportunity of choosing officials to represent the policy that the majority deem wisest and best under existing circumstances, the principles of anarchy would find no friends; and we have reason to feel gratified in the fact that but few if any Americans or Englishmen can be found in the ranks of this class of anarchists. The chief actors among that class seem to come from a foreign element, who are unable to discern the difference between liberty and license; between freedom and the abuse of it. This class need to be banished from a land they are unable to appreciate; they should be placed on an island, and given opportunity to carry out their ideas among themselves, allowing them no communication with the outside world except as the necessity for provisions should require, giving them a chance to put into practical application in their own persons, of the life they teach as being best; no law, no restraint, every man and woman their own ruler. We are confident they would not enjoy it very long; the strongest would be master, and in the nature of their plans there would be constant warfare. But the rest of the world would be free from their contamination and influence, thus getting rid of a source of much evil. We hope to see the law making power of this nation taking steps to rid this country of these pests of society, and these opposers of all good.

But the ranks of the poor do not contain all the anarchists. We believe there are many today among the wealthy who practically belong to that class who favor law in general, but particularly only as it can be made to serve their interest. The man who will use his wealth to buy legislation to further his own purposes, at the expense of others; to increase his own wealth or power, though others must suffer and lose thereby, is an anarchist in principle, and should be deprived of the power to do this evil, as much as the other class. Indeed much of the spirit of unrest and rebellion found among the working classes is due to this very cause; that men who possess vast wealth are using it, not for the good of the country or its people, but to further increase their holdings and their powers to get gain for themselves, oppressing others in this effort to such an extent as to make it harder as the years go by, to obtain even a bare living, while they live in splendor and luxury, and useless extravagance. The law making powers should take cognizance of this evil. But, unhappily, the PEOPLE themselves have sent too many of this class to represent them in the halls of legislation. It has become a sinful fact that because of the extravagance in living, only those who are wealthy can meet the requirements of a Senator's life. The salary allowed does not begin to meet the expenses.

The individual who tramples upon the rights of others, regardless of what the constitution of the country, and the law of God guarantees to him, is an anarchist, though he may not openly take the life of his fellow. He may be equally as guilty in the sight of God, and the intent of the constitution of the land, when he uses his means to purchase legislation to his own aggrandizement, by which others may be deprived of the necessities of life, causing many deaths from privation and disease, but because he has been able to hide his purposes, he has so far escaped; he may continue to do so until the judgment of the great day is set; he cannot escape that, what must to him be, awful day. But the amount of suffering his unfortunate brethren must endure until that time, that day alone will reveal. The idea that some have imbibed that the possession of worldly wealth makes them of nobler blood and higher quality than their less favored fellows, is the cause of much evil. It is a false and despicable thought, narrowing the soul and estranging it from noble impulses and generous acts. God hath created out of ONE blood, all nations to dwell upon the face of the earth, and intelligence is the only mark by which a distinction will be recognized by our heavenly Father. Surely the necessity for the redemption of Zion and the gathering of the righteous is making itself apparent more strongly as time passes in its flight.

No follower of the Lord can favor lawlessness, such as anarchists teach. Jesus said:

Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's.—Matt. 22: 21.

Paul writes:

I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour; who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto a knowledge of the truth.—1 Tim. 2: 1-4.

To this these statements of belief from Doctrine and Covenants 112, agrees:

We believe that governments were instituted of God for the benefit of man, and that he holds men accountable for their acts in relation to them, either in making laws or administering them, for the good and safety of society.

We believe that no government can exist, in peace, except such laws are framed and held inviolate as will secure to each individual the free exercise of conscience, the right and control of property, and the protection of life.

We believe that all governments necessarily require civil officers and magistrates to enforce the laws of the same, and that such as will administer the law in equity and justice should be sought for and upheld by the voice of the people (if a republic), or the will of the sovereign.

We believe that all men are bound to sustain and uphold the respective governments in which they reside, while protected in their inherent and inalienable rights by the laws of such governments, and that sedition and rebellion are unbecoming every citizen thus protected, and should be punished accordingly; and that all governments have a right to enact such laws as in their own judgments are best calculated to secure the public's interest, at the same time, however, holding sound the freedom of conscience.

We believe that every man should be honored in his station: rulers and magistrates—as such—being placed for the protection of the innocent and the punishment of the guilty; and that to the laws all men owe respect and deference, as without them peace and harmony would be supplanted by anarchy and terror; human laws being instituted for the express purpose of regulating our interests as individuals and nations, between man and man, and divine laws, given of heaven, prescribing rules on spiritual concerns for faith and worship, both to be answered by man to his Maker.

But Anarchists oppose the church, as well as the state, hence the teachings of the Word of God or the beliefs of good men, have no weight with them. They should, therefore, be given no place among law abiding people. They should not share benefits which would not be realized if they had their way, and law loving citizens will be glad to see such enactments of law as shall remove from the land sentiments so antagonistic to human life and happiness, as are continually voiced by this unhappy class.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JAMES M. BLOOD has removed from Correll, Minnesota, to Manchester, Kingsbury Co., South Dakota. He attended the reunion in June at Clitherall, Minn., and listened to twenty-five good sermons, feeling well repaid for his trip. Eight were baptized during the session and an enjoyable time was had by all in attendance.

ELDER G. H. HENLEY, Fennelon Falls, Ontario, August 31.

I am laboring in this part of the country as a missionary, and finding that some of the Saints do not take any of the church papers I have talked with them and tried to get them to take the Ensign; two have signed—addresses herewith. The work is onward here. I am laboring with Bro. B. St. John, and we are doing all we can for the work; we are to make a new opening tomorrow; so the good work goes on. May God bless you in your labors of love is my prayer.

This brother's efforts are truly commendable, and are directly in the interests of the church and for the well-being of the Saints. No Saint can afford to be without the church papers in their homes. They should be in every house, welcomed as a means of comfort, light and encouragement. Neither the Herald nor ENSIGN are supported as they should be by our people. There should be at least 10,000 paying subscribers on our lists, and there would be if all did their duty by this department of church work. We trust and request all our missionaries and all others interested, to work to this end. We want to see our list increased as above. We need it. Are you willing to aid us to get it?

It is remarkable what an amount of the spirit of spitefulness, intolerance, and bigotry some preachers can display sometimes, when arraigning the positions occupied by those who do not interpret as they do. Especially is this noticeable when the faith of the Latter Day Saints is on trial by them. Then, if at no other time, they reveal the source of inspiration influencing them. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

IRA C. MOORE, a Christian preacher and junior editor of the Gospel Missionary, published at Covington, Indiana, devotes nearly a column in the issue of that paper for September 4th, to telling his readers that the restored gospel of the "Mormons"—referring to the Reorganized church—is the Book of Mormon; and after getting his man of straw "set on high," goes to pelting at it in an effort to demolish it, calling us "poor, deluded wretches" for believing some thing which neither he nor any one else ever heard authoritatively taught as our belief. All this because the ENSIGN recently stated that "God so loved the world that he restored the gospel to the earth." He might as well spare his poor attempts at expressing a charity he does not really possess. He will surely need all his commiserations for his own condition when it is revealed to him in the great accounting time how blind and full of prejudice he has been, and how unrighteous has been the judgment he has exercised. The Saints are not now, nor will they then be, in need of the pity of the class of which Mr. Moore is a representative, for their belief in that which the Lord has revealed as His gospel. In this connection, and in view of Elder Moore's inquiry, "Was that which we have in the New Testament ever away from the earth," and his reply, "no," it would perhaps be interesting to hear his explanation of what it was that Alexander Campbell "restored;" prominent historians of his church claim for him the title of a "Restorer."

We are not partial to one sided newspaper controversies and do not purpose in this article to inaugurate one. When the same class of readers can be reached by both writers, and the arguments are made in a gentlemanly, dignified, and christian spirit, good would probably result. But when a spirit of unfair, untrue and captious criticism is manifest, as is usually the case with our opponents when what they are pleased to term "Mormonism" is under consideration, it is useless to engage in it. And for each side to reply only in his own paper is unfair and unprofitable. No one can judge correctly unless the arguments of both disputants are heard. For this reason we, as a rule, pay no attention to the scurrilous articles so often appearing in the press against the faith of the Saints. We know this work is of God and all the efforts made to overthrow it are futile; and where our ministry got a fair hearing, it is not difficult to refute the foul aspersions and slanders indulged in by the enemies of Christ's church. Truth will prevail and the Lord will sustain those who follow Him.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS INDEPENDENCE.

The family of Bro. Henry Holdsworth desire to express their grateful appreciation for the many acts of kindness and sympathy extended them in their sad bereavement in the loss of their son and brother, Henry Holdsworth, Jr.

Memorial services will be held in the church today, Thursday, from 2:30 to 4 p. m., in accordance with the proclamation of President Roosevelt, during the hours of the final obsequies of the late president, Wm. McKinley, at Canton, Ohio.

Sunday morning Elder Alfred White presented the subject of the efficacy of prayer, in a forcible manner to a good sized audience. At night President Hulmes addressed the assembly on the relation of earthly governments—especially our own government—to the church until the millenium. Both of these brethren had good liberty and fine attention.

Elder I. N. White has been confined to his room with a severe attack of malarial fever since his return from Kentucky last week; but we are glad to report he is now improving. He was able to be up Wednesday for a while, though very weak. He met Clark Braden at Briensburg, Kentucky, on the Davis Chapel ground—the church erected by our brethren, but which was destroyed by incendiary fire recently—and Elder Braden's boast that no "Mormon"—meaning the elders of the Reorganized church—"would dare meet him in fair and honorable debate," was shown to be a vain one. As usual his efforts to injure the work proved abortive, and Bro. White's defense made many friends to the cause. He sold a number of the Book of Mormon there, several members of the church which Elder Braden claims to represent, purchasing copies; and when he left the sentiment of the community seemed to be in our favor.

Mrs. W. H. Smith and mother, Mrs. Dunn, of Pittsburg, Penn., are visiting Bro. and Sr. G. H. Hulmes, Frank Criley and Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Smith.

There was a slight frost reported in some localities Tuesday morning, but Wednesday morning showed a heavy white frost everywhere. The atmosphere was quite cool, and light overcoats were brought into requisition in the early morning.

The genial Bro. J. M. Terry, of St. Joseph, was a visitor in the city Monday and Tuesday, the guest of Bro. and Sr. C. J. Clark. Though not in the best of health, he seems to be gaining slowly. He returned home Wednesday morning.

Tonight (Thursday) the Stake Reliquio convention will hold its first session at Holden, Missouri.

Tomorrow the Sunday School convention will begin its work there, and on Saturday and Sunday the Stake conference will be held. A large attendance is looked for.

Usual services will be held at the church next Sunday, though all the Stake officers, and many of the elders and membership will be at the conference at Holden.

The prayer and testimony service last Sunday afternoon was well attended, the lower auditorium being filled. The earnest spirit of devotion manifest brought answering response in the blessing of the Holy Spirit. Let the good work continue. ✓
Sr. Mary Agnes Inman, wife of Bro. J. Newton Inman, Bertha Mary Lewis, daughter of Bro. and Sr. J. E. Lewis, Dorothy Hatty, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Harry Hatty, and Minnie Estella Scott, daughter of Bro. and Sr. B. J. Scott, were baptized in the font Sunday afternoon by Bishop W. N. Robinson. They were confirmed at the afternoon service by Bishop R. May and Pres. W. H. Garrett.

An adjourned business meeting of the branch was held Monday, September 9th, Presidents G. H. Hulmes and W. H. Garrett in chair, President White being in St. Louis. After opening exercises minutes of previous meeting were read. Treasurer gave a corrected report for May, June, July and August, showing total receipts $145.67, expenses $132.16, balance, $13.51. This report was referred to the auditing committee. A motion that official actions of any member of the branch, who is a member of a secret society, beneficial, social, or otherwise, be not recognized, was presented, discussed and tabled. The suggestions of President Hulmes for the appointment of a committee of six brethren and six sisters, as a reception committee, to visit, introduce, and make strange brethren and sisters, new comers in the branch, feel at home in our midst, was taken up and adopted. A motion to light the church with electricity, instead of gas, was moved and was finally amended, referring the matter to Building Committee for action. A resolution to present the name of Earl Cortbell to the Stake conference for ordination to the office of elder, President Hulmes stating he had been so led, prevailed. On motion the president was authorized to appoint a committee of three to investigate the system of finances adopted by the Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, branch. A motion to hold our communion service on the first Sunday in the month only, instead of twice each month as at present, was discussed and prevailed. A motion also prevailed empowering the officers of branch to proceed in matter of securing signs, announcing names and addresses of presidency, and time and character of various meetings held. Meeting then adjourned until December 2d next.

LAMONI, IOWA.

First frost of the season, Tuesday morning, the 17th.

Elders George W. Thorburn, Eli Hayer and S. K. Sorenson returned from their mission fields last week, and President Joseph Smith from California Sunday noon.

The bazaar for Graceland, held on Saturday, the 14th, was a success, the profits being estimated at not less than $175.00; the exact figure is not yet known as the business has not been entirely closed up.

There were only 375 present at the Sunday School session last Sunday morning.

Memorial services will be held in the Saint's chapel Thursday, the 19th, in honor of the late President McKinley. President Joseph Smith will deliver the sermon. The M. E. church, the G. A. R., and the citizens, through the mayor and the town council, have been invited to attend and participate in these services.

Rev. D. D. Mitchell, representative of the Northwestern Purity Association, of La Crosse, Wisconsin, will lecture at the Saint's chapel Thursday evening, the 19th, on the subject of "Social Purity," and Friday evening on the subject of "Divorce."

On Sunday last Elder George W. Thorburn preached at Davis City in the morning, H. A. Stebbins at Greenville in the afternoon, J. R. Lambert at Evergreen in the morning and G. H. Hilliard in the evening. At Lamoni Elder G. H. Hilliard preached on "consecration" in the morning. The afternoon prayer meeting was in charge of Elders Eli Hayer and S. K. Sorenson. The evening hour was occupied by a continuation of the Historical Lectures by Elder Herman C. Smith.

It is evident that the elders of the Stake desire to arrive at an understanding of the law of consecration, from the fact that there were thirty representatives of the higher priesthood in attendance at the morning service to hear the Bishop's interpretation of the law.

We think that a better understanding is being reached through the efforts of Bishop Hilliard.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

First Chicago Branch, 8 So. Wood St., Sunday School at 1:30, preaching at 3 and 7:45 p. m.; Central Branch, 2411 Cottage Grove Ave., Sunday School at 9:30 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman, preaching at 10:30 a. m., followed by Sunday School, preaching at 7:30 p. m. Graves' Mission, 2458 State St.

The district conference and Sunday School convention was held here in a large tent pitched on Cottage Grove avenue, near 34th street. At our meeting place, 3411, the home of Bro. Lang, a sort of a communal boarding house was kept, where the major part of the visitors were provided for.

Bro. Barr, Keck, Hackett, Wildermuth, Sheehy, Rudd and R. C. Evans, of the missionary force were present, also Graves and Fuller. Bro. Pement was elected as district president, with Bro. Hackett as assistant.

Meetings were continued all the week in the tent with Bro. Evans as the drawing card. They will continue over this week and next Sunday.

Bro. McCallum, of Independence, is in town for a season.

Our baptismal font has been in use recently, with prospects for another disturbing of the waters soon.

We had a visit from Bro. C. P. Paul who, in company with Bro. Schmidt, was on the way to the Pan American.

Just now Chicago is dressed in mourning over the death of the president. Feeling is intense against the anarchists here, many of whom are in jail, having been arrested on suspicion as being parties to the act of assassination. Reports have it that they do not want to be let out of jail now, fearing the mob spirit prevalent. Miss Emma Goldman is among the number.

Saturday night a rumor on the street was that a call for 6,000 had been made to form a mob. Perilous times are at hand. What will be the next sensation?

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

On Thursday we were called to preach the funeral sermon of the child of Bro. and Sr. R. M. Beamon, of South St. Joseph, the tenth funeral sermon in three months.

Richard Haynes was blessed at the Aspley mission on Thursday night, by Elders G. W. Best and J. M. Terry.

The interest in the Thursday night sermons on the "divinity of the Bible" is still good. They will continue for some time, followed by another on the Book of Mormon.

Mr. F. M. Coots and Sr. Teresa Riedell were married at the residence of the missionary, 2005 Holman street, on Wednesday evening. It was a quiet wedding.

Bro. John Burlington will remove to St. Joseph again, having purchased an interest in the creamery business of Bro. Wm. Lewis, Mr. Stroker taking the remaining interest.

Four were confirmed at the church on Sunday evening who had been previously baptized.

Bro. Hogue, of South St. Joseph, is about to return to his first love, and go back to Springfield, Missouri.

Six L. D. S. sermons were preached in the city yesterday by Bro. Shaw, Tadickon, Guinand, Best and Terry, and yet there were many who did not hear one of them.

We commence a protracted meeting at South St. Joseph, Park and Texas avenues, on next Sunday night. Let all who can (and that means you) help us in these meetings. Let us rally at this point.

In the faith,

J. M. TERRY.

The Five Necessary Books for Young Men.

There are certain fundamental books upon which any profitable reading should be based. I mean the Bible; Shakespeare; a good Dictionary; an Encyclopedia, and Roget's "Thesaurus." These are compelling, and all intelligent reading must be based upon these works in the order that I have named.—Edward Bok in Ladies' Home Journal for Sept.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

WILMONT, Ont., Aug. 19.

Editor Ensign—Having just returned last evening from a trip with our mission president, Apostle R. C. Evans, through what is known as the Sauble Falls district, I will try to write you a "brief" of our trip and historical sketch of some of the places visited. And if any of the brethren who have labored in this district (or any Saints who have assisted to make openings), do not get proper credit for their work, they will please attribute it to my lack of information or space, rather than partiality, as I am better acquainted with the circumstances under which some have labored than others.

Bro. Evans and I met at Port Elgin July 28th, where about twenty-five members are building a neat and commodious church. Elder J. L. Mortimer, who, I understand, made the opening there, and did an effective work in connection with Elders S. W. Tomlinson, Daniel MacGregor and others, in working on the building made with hands. Here the Spirit designated N. E. Leeder to the office of priest, and Bro. James Phillips teacher, and a branch was organized. Good audiences listened to Bro. Evans' stirring sermons all the week. Before leaving he troubled the waters of Lake Huron by baptizing Miss Leeder, who has been a school teacher for a number of years, also a daughter of Bro. and Sr. Mather.

Saturday we journeyed with "Blind Billie" to Sauble Falls, the driver being often told "if the blind lead the blind both will fall into the ditch, howbeit 'ye president' was the first to get out and write his name on the sand. Bro. Edwin Humphries, some three years ago, took Bro. Daniel MacGregor to Sauble Falls, where a splendid work was done by Elder R. C. Evans gave the Rev. Thompson, who attempted to destroy our brother's name and place among that people. The sound of that victory has gone all over this peninsula. Three years ago there were scarce half a dozen Saints, and now there are some two hundred. Elders Compton, A. E. and J. L. Mortimer, S. W. Tomlinson, R. B. Howlett and others have done good work in Sauble Region.

From August 4th to 10th, Bro. R. C. spoke at Sauble, Hepworth, and Olliphant. Sunday 11th, at Colpoys Bay a crowded house greeted their mission president for the first time, whose grand counsel will surely benefit all who follow it. This opening was made by Elder Frederick Gregory, whose memory is cherished by all because of his godly walk and conversation among them. He will be glad to learn that Bro. Ralph Waters (the first fruits of his labor there) has been designated by the Spirit and now holds the office of elder.

Clavering was visited last Tuesday and Wednesday evenings—three Saints there. Last evening two men from there awaited our arrival here for baptism, one the general merchant and postmaster there; the other, Mr. Geo. Lambkin, who first heard this gospel about thirty years ago at Osborne. For years he had not heard a sermon, but always confessed this work to be true according to the Bible.

Friday 16th, we journeyed to the farthest branch north, Stokes Bay. Two years ago Elder St. John made an opening there and baptized fourteen as the result of his effort. When the writer visited there a year ago Rev. Selveright (Presbyterian) lectured against us, we replied two evenings; since that time the magistrate and several of the best citizens have been our warm friends, and some of them, we believe, are near the kingdom. Here again large audiences greeted Bro. R. C., and powerful sermons, with logical arguments greeted their ears.

In order that the Saints may comprehend the extent of Elder Evans' vacation among us, permit me to say that in twenty-one days he delivered twenty-eight discourses in eleven different places, and traveled with horse and rig over two hundred miles.

Eight were baptized and others have requested baptism later on. We had good weather, no accident, and were kindly treated by the Saints and friends all along the line.

I was forgetting to mention the physical labor of Elder Gerrie, and others of Sauble Saints, in building enclosed stand, and seating grove for August 4th. Colpoys Bay Saints seated grove for 11th inst.; Stokes Bay Saints fitted up Bro. Fletcher's mill for yesterday. Large audiences in above places, listened to our brother. He left for home this morning. Owen Sound will be visited later on. To all Saints wishing my address, Colpoys Bay postoffice will find me, as that is the central for my field, and mail will be forwarded to me.

Yours in bonds,
JOHN SHIELDS.

SALTLEO, Ark., Aug. 25.

Editor Ensign—The camp meeting is a thing of the past in these parts, but we have much to be thankful for, having had one of the best meetings we have ever had in this country. We had the faithful labors of Bro. H. O. Smith, W. S. Macrae, Jos. Ward, and J. W. Jackson. Large crowds at night greeted the speaker with very good behavior and close attention; many souls stirred to a realization of the fact that there is something in what the elders of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints teach.

The Saints were strengthened and encouraged to go on in the work. Five additions to the branch were made, two by baptism; three by restoration. I believe God has a people here to be gathered out from Babylon into the true fold.

We once had a very lively branch here, but some have moved away and scattered to different places, till we cannot have our meeting as we would desire; but I hope to see the day when the work will be built up again, till we become as a saving power unto others. I feel weak in trying to labor in this glorious work, but I know that it is of God; may he bless His servants engaged in this work.

GALLEN, Mich., Aug. 27.

Editor Ensign—The Lord instructed Hyrum Smith to study "my word which shall come forth among the children of men, or that which is now translating" (D. & C. 10:10), and the Saints in Zion came under condemnation "because you have treated lightly the things you have received," and were to "remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon, and the former commandments which I have given them."

This indicates to us the necessity of studying the Book of Mormon as well as the Bible and Doctrine and Covenants. I have felt the need of a concordance to the Book of Mormon, both as a member and a missionary, and have often wished some of the members would produce one; but as the years passed by and none appeared, I concluded last January to make the attempt. It was a question as to how elaborate it should be to be suitable to all classes of students. Too large would make it unhandy and more expensive, hence I have tried to make it cover all subjects of importance, giving necessary references, making it suitable for the ministry and laity.

I have just received some from the Enston Publishing House where they were printed, and find they have done good work, making a booklet about twice as large as the concordance to the Doctrine and Covenants. Price 15 cents. Address ZION'S ENSIGN, Independence, Missouri, or W. E. Peak, Gallen, Michigan. I send the little book forth among the Saints with a hope that it may accomplish good. May the blessing of God be enjoyed by His people.

W. E. PEAK.

DRURY, Mo., Aug. 20.

Dear Ensign—I fear your readers will wonder if Bro. O. B. has forgotten his pen again, or has he "fallen out by the way?" While we confess neglect of duty we have neither forgotten to write nor let go of our effort, and are doing the best we can to "preach the word."

After laboring some three or four weeks in Springfield, Missouri, speaking in the Saints nice, new chapel, and on the public square, we started for the southeast by train to Seymour, where Bro. Ben Pearson met us with team for a twelve mile ride to the settlement of the Saints (unorganized) on Big Beaver, with whom we occupied a week (less one day), speaking such words of comfort to the Saints and others as the Holy Spirit gave, both in assembly and their homes.

Bro. Pearson then took us to the Ava branch, where another short week was spent in like pleasant, and, we trust, profitable manner. We made our stay at these places short, because Bro. Davis and Baker had preceded us, and there was no need of a longer visit at present. These stops were only en route for the field further on.

From hence Bro. Gray took us to a neighborhood some seventeen miles farther to the southeast, where Bro. D. W. Thomas, True Gray and the writer had put up for the night en route for the Woodside conference the last of May, with a very cordial gentleman who invited us to stop and preach on our return in a school-house called the Champion, some two miles from his home, promising to give out the appointment, and "get out a crowd," which he surely did, though not at the proposed time, because of our returning by another way at the suggestion of Bro. Sparling (in charge), for some other work. A card of explanation to Mr. W. F. Wall, above referred to, made the matter all right till the invitation was responded to as already narrated.

The commodious school-house was well filled with attentive listeners every night, Sundays included, for nineteen sermons, with only one comparatively thinly attended meeting.

Although no accessions to the church were made, several are much interested. Some expressed a desire to read the Book of Mormon. I loaned mine to two families while there, and at the next place. One of the readers remarked in my hearing, to numbers of a fishing party, with whom I was invited to participate (the fish being served on the bank near the shady bowers of nature), that he had to find something else to "kick about." The lady of the other family remarked, as she handed the book to the one whom I sent for it, "I can't find anything wrong in it." Still another said he knew ten who want to read it. At the request of some I left the address of the Publishing house.

At the first series I received invitations to preach at three other places, and at the second place, where fifteen meetings were held, closing Sunday night last, requests came from two more neighborhoods, and at one of these, where two Sunday afternoon sermons were put in as extras, still another invitation. Some have remarked, "You'll not get out of Douglas county this year."

We began the third series near Drury (having one store), in a commodious temporary building in a nice, clean place in the forest, with a good number present, voluntarily bringing their books to do the singing, which we esteemed a favor. In fact, we were so assisted at the other places as soon as they were requested to do so. Four local preachers and one brother of other religious persuasions, have kindly assisted in the opening services, upon being invited, not one refusing.

I am, in this new place, domiciled with Bro. and Sr. Ed Moorman who came from the Des Moines district nineteen years ago. They were among the charter members of the Des Moines Valley branch. We will have his assistance at this place. We have visited and talked with thirty families since leaving Springfield. Did a little of that work while there.

Your co-worker,
O. B. THOMAS.

JOLIEN, Mo., Aug. 16.

Editor Ensign—The night of the 9th, at the close of our services, a wind storm struck our large tent, and before we could let it down, rent it from top to bottom. We have it mended again; the good sisters, with my help, sewed up seven spools of thread on it. I wish all of the brethren had the zeal of the sisters of this branch. They have raised the money to buy me a pair of shoes and other necessary clothing I was in need of.

I baptized a noble man last Sunday; others almost ready for the water. I have preached twenty-six discourses here, besides what Bro. J. D. Erwin and Bro. I. N. White have preached. I have witnessed some miraculous healings in the past week. I have been delivering a series of practical sermons to the Saints; I have been blessed in the efforts. Brethren, seek God for a humble spirit to preach the word.
F. C. KROCK.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 10.

Editor Ensign—Our church number is 1818 N. 21st street. We have Sunday School at 9:30 a. m., and young people's meeting at 6:30 p. m. Preaching services at 11 a. m. and 7:45 p. m., every Sunday except when sacrament is administered at 11 a. m. the first Sunday in each month. Prayer service Thursday evening at 7:45, and Sisters' Prayer Union and Aid Society meet at church Wednesday afternoon at 2 and 3 o'clock.

Sunday, the 18th inst., the pulpit was filled at 11 a. m. by Elder W. A. Ballard, and at 7:45 p. m., by Elder F. M. Cooper. Both occupied acceptably to the Saints and friends.

The Sunday School, under the direction of Sr. Alice Swartz, and her able corps of teachers, is doing a grand, good work, which we are pleased to note. Long may the good work continue.

Tent work by our people in the city has been in progress for about a month, and some good has been done, we think, though we have had some unpleasant things to contend against; however, the true soldiers for Christ never permit themselves to become discouraged, but steadily persevere. The help of the Saints at tent meetings in singing, and encouraging by their presence, is appreciated and beneficial.

Elders Oscar Case and James Huff are running the district tent in the country and small towns, and good is being done. Last Wednesday six were baptized as a result of tent work at Waterloo and Near Valley, some six miles south, I believe. City work is somewhat difficult, but with the help of the Lord we hope to succeed.

Sr. David Condit has been very ill for three weeks, and is still very low, though we hope it may please the Lord to help her to recover. Others have been very sick, but are better.

Onward and upward is the watchword.
C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

COOKS POINT, Tex., Aug. 9.

Editor Ensign—Here I come again to tell you and readers that on July 27th, near Hearne, the Texas Central district conference met and after the transaction of the business of conference we continued meetings for eight days and nights. We had Elders H. O. Smith, John Hawley, J. W. Bryan, T. L. Veale, S. R. Hay and many of the lesser priesthood. All took an active part in the meetings. We had a good turnout and interest. Bro. H. O. Smith did most of the preaching. But one was baptized; others seemed almost persuaded to be.

This meeting was the first effort to hold a reunion in this district. A kind of a feeler; the interest was sufficient to justify us in making another attempt next year. Now, let every member of the church in this district work to that end until we meet again in a reunion next year. Let each one do their very best to push the work. Let every one observe the spiritual and temporal law to a jot and tittle, and God will bless and prosper us in all we undertake to do. Bro. Hawley, Bryan and I are holding a meeting at Cooks Point. We have a small turnout and good interest; aim to hold another next Sunday night. Bro. Hawley then aims to go to Cleburne on Monday next, and Bro. Bryan and I intend to go to Crimes county and hold some meetings there. Bro. Bryan is busy writing up the church history in Texas; he enjoys it very much.

We have had a long drouth in our part of the country. Crops short, stock water scarce, yet we aim to keep moving among the people and let them know that the gospel is restored again, and men must obey it to be saved from sin and its effects. I am

Yours in bonds,
E. W. NUNLEY.

LOGAN, Ia., Aug. 7.

Editor Ensign—To those that may have an interest in my welfare I will say I am located in Higelow grove, Harrison county, Iowa, my old home, the place where I spent my childhood, where I first heard the gospel. This is among the first places visited by Bro. W. W. Blair and E. C. Briggs, in the interest of the Reorganized church. There was a large branch built up here and many souls were added to the church in this part of the country. The branch flourished for a while like a green bay tree, but wolves crept into the church or flock and the sheep were scattered, but upon the ruins of the old branch, among the grandchildren of those pioneer Saints, there has recently been organized a new branch under the old name Bigelow Grove, with J. A. Donaldson as president, C. Winer and F. Seely as priests, and A. Harper as teacher.

We have Sunday School every Sabbath at 10 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. in the grove; prayer meeting every Wednesday night. There seems to be a goodly degree of love and good fellowship manifest in the branch. Each one seems to be imbued with the spirit of the work and a desire to move forward.

A. J. HEADLEE.

WILLIAMS BAY, Wis., Aug. 27.

Editor Ensign—For two successive Sabbaths we have enjoyed a feast at the East Delavan branch. Bro. and Sr. J. A. Robinson, accompanied by W. N. Robinson and wife, also Sr. Belle Robinson James, and friends from Kansas City, who are at Lake Delavan for a few weeks outing, have been with us. Bro. James was with us on the 18th inst, but returned to Kansas City on the 19th. Bro. J. A. Robinson gave us three grand sermons, and the singing was beyond our expectation. We feel to commend the Independence Saints for such grand singers. We trust that they may meet with us again.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard was with us the first of the month and gave us three instructive sermons along the lines of temporal duties. Our "Jots" man speaks of a truth when he says Bro. Hilliard does not use the handle of the gospel fork. Neither does he beat around the bush when more available work can be accomplished by cutting across lots. Come again, Bro. Hilliard.

My wife was born into the kingdom in April, and we are now rejoicing together. Our brethren who have done efficient work here in the past hold a bright place in our memory, and we often rejoice when reading of the work done by them in distant lands, especially those noble young men who bore the burden in the heat of the day; namely, J. W. Peterson and W. S. Pender.

Your brother in the gospel,
F. M. BALL.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Sep. 9.

Editor Ensign—Friday, the 6th inst., at 2 p. m., while Pres. G. H. Holmes, Sr. A. Daka and myself were bowed in fervent prayer, in honor of our beloved Sr. Nellie R. Madison, according to her mother's earnest request by note, she peacefully passed away. It was before noon, and she had been much distressed, ending in convulsions. The Spirit rested upon us, and while in humility and heartfelt sympathy for the suffering one, our supplications seemed to meet with divine approval by bringing a season of peace and comfort. The testimony to one of us, as she expressed it immediately afterward, was that our dear sister would die. This calm and heavenly frame of mind, in such an hour, and under such conditions—for Bro. Holmes said he was led not to go and administer to her, but to bow in united prayer—is to the Saints an added witness to the truth of the gospel and the latter day work. Truly our heavenly Father will bring peace to the dying, in answer to prayer, and also lead and direct His humble ministry while engaged in devoted service to those under their watchcare.

Your sister in the faith,
ANNIE A. HORTON.

A JOURNEY TO AND FROM JERUSALEM.

[WHILE accepting the truth and fact of a literal gathering of God's people, as foretold in his word, we cannot accept the conclusion of the writer of the article following (who is probably of the Advent faith) that the place for that gathering is—except for the Jews—the land of Palestine. The greater blessing was upon Joseph's, not Judah's, posterity (Gen. 49: 26), and Ephraim's heritage reached "unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills," "in the land shadowing with wings" (Isa. 18: 1), and his branches [posterity] ran over the walls [ocean]. Joseph was equally with Judah, the descendant of Abraham—"Abraham's seed"—and much more in favor with God because of his integrity; and the larger promises of inheritance are through his line. The description of country and incidents of travel in this article will, however, be of interest to all who revere the land of Palestine as the scene of the mission and death of our Lord, and we are pleased to present it.—Ed.]

Some time ago a small company of believers, after careful study of the scripture, were convinced of the fact that there was to be a day of gathering of God's people. (Deut. 30; Jer. 32; Ezek. 36, etc.) The gathering place was found to be Palestine or what is now called the Holy Land, and Jerusalem the city of the Great King. (Isa. 44; Zech. 14; Matt. 5: 35). As that land was promised to Abraham and his seed (Gen. 15, 26, etc.), and believing the promise, "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise," it created a desire in their hearts to go to that land. The more they studied the greater became the desire to go. So accordingly determinations were formed and preparations for the journey began. Farms and other property were sold. Arrangements for the journey completed and tickets for the railroad and steamship secured. The company of nineteen in all was at last ready, and on the third day of May, 1899, they left their old homes, near St. Louis, Michigan, to take the train at St. Louis, the starting point of the journey. After partaking supper from a well spread table, prepared by a sister in St. Louis, we all knelt in prayer, asking God's protection for each of us. All then went to the station, where a few friends had gathered. Soon more came, and when the train arrived, the station was thronged, and we were saying, as we supposed, the last good by.

The next morning we were in Detroit, where we found relatives and friends, spending a short time there, when we again had to say good by. It made us feel sad to part with those we love, yet, although the writer of this article never expected to return to America, she could not feel in her heart that the parting was forever. When leaving Detroit our car was backed into a boat and taken across the Detroit river, where we went on land and rode through the Dominion of Canada, across the Niagara river, past the Falls, arriving at Buffalo about sunset. The portion of Canada through which we passed was the greater part level, a nice looking country, much better than the idea I had formed of it. We were disappointed in not getting a good view of the Niagara Falls. The Rapids were in plain sight. After leaving Buffalo it was dark, so we could not see the country. We regretted not having the privilege of riding through New York state in daylight. Occasionally a pretty sight was brought to view when we passed the electric lighted towns, especially the city of Scranton, Pennsylvania. We were seemingly riding upon a mountain, with the city in a valley on either side. Its four hundred electric lights presented the likeness of myriads of bright stars hovering over some sacred spot. As soon as daybreak the scene was very interesting. Often we were hemmed in on either side by the Blue Mountains, rising many feet above the car. Sometimes it looked like solid walls of stone. The sides of the mountains were in some parts covered with ragged rocks. Three times we passed through tunnels in the mountains. Here and there among the mountains were level grounds, where small towns had found comfortable spots. Small streams and lakes were interspersed among the mountains. Then there is the Delaware river, a rapid and pretty stream.

About seven o'clock we arrived in Hoboken, New Jersey, where we must wait until the next day before taking the steamer. The gentleman who sees to the transfer of baggage, directed us to a boarding house. So far as we were concerned in rooms and beds we were quite comfortable, but our food was poor. Although we paid $2.50 per day, one half for children, all we got for breakfast was brown bread (sour at that) boiled eggs, butter and coffee. Hoboken is a large city, but as we had writing and other work to do we did not look around much. The next morning the porter went with us to the dock where the steamer was being loaded. (The ship was of the North German Lloyd line). Several hundred people had gathered, mostly Italians being sent home. And such confusion. Friends parting with friends, weeping and mourning, while others were pushing and crowding in their haste to get through the gate and get the best place in their assigned part of the ship. Almost in vain were the officers' attempts in compelling them to be quiet and orderly. Although the officers were Italians and we could not understand the language, we saw by the countenance and gestures that they were getting quite impatient.

After some time and much difficulty all were on board and in their respective quarters. Baggage being loaded and all things ready, the anchor was raised and soon we were sailing in deep water. For three days the weather was calm and beautiful. Whales were seen sporting in the water, and schools of fish jumping about, but the sea could not remain smooth. In the night the wind became high and strong, and soon the steamer was plunging out of one swell into another throwing the water in great sheets up over its deck. Suddenly it changed its course, and as the water boiled, twisted and curled the ship would be hoisted on a large billow, then down it would fall lengthwise in a trough of the sea, riding on its side until we began to wonder if it would ever balance, when up it would come only to be let down with a great splash on its other side. Five days of such tossing about was upon us. Long and tiresome was the time spent in pain and sickness. Dreadful it is to be seasick. Faint hearted women growing fearful and discouraged prayed for help. Ropes were stretched across the deck for the sailors to steady themselves while walking from one end of the ship to the other. Not many passengers were seen on deck until one day we came alongside of land which seemed to break the breeze from off us, when all in their eagerness to see land forgot they were sick and were soon on deck viewing the Azores islands.

Those islands lying far out in the Atlantic ocean presented an interesting scene. The surface of those islands looked to be quite mountainous and hilly. We sailed close enough to the islands to see the green grass and trees. Here and there along the shore or upon the top of a high hill, a small town or village could be seen. The surrounding country was divided into farms. Occasionally we would see men at work in the field, and as they saw us passing they would wave their hats and cheer. The farms seemed to be laid out in fields somewhat like they are in America. The fields were surrounded with hedge fences, and we could see sheep, cattle and other animals grazing on the green grass. Everything looked neat and pretty. From high up the sides of lofty mountains would often be seen a stream clear and bright falling down into the ocean forming a beautiful cascade. Sometimes the water fell from so many feet above the ocean, and as it came nearer the foot of the mountain the stream widened and seemed to grow thinner until it resembled the thin white veiling of a bride. There were streams flowing in the valleys between the mountains, and as they came nearer the ocean they would often divide into two streams which carried the water into the ocean. Light houses were built in different places along the shore. When leaving the islands the sea was yet tempestuous, but as we drew near the Strait of Gibraltar, it became calm again and we were enabled to sit on deck and enjoy the fresh breeze and warm sunshine. Next we came to the straits where we saw that huge rock standing out in the water and towering many feet above the surface.

Gibraltar is a pretty place, curious and interesting. At the foot of the mountain or rock, it is surrounded by a high wall. There are walls up the sides of the rock between the buildings and fruit yards. The buildings were built in rows one behind the other up the rock, so with buildings and fruit yards the rock was nearly encircled many feet up its surface. The ship remained here for a few hours. Some of the passengers went on shore, while others enjoyed themselves on board eating fruit. Although this was early in May, Gibraltar seemed well supplied with fresh fruit, such as oranges, lemons, cherries, strawberries and apricots, besides dried figs and dates. It was not the season for grapes. We were told that the principal fruit was oranges and grapes. The oranges were delicious, they were so large and juicy with such a fine flavor. Oranges were sold for one cent each, lemons for a trifle more, while other fresh fruit was quite expensive. Gibraltar is well guarded by the British government. It was night when we left, and as we looked back to the rock with its many bright lights, it presented a very picturesque scenery.

After a few days sail and passing some small islands we next came to Naples, Italy. The steamer on which we were to sail to Port Said, had left the day before we arrived, and we were obliged to remain in Naples nearly two weeks. The agent took us to a large seven story building where he secured rooms for us. This house was first built two stories high, then the front part was left as it was, but the back was built five stories higher. The front part of the building had a flat roof. Here we spent the greater part of the time when we were not on the street. This building faced the bay so we had a good view of the harbor, as we were up above the street. There was always a fresh breeze from the water. The streets near the water are not very clean. Much fishing is carried on there and the odor is very offensive to those passing along, besides those streets are infested with fleas. The main part of the city is clean and pleasant. There are many large, elegant looking buildings. The streets are wide and well paved. Electric lights and street cars are used in the main part of the city, while in the less important part street lamps and horse cars are used. The streets are swept and the refuse is carried away in carts, perhaps to enrich the little gardens outside. The railroad coaches are somewhat inferior to those in America.

In the west part of the town is the king's palace. We would not call it a pretty palace from the outside view. It is a very large stone house. Windows of somewhat old fashioned style, while the whole building looked dull indeed, but the yard was beautiful with the many pretty flowers, green grass and trees; the whole is enclosed by a high iron picket fence. Two large double gates open into the street in front of the building. At each gate a soldier with a sword and rifle is stationed. All the officers in Naples carry a sword or rifle. The material used in buildings and sidewalks is mostly stone. The chief religion in Naples is Roman Catholicism. There were priests everywhere. While there we witnessed a funeral procession. The city band took the lead and the hearse followed, but the corpse was not in the hearse, it was carried in the coffin on a bier concealed from sight by a rich and beautiful spread and drapery. Next followed the priests and people on foot, then the carriages with the mourners, and last a line of empty buggies which I suppose were to carry the people home after the funeral rites were finished.

We had beautiful warm May weather with now and then a refreshing rain. A stroll to the suburbs of the town was interesting. The gardens which supplied the city with plenty of green vegetables looked green and thrifty. The orange, lemon, and fig trees were plentiful, and it is almost needless to say, oranges and lemons were very cheap. We would see oranges lying under the trees as we see apples in Michigan in the fall. Looking nearly eastward we could see Mt. Vesuvius, at the foot of which the ancient cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum were buried by great volcanic eruptions pouring down its sides. Smoke is continually issuing from this mountain, and in the night time fire can be distinctly seen. Although there are many Italians in our country, Naples does not welcome American travelers. Their baggage is searched, and if they find anything that is dutiable they simply keep it. Not many of the officers can speak English, so Americans may as well keep quiet as to try to get anything back.

At last the day came for us to leave Naples, and as the anchor was raised we gave the city a farewell glance, and we were soon sailing far out into the sea. The Mediterranean Sea was quite smooth, and we enjoyed the sail, although no objects of interest presented themselves while the great steamer plowed its way through the blue waters, passing in sight of Alexandria, and on the fourth day arriving at Port Said, Africa. Port Said is a small seaport town, built on a point which is nearly barren of vegetation, except a few shade trees along the streets. Living there are a few English speaking people, but the greater part are Egyptians, Africans, negroes and Arabs. The language was different from that we heard at Naples, but we could understand it no better. There is a good sea beach along one side of the town. The buildings there are not so much of solid stone as in Naples. Some of the buildings are plastered inside and out. The plaster on the outside is just daubed on and gives the wall the appearance of rough stone. It was now June and the weather was quite hot, and rain water was what we had to drink. We were told that the cisterns were left open under the buildings, so the air was full of mosquitoes, which made it difficult to get a good night's rest.

There seems to be little for the people to do, since they raise nothing, and everything has to be brought from other places.

It is only because of its being a seaport that the inhabitants receive employment. There are many beggars. The men generally wear dresses made after the fashion of long night robes. The women still cling to the Mohammedan custom of covering their faces while on the street, no matter how hot the day. Port Said was well supplied with fresh and dried fruits and several kinds of vegetables. We could procure quite good bread also cooked meats at the bakery. As we hired rooms and bought our food, our living was not so expensive as it would have been had we gone into a boarding house if there had been one to go to which we did not find. While in Port Said we witnessed another funeral procession. Here the hearse carried the corpse in the coffin, but the lid of the coffin was carried by men walking behind the hearse, leaving the corpse uncovered in view of those along the streets. Following those carrying the coffin lid, were mourners and friends, but no women were seen in the procession.

After a stay of one week in Port Said we were again on board the steamer, this time for Beyrouit. The steamer was small and heavily loaded. As the sea was somewhat rough, the steamer was very unsteady, and we were again seasick which made it very unpleasant. After one night and a day we were anchored at Beyrouit where we spent ten days in quarantine. The captain signaled for a tug boat to come for the passengers, but all in vain. The next morning the life-boats were lowered and preparations were made for landing, but the sea was very rough, and it was with much difficulty that the third boat got to shore. The rowers being much fatigued, the captain said he would land no more until the sea was calm, so we remained on the boat two days. One night we had quite a shower of rain, giving things on deck a good bath. It was there quite warm in the day, but cool at night. The quarantine grounds were partly enclosed by a high stone wall, while the sea was at the back. Small cottages and tents were what we lived in, but had to furnish our own bed. Bread, ready cooked meat and vegetables could be bought at the cook shed, and fruit at the store, both inside the wall. Plenty of water in the well, free to all. Letters could be sent out and others received. Some persons were amused by games and music, while to others the time was long and monotonous.

After serving the ten days in quarantine we had a few days to look around while waiting for another steamer. Beyrouit is quite a large town, has many nice buildings and pretty parks. Some of the streets are wide while others are narrow and crooked, so that driving is impossible on those streets. The Presbyterian people have a large church there, also a missionary school. Just southeast of the city is Mt. Lebanon. This mountain is dotted here and there with villages, wherein is often found English missionary schools. The country surrounding Beyrouit is very pleasant.

After spending two weeks in Beyrouit we were again on board a small steamer, for it was only small steamers that came to those ports. Fortunately we were but one night sailing to Jaffa, where we arrived in early morning. The sea was so rough it was almost impossible to get from the steamer into the small boats to go to shore. There are not many good harbors so the large boats have to anchor out in the sea, and the passengers and baggage are taken to the shore in row boats. On this occasion it was a task, but through waiting for the waves to raise the small boat to the stairs on the large boat, and by partly jumping and sometimes almost falling, we were, by the aid of the boatman, at last in the small boat, and were soon on shore feeling thankful that our boat rides were over. We spent only a short time in Jaffa. Shortly after noon we were on board the cars en route for Jerusalem.

The passenger coaches are small with a bench along either side the coach, and one through the center. We passed by and stopped at five small towns, the first being Lydda. Besides those towns were other smaller ones, the buildings of which were made of mud, with straw, corn-stalks and such like, for roofs. They gave the appearance of straw stacks or sheep sheds, such as are sometimes built by farmers in America. For many miles after we left Jaffa, the land was quite level. The farms were as good as elsewhere. Nearly all kinds of grain is raised and a great variety of vegetables. Olives, figs and grapes are the principal fruit. Although it was as early as the 27th of June, harvest was over and threshing was going on, being done in the old style, tread out by cattle or camels. A goodly share of the grinding grain is done in the old time hand mill. The farming tools are not so handy to work with as might be desired.

After leaving the level plain, we came to the mountains. The railroad track is made between the mountains, or occasionally on the side of the mountains. The track winds in and around the mountains, making a very crooked road. Sometimes while riding along we could scarcely see the top of the mountains from the car window on one side, while on the other side we could look hundreds of feet into the valley below. There are many large caves in the sides of the mountains, and often a family of natives find their home in one of those dark places. I cannot tell what they live on unless it is olives, figs and grapes, which are often found on the mountains. Ripe olives are a very wholesome food, but they are so very bitter that it is sometime before strangers learn to appreciate them.

After traveling in this strange country for thirty-five or forty miles, we came to Jerusalem, "the city of the Great King." Here the train stopped at a small station, and every one was anxious to get out. Carriages were ready and the drivers were making noise enough to awaken any sleepy head, but to us their talk was senseless, as we could not understand it. The dragoman who was with us had telegraphed from Jaffa for tents to be pitched for us at Jerusalem. We enjoyed a short carriage ride over the valley of Hinnom, past the Jaffa gate, around to the north side of the wall of the city just west of the Mount of Olives, where we came to four quite pretty tents with the United States flag floating in the air at the top of one of the tent poles. Here our baggage was delivered, and we were all glad that our journey was finished, and that we could rest for a while at least. Soon we secured a large house where we had plenty of house room, a good cistern of water, and a garden furnishing a play ground for the children.

Nearly all the water used in Jerusalem is rain water. Large cisterns are made by drilling the rock and blasting it out with dynamite or some other explosive substance. The cistern is covered with a cemented cover. They hold several barrels of water, some even hundreds. Many have filters arranged so the water is filtered while passing into the cisterns. Wealthy men have offered the sultan large sums of money to be allowed to put in aqueducts from springs outside of the city, with water-works which would supply the city with good, fresh water, but he will not allow it to be done. We were not there at the time of the "rainy season;" but we were told that the rain came in November and continued three or four weeks, then they had fair weather for a while. The farmers at this time prepared the ground and sowed their grain. Then the rain came again, continuing until March or later, when it would clear away and the weather would be lovely and the ground covered with beautiful flowers. The hot months are May and October. Between May and October the nights and mornings are quite cool, but when the sun gets up it grows warmer until about ten o'clock, when it is very hot until about three when it grows cooler again. As Jerusalem is elevated so many feet above the sea, it is generally receiving a cool breeze, and strange as it may seem it is nearly always cool in the shade even if the weather is hot. People suffer with the heat in one way here in America more than they do there. Of course the heat and sun there bring fever and sunstrokes, from which our company did not wholly escape. Nevertheless, we were quite fortunate considering the time of the season we arrived there.

Jerusalem is indeed a place of interest, with its large hotels, hospitals, churches and other fine buildings. It is more pleasant in the city outside the wall than inside. Inside the wall are many small stores. As the city is built on four mountains, the streets are narrow, with stairs which lead up the mountains. Among the fine buildings is the church of the Holy Sepulchre. It is claimed by some that this church covers the spot where Jesus was crucified. We were allowed to pass our hands through the opening of a case which enclosed a smooth stone claimed to be the stone on which Jesus sat. There was a large rent in the rock underneath the building, said to be the effect of the earthquake which occurred at the time Jesus died. Many such things were shown us to prove the place to be Mount Calvary. According to scripture Mount Calvary is outside the gate.

Another place of interest is the Mosque of Omar, which stands on Mount Moriah. This building is eight square, each side being 67 feet in length, and supports, by the aid of large stone, granite and marble pillars, a beautiful dome, which covers the rock where Abraham offered up Isaac. This rock is 57 feet long, 43 feet wide, and 6½ feet above the ground. The Mosque has 56 windows made of small pieces of glass of various colors arranged in beautiful designs over which are extracts from the Koran in large Turkish letters. When the king of Germany was in Jerusalem he offered the sultan several thousand dollars for one window, but he would not sell it.

The Mohammedans' worshiping house, underneath which are Solomon's stables; and Solomon's pools are on the same ground with the Mosque. The huge stone pillars in the stables which support the worshiping house were estimated at seven feet square. The buildings are of stone, marble and granite, and the whole is enclosed by a high stone wall, the east and part of the south walls form a portion of the city walls. In the east wall is the Golden Gate, which the Mohammedans keep closed for fear of a king coming in which they believe will take their power from them. It is but a few years since christians were allowed inside of the wall and now it is only in company with a Turkish soldier, and one whom the Consul from the same country sends, that they are allowed to go in; besides they must put on slippers and pay a certain fee. There is the Tower of David and other objects of interest, besides the Jews' walling place, where Jews go each day of the week, but more especially on Friday afternoon, to weep and pray for the restoration of Jerusalem, their beloved city.

Passing the Damascus gate and going to the north, less than one-half mile, we come to the tombs of the kings, a wonderful place. A large iron gate is opened and several broad, stone steps are descended, which brings one into a large uncovered square, seemingly cut in the earth, with walls on every side to the height of thirty feet or more. At the opposite side of the square is a sort of platform, at one end of which is a small door, at the side of the opening is a large, round stone, which is supposed was before the door in years past. No doubt this stone is the same as the one that closed the door of the tomb in which our Savior was laid. Passing through this small door another flight of stone steps were descended, which brought us into a small room cut in the rock. It is dark and one must carry a light.

At the first glance the room looked to be surrounded with windows, but by looking closely we found them to be niches cut in the wall large enough to admit one or two coffins with sometimes a smaller space at the farther end cut crosswise to place a small casket. A door at one side of the room led into another room, which was the same as the first; then a third room, with a small door at the top of another flight of steps, which led to a lower room which had much water in it. What courage, patience and skill those men of old had in drilling, digging and working in their ancient way, to provide such perfect sepulchers in which to bury their dead, and where their own bodies were perhaps laid. It is certainly a wonderful work.

Going from the Damascus gate a few steps north, and then to the east, we come to Mt. Calvary; the mount is nearly covered with tombs. No trace of the tomb of our Savior is left and it is difficult to tell the spot where it stood. There are several caves in the side of the mount, and it presents a lonely spot.

Leaving Mt. Calvary and going farther east until we reach the northeast corner of the city wall, the road turns south, and when nearly opposite St. Stephen's gate we again turn east, cross the Valley of Jehoshaphat, and begin to ascend the Mount of Olives. At the left of the road is a large cave, at the entrance of this cave is the tomb of the Virgin Mary. Down in the cave at the east end, is an altar enclosed by curtains, where it is supposed the angel appeared to Mary to announce the glad tidings of the coming Savior. This cave often serves as a worshiping place for the Greeks. When the cave is open for worship it presents a pretty sight; handsome rugs are spread on the floor where the patriarch and priests walk. No daylight can lighten the inside of the cave except the little that creeps through the entrance. The cave is lighted by many, yes many, little olive oil lights, hanging from iron rods stretched across the top of the cave. When descending the broad, stone steps leading into the cave, one is impressed with the thought of going out on a dark night with the stars shining overhead. Something beautiful to behold.

At the right side of the mountain road is the garden of Gethsemane. The garden is well protected by stone walls and iron fences. The flowers are beautiful, and there in the midst of the garden is the tree under which, they told us, Jesus knelt to pray. It may not be that Jesus knelt under any of those trees, but no doubt those trees are shoots from the very trees under which he knelt. However, the trees are very old and show the work of ants and bugs for years past.

vines, gardens and olive trees. At the very top is a Russian tower, said to be erected on or near the spot where Jesus the Christ ascended to heaven. From the top of the mountain an excellent view can be had of the city of Jerusalem. Then looking to the east over mountains, hills and plains; the Dead Sea, a beautiful blue sheet of water, spreads out before us at the distance of twenty-five miles or more; and the Jordan River flowing in from the north, can be distinctly seen. The waters of the dead sea are very, very salty, no fish can live in them; they swim down, the Jordan into the sea, but are soon washed ashore, dead, salted fish. Perhaps no one can realize, like those who have been there, the necessity of the waters being healed, which God has promised will be done. (Ezek. 47.)

At the southern border of the Mt. of Olives lies the little town of Bethany. In it still stands the ruins of the house of Simon, the leper; also the ruins of the home of Martha and Mary. The tomb of Lazarus is yet to be seen. The town is small and not much improved.

A drive in the fresh morning air, from Jerusalem to Bethlehem, a distance of six miles, is pleasant and refreshing. The road is high and smooth, and the breeze from off the mountains has a bracing effect. On we went, past the tomb of Rachel and other places of interest, besides fruit trees, vineyards, gardens and small towns in the valleys, all of which make the scenery delightful, and too soon our drive is at an end, and we are at Bethlehem, the birth place of our Savior. Over his birth spot is erected a large church, and in the church, on the very birth spot is a large, silver-like star, nearby is the manger in which his mother laid him. Under this church is an iron grate which, we were told, led into the cave where the little children were thrown, whom King Herod caused to be slain.

Bethlehem contains the shops for making up the pearl shells. Breast pins, pen-holders, knives, pocket-books, beads and various other beautiful and useful articles are made from this valuable shell. The work is done by hand with such small tools, and it is so fine and delicate that one can but admire it. The Arabs show wonderful skill and taste in this work. There are shops where olive wood is carved and made into many useful and ornamental things in different parts of Palestine. We visited other places which I cannot here write about as my article is now getting too long.

When we left America on our way to Jerusalem, our intention was to procure a home there; but after looking about and finding the price of land beyond the reach of our fortune, and finding employment scarce for Americans, and learning the condition of the government and other interesting features, and also learning that many changes must be made in different ways, we could see that the time for our Lord's coming was not so near as we believed before we left home. Then my husband decided to return to America again, for a while, at least. So on September 2d we left Jerusalem on our homeward journey.

Arriving at Jaffa we found the ship was not there, and we must wait a few days. While at Jaffa we visited the old home of Simon the tanner, whose house is by the seaside; with its flat roof, where Peter went to pray and saw in vision the sheet let down with all manner of beasts, etc. Jaffa is a busy, little town; the heat and color of the ground is not so trying on one's eyes as in Jerusalem. We spent much of our time walking about watching the people, and gathering shells by the seashore.

At last the ship came, and we were soon on board and having another seasick time. Soon we all felt better and although we had much rough sea, we were more comfortable and enjoyed the trip back much more than going, because we were sailing on English ships and could talk with those on board; and besides we had better food and more comfortable rooms. We sailed on the Tuscan Prince S. S. as far as Liverpool, England. The captain had all kinds of games to amuse the passengers and pass away the time.

We stopped two days at the island of Malta (Melita) where Paul was shipwrecked. The wall around the city is said to be thirty-five feet thick. Beautiful gardens were cultivated on the top of the wall. This city is built on many steep hills; stairs were built in the streets and vehicles had to go a round about way. Many English speaking people are there and it seems to be a busy town. There was plenty of fresh fruit and other "goodies."

Liverpool is a large place with eight miles or more of docks along the harbor. No doubt many of the readers of this paper know much more about Liverpool than I do. We were there three days and I will just say that I saw nothing very interesting or admirable. The weather was damp and foggy, although the people seemed kind and friendly, and there was plenty to eat, drink and wear, I don't think I would care to live there.

We left Liverpool the last day of August on the Lake Ontario S. S. of the Beaver line. This ship was larger than the others we had sailed on, it being about sixty feet wide and over five hundred feet long. It was good exercise to walk from one end to the other a few times. We were with a large crowd and nearly all were enjoying themselves. Evening entertainments of singing, speaking and instrumental music were frequent. On Sundays preaching was held in the parlor of the first class. Yet the voyage could not end without sorrow, one man and a little child died and were buried in the great deep. One lady was near death's door, but they succeeded in bringing her to shore.

We saw several ice bergs in the ocean, some looked to be as large as the ship. Whales were seen in the St. Lawrence River shooting the water up in such a way as to resemble a fountain such as we see in the city parks. We sailed through the strait of Belle Isle, through the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and down the river, landing at Quebec. Then on the 12th of September, 1899, we were again in Detroit.

Although I have spent some time in preparing this article, I have given only a brief account of our journey, but hope it will be interesting to its readers. The visit and journey was interesting to me, and I would have enjoyed a longer stay. Many are gathering at Jerusalem, especially the Jews, from every country, and although I am now in America, my faith is not lessened in the promises of God, but hope when the time is fully come, we shall be gathered with his chosen. My prayer is for the prosperity of Jerusalem, and that peace may be established within her walls. (Isa. 62.)

Mormon Tabernacle Here.

REORGANIZED CHURCH OF LATTER DAY SAINTS BUILDING A HOUSE OF WORSHIP IN MILLER STREET.

A Mormon church will soon be built in Pittsburg, in Miller St., near Colwell. It is not the Utah and Salt Lake City brand of Mormonism, however, but an offshoot of it—the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. While they accept Joseph Smith as a prophet and the Book of Mormon as a revelation, they are opposed to polygamy and other practices of the mother church.

The Pittsburg congregation of Latter Day Saints was organized about 25 years and have never owned any church home. They have been meeting in various halls in the city, and for a number of years met in Fourth avenue. Recently their meetings have been held above the Fifth avenue bank, at Stevenson street and Fifth avenue. The church now has a membership of 105, and the Rev. F. G. Pitt is pastor.

The Miller street tabernacle will be the first church building of the denomination in Pittsburg. The cost of the structure will be about $5,000, and work was begun on the foundation this week.

Several months ago the congregation purchased for $1,500 from Jacob Morgan a lot facing in Golwell street, 25x95 feet. It was proposed to erect the church on this spot, but it was afterwards deemed to be more desirable to build on the Miller street side.

A deal was consummated with the Rev. Dr. J. M. Wallace whereby he transferred to the church a lot 40x80 feet in the rear of his residence in Miller street, and accepted as payment the lot in Colwell street and $300. The tabernacle will be a one-story brick building, 40x80 feet. It will contain a main audience and Sunday School room, and it will require about four months to complete it. The building will be extremely plain in outward aspect.—The Commercial Gazette, Pittsburg, Pa.

"OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS."
MRS. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

Editor's Address, 1210 West Short St., Independence, Mo.

I would like to call attention to the description of a perfect woman, found in Proverbs 31. How many women of the present day compare favorably with this description? If not, why not? Righteous living will produce perfect physical results. A diligent study of the word and strict application of the same, is warranted to make one "healthy, wealthy and wise." Healthy mothers produce healthy offspring, and wise mothers have no careworn faces among their little "olive plants." Dear mothers, study diligently the Word of Wisdom. Ask, seek and knock.

Oh! how like children are the oldest and wisest of us. What a responsibility we assume when we obligate ourselves to bring up a little child, and yet to some the care of little ones is made of less account than the care of dumb beasts. It ought not to be so; and I hope no mothers are to be found among the Saints who answer the description of the mothers written about in these lines. The pure, perfect wisdom of God will educate mothers. Let us diligently seek it, dear sisters; I feel for one I am very lacking, but humbly desire perfection along these lines.

Yours for truth,
E. L. CHEDELL.
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

My sweetest memory is to remember lying awake at night on my bed in my little room, hearing the voice of my dear mother, who for twenty-five years had never a night without pain, and never a night with two hours unbroken sleep, and through all that quarter of a century this light shone, till it brought in the everlasting day. My earliest and tenderest memory is lying awake at night and hearing her, not singing, but trying to forget her pains by reading in the silence of the night, with all the house, as she thought, sleeping around her, though I was awake. And I can hear her in her woman's voice—and all memories hover over it, for the sweetest voice that can fall on a man's ear is that of his mother—"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil. Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me!" Sweet mother! May your child rise up some day and bear a like testimony for you!—John McNeill.

"Christ never asks of us such busy labor
As leaves no time for resting at his feet;
The waiting attitude of expectation
He often counts a service most complete.

"God loves patience! Souls that dwell in stillness
Doing the little things or resting quiet,
May just as perfectly fulfill their mission,
Be just as useful in the Father's sight."

The best preparation for the future, whether for work, calamity, trial or task, is to do thoroughly, bravely and cheerfully those things which fall to our hand day by day. It is after this fashion that the greatest works are accomplished; it is by this method that the finest characters are formed; it is in this way that the wisest train themselves for life. He who gives himself up to thoughts of heaven and anticipations of happiness denies himself that preparation for heaven which comes by accepting the education of life and which is the only sure promise of the possession of heaven. We must create heaven within ourselves before we claim it as a condition.—Sel.

$2.50 SENT FREE.

THE WELL KNOWN CHICAGO HEART SPECIALTIST, DR. MILES, 201 E. WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO, ILL. HAS SENT FREE $2.50 WORTH OF HIS NEW AND COMPLETE TREATMENT TO OUR READERS.

There never was a better opportunity for persons suffering from diseases of the heart, nerves, liver, stomach or dropsy to test, free, a New and Complete Treatment for these disorders. Dr. Miles is well known as a leading specialist in these diseases, and his liberal offer is certainly worthy of serious consideration by every afflicted reader.

His new system of Special Treatment is thoroughly scientific and immensely superior to the ordinary methods. It includes several remedies carefully selected to suit each individual case and is the final result of twenty-five years of very extensive research and experience in treating this class of disease. It consists of a curative elixir, tonic tablets, laxative pills and usually a plaster, selected for each case. Extensive statistics clearly demonstrate that Dr. Miles' New Treatment is three times as successful as the usual treatment.

Thousands of remarkable testimonials from prominent people will be sent free which proves the doctor to be one of the world's most successful physicians.

Dr. Julius Kessler, of 350 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, testifies that Dr. Miles cured him after ten able physicians had failed. Mrs. H. Trimmer, of Chicago, testifies that Dr. Miles' physicians had pronounced her case hopeless. Dr. S. B. Caldwell, of San Diego, California, testifies that Dr. Miles' Special Treatment has worked wonders in my son's case when all else failed. I had employed the best medical talent and had spent $2,000 in so doing. I believe it is a wonderful specific. My son is now able to resume his usual life. "For years I had severe trouble with my stomach, head, neuritis, sinking spells, and dropsy. Your treatment entirely cured me." writes Hon. W. A. Warren, of Jamestown, N. Y.

As all afflicted readers may have $2.50 worth of treatment especially adapted to their case, free, we would advise them to send for it at once. Address, Dr. FRANKLIN MILES, 201 E. WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO. Mention this paper.

Styles for the Winter.

The easiest and simplest way we can suggest for our readers to get a good idea of the styles that will be popular this winter is to buy a copy of the October Delinicator, just on sale at every news stand.

In addition to the fashion features and practical dressmaking advice that has made the Delinicator famous, the October number is full of good general reading, most tastefully illustrated under the immediate direction of the well known artist, William Martin Johnson.

Alma to Helaman.

"And now my son, remember the words which I have spoken unto you: * * * teach them (the people) an everlasting hatred against sin and iniquity; preach unto them repentance, and faith on the Lord Jesus Christ; teach them to humble themselves, and to be meek and lowly in heart; teach them to withstand every temptation of the devil, with their faith on the Lord Jesus Christ; teach them to never be weary of good works, but to be meek and lowly in heart: for such shall find rest to their souls. O remember my son, and learn wisdom in thy youth; yea, learn in thy youth to keep the commandments of God; yea, and cry unto God for all thy support; yea, let all thy doings be unto the Lord, and whithersoever thou goest, let it be in the Lord; yea, let thy thoughts be directed unto the Lord; yea, let the affections of thy heart be placed upon the Lord forever; counsel the Lord in all thy doings, and he will direct thee for good: yea, when thou liest down at night, lie down unto the Lord, that he may watch over you in your sleep; and when thou risest in the morning, let thy heart be full of thanks unto God: and if ye do these things, ye shall be lifted up at the last day."—Book of Mormon, Alma 17: 11; page 306, small edition.

House Plants for the Winter.

The best time to get decorative plants to be grown indoors during the winter is early in September. At that season artificial heat and high, moist temperature have been dispensed with, and plants are growing more naturally than at any other time in the year. There are but few which one can expect to grow well in the house in winter. The aspidistra is a plant which can not be killed by ordinary neglect. Give it all the water it needs, an occasional application of fertilizer and a reasonable amount of light. The agave is a stately plant, and a well-grown specimen always attracts attention. For the hall it will be found quite as ornamental as a palm. Because of the semi-succulent nature of the foliage it will not require much water except when it is growing. Asparagus Sprengerii is another plant which grows as well for the veriest amateur as it does for the owner of a greenhouse. Plant it in a soil of rich loam, and give it a liberal allowance of water when it needs it, a shady place to grow in, and a frequent shower bath. Begonias are not often classed among the very robust plants, but there is one variety which I have found sure to grow well under difficulties. This variety is B. argentea guttata. Give it a soil of sandy loam, well drained. Be careful not to over-water, but shower it frequently.—Eben E. Rexford in the Ladies' Home Journal for Sept.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

We have razed the tent and it will soon be on the way to Janesville near our worthy Bro. Dutton's place, where the reunion will convene, commencing on the 21st of September to continue ten days. The good Spirit has indicated to thus meet was pleasing to the Lord and He would amply care for and provide for the welfare of all who gathered, and the weather should be propitious for "your sakes."

We are anticipating a large gathering. Both district tents of Wisconsin have been pressed into service for this reunion and it is rumored that Brn. H. C. Smith and Henry Stebbins of Lamoni will be with us; it is to be hoped we shall not be disappointed. All the missionaries of Wisconsin with nearly all its local talent will be present, so we shall have a spiritual feast which will assist in our spiritual warming for the rigors of the coming winter.

U'ens in Kentucky and Tennessee, let your optics gaze upon this: In company with Bro. Robinson we visited a tobacco patch of five acres within the suburbs of this little town of Oregon. The plants were set the 15th of June and on the 28th of August the crop was gathered into the barn. We measured one "stick" which was 5 1/2 feet in length and the largest leaves measured 18 inches in breadth and 31 inches in length. Such an enormous growth in nine weeks from the setting seems incredible, but it's the devil's own weed and it grows like the "old scratch."

Some of the people of Kentucky and Tennessee could find lucrative work in this country. The "firing" in the tobacco barn is not a custom here; they depend on sun and wind to dry out the plant, using no fire or smoke to "color" it, and unless the weather is just seasonable much of the tobacco spoils in the barns. While the plant is larger here and grows so much quicker than in the south, yet we'ns do not "color" the weed like u'ens do, hence would like to see some one of the many expert workers try a "burning" in this country. The five acres referred to above as estimated by experts, yielded $20.00 to $21.00 per acre, and not a good year for the weed either. OREGON, Wis., Aug. 31.

Help Wanted.

The Fayette City, Pennsylvania, branch will hold a Grand Rally day at the above place on Sunday, October 13, 1901, for the purpose of raising funds to cancel the debt of our church lot, whereupon we can erect a church suitable to the Saints and not have to climb two flights of stairs, which is very inconvenient to some. A cordial invitation is extended to the Saints in the Pittsburg district to come and have an enjoyable time and aid us in this good work. To those who cannot come and feel inclined to help, please remit their mite to

JAMES RAISBECK, clerk.
FAYETTE CITY, Pa., Sept. 10.
Every branch should have a supply of the new sermon tract, "Objections Answered," by Pres. Joseph Smith; 25 cents a dozen at ENSIGN office.

DIED.

PARISH.—At St. Louis, Missouri, September 4, 1901, Sr. Lillian I. Parish, wife of Bro. John S. Parish. Her babe, two days old, survived the mother only a few hours and was buried with its mother. Sr. Parish was born December 23, 1862, and leaves a husband, six children, an aged mother, one brother and one sister to mourn her sudden departure. She has builded a character that will remain in the minds of those who knew her best as a monument to patience, hope and unwavering fidelity to duty. Another child of God at rest. Funeral services by Elder F. A. Smith.

ADAMS.—At Brockton, Massachusetts, August 14, 1901, Bessie Chase, wife of Lester C. Adams, and daughter of Benjamin G. and Sr. Ada W. Chase. Was born at Harwich, Barnstable county, Massachusetts, July 17, 1878. A young husband, father, mother, brother, a large circle of other relatives and friends mourn their loss. She was of a fine disposition, and though not connected with our church by baptism, was yet very favorable toward us, and if spared would, no doubt, have finally united with us. Funeral services conducted by Elder M. H. Bond.

The Real Names of Some Noted Rulers.

Suppose that some morning there should appear in the newspapers such an item as this: "Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Wettin, accompanied by their nephew, Mr. Frederick W. V. A. Hohenzollern, sailed yesterday from Liverpool to New York." How many people would give more than a passing glance at this announcement? Yet it would be a piece of news calculated to throw the people of New York, and the whole of this country, in fact, into a paroxysm of excitement and feverish expectation, as must be admitted when the names of King Edward VII, Queen Alexandra and Emperor William of Germany are respectively substituted for the true family names given in the supposititious item. Then there is the youthful matron, Mrs. Henry Schwerin, who wields more power than any other woman of twenty one now living. She is known to the world as Wilhelmina of Holland, and is the only Queen in the world today with the same powers as a King.—Sept. Ladies' Home Journal.

PRAYER.

That there is a power in the humble, fervent prayer of faith, thousands in this age are ready to testify. And countless thousands of the past, could their voices be heard, would gladly add their affirmation to that of those who are still experiencing the unimpeachable character of the testimony of Holy Writ, that our heavenly Father is one who hears and answers prayer. Elias, one of the servants and prophets of the Lord once prayed that there should be no rain for a certain period, the wickedness of the people being so great that they were in danger of destruction spiritually as well as physically. His prayer was granted until the people were brought to realize that Baal was not God, but that the Lord alone was worthy of reverence and faithful service. James, in referring to this event, says:

Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain: and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.—Jas. 5: 17, 18.

In this instance the prayers of one righteous man affected a whole nation; and when, later, he proposed the test that the priests of Baal and himself should prepare sacrifices and the God who should answer by fire, consuming the sacrifice, should be acknowledged and worshiped, a marvelous answer to his prayer was again manifested in the eyes of the people, while the priests of Baal acted like demented people in their mad but futile efforts to meet the requirements of the test. One of the qualifications necessary in offering a prayer that shall prevail is shown in this incident to be righteousness. James says (5: 16), "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," and then cites the case of Elias referred to above. It is both a reasonable and natural conclusion that the Lord, who is the perfection or completeness of righteousness, is pleased with the individual who lives a righteous and godly life; and that He will be more ready to regard the right desires and requests of such an one, than He would those of the ungodly and rebellious, though the urgency and pressing necessities moving the latter to appeal unto the Lord, fills their prayers with all fervency and earnestness. Of such it is written:

But ye have set at naught all my counsel, and would none of my reproof: I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh; when your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish cometh upon you. Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me.—Prov. 1.

We know of no life in this world which never has need to call upon the Father of all for aid at some time in its experience. It matters not how much we may be surrounded with that which in this world is deemed all powerful. Sickness will come, accidents will occur, and notwithstanding that the highest medical and surgical skill may be employed, it will, in many instances, be found wholly ineffective to meet the emergency. Then, if at no other time, men will turn to their Creator and beg for recognition, and wish, if they have not led an upright life, that they had done so, that their prayers might prevail. But while the Lord is very merciful and full of compassion towards the works of His hands, He also possesses, equally with mercy, the attribute of justice, and the wilful transgressor has no assurance, no promise, cheering and comforting in its application to him. Yet the Lord often extends mercy and forgiveness to those sorely tried, though their lives have not been such as to have any claim upon his clemency. It will not do, however, to depend upon this fact; it will be like leaning upon a broken reed. Far better is it to give loving, faithful service to our heavenly Father, recognizing His claim upon our fealty because of the multiplied blessing received from His hand. Then when we are overtaken by forces with which we are unable to cope, we can, with confidence, turn to Him "from whom our help cometh" in the assurance that "the effectual fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much."

Fervency is another necessary qualification for the recognition of the heavens. A request preferred that does not come from a heart filled with the sense of necessity for making the supplication, would hardly commend itself to the Lord as worthy of favorable consideration. "Elias prayed earnestly," the apostle records, and when we read his prayer concerning the acceptance of his sacrifice as God's own priest and servant, as given in 1 Kings 18: 36, 37, we may understand how very much concerned he was that his prayer should prevail. Even an earthly ruler who had the power to confer benefits upon an individual would hardly be moved to manifest it favorably to an individual who did not feel sufficiently interested to seek it with due appreciation of the favor and good its reception would confer. No ruler would feel complimented by a careless and indifferent application for choice favors in his power to bestow. So that when we go to our heavenly Father for blessings, upon which our existence and happiness depends—or even that of others—we can consistently do no less than both feel and manifest a very deep earnestness in making our supplications.

Faith and confidence are also prerequisites to effectual prayer. An abiding trustfulness, that though realizing the urgency and necessity existing for the help asked for, there will be no disposition to worry lest it should not be granted, or that it should not be received as soon as we think it should, or to the extent desired. We have heard some pray for the faith "that will take no denial," but that kind of a petition seems to partake of the nature of a dictation unto the Lord. "Give me what I ask for, I won't be satisfied until you do," seems to express the sentiment in asking for that character of faith. And we do not see how any one could expect the Lord to answer favorably that kind of a petition. How different the Savior teaches us to pray, "Thy will be done on earth as it is done in the heaven." The proper way would seem to be to pray for that faith and that grace that will thankfully accept whatever our heavenly Father in His superior judgment and wisdom sees best for us. Surely every one who tries to serve the Lord in sincerity and truth ought to realize that if He so loved the world, sinners as all were, that He was moved to give His Only Begotten Son as a sacrifice for them, and a propitiation for the sins of those who would believe on His name, or obey His teachings, that when they have obeyed the everlasting gospel and become heirs of the promises, that He loves them none the less, and therefore can be trusted to advance their interests always, unto the end.

This thoughtfulness for the welfare of his children will often be manifest in either obedience or transgression. If faithful to their covenants, peace and favor. If disobedient, chastisement and reproof, until they learn by the things which they suffer that it is not best to disregard the obligations they owe Him, resulting in life and happiness in the end, if they wisely profit by that which they receive. Why not, then, seek to possess the kind of faith that is willing to abide cheerfully whatever the Lord sees is best for us, so long as we are convinced that He loves His children and will send that which is best for them in their loyalty and devotion to right principles? The one who knows he is not living faithful to his covenant, cannot, in the nature of the case, have confidence and faith that he will receive the blessings he seeks; for he knows he is not entitled to such recognition; doubts and fears will fill his mind, and James says of this class:

For let not that man [the that wavers] think that he shall receive anything from the Lord.—James 1: 7.

It is impossible under such conditions to present an acceptable offering to the Lord; hence it is best to try to live in harmony with our profession and covenant, and so have power with God; for "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." The Lord always hears the prayers of His people; we can be assured of that. But it is not always best that our petitions be granted; if they should be, they might not in the end prove beneficial to our welfare. The children of Israel would not, at one time, be satisfied without a king to rule over them like other nations around them. The Lord told them, through His prophet, exactly what would be the result of granting their petition. It was not His will that they should have any king but the Lord. But they would not be content, and their prayer was granted, resulting disastrously to them, as had been foretold. It is best to trust the wisdom and love of our heavenly Father, and in presenting our earnest, fervent requests in the name of Jesus Christ, believe heartily we shall be answered if it is for our best interest that we should, and accept with cheerfulness that which is sent us, being, as the apostle says, "thankful in all things," and "in everything give thanks." Live righteously, "walk with God," and we shall realize the force of the Psalmists' prediction:

No good thing will be withheld from them that walk uprightly.—Ps. 84: 11.

In issue of September 5th, there was an error in Bro. J. W. Adams' letter. Instead of reading, "None of the brethren have been here," etc., it should have been "Some of the brethren," etc.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ELDER T. C. KELLEY'S field address is Audubon, Minnesota.

Our readers will find on page 5 of this issue, in "Sights and Incidents," a very entertaining account of Bishop and Sr. Kelley's journey to the British Isles. We hope Sr. Kelley will favor us with the remaining chapters.

You are on dangerous ground when you get so you cannot feel kindly toward those who differ with you.—Nashville, Tennessee, Gospel Advocate (Christian).

A noble, Christ-like sentiment truly; but in our experience, too many are occupying that "dangerous ground." A kindly feeling is manifested by kind words and deeds. Never in harsh, unfair, untrue criticism of another's honestly cherished and conscientiously accepted belief. A tolerant spirit and a broad charity are attributes which are consistent with a profession of faith in the teachings of the Lord Jesus, and with His Spirit; and none can cultivate the Christ Spirit too assiduously.

A consideration of the following instruction of the Savior, as applicable now in its spirit as when uttered, may help in this direction:

And John answered and said, Master we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us. And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us.—Luke 9: 49, 50.

If the Lord was thus tolerant to the erring, should not those who profess to be His followers be likewise minded, to be consistent with their profession? We think so.

It is an easy matter to find fault. The devil is at it all the time, wherever there is a faithful child of God. And how it does delight him to have others help him out along this line. It is sad, too, to see how many are willing to render him their assistance in this work, causing wounding of spirit, destroying confidence and love, engendering bitterness and coldness in the hearts of some whose greatest desire is to do good—to do right. O, it's easy enough to find fault in poor, weak humanity. But when do we assiduously look for the good in our brother, our sister? Too often after they are dead, when their tried and wearied spirits have grown weary of burden-bearing and they have gone home to rest. But alas, the good we then discover in their characters, bringing from us words of commendation, is too late to affect them. Let us recognize good everywhere. Our heavenly Father does, why should not we? Let us speak of the good traits of our brethren and sisters, and pass unremarked those weaknesses which do not affect directly the good name of Christ's church.

Be ye kindly affectioned one toward another.

FROM THE CAMP.

Dear Ensign.—The reunion at Dow City, Iowa, commenced under favorable auspices again this year, the grounds in the city park seem to be in perfect condition, and though the attendance so far does not equal that of last year, there are quite a number—nearly sixty—tents already up, and others arriving daily. A cold rain just before the reunion commenced has detained some and perhaps deterred others, the roads, for a few days, being quite bad; but the warm sun, accompanied with quite a breeze, has now restored them to an excellent condition. The health of the campers is good, and the administration committee have, so far, had only one or two calls. The large tent is well filled at the preaching services, especially at night, and the ministry have been blessed with splendid light and liberty in dispensing the word. The weather is warm during the day, but the mornings and nights are cool and pleasant. The drought has affected this region seriously, though not so severely as in many other parts of the country. Sr. Holcomb, daughter of Bro. Henry Kemp, thinks their crops will be better than at first anticipated. Pres. Joseph Smith is in charge of the camp, and is looking and feeling well. He has as assistants, Brn. J. W. Wight, president of the mission, and J. M. Baker, president of the district. Bishop Hilliard is also here, but not so well as usual, though by no means disabled; as was practically demonstrated in a very forceful sermon yesterday morning. Brn. Chas. Dery, Jonas W. Chatburn, John Hawley, and others of the old, tried and true veterans are here, besides a number of the younger ministers. The prayer services are spiritual and full of interest, and the spirit of peace is present over the camp to bless, comfort and gladden the heart. All are cheerful and happy in the Lord and in the pleasant associations surrounding them.

Hopefully,

W. H. GARRETT.

INDEPENDENCE.

We have just received word from Colorado Springs that Elder C. R. Duncan desires the prayers of the church in his behalf. Unless divine aid is granted him, no hope is held out for his recovery.

Elder C. Ed. Miller will be the speaker Sunday morning; subject, "In the Image of God."

Elder W. H. Garrett is in attendance at the Dow City, Iowa, reunion.

Elder G. H. Hulmes will preach at the Armstrong branch next Sunday morning and at the First Kansas City branch in the evening.

Sunday morning brought together 327 of Mt. Zion Sunday School, 91 were primaries. Out of forty-three teachers, ten were absent, six of whom were in attendance at the Sunday School convention at Holden; only one teacher tardy. A spirit of solemnity seemed to reign throughout the entire day, even holding sway at the Sunday School, due somewhat, perhaps, to the emblems of mourning with which the gallery and platform were festooned. Bro. H. H. Robinson and Bro. Roberts occupied the pulpit morning and evening respectively.

Thursday afternoon, September 19th, memorial services in memory of the late President Wm. McKinley were held in the Saints' church at 2:30 p. m. President Roosevelt's proclamation was read by Bro. W. H. Garrett, who made brief remarks concerning the occasion calling for the service, and announced hymn 175 in the Hymnal, "Lead, Kindly Light," one of the deceased President's favorites. Bro. H. H. Robinson led in prayer; the choir sang the anthem, "God Knows Best," and hymn 291 in Hymnal, "Nearer, My God, To Thee," another of President McKinley's favorites, was then sung, after which Pres. Geo. H. Hulmes addressed the assembly, touching upon the nobility of character which marked the life of the late President and spoke at some length upon proper government and the support due it, reading from Luke and Titus and from the Doctrine and Covenants. He was followed by Brn. B. J. Scott, R. J. Parker and Bishop R. May briefly. Hymn 249, "God Bless Our Native Land," was sung and benediction was pronounced by Bishop May. The day was quite cool and cloudy; rain fell in the morning, but stopped before noon and the church was well filled. Festoons of black muslin with crepe rosettes and streamers graced the gallery front and around the railing of the rostrum, also covering the pulpit, in front of which the United States flag was gracefully fastened. The services were of a pleasing and profitable character consistent with the occasion. A union service was held in the First Presbyterian church in this city, which was largely attended. All business was suspended in the afternoon during the hours of service. Besides meetings in various churches in Kansas City an immense service was held in Convention Hall.

The afternoon fellowship meeting was one long to be remembered. The Saints rejoiced in some receiving the gift of prophecy, while others were greatly helped and encouraged thereby.

On the 18th inst. there was an excellent attendance of the Daughters of Zion, sixteen being present, four of whom enrolled their names. The reading of "Our Boys" was a responsive one, which brought forth informal answers both interesting and profitable. Material and other donations were solicited for the use of the Gleaners, who are, in their good work of giving aid to the needy, worthy of the encouragement of all.

The tent which has been for the past three weeks located at 8th and Spruce Streets in Kansas City (Mo.), was moved Monday to Dickson Park, between Sheffield and 9th St. stations on the Independence Electric line.

Sr. Joseph Luff is at present sojourning in Canada, visiting relatives and friends there.

The Saints of Independence had the pleasure of once more enjoying a visit with the Saints of Holden. On Thursday the Religio, Friday the Sunday School convention, and Saturday the Independence Stake Conference assembled, and these gatherings brought together a number of people who were filled with love and enthusiasm for the latter day work. The weather was delightful and the Saints at Holden, with their wonted generosity, entertained the visitors. In possession of such pleasant homes, with such a fine chapel to worship in, and surrounded as they are, with a beautiful and thriving country, the Holden Saints are indeed a happy people.

Bro. and Sr. Devore's cosy home at Holden was the center of interest to all who were fortunate enough to visit it during the Stake conference. The tasty and extensive arrangement of their large collection of shells and mementos of the Tahitian Islands, gathered during their five years missionary life there, was a delight to see, and especially to hear Sr. Devore's eloquent explanation of facts relating to the collection with reminiscences relating to their missionary life there, which often draws tears to the eyes of the listener.

Aside from the scarcity of manufacturing interests giving employment to boys growing up, Holden is an ideal home for an elder's family. Schools are excellent, homes may be bought at surprisingly low figures, and the town is an ideal home place.

The Saints of Holden are to be congratulated for the high moral standard of estimate in which the business men of the town seem to hold them. May no members of the church go there who will lower the excellence of the present estimate.

Conference was peaceful, as David Smith's beautiful hymn expresses, "There was not a cloud upon a single brow." Neither was there a single discourteous or harsh expression used by any one during the entire sessions of the first Independence Stake conference.

Elder John D. White, of the Stake presidency, was feeling quite ill during most of the conference, and was obliged to return home Sunday.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins attended all the services at Greenville chapel Sunday before last, occupying at the usual preaching hour, 4 o'clock.

The lectures given on Thursday and Friday nights of last week and on the subjects of "Social Purity" and "Divorce" were quite well attended, and were well worth listening to.

We have not had the privilege of attending the debate being held at Davis City last week and this, but from those who have been in attendance we learn that it is progressing nicely, and that the cause of truth is losing nothing by the efforts of Elder R. M. Elvin.

Sr. Dora Young came in Sunday from Holden, Missouri, her present home, to help push the editorial work on the Lesson Helps for the First Primary department, she being one of the committee appointed to attend to that work.

Among those attending the Dow City reunion from Lamoni are Presidents Joseph Smith and John Smith, Elders J. R. Lambert and J. A. Gunsolley. Elder Heman C. Smith left this week for the Southern Wisconsin reunion, to be held at Janesville, Wisconsin.

Elder H. N. Snively preached at Ellston Sunday, and Elder M. M. Turpen at Surprise schoolhouse. Elder R. S. Salyards and Bro. David Keown held services Sunday afternoon at Greenville.

At Lamoni Elder George Thorburn occupied the morning hour assisted by Brn. M. J. Danielson and David Keown. The afternoon prayer service was in charge of Elders F. M. Smith and James Allen. The evening hour was occupied by Elder Heman C. Smith continuing the Historical Lecture course. He was assisted by Elder Columbus Scott.

Elder H. A. Stebbins has been confined to his room for several days with a lame back, but hopes to soon be out again.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Our protracted effort at South St. Joseph Mission opened out under favorable conditions, being well attended by the local Saints with a sprinkling of strangers. The spirit of the service was good and satisfactory—only our singers and players were not there, but will be.

Marion, the ten weeks old child of Sr. Hattie Chapman, passed away on the 20th, and was buried yesterday. Services at the house in charge of Bro. M. Shaw, remarks by the writer, "Tis better to go to the house of mourning than the house of feasting."

Our quarterly conference convenes at Stewartsville on Saturday next. An enjoyable, spiritual time is hoped for.

Bro. Wm. Lewis occupied the church pulpit yesterday, of which we heard favorable comment.

We had the privilege of attending an excellent prayer meeting at the Aspey mission on Friday night. Earnestness, promptness and spirituality were its characteristics.

We will continue our sermons in defense of the Bible at Aspey mission on Tuesday nights instead of Thursday, as heretofore.

We formed acquaintance last night, at our meeting, with R. W. Duncan, who had been baptized some years ago near Weir City, Kansas, but who had been in the wild west away from church privileges, as a railroad man. He is now located in South St. Joseph as such. He mentioned with feeling the names of J. A. Davis, Bro. Richards, E. Wheeler, D. Crawley and others.

Yours in bonds,

J. M. TERRY.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

First Chicago Branch, 8 So. Wood St., Sunday School at 1:30, preaching at 3 and 7:30 p. m.; Central Branch, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., Sunday School at 9:30 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman, preaching at 10:30 a. m., followed by Sunday School, preaching at 7:30 p. m.; Graves' Mission, 2158 State St.

During the week the district tent has been in operation on Cottage Grove avenue. One evening was devoted to a refutation of Seventh Day Adventism by Bro. Sheehy, and the following night the tent was granted to a minister of that faith to defend his case. Would the Seventh Day folks treat us likewise. However, we can afford to be liberal seeing we fear not the light. Last evening at our last meeting in the tent we had the largest audience of outsiders had yet.

The meetings will now be held regularly at the old stand, 3411 Cottage Grove avenue.

On the west side yesterday Bro. Sheehy occupied the afternoon, Brn. Kier and McCallum the evening. Twice yesterday in the tent preaching by Bro. Sheehy.

Bro. Hackett left us last week for the north and has not returned.

Brn. Graves and Fuller are still trying at street work.

Bro. F. M. Pitt is hereafter to be a denizen of the South side, intending to move his family.

Sr. F. G. Pitt is here on a visit; attraction, a new grandchild. Alma now assumes a paternal air.

Bro. James Lang has moved to 160, 88th street.

Sr. Dottie Logan is north in the forests of Michigan with her husband hunting. She will likely learn tactics enough to "present arms." By the way, Dottie is a dead shot either for bear or burglars.

Bro. Walter Dudley, of Farwell, Michigan, has been to the city seeking medical aid.

Sr. Ada Gudworth is sojourning at Crystal Lake for a season, accompanied by Sr. Mamie Pitt.

Two spoils of ringing the matrimonial bells on the South side recently. Don't know the particulars so can't tell all just now.

Bro. and Sr. Penny, who have been to Wisconsin with their sick babe, have now returned minus the little one. Death as usual "loves a shining mark." Sr. Penny has been confined to the house with sickness, Srs. Mabel Sanderson and Deam taking the part of the good Samaritan.

Bro. Sheehy today spent a few hours in an interview with some Persians who have come to the west in the interest of a new religion. He is to go again to continue the interview, and may say something relative to it later.

The weather is very warm, almost like summer; we have had two or three light frosts, but it is so dry they did but little damage.

Bro. and Sr. A. E. Tabor, of Wray, were in the city Sunday, the 16th, on their return home from California.

Sr. Stubbart, of Lamoni, and Sr. Williams, of Lucas, Iowa, are sojourning in the city.

We learn by letter from Bro. Frank Curtis to Bro. Roush that Elder C. R. Duncan is very low and unless the power of God intervenes his days are few.

Sr. J. Floy Lewis is attending the Boulder University.

Sr. Myrtle Hamlin fell from her wheel on Thursday and sustained a fractured shoulder.

Memorial services were held in the church Thursday for the late president, Wm. McKinley.

Elder Joseph Luff came in Saturday morning from Salt Lake, and was the speaker at the church Sunday morning and evening.

A very interesting program was rendered by the Religio Sunday evening.

Beautiful weather, even in smoky old St. Louis, as some call us.

All of us mourned the past week, because of our departed president. The special service Thursday afternoon, which was very largely attended, is spoken of as being replete with two splendid sermons, by Bro. F. A. Smith and R. Archibald. Sunday morning service also, of the 15th, which was reported by Bro. Archibald, was in commemoration of the president, touching also on law and order.

Sunday School service yesterday was largely a review, in charge of Sr. Florence Burgess; as usual, her effort was a splendid one, and some strong deductions were gathered as we passed from lesson to lesson. There were a number of scholars participating, who also deserve a word of praise.

Bro. A. Burgess, assistant Sunday School superintendent, has returned from his protracted visit in the west.

Bro. F. A. Smith was our speaker, both services yesterday.

Appointments yesterday: J. Christenson, Oak Hill, evening service; R. Archibald at Cheltenham, evening; Bro. Gordon Smith at Belleville.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at "Druid's Temple," Cor. 14th and Folsom Sts. Sunday School 9:45 a. m.; preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sacrament meeting on first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

We are to have no services in this city for nearly two weeks, so that all can attend the reunion of the Northern and Central districts of California, now being held at Busbrod Park, Oakland.

The meetings, commenced there Friday, August 30th, and was a grand success from the beginning. Your correspondent was there Sundays only, but found everybody happy and rejoicing. There was prayer meeting at 10 a. m., during which thirty-six testimonies were given, two prayers offered and ten hymns sung. There was also one tongue and one prophesy. One child was blessed by Bro. Joseph and Alexander Smith.

Services are held every day at 9 and 11 a. m., and 2:30 and 7:45 p. m. The tent is always well filled; many strangers are present. There are forty tents on the ground, and about four hundred people in attendance.

The expenses of the reunion were about one hundred dollars, and the large tent one hundred more. We have bought the tent, and raised enough money to pay all the expense and pay for the tent, and had a surplus—which, on motion, was divided among the missionaries present.

Preaching was done by Pres. Joseph Smith, Alex. H. Smith, Joseph Luff, Joseph F. Burton, Elders Keeler, Blair, Phillips, Gilbert, Saxe and Schmidt.

Beside the above we saw on the grounds Elders Bishop C. A. Parkin, Chas. J. Kaighn, John Carmichael, Henry Burgess, Thos. Daley, Albert Haws, Jas. Parr, J. B. Price, J. A. Anthony, Gilbert, Wyatt, Lawn, Willey and others, also a number of priests, teachers and deacons.

Three were baptized and two children blessed. It was the best reunion the writer has attended for a long time, and much good was done for the cause and our fellowmen. The weather was fine throughout. September 9.

LATER.—Thursday, the 12th, President Joseph Smith left us, he was suddenly called home. Many of his appointments had to go unfulfilled on account of his hasty homegoing. Elder Joseph Luff accompanied him as far as Utah.

Sunday morning, the 15th, there was a good attendance at 9:45 at the Sunday School service. At 11 a. m. we had preaching by Elder Gilbert, and at 7:45 p. m. by Joseph Burton. These were their farewell sermons, as their departure for the Islands is near.

Bro. Fred B. Blair has gone to Modoc county.

We had a fine prayer meeting, with full attendance, last night at the residence of Bro. J. A. Saxe. All the missionaries to the Islands were there, Bro. Alexander Smith, and his shad. ow, Bro. Gould, Bro. and Sr. Jos. F. Burton, and Bro. and Sr. Gilbert; we also noticed Sr. Keeler present. It was a sweetly sad meeting, many feeling remarks were made touching the early departure of those made dear to us by gospel bonds, on their mission of love to those so far away, and prayers were offered for their well-being and safe return.

Today at 10 o'clock we met at wharf, and boarded the "Australia," to bid them a last good-by. Quite a number of the Oakland and San Francisco Saints were present; we counted forty-five of them. We had the pleasure of seeing the cosy little dining room, and also the sleeping apartments. They will have plenty room, as the vessel is very large, and we learned that there were only forty-three passengers.

When the whistle blew we all went ashore, and standing near the end of the wharf, watched the vessel, with its precious load, sail grandly out of sight, and the waving of handkerchiefs pass from view. With a silent prayer for their safety we turned our faces homeward. They have gone. May God's Holy Spirit accompany them.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

E. E. PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 5.

Editor Ensign—The Pittsburg district conference convened at Fayette City last Saturday and Sunday. Representatives from nearly all the branches were present, making in all quite a nice gathering. Through the kindness of the trustees of the Methodist church we were permitted to hold our conference in their church, so that we had plenty of room and in a good location.

The weather was fine, and every one seemed to bring the good Spirit with them. We had our Sunday School convention Saturday morning from 10:30 till 12. Conference convened at 2:30 and business session lasted till 5 o'clock; good order and harmony prevailed. Elder Perrie was elected vice president of the district, all the other officers were sustained. The Banning branch, which has been reported in a dead condition for some time, was declared disorganized, and the members requested to unite with the Fayette City branch. In the evening Elder Maxon preached, assisted by Elder Rush. Sunday morning, Sunday School in charge of the officers of the association. As an experiment, we formed all, both old and young, into one large class in the Primary grade, and taught them all as though they were "little tots" from the Primary Quarterly. It was pronounced a success.

The preaching services were well attended morning and evening, especially the evening service, and the best of interest manifested. Directly after the morning service two young ladies were led into the waters of baptism. These were confirmed at the afternoon sacrament service amid the melting influence of God's Spirit, which seemed to pervade the entire room, making the "new birth" complete.

We had some visitors from West Virginia, among them Elder Thomas Downs, of the Bickerton organization. He seemed delighted with the meetings, and Monday morning offered himself for baptism. At his confirmation we had another glorious meeting, thought by some to be the best of all. Several were administered to, and all felt comforted and blessed. Bro. Downs is highly spoken of by those who know him, and the Spirit seemed to indicate that he would become a useful member in the church if faithful. We trust such may be the case.

The Saints of Fayette City are very warm hearted and hospitable. Everybody was made welcome; and when the time of departure came, we all realized that we were parting from true friends as well as brethren and sisters in Christ. May the good Spirit ever be theirs, and keep them faithful. They too are thinking of building a church. They have their lot nearly paid for; it is nicely located. They hope to have their building erected next year.

Monday evening found us back to our rooms in Pittsburg to take up the work again in this city where we left it over two weeks ago. Our first thought was of our new church which our friends will be pleased to learn is in process of erection, we having let the contract at a very reasonable figure over a week ago. The building is to be of pressed buff brick, 34x44 feet. The main auditorium will be 32x32 feet inside measurement. There will be a lecture room, entered by a side door, in which to hold prayer meetings, 10x20 ft. A sliding partition separates this room from the auditorium, so that in case of a large gathering we can throw the two rooms into one. The baptistry is located in front of the pulpit, the cover of which slides under the pulpit platform, when open. Two dressing rooms are in close connection with baptistry, also having sliding partitions, so that they can be thrown into one if needed. There are also two toilet rooms. The front doors are in the corner of the building, these open into a small vestibule, with swinging doors leading into the auditorium. The pulpit is located in the opposite or further corner from the entrance, on a large circular platform, on which the choir will be seated back of the pulpit. The seatings will be circular in form to match the circular platform, which gives the interior a very pleasing effect. The plans are quite original, and give general satisfaction.

The Pittsburg Saints have had to meet many discouragements in this enterprise, but through it all the Lord's hand has been manifest, and now it really seems as though success was about to crown their efforts. Of course it will require work, and no little sacrifice, to meet the expense of this undertaking, but as the Lord has raised up friends in the past to enable the work to be carried on thus far, we have confidence that if wisdom is exercised, we shall not lack what is needed to finish the work. Should any feel to give us a helping hand it will be gratefully received if ever so little.

We cannot boast of any great progress made in this city so far as making converts is concerned; nor do we expect to under present circumstances. But we do hope to see some progress in that direction when we are able to occupy our new church. We are glad to say, however, that a good spirit prevails among the members, and in this respect we think substantial progress is being made.

Sickness has been an unwelcome guest in our midst of late. I was called to administer to no less than six, yesterday. Among which was our right hand assistant, Bro. Harry Thomas, who had to be assisted home from his work yesterday afternoon. He has been poorly for several weeks. We trust the Lord will raise him up. Bro. Barrett, another faithful branch worker, has been confined to his home several days. We trust he may have received the blessing through administration. Sr. Lewis has also been very poorly, but we learn is getting better.

If Master Stanton Fairley should seem to act a little important, it can easily be accounted for in the fact that a little baby brother has arrived at his home.

In this city cooler weather is welcome. Business is very brisk. Prices high, houses to rent scarce. Everybody busy. The building boom something immense.

Still hopeful.

Editor Ensign—Having never contributed anything to your interesting columns, I will inform you about the work in this part of the Lord's vineyard. We have a nice little Sunday School, and all are seemingly interested in the work. We meet at different places to hold our services. Last Sunday we had sacrament and prayer meeting, and had a pleasant and profitable waiting before the Lord, that spirit of humility being manifested by all who took part in the services.

We have had some good preaching here by Bro. Peter Anderson, D. C. White and F. L. Sawley, and while we haven't seen any immediate results, we know that a great deal of prejudice was removed and they have found out that we were never associated with "Utah Mormonism," which we have unjustly suffered from for so long. A very devout christian (?) lady rumored it around that our worthy brother, Elder Peter Anderson had seven wives and that was why he was "going all the time." Paul, it seems, was "going" all the time also, and it is generally conceded that he didn't have any. Bro. Anderson preached on the difference between us and the Salt Lake people, removing certain objections raised against us, to the satisfaction of all present, and clearly and intelligently exposed Utahism which has been, and is now a stigma against religion and a stench in the nostrils of decency.

We regretted very much to see the brethren go away, but they had to meet other points in which to present the message of the angel, the everlasting gospel, which should be good news to all people. The more I see of sectarianism and faulty creeds, the more I am convinced of the divinity of this "marvelous work and a wonder," that the "unlearned man" told the truth when he announced to the world that their creeds were "all wrong," and sectarianism is fulfilling his words every day.

Since I have come into the church I have praised God for the light that has been revealed to me upon matters that troubled me; and the promise is to them that obey him and keep his commandments, "The path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." "If I walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." These "exceeding great and precious promises" are for us; shall we profit by them?

I thank God for the gospel of Jesus Christ, which points out our duty to God and man, and creates within us a desire to be more and more like the Master. May the characteristics of the Son of God be exemplified in our daily lives, and may our motto ever be "Onward to Victory," is the prayer of your brother in the true gospel.

Editor Ensign—As you do not often hear from me missionary in this part of the district, just dot you a line. Since the drought has been broken by the recent rains and the weather is somewhat cooler, it is a good time for the missionary to be about his Father's business. The writer visited the Saints at Walker where he found a lively little band of devoted Saints. I preached several nights with good liberty and fine interest by the Saints, but must confess the attendance from the world was not what it might have been.

Taking my departure from Walker, I went to Nevada, the county seat of Vernon county, Missouri. There is a nice little branch of Saints located there; they have rented the Baptist church and have recently moved in where your missionary had the privilege of preaching the first sermon to the Saints. They have a nice Sunday School of which our young Bro. Keck is superintendent, and all feel happy in their new home. I spent a few days visiting with the Saints and administering to sick. The Saints are alive to the work and don't forget an elder's needs when he leaves. They expect a protracted meeting or effort soon, but they need big guns, say about 240 pounds avoirdupois.

Leaving Nevada I took my journey to Ft. Scott, where the Lebanon branch is located, and where I am holding forth at this writing. Yesterday led two precious souls into the water and buried them with their Lord and Master in baptism, so you see the good work goes on. Now, brethren missionaries, this is the time to work. I see lots of fields now white to harvest, so let us thrust in our sickles and reap. Hoping all will lend a helping hand to the mission, and carry the work along, I remain, Your brother and collaborer in the gospel.

THE LIVING GOD.

W. H. DEAM.

So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.—Gen. 1: 27.

In the foregoing text we learn something of the form of the Creator of all things; and by viewing a perfect human being in physique we see a likeness of God. By reading the whole chapter we may learn of the wonderful works of God in creating the worlds and establishing a perfect system of laws to control them. In bringing form and system out of chaos and disorder in the realms of unbounded space, shows Him to be a Being having power, thought, intelligence and action, unlimited and incomprehensible to the human mind. The sacred record throughout describes God as a being with body (in whose likeness man is made) having parts and passions, a living entity, and not simply a force in the higher laws which govern the universe.

Not only do we learn of God's power and intelligence, but that he could condescend to talk to man, that he gave commands, instruction and warnings, and through His power miracles were wrought in the raising of the dead to life, healing the sick, and the substitution of fixed laws, examples of which are cited in the cases of the sun and moon standing still, and the dividing of the waters of the Red Sea.

Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, D. D., in The People's Bible History, under caption "The Red Sea," says:

"Wonderful as is the weakness of humanity, it is never quite so wonderful as the strength of God."

In the same book Rev. R. S. McArthur, D. D., under caption "Standing Still of Sun and Moon," gives place to these utterances:

"Was it a stupendous miracle, or can it be otherwise explained in harmony with the narrative? That God could perform a miracle, however great, we do not for a moment doubt. We place no limit whatever to his power. * * * We do not hesitate to say that God could make the clock of the universe stop without jarring the mechanism, by introducing laws now unknown to us. * * * God holds the waters in the hollow of his hand; he metes out the heavens with a span. He could certainly arrest the progress of a great universe, though it were ten thousand times greater than it is. Man can stop, in harmony with his own laws, a machine vastly greater than himself. Can not the Creator stop, by the introduction of higher laws, the machine which he has set in motion?"

The testimony of leading divines, and religionists in general, agree that God was a reality, a powerful living God in ages past. But we ask how about him today? Is he dead? If so, when did he die? Or, if alive, is he decrepit and powerless, having finished his work thousands of years ago? Or, is he agile, but indifferent or unwilling? These are pertinent questions on the character of God. Unless we assume he is a living God, the same in every respect as in ages past, we must be prepared to defend contradictions and inconsistencies and make more room for infidelity and Bible criticism.

Moses, Aaron, Nadab, Abihu and seventy of the elders saw God, as recorded in, the 24th chapter of Exodus. In the 5th verse of the 34th chapter we learn that the Lord descended in a cloud and stood with Moses. In the 89th Psalm we read that the Lord is everywhere; in Psalms 23: 6, that he is enduring; Deuteronomy 33: 27, that he is eternal; Psalms 104: 31, that his glory shall endure forever; Acts 17: 27, that he is not far from any one of us; Proverbs 15: 3, that "The eyes of the Lord are in every place beholding the evil and the good;" Job 28: 24, that he "looketh to the ends of the earth and seeth under the whole heaven."

A great throng of witnesses can be cited, all agreeing concerning God's character, his power and activity, which, as recorded, were made manifest from time to time. Christians profess to believe all this. The incidents recorded in the Bible transpired thousands of years ago, and there is not a single living witness who can verify them, unless it is corroborated by God's power being manifested today. If the skeptic asks why God's power is not in evidence today, he receives the answer that spiritual manifestations are no longer needed, and, consequently, are done away. Indeed! Was that the arrangement God made? Has He ever said that He would, up to a certain time, show his power in miracles, and bless his people, and converse with them, and answer their petitions, and then he would become deaf, close down the windows of His soul and say, "You do not need me any more?"

The skeptic could say consistently, That cannot be so, for we read in Malachi 3: 6 these words, "For I am the Lord, I change not," and that would make him out untrue; and in the 14th and 15th verses of the 3d chapter of Ecclesiastes we read:

"I know that whatsoever God doeth it shall be forever: Nothing can be put to it; and God doeth it that man should fear before Him. That which has been is now and that which is to be has already been, and God requireth that which is past."

Also in James 1: 17, is another evidence that God was to continue the same, for there we read:

"Every good gift and perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

The testimony of the Bible is that God should continue the same, and we are not warranted in believing he should diminish in power, might or dominion; but modern theology assumes that he has changed. Who are we going to believe, God and the Bible, or man? We are told that God's power is no longer needed. Does not the poor soul groping in darkness and unbelief need some evidence of God's power? Do not the sick, the lame, the halt, the blind, need some evidence of God's power? Do not those in abject poverty and distress need some evidence of the God's power to cheer them and give them hope and smooth out the rugged road they are compelled to tread?

We assume that God has not changed. It is the people who have changed. God has not left them, but they have left him and have forgotten him, as he tells them in Jeremiah 13: 25.

"This is thy lot, the portion of thy measures from me, saith the Lord; because thou hast forgotten me and trusted in falsehood."

Again in the 18th chapter and 15th verse he says:

"Because my people have forgotten me they have burned incense to vanity and they have caused them to stumble in their ways from the ancient paths, to walk in paths in a way not cast up."

If the Lord should speak today could he not consistently reiterate the foregoing quotation?

Apropos to this let us see what David, in Psalms 77: 9, says:

"Hath God forgotten to be gracious? Hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies?"

In the 14th verse he seems to answer his own question in this wise:

"Thou art the God that doest wonders; thou hast declared thy strength among the people."

If David was on earth today would he think God had lost his strength and ceased to be a God of wonders? No, he would not, because he would read in Isaiah 40: 28 that the "Everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is he weary."

We learn from the Bible that God is just, gracious, does wonder, shows his strength, is not variable, neither hath he the shadow of turning, and that he does not faint nor get weary. On the other hand there is in the people just exactly the reverse of these conditions. We find man unjust, ungracious, weak, variable and constantly turning. Man has changed to such an extent that he says he no longer needs God. He prays with no idea that God will answer or give him what he asks for, but simply to bring himself near to God (in feeling). Is not that the popular idea of prayer? We are told that spiritual manifestations are no longer needed, and the only reason assigned is that man's wisdom is so great that he does not need God. It may not be told just in that way, but that is the meaning. When man becomes so independent of God it is quite reasonable to suppose that God would not give him what he is unwilling to receive.

We are told in regard to the manifestation of God's power that it is all done away, and God is only given credit for that which comes through the regular course of nature, and which the skeptic can easily attribute to natural causes 'without any intervention of providence; as, for instance, a refreshing rain on the parched earth as a God-send, or a bountiful year. It is a sort of white-washed infidelity in regard to God's power. Did God ever say he would do away with his power? No, but man has simply crowded God out. The only reason assigned why God's power is not manifested is because it is not needed, and that such belonged to Bible times, and that it ceased with the apostles.

Who is responsible for Robert G. Ingersoll's boast, wherein he said:

"I have lived to see the majority of men and women of intellect in the United States on my side. I have lived to see the church deny her creed. I have lived to see ministers apologize in public for what they preached, and a great and glorious work is going on."

Inconsistencies in modern theology made Ingersoll what he was, and theologians are responsible for his "great and glorious work" by dethroning God and taking away his power.

As substantiating this statement I quote from Rev. R. A. Torrey, as published in the Chicago News, for November 24, 1900, as follows:

"Look, for example, at the ministry. Many of us who are professedly orthodox ministers are practically infidels. That is plain speech, but it is also indisputable fact. There is no essential difference between the teachings of 'Tom' Paine and 'Bob' Ingersoll and the teachings of some of our theological professors. The latter are not so blunt and honest about it. They phrase it in more elegant and studied sentences, but it means the same. Much of the so-called new learning and higher criticism is simply 'Tom' Paine infidelity sugar coated. * * * And look at the doctrinal state of the church. Many do not believe in the whole Bible. The book of Genesis is a myth, Jonah is an allegory, and even the miracles of the Son of God are questioned. The doctrine of prayer is old fashioned. Confession is unnecessary and hell is no longer believed in."

Rev. Torrey blames the ministry for the spiritual dearth and "sugar-coated" infidelity. How many prayers uttered in the pulpits of the fashionable churches have any genuine spirituality in them? How many such prayers are free from hypocrisy? How many of the authors of such prayers believe it is possible to get what they are asking for? For all the good such prayers do they might just as well be directed to the heathen's god of wood or stone. In fact the heathen's god is more of a reality than the "sugar-coated" infidel god. Such professors of God are like, if not worse, than the scribes and Pharisees, to whom Christ, as recorded in the 15th chapter of Matthew, quotes that it is all done away, and God is only given credit for that which comes through the regular course of nature, and which the skeptic can easily attribute to natural causes 'without any intervention of providence; as, for instance, a refreshing rain on the parched earth as a God-send, or a bountiful year. Sometimes the disciples healed the sick, and even raised some from the dead, but they did not heal every one. Neither did the Lord always have the best of success. In Mark 6: 4, 5, we read that Christ could do no mighty works at that time, and the reason given is that he was without honor in his own country, because there they had known him from childhood, and perhaps he was not looked upon as anyone extraordinary—simply the son of Joseph and Mary. No doubt he realized that, and felt his weakness from a human standpoint, for, while he was the Son of God, he was born of the flesh.

If God can not, or will not, hear and answer prayer, what do we pray for? If God hears not prayer and does not make his power felt in temporalities, what a farce it is for the president of the United States to issue a proclamation every year requesting the people to give thanks to "Almighty God" for the manifold temporal blessings received. If God thus showers blessings and will receive thanks for them, why should it be thought strange that he should send a blessing, when implored to do so by his faithful, trusting children, through the very means he has established? If there was ever a living God there is one today; but the children of men have departed from him. God changes not, as is stated in the beautiful hymn by Wm. H. Monk, the first two verses of which are as follows:

Abide with me, Fast falls the evening,
The darkness deepens—Lord with me abide!
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Of the helpless, oh, abide with me!
Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day,
Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away;
Change and decay in all around I see,
O Thou who changest not, abide with me!

It is possible the Holy Spirit indicted these words, "Change and decay in all around I see." Indeed! change in man, in every thing, but God. As this poet says, he "changes not." Reader, do you believe there is a living, unchangeable God? Search the Scriptures and satisfy yourself, then find a church that has the principles, ordinances and blessings corresponding with what you find in that record. If you search God will show you the way. He will lead you on if you follow in faith and prayer.

SIGHTS AND INCIDENTS.

Editors Ensign.—Thinking it might be of interest to some of your readers to have some items of our trip to this foreign shore, will endeavor to furnish you with a few.

Bidding farewell to quite a large number of friends who had gathered at the depot at Lamon, on the evening of July 8th, we boarded the train at 8 o'clock p. m., and started on our long journey. Was accompanied as far as Kirtland, Ohio, by Sr. W. H. Kelley and little daughter Louisa. Arriving in Kirtland the forenoon of the 10th, the remainder of the day was spent in resting, visiting with friends, and renewing old acquaintances, many with whom we had not met since moving out from among them in the year 1891, and the meeting with them brought to our recollection the scenes of other days when they had sympathized with us in our griefs, or perhaps enjoyed the same pleasures with us.

We met with the Saints in the temple for prayer meeting in the evening. The next morning after bidding good-by to friends, once more we pursued our journey. After visiting the Pan American in Buffalo, and a ride to Albany where we took the boat for New York, on the Hudson river, we arrived in Brooklyn, and enjoyed the hospitality extended to us by Bro. Joseph Squires Sr., and family, attending Sunday School and meetings with them on Sunday. Quite a number of Saints here sent messages and best wishes by us to some friend in England.

Monday, the 15th, went to New York and on to New Canaan. Through the kindness of Bro. Stone and wife we were kindly cared for and taken by horse and carriage to Scott's Corners, where Bro. U. W. Greene and D. A. Anderson, with their wives, were holding tent meetings. After enjoying the scenery, the meeting, and a cordial handshaking with friends we returned to New York accompanied by Sr. Roxana Anderson—who by the way was a very good representative from Lamon to wave adieus to us as we were leaving Boston Harbor. When her handkerchief began to seem too small to be seen, I noticed her jacket was brought into use as a good-by signal.

On the evening of the 16th inst. we, with Sr. Anderson, sailed from New York for Providence, Rhode Island, on a very pleasant little boat, the Massachusetts. About twelve o'clock we were awakened by the danger signals, fog horns, and the hurried orders of the captain of our boat to his crew, so Bro. Kelley dressed and went out on deck. We could see the men lowering the lifeboat, and lights from other vessels all around us, and soon learned that there had been an accident. The steam yacht Wild Duck had disabled the Trenton, and the Massachusetts, along with some others, were taking care of her passengers. The next morning when we were almost ready to land, I heard Sr. Roxana say, "Oh, Sr. Kelley, I feel so sick!" and another lady out in the cabin did not need to tell me how she felt, I heard sufficient to know that, and the steward gathering up the poor woman's baggage singing "I'll never live to see my mother," made things look so dubious to me that I decided to stay in my berth till the boat stopped, and so I did.

After landing we soon found our way to the place where our general friends, Bro. and Sr. M. H. Bond, reside, who cordially bid us welcome, and after a few minutes' conversation, were in company with them on our way to Newport. About 1 o'clock p.

m. partook of one of those famous shore dinners so famous among New Englanders. After taking a long ride, viewing those fine summer cottages (mansions) we returned to Providence by boat in time for prayer meeting. The next day, the 18th, we visited the old historical town of Plymouth, Massachusetts, then on to Silver Lake where we had a short but pleasant visit with Brn. Myron and E. H. Fisher, and their congenial wives, who were there taking their summer outing; then on to Boston that evening so as to be ready to receive and answer letters the next day, and make ready for sailing the following day.

We felt thankful indeed that we had the company of so many as four friends, Brn. Bond, Bulard, Busiel and Sr. Anderson, who could accompany us to the wharf and see us embark, and was much pleased to see them get aboard the tug Confidence which accompanied the Saxonía to the outer lights. At first there were three tugs helping the Saxonía move out from the wharf, when suddenly one let go and went hurrying back, then came out again, and went around the other side from where it had been. I wondered what it could mean. I could see anxiety depicted in Roxana's countenance. Presently a gang plank was laid across from the little tug to the entrance of the Saxonía, and a lady with a little girl and a number of bundles was helped on board, and evidently there was a passenger "on board" who had been left behind. In conversation with the lady a few days after I asked if it was true that her mother was on board. She replied with true Irish accent, "Och no, I jost told them that so they would bring me out in the toog." Whatever may be the criticism the lady seems to have wittily galled her point. Here let me mention the fact that Bro. Muceus, the missionary to Norway, and wife, were very companionable associates on our journey. We were with them about three weeks.

The voyage was all that could be expected or even hoped for. Everything for comfort seemed to be at our command. Kind attendants, plenty of nice food, smooth sailing, except a little rough one day, of which I will mention later on. We spent all the time Saturday afternoon on deck. Sighted a whale in the evening. Most of Sunday and Monday forenoon was spent on deck, but just here let me draw the curtain a few minutes. Seasickness got the upperhand of me for a short time, and I spent the afternoon in my stateroom. Tuesday felt much better, but preferred my meals brought to my room. Got out on deck again and everything went along nicely. Attended the concerts given by the passengers on board, and some of the music was very fine indeed. The voyage was uneventful, or rather one pleasant day after another. Sometimes the fog horn would break the monotony by its doleful notes, pleasant enough, however, when we think of the reason for which it is sounded.

Saturday, the 27th, the wind blew and the sea was somewhat rough. I went on deck for a walk in the morning, but only stayed a short time when Sr. Muceus and I decided that the state room was the best place for us. We were not alone in our misery this time either, as Bro. Kelley and Bro. Muceus had to succumb to the unpleasant sensations of seasickness for a short time that evening. Like Adam of old they seemed inclined to say it was the fault of the woman, E. L. thinking it was enough to upset any one to wait upon a seasick person; and Bro. Muceus thought if his wife had not had so many errands for him to do and he could have got to bed sooner he would have been all right.

Sunday, the 28th, was a beautiful day, and we spent most of the time on deck viewing the rocky coast of the "Emerald Isle." Sighted Queenstown about 4 p. m., when all passengers for that place, our friend from Cork among the number, went on board the tug or tender, which carries them to the wharf. That evening our bill of fare at supper time read, fresh fish and new potatoes from Queenstown, and they were fine.

Monday, the 29th, we landed in Liverpool, after a voyage of something over eight days. Was soon done with having our baggage examined by the custom officers, and on our way to Manchester, taking our first ride in an European railway train. It is only forty minutes ride from Liverpool to Manchester.

We reached Bro. Joseph Dewsnup's residence Monday forenoon, and were kindly received and cared for by Sr. Dewsnup, Bro. D. being at his place at that hour, but came later on. We took dinner with them and enjoyed their hospitality till in the afternoon when we were shown by Bro. Dewsnup to Sr. Clark's where we, with Bro. Muceus and wife, were to make our stopping place during our stay in Manchester. A very comfortable abiding place by the way, with Bro. Clark, Bro. and Sr. Green, Marion and little Lucy to help Sr. Clark keep things lively.

Monday evening attended a baptism. Four persons were baptized by Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Sr. Brn. J. W. Rushton and G. T. Griffiths arriving in Manchester to attend the Mission conference were also domiciled at Sr. Clark's and counted as members of the household.

The conference convened on Saturday, August 3d, with a good number in attendance and a good spirit which was maintained throughout the entire session. All seemed to feel they had enjoyed a time of refreshing and were willing to work with renewed zeal and energy in the Master's cause. Here we met with Bro. Ernest Downsup who, as will be remembered by a great many in America, was president of Graceland College for a time. He was looking well and is engaged in educational work in one of the large colleges in England.

Leaving Manchester on Saturday, the 10th, we arrived in Birmingham at 5 p. m., and were met at the station by Bro. and Sr. Meredith and Bro. Thomas Taylor. After tea they took us a long ride on the cable cars to a comparatively new and elevated part of the city called Answorth, and back, then through the Arcades and market house. One would think it some great holiday judging from the number of people on the street, but it was only an ordinary Saturday evening with them.

Attended meetings three times on Sunday, also Monday and Tuesday evenings. Monday visited Stratford-on-Avon, the old home of Shakespeare. Tuesday forenoon, through the kindness of Bro. Meredith we were shown through the Council House, the committee rooms, Lord Mayor's parlor, reception and banquet rooms, council chamber, private tea or lunch room, smoking room, library, etc. Also public library and reading rooms, and art gallery of the city. In the afternoon Bro. Taylor took us a drive through Canon Hill Park, and later on he and Mr. Roberts, his son-in-law, showed us the new and model village of Bournsville, and in connection therewith an almshouse, established by the benefactor of the town, Mr. Richard Cadbury.

The peculiar feature of this part of the city consists in the fact that all the buildings are put up under the management of trustees who are authorized to lay out the funds. One sixth of an acre of ground is allotted to each building. All are tenanted at a reasonable rental, and while the buildings are of different styles and models so as to present a pleasing variety, yet, all are put up in a substantial and pleasing manner, and we were told that they were only let to good tenants who would care for them as their own property, a fact also which appearances confirmed. Tenants are permitted to purchase the property in time under rules which require them to be kept up in a proper way, and not to change any general features of it without consent of the trustees of the building fund.

Wednesday noon we left for London, feeling that we had been royally entertained and made welcome in Birmingham as well as Manchester. Arriving in London at 4 p. m. we were met at station by Bro. Griffiths who had preceded us the day before. While in London we are stopping with Bro. Thomas Bradshaw and wife, who have furnished a home and transient stopping place for the Saints for many years. Have attended four meetings and Sabbath School here, and expect to attend another meeting tonight. We are trying to get the benefit of some places of interest while here in this, the world's metropolis, but will not try to write London up in one day.

Expect to leave here for Glasgow, Scotland, soon, but all mail addressed to 125 Stockport Road, Ardwick, Manchester, England, will reach us.

Yours in bonds,
CASSIE B. KELLEY.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

When the news flashed over the wires Friday p. m. that President McKinley was shot while in Buffalo, a wave of indignation swept o'er the nation, and the question on every lip was, "who is the assassin?" Czolgosz (pronounced Sbolgosz), an anarchist, meaning a species of insanity, was the guilty man. This fair land has no room for such men. If they are inspired by anarchy, they should be banished; if insane, they should be locked up. We do not think that this attempt at assassination was made against McKinley as an individual, but the impulse that fired the shot came from the spirit of hatred against the government, law and order that he represented. The home life of McKinley is an ideal one in which the great heart of a great man displayed a tender and loving side, which has won the heart of the true man—and who is worthy of every confidence at home and abroad.

We are holding a series of meetings here (Lima) in company with Bro. W. A. McDowell, district president of Southern Wisconsin. Bro. W. P. Robinson, our former and genial companion, is at his pleasant home in Oregon for a week, to enjoy a rest. It is pleasant indeed to enjoy a rest with Saints whose lives are pure, where loving thoughts and words are the rule and not the exception.

LATER.—Sad, sad indeed, a great sorrow is upon us and a nation is in tears. A great ruler of a great nation is dead; he has passed into another realm which no human eye can penetrate, into the light of a great eternity. He died bravely, without fear to face the future or his God; he has gone where men will be judged with justice, where there is no anarchy, but where the divine law of eternal peace rules supreme. The Christ was never more nearly reflected than in his words, referring to the assassin, "Do not harm him." "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." "God's will, not ours, be done" is reflected—"Thy will and not mine be done, and as he neared the other shore of the mystic river, there came back to the strained ears the joyful landing, "Nearer my God to Thee."

A grand man in peace, a man serene in war, and supremely triumphant in death, who in dying proved himself as great a hero as any whose name illumines the pages of history. May he rest in peace.

In last week's "Jots" the statement of tobacco yielding $20 to $21 per acre should have been 20 to 21 hundred lbs. per acre.

DOWIE'S METHODS.

The truthfulness of Bro. Chatburn's statement in regard to the "doctoring" of Dowie's sermons before they appear in the Leaves of Healing, I am prepared to testify to from a personal knowledge. About six months ago I worked in the Zion printing office for a short while, and know whereof I speak. These sermons are nicely prepared in typewriting by the stenographers, no doubt just as they fall from Dowie's lips. The compositors set them up and the proofs are read and corrected according to the typewritten copy. Then another set of proofs are taken and sent to the doctor. The proofs are taken with very large margins so as to give ample space to cut out and fill in, and these margins are filled in with changes—parts cut out and others supplied, in many instances the sense and meaning changed entirely. The workmen told me that sometimes the changes were much greater than the ones I saw and corrected.

People who read the newspaper reports, and then see the sermons in the Leaves, naturally think the newspapers have misrepresented them. On one of my proofs there was a tirade against the man whose wife staid at home on Sunday to cook a hot dinner for his "filthy belly," and in it he stated that he had kept house some thirty years and that he had never had a hot dinner on Sunday. In the proof he put it that he had never "ordered a hot dinner" on Sunday. I thought I had also had many hot Sunday dinners and had never yet "ordered" one.

I have understood that there are advertising men in the large cities who are paid ten or fifteen thousand dollars a year for writing advertisements. I doubt if any of them can distance Dowie in effectiveness. He has it down fine. Every sermon, every publication, every article, and, I might say, every sentence, is an advertisement. Every sentence or a full stop is displayed in a paragraph, and there is never a parenthetical or long sentence. They are simply short outbursts of extravagant speech, with little or no refinement, but coarse, and approaching vulgarity. The whole system is advertising, advertising, advertising, not the gift of the Son of God and man's salvation through Him, but Dowieism, healing, tithing, the building up of Zion, and all to enrich and lift up the self-styled Elijah.

Dowie is the responsible party in all the business affairs, nothing being incorporated as a society. Zion Steamship Company, the printing office, bank, and all have to have John Alex. Dowie attached to or under the name, showing he is the one responsible, and actually the owner. The same with Zion City. Lots are paid for, but if I am correctly informed, no one can own one. Dowie cinches every thing. He is one of the best financiers the world has ever seen, and I doubt if any mercantile firm ever did as systematic and effectual advertising as he has done in building up his hierarchy. He is worth millions of dollars and is classed among the millionaires of the United States. Advertising has done it—advertising healing. It may be the Latter Day Saints do not advertise enough, but Christ told those he healed to go their way, and tell no one. But the difference between Christ and Dowie is that there is a profit in it for the latter, and the former was not here for financial gain and earthly glory. I think Bro. Chatburn hit straight and true. W. H. DEAM.

OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS. DAUGHTERS OF ZION Mrs. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

A Few Observations.

"If I should become the mother of seventeen children," said a young woman to me not long ago, "I would never saddle the care of the younger ones upon the shoulders of the eldest girl." I can say amen to the above remark. Many times have I looked upon little faces and noted the expression of care, yes, also the little creases upon the brow. Have seen very young children wearing this look of care. Again have seen a mother send a child of six off to play with and care for one of a year old, or a little over, doing the same thing daily, and evil was the result.

Mothers, be watchful over these little souls given you to nourish and train; you will be held responsible for faults acquired which mar and deform the beautiful soul over which you are granted the stewardship. I have never liked to hear the expression, "little old woman," as a rule it means old beyond its years.

If mothers get tired of constantly caring for little ones, what can they be thinking of to thrust upon the shoulders of a diminutive maiden of six the care of two selfish, fractious and altogether aggravating boys, of two and four? Still I have seen that done.

Another thing I wish to call attention to is, children, great or small, should never be given any thing they cry for; neither should the little ones be allowed to take the choice playthings of the older ones, and destroy them; each child should be taught to respect the rights and privileges of others.

Again, a mother should develop all sides of her child's nature: mental, moral and physical. A mother who would fill her child's mind with wisdom and his stomach with inferior food, is not so wise as the animals and birds. Entire wheat bread will produce a good mental and physical organism; why mix it with something that will retard the processes of nature?

It is a law of nature for the parent to teach the young how to take care of themselves, how to get food and drink, in fact, everything that is necessary for its sustenance.

Yours for truth, E. L. CHEDELL.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

FORGIVING OURSELF.

"We can forgive the one who injures us," said a wise student of human nature, "but the one whom we find it almost impossible to forgive is the one whom we have injured." We do not state the case in that way to ourselves; nevertheless it is true. There is nothing that will more surely incline us to dislike another than the knowledge that we have in some way wronged him. His acts, whatever they may be, take on unworthy motives to us. It is easy to believe any evil report concerning him. The sight of him awakens our animosity. Why? Because deep in the spirit, too deep for our conscious recognition of it, perhaps, lies a desire to justify myself to myself, and to prove that he deserved the treatment we have given him. For the one who has wronged us we may find excuses, but for the one whom we have even a secret suspicion of having wronged there is solace in finding condemnation. The sight of him makes us uncomfortable, his presence wounds our self-respect. We cannot forgive him for making it impossible to forgive ourselves.

"What has he ever done to you?" is the question commonly asked when an unexplained enemy manifests itself. A question we might more profitably ask ourselves would be: What have we ever done to him?

SIN.

BY MATTHEW D. BARCOCK, D. D.

Sin is unnatural, abnormal. Wrong means wrung; sin means wide of the mark; iniquity is inequity. Deformity, disfigurement, disgrace, all imply a falling away from the ideal. Jesus was natural. His life was the kind of life we were meant to live. He touched work and rest and play and thought and the outdoor world, friends and children, and sickness and trouble, and everything, in the divinely natural way. He was unsovereign only in sin. He could not be unnatural and cross his Father's good and holy will. He gave the naturalness, the supernaturalness, of his life to cure the unnaturalness of ours. He related himself to sin only to remove it and redeem us from its power, that God might again say "Very good" of all nature, and paradise be regained.

"Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl chain of all virtues."—Christian Moderation.

The Straight Edge People.

The "Straight Edge People" of New York, is a new social order, small but growing, who take the Golden Rule as the basis of their society. The object of the school is to practice communism, though they object to the application of this name. They have a small school of methods for the application of Jesus' teachings to business and society, the members of which have all interests in common—all their earnings go into a common fund, and no member makes or loses more than another. Mr. Copeland, the manager, says they hold that every dollar a man owns is a debt which he owes to society. Mr. Carnegie's and Mr. Rockefeller's wealth belongs not to them but to the community at large. Talking, thinking and writing, he says, are three forms of dissipation under the spell of which the human race has frittered away its heritage of power, and neglected the opportunities which Jesus pointed out. There is no heresy but the heresy of talking, thinking and writing, however correctly and beautifully, and then neglecting to apply the law of love to human activities. If a man says he loves God and does not prove it by loving acts to his neighbors—even his poorly dressed and disagreeable neighbors—"he is a liar and the truth is not in him." This society is carrying on several kinds of work which seems to be prospering, and the number of its membership is increasing.—St. Louis Christian Evangelist, August 9th.

To think well of one's self is not always a sign of weakness. We should never think so little of our abilities as to make it impossible for us to try to do a good work. Underrating one's capabilities for doing worthy deeds is, if anything, worse than to over rate them. In the one case the good would not be performed at all; in the other, while the effect may possibly be lessened, there is nevertheless good done.

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

BY THE GREAT SPECIALIST IN TREATING WEAK AND DISEASED HEARTS, FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B.

WILL SEND $3.50 WORTH OF HIS SPECIAL TREATMENT FREE AS A TRIAL.

To demonstrate the unusual curative powers of his new and complete special treatments by mail for heart disease, short breath, pain in the side, oppression in the chest, irregular pulse, palpitation, smothering spells, puffing of the ankles, or dropsy, Dr. Miles will send two dollars and a half worth free, as a trial, to all who mention this paper.

His treatments are the result of twenty-five years of careful study, extensive research and remarkable experience in treating the various ailments of the heart, stomach and nerves, which are often complicated each case. So astonishing are the results of his complete special treatments that he does not hesitate to offer all persons a trial free.

Nothing could be more generous. Few physicians have such confidence in their remedies. There is no reason why every afflicted person should not avail themselves of this exceedingly liberal offer, as they may never have another such opportunity. No death comes as suddenly as that from heart disease.

Mrs. A. Knoch of Huntington, Ind., was cured after thirty physicians failed; Mrs. Fiera Granger of Hillsdale, O., after twenty-two; Jas. E. Watto, the hotel agent, after a stroke had pronounced him incurable; Mrs. Frank Smith of Chicago, after five leading physicians had given her up; Mr. Julius Keister of Chicago, after ten; Mrs. R. Parker after sixteen failed. A thousand references to, and testimonial letters from, Physicians, Bankers, Farmers and others will be sent free upon request. Send at once to Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., 209 State St., Chicago, Ill., for free examination blank, pamphlets and free treatment before it is too late.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Northeastern Illinois District:—The Northeast Illinois district conference held in Chicago, Illinois, September 7, 8, 1901, having elected me to the office of district president, I feel it my duty to enter into the work entrusted to me. Being largely unacquainted with the district and its spiritual condition, I hope that every one who has named the name of the good Master, will examine him or herself and see that there is nothing in their lives which contradicts our profession.

Now, dear Saints, it is my desire to get acquainted with you all face to face, but as this desire may never be realized, then I want to get in touch with every one holding the priesthood authority in the district, with the exception of the general church missionaries. I will kindly ask the presidents or those having charge of branches to write me an accurate condition of the branch over which they are placed. The object of this is to find out where my labors are most needed that I may direct them there first.

Were my hands loose I would certainly visit every branch in the district before the next conference at Plano; but as I am situated, having a large family, I must "labor for the bread that perisheth" and be content to direct my personal efforts to help those who must have assistance at once. For that reason a large part of my work will necessarily have to be done by correspondence; and it is my desire that every branch officer will see to it that the responsibility resting on him will be discharged in such a manner that the good Lord will commend him for so doing; for, brethren, the condition of the branches are largely what you make them and what you allow them to become. If you are neglectful and careless in the obligations you have assumed, the members are very liable to partake of the same spirit of carelessness. If you have unruly members, and you allow them to carry out their hobbies and cause dissensions, you will soon see ruin following in that wake.

"Purge out the iniquity which is among you, sanctify yourselves before me."—D. C. Sec. 43: 3. Brethren, if there are any abuses being carried on which cause reproach to come to the fair name of the church, and you close your eyes to them, the responsibility lays at your door and will have to be accounted for.

I am in bonds,

THE CAMP OF ISRAEL.

The annual reunion which, for the second time, was held in the city park at Dow City, Iowa, fifty-eight miles east of Omaha, Nebraska, on the lines of the Chicago and North Western and the Illinois Central railways, was a profitable and happy season for those who were privileged to gather there from September 20th to September 29th inclusive. Pres. Joseph Smith and Apostle J. W. Wight, of Lamoni, Iowa, and High Priest James M. Baker, of Dow City, presidents of the church, the mission and the district in which Dow City is situated, respectively, were chosen to preside. Elders A. Harrison Radd, of Dow City, and Oscar Case, of Moorhead, Iowa, were made secretaries, and Brn. S. B. Kibler, Woodbine, and James Pearsale, Dow City, choristers.

The city park, just two blocks from the center of the business portion of the town, convenient to the railroad stations, and which is a beautiful, level, well shaded and grassy plot of ground, was in first class condition, and with the rows of white tents bordering around it, the large tabernacle, about 65x102 feet, in the center, made a very picturesque scene; there were seventy-two tents and four covered wagons occupying the space allotted for tenting purposes, six less than last year. The weather, for the most part, was very pleasant, though, at times, a little warm; but a fine rain the night of September 24th, cleared the atmosphere and enhanced the comfort of the campers. About midnight of Friday, the 27th, another rain visited the camp, and continued until afternoon of Saturday, making it rather disagreeable, but by the following Sunday morning it cleared again, and the last day was very enjoyable, a large crowd being in attendance, more than filling the large tent. Bro. John Smith, of the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and the editor from the Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, represented the publishing interests of the church. Bishops G. H. Hilliard, of Independence, Missouri, and C. J. Hunt, of Deloit, Iowa, represented the bishopric.

Owing to heavy rains just prior to the commencement of the reunion, many were unable to be present in time for the morning exercises, and services were not begun until 7:30 p. m., when Bro. J. M. Baker called the assembly to order, and announced Pres. Joseph Smith as the speaker. He referred to the condition of the church morally and spiritually, since 1830 to the present, and gave, as his opinion, that the church was in higher standing than at any time in its history. Saturday morning at 10:45 the proper organization was effected as above noted. Short speeches from Brn. G. H. Hilliard, D. A. Hutchings, Oscar Case, C. E. Butterworth and J. W. Wight occupied the remainder of this session. Pres. Joseph Smith preached at 2:30 p. m., and at 7:30 Bro. W. A. Smith delivered the discourse, the principal of faith being his theme.

Sunday was clear and warm. The morning prayer service was well attended, as were all the services of the day. At 10:45 a. m. Judge Wm. R. Green, of Audubon, Iowa, a former resident of Dow City, by invitation of the citizens, delivered an address of welcome to the saints; his remarks, which were listened to very closely, were, in part, as follows:

"Mr. President and members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Assembled:—In behalf of the citizens of Dow City, I extend to you a welcome in our midst. We welcome you as a God-fearing people, who are striving for the uplifting of humanity. There is an organized effort for evil in the world, and the forces for good must organize to meet this rising tide, which would overwhelm our nation, and drag it down from a God-fearing to evil conditions. Here you have met to devise means that shall be carried out into the workshop, and into business life to meet this flood of evil. We cannot confine our efforts to our own fireside, but must broaden our efforts for good. I have ever found in my experience that you, as a people, are always on the side of law and morality, so we have no jealousies in your success. Again we welcome you to our midst."

At the conclusion of Judge

Green's address, who by the way, stands very high in the esteem and respect of the citizens of his state, Elder J. R. Lambert, of Lamoni, addressed the assembly in a very able discourse upon the necessity of sustaining the laws of the country as well as the law of God, showing that only upon conditions of obedience and the working of righteousness will men be justified and saved. The effort was truly an inspiration of the Holy Spirit. At 2:30 p. m. Elder J. W. Wight took for his theme "government," deploring the recent attempt to strike down all law and order in the assassination of the late President McKinley. That in this enlightened age there should be found lurking in the brain of any one residing in this land of freedom, the desire to destroy law and order; for where there are no, there is chaos, and where there is confusion there is no unity, and where unity does not prevail, there is no peace. The speaker read Acts 1:9-11 as a basis for thoughts upon a government in which there shall be found no reason for dissatisfaction. He also referred to the tragedy of the cross, and the condition of the church crucified with the Savior. (Luke 23:40).

Our space will not permit anything but a generalization of that which transpired at this reunion. President Joseph Smith preached at 7:30 Sunday evening on the "Abrahamic covenant." He also spoke Tuesday at 10:45 on the Gifts of the Spirit; at 7:30 p. m. Thursday, 2:30 p. m. Friday, Sunday 10:45 a. m., September 29th, and presided at the business meeting Saturday afternoon, September 28th. Brn. J. R. Lambert, G. H. Hilliard, J. W. Wight, Chas. Derry, Oscar Case, J. A. Gunsolley, John Smith and Paul Hansen also occupied, some of them a number of times, Bro. J. W. Wight giving the closing discourse Sunday night to an audience which completely filled the large tent, many being on the outside.

During the week Sunday School and Religio and Daughters of Zion work were industriously looked after by Brn. T. A. Hougas, J. A. Gunsolley and J. F. Mintun, very encouraging attendances being noted. The morning prayer services at 9 a. m. each day were well attended and very spiritual and encouraging, a number of gospel gifts being manifest to the comfort of all; but especially was the presence of the Holy Spirit felt, blessing abundantly the humble devout worshipper. At the business meeting Saturday afternoon, September 28th, Dow City was chosen as the place for the reunion next year, and a good collection was given for expenses incurred during this year, and for repairs to the tent. The citizens of Dow City were hospitable, and kindly entertained the visitors well, and attended the services generally. The health of the campers was good, and all were cheerful and happy in their associations and in their disposition to continue the conflict unto victory.

PERFECTION.

Men are seeking for it in the affairs of life. Mechanically we are reaching it in speed, light, modes of communication, etc. This longed for condition drives and beckons us onward and upward. God can only accomplish results by law, so can man, so can Satan. Law is neutral, we can use force for good or evil purposes; is it not pleasing to God when He sees men use the laws of the universe for a righteous and noble purpose? Does not the progression of the race, even materially, please Him? Isn't unprogressiveness in material things, to some extent, a sin, just as a lack of improvement in spiritual matters is displeasing unto God? Don't God swing the planets by the best method known to Him? Don't He light and heat the earth by the most perfect system in the universe, conditions considered? Even with a curse upon the earth and all things therein, yet could there be any arrangement of chemicals acting upon dust to produce anything more beautiful than a full blown rose or to smell sweeter than the flower of the modest heliotrope?

God has revealed to us in the magnificent magnitude of His works, in their beauty, in their detail of thought, that He is a Master Mechanic, the Supreme Artist, the Chemist of chemists, the Architect of the universe, and when Christ said: "Be ye perfect even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," it may be applied to an imitation of our heavenly Father as a Workman. Our church publications should reflect the highest skill in their intellectual and mechanical make-up. Is it not pleasing to God that the highest achievements of the intellect should be used to produce the literature of the church? We have some archaic machinery here in the ENSIGN that should give place to modern contrivances for publishing a paper. If the subscription list of the ENSIGN was what it should be, we could have an up-to-date plant; this we ought to have and will have with the help of the ENSIGN friends. From time to time we are going to try and increase the circulation of the ENSIGN, as we know it is doing an immense amount of good. Will you help us? Pay indebtedness to the paper promptly. On much of our output we only make ten cents on the dollar, and when we are compelled to write several times for an account, every bit of our profit is eaten up in time and postage. Stand by us in our effort to spread the gospel by means of our various publications. Brethren, who are in business, patronize our job printing department. This part of the plant is well equipped for doing all the various kinds of commercial printing, and is under the supervision of a printer of large and varied experience. Help us to attain to perfection in the printing plant of the ENSIGN.

LATTER DAY SAINTISM APPLIED.

We believe in present day revelation. We claim to receive, through God's appointed channel, instruction from Christ to His church. We have such instruction printed and preserved in a book called "Doctrine and Covenants." The instruction contained therein is as binding to Latter Day Saints as other commandments of the Lord given in other ages of the world. What kind of Christians will the application of the instructions here quoted make? What kind of fruit can we expect from Latter Day Saints if they apply the instruction given in the Doctrine and Covenants, a few cullings of which appear here?

And now, verily, verily I say unto thee, put your trust in that Spirit which leadeth to do good; yea, to do justly, to walk humbly, to judge righteously, and this is my Spirit.—Sec. 10: 6.

Behold, I speak unto you, and also to all those who have desires to bring forth and establish this work, and no one can assist in this work, except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope and charity, being temperate in all things, whatsoever shall be intrusted to his care.—12: 4.

Let every man esteem his brother as himself, and practice virtue and holiness before me. And again I say unto you, let every man esteem his brother as himself.—33: 5.

I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded. And let your preaching be the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness. And go ye out from among the wicked. Save yourselves. Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord. Even so. Amen.—38: 9.

And now, behold, I speak unto the church. Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come.

And again, I say, thou shalt not kill; but he that killeth shall die. Thou shalt not steal; and he that stealeth and will not repent, shall be cast out. Thou shalt not lie; he that lieth and will not repent, shall be cast out. Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and one flesh; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit; and if he repents not, he shall be cast out. Thou shalt not commit adultery; and he that committeth adultery and repenteth not, shall be cast out; but he that has committed adultery and repents with all his heart and forsaketh it, and doeth it no more, thou shalt forgive; but if he doeth it again, he shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out. Thou shalt not speak evil of thy neighbor, nor do him any harm. Thou knowest my laws concerning these things are given in my scriptures; he that sinneth and repenteth not, shall be cast out.—12: 6, 7.

And again, thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; * * * and let all things be done in cleanliness before me. Thou shalt not be idle; for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer.—3: 12.

If a man or woman shall rob, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. And if he or she shall steal, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. And if he or she shall lie, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. If he or she do any manner of iniquity, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law, even that of God.—13: 22.

This Doctrine and Covenants is full of just such instructions. Our religious cotemporaries, in examining our position, invariably overlook the good we have, and infidel like, seek to so twist the declarations of the word of the Lord that they may appear evil. Such methods will eventually bring the condemnation of God upon these unjust critics. The Bible has been attacked along the very same lines as is the Bible of the ancient Americans—the Book of Mormon—and the modern revelations of God to His people in this age—the Doctrine and Covenants.

Latter Day Saintism applied will make noble men and women, loyal citizens and fit subjects for the higher education of the millennial reign of Christ on earth.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bishop R. May and Pres. G. H. Hulmes expect to leave Saturday morning to visit the Post Oak Saints, and from there, during the following week, to Burtville and Knob Noster, accompanied by Elder S. J. Madden of Post Oak.

The Letter, one of the two week dailies, of Independence, has this item in Monday's edition:

"The choir at the L. D. S. church sustained their reputation for good singing at last night's service. The choir consisted of twenty-five or thirty voices."

Bro. and Sr. Will Pitt and family returned Tuesday from an extended visit to the parents of Sr. Pitt, Bro. and Sr. D. Hougas, Henderson, Iowa. Sr. Pitt brought to the ENSIGN of fee, Wednesday, a basket of apples sent by her father, the sight of which called forth exclamations of surprise and delight. They show no effects of the drouth this past season, are large in size—one of them weighing eleven ounces—beautiful in rich coloring, and delightful in flavor. We do not know the varieties, but judge them to be Northern Spy, Baldwin and Jonathan. They are all good any way, and a few barrels of them in the cellar would conduce to the complacency with which those who are well prepared, view the approach of the icy hand of the frost king. Thanks, Bro. Hougas.

Bro. J. A. Kennedy has just finished a fine nine foot wide cement or graitoid walk in front of the ENSIGN office, and an eight foot walk of the same material from this office to the corner of Osage street, all being church property. This adds greatly to the appearance, as well as to the comfort of the pedestrians. To further beautify the ENSIGN frontage, our enterprising business manager, Bro. Miller, has moved part of the Temple Lot upon it, sodding a space about eight feet wide, between the curb and walk, with sod from that much revered spot of ground, the part of it to which the Reorganized Church holds title. The street has also been bricked from the Square to Pleasant street, and the workmen are laying brick now from Pleasant towards the Missouri Pacific Railway. We will have a fine street by and by. Bro. Kennedy is now engaged in laying a walk in front of the church, having also completed the walk in front of the Temple Lot property opposite Bro. Joseph Luff's residence.

Mr. W. H. Smith, manager of the "C. N. D." (Commercial News Department), of the Western Union Telegraph Company for many years, at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, is visiting relatives and friends here. He is a brother of Srs. M. E. and G. H. Hulmes, and Sr. Frank Oriley, and brother of M. H. Smith. His wife and her mother, Mrs. Dunn, have been here several weeks.

Bro. and Sr. Horton are entertaining their son and family from Chicago.

Bishop and Sr. Hilliard leave tomorrow, Friday, night, for their old neighborhood in southern Illinois, to attend a reunion and visit relatives.

The city electric lighting supplies are now arriving, and Superintendent Caldwell is kept rustling to get things in readiness for running as soon as the plant is handed over to the city by the contractors; they must indeed be "great bodies," they appear to be moving so slowly in the matter.

If your paper is a little late this week, "Uncle Sam" will not alone be to blame. The paper makers are over two weeks behind time sending our supply. Telegraph, mail, telephone and messenger have been utilized—the two latter to Kansas City—unavailingly to get paper here on time. We did our best to make the delay as little as possible.

Sr. F. Criley is recovering from an attack of malarial fever. Bro. C. G. Gould also suffered a slight attack, but is again at work.

On Friday last a merry party of Saints led by Bishop May, and composed of Sr. May, Sr. J. A. Robinson, Sr. Belle James, Sr. Will Bushnell, Sr. G. Bartholomew, Srs. W. and Frances Williamson, Sr. C. Mills, Sr. M. E. Hulmes and Mrs. L. Dunn, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania—the rear being kept within calling distance by Bro. and Sr. G. H.

Hulmes—started over the beautiful Lexington road until the magnificent scenery of the Missouri river bottoms was seen below; when they turned off on a country road intersected with gates, when upon passing the fifth gate the party found themselves in an almost primitive valley at the home of our aged brother, Dr. A. B. Herman and wife. Arriving immediately before them was one of Bishop May's large wagons which had conveyed there a carefully selected load of donations from various of the Saints, the purpose being to make pleasant and comfortable as possible for the winter, our aged and industrious brother and sister now that the days have come when they cannot, as in the past, labor continuously. The surprise was complete, and having brought abundance of suitable food for lunch with plenty to spare after the quick and able hands of the sisters had spread a table to almost overflowing, all sat down to enjoy it with hearts turned in thanksgiving to the giver of every good and perfect gift" to us all. After putting down carpets, putting up new stoves, bedstead, lounge, etc., and placing cosy chairs, and with a few pictures on the walls of the addition to their home which had been built under the direction of Bishop May some months ago, prayer was offered and a few sweet hymns sung, then the homeward journey of ten miles over the hills to Independence began. Thus, to those who went—as well as to others who donated to the successful object of the visit but were themselves prevented from going—ended in one of those lovely Missouri moonlight nights, a profitable day, such an one, when, if the soul is at peace within, the heart is glad and thoughts of eternal heritage, amid scenes and associations made still more perfect by the entire absence of sin or sorrow, pain or death, brings in sweet anticipation, eternal joys, of which no earthly disaster, save voluntary sin, can rob us.

LAMONI, IOWA.

On Thursday, the 26th, funeral services were held in the chapel over the remains of Bro. Asa J. Hiscock, a former resident of this place, who died at Alliance, Nebraska, on the 22d, of typhoid. Elder Columbus Scott preached the sermon, and was assisted in the services by Elder R. S. Salyards.

Elders Thorburn and Hayer returned to their mission fields last week.

Elder R. M. Elvin came in from the debate the other day, smiling and apparently happy over the result of the contest. He reports good crowds every night, and gentlemanly conduct on the part of his opponent. Sold the elder a copy of the Inspired Translation at the close.

The Sunday School and Religio convention held at Evergreen Saturday and Sunday was quite well attended, and an interesting and profitable time is reported. It is Lamon's turn now, but the time has not yet been set.

Elder Columbus Scott preached at Lamon Sunday morning. The evening hour was occupied by Elder R. S. Salyards. The afternoon prayer service was in charge of Brn. M. J. Danielson and Will J. Mather.

We understand that there is a quantity of Heralds, ENSIGNS and Autumn Leaves in the hands of the Good Literature committee of our local Religio, which will be furnished to any missionary applying for them for free distribution in introducing the work. If you wish them write to the chairman of the committee, Miss Mary C. Banta, Lamon, Iowa.

The report of the Lamon branch for the four months past, as read Tuesday night, shows a gain of 31 by baptism, 11 by letter, making a total gain of 42, with a loss of 6 by letter and 3 by death, total loss of 9, or a net gain of 33. Present membership 1333.

Elder H. A. Stebbins and wife were called to Burlington, Iowa, Sunday afternoon, by telegram, to attend the funeral service of an uncle of Sr. Stebbins, who passed away suddenly the night before.

October 1.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Our quarterly conference at Stewartsville, passed very pleasantly. Evidences of permanent growth in grace were visible. The attendance from a distance was fair, and locally was good. The district missionaries were all present with good reports. Bro. Summerfield, a veteran in the work, and still a missionary, has been greatly hindered by affliction. Bro. T. T. Hinderks was wisely continued as president, with Bro. B. J. Dice as assistant, and Bro. C. P. Paul, whose absence was conspicuous, having so rarely occurred, was continued as record keeper and money changer. The preaching was done by Brn. Wm. Lewis, S. Swenson and the writer. The next conference to be held at St. Joseph, the time not set. The Sunday School and Religio work was done on Friday, of which we hear good words.

Bro. Wm. Lewis has completely disposed of his business in keeping with the counsel of the appointive authorities, preparatory to going on a mission to Wales, his native land. He is awaiting the final word from Bro. G. T. Griffiths to come. In Wales or America Bro. L. will make an able, wise and safe minister for and representative of the work. There have been strong and repeated evidences in the past of the divine call to which Bro. Lewis is now prepared to comply.

We returned from the conference yesterday in time to continue our protracted effort at South St. Joseph, where we were greeted by a house full of anxious listeners. Additional seats had to be provided to accommodate all. The meetings will continue during the week.

Bro. John Taylor and wife, formerly good Sunday School workers in north St. Joseph, have removed from Acheson, and located at South St. Joseph, and will be a help there in the Sunday School which has fallen to our charge.

J. M. TERRY.

The preachers yesterday at the tri-branches were Pement, Earl, Sheehy, Deam and McCallum. Bro. J. D. White attended our Thursday evening prayer meeting last week.

Chicago is to have a convention of ministers during this week to discuss some of the problems that are causing anxiety among the well meaning ones. "People's minds are failing them for fear of the things coming upon the earth."

Sr. Grace Williams Webster has started a class in instrumental music.

Bro. Homan C. Smith passed through the city last week en route for the reunion at Janesville, Wisconsin.

Bro. Robert Cooper and wife leave us for the west tonight. His residence will likely be in Denver. We will miss him.

We believe last Sunday's effort on the West side was Bro. Deams debut as a preacher.

Dowie's sermon yesterday in the auditorium was "Elijah and the priests of Baal. The report this morning is that the former prophet Elijah showed a weakness in being frightened by a scolding old woman (Jezebel) which he says will not be the case with the prophet as now re-incarnated here in Chicago.

Bro. Graves has now started street preaching on the West side with Bro. Cummings assistant.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.
Corner 23d and Holly. One block south of Observation Park line.

Now that the cooler weather has come our meetings have been placed back in their usual order. Preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m, social meeting at 2:30 p. m., and Sunday School at 9:30 a. m.

Meetings were fairly well attended yesterday, particularly the evening preaching when Elder J. A. Gillen addressed the congregation in a very able and instructive manner.

Bro. Fred Koehler was the morning speaker, using as his subject the "divine calling of the martyred seer."

Some of the Saints are investing in property around our church, and at present we know of four "pieces" held by our people in the immediate vicinity.

A good sized delegation of our branch was present at the Holden Stake conference, and the expressions we hear now run like this: "It was beautiful, so spiritual and so peaceful." "Those Holden Saints know how to entertain a conference;" "I had such a pleasant place to put up," etc. We were truly pleased to see the advancement made by that branch since last we were privileged to meet with them—five short years ago.

Our Stake president was a busy man among the Kansas City, U. S. A., Saints yesterday, preaching according to the announcement, to the Saints at Armstrong at the morning hour, meeting also with them in their afternoon social meeting, after which he made a flying call on some of our West side members, and left our bidding place at 6 o'clock to solemnize a marriage on his way to his 7:30 appointment with the East side Saints. A. C. K. September 30.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 31.

Editor Ensign—On the evening of August 1st, after about the lapse of three weeks, one week in June and two weeks in July, which were so very hot in the streets at night, between these high buildings, people could hardly stand five minutes to listen to the preaching, I loaded my canon and started for the street corner again, to begin to shoot the gospel gun once more to large crowds of all kinds of people.

On August 6th Bro. W. H. Fuller came in from Independence, Missouri, where he had been laboring for three months, and before he could get any rest I put him at work, the same night he came, and we have put in this month, so far, with good interest. Great excitement among the people. Some to be baptized this week.

We want to organize and bring ministers of other faiths in union with us. Hear we are only a few, colored Saints, as yet, and we are made to more and more fully realize every day that we are to put on the whole armor of Jesus Christ, and to live more strict, godly lives in God and Christ. I find to be a true latter day disciple, I have all I can do to attend to my own business, and let other people's affairs alone. I rejoice in this restored gospel, and I am so glad and thankful that the Lord is blessing us his tender mercy, enlightening our minds and giving us his Spirit to rightly divide the word of truth to the people, so they are beginning to see eye to eye with us in this blessed gospel.

This field has been very hard for one colored missionary; what I want, brothers and sisters, is more help of our colored ministry and missionaries to the colored people, for I see it is very hard for two of our men to go up against all the world. May God give us more power to catch the minds of the people, they are in darkness and they are told by their pastors not to go hear us, and some of the people seem to be afraid to come out to hear for fear of their pastors. One pastor here said he would turn all of his bad members out of his church, but he was afraid that Graves, the Mormon preacher, might get hold of them. He need not fear, for the "Mormon" preachers will get a few of his flock, at least, we will try, by God's help, to help them to find a better hope in Christ.

I feel that the foundation of darkness is beginning to pass away, and the light has come to this race of people. To God be thanks for all his blessings. May he hasten his work among all and every nation and tongue, kindred and people, is my prayer in Jesus' name.

Bro. W. H. Fuller baptized five precious souls tonight, four of them colored, and one noble white gentleman. I preached to these people on the street, and Bro. Fuller also; more are very near the kingdom.

Yours in bonds of the gospel,

ELDER GEO. H. GRAYES.

No. 2458 State St.

BARTLETT, Ia., Aug. 16.

Dear Ensign—Sunday, August 18th, will close a series of four weeks' meetings; lacking two evenings. Brn. Minton and Fry in charge of a district tent, purchased for the Fremont district and by the Fremont and other Saints. The tent is set in the small town of Bartlett, with good crowds and considerable interest shown. Bro. H. Kemp is here now and will stay until the close of the meeting. Baptism will be administered Sunday. Much prejudice has been removed and friends made to the cause; some coming out to hear that would not before. Bro. Chas.

Fry is conducting the music, and Brn. J. F. Minton is doing most of the preaching.

In the faith,
"F. F. M."

FANNING, KS., Aug. 28.

Editor Ensign—I am still on the war path. I have since May 5th visited the several branches in this, the Northeast Kansas district, and had many precious Saints in the light of God, no doubt, trying very, very hard to live up to their high calling with the Master; while others are standing in the way of the onward progress of the gospel, and imagine the ungodly course they take is the only way to heaven's gate, and when they get there, to their surprise and astonishment, the swords with a heavy clash will only reveal the fact that they are not worthy to enter, and will have to fall back perhaps to China or old wicked Spain.

The summer has been very hot, but I have managed to preach in eleven places, have spoken 82 times and baptized six, besides the other work I have done.

The tent is now at Corning in charge of J. W. Roberts and Geo. W. Beebe. Bro. Pierce is in Pottawatomie county. All the missionary force are doing the best we can. Bro. Samuel Twombly, president of the district, has put in all the time he could, but is now at home looking after farm work.

After conference, September 6th, at Atchison, the tent will go to Troy. We have a number of people who believe the gospel, and it is hoped ere long they'll obey.

I am now holding a series of meetings three miles from here. Very good interest, fine liberty and good sized congregations. Had a large audience last night and a good feeling among the people.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

CORNING, KS., AUG. 20.

Editor Ensign—I take this method of informing the Saints of what I am trying to do as a missionary. I came to my missionfield (Northwest Kansas) July 23d, and to the district tent at Wetmore the 24th; found Brn. George Beebe and F. J. Pierce in charge. Bro. Foss, our missionary in charge, came over and preached for us the next night, and then sent Bro. Pierce to Centralla, leaving Bro. Beebe and myself in charge of tent. We tried to hold the banner of the Savior, with what success remains for the future to tell. However, by the assistance of Brn. Twombly, Foss, Beebe and Pierce we told them the gospel story in as plain a manner as we could. Some of the time we had a good crowd out to hear and they gave good attention; then three nights we did not have any meetings at all, one night on account of rain and two because there was no one came out. The tent was there three weeks.

The 10th of August we pulled stakes and shipped the tent to this place; it being Saturday we went on up to Centralla and met with the Saints in prayer meeting on Sunday, the Spirit of God being present to the comforting and cheering Bro. Beebe and myself who each preached once. We stated the condition of the tent work that we could not continue it without aid, and they came nobly to our assistance with provisions, gasoline and some legal tender. They seemed to realize the fact that missionaries could not prosecute tent work on letters of appointment, wind and water altogether.

Brother Alex. McDougal brought us over to this place on the 12th inst., and getting permission we selected a nice location, set up the tent that evening so we could lodge therein, and the next night we commenced meetings with a few out to hear and have been holding forth since; but I notice one thing that the people of this country do not seem very anxious to hear the angel message. I must say that when we left Wetmore one man and his wife seemed to be very much interested and he made the statement to me that they wanted to make a thorough investigation and pray over the matter, and when convinced would send for me to bury them in Christ. I did all that I could for them and left them in the hands of God.

Can't tell what we will do here yet, but one thing is sure, by the help of our Father above we will do what we can and leave the result with him; it is his work and he will take care of it and His servants also if we do our duty.

I will close by asking those who may read this to remember the missionaries, for it is not all beds of flowers for us. Let us press on until the battle's over, then we will wear the crown.

Your brother in the conflict,
J. W. ROBERTS.

VOLINA, Ala., Aug. 22.

Editor Ensign—Enclosed please find $1.00 for Ensign since February. I should have sent it sooner but misfortunes, together with negligence, is all the excuse I offer. I have been thinking all along when I sent the dollar I would also enclose something more to be appropriated toward the college debt, this, God knows, I want to do; but at this writing 't is almost impossible; there has been a terrible storm here and it seems it has hurt me worse than any one I have heard of. This is the third effort I have made at a crop since I have been in the country, and almost failed each time; I do hope, though, in the near future, I will come with my little mite.

I am entirely isolated from any of the Saints, and when I read in the Ensign of some brother who is so situated, I know how he feels. I often sit out on my gallery and look down the road, and think, now if I could only see Bro. Turpen or Bro. Erwin, or good old Bro. Gillen, how glad I would feel; not only those, but any of the dear brethren or sisters. I live seven miles due east of Castleberry, Alabama, which is situated on the Louisville & Nashville R. R., eighty-eight miles north of Mobile, and one hundred miles south of Montgomery. If any of the elders will write when they can come, and when to meet them, I will be sure to do so with conveyance. I think there might be some good accomplished here.

I will say if Bro. Kelley's eyes should fall on this, who I understand is laboring in Alabama, that if he will write me and tell me if it is possible that he can come this way and preach the funeral of my darling child, Jennie. He has been to my house and was acquainted with Jennie and myself.

Dear Saints everywhere, I feel I need the prayers of God's people; I am doing all I can in my weak efforts to come up higher; my hindrances are many and temptations before me. I do hope and trust I may so live that I will meet my dear child, and all of God's people, where parting will be no more.

Your brother in the one faith,

FLORESVILLE, Tex., Aug. 25.

Editor Ensign—We are banished from meeting with the Saints, it being thirty-five miles to the nearest branch, which is at San Antonio. So the only exhortation we get is through the Ensign and Autumn Leaves, which are welcome visitors at our home. Will some of the Saints of the San Antonio branch please inform us when they will meet in conference, and the condition of the branch there. I never see any letters from them. I have written Bro. Shepherd to come this way and preach some for us, but haven't heard from him yet. Am willing to do all in my power to help establish the work here if some one will come this way. The work has never been introduced in Floresville yet, and I think some good may be done.

There are only three members here. My wife is not a member of the church, but is a strong believer in the doctrine; she has never heard one of our elders preach. I have been a member of the church eight years in September, and have never regretted the step I have taken, although I have been very disobedient at times, so much so at one time, I did not pro-less any religion; but inasmuch as I have been obedient God has surely blessed me, and has given me a knowledge of the truth. Dear Saints, let us obey the teaching of our heavenly Father and receive his blessings. Pray for us that we may be faithful and do some good, if not much, in the upbuilding of the church and the redemption of Zion.

Ever praying for the success of the gospel in
Yours in gospel bonds,
ED JACKSON.

STOCKTON, Cal., Sept. 14.

Editor Ensign—Please let me extend the invitation through your columns to all the Saints to send to my address, 807 E. Main street, Stockton, California, all the old, clean Ensigns they have to spare, and I will give them away. I had thought that California Saints would send enough, but they have not, and will be out in a few days. The mission is a success, and I am probably reaching as many people as many of the elders who are in the field. Bro. Wm. M. Bohall is with me now and has a horse and buggy, so that I can get around better to distribute papers, so, brethren and sisters, let me again say, bundle up your Ensigns and other tracts and mail them to me, then go into your closets and pray that God will bless them as messengers of good, and that will be practical religion. I am as well as usual.

Yours in the one faith,
A. HAWS.

VERMILION, O., Aug. 22.

Dear Ensign—Bro. Allen, from Kirland, came to Ashmont, Friday, July 14th, and preached Sunday afternoon. His text was Matthew 7, "Judge not that ye be not judged." What beautiful words for our consideration, to think upon and ponder well before expressing our sentiments in regard to others; we might possibly have a beam to be cast out first; we are not perfect, no one so, says the word. May God help us to be pure in heart in every thought and act; purity in this life means much in the life to come. We should so live that each moment may be sent out freighted with love, good will and charity to all the world. We may possess all the essentials required to form the Christian character, but without charity we are as sounding brass or tinkling cymbal, and the Psalmist says, "If thou Lord shouldst mark iniquities, oh Lord who shouldst mark iniquities, oh Lord who shouldst mark iniquities."

This people, previous to the present time, have had plenty of good preaching, many grand, inspired sermons, but they will not receive it, neither will they come out to hear the word. What will the harvest be? God alone is the judge; may he be merciful and kind to the erring ones. He doeth all things well. "But every one that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them shall not shall be likened unto a foolish man that built his house upon the sand."

We meet with many trials and temptations by the way, but Christ himself was accosted by the tempter many times, so we cannot expect to glide along on smooth ground at all times.

Dear Saints, pray for me that I may be more faithful and ever watchful, that I may be able to withstand more fully all the evils which surround us. I am one of the isolated ones and very seldom see any of the Saints. I often think of what Christ said to Martha, "Too much serving makes the world unsovable. May God's blessings rest upon all His children, giving them strength to endure and grace to overcome self, sin and the world, and bring us into a more perfect submission to His will, is my prayer in Jesus name.

ZION'S ENSIGN.

CONFIRMATION STILL COMING.

That men are beginning to seriously consider and finally concede some of the major propositions of this "Latter Day marvel" is gratifying to say the least.

The Boston Congregationalist has the following editorial comment on the question, "Does the Christian Church Need Miracles?"

"A craving for miracles is manifest. As belief in the miracles of the Bible has declined in the church an increasing number of persons are showing their belief in modern miracles. Faith curists tell wonderful stories of diseases banished by prayer and the word of power; and the death of those who declared themselves healed by faith does not shake the faith of survivors. Christian Scientists go farther, and declare that disease is a delusion, and death also, and that knowledge of God in Christ as they teach it, will banish the delusion. The subjects of their weekly assemblies consist mainly of signs and witnesses. Can the Christian church live and grow through the witnesses without the signs? It may as well be admitted that if the only signs and wonders to convince men that Jesus is the Son of God occurred in the first christian century, or before, the rehearsal of them will not give power to the church of the twentieth century.

"The church is laying greater emphasis than ever before on our Lord's command, 'Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation.' Mark joins to these words the Lord's assurance, 'These signs shall follow them that believe,' and the prominent signs promised were casting out demons, speaking new tongues, immunity from disease, and healing the sick. It is true that doubt is raised concerning the genuineness of these passages. Two of the oldest Greek manuscripts do not contain them. But Matthew joins to the same command of Jesus his assurance that He has all authority in heaven and on earth, and that He will be always with His disciples. The statement attributed to Jesus in the closing sentences of the gospel of Mark that He would continue to exercise His authority and demonstrate His presence by signs following them that believe was beyond question the faith of the early church. Has that faith been surrendered because such signs ceased to follow, or did signs cease because faith in the authority of Jesus grew weak?

"However these questions may be answered—and the demand for satisfactory answers grows constantly more urgent—the church can maintain its supremacy in the world only by the evidence of divine authority within it, and the evidence of that authority in its members which ever has convinced the world has been 'the Lord working with them, and confirming the word by signs that followed.' The company of believers in Christ will impress the world only by showing that they have power which the world has not. Men will pray when they see that prayer brings answer in gifts of power: Men will learn and obey the words of Christ when they see that knowledge of him enriches and transfigures life. The church must show itself different from and above the world if it is to transform the world. And all that the church needs for this purpose is the gift of the Holy Spirit. That gift is promised to them that ask. The result of his indwelling will be signs which will demonstrate his presence. Whether or not they shall include manifest banishment of disease from the body we do not affirm, but they do include transformation of character, which are miracles of grace, and which enable and purify the body. They include self-denial for Christ's sake, and sacrifice for others for the sake of mankind, for whom Christ died, which are the fruit only of the Holy Spirit, and which are the deeds always wrought in men through complete surrender to that indwelling spirit. These are the miracles which the church imperatively needs. She can have them for the asking."—Boston Congregationalist.

There is one weak place in this article, viz., "Whether or not they shall include manifest banishing of disease from the body we do not affirm," otherwise this Congregational editor has made a long stride in the right direction, compared with the attitude of his sectarian predecessors during the last three-quarters of a century. The Literary Digest for July 27th, commenting editorially on this article, states:

"The belief in the continuous presence of miracles was held by the whole Christian church, east and west, up to the time of the reformation. Since that event the various religious bodies which succeeded from the historic Western church have, with little exception, held that the age of miracles ended with the apostolic era. Within the past century this tendency has been carried back still farther by many christian students of the Bible, and the credibility of most or all of the Old Testament miracles have been questioned."

When we consider that it was on affirming that the age of miracles and revelation was not passed, Joseph Smith was persecuted and mobbed by supposed christians, who were nothing but ignorant fanatics, we should take comfort in any concessions made. I do not know how the rest of the brotherhood look on concessions like the following, but as for me there is the keenest satisfaction in its perusal. The Rev. DeWitt T. Van Doren, a New York minister, delivered himself as follows on the question of "Signs Following Believers:"

"Why should clergymen think it a wrong thing, and contrary to the preaching of Christ, that a church should believe in and practice bodily healing? Certainly in the teaching of Christ, as in the atonement of Christ, there is a foundation laid for faith in the healing of disease. Christ was the sickness bearer as well as the sin bearer of his people, 'Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.' Sanctification of the spirit, redemption of the body, this is the atonement of Christ. Sanctification is a progressive, continuous work, from the cross to the crown, so also is the redemption of the body. Christ never divorced these: 'Thy sins be forgiven thee,' and 'Be whole of thy plague.' The ministry of the apostles, under the leadership of the Spirit, is the exact model of the Master's. Nor did this commission end with the death of the apostles, for Mark says: 'These signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils, they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.' 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved,' in any and every age of the Christian church. And these signs shall follow them that believe—not the immediate apostles of Christ only, but all believers, in every generation of the church's history.

"This guarantee of miraculous signs is given to the church in its corporate capacity. Not all, as individuals, have gifts of healing, but this gift was to the church as a whole—including in it as an organic function of faith, and for all time. This promise is all the more significant when you consider that it was given just previous to the ascension of Christ. 'Greater works than these shall ye do; because I go unto my Father.' What other interpretation can be given to the statement of St. James, recorded in his epistle, than that he refers to an established and perpetual usage in the church?"—Literary Digest, July 20, 1901, Vol. 23, No. 3.

Brethren, can any of you state our position in more forceful terms than these? This man ought to be a member of the church. Can you not reach him Brn. Greene and Anderson? From the remainder of the article it would seem this man knows very little, if anything, of our church or its position. God hasten the day when many such men may be rescued and brought into perfect light of God's glorious gospel.

Though the Christians or Disciples have been so strenuous in their contention that the age of all miracles have passed, yet the Christian Evangelist, of July 25th, under the head of, "Praying for Rain," concedes our major premise. It says:

"Christians believe in a personal God, who is behind all natural laws, and who is the source of such laws. He ministers to man's material needs through these laws, which are but the outgoings of His infinite will. Science has not yet discovered all the laws and the conditions which govern the weather. Meteorological conditions change and upset the calculations of the weather bureau and the weather prophets. There are unknown forces at work here which elude the investigation of science, who is wise enough to say that none of these forces or conditions are of such a nature as to be modified by spiritual force? We know, as a matter of fact, that while the human body, like everything else, is under natural laws, yet it is powerfully affected by the condition of the mind, by the decisions of the human will. This will be freely admitted, but it will be said that the human mind or spirit dwells in the human body, and the relation is so close that the condition of the mind naturally affects that of the body. But who is prepared to say that God does not dwell in his world, in an even more intimate relation to all its processes than the human spirit dwells in the body?"

"When we come to look the doctrine of the divine immanence square in the face—the doctrine of God's presence in all the processes of the natural world, as well as in the goings of human history, now recognized by the best thought in both science and religion—the idea of prayer for rain loses the apparent absurdity it may take on in the eyes of a superficial thinker. This is especially true when it is remembered that this God who is present in his world, and in whom we live and move and have our being, is our Father, and that he uses natural and spiritual laws alike for the benefit of his children—his intelligent creation. Is it a thing incredible that this infinite and eternal Being, revealed by Christ as our Father, hearing the cries of his children from relief from drought, should by His will so influence the operation of these natural laws by the introduction of a higher law, as to accomplish the end desired in bringing the needed rain? Why may not prayer itself be that higher spiritual force which, through the will of God, may effect the needed change? There is too much in this wide realm that we do not know for any one to be dogmatic as to the uselessness of prayer."

Spirit Manifestations Examined in the Light of Divine Revelation.

That this subject is of vital importance and of interest to all Saints, will hardly be questioned; and since our heavenly Father has, in his wisdom, given us more light, we will attempt to advance a few thoughts in hopes that they will be of benefit to the reader.

The gifts of the Spirit were designed for the benefit of the true followers of Christ, "for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." Therefore it is not to be wondered that Satan would bring all of the opposition possible against this means of grace; especially since we have been repeatedly warned through the revelations received by the church, that such would be the case. Whenever the gifts of the gospel were enjoyed by God's people, Satan has always sought to palm off his counterfeit. When Moses, by the mighty power of God, performed those wonderful signs, the magicians, by some other power, were enabled to do many of the same things.

The Lord warned his people of these evil powers in that day. See Deuteronomy 18:9-12, also Leviticus 19:31.

In the days of the apostles, the Saints were admonished in the following language: "Beloved believe not every spirit but try the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world." (1 John 4:1). In these last days, as early as 1831, the Lord warned the church as follows: "Behold verily I say unto you, there are many spirits which are false spirits, which have gone forth in the earth, deceiving the world: and also Satan hath sought to deceive you, that he might overthrow you. Behold, I the Lord have looked upon you, and have seen abominations in the church, that profess my name; but blessed are they who are faithful and endure, whether in life or in death, for they shall inherit eternal life. But woe unto them that are deceivers and hypocrites, for thus saith the Lord, I will bring them to judgment."

Scarcely had the gospel work commenced, when Satan also began his efforts to overthrow it. Satan evidently is not satisfied with the success he is having in deceiving the world; but he is constantly striving to overthrow the faith of the Saints by his deceptive influence. The prophets that Satan employs in the world, have little or no influence with the Saints; as it is quite an easy matter to discern them with the light given, when the gospel was restored. It is an easy matter for us to see where the false prophets, in the world, are lacking in the scriptural requirements, and we do not hesitate to denounce such as false prophets. The church has little to fear from this source, but are warned, in the above instruction, that false prophets, hypocrites and deceivers are in the church. These, of course, are Satan's agents, and if they always appeared in their true state, they would not have power to deceive; but we are told that Satan has the power to transform himself so as to appear as an angel of light; hence the very elect need to be on their guard. We expect, from the promises made, that the power of the Holy Spirit will be poured out upon God's people to a greater extent in the future than ever it has in the past. "Zion must needs come by power."

As the power of God increases in the church, we may expect that Satan will become more daring in his efforts to deceive. Since the Lord has warned the church that there are "many" false spirits in the world, we have good reason to believe from the language, also from what has come under our own observation, that there are many; in fact, more than some have thought. It would be foolish, or careless, to say the least, for a person to leave their house unlocked, so that anyone that chose to do so, might come in and take possession; especially in a community where it was known that wicked people lived. But far more foolish is he who knows that there are evil spirits, and even Satan seeking an entrance to take possession, who holds himself in readiness for the reception of any spirit that may desire to enter, and, without question, willingly follows the direction of those that enter. A terrible mistake for a child of God to make. Therefore all, especially those who are so susceptible to spiritual influences, should take the admonition to "try the spirits."

"The Lord has said that he will bring the deceivers and hypocrites to judgment. He will, of course, do this through the application of his divine law, which provides that false spirits shall be proclaimed against. "Wherefore it shall come to pass, that if you behold a spirit manifested that you cannot understand, and you receive not that spirit, ye shall ask the Father in the name of Jesus, and if he give not unto you that spirit, that you may know that it is not of God; and it shall be given unto you power over that spirit, and you shall proclaim against that spirit with a loud voice, that it is not of God."—Doc. & Cov. 50: 7.

"He that speaketh whose spirit is contrite, whose language is meek, and edifying, the same is of God, if he obey mine ordinances. And again, he that trembleth under my power shall be made strong, and shall bring forth fruits of praise and wisdom, according to the revelations and truths which I have given you. And again, he that is overcome and bringeth not forth fruits, even according to this pattern, is not of me; wherefore by this pattern ye shall know the spirits in all cases, under the whole heavens!"—Doc. & Cov. 52: 4, 5.

"A prophecy or a spirit manifestation, that is meaningless, or is lacking any prediction in relation to the future, or that fails of fulfillment, is certainly unedifying. These often are delivered in loud and excitable tones; and are among the class that have been a "fruitful source of trouble," a hindrance, instead of a help, to the true spiritual interests of the church. "In both branches and districts the presiding officers should be considered and respected in their offices; nevertheless, the traveling presiding councils of the church being made by the law, their calling and the voice of the church the directing, regulating and advising authorities of the church, and representing it abroad, should when present in either district or branch, be regarded and considered as the leading representative authorities of the church, and be respected as such, their counsel and advice be sought and respected when given; and in cases of conflict, or extremity, their decision should be listened to and regarded, subject to the appeal and adjudication provided for in the law."—Doc. & Cov. 120: 4.

Is there not cause then for alarm, when Saints, in times of "conflict or extremity," go directly opposite from the way that God has appointed in the above revelation and law to the church, and seek for direction from some unauthorized channel. As a result of a disregard to the above instruction, there has come under our own observation, no less than three spirit manifestations given, all claiming to be of God, and yet each conflicting one with the other. In some instances; in addition to prophecies, visions and dreams are given; each one coming in conflict with the law of God, touching the manner in which direction should come.

Satan has ever been an aspirant; he is ever seeking to exercise authority where he has none. Those who act or speak under his direction, will have the same characteristics. This is one way they may be known.

"Branches and districts are to be conducted according to the rules given in the law as directed in a former revelation: they shall take the things which have been given unto them as my law to the church, to be my law to govern my church. And these affairs are not to be conducted by manifestations of the Spirit unless these direction and manifestations come through the regular authorized officers of branch or district. If my people will respect the officers whom I have called and set in the church, I will respect these officers; and if they do not, they cannot expect the riches of gifts and the blessings of direction."—Doc. and Cov. 125: 14.

That the ministry have not always proclaimed against these false spirits, according to the commandment, is quite evident. As a consequence, havoc has been wrought in many localities. However, God has not failed to do according to his promise. Many of these daring spirits know that some of the elders would not have the courage to proclaim against them, but would fear the result and permit "their human sympathies to overcome that which has been written in my Scriptures." As a result these evil spirits have felt secure. But God is ever looking after the interest of his own work and he himself has proclaimed against those who have made false presentations. What a surprise to these false prophets was the last revelation. In a communication from Bro. M. H. Bond to the Saints Herald, April 3, 1901, we copy the following:

"When spiritual gifts, or more properly or safely termed, 'spiritual manifestations,' are made the vehicle for destruction of the peace of Saints, for rebellion against law, or common or majority consent, it is time to begin an analysis of the motives that are impelling our action and the true character of the spiritual influences, as well as of our fleshly associations, that may control us.

"Evil communications corrupt good manners.' Let us, as Saints, not forget this when dealing with men or devils; and let us try to realize what contemptible and ignorant business it is that brings the great and good, the all wise and perfect God down to our level, or endeavor to make him the endorser of our small spites and human sense, or worse—nonsense."

We quote one more extract as follows:

"Strange is it, indeed, if it should not be clear to the student and observer of God's law that an honest, legal, kindly effort to fulfill the law and raise the standard of intelligent worship, should meet with other than hostility and opposition, and that those whom God has set in the church as advisers and helps, 'for the perfecting of the Saints,' should be counted as an enemy, while the seductive flatterer, cheap imitator, and counterfeiter, should be taken to our bosoms, and our confidence, as a friend and adviser instead."

What a sad picture; what a deplorable condition, if it is true that such exists, and we have no reason to think that this, "one of the watchmen," has overpainted the scene. What a cause for alarm! What great need there is for divine wisdom and guidance. Well did the Apostle Paul say, "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Let us then be "strong in the Lord and in the power of his might,"

CHICAGO, ILL. F. M. PITT.

ZIG-ZAGS.

BY J. W. GILBERT.

Pursuant to fulfilling our mission to the Society Islands, wife and I took our leave from the dear Saints of Denver on the 15th of August. Quite a number of the young people and relatives assembled at the union depot to bid us a last farewell. Here we were made to realize how strong the ties had become that we must now partially sever, for we had to say good-by despite the vehement remonstrations from within, and wave adieu to our beloved, sunny Denver.

Bro. and Sr. Duncan, at Colorado Springs, where we stopped over one day, made us welcome and comfortable. Sr. Lillie Baker planned a trip up Cheyenne cañon to Seven Falls, and with business-like facility soon secured conveyance and put up lunch, and we were off for a day's outing among the wonders of nature.

The ride through the balmy air and the pleasant sunshine was truly delightful as we went through the little valley which served as an approach to the canon proper. On either side were cosily situated cottages half hiding in green foliage with well kept lawns beneath, while here and there a rustic seat couched in shady bower and clustering vines—alluring spots to youthful hearts that swell with love's young dream,

As we sped along past pagoda-like pines and jagged rocks, around curves and windings, across babbling brooks and singing rivulets, the blue tinge that softened the monster peaks grew thinner, and revealed in clearer outline the pine-crested slopes and the deep-hued gorges. The increasing sound of rushing water in the stream nearby told us the incline was getting much steeper. But with us there was small concern for crooked roads and steep inclines, for those, with towering cliffs and rugged bluffs, only made our trip the more enjoyable, our climb the more exhilarating, and the scenery the more awe inspiring.

On we went, reveling in nature's luxuries, thanking God for rearing with his mighty strength the everlasting hills and lofty mountains, breaking the monotony of the level plains and giving variety to the elements of nature to please the eye and gladden the heart; and thus we waddled on as pigmies amidst the vastness, peering our eyes and craning our necks to behold the heights, the fissures, the poised boulders, the overhanging ledges, the quaint designs and huge cartoons wrought by invisible hands. We missed that the freedom of the earth is ours; when behold, our progress was stopped short by a great barricade built across the canon with a swinging gate. A man presented himself and would not let us pass; for should we make the least attempt to pass, 'twould bring an ugly scowl upon his brow. But we showed him a piece of metal with a bird stamped upon it with outstretched wings. This seemed to please him so very much that he opened wide the gate and let us pass.

Here was a piece of scenery seldom excelled in beauty and grandeur, visited by nearly every one that comes to Colorado Springs. The only available avenue to it was fenced up and a toll-gate instituted, with 25 cents as the admission for pedestrians, and more for wagons and carriages. Here during the summer season hundreds of people enter daily to visit the famous Seven Falls. We paid our coin and strolled on, but thought such public places of resort should be bought by the state or nation and thrown open for all to enjoy alike, for they are or should be kept for a heritage for all the people. The same condition exists at Glenwood Springs with regard to the hot springs. They are fenced off and housed up so that poor invalids who would bathe their aching limbs in the healthgiving liquid are barred unless they are so fortunate as to possess in abundance the alluring lucre so craved and loved by earth's children. All such places should never be allowed to be gobbled up by private individuals and fenced in from the public, when they are the natural heritage and divinely given hospitals and dispensaries of all God's ailing children.

But approaching such a beautiful sight as the Seven Falls was not a time to be long given to meditation on economics; so after involuntarily resolving what I would try to do if I should ever become a legislator, I resuscitated back to a realization of my surroundings in time to see Bro. Wildermuth step up to a tree by the roadside and peer through a long piece of gas pipe that was fastened to the trunk of the tree so as to point like a telescope to the "Dutchman's Face" high up on a perpendicular cliff. One by one we all had a peep, and sure enough, there it was in almost perfect configuration, stamped in the solid rock to endure the rains and storms of ages, entirely out of reach of the hand or foot of man.

We now drew near the Seven Falls and could hear the splash of the leaping liquid farther up. We passed numbers of people on their return; some on foot, some in carriages, and a great many riding burrows. These little animals are very much in demand in the mountains for traveling in steep and difficult places. They have a marked propensity for going slowly; and true to the characteristics of their illustrious ancestor that Baalam rode, they cannot be induced by lash or spur to attain to more than a very reluctant jog-trot. They are gentle, and are seldom known to kick. That shortcoming evidently comes from the other branch of their progenitors of their hybrid half-brother, the mule. These burros are the joy and delight of the children; they crawl under them and over them, and between their legs; hang on their necks, play with their ears and pull their tails, while the imperturbable animal enjoys a morning sunbath, or revels in the fantastic scenery of an afternoon day-dream. From four to six children will pose for a photo upon the back of one of these little animals. At a souvenir counter near the falls are many pictures on sale, prominent among which is the stoic burrow in groups of jolly boys and girls in varied posture.

At the falls the water comes down in seven distinctly different leaps from a height that is reached by visitors by a series of something over two hundred steps [257.—Ed.] which lead you up past the several ledges or landings of the falls, where the incessant beating of the crystal liquid has worn great basins in the solid rock, where it pauses in its precipitous descent and gathers strength and courage for another leap, until seven times the magnificent performance has been rendered before the eyes of the delighted spectators; the troubled waters at last find momentary rest at the bottom in a miniature lake.

The canon here is very narrow, and we were enclosed on every side by stupendous heights that permitted only a portion of the blue dome of heaven to be seen. People were climbing everywhere. Cameras were shooting at all the most beautiful spots of scenery. Scores of men and women were ascending and descending the long stairs that led to the top of the falls, while children torment-ed the burrows and skipped stones on the water. People from all parts of the country were there sightseeing. They were all good natured and friendly, laying aside the conventionalities of the home town society and sociably conversing together, the easterners asking the westerners about the name of yonder peak; the New Orleans belle daringly seeking information concerning the height of the falls, of a Canadian loyalist, or the climbing pedestrians of different states tracing between breaths their acquaintances back to some common point.

At the upper landing of the falls ladder is a fallen pine tree, close beside the walk; this is literally covered with thousands of pieces of paper bearing the names and monograms of people from every part of our great United States and other countries. Every twig and limb is stuck full and strung to the end with name cards, envelopes, scraps of paper, or anything on which a name could be inscribed. We stood and read the names from a hundred cities, and studied the chirographies of many hands, when, suddenly, there came a peal of thunder reverberating among chasms and peaks, announcing the soon coming of the tiny rain-bow makers. They soon began to patter, and we had to souse in our descent to escape an imminent drenching. We gained our wheels and coasted down the long decline for miles like soaring aerolites, with scarce a foot to the pedal; chasing each other, racing, falling behind, catching up, running ahead, shouting to the hindermost, laughing, flinging care to the wind, growing fat. Thus ended our outing and zig-zags too, till more comes anon.

As soon as the weather will permit and proper locations can be selected there will be pitched near Boston the first of a number of camps for consumptives. This camp (and each succeeding camp will be like it) will consist of ten piano-box tents, arranged in a circle with an open-air fire in the center, and surrounded by a duck wall eight feet high. Each of these tents will be a consumptive's home; a consumptive will sleep there, even through the coldest weather, with no other protection than plenty of felt blankets, felt sleeping boots, and a two gallon jug of hot water.

The tents are made of twelve-ounce duck, are only seven feet high, with four-foot walls, boxed in around the bottom a foot from the ground. They will be lined with weather paper. The flaps will open towards the fire, the ten tents making a little circle about a clean gravel court. In the duck wall which will surround the whole will be a single entrance. The people who live there will wear one heavy suit night and day. They will each of them take one quick soapless bath a week, and will eat three good, hearty meals a day, with coffee in the morning, and hot chocolate any time of the day or night. Their bill of fare will include milk, eggs, vegetables, bread and butter and meat—chiefly beef, mutton or pork, broiled on spits before the fire, or roasted in the embers, or boiled down into soup.

This open life is expected to cure them of their disease. The method is the result of experiments made last winter in a tent on Huntington avenue, by a scientist whose name has not yet been divulged. This gentleman pitched his tent during the coldest part of a January which was more than usually cold, and stayed in there until the early spring, engrossed in his experiments, but finally seeing patients and announcing that he wanted as many consumptives as possible to prove the truth of his theories.

He wants the consumptives still. His theory has been pretty well tested now, but he still wants as many consumptives as will come to him—the worse their condition the better—to put them in his settlements.

"The life there," he said this morning, "quickly fortifies a man's bodily powers; it envelops, then envelops man back toward ancestral or wild life. The skin, nails and hair toughen and thicken; pulmonary catarrh stops; hemorrhages cease. A civilized man loses his sensitiveness; his emotions change. He becomes insensitive and fearless. All his energy goes to nutrition; his intellectual centers are dormant. All his powers are concentrated in building and repair. He falls asleep at twilight and wakes at dawn, ready to eat. Incidental disaster affects him little; he changes from a hot-house plant to an oak. The fear and panic customary to a crowd of consumptives no longer affects him, and thus the greatest danger of hospitalism is avoided.

Baron Larry Nap, chief surgeon and adviser, made this same observation in his Egyptian and Russian campaigns; that incipient consumptives make the best soldiers. They have Spartan courage, and army life properly regulated will cure them. A regiment of consumptives would be no mean enemy.

The camps are merely for the purpose of scientific investigation, and if a patient cannot afford the expenses he will be taken free. The camps will all be near the city, where scientific physicians are within call.—The Kansas City (Mo.) Star, Sept. 3, 1901.

What Really Educates a Child.

The child who runs for a day over an ocean ship has laid in a store of observations worth more than much teaching of mechanical invention and means of transportation. A few weeks spent in making a little garden, planting seeds, caring for the tender growths, gathering and utilizing such produce as may come, will bring the child nearer to the great Nature-mother than much school work and even many excursions for Nature-study. It is play, work, love that educate; spontaneous self-expression, action compelled by inner or outer forces, relations to other individuals.—Edward Howard Griggs, in the October Ladies' Home Journal.

"OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS."
Mrs. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

HOME INFLUENCE.

The education of a child cannot be shifted to the shoulders of teacher or educator. The responsibility rests, first and foremost, with the parents.—September Ladies' Home Journal.

This seems to me to be a subject of great importance, or at least it should be, especially with parents. Surely we cannot give it too much thought. I fear there are but few people who realize the real worth of the power of home influence, and yet we have all been children and carry around with us daily and hourly, thoughts and feelings we have imbibed in the home of our childhood and youth. We are what that home made us. If parents realized this truth as they should, there would be happier homes, better children, nobler men and women, and altogether a different and better world. What is our nation but a vast number of homes? It seems but a small matter, you may say, what kind of a home you have, but a little leaven leavens the whole lump, and who knows but ruin may start its deadly work in your own home. As the streets of Jerusalem are kept clean, every one sweeping before his own door, so must a nation or even a church be kept pure by every man's faithfulness in guiding aright his own home.

Are there not some homes where mothers are neglectful of their duty to the holy trust committed to them? The love of style and fashion fills their hearts to the exclusion of everything else, consequently they give their time and attention to this instead of being devoted to the heart culture of their children. This is left by them for the pastor or Sunday School teacher to do, while mother's attention is being paid to dress or some other like folly. How sad the thought that these neglected children may at the day of judgment be their parents' accusers. Children in their helplessness are like wax to be moulded into patterns. Their characters, their lives, their destinies are in the hands of their parents. The wrecked life, the ruined soul may result alone from lack of youthful training. The little child looks up to father and mother, to him they are goodness, wisdom and power, and all they do is right in the eyes of the child. Now just consider this thought. What pastor or Sunday School teacher has such influence as just mentioned over them. Besides God has not placed them in the care of church officials, but in the care of the parents, and they are responsible to God for the way they train them, and therefore everyone should see to the training of their children aright. They should teach them to pray and to put their trust in God; that will make our homes happier and will create in the child a faith that will not shrink. Who shall receive the welcome home? All they that do the will of the Father. Let each of us be more diligent in the training of our children, setting good examples before them in our homes.

Mrs. M. E. McCORMICK.

How An Angel Looks.

Robin, holding his mother's hand,
Says "good-night" to the big folks all,
Throws some kisses from rosy lips,
Laughs with glee through the lighted hall.
Then in his own crib, warm and deep,
Rob is tucked for a long night's sleep.
Gentle mother, with fond caress,
Slips her hands through his soft brown hair.
Thoughts of his fortune all unknown,
Speaks aloud in an earnest prayer,
"Holy angels, keep watch and ward!
God's good angels, my baby guard!"
"Mamma, what is an angel like?"
Asked the boy in a wondering tone;
"How will they look if they come here,
Watching me while I'm all alone?"
Halt with shrinking and fear spoke he.
Answered the mother tenderly:
"Prettiest faces ever were known,
Kindest voices and sweetest eyes,"
Robin, waiting for nothing more,
Cried, and looked with a pleased surprise,
Love and trust in his eyes of blue,
"I know, mamma, they're just like you."
—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Voice as a Revealer of Character.

There is no greater revealer of character than the human voice. It is the first thing that strikes us in a stranger, or in a new acquaintance. If it has that spontaneous ring of truth that no training can impart we recognize its appeal for confidence. Some voices have the jar of falsehood, and are as full of warning as the hiss of a serpent. The unconscious, natural voice is to be regarded as the index of character. To speak promptly and positively is generally to act promptly and positively; to speak politely is to act politely; and to speak gruffly and rudely is a good way to make rude action easy.—Amelia E. Barr, in the Ladies' Home Journal for August.

The Nose Indicates Character.

"A large nose is always an unfailing sign of a decided character," writes Blanch W. Fisher, in an article on "Reading Character from the Face" in the October Ladies' Home Journal. "It belongs to the man of action, quick to see and to seize opportunity. A small nose indicates a passive nature, one less apt to act, although he may feel as deeply. He will have many theories, while the possessor of a large nose will have deeds to show. Persons with small noses are most loving and sympathizing, but their friendship is not the active kind.

"A nose with the tip slightly tilted is the sign of the heartless flirt. A long nose shows dignity and repose. A short nose, pug-nacity and a love of gayety. An arched nose—one projecting at the bridge—shows thought. A straight nose shows an inclination toward serious subjects. A nose that turns up slightly indicates eloquence, wit and imagination. If tured up much it shows egotism and love of luxury. A nose that slopes out directly from the forehead, that shows no indenting between the eyes, indicates power. If the nose is indented deeply at the root the subject will be weak and vacillating. A nose that turns down signifies that the possessor is miserly and sarcastic.

The United States "Are" or "Is."

We should treat the term "the United States" as we treat any other noun which, though plural in form, is sometimes plural, sometimes singular in meaning. In speaking of the United States, when we mean the several states, we use a plural verb; when we mean the nation, or the governmental entity, which is designated by the term "the United States," we use a singular verb.—The October Ladies' Home Journal.

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

By the GREAT SPECIALIST in TREATING WEAK AND DISEASED HEARTS, FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B.
WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS SPECIAL TREATMENT FREE AS A TRIAL.

To demonstrate the unusual curative powers of his new and complete special treatments by mail for heart disease, short breath, pain in the side, oppression in the chest, irregular pulse, palpitation, smothering spells, puffing of the ankles, or dropsy, Dr. Miles plans two dollars and a half worth free, as a trial, to all who mention this paper.

His treatments are the result of twenty-five years of careful study, extensive research and remarkable experience in treating the various ailments of the heart, stomach and nerves, which so often complicate each case. So astonishing are the results of his complete special treatments that he does not hesitate to offer all persons a trial free.

Nothing could be more generous. Few physicians have such confidence in their remedies. There is no reason why every afflicted person should not avail themselves of this exceedingly liberal offer, as they may never have another such opportunity. No death comes as suddenly as that from heart disease.

Mrs. A. Kronicke of Huntington, Ind., was cured after thirty physicians failed; Mrs. Flora Granger of Bristol, O., after twenty-two; Jas. E. Waite, the noted actor, after a 40 75 had pronounced him incurable; Mrs. Frank Smith of Chicago, after five leading physicians had given her up; Mr. Julius Kestler of Chicago, after ten; Mr. J. Parker after sixteen failed. A thousand references to, and testimonials from, the physicians, Bankers, Farmers and their wives, will be sent on request. Send at once to Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., 209 State St., Chicago, Ill., for free examination blank, pamphlets and free treatment certificate if you like.

Foreign Colonies in the Heart of Washington.

The official residence of an Ambassador or Minister accredited to Washington, is foreign territory, technically, if rented; but actually, if owned by its government. Our laws have no hold upon diplomats or their attaches detailed here. Their abodes enjoy immunity from our legal processes. Seven foreign countries own their embassies or legations in Washington. The land upon which they are built is exempt from taxation.—The 'October Ladies Home Journal.

CANCER A CURABLE DISEASE.

Many people have an idea that cancer is incurable, but we have over 150 original and recent testimonials of cures of actual cancer, the sufferers having taken 8 to 24 bottles of the famous B. B. Among others cured was Mrs. M. L. Adams, of Fredonia, Alabama. Had an eating cancer, the bones of her nose and upper part of her mouth entirely eaten out. Could only eat strained soup, yet the cancer healed perfectly by taking 14 bottles of B. B. B. Allan Grant, Sparta, Georgia, had painful sore on lip called epithelial cancer, also much pains in bones and weakness in back; 10 bottles of B. B. B. healed the sore and gave him strength, and made his blood pure and rich. B. B. B. heals ulcers, scrofula, eczema, cancer in any form, old sores, etc. Druggists or by express prepaid, $1.00. The Book of Mormon in the Literature of the World.

The above is the subject of a paper written by Sr. Louise Palfrey and read at the General Convention last April. This excellent article will appear in the Autumn Leaves for October, and is the introduction to a course of reading on American Archaeology prepared by the same writer for the Religio-Literary Society. This course has been prepared after a careful examination of the best authors who have written upon this very interesting subject, and no pains nor labor have been spared to make it the best possible. We bespeak for this article and the entire course a careful reading by all Book of Mormon students and those interested in the subject of which it treats.

PRICE, $1.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

ENSIGN PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Make all remittances, and address all communications to ENSIGN PUBLISHING HOUSE, Box B, Independence, Jackson County, Missouri.

New subscriptions can begin at any time. If possible to avoid it, never send silver as it is liable to wear through the envelope and be lost. Always give the name of the post office to which your paper is sent or we can not find your name on our list.

When desiring your address changed, give both the old and new address. Papers will be discontinued one month from the time subscriptions expire, unless ordered continued.

In making remittances, money orders are preferable for they are absolutely safe. If you can avoid it, do not send coin or stamps. Canadian stamps are an entire loss, and Canadian currency is only worth sixty cents on the dollar to us, for that it is all worth nothing for that matter. Letters should be addressed, and orders and drafts made payable to

A CRITICISM CONSIDERED.

"I am of the opinion you are altogether too quick in stopping the paper of good customers where their remittances do not immediately follow your notice. You ought to know by your books that those who have subscribed for your paper from the first and always paid should be considered before stopping their paper. I have heard so many complaints of this that I am almost afraid to take orders, lest an early offense should be made. Please give this your thought."

"Yours for the right."

This is the verdict reached by one of our good brethren, upon hearing the statement of ONE side—the delinquent subscriber; and lest there should be others in the future, who might form the same opinion from like ex parte testimony, we here present the other side, and believe when it is considered, our rules will not be found either hasty, unjust, or inconsistent. In the first place no newspaper man, publisher, business manager, or editor, likes to discontinue a "good" subscriber's paper. Every name dropped from their list lessens, to that extent, their influence as a journal, and detracts from the value of the paper as an advertising medium; usually, the main financial support of a successful paper comes from the advertiser, for which reason the bona fide circulation of the paper is all essential in fixing the standard of rates to be charged in remuneration.

It will, therefore, be understood that where the advertising department of a paper is to be made a success, the continual effort must be to increase, instead of decreasing, the number of copies distributed each issue. If this is true where success depends upon this feature, does it not occur to the reader that this is equally, if not of far more force, where the income of the paper depends so largely upon subscriptions, as in the case of the ENSIGN, whose advertising space is small, and the class of advertisements limited to those which properly may be admitted to the columns of a religious journal. These facts have been taken into consideration when framing the rule of which our brother complains, and having the interests and success of the ENSIGN at heart—as our appeal for an increase of subscribers, made from time to time, show—it ought to be apparent to all our friends, that in every way possible, we not only try to hold those we have already secured, but to add others as rapidly as we may do so.

But let us look at the rule relating to delinquents, itself. At the termination of the time to which the subscriber has paid, a notice printed on cherry colored paper, is inserted in the copy of the ENSIGN sent to the usual address, which reads:

"SUPPLEMENT TO ZION'S ENSIGN.

"Dear Reader:—Your subscription to the ENSIGN expires with this issue. If you wish the paper continued, please notify us at once. We do not wish to discontinue it, but unless you order it continued within one month, we will take it for granted that you do not desire it longer, and will drop your name from our list. Address all communications to,

"Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Mo."

Three weeks are permitted to pass without stopping the paper; when, if no response has been received, another notice, printed on yellow paper, is inserted in the copy of the ENSIGN sent to the address of the delinquent, which reads:

"SUPPLEMENT TO ZION'S ENSIGN.
"IMPORTANT!"

"Dear Reader:—You are among the number who were notified a few weeks ago that your subscription had expired, and your paper would be discontinued unless we heard from you within one month, but as we have as yet received no reply, and thinking it an oversight rather than a desire to have your name dropped from our list, we send this second notice.

"If you are not able to send the amount of subscription for one year, or six months, or even three months, and still want the ENSIGN continued, if you will write us, stating when you think you will be able to pay for it, we will continue.

"We do not desire to deprive any one of the ENSIGN because they cannot pay for it just at the time of expiration, but we must hear from them in regard to it, that the proper entries may be made on our books. Address all communications to,

"Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Mo."

Two weeks more are allowed to go by, making five weeks in all, that the paper is continued before being dropped from the list, ample time to hear from countries across the ocean. All that is asked upon the part of the ENSIGN management is, that some kind of a reply shall be given. If parties are so situated that it is not convenient to send remittance promptly, a simple statement on a postal card, costing but one cent, will be sufficient to obviate any difficulty caused by the discontinuance of a paper in which one may feel interested. If necessary, when notice of a desire for the paper is received, a credit of six months is extended, but not beyond that time, unless special arrangements, satisfactory to the management, are made. We fail to see wherein this rule works a hardship upon, or does an injustice to, any one. Where any name is dropped it is because the individual is too careless and neglectful to send the advice asked for, that we may keep from our lists an ever increasing indebtedness.

We do not keep a ledger account with subscribers—that would be cumbersome and costly—and have no means of knowing those who have subscribed for the ENSIGN "from the first." We do keep a record of the expiration of each subscription, and without partiality or discrimination, using all alike, send the above notices at the date of such expiration. Many papers do not do this, but drop the name from their mailing lists at once, if no voluntary notice is received asking continuance. Others send the paper right along and invariably accumulate a debt of thousands of dollars in two or three years, finally sending the names of those in arrears to some Newspaper Collection Agency to systematically dun the delinquent, and threaten him with legal proceedings, until the debt is settled, for which service the publisher is charged 25 cents on every dollar thus collected. We leave our reader to judge which of the three methods outlined above is the most acceptable and wise; we certainly prefer the one we have adopted, and we think our subscribers will also.

If our friends will only write us a card, stating their desire to have the ENSIGN continued, for which remittance will be made later, we shall very gladly comply with their request. Under the rule formerly in force, of sending the paper until the subscriber ordered it stopped, dissatisfaction often arose when payment for several years' arrears was requested, and the query has been made, "Why didn't you stop my paper when the time was up to which it was paid?" This is no way to do business," and other remarks equally expressive of the disapproval of the methods then employed. After giving the matter careful thought, as suggested by our brother, the rule now in force was adopted, and it has proved the most satisfactory generally of any procedure previously used. Any of our subscribers who do not wish their paper stopped when their time is expired, may have it continued by sending us a definite request to not discontinue until they order it done; to such we will send notice of expiration, reminding them it is time to remit—as many do not always keep track of dates on the labels on the paper—but we will not stop sending the paper to these parties until they so instruct.

In conclusion we state it as our opinion, that our efforts to deal fairly and justly by every one, deserves the co-operation of our patrons, and we believe we shall have it, as they more fully comprehend our methods in this matter.

DAVID W. WIGHT.

Friday of last week the shocking intelligence of the untimely death of Bro. David W. Wight at Ogden, Utah, was circulated among the Saints of Independence. Even yet it seems hard to realize that his work on this side of the veil has been closed. He was a young man of more than ordinary ability and gave much promise of a life of usefulness and power for good in the cause of Christ to which his life was consecrated and devoted. He was of a kindly disposition, fearless and prompt in the discharge of duty, and never lacked for warm friends where he was known. At the organization of the Lamoni Stake last April he was chosen from the quorum of seventy to be Second Counselor to President John Smith (Bro. J. A. Gunsolley being chosen First Counselor), and it was expected that next year the stake would have the benefit of his labors.

The cause of his death has been stated as appendicitis. The last news received by Bro. R. J. Parker—who was for a time associated with him in the Rocky Mountain mission—was that it was thought he was improving, and the news of his death was hard to believe. The family and relatives of our departed brother have the deepest sympathy of all who knew him; with them they have a sense of personal loss, and while sorrowing that he has been taken from us, find comfort in the thought that he fell at the post of duty in his mission field, as falls a hero in the conflict and in the victory which he has achieved, believing that the Lord has called him to a grander work than could be accomplished in this life. His memory will be cherished as a noble, self-sacrificing and faithful disciple of the Master, whose greatest pleasure in life was in seeking to win souls to the truth as it is in Christ. He was "faithful unto death," and a crown of life is won.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE ENSIGN needs the financial support of every member in the church. Is it getting yours? Please give us a personal answer, enclosing a dollar for a year's subscription by postal order, express order, bank draft, or stamps, the former preferred.

WE learn from Sr. Marie E. Dickey, of Viola, Illinois, that Bro. E. Pine was seriously hurt by an explosion while working in the coal mine at Gilchrist, Illinois. His right side is badly bruised, some of his ribs broken, his right eye put out. Bro. and Sr. Pine request the prayers of the Saints in his behalf. If Bro. Russel is near they would be glad to have him come and see them.

THE gospel of "Repentance" was sent to be preached in all the world; and we wish it could be emphasized to all who are not doing their duty by the publishing departments of the church. THE ENSIGN wants and SHOULD HAVE at least 10,000 paying subscribers from among the number of members in the church. Some of our elders are very active in calling repentance to all whom they find are not taking the church papers, and are obtaining results. Urge this matter everywhere, brethren, and see if we can't get what we should have in this line. We want to pay off our debt on this plant and obtain what is very badly needed—new presses and other material. Help us, and help us NOW, EVERYBODY.

Extracts from Letters.

ELDER A. M. BAKER, Mountain Grove, Missouri, October 3: We had a splendid conference at Pomona. Baptized six at Woodside and two at Cain Hill. Have been laboring with Bro. Sparing the past month and find him a jovial co-laborer. We intend holding a series of meetings in Springfield branch, commencing the 6th inst.

ELDER D. C. WHITE, Bedison, Missouri, September 30: Last night Bro. William T. Ross and I closed a tent meeting at Ravenwood. We had a fair hearing all through, and the last night a crowded tent, Book of Mormon being the subject. We believe the Lord has a people there, and we know the devil has. Four of our tent ropes were cut the last two nights. We go to attend district conference October 5th. Bro. William T. is a good companion in the gospel work. I am hopeful in the work.

INDEPENDENCE.

Sr. D. W. Wight and others whose names we did not learn, arrived with the remains of her husband at Kansas City about 7:30, and left for Lamoni at 11:25 Wednesday morning.

Potatoes are getting more plentiful in the market, but those raised here are hardly fit for the table, being hard and unpalatable, and consequently undesirable. Some exceedingly fine in quality and size are being shipped in and generally sell from $1.15 to $1.20 per bushel, or 30 cents per peck. Apples good in quality and size are plentiful, and prices range from 80 cents to $1.00 per bushel.

Bro. Joseph Luff returned from the west about ten days since, feeling quite ill; though slightly improved he is still incapacitated for much active work. Sr. Luff, who has been visiting home folks in Canada about three weeks, returned Thursday of last week.

Sr. Lucy Lee returned from Colorado Springs, Colorado, after a pleasant and beneficial visit in Colorado, Tuesday evening. She visited for about ten days in the Springs, after a visit of several weeks at Rocky Ford with the families of Brn. Bozarth and Layton, who she says are doing well and are in good health. Grandma Davidson was quite ill recently, but is now again in usual health. Bro. Chas. R. Duncan was brought from Husted, Colorado, where he had been living recently, about two weeks ago, to his old home, 655 East Willamette street, Colorado Springs, and though very weak, is slightly improved, and hopeful of recovery. He desires that the Saints will earnestly remember him in their prayers continually. We are glad to hear of the improvement in his condition and trust his life may be prolonged for many years of usefulness.

Bro. Stretrett and family, from Utah, arrived in the city Wednesday of last week and will locate here.

The Independence local Z. R. L. S., assisted by the First Kansas City and Armstrong locals, will give a literary and musical entertainment October 21, 1901, at 8 p. m., at the church of the Second Kansas City branch. An admission of 15 and 25 cents will be charged, the proceeds to be used for the benefit of the Second K. C. branch. The Independence social committee will be in charge. All are invited.

Our aged Bro. Joseph Westwood, Sr., still continues very feeble. He is anxious to be released and to be at rest. So also is our other dear aged brother, C. J. Clark. They will not be strangers on the other side; their long service in the Master's cause in this world will make them welcome among their fellow workers of all ages. Our brief separation will bring to them blissful experiences which we shall understand, if faithful, when our work has been well finished, as has that of these brethren. May peace be with them to the end. Since writing the above Bro. Westwood has passed to the other side, departing this life Monday about 4 p. m. The funeral took place from the residence on the south side at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday, brief services being held, the intention being to have a sermon preached at some future date. He was nearly 90 years of age.

Bishop May is negotiating for a carload of Minnesota potatoes, which will be sold to the Saints at cost, somewhere about 80 cents per bushel.

The concrete gangs are about through with the street from the Square to the Pacific bridge, and two gangs of bricklayers have laid the bricks past Bro. Maguire's store on Electric street, and will probably reach Clark street by next Sunday. There is a delay in binding the brick already laid, on account of the cement supply failing to reach the contractors, consequently the street is only open for wagons from the Square to Pleasant street. A couple of weeks of good weather will finish the bricklaying, and then the side walks will require attention, but it is probable that matter will reach into late next spring at the rate the matter is going now.

Sunday morning was wet and disagreeable out of doors, and the attendance at the services was very slight. Elder B. J. Scott was the speaker at the 11 o'clock service. At 1:30 p. m. Alma, Myron and Ethel Roberts were baptized in the font by Apostle Joseph Luff, and were confirmed in the afternoon by Brn. B. J. Scott and Frank Criley, Bro. Scott being spokesman for Myron and Ethel. It being the first Sunday in the month and communion service, quite a goodly number were in attendance at this service. It was a profitable and enjoyable occasion, Brn. Garrett, Williamson, Criley and Murphy in charge. At night Pres. Garrett was the speaker, the attendance much better than in the morning, the rain having ceased before noon.

Friday, of last week, Bro. J. A. Robinson, Sr., returned from a business trip to Oklahoma, a very sick man, suffering from an aggravated attack of cholera morbus. Monday night he was troubled, to some extent, with heart failure, and yesterday, Wednesday, there were typhoid indications. He is in a very serious condition, but it is hoped that he will be spared to continue his work here. He has always been an exceedingly zealous and active man in church, as well as in business, affairs, and has, at times, taxed his physical strength. While in spirit he is as ambitious as ever, his physical powers are waning, and, like others, he will have to be content to let younger men push the work, reserving his forces for counsel. His many friends will join in praying that his days may be lengthened out to many days of usefulness.

LAMONI, IOWA.

The Saints of this vicinity were shocked last week by the sad news of the sudden demise of Elder David W. Wight, second counselor to the president of the Lamoni Stake, who died at Ogden, Utah, October 3d, of appendicitis, after a short illness. The remains are expected to arrive here Wednesday, the 9th, for interment. While the family have the heartfelt sympathy of all the Saints and friends, yet we do not mourn as those without a hope, for Bro. Wight was in his mission field and actively engaged in the work of the Master when he was stricken, and none can for a moment doubt that he has gone to a glorious rest.

On Wednesday, October 2d, Bro. R. S. Salyards was called to Lone Rock to preach the funeral sermon of Gracie, the infant daughter of Bro. Robert and Sr. Sarah Johnson, who died on the 1st inst.

Elder J. R. Lambert and Presidents John Smith and J. A. Gunsolley returned last week from the Dow City reunion.

On Sunday last Elder H. A. Stebbins was at Pleasanton and preached the funeral sermon of Sr. Hannah Reese, widow of Elder Abram Reese. Sr. Reese was born in Wales November 2, 1819, married A. Reese in 1844; in 1848 accepted the gospel; came to America in 1855; joined the Reorganization in 1867, came to Pleasanton in 1881, where she departed this life October 5th, at the age of 91 years, 11 months and 3 days.

Other Sunday pulpits were occupied by Lamoni brethren as follows: Greenville, John Smith and R. J. Lambert; Davis City, J. R. Lambert and W. N. Ray; Evergreen, E. N. Snively; Elliston, R. M. Elvin; Union, F. E. Cochran and F. M. Weld.

Lamoni, morning hour, Elder C. H. Lake; evening hour, Elder O. B. Thomas; the afternoon prayer and sacrament service was in charge of Pres. J. A. Gunsolley, assisted by Elders James Allen and C. J. Peat; Saints' Home, Elder J. C. Clapp.

Elders Hema C. Smith and F. A. Smith came in Tuesday morning to be in attendance at the funeral services of Bro. D. W. Wight.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Bro. J. S. Whiteaker and wife arrived a few days ago from Wisconsin, with a desire to make this city their home.

Our aged and worthy Scotch brother, F. C. Graham, is confined to his bed by affliction. We spent a short time with him and were encouraged by hearing some of his remarkable testimonies.

Our series of meetings closed last night at South St. Joseph. The attendance as a rule was poor, though a few strangers heard a part of the great message. We enjoyed excellent freedom in presenting the word, which is evidence of God's acceptance.

Bro. Wilford H. Ruffing, a man of good address and pleasing manners, was baptized last evening at the church. His confirmation and subsequent promises were of an encouraging nature. We shall wait and bid welcome to the other half of the family.

Bro. Wm. Lawrenson occupied at the South St. Joseph mission last night. Bro. L. is one of our staunch helps in the work.

Bro. Wm. Lewis has received word to go at once upon his mission to Wales. Bro. Frank Pearce, of Kansas, will also go with him. He wishes to start by the 1st of November.

Bro. John Burlington filled our Tuesday night appointment at the Aspey mission. His family lately arrived and he is now quite well located in housekeeping and business.

The choir at the church rendered some excellent music last evening, led by Bro. D. C. Kinnaman, with Sr. Pearl Smith as organist, and the two sons of Bro. Christianson with their wind instruments. The rendering of "Send forth the reapers" was specially inspiring. What a power for good these musicians have, some of whom have aided us very much in our mission work, especially Sr. Josie Isleib.

Still in the ranks,
J. M. TERRY.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Sunday's services were, preaching at West Pullman by Bro. Sheehy in the morning, and in the evening on the south side; Bro. Earl occupied at the west side, while Bro. McCallum spoke in the morning at the south side. The afternoon, on the south side, was the monthly union sacramental service, which was well attended.

There appeared among us one of those "wandering stars," or religious anarchists that are occasionally in evidence at meetings in cities. This one calls himself Isaiah the 80th; the name was given to him at his birth by a sister two years of age, who arose in the cradle and said, "Call him Isaiah." Later in life angels have called on him several times, together with his claim that he is in constant communion with the Almighty, makes him quite important in his conceited hallucinations, he had just about finished his tour of the churches of Chicago, delivering his message. We did not think it complimentary to us to leave us until the last. He told us though that the last should be first, and the first should be last. It does not take the Saints long to recognize the "call" of such "clouds without water."

The Religio on the west side now holds its meetings Tuesday night, and reports enjoyable sessions.

A Bro. Chapman, formerly a Outelite in their palmy days in Mant, attended services in the city. He was the guest of Bro. Geo. Blakely. He is reminiscent of Kirtland's early day; is anxious to again visit the spot of his childhood there.

Some strangers have been coming to meeting since the tent meeting on the south side.

Bro. F. M. Smith, of Lamoni, visited us during the week.

Bro. Deam has recently started a printing plant at Morgan Park.

Brn. F. M. Sheehy and R. S. Nayaka have changed their address to 1846 Jackson Bvd.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Sunday, September 22d, we had preaching at 11 a. m. by Bishop Chas. A. Parkin, and at 7:45 p. m. by John A. Saxe. The attendance was good at both services. Quite a number of visiting Saints were there. Among others was Bro. W. C. Burroughs lately returned from the Philippines; he has been on the sick list. He is now located on Angel Island.

Elder J. A. Anthony preached at Oakland.

There was the regular attendance at the Religio Friday evening, at the home of Bro. Roy Davis. The interest in the Book of Mormon study still keeps up. Last Sunday our morning sermon was by J. A. Anthony, and by your correspondent in the evening.

Elder J. A. Saxe preached at Oakland.

Our rainy season has commenced; we have had some quite heavy rains already. Sunday afternoon there was quite a down pour. The grass has already sprouted on the hills and in the empty lots.

The long strike here is at last broken after a stubborn resistance of eleven weeks. All the teamsters are permitted to return to work today, providing they can find work to return to. We now hope that disturbances may come to an end and business improve. All well with the Saints.

DENVER, COLORADO.

The weather man says it snowed Saturday night, but it turned to rain and there was no sign of snow in the morning.

The festival of Mountain and Plain took up all the time last week. I suppose it was enjoyed by a good many, but to us it was like a circus, the same thing over again.

Bro. R. T. Cooper, of Chicago, was in the city from Friday till Sunday. He is running from St. Louis to Denver and will be here two days of each week hereafter. He is thinking of bringing Mrs. Cooper here and making this his future home; we have plenty of room for such Saints.

Bro. and Sr. Herbert Stuart buried their baby Sunday, the 6th inst. Funeral in charge of the writer, sermon by Elder J. B. Roush. This is the third child they have lost in two years.

Elder Joseph Luff gave us a call and preached two sermons on his way home from the coast.

Quite a number of the Saints from a distance were in attendance at the festival of Mountain and Plain. I wonder if they will be in attendance at the district conference in February. I wonder—we shall see.

The Sunday services at the church were quite well attended. Preaching at 11 a. m. by Elder Roush. Sacrament service at 6 p. m.

Elder James Kemp was in the city last week to meet Sr. Kemp on her return from visiting her daughter in Utah.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

WILLIAMS BAY, Wis., Aug. 30.
Editor Ensign—On June 23 was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of Miss Bessie Williams, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Williams, of East Delavan, Wisconsin. She was taken in the bloom of life. She was married in a short time. A large turnout at the funeral, and many hearts were made sad. Oh how uncertain is this life!

From there I started towards our district conference to be held at Wheatville, Crawford county, calling on the Saints at Wilder and meeting with them on Sunday in their sacrament service; also preached once: the Lord blessed us. The Saints of this place are alive to the work of the Master.

June 16th met with the Saints at Oregon, speaking twice in the home of Bro. Robinson; only a few Saints present. We should all try to be present at meetings and thus not discourage those who do attend.

June 21st called on the Saints at Madison, preaching twice in Bro. Stephens' house. At this place Bro. O. N. Dutton came with horse and buggy and we drove to the conference, a distance of about one hundred and thirty miles; the weather was very hot and dry, but "Jack" took us through the sand and over the hills until we reached the conference grounds.

June 29th and 30th found us assembled in conference. Bro. C. H. Burr and A. V. Closson were in attendance and did us good service. May the Lord bless them. The meetings were grand. The Saints made the meetings a success in every way, and the Spirit was present. In one testimony meeting there was twenty-four testimonies given in seventeen minutes and all rejoiced in the work. Here is where Bro. L. Houghton and F. L. Sawley did a good work some time ago, and the Lord is blessing the labor done.

The next day Bro. Dutton and the writer turned our horse towards the east, to where the district tent had been stored for the winter. We at once loaded it on the cars to be used by Bro. Chatburn and Robinson in the city of Madison, and went on our way through the dust and heat, calling on some of the Saints and friends along the way until we reached the home of Bro. Dutton.

July 19th was called to assist in an elders court, a very unpleasant task indeed. On the 21st met with the Saints at Lyons; preached twice. They are true to the work. And on the 24th called at the tent in the city of Madison where Bro. Chatburn and Robinson were trying to get the gospel before the people. Only a few that cared to hear, so few that the brethren began to get discouraged. The writer did what he could to assist and cheer them. All at once who should step into the tent but Bro. G. H. Hilliard, and you all know what he would have to say and how he would say it. All right, Bro. H., come again.

On the 26th Bro. Hilliard and the writer, together with the branch officers, had the unpleasant task of dealing with some members who would not live faithfully. Oh, how sad that any have to be expelled from the church. On the 28th Bro. Hilliard and the writer met with the Saints at Wilder. The day was warm but Bro. H. spoke to us three times, and the next day he went on to Janesville, then to East Delavan, and the writer back to Madison, assisting in tent work until August 2d. At noon we had the pleasure of baptizing Bro. Oscar Carpenter's wife, in one of the beautiful lakes near the city. And with her kind nature we believe her to be an honor to the church.

At 2 p. m. I was on train moving toward the Flora Fountain branch, where we held a two days' meeting, August 3d and 4th, and we had a time long to be remembered. A good turnout, good interest, and the Spirit was present to a marked degree. I preached six times, held one prayer and one sacrament meeting; baptized Bro. Banner's wife and they returned home happy in the work. On Sunday the house would not hold all that came. The Saints and friends came prepared to stay all day, bringing their dinners with them, and at the noon hour we repaired to the grove and did justice to the meal. I remained during the week and spoke twice, and thus I feel encouraged in the work there.

August 10th found us on our way to the Rockview Ridge branch for a two days' meeting. And on Saturday, to our surprise, many of the Saints of the Flora branch came over to enjoy the meetings with us. That is right, dear brethren and sisters, come again. Many were caused to rejoice, and all went to their homes encouraged in the work, and with a desire to live near to God and do His will. I preached four times and held two other meetings. I called on Bro. John Blackburn and Bro. Oates, of Lancaster, where the elders have often been made to feel at home. From there I called on Bro. Dodge and Lighty, of Linemore. And they are always pleased to meet an elder. May God bless them. On the 17th called at Livingston where I found Bro. and Sr. Anderson, Bro. A. had gotten the use of a nail, and I spoke twice to a small but attentive audience. Do not be discouraged, Bro. A. I also met at the home of Bro. A. Gratz, some eight miles away, and found them alive in the work. And on the 22d went to Blue Mounds where Bro. and Sr. Rogers live; we got the use of the church and preached twice. The church being in use over Sunday we called on the Saints at Adamsville and found the Holiness people there with their tent. But with all their music and noise, only a few would come forward to be prayed for; it was confirming the Saints more and more in the Latter Day work.

I went from there to Madison where I found that Bro. Robinson and Jots had laid aside their tent and had gone out on the street corner. While the former felt a little timid on the corner, the latter felt at home; so the story was being told by the "Jots" man, and many had been listening; one had been baptized and others gave their names, and more are interested. These brethren have done a good work in the city. They are now looking for a new location. I stopped two days with them and came on home for over Sunday and will be away Monday next.

In conclusion will say that I had indeed one of the most pleasant and satisfactory trips I ever took through the district; found so many of the Saints alive to the work and striving to "come up higher," and doing what they can to help the work along, remembering that it takes some money for the elder to use for their traveling expenses. May the Lord bless the kind hands and hearts, and may you ever remember all the elders of Israel as well.

Let us labor for the redemption of Zion and the salvation of her people.

In bonds,

W. A. McDOWELL.

LIMERICK, O., Aug. 29.

Editor Ensign—I have been on the war path since May 16th, some of the time alone, and a part of the time with others of the missionary force. Bro. Elmer Long, of Creola, has been with me several weeks, is a valiant and worthy soldier; the enemy will have to struggle if he recaptures him. I find the proverb still true: "Wherever God erects a house of prayer, The devil always builds an altar there."

Many of the members are almost dead, no apparent, spiritual life in them; they are drugged with the spirit of the world. Prayers and exhortations seem to be fruitless in arousing them to the full realization of their real status. If a show, bean dinner or political gathering is on hand, these are usually present; but if there is to be Saints' meeting or preaching nearer, they become suddenly too unwell to go, or it is too hot, too cold, too muddy, or some other cause which Satan will suggest to keep them away.

Some families take neither the Herald, Ensign nor Autumn Leaves, know nothing about the progress of the work; are indifferent as to family duties. What will the Shepherds, placed over these flocks which have gone astray for the want of being properly looked after, answer to the "Chief Shepherd" when called up to answer by and by?

The work in this field is not as prosperous as it once was. Causes have brought about the present status with many. There are those who have continued faithful, who have not heeded the "Siren singers," and are up to date along all the lines of church work. They are oases in the desert, where the weary may take rest and be refreshed while sowing the seed of the kingdom. I am working for the promised "rest."

Ever laboring and praying that Zion may prosper, I am

As ever,

BEAVER, Mo., Sept. 21.

Editor Ensign—I am glad to inform your readers that the prolonged drouth has been broken by weekly refreshing showers during late month, and all kinds of garden vegetables and other seeds planted since the rain, are doing nicely; oats are almost a total failure. This has truly been a trying season, owing to the drouth; its like has never been known to the oldest settlers; but notwithstanding the heat and severe dry weather, our never failing springs have continual flow of pure, cold, crystal clear water, and we have no reason to complain after all, as this country has never had a total failure as yet, either in grain or fruit; as it is, I am told that we have the best crops, and better prospects than have been seen elsewhere. Early corn is of but little value, while some of our late corn will yield about twenty to thirty-five bushels per acre, other late seed accordingly, and we have an abundance of fruit for home use, and some for the markets. However, like the children of Israel, the Saints and sinners grumble at times, for what we may have brought upon ourselves by reason of careless living.

Saints continue to move in here, and others write us that they are coming. But notwithstanding the many good chances and bargains in land and homes, my advice is, to the Saints, that they prepare the way before them, by first making our country a visit, and see for themselves; for notwithstanding that this is a very healthy country, it is full of hills, valleys and timber, and more or less stony or gravelly in places, which would not suit some people who have been used to the prairie and smooth sailing altogether; so a hint in time may save trouble.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

JACOB E. SWIGART.

ROSLYN, Wash., Aug. 30.

Editor Ensign—In company with Bro. John Davis I left Stewartsville in May, for our mission field, the state of Washington; trying to be as cheerful as I could, but when bidding good by to wife and children and brethren and sisters, my feelings were more than I could control. Staying over night in St. Joseph with relatives, we took the morning train by way of Salt Lake City, stopping over Sunday with Bro. E. Barrows. Met with the Saints in Sunday School; at 11 a. m. met for prayer and testimony meeting. Bro. John Davis assisting the presiding elder. Preaching at 7:30 p. m. by the writer, assisted by Bro. Davis. Renewed acquaintances with Bro. Pender and wife.

Monday morning boarded train for Brigham City where the writer was partly raised, and united with the Reorganized church. I noticed the Brighamites have not changed their polygamy doctrine, but dare not practice it. In conversation with one of the Utah elders he said he was glad to meet with a couple of Josephite elders, but was glad to say he was a polygamist Brighamite.

We left Brigham City for Castle Rock, where we commenced preaching, making our home with Bro. S. Crum. The Saints have a fine little church. The presiding elder, Wm. N. Williams, gave out preaching for ten nights. We got acquainted with the Saints; they are faithful and energetic, and were kind to us in assisting us to getting places to preach in else where, and gave us money to travel with. May the Lord bless them all for their kindness in gospel work. They have a fine Sunday School, Bro. Geo. Appleman as superintendent, and Sr. McKluney secretary. I am pleased to see the Sunday Schools prosper for it is a nursery for the church.

We went to Little Falls, ten miles from Castle Rock, with the intention of preaching there. We asked the minister of the Evangelical church, the only one there, for the use of his church. He said he would have to refuse us. Bro. Davis told him we would like to tell the people what we believe. He said, "I know all about you people. One of your deacons told that all the other denominations would be servants to the Saints in heaven." Bro. Davis told him he would better be a servant in heaven than a slave in hell. The writer told him we would get the Oddfellows' hall for preaching, and asked him if he would come to hear us. No sir, he said, I know all about you Saints. So we bid him good day.

We got permission for the use of the hall. Bro. Davis preached the following night, only one lady came in time for meeting, and seeing no one else there she did not stay, so we gave up trying to hold meetings there. We were staying in the hotel, and to be saving with our money, so we could have enough to get back to Castle Rock, we went without breakfast, and as the train did not leave there till 2 p. m. we walked around like two forsaken children. We went to the depot at noon and met a gentleman who inquired if we were going to have meeting that night in the hall. We told him no, that the people did not come out, so we were going to Castle Rock. He kindly invited us to go with him to the hotel for dinner, saying he would be glad to have us go; and of course we were just hungry enough to say yes. The Lord knew what we needed, His name be praised.

We got back to Castle Rock, commenced meetings for another week, and at the close a lady gave her name for baptism, the writer being requested to baptize her; so one more was added to the church.

Leaving the Saints at Castle Rock feeling well in the work, we arrived in Tacoma July 31st, making our home with Bro. J. H. Vaneaton and family who provided for our wants. They are a faithful family in the gospel work. They hold meeting on Sunday in their house and at Bro. Emmerson's, son of the presiding elder. They have a membership of twenty-five, also a Sunday School, with Bro. Townson, superintendent, and Sr. Elizabeth Emmerson, secretary. The Saints are talking of building a church in Tacoma; hope they will have success in their effort.

Having done what we thought we could at Tacoma, we took train for Roslyn, arriving at this place on the 27th of August. We are stopping with Mr. and Sr. Holmes. Bro. Davis preached last night in the church which is a neat building finished and ready for dedication. The writer was made acquainted with Sr. Enge and her children, and quite a number of good, kind hearted Saints. We expect to labor here as wisdom shall direct. My regards to all the Saints of old Farwest district.

Your brother in Christ,

D. E. POWELL.

WATERLOO, Ia., Sept. 21.

Editor Ensign—Nearly a year ago my husband and myself made a trip through a part of northwestern Missouri with reference to locating somewhere in the "regions round about," and ever since I have thought I would write something of the impression the trip made on me, and also to let the Saints we met know they are still kindly remembered; for everywhere we went we were received like members of one family. To me the Saints seem truly related to me, none of them like strangers, but all brothers and sisters. This is one great comfort to me in being a Saint.

But of our trip: We went from Waterloo direct to St. Joseph, Missouri; from there to Stewartsville, where we stayed over night at the comfortable hotel kept by Bro. Haden, and had a very pleasant visit with him. In the morning we visited Bro. and Sr. Andrew Lewis, whom we had met at the first reunion at Monroe, Iowa. Bro. Lewis took us out in his carriage and showed us the surrounding country. We had a very pleasant time there also.

From Stewartsville we went to Cameron where we stopped at Bro. and Sr. Elvert's, coming in the evening in time to hear part of a sermon preached at their house by Bishop Kelley whom we met for the first time. We also met Bro. Cushman and a number of the Cameron Saints. While here we got a rig, and Bro. Ballinger acting as guide, drove about, looking at the country. The country both at Stewartsville and Cameron is a trifle more rolling than with us, and while it is a nice country we did not like the ditches or the narrow roads, forty feet being the width I think, while in Iowa they are sixty feet wide.

From Cameron we went to Richmond where we stayed all night, stopping several hours at Lathrop on account of our train being late. From what we could see from the train and from town we liked the looks of the country about Lathrop the best of anything we saw for general farming. From Richmond we went to Higginsville, crossing the river on a ferry at Lexington, and going, it seemed to me, two miles as fast as we could, to catch the train to Higginsville, where we drove out to look at some farms, and returned too late for the train to Independence, where we intended to spend Sunday. So we left early Sunday morning for Independence, arriving in time for church. I had always wished to hear Joseph Luff preach, and was much pleased that morning; and we were not disappointed in the sermon either.

The first person we met in front of the church was Bro. Geo. H. Hulmes who introduced us to many of the Saints, and insisted on our going home with him for dinner. We had a very pleasant time with them and looked over their beautiful little home. In the afternoon we attended Saints meeting which seemed strange to us. I mean the number of people seemed strange as we had never met with a large branch before. After services we went home with Bishop R. May and wife where we ate supper and enjoyed a pleasant chat until time for the evening service, sermon on the Book of Mormon by Elder R. J. Parker, after which we went to our hotel, and Monday left for Lees' Summit, where Bro. DePuy took us in hand, showing us the country and entertained us at his house. Here we met Bro. and Sr. H. H. Robinson and other Saints at the chapel there. The orchards around Lees' Summit are the largest I ever saw. From Lees' Summit we went to Kansas City and home.

Of the country I think it is better for fruit and wheat and grass than with us, and if it were not for the ditches would be a very fine country. We have a finer looking country, better for corn, oats, and much better improvements. If the people ever get to running creameries as they do here, in ten years you would scarcely know the country. The improvements there now are about what we had twenty years ago before people went into the dairy business. Of the people we met I never met with better, kinder or pleasanter people anywhere. The Saints are our own folks there as elsewhere, and independence one of the most homelike places I ever saw. I would like sometime to live there. The more we think of Missouri, and the more familiar it seems to us, the more we think we would like it there. Perhaps at some time if we dispose of our property here, we may locate somewhere there.

My letter is much too long now, so I will close, thanking all who made our trips so pleasant, and inviting one and we call on us if they ever come to Waterloo, and we will try to make their stay as pleasant as they did ours. Our address is 215 E. 6th street.

Your sister in the one faith,
 Mrs. J. A. GARDNER.

ZION'S ENSIGN.

SHALL OBEDIENCE OBTAIN?

ELDER A. H. PARSONS.

It was said long ago "to obey is better than sacrifice." (1 Sam. 15: 22). About three hundred and seventy-five years later Jehovah said:

Hearken diligently unto me. * * * Incline your ear and come unto me: hear and your soul shall live.—Isa. 55: 2, 3.

Letting on the light seven hundred and forty-four years later, through His Son, Jesus the Christ, he says:

Hearken unto me every one of you and understand.—Mark 7: 14.

As creator of man he knew his deficiency, and has sought, at different time, to instruct him in the means necessary to make him proficient in life's work. Yet in the face of these extraordinary efforts to obtain the attention of man, his creature, indifference, to a large degree, has been the history of the past. So much so that few—eight souls—were saved from the flood. And as man has constantly kept repeating his failures since history began, why not more carefully consider the record of the past, and the dealing of a loving Father, by which we might be able to escape these sad and serious results that have followed the race by reason of the "lack of knowledge." (Hosea 4: 6). The Lord further says, "thou hast rejected knowledge," hence destruction follows as a natural result.

Not entering into the details of the earlier history of the race, we will occupy our time in carefully considering the history of latter day Israel. And as a starter we read from a revelation given on Fishing River, in the state of Missouri, in the year 1844 A. D., as found in Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2:

"Behold, I say unto you, were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now; but behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh Saints, to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom; and Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I can not receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be CHASTENED until they LEARN OBEDIENCE, if it must needs be by the things which they suffer."

It would be wise at this juncture to carefully look back over the history of the people to whom this instruction was given, and let their experiences assist in arousing our faculties to a deeper consideration of benefits accruing by obedience; though we may be compelled to sacrifice some things that are very dear, and thereby act, talk and dress, in some respects different from the people of the world, as here-in stated:

"I give not unto you that ye shall live after the manner of the world."—D. & C. 92: 3.

The gospel message of the eleventh hour period was, "COME OUT of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not her plagues." (Rev. 18: 4). The first thought expressed, "Come out," signifies a separation from that condition referred to, covers a more extended thought and act on the part of humanity, than merely joining church. That is a small part of the consideration.

To get the matter before us and have a clear understanding, let us notice some of the things that bring destruction, like an avalanche, upon the inhabitants of the world.

First, PRIDE; this is killing people by the score who live now, and digging a pit to bury thousands yet unborn. It is a fact that the wearing of good clothes is not always a sign of pride. A proud, haughty and arrogant soul may be in modest apparel. I have seen them in rags, as well as in magnificent apparel. A better motto I know not, than to "possess your soul" with a "sound mind" and "good judgment" in all things. The mind should be well instructed in the gospel law, to be able to exercise good judgment. The Lord said to Joseph the seer:

"Be admonished in all your highmindedness and pride, for it bringeth a snare upon your soul."—D. & C. 87: 5.

Just stop and meditate on what he said to the church at Kirtland, Ohio:

"I, the Lord, am not well pleased with many who are in the church at Kirtland, for they do not forsake their sins and their wicked ways, the PRIDE of their hearts, and their covetousness, and all their detestible things, and observe the words of wisdom and eternal life which I have given unto them."—D. & C. 95: 4.

Continuance in disregarding these exhortations and pleadings there followed as a result—church rejection, as foreshadowed in these words:

"At the end of this appointment, your baptisms for your dead shall not be acceptable unto me; and if ye do not these things at the end of the appointment ye shall be rejected as a church."—D. & C. 107: 11.

It is a fact known to every student of history that the work committed was never finished; hence the scattering and division into many parties and societies, calling themselves the church, which was distasteful to many, and especially to the companion in life of him of whom it was said about twenty-five hundred and four years ago, "the kingdom shall not be left to other people." (Dan. 2: 44), as confirmed in these words in this age:

"This ANOINTING have I put upon his head [who? Joseph Smith], that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him."—D. & C. 107: 18.

I am aware of the fact that the Utah elders object to this rendering of this scripture; but it seems to me no other intelligent rendering can obtain in view of other statements so closely connected explanatory—if need be—of that which seems mysterious to them.

"I have given him the keys of the mysteries and the revelations which are sealed, until I shall appoint unto them another in his stead * * * neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants, for all things must be done in order and by common consent in the church."—D. C. 27: 2, 4.

It is claimed that Brigham Young was the one selected to occupy at the death of Smith; but let him speak—"though dead he yet speaketh."

"For it is the legal right in God's kingdom [if not in the [Utah church] for the oldest son to minister and act for his father when he is gone into the eternal world."—9th Gen. Epistle of the Twelve, Salt Lake City, April 13, 1853.

Just six days prior to the above statement we have this from Mr. Young:

"Right of heirship in the priesthood. THIS RIGHT DID BELONG, STILL BELONGS, and FOR EVER WILL BELONG to the FIRST BORN SON in every family of Adam's race. * * * This I want the Latter Day Saints understand a little better than they have heretofore."—Millennial Star, Vol. 15, p. 493.

In keeping with this thought Joseph wrote Hon. J. C. Calhoun:

"While I have powers of body and mind, while water runs and grass grows, while virtue is lovely and vice hateful, and while a stone points out a sacred spot where a fragment of American liberty once was, I or MY POSTERITY will plead the cause of injured innocence until Missouri makes atonement for all her sins."—Times and Seasons, Vol. 5, p. 395.

Where is his posterity? In Utah at the head of the church there? No! At Lamoni, Iowa. Here you find his eldest son at the head of THE CHURCH in keeping with Mr. Young's statement. Where are the Saints of Utah drifting when they take the position that Young was Joseph's successor?

There are three points I want to impress the mind of the reader with:

1st, Mr. Young's own statement, April 7th, 1853, incorporated in the epistle of the Twelve six days later.

2d, The law of the church—"common consent"—which did not obtain in the selection of Mr. Young, for this reason, there was a very small gathering, and the work had been cut and dried—as the old saying goes—among a few of the ministry before it came before the few members of the church at Winter Quarters or near Council Bluffs, Iowa, 1847.

3d, Revelation is wanting, as "the president of the council is appointed by revelation." (D. C. 99: 6).

Observation along these lines, with these few statements selected from the many of the kind indicates the narrow way ordained by God for the redemption of fallen humanity. Yet but few have suffered sufficiently to arouse their faculties to discern the right of the eldest son to occupy his father's place, as positively stated by Mr. Young.

Obedience to God's law establishes peace and love. Where intelligence prevails idols cease to exist; hence, church worshippers, temple boasters, and pride belong to idolatry, and smacks of stupendous ignorance. The law of God, His word, must be the principle of action in all things, else Zion will not be redeemed.

May the good Spirit work with the rising generation and save them from the spirit of indifference and disregard to law and order that seems to be creeping upon the nations of the earth like a slow creeping tide, but surely gathering its thousands within its grasp.

Waiting, working and watching for the final triumph of Zion and her children, I remain your co laborer in Christ.

ON DUTY.

Once more are we at our post of duty, and will push the pen in behalf of our Graceland. Our opening for the college this year was quite satisfactory, and although there is a material change in both the faculty and students, the outlook is promising for good results.

Any reflections upon the faculty or students of either past or present year, is unfriendly and must work an injury to this church institution. Saints! avoid the practice of animadverting the authorized work of the church.

We, of the 20th century, must keep in mind that we live in the age of steam and electricity, and if the young people of the church keep abreast of the demands of the times, they must be up and at it with a vim, and all Saints should not overlook their duty to patronize their own institution—Graceland, that we may come behind in no good work. The following is suggestive, and should prove an incentive to all interested in a higher education:

"THE DEMAND FOR COLLEGE MEN."

"Graduated, but not present," was the suggestive announcement made concerning the class of 1901 at a well-known institution of higher learning. A majority of the class did not appear at commencement, though their names were called and their degrees were conferred. The case was extraordinary, but the explanation was simple and satisfactory. The services of the young men had been sought and engaged by business men so urgently that the president of the institution had given the students permission to leave school and go to work in advance of actual graduation. Their courses of study were satisfactorily completed and their examinations passed, and it was thought to be not worth while to keep them away from the industries which needed them, for so long as even the few days yet remaining before the formal close of the academic year.

"The case was decidedly exceptional. Yet it indicated, a state of affairs which is common enough. Men are seldom absent from commencement for such reasons. But many of them are, before commencement, engaged for business or industrial enterprises. Year by year the 'captains of industry,' more and more seek recruits for their staffs from among college men. Such is oftentimes the case, of course, in the great technical schools, or in colleges having important schools of applied science. Chemists, electricians, civil and mining engineers, and others trained in the so-called 'practical sciences' are passing from college immediately into the ranks of industry and trade. But the practice is by no means confined to such departments. Young men are being similarly drafted from the schools of pure science and of arts and letters. The world of action puts a premium upon men of thought.

"There is in this a fine rebuke, of the most practical and convincing kind, to the pretense that a college education is a handicap to a young man in business. It is not a handicap, but it is an incalculable advantage—provided, of course, that it be a proper education, in which the first aim has been to train the mind, to stock it the second. The hardest-headed business men send their own sons to college, and give their wealth to endow colleges and seek collegemen for their lieutenants. The trained and disciplined mind is recognized to be the efficient mind, just as much as the trained body is the efficient body. That is the fact, and it is a fact which is now gaining universal recognition."—New York Tribune.

We have one of the finest museums for its age, and the size of our school that can be found, and we are anxious to still improve it; who will help us? Our library is also an honor to the college, and needs additions; who will donate?

Herbarium is in charge of Prof. Jacob P. Anderson, and he will cheerfully receive specimens, or give any needed instructions.

We have ample room for a number more students, and solicit both Saints and friends of education to give us this aid. And we are in need of financial help for running expenses, and hope none will forget the word of the Lord as to the payment of the "college debt."

When the revelation last spring pointed out our duty in this matter I was hopeful for a prompt and immediate compliance. I am fully satisfied that dereliction of duty, or opposition to divine instruction will not be pleasing to our heavenly Father.

FIELD NOTES.

Dear Ensign.—I came to this city on August 14th and began street preaching in the gospel wagon with the assistance of Bro. E. J. Lang, one of our noble and self-sacrificing local workers. Bro. Lang, feeling the need of a more efficient way of reaching the people with the truth than for the missionary standing in the gutter while speaking, purchased at his own expense a horse and wagon. This move proved to be a wise one, as it places the speaker above the congregation, enabling many more to hear. Attached to the wagon is a gasoline lamp that furnishes light for the speaker and the singers that may accompany him. In my judgment this is the most successful method of reaching the people in this city.

After occupying about ten evenings on the South side of the city, by invitation I preached twice to the Saints of the First Chicago branch, after which I held forth on the street corners on the West side of the city for several nights. A large number of the Saints rallied to our assistance and helped in the services by singing. Sr. Mabel Sanderson rendered excellent services at the organ. I was called away from the city for a few days to say the words that made a happy couple husband and wife.

I returned on the 5th inst. and found Mr. Merrick, Bro. Lang, Richardson, Cochran and F. M. Pitt busily engaged in putting up the tents. They invited me to take off my coat and assist them, I having had some experience in that line of work. Responding to the call for help we were enabled by a united effort to have both tents up and comfortably furnished the same evening. Friday morning the 6th at 10:30 a prayer meeting was held in charge of the writer and Elder E. M. Wildermuth. At 1:30 the Religion held its district business session; following this the district Sunday School convention convened with the district superintendent, F. M. Pitt, in the chair. All business was transacted in the spirit of wisdom and brotherly kindness. The institute work was an interesting feature, and the reports show the telling effect of the visits made to the various schools by the district superintendent. An excellent entertainment was given Friday evening.

Saturday morning at 9 o'clock the Saints met for prayer service, the meeting was in charge of Bro. Earl and the writer. At the close of this service the district conference convened and Bro. D. M. Rudd was chosen to preside; before this session closed Bro. Evans and Sheehy came and received the warm greetings of the Saints and friends. The business of the conference passed off smoothly. The preaching was by Elders Evans, Rudd and Sheehy. These services were good and well attended.

A Sabbath School session was held between the hours of 1:30 and 2:45 p. m., conducted by the district officers. One feature of the conference I wish to make especial mention of, is the manner in which the Saints of the Central Chicago branch entertained those attending the conference. Bro. Pement as president of the branch and his band of faithful workers had arranged for the accommodation and comfort of all that attended and more had they come. Bro. and Sr. E. J. Lang kindly gave their spacious building, the three top floors of which were fitted up for sleeping rooms, while the first floor was used for the dining room and kitchen. By this arrangement all were enabled to attend all the services. Sr. E. J. Lang had charge of the culinary department and had to assist her Mr. Geo. Cavil, a professional cook, also eight waiters as follows: Srs. Daisy and Maud Kelso, Srs. Wright, Beardsley, Hicks, Evison, Scholing and Sadio Pitt. All the meals were very good and were served quietly and quickly. The expense of the conference was readily met by contributions made by Saints and friends. Sr. Merrick had charge of the subscription list and Bro. Isaac Richardson was the treasurer. The workers as a whole performed their parts admirably and as a result success crowned their efforts. This event will long be remembered as having been a profitable and enjoyable time. Long live the Central Chicago branch!

A series of meetings are being conducted in the tent at present by Elders E. C. Evans and F. M. Sheehy. When the weather is favorable I still hold forth on the street corner in the gospel wagon. I am at present enjoying the hospitality of Bro. and Sr. James Laing. Out of respect for our departed President, Wm. McKinley, the pulpit and platform in the tent has been very suitably draped by Bro. Yendes.

Yours in gospel bonds,

J. T. HACKETT,

Asst. District President,
CHICAGO, ILL., Sept. 21.

Editor Ensign.—I came to this place on the 8d inst. and began meetings on the following day and have continued each night since. Fair attendance and interest. Was joined on the 10th by Bro. S. J. Jeffers. The Saints here seem somewhat revived. We have organized a Religion while here. We leave tomorrow for Hemlock and Congo in Perry county.

H. E. MOLER,

SAND RUN, Ohio, Aug. 14.

Dear Ensign.—Many of your readers in this mission appreciate your appearance very much, and I concluded to send an item or two for use that an acquaintance with the spiritual efforts being made here may be known. I find a kind hearted, teachable, liberal dispositioned class of Saints in southwestern Iowa and enjoy my labors so far.

Preparation is being now made for one of the most enjoyable reunions ever held in this district, and the Saints are anticipating a feast of fat things, and by humility of purpose and a willingness to assist in every good work I cannot but conclude that their anticipations will be realized.

We are now engaged in tent meetings here, with another meeting each night by the Christian church, but this opposition seems to be affecting our services favorably, and our experience here has proven that the best arranged plans to overthrow God's work proves a blessing to us in disguise. So it has been thus far with these meetings.

Since beginning in missionary work I have ministered at Thurman, Riverton, Hamburg and McPaul since June 10th, at each of which places good was done. We anticipate an excellent work to be done here. Since beginning this letter I have overheard very favorable expressions made with reference to the services thus far held and the pleasant and convenient arrangements we have made for services; and indeed, I think we have one of the nicest tents and most convenient seats and pulpit it has ever been my fortune to use, all furnished by the liberality of the Saints here, who in seeking for a contribution of $70.00 raised nearly $100.00 from the results of their first invitation. For all these favors we feel to praise God.

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

BARTLETT, Ia., Aug. 25.

Editor Ensign.—This writing finds me at the very pleasant home of Bro. and Sr. Henry Way, who for years have been conducting for the faith in this country. I suppose there is not one of the missionaries who have labored in Minnesota but can bear testimony to the efficiency of Bro. Way and wife in making things pleasant and home-like for the traveling representative of God and his church back to the days when Bro. T. W. Smith first came here as a representative of the Reorganization in 1875.

These are not the only ones, however, who are worthy of honorable mention along this line. Bro. Hawley, Omans, Whiting, Albertson, Griffin, Murdoch, Harpster, Barns, Sr. Langdon, Mr. Jepson; with their families, together with others whose names do not come readily to mind have my thanks for kindnesses received. Nor do I wish to omit the name of Bro. T. J. Martin, president of the Northern Minnesota district.

Since about July 15th the busy season has been on in this country with no prospect of letting up for some time yet, till the wheat is all threshed and corn harvested. The fall season is not nearly so good for mission work as in the sunny South. It is the time there for "big meetings" or revivals, and the people seem to count on spending a good share of the late summer and fall in attending meetings and warming up the old love; but here it is harvesting, haying, threshing, without rest, and with most people seemingly without religion or desire for it. However I have preached in a number of places with attendance as large as one ought to expect under the circumstances. But better things are hoped for when threshing and haying are over.

My own health and that of the Saints generally is good. Twice have I been attacked by my old enemy—malaria, but both at tacks were of short duration, and now I feel that I have gained the victory on that line and I am pleased.

Satan is raging at this place and has been somewhat active for some time. Cause: Eight sermons in July resulted in the baptism of Bro. Arthur Sanderson, a very influential man, who before time had been a member of the M. E. church. He was teacher of the Bible class in the Baptist Sunday School and had given good satisfaction up to the time of his baptism. But the new Baptist minister would have none of that, "for," saith he, "what would my people think of me if I should come here and preach to you and a Mormon teaching in your Sunday School? Why I would not get my money if I should do that."

Well, Bro. Sanderson was thrown overboard and another teacher put in his place; a man whose reputation is not much—if any more—savory than some of the Utah representatives whom he accuses of stealing his wife, so I am told at least; but it won't do to write all that is told one these days, but shows which way the winds of persecution have begun to blow for Bro. Sanderson. May he have grace to abide and so win the crown in the end. He is doing well.

Since the commencement of the reunion about the 20th of June there have been twenty-two baptisms that have come to my notice; two Sunday Schools have been organized and so goes the work. May Zion's zeal be great and her people blessed.

In gospel bonds,

T. C. KELLEY.

OSAGE, MISS., Sept. 13.

Dear Ensign.—I take pleasure in dropping your columns a few lines in regard to the work at this place and also in the Indian Territory. We have a wonderful interest here. On July 4th I baptized five; on the morning of the 15th I boarded the train for home. Many warm hearts wished me success on my departure. Wife and I started for the south July 23d; we arrived at our home July 24th all overjoyed to see us. We spent a very pleasant time with friends and loved ones; feelings inexpressible came over me when I was permitted to look upon the faces of God's chosen people; my heart swelled with joy and gratitude. We had such a nice visit with Aunt Susan Duncan, a full blood Cherokee; she visited with us a couple of days and also Bro. Karahoo, whom many of you know; he fondly expressed his love to all the Saints in the north.

Bro. Thurman and I held a week's meeting near Bro. Karahoo's; had a wonderful good interest. I never preached to as large a crowd of Indians as we had there; our crowd was on the increase each evening. We baptized one good old soul the day we closed and many more would have obeyed the gospel if we could have stayed longer. Bro. Riley is doing a good work.

When I got back to our home my wife gave me a letter which she had just received from J. W. Adams, in which he stated for me to come to Chillicothe at once. I had a marriage ceremony to perform the following Sunday and some other work, but left all and came to J. W.'s rescue; he went home the same day I arrived, to spend a few days. Bro. Benjamin Dice is with me now; he gave us an excellent talk last night. Our tent was full and quite a number on the outside; good order and excellent interest; may do some baptizing tomorrow. We have baptized 19 since we came to this place. We may stay here as long as we can use a tent. The Lord is standing by us in great power to defend this wonderful work. Will close by asking all to remember us in your prayers.

Yours in bonds,

W. E. HADEN.

CHILICOTHE, Mo., Aug. 17.

Editor Ensign.—Elder S. W. Tomlinson and I came here on June 27th. Seven good people have been baptized including Mr. Lane and his noble wife, having come here on a visit and upon hearing the gospel obeyed it and are now rejoicing in the restored gospel. They left this morning for Acton. When parting as we grasped the hand of friendship their eyes moistened as they thanked us for the light we had through the sweet Spirit of God given them.

I am holding forth at present in a school house two miles from Manitowaning; started a series of lectures there about two weeks ago. Last evening the building was packed to the door; blocks of wood had been carried in and boards placed upon them until all the available space was occupied on my arrival. There were quite a number outside who could not get in, and I was told that the building was so completely packed that I would have to go in at the back window; but I managed to get up one side, so gained entrance to the stand. I felt well and God blessed the effort; the great congregation seemed to feel there was power behind that sermon. What will the harvest be?

I expect to leave here for district conference next week.

Yours in gospel bonds,

G. C. TOMLINSON.

MANITOWANING, Ont., Sept. 8.

Editor Ensign.—The outlook for the gospel is very good in this country. We have been busy ever since General Conference telling the angel message. When I began to think about the judgments being poured out on this generation and what a dark cloud is coming over them, I only wish I could tell it to all the world; and oh the word to the Saints at this point, live faithful, serve God with all of your heart, body and mind, because all that is not pure will not stand the test of the next few years. There is coming one of the most troublesome times on this generation that has yet been on any people for ages.

We had a fine district conference at Douglass in Red River county; about 400 people were in attendance and God greatly blessed us with his Spirit. Four were added to the church, and several others convinced of the truth. One of the remarkable things that occurred was a fine rain that fell on the evening we began to gather for conference. When we got on the ground for conference we had no water for man nor beast; the nearest we could get any for our horses was four miles away and not good; Bro. Scott Goodman had a few buckets full in his cistern which he divided with us and we were wondering what we would do, but the Lord seeing our condition spread a cloud over us and sent the rain down in torrents for about two hours, filled up the cisterns and pools gave us plenty of water and then gave us nice, fair weather for the conference.

Bro. E. L. Henson of Vernon, Wilbarger Co., has been laboring with me since district conference. He is a noble young man and a fine preacher for his experience and will be quite an instrument in the Lord's hand to win souls to the kingdom if he will hold out faithful. May God bless His church.

Your brother,
E. A. ERWIN,
MANCHESTER, TEXAS, Sept. 2.

Dear Ensign:—If you will permit us space in your columns we wish to say that we are yet alive, and not, as in the past, merely existing, but thoroughly alive and are striving to build up the Master's cause in these parts. Since March 1st, of the present year, we have had twenty-six additions to our branch, nine of which were by baptism, and still others are near the kingdom. We hold our regular Sunday School and other services, and, for the scattered condition of our membership, have good attendance, some coming thirteen miles to meet with us. Our monthly meeting is a source of much comfort and strengthening to the Saints, and all are becoming more united in all things pertaining to the welfare of the cause.

We are planning to build an house of worship this winter, and trust when our scattered members return for the winter, we may be able to secure labor sufficient to complete it by spring. We have the manifestations of the Spirit with us, in tongues, prophecy and revelation regarding the work in this place. Under the direction of Spirit, through our branch president, we were directed to go and investigate the timber and grazing lands on the ranges adjoining the valleys, and to act quickly that we might secure property in common to be used for the spread of the gospel, and to be held for the branch for the benefit of all, that none need to want. The committee report abundance of available land, and have located a half section of the best timber in this section of the state, and there are nearly three sections adjoining that are good and nearly one fourth of a township in all, adjoining, most of it can be taken under the pre-emption act, and all fine grazing lands, and much will soon be valuable for potatoes, barley and hay, as well as pasture, which alone will soon be a source of revenue, to say nothing of the timber, which, on the land adjoining the tract located, is perhaps worth, in all, from five to ten thousand dollars, as soon as a title is secured for the same, just as it stands.

Now, we cannot take it all on account of means to pay for proof, the three sections of timber we wish to secure will cost $2.50 per acre, to be paid in ten weeks, after application, with some $15.00 expenses for each 160 acres, and the rest can be pre-empted at $1.25 per acre, with thirty-three months for final proof, which we could most-ly secure with our membership here, and let all who wish to assist financially do so, as each one uses his or her right; but as soon as they secure title from the government they turn it over to the association and Board of Control within the branch, said association paying all expenses and actual cost, and the entire property being held in common, all having their individual homes and holdings. It has been given to us that we will receive help from those within, or they who will come into the church to carry what we have successfully; but we invite any of the Saints who have money, and wish to cooperate with us in the matter, to write us and we will be glad to give any information desired, and in case we have to borrow money to carry us the first year to secure title, etc. We prefer to secure the same of the Saints and secure them with the property.

It is indeed a rare opportunity for the Saints to exemplify the law of the church and as the subject of a common fund in the branch has been talked of, the direction, as given by the Spirit, was in answer to fasting and prayer, for the welfare of the Fairview branch.

Praying God's blessing upon the whole church and upon our efforts, with all who wish to join us or assist us in this undertaking, we subscribe ourselves,

Your brethren in the faith,

M. L. SCHMID,
Branch Pres.,

R. H. WIGHT,
ALBERT PARKS,
JESS PARKS,
CHAS. BISHOP.

P. S.—We discovered at land office, where we filed our application September 27th, that there are six sections, a part of which we wish to secure in future, that is unsurveyed, which we think could be squatted on and held until surveyed. We will investigate and give particulars to those who desire. Direct all communications to Mrs. Schmid, Delta, Col., Sept. 28.

Editor Ensign:—I have tried to keep your readers posted in regard to the work being done here by Bro. F. M. Cooper and myself in our tent work, but from some cause the last two letters have not been published, though many of later date have appeared.

We have been holding our tent meetings about a month in the southern part of the city and the attendance has been good, and many have heard the gospel for the first time and some are deeply interested. On the approach of cold weather we put in a stove and our tent is warm. We believe good has been done, and we propose when we cease tent work, to begin a series of cottage meetings in the city.

Last night Bro. D. A. Hutchings, who is en route to his field of labor, preached for us, and heaved close to the line. We are expecting Bro. Joseph next week for a short visit with us, and all are glad. The city is going to lay brick paving on Pierce street, past our chapel, and this will cost near $150, but we are glad to have it done. The branch is in good condition at present. Bro. Samuel Harding is president, Bro. Beebe having resigned.

At our business meeting on Wednesday, Bro. Chambers, the district president and missionary in charge, was here, and arrangements were made for the ordination of Bro. James Christenson to the office of priest. Bro. C. is an excellent young man and will, no doubt, enter upon his duty with zeal. That is all that will be of interest, and I will close with a prayer that God will bless the ENSIGN in its work of love. As ever

Editor Ensign:—We are neither unmindful of your desire for news, nor too busy to write, but when our strenuous efforts are so meager in fruitage, we are too modest to take much of your valuable space from those whose works for the church are progressively phenomenal. Here where plenty of worldly goods is the rule, and riches not uncommon, there is such measure of pleasure in present existence for those of the world, that gospel enjoyment affords little attraction. Yet as the constant dripping wears away a stone, so the perpetual distillation of gospel dearts will make a way to some heart of seeming adamant, so we try to keep alive the fires of our zeal to continue this dew dealing process.

The writer spent the summer under the disadvantages of an unusually hot season and busy time. He preached for quite a while at Heavener school-house, near Piper City, and baptized two, in whose conversion parental example and teaching, the ministrations of the ENSIGN and a little final touching by "yours humbly" shared. At Essex, where Bro. Moler and I had some interest last winter, although in the hottest weather, I experienced what impressive, but intelligent language terms a "freeze out." Labor has also been bestowed at Mission and Wilmington; at the latter place the writer was detained last week while waiting for the use of the town hall here, So he delivered five talks on the Book of Mormon. Incidentally a pamphlet issued by the Salt Lake ministerial association upon the origin of the Book of Mormon, was reviewed. This pamphlet, as though ashamed of its existence and parentage, bore no title page, and came through the mails from "Anonymous." I think that at the close of the series of talks the audience agreed with the speaker that the pamphlet's mysterious chain of circumstantiality, attempting to bind the Book of Mormon to the corpse of poor, old Spaulding, appeared weak, beside the many stranded cables of biblical, traditional and archaeological testimony holding it to the living God. Bro. Elmer Kahler, recently ordained priest, has charge of the Saints at Wilmington. Although but nineteen years of age, he seems to sense responsibility in the priesthood that some of maturer years sometimes fail to. May he be made progressively useful under divine favor.

I began meetings here last night with fair promise. Am domiciled comfortably with Abe L. Rogers, who, while yet outside the door of the church, does what he can to help our work here.

Now, Bro. Editor, I did not expect by my remarks upon Dowie to so rasp the sensibilities of Bro. Jots, as to provoke personalities so pointed. Bro. Editor, if you permit, unrebuked, such flippant reference to the blankness of the skyward portion of honorable heads, you may yet expect disrespectful reference to the grayness of your own capital adornment. Bro. Jots, bald heads are honorable, and no sign of relationship to the new Elijah. Seriously, I still think that Bro. T. W. C., who could not hear all of Dowie's remarks, was not right in finishing out his report from the newspapers. Remember how Chicago papers have reported us at times. Nor does Bro. Deam's article help the matter. I think every sermon the ENSIGN prints is edited by the man who delivered it, I know they used to be. It would not be at all surprising that a reporter should render "ordered a hot dinner," "had a hot dinner." I have no desire for any controversy, much less with my brethren, but I insist that we must allow others all we expect for ourselves. Dowie's own publications show him to be rough, dictatorial, grasping, loving prominence and display, twisting the Scriptures, boasting, etc., etc. His own speech condemns him sufficiently, why allow a sensational press to make it worse for us? "Give—his due." Your brother,

ADAM J. KECK,
DESELM, Ill., Sept. 30.
[THIS will end all reference to the Dowie episode. We think enough has been said about it.—Ed.]

Dear Ensign:—Bro. W. H. Mannering and I are now holding meetings in the M. E. church near this place. This is in Polk county, a new opening, as none of our ministry, aside from Bro. Mannering and myself have ever preached in this county before that I know of. We have already awakened a fine interest and have other invitations to come and preach in adjoining neighborhoods. We came here from the Wheatland reunion under the direction of the Spirit as manifested in a prayer meeting one morning through Bro. I. N. White during the reunion. We were told we would have to take our lives in our hands in our opening the work here. A drunk young man last Saturday night, for being corrected for talking out loud during service, stood just outside of the door as we passed out to go home, to pound or strike me for correcting him, but was prevented, I believe, by an unseen power, and we were not molested.

I believe there is no better field for an elder to enter into and keep constantly busy in than this part of the Clinton, Missouri, district. We have already in mind places in Hickory and Polk counties where we can keep ourselves busy all winter, besides a large territory that knows nothing of our work as yet, but is as good a territory for preaching as any we have ever gone over. Bro. Mannering and I went into the neighborhood of the Wheatland branch about six years ago when there was but one member in that locality. Now there is a branch there with about sixty members, seemingly alive and alert in the work. It is indeed a satisfaction to me that after an absence of nearly four years from these parts I am back again and find that my work is highly appreciated with that of Bro. Mannering.

I am of the opinion that many of the Saints in other places in Missouri, especially in the north, have a wrong impression of this country and the people; the land in some places is rough, but is very good in many places, not rough, with a good, strong soil. The people as a general thing are industrious, honest and very kind and hospitable, much more so than we have ever found in more thickly settled, richer countries, and I have always found them (the most of them) to be ready to hear our gospel story. Those who have thought otherwise are, I am glad to say, mistaken. We feel well in the work in which we are engaged, and have enjoyed the best of light and liberty in preaching and administering in the ordinances of the gospel. We are on our way, by direction of Bro. I. N. White, from the Nowaday, Missouri, district to the Southern Illinois district to assist Elder F. M. Slover in that mission the remaining part of the conference year. We therefore will labor on, praying the Lord to bless his church and people to the edifying, building up, and the redemption of the Saints.
ELDER F. L. SAWLEY,
HURON, Mo., Sept. 16.

Editor Ensign:—It has been some little time since we wrote you concerning the work in our district, but we assure you we have not forgotten, and are just as anxious as ever to read the precious truths heralded to the church and world as published in your paper of glad tidings to mankind.

Our work in this district is by no means on the wane, but we are mostly alive to the interest of the same. A new district tent has been purchased by the Saints, and it has already answered the demands, and accomplished measurably its purpose and design. Bro. Minton and Chas. Fry have had charge of it mostly, and at Bartlett, where it was first put up, great good was accomplished; quite an interest was created. We had a large at-

WHERE DO YOU STAND?

The church of Christ is designed to be cosmopolitan in its character; the gospel of Christ is intended to be universal in its application, to be the savor of life to all—every one—who will accept the conditions and obey its requirements; hence, they are of equal interest to every member of the church, to each one who has obeyed the gospel laws. No member or any set of members can properly claim an exclusive ownership of anything belonging to, or which is a part of the church, as against any other member; or even as holding a prior claim upon it; the individual entering the church today holds an equal interest with he who has been its devoted servant all his life. With our Lord, time evidently has no bearing if all alike faithfully do the work assigned them. If this were not a fact, those who have labored and suffered in His cause for the one hour, would have but little compensation in comparison with the one who had been privileged to spend a lifetime in such service. Consider this parable:

For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard. And when he had agreed with the laborers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard. And he went out about the third hour, and saw others standing idle in the marketplace, and said unto them: Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way. Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise. And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and said unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle? they say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right that shall ye receive. So when even was come, the lord of the vineyard said unto his steward, Call the laborers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny. But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more; and they likewise received every man a penny. And when they had received it, they murmured against the good man of the house, saying, These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day. But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong: didst thou not agree with me for a penny? Take that thine is, and go thy way: I will give unto this last, even as unto thee.—Matt. 20: 1-11.

So much by way of introduction to some thoughts we desire to impress upon our readers. A few years ago the church, by its representatives in conference assembled, authorized the erection of an institution of learning in which all who desired, but particularly those belonging to the Church of Jesus Christ, might obtain an education under influences which would better equip them for the duties of life spiritually as well as mentally. Latter Day Saints are all familiar with the approbation of our heavenly Father given to the work of the Saints in the different auxiliary societies, or as He termed them, ORGANIZATIONS FOR GOOD, and the commendation which He gave them in their work for the advancement of His children. GRACELAND COLLEGE is the result of one of these "organizations for good," and if as such it has merited the kindly consideration and approval of our heavenly Father, who is there, of all His faithful children who cannot also give to its success his or her earnest, faithful and unqualified support?

"But," some have argued, "We have in our own neighborhood, the very best institutions for learning, both the common and high schools, as well as most excellent colleges—right in our own city, why should we give our support to this one institution?" Those who are thus situated who have such privileges, should truly appreciate them; so much so, in fact, that they should feel an honest sympathy for others equally worthy and ambitious, but who are so situated that they are deprived of these advantages. There is no room in God's kingdom for the principle of selfishness; that is entirely a product of the devil's dominion, and properly belongs only to his adherents. "A new commandment I give unto you; That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." (John 13: 34, 35). And if, as disciples of Christ, we have this love in us, we will be exceedingly anxious that all of our young brethren and sisters shall have the best possible advantages in acquiring an education that shall the better equip them for the battle of life, and to shine as polished shafts in the Lord's work.

The testimony of the ministry who are in the field, is that never has there been so intelligent an effort made by the opposers of the work as is now being made. The old time tactics of slander and abuse is beginning, in some quarters, to have a less part in the effort to overthrow the latter day work; the results have not been satisfactory to them; and a change of front is being shown; and it is but fair that those upon whom shall devolve the sustaining of this work, so far as human instrumentality is concerned, shall, at least, be placed upon an equal footing with regard to educational advantages, as those whom they must meet in the conflict. In a great many sections of the country where the secular educational advantages are of the highest character, the church interests are meagre or altogether lacking, so that the young Saints are, to some extent, handicapped in acquiring those spiritual forces which they should have to enable them to do justice to their talents in the great work lying before them.

Others have long ago comprehended the necessity for colleges conducted under church or society supervision, and in nearly all the civilized world such are to be found successfully filling the purpose had in view in their establishing, and accomplishing good in the world. They do not pretend to instruct along denominational lines, but there is always that church influence pervading the institution and it has been helpful in the formation of character. Why should this not be equally true of our own college? There are just as earnest, spiritual, devoted men and women connected with its direction, as can be found anywhere, we believe, and the results manifest in the short period of its existence show that its work is thorough. It was not built for any particular class of individuals or section of country, but for the CHURCH, and every Saint, without regard to the advantages personally enjoyed elsewhere, should have, and evince, the liveliest interest in Graceland, as being the property of the church of which, as individuals, they are a component part. Let everyone, then, take an active part for its success, contribute what you may be able to give, as you would to any other department of church work, and God's blessing will rest upon the effort. Can you, beloved, afford to miss this opportunity for doing that which will commend you to our heavenly Father? We think not.

VALUES.

The value of any acquirement is usually determined by the benefit its possession confers upon the receiver. Actual or imaginary benefits give rise to two classes of what are termed "values," the real and the fictitious. Real values are based, generally speaking, upon intrinsic worth, while the fictitious, from a commercial standpoint at least, results from the value the possessor of an article or property may be able to make another believe it is worth to him.

The gospel of Jesus Christ is of real value to an individual only as he makes a practical application of its precepts in his own daily life. Those who fail to see the benefits derived from such a course must, in the nature of the case, place a higher value upon some other manner of living, and consequently gives it a fictitious value; being beguiled by the adversary into the belief that it is not necessary to make such sacrifices as the carrying out of gospel teachings enjoins upon its adherents, he naturally invests an opposite course with a value it does not really have. The Apostle Paul gives this instruction and admonition.

For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss.—1 Cor. 3: 11-15.

The foundation is laid in truth, and its value can never be impaired by the failure of any one to properly appreciate it. Those who do recognize its worth, and carefully, patiently and consistently build upon it, obtain returns of such vast magnitude and proportions that human comprehension and human conceptions are inadequate to realize, only to a limited degree; hence, their fullest enjoyment is to be obtained when the life to come is reached and its perfection attained. But there may be realized in the meantime, joyously cheering experiences, foreshadowing the more complete fulfilling of promised bliss to the finally faithful and wise builder. The admonition of the apostle that "the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is," after he had described the nature of the different materials which may, or rather will be used in the work of building the character for eternity, indicates that some are imperishable, while others are so unenduring that this final test to be applied to all our works will destroy them, causing severe loss to the unfortunate and unwise individual who has employed them in his work. Every individual who reaches the period where he comprehends the difference between right and wrong, and discerns his responsibility for his acts, commences his character building, and must use either the imperishable or the unstable materials that are provided for his work—the sound material by the Lord, the unsound by the adversary—the searching test of that which is described as "the fire" to determine the character of that of which choice has been made. Not only will "the fire" be unable to destroy the imperishable material which may be used, but it will serve to increase its beauty and worth to him who has so wisely selected such material for his building; while confusion and loss will result to the one who has been deceived into using that which is unstable and unenduring. How sad it is that all men do not value the necessity of building wisely for eternity as well as for time; many learn by their experience the value there is in using wisely the means at their command in securing worldly advantages, but altogether overlook that which is of far more importance, the building of their eternal interests; and in concentrating all their energies in such pursuit to the detriment of the higher obligations due from them, they are placing fictitious values upon their work and the loss will be great indeed. "The fire" must destroy their work; it is not abiding.

Complete harmony in proportion and coloring in the erection and decoration of a building can only be attained by following true principles and correct rules. No matter how perfect the foundation and how choice the material used in building upon it, if that which is erected is disproportionate, the material not rightly used, there is a depreciation in value that would result in great loss to the owner. No one desires to possess for a home a building which would cause him dissatisfaction every time he scanned its outlines. But combining good material with correct architectural principles, there may be secured an abiding place which shall bring to its owner the fullest satisfaction in its possession. So it is with our eternal temple; if we rightly value the importance of building with imperishable material, and building as the great Architect has planned, confining our labors strictly to the directions He has given, we shall be accounted "wise" builders, for He has said: Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock."—Matt. 7: 24, 25.

But of those who fall to rightly value following His plan, He says:

And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.—20, 27 vs.

DEATH OF LORENZO SNOW.

Lorenzo Snow, fifth president of the Utah church, died at Salt Lake City at 8:35 p. m., October 10th, and Joseph F. Smith, one of the presidency, is spoken of as his successor. If this is realized, it will break the rule adopted by Brigham Young and his successors, of choosing the president of the Twelve as president of the church, and will make it difficult for the authorities of that church to explain such action, and remain consistent with their own rulings. It is said that by right of precedent, it should go to Brigham Young, but for some reason the authorities do not favor his candidacy, and he is deprived of the rights hitherto accorded his brethren. Whether he will submit to this, according to established precedent, injustice, and inconsistent action, without a protest, remains to be seen. But expediency causes some remarkable actions sometimes.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Elder A. H. Parsons delivered an interesting discourse at the Saints' church last Sunday morning, his theme being "Perilous Times." At night Apostle I. N. White gave an instructive sermon from his chart; large, attentive audiences at both services. In the afternoon quite a large number was present and a profitable season was enjoyed. At the conclusion of the regular service about twenty-five of the Saints repaired to the home of our esteemed, but afflicted brother, C. J. Clark, and for an hour had a spiritual feast, Bro. Clark bearing his testimony to the work, rejoicing in the Lord, and in the association with the Saints. The blessing of the Lord was with his people.

Bro. and Sr. R. G. Smith doubtless think there are several things which contribute to make this world a pleasant place to live in, and not, by any means, among the least of these, is the arrival of a young son last week. Bro. Ralph has a very pleasant smile for every one now-a-days. The ENSIGN tenders congratulations.

Dr. and Sr. H. B. Curtis are very happy in the arrival of a little daughter, Tuesday evening, to gladden their home. Sr. Curtis' department in the ENSIGN will probably have for her a greater significance than ever. Congratulations.

The car of potatoes, ordered by Bro. R. May, mentioned in last issue, have arrived, and those who wish to take advantage of the cheapest rates should see him at once.

Elder T. W. Chatburn is taking his first "furlough" in his ministerial experience, having returned home Saturday last.

President Hulmes has been visiting some of the branches in the Stake, returned home Monday night, Post Oak, Burtville, Henrietta and Knob Noster being points reached. Bishop May was prevented from accompanying him by an attack of neuralgia.

Bro. R. May, Wm. Crick and Ellis Short and a Mr. Seitz have purchased a coal mine about twenty miles east of Independence on the Lexington branch of the Missouri Pacific Ry. It is the same vein of coal as the celebrated Farmers Red Tag, the best soft coal in this country.

The bricklayers are beyond Clark street on West Electric, and if the weather continues favorable will nearly finish to the bridge this week. The Metropolitan Street Ry. have commenced concreting between the rails of their track and will soon commence laying the brick. Work on the concrete walks is also being pushed, and we will soon have about the finest street in the city.

There was a sharp frost Monday morning, and the air was quite cool up to Tuesday when the temperature moderated to some extent.

Bro. J. A. Robinson, Sr., rallied last Friday, and is now convalescing nicely. Bro. A. L. Newton came up from Cove, Arkansas, the early part of the week, but returned Thursday morning.

Bro. Omar Lytle has raised some fine yams in his garden this year; four of them weighed seven and a half pounds.

Bro. R. J. Parker has a well written article of about a column and a half in length in the Kansas City daily Journal, of October 14th, criticising a recent interview of a Journal reporter with a Mrs. Hayde, a member of the Utah church, in which she made some very misleading statements if she was correctly reported. Bro. Parker briefly sketches the inception of the work up to the death of the martyrs, then shows where the followers of Brigham Young diverged from the original faith, and introduced doctrines totally at variance with the teachings of the first organization. He shows up the difference between the Reorganized church and the Utah church clearly, so that "he who runs may read" and comprehend. It is an article that will receive a careful reading and impress the reader with its force and correctness.

LAMONI, IOWA.

The funeral of President David W. Wight, held on Thursday the 10th, was attended by a large audience of sympathizing friends. The sermon preached by Elder J. R. Lambert was full of precious promise for the departed one and bright hope and comfort for the relatives and friends who remain yet a little while to finish the work the Master has given them to do. Elder R. S. Saltyards assisted Bro. Lambert in conducting the services. The pulpit and vacant chair were draped, as was also the wall back of the pulpit.

Presidents John Smith and J. A. Gunsolley; the two remaining members of the Stake presidency, occupied seats on the platform. Very appropriate music was nicely rendered by a quartet composed of Mrs. May, Gunsolley and Lena Church and Bro. F. E. Cochran and Oscar Anderson, with Sr. Clara Bell as accompanist. President J. A. Gunsolley and Elders H. A. Stebbins, F. A. Smith, D. J. Krahl, R. J. Lambert and C. H. Lake of the Stake Council served as pallbearers.

On Sunday night, the 13th, Blair, the little daughter of Bro. and Sr. James Dillon, passed from this earth life after an illness of eleven days. The funeral services are being conducted this morning, the 15th, Bro. H. A. Stebbins preaching the sermon.

On Monday morning, the 14th, the sad messenger of death came again to our midst and released from its earthly bondage the spirit of Bro. Willie Mayhew, who, a short time ago, met with such a serious accident, wherein he lost both his feet. We understand he is to be buried this afternoon.

White both these departures are sad blows to the parents and relatives, yet in both cases it has brought relief and release to tired pain racked bodies, and as both were yet in tender years, the one a mere child and the other just entering upon manhood, we feel assured that both will be spared the trials and sufferings that surely awaited them in this life had they remained with us.

Two were baptized Sunday by Elder Columbus Scott, at the Home Pond, and were confirmed at the afternoon prayer meeting.

Sr. Dora Young returned to her home at Holden, Missouri, last week. The committee on First Primary Lesson Helps, of which she was a member, report their work well under way, and hope to have the first issue in the hands of the teachers at the beginning of the new year. They have spared no time nor labor to make this work a success, and we trust that every teacher in this department will avail themselves of these "helps" which are prepared for their benefit.

Next Sunday evening the Historical Lectures will be continued by the Church Historian.

One week from Saturday next the second conference of the Lamoni Stake will be held with the Lamoni branch.

Last Sunday's services were as follows: New Buda, morning; J. C. Clapp; Davis City, morning; H. A. Stebbins, evening; J. C. Clapp; Surprise, J. P. Anderson; Lone Rock, R. S. Saltyards; Bloomington Center, F. E. Cochran; Evergreen, John Smith and R. J. Lambert; Lamoni, morning; F. A. Smith assisted by J. A. Gunsolley and C. M. Hollenbeck, of Omaha, Nebraska; evening; Wm. Anderson and F. M. Weld; Saints' Home, L. Gaultier.

The largest audience ever assembled in our church on a funeral occasion, was there yesterday, in honor of our greatly lamented brother in Christ, Lambertus Niedorp, who passed peacefully to his heavenly resting place at 12 o'clock on Thursday last. Asthmatic troubles, which had long time lingered with him, was the cause of death. Bro. Niedorp was honest, thorough and energetic, loving with devotion the house of worship and the Saints of God. Through his energy he remained in active business life till the evening before his demise. His wife, three sons, Benjamin, Harry E., Albert B., and daughter, Nellie M., remain to mourn. By his request he was laid to rest in Mt. Mora, near the route from his home to the church, that, as he said, "they might look upon his grave as they passed." He was past 62 years of age, and of the active Hollander race. Funeral in charge of Bro. Wm. Lewis, sermon by the writer.

Sr. Fifer, one of our active Sunday School workers, accidentally fell through an open collar way, breaking the shoulder blade, and dislocating the joint and otherwise bruising her. Through administration she is free from pain and doing well.

A son of Bro. R. W. Hopkins was recently kicked by a horse and severely injured, narrowly escaping death. He is a grandson of Bro. Price, of Kansas.

Bro. John Burlington was the morning speaker at the church yesterday, and Bro. Wm. Lewis in the evening, the funeral occurring at 3 o'clock. Bro. G. W. Best and C. Archibald declared the word at Aspey mission, and Elder Wm. Lawrenson at South St. Joseph, while the writer was at South Park mission morning and evening, where we expect to continue during the week.

The mission work could be prosecuted more effectively here had we more money at our disposal. We could get a completely furnished hall in unoccupied territory for five dollars per month, but the needful does not come our way. The Saints are burdened with a heavy church debt, which, by special arrangement with the bishop, and strenuous effort of some of the Saints, is being lessened.

By letter from Bro. I. N. White we learn that he is coming our way some time soon. We shall be pleased to see our Missionary in Charge once more.

Yours in the struggle,

J. M. TERRY.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Sunday evening at 6 p. m. E. F. Shupe, pastor, 3633 Clayton St.

Another snow storm Friday night, which laid the dust and brought a cool wave, but Sunday was a beautiful day and the attendance at the church was up to the average. The Sunday School session was very interesting.

Bro. Ed Rannie, of Omaha, was the speaker at the morning service, and Bro. Wildermuth, who recently came from Colorado Springs, in the evening. The Religio held a very interesting session at 6 p. m.

Elder J. B. Roush was called to Cheyenne Tuesday, to administer to the daughter of Sr. Limpus.

The babe of Bro. I. C. Edwards died Wednesday and was buried Thursday; funeral service was in charge of Elder J. B. Roush.

Denver is undoubtedly ahead of any city in the country, having, within the past week, added a new addition to the Bible. I have not yet learned what it is to be named. Born to Mr. Harry and Sr. Jessie Bible on Friday, a daughter.

Elder J. B. Roush has bought property on the north side, and will abide under his own vine and fig tree in the near future.

Meetings yesterday were, preaching at West Pullman by Bro. Strange and Earl. On the South side by Bro. Pitt and Sheehy. Sacrament meeting on the West side in the afternoon, and preaching in the evening by Bro. James Kier.

The Religio on Tuesday was made interesting by an excellent review by Sr. Mamie Pitt. It is worthy of note how the young people are becoming informed in Book of Mormon matters through the means of the Religio.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn spent a few days with us on his way homeward.

Sr. Horton and family have returned from their trip to Independence.

Pres. Joseph Smith is expected in town tonight and will be the guest of Sr. Warlick.

A visit among the Brighamites recently, informed us that Joseph F. Smith, of Salt Lake City, will be the successor to the late Pres. Snow, his claim being seniority of ordination. This will break their rule of giving it to the president of the Twelve. The present one is Brigham Young. However, this is all subject to revelation that may come, as they are "always governed by that principle," says Elder Lyman, who is in charge here. We submit a few points obtained from said elder, viz., Negroes cannot hold the priesthood as they are under the curse put upon Cain, this having bridged over the flood through Ham who married a daughter of Cain. As also in the pre-existent state some spirits did not take sides with Christ, neither with Satan, were indifferent, consequently lost their chance to hold priesthood, and as an evidence of it to humanity they are put into black skins. How about these half breeds, octo-roots, etc.? Again, no woman can sin against the Holy Ghost and become a son of perdition as only those holding priesthood can so sin.

Bro. Aaron Israelson leaves us this week to become a citizen of Los Angeles, California.

Sunday, October the 6th, Bro. A. Allen occupied the rostrum twice; during the week he departed for his mission field.

Thursday, the 9th of the present month, Belleville was re-organized and once again is an independent branch; Bro. Allen, Smith and White were present at the meeting.

Sunday, the 13th, Bro. Archibald spoke twice. Bad weather had its effect upon the congregation.

The social service was not largely attended; however, those present had a splendid, spiritual time.

Sr. Allen, of Kansas City, has been visiting her daughter, Sr. S. R. Burgess, the past week.

Friday evening the Religio held its regular session. The talent of our young people is attractive and the attendance is good.

At 11 o'clock Sunday Bishop Chas. A. Parkin was the speaker. At 12:15 sacrament meeting was held. There was a large attendance at both services and a good peaceful spirit prevailed throughout. At 7:45 p. m. Jno. A. Saxe was the preacher.

Your correspondent went to Oakland in the morning and on invitation took charge of the sacrament and testimony meeting, assisted by Elder Richard Ferris. It was a good peaceful meeting. The church was well filled, quite a number of visiting Saints being in the congregation. Elder J. B. Price was the speaker there in the evening.

Bro. Fred B. Blair is still up in Modoc county actively engaged in his missionary work. Elder Albert Haws is pushing church affairs at Stockton and the people are finding out that he is there. He is using the "silent preacher" to good effect.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

McBAIN, Mich., Oct. 7.

Dear Ensign:—Our two days meeting at South Boardman were good; three were baptized by Bro. G. D. Washburn, and at last Saturday and Sunday's meetings, held at Free soil, one was baptized by Bro. J. Kaplinger, president of the branch.

Yesterday Bro. Derve baptized four persons at this place. Bro. Berve and Lambking have been operating in the tent at this place for about five weeks, doing a good work. I received word from Bro. F. C. Smith, stating that he had baptized three more, at Shabbona, Sanilac county, where we held a debate with Mr. R. B. Brown, of the Disciple church, during the month of July, which makes ten, all told, who have been baptized since the debate at this place.

I have been informed that Bro. Brown was asked how he got along with Cornish in the debate, and that he should have said that "gained the day;" they asked if he got any members after the debate, he said "No;" and then the question, "Did Cornish baptize any?" "Why—no, O yes, I heard that he baptized one or two little children of those who be long to them," etc. But that is not just correct. There was, however, one little girl belonging to the Saints who was baptized by me right after the debate, with four others, two of whom, before the debate, were opposed to our faith, and who would not come out to hear our ministers, but who came out to hear the debate, and also the discourses delivered between the time of the beginning and the ending of the discussion, and others left believing, and I look for more to come in time. Thus ten, all told, since that proposition was discussed; and when we meet Bro. Brown to discuss the doctrine of his church, it will be no surprise to me if ten more will obey the gospel.

Zion's cause is onward,

DIXFIELD CENTER, Me., Oct. 4.

Editor Ensign:—The work in Maine is not dead. It is not as thoroughly alive as I would like to see it, but we have learned to be thankful for small favors, knowing we do not deserve great ones.

The conference of the Eastern Maine district was held at Jonesboro, the last Saturday and Sunday in August; and the Western Maine district held its conference at Little Deer Isle, the last Saturday and Sunday in September. Both were well attended and a good feeling prevailed throughout all the sessions so far as is known to the writer.

The present missionary force in Maine is W. W. Blanchard, J. N. Ames, S. O. Foss, James E. Kelley, S. G. Cunningham, U. M. Kelley and myself. Bro. C. H. Rich is expected to join our force next week. And with this force we certainly ought to accomplish something for the work during the winter months, and I am sure we cannot do more than is needed. Brethren, let us make one united and determined effort to reach higher conditions of spirituality and usefulness. We must "come up higher." The Lord has commanded and we must obey. Self and selfish interests must be left out of consideration if we are to succeed as ministers of the gospel, in the accomplishment of the work required at our hands. My address for the next five or six weeks will be Dixfield, Oxford county, Maine.

May the Lord help us by his Spirit, and enable us to faithfully and effectively do the work allotted to us.

In gospel bonds,
ISAAC M. SMITH.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 19.

Editor Ensign:—Since the Colorado district conference which convened here on the 24th and 25th ult. the gospel tent meetings have been kept up part of the time by Bro. J. B. Wildermuth and the writer and lately by Bro. J. F. Curtis has been lending his voice. Fairly good crowds have greeted us, and some interest has been manifested. Since our coming here two have been baptized, not directly the work of the tent missionaries; however—viz., Sr. Stella Duncan, daughter of W. C. Duncan; and Bro. Edward Disert. The latter, with his wife, Sr. Grace, has moved to Chambersburg, Penn., to remain. The brethren laboring in the eastern mission please take notice. The home of Bro. and Sr. Disert will be a welcome stopping place for the weary missionary. Look them up!

We will soon put the tent away. The coldness incident to high altitude shortens tent work in this state. On the whole the tent has been in better success this year than last. Many new openings have been made which later will develop.

Bro. C. R. Duncan at this writing is very low with hemorrhage of the lungs and to all human observation cannot live long. The Lord doubtless has work for him on the other side. His residence in Colorado has lengthened his days into years of usefulness to the cause; the end now seems near.

The Colorado Springs branch will welcome any and all of the traveling ministers passing through, to their hospitality with the understanding that they stay long enough to give a sermon or two.

The Lord is pushing his work in this place. A year ago our cause was almost unknown here; but today we have a membership of forty-five and have a standing along with other theological societies, with the newspapers and people. May the Lord wondrously bless the needy, support the weak and bring his work off triumphant, is the wish of your collaborator,
A. B. HANSON.

SWAN, Ky., Sept. 25.

Dear Ensign:—I have just closed a series of meetings at the Foundry Hill branch resulting in eleven baptisms and a spiritual feast to the Saints or at least the most of them; others are near the kingdom. The tattle's tongue is not idle in trying to bring trouble to hinder the work of God. I am thankful to my heavenly Father for the gift of his Holy Spirit to guide me in the teaching of his law, also the gospel to the world.

I was called here yesterday to administer to the sick. Bro. John Adair came after me with horse and buggy, and after a drive of sixteen miles or more we reached here and found our Sr. Mary Adair very sick. I administered once alone and but little relief came. When her father, Bro. James Adair, came home from town we both administered with no apparent relief. Later we administered again and a blessing came. The young sister rested quite well and at present writing is much better. The first two administrations were with oil that was not blessed; the mistake was discovered and the remedy made and the Lord did his part.

The Saints where I have labored most of them are striving to do their duty and are moving on better than before. Our conference and reunion begins here on the 28th inst. and we hope to have a good time. When that is over I shall work my way to the southern part of my field where there is much to do. Dear Saints of the Southeastern mission, awake, awake, as we are cautioned to be ready when the Savior comes, and the only way we can do that is to line up to His law and keep His commandments. May the Lord bless you all, is my prayer. Yours for the truth,
I. N. ROBBERS.

EIGHT MILE, Mo., Sept. 22.

Dear Ensign:—We have just located here from Hope, Arkansas. I attended a ten days reunion at Bald Knob, Arkansas, August 14th to 24th. Good meetings and good attendance. Elders H. O. Smith, W. S. Macrae and Joseph Ward were the speakers there, and much good seed was sown; they have a branch there of about twenty Saints.

I came from there to Thayer, Missouri, enroute for this place, remaining a few days to visit with my brother who is alone in the gospel work. While there I attended the Pomona conference of South Missouri district, which was one to be long remembered; the Spirit of the Master was there in power, and the house was filled to overflowing with its holy influence. The least I can say is that it was a spiritual feast. The Saints there have a nice little chapel and the finest Sunday School I have attended this season. Elders present were D. W. Thomas, district president, Elder O. B. Thomas, Henry Sparling, Davis and Baker.

From there I came here to make my home. I have a large, roomy house and any Saints coming this way will be welcome here as myself and wife are the only Saints here. Will be glad to have some of the elders come this way. We are six miles south of Harrisonville, on K. C. & S. R. R. Sixty miles east of Kansas City, and thirty-four miles north of Clinton. We trust some of the elders may come this way believing there are honest people here who might accept the gospel should opportunity be presented to them.

Yours in bonds,
W. P. BOOTMAN.

ALTON, Mo., Sept. 26.

Editor Ensign:—I feel glad that I can testify of the true church of Jesus Christ. I had been sick in bed with a slow fever, and when people saw me they just scolded and told me I would have to get the doctor or not get better. But I was waiting for an elder to come, and when Bro. Sparling came to Thayer to hold meeting, my husband telephoned him to come out here and administer to me, so he came and Bro. Bootman with him, and Bro. Sparling administered to me; and I want to say, dear brothers and sisters, that though I was senseless I could feel his cooling hand on my head, and I know the Lord's power was with him.

One night when I was very sick my nurse slept soundly I could not wake her with my weak voice. I was waiting water to drink and wanted to be waited on. I was very sad and turned on my side thinking I was neglected, but two bright spirits came to me, one at the head of my bed and one at the foot, and they comforted me so that I went to sleep and slept till morning. One of them told me that I would not die in this sickness, but would get better and live forty years longer and be a healthy woman after that.

Bro. Sparling and Baker held a weeks meeting here, but the people were so conditioned they couldn't do anything with them. Dear brothers and sisters, it is a joyful thing for me to think that we can call on the elders of the church when we are sick. Excuse my mistakes in writing this letter, I cannot write the English language well, but I can write German.

Yours for truth,
THERESA GRAFF.

MANSTON, Ill., Sept. 25.

Editor Ensign:—Monday, September 9th, immediately after the close of our quarterly meeting held at Rock Island, Illinois, Elder J. Arthur Davis and O. H. Bailey put the district tent on a boat and came down the river with it to the Illinois City landing, and late at night Elder D. S. Holmes met the brethren with a team and wagon with which to move the tent up to Illinois City. After he had the elders comfortable for the night, he drove to his home some eight miles from town. Tuesday morning he returned, and they set the tent up, and on Wednesday evening, September 11th, the brethren commenced a series of meetings. At first much prejudice prevailed, and the weather was cold and wet; but they have had fine congregations and the best of order. Elders Davis and Bailey have continually had the Spirit of the Lord with them and they have delivered a series of powerful sermons.

Illinois City is a small island town, and there is but one Latter Day Saint in it, but we think there will be more ere long; at least the people will hear the restored gospel in its fullness.

We trust the Saints will all aid by their prayers in the work in this place.

POMONA, Kan., Oct. 9.

Dear Ensign:—Bro. J. C. Vaughn and L. G. Gurwell closed a series of fifteen sermons September 29th, at this place. They had the district tent here, so were not obliged to ask anyone for a place in which to preach. There was quite a little interest manifested and it was noticeable that there were some who were there every evening, while others came and went. Two ladies (Mrs. Parrott and Wescott) were baptized Tuesday, October 1st, in the river at Scandia. Others are interested and are reading the Ensigns and sermon pamphlets.

Two dear, old Methodist ladies are lamenting and bemoaning, and say, "It is such a pity the Mormons ever got a foothold in this town." But they have it and they do not intend to let their foothold slip either. We have started prayer meetings Sunday afternoons and we intend to have a Sunday School as soon as possible, as I think that is more instructive to non-members than the prayer meetings, which are more for the Saints.

Only those isolated as we are can understand how we appreciated this meeting and how we devoured those sermons. We are hoping and praying for the establishment of a branch at this place. There are now nine members here, and the nearest branch meeting over twenty miles away. We hope that this effort will not be allowed to fade from the minds of the people before some other of the ministry comes to water the seed sown. Ever praying for the advancement of Zion's cause, I am

Your sister in the one faith,

WHEATLAND, Mo., Sept. 26.

Dear Ensign:—By direction of the missionary in charge, Bro. Frank Sawley and myself recently introduced the restored gospel at Huron, a neighborhood ten miles northeast of Bolivar, Missouri. The day after our arrival from a twenty-eight mile drive, we secured from the trustees of the M. E. S. church their building to preach in; announced services in school and commenced preaching at 7:45 p. m., to a medium sized congregation. While the good M. E. brethren hear their circuit rider one Sunday each month, they deem it profitable to listen to the Latter Day Saints present their views of salvation. The exception who missed services for fear of what they called "Mormon delusion," didn't influence intelligent neighbors away, who helped the Methodists furnish our congregation. We were asked to lead in the "president's funeral day occasion," to which Bro. Sawley responded, giving good satisfaction. A funeral service for Mrs. Piper, deceased daughter of Bro. S. Davis, threw great light upon the subject of God's justice, and occasioned the remark from many that they could see more reason and glory in the method of God than they had ever heard before. Two persons, at the close of this service, which was the first of our meetings they attended, remarked, "We never knew before what they were, but now we know they are Latter Day Saints."

We were asked to continue longer than the two weeks we occupied, and several said they received light through our preaching. "One who attended throughout, said, "I about believe your doctrine now." On thanking the main trustee, Mr. Franklin, for the use of the church, he replied, "When you want it again just use it." We expect to return before long and also respond to an invitation to preach four miles west of the church in a school-house, and three miles north-east of the church, in another school-house open for preaching.

We are rejoiced to find good openings for the gospel, and people who are happy to hear it.

SALVATION THROUGH THE GOSPEL.

Sermon Delivered at the Washington Park Reunion, on Friday Evening, August 31, 1900, by President Joseph Smith.

It should not be necessary in this age and under the conditions in which we are living, with the intelligence that the world seems to have, and the spirit of toleration which should obtain everywhere, for men to be required to give an apology to the public for their religion or their political opinion; but it unfortunately happens that the devotees who are worshipping upon this camp ground, whose views are being presented from time to time, have been under the necessity now for seventy odd years to offer a sort of apology to their religious conferees for 'presuming to depart from them, in considering the question of service offered of God to man; and while I may appear in the role of an apologist for the things that we heard expressed, for the views that we hold, I would like to have it understood for myself and for my brethren, that there is one thing that we do not attempt to do, and that is, to offer an apology for God, to offer an apology for Jesus Christ, or make any apology for what we find written of divine record. And we would like it further understood that we do not propose to evade what has been written, or to attempt to shift the responsibility of our loss of life and happiness and peace here and hereafter, should we happen to suffer that loss by reason of our adherence to the so-called, and so-believed word of God.

It is stated that salvation is of the Jews; that our Lord sprang out of Judah, of whom nothing is written of priesthood; and that in due time salvation was manifested through Him who represented the Jewish nation as a Jew, and that under His divine teaching, His administration, there was inaugurated a scheme of salvation called "The Gospel," and in pursuance, evidently, of a divine intention, that from a certain period repentance and remission of sins have been preached in all the world wherever the name of Jesus Christ is honored, wherever credence has obtained to the word of God; and while we freely accept the thought that repentance and remission of sins have indeed been taught in the world from that time until this, we are decidedly of the opinion that the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ has not been taught from the period of the institution of the church under Jesus Christ and his apostles to the present time, unless it has been done in quite modern times.

I would like to be understood in this sense that I do not propose to say that good news has not been published to men in the name of Jesus Christ by a great variety of teachers; neither would I like to be understood as saying that glad tidings of great joy have not been published abroad in the name of Jesus Christ, but that those things which we find in the New Testament scripture as stated by the Apostle Paul as the principles of the doctrine of Jesus Christ, have not been taught; except through the first years of Christ's ministry, under His apostles, and for a short period thereafter; until there has been what we understand to be a restoration of the gospel in these last days.

I am aware that this position does not meet the favor of a great many of our co religionists, but I am not responsible for that; neither are my conferees of like faith responsible for that. And if it be said to me, "Elder Smith, yourself and your conferees are to blame for believing that this gospel has not been preached, when we read in the Inspired word that the sound of them went abroad to the whole earth," I want, if I shall be permitted a sufficient degree of liberty of thought for the short hour that I shall stand before you, to present some of the reasons why myself and my brethren are assuming religiously the attitude that we have, touching this gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

We believe that mankind is much the same now that it was when Jesus came; that men are now what they were in the days of the apostles; that their moral needs are as great now as they were then; that their physical needs are much the same now as they were then; and that just as earnest an interest in the salvation that may have been wrought for us through Jesus Christ is held by us as by those to whom the preaching of the apostles came directly. And we see no reason that we can either gather from our contemplation of the subject, or from the reading of the Bible, the Old and New Testament, why there should have been a discrimination made in favor of mankind at that period of the world's history, and against mankind in this period of the world's history; and some of the reasons why are these: Jesus Christ said that He came, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but should have everlasting life; that He came to give life unto those who might believe in Him, that they might have it more abundantly; and following the reasoning of the Apostle Paul, we adopt the sentiment that when Jesus Christ came for the accomplishment of the specific work unto which His Father had sent Him, to-wit the redemption of mankind, that He came fully prepared to lay down in the arduousness of the work, the glory that He may have had with the Father, and to take upon Himself a body of the nature of Abraham's seed, and in that body absolutely to work out, in His humiliation, a compatible means by which himself and all flesh might receive entire and complete salvation. That in this offer of mercy, it was intended to include the whole human race, wherever the name of Jesus Christ might go, and His announcement as the Son of God be spread abroad.

I want to lay down here a premise or two upon which I think we can all agree. I feel quite satisfied that those who believe in the Bible, believe in God and in Jesus Christ. Those who have no belief in them whatever, but are what the world calls infidel, but which I respect as unbelievers, will agree upon the premise which I lay down and upon it we can argue and argue successfully one with the other, as to what our hope may be in this Jesus of Nazareth. The first proposition of this premise is this, that God knew, when He proposed to send an embassy to the world for the purpose of redeeming the race, the condition in which men would be, would know the condition and did know the requirements of the whole race; and that He had devised in the divine counsels held on high the very best means for the accomplishment of this work, that was within the reach of heavenly power.

I presume that none would dispute the thought. The second proposition, that Jesus Christ, or Christ, more properly speaking, was a part and parcel of that grand council, and consenting to the conclusions which were reached by it, had a full conception of the condition of the human family, all that would be required to produce for them salvation, and accepted as the conclusions of the divine hosts and the wisdom of God, the means which had been devised for the purpose of its accomplishment. I presume you will all agree with me that Jesus Christ must have known all this that I have presented before you. Now what follows? It is of interest to me, it must be to you, it must be to everyone that has a soul to save, everyone that is traversing these weary walks of life under conditions that are so onerous in some respects, under conditions which we have no power within ourselves to change, under conditions beneath which, unless there shall be divine intervention in our behalf, we must sink; and unless we shall be redeemed therefrom, forever remain sunken in despair unto our final degradation and loss.

It follows first, that if there was a means devised, it becomes necessary that men should be made acquainted with that means, that there must have been employed some powers by which men could be rated as an intelligent creation, not as a slave, not as slaves nor as those who have no responsibility, no individuality for which they were to be made finally answerable before the great Judge of the whole earth. But as we look out and see mankind, we find him endowed with individuality, with responsibility; we find him endowed with power to reason and to weigh and examine; and find him in touch and influenced by everything which surrounds him, both those material things which he sees and comprehends, and those unseen forces above and below and around him which he cannot see, nor comprehend except as they are brought to bear upon him, either for his own good or for his own loss. All that, as well as the Divine Word conjoined together to impose the proposition upon mankind that he will be held responsible for the exercise of that which God has given him, and never be absolved from his responsibility, until he stands before the great Judge of the living, the quick, and the dead, to answer for the things which have been done in the flesh.

It follows further, that if He placed this means upon record anywhere for you and for me, all that we may be interested in is to discover what that means might have been which should come to us in such plain terms, should come to us with so little disguise and so little of mystery about it, that as plain common sense every-day individuals, we could understand what it was and conform ourselves to its requirements, both in our belief and in our conduct. Is there anything extreme in that view? I apprehend not.

I am told that in the New Testament scripture we will find a revelation of God's last will and testament to men; that since the compilation of the Holy Writ, there has been no further revelations from God, and that none have been intended; but that those which are found in the limits of the Testament are to express His perpetual will touching the creatures whom He has made. Now, while I do not believe that, at the same time, for the sake of the argument, I assume it, as being forced upon our consideration by the attitude of our religious conferees. Now if that be true, then when we shall find the New Testament and regard it as it has been given to us in the language which we speak, in the language which we hear and understand, then I can agree with the proposition that it shall be declared unto us by men who are qualified either within themselves or by acquired information, to tell us the plain story of the redemption through Jesus Christ as found in that gospel.

I take up the book and read it, and I believe now that I am prepared to give you the text. I would prefer that you should remember the text if you will, and in order that you may I am going to tell you a little story. A very devout lady, living in one of the cities of the east, was in the habit of going to the church, was very fond of it, and she invariably made it her duty to remember the preacher's text. Upon one occasion she was too ill to go to church, but she charged her husband to go, and told him to be sure that he remember the text. Being like a good many other husbands are, he was quite willing to oblige his wife, and so when he came back and she asked for the text he says, "Yes, I remember the text, it was this, 'An Indian came down from New Haven and he caught a live colt by the tail and jerked him out of his halter.'"

The text really was something like this in sound, and is found away back in the olden book: "An angel came down from heaven and touched his lips with a live coal taken from off the altar." You can see the relationship of sounds deceived the man. Now my text is this, please remember it. It occurs somewhere in the writings of John, and reads like this:

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

The language was addressed to the believing Jews, just as I am trying to address my language tonight to those of you who say you believe in the word of God; and to test the accuracy of their belief and to give them a sure word upon which they could rely, he fixes the conditions of the choice, "that if they continue in my word," they may be his disciples. Then if this is true, the opposite, or antithesis is true. I introduce the antithesis, so that you will see the force of the text. "If ye continue not in my word, then are ye not my disciples indeed, and ye shall not know the truth, and the truth shall not make you free." Some one might say, "Bro. Smith, you are making scripture." No, I am not, I am only taking the common sense, plain view of the Scripture as I find it, and it is because of this peculiar characteristic in the Scripture that it is so straightforward and so plain, that myself and my conferees have received from the world the credit of taking the Scriptures literally. How else are we to take them? If they are to be mysteriously understood, then we are not having the gospel of Jesus preached to us in such plain terms that we, as intelligent people, may understand it, but only those who shall be schooled until they understand the Biblical application of the texts which they may read, or the books that may be found among the scholars in the rendition of it, only those are to come within the pale of salvation and become worthy to be saved with the everlasting salvation.

I believe that Jesus Christ came upon no unerring mission, that he came fully endowed with the understanding of what he was sent to accomplish, and that when he told the world, in plain soberness, that he came because his Father had sent him to do the work that he gave him to do, and to declare the things which he told him to declare. He gave to you and me the very strongest guarantee that he came upon the errand of our salvation, and proposed to work it out as a plain business transaction, to put us in the way of salvation, and if we received it we would be saved thereby, and if we rejected it, it would become unto us the savor of death unto death.

I have never yet found myself treating lightly the words of the Savior in the New Testament Scripture. I have taken the sentiment that was expressed concerning himself, that he was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, indicating the great responsibility that rested upon him and his entire consciousness of it; and as I trace his life history from the time that he was found disputing with the doctors when his father and mother sent for him and found him in the temple disputing with the doctors there, and reproached him because he had stolen away from them as they started from the city where the discussion took place; and when he told them, though he was but twelve years of age: "Know ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" That from that hour until he, upon the cross, was lifted up, and begged forgiveness for them who had despitely used him and shed his blood—asking that his Father forgive them for they knew not what they did—from the first to the last he understood the stupendous work that had been entrusted to his care in the saving of the world; how can I think he made any trivial or light expression of the will of his father who was in heaven?

We are desirous of becoming his disciples. It seems to me the way is open for us. Is it to take some mysterious translation of the Word, to fasten some mysterious rendition upon them and make some mythical application of it, and suppose we are to be saved by some mysterious application unto ourselves? Or are we to accept the business proposition that Jesus Christ came to save men, not to judge them? And as I once expressed it, when I was charged with the idea that anybody could belong to the church that I was representing, a man made the statement, "Anybody can belong to that church." The answer that I made was this, quoting the words of the Savior, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

If there is a man or a woman within the sound of my voice who feels the necessity for the Savior, that is the man to whom I am trying to address myself tonight. If those of you who are so righteous that you have no fear of a loss to yourself, either here or hereafter, in material damage to your everlasting salvation, I want you to consider that I am not addressing the gospel to you. But if there are earnest hearts present, earnest minds present, who feel the necessity for a Redeemer, who feel the conditions and environments around them, whose spirits are striving to relieve themselves from this irksome condition; if there is a soul that feels the necessity for the abatement of the sorrows and the griefs of this life as tending to the life which is beyond, or if they feel that they need a Saviour, these are the people to whom I am addressing myself tonight.

Now, if you want to become a disciple of Jesus Christ, then you must continue in his word. Where do you find that word? I go in imagination to that wonderful prayer. I see the scene in which this prayer was uttered. I see the Savior in his loneliness, forsaken by his friends and those who should have stood by him; I see him kneeling in the twilight; I stand by him as he bows his head, and, I suppose, with eyes looking up unto God, asks for his disciples certain things which he desires should be given unto them from his Father. Not that they should be taken out of the world, but that they should be kept from the evils of the world. And one branch of that prayer I call your attention to tonight: "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth." I have been challenged hitherto to tell the people what the Holy Ghost was. I can tell you what the Savior said it was, and I know that he must have had as good a conception of what the Holy Spirit was as any man who has ever lived since that time, or any man had before that time; and in the 14th and 15th chapters of John's gospel, in the 26th verse of each chapter, we have clear and unmistakable statements as to what the Holy Ghost is: "The Holy Ghost, the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth, which shall guide you into all truth." We have the three terms synonymous; put the two verses together and you have a complete rendition of what the Holy Ghost is, and if there be any means by which we can make it sufficiently plain for each and every man to comprehend it, I should simply say in that regard, it is the absoluteness of all things.

It is the spirit of truth. The divine comprehension of that which was from the first, that which is now, that which shall be. Of divine understanding which God had through his wondrous ministration, by which he became acquainted with the wants of mankind, by which the thoughts were to be supplied, by which he became acquainted with the condition of things and the things that were transpiring, and was able to divine it all from the very start and to so supervise all the material, all the natural and the political affairs of the nations, that from the time His Son came and took up his ministry in Jerusalem until the last son and daughter of Adam shall be saved from their sins and be given a right and title to happiness here and hereafter, never has God for one single moment ever forgotten the divine intention of saving the world, but has so supervised and prepared and completed the things of this earth in its national character, in its geographical character that He has from first to last made it possible for the gradual emancipation of man from under the dark tyranny of superstition and priestcraft until they today may stand as free men in politics, in economics and in religion, where free men lift their voice unto their fellowmen and call them back to see the wondrous ministration of Jesus Christ restored by virtue of His same divine unction unto men who are now living and are ceiving revelations from God on high.

To us, that is no idle thought; to us it is no chimera of the brain. To us it was not hatched in the mind of a restless man, or men, without thought or character; but it came by divine impress. And when it came, it pointed out the words by which men were to receive life and salvation and told them to whom the revelation came, that if they would but accept these words which came from Jesus Christ they should have life, but if they were sufficiently careless to neglect them they must take the consequences and continue in death. Some things we find in this word are very inconvenient, if we undertake to conform ourselves to the things we see around us in relation to religious subjects. I was much pleased on yester night to hear our brother endeavoring to enforce the thought of doctrine. There were two or three texts that he forgot, I guess, if not, he seemed to forget them, but I do not know but they were left designedly for me. One of them was this, in the second epistle of John. It is plain and unmistakable:

"He that abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God; but he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son."

Now, my friends, when some of you who are in the ministry go to your people, when you undertake to picture the condition of man in this life without God and without Christ, without the hope of life and salvation which are to be found in Christ, read the second epistle of John the beloved disciple, and take these texts which I have quoted in your hearing and see what you will do with them. How long is that text to continue? There is no limitation in it whatever. I read just before that text is reached in the book, something that is of a very peculiar character.

I was once teaching in a little town in northern Illinois, and was impressing the thought upon the people that I am trying to do now, that Jesus Christ came to declare a means by which men might live, and a young brother in the ministry withstood me, and as he did so, he did it in this language, quoting from the same book: "Not as though I write unto you a new commandment that ye love one another," and in this is the conclusion of the whole mystery of Christ." This was the argument of the young man, "for if we love one another then are we his disciples." I asked him if he would be willing that I should render the meaning of the word "love," or whether he would prefer it from the Scripture itself. He said very naturally he would prefer it from the Scripture. Then from the same epistle from which he quoted, under the words which I have quoted you, that is, "Love one another," there follows this thought: "And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, that as you have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it." I may not have given you the exact words, but that is the substance of it. Pray where was that beginning? Go to the first chapter of Mark and you will find in reading the gospel there, also St. Luke and see what he says about the gospel. "The beginning of the gospel of the Son of God." Go to the opening chapter of John, also in the 6th of Hebrews and you will find it there, what is the character of this pattern referred to there? If this be true, then you and I and all who shall seek the salvation such as was guaranteed unto them, must come under the operation of the same promises, must make some application of them in our lives and live in accordance therewith or we cannot be his disciples.

One other text is this. To me it is the grandest text of all. It occurs in the 7th chapter of John's gospel:

"My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me."

If there is salvation offered to us in this period of the world's history through Jesus Christ, it is by virtue of his doctrine. I am not trying to tell you the specific principles of that doctrine tonight, but you will find that if salvation is offered to mankind at all in the period in which we now live, it is in accordance with that which is divine in the counsel of heaven, which we have concluded as a premise, that God did know the condition of the human race and what was necessary for their salvation; and that when Jesus Christ consented to take upon himself the great message of redemption or the mission for the salvation of the world, He knew the object of it and the means by which it was to be done; and so when he came he went preaching the doctrine of the kingdom of God.

Therefore we say unto you tonight that we believe that God is offering to mankind a salvation; that he is offering it through Jesus Christ, and that he is offering it by virtue of the same terms which Jesus came to declare; that he has so far added a guarantee unto the operation of that gospel in the days in which we live, that he has renewed it by virtue of the voice of divine revelation.

A word or two of application and then I have done. There is a prominent opinion among a great many people that Joseph Smith was an impostor, that the system of religion which he presented with his conferees Sidney Rigdon, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, Martin Harris, and his brother William, and all the rest of them, was a deception; that that doctrine was a fraud. I want this intelligent audience to take into consideration this thought, that if it was a fraud, if Joseph Smith was engaged with others in foisting a religious fraud upon mankind, it has had one of the most singular confirmations it is possible for men to have, or receive, and that is this: that they were told by the voice of inspiration that if they would go out and preach the New Testament doctrine as they found it, those who obeyed it and received administration at their hands should receive the Holy Ghost, and it should testify to them that the doctrine was true and that Jesus was the Christ.

I have been preaching for forty years; I have baptized some hundreds of individuals; there are individuals present who have been baptized under my hands, and I have heard people to whom I have ministered thus rise in the congregations of the people and testify that they had received through the ministration of the Spirit the revelation to themselves that the doctrine was true, and that Jesus was the Christ. If this then was fraudulent, then it has been for seventy odd years; it was so nearly the pattern of the truth so called, so complete a repetition of the condition of things that existed under the disciples that the Spirit of God, the Spirit of truth, the Holy Ghost was imposed upon and made to bear witness to what these men said. But was it a fraud? I simply say this, that if it was fraudulent, it was of such a character that it not only deceived earnest minded men and women, but it has deceived the Lord and the Holy Ghost.

I testify to you tonight, as I have elsewhere, that I have, through the ministration of the Spirit learned that the prophecy was true and had the force and fire of its conviction forced into my soul, that Jesus was the Christ. Who is responsible for that? I will make it as easy as I can. Earnest minded men and women seeking for light and for life and salvation, being told to take the Bible as the man of their counsel and listen to the teaching of Jesus Christ, to become his disciples by virtue of that means for salvation which was given in the New Testament Scriptures. When they have gone to God on bended knees and asked Him for a confirmation of their hope, He has turned aside the dark curtain between men and angels and Himself, and has sent the voice of inspiration into their hearts and spirits by which the testimony has come to them that Jesus is the Christ; and He tells us that upon this rock, or fact that Jesus was the Christ, He should build his church and the gates of hell should not prevail against it.

I am thankful tonight that this is the gospel of the Son of God as we understand it, and are striving to present it; and that those who abide the voice can become His through the ministration of the laws of adoption, and you also shall receive the testimony that Jesus is the Christ. I thank you for your attention.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

On the 21st of September, 1901, with an autumn sun smiling brightly from a cloudless sky, the birds singing their convention benedictions from amid the gorgeous autumnal colored forests, the Saints of southern Wisconsin, with smiling faces and happy hearts, were gathering upon the beautiful grounds owned by Bro. O. N. Dutton, near the city of Janesville, Wisconsin, to participate in the yearly reunion and conference of this part of the Lord's vineyard.

The white tented city was nicely situated upon an elevated spot, overlooking a beautiful, fertile valley dotted with beautiful farms and typical homes of southern Wisconsin. The spires glittered towers of the prosperous, thriving city of Janesville nestled amid the forest trees which skirts the banks of Rock river some five miles away, gives a picturesqueness which lends enchantment to the view. There, under such beautiful auspices, inspired by the promise of the God of Saints some weeks ago, "The weather shall be propitious for your sakes," the Saints are coming from every point of compass to enjoy the feast and more firmly cement the bonds that bind the Saints in peace.

The reunion was called to order by Bro. W. A. McDowell, president of district, who, in a feeling address, welcomed the Saints kindly, advising and admonishing to the success of the meeting.

An organization was effected by choosing Bro. W. A. McDowell to preside, with Bro. C. H. Burr as assistant, T. W. Chatburn, secretary; Brn. E. M. Wildermuth and A. V. Closson, choristers, with Sr. M. Blackburn, organist; Bro. Jasper Dutton, chief marshal.

Until the evening hour the time was employed in short speeches from the following brethren: W. A. McDowell, C. H. Burr, T. W. Chatburn, E. M. Wildermuth, A. V. Closson and O. N. Dutton. Meeting again at 7:30, the writer occupied, delivering the first sermon of the series, September 22d. Prayer service at 9 a. m., C. H. Burr in charge. In this, the first prayer service, the Spirit was present in power, to cheer and comfort Saints, also in the calling to the elder's and priest's office, Brn. Jasper Dutton and Charles Woodstock, respectively. At 10:30 a. m.; Bro. E. M. Wildermuth, the senior member of all the Seventy, occupied. Others occupied as follows: At 2:30, A. V. Closson, president of the Northern Wisconsin district; 7:30 C. H. Burr, sub-missionary in charge; September 23d, 2:30 p. m., the writer; 7:30, our genial brother of the seventy, L. E. Hills, gave us a pleasing address on the Book of Mormon lines. Bro. H. is a railroad conductor on the Milwaukee and St. Paul line, from Marion to Galena. Make yourselves known to him, ye Saints who travel, you will find him a conductor on more lines than one.

September 24th: 10:30, A. V. Closson occupied; 2:30, W. T. Robinson. Bro. H. C. Smith, of Lamoni, and missionary in charge of Wisconsin, "lit" up the camp with his smiling countenance at noon, much to the satisfaction of all, and in the evening gave one of his inimitables.

September 25th: 10:30 W. A. McDowell occupied; 2:30 H. C. Smith again held forth; 7:30, the writer.

September 26th: 10:30 Bro. Jerome Wildermuth, a son of the old pioneer, E. M., occupied the stand; 2:30, A. V. Closson; and at 7:30, C. H. Burr.

September 27th and last day: 10:30, W. A. McDowell; 2:30, T. W. Chatburn, and at 7:30 Bro. H. C. Smith preached the closing sermon, the conference coming on at 10:30 the next morning, and thus the reunion of Southern Wisconsin district passed into history.

Tongues, interpretation of tongues, and the spirit of prophecy were among the manifestations enjoyed. The expenses were met readily, and with a spirit that evinces that the Saints are alive in the work. Much of the success of this reunion is due to the faithful work of the president, W. A. McDowell, who never tires of his vigilance for success. The song services were good, giving cheer and impetus in every service. The Religion held one session and gave a very creditable entertainment, report of which will appear later on.

Bro. and Sr. Squires, late of Long Beach, California, rendered very acceptably indeed, a few choice songs in ye old fashioned way, which for sentiment and feeling, and harmony of voice, was par excellence.

Bro. O. N. Dutton, with his estimable family, did a noble part to the success of the reunion, his commodious house was filled from cellar to garret with Saints, also the large hay barns, in which many of the brethren were comfortably chambered. We cannot close this report without expressing our joy and pleasure in mingling with the Saints here; we have surely been benefitted and we hope it has been mutual.

FIELD NOTES.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 23. Editor Ensign:—Tent work concluded on the 16th at Akron. After obtaining the outfit—tent, seats and organ—at the cost of two hundred and four dollars and eighty cents ($204.80), and after three sittings in the suburbs of Cleveland with but small audiences obtained, after advertising sufficiently, we thought, to let people know where we were, and the baptism of two ladies living at Collinwood, we shipped to Akron and commenced there the first Sunday in September. Here we had the largest attendance, good order and fair interest. Indifference is fast engulfing the people so that their faculties are so dead to spiritual concerns it is hard to move them on an investigation. Bro. D. L. Allen, my co-laborer, did his part nobly except an occasional mood when he would be a listener irrespective of turnabout being fair play at the pulpit as speaker.

Thus a pleasant tenting campaign was had and one that will bring forth fruit in the Lord's own time. Many heard the gospel for the first time who otherwise would not have known that such a people or church was in existence. We started without a dollar, but by contributions of three sisters and one brother and the Saints of Cleveland, we now only owe one hundred and eighty-four dollars and seventy-five cents on the tent and outfit. We trust that the district conference will, at the October session, make arrangements to keep the tent and finish paying for it. They have made several attempts toward obtaining a tent in years gone by but failed. We trust each member of the district will take an interest in keeping the tent to be operated in Kirtland district.

To the credit of the Saints where we have labored they have supported us with their presence and supplied us financially, so that we wanted for nothing in the way of eatables. It is encouraging to be associated with those who are willing to do their part, and seemingly happy to have the privilege to do something to further on the great work of preparation for the celestial kingdom to come.

In gospel bonds working and waiting for the final triumph.

MRS. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as molders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

Friendship's Truest Ministry.

Our truest friend is the one who touches our life on its spiritual side. There are influences enough to call out the earthly side of our nature. The world's fascinations play about us continually. Our eyes see only material things, and, therefore, material things make strong appeal to our taste, our feeling, our desire. Many of the friends, too, who come into our life minister to us only along earthly levels.

Two young people sit together for an evening, and not a word is said by either which starts in the other a thought above the range of the material. The conversation runs on neighborhood gossip, trivial personalities, criticisms of people, compliments, bits of playful humor, but with not one serious word in it all. In marriage, two lives are united and move on together, perhaps in ideal fashion, blending in love, in interest, in fellowship, in care, in self-denial, in sorrow. Each exerts over the other a strong, transforming influence. They give much pleasure the one to the other in all love's tender and helpful ways. But too often there is a whole great section of each life which is never entered nor touched by the other. As it were, these two are dwelling in a house with lower and upper stories. In the lower apartments is found all that belongs to the physical and earthly life. In the upper apartments are the higher things, things of the mind, of the spirit. But our friends always stay downstairs and never go up into the rooms where thought and reason and hope and faith hold their court. It is a pity that friendship and love should miss so much, for it is only in the upper ranges that the things which are worth while are found.

Doctor Peabody, in one of his inspiring talks to the students at Harvard, draws a picture of a vessel lying becalmed on a glassy sea. There is not a breath of air to fill a sail. While the men wait and watch, they notice that all at once the little pennant far up on the masthead begins to stir and lift. There is not a ripple on the water, nor the faintest moving of the air on the deck; but when they see the pennant stirring, they know that there is a wind rising in the higher air, and they quickly spread their upper sails. Instantly the vessel begins to move under the power of the higher currents, while on the surface of the water there is only a dead calm.

In life there are lower and higher currents. Too many set only the lower sails and catch only the winds which blow along earthly levels. But there also are winds which blow down from the mountains of God. It would be an unspeakable blessing to us all if our life fell under the influence of these upper currents. Friendship fulfills its sacred functions only when it brings into our life the loftiest inspirations.

There are many ways of helping others. We can bring them bread if they are hungry, or garments to wear and fuel for their fire if they are cold, or money to pay their debts if they are in need. We can brighten a dull hour for them by our presence if they are lonely, and warm their hearts by our compassion if they are sorrowing. But there are better ways of helping. George MacDonald says, "If, instead of a gem, or even a flower, we should cast the gift of a lovely thought into the heart of a friend, that would be giving as the angels give." There are friendships in which this kind of love is given by one to the other. Great thoughts, sweet, inspiring, uplifting thoughts, have been put into the heart to bless, enrich, and transform the life. It was such a friendship as this of which Charles Kingsley spoke when, in giving the secret of his own rich life, he said, "I had a friend." If that friend had ministered to him only in lower and earthly ways, he would never have been lifted up into the sublime reaches of character which he attained. She was not content to please him in the bright and trivial ways which are the only charm of too many friendships. She was not satisfied to walk with him as his companion in the dusty paths of earthly toil and care. She brought into his life lovely thoughts, visions of radiant character, glimpses of lofty heights, and inspired him continually toward whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely. That is the kind of friend we should seek to have and to be. No other conception of friendship's ministry is worthy of an immortal.

At the Beautiful Gate of the temple a beggar sat one day, asking alms of those who entered the sacred place. Peter and John were passing in and the man reached out his hand hoping to receive money. Peter said to him, however, "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee." Then he bade the man arise, and, giving him his hand, helped him up. Peter was a far better friend to this man than if he had given him a coin. This would only have provided for a few hours more of the poor life he was now living, leaving him in the same condition as before. Peter brought healing down into the man's crippled body and restored him to strength again. He need not beg of others any more, for he was able now to earn his own bread.

DIED.

WESTWOOD. — At Independence, Missouri, October 7, 1901, Elder Joseph Westwood, Sr., in his 90th year. He was born in Bellbroughton, Worcestershire, England, November 9, 1811, was baptized into the old organization in 1843. Three weeks after his baptism he was ordained an elder, and immediately sent on a mission. He afterwards occupied important positions in the church, presiding for years over different conferences, and was very active in the ministry. In 1845 he came to America, going to Utah, but could not accept what he saw and heard there, and although remaining there for two and a half years he refused to identify himself with the Brighamite church. In 1876, at his own request, he was baptized into the Reorganized church by Elder Emsey Curtis, and afterwards presided over the Valley branch, where he was baptized. He has been a resident of Independence, Missouri, about twelve years. His first wife was Martha Clark, whom he married in England, who died in 1865, leaving five children, three having preceded her home. In 1866 he was married to Alice Sturges, at St. Louis, who died in 1878. In 1880 he married Sr. Curtis, who, with two sons, Joseph and Thomas, and a daughter, Sr. Jane Smith, children of his first wife, with a number of grandchildren, survive him. He was ready and anxious to depart, having seen the fulfillment of the Lord's promise, that he should come to his heavenly home, and was fully ripe. Services at the Tuesday, October 8th, in charge of Elders W. H. Garrett and R. May. At his request, the sermon will be delivered at some future date by Bro. L. F. Johnson, of Kansas.

WILL SEND $2.50 FREE.

FRANKLIN MILLS, M. D., LL. B., THE CURED. SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS NEW SPECIAL TREATMENT FREE TO EACH OF OUR READERS.

When an experienced physician offers to give away $40,000 worth of a New Treatment for diseases of the heart, nerves, stomach, or dropsy, it is conclusive evidence that he has great faith in it. And when hundreds of patients, men and women freely testify to his unusual skill and the superiority of his New Special Treatment his liberality is certainly worthy of serious consideration.

That Dr. Miles is one of the world's most successful physicians in treating these diseases is proven by hundreds of testimonials. One cured after failure of eleven Grand Rapids physicians, two after being given up by six and seven Chicago physicians, another after nine of the leading doctors in New York City, Philadelphia and Chicago failed. Thousands of testimonials sent upon request.

The eminent Rev. W. Bell, D. D., of Dayton, Ohio, General Secretary of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, writes: "We desire to state that from personal acquaintance we know of no other so successful specialist, a man who has saved neither labor nor money to keep himself abreast of the great advances of modern medicine."

The late Prof. J. S. Jewell, D., editor of Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, Chicago, writes: "I have published your surprising results." Rev. J. W. Stokesbury, of Fairport, Mo., had head, heart, stomach troubles, and nervous prostration. Three physicians failed to help him. He writes: "I regard myself cured." Dr. Miles treated me fully. I wrote a circular letter to the Rev. J. W. Stokesbury, and he writes: "Dr. Miles treated me nervously. He cured me of my nervous prostration. My son was so bad, he was helpless. Other physicians could not help him. But Dr. Miles brought him out all right."

This new system of special treatment is thoroughly scientific and is immensely superior to the ordinary methods.

As all afflicted readers may have $2.50 worth of treatment especially prepared for their case, free, we would advise them to send for it at once. Address Dr. Franklin Mills, 201 to 209 State St., Chicago. Please mention this paper.

PASTORAL.

To the Saluts of Colorado, Eastern Wyoming and New Mexico, Greeting:—The condition of the church treasury is such that I feel it necessary to address this letter to the Saluts of this mission and call their attention to it.

For some time past the families of the missionaries have not received the full amount of their allowances, for the reason that there has not been sufficient money in the hands of the bishop's agent to supply them, and the bishop is unable to supply the deficiency.

They meet together at their place of worship at 2:30 p. m., and there offer to God thanksgiving and praise, and pray his blessing upon the work here and the laborers engaged in it, both local and general, and bring your free-will offerings to this meeting to be put in the hands of some one to forward to the bishop's agent, giving name of each donor and the amount.

Your brother and co-worker, JOHN B. ROUSH, In charge Colorado Mission, 4530 West 33d ave. DENVER, Col. October 12.

RIGHT THOUGHT.

It is a statement of one of old who was noted for his observation of events, that as a man "thinketh in his heart so is he." And from what may be seen in our own observation any one may be able to confirm the truth of this statement. When a child begins to exercise the faculty of reason its first lessons are most frequently taken from observation; but as it develops, other means of acquiring information is brought into requisition and instruction is given from accepted text books, in matters which his observation is unable to reach. When the years have brought the period at which his life work is to be decided, and choice of an occupation is made, if he is to make it a success it will be necessary for him to direct his thoughts for the most part to that which will contribute to his development along lines that bring knowledge and experience in that direction.

If he chooses a mercantile or a mechanical pursuit, his thoughts and studies will develop a merchant or a mechanic as the case may be. A constant study of mechanics would not lead one to successfully practice as a physician or attorney, nor as a merchant. If a carpenter wishes to practice as an attorney he must discontinue his thoughts as a carpenter and study along the lines of statutes and ordinances of the country in which he intends to represent his clients. It is the same in politics. The study and acceptance of the platform and policies of the democratic party will not make one a good republican, and vice versa. A man is a democrat only because he thinks that way; thinks the policy of the democratic party is the best for the country and for himself as an individual. As a man thinketh, so is he. This is equally true of a man's religious inclinations. He is a Roman Catholic, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Methodist, Disciple or Latter Day Saint, because he thinks that the way in which he has elected to "work out his salvation" is the best way possible for him to do so. True his decision may have, in the beginning, been largely influenced by the course his parents have pursued. The instructions received at the Sunday School of which he was in early life an attendant may have been, and very frequently is, a strong factor in assisting to form his belief. But after all it depends upon his own thoughts as an individual as to what his character shall be, hence the imperative necessity that his thoughts shall be right in order to be of the most benefit in forming his eternal habitation. We do not see that it will be a legitimate excuse for any one to urge that he has failed to think rightly in forming his spiritual character, for not only has he an unerring text book as a guide, but in the acceptance of and adherence to its precepts, he has the promise of the assistance and guidance of the Holy Spirit whose office work was declared by the Savior to be "he shall guide you into all truth," and "show you things to come." With this assistance his thoughts, both from observation and reading, should be right, and it would seem that only carelessness and neglect could prevent true conceptions of his duties and obligations.

An individual is wise or unwise as he permits his thoughts to direct him. Not long since we were an interested listener to a conversation between a minister of the church of Jesus Christ (Reorganized) and a member of one of the prominent denominations of this day, the party having criticised a statement of the minister made in the course of his sermon one evening; and when the minister, taking his Bible—the very book in which the other believed and from whose teachings the faith they had accepted was claimed to be based—and showed the very plain statement of the Savior, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3: 5), the conclusive answer was, "Well, I don't believe that way." Now, who will be held responsible when one refuses to think correctly when indisputable evidence is presented in opposition to that which they had conceived to be right and proper?

any one really suppose that any excuse will avail to evade the consequences of such judgment? In following the arguments in many cases tried before the courts of the land today, one is forcibly impressed with the efforts made by some attorneys to evade the plain provisions of some of the statutes, so as to permit the transgressor to escape the consequences of his misdemeanor. And one of the factors in the awful frequency of lynchings in different states north and south, is that too often have men, guilty of murder in a most heinous manner, been enabled to escape the just penalty of their crime through the sharp practice of those defending them. The domain of religion is no exception to this spectacle; the unholly practice has invaded its sacred portals, and men study long and ardently for a plausible excuse for evading the plain, pointed and unequivocal statements of Holy Writ, such as referred to above; and when the reason is sought as to why any one should wish to go contrary to that which is written as the will of God for our guidance, the only solution of the question is that individuals do not think it is intended to have a literal application in their case. They are unwise. They are building their house upon the sand, and the Savior has said, "great will be the fall" of the house so erected. The wise man is he who, hearing (comprehending) the words of the Savior, proceeds to carry out the instructions given, and so builds with stability.

Everything seems to depend upon right thinking. Very often a grievous wrong is done an individual by improperly judging both motive and action. It is the result of wrong thought, and in exercising such a judgment one becomes not only unwise, but unjust. Our judgment of values in the affairs of life is good or poor as our thoughts and experiences have educated us. The estimate we place upon the character of our fellows results from the observation of ourselves or of others to whom we give credence, and may be correct or faulty as our own thoughts or those of others may have been justified or otherwise by the facts in the case. Every one should use care in the exercise of the mind that the information with which we may store it shall be valuable because our thoughts have right upon the subjects engaging our attention from time to time; and especially should this be the case with regard to the hope we are building for eternity. "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." (Prov. 23: 7.)

OUR comment last week upon the death of Lorenzo Snow, president of the Utah church, should have read fourth president of the church, Brigham Young, John Taylor and Wilford Woodruff being his predecessors in office.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ELDER J. B. ROUSH's address is 4539 West 83d avenue, Denver, Colorado. His correspondents should make a note of it.

SOME one in St. Louis sends us a preamble and resolution concerning the demise of Bro. Wm. O. Thomas, but as there is no signature to the article we will not be able to give it space.

BRO. H. R. EVANS, Malad City, Idaho, would be pleased if some one would send him the address of Theophilus Kettel, formerly of Washingtonville, Ohio, and of Henry Dredge, formerly of So. Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

ELDER WM. LEWIS, wife and daughter Ruth of St. Joseph, Missouri, expect to leave New York on November 2d on the Steamship Campana of the Cunard line, for Wales, to which country Bro. Lewis has been sent to do missionary work. They expect to be gone two or three years. The ENSIGN trusts they may have a safe and pleasant voyage and much success in their work.

ELDER J. M. TERRY's lectures at St. Joseph on the "Divinity of the Book of Mormon" are attracting attention. Wednesday of last week the St. Joseph Gazette-Herald (daily) noticed the first of the series in an article of nearly a column in length. This should increase Bro. Terry's audiences, as we hope it will.

BRO. J. D. JACKSON and family are located at 1802 East 6th St., Pueblo, Colorado, and any of the ministry passing through are earnestly invited to call upon them as they need all the help they can obtain to make the work a success there. They are few in number, but are endeavoring to get the gospel before the people of that city. Bro. Jackson says Pueblo is a good place for work, but it is almost impossible to find an empty house; land is cheap, however.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. (MRS.) M. J. FELL, Big Timber, Sweet Grass County, Montana:

My trust is still in the Lord and my faith is still in this doctrine of the latter days. I read all the books I can and truly have a good many. I have a lot of Ensigns and Heralds which I will give to any one desiring them. It is almost three years since I was healed of heart and brain troubles under the hands of Elder Gomer Reese of Bozeman, Montana. Remember a lone sister in your prayers. All the sermons I ever get to hear are in my church papers.

W. H. PERWIT, Lark, Cleveland county, North Carolina:

I am enjoying good health and am preaching nearly every night. Have not baptized any in this country as yet, but I have as many calls for preaching as I can fill, and the dear Lord has increased my faith. I feel that it will not be long before some will come into the church, and I earnestly desire the prayers of the Saints that the Lord may ever be with me.

SR. AMANDA BOWEN, Chillicothe:

There are a few Saints here without a branch. We were blessed this summer by some of the brethren coming who held meetings some ten weeks. They did a great work of which we feel proud, baptizing nineteen in all, and organized a Sunday School. We feel more like pressing onward to build up the cause than ever, and desire the prayers of the Saints.

[We do not know the state from which this sister writes, and cannot credit the remittance which she enclosed until we hear from her again. There are a number of Chillicothes in the United States.—Ed.]

SR. (MRS.) INA SCHALL, Monte Vista, Colorado:

The weekly visits of the ENSIGN are much enjoyed; yes, I may say feasted upon, for like a hungry soul longing to be fed, we peruse the pages over and over for the good that is contained therein and try to measure ourselves by the contents to see if we are still walking in the path of duty, for we are like sheep without a shepherd with no fold of our own to enter. Our prayer is that it may not always be so, for we long for the association of Saints.

ELDER F. C. KECK, Rich Hill, Mo., Oct. 14:

After an absence of four years from this place, so far as preaching in a protracted effort, it is gratifying to meet such large audiences of interesting listeners as we are having. The church was full last night. Some are very near the kingdom. Saints have a fine chapel here, and the outlook for this branch is good. I am enjoying a marked degree of the Spirit in preaching the word.

ELDER J. W. RUSHTON, No. 5 Bradden St., Hamilton, Scotland, Sept. 28th:

Pleased to report all well here; fair prospects before us. We have a hall in Hamilton where every Sunday evening we hold preaching services and have a good attendance of strangers. Also in Carlisle we commence services in the Town Hall on Monday evening next and have the promise of help from several who are interested. In Glasgow we have good audiences on the streets. The Saints here are well and zealous in the cause.

ELDER J. D. ERWIN, Sherwin, Canada, October 8:

Please announce in your columns that the debate agitated at Fairland, Indian Territory, with Dr. D. B. Ray and myself will begin October 21st, in the Baptist Church at that place. Bro. I. N. White having appointed me to meet Dr. Ray's challenge against us. All who desire to attend are invited to do so. The Baptist church and the Latter Day Saints will be put to the test.

ELDER L. R. DEVORE, Sinking Springs, Ohio, Oct. 14th:

I have been laboring here for a few weeks and yesterday baptized an excellent lady who has been a believer for several years, Mrs. Mary L. Davidson, wife of Mr. Cary Davidson; numbers of your readers will remember her. Since leaving home I have baptized six. I was grieved to read the sad news of the death of Bro. D. W. Wight. Our loss (which is great) is his gain. May God bless and comfort the bereft and loving wife. I start to the district conference on the 17th to be held at Wellston, Ohio, on the 19th and 20th inst. Have had excellent liberty in nearly all my public efforts. Zion's cause is moving, sheafs are being garnered.

INDEPENDENCE.

Pros. Hulmes according to previous arrangement will leave for Post Oak, Missouri, Saturday, in the interests of the work. The series of meetings contemplated at Holden will be held sometime in November.

Elder T. W. Chatburn left Monday afternoon for Wheatland, Missouri, to meet A. Carlin who has been assailing the faith of the Saints in some lectures he has been delivering at that point.

Bro. A. H. Parsons left Monday night for Okrey, Oklahoma, to enter into discussion with Elder Collins of the Disciple faith.

The weather has been clear and, during the day, quite warm the past week. The leaves on the trees are, however, changing in color and rapidly falling off.

The attendance and interest at the church services last Sunday were excellent. The choir service lately has been unusually fine. At the morning hour Elder T. W. Chatburn was the speaker, and at night Elder Joseph Luff occupied. The afternoon prayer and testimony meeting was well attended and cheering and uplifting.

Bro. Wm. Aylor has purchased a lot in the Wilson Lawn; Bro. Grabsky, of Kansas City, has also arranged to secure a lot there. But five lots are now left in the hands of the Bishop.

Bro. John Foss returned home Monday, being called here on account of the serious illness of his daughter.

Bro. A. H. Mills' new house on West Short street, next to Bro. W. H. Murphy's residence, is rapidly being enclosed, and will be ready for plastering next week. The foundation of Bro. Frank Mill's house, next to his Bro. Arthur's is finished, and work will soon be commenced on the dwelling.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Bro. Wm. Lewis and wife went to Bevier on Friday and remained over Sunday to visit relatives prior to starting on their mission to Wales. They expect to sail on the "Campania" about the first of November.

Our stalwart policeman, Bro. M. K. Kinnaman, and our little less stalwart "restaurateur," Bro. D. C. Kinnaman, his brother, displayed fine musical talent at the church service last evening in a duet; the sentiment and rendition combined made it very enjoyable.

We closed, yesterday morning, a very successful series of meetings at South Park. The attendance was good, the Saints did nobly, and many strangers heard the glad message. Our talented young sisters stood nobly by us and gave zest to the service by their song. The Sunday School at that point is doing well under the charge of Bro. H. D. Tadickson and Sr. Anna Derickson.

Bro. and Sr. I. H. Hopkins, of South Park, spent a week with relatives in Iowa, returning refreshed for gospel work. Sr. H. is a Sunday School worker.

Last evening we began a series of meetings at the church, 17th and Paragon street, with a large attendance and good spirit. We tried to lay the foundation, the Christ of "yesterday, today and forever," in which we felt blest.

Bro. J. C. Foss was upon our streets a few days last week.

The attendance at the Religio has materially increased under a "contest" method. The number at last meeting was said to be seventy-five. The Religio at the Aspey mission is also improving in numbers and interest. Success to the Sabbath School and Religio work.

Sr. Eldredge gave a feeling testimony in the social meeting yesterday, of how her son Charles was wondrously healed when a child, when told by physicians he could not live; being directed to call the elders by an audible voice; and how her mother heart was now grieved to think this son was starving on the husks of skepticism, yet has hopes of his return.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

First Chicago Branch, 8 So. Wood St. Sunday School at 1:30; preaching at 3 and 7:45 p. m.; Central Branch, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave. Sunday School at 9:30 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman, preaching at 10:30 a. m., followed by Sunday School, preaching at 7:30 p. m.; Graves' Mission, 2458 State St.

Preaching yesterday at West Pullman by Bro. F. M. Pitt; at the Central branch by Brn. Earl and Sheehy. On the West Side by Sheehy and Stranga. Fair sprinkling of non-members attended at both South and West sides. A promising young man was baptized at the Central last evening by Bro. Lang. Three others have given in their names.

The Sunday School on the South side has been changed to 1:30.

There was a memorial service for Col. Ingersoll in the city yesterday at which a move was made to erect a monument to the great agnostic. One of the speakers was Dr. Thomas of the People's Church, who said as follows: "The gates of heaven or any good country would be glad, I know, to open to Robert G. Ingersoll." Poor "Bob" had to take it though when he was alive. How long shall the "choice seer" remain in neglect for a suitable monument to mark the spot of his earthly remains?

We had the pleasure of a visit from President Joseph Smith who stopped over on his way from the Indiana conference, to meet his wife and children who were returning from a visit to her parents in Canada. Bro. Smith with Bro. Sheehy called on the editor of the American Archaeological and Oriental Research, in the interest of a supposed archeological find that a brother in Pennsylvania sent on. Its value has not yet been determined. Bro. Sheehy will continue the investigation. Bro. Joseph preached Wednesday evening on the South side.

Bro. Elmer Johnson who has been ailing for a long time, is still holding his own. He is now domiciled with his wife at the home of Sr. Braidwood.

Sr. Hunter, recently from California, is now living on the South side.

Evening meetings at West Pullman will be discontinued for a while.

With Pres. J. D. It is intended to make this an interesting and profitable revival, both to the Saints as well as to the public. The day was delightful and at 11 a. m. the church was well filled, many visiting Saints were present; Elder F. C. Warnky was the speaker. After dismissal Pres. White baptized Mrs. Sarah Griffith. The prayer meeting, in charge of Brn. Winn and White, was very profitable and instructive, the sister who was baptized in the forenoon was confirmed by Elders White and Warnky. Bro. Ashbaugh, our presiding priest, has gone out to Colorado, we miss him very much and hope he will soon return.

Winn officiating. A large number of relatives were present; they were the recipients of many beautiful and useful presents. They will reside at 2422 Wabash avenue.

Elvin-Ellmore Debate.

I had not expected to personally report this discussion and will not now attempt to enter into details.

The debate was the result of an invitation from Elder Wm. R. Manchester of the Christian church to me to submit propositions for a friendly investigation of the respective churches as to their organization, faith and practice being in harmony with the New Testament. The debate by mutual agreement was held in the Saints' chapel at Davis City, Iowa, and commenced September 16, 1901, continuing for twelve evenings.

The attendance was large, even to an overflow most of the time, with order and attention all that could be desired. Mr. Manchester was moderator for Ellmore and Bro. J. C. Clapp for Elvin. They made choice of a Captain Warner, who by the way was taken sick and did not have the privilege of attending. No particular hindrance was experienced, as all the moderators had to do was to keep time and return thanks to the speakers for their good behavior and gentlemanly conduct. Many were disappointed that there was no mud flinging or slurring; he it said to the credit of Elder Will Ellmore; so far as my experience and observation has been, he is a pleasant exception among his brethren in debate with the Saints. While artful in debate and verbose in Bible language, he is adroit in evading the force of a point made—with his most potential argument—silence.

The usual proof texts in such contests were employed, with some additional proof not heretofore used so far as I am aware.

The special points most hotly contested were: The apostasy. At first he wanted to agree with me, professing to believe and preach the apostasy as strongly as I did, stating that it was impossible to trace a church link by link back to the apostles; but as we progressed he changed front and the apostasy was the snag upon which he shipwrecked.

First president and patriarch were great stumbling blocks, but denial of their own publications was no aid in removing truth. Alexander Campbell as a prophet, patriarch and apostle were thorns pointed in the wrong direction.

"Upon this rock will I build my church" would not fit the application of Peter using the "keys" for the first time on Pentecost in organizing the church; that is a hopeless task and a flat failure. The fulfillment in all its parts of Joel 2:28-31 on the Pentecost day was a most unfortunate assertion of Ellmore, especially in stating that Peter said that Joel's prophecy was on that day fulfilled. An untrue statement in a public debate is most unfortunate to a debater and will prove an unre-movable thorn, perplexing and vexatious to the conclusion.

Washing of feet was persistently opposed, but both argument and supposed evidence was faulty and weak and proved recoiling to the efforts of Mr. Ellmore. While it may not be thought becoming or modest in me, I wish to say that no essential principle of faith or practice held or taught by the Saints was impeached or in any wise injured by the investigation, and that means much without reference to the claims of the opposing church. Permit me to say, I have now reached that period of life when I am prepared to receive and defend the truth of God wherever it shall be found, and that a constant search for that truth during the past thirty-five years has not cooled or changed my first love.

There exist today very important reasons for an intelligent acquaintance with the doctrine and history of our own church, as also of the churches of men.

Hastily,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 6.

Editor Ensign:—Our family have returned from Wisconsin, where we have been sojourning for part of the summer. When at Delevan Lake my first Sunday, we hired a wagonette, and drove to our little church near Lake Geneva, at Williams Bay, eight miles away. Bro. O. L. James and wife, Mr. Mauzer and wife, Mr. Gipple and wife, of Kansas City, Bro. W. N. Robinson and wife, all singers, gave the Saints a beautiful service of song. My wife accompanied us. I addressed the Saints.

The next Sunday morning early, three spring wagons arrived at our cottage, and we all drove away again to the little church, where we were made very welcome, the singers giving several selections of sacred music, and I again spoke with fine liberty: also in the afternoon.

It was a great pleasure to meet the Saints there. Bro. Southwick is in charge, he has a good line of men assisting him. We were hospitably entertained, and only hope that the songsters inspired the young people of that place to devotion to song.

I am sure it seldom happens to the elders' lot to have such an inspiring company of singers with him on a preaching tour. The third Sunday out found wife and I in the beautiful city of Detroit, also W. N. and wife, and Mrs. James. I was pleased to hear a brother, from Toledo, present beautifully the working side of a Saint's life. I was discovered by some one, and announced to speak at night, which I did with freedom of thought. I hope the instruction will be of lasting benefit to all who heard.

In the faith,

J. A. ROBINSON.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Sept. 26.

Editor Ensign:—For three weeks I have been preaching on the streets of Cripple Creek every evening to crowds of from one hundred to three hundred people. They manifest a splendid interest and many times they keep me there for two hours after preaching, answering their questions. The pastors of the city are saying much against me, but it only serves to advertise my work. Bro. Merrymann assists me nearly every evening by playing his cornet to draw a crowd. In this high altitude the weather is getting quite cool for street work, so I shall soon have to close my series of meetings, yet I hope the efforts may be as seed sown in the sand of time. I earnestly wish that some of the elders could follow me up that had a gift of persuading people to be baptized.

I hope some of my brethren in Wisconsin will go to the Joice school house four miles south of Barron and baptize in that neighborhood enough for a large branch. They are friends to the cause, but we could not baptize them. May God bless every effort for the advancement of His cause.

Your co-laborer,

J. B. WILDERMUTH.

Field address, 2942 California St., Denver, Colo.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 13.

Editor Ensign:—As Chicago Salutes we feel that during the last couple of days our burden has been more bitter than sweet, because of the very great injustice done us by all of the Chicago daily papers, in their remarks of reference to the death of Lorenzo Snow, who was the head of the Utah Mormon church. I myself asked them all to print correction of the same, but none appeared to contradict their already published statement, to the effect that Joseph Smith was the first president of the "Mormon church," and that his son would now succeed him if he lived until the next Conference.

Well, the Chicago daily papers have the best of us today in Chicago, so far as printing presses go; but we do hope, and trust, and pray, that shortly we will be able to work, at least, a hand press, that will be so well fed that ere long we shall be able to keep the very best at the steady work of scattering, in print, the doctrine of Christ.

We realize, more and more, how feeble, how small are our efforts here in this great city, not of quite two million people, while we, at most, are only some five hundred. However, we are not writhing a word of complaint; we feel that we are indeed blessed in having so able a man in charge as Bro. F. M. Sheehy, but we do feel that indeed the laborers are few compared to the harvest field.

"Our friend, Dowle," Elijah II, if we understand correctly, came here in 1893 on borrowed money, and today is assessed for $6,000,000 worth of property. With the arm of our Savior and our God to lean upon, his promise to help us in the time of need and our efforts to uphold his kingdom, surely we ought to make Dowle, and all others, in this 20th century of the world, and in this eleventh hour of God's dispensation; appear insignificant in comparison with his truth, if we will put to use the God-given energy, wisdom and knowledge he has and can so abundantly bestow upon us.

Your brother in Christ,
S. D. YENDES.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 15.

Editor Ensign:—I returned home yesterday after a two month's trip through southwestern Missouri. I had a very prosperous trip, good congregations almost everywhere, assistance of the Saints in a number of places in getting things in good shape, baptized two; administered to many sick, is some instances with very remarkable results; did what I could for the Ensign and Herald.

I also arranged for a discussion with Rev. John Geddens, of the Christian (Campbellite) church, to come off December 23d, in the M. E. church, at Montevallo; questions of discussion: "Is the church of which I, John Geddens, stand identified with, and known by my brethren as the Christian church, in fact the church of God; harmonizing in faith, doctrine, organization and practice with the church of Christ set up by divine authority nearly nineteen hundred years ago?" He affirms, I deny. I affirm our church and he denies.

Yours in gospel bonds,
F. C. WARNEY.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 8.

Editor Ensign:—Sitting in the chamber of my son Leonard, my oldest, who is very ill with typhoid fever, I thought to pass away a few of the lonely, anxious moments, while he is so quiet—for he is in a stupor most of the time—by writing a few lines to you through the dear old Ensign. It is not because of lack of interest in the cause that you have not heard from me, as I expect you could see for yourself could you take a peep into some of the pigeon holes, or possibly into the waste basket of the Ensign office. At least three articles under the heading of "Notes and Comments," and one or two letters await the light somewhere or have been sent, but although those articles contained much which I wanted to lay before the Saints for their consideration, if so be that in anything I was deceived they might set me right, yet for some good reason, possibly many of them, our dear editor has not seen fit to print them.

I am sorry, not for myself, I trust not from any egotistical motive, but because I believe God is working in a wonderful way here, and I would like the Saints to watch the unfoldings of His plans and purposes. You know I have always said the Apostolic people were so much like us. You also know how the pastor put a veto on my taking part in their meetings, as my "influence was damaging," etc., but you do not know how wonderfully the prejudice has been allayed if not removed. I have many things to say that I cannot in the space of a short letter, but if the editor sees fit to give the articles room that I mentioned, I would be glad to follow with some recent transpirings.

I do not believe I have compromised anywhere. I may not have been as bold as I ought, but some how I have not been led to say or do much to antagonize. I agree with them whenever and wherever I can truthfully, and try to let my life testify to the truth, and to the saving and keeping power of this latter day gospel; for if it will not keep us from sin, it is of not much more worth than the sham gospels around us.

Since my son has been sick the pastor called on me, a thing the more remarkable as he never visits unless led of the Lord or in cases of sickness, not even among his own flock.

I will tell you a few of his words: "Well sister, I thought it high time I called on you, and was led to come last night, when I heard your son was sick, but it was so late; and this morning I only wanted to give you a chance to get the morning duties out of the way. I felt like I might do you a little good, and then again I felt like that was thinking too well of myself to think that I could do you any good; anyway, I said, I can show my sympathy." I thanked him and assured him it had done me good.

"Now, I want to tell you something that may do you good too. I was coming down the street and stopped to talk with a lady a moment who invited me in, and I told her no, I was going to call on Mrs. Corson who had a very sick son I had heard. I am not going to tell you all I said, but I will have to tell this much to tell what she said. I said, 'I believe she is a good woman.' She said, 'Yes, I have heard say she was.' I thought I'd tell you this for I know how people are always ready to tell you of all the bad things said about you." He has alluded several times to me personally in sermon and at prayer meetings, and lets his people know he is my friend. And said once, "I never can antagonize her faith." Sometimes when we meet just for a minute or two, he gives me such a glimpse of his heart-life as I don't believe a member of his church hardly can understand. Our leadings out of Babylon have been so similar, though of course his trials were on a much larger scale; as much greater than mine as he is greater. I heard him tell not long ago of a time, six years ago, when even little children ran away from him in fear, or if bold enough to meet him, jeered and hissed at him; "and do you think that cost a man anything that loves children?" he asked. And told of his old pastor in the Baptist church and the twenty-five or more ministers of the association refused to recognize him on the street, etc., and not one thing had he done but to be true to the voice that called him out of Babylon, and bade him "cry aloud and spare not" concerning their sins, and hollow, empty professions.

"What is the name of your church," said a lady to me recently. I told her. "Oh yes!" she said; then told me she overheard Bro. Dougherty saying to some one, "Well, I cannot say a word against the Latter Day Saints." "Sister," he said to me once, "I cannot see these things as you do, but I am willing, or if not willing I am trying to be willing to be made willing to see these things if they are right." Just the point I was in for months, trying to make myself willing for God to subdue my will to be willing to accept reproach and all, if it was his will. As many as will join with me in prayer, that he may see these things in their true light, write to me, and let us agree to lift our hearts in humble prayer that he may be led into the true path. Let us unite in prayer no matter where we are, at half past seven, or between then and eight. Give him up? The same power that laid him and his people on my heart, also said, "Ask and ye shall receive. whatsoever things ye shall ask in my name for by my authority I will send." How can He help granting the request? He himself tells me to make?

Oh for more courage! for that holy boldness that will speak out when the right time comes, but I have been shown that my mission was indeed a very humble one. A flash vision came in answer to my question of "Lord, what can I do? what will thou have me to do?" A net work of roads, and one straight and narrow leading off into a forest and through a lonely valley, and just where the narrow road started stood a weather beaten signpost with its arm extended down this narrow road; and like a flash came the meaning. I was only a sign post. And I said, "All right, I am willing to be nothing but a sign post, if so be I can best advance the cause. And I thought, Sign posts can point the right way if they are of ever so poor material. In the journey of life a sign post is very essential, and it is only required of a sign post to stand firm, and always point in the same direction, not "turned about" and never lying down; always standing through storms as well as sunshine; through winds as well as through calm weather; through cold as well as heat; a sign post must stand, and I said, "Lord, help me; I'll be a sign post, if the people will not go the way I point it shall be their fault not mine. And always, by thy grace, I will point toward the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Not long ago I had a dream that impressed me wonderfully. I thought Bro. D. had been talking to his people about doing more to win souls, and he said they must go out into the world and warn the people. I thought we were standing out in the street discussing this matter, and they were dividing up into groups of twos and threes to go about it, and I said, "I am going too, but I cannot go alone." "You?" "What will you say to them?" I dreamed some one said to me. "I don't know," I replied, "I am going to go, and the Lord will give me the message. I will say whatever he tells me to say." "All right then, go ahead and God bless you," I thought Bro. Murray said. So I started. I had my route shown me; a narrow sidewalk off which I could not go. I must only stop to speak to such as I met on that walk.

I first saw a lady standing in the door of her house. "Good morning," I said, extending my hand. "I have a message for you," I said, then trembled because I did not know what to say, nor did I until she said, "You have? what is it?" Then the message was given. "The Lord Jesus Christ is coming soon to set up his kingdom and sent me to tell you to get ready to meet him." "How do you know," she asked. "You read your Bible and the signs of the times and you will see for yourself," I replied, and went on. Everyone I met I had the same message for, and it seemed that in each case I knew not what I was going to say until I began speaking. At last I met a crowd and I thought I can't speak to each one of them separately, and the message came to me in song, and I began singing the good news, while people stopped even in the broad street along side of which my walk lay, to listen. Then I awoke, thrilling with a desire to tell the good news.

My letter is so long now I will close. I am glad to say my son's symptoms are more favorable. Remember your far away sister in the gospel in your prayers.

BLACKFOOT, Ida., Sept. 23.
Editor Ensign:—Our reunion, held at Provo from August 24th to September 1st, was a success. Not many strangers attended, but a goodly number of Saints were present. On September 14th I baptized two at Salt Lake City, and the next day we were privileged to listen to two excellent sermons by Bro. Luff at the same place. He stopped a few days in the city on his way to Colorado to do missionary work in that part of his field.

Next day I went to Ogden and spoke in the evening in the new chapel built there by our people. Bro. D. W. Wight had held a series of meetings before, working on the church during the day to get the building ready for dedication; the outside painting only remained to be done. Bro. Wight, Dana and Chase have done a large share of the work, and there is no debt on the building. The Saints and friends of that vicinity have thus manifested their interest in the work in a very substantial way. One was to be baptized the next day by Bro. Wight.

On the 17th I went to Logan where Bro. Condit had arranged for a few meetings. We held two meetings in a room occupied by the Seventh Day Adventists. I also spoke to the Scandinavian people on Wednesday afternoon in Sr. Larsen's house. Bro. Layland joined us here, and together we started by team for Malad, Idaho, to attend conference. We arrived in Malad on the 20th. During our stay there seven meetings were held, four persons baptized and the Saints' church at that place dedicated. We enjoyed our visit to Malad very much and believe that all were profited by the conference. On Sunday evening the church was crowded with attentive listeners.

On Monday morning we continued our journey northward stopping overnight with Bro. and Sr. Goodenough, near McCammon. The next day was rainy and cold, but we succeeded in reaching Pocatello along in the afternoon. Bro. Condit and Layland went to work at once and arranged for a meeting, and in the evening I addressed a few Saints and friends at the house of Bro. Croshaw.

Yesterday we arrived at this place, and may labor together in this vicinity for a few days, then separate. Bro. Condit and Layland to labor in their respective fields in Idaho and Western Wyoming, and I to go to Montana, where I expect to labor the remainder of the fall.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Oct. 21.

Editor Ensign:—Being directed to work in this place since the middle of September we have endeavored to act accordingly. At the close of our meetings with the tent in Dayenport the Saints decided to change their meeting place from Rock Island to Dayenport. A room was secured on Harrison street, and after considerable scouring we were ready to receive "callers." Attendance of non-members has been fair, though not large. Some of the Saints are doing well and their zeal and interest is commendable. Others are just "joke warm," while some are very seldom found at the meeting place of the Saints. One excuse or another is presented, principally that rest is desired after working hard all week. We wonder how one can feel justified when such is offered as a reason for non-attendance at services.

The Religion is in good condition, results gratifying. And while some may be disposed to "check" the young, we believe that unless the older ones wake up and come along, the young will be in the lead, and nothing having placed them there but study, which brings knowledge, and knowledge is power. There are young people in this branch who can give a far more instructive talk on the Book of Mormon and its teachings than many of the older ones. This is the result of systematic work, and we are pleased to note this fact. Pleased in the sense that it is gratifying to see the young preparing themselves for service; but sorry it is so with the older ones. And when we say "older ones" we speak in general, not this branch particularly.

Our midweek prayer service is well attended, some of the Saints coming six and seven miles. The Lord has blessed us in these services and we feel comforted. There are some encouraging features even in city work. We shall refrain from mentioning the discouraging ones. The city papers have shown a disposition to be courteous and fair, and we shall endeavor to keep them supplied with all the matter they wish in our line.

Most all missionaries indulge in some diversions occasionally. We are no exception, and though working along the river nearly all summer, yet we have not been fishing during the season. Not until the eve of Saturday, October 12th, were my wife and I permitted to join a "fishing party." Even then we were required to do all the fishing. This seemed a little unjust to us, but our murmuring soon ceased. The "pond" was located in Dr. and Mrs. Assy's sitting room and we were given a piece of gaspille which served as a pole, a piece of wire for a line, and told to go work fishing over a "dam," a sheet stretched across the large doorway. Well such a variety of "fish!" There was bread, butter, eggs, potatoes, bags of beans and rice, cheese, sugar, canned corn and peas, together with several jars of fruit, pickles and relishes, baskets of grapes, sack of flour, and many other useful articles, all of which were safely "landed." You may talk about your mountain trout, but this beats them all, we think. A certain disciple of old was told to "fish" and he would find a "coin." The last two "fish" that we caught did not bring us coin, but from their "mouths" we each obtained a piece of green colored paper of regulation size. Thus you see the kind hearted Saints here are not unmindful of the fact that the physical man must be supplied. They took advantage of my absence from the city a few days and planned the whole affair unbeknown to us. May God reward.

On the 10th I went to Gilchrist to visit Bro. E. H. Pine, who had been severely injured in a mine explosion. Left him feeling much better. While there I preached twice in the church, occupied part of the time by M. Es. and part of the time by Christians. Bro. Short, this is the same church which was closed against you in old Gilchrist. One of the men who was trustee then still serves, but with the others, he gave his consent for us to return and hold a series of meetings in that church. We felt well in speaking and it is evident that events of the past have removed prejudice. We expect to return there this fall or winter.

Still desirous of being numbered with the workers for Christ, I remain, Queer Church Treatment.

From the New York Sun.

Strangers in the city are as a rule unfavorably impressed by the treatment they receive in the best known of the churches, and go away with stories of what they call rudeness to tell. If they come to New York to live permanently, they soon become accustomed to the metropolitan view on the subject. It is after a first experience in seeking seats in some of the wealthy churches that they are most eloquent.

"The sexton," said a Southern woman, "put me in a pew and evidently meant for me to stay in the end he pointed out to me. I was audacious enough to move to the other end of the seat, and he came to me while the clergyman was praying and made me get up from my knees and take the place at the end of the pew he had first pointed out to me."

Such episodes are frequently the cause of complaint from visitors who cannot understand why the rights of pew holders should be so strictly protected. They do not realize that the sums paid for the seats are several times at least as much as the pew rents in any of the other cities of the country, and that in the rush of visitors to the well known churches the pew holders would never have a chance to get their seats unless their rights were energetically protected. New York life often seems heartless to persons who view it with only a brief experience of its peculiarities, and the treatment of strangers in churches has always excited comment from them. But this matter is not nearly so much discussed today as it was a decade or so ago, when the sexton's of some of the Fifth Avenue churches acquired very enviable reputations in the matter of courtesy and christian charity.

MEMORIAL SERMON.

Memorial Sermon Delivered in Saints' Church, St. Louis, Mo., September 15, 1901, by Elder Fred A. Smith, Upon the Assassination of President Wm. McKinley.

Circumstances the past few days have been of a peculiar and sad nature. The whole nation has been brought to grief—made to mourn. Party differences, articles of strife, have been laid to one side, and as one people we have mourned because of the loss that has come to the nation. And our hearts are made sad not only with the loss that has come, but with the thought that in this land of freedom, this land of liberty, where all men should be free, the assassin has raised his horrid head. Three times we have been made to suffer thus as a nation. Three times have we been made to pass around the bier of an assassinated president; and we wonder almost if it is not leading to conditions that will destroy and take from us the liberties so dearly bought, and can but hope that the sentiment of the prayer this morning, the sentiment of the hymn that has been sung, may be indeed breathed out by the people of this nation, and that as one their hearts may ascend to God that His redeeming power shall save the state.

In Jeremiah we have an expression made in the 9th chapter, reading from the 1st to the 9th verses, that I believe will now be partially appropriate, at least:

Oh, that mine head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people! Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men, that I might leave my people and go from them! For they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men. And they bend their tongues like their bow for lies: but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth, for they proceed from evil to evil, and they know not me, saith the Lord. Take ye heed every one of his neighbor, and trust ye not in any brother, for every brother will utterly supplant, and every neighbor will walk with slanders. And they will deceive everyone his neighbor and will not speak the truth: they have taught their tongue to speak lies, and weary themselves to commit iniquity. Thine habitation is in the midst of deceit, through deceit they refuse to know me, saith the Lord. Therefore, thus saith the Lord of hosts, behold I will melt them and try them; for how shall I do for the daughter of my people? Their tongue is as an arrow shot out: it speaketh deceit: one speaketh peaceably to his neighbor with his mouth, but in heart he layeth his wait.

There are some expressions in this that it seems to me are applicable at this time, and cause us to think that the Lord, talking through the prophet, proclaims some of the evils that existed, some of the difficulties that seem to have beset the people at that time; and while it refers to Israel, and the talk is made concerning Israel, we cannot be un-mindful of the conditions that exist now as well as then.

I have before me a little statement made by President McKinley at the Trans-Mississippi

Exposition in Omaha, October 12, 1898. I stood amidst the thousands that surrounded him at the time, and heard the utterance; I listened to the man as he talked to the people—a common man among the common people. This part of the statement has been given to us again.

"Right action follows right purpose. We may not, at all times, be able to divine the future, the way may not always seem clear, but if our aims are high and unselfish, somehow and in some way the right end will be reached. The genius of the nation, its freedom, its wisdom, its humanity, its courage, its justice, favored by divine Providence, will make it equal to every task and the master of every emergency."

One of these emergencies has come. We have met one of them in the loss of the man that uttered this declaration. That his purpose was high, that his aim was high and his purposes noble, no one that has ever studied the life of the man can possibly deny. His devotion to his wife and mother, as a boy, as a man, as a husband and son, have marked him and stamped him upon the hearts of the common people of this country, as well as all the world, as a noble man. And from the utterances that he breathed here, it seems to me that he must have drunk of that principle of truth that has for its high and noble purpose and aim the benefit of mankind.

"Right action follows right purpose. We may not, at all times, be able to divine the future, the way may not always seem clear, but if our aims are high and unselfish, somehow and in some way the right end will be reached."

Take notice of the statement made and of the principles that he presents before us, that they are unselfish, leading us to thoughts above the selfish, hard natures of life that we come in contact with; and it would seem from the very nature of the man that that has been one of the principles of his life. After the assassin had stricken him down, while he sat in agony and pain, he said to those about him—pointing to his assassin—"Don't let them hurt that man." The same principle of unselfish thought for others seems to have been always with him, even in that hour, when resting under the death sting of the murderer's blow, he pleads, not to allow them to harm the man that struck him down. It savors of the principle of the Master, it savors of the thought that came to him as he hung upon the tree, when he said, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

And in regard to the principles of patriotic duty that devolve upon us, it seems to me that a few words this morning along that line may prove beneficial, may be of worth to us, and may help us to look forward with more confidence in the performance of our duty in this direction than we have done before. It may enable us to draw some lesson from the word, to discern the difference between the duty that we owe to our government, to our God, under His direction, and the awful, terrible, wicked teachings of the evil one and the condition of those who listen to him. Under such influences the assassin struck the blow—not at the man alone, but at the very fundamental principles of the government we love, and under whose influences we enjoy liberty and freedom.

"Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers; for there is no power but of God, the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation."—The Apostle Paul, 13th chapter of Romans.

As I read this statement this morning and thought of the conditions existing, of the exultant words of the individual who had shot the president, and the place he put himself in; of his exultation over the crime he had committed and how he felt that he had done a good deed in this, I could not help thinking, what must have been the teachings and the influences of the thought that lead and directed his mind that could make him exult in a crime of this kind. "They that resist shall receive to themselves damnation." And I asked myself the question, Under the influences of this great government for freedom, shall we foster, can we foster, can we sustain, can there exist in our midst such teachings, that we should resist every form of government; and at the same time we continue to enjoy the principles of freedom? These are they who deny the right of government, who would resist every ordinance that may have come in the form of government, and that, too, as we thoroughly believe, and as we believe we will be able to show from God's word as it has been given to us as a people in these last days, in this government, notwithstanding conditions in the government under which we exist, the constitution that has given us these rights and privileges, was framed by men whom God raised up, and they were given for the special purpose that freedom might be had here; given in the thought that all men might have an opportunity to stand before God and answer to him for the works they do here—for their agency.

There are a few other statements made in this same chapter concerning this:

"For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil."

Let us compare that with the declarations made by those who have followed these peculiar teachings which have led to this calamity that is upon us now, in which they have denounced the rulers as being tyrants, the government as the oppressor of the poor and the people who work. They have thought that if they could remove the chief officer of the government, they were striking the shackles from off the people. They seem to have forgotten the fact that the individual who stood there but represented one to whom the duty and responsibility of the execution of the laws of the government had been confided. When we view the situation and consider the teachings to which we have referred, we are confronted with the thought that if in the teachings as presented by God through His Spirit and the apostles, we are given to understand that the rulers are a terror to the evil doers and not to the good, from whence come such teachings as these, from whence do they emanate? There is a direct contrast.

These are some of the teachings that are given according to the doctrine of Christ:

"Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? Do that which is good and thou shalt have praise of the same. For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake. For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor."

The apostle's understanding, as he received the inspiration from God, would lead us to that high, respectful position that in these individuals we would recognize those, who, under the influence of God, themselves occupied high and responsible positions among men for the good of men. "Wherefore ye must be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake." This last statement, it seems to me, is a splendid one. Not only for fear of the wrath to follow the transgression of these laws should we be careful to keep the laws of the nation, but for conscience sake we should do so. Now, let me ask you to bring in connection with that the statement of the man himself, "Right action follows right purpose." If we have the right purposes in life, if our hearts are right, our conscience is true, our soul's desire is for that which is good and for the benefit of mankind, then right action follows such conditions as these. Then we would be blessed, and the apostle, in making his statement, although he has given us the divine law, has brought to us the same keen thought. For conscience sake we should be subject to the rulers, for conscience sake we should submit to the laws.

"For this cause pay ye tribute also, for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor."

These are the teachings of the Apostle Paul; and in his presentation he has given us something that savors of the words of Jesus Christ, as they have been given through the prophet to us in the last days, and to which we shall call your attention in a few moments. There are a few other statements we want to notice briefly. In Titus, 3d chapter, the apostle makes this statement:

"Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, and to obey magistrates, to be ready for every good work, to speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, showing all meekness unto all men."

Then we turn over here and notice a statement made by Peter, that impetuous man, that servant of God who was so anxious to be in God's work and yet so often made mistakes himself, for which he afterwards, in humility sought pardon. In the second chapter of the first epistle general of Peter:

"Having your conversation honest among the gentiles: that, whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation. Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme, or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of them that do well. For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men."

He has stated it nicely, and we discover that these disciples of Jesus Christ looked upon the rulers of the land under whom they lived, as ministers of God; they recognized this in the teachings of Christ and the example set by Him as their Master. He taught all men to walk uprightly and honest in the sight of God and before men, and to be subject to these individuals whom God had sent them as rulers; that they had been chosen as such and had been called upon to occupy that position; and under the conditions in which they were living the disciples were under the necessity, as servants of Christ, as those who would walk uprightly in the sight of God, that they should walk in harmony with the laws of the land, and in their teachings we have the same sentiment. Christ himself, when he was upon the earth, when asked the question as to whether they should pay tribute or not, and whether they should be subject to these individuals, called them in question and pointed them to the thought that they themselves, and he also himself, was subject to the powers that be; paid tribute to the Roman government under which he was born, rendered obedience to the laws of that government, and not only by precept, but by example, taught that they should recognize these principles all along the line.

In the prayer our brother offered, the thought was expressed that we believed God had a hand in framing our Constitution. It is a peculiar thing that as we compare it with the different forms of government that had existed up to that time, that there was not a document of the kind in existence anywhere when it was made. It stood as one of the most peculiar instruments of all ages; it stood out bold, dis-thet and plain in all its declarations. It has stood the test of years and years, and still stands without an equal anywhere—outside of the gospel law—as a constitution under which the people should be governed.

Now on page 270 in the Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord makes this statement. (Sec. 98: 10).

"And again I say unto you, those who have been scattered by their enemies, it is my will that they should continue to importune for redress, and redemption, by the hands of those who are placed as rulers, and are in authority over you, according to the laws and constitution of the people which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles, that every man may act in doctrine and principle pertaining to futurity, according to the moral agency which I have given unto them, that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment. Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood."

And in making the declaration he points us to the thought that all might, "act in doctrine and principle pertaining to futurity, according to the moral agency that I have given them, that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment." And here I might make the statement, on this soil, under the banner of this nation, under the constitution here framed and sent out to the world for religious liberty, freedom of thought, freedom of speech, God has established a government wherein these rights are to be had by the human race. Here it was that people have been taught in the principles of right living; here they have been taught to look up to that condition where the individual might live in perfect harmony with that which he understood to be God's law; that he could bow in freedom, in protection, bow in perfect confidence to God and offer to Him his devotions on high, and answer to Him and to Him alone for the worship that he should render. Now let us notice some other statements that are made in connection with this. On page 259, section 95, paragraph 2, we read:

"And now, verily I say unto you, concerning the laws of the land, it is my will that my people should observe to do all these things whatsoever I command them, and that law of the land which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges, belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me; therefore, I, the Lord, justifyeth you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these cometh of evil. I, the Lord, maketh you free; therefore, ye are free indeed: and the law also maketh you free; nevertheless when the wicked rule the people mourn; wherefore honest men and wise men should be sought for diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold; otherwise whatsoever is less than these, cometh of evil."

Here is the command of God to the church; here is the statement that should plant within us that love of the Constitution, of the laws of our land, and of the government, that we should ever be able and willing to uphold, to maintain and sustain those who are placed over us; and to feel keenly the losses that may come to the people by reason of the transgression of these laws, by reason of the lifting of the hand of the assassin, by reason of all that would tend to destroy this government. We stand in a position thoroughly in harmony with the laws of the land and the principles of freedom, and we should not look upon the transgression of these laws, or a crime against the government with any degree of allowance whatsoever. God has given us a government that should maintain the rights to the people, and the purposes of their lives should be to sustain it at all times.

Now another statement we wish to call attention to. We have used it at various times for different purposes, but this morning we want to notice it with more than usual pleasure.

"Let no man think he is ruler, but let God rule him that judgeth, according to the counsel of his own will; or, in other words, him that counseleth or sitteth upon the judgment seat. Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet. Behold, the laws which ye have received from my hand are the laws of the church, and in this light ye shall hold them forth. Behold, here is wisdom."—D. C., p. 177, Sec. 58: 5.

"He that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land." We should maintain these laws. The prophet that spoke in this age, the prophets that spoke in ages past, the Christ himself, the apostles that have followed him, have all proclaimed obedience to the laws of the government under which they lived, and have all held before the people the thought of responsibility, of being honest, virtuous and upright and fully maintaining these laws and governments; upholding and maintaining these powers and being subject to them; and when we feel that we are surrounded (I will not use the term surrounded) but when we feel that we have in our midst the very elements of danger that seek to destroy that which God has said we should sustain, we cannot help but believe that it is the power of the adversary that seeks the destruction of that which is divinely appointed; that seeks to destroy mankind and bring him to that chaotic condition that would result in anarchy, distress and trouble, and (I was going to use a term that possibly would not be proper here), but we will make the statement, barbarism. That would take from us the restraint of the laws that have been placed around us; take from mankind the principles of right that have been given him in the gospel of Jesus Christ, the love of liberty, of truth and right, and establish the principle that has been contended for, which, as one expressed it, is, if an individual has a desire to kill he has the right to kill. Let this condition come and how far would we be removed from barbarism? How far would we be from the state where no truth is taught, where no principles of love, liberty, charity, virtue and uprightness are held up before the people? How far would we be removed from that?

Then we have before us this morning not only the teachings of the apostles and of Christ—not only these—but we have the declarations of God through the revelations given to the prophet of the present day, the declarations of him that has been slain, filled with high purposes, with aims for the benefit of mankind, that the people might be blessed and the government upheld. We have before us the life of one who has presented the matter in this way. He that would raise his hand against such things, he that would oppose them must oppose righteousness, virtue, liberty, charity; must oppose God himself in everything that comes before us as teachings that emanate from Him, and hence must stand hand in hand with and as having made a covenant with the adversary of mankind to bring the people to sorrow, weeping and mourning.

We are grieved as we look over the history of the man that has gone; as we think of the statements that have been made concerning him, and all along through the trying times which came to him and the nation, he has maintained dignity and has conducted himself in such a way, political as his life has been, public as it has been, almost from his boyhood days, that he has commanded the respect, the esteem and the honor of those who were absolutely opposed to him politically, and his governmental policies. He has stood in that position for years, and even when he was stricken, he has not only had the sympathy of those who were fellowshipped with him in the party lines in which he walked, but he has the sympathy and tears of those who looked upon things from a different standpoint from him, as a noble man and worthy of the position he held as the president of this nation. They recognized in him not a partisan, but our President. We admire the teachings of the man. The solicitude for his wife and mother, the carefulness for those around him always manifest in him, the patience under which he suffered his affliction, and, better yet, even with all the honors that had been heaped upon him, they had not been able to stamp from him the thought of God; they had not stamped from him the love of God; and as he lay, with the dampness of death upon him, he took his wife by the hand and said, "Not our will but His be done." He said it to comfort her, and as those patriarchs of old, who went to their rest with a realization of the sorrow that must follow the separation that must come, with the sense and knowledge of the people's sorrow for him, he comforted and cheered; he told them "Good by, not our will but thine be done." And yet in his sufferings, one of his last thoughts during the moments of consciousness, was "What have they done to the assassin? Don't let them harm him." Even with death staring him in the face, with the hours of his life ebbing away, with the moment drawing closely near when he should have to pass, he said, "Don't let them harm him."

I say, friends, when we lose one from such high position who has been filled with such noble purpose, the government has lost, the people have lost; and the hand that struck at him struck at our freedom, at our privileges, at our rights, at God's word, and cannot possibly expect to be protected under our government and to escape the condemnation that comes upon such. May God deal with him justly, according to his just deserts, and may He bless those who mourn; may His peace come to the afflicted wife. And may God bless him who takes the place now vacated, and under these distressing circumstances, must assume the responsibility of the reigns of government; lead him in the paths of uprightness and honor, bless him with wisdom and direct him in all his ways, that he shall do those things only that shall contribute to the freedom of the nation, and make it as it has ever been, and as it ever should be, an asylum for the oppressed and down trodden of earth, that they may find in it what God has said should be here. May his blessings rest upon those other officials who have responsibilities in this line. And may the thought of the President find an echo in our heart; may it ever be that such shall be our lot; that indeed we may cherish right purposes that will bring about right action; and that we may at all times be able to stand for principle, though we cannot divine what the future may be. May we aim high, as he has said, with unselfishness on our part, and work for the accomplishment of the good as strength may be given us, until all shall work out well in the end. Now, let us read this statement again that we may get the thought fixed in our mind, then we will leave the matter with you.

He was taught by a Puritan mother, under those schools that told him to respect, to honor and revere the name of God. We thank God that such men can find place in the highest official positions of our government. May He bless us with wisdom, give us His Spirit, and direct the government to its ultimate end.

BURIED CITY IS FOUND.

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 8.—The most astonished man in the United States was probably Columbus Gray, an old Arizona settler, known all over the territory as "Cap Lum" Gray, when, while plowing up an uncultivated mound on his farm near this city, he unearthed a section of a village of a prehistoric people. This event, so important to scientific research, occurred when the industrious farmer was preparing his new ground for a late crop.

According to the natural laws of irrigation, ground cannot be flooded when elevated above the level of the ditch. The arid land of Arizona has, with a few exceptions, a perfectly level surface. These exceptions usually prove to be aboriginal mounds. Independent scientists, scientific societies, universities and even the students of antiquity employed by Uncle Sam have made numerous expeditions in the Southwest in search of traces of the ancient inhabitants of North America. Volumes have been written of the cliff dwellers of Arizona and the mound builders of other territories and states of the Southwest, but little has been said of the latter race in Arizona. In fact, no trace of them was found until within the last few years, when the progress of agriculture accidentally discovered these buried habitations of a former people.

When the first rumor of traces reached the ear of science, the bureau of ethnology hurried its great experts to the scene, but before precautions could be taken by the department, which cannot act without the authority of congress, individual scientists had, to a large extent, claimed or bought up much of these lands. Great expense is necessitated in unearthing and preserving these hidden villages of a long forgotten people, hence little has been done to enlighten the world as to their extent and real character.

LAND NOT PRODUCTIVE.

"Cap Lum" Gray, whose early days were spent in fighting off the hostile Indians, was disgusted with his discovery, which deprived him of turning this plot of elevated ground into an alfalfa patch. He threw down his plow and went into town to tell of what he believed to be his "hard luck," "for," he asked, "what can you raise on ground as hard as sandstone?" He described it as an "old dump" and complained bitterly of "all that rubbish being strewn over his place."

Then, as has been the case in so many of these important discoveries, stray scientists, curio collectors, tourists and agents swarmed to the scene and carried away every relic which could be found near the surface. The earth being stonelike in its composition, it is almost impossible for other than experts to excavate these specimens without breakage or injury of some sort. Not realizing the true value of his possessions, "Cap" Gray willingly told the crowd to "help themselves." However, several days later, when he learned that several pieces of the pottery which one of the curio collectors had unearthed had been sold for the price of several alfalfa crops, he put an abrupt stop to the devastation which had been going on at a lively rate.

Then; finding, that some collectors who were determined to obtain specimens, would wait until night, and then, by the brilliant light of a tropic moon deepen the hole where the first relics were found and labor late into the night until their efforts were fruitful, the farmer built a little hut near his mound, or "mine," as he insisted upon calling it. Since then it has developed that the mound is an extension of some of the prehistoric villages which have been unearthed during the last four or five years and which are now under the control and protection of the University of Arizona and several other scientific societies, while a few of them have come under the care of the bureau of ethnology.

Although several scientific societies have made overtures to "Cap" Gray, he has refused all offers to sell or lease his "mine," resolving to study the question for himself and learn the real value of his property. No price will tempt him to part with a single specimen or relic taken from his mound. Among the valuable articles already excavated from the ancient ruin are several pieces of pottery. Nearly all of them are round, while the lines of once gorgeous decorations are now almost indiscernible. Then, too, there are several slabs of stone of light, grayish granite with a few hieroglyphics on them. Jousset, the great student of antiquity, finds an indication of Asiatic origin of these ancient people in the outlines of the elephant which circumscribe some of their mounds and the forms of these animals have been traced in some of this pottery.

One of the curio hunters, who made quite a collection from this mound before the old farmer found the value of his "old trash," asserts that he excavated a skull from the ruins. However, this has not been substantiated, as no one saw him unearth it, and he declares that he has lost it, and no like find has been made. Nevertheless it is a fact that pottery and slabs can be taken from the mound today, and they have been taken in the presence of scores of people, and are now collected, some of them in the Arizona university, and quite a number of them in "Cap" Gray's home.

The pottery which has been obtained from the mound has, in some cases, a soft, crumbly appearance, as though it were in a state of decay, while other pieces seem to have been hardened with age, until their substance is as hard as metal. When broken the raw edges of these ceramics reveal black, shiny specks, which seem to indicate the presence of iron or silver, and yet neither of these ores is to be found in this part of the country. Still, the theory is that the aborigines may have carried these pieces, or the materials from which they were made, from some other lands they occupied; or, perhaps, they were the spoils of war, as it is the generally accepted theory that this dead race were great warriors, and continually fought either themselves or their neighbors.

It is a remarkable fact that this mound has as yet revealed no implement of war whatever. The first specimens found, as a rule, in these prehistoric villages are spears, mallets and war clubs fashioned from stone. However, the field has by no means been exhausted. Meanwhile, deep secrets lie hidden beneath this agriculturally unproductive ground. — Montana Record, Aug. 9.

To Colonize Palestine.

Home and a Language for the Jews, Some Successful Settlements Already.

Zionism, as the plan now appears, means a tremendous industrial, commercial and agricultural development of Western Asia. Palestine was once the seat of a vast population. It is capable of supporting such population again. There are round about it many parts of Turkey, Mesopotamia, Arabia, etc., that might, if properly treated, become the homes of modern nations. On the Pacific shores of Asia there is a teeming population. In Western Asia there are not these numbers of people. Why not take some there, especially since there are millions who are looking for homes? A federation of American Zionists is composed of a few far-sighted American Jews, who are in sympathy with equally progressive men in Europe. They feel the burden of privation that falls upon fellow Jews in Russia, and, in only a little less degree, in many other parts of Europe. The president of the American federation is Professor Richard Gottheil, of Columbia university, and son of Rev. Dr. Gustav Gottheil, long rabbi of Temple Emmanuel, New York, perhaps the greatest temple of Jewish worship in the world. Speaking of Zionism, its meaning and its aims, Professor Gottheil said:

"The central thought of Zionism is not to get, but to give. Its aim not to induce American Jews to make great sacrifices in a doubtful undertaking, or the Sultan of Turkey, into whose political dominions we seek to enter, to forego some of his power or surrender a part of his territory. Its aim, an altruistic one, is to provide a home for men, women and children who have no home, and to make a part of Turkey that is now productive of little, the seat of a population that will be rich for itself, rich for Turkish revenues, and rich as customers for the products of everywhere. WILL SEND $2.50 FREE.

FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., THE CHICAGO MEDICAL COLLEGE, WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH HIS NEW SPECIAL TREATMENT FREE TO EACH OF OUR READERS.

When an experienced physician offers to give away $40,000 worth of a New Treatment for diseases of the heart, nerves, stomach, or dropsy, it is conclusive evidence that he has great faith in it. And when hundreds of prominent men and women freely testify to his unusual skill and the superiority of his New Special Treatment his liberality is certainly worthy of serious consideration.

That Dr. Miles is one of the world's most successful physicians in treating these diseases, is proven by hundreds of testimonials. One patient cured after failure of eleven Grand Rapids physicians, two after being given up by six and seven Chicago physicians, another after nine of the leading doctors in Philadelphia and Philadelphia and Chicago failed. Thousands of testimonials sent upon request.

The eminent Rev. W. Bell, D. D., of Dayton, Ohio, General Secretary of Foreign Missions, writes editorially in the State Sunday School Union: "We desire to state that from personal acquaintance we know Dr. Miles to be a most skillful specialist, a man who has spared neither labor nor money to keep himself abreast of the great advances of modern medicine." The late Prof. J. S. Jewell, M. D., editor of Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, Chicago, said: "By all means publish your surprising results." Rev. J. W. Stokesbury, of Patuxent, Md., had head, heart, stomach troubles, and nervous prostration. Three physicians failed to help him. He writes: "I regard myself cured." Mr. C. Clark, of Webb City, Mo., wrote a friend: "Dr. Miles treated me for mind trouble, unnatural fears and great nervousness. He cured me in nine days." Mr. George Woodhouse, of Flat Creek, Mo., remarks: "My son was so bad, he was helpless. Other physicians could not help him, but Dr. Miles brought him out all right."

This new system of special treatment is thoroughly scientific and immensely superior to the ordinary methods.

As all afflicted readers may have $2.50 worth of treatment especially prepared for their case, free, we would advise them to send for it at once. Address Dr. Franklin Miles, 201 to 209 State St., Chicago. Please mention this paper.

in great numbers in Europe and America. Why may there not be railroads in great numbers in Western Asia? Why not a trunk line connecting Palestine and Egypt? A transcontinental line, across Asia, through such cities as Teheran, Lucknow and on to tide waters of the Pacific, has as favorable an outlook for profit as a transcontinental line from New York, through Chicago or St. Louis to the Pacific tide water. A great aim for a few poor Jews. Not long before his death there visited Lord Beaconsfield, the great British premier, a Jewish lad from the Continent. Looking at him thoughtfully, Disraeli said, "You and I belong to a race that can do everything but fail."

"It goes without saying that there are Jews in America who think Zionism unnecessary, even impracticable and visionary. But laying prejudice aside, look with fairness upon the situation. Never mind exact numbers, but they run into millions of Jews, who, never mind why, are not wanted as residents of various European countries. Palestine is the traditional home of the Jew. It is sparsely peopled and millions of square miles of territory are supporting a few where they might support many. Jews expelled from Europe have flocked to America and have settled in New York, until now it is the greatest center of Hebrew population in the world. Closely huddled together there, little room exists for them, and less chance for their development in any direction, except perhaps in wretchedness. What more sensible thing than to colonize Palestine?"

"Having stated so much, let me answer a few questions. Yes, the Jews are an agricultural people. Americans think of them as tradesmen exclusively,

OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS. DAUGHTERS OF ZION Mrs. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

Editor's Address, 1210 West Short St., Independence, Mo.

Boys and girls, how many of us, and how often, have we, during the last few moments before arising, resolved that this would be a red letter day for us—what an easy matter it looked to vanquish the foe—how we were going to do this, and not do that, and so on through the whole category of virtues. We already felt the thrill of satisfaction that waits upon duty well done.

But alas! On this of all days every thing goes wrong. We are tempted to impatience, to unkindly criticism, perhaps to doubting if its worth the while to put forth such efforts, and our whole spiritual atmosphere becomes clouded and the day really ends worse than any preceding ones.

Do not be discouraged; we all have trodden the same path and are continually going that way. Follow the example of the evil one and at those times redouble your efforts, even a resolve, "I will," sometimes leaves us barely conqueror. Look up, ask for help, strive with all your might and the evening will bring the consciousness of duty we have tried to perform, and not altogether failed in doing. Every victory makes us stronger, believe that. In this sifting time the opposing power realizes he must quench every holy desire, and it seems to me, as it may to you, that he has sometimes to be met almost as a tangible presence. But do not let us give him the victory, God will help us if we ask him, and he sees our hearts are set on his service. Let courage and resolution be our watchwords.

"After all, we must come back to the old truism—that men and women are like water; they always find their true level. And where you live happiest that is your level. There is polluted water and there is clear water. But one law is inexorable—the closer you get to nature, the truest and simplest thing there is because it is closest to God, the clearer always will you find the water."

An Old-Fashioned Woman.

No clever, brilliant thinker she, With college record and degree, She has not known the paths of fame, The world has never heard her name, She walks in old, long-trodden ways, The valleys of the yesterdays.

Home is her kingdom, love her dowry. She seeks no other wand of power To make home sweet, bring heaven near.

To win a smile and wipe a tear, And do her duty day by day In her own quiet peace and way.

Around her childish hearts are twined

As round some reverend saint enshrined.

And following hers the childish feet Are led to ideals true and sweet. And find all purity and good In her divinest motherhood.

She keeps her faith unshodded still, God rules the world in good and ill; Men in her creed are brave and true, And women pure as pearls of dew. And life for her is high and grand, By work and glad endeavor spanned.

This sad old earth's a brighter place All for the sunshine of her face; Her very smile a blessing throws, And hearts are happier where she goes.

A gentle, clear-eyed messenger, To whisper love—thank God for her!

—L. M. Montgomery in the Congregationalist.

"The woman who, feeling that her life is complicated with unprofitable things, will simplify that life, will find the moment she steps out of her bondage that she is not alone. Far from it indeed! She will find herself of a sisterhood that numbers more votaries than she has ever dreamed of. A sisterhood she will know not of until she becomes part of it. Like attracts like in this world. If we live false lives we attract those who live similar lives. If our lives ring true the chords we strike will attract those who also live on equal heights. The true lesson for us to learn is to live for things we believe; not for what may be thought of those things by others. That is where our chief trouble lies; we are too much concerned by what the world may think of us. We are fearful lest some action of ours may be misunderstood. We are unwilling to stand by our convictions. We forget the thing itself. We forget that we are what we are by the things we do. It matters exceedingly little what the world thinks of us. But it does matter, and it matters much, to ourselves whether the lives we lead are true or false."

"Don't forswear the Evens, but remember Adam wasn't happy alone even in Paradise, so find a little better half by-and-by, and through the power of a genuine woman's love, regain and keep your Eden green through a long and happy life."—Louisa M. Alcott, in The Ladies' Home Journal for September.

You are never quite conscious of how many disagreeable lodgers there are in that many-chambered mansion you call your "self" until anger or envy or hate knocks at the doors—and presto! out come trooping such a lot of unhappy creatures—rancor and uncharitableness and suspicion and all unkindness, a perfect army of enemies to peace and happiness.

and that along a few lines only. But Jews have been driven out of other lines. Were not Jews of Bible times agriculturalists? Did they not cultivate the vine and tend their flocks? To say they cannot do so now, if afforded the opportunity, is to fly in the face of the whole history of perhaps the most remarkable race in the world. And Jews can become manufacturers. They can do anything that anybody else can. To say so is but to state a truism. Who doubts it? Any agreement which Jews might make with the Sultan of Turkey would have to be ratified by the European powers. A grant to us would be no taint upon the authority of the Porte. As I have so often said, Zionism offers something to the sultan and to the world. In giving what it has to give, what may it not get for itself? In other words, what may not the Jew accomplish, having a home of his own? If he has done so much as a wanderer, to what developments may he not attain as a fixture? Jews do not understand their own powers. Our difficulty is to get them to have ambition.

"Zionism is growing steadily in wealth and in Jewish estimation. There are settlements in Palestine already and they are successful. All that is now required to do is to go on as we have been doing. Mere colonization will not do. We must have Jewish sentiments with us. We must also have legal guarantees, granted by the sultan, the political sovereign, and underwritten by the powers of Europe, perhaps of the world. We do not hold that all Jews must return to Palestine if Zionism is to succeed. All Germans do not live in Germany, but there is a German nation. Sometimes we feel that Irishmen live everywhere but in Ireland. But there is an Ireland. Jews, we know, live everywhere, in some places where they are wanted and in some places where they are not, but there is no Israel. There ought to be. There can be. If it be in Palestine it can exist under some such charter as the South African Company, or the old East India Company. Under proper direction, and assisted as it is intended to be by the Jewish Colonial Trust or other agencies, it can be the home of the Jew and the center of trade with the rest of the world, the England of the commercial Englishman, the France of the artistic Frenchman, the Italy of the laboring padrone.—The Kansas City Journal, August 4, 1901.

After two years careful study of the mineral formation of Baxter County, Arkansas, Elder Joseph Ward organized the White River Mining Co., interesting some of the best citizens of the County, and they have located 3,500 acres of the best mineral land there. Lack of transportation has retarded the development of this section, but the White River R. R. is now building and when completed will run through some of this land.

In order to develop this property we will sell 1,000 shares in blocks of 5 shares or more at 20c on the dollar. Shares are $25.00 par value each and are fully paid up and non-assessable. This offer only holds good until Jan. 1, 1902.

Now is the time to make a small investment which will in the near future bring large returns, for as soon as we begin shipping ore this stock will be worth 100 cents on the dollar. For further information write to Joseph Ward, Mountain Home, Ark., or E. Eitzenhouser, General Manager, 507-5 Mass. Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

The reunion over, the tearful partings ended, in company with Bro. H. C. Smith, we leave the peaceful home of our worthy Bro. Dutton, which, to us, will ever be a green spot in memory, together with the beautiful reunion grounds, where God was pleased; by his Spirit, to meet with and comfort his Saints. We wend our way to Janesville, boarding the chariot, and are off for "Voree," made famous by J. J. Strang and others—Bro. Smith to glean bits of history for the archives, and the writer to pick up a "Jot by the wayside." Arriving at Lyons, three miles from Voree, we domicile with Uncle and Sarah, who have a peaceful and quiet home in the village. Uncle Chas. Davis is one of the early Strang pioneers, who, "I tell oo," has a well stored memory of the eventful and halcyon days of "King James." Aunt Sarah, who is a niece of Uncle Davis', presides neatly and kindly over the household, having held the responsible station for some eighteen years. Aunt Sarah is yet a "miss," and while bearing her years nicely, still lives in hopes.

An appointment is out and in the evening Bro. H. C. addressed the fair sized audience unto edifying. On the morrow, in company with Uncle and Bro. Revelton, we are driven to Voree, and near the "Hill of Promise," we stand on the green sward of the old graveyard, Bro. Davis pointing out the spot where the earthly remains of J. J. Strang were buried. Later years the body was taken up and reinterred in the Burlington cemetery, about one mile distant; the exact spot being hard to locate, as no stone marks his final rest. The old graveyard is uncared for now, the lowing of kine and blating of the sheep only awaken the echoes of the home of silent sleepers. "Change and decay in all around I see," yet the evidences of the once bustling Voree are plainly visible, which was estimated to be near ten thousand souls.

Looking west and just across a narrow marsh we see the "Hill of Promise;" step over with us while we view the scene; standing now on the summit of the "Hill of Promise," on the foundation stones of "the house of the Lord," amid the oak trees, we have a fine view of a beautiful country. This Hill of Promise composes about forty acres almost round, studded with forest trees, now robed in their beautiful autumnal glory; on the north and west sides flow the peaceful waters of White river, a portion of which was sanctified for the baptism for the dead—Strang's revelation reading, "And the waters shall be sanctified for the baptisms for your dead from the bathing pool to the water wheel." We walk down the west slope towards the river a hundred yards or more, to the spot where, it is said, Strang dug up the plates purporting to be the sealed portion of the Book of Mormon plates, our worthy guide picking out a depression which he thought was the very spot. Stepping back upon the brow of this wonderful Hill of Promise, and near the old foundation, is the spot where one of the brethren stood facing the north, and by command of Strang, blew the trumpet, sounding the joyful notes for the assembling of Israel's hosts from the north country. Uncle Davis says, "I tell oo, they didn't come."

Looking to the northwest, across the river, we view the town's plot of Voree, laid out in 1844, just after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith—and Strang declared by appointment of Joseph in a letter written nine days before his tragic death, and directed to Strang here, in the which was Strang's appointment as prophet and successor, to lead the church, and Voree to be the gathering place. This noted letter is dated Nauvoo, June 18, 1844. In July, 1846, Strang receives a revelation to build the "Hall" on the spot we are now standing, also the temple across the river, on a beautiful plat designated. Here J. J. Strang, Wm. B. Smith, John E. Page, Wm. Marks and others, figured in the marvelous work and a wonder of latter days.

The sun is dropping down into his setting splendor, the shadows and shades are deepening, the whip-poor-will is sounding his doleful notes, and over the once thronged streets of Voree (meaning the garden of peace) the shades of dark death hath settled, so we drop our pen to think of what our sermon shall be to interest our audience to-night, and later on to dream of Strang and Strangites.

Count Tolstoi on Creeds.

From Frank Leslie's.

"But don't you still teach creeds in America?" Tolstoi asked me. I said we did not allow creeds to be taught in public schools. He asked me to explain the public schools of America, which I did. "Oh, that is grand," he cried, "knowledge, true science for every child." Still, he said he was under the impression we taught creeds. "Now the Congregational, Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, as well as the Catholic; they must teach the church beliefs somewhere." I said that in the parochial Catholic schools I understand there was a certain amount of the creed taught. "But in your home, your mothers, your teachers, somebody, somewhere, teaches a great deal of church belief." I replied that some parts of the Bible, like the Sermon on the Mount and the Lord's Prayer were read in our schools.

"That is good. How about the parents? Do they teach dogma to the infant? I had to tell the truth, that some of our mothers teach dogmas, but nearly all let the young brain of childhood form itself according to reason and teach the child by example rather than precept.

"No. creed should be taught the child," exclaimed the philosopher. When I said that some parents are so afraid to wrong the child's intellectual freedom that they do not teach the child any religion at all, just hoping that it will grow up and be converted, he said: "Ah, that is fatal; religion, God, morality, the divine, sublime. It wrongs a child for a parent to withhold strong, definite teachings there. But religious and moral teaching should be all proved, all true, all scientific, all fact."

Working uniformly and perfectly, it makes the bread and cake always light and beautiful, and there is never a waste of good flour, sugar, butter and eggs.

"OUR CREED: ALL TRUTH."

VOLUME 12.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1901.

NUMBER 44.

"PERVERSE THINGS."

Perverseness has always been a characteristic of the human family. At least it is a trait which has often been manifest throughout its history. One of the remarkable features connected with its exhibition is that notwithstanding its unprofitableness has been so often demonstrated, the lessons furnished have not been sufficiently heeded to deter a repetition of offenses against the Creator by others, both of the same and succeeding generations. Just why this should be so, is perhaps only explainable by the fact that "men love darkness rather than light," as the Savior testified. Their understandings being darkened they naturally support very earnestly those theories which appear to them to be correct and of worth. This of itself is also a strange thought; that there should be found any who prefer to walk in a path which has not received the approval of the Lord, when there exists a way which He not only accepts, but has Himself trod! But it is a fact, and has so been demonstrated from almost the beginning of Creation until this hour, and will continue until the end of time, according to the Scriptures.

Another astonishing feature of this spirit of perverseness is found in the fact that it has so frequently been shown in the history of Christ's church that men have deliberately gone to work in the church to sow the seeds of dissension, and sought to draw away a following; and no matter how often the effort has been made, or how chimerical the theories advanced to supplant the truth, there has nearly always been some unwary ones ready to give heed and to follow the lead of the perverter. One would think that when an individual is once enlightened in the knowledge of the truth, and has had witness of its stability, that nothing could tempt him to give it up for any theory, no matter how plausible; but human nature has been shown to be very weak, and human judgment to be uncertain, and in this fact may be found the explanation for the erratic course so frequently pursued by some who appear to be, and doubtless are, very honest and sincere in their beliefs.

The Savior declared:

I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness.—John 12: 46.

He that believeth on him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil.—John 3: 18, 19.

Here it is plainly stated that Christ came "a light into the world," and it is clear that if men and women are willing to accept that light and walk in it—abide in it—the adversary will not have power to lead them into darkness and error, for that which he advances to men being the opposite of the influence emanating from Christ, must, in the nature of things, be darkness; and when an individual turns aside from the light of Christ to that which is contrary to His teachings, he is exhibiting his lack of appreciation of the sacrifice of the Son of God, and shows he prefers the darkness, hence is under condemnation before the Lord. "He that believeth on him is not condemned," because if a man conscientiously believes in the mission of Christ he must of necessity do the things He has taught and commanded, in doing which the Lord will justify him and acknowledge his works. But so many in the world continually misinterpret those teachings and insist upon following their own imaginations, teaching doctrines the very opposite and contrary to those inculcated by the Savior and his brethren, and yet, inconsistently, expect recognition from God as His children, declaring themselves to be heirs of eternal life; as the apostle says, "They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him." (Titus 1: 16). They are perverse.

This turning away from the faith on the part of some who were more or less prominently identified with it, was foretold by the Apostle Paul upon his last visit to Miletus, when he called to him the elders of the church at Ephesus, and after recounting to them his faithful service for the church, and telling them they should see his face no more, and taking them to witness that he had "not shunned to declare unto them all the counsel of God," he forewarned them of what they should experience after he left them, in this remarkable language:

Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.—Acts 20: 28-31.

The apostle concluded his work for them by kneeling down and praying with them, and the record says "they all wept sore" * * * sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, that they should see his face no more," and yet, of the very number present who received his warning and admonition, some were to try to destroy the flock and lead away disciples after them. "Also of your own selves"—you elders here, who have been chosen by the Holy Ghost to care for and lead the flock in safety—of your own selves shall men arise, speaking PERVERSE THINGS, to draw away disciples after them. What a terrible thing to have to foretell, and yet how fully it was justified; for only twenty-six years afterward the Lord, by John the Revelator, sent the servant of the Ephesian church,—the presiding elder probably—this message:

I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars: nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love. Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first work; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.—Rev. 2: 2, 4, 5.

It will be noticed this condition was brought about by teaching perverse things, and could be possible no other way; and thus it is seen that the perverseness seemingly inherent in man, leading him to forsake the plainly revealed plan of the Creator, and substitute ideas of his own, is responsible for the darkness so prevalent, and the resultant multiplicity of sects and parties, in the name of Christ, and for which there is not the slightest divine authority. Christ is not divided. There can be but one true church acknowledged by Jesus Christ, called by His name, and having the fruits of that approval. It therefore behooves every individual to take the Scriptures, study the plan of the church therein described, and search for the church built upon that same identical plan, and having in its organization the same officers, the same laws, and the same manifestations of the Spirit. "The law of the Lord is perfect," says the psalmist, and cannot admit of any improvements or changes as the ages come and go. It must be eternally the same; hence the identification of His church, the one He acknowledged as His own, should not be a very difficult matter, so long as we have the chart of the original plan to guide the seeker in his search. Once get fixed in the understanding the organization of that church by Himself and His servants, its doctrines and ordinances, as they instituted them, trying every church claiming to be the church of Christ by that chart, and those whose claims are erroneous will at once be made plain. But if the searcher will permit himself to be influenced by perverse teachings of men, that which is contrary to the doctrine, organization and gifts of the church as our Savior gave them in the early days of the church's existence, he will soon get into darkness and come under condemnation.

In the light of past experiences then, it should not be a surprise that there will be found in the body of Christ, at times, those who will speak perverse things. It is the purpose of the adversary to use the most effective means at his command, to frustrate the designs of the Almighty for the blessing and salvation of His people. God's designs cannot be frustrated, but men may and do forfeit their rights by transgression, and this is just what the adversary delights to have them do. If it is needful that the Almighty should work by means, that is, that He should employ human agencies in His work among men, much more does the adversary find this needful, and he can use a clean vessel to much better advantage often, than an unclean one. A servant of God has the confidence of his brethren, and if the adversary can subvert that influence to his service, it is apt to be more effective than that of a profane person, among the class he is most anxious to reach—the faithful Saints. But if God's children will carefully examine the teachings of every individual—in the church and out of it—by the word of God—the Scriptures—there is no danger of being deceived. "Let no man beguile you of your reward," by influencing you with perverse teachings of men. Follow Christ and your salvation is assured.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JOHN G. PAGE, who has recently moved to Blairsville, Pennsylvania, thinks that point a good place for missionary work, and if any elder comes that way he would be pleased to have him stop for a week or ten days' effort to get the gospel before the people. He is willing to assist all he can. He knows of no other members of the church there.

SR. AMANDA BOWEN, Chillicothe, Missouri, desires to correct the statement in our last issue regarding the number baptized by the brethren as noted. There were seventeen instead of nineteen baptized. Brn. J. W. Adams, W. E. Haden and others, she says, have done a great work there. The Saints have been encouraged, the Lord has blessed them and they feel like pressing on. Any of the elders laboring in the vineyard will find a welcome home at her house at any time.

BRO. W. H. DEAM, Morgan Park, Illinois, a Chicago suburb, has opened a printing establishment called "The Ridge Press," at 10735 Washington avenue, and announces himself as being prepared to do fine job printing. The brethren of Chicago are to be congratulated in having so strong an assistant in their work as Bro. Deam, who is an up-to-date printer of long experience. By combining their means, talents and energy there should be considerable literature distributed in that city in time to come. They have issued an artistic and attractive leaflet setting forth a few points which will attract the attention of the reader to the position of the Reorganized church upon the gospel theme. May "The Ridge Press" become famous in that city for its good work, artistically, financially and efficiently.

ELDER J. C. CHRESTENSEN, Beaver, Douglas Co., Missouri, has a three quarter column reply to an article on "Joe Smith" published in the Douglas County Democrat, in the Douglas County Herald of October 10th, in which he issues a challenge offering to affirm a proposition that Joseph Smith neither practiced nor taught polygamy or "spiritual wifery," and that the church was established in harmony with New Testament scripture in doctrine and organization. A one sided proposition we think; an opponent should be required to affirm something for his church.

ELDER J. T. DAVIS' address is 22 Ball St., Webb City, Missouri.

Extracts from Letters.

F. M. EDEKER, Abbott, Alabama: I am one of the isolated ones, and do not get to hear preaching often, so I cannot do without my paper that comes every week laden with soul cheering news.

D. T. FREEZE, South Pittsburg, Tennessee: The ENSIGN is a welcome visitor in our home. My wife says she could not do without it; although we are not members of the church yet, but expect to be soon.

BRO. WESLEY RAVEILL, Post Oak, Missouri, Oct. 24:

Since last May our Sunday School has increased to 35 in attendance. Bro. S. J. Madden has since that time baptized 11, and I believe more are interested. Pres. G. H. Hulmes was with us recently and gave us some very interesting sermons, and we expect him back the 26th. I pray the Lord to bless him and bless our efforts that we may yet have a branch here.

SOME one in Bay Minette, Alabama, who forgot the little formality of signing the name of the writer, says:

There appeared in your columns some time back something concerning Bro. Stogins; the paper containing the information has been misplaced. The parties concerned can address Sr. Nancy Stogins or Sr. S. A. Bankster, at Bay Minette, Alabama.

INDEPENDENCE.

Elder J. C. Foss will be in Topeka, Kansas, next Sunday, his daughter being convalescent.

The Independence Religio local will give a musical and literary social, assisted by the First and Second Kansas City and Armstrong locals, at the home of Bro. Elliott, Pacific Place, Independence, Monday evening, November 12th. Admission 15 and 25 cents. Proceeds for the benefit of the piano fund.

Sr. Minnie Huff, of Olathe, Kansas, accompanied by Bro. and Sr. I. B. Laing, also of that place, were visitors in Independence Sunday. Sr. Huff was baptized in the church font at 1:30 p. m. by Elder J. C. Foss, and confirmed at the afternoon service by Bishop R. May and Elder I. B. Laing. They returned home in the evening. Sr. Huff's membership will be with this branch, there being no organization at Olathe.

Grandma Davison, Sr. J. W. Layton and daughter, Irene, returned from Colorado Friday, of last week, all in good health and glad to get back home. Grandma is quite delighted to be in Independence again; she, and in fact, all of them, look as if their sojourn in Colorado had done them good. Bro. Layton will follow later, as soon as his beets are harvested, having sold his place there. They will occupy their home on Bowen street and we are glad to have them with us again.

Bro. J. S. Smart, who came here from Montana, some few months since has improved in health somewhat, though he is still practically confined to the house. We hope he may improve so as to get out during the fine weather. Sr. Smart, while not in the best of health, is able to look after the affairs of the house, Bro. Evan Davis, their nephew, being an able assistant in the outdoor matters. We are pleased to have our sister and our brethren with us.

Bro. J. A. Kennedy and J. E. Lewis are just as busy as they can be, putting in granitoid walks on Lexington and Electric streets. They are doing good work.

Bro. Wm. Street is putting up the brick building for the power house of the city electric light plant. A number of buildings have already been, and more are being, wired, in readiness for the turning on of the current. Wires are being strung on the poles and the work is being pushed fairly well. The Board of Control decided to put in the wires at cost for material, making no charge for the labor, and quite a number are taking advantage of this liberality to have their work done now, which is the right thing to do.

Sunday was a fine day, but attendance at the different services was not quite up to the average. At the morning hour Bro. H. H. Robinson was the speaker, and at night Bro. R. J. Parker occupied. The afternoon service was very enjoyable and enlivening. Brn. Garrett and I. B. Laing, of Olathe, Kansas, were in charge.

The weather continues very fine and summer-like; some parties report gathering "spring" wild flowers last week. It is ideal weather for outdoor work and the builders are pushing their work along as fast as they can. Bro. H. R. Mills is having the foundation built for his new home on West Short street, just beyond his present residence. The sidewalk and paving gangs are also hard at work.

Bro. W. B. Patten, late of Canon City, Colorado, was in the city Tuesday, en route to visit his daughter in Kansas. He has disposed of his business in Canon City, and is not settled as to his future location, but will probably return to Colorado.

Tonight, October 31st, is what is commonly known as Halloween, when, by a tradition that would be infinitely more honored in the breach than the observance, the young people are supposed, by some, to have license to perform all kinds of thefts and commit other petty annoyances upon the unfortunate property holder. We hope parents who are members of the church, will see that their children do not participate in the barbarous usages by which their fellow citizens are put to loss, annoyance and inconvenience. There are plenty of ways by which an evening's enjoyment may be had without causing others distress.

Bro. and Sr. Newland, residing near Liberty, Missouri, attended services here Sunday, and their two children, Myrum and Thompson, were blessed by Elders Joseph Luff and R. J. Parker, respectively. These brethren also officiated in the blessing of Benjamin Franklin, infant son of Bro. and Sr. Stephen Jennings.

Bro. E. C. Harrington prevailed on his employers (the Phil. R. Toll Box Co.) for the use of one of their large box wagons filled with hay and two of their best teams last Saturday night, and a party of Armstrong (Kansas City, Kansas) Religians made Independence a midnight visit, their destination being Bro. and Sr. Wm. Bushnell's. After about an hour spent here the merry party turned their faces homeward.

LAMONI, IOWA.

Last week just before the time for writing the "items" your correspondent was called to go into the country about twenty miles to wait upon the sick, not returning until too late to catch the mail, thus preventing the sending of anything for the last issue.

The second Stake Conference of the Lamoni Stake convened here last Saturday and Sunday, the 26th and 27th. Representatives were present from Leon, Lucas, Pleasanton, Davis City, Greenville, Evergreen and Lone Rock. All branches sent in reports showing a healthy growth in most cases. Several ordinations were asked for by the branches and ordered by the conference. A Stake record of names was ordered purchased and kept. C. I. Carpenter was elected Stake Recorder, and B.

M. Anderson, assistant. Adjourned to meet at Lamoni at the call of the Stake officers.

Twice again within the last week has the "pale messenger" visited our ranks. On the 23d Sr. Sarah H. O'Connell departed this life at the age of 59 years, 5 months and 19 days. She had been unwell for a long time but confined to her bed only about a week. Funeral sermon by H. A. Stebbins.

On the 27th Sr. Caroline Barrall passed away at the home of her nephew, Bro. Clarence Bootman, near Pawnee, Missouri, after a severe sickness of pneumonia. She accepted the work more than sixty years ago and died in the faith, at the age of 82 years, 9 months and 19 days. Funeral services at Pawnee by H. A. Stebbins; burial at Lamoni.

The local Religio of Lamoni have arranged to give a course of five entertainments during the coming winter, the first number of which will be given one week from next Saturday night, November 9th. These entertainments promise to be of a high order, and we believe that all will be pleased with them.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

A large audience assembled at the church last evening to hear the farewell sermon of Bro. Wm. Lewis who has been president of the branch for some time, thus showing the high esteem in which he was held. The Saints regret to part with him, but bid him good speed and success in his far away mission. On Monday night a goodly number assembled in the church basement to tender a surprise and extend a final handshake and good will to himself and wife and Ruth. Bro. F. J. Pearce will also go at the same time to his mission to England and Wales. They expect to leave here Wednesday, and sail on the Campania on the 2d.

Bro. F. C. Graham is improved sufficiently to leave his bed and room. His firmness of faith is a strength to the weak who listen to him, and a joy to the strong. Sr. Pifer is also recovering from her recent infirmities.

We expect to begin a two weeks' meeting at Twelfth street and Grand avenue on Sunday night, November 3d. This is a new field, or the reopening of an old one. We wish to occupy as we can and leave the results with the "Good Man of the house" who hath hired us, and for whom we have agreed to work and to "occupy till he come."

Bro. F. J. Pearce occupied yesterday morning at the church quite acceptably as reported.

Announcement was made for the baptism of two at the church next Sunday by Bro. Coventry Archibald.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Sunday, October 20th, was noted, in that at the afternoon service the gift of prophecy, through Bro. Archibald, was enjoyed; also words of exhortation and cheer were spoken by Sr. Brown, while inspired by the Spirit of God. The meeting was most excellent, the best we have had for years.

Sr. Fry, of North Missouri, is now located in St. Louis and intends remaining.

Bro. Alfred White was in town and of course was pressed into service, occupied the rostrum morning and evening service yesterday.

Friday night Bro. and Sr. Gall celebrated their 15th anniversary; quite a number of the church folks were present, as also a number of their other friends. The occasion was quite enjoyable; they were the recipients of many hearty congratulations, in addition to the beautiful gifts of crystal, cutglass, etc.

Sunday night at the Oak Hill Mission, the Cheltenham choir gave a song service; the attendance was good, the service was good, and the time was pleasantly and profitably spent, Bro. Ivor Davis improving some portion of the time with a gospel discourse.

District superintendent, C. J. Remington, visited and addressed the Sunday School yesterday.

Our choir treated us to a good anthem at the morning service, and at night service a quartette was very pleasingly given. Success to our young people who are cultivating the gift of song.

Brn. Archibald and J. Beard were in charge of the social service; the time was fully occupied by fifteen testimonies and three prayers. The service was quiet, peaceful, refreshing.

Sacramental service next Sunday the 3d. We are expecting Bro. F. A. Smith then.

The babe of Bro. and Sr. Dick Trowbridge was blessed, under the hands of Brn. Archibald and Beard, yesterday afternoon, and named Richard Stephen.

Thanksgiving echoes in the air; Mite Society members are busy.

Bro. Dawson was prevented by sickness from attending services yesterday. We understand he is now alright.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

First Chicago Branch, 8 So. Wood St., Sunday School at 1:30, preaching at 3 and 7:45 p. m.; Central Branch, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., Sunday School at 9:30 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman, preaching at 10:30 a. m., followed by Sunday School, preaching at 7:30 p. m.; Graves' Mission, 2458 State St.

Our services yesterday were preaching at West Pullman by Bro. Lang; at Central branch by Brn. Good and Sheehy; at West Side Brn. Sheehy and Good. Bro. Graves held forth at his mission on State street. There is evidence of increase in numbers in attendance at all the meetings. Baptism was administered on south side at the close of the evening's service.

It was concluded at business meeting that Sunday morning meeting be changed to 3 p. m., on south side.

Bro. Graves has established a Bible study for Friday, and a prayer meeting for Wednesday evenings.

Sr. Sloan has gone to Nebraska, to visit a sick sister.

The colored Saints, who recently joined, are showing up nicely.

Sr. Fanny Vernon and Sr. Randall, of Downer's Grove, and Sr. Fletcher, of Sandwich, were in attendance on the west side yesterday.

A matter of note here is the resignation of Dr. Thomas of the People's church. It will be remembered that Dr. Thomas, some twenty years ago, was crowded out of the Methodist church for holding too liberal views, one of which was the belief of what is known as the "larger hope," a belief in opportunity for man after death. The doctor began the work of establishing a church in Chicago on these more liberal lines, which has been a decided success; so he is to enter upon the work of extending the movement to other cities, there being a demand therefor. It shows how our doctrines are expanding, and in due time will leave the lump.

Rev. Frank Crane, a noted preacher of the Methodist church, has already been selected as the successor. He will, of course, have to sever connection with the Methodists or share the fate of Thomas, be expelled for heresy. It is a surprise at Dr. Crane's move, as he was in good standing in the Methodist church. But this shows he was a "heretic" and was there against his conscience, only waiting for a convenient chance to step out. How many more men are there who are stultifying themselves by preaching in hypocrisy.

A leading divine here (Gundaus), who is now on the independent order somewhat, was taken very sick, and while in that state became repentant and promised the Lord that if he would let him recover he would no longer preach what he did not believe, so we now suppose he is doing so. "Draw near me with their mouths, but their hearts are far from me" is not a dead letter yet it seems.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Corner 23d and Holly. One block south of Observation Park line.

Monday evening, October 21, a very instructive program was rendered at our chapel by Religians of Independence. The proceeds—about $24—is to be used in plastering the basement of our little church to be. We feel to express our gratitude to the participants for their assistance which was given so willingly and cheerfully.

Sunday morning sermon by Bro. J. J. Emmett. Afternoon social meeting was well attended and an enjoyable time had. Bro. Fred Koehler discoursed Sunday evening on "The Restoration of the Gospel." About seventy were present. Good liberty was enjoyed by the speaker.

We were glad on last Wednesday evening to again hear the testimony of our Bro. M. B. Williams, of Armstrong, Kansas. We would like to have the brethren visit us often.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 7. Dear Ensign:—On the evening of September 23d, last, while Elder Geo. W. Robley was on a visit to the home of Bro. and Sr. Mackinnon, this city, he was happily surprised and completely so, by the arrival of about fifty Saluts and friends to celebrate the anniversary of his birth. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed with song, games and pleasant conversation, Bro. George, of course, doing his share. Cake and Maine ice cream, with fruit, formed the delicious menu. Mrs. Etta Hatfield, sister of Bro. Robley, very nicely rendered two recitations—"The Blue and the Gray" and "A Receipt for Catsup." Bro. Daniel Joy, the bread street baker, made a handsome birthday cake with the inscription on it as follows: "Let Brotherly Love Continue, Bro. Geo. W. Robley, age 40 years, 1861-1901," showing that Bro. R. is surely "30 past." Bro. Adolph Leckney presided at the organ.

It was the most enjoyable event of the season thus far and all wishes for other like gatherings. Long may you live, Bro. George. Through the energetic efforts of Sr. Mackinnon and others a purse of money was also presented to Bro. Robley. All wished him many happy returns of the day. A. B. PIERCE.

PONSGRUND, Norway, Sept. 30. Editor Ensign:—Your welcome paper reached us here yesterday morning, and, as usual, it brought good, cheering news from a far off land, where so many loved ones are busily engaged in the Master's service. It usually comes every Sunday, and though it is nearly three weeks old when we get it, it is a welcome guest to our home, bringing sunshine and gladness to our hearts.

Not wanting to always be a receiver and never a giver, I feel it my duty to give your dear readers a little news from the other side of the water, where a few souls are striving, in their weak way, to live their sacred and so much cherished religion, and, as the Saviour commanded, put the light so people can see it, and be led to its great, unchanging, everlasting source, from which all might draw freely.

Wife and self arrived here the 12th day of August, after a pleasant journey across the big water, and a very pleasant sojourn in England, for which we were truly thankful to our heavenly Father, as well as to His children, who had done their share in making it pleasant for us; the pleasant company of Bro. and Sr. Kelley on the floating palace, "Saxonia," shall ever be remembered with great pleasure.

In my native town we received a most heartfelt welcome from father, his wife, my sisters and some friends, who, I believe, were truly glad to see me once more in this present life, and to whom I hope to become even dearer by those ties that God alone can bind and no one break. In return I can say I was glad to see them, yet they were not Saluts and could not be loved as such; but the thought came then, and is yet present with me, that God, who, in His great love, has so kindly led the rays of light upon my pathway, can, in like manner, by our efforts, as well as that of others, cause the same light to give them the needed understanding, and thus make us one in deed and in truth. Not many days after my arrival I was called away to aid Bro. Enge in missionary work; we labored together for about two weeks, but not being able to hold many meetings, I returned home to get ready for a more successful campaign. Sunday, September 8th, I preached in father's house to a few of my relatives and friends, and in so doing enjoyed good liberty, though the language was not as easy as desirable.

The following Sunday I held my first meeting on the street, having never made the attempt since I began preaching; but I believe God wanted me to try, for during the week, while pondering over the work here, I was prompted to hold meetings on the street, on a square outside of my old home. I at once went to the mayor, obtained his consent, and advertised in both the papers, so all might know about the preaching. Having done so I felt quite well until Sunday came, when I commenced to feel uneasy and afraid I might not be able to do as well as I would like to, knowing that my first effort in this town would have much to do with future meetings and their result. When the set time arrived and I saw the people gather from different directions, I gathered up all my courage, while the Lord filled up the deficiency, and, announcing the hymn, the meeting was begun before I realized it. A short prayer was offered and I began to tell the people the object of the meeting; the people gathered still until there were over three hundred present, who gave me their attention for nearly two hours, while they looked at me as if I had been John the Baptist. I have never seen more eager listeners at any time in my experience; many who are never seen at any kind of meetings were out and stood as charmed, and when I announced to the people I had some tracts for free distribution, the people almost fought each other to obtain our epistles. I have also held meetings on the same place the last two Sundays with even better results; last Sunday when speaking on the kingdom of God, the people seemed more interested than ever and the Lord blessed me wonderfully in presenting the word. My reasoning faculties seemed clearer than ever before, and by His aid I was enabled to make it so plain that people could not help but see the consistency of our position.

I feel truly thankful to God for his kindness in thus making an opening for the work here, and hope it may result in much good. The Utah missionaries are here in great abundance with their abominations, causing prejudice to increase, but we hope by next summer to have some open air conflicts and see if their much marriage will stand the test of truth. We are greatly in need of different tracts in this mission, for without literature we can not accomplish much; we shall, however, do all we can under the circumstances, leaving the result with God.

Wife and myself are both well and quite contented under present conditions, yet long for our return. We shall be pleased to hear from dear Saluts in America any time, but please remember only one-half ounce for five cents.

May God bless all his children and make them firm and steadfast to the end. Yours for truth,

P. S.—Editor, will you please answer in your paper if I may use both sides of the paper while writing from this field? My object is to save postage. [In this case, certainly, Bro. Muceus.—Ed.]

ELKHART, Tex., Oct. 21. Dear Ensign:—I have just returned from a month's trip through Houston, Angeline, Nacogdoches and Cherokee counties. I preached near Elkhart on my way at the home of S. H. Higginbotham, to a small but interested congregation. I then went to Cross Roads and found the house locked against me. A Baptist, postmaster Slocum, came to hear, and as we could not get in the house intended he took me to his house and entertained me and heard me till late at night, and next morning till he had to leave home to attend a convention of his church.

I continued my way to Lufkin, Angeline county, where I met Bro. and Sr. Albert Gilmore, and Sr. Nice and Bishop. With these Saluts I remained over Sunday and we had an excellent prayer and testimony meeting. I blessed Raymond Terry Gilmore, and enjoyed the best and most satisfactory meeting I have partaken of in Texas. Sr. Nice's husband is not a member of the church but is very friendly to the ministry and gave assistance in a substantial way. Bro. Gilmore paid his titling which I had the pleasure of forwarding to our agent. He is a workman, but honest to his God as well as man. Oh! that all men were such, that they might be participants in the blessings that surely would be poured out upon the faithful.

From Lufkin I went to Nacogdoches where I met Bro. C. F. Beikham, who went with us out ten miles to the Angeline branch where I preached the funeral of Bro. Henry Grim, who was president of this branch, but passed on to his reward on the seventh of January last, aged 71 years, 10 months and thirteen days. I baptized him in Angeline county, April 20, 1879, ordained him an elder and left him in charge of the Cheeseland branch. When that branch became disorganized he traveled some time in Missouri as a missionary, and when the Angeline branch was organized he was chosen to preside and remained in charge of it until called from his earthly labors to his rest in that home above.

I parted with Bro. Belkham at Lufkin, he going to his home in Polk county, and myself to come home to prepare to attend district conference at Cooks Point, Burleson county, and then on to Bandera and San Antonio, to obtain material to write history of Southwestern Texas district.

Yours in the work, JAMES W. BRYAN.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 23. Editor Ensign:—Having business to attend to in Mait Point, Mississippi, surrounding towns and country, we took the train in Mobile at 3 a. m., 7th inst., for Scranton, visiting our old home near there, in the early hours of the day, occupying the rest of the day with our business affairs. Late in the evening we reached Bro. John Mizell's home, in Escatawpa, with whom, in company with his daughter, we were driven to the Saints' meeting house, about five miles, at Three Rivers, and led in the usual Saturday night's prayer meeting.

The following Sunday morning quite a large congregation assembled for Sunday School and services. Here is the largest Sunday School in the district. It was in this Sunday School that Bro. C. I. Carpenter, now of Lamoni, Iowa, labored so long and patiently, and the fruits of these labors still remain; he has a warm place in the hearts of the members of that Sabbath School. His services in the Sunday School were of great worth throughout the district, and he is sadly missed in association work, as none have been able to take it up where he left off, owing to lack of time as well as adaptability.

We preached at 11 a. m. and felt well in talking to the congregation, which was comprised mostly of Saints. At night Elder Warren Sherman and I were kindly taken across the river in his carriage by Bro. Thomas Fry to the Pascega church house, about five miles, the monument of where was once a branch. I had caused an appointment to be circulated the previous day among my old neighbors and friends, and a goodly number of them assembled to listen with rapt attention to Bro. Warren, who, by the assistance of the Master, had succeeded in interesting them. Another appointment was left for the fourth Sunday. Will the Saints please pray for us.

Your brother in Christ, FRANK P. SCARLEFF.

ACORN RIDGE, Mo., Oct. 3. Editor Ensign:—Bro. Spurlock and myself have been laboring very diligently to get the gospel of Christ before the people of Southeast Missouri. At first it was difficult to procure places to preach; we would travel for miles, from place to place, and only meet with disappointment on every hand; but of late things have changed in our favor; we meet with greater success. I truly am grateful for a change and rejoice that the way has been opened for preaching. We left Stoddard August 13th, bound for Ripley county; stopped in Butler county near Sr. Glasener and preached one night; kindly received by her. She takes the Ensign though a widow and in poor circumstances. I am proud to see such zeal manifested in the Saints. We also stopped with Sr. Taylor, a noble sister indeed. From here we went to Ripley and began meetings near Gatewood; large attendance, good order prevailed, kindly received by the people; there was one good feature about this community that I observed that is quite different to many other places in the field, and that is, they had a good choir who kindly offered their services which was highly appreciated by us. Bro. Spurlock preached on the streets of Doniphon, county seat of Ripley, and a large crowd greeted him; at the close of the sermon Ensigns and Herald's were distributed and went like wild fire. I believe a great deal of good can be done this way.

Thence we went to Butler county, stopping at Harville, where we got the use of the church and began meetings at once; interest fair. Also preached at two railroad camps, the people expressing themselves as being glad to hear. Some said we preached the Bible and have been greatly misrepresented. We were invited to come back to this place; they gave us money as a token of appreciation for what they had heard.

Our next point was at Poplar Bluff, a city of 6,000 inhabitants. Bro. Spurlock proposed that I should speak on the street. I tried to excuse myself in preference to him, but this would not work, so I began to muster up courage and the Lord stood by me. The people appeared to be well pleased. At the close Bro. Spurlock announced meeting for 4 p. m. on the street. A large crowd was present. The first principles of the gospel were made plain to the people; at the close a Baptist minister began to ridicule us, and said we taught false doctrine; yes the doctrine taught by Christ, Peter and Paul when taught by Latter Day Saint ministers, is false. What an argument to meet the truth. His chief argument was slander and false assertions against the character of Joseph Smith, and that we were responsible for the Mountain Meadow massacre, and that his brother and sister had been dragged into our church. Just think of it; if that should be the case, how long would they remain in the church? I am informed that his sister and brother are still in the church and are good members; but this man, we are told, is dishonest, unchristianlike. Such men generally oppose this work who are willfully wrong themselves. Bro. Spurlock replied and showed his glaring misrepresentations to the satisfaction of some.

We left Butler county and came back to Stoddard county and began meetings holding forth at two places for ten nights; baptized two, an old gentleman seventy-five years of age, and his wife. Closed meetings the 23d and started to a little place called Idalia; got the use of the church; people were very indifferent and did not turn out well; held forth for three nights and concluded to close out, and moved for another point six miles from Idalia; obtained the use of the school-house, and some appeared to be interested while others were not. Conditions did not seem ripe to continue long, and we deemed it wise to close Sunday night. Thanked the people for their courtesy toward us and their kindness for the use of the school-house. We began singing the closing hymn when a rotten egg passed over our heads and struck the wall. This disgusted the people and we were informed Monday that the one who did the deed would be fined; we were invited to come back. This was not all; on our way back, about ten miles from the point we had been holding meetings, another egg saluted us and exploded on our umbrella. I believe before a great while many will be baptized.

We expect to labor on by the aid of our loving Father and battle for the truth. HARRY THOMAS.

FR. SCOTT, Kas., Oct. 23. Dear Ensign:—Work is slow here but the battle is still on. I came here about the 1st of September and began to do some skirmishing on the outlaws of Satan's ranks. The battle raged strong for a while, but the strength of the Lord prevailed, and finally we were able to break their ranks by the assistance of the Holy Spirit; getting right into the midst of the camp we took three prisoners led them off to the waters and baptized them, enlisting them in the army of the Lord.

Street preaching seemed to be the order of the day, and as I saw other preachers drawing crowds to hear them, I thought the Lord would also bless me in making the attempt, so I began work on the streets, having good crowds and some to hear the angel's message who we could never get to church. One man told of hearing some fine preaching on the street that just suited him, and when he was told it was a Latter Day Saint preacher he said it was a pity to God that they were not all Latter Day Saint preachers. This man is an enemy to the work and is too prejudiced to come to church, but, like many others, knows nothing of the work. But, brother co-laborers, where you can, preach on the streets in the day, and invite them to hear you at night in church.

I was reinforced by Bro. J. Moler, sub-missionary in charge, about October 15th. He did some good work; ordained one brother to the priest's office, setting the church in a better condition, and then left the field in my charge for a while. I then made another flank movement upon the enemy that was located at Devon, about ten miles to the north, and preached six sermons resulting in the baptism of one more. I am now laboring at another point called Lunber.

Brethren and sisters and coloborers, one and all, the battle is on, rally to the front, press forward, and if death overtakes you, fall in Zion's war, clad in the armor of God and in the power of the Holy Spirit and God will bless you.

In gospel bonds for Christ, ELDER C. P. WELSH.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Sept. 29. Editor Ensign:—Our work is onward in this mission, but much more could be accomplished were all our forces continually at the post. Hindrances have been thrown in the way of some of our ablest men, and, as a consequence, little has been done by them.

At Redmoon our work has been assailed several times, but we are still gaining, despite the attacks of the enemy. Bro. Joseph Baggerly won a decided victory in a little contest with one Rev. Ross, of the Christian persuasion, at Redmoon, and we have signed propositions with another one by the name of Nichol.

Bro. R. M. Maloney met W. B. Tony in debate in Dewey county, and won a victory for the side of truth. Tony isn't half as strong a man as we expected he was. Bro. Maloney began a little timid but grew better to close of debate. I am glad to see our young men develop and shall ever seek to encourage them. He relied wholly upon the Lord for help and we truly thank our heavenly Father for his aid.

From Dewey county we went to Dover reunion where we met a goodly number of Saluts with smiling faces and good humor. Our meeting was a profitable one, Saluts were blessed and encouraged, and sinners permitted to hear the word preached. Four were baptized and others are near the kingdom, four of whom Bro. Crawley has since baptized. Bro. C. is alive in this great work and preaches many sermons, both in private and in public.

The writer baptized a noble lady at Redmoon, and quite a number of others are expected to come soon, as they have given names for baptism.

My little Cecil received a bad injury about four weeks ago, by falling from a horse and dislocating her elbow, and last Monday her grandpa (Bro. Geo. Montague) was bitten by a large rattlesnake. I left him getting along finely last Friday. Today I am in the state capitol of Oklahoma waiting for train to go to Ripley, to the bedside of Bro. T. N. Berry, who is sick.

I have been greatly blessed in the work and ask the prayers of the Saints that, with my brethren, we may peacefully go on and on to victory. Your co-worker,

ZIG-ZAGS NO. 2.

ELDER J. W. GILBERT.

The morning after our exciting ride to and from the Seven Falls, Sr. Gilbert and I again boarded the Rio Grande train; and, after waving adieu to a cluster of Saints who had gathered to see us off, went bounding on our way to Salt Lake City. Sr. Duncan had very kindly anticipated our physical wants and had prepared a neat basket of eatables for us, and Sr. Lillie Baker presented us with a very acceptable present—a volume from Ruskin.

In a short time we were in the valley of the Arkansas river at Pueblo, and our long train was running with a vengeance, like a great serpent hurrying to hide among the rocks of the Royal Gorge. We sped by the prison city of Colorado, and saw the great walls of the penitentiary. Near the railroad, and overlooking the whole grounds of the prison is a high watch-tower, where a man stands all day long on duty, with a rifle in his hands ready in an instant to shoot down any criminal who may try to break away from the state's safe-guard against outlawry. What a restraining effect the sight of that man standing there must have upon the convicts within, for I must confess it caused a very queer feeling to come over me when I looked up and saw him; especially when I remembered of hearing of several who tried to escape and were shot. When will all the people of this world learn to be obedient to law? When will there be no more need of prisons? The very walls of that prison seemed to emphasize the necessity for greater efforts in ethical teaching and training, and the rifle in the watchman's hands seemed to accentuate the emphasis.

But the meditations upon the magnitude of the work to be done before the final redemption of the world were brought to an abrupt termination by the vociferous news agent appearing in our coach and pouring forth a veritable whirl-wind of explanations about the wonderful Royal Gorge, and how much more beautiful it would appear through a pair of yellow colored spectacles, a stock of which he had for sale. So well did he say his speech that one would think they would lose the treasure of a lifetime by not buying a pair; and most of the passengers did, and the glasses actually hindered getting a good view of the gorge.

We were now entering the wonderful chasm by curves and semi-circular windings, the meanwhile our train, like a mad dragon, writhed and swayed, its double mouthed head belched fire and smoke as it swooped around the cavernous walls, till its teeth would seem to snap at its own tail, when it would change and swing to the right around a sharply projecting point where its hollowing would almost be smothered into silence by hundreds of feet of intervening solid rock towering to the sky. The stupendous heights and the awful grandeur of this great break in the solid granite must be seen to be fully appreciated. It is, indeed royal. It is so narrow that there is scarcely room for the river and the railroad. Indeed at one place it is so narrow that the track is built on a swinging bridge right over the river. The walls are perpendicular and seem to reach the sky. In fact, in order to see the sky one must stand on the platform between the cars. If the huge boulders could talk, what stories they would tell! We wondered if that place had once been a level plain. We wondered at the strength exerted to heave up such an incomprehensible weight. We thought of the Book of Mormon and the story it tells of the crucifixion: how all nature groaned and seemed almost to lose its wonted equilibrium while its Master Builder was in the throes of a cruel death; when the confines of chaos grew rebellious and stalked forth from whence they had receded from the aggression of the great Intelligence. We thought of the buried cities and the great upheavals, with the wondrous testimonies they are bearing to this generation. And these grand old walls seemed like monumental witnesses, testifying in no uncertain way of a great physical cataclysm too great for any common mundane force to bring about. The strata on both sides of the immense chasm looked as if at one time they were joined in one, but had been broken and moved apart a pace by unseen force during a superhuman performance, thus opening the way for the waters of the Arkansas and also for the highway of the raging chariots.

After leaving the Royal Gorge the valley opens out like a funnel, and we are soon at Salida. All day we were surrounded on every side by ever-changing magnificent scenery, from the cosy little valleys well filled, to the towering peaks bathing their exalted crests in the clouds above, while we, far below, industriously chased the Arkansas into the tops of the mountains, where, eleven thousand feet above sea level, one could catch the whole volume of the river in his hands.

After going through a tunnel of one half mile in length at Tennessee Pass, we are over the great divide of the Rocky Mountains, and begin to descend the western slope, dropping in twenty-five miles, 2,500 feet. The steep inclines, the precipitous heights, the boulder studded slopes, the evergreen pines, and the rushing rapids all together formed one continual panorama on which our eyes feasted till darkness hovered over all, turning the spruce into ghosts, and boulders into hob-goblins that chased each other rapidly by our berth window till we grew tired tracing their weird outlines, and dropped our weary heads upon our pillows for the night.

Morning dawned as we puffed up the grades to Castle Gate, leaving the alkali dust and the water of the desert behind. From Castle Gate, which is well worthy of its name, we make a serpentine descent upon the Great Salt Lake valley, where is immediately presented abundant evidence of prosperous and flourishing industry. Passing the waters of Utah Lake on the left, our train, being behind time, fairly charged upon the orchard dotted country side, and pounded the rail-joints with a vengeance in its effort to make peace with the stern pilgrim that carries the keen scythe; but, notwithstanding, we were two hours late when we reached the Salt City.

As we drew into the suburbs our attention was first drawn to that famous pile—like a series of great stactalites inverted, lifting itself above the surrounding foliage, bearing aloft on its top-most pinnacle a statue of the angel Gabriel, blowing his long trumpet toward the east, pointing the way to Zion, and calling all to follow. "Salt Lake City," said the porter, while we were yet contemplating, and we gather up our hand baggage and alight, find a street car, and in a few minutes were dropped, by the kindness of the conductor, right in front of our chapel on east 2d South street. We found about a dozen of the Saints at the church in Sunday School session. When the hour for preaching arrived the writer was invited into the stand to preach, and, although my head was whirling, my eyes full of cinders, and my stomach empty, I went; for I resolved when I left home that I would not refuse when called upon to speak.

After preaching Sr. Pender was the good Samaritan that took the travelers in and fed them. On the way to Bro. Pender's we passed along east Temple street and saw the statue of Brigham Young in the square at the southeast corner of the temple block, with his back turned on the temple and his hand fondly outstretched toward the bank on the opposite corner. I wonder if we would be thought cruel if we should say we think it very characteristic?

After regaling ourselves at Bro. Pender's table, we went to the tabernacle at two o'clock in the afternoon to hear the famous choir and the great organ; in this we were not disappointed; as to whether we were in other things we saw we will not say. We grew tired of the length of the service however, and went outside and walked around the grounds, a ten acre block containing the temple, tabernacle and Assembly Hall. We saw a good many tourists taking in the sights. Small need of any one to point them out, for curiosity was written on their faces too plainly to be mistaken. O that all earth's children might see alike! that the time may speedily come when the refuge of lies may be swept away that divide into classes and sects, that make one man to think evil of another. We saw a crowd of tourists huddled together looking at and talking of the Mormons as they filled out after service; and evidently they looked upon them as being poisonous to the touch, and that themselves were in imminent danger of contamination.

Preached in the evening at our own church to an audience of about fifteen or twenty. We were very much disappointed in the size of the congregation, and after some grieving over the state of things in this branch of about two hundred, we became reconciled to some extent. Suffice to say, Bro. Pender and the officers of the branch have a big work before them. Bro. and Sr. Davie and Ida Davis entertained us part of the time and saw to it that we had a pleasant and profitable stay, by taking us to Saltair, to the Salt Palace and other places of interest. Where I bathed in Salt Lake seven years ago, standing in water up to my arm-pits, is now a dry sand-bar. The lake is drying up at an astonishing rate. This fact is causing no little consternation among the populace.

King Solomon's Pools.

King Solomon's Pools, the ancient aqueducts and reservoirs of Jerusalem and the most remarkable remains of antiquity, after centuries of disuse have just been brought again into service, and now supply the city with a steady flow of clear, cold water.

These historic aqueducts are remarkable for the labor and expense employed in their construction and for their durability. They were planned and built in Bible times by Solomon the Wise, and mentioned in his song. "I have made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees."

They are situated about two miles southwest of Bethlehem and nine miles from Jerusalem, at the head of the beautiful valley where the ancient Gardens of Solomon were located.

Their restoration was brought about by the drouth of the present summer, which led to so much distress that Mohammed Djavad Pasha, the new governor of Jerusalem, a man of determined will and much energy, secured the sultan's consent to the laying of a pipe connecting the wells with the city.

It is believed that these aqueducts were constructed for the purpose of supplying the temples in Jerusalem with a never-ceasing flow of water.

The aggregate surface of these pools, which form some of the oldest structures in existence, is about six and one-quarter acres, with an average depth of thirty-eight feet. From this statement the immensity of labor involved in their construction, as well as the skill which has caused them to stand so complete and entire to the present day, can be more fully realized.

The sources of supply for these reservoirs are most interesting. That for the upper two pools is a fountain in an underground chamber cut down into the solid rock, then arched over with masonry and covered with earth, so that, but for the place of entrance, it could not be distinguished from the surrounding surface. When first discovered in modern times its entrance was through an opening like a cistern's mouth, which would be passed unobserved in walking over the cultivated field in which it lies. A flight of stairs descends to the floor of the chamber.

OF NATURAL ROCK.

Its floor and walls and arched roof are composed of the natural rock. In the floor of this chamber are basins which collect the water which flows from the walls. With the exception of the water found in springs, which are supplied by snow from Mount Hermon, these springs are the coolest in all Palestine.

The source of supply for the third pool is from another aqueduct coming from the south, starting from the "Valley of Wells," about three and one-half miles distant.

The uppermost of these three wonderful pools is 380 feet long, and at its widest part 236 feet, and is 25 feet deep. It is dug down into the solid rock, walled with substantial masonry and cemented. It has a flight of well-preserved steps six feet wide, descending to the bottom. These steps were constructed to enable the women water carriers in olden times to carefully fill their vessels, no matter how low the water might be in the pool. Openings through the wall at the level of the outside surface admit the surface drain in winter.

The second pool is about fifty yards farther down the valley. It is much longer than the uppermost, and on account of the more rapid descent and widening of the valley, it is much wider at the lower than at the upper end. Its length is 423 feet, width at lower end 250 feet, and the lowest depth is 39 feet.

The bottom of the second pool is not level like that of the first, but slopes from the sides towards the middle with the natural slope of the valley, and the entire bottom and sides are cemented. The cement is in a perfect state of preservation, not blackened with age, but fresh and clean.

The lowest pool, about fifty yards below the second, which is much the largest of all, is 582 feet long, 207 feet at its widest section, with a greatest depth of 50 feet. Its bottom is composed of several layers of the natural rock, dropping off like terraces towards the middle, and all well cemented and in perfect condition to this day. This pool also has a settling basin at its upper end and a broad flight of steps in one corner.

FOUND THE SPRING.

Some years ago this last pool contained less water than either of the others, but a water line, distinctly traceable on the cement at the top level of an overflow channel, near the top of the lower wall shows that it is often full. The other pools have no overflow channel, showing that this one was expected to overflow more copiously than the others.

The lower end wall of this pool, unlike the others, is almost entirely without support from earth outside of it, the more rapid descent of the valley at this point leaving it entirely above the surface. Consequently, the wall is built with immense thickness, and is supported by a huge buttress in the middle. Under this buttress there is an arched passage reaching through it, through the wall and for a considerable distance under the pond. A stream of water flows along the floor of this passage, coming from a spring under the bottom of the basin.

Thousands of years ago the workmen, who, indeed, were master masons, and well worthy to be the founders of that magnificent Order of Masonry, when constructing the pool evidently found the spring in the bottom of the valley, and knowing if they attempted to stop its flow it might eventually force its way through and cause a leak, they arched it over and gave its water a free passage under the pool into the valley below.

The fact that these pools were constructed by Solomon has been brought into question, but to students of antiquity and to noted historians there remains no doubt as to their builder.

The Hebrew historian, Josephus, declares that the pools were constructed by Pontius Pilate, who, it is recorded, undertook to bring a current of water fifty miles away to Jerusalem with sacred money. But as fifty miles is over five times the distance of the aqueduct from the city, together with the fact that the existing work conveys water to the sacred precincts of the temple, points not so much to a heathen procurator for its origin as to a religious king like Solomon. Furthermore, the extensive system of cisterns and reservoirs within the temple inclosure, evidently demanding and contemplating some such source of supply, points to the builder of the temple as the constructor of the aqueduct, seeing that the temple would have had no water except from the rainfall on its own premises.

STILL INTACT.

These pools, so wonderful in their durability, are situated at the head of a narrow valley called Wady Uritas, which descends eastward past the frowning Frank mountain, and thence to the Dead Sea, in the region known as Solomon's Gardens, mentioned in Ecclesiastes. Here in the mornings the wise king would proceed, and found much delight in the fine gardens, abounding in many rivulets of sparkling water.

This, too, is the spot where Elijah rested in his flight from Jezebel and crosses the plains of Ephraim, where David, in the heat of battle with the Philistines, longed for water from the well of Bethlehem. After passing around the slope of Zion it enters the city through the grounds of the mosque Omar, which is the old temple area.

The country in which these pools are situated is most beautiful, and almost beggars description. Situated in the valley, and surrounded by mountains looming up against the soft sky, there is a small break in the hills, and through this rift of blue and green, the Dead Sea, calm, majestic, can be seen. Everywhere throughout the valley and in the gardens are remains of staturary, mocking emblems of Solomon's time, a period of grandeur and glory that has never been equaled and can never be surpassed.

Compared with modern constructions of a similar nature, that will last but a few centuries along the floor of this passage, the aged aqueducts fills the mind. Although constructed thousands upon thousands of years ago, the pools of Solomon still remain intact, and in the year 1901 supply the city of Jerusalem with a bountiful flow of the purest drinking water.—The Kansas City Journal, October 6, 1901.

A REPLY

[The following was sent to the editor of The Bald Knob [Arkansas] Herald in answer to an editorial appearing in his paper. He refused to publish it; we give it space at Bro. Smith's request. Ed. ENSIGN.]

To the editor Bald Knob Herald:

Dear Sir:—In your issue of September 12th, present year, I find an editorial which does an injustice to the church which I represent, and whose cause I was recently advocating in Bald Knob, and I respectfully ask that space be granted me to make proper correction. I do not wish to accuse you of wilful misrepresentation, but you say in your closing sentence that you have investigated our position and advise all to investigate as you have done. I do not know how you have investigated, but there is one thing sure, had you investigated properly you would not have made some statements you did.

In speaking of the writer you say, "We understand Mr. Smith is a strong man and well posted in the doctrines of the Mormon church." This conveys the impression that you know nothing of me personally, but simply take the statements of others. You did not attend my lectures while there, and hence all you know is hearsay. Is that the proper way to investigate? Why not come and hear for yourself and then judge? I quote at length from your editorial. You say:

"It is surprising how many men and women will leave the settled and well grounded truths of a life time to run after an ignis fatuus that rises from the quagmires of death and decay. That the Mormon church teaches some truth we are ready to admit, and for that reason it is all the more dangerous. In deciding as to whether it is right or not, we have only to enquire as to its history."

Mr. Editor, will you please look at your article under the caption, "Is it so?" in the first column, parallel with the one in which your article against us is found, and read this sentence, "It is not what Bald Knob has been, but what it is now, that should determine its right to our respect and confidence." Then compare your logic in condemning us, and your logic on the Bald Knob question and see how they agree (?). But then it makes all the difference in the world whose ox is gored, doesn't it?

But I am not ready to admit that the history of this church is bad. What is history, Mr. Editor? I believe that you will agree with me that it is the statement or record of things as they actually occur. Who is best qualified to write an authentic history, our friends or our enemies? You may say that either may be biased. True, but which would be most apt to do you justice? Your friend, certainly. If we are to judge the former Christians, or Christians in Christ's time, and in Paul's time, by popular opinion, or by what their enemies said of them, they would certainly stand condemned. Luke records popular opinion in Acts 28: 22:

"But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest; for as concerning this sect we know that every where it is spoken against."

This is what people said about Paul's sect in his day. Paul was called a "pestilent fellow," and "a mover of sedition," (Acts 24: 5). It was also said that he was not fit to live (Acts 22: 22). A church historian of early days says:

"The Christians were denounced as the common enemies of mankind. The grossest crimes and foulest superstitions were charged against them. The learned looked upon them with contempt as a vulgar throng of deluded enthusiasts. Pliny speaks of them with scorn, and the wise Trojan, and the philosophic Aurelian united in persecuting them and sought to extirpate every vestige of the hated creed."

Tacitus, who lived from 55 to 117 A. D., wrote:

The founder of the Christian sect, Christ, was executed in the reign of Tiberius, by Pontius Pilate, but the pernicious superstition burst forth again, not only in Judea, the birth place of the evil, but at Rome also, where every thing base and atrocious centers and is in repute."

I might quote much more from Lardner, Mosheim, Robinson and others, but believe this is enough to show that so-called history and popular opinions are not to be relied on. Why not take the better way, and, as Daniel Webster used to say, "War with principles, and not with men?" I quote again from your article:

"The Mormon church from which this branch has been evolved has given this country much trouble, and some of its all practices have had to be suppressed by most stringent laws in order to save our domestic relation from disruption and ruin. In the reorganization of the church some of these objectionable features have been left off; such as the plurality of wives, etc., but they still cling to the so-called prophets of God, who claimed a direct revelation from God in support of polygamy."

There is a grain of truth in this statement and we are thankful that you have given us credit for a little improvement as you call it, but there are two glaring misrepresentations. The first is that we, as a church, have been "evolved from" the Mormon church of Utah. We never had the remotest connection or affiliation with that church, which has caused the nation so much trouble. Brigham Young led a few people to the mountains, organized a church of his own, and we have never had anything to do with it, and never will. I am very sorry that I can not recommend the people to investigate "as you have done," for it certainly would be a very superficial investigation. We claim to be the original church organized in 1830, and we have twice been pronounced, by the courts of the land, as the successors, legally doctrinally, to that church, and the Utah church has been pronounced heretical. Let me quote to you the findings of the Court of Common Pleas, Lake county, Ohio, February 23, 1880, Hon. L. S. Sherman, Judge.

"That the said plaintiff, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is a religious society, founded and organized upon the same doctrine and tenets, and having the same church organization, as the original church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized in 1830, by Joseph Smith, and was organized pursuant to the constitution, laws and usages of said church, and has branches located in Illinois, Ohio, and other states. That the church in Utah, the defendant, of which John Taylor is president, has materially and largely departed from the faith, doctrines, laws, ordinances and usages of said original church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and has incorporated into its system of faith the doctrines of celestial marriage and a plurality of wives; and the doctrine of Adam-God worship, contrary to the laws and constitution of said original church."

These findings were made in a suit brought by us to recover what is known as the "temple," in Kirtland, Ohio. Judge Phillips, of Kansas City, rendered the same decision at Kansas City in 1894, which is too long for us to quote here. There has been no reformation of doctrine by us so far as the original church is concerned, and so far as any credit attaches to us for teaching good doctrine, the same attaches to the original church.

The other false and misleading statement in your article is that we "still cling to the prophets who claim to have received a direct revelation from God authorizing polygamy." This is without a grain of truth. We claim that Brigham Young and his colleagues were alone responsible for the introduction of polygamy, and that it was not introduced publicly until Joseph Smith had been dead eight years, and hence neither Joseph Smith or the original church was responsible for it; and you know that we do not cling to Brigham Young and his co-laborers. You say that claiming that God has revealed the gospel through the Book of Mormon is dishonoring to God, Christ, the apostles and the Bible. But let us see; the Christian world tells us that faith in God and Christ, with obedience to the gospel law, will save me. The Bible tells me the same, the Book of Mormon tells me exactly the same. Is that dishonoring the Bible, God and Christ? I asked this question of my audience at Bald Knob after showing that the Book of Mormon taught the same things as the Bible; "Supposing I had never seen a Bible, and should come across a Book of Mormon, and I should learn exactly the same things from it that are contained in the Bible, and obey them, would it save me or damn me? You dare not say it would damn me. I am ready at any time to prove in public that the teachings of the Book of Mormon are not dishonoring to God or Christ, and that they are worthy the respect of all Christian people. Trusting that you will be fair enough to publish my defense, I am

Yours for truth,

H. O. SMITH.

AN IDEAL LATTER DAY SAINT.

ELDER M. T. SHORT.

It is too generally conceded that a former, or ancient Saint, was absolutely perfect, even while here in mortality. It ought to be borne in mind that these ancient worthies had passions, appetites, trials, human ties, and earthly environments to surmount and overcome. They had to withstand, combat, drive forth and vanquish the occult forces of the black art. The magnetisms of mankind, coupled with the mesmerisms of nature, and the love of the wonderful, the siren power of the magician, and the high pretension, and dazzling glory of the necromancer, the prognosticator and the astrologer were indeed foemen worthy of their steel.

At first sight, or on casual acquaintance with some meek appearing, well informed, extra polite disciple, one might be led to think, I surely have found an all-around up-to-date Christian! This one shall be my model, pattern, guide, and inspiration. When one sins hastily he can repent at leisure, even though it may be in a fellow's cell, or a bed of anguish and pain. To jump at conclusions, in the absence of experience, or without a proper knowledge, will likely land the adventurer in the slough of despond, or the gulf of dark, deep despair. The lack of caution and prevention, as instanced in the tragedy at Buffalo, rendered prayers and medicine unavailable. When your clever standard, your right hand man, reels under the heavy winds of adversity, trembles at the chilling blasts of persecution, bows at the sturdy stroke of scandal, and falls at the altar of lust, where will all this misplaced confidence lead, direct and indirect? When the fair flower is withered, the beautiful vase is marred, the honored place is desolate, and the sweet flavor all gone, what will retrieve the loss? Affability, urbanity, civility, and a pious mion may be only a sugar coating to the wormwood, or an adroit bait to cover a well barbed hook.

When such are the facts in the case, the beautiful exterior, the suave smile, the courteous bow and the proffered good-will are but the veneering and fig leaf covering, to screen a hideous deformity in character. It is the old confidence game of, "Won't you walk into my parlor, said the spider to the fly." To be forewarned is, to be forearmed, therefore we have no right in justice to allow any man, or set of men, to say naught of demons, lead us into error; or deceive us a particle. We must not, however, be so fearful of being gulled that we will not believe and receive the truth, although a fallible man may tell it to us. To be overly cautious and ever suspicious, are extremes to be hedged against, as also to be too confiding and credulous, when our eternal interests are at stake.

As we travel abroad and view the landscape over, as we hear the fervent affirmations, and note the ardent zeal of adorers, at first sight, and through inflated impressions, a person is liable to conclude that these sanctified, sinless, justified, glorified, saved (?) claimants were the embodiment of perfection, the preserved of God, and the redeemed of Jesus Christ. As long as you complacently take their treatment without caviling, or questioning, and lend them your sympathy and support, they will bless you for cash, or its equivalent, and, in turn, promise you a great reward. When you want to quote, and reason upon the Scriptures, and look well into the perfect law, and talk on the gospel and doctrine of Christ, exit brother.

In the straight road, the narrow way, even the household of faith, we meet some who appear right in certain characteristics. We find many with splendid qualities, and numerous virtues; but in the great beyond is the place where unalloyed perfection will eternally crown the faithful. We can hardly be as perfect in an imperfect sphere as God is in his everlasting abode. All that is of divine origin is absolutely pure and perfect. The object and aim, the operation and end of the rule of life, is to herald abroad, and harbingering forth the timely benefits, and the future glorious outcome of a fruitful pilgrimage of a lawful integrity of service. The acorn is the great oak in embryo, and a true disciple is on the highway.

That the world have a right to expect and behold good examples among professors of religion is cheerfully conceded. The possessors of the faith can hardly afford to let the ensign be at half mast, much less to suffer the banner to trail in the dust, and be trampled beneath the mire with unhallowed feet of swine, in human shape. When a backslider allows the lamp of conscience to flicker and fail, his extinguished light intensifies the blackness within, and the darkness all around. The worthless salt is only fit to be cast out and trodden down. A lukewarm state is an opium dose. A chilled child is amid the Niagara, just above the awful roar of the cataract of death. A careless devotee is in the coils of the boa constrictor, or the anaconda. Seeing that "The covenant of salt," and the light of the cross ought to be allowed to do their perfect work, "let us watch and be sober." Our lives should flow onward in the broad, deep channel of God's love, as a mighty river. Our endeavors must be as constant as the magnetic needle. Our light ought to be as constant as the diamond. While men lie, women sigh, children cry, swallows fly, and fishes die, may we strive to be relatively and approximately right, here and now, in order that we may fill up and round out our selves for the time when the spirits of just men will be made perfect through Jesus Christ the mediator of the everlasting covenant, which may God grant.

I am still in the field of experience.

Beware of the Cold Bath.

The cold bath in the morning is not so popular as it was formerly. There is much energy expended in the reaction and just at the time of day when this energy is at its lowest ebb. Then, too, cold water has very little cleansing effect. Very hot water stimulates the nerves, which is the effect that we are seeking from the cold water, while it does not demand the energy of reaction of the latter. The duration of the morning bath should be as short as possible—hardly longer than the mere application of the water to the skin followed by a brisk rubbing. However, many prefer a cool sponge bath in the morning, and if this is followed by a warm glow and a feeling of well-being, it certainly is beneficial. Many people are not strong enough to react well. A hot bath at night is most cleansing and restful. General bathing must be regulated by individual peculiarities.—Emma E. Walker, M. D., in the November Ladies' Home Journal.

A Letter to the Farmers From the Missouri World's Fair Commissioners.

OFFICE OF MISSOURI WORLD'S FAIR COMMISSION, ST. LOUIS, 1904, 14 LAUREL BUILDING.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 16, 1901.

To the Farmers and Fruit Growers of Missouri:—Our legislature has provided very liberally for a presentation of the resources and products of our great State at the coming World's Fair, and it is the intention of this Commission that our Agricultural display be second to none. To accomplish this we must have the co-operation of the farmers in every county of the State, individually and collectively. We want you to help us get together the cream of the products of the field, the orchard, meadow, vineyard and garden, a collection which will demonstrate just what each county in the State is capable of producing and does produce when farmed intelligently, and an exhibit that will enhance the value of every farm in the State. We want every farmer to be on the lookout for fine wheat, fine corn, grasses, beans and in fact every thing produced from the soil. If you have raised something which you know will be a source of pride to your county, and a credit to yourself, preserve it and write us what you have. If conditions justify, we will try and arrange with you for its proper storage until needed, and for its display at the Fair, with proper credit to the county and the producer. At least half a bushel of each sample of wheat, a bushel of corn and a half bushel of pods of beans, clover, and other crops of the various grasses, and where practical to preserve them, a half bushel of apples, peaches, etc., should be preserved.

This has been a great wheat and fruit year for our State, and as we have but the crops of 1901 and 1902 to select from, it behooves us to preserve the best from this year's crop to guard against crop failure next year; and we issue this appeal with the assurance that every farmer in the State will begin at once to keep his eyes open for something which will add to his State's display, and to this end we earnestly invite your co-operation. Col. G. W. Waters, Institute Organizer of the State Board of Agriculture, has been authorized to represent the Commission at the Institutes in the matter of bringing before those interested the necessity of prompt and vigorous action, and your co-operation with him and the Institutes will be of value.

We will be glad to hear from every farmer with any suggestion that may be of interest. Sincerely, M. T. DAVIS, President. B. H. BONFOY, Secretary.

The Social Rank of Cabinet Officers.

The social rank of each cabinet officer is reckoned according to his standing in the order of succession to the Presidency, which is arranged according to the age of each executive department. The State Department having been the first executive branch of the government created, the Secretary of State is the official and social head of the Cabinet and the first of its members to succeed to the Presidency in the event of the death of both President and Vice-President. If the President, Vice-President and Secretary of State were all to die before their successors had been appointed, the Secretary of the Treasury would become President, because his is the second oldest of the executive departments. This right to succession extends in turn to the Secretary of War, Attorney General, Postmaster-General, Secretary of the Navy, and lastly to the Secretary of the Interior. This gradation thus indicates the social rank of each Cabinet officer in his own circle.—The Ladies' Home Journal for November.

WILL SEND $2.50 FREE.

FRANKLIN MILLS, M. D., LL. B., THE CELEBRATED CHICAGO SPECIALIST, WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS NEW SPECIAL TREATMENT FREE TO EACH OF OUR READERS.

When an experienced physician offers to give away $40,000 worth of a New Treatment for diseases of the heart, nerves, stomach or dropsy, it is conclusive evidence that he has great faith in it. And when hundreds of prominent men and women freely testify to his unusual skill and the superiority of his New Special Treatment, his liberality is certainly worthy of serious consideration.

That Dr. Miles is one of the world's most successful physicians in treating these diseases, is proven by hundreds of testimonials. One patient cured after failure of eleven Grand Rapids physicians, two after being given up by six and seven Chicago physicians, another after nine of the leading doctors in New York City, Philadelphia and Chicago failed. Thousands of testimonials sent upon request.

The eminent Rev. Dr. D. D. Dayton, Ohio, General Secretary of Foreign Missions, writes editorially in the "State Sunday School Journal": "I have known Dr. Miles for many years, and I can say that I have had acquaintance with him who has spared neither labor nor money to keep himself abreast of the great advancement of medical science."

The late Prof. J. S. Jewell, M. D., editor of Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, Chicago, said: "By all means publish your surprising cures. I had head, heart, stomach troubles, and nervous prostration. Three physicians failed to help me, but Dr. Miles cured me. I had been told that Dr. Miles brought him out all right."

This new system of special treatment is thoroughly scientific and immensely superior to the ordinary methods.

As all afflicted readers may have $2.50 worth of treatment especially prepared for their case, free, we would advise them to send for it at once. Address Dr. Franklin Mills, 201 to 203 State St., Chicago. Please mention this paper.

DAUGHTERS OF ZION

Mrs. E. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

Work For All.

Too often we think because of certain circumstances which surround us, there is nothing that we can do for the advancement of truth; and just so often are we mistaken. God knows our every circumstance; He has called us into this work, and surely there is something further for us to do than simply gaining for ourselves salvation. Life may be such with us that our work is confined to our own household, the instructing of our own children (which duty certainly is ours if God has blessed us with children); if no other work is open before us, we no doubt have all we are capable of accomplishing in this; let us not by any means neglect this one thing while looking for something to do. Yet as a general thing we may reach out further and find many ways in which we can assist in sending the light.

I once knew a young girl who was so desirous of doing good that she thought she must go to some foreign land and teach what she then thought to be the gospel, to the heathen. She ignorantly closed her eyes to the important duties of every day life, in the performance of which she could do much for the Master; and sought only the opportunity of being a foreign missionary. But God in his wisdom overruled these ambitions, taught her the gospel in its fullness, and now, in rearing the little family which God has entrusted to her care, and endeavoring to advance in gospel truth, improving opportunities of giving light to others as it has been imparted to her, she is assured that it is God who has called her unto this work, and not merely an ambitious desire to do something great, but is satisfied with doing even these little things of life. Yet can we call them thus? Let us not think for a moment that in our present circumstances we can do nothing for the advancement of truth on the earth. I do not believe that God calls any one into this work who cannot find the work designed for them if they seek it earnestly. First of all we must conform our lives to His law, and learn of Him the way of life; receive the knowledge He has promised to all who seek it, and then by the guidance of His Spirit impart this knowledge to others who are seeking truth. So as many of us have families to instruct, let us be prayerful and ever careful to mold their lives according to the divine will of Him who has entrusted them to our care, and let not a Daughter of Zion, old or young, think for one moment there is no way in which she can help this cause along, as God knows about us. And "all things work together for good to those who are called according to his purpose."

Italian Girls Never Flirt.

In Italy, according to Marchesa Theodoli, who writes about "What Girl Life in Italy Means," in the Ladies' Home Journal for August, there is plenty of love making, but not between the young people of the higher social class. Among the lower classes the youths are freer to please themselves, and there is no lack of furious love making, seasoned with jealousy, estrangements, peace makings, tears and smiles, as Mother Nature intended it to be. But there is no flirting. Love is taken very seriously, and on the girl's side, at least, is indulged in with marriage as the end in view. Flirting for the sake of amusement, simply to while away the long summer days or as a mild stimulant at balls and parties, with no idea of matrimony in the background, is a kind of sport which has not yet reached us from beyond the Alps. We are so far behind the times that to grant the slightest privilege to a man who has not avowedly shown that he means marriage would be considered downright dishonest by a respectable Italian girl. A girl who is not married at thirty will remain in the same dependent state as at seventeen. She would no more think of walking the streets alone, paying a visit or traveling from the city to the country without a companion or chaperone than she would think of choosing her own clothes and dressing as she liked best. Not even at that mature age would she choose a husband for herself without the approval of her family.

The social liberties of the American child are one of the evils of this country. Children's dances and children's parties, once given in the afternoon, have intruded into the evening, and are sending thousands of our children to their beds in a state of excitement which means no good for their future. It stands to reason that no child can, with his or her unformed strength, burn the candle at both ends.—September Ladies' Home Journal.

THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

G. B. FARLAND.

The clock of time the eleventh hour is striking. And there is need of laborers, not a few. I must be up and doing, time is flying. What is there, Lord, that my weak hands can do? If I have been afraid, O Lord, forgive me. Knowing, like Moses, I am "slow of speech. Or if, unthinking, I a talent buried. In this late hour to me thy mercy reach. For I do love thee, Lord, and have been longing. Through all these years to do a noble part, Beside the fountain, 'mid life's scorching desert. I longed to stand and call each troubled heart. I have walked foolishly, so late I see it. So many hours have gone, so little done. Waiting for fitness, I have missed the harvest. A victor's crown by waiting is not won. Lord of the vineyard, while the day is dawning, Set me a task in this eleventh hour: I will work faithfully until the evening, If thou wilt give me strength, and grace and power.

A CHANGE OF A LIFETIME.

After two years careful study of the mineral formation of Baxter County, Arkansas, Elder Joseph Ward organized the White River Mining Co., interesting some of the best citizens of the County, and they have located 3,650 acres of the best mineral land there. In order to develop this property we will sell 1,000 shares, in blocks of 5 shares or more at 20c on the dollar. Shares are $25.00 par value each and are fully paid up and non-assessable. This offer only holds good until Jan. 1, 1902.

Now is the time to make a small investment which will in the near future bring large returns, for as soon as we begin shipping ore this stock will be at least 100 cents on the dollar.

October 21.

The Ohio district conference convened at South Wellston, Ohio, October 19, 1901. Elder W. H. Kelley was chosen to preside, S. J. Jeffers associate, Bro. F. G. Pitt chorister, Sr. Janette Williams organist. The visiting brethren were given voice in the conference.

After opening address by Bro. W. H. Kelley, the rest of the session was occupied with short speeches by Bro. S. J. Jeffers, T. J. Beatty, L. R. Devore, V. M. Goodrich, J. F. McDowell and F. G. Pitt.

The following was offered by V. M. Goodrich and carried: That this conference ask the pardon of Bro. H. E. Moler in that it took hasty action at Vales Mills, one year ago, not permitting him to be heard when requested so to do.

The following branches reported: La Grange, 67; N. Columbus, 33; Creola, 47; Milton, 41; Vinton, 102; Liberty, 49; Blerly, 36; Hocking Valley, 80. The Hocking Valley branch report was referred back to the branch for correction to be returned to the district secretary.

Bishop's agent reported as follows: Total receipts, $996.00; expenditures, $892.50; back due church, $103.59. R. Devore, A. B. Kirkendall and T. J. Beatty appointed to audit same.

The request of the Saints of Paddle Creek to be organized into a branch was discussed and referred to the missionary in charge.

The Davisville branch matter was taken up and discussed, and on motion was referred to a committee of three elders of the district, and that the committee report to this conference. Bro. A. B. Kirkendall, A. W. Kriebel and V. M. Goodrich were appointed said committee.

Auditing committee reported bishop's agent's report correct. A motion to accept report was adopted.

Committee appointed to adjust the Davisville branch matter reported as follows.

We, your committee on Davisville organization, beg to report that it is the sense of the committee that the recognition of the second organization occupying the same building and territory as the first, is unwise and a detriment to the work under existing conditions. We suggest that the members retain membership in the Byer branch or take letters of removal to adjacent branches. We further deem it wise and suggest that Bro. J. Munion be elected president, and pray that all will lay personal feeling aside and labor for the good of the work in that vicinity.

A motion to declare both organizations disorganized and further organization to be referred to missionary in charge and district president, was lost.

The report was then amended by striking off the recommendation that Bro. J. Munion be chosen to preside, and was adopted by a vote of ten to five.

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder

Each time the United States Government has officially tested the baking powders the report has shown Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder to be of superlative leavening strength, free from alum, absolutely pure and wholesome.

This is gratifying, for Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is depended upon by millions of people to raise their daily bread.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

NOTE.—These Government inquiries also developed the fact that there are many mixtures upon the market made in imitation of baking powder, but containing alum or other caustic acid, whose use in food is dangerous.

WORSHIP.

It is the testimony of those who have had experience in that direction, that nothing in this life causes such complete satisfaction to the soul as the fervent, sincere and faithful devotion paid to the Most High God; and the longer an individual has been in such service, the more emphatic is his testimony. Many things in this life engage the attention of mankind, and to all the objects to which thought and energy are given in this life, there is connected with it more or less of anxiety and uncertainty. But when the mind, the heart, the strength and the soul of an individual is given in the worship of the only true and living God, there is neither dubiety or anxiety as to the results following. On the contrary there is a sense of recognition given which brings joy and peace, coupled with a desire to continue, and if possible, to enlarge upon such service that greater blessings may be realized. Our Lord has said:

If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.—John 14: 23.

With such an influence surrounding an individual, naught but peace can be experienced. The power of the adversary that distress is broken or made ineffective; for with such attendants to comfort and strengthen even martyrdom has been endured with joy.

The desire to worship seems to be inherent in the nature of man; and though the knowledge of what he should worship and in what manner devotion should be offered, may be very crude and imperfect in some, yet the desire to worship seems rightly a part of his nature. And why not? From the beginning of his history it has been impressed upon him that he is under obligations to his Creator for all the blessings of life, both now and hereafter; that because of mercies enjoyed he is in duty bound to be thankful and appreciative, which should be manifested by doing those things which are pleasing and acceptable to the Giver of all his benefices; and that to fail to show such appreciation is to justly incur his displeasure. Hence, from the dwellers in "darkest Africa," and the aborigines of America, to the highest type of civilization, worship is offered to God in some form; and with more or less zeal and sincerity.

Comparatively few, however, of all of earth's children worship as they should, in spirit and in truth. Our Lord, when questioned on one occasion as to which of all the commandments of the Father was most important, gave this instruction:

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.—Matt. 22: 37.

Mark (12: 30) and Luke (10: 27) both make the addition of the words "and with all thy strength," and when a perfect worship is given, all our strength or force of character must be in it. To love the Lord with all our heart implies that our love for Him is the chief element in it. To love Him thus, not only does not exclude love for other right and proper objects of esteem, but rather enjoins such upon us as a duty, as being the workmanship of His wisdom and power. For instance, while the question propounded the Savior had reference to the greatest commandment, His reply includes a second great commandment, which He declared was "like unto" the first. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," and Matthew records Him as adding, "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." It follows then, that he who loves God with all his heart must love his neighbor with the same unselfish interest as he is wont to extend to his own inclinations and characteristics. If the question arises as to who is one's neighbor, we have only to turn to the pointed reply to this question which the Savior made when uttering the parable of the man who fell among thieves while traveling from Jerusalem to Jericho (Luke 10: 30-37), demonstrating beyond all controversy that it is the individual who anywhere, and at any time NEEDS the help you are able to afford him, though it should even require a sacrifice on your part to render it.

Locality is not in the consideration when deciding scripturally the question as to who is one's neighbor. Usually the definition of neighbor is applied only to those who reside near us, and who are congenial to us as associates, who move in "our sphere" of life. But this definition is too narrow, too contracted to meet the requirements in an acceptable worship of God. A godlike service to our fellowman is service to God, and the Savior emphatically showed his disapproval of the usage which includes only those who are able to repay us in kind for favors extended, to the neglect of the interests of the helpless and needy. "The poor ye have always with you," indicates that there is a duty pressing upon the faithful servant of the Lord which may not be disregarded, without individual loss to the one so unobedient. The way of the world is to show favors to those who are already prosperous, in the thought that they might, in a time of emergency, be of assistance again; but our Lord enjoined that assistance should be rendered those who are unable to return the favor in this life, declaring that in so doing the recompense should be had "at the resurrection of the just," which would be of far more worth than any returns that could possibly be made in this life.

But to serve the Lord with all one's mind, and might, and soul and strength, requires an intelligent and comprehensive understanding of the Being to whom our devotion is offered. The Savior declared to the Samaritan woman, "Ye worship ye know not what: we know what we worship" (John 4: 22), and that statement was as applicable to others as to the Samaritans. The Apostle Paul when visiting Athens, and taking note of the devotions of the Athenians, found one altar with the inscription TO THE UNKNOWN GOD, showing that they were indeed worshipping they knew not what. Such a worship could not then, nor can it be now profitable to the worshiper, nor entirely acceptable to God. Christ taught that the hour had come even in His day, "when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in truth for the Father seeketh such to worship him" (John 4: 23), making it an absolute necessity for the spirit of revelation to inspire and direct that worship.

The statement in the verse following that "God is a Spirit," has confused many in their conception of His personality, so that they cannot present an intelligent worship. Creeds have taught that God is without body, parts or passions, precisely the opposite to the statements of the Scriptures concerning Him; the word of God declares in plain and unequivocal language that He possesses all of those characteristics. From what source men have drawn their understanding that God does not possess either "body, parts or passions," is hard to determine, unless it be from the thought that a spirit has no entity; and even that is as erroneous as the other, and so confusing to the understanding that the mind can have no correct comprehension of the Almighty, and worships it "knows not what," therefore not "in truth." We will quote a few passages from Holy Writ to show that God is; that He has a body, with parts, and possesses passions; and, taking the Bible, the revelation of God, instead of the mistaken opinion of men, as a guide, those who will accept its teachings may be able to worship with profit to themselves and acceptance to the living God, who talked to Moses at the burning bush.

And when the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses. And he said, Here am I. And he said, Draw not nigh hither, put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground. Moreover he said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham; the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.—Ex. 3: 4-6.

There can be no misunderstanding here; the Almighty spoke to Moses in his own language, face to face as one man speaks to another, consequently He has a voice and a personality, and this personality was represented in the Lord Jesus Christ. Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his PERSON, and upholding all things by the word of His power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high.—Heb. 1: 3.

This scripture clearly shows just what kind of an entity is possessed by our great Creator. Jesus was the express image of His person, and if we have a clear conception of the personality of the Redeemer, we will know, in the light of this testimony, just what form the eternal Father possesses, and may offer an intelligent worship to Him. Jesus sat down at his "right hand;" how could this be possible if He possessed no form or shape?

And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for I have seen God face to face: and my life is preserved.—Gen. 32: 30.

And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend.—Ex. 33: 11.

For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him.—2 Chron. 16: 9.

The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous and his ears are open to their cry.—1 Peter 3: 12.

The Lord hath sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength.—Isa. 62: 8.

And upon the nobles of the children of Israel he laid not his hand: also they saw God, and did eat and drink.—Ex. 24: 11.

And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God.—Ex. 31: 18.

Then went up Moses, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel; and they saw the God of Israel: and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of sapphire stone, and as it were the body of heaven in his clearness.—Ex. 24: 9, 10.

Very much more along this line could be given but this will surely suffice to make it clear that God possesses form, a body, as did our Savior. In the beginning God said let us make man in our image, after our likeness. (Gen. 2: 26). No one will probably advance the theory that the form of mankind has changed since that time. Nor will it be asserted that God has changed. He spoke from the heavens in an audible voice at the baptism of the Lord Jesus, declaring Him to be His Son in whom he was well pleased, and commanded all men to hear him. He has been shown to have a face, eyes, mouth ears, hands and feet, seventy-four men having been eye witnesses of this fact. He loves the righteous; He hates sin; He is angry with the wicked; He is just, merciful, patient, forgiving, so that He does possess passions, as well as body and parts. He is not personally in every place at one time as witness this testimony:

And he said, Go forth and stand upon the mount before the Lord. And behold, the Lord passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and broke in pieces the rocks before the Lord; but the Lord was not in the wind: and after the wind an earthquake; but the Lord was not in the earthquake: and after the earthquake a fire: but the Lord was not in the fire: and after the fire a still small voice. And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that he wrapped his face in his mantle, and went out and stood in the entering in of the cave.—1 Kings 19: 11-13.

All may then draw nigh in spirit to the living God. They may draw nigh to Him in character and in the resurrection, because they have obeyed His laws and commandments may, through the atonement of Christ, be like Him in every way, possessing His likeness in form, glory, intelligence and life.

"Worship God."

Extracts from Letters.

SR. (Mrs.) M. M. GOODRICH, Aaron, Bates county, Missouri, remitting for ENSIGN, says:

I thank the Lord we have that much preaching. We get but very little preaching besides what we get through the "silent preacher." God bless the "silent preacher."

ELDER W. H. PREWITT, Lark, Cleveland county, North Carolina:

I have preached fifty-one sermons. None have been baptized, but the people are marvelling about this gospel. I think if some one would make the start many would be baptized. If any of the Saints feel like sending me church papers I will be thankful, and can distribute them.

INDEPENDENCE.

Be sure to attend the young people's entertainment at Bro. and Sr. Elliott's new home near the Pacific bridge, next Monday evening. You will be sure to enjoy it, besides helping these lively folks in a laudable work. They are going to have that piano for the Religio and Sunday School work, and that's all there is about it. 25 cents will admit adults, and 15 cents the little folks. Don't fail to get there on time.

Bishop May and President Hulmes are having an office prepared on the first floor of the ENSIGN building, and will soon be ready to receive those who may have business with them in their new quarters. Bro. Wm. Roberts is doing the necessary carpenter work. The papering and varnishing will be done as soon as he is through, and the brethren will probably be located some time next week. It will be quite a convenience for all concerned.

We are informed that Bro. Alma McCallum is preparing to open a restaurant in the rooms formerly occupied by the News on West Lexington, opposite the Electric Line station. John Barbee will assist him in taking care of patrons.

The young people's prayer service Tuesday evening was very interesting and encouraging. Bro. C. Ed. Miller and Harry Hatley were in charge.

Bro. G. Ed. Weeks met with a painful accident last Saturday evening while at his work in the foundry of the Eagle Manufacturing Company, at Armourdale, Kansas. He was carrying a ladle of melted iron, when he fell, spilling the iron, and burning both hands, left arm and right side. Though not serious it was quite painful.

Sr. Lucy Young and Bro. Frank Resch were married Tuesday evening, November 5th, by Elder B. J. Scott. The ENSIGN extends hearty congratulations to the happy couple. May happiness and prosperity crown their union. Rumor has it that the "bells" are softly swinging and will, ere many moons, peal merrily for two more of our excellent young sisters. Don't ask us; we don't know.

At least two young people are anxiously scanning the weather signs each day, and hoping for a continuance awhile longer for the beautiful weather we have been having. The framing of Bro. Frank Mills' new house on West Short street is up, and in a few more days will be covered in. It will be a pretty little home when completed.

We have had a remarkably beautiful and pleasant fall. Have had ripe tomatoes from the garden up to this week, and November 4th, the editor and family were favored with roasting ears (green corn), furnished by the kindness of Bro. C. A. Roell, from his garden. Missouri is a good place to live.

President Hulmes was the speaker at the morning hour last Sunday, and Apostle Joseph Luff at night, both efforts were good. The afternoon communion service was enlivening.

Lamoni, Iowa, had the first snow of the season Saturday last, and another followed Monday night. We are having beautifully clear weather here, though quite cool Monday and Tuesday. It is pleasant in temperature as well as appearance since then.

Sr. Sarah Jane Franklin, of Independence, aged 80 years, died Wednesday morning, October 30th, at Del Norte, Colorado, where she had gone to visit her daughter.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

News of the severe illness of Master Blair Winning, youngest child of our esteemed former associate townsmen, Bro. and Sr. Robert Winning, now of Niagara Falls, reaches us, yet with a mingling of hope for his final recovery. To you our sympathy extends.

Bro. Church, of Lamoni, was in attendance at our church services yesterday. He was the guest of Bro. Smith, formerly of the same place.

The sacrament service yesterday was in charge of Bro. R. Archibald and Wm. Lawrenson, two of our tried standbys. It requires a great effort for Bro. Archibald to get to church on account of his affliction, but he comes. The meeting was progressing nicely when we departed for our mission work.

Bro. Wm. Lewis and company were delayed near six hours between here and Chicago, by a wreck, which will make it questionable about their reaching New York in time for the sailing at 10 o'clock on Saturday.

Bro. and Sr. Hancock, a worthy old couple living at Watheua, Kansas, spent a happy week among the Saints here, attending services and rejoicing in the gospel they love so well and have loved so long.

Our series of two weeks meeting at Geiger Hall, 12th and Grand avenue, opened out last night with a very satisfactory service; a fair attendance and splendid spirit. After the service a good Methodist shook hands saying, "I thank you for your fairness, I will come to hear you again." Is not the truth always fair when fairly handled?

Bro. G. W. Best and Coventry Archibald held forth at the Aspy mission yesterday, and Bro. H. B. Tadicken at South Park, for the city. Six sermons in all, three Sunday Schools and one sacrament service.

LATER.—Bro. Wm. Lewis and party reached New York and sailed at 10 a. m. Saturday. All well.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Sunday the preacher at West Pullman was Bro. Sheehy; at south side Bro. Pement; on the west side Bro. Earl and Sheehy. The union communion service on the south side was well attended. Bro. G. F. Weston and mother of Buchanan, Michigan, and Mrs. Hegwitz, Epperson and Heliver of Peoria, Illinois, were in attendance; also Sr. Steele, who now in her 85th year bears a faithful testimony to the truthfulness of the latter day work. She has been a member of the church for 70 years; was acquainted with the Martyrs, the three witnesses, was present at the dedication of the Kirtland Temple. She was the daughter of Duty Griffiths and was baptized at Amherst, Ohio, in 1831 by Elder Fuller. Such interesting testimonies as she can bear are few nowadays, as these aged warriors are fast becoming few.

We learn from Bro. Weston that the Glad Tidings has removed its office back to Grand Rapids, Michigan.

The Willing Workers Sewing Society of the west side have now renewed their work for the fall and winter campaign at the hall, 8 South Wood Street every Thursday at 10 to 4; the Prayer Union at 2:30. The following is inscribed on their banner: "Our Aim—To do all the good we can, in all the ways we can, in every place we can, to all the people we can." Motto, "Rowing, Not Drifting."

Bro. Elmer Johnson is poorly; he had to be removed from Sr. Braidwood's to his parents home. The outlook for him is anything but encouraging.

The Mite Society are very busy preparing for the Thanksgiving bazaar, which they are trying to make a brilliant success every way.

At morning service we greeted Sr. Nettie Thomas of Bevier, as we supposed; were pleasantly surprised to know the young lady had recently changed her name. Her husband, Mr. Hamilton, accompanied her.

Bro. J. J. Billisky was forced into service yesterday by the absence of Bro. Archibald, who was detained by work. Bro. B. acquitted himself creditably.

Our protracted meeting closed last Sunday night; while the attendance was not so very large, yet a good interest was manifest throughout, and quite a number of non-members were brought near the kingdom; the Saints were cheered and built up, and an excellent spirit prevailed. President J. D. White was ably assisted by Bro. R. J. Parker, F. C. Warnky, I. N. White, D. R. Rudd and President D. F. Winn. With the exception of last Saturday evening the weather was most delightful. Bro. White contemplates beginning another series of meetings in another part of the city this week.

Last Sunday evening Bro. Warnky assisted Bro. J. A. Gilgren at the Northeast branch, where a good interest has been worked up, and quite a number have been baptized lately.

Two daughters of Sr. F. M. Steward, of Rosedale, were attacked by scarlet fever recently, the eldest, 10 years old, died; the other one is getting better. Sr. O. Hughes has been a good Samaritan during this trouble.

Bro. John F. Allen died last Sunday, and was buried from the 18th street Union Mission, Bro. F. Parker in charge, Bishop W. H. Pease preached the sermon.

Last Monday night was the regular business meeting of the branch; the former officers of the branch were re-elected, except Bro. Henry Ashbaugh, priest, he having moved to Colorado. Bro. Eli Etzenhouser was recommended by the president, and provision for his ordination to the office of priest, was made for next Sunday afternoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at "Druid's Temple," Cor. 14th and Polson Sts. Sunday School 9:45 a. m.; preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sacrament meeting on first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3016 16th street.

Sunday, October 18th, we had preaching at 11 a. m. by Edgar Smith, from Sacramento. He is a young man just taking his first steps as a preacher. He acquitted himself quite nobly, and will accomplish much good for the cause if he continues faithful.

In the evening Bishop C. A. Parkin, was the speaker. He also addressed the Oakland Saints at the morning service.

There was a full attendance at the prayer meeting Wednesday evening, Bro. Saxo's parlors were well filled with interested Saints, nearly all taking part in the services.

The Religio had a very interesting session Friday evening, at the residence of Bro. Roy Davis. There was a review in Book of Mormon studies, also two discussions, one concerning the Urim and Thummim, the other about the name of the brother of Jared. There was a general interest spread among the members in the matters considered.

Sunday, October 20th, regular Sunday School service at 9:45, preaching at 11 by Bishop Parkin and at 7:30 p. m. by the writer.

We are having nice, warm weather now, almost too warm. At mid-day; the evenings are grand. Our summer winds are over, and we now enjoy our finest weather.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Sunday evening at 6 p. m. E. F. Shupe, pastor, 3633 Clayton St.

The weather is fine, a little cool at night, but fair and warm during the day; the flowers are still blooming beautifully out of doors, there not having been frost enough to kill them.

Elder J. B. Roush and family have moved into their own home on the north side. Sr. Roush has been quite poorly for several days.

Two were baptized on the 27th ult., and four received by letter the 3d inst, making six additions to the branch within a week.

At the Religio the 27th a long letter was read from Sr. Laura Gilbert giving a history of their voyage from San Francisco to Papete; it was very interesting.

The Religio gave an entertainment and oyster supper at the church Friday evening. The program, though short, was one of the best ever given by the society.

Preaching Sunday morning by Elder J. B. Roush.

There was a large attendance at the six o'clock sacrament service, and the meeting was one of interest, lasting over two hours.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 3.

Editor Ensign:—Permit me a small space in your interesting paper to inform your readers of my whereabouts, and a little of what is being done for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God, and I trust, encouragement to the Saints. My appointment from the last General Conference being Canada, and under the direction of our beloved president, Apostle R. C. Evans, I was to labor in the London district, and since communicating to the Herald, of August 10th, I was permitted to go and see the loved ones of home. After a pleasant time and attending to some church duties for the London branch, by request of Elder

H. Dickhout, of Hamilton, I came here on the 3d of September, and have felt it wise to remain for a little longer for the good of the work in that place.

Hamilton is a city of some 35,000 or 40,000 people, and we have about eight families of Saints, with a branch of about twenty-five members, one elder, one teacher. The elder is an engine driver and goes to his work 7:30 p. m. each night through the week and oftentimes on Sunday; as a result he cannot attend to the wants of the branch as required, but tries to do his best under those circumstances. The teacher lives about two and one half miles out of the city, and while working as blacksmith in the same, finds it hard to attend to the duties of his office, and like many of the members of the church is poor as regards this world's goods.

There had been no meetings for four weeks before I came, and things were looking a little dark. The missionaries will better understand this experience; but at times it falls to our lot to meet them. I looked at the situation thoughtfully and prayerfully, and asking for light from Him in whom there is no darkness at all, I went to work among the few Saints with the view of building them up in the true faith of Jesus Christ.

I first visited nearly all its members, got them to feel their duty to God, the church and themselves, and tried to find out if they were not willing to make the required sacrifice in order to bring this work before the people, informing them that I had instructions from our beloved president of the mission to stay with them as long as my duty required and interest remained. Having no place of meeting some of the Saints and friends opened their houses for preaching, which was very encouraging, and I tried to dispense to them the true gospel restored in these latter days, and am pleased to inform you that the effort put forth was not in vain, for Mrs. Mary Slover became very much interested, and after going to her house and having some long talks on the rights of the true church of Jesus Christ and his teachings to mankind as found in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, she asked to be admitted into the church, believing it to be of God; so on the 16th of September in the lake at Hamilton, after a spiritual service at the house, she was baptized by the writer, and under the hands of Elder H. Dickhout and myself she was confirmed a member of the church of Jesus Christ known among men as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

It was thought wise that we get a permanent place for preaching and branch meetings, so I got the consent of the few Saints to hire a hall, and would try to meet the expense of the same. So Elder Dickhout and the writer went to inquire about one, but could not get it for the purpose required, though it had been empty for a long time and is still empty, with other places owned by the same parties. We tried again and found a large store on one of the main streets close to the city hall and market, No. 60 York street. The agent wanted $6.00 per month, but we went to the owner who wanted $5.00. So we talked for a while of our object, and he said we might have it for $4.00 per month, and we took it.

Then the work of cleaning commenced; the writer with Srs. Forest and Bessie Dickhout went to work and put in three long days, pulling down paper, scraping walls, washing windows, white washing large ceiling all around walls half way down, then painting with two colors the other half, painting doors, etc. Getting out and posting bills, getting in electric light, etc., all done with the cost of $12.13, rent for one month included, and on Sunday 23d we had four meetings—sacrament, prayer and testimony, preaching three and seven p. m., and have been holding meetings every night since except Saturday and three meetings on Sunday.

I have my English organ accordion, a small instrument, and we have some very good singers, and can say I have been blessed in preaching the word of the Lord to the people. There are no many turn out at times, but having felt of the Holy Spirit when by prayer the place was dedicated by the writer, I have every reason to believe that good will come from the same. We have our temptations, and at times the way seems dark, but the promise holds good to day "as thy days may demand so thy succor shall be."

Bro. Keen has painted a small advertisement, "The Hamilton Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, All Welcome." It is pasted on the window with other notices of the meetings. I think I can truly say that the Lord is with us, and though the work may be moving slowly here, yet it is forward. Trusting God and persevering will honor the calling, and I still beg the prayers of the faithful Saints that I may live humble, watchful and pure to the Lord, and with the pure in heart be gathered home to Zion when the work is done.

Your brother in Christ,
R. B. HOWLETT.

HAMILTON, Scotland, Oct. 15.
Editor Ensign:—Perhaps a few lines may be of interest, from this side of the Atlantic, to the readers of the ENSIGN. The work of the Lord over here is in a fair and prosperous condition, but still there is ample room for improvement. The few missionaries that we have over here are striving to magnify their calling. The local ministry are in good spirits and co-operating with us to advance the interests of the work. We hope that the Saints will pay special attention to the appeal accompanying this letter.

We are glad to learn through the columns of the Herald, and ENSIGN that the gospel is winning its way, but feel sad to learn that so many of the Saints are ill and some passing away; however, we must be prepared to meet adversity as well as prosperity in this world. It pained our heart to learn of the assassination of the late President McKinley, having been acquainted with him for many years and all the time we have known him have found him to be one of the honorable men of the earth. There was deep and universal sorrow at the cruel deed which prematurely closed a life of useful activity for common good, bespeaking the esteem and admiration for him from all the civilized world. We truly sympathize with his companion and humbly pray that God will give her grace to bear this heavy affliction.

Since my arrival in this country I have visited many places, renewed the acquaintance of many, and made many that are new, and miss the faces of many who were friends and helpers in the days gone by, some emigrating to the land of America and some have steered their bark for the haven of eternal rest. This is a strange world in which we live; a few years bring about many changes, some pleasant, some trying and others very sad in their nature. We beg a deep interest in the prayers of God's people for ourselves and the work in this land.

With love to all, and regards to ye editor and manager.

GUILFORD, Mo., Oct. 23.
Editor Ensign:—Elders J. S. Snively and D. A. Hutchings closed a ten days meeting at Gravel Wall Baptist church, four miles northeast of Fillmore, Missouri, last Friday. The interest was good to the last, good size crowds, the young people taking an active part in helping with the singing. The brethren regretted the close of the meetings so soon, but the Baptists had arranged to begin a protracted effort. They will find it hard work to interest the people with a "mourner's bench" conversion, after hearing so much solid gospel truths.

Bro. W. T. Ross and I have been holding services at the Fairview school-house, two and one half miles northeast of Barnard, where the attendance has been large, and a more attentive class of people, I have not found in the state. A number of evenings' the house would not hold the audience. I do not want the reader to think this was all on account of such good preaching, Bro. W. T. Ross being in charge of the singing, with the two sisters, Arietta and Eliza Byerko, they securing the use of an organ, and hauling it six miles to the school-house, then attending the services each evening, making a twelve mile trip, all to assist the elder to get a crowd to come and hear the gospel. May God bless such faithful souls as they. Other Saints might do well to take this for an example to do likewise.

Bro. Sively and Hutchings came Friday and Saturday to my assistance and will continue the meetings another week. People have kindly extended invitation to us to stop with them. We trust lasting good has been done, and that some may be led to obey.

Arrangements have been made to hold a series of meetings at Guilford and Bedson branch, beginning Friday, November 15th, continuing two weeks or more. I have the promise of Bro. J. N. White to be with us, and the missionary force will try and be in "prime" shape to do their best to make these meetings a success. Both meetings will be carried on at the same time, being only about ten miles apart. Let the Saints get their singing in "trim," and the Lord being with us, surely we will have a good time.

Yours in bonds,
D. C. WHITE.

SHABONA, Mich., Oct. 23.
Dear Ensign:—The conferences of Northern Michigan and Eastern Michigan are past. The Northern conference was quite the best that I ever attended; perfect harmony and agreement prevailed from the opening of the Sunday School convention until the close of the conference. The outlook is indeed encouraging. The lines are being constantly extended and not a few are receiving the gospel.

The Religion has become a permanent fixture among the Saints. The first convention of this growing society to be held in Michigan, convened at Five Lakes, October 19th. Nine local societies were represented, and the organization of "The Peninsular State Association," was effected. I also organized a "local" in Gagetown, on Tuesday evening, October 22d, delivered one address in the G. A. R. Hall, and arrived here today. Commence meetings in the hall tonight.

This place (Shabona) is the place where our own J. J. Coraish met Rev. R. B. Brown in debate in June last. Elder Cornish baptized ten at the close. Rev. C. W. Seelhoff, the Methodist minister who brought about the discussion, has "hied himself away," and another has been installed in his stead. Many are interested and we look for other additions.

Our worthy apostle, J. H. Lake, is at present laboring in the vicinity of Buell Center. His labors are very acceptable among Saints and others.

I can but say that prospects are very bright from my point of view, and I believe it is the general expression. I go to Bay City next.

ILLINOIS CITY, Ill., Oct. 26.
Editor Ensign:—About the 9th of September Elders J. Arthur Davis and O. H. Bailey, Russell and Steadman came down from Davenport, Ia., with their tent and held meetings over four weeks; the tent was crowded every night and they had the best of order. They packed their tent about the 12th of October at Charlie Holmes' in Mercer county, Illinois. Bro. Bailey is now at home in Clinton, Iowa, and Bro. Davis and Steadman are holding meetings at Savannah, Illinois.

The people here say that they never heard as much gospel preached in all the years that they have lived as was preached in those four weeks; if they had a church here they would do a great deal of good, but the Methodists and Brethren will not open the church to them, and there is no place here to hold meetings.

In gospel bonds,
Mrs. M. REEVES.

To Mrs. M. WINDSON,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo.

Dear Sister:—Your welcome letter of September 7th arrived today, just one month after you posted it. On behalf of Australian Saints I desire to extend sincere thanks to "Willing Helpers" of Independence, Missouri, for their thoughtful kindness and most noble efforts to assist us few, far away, struggling Saints, by so promptly sending us the large sum of $15.00. So far I have only received nine letters from U. S. A. Yours contains the largest sum; the others had from 25 cents to $2.00 each; most of them $1.00 each.

In 1888 I joined the Independence branch, and in the spring 1889 while reading the Herald one day alone, the Holy Spirit rested on me and witnessed to me that I had a work to do in Australia. In 1892 I was ordained a Seventy in the stone church, Independence, Missouri, and appointed to the Australian mission, but did not get here till August 15, 1893, having labored one year in Colorado. I found this mission a hard one to make headway in because of lack of money and printed literature to work with; so from a financial point of consideration, our work here these eight years has been slow and uphill pushing.

Like Paul of old I have labored much with my own hands to partially supply needs of self and family, as my wife during these eight years did not draw fully $800 of her allowance from the church on account of hard times and lack of funds in this mission. God has been wonderfully mindful of me, for when I needed cash he always opened the way for me to earn it, and I could get work while thousands of men were out of a job. Times are getting better, and there are plenty of titles to support missionaries families now.

But we are badly in need of a good printing press. The voice of the Spirit to me of late has been that there are thousands in Australia to be gathered to Zion. How is it to be done? God works by means, and one that must largely be used here is the printed word; this together with the voice of the missionaries and godly example and sacrifice of all Saints will accomplish the work and push many to Zion.

I have had great trials of late by sickness in my family. I ask you all to pray for my wife that she may be restored to good health, so I may be free from family care to go forth to do God's work and be not burdened in mind on account of knowing that Sr. Kaler is not able to properly care for our three darling children.

Kindly remember me to Bro. Joseph Luff; my heart swells with love for him when I think of the wise counsel I got through his sermons before and after I joined the church. I believe he is doing God's will, though many may think otherwise, and not knowing the hidden purposes of divine wisdom, may misjudge him, as some of the Saints here have done me when I was laboring at things other than spiritual or missionary work. A word from any of you in ENSIGN on behalf of our "press fund," would be appreciated very much. Love to all Independence Saints.

Determined to battle onward for the truth, I am

JOHN KALER.

GAYLORD, Kas., Oct. 28.

Editor Ensign:—The past week Bro. J. C. Vaughn and L. G. Gurwell discussed in the Baptist church at this place. The attendance was not as large as we would have wished for, but the interest was very good throughout. Bro. Gurwell's chart lectures on the various dispensations were excellent, and no doubt it will arouse the spirit of investigation in some, though I do not look for very great results to follow from preaching to this people.

The record of the past discloses the fact that for over a quarter of a century the gospel story has been repeated with but very small results. Yet if those who have been obedient receive eternal life through faithfulness, the labor of those years will be richly paid and honor and glory added to the faithful laborers of the vineyard.

The Saints of this place are mostly faithful. Services are held regularly, and we are striving to keep pace with the rapid progress of the church in faith and works.

In conclusion will state that we are grateful for the above labors. Call again brethren.

Hastily,
L. F. JOHNSON.

CENTRALIA, Ill., Oct. 29.

Dear Ensign:—Will you please announce in your columns to the Saints that I have an affected heart and I ask an interest in their prayers. I have been troubled with it for years. I saw in your columns the statement of a sister who gives in her evidence to this, and I cannot doubt it in the least. God has made us this promise in his divine word if we will submit to his will.

Bro. J. D. Stead is the only elder that knows me, under whose hands I was baptized, and if this should fall under his notice I especially ask an interest in my behalf. My address is 1104 South Locust St., Centralia, Ill.

Yours in gospel bonds,

F. M. DAVIS.

WEIR CITY, Kan., Oct. 27.

Editor Ensign:—Bro. John T. Davis, district president, has been with us and strengthening the Saints here by his wise counsel. We have been looking for Bro. F. C. Keek, but he has not put in his appearance yet.

The branch at this place is in a better condition now than for some time. Some of the Saints are moving back here and I think the branch is advancing. We have a nice Sunday School here. Next Sunday, November 3d, at 9 a. m. is appointed for fasting and prayer for the bettering of the condition spiritually of the branch. We would be glad to have the Saints remember us.

Yours for the gospel,
W. S. STRICKLIN.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. ABBIE PECK, Fife Lake, Michigan.

We would be lost if we did not get the ENSIGN and read how other Saints are prospering. We do not have any meetings near here, the nearest branch being seven miles distant, but are striving to serve the Lord our Master.

SR. (MRS.) EMILY BURLLEY, Stokes Bay, Ontario:

I take great delight in reading the pieces written by the Daughters of Zion which are very helpful. The ENSIGN is a very welcome visitor to our home, and I think it is a paper that should be in the home of every Latter Day Saint. My husband and I are both Latter Day Saints and the prayer of my heart is that we may be Saints in every sense.

ELDER F. L. SAWLEY, Wheatland, Missouri, Oct. 25th:

Bro. T. W. Chatburn, the "Jots" man from the Wisconsin mission, is now in debate with Elder A. Carlin of the Baptist church. Carlin came here and began a series of lectures against what he pleases to call "Mormonism," who are in fact Latter Day Saints. He challenged the church from Joseph Smith down and wanted us to procure our best man. We did our best to accommodate him. The result of which is, T. W. Chatburn came to our rescue much to the surprise of Elder Carlin. Bro. Chatburn seems to be just the man to meet Elder Carlin. A large audience is in attendance with marked interest in the truth manifest. Rev. Pipes of the Methodist church is chairman of the moderators and is ruling fair thus far. The debate is announced for six days, two sessions daily in the forenoon and at night. Two church propositions are being discussed; we are discussing our own proposition now. The debate began yesterday and we are hopeful that our cause will be ably cared for all through, and that good results will follow our effort.

ZION'S ENSIGN.

THE ORIGIN OF MAN.

ELDER CHAR. J. CLARK.

In a recent article written by me, and published in the Autumn Leaves, I stated that Bible writers spoke of man as a being composed of body and spirit; and that these two natures were distant and separate entities, capable, of existing in union—thus forming a living soul—or separate from each other. It is not difficult to prove this to be a Bible doctrine, and a vital one too, because it is a necessary link in the chain which connects mortals with immortality; and the Bible is a spiritual chart or guide to immortality.

If man has no spirit within him, if, as phrenology asserts, his mind or spirit grows and decays with the body, he is no more spiritual, and has no better reason to expect immortality than any other animal that lives on the face of the earth. Then the same thing happeneth to both of them; life is in them both, and as one dieth, so dieth the other, for who can prove, by human reason or by observation, or by diligent research, that the spirit of man goes upward, and the spirit of a beast goes downward, or that it does not. Nobody can, it is a problem that human wisdom cannot solve.

The science of evolution starts man into his life as man, from a lower animalism; it scouts the spiritual account of the creation of man, as an antiquated superstition, yet what great light does it bring to him to solve the problem of his being, or of what existed before him or what will be after him? The Scripture says, God made him from the dust of the ground, and then, after he had thus completed his physical formation, he breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul. As to what is meant by the breath of life, see Zech. 12: 1:

"The burden of the word of the Lord for Israel, saith the LORD, which stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, formeth the spirit of man within him."

If the Bible account is right, then the doctrine that he came up from a lower animal life and is animal only, is certainly wrong.

Supposing one of these two opposite positions to be substantially right, which gives the most probable and most satisfactory solution to the seeming mystery of human existence? Why do we exist at all is the question we want answered, and which of the two opposite explanations of our origin points to the answer our best nature craves?

Whenever man came from, however he began his existence upon the earth, we know he is here, and what is he here for? To eat and drink, to live, to fight and die, and what? Did he ever have a home? Is this his home, or does he deceive himself by expecting a better one? At any rate, if he did come up from below, he does not seem much given to looking back upon his birthplace nor his ancestors, with any longing desire to return to them as his future home. Oh no! he is continually looking ahead, climbing mountains to increase the range of his vision, but always towards his front; trying to penetrate the haze which hangs between him and the home of his desire, in the glorious beyond.

If he did come up to where he is now from a lower animal life, and is just finding out now, when more enlightened, that he is only an animal, destitute of all but animal desires, from whence did he ever get the idea, in his lower animal life, that he had within him a spirit, and of a spiritual God, and that spiritual being was his creator. Him, an ape probably, finding out that there was a spiritual God, and that He was his heavenly Father, or even thinking such thoughts? I know of no animal at this time that has any such thoughts or instincts.

Surrounded wholly by decay or death, everything perishable, with no guide but his own dying animal nature, from whence came to him the thought, yes, the thought of immortality? How could he even think of everlasting life? What could put such a thought into his head? Could such a thought come from mere animalism, and of the lower kind too? It must be so, that that is where it came from if man has no guiding spirit within him. But Job says he has. He says in 32: 8:

"But there is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."

And in verse 18 he says: "I am full of matter, the spirit within me constraineth me."

In Proverbs 20: 29 the wise man says:

"The spirit of man is the candle of the LORD, searching all the inward parts."

There is much more scripture bearing out this idea, that man is actuated by a spirit within him, and that spirit is immortal, so that when the body returns to the dust as it was, the spirit returns to God who gave it. But why fill up with quotations; it is the basis of all man's hopes of immortality; no animal instinct ever suggested immortality to man. Animal wisdom provides only for animal nature, but the spirit provides for the spiritual nature.

The immortal spirit, by its movings, its longings, its impellings, wakes up its intuitions, withdraws the curtain which concealed its divinity, and re-produces to mortal man, through its earthly tenement, those divine images which were stamped into it in its far-away spirit home.

If man did come up from below, he didn't come from nothing did he? and if he came from something which previously existed, does his coming from below afford a better and a clearer explanation of that previous existence than is given otherwise? Does it solve the problem of the great first cause of all existence or of the destination of it, or the object of its being? Does it bring a greater light on these mighty subjects than is otherwise attainable? If it does this it proves much for it; if it don't, why should it be preferred? It teaches man to search downward in the scale of animal life to find his ancestors, but the Bible teaches him to look upward for his beginning, saying, "Our Father which art in heaven."

That short sentence grasps mighty thoughts. It seems easy enough to say, to those who have been repeating it all their lives, but whoever said it first had a great mind and a great heart. It is satisfying to man to have a spiritual Father; it gives his human life a greater value; imparts to it a sense of good and high relationship which dignifies it; not in a vain sense, but it makes life worth the living, and inspires to nobler living. It links him to immortality and gratifies his spiritual craving. Therefore man has always been religious, brutal often, but a worshiper, to worship something has been a characteristic of universal man.

All nations of men that have ever lived upon the earth have had some glimmering idea about the separate identity of their body and their spirit, and that their spirit was immortal. Even the most barbarous and isolated tribes of men have preserved, by tradition, what was doubtless formerly, away back in the far distant past, given to their forefathers by revelation from their great spiritual Father in heaven; and although corrupted and animalized, still, by some form of worship, express spiritual relationship.

Because science finds man with so many different forms of head and feature and bodily expression denoting inferiority, it proclaims, therefore, that man came up from brutish inferiority; instead of charging those brutish tokens to where they belong, the brutishness of man to fellowman, and curable by cultivation backward; working upward and backward to the original, nobly perfect model. Science, instead of judging man from his worst, should construct a model of a perfect man—perfect in brain and body—and say to all humanity, "There is your judge, he will tell you where you lack; in what you have too much; in what too little; let him take your measure, and lead you up to righteousness and truth." God made man upright but he has bent himself out of shape, bowing to false Gods, and yielding to false ideas and degrading conditions, which account for the variety of forms and shapes indicative of inferiority, and upon which they base much of their science.

Paul said: "Life and immortality is brought to light by the gospel," which is the truth; but no doubt the gospel of restoration was revealed to man very soon after his expulsion from Eden, and from thence was carried by the colonies of people who spread out over the whole earth. At any rate, however they came by it, they certainly have always had some ideas about the immortality of the soul, and we feel quite as certain that they did not get them from their animal nature. They must have come from a spiritual source, because in their purest, best and most perfect expression, they always run counter to and seek to repress the animal nature; and how could they do that if they came out of it, or was any part of it?

Neither did they get them from their natural mind; the proud intellect and spiritual intuition are rarely in agreement; for the world, by its own wisdom, knows not God, neither can it, because He is spiritually discerned. The Spirit of man hungers after spiritual associations, and because it is immortal, after immortality—and immortality means eternity—and the human intellect cannot search through eternity, it is stopped on the line which divides time from eternity; it don't know, neither can it find out, what there is beyond that line; but the spirit which man has within him, knows intuitively it has been there, it remembers the past—dimly may be for a long time—indistinctively, but still it is a memory of spirit society, and it longs to return to the parental home, and re-associate with the heavenly kin and the spirits of just men made perfect.

The intellect says to the spirit, "Ah! ah! you are on the wrong road," but the spirit answers, "Ah! ah! for yourself, you can reach the divide, there you stop; but I am booked for clear through to my eternal home. No stops on the way, for it is true the inspiration of the Almighty gives me right understanding."

The intellect says, "That is sentimentalism, it cannot be proven to a demonstration of reason, therefore I refuse to go your way."

The spirit says, "You require the proof by logical demonstration before you accept anything as truth, but just look out into infinite space, you see that there are millions of luminous bodies bespangling this interminable space, but of what they are or what they contain, or what they are there for, or their ultimate destiny, how much of it can be proven to a demonstration of human reason? yet they exist. Do you reject all because you cannot prove all? As for me I awake as from a dream. I find myself confined to a mortal body formed from the earth. I feel in my awakening a clouded memory of a spiritual Father and a spiritual home, yet there hangs a heavy mist about it all. I could not prove it true, as yet it is but an intuition; but this intuition grows, becomes clearer, brighter, more conscious of the mission and destiny of the spirit that it was sent into this earthly body to begin to spiritualize it so that they might go back together to immortality, thus enlarging their power and their glory. Then there is a further confirmation, a new awakening, a new life, a new breathing into the new man of a new spirit, the object of whose coming is to lead and guide into all truth. This Holy Spirit of God so quickens the spirit and the body of man that he can say confidently, 'Abba Father,' " see John 20: 22.

But this cannot be logically demonstrated; it is spiritual suggestion, the craving of spiritual hunger, the awakening of spiritual desire, not in one man, or a few men, but in all the peoples of the earth. It is, it must be, a divine quality in man, because it maintains itself in defiance often of his intellect and of his animal nature. It does not, necessarily antagonize the intellect, however, only where the intellect sets up as dictator. The greatest intellects of the world have believed in the immortality of the soul.

Cicero says: "As we know by nature there is a God, so we judge by the consent of all nations that souls remain after death and are immortal."

Socrates says: "I am in good hope that there is something remaining for those that are dead, and that good men will then fare better than bad ones."

But without the inspiration from the Almighty their vision was not very clear, yet their testimony is valuable. Alike in the schools of philosophy of Greece and Rome, and by the American Indian, or by tribes of men in the wilds of darkest Africa, men do, and always have during their existence, had more or less clearness of belief in the immortality of the spirit or soul of human kind. Of course many individuals have doubted, both among the philosophers and others, but the belief in it has always been universal.

But the human spirit, though responding to spiritual affinities, is not sufficient of itself, hampered by the animal cravings of the body, to find its way back to its heavenly Father's home; it needs the inspiration of the Almighty, and to be enlightened by a larger measure of light from the brightness of his presence. Even the spiritual gift of his Holy Spirit to lead and guide into all truth concerning things that were, things that are, and things that will be. This means individual communion with the Father of spirits, for this precious gift is promised to every human creature who hungers and thirsts after righteousness, for our God is no respecter of persons; there is no aristocracy of souls, but the aristocracy of goodness. All forwardness, all work done is tested and valued by goodness. Neither priests, nor kings, nor riches, nor birth, nor anything which men value, counts for advancement, only for their goodness. Every human creature has the blessed privilege of taking his own cup to the crystal fountain and there drinking his fill. To be perfect even as your Father in heaven is perfect, means a perfect individualism, or voluntary goodness.

The true assertion of spiritual authority is not in ruling, but in guiding, in communicating light so that people can learn better how to save themselves, how to rule their own bodies and their own spirits, for the wise man says, "He that can rule his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city." So verily "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."

ZIG-ZAGS NO. 3.

ELDER J. W. GILBERT.

From Salt Lake City our journey to San Francisco was very pleasant, embracing all grades of climate, from the hot summer day of Salt Lake Valley, to the frosty atmosphere of the Sierras; and from the alkali laden winds of the Nevada desert to the fresh, cool breeze of San Francisco Bay. The pine covered slopes of the Sierras were beautiful, and were a relieving contrast to the barren fastnesses of the desert that precedes them in the journey westward; but Donner Lake, in the tops of the mountains, was simply superb and grand; its water, clear as crystal, lay hundreds of feet below us as we sped along the crest of the enclosure that held the waters of the lake. In trying to drink in the picture, we were tantalized by our train plunging through a series of forty miles of the snow-sheds and tunnels, giving us an occasional flash of daylight, followed by midnight darkness.

From the pine crested mountain range, we swooped upon Sacramento, which is only thirty feet above sea level. After pausing in the Union Depot for a short breath, as it were, our train put the level country under us at the rate of one mile post to the minute, by the watch, till we rounded the curve that led us onto the great ferry that crosses an arm of the bay, fifty miles from Frisco. In three minutes our train was loaded on the boat in two sections, and we were afloat. In about fifteen minutes we reached the opposite side, where our train was again put upon the track, and in a "jiffy" we were scorching the border of the bay that led around to Oakland. All the way the track is right at the water's edge, and gives us a splendid view of the bay and its flotilla, which varied all the way from a canoe to the largest steamboats. There were sea-faring ships at anchor, of every description, and from different nations of the earth.

Steamboats and launches darted hither and thither, making a beautiful picture indeed. Our train soon ran down the thirty miles from the ferry to Oakland; and passing, in rapid succession, the numerous little suburb stations, soon reached the long approach that runs out for almost a mile on piles into the bay to the Oakland pier. Here we all change for the steamboat that crosses the bay to San Francisco, a delightful ride of five miles that every one falls in love with at first sight, and never grows tired of afterwards. Sr. G. said if she lived in San Francisco or Oakland, she would squander all her money crossing the bay on steamboats. The bay, with all the towns and cities that are on its shores, together with its shipping and ever cool climate, makes a very interesting and fascinating portion of earth's lovely places.

Landing on the Frisco side, we took the blue car for Sixteenth street, and made straight for the home of the worthy bishop and his amiable wife, Bro. and Sr. Parkin, in whose home there is always room for one more, so long as they are traveling without purse or script, in the service of the Lord.

San Francisco is the same old busy place that it was eight years ago, when the writer first visited it, with its cobbled paved streets and hurrying drays and wagons, sending up their rattling din from morning till night, deafening the thousands of pedestrians as they hurry impeturbably to and fro. The electric cars add their dismal grinding and the clang of their impatient bells to the busy clatter; the pokey cable cars lazily creep along Market street, shoving the crowds of people and swarming vehicles to either side, as they move back and forth, like hand shuttles, weaving their part of the woof of the great industrial fabric. The emporium of trade swarms, as ever, with the fashionable ladies, and lasses petit; the rosy-cheeked maidens and the all-important lads were in evidence on every hand on their way to and from school, with their little hand satchel for carrying their books and lunch, as is the custom here.

One thing struck the observers as rather strange; and that was that all the drays, or nearly all, had, in addition to the driver, a big policeman sitting upon the seat with the driver. On asking what it meant we were informed that it was because of the teamster's strike that had been on for some time, and had become very grievous; so much so, that policemen had to go with each teamster to protect him from the attacks of the strikers, as the drays are now all driven by "scab" teamsters. The "scabs" are pounced upon nearly every night and beaten by the strikers. Several have been killed on both sides, and I was told that something over a thousand cases had been reported from hospitals of the wounded and bruised—the results of the numerous battles and "scraps." It is a pity that law-makers cannot discover and institute a law that will obviate all such trouble as this, and strike a more equitable medium between capital and labor. It seems ridiculous that a man in the 20th century, and especially in the United States of America, should be in danger of his life as he goes about his daily labors, unless he is protected continually by an officer of the law right at his side. It is also a grave condition of affairs on the other hand, when capital and labor are so blind to their common interests as to allow conditions to arise that would either incline or impel to strikes or boycotts. But, we suppose, it will and must be so until all men learn that the best way to provide against want and unhappiness is to do that which will conserve the best interests of each other. May that time soon come, and the causes that will bring it about be much intensified!

Our stay in "Frisco," previous to our embarking for the South Seas, was made very pleasant and enjoyable by the kindness and thoughtful solicitude of Bro.

and Sr. Parkin, Saxe, Davis, Tilton, Keighin, Helwig, Anthony, Sr. Knight and family, and others. We surely appreciate their kindness, and earnestly hope and pray that God will bless and reward them all with peace and prosperity.

At the reunion in Oakland, we, the missionary party en route to Tahiti, were much strengthened and built up by the spiritual testimonies and prayers in the Saints' meetings; by the inspired preaching of the ensign bearers, and the sociable converse of the brethren and sisters from various places of northern California; by the instructive sessions of the Sunday School and the pleasurable and interesting programs of the Religio. All these, to us, before leaving on our long journey, were like a soldier putting on his armor before going to battle. It encouraged us to endure the trials and hardships we are sure to meet with in the Island mission.

At the close of this pleasant reunion we hurried to pack our baggage, for in two days the ship was to sail. This we did, and were about ready when we were informed that the vessel had to lay up for a week to have her machinery repaired. When the day set for sailing had again arrived, we were informed again that it would be delayed still another day. The saying, however, that "the third time charms," proved to be true this time, and we were instructed to get our baggage all down to the pier on the 19th, prior to leaving on the 19th. So Bro. Burton secured an expressman to haul all the luggage of the whole party, which made a pretty big load. We all went down with our tickets to have our trunks checked, then returned in time to enjoy our last evening in America at a very enjoyable prayer meeting with the Saints of the San Francisco branch.

AN AFTERNOON WITH TRACTS.

It takes courage to go from house to house distributing tracts, but we can't well fulfill the command of the Master which says, "And let all those take their journey as I have commanded them, going from house to house, and from village to village, and from city to city," unless we do something like this. The missionaries in Southern California have come to the conclusion that about the only way they can reach the people is to go to them. They will not come to us. So, Bro. Carmichael and Smith are systematically canvassing the town of Santa Ana, while I am at work with some of the brethren in this large metropolis of the southland. This afternoon we canvassed one street going to every house on both sides for twelve blocks with the following results:

At the first house we knocked at the door, and when the lady opened it we informed her of our mission: that we were desirous of securing her attendance at our church services; and further that we were distributing some of our tracts setting forth our church doctrine, and would be pleased to have her take one and read it. "What church is it," she asked. "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." "Oh, I don't want to have anything to do with you." "Well, madam, it is barely possible that you do not understand our position."

"Yes, I do, I understand everything." "Yes, but it is possible that you do not know that there is a difference between us and the Mormons from Utah." "Oh yes, I know everything. I know all about you." "Well, won't you please take this tract and read it, then you may find that you are mistaken." "No sir, I know everything that I care to know, and I do not wish your tract either." The door shut with a bang and we went down the walk feeling that the pathway of the disciple of Christ was not all strewn with roses. Nevertheless, we have the consolation in knowing that the servant is not above his Lord, and in doing this we may claim the promise, "and be filled with joy and gladness and know this that in the day of judgment you shall be judges of that house and condemn them." They cannot meet us at the judgment bar of God and demand leniency because of our negligence.

We found the occupants of the next house away from home but we left a card containing the epitome, praying that God would send his Spirit to accompany the perusal. In fact, in going to each house I think it a good plan to breathe a silent prayer to the Father, asking him to specially bless the people of that house, if they are honestly seeking the truth, and open their hearts to receive the gospel message.

The people in the next three houses were very favorable and their willingness to listen more than compensated for the first rebuff. The lady in the next house was a Catholic and we soon observed that she was bound and shackled; her every word and act indicating that she was under the thumb of the priest.

At the next house we found a lady who was well acquainted with the teachings of the Brigamites but who had never come in contact with our people. We left a tract and elicited a promise from her to attend the services. Will she come? Time will tell, but, if not, she has been invited; she must answer for her disposal of said invitation to God. And so the list lengthened. We succeeded in securing one new Sunday School scholar, and met one man who had known the Latter Day Saints for over fifty years. We made a special entry in his case and we will make it a special point to call again. A Presbyterian lady admitted that she was filled with prejudice. She said, "Our church is away down town, yet I am so full of prejudice against you people that I would not think of sending my little girl to your Sunday School." "Why are you prejudiced," we asked. "Oh, I don't know, but I am." "Do you know the difference between us and the Mormons," we ventured. She hesitated and we took advantage of the hesitation to show her the inconsistency of her position and elicited a half way promise that she would come out and see for herself. We ran across a great many Catholics; half of the people seemed inclined, that way. There were Swedenborgians, Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregationalists, and Liberals.

In summing up the work we were well satisfied with the results. Such work done every day cannot help but count. It does not always need the ministry to do this. The sisters can help in this matter. Would that all of our people were alive to the opportunities in this direction. Our method is to go "two and two;" there are several reasons why this should be done. If the people do not seem very well disposed toward us we leave an epitome of the faith. If they seem anxious to investigate we leave a Voice of Warning or some other good tract in addition, and, taking the name and the number, we call again after a week or so. We propose to follow this up as opportunity affords and wisdom directs. If we only succeed in interesting one person a day we will have done a good work.

The Lord said through Joseph the Seer; "Wherefore confound your enemies; call upon them to meet you, both in public and in private; and inasmuch as ye are faithful, their shame shall be made manifest; Wherefore let them bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord. Verily, thus saith the Lord unto you, there is no weapon that is formed against you that shall prosper, and if any man lift up his voice against you he shall be confounded in mine own due time; wherefore, keep my commandments: they are true and faithful."—D. & C. 72: 2.

Again, how pointed is this command:

"Behold, I send you out to testify and warn the people, and it becometh every man who hath been warned to warn his neighbor; therefore they are left without excuse, and their sins are upon their own heads."

The antithesis of this is: if we fail to warn our neighbor then his sins, in a measure, will be on our heads. We cannot afford to have this occur. Brethren and sisters, all over the church, have you warned your neighbor? If not, why not?

If every Latter Day Saint in the large cities would see that the people in their particular block were duly warned, invited to attend the meetings and given such reading matter as they would accept, what an impetus would be given to the missionary arm of church work. Try it brethren. There is so much good literature in the church now; so many sermonettes, leaflets, tracts and pamphlets, that we have something to reach nearly every case.

There is no need for a direct command for each and every one to lend their assistance to circulate church literature. The Lord has said:

"Verily, I say, men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will and bring to pass much righteousness; for there is power in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good, they shall in nowise lose their reward. But he that doeth not anything until he is commanded, and receiveth a commandment with doubtful heart, and keepeth it with slothfulness, the same is damned."

There is another thing that we seem to lose sight of. In many places the local priesthood are becoming more and more inactive. We are commencing to take it as a matter of fact; the Saints are looking for the general ministry to do all of the preaching, and the local ministry are gradually slipping out of the harness. Other things figure in this also. The increased demands on the man who has to work for a living engrosses his attention oftentimes to the exclusion of everything else. But we should not forget that when a man is ordained to the priesthood in this church it cannot be thrown off with impunity. Too often men holding the priesthood cumber themselves unnecessarily in order to acquire more of this world's goods. It is proper and legitimate for men to be frugal and industrious. Our brethren are to be commended when their business or manual toil brings enough for the maintenance of the family and the fulfilling of the financial law in tithes and free will offerings, but farther than this they should not go.

What is the use of striving for filthy lucre when souls are hanging in the balance? If we have enough to eat and wear, take God at his word and let Him care for the future, for He has said:

"Wherefore seek not the things of this world; but seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought for the morrow; for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day shall be the evil thereof."—Matt. 6: 33, 39.

Let us contribute our mite in rolling on this grand work. I am assured that many of us lose golden opportunities because we think that tomorrow, or next month, or next year, we are going to do some great thing for the Lord. There is no greater delusion than this. We cannot, we will not do anything more for the church than the present hour affords, and, if we do any great thing, it will be because that each day we have not failed in the little things. No really great achievements have been gained at a single bound. Sometimes it may seem so to us, but we fail to note the many efforts of which this is but the consummation. The steps leading up to these glorious achievements have been equally important and sometimes greater as character tests than the crowning act, but we have failed to notice them at all.

Now is the time for action. We love the memory of Bro. Wight and a host of other immortals simply because their motto was, "The present hour is the decisive hour." Thank God for the heritage they have left behind.

God is blessing the Saints of Southern California. We had an unusually good conference, the Spirit of the Lord giving comfort and cheer. There is an excellent feeling all over the district. There is a general desire to work all along the line. True, we have a number who are spiritually dead; we do not count them. As district president I hope to visit the house of every member in the district, and, if possible, talk and pray with them. We look for a general spiritual revival. May God bless all his people and enable us to occupy higher grounds.

Yours ever in the warfare,

Meditations.

I have thought that the evidences concerning the millennium of peace should be encouragement to all who desire to live in that blissful age that is to continue for a thousand years, to try and live for it. We cannot comprehend much about the eternal existence which follows this period, but what is in sacred writ declared about the reign of peace we can understand somewhat. All will then see and know the Lord, for He will be the king of all the earth; the curse that came by reason of the fall being removed and Satan being bound so as to have no power to tempt and entice to sin; they will then build houses, plant gardens and vineyards, and nothing be in vain; nothing to molest or make afraid. It seems that then the whole earth will be as was the garden of Eden and as a land flowing with milk and honey for plenty, purity and deliciousness; and instead, as now, the nations studying war, they will then delight to study and pursue the arts of industry, peace, happiness and contentment and delight to keep the perfect law of the Lord; respect and help one another and be prepared for eternal joys to come. Let us all try and so live that we may be there too.

A LAMONIAN.

The November Delineator.

A reasonable atmosphere rises from the various useful and valuable features of the November Delineator. The styles shown are those for early winter; the dress-making article tells about the making of coats; the fancy needlework article bears upon Thanksgiving and Christmas gifts; the crocheting articles are those of a winter character; the gardening article deals with the pruning and protection of rose trees throughout winter. Every woman who wishes to get splendid value for her expenditure should buy The Delineator for itself. It, in turn, will help her to economize in household matters at every point.

"Faithful Creeds," by Elder R. C. Evans, 20 cents each.

"Three Bibles Compared," by Elder R. Etzenhouser, 25 cents each.

The Frightened Friar of Pisa.

Edith King Swain, who has ascended more famous heights than any other woman in the world, perhaps, tells a most amusing incident in an article about "Some Famous Ascents I Have Made," in The Ladies Home Journal for November. She was far up in the famous Leaning Tower at Pisa, and bending over a balcony she let fall a toy torpedo, to test her ability to estimate the exact height of the structure by Galileo's method.

"Choosing a time when I was alone on the tower," she writes, "and no one was in sight below, I dropped the torpedo, watch in hand. At this instant a friar came hurrying around a corner, and, by direct chance, his shaven crown passed directly below me just in time to be struck by the falling torpedo, which exploded with appalling effect. I do not know what the poor man thought—perhaps that it was the crack of doom. He was fearfully upset and so was I. The torpedo was too small to do more than frighten him, but his amazement on looking up and seeing me peering down at him in open mouthed horror, like a gargoyle come to life, was excruciatingly ludicrous. I forgot to time the report."

A Daughter's Reading.

For those mothers who are anxious that their girls should read wisely rather than widely, there is a valuable article in the November number of The Delineator describing "The Book Life of a Girl." It shows how, with a little assistance, her book reading can be so manipulated that she will be broadened out by her reading without the necessity of later being obliged to unlearn or forget pernicious books that may only be pernicious by having been read in advance of the time when she could comprehend their deeper and fuller meaning.

"INCURABLE" HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

FRANKLIN MILLS, M. D., LL. B., W.M. SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS SPECIALLY PRESCRIBED TREATMENT FREE TO AFFLICTED READERS.

To demonstrate the unusual curative powers of his New Special Treatment for diseased hearts, stomach and bowels, Dr. Miles will send free to any afflicted person, $2.50 worth of his new treatment. It is the result of twenty-five years of careful study, extensive research, and remarkable experience in treating thousands of heart, stomach and nervous diseases, which so often complicate each case. So certain are the results of his New Treatment that he does not hesitate to give all patients a trial free.

Physicians have such confidence in their skill. Few physicians so thoroughly deserve the confidence of their patients, as no false inducements are ever held out. The Doctor's private practice is so extensive as to require the aid of forty associates. His offices are always open to visitors. Col. N. G. Parker, Ex-Treasurer of South Carolina, says: "I believe Dr. Miles to be an attendant for diseased hearts, stomach and bowels, of the best qualities of head and heart." The late Prof. J. S. Jewell, M. D., editor of the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, of Chicago, writes: "By all means publish your surprising results."

Thousands of "Incurable cases" cured. Mrs. Frank Smith, of Chicago, was cured of heart trouble after twelve years' treatment. Hon. C. M. Book, banker, Fairbairn, Minn. writes: "I had broken completely down, my head, heart, stomach and nerves had troubled me greatly for years. Forged I would never recover, but Dr. Miles' Special Treatment of Chicago cured me after six eminent physicians of Chicago and elsewhere had completely failed." Mrs. P. Constantine of Boston, Ill., says: "Seventy years ago when I sent to Dr. Miles for treatment, three physicians said I could not live two weeks. I could not walk or sit up, nor eat more than 1,000 references to, and testimonials from Hislop's Clearness Balm, Farmer's Kidney Pills, and Wills' Kidney Pills, will be sent free. These include many who have been cured after from five to thirty physicians had pronounced them incurable." Address Dr. Franklin Mills, 201 to 208 State St., Chicago, for free treatment. Please mention this paper.

OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS. DAUGHTERS OF ZION

MRS. H. B. CURTIS, Editor.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

Editor's Address, 1210 West Short St., Independence, Mo.

I have gone into homes, and so have we all, where every attempt at beautifying was sacrificed to the children. For instance, there could be nothing too good for them to play with, bric-a-brac must be set up out of reach or done away with entirely "until the children were grown," and in lieu thereof their playthings were allowed everywhere about the house, and if a guest happened in, a general clearance had to be made. What can be expected of such children when they do grow up? Not having their artistic natures cultivated, they are apt to be unappreciative of the refinements of life, and it does not take a child long to realize that their home is not like other homes, and as they do not love it any more for this knowledge your sacrifice is in vain.

The home and family is a commonwealth wherein the rights of all should be respected. It is not necessary that we starve the finer nature that another be taught lawlessness and a disregard for proper conduct. Children are quite as happy, and certainly more lovable, if made to be well behaved. God realizes the danger of license and does not grant it to us; why then should we inculcate it into our children? There is both sin and danger in appropriating such responsibilities, especially unbefitting to Latter Day Saint parenthood.

Give our children the best of everything that we legitimately can, with due regard for the rights of all, and their own ultimate good. If we want them to behave well in a parlor, accustom them to it; do we desire that they appreciate the beautiful, surround them with it in so far as we are able; they will not learn the best of table manners if we set them down to the old est crockery in the house when we have better, for fear they will destroy that "better." Teach them not to destroy it. They will thank you some time. Don't go on craving what you might have, all through the best part of your life, that your children may grow up with false ideas of happiness. License is not liberty, neither does it conduce to happiness, and it would be well if every parent realized that while training their little ones. Allow children the fullest, freest liberty to romp and caper to their heart's content out of doors, but indoors, where others have rights as well as themselves, they should be taught due respect for all, and it is not teaching them this respect when the house has to be kept in an uproar or litter to please or pacify them.

When the question was asked at our local "Whether boys are harder to manage than girls?" three-fourths of the sisters present answered yes. But nearly all agreed that it was not because boys are worse at heart than girls, but because of the different treatment they received from their earliest infancy.

Boys are allowed more liberties than girls, making them harder to restrain. We would expect to be criticised if we allowed our girls to play on the streets; but our boys are often allowed to do so, even when they are very small, without let or hindrance. It is so much easier to keep girls regularly employed than boys; so the boy runs off to play while the girl helps her mother, and if they are not employed they soon become dissatisfied and lazy.

Girls are more noticed and petted than boys, and have more favors in the way of accomplishments, dress, etc., causing the boy to feel that it does not matter how he looks or acts, he is of no consequence anyway. Again, he may be petted because he is a boy, and so become overbearing and boorish. When mothers see the evil tendencies arising from these oversights, arising out in her boy, she is too ready to admit that she has a hard case on her hands, and give up the struggle. Don't do it mothers. Then is the time to renew your diligence, and go the Lord often in prayer.

We need to teach our boys to be self reliant, but they need not run on the streets to learn that.

One mother said, that if she had to raise her children over again, she would spend her time in teaching them to do for themselves rather than in doing for them.

In every one's life there comes a waking-up time, and it's well for them if it comes at the beginning and not at the end, when it is too late to mend the past. These times are private revivals and do more good than any public ones.—September Ladies' Home Journal.

The best and truest help we can give to others is not mere present gratification, but strength, courage and hope, that they may rise into nobler, worthier life.

A CHANGE OF A LIFETIME.

After two years careful study of the mineral formation of Baxter County, Arkansas, Elder Joseph Ward organized the White River Mining Co. Interprising some of the best citizens of the County, and they have located 3,580 acres of the best mineral land there. Lack of transportation has retarded the development of this section, but the White River R. R. is now building and when completed will run through some of this land.

In order to develop this property we will sell 1,000 shares in blocks of 5 shares or more at 20c on the dollar. Shares are $25.00 par value each and are fully paid up and non-assessable. This offer only holds good until Jan. 1, 1902.

Now is the time to make a small investment which will in the near future bring large returns, for as soon as we begin shipping ore this stock will be worth 100 cents on the dollar.

A SPECIAL APPEAL

To the Saints Interested in Scotland, Wales and Scandinavia, Greeting:— I herewith appeal to you once more on behalf of the work in these lands. The following Welsh brethren have responded liberally: Brn. Wm. Bowen $25.00; Wm. and David Lewis each $10.00; Henry Griffiths of Australia $5.00; Bro. Backer near New Philadelphia, Ohio, $5.00; but we have not received a penny from any of the Scotch or Scandinavian brethren. The following extract from a letter received from Bro. P. Muecus will show the needs of the work in Scandinavia:

"For the last four Sundays I have preached on the street where I have had an average attendance of 300, and the best of attention although the weather has been rather cool. I had splendid liberty and held the audience for nearly two hours each time. Last Sunday evening I preached in a rented hall and had 60 out. It is getting too cold to hold outdoor meetings any longer, so it is necessary to rent some halls this winter. The Utah people are strong here, having about forty missionaries here, and in Christiania about 800 members."

From the above it will be seen what the prospects are in that land for spreading the work. There are but few Saints in all Scandinavia and they are poor. The question is, how can these brethren prosecute the work there through the fall and coming winter when they have not the means to rent halls?

Now, it seems to me that if all the Scandinavian Saints will make a sacrifice and send a little that halls can be rented and Bro. Enge and Muecus will be kept preaching every night through the winter. Utah Mormons are putting forth a special effort in this European mission, and the members in Utah supply them with means to enable them to rent halls in almost every town and a home to live in. Is it possible that the members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are not as interested as these mistaken devotees of an apostate church? Think of them having 800 members in Christiania alone, and 40 missionaries in Norway, and the Reorganization but 2 for all Scandinavia and not one branch. Now, if you Scandinavian Saints in the States will supply means to furnish halls, we venture to assure you that there will be some branches established in that country in another year or two; hence we hope when you read this, you will respond immediately.

To the Scottish brethren of America and Canada:—We wish to call your attention to the condition of the work in Scotland. We have two missionaries assigned to this field. Bro. Rushton has created a great interest in Glasgow, Hamilton and Carlisle by preaching on the streets. I have never seen better interest anywhere than is to be found here; but the weather now is cold and wet so that street preaching is almost impossible, and unless halls can be procured the efforts put forth will be in vain, and it would be a pity to let the interest die out as a number are on the verge of entering into the church.

There are only twelve members in all of Scotland and they are doing all they can. In Carlisle people not in the church have been subscribing for a hall; but we cannot get more than half that is needed to defray expenses; but surely when strangers are willing to help, the Saints should not be backward in doing their share. We want to hire a hall in Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Hamilton and Carlisle, and unless help can be procured the missionaries will have to rest till spring. The Utah Mormons have 24 missionaries and a large number of members in many of the big centres and are creating quite a stir. Here is an opportunity for all of the Scottish Saints to manifest their love and interest in their native land; to sacrifice a little of their means to get the gospel before their countrymen. Now, who will be the first to respond? Some of the Scotch brethren who have been here on a visit have promised to help the work here, but their promise has not materialized yet.

This appeal is to all the Saints of whatever nationality who desire to help on the good work in this mission. Remember this is the day of sacrifice and this gospel must be preached in ALL the world for a witness ere Christ comes. We sincerely hope the Saints will not close their eyes to this appeal. All money received will be accredited and a report of expenditures given through the church publications.

Please address all communications to me at No. 125 Stockport Road, Ardwick, Manchester, England, and the money will be distributed to the places mentioned by the givers. The Secretary of the mission, W. R. Armstrong, will make a record of all cash received and will publish the same in due time.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS, President of European Mission. Northwest Kansas District.

Dear Saints:—We of the Northwest Kansas district, are called upon to bear our part of the burden of liquidating the Graceland College debt. I have conferred with the Bishop's agent, Bro. Arthur Smith, and he is heartily in accord with the movement. He has appointed a man in his part of the district to solicit for Graceland and I appeal to all scattered members to cast in your mite that we may all bear the burden together in executing God's will. We as Latter Day Saints (the church) do as God intends, viz., ask Him when we are in doubt. A few years ago we were discussing the Sabbath question, the Lord soon decided it for us. (Doc. & Cov. 119: 7). Again we were at one time undecided about the time of administering the sacrament. We acted like Saints and asked God. What about it? He decided the matter. (Doc. & Cov. 119: 5). We were also troubled about the musical instruments being used in the congregations of the Saints; again the Lord settled the question. (Doc. & Cov. 110: 6). As also organization of quorums, rules for governing branches and districts; and every question arising in the church where there is need of light the Lord gives it at the proper time; thus we are "the light of the world."

The body ordered the college built and as the law provides for majority rule, all of the districts were, no doubt, represented by delegates, or nearly all; when the decision was made to build it. Now honor said, "pay the debt," yet some were not satisfied about it; and acting like Saints we asked the Lord about it. The answer was, "the college debt should be paid," which is also in harmony with the law. No Saint therefore need be troubled about it, but as a test we can say, "Who is on the Lord's side? and it will be demonstrated by our acts in this time of need.

As you have the means we are as willing to receive $500 as 5 cents, and as our district fund is known as the "Every Name Graceland Fund," we hope to have every member's name enrolled in a few days with a nice donation. All branch presidents please appoint a committee to solicit your members and have them remember the name and act accordingly.

Those who may be averse, please appeal to district authorities and missionaries before you go to the columns of papers with your grievances. Your name with the amount donated will be published in the Bishop's report and that will answer as a receipt for your money.

Send money to Arthur Smith, Clay Center, Kansas, R. F. D. No. 1; or to me, Fanning, Doniphan Co., Kansas. Saints of the district, you have done nobly in donating for the tent. The tent is paid for, and I find but two or three who are opposed to the college. Brethren, you consider and be convinced that unity may prevail throughout the district.

Laboring together with you for unity in the great work and for Zion's progress, I am your brother,

L. G. GURWELL, Edmund, Kas., Oct. 20.

THEY ARE AMENABLE.

The Saints have been, from the beginning of their acceptance of the gospel of Jesus Christ—the everlasting gospel—until the present, subject to persecution by their enemies. Nothing seems to be beneath the dignity of their opposers if the use of it can in any wise be made to bring discredit upon the individual, to say nothing of his faith. In fact it has been all along an attack of personalities, of the most bitter and unreasoning character, chiefly because their faith cannot be assailed without throwing discredit upon the doctrine of Jesus and his apostles, and that could not be successfully done without injury to that part of the Savior's teachings they had selected out and inculcated in their creed and belief. So that it has been, and still is, as a rule, a warfare upon the character of the Saints, precisely as it was in the Savior's day. "Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners," a man of low associations. "He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?" "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" etc. Prior to 1844 the Saints were accused of all kinds of crimes against the law, the falsity of which was established in the fact that convictions by the law did not follow, as they surely would have done very quickly had there been any foundation to the charges; but it served to create prejudice often, so that the preaching of the gospel of Christ was hindered, and that was one of the ends sought.

After the death of the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844, and the subsequent usurpation of power and place by Brigham Young and his associates, when in 1852 the abhorrent doctrines of polygamy, blood atonement, Adam-God, obey counsel, etc., were advocated by the people of the Salt Lake valley, a new weapon was put into the hands of the enemies of truth which they were not slow to use, and which has ever since been made use of to blind the eyes of the truth seeker, and prejudice his mind against even an investigation of the claims of those who had maintained their integrity and kept the faith of the gospel in its purity as originally delivered from the heavens through Joseph Smith the Seer. The effort has been persistently made to fasten upon Joseph Smith the responsibility for the revelation on plural marriage as found in the Utah book of Doctrine and Covenants, notwithstanding the repeated challenges of the Reorganized Church for reliable evidence on this point, and their unchanging denial of the allegation. But to fasten it upon the devil as its author, and Brigham Young as the medium of communication, where it properly belongs, would not serve the purpose of the adversary; and he has always done his utmost to prevent such a disposition of the matter. It is a truth, and he does not love the truth—not overly well.

The late Geo. Q. Cannon, who for a number of years was one of the First Presidency in the Utah church, in a sermon delivered June 11, 1871, and reported in the Journal of Discourses of that church, Vol. 14, pp. 165-6, stated:

A prevalent idea has been that this prejudice against us owes its origin and continuance to our belief in a plurality of wives. * * * Joseph and Hyrum Smith were slain in Carthage Jail, and hundreds of persons were persecuted to death previous to the church having any knowledge of this doctrine.

Being interviewed by United States Senator Trumbull, in 1869, Brigham Young said:

As to our institutions, we know we are right, and polygamy, which you object to, WAS NOT ORIGINALLY A PART OF OUR SYSTEM, but was adopted by us as a necessity, AFTER WE CAME HERE.—Alta California.

The courts have also taken this view of the question after a very thorough and exhaustive examination of evidences presented for and against the connection of Joseph Smith with the alleged revelation on polygamy. The Hon. John F. Phillips, Judge of the United States Circuit Court for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, handed down a decision March 16, 1894, in which he stated:

In view of the contention of the Salt Lake party that polygamy obtained at Nauvoo as early as 1841, it must be a little embarrassing to President Woodruff of that organization when he is confronted, as he was in the evidence in this case, with a published card in the church organ at Nauvoo, in October, 1843, certifying that he knew of no other rule or system of marriage than the one published in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants [Sec. 111], and that the secret wife system charged against the church, was a creature of invention by one Dr. Bennett, and that they knew of no such society. That certificate was signed by the leading members of the church, including John Taylor, the former president of the Utah church. And a similar certificate was published by the Ladies' Relief Society of the same place, signed by Emma Smith, the wife of Joseph Smith, and Phoebe Woodruff, wife of the present President Woodruff. No such marriage ever occurred under the rules of the church, and no offspring came from the imputed illicit intercourse, although Joseph Smith was in the full vigor of young manhood, and his wife, Emma, was giving birth to healthy children in regular order at the time of Joseph's death. But if it were conceded that Joseph Smith and Hyrum, his brother, did secretly practice concubinage, is the church to be charged with those liaisons, and the doctrine of polygamy to be predicated thereon of the church? If so, I suspect the doctrine of polygamy might be imputed to many of the Gentile churches. Certainly it was never promulgated, taught, nor recognized as a doctrine of the church prior to the assumption of Brigham Young.—[Decision pp. 25, 26. [Emphasis ours.—Ed.]

In this carefully weighed decision it is shown that even the president of the Utah church acknowledged over his own signature as early as 1843 that no such doctrine was taught by the church. In addition to his signature, other prominent officials of the church at that time testified over their signatures to the same fact, as did Emma, the only wife Joseph Smith ever had, on a separate statement, accompanied by the signatures of many prominent ladies of the church, one of whom was the wife of Wilford Woodruff, president of the Utah church at the time this decision was rendered. To every fair minded individual this should be conclusive evidence that Brigham Young is alone responsible for the introduction of the blasphemous article called by the Utah church "Revelation on the Eternity of the Marriage Covenant including Plurality of Wives" (Sec. 132, Utah Ed. D. & C.), and the United States Court having rendered such decision every law abiding citizen should acquiesce therein, and forever free the memory of Joseph Smith from so unrighteous an imputation. We are confident that all fair minded persons will thus judge.

But there are demagogues and bigots in religion as well as politics, and these, we presume, will continue to make use of the old accusations, regardless of any testimony whatever, that may be offered to the contrary. The truth does not answer their purpose to inflame the passions of men, arouse prejudice and they would have no objection if these led to violence; it would only be repeated history. But there is a way to reach such characters, and perhaps some day they may be confronted with an action that will bring consternation and chagrin to them. They may not realize it, but it is a fact, that every one who publicly makes such a defamatory assertion derogatory to the character and morals of an individual, in the face of the fact that the courts of the land have declared the individual innocent of such charge, ARE LAYING THEMSELVES LIABLE TO ACTION FOR LIBEL, and this is precisely what some of these unprincipled lecturers and so-called ministers of the gospel should be made to face to teach them a much needed lesson, and keep innocent people from being deceived and prejudiced to their own hurt.

One of the elders of the Reorganized church recently held a debate in the state of Missouri, in which, while presenting the evidences of the Scripture regarding the organic construction of the church of Jesus Christ, was answered by his opponent with slanderous and untruthful assertions regarding the character of Joseph Smith, from such works as Beadle, Howe, et al., no attempt being made to refute a scriptural argument from a scriptural basis. No attention was paid by the elder to this unchristian and untenable procedure, except to refer to it as being unworthy of reply, until nearly the close of the proposition, which the elder was then affirming, when, taking the decision of Judge Phillips, from which we have quoted above, and reading the several extracts referring to this phase of the question, he turned upon his opponent and clearly pointed out to him the fact that he was placing himself right in the same class as the Utah Mormons, in trying to fasten this crime on Joseph Smith, and with all other disloyal and lawbreaking individuals in manifesting a contempt for the decisions of the United States Courts. This effectively answered all the slanderous references made and at the close of the debate an attorney volunteered the information that the minister making those statements rendered himself liable to action and imprisonment for libel.

We are of the opinion that some one ought to be made an example of in persisting in making such unfounded and infamous statements. This charge, more than any other, is used against the work of our elders; get it out of the way, make men realize that they are invoking the law against them in uttering incendiary and defamatory language against innocent men, and they will be more careful to see that their statements are truthful before making them; and our ministry will then be left more at liberty to handle the scriptural arguments, not having to stop to clear away a lot of useless rubbish thrown in the way by a set of godless individuals, full of prejudice and the spirit of the evil one. We do not believe there is any glory or commendation to be received by the Saints in enduring persecutions and hindrances which it is possible for them to counteract and stop by due process of any lawful means placed within their reach. There is enough to endure from sources that laws cannot reach. But of course any action of this character should be taken only under the direction of the chief authorities of the church to make it effective. Let all carefully consider this proposition.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Thursday, November 28th, has been appointed by the President of the United States a day of Thanksgiving, at which time all the people are asked to repair to their respective places of worship and render thanks to God for the blessings of the year. All loyal, law-abiding citizens of the United States will respect this admonition so far as their circumstances will permit, and it is right they should do so. All men should with willing and grateful minds join in a service of thanksgiving for blessings upon the nation, the commonwealth and the individual. If there have been trials and disappointments, there have been also many things for which our souls should go out in praise to God. Let all appreciate the good that has come to us and strive to merit in faithfulness the continued favor of our heavenly Father.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Sr. Henry Etzenhouser died Friday afternoon of last week about 20 minutes before two o'clock from a complication of diseases. She was an earnest faithful worker in the church being so long as her strength permitted an active member of the "Willing Helpers" society of this branch and was always considerate of the welfare of others. Her departure falls heavily upon her aged husband who is left alone, and much sympathy is felt for him in his sorrow. The funeral took place at 11 a. m. from the church, Pres. G. H. Hulmes preaching the sermon.

The genial Bro. Fred A. Smith was in the city a short time Saturday last en route to his mission, St. Louis, Missouri. We tried to get him in the net for a sermon for Sunday night, but it would not hold. He had a through ticket which required him to continue his journey Saturday night. He visited with his sister, Sr. W. A. Kennedy, and with his cousin, Sr. A. McCallum. We hope to have the net strong enough to hold him the next time he comes.

Sr. James McKiernan, of Iowa, is visiting Sr. P. Peterson, her sister.

Bro. Smart was quite low this week, but is resting easier again. Bro. C. J. Clark is about the same as when last noted.

Bro. O. B. Thomas will probably leave for his mission field Saturday.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn left for his mission in Wisconsin, Wednesday.

Bishop and Sr. G. H. Hilliard returned Tuesday morning from their trip to Illinois. Bro. Hilliard has just passed his 63d birthday, but no one would judge him to be much over 50. He is hale and hearty, and, from appearances, bids fair to live pretty close to the 100 mark. We hope he will, and continue as active in the work as he is at present.

We are having some delightful weather; Wednesday was warm enough to discard wraps in the sunshine part of the day. It was somewhat blustery the early part of the week, but cleared later.

At the church Sunday morning Pres. Hulmes preached the funeral sermon of our late Sr. Henry Etzenhouser. It was a comforting discourse; at its conclusion the casket was borne to the city cemetery, and peacefully and fittingly laid in the tomb. At night Bro. O. B. Thomas was the speaker, giving us an interesting and educational discourse. The afternoon prayer service was well attended, and was of much interest.

The Metropolitan Railway Company are still dragging wearily along with the paving of the street between the rails of their track. The have reached Union street and a little past, with a couple of gaps between, and if they keep on at the same rate, and the weather continues favorable, they may possibly get to the Pacific bridge by January. Meanwhile the street is partially blocked, and the already narrow space between curb and rail, is taken up with debris, to the discomfort and inconvenience of the traveler. It is a time of trial to one's patience. The sidewalk people, Bro. J. E. Lewis and J. A. Kennedy, are pushing things at as lively a rate as they can, and a ten days or two weeks continuance of good weather will put them far on toward the end of their work.

A very pleasant entertainment was that given by the local and Kansas City Religians, Monday evening at the home of Bro. and Sr. E. A. Elliott. The dialogues, recitations and solos, vocal and instrumental, were all enjoyed. Mr. Tycho Gerdine, of Kansas City, received a hearty encore on his mandolin solo, and Sr. M. Eunice Winn was twice called back for recitations. The trombone solo by Bro. John A. Robinson, Jr., was heartily applauded, as, in fact, were all the numbers. The proceeds for the piano fund was about $21.00.

Bishop May and Pres. Hulmes will be ready to receive visitors at their new office in the ENSIGN building about tomorrow, Friday.

Bro. A. H. Parsons returned last week from his debate with Elder Denton Collins, of the Christian (Campbellite) church, at Matthewson, Oklahoma, feeling satisfied with his part in the conflict. A correspondent of the Oklarche Times, of November 1st, has this to say: "The debate at Matthewson between Elder Collins, of the Christian church and Elder Parsons, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was very interesting. After an investigation among the unbiased people, who have watched the debate very closely, and who should be competent judges, we find that Elder Parsons is given the victory, which is deserved."

LAMONI, IOWA.

For some reason, we suppose some irregularity of the mail, we did not appear in the last weeks issue, though we forwarded copy at the usual time. [Received too late.—Ed.]

The attendance at Religio last Friday evening was quite gratifying, there being 132 present. Two new classes were organized, making in all nine classes at present. Judging from the attendance and interest manifested, we are inclined to the thought that our Religio is at last gaining the popularity that it justly deserves.

The Enterpean Ladies' Quartette was welcomed on Saturday evening by a large and apparently appreciative audience. If the other numbers of the course do as well we will have no serious cause for complaint.

Again death has visited our community. On Friday morning, the 8th inst, Bro. Abraham Stagers passed away at the age of 69 years, after a long illness. Funeral services were held Saturday morning from the church. Sermon by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

On Sunday morning, the 10th, Sr. Sarah, wife of Bro. John Scott, was taken suddenly with hemorrhage of the brain, and passed away in a few minutes. She was 61 years of age. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon. President Joseph Smith preached the sermon, and was assisted by Elders H. A. Stebbins and R. M. Elvin.

On this, Tuesday morning, as we write, we learn of the death of Bro. Samuel S. Ackersley, an aged veteran of the cause. Several months ago he received a partial stroke of paralysis, and has been gradually growing weaker until this morning his release came. He was 74 years of age, and had been a member of the Reorganization 36 years. We have not yet learned of the funeral arrangements.

Elder C. J. Peat and Priest J. F. Anderson were the speakers at Surprise school-house on Sunday, and Bishop Wm. Anderson at Pleasanton.

President John Smith occupied the morning hour and Elder Heman C. Smith the evening, at Lamoni.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

First Chicago Branch, 8 So. Wood St. Sunday School at 1:30, preaching at 3 and 7:45 p. m.; Central Branch, 241 Cottage Grove Ave., Sunday School at 9:30 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman, preaching at 10:30 a. m., followed by Sunday School, preaching at 7:30 p. m.; Graves' Mission, 2458 State St.

The rite of baptism was administered by Bro. Good to Miss Amy Johnson, Sunday at 11 a. m.

Bro. Strange ministered the word at West Pullman; Bro. Pitt and Sheehy at the Central branch. The afternoon on the South Side, was a sacramental service; Bro. Hayes, of Peoria, was in attendance and assisted. The meeting was a quiet, thoughtful hour. Sr. Johnson was confirmed by Bro. Good and McCallum.

Bro. McCallum reports as being kept busy several nights a week talking on gospel topics to interested parties at South Chicago.

A recent visit to the Holiness Convention now in session here, revealed a strange sight. To see several hundred people carried away, in blind zeal, some talking, others praying, yelling, waving their hands, händkerchiefs, some down on all fours, kicking their heels in the air all at the same time. No doubt they are honest, and are thereby to be pitied because they are so unfortunate in being so misled. We ought to feel thankful that our religious impulses have not been so warped.

The Willing Workers Society of the West Side branch are to give a New England supper next Thursday evening, at the hall, No 8 S. Wood street, and an invitation is hereby extended to the ENSIGN staff, only 25 cents a piece. The "devil" of the office tree.

The Religio is to have a debate next week, the subject, "Is water baptism essential to salvation." Bro. Mead and Sr. Mamie Pitt to affirm, while Bro. James Kier and F. M. Sheehy are to deny. Ramor has it that "James" has his battle ax all burnished.

Sr. E. J. Lang has entered upon a new and novel enterprise of making for the market fresh soup of various kinds put up in glass bottles. Her son Lloyd delivers with a new rig all painted and fitted up for the purpose.

Bro. Fuller starts this week for his field, Detroit.

Will you announce that the permanent address of F. M. Sheehy, and K. S. Nayaka, is 1242 Mourre St.

We were favored with a visit from Bro. Geo. Hilliard yesterday; preached twice for us, then on towards home, Independence.

Bro. F. A. Smith put in an appearance yesterday, assisted Bro. Hilliard morning hour, then out to Cheltenham for evening session. Large attendance at both services, especially so in the evening. Bro. Archibald assisted at evening service, when our choir favored us with a fine anthem. Bro. Hilliard and Smith presided over the social service.

A good number of strangers and visitors. Sr. Braidwood, of Chicago, has been attending services lately, she is here on a visit to her son and wife. Sr. Smith and family have located here; Sr. Smith comes from Minneapolis.

The infant daughter of Bro. and Sr. Billinsky was blessed under the hands of Bro. F. A. Smith and G. H. Hilliard, yesterday, 11 o'clock.

Bro. A. C. Richards and wife, of Webb City, have located here, and are going to be church attendants after this. Sr. Holton has also located at St. Louis. All have promised to be church goers, and are pleased with our meeting place.

Friday evening's Religio was presided over by Sr. Florence Burgess, who, as always, acquitted herself creditably, and assisted in making the meeting "go."

Bro. T. J. Elliott and Bro. G. F. Barracough were in charge of services at Caseyville, on the 8d. Sunday School, prayer service and preaching were the events of the day.

Thanksgiving preparations are now the order; the Mite society (and their friends) are busy.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at "Druid's Temple," Cor. 14th and Folsom Sts. Sunday School 9:45 a. m.; preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sacrament meeting on first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

Sunday, October 27th, we had preaching at 11 a. m. by J. A. Anthony, and at 7:30 p. m. by Bishop C. A. Parkin. There was a good attendance at both the services.

J. A. Saxe went to Oakland and preached in our church there.

There was a full house at the prayer meeting Wednesday evening and a very pleasant time was had; nearly all took part in the services.

The Sisters Prayer Union held its regular session on Thursday afternoon and the time was profitably spent.

The interest in the Religio still continues, as the attendance each Friday evening shows. We are becoming better instructed in Book of Mormon affairs and are preparing for more usefulness.

Last Sunday we had a fine discourse at 11 a. m. by Fred B. Blair; a good congregation greeting him. A number of visitors were present, among them we noticed Sr. F. B. Blair and also Sr. Blair from Sacramento, and Sr. Billups from Modoc county.

At 12:15 we held our sacrament and prayer meeting. There were eight hymns sung, nine testimonies given and six prayers offered. It was a very peaceful and pleasant meeting.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

BEAVER, MO., Oct. 31.

Editor Ensign.—At this writing I am working very hard at improving our home, and making every possible preparation to go into the active ministry again, although not altogether idle on this line as the calls are many, and we have our regular services and Sunday School here. We have been holding forth in the Grove all summer, but "Jack Frost" has compelled us to again make use of private dwellings, as we have as yet not been able to build our church, the drought, finance and other circumstances preventing, but still we are not discouraged, nor have we lost hope. We have some cash on hand, but we need much more, as we do not want to go in debt, and we implore the Saints throughout the church to do all you can for us on that line; let that be much or little, but not beyond your means or ability. Amounts small or large may be sent to either of the building committee (the writer or Bro. J. E. Swegart). All money orders should be made payable at Seymour, Missouri, but sent to our home address, Beaver, Missouri.

It is true that quite a number of Saints have moved into this region during the past year, but poor in this world's goods generally; others write us they are either on the way or coming in the near future, hence, the need of a house of worship. But by way of precaution to those who contemplated moving to southwest Missouri:

First, see that the way is prepared before you; that is, consult the proper authorities as per revelations given, and come and see the country for yourselves, never trusting the judgment of others on matters and business of that nature; as all can not be suited here, nor in any other country.

Second, do not bring a lot of northern horses with you, as some of them might die before they become acclimated, which takes a year, more or less. But enough on that subject at present.

Am glad to state that this grand and noble latter day work is moving onward and upward in Douglas county. I have just returned from the Ava branch where four were baptized by Bro. J. T. Davis last Sunday, and many more greatly interested. Bro. Davis, though young is becoming a power for good, and if humble will make his mark in the church as a speaker. Elders O. B. Thomas and A. M. Baker, of the missionary force, have been with us also, and have left lasting impressions. The former I had not met for nearly a score of years—a joyful meeting on my part; he is the same O. B. and bears the same grand testimony. And by the way we are now looking for Bro. I. N. White of the Twelve, to come and organize a branch here, as per conference resolutions.

FARMERSVILLE, Tex., Nov. 6.
 Dear Ensign:—I will send a few items from Aston Chapel. Bro. S. W. Simmons was here October 26, 27, and preached two noble sermons to small congregations. But they were composed of the best element of the community, mostly Bible read men. Two of the best men of town came out from Farmersville to hear him, being the first sermon of our faith they ever heard: one of them said he was coming to hear him again. Bro. Simmons will be back the fourth Sunday in November. The heathen rage and the people imagine vain things. Some of the rowdy element tried to get up a mob to egg Bro. Simmons, but the writer's grandson caught on to it, and threatened them with the law, and that is the last of it, so Bro. Simmons can preach here unmolested.

The writer has been here eight years alone, as one of the scattered members. Elder J. D. Erwin came and preached a week four years ago to small audiences. When he left everything was quiet until Bro. Simmons came and visited us. And today I hear favorable comments from the best element of the people. It makes the writer feel like praising God from whom all blessings flow.

R. T. JONES.

FAIRLAND, Ia. T., Oct. 28.
 Editor Ensign:—The debate held at this place between Bro. J. D. Erwin and Dr. D. B. Ray, of the Baptist faith, is a thing of the past, and I must say if success was ever had it was in this debate, for Bro. Erwin completely snowed him under, and he never did get out, but kept getting deeper and deeper under the snow. I never saw a man who is called a smart man cross and contradict himself so much as D. B. Ray did. I will not try to give all the details but will give a few statements.

It was impossible to keep him in the affirmative on his proposition; in the place of affirming his church, he would jump on "Joe" Smith and the Book of Mormon, and when squall and "pull his hair like a wild man. You could hear people all over town saying, "What is the matter with that man, is he crazy?"

In fighting baptism for remission of sins he said that to preach baptism was abominable and erroneous doctrine, and then in one of his other speeches said that he that is baptized of John's baptism accepted Christ, and he that was not baptized of John's baptism rejects Christ; and in fighting the succession of the apostles he said that no man could be an apostle without he had seen Christ after he arose from the dead. I suppose he had forgotten that Paul was not an apostle until after the resurrection and the ascension of Christ, and also that Judas was dead when Christ arose; but he said Judas was not one of the chosen apostles, but there was twelve without him.

In fighting the spiritual gifts he said there was no such thing as prophecy and tongues and healing after the apostles; and then in another speech he said whenever a man was baptized with the Holy Spirit he would be able to speak in tongues. Just such contradictions as these he made all through the debate. Of course you know the Baptists claim they have been baptized with the Spirit. Then according to Ray's last statement why don't Baptists speak in tongues? You can see where he placed himself.

He did not, or could not bring forth any proof whatever to show where the Latter Day Saints failed to be in harmony with the Bible, but just said he would endorse every bit of scripture that Bro. Erwin quoted, and you may guess he quoted plenty.

Bro. Erwin hung up his charts, one on the different dispensations, and one showing the organization of the church and the spiritual gifts, but Ray would not touch them, and said they were hung up to confuse the minds of the people; but when Bro. Erwin would call his attention to them, and press him with them, he would say they were a fraud, and his time was too precious to fool with such stuff as that. But Bro. Erwin kept giving it to him with the Scripture, and he howling "Joe" Smith and the Book of Mormon. I do not think he used twenty-five passages of scripture during the debate.

He made a terrible row on the battle ground in the Book of Mormon on page 331, but when Bro. Erwin called his attention to the great battle found in the Bible, (Num. 31: 1), he dropped that, and took up what he called the "Snake tale," in Book of Mormon page 518, and oh how he did roar and make all sorts of fun of that; but when Bro. Erwin again came at him with the snake tale in the Bible, (Num. 21: 7), and showed how the infidel would make fun of the Bible, and also called his attention to the great things that were done by Samson, which are in the Bible (Judges 15: 4-20), and showed how ridiculous he could make them look, Ray dropped the snake tale and was glad to do it, so then he was done for; he would not try to do anything with the Bible, he had no use for it. So he just wound up by preaching and trying to cry a Bible; he finally cut his own head clear off, in that after he had been fighting the visitation of angels, dreams and so on, the very last thing he said was that he had a dream, and an angel appeared to him and said to him, "Fear not, for you are a chosen vessel unto the Lord," and he believed it was true.

Surely the Lord was with Bro. Erwin in power, for Ray was simply confounded and could not do or say anything but that it went against him, and everybody could see it. I think great good will be the result.

The work is onward in this part of the Lord's vineyard; more calls for preaching than can possibly be filled. Bro. Erwin will go from here to Arkansas to hold a debate with a Christian preacher. May the Spirit of God be with him in defending the truth at that place I pray.

Ever praying for the upbuilding of this great Latter Day work, I remain,

Your brother in gospel bonds,
 J. T. RILEY.

NEVADA, Ia., Oct. 21.
 Editor Ensign:—Myself and family are isolated from church privileges but long for the day when we will be privileged to meet with the Saints in Sunday School, Religion and meetings of different kinds. We had Bro. H. A. McCoy and J. C. Clapp with us with the tent, but the people were so prejudiced that few came out, but we hope that we may overcome that by setting a godly example before the world and doing what little good there is left for us to do.

Dear Saints, this work is all to me; I want to so live that when the Lord Jesus Christ comes with ten thousand of His Saints that I may be ready to meet him with joy. I sincerely hope and pray that all who have obeyed this gospel in its fullness may be very prayerful, and not be forgetful hearers but doers of the work, that we may be worthy of the kind protecting care of our heavenly Father, that when his judgments spread over the land we may be spared and protected by our faithful living and by doing all we can to forward the work.

We read in the Scriptures that when the bridegroom comes there is to be five wise virgins and five foolish. According to my understanding of this there will be one-half of the people of God who will be void of the Spirit when the Lord comes. I have met one lady who had even forgotten the name of the elder who had baptized her. I believe this sleepy condition starts at first by a neglect of prayer before the Lord, and many get up in the morning too late, as they think, to have family prayer, and go away to work that day and wonder why everything goes wrong with them, when if they would only stop and think they did not have prayer that morning, and Satan is getting a new hold on us; he is always ready to take as much advantage as we give him and a great deal more.

Dear Saints, the Lord instructs certain officers of the branches of the church to see if they keep up family prayer. He knew that some of us would be careless in this regard. Oh, let us awake and pray morning and evening in our families at least, and as often as possible besides, or we will be the losers in that great day when the Lord comes to make up his jewels on the earth.

Says one, "I haven't time to pray mornings; I have to hurry off to my work." To such an one I would suggest that you arise a little earlier and then you will have plenty of time for family prayer, and you will be surprised to find how much better everything will move along that day. May God bless all true Saints and help them to always continue in the truth, and those who are not true, may He be merciful to them and that the time may speedily come when Satan may be bound that he cannot deceive and destroy, is the prayer of
 Your brother,
 W. C. HDX.

FT. REDWELL, Cal., Oct. 25.
 Editor Ensign:—This letter leaves us in the extreme northwest corner of California, about one hundred miles from the railroad. Will leave in the morning for Oakland. We left Oakland as soon after the reunion as we could settle up the business of such a large gathering, and started for Lassen and Modoc counties to visit the scattered Saints. The first stop was at Sacramento, where we spent Sunday, preaching twice and having a friendly fireside discussion with a "Millennial Dawn" disciple for about three hours Sunday afternoon. There were two men present who are considerably interested in our work, and I felt thankful to God for a work which was so grand and complete when compared with the "ideas of men" which we are constantly meeting in the world.

We took the ten o'clock train Sunday night, and eight o'clock the next morning found us at Reno where we visited Sr. Jane Gault and Sr. Stottis, who, though isolated and not having the privilege of church associations, are strong in "the faith once delivered to the Saints." Sr. Gault has long been a financial pillar of the work in Nevada, and though surrounded by conditions that would discourage most persons, she has stood firm in the faith she espoused years ago in Canada. Sr. Stottis was administered to in Oakland on July 6th, being afflicted with two cancers, and says that he has not felt a pain since. After a day's visit here we again took up our journey and the next night found us at Bro. Tucker's, near Standish.

From there we rode about ninety-five miles by stage and wagon to Bieber, where we held several services with small audiences, but we believe the Saints were somewhat encouraged. Our next stop was in Round Valley, near Adin, where Bro. Ed Schmidt was holding services, and preached for them four times. I neglected to mention that while at Sacramento we ordained Bro. Schmidt to the office of an elder by direction of the missionary in charge. From Adin we came here, another ride of one hundred miles, and up to date have held twenty services to good audiences, and baptized two. One of these, Sr. Hickerson, was so attracted by the remark made to her by Bro. Chaburn when introduced to him nearly three years ago, that she investigated, believed and obeyed. The other one, Sr. Nellie Baty, has been investigating for the last two years, and though at first she was very bitterly opposed to the work, when she was convinced that it was of God she "conferred not with flesh and blood" but laid her hand trustingly in her Savior's will the thought, "Lead thou me on." She counted well the cost, but the words of that beautiful song best express her sentiments, "Let the world despise and leave me, they have left my Savior too." If these sisters are faithful they will be a power for good and will be instrumental in bringing others to Christ. There are others here who believe the work is divine but are hindered in one way and another. May they not put off obedience until it is too late, is my prayer.

I am sure that the instruction given by Paul to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that need not be ashamed," is good advice for me now, and that a minister's actions outside of the pulpit are as closely watched as the words he speaks when in the pulpit are closely listened to, and no matter how smart and eloquent he may be in the pulpit, if he is obnoxious outside of it, he will neutralize the good he accomplishes by his eloquence. In other words we can't afford to be "odd," "peculiar," "cranky" and "selfish," but study to get rid of our "peculiarities" as fast as we discover them. A minister for Christ, enjoying the hospitality of a widow woman; who lays in bed in the morning while she goes out to chop wood to make a fire and get his breakfast is not a very big light set on a hill. This is but an illustration.

The principle of the gospel most impressed on me during this trip is the principle of "the gathering." Those who have lately come into the church are talking it, and as I see the conditions obtaining in the world I can see the necessity for it. However I am impressed with the thought that we need not worry over it, but live the gospel and the gathering will follow as a consequence.

Words fail to express the emotions that filled my breast upon reading of the death of our beloved brother, David Wight; nor do I feel ashamed of the tears that came unbidden to my eyes, for to know him was to love him. If this life ended all what a mockery it would be; but, thank God, the Savior has brought immortality to light through the gospel, and if we live in harmony with it we can meet our loved ones gone before, where there will be no parting, no tears nor sorrow. May God help us all to so live that we may have an abundant entrance there, is my prayer.

Your brother in Christ,

F. B. BLAIR,

LAMOIN, Maine, Oct. 21.
 Editor Ensign:—Since last communicating through your columns I have been trying to blow the gospel horn in the eastern and middle part of this state; what my labors may culminate in, time, the faithful chronicler of events may disclose.

After finishing my work in Aroostook, and reluctantly bidding the Saints and friends, who had so endeared themselves to me, good-by, in company with Sr. Foss, who had visited the Saints for some two weeks, I returned home to attend the conference of Eastern Maine, which was par excellence, representation large, and a good spirit prevailed. Labored for a time in Washington county, trying to do the work of a missionary, and met the conditions incident to missionary life, such as preaching the gospel, baptizing, confirming, administering to the sick, etc., continuing thus in that county until late in September, when, in company with Elder J. N. Ames, I came into the Western district, attending the conference at Little Deer Isle. A good time was had; district was largely and ably represented, a full house, business transacted satisfactorily, preaching good and spiritual, social services grand.

At this conference I met for the first time with Elder James E. Kelley, son of Apostle W. H. Kelley. James, like his illustrious father, has the push and get, and is destined to make his mark for good in the church; he is liked very well in the East. At the close of this conference, I stayed at the Little Island and preached twice to full houses. From thence to Mountville where we occupied four times to fair sized congregations, baptized one, leaving the Saints cheered and encouraged. On Monday, through the kindness of Uncle Joe Harvey, I was conveyed to Stoughton, where I had been booked for preaching for one week. The merry-go-round and medicine show took the crowd as usual, so a small audience greeted us. Tuesday found us in Rockland, Wednesday at Vinal Haven, a new place to me, the time to visit and preach to them was not propitious, but we occupied, however, five times, with good attention and fair interest, and a request to return again. This place was an old Mormon stronghold in 1835, Elders Woodruff, Hyde and Herrick were there and baptized quite a number; the latter died and is buried there. Some of the old timers are living there yet. I visited one of them by the name of Pees, now 81 years old, from whom I received advices concerning those men's labors.

Leaving Vinal Haven I came to Little Deer Isle by way of Rockland, preached twice there, and at North Deer Isle twice. While at Little Deer Isle I was sent for at Lamoin to administer to Sr. Mary Closson, she being very low at the time with appendicitis. At this writing she is seemingly well. I do not often get left yet the boat being late, I was obliged to seek shelter among strangers, a thing not easily done in the stillness of night, when all are salubriously enjoying the benefits of sleep; however, after several unsuccessful attempts, I was able to arouse one man who gave us shelter, and who feels thankful for such friends. Tonight ends my labors in this place, thence to Dexter. In bonds, AVA, Mo., Oct. 28.

 Dear Ensign:—I have been preaching the last week at the Hunter school-house and I must say never did I see finer prospects for the work. Interest?—Why the entire country seems to be on the side of the right, and you know what that means, don't you? I opened the work at this point nearly one year ago. The remarks on the outside were common.

"Well that is the plan all right, and I just like to hear them, don't you?"

Again:
 "I tell you when I want to hear something I will just come here."

On Sunday, the 27th inst., I had set apart for the day as follows: preaching at 11 o'clock by Elder J. C. Christensen, of Beaver, Missouri, he and others of the Saints having come to our assistance for Saturday night and Sunday. Dinner?—Yes a big basket dinner on the ground—and wood pile. 3 p. m. baptizing; here we could see the silvery lining, four precious souls were led into the waters by the writer, while the rock bound shores of the rippling stream were decked with many bright faces, there to witness the solemn rites of the Savior's kingdom. Tears of great joy could be seen coursing down the cheeks of dear Saints as the candidates were led down into the water and back upon shore again, new born babes in Christ. Five p. m. we all wended our way to the Saints' chapel at Ava for confirmation and sacrament meeting, Elder Christensen officiating; an enjoyable time was had. Seven p. m., Religion work, which seemed to be enjoyed by all. Eight p. m., preaching by Elder Christensen, subject, Restoration.

You will see by this that your correspondent and brethren are not altogether idle, while to our kind, heavenly Father we feel to ascribe the praise. Indeed, it seemed like a refreshing time from the presence of the Lord. While the outsiders listened to the words of life, the Saints seemed to almost "view the landscape o'er," and as the poet has said: "Their losses were gain, Each sorrow and pain."

Were exchanged for the conqueror's song.

Where is the district president? The Saints have got so they cannot tell when quarterly conference is held, or what is done at the different sessions. We should like to know where and when is the next conference. Brethren, please let us know about your conference in time to get there, if it is possible.

With love for all, I labor on, trusting to be among the faithful at the crowning day.

Your brother in bonds,
 JAMES T. DAVIS.

ZION'S ENSIGN.

SLANDERERS UNMASKED.

Sometime during the early part of last spring, while Elder R. C. Evans was in the western states, in consequence of some of the leading and wealthy people of the community having been baptized into the Latter Day Saints church, the sleeping malice and hatred of the Rev. Wm. R. Burwell, of the Baptist church, and Rev. T. Alfred Flemming, of the Campbellite church, were aroused, both of which broke out in a violent tirade of abuse, and all slanders of the dead past were retold, viz., Spalding Romance, polygamy, etc.

The brethren wrote to Elder R. C. Evans, requesting him to take action in the matter, who replied, through the Hillsburg Beaver, that upon his return to Canada, he would call upon the gentlemen, and request them to retract their slanderous statements, or affirm them in public debate. Several letters passed the local paper, the Hillsburg Beaver, on both sides, the gist of which is as follows. The Baptist minister positively refused to debate under any consideration whatever, stating to Bro. Evans personally, in the presence of witnesses, that he had neither time, inclination nor ability to meet him on the platform.

Not so with the Rev. T. Alfred Flemming. This noisy young man, and famous Ohio debater, who had "probed Mormonism to the bottom," was ready to debate, but made so many foolish conditions, that a discerning public readily discovered that he was working a bluff game and had no intention of debating.

Here is a specimen of his conditions. The Latter Day Saints must pay him thirty dollars per night and six nights in advance must be paid him. In event of the town hall not being large enough to hold the crowd, the Saints must provide a tent with a seating capacity of one thousand. This is a sample of the conditions imposed. Bro. Evans then formulated three propositions for each preacher, requesting them to affirm the statements made in their lectures. Upon a point blank refusal, on their part, to affirm anything in debate, he (R. C.) at once wrote a two column article in the local paper, exposing their dishonorable methods, riddling their cowardice, advertising the propositions they refused to discuss; that he would unmask them by exposing their methods, and examining their so-called evidence. Bro. Evans had requested me to accompany him to Hillsburg, and, in event of a debate, to act as his moderator; or, if otherwise, as chairman of his meetings. We left London on Tuesday morning, the 2d inst., for Rockwood where we were met by Bro. Edwin Awry, who drove us to his beautiful home, where we enjoyed a brief rest. Bro. and Sr. Awry united with the church some time in March last. They are well-to-do, both in this world's good things, and in those sterling qualities that go to make a desirable couple in the church. It seems that Priest King Cooper, of this branch, was doing some brick work for Bro. Awry, and was being assisted by Teacher David Tarzwell; Bro. David had his violin with him, and at noon and evening the beautiful songs of Zion would be sung and played. This attracted the attention of the family, and led to conversation, which resulted in their acceptance of the gospel that came to their souls as rain to the thirsty ground. Bro. Cooper led them into the waters of baptism, and afterwards, being confirmed by Elder R. W. Tarzwell, they continue to witness to those glowing truths of which they can say, "We have heard with our ears, but now we know of this glorious and beautiful truth, and that it is a marvelous work and a wonder." Prior to this they had belonged to the Baptist church, and, maddened by the loss of two such ornaments, as well as substantial supporters, they (the Baptists) induced their minister to give an expose (?) of Mormonism. He made the attempt which proved a signal failure.

Just why the Disciple preacher jumped into the fray may not be known, even to himself, but if he was seeking for notoriety, he has found it, but not in the desirable way he wished for and anticipated.

After supper, with Bro. and Sr. Awry, we drove over to Elder R. W. Tarzwell's, where we have been stopping since, or till the close of the series of meetings as announced. We then drove over to Hillsburg, and at 8:30 p. m. a large crowd gathered, in spite of the sweltering heat, and numbers stood outside, all attentive listeners for over two hours. Bro. Evans treated on the proposition as publicly affirmed, by them, but which they refused to stand by, viz., "Resolved, that Joseph Smith professed to receive a revelation from God, authorizing the practice of polygamy, and that he taught and practiced polygamy."

The speaker first paid his compliments to the encyclopedias, showing their general unreliability, and that they contradicted each other, and, very frequently, themselves. He then produced the evidence in the "Temple Lot suit;" Nauvoo testimonies of 1843, Smuoker, Emma Smith, the prophet's wife, Mrs. White, Bancroft Bidamon; Governor Ford, Fanny Stenhouse, George Q. Cannon, Clawson, Brigham Young and others, showing conclusively that Joseph Smith was innocent of the above allegations. He showed clearly that these preachers had done violence to the known rule of evidence by accepting the self-contradictory testimony of the infamous Brigham Young as against the combined testimony on the other side.

Elder Evans was at his best and waxed brilliantly eloquent in his exposure of the contemptible methods employed by these preachers in slandering the name of a dead man, and an innocent people; but the climax was not reached till he showed, by conference records, that polygamy was endorsed in foreign countries by Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists, Congregationalists and others. This revelation caused considerable sensation in that large and intelligent audience, and was as a bolt out of a clear sky. He then closed by challenging the world to produce one clause in favor of polygamy, from the records of the General Conference over which Joseph Smith presided, or of that presided over by his legal successor, and son, the present president of the church.

The second evening, Wednesday, July 3d, another large audience greeted our brother. He took up the following proposition, as publicly asserted by the preachers.

"Resolved, That the Book of Mormon is a fraud, taken from 'Rev. Spalding's Manuscript Found,' and arranged by Joseph Smith and Sydney Rigdon to deceive the people."

After examining the encyclopedias on the matter, he read Pratt's reply to Sutherland in 1842, wherein he shows that Rigdon did not see the Book of Mormon till late in 1830, when he (Pratt) and Oliver Cowdery presented it to him, and that he never saw Joseph Smith till 1831. Also, Rigdon's letter of May 27, 1839, showing he had nothing whatever to do with the Manuscript Found. Also Sydney Rigdon's daughter's testimony, wherein she gives the statement of her father, made to clergymen around him, when, as she said, "At a time when he had but little hope of living from one day to another." We here appended the dying man's statement. "As I expect to die and meet my Maker, I know nothing about where the manuscript of the Mormon Bible came from."

Another statement was also presented where Rigdon said, "I know nothing of its origin (the Book of Mormon) only that Joseph Smith, David Whitmer and Martin Harris stated in regard to it. I believe that the Book of Mormon was found just as Joseph stated. Joseph Smith was a prophet and this world will find it out some day." Also Wm. Small's testimony given in 1876, containing the statement of Paterson, the Pittsburg publisher, in which he declares that Sydney Rigdon did not obtain the Spalding story at his office, nor did Rigdon work for him when the Spalding story was in the office, as alleged.

Bro.-Evans then gave a history, locating Rigdon, and giving an account of his work from 1822 to 1880, showing clearly that he had nothing whatever to do with the Spalding Romance, the Book of Mormon or Joseph Smith during those years; after which he took up D. H. Bays' work, one of the latest publications of Campbellism on Mormonism, in which he says, "The Spalding story is a failure; do not attempt to rely upon it—it will let you down." He next turned his attention to the Spalding story as told by Revs. Tyron Edwards, Green and others, exposing their nonsensical and contradictory stories, in which they try to connect Joseph Smith with the Spalding Romance.

1st, Solomon Spalding began to write his Romance in 1809, Joseph Smith, at this time, was a neighbor of Spaldings, and used to spend his evenings listening to Spalding read his manuscript.

2d, He (Smith) borrowed this manuscript to read to his family at home.

In refutation of this Elder Evans showed:

(a) Joseph Smith was born December 23, 1805, and if the statements of these reverend gentlemen, as above, be true, Joseph was a neighbor of Spaldings', listened to him read his romance, and borrowed the same to read to his family at home, and all this when he was but three or four years of age.

To prove that Smith borrowed this manuscript. (b) Green testified that he heard Smith tell Spalding that he had made a Mormon Bible out of it. (c) Green testified to having a conversation with Spalding as late as 1827, and that he has a letter from Mr. Jenkins, who testified that he saw and conversed with Spalding in 1827.

In refutation of this Elder Evans showed by the encyclopedias, and other histories, including the testimony of Spalding's widow, that he (Spalding) still held the manuscript complete in 1812. That he, or his wife took it away with them when they left Ohio, presented it to Paterson, the Pittsburg publisher, for publication, who returned it safely to Spalding, and that Spalding held it in his possession till his death in 1816. Query? Did Green and Jenkins, et al., talk to Solomon Spalding in 1827, 29, if Spalding died in 1816? Did Smith borrow the Romance, refuse to return it, and make a Mormon Bible out of it, if the story be true, as told by Mrs. Spalding and others, that the manuscript was in their possession, where it remained till the time of Rev. Spalding's death? Who can explain these discrepancies as told by the preachers?

Bro. Evans then showed from the histories that the manuscript remained in the possession of Spalding's widow from the time of her husband's death in 1816, till the year 1834, or four years after the publication of the Book of Mormon, and very many copies were in circulation. Figures won't lie, and facts are stubborn things.

In 1834, one D. P. Hurlbut, who was cut off from the L. D. S. church for bad conduct, swore vengeance. He made friends with one E. D. Howe, who was an infidel, and had written a book against the Bible. The said Howe was angry because his wife had united with the church. These two men, full of spite and unbelief, decided to write a book against the church. D. P. Hurlbut went to the Spalding's widow, procured the "Manuscript Found," promising to return it; gave it to Howe. Then to spite Joseph Smith, and make money by the sale of their work, they got Wrights, Millors, Lakes and others, with the Book of Mormon in their hands, to make up statements that the Book of Mormon and Manuscript Found were similar, and contained identical names, etc. Howe fills his book with these statements, which were false, and manufactured to deceive. Hence we have "Mormonism Unveiled," by E. D. Howe, the basis of all works written against the church.

In order to cover the trick they refused to return the manuscript to Spalding's widow. Howe hides it among other manuscripts in his printing office, he forgets where; tells Spalding's widow and others it was burned. In 1839-40 he sells his office to L. L. Rice. The transfer of the printing department was accompanied by a large collection of old manuscripts. Years passed away. L. L. Rice removed to Honolulu, Sandwich Islands.

In 1884-5 President Fairchild, of Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, visited Mr. Rice. Looking over a lot of old documents, they came across the long lost "Manuscript Found" of Solomon Spalding. It had been in Mr. Rice's possession for over forty years, and can now be seen at Oberlin College in the library of that institution. It has the following endorsement: "The writings of Solomon Spalding, proved by Aaron Wright, Oliver Smith, John N. Miller and others. The testimony of the above named gentlemen are now in my possession." Signed, D. P. Hurlbut.

The speaker closed by placing before the audience the testimony of the said L. L. Rice, which says: "Two things are true; first, it is the genuine writing of Solomon Spalding; and second, it is not the original of the Book of Mormon." There is no identity of names or persons or places, and there is no similarity of style between them." Thus closed one of the most masterly efforts in refutation of the Spalding Romance theory.

On Thursday evening, the 4th inst., and third of lectures; Bro. Evans sprang a rich treat on the large audience assembled, talking as his text the following:

"Resolved, That the Disciple, Christian or Campbellite Church is the most egotistical, deceptive, hypocritical, noisy and vacillating sect in all the civilized world."

In proof of this allegation, he quoted copiously from the works of Alexander Campbell and other leading authors of the Disciple church, up to date. Also from leading writers of the Baptists and other denominations. Some of the points were as follows:

He showed, from their sermons and public documents that they denounced all reformers as mere pigmies compared to Thomas and Alexander Campbell. That they denounced all other churches both Protestant and Catholic, as being the mother of harlots and the abominations of the earth; a mess.

That there is no conversion, regeneration or salvation to be found in any of the churches outside of the Disciples. That the clergy are stigmatized as "Textuaries," "Scrap Doctors," "Theoretic Doctors," "Hirelings and Goat Milkers." Yet, notwithstanding all this, in order to curry favor, and ingratiate themselves into the good graces of the other churches, they ostensibly endorse "these legitimate daughters of the mother of harlots, the church of Rome" (Mill. Har. Vol. 3, p. 362), in their communion, baptism and revival services, etc.

We would gladly give your readers a full and complete account of this very interesting lecture, but time and space forbid; suffice it to say, Elder Evans closed by stating that the Disciple church owes an apology to the christian world for their indiscriminate, violent and bitter attack on all other denominations, and that nothing short of a fair and open retraction and apology on the part of that church can ever begot confidence in and respect for them.

It is but fair to say that we believe that the double dealing, so characteristic of that church has been so faithfully exposed by the Saints and others, that, except they speedily repent and reform, the time is not far distant when the Disciple church in Canada shall be only remembered as a thing of the past, with pity and contempt. To show that we have some good and substantial foundation for this thought we submit the figures, as given by the census, and read by Bro. Evans before the audience, showing that in ten years they have lost in membership, seven thousand, four hundred and thirty (7430) dropping from 20,198 to 12,763.

On Friday night, the fourth lecture, a somewhat larger crowd than before greeted Bro. Evans. This was owing, in part, to the fact that it was whispered that, as a result of the pressure brought to bear by the parson's followers, that the Rev. T. Alfred Flemming intended to risk his reputation as a thirty dollar a night debater, come to the meeting, and try to show to his people, who, it is reported, were losing faith in him, that he was a man of courage. The meeting was well under way before he arrived.

Bro. Evans' subject was "The persecution of God's people in all ages," proving the words of Christ to be true, both prior to and after his day. "Ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake," and also, "the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service. And these things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father, nor me." That persecuting mobs were frequently led by hireling priests. He was just getting well warmed up to his subject when in walked Mr. Flemming. Bro. Evan's had seen that gentleman's picture but once, but his sharp eye recognized the original standing inside the door. He at once gave Mr. Flemming an invitation to come forward to the platform, promising him half the time for the presentation of his views. I should say right here, that Mr. F. was followed into the hall by a crowd of young men and women, evidently of the Campbellite persuasion, either by baptism or sympathy, and possibly for the purpose of encouraging him to do battle for his cause and uphold his reputation as a thirty dollar a night man, even if that reputation was the product of his own mind. Now, this mixed crowd were dressed well, but they manifested such lively symptoms of rowdiness as to cause observers to believe them (the crowd) to be strongly infected with the disease. One lady (save the mark!) threatened to slap a young man's mouth because he asked her to please not make so much noise.

The invitation of Elder Evans, as given to Mr. F. was as follows: "Mr. Flemming, I have been exposing your methods, both in your unwarranted and unfair attack upon us, and your refusal to affirm the assertions you made against us. If you have any statement to make with regard to the same, consider yourself at perfect liberty. Come forward and occupy the platform."

After some hesitancy, being urged, he came forward, but refused to stand with us on the platform. He began by saying he had heard of these meetings, but had heard nothing of what was said. He admitted that he had made assertions as to Joseph Smith being the author of polygamy, and that he professed to have received a revelation authorizing the same in doctrine and practice. Also, that he had said that the Book of Mormon was a fraud, taken from the "Spaulding Romance." That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is a system of blasphemy, but that they did not practice polygamy openly.

Elder Evan's reply to him was so effective as to convince the people of intellect that Mr. Flemming's allegations were as false as the source of all evil, and that he was but acting the part of the unclean buzzard that delights to feed on carrion and other delectable tid-bits.

Upon Mr. F. interjecting some expressions of dissent, the aforementioned crowd of irresponsible young men and women, who, with some boys and girls who certainly should be taking lessons on good behavior, acted more like hoodlums than otherwise, broke forth into yells of encouragement, realizing that their man needed such. Rendered brave by this backing, he offered to take the negative and prove true every assertion he had made if Elder Evans would affirm they were not true.

Fancy such a situation. Just imagine the famous Ohio debater, who only asks thirty dollars a night, and we to pay him, for the especial privilege of being treated to a lot of worn out and stale old yarns that have been met and refuted years before this rising star of polemics was born. And he really did challenge Elder R. C. Evans to affirm in debate, and prove his (Mr. Flemming's) old threadbare yarns, and vile assertions were not true, while he, Mr. Flemming, would take the negative side, and produce the proof, and substantiate every "assertion" he had made. Was it not the very me plus ultra of profundity! Elder Evans then gave an exposition of his opponent's attempt to evade the real question in such a clear and concise manner that men and women of brain could and did see the foolish spectacle he has made of himself. Finding the situation too hot for him; Mr. F. left the hall, followed by his body guard of male and female attendants, yelling at the top of their voices, and waving handkerchiefs to their hearts content.

The next day numbers of the solid people of the place expressed their disapproval of the part Mr. Flemming played with the rowdy element that night, of his refusal, when asked, to hold in check that lawless spirit that was so manifestly friendly with him, and that he incited to disturb Elder Evans at different periods during his stay. They also condemned the palpably unfair and cowardly attack he made upon an innocent people, the Saints, who, if judged by those who live in this locality, are as far above his base imputations as honor, integrity and probity are above the methods of such men as he loves to employ.

On Saturday night, the 6th inst., and fifth lecture, Elder Evans again faced a good sized audience. This was an extended review of the general methods as employed by Mr. Flemming, and, I may say, there is no need for me to go over the different points advanced and proven; suffice it for me to say the speaker was in good form, and his exposition was full, complete and convincing.

On Sunday at 10 a. m. we had a very pleasant prayer and testimony meeting in our little chapel in Cedar Valley, Bro. Evans, by request, presiding. At 3 p. m. he again addressed a large audience in the town hall, Hillsburg, taking for his subject, "Identity," showing the perfect agreement between the Latter Day Saint church and that of the New Testament. Also showing the discrepancy between the Disciple, Christian or Campbellite church and the same standard. He took the statement of Campbellism from 1827 down, "Where the Bible speaks we speak, and where the Bible is silent we are silent." This he characterized as the most misleading statement ever coined by any human sect. Thus Bro. Evans closed his defense against the base and unwarranted attacks upon our faith. At 7:30 p. m. he spoke to a good turnout of Saints and friends in the Saints' chapel, Cedar Valley, on "The Restitution of all things."

Monday morning I drove him to Rockwood station where I saw him off on the train, parting from him with regret, as our little association here was a very pleasant one; but this life is made of meetings and partings, to fit us for that life where parting will be no more. He was called home, and further to preach a funeral sermon and to unite a happy couple in the bonds of "holy matrimony."

Instead of going to the field I was appointed to at first for this summer, viz., the Lake Erie counties east from Waterford to Niagara Falls, Elder Evans has decided to leave me up here. I am now, at this time of writing, with the Cedar Valley branch. I expect to visit in turn the Garafra branch, Masonville, and north at Maple Valley, Proton, Egremont and Listowel.

All honor to Elder R. W. Tarzwell, Priest Cooper of the Cedar Valley branch, and the Saints for their noble stand against the slanders that were hurled against them. The Saints here express themselves as thankful to those friends, although not of our faith, but who, from their honest hearts, condemned the manner in which the Saints were so slanderously assailed, and who gave them to understand they were not without friends in this conflict. May God bless them.

Ever yours for the truth,

A. E. MORTIMER.

CEDAR VALLEY, July 9.

ZIG-ZAGS NO. 4.

ELDER J. W. GILBERT.

After considerable preparation and much waiting, our little party of six persons (A. H. Smith, L. A. Gould, J. F. Burton and wife, and J. W. Gilbert and wife) assembled at pier 7, where the steamship Australa lay at her moorings; the stevedores had finished their work of stowing her cargo away for her trip to Tahiti, except two or three dray loads of provisions. Between twenty and forty of the dear Saints from Oakland and San Francisco gathered on the wharf to bid us a last farewell. The time set for leaving port was ten o'clock, but as usual the propeller did not turn till about eleven o'clock. We took our friends into our staterooms and showed them where we would rendezvous for the next two weeks. Of course nearly all of them wanted to go with us, but finally concluded it were best for them to stay; so, after they had gone with us all over the ship, we all went up on the promenade deck, where I drew them all up in a line for a snap from my camera; then, reluctantly, we shook hands with them one by one as they went over the gang-plank ashore. The cables were loosened and our good ship crawled its way out of its stall into the bay. The Saints all gathered on the outermost point of the pier for a better view of our departure. Bro. Morrison took a snap at us with his camera as we passed the end of the pier. When out a sufficient distance for room to turn, our ship turned on her bow and headed for Golden Gate, and we were off for the islands of the South Seas. We now flourished our handkerchiefs to those on shore, who waved back at us; we kept it up; the distance soon put a haze between them and us, but still we could see the flutter of their sympathetic adieus, till rounding a point somewhat, an extended pier cut them off from our view; then, and not till then, did we cease to answer enthusiastically their friendly farewell signaling. We passed ships at anchor, and ships en route. Passed the old fort and Presidio, where the big guns pointed out over Golden Gate as a warning to all who may come with ill intent. The shipping, the harbor, Oakland on the opposite side, and the islands in the bay, San Francisco and all, were receding into the gray haze that crept over everything, softening the whole picture in its gradual transmutation, till all were swallowed up in the misty shroud. San Francisco, with all its noise, its clanging street cars and noisy drays; with all its hustle and business turmoil—San Francisco with all its wicked thousands, and yet with all its kind and loving, good and obliging people, was gone; out of sight, out of hearing, but not out of memory. Long shall we cherish fondly the memory of the dear, good brethren and sisters we met there, and who left no stone unturned in their endeavor to make our stay there pleasant. God bless them all for their kindness which we appreciate very much.

Taking a last look at the seal-rocks and cliff-house, we left them to port to be, soon swallowed up by the light fog as we passed out through Golden Gate and over the bar. This bar is formed by the sediment borne out from the bay by the current that rushes like a river through the gate at low tide. It is deposited in a semi-circular form about three miles outside the gate, and reaches in length for many miles. Here is where the light boat is anchored continually, the sea being only about thirty to forty feet deep on the bar. Here also is where the pilot schooner plays back and forth all the time, day and night, to pick up the pilots from out-bound vessels, and to furnish them for incoming ones. When outside the bar in safety, our ship slowed down, and put off the pilot after a row boat from the pilot schooner came to pick him up. We were now ready to take our course for Tahiti, and were cut loose from everything and everybody for our journey. The sea was as smooth as a mill-pond almost, and the vessel only had a slight rolling motion, therefore it was very favorable to those who had never been on the sea; hence none of our party were sea-sick; we all ate a hearty lunch and dinner the very first day.

We were now on our way, and out of sight of Columbia's hills, and nothing to look at or interest one outside the ship except a few whales now and then which created considerable excitement and interest as they would come to the surface and spout water into the air like the exhaust of a great steam engine; then they would go down again head foremost and raise their great tail high into the air. "Monster" is the first word to come to the lips on seeing one of these great mountains of living flesh. It fills one with awe to thus consider the wonderful creations of God. One feels his littleness when beholding living creatures built on such a large scale. But after a day or two out we saw no more whales during the first part of our journey; so, while there is not much of interest outside we will take a look at our floating palace.

The Australia is the largest ship I ever saw (but I have not seen very many); from 350 to 400 feet long by 40 feet wide, and drawing 20 feet of water as loaded for this trip, with three stories above the water line. It is forced through the water by a screw propeller driven by three engines. It has a complete electric plant for lighting purposes, with wires ramifying to all parts of the vessel. It is provided with the modern bath tubs, with hot and cold water, fresh or salt. Electric buttons are in every part of the ship; by touching one a steward will bob up as if by magic to do one's bidding; but a quarter would make him go faster, and a half would almost make him break his neck to supply our wants.

The dining saloon is about 40 by 50 feet, and will seat just one hundred people at once. A cabinet grand piano stands at one end with the books of the library on either side. At the other end are two great sideboards with plate mirrors five by eight feet. Wilton carpets adorn the floors, and the seats are all cushioned. Over the two side rows of tables swing two racks for the glass ware, fixed in such a way that the things cannot tumble out when the vessel rolls. Each table will seat twelve persons. There are two waiters to each table, each one attending to the wants of six people.

The meals are served in French style and in courses, from a bill of fare that presents so many good things one would sometimes be puzzled to know what he really did want. The saloon was decorated quite abundantly with nice fresh cut California flowers. There is a series of portholes as windows on each side, and a large skylight opening in the center reaching up through the upper deck. But for the motion of the vessel one would think he were in the dining room of some large hotel in the city.

The state-rooms are very comfortable; not very large, of course, but with plenty of room for two persons; about seven by eight or nine feet, and well ventilated. Those that our party occupy are the best to be had, and are just off the end of the dining saloon. Everything necessary to facilitate comfort was anticipated in the accoutrements of this ship. The novices of our crowd are often heard to say, "this beats rail-roading." Truly this is a fine way to travel.

After meals everyone goes up on the promenade deck for a stroll. This deck is the highest apartment, or third floor of the ship. On this deck our feet are about twenty-five feet above water line, and we got a good view of all the heaving country round about, and also plenty of fresh air as there is always a breeze here even in a dead calm, by reason of the speed of the vessel through the air.

This deck is about 150 by 40 feet and is furnished with rustic benches in the center and easy deck chairs. There is a promenade all around the outer part with railing four feet high, and an awning of canvass over head. This apartment serves as a kind of park or pleasure resort for the inhabitants of our floating city. Here we all come in the evening to watch the setting of the sun and the fading of the twilight, which, as we get down into the tropics, is very beautiful indeed, at times, presenting varying shades from a light orange to a fiery red, and reflecting the same in the water when it is smooth; of this one never tires. Truly there is great variety in the different climes and countries of this old world of ours. But for the injustices of men the children of earth would all get a great deal more sweetness out of life. What a pity that the contrivances and avarice of men should rob so many of the inhabitants of this planet of so many of the comforts and legitimate pleasures of life.

Sunrise in the tropics is no less beautiful than the sunset. When there are clouds scattered sparsely over the sky, it is all the more picturesque and grand. Feasting is the proper word for expressing one's experience in beholding it, for the soul is uplifted to God in adoration, and it helps one to put aside and rise above the little trifling things of life. It gives one, as it were, a peep into eternity and infinity. The captain would tell us about many of the stars and their distances and magnitude and movements.

We have now crossed the equator, and the North star is gone out of sight, to be seen by us no more till we go back to the northern latitudes. The Southern Cross has come into view and occupies a position in relation to the South Pole, as the North Star and Great Bear (dipper) do to the North Pole. We see stars now that we never saw at home. The atmosphere in this climate is so clear that we can see stars of the first and second magnitudes in their descent until they reach the edge of the water, when they suddenly pop out of sight as if a dark hood had been placed over them quickly.

Twelve days out and we have sighted the Tuomoa Islands. Interest becomes very absorbing as the captain invites all the passengers onto the bridge for a better view, as it is several feet higher than the promenade. What a peering through the three or four pair of glasses! and what anxiety with which each one awaits his turn! First the tops of the trees here and there, then the whole extent of the verdure. Presently the snow white sand of the beach comes into view with a plainer outline of things on shore, and lastly, the white foam of the waves breaking upon the coral reef. This is the first land we have seen in four thousand miles, and it looks good. We pass this island (Tikabau) to starboard as Rairoa comes into view to port. We now ran into a school of "auhopus," a kind of fish that jumps out of the water describing a curve, and back

INCURABLE HEART DISEASE SOON CURED.

FRANKLIN MILLS, M. D., LL. B., WILL SEND $2.00 WORTH OF HIS SPECIALLY PREPARED TREATMENT FREE TO APPLICATED READERS.

To demonstrate the unusual curative power of his New Special Treatment for diseases of the heart, nerves, stomach or dropsy, Dr. Mills will send free to any afflicted person, $2.50 worth of his new treatment.

It is the result of twenty-five years of careful study, extensive research, and remarkable experience in treating thousands of heart, stomach and nervous diseases, which so often complicate each case. So certain are the results of his New Treatment that he does not hesitate to give all patients a "trial free."

Few physicians have such confidence in their skill. Few physicians so thoroughly deserve the confidence of their patients, as no false inducements are ever held out. The Doctor's private practice is so extensive as to require the aid of forty associates. His offices are always open to visitors: Col. N. G. Parker, Ex-Treasurer of South Carolina, says: "Believe Dr. Mills to be an attentive and skillful physician. He has just cured the best qualities of head and heart." The late Prof. J. S. Jones, editor of the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, of Chicago, writes: "By all means publish your surprising cures."

Hundreds of "Incurable Cases" cured. Mrs. Frank Smith, of Chicago, was cured of heart disease after five physicians had given her up. Hon. C. M. Huie, banker, Fairbault, Minn., writes: "I had broken completely down. My head, heart, stomach and nerves had troubled me greatly for years. I never would recover, but Dr. Mills' Special Treatment cured me after six eminent physicians of Chicago and elsewhere had completely failed." Mrs. P. Carlin, of Chicago, Ill., says: "Several years ago when I sent to Dr. Mills for treatment, three physicians said I could not live two weeks, I could not eat, and I had lost nearly 1,000 references to, and testimonials from Bishops, Clergymen, Bankers, Farmers, and their wives, who had broken completely down, who have been cured after from five to thirty physicians had pronounced them incurable."

Address Dr. Franklin Mills, 201 to 203 State St., Chicago, for free treatment. Please mention this paper.

again, making the water to foam continually. We enjoyed their frolic for several minutes as they were traveling in the same direction we were.

As we came well into the passage between the two islands, we began to feel, rather sad and reverential, for we were passing over the grave of the lost Evanelia, for here is where she went to her last resting place. We have learned that when she went down, she was loaded with thirty tons of copra, besides seven or eight tons of pearlshell. No wonder she foundered under this terrible load when we consider that her capacity, by official measurement, was only a fraction over nineteen tons.

About four o'clock in the afternoon we pass near the island of Mokateta, the last one we will see till we reach Tahiti. All these islands the writer had visited in his former mission to this part of the world, and it seemed somewhat like home to be among them again.

The sea was very calm and smooth all day, and a great deal of phorescent matter had arisen to the surface; so, after night-fall the waves where the ship disturbed them were very luminous, presenting a very interesting scene, tempting us to remain on deck till a late hour, watching it.

At the peep of dawn on the thirteenth day the gong was sounded for all to prepare for the last breakfast on board. This was two hours earlier than usual in order to be ready to go ashore early; for the mountains of Tahiti loomed up not far away, and all were astrid and in a hustle to be ready to see the pilot take us through the passage into the harbor.

The passengers now were all eyes. The second gong sounded and all scurried to swallow a hasty breakfast and get back on the promenade to watch operations.

OUR AIM: MANKIND TO BLESS. DAUGHTERS OF ZION. MRS. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may flow the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

LET YOURSELF GO.

It has been said that "power and aim are the two halves of felicity." The world, really, is divided very largely into two classes; one class which aims so long that it never hits the mark, from fatigue in holding the weapon; and the other that moves with undirected power, and so scatters its force without result.

The highest ambition in a young man's mind is accomplishment. By a curious twist of language, the graces of life are called "accomplishments." This departure of language from its simplicity even goes so far as to name schools for young women, where more of the grace of life than of learning is conveyed,—"finishing schools." There could scarcely be a more marked departure from the proper use of terms. Accomplishment is the registry of work done. It may be only a section of the whole, but it is a complete section, and "finishing schools" show, for the most part, only nicely trimmed edges of behavior and complacent deportment, in the presence of a world which should stir the deeper emotions of life.

One cannot observe men entering upon the work of life without feeling a desire to cut them loose from over-caution, timidity, and, above all else, a desire to save oneself. There is a certain niggardiness of behavior about some men entering upon the work of the world which makes the impression upon the observer that they are aware that they have not much resource. It shows in the way in which they lay out their strength,—they lay it out as if it were dead; in the way in which they use their minds, as if they were afraid the thought would wreck the thinking machinery; in the way in which they give themselves to their employment, always afraid of doing too much. To all such one feels like saying, "Let yourself go!" Immediately this man, "new to life," says,

"If I let myself go; I may go to pieces." It requires a very swift revolution of a wheel to break it by its own velocity. It would be a good sight to see some of the careful, smug, complacent, elaborately-scarfed youths, break a collar button, or rip a seam. When I see a young fellow trying to do business that requires him to bend his neck, with a four-inch collar under his chin, I make up my mind—perhaps rashly, but still inevitably,—that he has forgotten that most of the work of this world has been done, in past generations, by people with shirts open at the neck. It is the same kind of young man that one finds standing before the haberdashers' window, adoring the last sweet thing in ties. It is the same sort of young man that puts more energy into preventing the bagging of his trousers, when he sits down, than he puts into his employer's work, when he sits down to it. These are over-nice fellows, who will never do anything that is worth while, until they let themselves go.

As a matter of fact, the resource of life is not scant except in the feeble-minded. Nature has a way of filling in at the bottom, as we take off at the top. One of the best services done to the youth of America, and England, has been rendered by athletic sports, which have taught young men to go in, and not mind what happens. And in the ordinary business of life, as in athletics, there must be a careful, previous training, but it is not completed, before work is begun. The training and work go on together. The work is the training. But, immediately someone rises, who is afraid of himself, afraid of expending himself, afraid somebody will see him in an awkward pose, afraid of "not getting his due," afraid of everything except his health,—which rarely enters into his thinking. He says, "If I let myself go, I am sure to make mistakes." A very good recent saying is this: "A man who does not make mistakes does not make anything else."

The fact is, we learn partly by our blunders and partly by our successes, and no right-minded man makes a blunder, from inexperience, which cannot be corrected the next day. The blunders that are made from being wrong-headed, and evil-minded, are not of this kind, and to such as may be described by these terms, one has nothing to say but that they must cast out the evil spirit. To tell such as are possessed by evil temper, low passions, and unclean impulses, to let themselves go, would be simply putting them upon the path of dissipation. We rather turn to those who are over-careful of themselves, with the exhortation to let oneself go.

Two or three things regarding ourselves we must be sure of. First, we should be absolutely sincere. A man has a right to claim that for himself. He has a right to know whether the claim is true.

A Very Naughty Doll.

Here is a story of a little girl who had been misbehaving, and for punishment her mother threatened to go away and leave her. The little girl was sitting on the floor playing with her doll while mother was putting on her bonnet. "Give me a kiss, mamma, before you go away," she said. "No, not one. I could not kiss anyone who has been so naughty," answered her mother, and by this time her bonnet was on, and she was in the act of opening the door when she heard her little girl say to her doll: "You are a very naughty doll, Jessie, and I will go away and leave you until you are good. No, I will not give you one kiss, you are so naughty. I'll just put on my hat and go with mamma." and she did, for mamma was not able to cope with this brilliant piece of strategy.—Ex.

A CHANGE OF A LIFETIME.

After two years careful study of the mineral formation of Baxter County, Arkansas, Elder Joseph Ward organized the White River Mining Co., interesting some of the best citizens of the County, and they have located 3,380 acres of the best mineral land there. Lack of transportation has retarded the development of that section, but the White River R. is now building and when completed will run through some of this land.

In order to develop this property we will sell 1,000 shares in blocks of 5 shares or more at 20c on the dollar. Shares are $25.00 par value each and are fully paid up and non-assessable. This offer only holds good until Jan. 1, 1902.

Now is the time to make a small investment which will in the near future bring large returns, for as soon as we begin shipping ore this stock will be worth 100 cents on the dollar. NOTICES.

Elder L. P. Hanson, formerly a member of the Lamoni branch, has been expelled from the church for cause. He claims to represent another church. Signed in behalf of the branch.

JOHN SMITH, J. A. GUNSOLEY, Presidency. Lamoni, Iowa, Nov. 8.

To the Branches of the Northeast Missouri District.—We your district officers do herein kindly ask you to honor the Thanksgiving proclamation issued by the President of the United States and gather to your places of worship on the day set apart, November 28th, and there hold a Thanksgiving service. We further ask that each member give a free-will or Thanksgiving offering of whatever amount each one feels to give, to be given to the Bishop's agent for the good of the work. Those who are not in reach of branch service can hold family service and do likewise.

Yours for the cause, J. A. TANNER, Dist. Pres. F. T. MUSSELL, Viced Pres. 708 Rogers St., Columbia, Mo., Nov. 8.

To the Saints of the Northeast Texas and Choctaw District, Greating.—As the current year is drawing to a close, I thought perhaps a brief report of the condition of our district, along with one or two other suggestions might not be amiss.

At our last conference at Douglas, Texas, the attendance was good and the Saints seemed to receive strength and encouragement. The preaching and testimony services were all, as I believe, highly satisfactory and entertaining from first to last, and all seemed to return to their homes feeling that good had been accomplished.

The reports from Brn. Erwin and Henson, who labor in northern Texas, have been encouraging. Bro. J. W. Jackson and the local forces have not been idle in western Arkansas, all laboring as best they could under the circumstances, and we believe that good has been accomplished.

Bro. H. O. Smith held forth for a number of days at Cove and Grannis and some were baptized at Grannis; the work there seems to be in a fairly good condition and some are interested. I am highly pleased to state that the Wilburton branch is in a much better condition than it has been for a long time and all seem to be working with a renewed determination to push forward the work. Bro. Grimes has been in charge of the work there for some time with good results. They now have the material on the ground and a good house of worship partly under construction, which we hope will be finished by the time that our next quarterly conference convenes at that place, which will be November 23, 1901. We hope to have a good attendance. The president of the mission, Bro. H. O. Smith, will be there, and we rather expect Bro. W. N. Robinson, who is an able Sunday School instructor, to be in attendance. Also some of the Saints from Independence expect to be there to assist with the funds.

As the funds in the general treasury of the church for the support of the missionaries are at this time very low, we hope the Saints will remember the necessities of the work along temporal lines. In the past you have come nobly to the rescue of the financial arm of the service, and while the present year has not been one of great prosperity, still we hope and believe that through individual effort enough titling will be forthcoming to prevent any of the missionaries having to leave their fields of labor for lack of assistance. Trusting that we may have a full attendance at our coming conference and that a profitable time may be had, I am, Your brother, ELIAS SMITH, District Bishop. Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 4.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

LAMONI STAKE.

The second conference of Lamoni Stake convened at Lamoni, October 26, 1901, at 10 a. m. Pres. John Smith was chosen to preside, assisted by J. A. Gunsolley; B. M. Anderson secretary, assisted by C. Though the loss is keenly felt, and we mourn our sore affliction, we humbly bow to the decree, 'It is appointed unto man once to die,' conscious of the fact that while the old must die, the young may die, and we take to ourselves the solemn admonition to be prepared for the coming of the pale messenger.

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder

The difference of cost between a good and a poor baking powder would not amount for a family's supply to one dollar a year. The poor powder would cause doctors' bills many times this.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is the most economical in the end, because it goes further in leavening and insures perfect, wholesome food.

Used always in making the biscuit and cake it saves both health and money. Made from pure, grape cream of tartar, most healthful of fruit acids.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

NOTE.—You cannot, if you value good health, afford to use cheap, low-grade baking powders. They are mostly, in spite of the pure food laws, made from alum, which endangers the health. All physicians will tell you that such powders in food are injurious.

DIED.

STEWART.—At Rosedale, Kansas, October 24, 1901, Emma F., daughter of Sr. Frances M. Stewart, aged 10 years. Interment at Independence cemetery.

ALLEN.—At Kansas City, Missouri, November 3, 1901, Bro. John Franklin Allen. Born in Pennsylvania in 1862; baptized into the church at Maysville, Mo., in 1885 by Elder Emley Curtis. Funeral November 4th in charge of Bro. Frank Parker; sermon by Bishop W. H. Pease.

NICHOLS.—At Malone, New York, October 26, 1901, of heart failure, Bro. Silas Nichols, aged 65 years and 8 months. He was true and faithful to the cause of Christ which he loved so well, and was beloved by the Saints of the Norton Creek, P. Q., branch over whom he presided as priest. He leaves a loving wife, one daughter and three sons to mourn his absence.

The Christmas Number of the Delineator.

A fitting climax to a year of remarkable advancement is the Delineator for December, between the covers of which is contained a rare collection of special features of varied interest. The winter fashions are pictured and described in detail; there is a delightful article on the Floral Fetes of Japan, illustrated in colors; the home surroundings of several stage favorites are entertainingly presented and described; there are three splendid stories by well known authors, together with illustrated articles on holiday fancy-work and homemade gifts; new recipes, entertainments, and a wealth of other material of seasonable nature, devoted to the pleasure and profit of every member of the household.—Butterick Publishing Co., 7-13 W. 13th St., New York.

"Faulty Creeds," by Elder R. C. Evans, 20 cents each.

This Puzzles Everybody.

Take the number of your living brothers. Double that number. Add to it three. Multiply the result by five. Add to it the number of living sisters. Multiply the result by ten. Add number of deaths of brothers and sisters. Subtract 150 from the result. The right hand figure will be the number of deaths, middle figure will be the number of living sisters, and the left figure will show the number of living brothers.—The Messenger, Owensville, Ind., Oct. 31.

HIS MISSION.

The coming of the Lord Jesus Christ into this world was in fulfillment of a purpose which had its inception in the love of God for man and the necessity for saving him from the awful consequences of his transgression. He was in darkness, cut off from the hope of life, until the plan of redemption was revealed from heaven and it was made known that through the offering—the atonement of the Only Begotten Son—he might again, through obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ, be brought into life eternal. For this act of beneficence man should, under all conditions be everlastingly grateful, for it is through no imperfection of the plan of salvation or insufficiency in the atonement that a single individual shall "come short of the glory of God." Every one who hears the gospel has an equal opportunity of embracing it, and by obedience to its precepts to obtain every benefit promised to such as are faithful and obedient. Those who do not have the privilege of comprehending what the gospel requires at their hands cannot, in equity, be condemned by its laws, but must be judged by that law which they have accepted as a rule of faith and practice, until opportunity of accepting or rejecting the control of that high and perfect law of the gospel is had.

In answering the inquiry of Pilate, "Art thou a king then?" the Savior replied:

"To this end I was born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.—John 18: 37.

Again we have His testimony on this wise:

I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment what I should say and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.—John 12: 49, 50.

There is a class of individuals in the world—perhaps we might say several of them—who, while admitting that Jesus was a good man, they yet refuse to give credence to the claim which he himself makes to divinity. They occupy a very inconsistent position, for an imposter—one who makes a fraudulent claim—cannot be a good man. But their unbelief in no way affects the fact that Jesus is all that he claimed for himself. It will affect their condition if it is true, for the apostle very forcefully says:

For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.—John 3: 17-19.

This plainly indicates that a failure to recognize and acknowledge the mission of Jesus as the Christ, the Redeemer, will bring condemnation to the individual so offending. "He that believeth not, is condemned already." He may not realize it, but condemnation really rests upon every one who rejects the Messiahship of Jesus, for no man who hears the gospel is left without opportunity to obtain satisfactory evidence for himself that Jesus really is the Christ and is abundantly able to fulfill every promise He has made. It is but reasonable therefore that those who treat so lightly this great privilege that they neglect to give it the serious consideration their own interests and happiness demands of them must suffer for their lack of wisdom and "come short" of the glory for which Christ died to make possible for them. He came into the world to bear witness of the truth; He spoke not of Himself, He declares; but bore His testimony that the commandment of the Father is "life everlasting," therefore whatsoever the Father said or commanded Him, that He spake to the children of men.

This fact makes it obligatory upon all men who are able to comprehend this language, to heed the doctrines the Savior taught, for they are all the commandments of the Father; the man who despises the claims of Jesus the Christ, is just as much in rebellion against God the eternal Father in that act, as he is against the Savior. And this failure to honor the teachings of the Lord Jesus is rendered the more reprehensible and unjustifiable from the fact that every one may obtain an indisputable personal testimony of their truth, if he will, by simply doing as they enjoin upon him. Nothing can be fairer than this; and why any one should decline to place himself in condition to apply the test, when the issues are so momentous, is a mystery only solvable in the explanation given by the Savior for the condemnation resting upon men; they "loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." It is an "evil" thing to turn away from the light of the grand truths revealed in the gospel of Jesus Christ, and many are, to their everlasting sorrow and shame, to find this out at the judgment seat.

When we reflect upon what the Lord has done that he might glorify and exalt mankind, the mind is unable to comprehend what more could have been done than has been done to that end. He might have so controlled as to save all men in one glory, regardless of whether or not they were willing to work for and show themselves worthy of it by obedience, and that is precisely what "Lucifer, the Son of the Morning," proposed doing; but that would have left man without the glory of "working out his own salvation, and resulting in placing all the glory for his saving upon one individual, and that was contrary to the wisdom and justice of the Almighty. He evidently is willing that man shall have the satisfaction of being a factor in his own redemption; that since he was brought under forfeiture of eternal life, by transgression, he might have the opportunity and glory of redeeming himself, by obedience to the commandments of the Lord, though under very different and adverse conditions, to those in which it was his privilege to work when first placed upon the earth; a time when it was perfect, as it came from the hands of a perfect Creator and when it was under perfect conditions, all things uniting in blessing man's occupancy.

The mission of Christ was one of blessing to man; "on earth peace, good will toward men." No single instruction which he gave contains aught in it, that by complying with it, disaster or hurt will be experienced; in all cases it is simply the revelation of a higher law than that conceived by man for his government, and in every instance tends to his exaltation and glory. God is glorified when his image is reflected in his children, because they, in realizing the happiness there is in that condition, will joyfully accord him grateful homage and loving service through all eternity. This joy could not be theirs if they could have no part in working out their salvation; but as Jesus Christ came as the exponent of that perfect law found in the everlasting gospel, and himself exemplified its perfect workings in his own life, every one who follows him therein will partake of his life and his glory. This was his declaration in that inspiring prayer recorded in John 17:

And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them: that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and loved them, as thou hast loved me.—Verses 22, 23.

This is evidence of the blessing which his mission confers upon men who "obey him," as the apostle Paul states in Hebrews 5: 9; and in writing of conditions as they shall exist when the results of that mission shall have been fully realized, he says:

And when all things shall be subdued unto him [Jesus] then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.—1 Cor. 15: 28.

When this takes place and the Father assumes again the control which he gave to the Son until the redemptive work is completed, and Jesus becomes the "elder brother," there is no ceasing of the honor and glory due him for the stupendous work which he shall have accomplished, but those who stand to him in the relation of brethren, will do so because they have been exalted through following his example, and being obedient to the commands of the Father. Truly his mission is a blessing of inestimable worth to mankind, if they will order their lives and form their characters in accordance with his precepts. He bore witness of the truth. Study his testimony and that of his brethren, follow their instructions as they laid them down and left them on record, and the mission of Christ will accomplish its work and purpose for you.

A USEFUL BOOK.

An interesting and instructive little book of 71 pages has just been published under the auspices of the Daughters of Zion, entitled "Fireside Talks With Our Girls." The subjects as indexed are, Law, the house in which you live, food, sleep, breathing, hindrances to deep breathing, tight clothing, exercise, bathing, special physiology, and a chat with Doctor West. The book is written in a spicy, narrative form and is just as its title indicates, nice little chats upon such subjects as are of vital import to the happiness and usefulness of such an important part of the world's inhabitants as "Our Girls." God bless them; what an important place they occupy in life; how they brighten the home; how they enliven society, and what ministrations of charity and sweetness they so often bring to the afflicted, the aged and infirm. And this little book tells them some things needful to enable them to fully enjoy their life; to enlarge their usefulness and make them a blessing in a fuller sense to all around them.

The author is deserving of commendation for the interesting and instructive way in which facts have been presented. Get a copy, girls, read it carefully and thoughtfully; think seriously of the privileges and possibilities it opens to you; give its instructions a thorough trial and thank your heavenly Father for the noble and interested friends He has raised up in the Daughters of Zion, who are so regardful of your welfare.

Mothers, all of you, see that your daughters have the opportunity to read this book, and, with the consecrated author, pray that the truths here inculcated may incite a deeper love for all truth, to their development in all that is noble and good. "Fireside Talks With Our Girls" may be obtained from the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, 20 cents in paper covers; 30 cents in limp cloth.

Elder Chas. R. Duncan.

We were deeply pained by the information in Bro. Baker's letter from Husted, Colorado, in this issue, that our much esteemed brother, Elder Chas. R. Duncan, was so near the end of his pilgrimage on earth. This prediction was confirmed in a note from Bro. Alma B. Hanson from Colorado Springs, dated November 18th, as follows:

Our esteemed brother, C. R. Duncan, passed to the beyond at 11:30 p. m. on the 17th inst. Death came without apparent pain, and he was rational to the last minute. A strong testimony was borne by him near the last to the latter day work. His remains will be accompanied to Coal Hill, Missouri, by Bro. Baker, his widow's father, for interment here. More later.

We mourn the loss of a good man and faithful brother, but the sorrow at the parting is all with we who remain; he has entered into his rest. His nobility of character, his generous and unselfish nature, endeared him to all who knew him. He delighted in the extension of the knowledge of the gospel of Christ, and while strength was permitted him was actively and zealously engaged in that work. He was well prepared to meet the issue and will surely have a glorious rest. We extend sympathy to Sr. Duncan and family, his brother, W. C. Duncan, and other relatives, in their bereavement. May the sweet consolations of the Spirit comfort them in the thought of the happy uniting when their life work has also been well wrought as has our brother's.

PRES. G. H. HULMES reports a series of well attended preaching services at Post Oak, Missouri, ending on the night of October 31st, having lasted one week, less one night. Elder S. J. Madden has, with the help of the Saints there, done an excellent work, having baptized twelve persons in the last few weeks. By vote of the Saints and consent of the missionary in charge, a branch was organized by Pres. Hulmes, Friday, November 1st, to be known as the Post Oak, Missouri, branch. Elder S. J. Madden was elected president. Bro. Henry Houts for priest, Alfred Madden for teacher, and Wesley Ravell for deacon, were mentioned by Pres. Hulmes as having, under the Spirit's direction, been suggested to him, and on motion it was decided that they be so ordained. Bro. Alfred Madden and Wesley Ravell were ordained by Pres. Hulmes and Elder S. J. Madden. Bro. Houts will be ordained as soon as letter from his former branch is received. The Spirit's power was manifested throughout the proceedings and the Saints are hopeful of good results. They have fitted up a former storeroom, and made quite a neat chapel of it. The reception accorded Bro. Hulmes, on both occasions of his visits there, both by the Saints and those not numbered with us, was courteous and kind in every respect. He has rarely seen better order and attention any where, both by young and old.

Extracts from Letters.

ELDER T. W. CHATBURN wrote from Wheatland, Mo., Oct. 31: "The debate [with Rev. Carlin] is over, and it was a glorious victory for the truth. In some ways this has been the hardest battle of my life, but it is also the grandest victory. We erect the tent today and continue meetings over Sunday. Some are near the water and we think will obey before long. Saints are rejoicing and all is well.

ELDER WM. A. SMITH, Mondamin, Iowa, November 9th:

We closed our series of meetings at Sandy Point, where I have been since the Dow City reunion, last Sunday night, November 3d. We had good attendance and attention. Baptized one noble young man, Wm. Metz, a blind brother, and left others near the kingdom. An holding meetings at the Echo school-house northeast of Mondamin at the present. Have good attendance and fair interest and hope the good Lord will bless our efforts there. Will try and do our duty and leave the results with Him.

BRO. R. E. WELLS, Monroe, Michigan:

We have not heard a sermon since we left Springfield, Missouri, one year ago last June. We are living in the southeast corner of Michigan and we are the only Saints here. Elder Durand has called upon us twice, and Elder Cushman stopped over Sunday with us this summer. We enjoyed their visits very much; they are the only Saints we have seen since coming here. The Utah folks have had two elders here for three months this summer preaching on the streets; they have called on us and seemed like very nice boys. I admired their bravery, for really they put in anything but a pleasant summer, for they were scored on all sides. We would be glad to have any of the ministry passing this way to call on us, Navara street, five blocks from First Street.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE

There will be a musicale at the home of Bro. R. G. Smith, 905 W. Maple avenue, Friday evening, November 29th. An unusually fine program is promised. Admission 25 cents. Proceeds for the benefit of the Religion piano fund.

President G. H. Hulmes left for Holden, Missouri, Wednesday, to conduct a series of meetings there this week.

Elder A. H. Parsons departed for Cleveland, Ohio, Tuesday to resume his mission work in that field.

Bro. Wm. Crick, who is suffering from a severe bronchial affection left Tuesday afternoon for Riverside, California. Later he will go to southeastern Texas. We hope his trip will result in a renewal of his health.

Sunday morning Bishop Hilliard gave the Saints an educational discourse upon consecration, which was much appreciated. At night Bro. O. B. Thomas presented some good thoughts in his logical manner, to the edification of his hearers. The afternoon service was very good indeed, giving joy and comfort to the participants.

The weather continues very fine. It has been quite cool the past few days, but no snow has fallen as yet, the sunshine predominating largely over the cloudy days. The paving men are pleased and are taking advantage of the situation, as are the builders. Bro. Frank Mill's house on West Short street is enclosed, and the carpenters began raising. Bro. H. R. Mills' new home on same street, Tuesday morning. This has been a very favorable fall for outdoor work.

Claude Harold, the 10 year old son of Sr. Mary Bell, living on Alton street, South Side, while jumping on a moving freight car on the Missouri Pacific Railway, last Saturday afternoon, met with a distressing accident that terminated his life at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. It appears he was jumping on the oil boxes and hanging on the hand rails, as he had seen brakemen do sometimes when switching, his foot slipped off the box upon the rail, and he was thrown in such a manner that the car ran over his leg above the knee, and both foot and leg were crushed. After the train passed he got up on his other foot, holding the injured member in his hands and made his way down the track opposite Bro. Blatt's home, where he slid down the embankment and lay until his uncle, Mr. Hines came and got him home. The injured member was amputated near the thigh joint, and it was thought he would survive, but the shock was too great and he died as stated. The funeral took place from the home at 1:45 p. m. Sunday, Bro. Earl Corthell preaching a very comforting discourse, after which the remains were taken to Downs, Kansas, for interment by the side of his father. We have been thus particular in giving details of the accident that parents may see the necessity of having a closer supervision over their children, to keep them away from the railroad yards; they have no business there. The wonder is that more accidents of this character do not occur. Sr. Bell and family have the sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

Sr. A. J. Headlee, who has been staying with the family of Bro. James Farrow recently, received a telegram Friday evening of last week, that Bro. Headlee had been killed by the cars at Council Bluffs, Iowa, Thursday night. No particulars were given. He had been in poor health, unable to do any work for sometime, and was probably on his way to Colorado to his sons, when the accident happened. Sr. Headlee left for Council Bluffs Friday night.

A couple giving the name of Dr. G. W. Day and wife, reached Independence this week, having come, as they stated, from Seattle, Washington. They presented a letter of removal to one of the branch officers which was found to be from the Brighamite organization. They state they heard the elders of the Reorganization preach the gospel in Clinton, Missouri, district—if we are rightly informed—and became convinced of its truth; they went west and say when they were baptized they supposed it was into this church.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Here too, Mr. Editor, for it seems our last weeks' items went amiss, as they were mailed on Monday. Our missionary in charge, Bro. I. N. White passed through our city on Saturday headed for the Nodaway district to engage in his usual work, preaching the gospel. Our pull was not strong enough to hold him in St. Joseph, but bye and bye. He looks well and feels cheerful.

We were called on the 10th to preach the funeral of Don Carlos, youngest child of Sr. Mary Hinderks, of the German branch, six miles north of Stewartsville, Missouri. He was accidentally wounded on the Friday previous by the discharge of a gun from which he died in a short time. He was a youth of thirteen summers, of good promise, and the idol of the household. Three older brothers, a sister and a widowed mother remain. Garbrother C. P. Paul, had charge of the funeral.

Our series of meetings was quite successful last week, and will continue another week. Interest was added to the meetings by the aid of our good singers; also Bro. H. O. Smith preached for us some excellent sermons. He will aid us as long as he remains in the city, which will be but a few more days.

Bro. R. Archibald, of St. Louis preached at the church yesterday morning, and Bro. H. O. Smith in the evening. The prayer meeting was said to be good.

We hear of the good time had at the Prayer Union last Thursday. A good attendance and spiritual feast. Success to the Prayer Union.

In the last seven days St. Joseph has had fifteen sermons, four prayer meetings, four Sunday Schools and two Religio's held, as a witness for or against.

Onward until victory.

FIRST KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

The sister societies of the branch are making a strong effort to have a successful social and oyster supper, Tuesday evening, November 26th, on Prospect avenue and 26th street. They will also have a number of useful articles for sale. They extend a cordial invitation to all the Saints in Kansas City and Independence; a program is being talked of besides the other attractions of the social.

We were much disappointed in not having Pres. Hulmes to preach for us last Sunday at 11 a. m., but his place was very ably filled by Elder Geo. Hicklin, from Armstrong, his subject was the kingdom of God. He made many strong points confirmatory of the church. The prayer meeting in charge of Pres. Winn and F. C. Warnky was a season of joy and comfort to all present. The evening sermon was by Bro. Winn, the attendance was not as large as it might have been, but, the sermon was good.

It is being talked of to put a furnace in the church, we hope it may be done, it will give us more room in our little church.

The Religio will have a special program Thanksgiving evening to which an invitation is extended to the five different branches of the church in the city.

The health of the Saints is much improved, all are up and well except little Myrtle, daughter of Sr. Stewart, at Rosedale, she is out of danger but yet confined to the house.

Bro. H. Ashbaugh has gone to Pueblo, Colorado, and his family will leave us next week. The prayers and well wishes of all the Saints follow them, and may our brother's labors there be crowned with success.

Sr. Rode has also left us and has taken up her abode in the city of the Saints, Independence.

The time of the debate between Elder E. C. Wainly and Rev. J. Geddens, of the Christian church, of Eldorado Springs, has been changed and is now arranged to begin December 2d at 7 p. m., at Montevall, Missouri, to continue for twelve evenings of two hour sessions each evening; each affirms his respective church. Quite an interest is manifested by the people, and the debate is looked forward to as one of the great events of that place.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

First Chicago Branch, 8 So. Wood St., Sunday School at 1:30, preaching at 3 and 7:30 p. m.; Central Branch, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., Sunday School at 9:30 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman, preaching at 10:30 a. m., followed by Sunday School, preaching at 7:30 p. m.; Graves' Mission, 2458 State St.

The meetings yesterday were, preaching at West Pullman, by Bro. F. M. Pitt; South side, by Bro. Good and Sheehy; on West side, Bro. Sheehy and Strange. The evening services at both the latter places were well attended by outsiders. Bro. McCallum reports the interest as continuing at South Chicago.

Do you know any Saints in or around Benton Harbor, Michigan? Assume those interested are to go there to live.

A lady way out in the state of Washington writes here, that she is interested in Chicago items as found in the ENSIGN. Why not blow your own horn?

Bro. Wilcox, of Plano, has been with us the past week. Bro. Clare Sherman was on hand Sunday with his artistic black board work, assisting Superintendent Penny at the Sunday School on the west side. That spider web affair was excellent.

Last Friday eve the Willing Workers society gave a New England supper on the west side, which was a decided success. About sixty plates were served, netting them some over $20.00. These auxiliaries, in the shape of sisters' societies, do a vast amount of good work in a quiet way, much of which never comes to light so far as public demonstration is concerned. This society has a record such as helping the sick, flowers for funerals, carpet, matting, curtains, coal, clock, linen for sacrament table, screens, paper, paint for the place of public worship. Let the good work continue notwithstanding some discouragements by those who are given to "croak" a little, a weakness humanity is subject to somewhat.

It was Bro. Haynes, of Aurora, that visited us last week, and not as was reported, by mistake.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Nov. 9.

Dear Ensign and Saints:—I arrived at Independence on October 26th; on the 30th was sent by Bro. I. N. White to meet A. Carlin in discussion at Wheatland, Missouri, whom I found lecturing in the Baptist church against Mormonism. After he was through I arose, made myself known, and asked him if he was ready to discuss church propositions. After much talk and considerable diplomacy—Carlin trying to evade a discussion—we finally signed his own propositions and the debate was on three days on each question.

Carlin objected finally to the president, claiming he was unfair because he ruled in my favor on every occasion. A new president was selected, Carlin growling continuously because he also ruled in my favor. (Carlin did not refer to my scriptural argument, but poured out his wiles of wrath upon the devoted head of Joseph Smith.) At the right place I impeached his Utah library with Judge Phillips decision, and classed him with Hec, Beadle, Stenhouse, Robinson, Brigham Young, et al., as still peddling the infamous falsehood that had been so declaimed by the supreme courts of the land, therefore Carlin in league and in company with them as lawbreakers, disregarding the highest tribunals of the land. His suggestion of Baptist church a total failure, so much so, he jumped two sessions of his own affirmation, and left me victor and in possession of the field.

Bro. F. Sawley and Wm. H. Maninger rendered valuable service all through the debate. I baptized two promising men, and some three or four others were to be baptized by Bro. Sawley very soon.

I enjoyed the discussion far more than any previous one; the prejudice was laid and enemies turned to be friends; Saints were confirmed and the truth of the gospel unsullied.

I shall start for Wisconsin on Monday, November 11th. My field address will be Madison, Wisconsin, for a time. The debate with Carlin has delayed my return, which, no doubt, will be excusable when the facts are known.

"The Jots" will be continued from "Voree," as indicated in the last.

T. W. CHATBURN.

OAKLAND, Calif., Nov. 4.

Dear Ensign:—Our church is located at corner of 16th and Magnolia Sts. Elder F. B. Blair returned last Tuesday from quite an extended visit at Fort Bidwell, Modoc Co. Sr. Billups and her sister, Mrs. Mason, accompanied him home and are now visiting among the Saints of the Bay cities. Elder Blair preached in San Francisco Sunday morning and at Oakland in the evening.

Sunday was our usual sacrament service in charge of Bro. Price and Cockerton. The social service was well attended and a growing spirituality is plainly noticeable.

A Hallowe'en social was held at the residence of Bro. and Sr. Morrison October 31st, which was largely attended. The house was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and berries; refreshments consisted largely of ginger bread, pumpkin pie, fruit and elder (sweet, of course). Proceeds for painting the church.

Srs. Cobb and Smith took the train Saturday evening for Sacramento, intending to spend Sunday with the Saints, resuming their journey on Monday to Portland, Oregon, intending to reach their home in Lamoni, Iowa, in time for Thanksgiving. They will be greatly missed here where they have endeared themselves among the Saints. Sr. Smith returns much improved in health.

The tent season having closed Bro. R. Keeler has returned to the Central district, attending the district conference at Monterey, and is now at San Benito for a short time.

Our general policeman, Bro. J. Cockerton, has been transferred from his beat in East Oakland to one near his home, making it much more convenient for him, and giving the Saints a chance, occasionally, to see him clothed in the dignity of his office.

St. Robinson, of Berkeley, has been suffering a long time, having two large tumors removed by plasters. She is now relieved from them and is doing well.

A number of San Francisco Saints were present at the Hallowe'en social, among them were seen C. A. Parkin and wife, Bro. and Sr. Kaulhan, Mrs. Edna Mills, Daisy Severe, Emma Pooler and several young brethren.

Mrs. E. KEELER.

LONDON, ONTARIO, Nov. 2.

Dear Ensign:—In reading the conference news I feel how truly we can say this latter day work is a "marvelous work and a wonder." Often when I am reading, a feeling of sacred awe comes over me as I look back over the past ages and see God's dealings with the nations of the earth, and then look forward to the great work yet to be accomplished, it seems really wonderful; well could the prophet say, "who may abide the day of his coming or stand when he appeareth," when we know the law of the Lord is perfect. We cannot expect it will lead to us, we must come up to it and hold on to the "rod of iron," for we must be tried, to bring out the gold.

How my heart was led to rejoice when reading Sr. M's report on the Sabbath School work. I think no one could find fault with the Quarterlies if they had been in the Sunday School work when I was first appointed teacher in 1878. I have never been released, and hope never to be in this life, and when my work is done here I have the assurance that I shall be a teacher in the life to come. This knowledge has enabled me to overcome many times when I might have failed, but the Lord has always been my helper.

One Sabbath morning it was bitter cold and I began to complain to myself, What better am I than any one else, they don't even come to school, and here I am nearly perished with the cold or nearly wilted with the heat, and when I came to the corner of the street and saw one of the old superintendents I forgot my trouble, but the Lord did not. A short time after, a young brother sang in tongues and my part was, "I have shielded and protected thee through long years of cold and heat; I am willing still to bless thee if my covenant you will keep." Fancy my feelings; I was chastised worse than any little child. Truly I wept sorely for my weakness.

I love the Sunday School work and the children under my care. I feel for one how much more I would know if I could say I know all the lessons in the Quarterly every Sabbath. I try to do the best I can, but feel there is much room for improvements.

My loving, noble mother has since passed away, Sr. M. A. Quick, to the rest that remaineth for the people of God in the life to come.

Editor Ensign:—Perhaps a few items from this place may be of some interest to your readers. We are few in numbers here but are trying to do our duties as best we can. We have Sunday School at 10 a.m. each Sunday; preaching at 11:30, also preaching in private houses at two places. Our brethren who were ordained at conference here are taking hold each in their turn and trying to present the old Jerusalem gospel.

We are glad to report our Bro. C. R. Duncan is much improved, and in a fair way yet to regain his health; hope the Saints will still remember him. Our place of meeting on Sundays is corner of Heurfanoc and Te-John streets, Union Labor Hall. Missionaries who may come this way, are invited to call.

Editor Ensign:—Just a few lines from this part of the globe may be interesting to some if not all the readers of our dear paper. Looking out upon the river from my window I see nothing but fog, thick and dense, which to a certain degree affects the mind and causes one to long for the land of Zion in her glorious condition when all will be grand and fair. Yet I do not feel "foggy," for I am holding meetings four times a week to attentive audiences who are anxious to hear the gospel story. I have rented a hall about a mile from town, where I have held forth about three weeks, having an attendance of from thirty to fifty, who seem much interested and pay splendid attention, which is very encouraging.

I have lately been informed of a hall in the main part of the city, where I can hold forth as soon as it is seated and the expense would be very reasonable; this I am very glad of, hoping to have a good attendance. The Lord has blessed me with splendid liberty in presenting the word, which is very cheering to me and enables me to hold the attention of the hearers.

Sr. Muccus is well and we both seem to thrive here. Pray for us, dear Saints, that we may have faith and courage to stand against all the opposition here. With love for all truth,
Yours humbly,
FERER MUCCUS.

BIGGS STATION, Oregon, Nov. 2.

Editor Ensign:—Last night we closed a series of meetings at Biglow, Oregon. Elder W. A. Goodwin and I commenced there the evening of Oct. 19th. The attendance and interest has been good from the first. Elder Goodwin left me there last Sunday and returned to Hood River to help the Saints with the building of a new church and to get ready for a tilt with the Christian Adventists. I continued at Biglow until last night. It is the first ground broken by the gospel plow in Sherman county, Oregon, and promises an abundant harvest in the Master's own due time. It was with a promise to return later that we left there.

I am on my way now to join Bro. Goodwin and to assist him in the discussion which will begin on Monday night, the 4th inst., and last probably twelve nights. That the seed sown may be nourished and become fruitful in its season I send a list of names, all of Biglow, Oregon, for the Extension to be sent to each of them. The outlook for the work in this field is fine, but the old story of "few laborers" has its fulfillment also; so will try to help keep the seed sown in growing condition by this method. One name for baptism at Hood River, which will be attended to tomorrow. Ever praying that the work may prosper and trying to work as well as pray, I am,
Your brother in Christ,
A. M. CHASE.

COLUMBIA, Missouri, Nov. 4.

Editor Ensign:—After our district conference—Northeast Missouri district—at Bevier, October 5th and 6th, Bro. J. A. Tanner and I preached there for a few days and on the 12th made a flying trip to Huntsville, or rather to the Hardister neighborhood some three miles northeast of the village—where we have had quite an interest all summer, having conducted thirty days tent work at that point as the closing effort of the season. The work having aroused the ire of some of our religious(?) neighbors, an indignation meeting had convened on the 11th and unanimously decided that we could not use the school-house. Our friends refused to take part in the unlawful affair. When the time for meeting came, however, we had a fair crowd, enough to fill the school-house and we occupied without hindrance, Saturday and Sunday.

On the 14th we called at Higbee and spoke four nights. Bro. Tanner was called by telegram to Macon on the 15th to look after the interests of the work, as a Rev. (?) Mr. Coombs was trying to tell the people all about "Mormonism," the Book of Mormon, etc. He joined me on the train Friday the 18th en route to Boonville, where we began a series of meetings at the house of Mr. (now Bro.) John Barnhart, six miles southeast of Boonville. While there Bro. Tanner baptized him and his wife and their niece, a little girl, and we blessed their three children and left them rejoicing in the marvelous work.

On Sunday the 27th we commenced meetings at the home of Mr. Matt Cochran in Boonville. We were blessed in declaring the word and on Thursday went again to the water where Bro. Tanner baptized another noble soul, Bro. James Cochran, and confirmed him at the home of Bro. Barnhart. Bro. Wells, take note how the work moves in this part: one by one they are coming in. On Saturday the 2d inst. we came to Columbia and are holding forth at the home of Bro. Alfred N. Evans, 708 Rogers St. We have some good Saints here and will be glad when we can see a good strong branch here in the Athens of Missouri. Hoping and praying for the final triumph, I am,
Your brother in bonds,
WALTER W. SMITH.

HUSTED, Cal., Nov. 16.

Editor Ensign:—A little more than a month and a half ago, I was requested, by my daughter, to come to Colorado Springs and help to care for her husband, Elder C. R. Duncan. Since that time I have been almost constantly with him. He is, at this writing, very near the end; his mind, once so strong, is wandering over the scenes of the past. He is leaving us sad, but with a bright hope of a happy meeting in the near future.

Often while watching him through his sufferings, while his body was being racked with pain, the question has come to me, Why all this suffering? We cannot tell why it is, so we can only bear our burdens as patiently as possible, looking forward to a glorious future, made possible to us by this beautiful gospel plan. What a glorious thing to contemplate, when the Saints will inhabit this beautiful earth in its glorified condition.

Dear Saints, no doubt before this reaches you, Charley will have passed beyond the confines of this earth life. He has spoken so often of those he has been associated with here on earth, that I thought possibly it might be of interest to many of the Saints to hear from him.

In gospel bonds,
F. T. BAKER.

LA CONNER, Wash., Nov. 12.

Editor Ensign:—I enclose a dollar to renew my subscription to the ENSIGN, as I desire to have its ever welcome visit to my home, and especially so in my new home in Washington (state), as there is no branch here, and very few Saints. We left our Iowa home the 11th day of September, and arrived in La Conner safe and sound, but very tired after a journey of nearly 2000 miles. We are enjoying reasonably good health and are nearly settled into our new home. The weather is quite unsettled and the rainy season has begun. It rains a great deal here during the winter months, but very seldom snows in the Puget Sound country.

If any of the missionaries come out in our country, they will find a warm welcome in our home, and I also send regards to all the members of the Mallard branch of Iowa, of which I was a member: may the good work move on. It is my earnest prayer that some of the missionaries may be sent here to help us do some good among the people. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion.

Yours in the faith,
Mrs. JAS. CHRISTENSEN.

HUMHOLDT, Neb., Nov. 14.

Dear Ensign:—As I sit in my room in the hotel this evening, I feel somewhat lonesome, so I will try and write a few lines for your columns. I feel lonely as I am away from home and loved ones; when I hear the church bells ringing tears come to my eyes many times, for I think how thankful I would be if it was a Latter Day Saint church, so that I could attend. The people around here with whom I have talked, have never heard of the Saints, except one lady who used to live at Joplin, Missouri, and had attended the Saints meetings there. I have distributed twenty ENSIGNS lately. I have attended the Christian and Methodist churches since I came here, but it doesn't seem like attending our own meetings; there is something lacking. I am striving to come up higher; I don't have very much time to read, but I have my Bible with me, and I try to read at least one chapter every day; and many sent me some ENSIGNS, which are such a comfort to me; they encourage me to press on. It seems somewhat discouraging sometimes, for no one around you is trying to do right. The young people seem to be kind-hearted, but the pleasures of this world, and the fashion, is all they appear to think of, but I feel that my heavenly Father will watch over me if I put my trust in him.

I would be so glad to live where there were some Saints. I ask the young Saints everywhere to remember me in their prayers, those who can attend church, to think of one who cannot, and among strangers. I want to attend General Conference if the Lord is willing. Trusting we all may so live that we may meet in the sweet by and by, where parting will be no more, I will close by sending my love to all the Saints.

Your sister,
MISS LILLIE SPURGIN.

LEE'S SUMMIT, Mo., Nov. 6th.

Editor Ensign:—I have a desire to speak of the goodness of God, and the many blessings I have received from time to time. I have gone to the Lord in prayer many times when suffering such distress and pain in my lungs that it seemed I could not endure it and do the work that I had to do, but thank the good Father I have always found relief, when I would go to him in humble prayer and ask for what I needed.

I have had many testimonies of this work, but it would not be wise to try to speak of them all, so I will only speak of one that happened some time last spring: while eating some fish for my breakfast one morning a bone lodged in my throat, and it was so painful I thought I had better go to the doctor and have it taken out, but when the doctor examined my throat he could find nothing, but said the bone had cut my throat badly as it went down, and that was what caused the pain. But when I got home I soon found it was still there, and it was so distressing and getting worse so fast, that I felt that something must be done; and while I was wondering what I would do if it kept on getting worse, something said, go and take some oil. I went at once, got the oil, went into an other room, closed the door, and took a teaspoonful of it, then asked the Lord that if I was one of his children, to make it known to me by removing the bone from my throat immediately. I knelt down, and as I began to pray, I felt the bone going down, and that was the last I felt of it; I truly thanked God for such a blessing, and rejoiced to know that there was a God who heard and answered prayer in these last days the same as he did in former days, and that he is no respecter of persons.

Dear Saints, I often think what grand privileges we as a people enjoy; if we would only make use of all the opportunities that we have of doing good, and hearing our testimony, we might drop a word that would find root in some honest heart. I must acknowledge that I am not as faithful in discharging my duty as I should be, but my desire is to overcome my weaknesses, and to this end I ask an interest in the prayers of all the faithful that God may give me his Spirit to guide me in the straight and narrow path, and that we may all hear it said well done good and faithful servant, is my prayer.

UNIVERSAL SALVATION.

The Ebeling-Riggie Debate.

SIXTH SPEECH.

We are here this evening to take under consideration a very important question, a question perhaps that might seem a little strange to some of you. But do you not know that almost all truth at first seems strange? And one of the grandest rules by which we may determine a truth is its strangeness and, oftentimes, its unpopularity. This is an excellent rule by which we might govern the controversy.

The question before us this evening is that all mankind will finally be saved; or, in other words, no doubt it will resolve itself into this—that the punishments of God some time will come to an end. This evening I am going to lay down a basis by which we might know whether the Bible is correctly interpreted or not, and that basis is this: Whenever an individual places an interpretation upon a scripture which in the least detracts from the glory, wisdom, eternal justice and fatherly care, or rather nature, of God, there is something wrong with the interpretation. The infidel comes to Christians something like this, or at least some so-called Christians: "Why if that is the kind of a God you worship I do not want to have anything to do with him." Now we have a certain class of people in the world today who believe in what we call predestination; that is, certain individuals are predestined from the beginning to be saved in the eternal glory of God, and they cannot be otherwise, because God has placed his eternal stamp upon them and they could not fall if they wanted to, because God said when he made you, "You be saved, and cannot be damned," and the teeming millions are going to be damned in endless torment because God did not say when he made them, "You be saved." We have some people, quite a number, in the world who believe and teach that kind of doctrine. But I thank God this evening that men's minds are becoming broader, and they are beginning to look upon God as a real Father. Why, that beautiful prayer where we say, "Our Father which art in heaven"—Oh, how much that means to say, "Our Father!" Well, I am happy tonight that thousands are beginning to realize the significance of that prayer when they say, "Our Father." And I say that whoever will take a position that will throw any discredit upon that sacred term, he is doing violence to the word of God. An infidel comes in and criticizes the believer in the Bible for presenting to the world such a God. Now I lay that down as a basis for interpreting scripture, that we should do so in such a way that instead of casting a reflection upon the eternal wisdom and purpose of God, that it might bring glory, might, power and praise.

I shall start out to prove that God is going to reward every man according to his works. I am going to establish that as an eternal principle of God—that he is going to reward every man as his works shall be. In Matthew 10:42 we have this language: "And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward." You see here that Jesus Christ offers a reward to any one who will just give a cup of cold water to a disciple, and that is just about as little a thing as we can do, although he is going to get his reward.

We turn next to Mark 9:41: "For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because you belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward." Romans 2: 5, 6: "But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgments of God; who will render to every man according to his deeds." We are told here that God is going to give a reward to every man. Now I wish to emphasize that word every man, because we are taught by so many in this world of beliefs that only certain ones are going to receive a reward. We are told by so many that unless we subscribe to a certain document or to a certain creed, or, in other words, unless you are a member of "our church," you go to hell. Now, I want to disabuse your minds of that false idea. I am going to talk slow tonight, and shall endeavor to during the remainder of this discussion, because I want this to go down in print just about as I say it. And I think I have everything about my own way now, since I have demolished his hobby on the kingdom. Now, then, the field is clear, and I want to talk slow that I may make the proper impression.

We next turn to 2 Corinthians 5: 10: "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." 2 Corinthians 11: 13-15 reads: "For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore, it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works." You will notice here, my friends, in every quotation, that you will be rewarded according to your works or deeds, and not according to your profession, not according to your creed or church.

Turn again to 2 Timothy 4: 14: "Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil: the Lord reward him according to his works." 1 Peter 1: 17: "And if ye call on the Father, who, without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's works, pass the time of your sojourning here in fear." Revelation 2: 23: "And I will kill her children with death; and all the churches shall know that I am he that searchest the reins and hearts: and I will give unto every one of you according to your works." Revelation 20: 12-14: "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death."

I think now I have quoted sufficient to establish this fact, that God judgeth according to our works. I do not know how my good opponent holds this, but I hope he will plainly state it when he gets up to make his negative argument; whether he believes that there are but two places, heaven and hell, and he will be doing me quite a favor if he will state to this audience in plain terms whether there are more than two places hereafter, heaven and hell. If he will give us his plain statement we will have something to work upon. I take the grounds this evening, dear friends, that if the Bible be true, if the passages I have quoted in your hearing mean anything, that there are more places than two. It forever destroys this old terrible idea, which is but a relic of Paganism, that God has but two places, heaven and hell, and if you miss heaven by a hair's breadth, you are cast into hell, and there you are going to burn, roast, cook and fry throughout the countless ages of eternity. I do not say that is the position my honorable opponent will take, but I would like to know just how he stands upon this. He knows how I stand. I stand forever and ever opposed to that narrow, bigoted, contracted notion that God is so unjust that he made such a miserable mistake in creating man that there are but two places, and all that are going to be saved in that higher place, or heaven, is that little handful that Jesus call his "little flock," and all the teeming millions going to be cast into the other place. I do not believe God made such a mistake when he created man. And I want to tell you, friends, right now, that if my opponent takes that position, he will have a harder job on hands than he ever anticipated. I came here prepared to meet that kind of doctrine and oppose it as long as my tongue will move, and I have been opposing it for eight years, and I expect to oppose it—that my Father which is in heaven has a few little pets to save in eternal glory, and teeming millions of others are going to be rejected. There will be some fun if he does. (Laughter.)

I am now going to prove to you that there are more places than one, and if he wants to oppose it he is in for a fight, theologically speaking; and if he endorses it, all right—so much the better. I am not here to widen the chasm between us; I am here to get to a unit if we can; and if he will agree with me that there are more places than one, we will shake hands and say we are one that far anyhow.

The first scripture to which I wish to call your attention is found in John 14: 1-3: "Let not your hearts be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." I emphasize the last clause, "I go to prepare a place for you," because I have some use for that before I get through with this discussion. Here he says, In my Father's house there are many mansions. The house here referred to, we understand, means God's dominion, and in that dominion of God, or his possession, there are many mansions. Then if God has many mansions in his dominion, and there are only two places, one for the righteous, and the other for the unrighteous, etc., why did Christ say, "In my Father's house are many mansions?" Unless my opponent takes the position when we get up there we are going to have a room by ourselves, or a department. That is the only way I can harmonize it if he claims there are only two places.

Again I call your attention to 1 Corinthians 15: 39: "All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds. These are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption." I hope you all gathered the import of that reading. Here the Apostle Paul calls attention that there are different glories hereafter in the resurrection, and he says one is similar to the glory of the sun, another to the glory of the moon. You go out on a clear day, and you see the bright sun shining in all its power and might, and you look upon it with the idea that it is the most brilliant orb in the universe. That represents the righteous; that represents the condition of those who have washed their robes white in the blood of the lamb, and whom John saw coming up through deep trials and tribulations with crowns on their heads and palms in their hands. That represents those who enter the kingdom of heaven in the right spirit in the proper way, and who remain in it, and stood day by day for the right, and who died praising God, who lived their religion every day, and who conformed their lives to the great character of Jesus Christ. Those are the ones, then, who are typified by the sun, called the celestial glory.

You go out on a moonlight night and you behold the moon, the next greatest orb in the universe. Who does that represent? Why, it must be one a little lower than the one represented by the sun. It must evidently represent some one who is pretty good. Now I am going to tell you who that represents. It represents the good moral man, no doubt, the noble father, the noble citizen, although he may not have made any particular profession. It represents that kind of a character. And the stars; whom do they represent? They evidently represent various kinds of characters—different rewards and glories. Now I read to you numbers of texts proving conclusively that every man shall be rewarded according to his works. Now since it is an undeniable fact that there are hundreds of different characters in the world today, if God is going to reward all these different characters according to their works, how can he do it if there are only two places? The Apostle Paul had the correct idea when he said, "There is a glory of the sun, a glory of the moon, and a glory of the stars: for one star differs from another star in glory: so should they be in the resurrection of the dead. All these different characters, let them be in the church or out of the church, they are going to receive a reward commensurate with their life here, whether it be good or bad. We see a real bright star, such as Jupiter or Mars. They represent another class of people upon earth. And we go down and down to the smallest star which we can scarcely discern. That would represent a man who has done but very little good in this world, nevertheless if he has only "given a disciple a glass of cold water," he shall receive a reward in some of those glories.

Now I turn again to Matthew 25: 31. Here is a parable of the sheep and goats. Some people have run away with the conclusion that these sheep represent the righteous—I mean those who are in the kingdom of God here and who live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God. A great many people, I say, seem to think that those sheep were really those Christians; but I am going to prove to you tonight that those sheep represent altogether a different character than those who are in the kingdom or church here on earth. The Bible is a grand book if you will just get the treasures out of it; and it is not like an old fiddle as a great many people claim it is. Infidels say it is like an old fiddle that will play any kind of a tune. Let me ask you the question, What makes the Bible play so many different tunes? What makes it play a Methodist tune? It is because it is played with Methodist fingers. (I say this with all respect to you good people, and I have no reflection to make). Again, it will play a Baptist tune. Why does it play a Baptist tune? Because it is fingered with Baptist fingers. Why does it play an Advent tune? Because it is fingered with Advent fingers.

But I will tell you, friends to-night, in all candor, if you will take that old Bible, and pick up the bow—good common sense—and you just strike across the strings—but do not fiddle with the strings—and if you just move that bow back and forward, the whole Bible will play the same tune from June till the judgment. Because the fiddle plays so many different tunes is by changing the fingers. You lay the old fiddle down and put the bow back and forth without touching the strings, it will play the same old tune. That is the way with the Book. There is too much theological string-manipulation with the Bible. No wonder the infidel says it is like an old fiddle. The fiddle would not play so many different tunes if it were not for the fiddler. The Bible would not play so many different kinds of tunes if it were not for the preachers.

I begin with the 31st verse: "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. And before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats. And he shall set the sheep on his right hand and the goats on the left." Here are three different characters represented in this parable—the sheep, and the goats, and the brethren. "Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Well, but says my good opponent, that is just what we believe, that God has prepared a kingdom from the foundation for his people. My opponent, though, may not be able to discern the difference between the sheep and the brethren. Who are the brethren? Turn to the second chapter of John and there is that feast where Christ turned water into wine, some were outside, and they came to Christ and said, Your mother seeks you. He turned around and asked, "Who is my mother? He that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven the same is my mother and my brother. So you see now, friends, by this plain reading that there are three different characters portrayed here; namely, brethren, sheep, and goats. Did the sheep have a kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world? That is what the word says. Now a great many people, and perhaps my opponent think the sheep represent the righteous in that kingdom. Now I say they do not. They represent a character or class of people a little lower than those in the kingdom; but the brethren are entitled to celestial glory, according to Paul in 1 Cor. 15. Again, when Christ said, "I go to prepare a place for you," to whom was he speaking? Why, he was speaking to his brethren. At the same time he turns around and says in the parable here that the kingdom was prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Now you see the logic in that?

There are two classes of people represented there. In the fourteenth of John he is speaking of the brethren, but in this parable he is speaking of the sheep, or class of people typified by the sheep. He said they were to enter the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world. What a grand, glorious provision God has made for all mankind. Instead of those good, noble men—those men who had given his disciples a helping hand, those who had taken them in and clothed them, and assisted them on their way, those who had toiled honestly and truthfully here in this life to make an honest living, those who never defrauded a neighbor out of a penny, those whose hands were always free to help the poor widow, those good noble men of earth who were always on the watch to help some poor struggling mortal; who by some hereditary influence or by some circumstances, perhaps, over which they had no control, were not able to see the consistency of Christianity, were not privileged to unite themselves with the true church and kingdom of God here on earth—that there is a place prepared for them. Oh, how sad it would be tonight to think that those good honorable men of earth would have to take their place with the drunken sot who passed from this world to the next with his hand crimsoned with the innocent blood of his brother! How could I get down on my knees and say, "Oh, loving Father, have mercy on me," when I thought he casts these good moral men into the same condition that he classed the adulterer, who, perhaps, along the dark walks of night laid his bloody hand upon the throat of his innocent victim, and there in the darkest hours of midnight he committed a terrible crime, and then with a weapon slashed across her throat and sent her soul to eternity—to tell me that that individual and the good moral men in eternity are going to occupy the same place here after is a libel on Almighty justice. Can any one to-night believe that? Can any one to-night get up and say, "O God, thou art full of justice and mercy, thou art from everlasting to everlasting, thou art a very present help in time of need," and say at the same time that he was going to cast the murderer, the assassin, the adulterer into the same place with the moral men and they are going to share the same fate? I never want to believe it.

I have fully proved that those sheep represented here in the parable were not the true disciples of Christ in the sense that they were in the kingdom of God and entitled to celestial glory. When Christ said, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me." When he said this unto these characters they were surprised, and they looked up to Christ in surprise, saying, "Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty and gave thee drink? when saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? They were actually surprised to think that they were going to get a reward. Now if those characters would have been the true disciples of Jesus Christ in the kingdom of God on earth, do you suppose it would have been much of a surprise to them when Christ told them of the reward? Nay, verily, they were expecting a reward all along, and they were looking and longing for that glorious time to come when they could enter into the triumphant kingdom and reign with the Lord, where the assassin's knife would never be used, where the bloody sword would never be taken up, and where peace, tranquility, and eternal felicity would ever reign throughout the ages of eternity. They expected that reward. And do you suppose for a moment that they would ask such questions in surprise? The Lord says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me;" and that is the grand harmony that existed between Christ and the brethren. Inasmuch as you do a good deed unto a disciple of Jesus Christ, ye do it unto Christ himself. That is a principle of justice. Which one of you mothers, or you fathers, who has a son (or a daughter), perhaps, struggling with the warriors down in the Philippines, and who of you would not rejoice and feel glad to remunerate an individual down there who, when they saw your son or your daughter in deep distress, down in the valley and shadows of despondency, would take them by the hand and help them up? Who of you if you had a son on the battlefield, lying there with gaping wounds and his lips parched for the precious water that runs along the little brook a few yards away, and some one would give him a glass of water, who of you would not feel to praise and thank that individual because he had helped your son in the time of need? You feel as well over it as if they had done it unto you, would you not, mothers, fathers? That is the beautiful harmony that exists between Jesus Christ and his brethren, and that is the sweet stream of life that emanates from God and permeates his true followers, that when you do it unto one of his struggling brethren here upon this sin-cursed earth, struggling in sin, struggling in the grasp of the evil one, and many times almost overcome by the evil temptations surrounding you, and some good moral man—perhaps he has made no profession—comes along and he sees that you are hungry, tired and weary, and says, You are a stranger; you are traveling this hot day, and you look tired and weary; won't you come in and take some refreshments? And he goes in, and the good house-wife prepares him a fine meal and so ministers unto his natural wants. He sits down and enjoys that good meal, he feels refreshed and invigorated to pursue his journey to save souls for Christ. But he feels that he has been blessed by that good moral man. Do you suppose that Jesus Christ is going to turn away from that individual when here on earth he ministered unto his disciple when he was in need? Nay, verily. Just as much as he did it unto his disciple or minister here in this life, Christ will minister to him, increased by the eternal reward hereafter. That is what is meant by the sheep—those who minister unto my brethren, those who visit my brethren here on earth, those who clothe them when they are in need. I love to contemplate upon that kind of a Christ. I love to think upon that kind of a Redeemer, who is going to reward every good deed.

It has actually been said—I have actually heard men stand up in the pulpit, men claiming to be disciples or ministers of Christ, and tell us that a good moral man was worse than a murderer. Have you heard that expression in any of your travels? I see two or three heads nodding yes. Lord, have mercy upon any one who will make such a blasphemous statement against the divine mercy of God! Why, the Hindoo God is regarded better than that. The Mohammedans have a better conception of their God than that. I asked a gentleman who advocated this idea that a moral man was worse than a murderer one time, Friend, if you were going to locate somewhere, and you go into a town where there are no professors, but they are all moral men. Moral man means a great deal. It does not simply mean a man who does not belong to any particular church, or that keeps in at nights instead of running around—there is more attached than that to a moral man. A moral man is one who loves virtue and who is always willing to help his neighbor. While morality does not take in and comprehend Christianity, yet Christianity brings morality. Do not get that thought in your minds, friends, that morality is equivalent to Christianity. The morality of Jesus Christ covers everything that is good and holy. I said to this gentleman: Instead of running around at nights they stay at home and read their daily papers—if not the Bible—and they go to bed quietly, and everything is quiet. They get up and take a walk out in the neighborhood or abroad, and they hear of no bank robberies, no murders, no adulteries, no drunkenness—that all means morality; that all means the moral man. But you enter another town where immorality is rampant, and on one corner of the street is a church, and on the other corner a saloon. And passing down the street you will meet a preacher with a Bible under his arm, and further on a man with a jug of whiskey under his arm. And going on still further you may hear sweet anthems sung of Jesus. And going on to the next place you may find a band of drunkards; and going down a little further, a man lying in the gutter. Where would you rather locate? "Well," he said, "I would rather go where the moral man was." The same individual said that a moral man was worse than a murderer. Give me that moral man every time before the murderer. I will tell you, friends, when we begin to contemplate God in his true light, it means a great deal. It means more, perhaps, than we have an idea at first.

Now the goats were going to be punished. Here is another thought that I want to emphasize, and I want it taken down just as I deliver it, and that is that you are going to be punished for every bad thing you do, every evil thought, every evil deed. You will be punished for what you do, but will only be punished until you pay the penalty. I want my good opponent to put that down and make reply to it. I want to get into the heart of everything attending this discussion. And if he did plug me on the last proposition I can knock the plug out on this one—that every evil deed that a man does on this earth he will have to suffer for in the world to come. But he will suffer just in proportion to the evil deeds done in this life, as I have read to you here in a number of texts.

Again I turn to Eph. 4: 10.—"He that descended is the same also that ascended far above all heavens [heavens, in the plural], that he might fill all things." He ascended up far above all heavens. Jesus Christ ascended up far above all heavens—a clear statement that there is more heavens than one. Turn to 2 Cor. 12: 1, 2.—"It is not expedient for me doubtless to glory. I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth); such an one caught up to the third heaven." Now I would like to ask you if there were three heavens, would there not be two and one? There seemed to be one, two, three there, and Paul says he knew a man who was caught up to the third heaven. My opponent may try to make it appear that these mean aerial heavens, but we will show that it does not always mean aerial heavens. When Stephen was dying he said he saw heaven opened, and Jesus Christ sitting on the right hand of God—looked up into the heaven where God was. We read again in 1 Kings 8: 27 that the heaven of heavens can not contain the glory of God. All through the Bible we see this thought clearly carried out, that there are more places than just the two.

Now a great many people believe that as soon as we die we are going right into the presence of God. I want to disturb some of your minds on that. Sometimes you have got to disturb a man in order to get him to look around. Now then, if any of you good people have the idea that as soon as you die you go right into the presence of God, I want to undeceive you now, before you die. Now I am going to prove to you that when you die, you do not go directly to heaven, but there is an intermediate state where you go. I will read the evidence of this in Luke 23: 42, 43, where the thief says: on the cross, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." And Jesus said, "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Oh, says one, what is that but heaven where God dwells? Bless your dear souls, no, it is not heaven at all. There is an intermediate state, and I am going to prove it to you. Now then, Christ says to the thief, "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Now we will see if Christ then went to heaven. In John 20: 17 we have this language: "Jesus saith unto her, touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and to your Father; and to my God, and to your God." Do you catch the point? Jesus Christ says to the thief, "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise;" three days later he says to the woman at the sepulchre, "I have not yet ascended to my Father." Go tell my brethren that I will, in the future, ascend to my Father, and to your Father; and that ascension was about forty days afterwards. So that is conclusive evidence that Jesus Christ instead of going to God immediately after he departed this life, he went to Paradise—just where you and I and every one will go; that is, those who are righteous; that when we die we may have favor with God. Of course, the wicked will go to their place, as we shall see after a while.

There is an intermediate place where man's spirit goes and there awaits the resurrection, and at the resurrection that spirit and body is reunited—and he has not gone to God yet. I say that in the resurrection it is when he gets that new glorified body fit and prepared to enter into the presence of God after the thousand years reign upon the earth, as we proved the other evening. So then, dear friends, do not get discouraged because you are not going into the presence of God as soon as you pass off this earth; for Christ did not get there: and Christ being our leader in all things, I do not expect to go any faster than he went. He went to Paradise, an intermediate state, and there his spirit was in Paradise awaiting the resurrection, and when his body was resurrected there were thousands of others resurrected also, as you will find in the 27th of Matthew, where it says that many of them that had died long before were resurrected, and they appeared on the streets of Jerusalem.

There is another evidence that I want to impress upon your minds; that there is an intermediate state between the present and the judgment. That the wicked do not go directly into hell. (Here Mr. Ebelling asked how much time remained, to which the chairman replied: one minute and a half.) I have not got time to conclude this thought that I had in mind, that the wicked were going to be cast into hell as soon as they die. There is a place prepared for them also. Is it to be the great burning lake of fire spoken of in Rev. 20? I say no. I will take this position right now, I will stand upon it, I will prove it, that there is not one single soul from the days of Adam to the present who are yet in that big lake of fire. Put it down, brother, and bring your proof; I will come with proof too. I say again that there is not one single soul—I mean mortals—I mean those who lived on earth—who are in that lake of fire and brimstone spoken of by John the Revelator.

Accuses Dowie of Fraud.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Samuel Stevenson, a brother-in-law of John Alexander Dowie, the "faith healer," today entered suit to have a receiver appointed for the Zion lace industries, one of Dowie's enterprises for which he imported fifty lacemakers from England. Stevenson himself came from England and alleges that Dowie has withheld from him remuneration which had been promised. His bill claims that Dowie offered him a bonus of $50,000, $100,000 of the company's stock and the superintendency of the business at a good salary. He further alleges that he got nothing but the superintendency and that Dowie beguiled him into signing an innocent looking document which really gave Dowie entire ownership of the lace company.—The Kansas City (Mo.) Journal, November 19.

OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS. DAUGHTERS OF ZION. MRS. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the charge of women and others who are interested in the welfare of our times. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not start one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send together list of names of members to the recording secretary.

LET YOURSELF GO.

[CONCLUDED] The sincere man has power back of his sincerity. His sincerity is the open groove through which he projects his power. If he can add to his sincerity, directness of method, he may let himself go. When one sees a young employee watching his employer's face to know whether the thing he is saying is well received, one cannot help feeling that he is wasting part of his power. He should be positive of the thing he has to say, and of the sincerity of his motives, and then, in the most direct way consistent with courtesy, go to his point. The employer grows tired of following the windings of a tortuous mind, and the effect upon the mind itself is the worst possible,—for the habit of expressing oneself with a margin of meaning in reserve, upon which one can change the purpose of the expression if it is not acceptable, is the very art of sophistry,—using words in two senses, teetering upon an action and not quite sure which way it will tip. All these things belong to the hesitation which Lowell describes in "The Courtin'." "He stood on one foot and then on t'other. And on which foot he felt the wust He couldn't ha' told you nuther." The unstable equilibrium that comes to the character that wishes to be approved instead of wishing to discharge its task, leaves the mind a jelly, and turns the muscles to pulp. What the world really wants is an unselfish, direct, sincere and energetic set of workmen, to do its work. The statement is forever true, that "he who would save his life, shall lose it." One of the highest attainments that can come to the mature man is that he may be settled well in his mind that it really does not matter what becomes of him, provided the thing he has sought to do has been achieved; and this attainment, in the mature life, begins in the young man when he lets himself go upon his task with an abandon that makes work a delight, study a rapture, recreation an unsullied joy, and the relations of friendship a chivalrous passion as real as that over which, in the romantic days of boyhood, we were thrilled with enthusiasm while reading of the knight who was "without fear and without reproach." SUGGESTIONS.

Many ask questions; few think. Don't be in a hurry, don't get tired. When you can put personal earnestness into your work it brings forth desirable results. Some times loving will do more good than spanking. Success is worked out of everyday common ideas. A small interest indicates a safe principal. If taught well they will talk well. Some successful people are greatly surprised over it. Don't judge all humanity by any one person. Save a little and it is easier to save more. Too many commands dull the ear-drums. Consistency is a jewel but persistency wins it. The washer woman's boy with a soap-box for a desk and book-case and perseverance for a guide can give himself a $10,000 education. Life is full of contradictions, and in order to win we must know how to handle them. The human hand is used to polish a piano, but one rub alone will do no good. Your money, muscle and mind amount to more if you re-read what you read. "Now that the women's clubs have passed through the transitional period of working for self culture and literary growth, there is no doubt that there is a growing conviction in the women's clubs all over the country that the most profitable and altruistic work for them to do is to consider the best methods of training children in and out of school. The scientists and philosophers are turning to the development of the child to help them solve the problems of life, and all that has been done and is yet to do may well occupy the serious attention of women in or out of clubs, for that matter. The awakening of women throughout the country is shown by the congresses of mothers that have been held during the past few years, which were devoted almost entirely to matters pertaining to the best development of the child; and the work of the collegiate alumnae has for a long time occupied itself with child study. "Here, as everywhere in woman's work, there also enters that element of sacrifice without which no real achievement is possible. To secure a great end one must be willing to pay a great price."—Modern Culture.

Why So Many Women Are Invalids.

The insane desire of fond parents that their children shall "shine" in their studies and accomplishments is one topic vigorously dealt with by Edward Bok in his editorial in The Ladies' Home Journal for September. Regarding the girl's side of this widespread evil he says: "There are parents who, not content with the studies which their daughters have to grapple with at school, load them down with a few special studies in the finer arts. I have in mind now several young girls between the precarious ages of twelve and seventeen, who, after they return from school, have an extra dose of painting, music or languages. But my daughter must know something of these things," is the protest of the fond mother. "She must be able to hold her own with other girls of her set." Of course, the girl at this tender age, with such a mental load, soon goes to pieces. She becomes anemic, listless and nervous, and then the mother wonders why! To build her up everything under the sun is tried except a lessening of mental work and the unnatural strain upon the nervous system. The girl develops into what? A bundle of nerves encased in the most fragile frame, her physical vitality sapped almost to the last degree. And in this condition she enters the marriage state! And yet we wonder why there are so few women absolutely free from organic troubles. Is it so inexplicable?"

Know that strength is yours in proportion to your progress, enough for each day, be it mental, physical or spiritual. Realize that there is a reward for every labor, rest after every task, and rise for every faculty developed. Your reward may not be what you expect; probably it will be much better. The power which comes from trying is more than worth the effort.

Floral Fetes of Japan.

All Japanese boys and girls are born with three good instincts. The first is to love their native country; the second, to reverence their elders; and the third is to take delight in flowers. The love of the Japanese for flowers has seldom been told with the delicacy that marks the article by Sir Edwin Arnold in the December Delineator, entitled "Floral Fetes of Japan." One is inclined to believe that during Sir Edwin's residence in Japan he absorbed more than the usual share of the national sentiment. The article is illustrated in colors with a daintiness and feeling and as rare as they are attractive; from a mechanical standpoint the execution of the work is perfection itself.

When the Rod Was Not Spared

The change of thought and conditions of mankind are no better illustrated than by the history of the rod, says the December Delimitator, in an article on the morals of the child, by Dr. Grace Peckham Murray. Which mentions a Suanbian schoolmaster who had during his fifty-one years of superintendence of a large school had given 911,500 canings, 121,000 floggings, 209,000 custodes, 136,000 tips with the ruler, 10,200 boxes on the ear and 22,700 tasks by the heart. He had made 700 boys stand on peas, 6,000 kneel on a sharp edge of wood, 5,000 wear the fool's cap and 1,700 hold the rod.

ZIG-ZAGS NO. 4. ELDER J. W. GILBERT.

[CONCLUDED]

The pilot had been called by signal, and the news of the assassination of President McKinley had been transmitted to shore by the same process. In a short time the pilot came in a small row boat drawn by four oarsmen who were natives. The pilot wore a band of black crepe around his left arm in mourning for our president. Then began the process of taking the ship into the harbor. The time consumed in turning a large vessel around is astonishing to a novice; I think they were over an hour getting her turned to face the entrance by a series of backing and going ahead. When we got well under way we met the governor and a few of his friends in a small boat drawn by six oarsmen. The governor's family, consisting of wife, daughter, and two sons, with the governess, were on board as passengers; hence, his anxiety to meet them. He could not come on board, however, until the health officer made his inspection. But he soon met us, and the ship's doctor met him on the swinging ladder that had been let down, and gave him the documents that showed that all on board were in good health. Then the governor and his party came on board bringing his own flag which they hoisted at the mast-head for him at half mast in honor of the president of the United States. This we thought very nice of him, and we appreciated the honor shown.

In a very short time we arrived at the anchorages, and the rumble of the great anchor chain marked the end of our journey, which had been a very successful one from start to finish. No one of our party was sea sick; for this we were indeed thankful. The weather was ideal, and the sea was not very rough at any time, although it was pretty choppy for about two days about the time we crossed the doldrums. But in all it was an exceptionally smooth and pleasant journey; so much so, that the officers remarked concerning it several times; and the stewardess said we must have had it ordered for our benefit. It was not rough enough at any time to require the dishes from the table to prevent the dishes from sliding and tumbling over. We were now anchored and they had gotten her up alongside the wharf, and we were ready to go ashore. More by and by.

THE LORD'S WORK.

The designs and works of the Lord as they are comprehended by man, under the revelation of the divine Spirit, are truly marvelous and wonderful. Indeed even some of the inventions of men are so esteemed; but when an enlarged view of the purposes of the Creator is permitted, we can join in the sentiment expressed by the psalmist, "O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth" (Ps. 8: 9). Men are generally willing to concede the Lord's claim as recorded in Isaiah 55: 8; 9. "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts," but, it is, with few exceptions, comparatively speaking, an acquiescence in an unreflective way, without an intelligent comprehension of the designs of the Lord with regard to his work among men, such as it is within their province to have in order to co-operate with him, and place themselves in the condition in which he can make use of them to that end.

For instance, neither the Jews nor the gentile world had scarcely an inkling of the scope of the mission of the Lord Jesus to mankind. They utterly failed to correctly estimate the work he came to do, and because of such misunderstanding he was greatly hindered in the accomplishment of its purposes, even among his own followers. Who can tell the depths of the sadness he felt when he uttered this rebuke on one occasion, "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now" (John 16: 12). They were as children, and seemed to make but slow progress in comprehending the work they were intended to do, at that time; but he promised them that the Comforter would be sent to lead and guide them, to open their understandings that they might do the work committed to them, and that was necessary to be done for the salvation of the human family. This statement was not made in the beginning, but towards the end of his three years work among them; it was made after they had enjoyed unusual privileges of learning the mind and will of God as revealed through His Only Begotten Son, from which it is evident that he was to that extent hindered in his work. It is self evident that had his persecutors had even a faint understanding of his real character they would not have so cruelly distressed and crucified him, when his whole life was spent in an effort to bless and exalt them. His prayer while on the cross, suffering as he was untold agony, and in which is revealed the depths of his great love and mercy, recognizes that they acted without a thought of the awful crime they were thus perpetrating, when he prayed, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

As both Jews and gentiles failed to comprehend the wonderful import of the mission of Christ to the earth, even his Saints seeming to have had but a limited conception of the plan of redemption, so today, do we find existing an almost exact counterpart of the conditions prevailing in New Testament times. Notwithstanding that it is apparent to all Bible students that an apostasy from the faith as revealed by Jesus the Christ, has taken place as foretold, and that it is so plainly shown in Revelation 14: 6, that a restoration was to come through the ministrations of a heavenly messenger—an angel—and notwithstanding that by all rules of logic and common sense such restoration could only be manifested in the same kind of an organization in faith, doctrine, and practice as formerly existed, when such claims are presented for the consideration of men, they for the most part are prone to antagonize the claims; it remains just as in the Savior's day, for the few, the minority, to acknowledge the light and to manifest a disposition to walk in it. But deplorable as is this state of affairs, it in no wise invalidates the truth of the claims made. If men fail to appreciate what the gospel is intended to do for them, so that they lend their influence to the hindering of the blessings it is designed to bring them, they are to be pitied—they are the losers thereby.

But, as under the gospel plan in the days of Moses the land was to be blessed as an inheritance for God's people and was to be placed in such condition that it would further the ends of the gospel in blessing the people, so again do we find that under the gospel plan, in the dispensation of the "fullness of times" is even the land on which the Lord's work is to receive a marked manifestation of his power, to be especially blessed, and fitted for the furtherance of the plan of salvation, by which the gospel shall be sent forth and its knowledge be spread abroad among the nations of the earth. The patriarch Jacob—or Israel—testified that his blessings had prevailed above the blessings of his progenitors (Abraham and Isaac), "unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren." (Gen. 49: 26). The 22d verse states that Joseph's branches ran over the wall (sea), locating the inheritance of his posterity in the land of America. It is also shown that this inheritance is to be fruitful in "the blessing of heaven above [the law of God, the gospel], blessings of the deep that [lie] beneath." (Minerals, etc.) and for multitudes of people, the very essentials to the existence of a mighty nation or power in the midst of the earth. The constitution of this great country has been the admiration of the greatest statesmen of the age. It is said that Mr. Gladstone, one of the greatest statesmen of the British Empire, known the world over as the "Grand Old Man," once said of it that it was the greatest document written by man, or statements to that effect; and it is manifest that there was the inspiration of the Almighty in it, for it has stood the test of time and experience, and still remains in the foundation of the republic.

The Lord has truly blessed this land, because of the important part it was to occupy in his work of redemption and salvation of the human family. We have recently published, at different times, statistics gathered by the treasury department of the United States, showing the growth and development of the country in its commercial interests with other countries. The conflict with Spain served to advance this country in the eyes of every nation, calling attention to her wonderful resources and power, and today the United States ranks as one of the greatest powers in the world; and recent developments are making it apparent that the probabilities are by no means doubtful that it will yet become the greatest of all nations on the face of the earth. This country has not yet reached the zenith of its power in resources; new developments and advancements are continually being made, and so great has been the progress made in placing its manufactured articles and food products upon the markets of the world in competition not only with the home markets, but also of countries nearer to them, that the home manufacturers of other countries are becoming seriously alarmed for their own supremacy.

In this connection we invite the reader to a careful perusal of the leading editorial of The Kansas City (Mo.) Journal for Wednesday, November 20th, entitled, "An American Protectorate Over England," found on the 5th page of this issue, in which it will be seen that while the Russian writer is not justified in all his conclusions, yet so far as commercial affairs are concerned, the United States by reason of its vast resources and immense productive territory in minerals and food stuffs, is destined to become, in the not distant future, the foremost nation of the world. This fact some of the English writers are recognizing, and while it is not a pleasant picture to the people who have so long held the primacy in the commercial world, the change is inevitable and must be conceded when the facts are demonstrated so forcibly as they are now being done. But this supremacy will not alone effect England. The German kingdom is feeling its force and so will Russia. The former, as one paper states, is getting almost hysterical in its efforts to counteract the growth of the trade of this country in their markets. Russia has not in the past nor is she now, with all her vast territorial possessions, able to provide food stuffs for her own population. How often in the past has this country gone to the rescue of her people with contributions—free gifts—of grain, to keep her subjects from starvation, and even now there is a terrible famine in that country as will be seen by the article on that subject on page 5 of this issue. The conclusion must be that every nation, apparently, will yet be dependent upon this country for the necessities of life to a considerable extent if these conditions continue to prevail.

Every Saint, no matter of what nationality, must rejoice in the thought of the greatness of the Zion land. It has been chosen by the Almighty for a special purpose, and he is blessing it to the end that it may be known throughout the world as a place of refuge, of peace and plenty under his guiding hand. True, under present conditions, many imperfections exist, and in some quarters iniquity abounds. But that is not the fault of the laws particularly, but because men work evil. But the land is a chosen one and some time a perfect government will exist upon it, and from it shall the law go forth to all nations. The Lord is working to this end, and while every man is loyal to the land that gave him birth, and protects his interests whether it be America, England, Scotland, Wales, Germany, France, Denmark, or any other nation, those who obey the gospel from a sincere love of the truth, will, first of all, render homage and devotion to God, and when he chooses a certain portion of his own footstool for his special favor and work, all Saints, of every nationality and clime, will find that spot first in their hearts because it is first in the heart of their heavenly Father, and because they are, first of all, loyal to his government. It is a certain result that wherever the influences of this land are felt, there the gospel has free access, and the people may "hear the joyful sound." Great events to this end are to be revealed, and every Saint will rejoice in the thought that our heavenly Father is moving for the supremacy of his kingdom and ultimate universal reign.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. J. M. RUDD, secretary of South Missouri Sunday School Association, calls attention to an error in the next convening of the conference of that district as published in the ENSIGN for November 7th. He states the date should be December 21st and 22d instead of the 26th as there given. He states the first full moon in December falls on Tuesday, December 24th, and conference convenes the first Saturday before that event. To this, Bro. McGuire, secretary of the district, agrees.

Extracts from Letters.

ELDER WILLIAM LEWIS, missionary to Wales, writes from Liverpool, England, November 10th, 11 a. m.:

We arrived last night 10 o'clock. Sailed from New York 10 a. m. November 20th on Cunard liner Campania, but the weather forecast was that we would run into a severe storm. On the 2d, 4th and 5th we passed through the worst storm in the history of this boat and she has made 90 round trips. For 24 hours we only made 240 miles; we should have made 500. The night before the storm I dreamed that we had reached Wales. When our gallant boat was ploughing through the high waves it brought to my mind our snow plows pushing through the drifts. It was a trying time on the ocean wave and most of the time we were under them. The dream gave me comfort and was fulfilled though at times it looked as though we could not make it in the face of the storm that drove 70 to 80 miles an hour.

INDEPENDENCE.

Thanksgiving services will be held in the church today (Thursday) at 11 o'clock.

Bro. John C. Grainger, of Kansas City, has been appointed solicitor for the Ensign Publishing House for the Kansas City and the other territory in the Independence Stake. Give him your kindly attention and support when he calls upon you for subscriptions for the ENSIGN and for orders for tracts and other publications of the house.

Bro. and Sr. J. A. Robinson, Sr., and Bro. and Sr. Orville James have taken up their abode in Kansas City, Missouri, for the winter months. Bro. and Sr. J. A., Jr., occupy the parental home.

After months of patient endurance of severe afflictions the prayers and earnest desire of our aged brother, Elder Charles J. Clark, were granted, and at half past four p. m., Tuesday, he passed peacefully to the realities of the better life, retaining his mental faculties until the last. He was born October 8, 1828, at Jared Cross, near Westminster abbey, England, and was there fore seventy-three years, one month and 18 days old. He was a resident of Keokuk, Iowa, over forty years, removing to Chicago about seven years ago, where he remained for five years. Later he came to Independence where he has resided for about two years. He was firm in the faith and died in the assurance of a glorious resurrection. His devoted wife, five daughters and two sons are left to cherish his memory. The funeral will be held today, Thursday, 2 p. m. President Hulmes delivering the discourse.

The Saints of Independence and the Kansas City's (Missouri and Kansas), should read President J. D. White's letter in this issue and respond enthusiastically in the effort to assist in building up the work permanently in new places. Bro. White has been an indefatigable worker, and with his brethren, has done a splendid work in the Kansas Citys. Let every one who can do so, assist in this needful and very laudable effort he and our Argentine brethren and sisters are making. Encourage them by your presence on the occasion mentioned as requested by our brother, and you will in no wise lose your reward in so working for the Master, even though it should require a small sacrifice to enable you to attend. Come in the Spirit of the Master and give pleasure and cheer to those noble workers.

Bro. J. C. Silvers, of Wheatland, Missouri, and R. S. Catlin, of Webb City, Missouri, were callers at the ENSIGN office Tuesday. The latter is 74 years old and will probably stay in Kansas City, Missouri, this winter. His testimonies of the work are always interesting. Bro. Silvers left for home Wednesday morning.

Don't miss the musicale at R. G. Smith's on Friday evening. Proceeds for Religio piano fund.

Neither rain or snow since last issue, a couple of days have been threatening in aspect, but for the most part it has been clear and pleasant. It is certainly a remarkably fine season though there is a shortage of water in some places. There yet remains a few green leaves on some of the peach trees.

Gracia Fern, the infant daughter of Bro. Sidney J. and Sr. Jessie Luff Preston, was blessed at the Sunday afternoon service, Bro. Joseph Luff and G. H. Hilliard officiating.

Sunday the Saints were favored with two splendid discourses from Bishop Hilliard at the morning hour on "Unity," and Bro. Joseph Luff at evening on the means of salvation. A fine interest in both efforts was manifested. There was a specially large attendance at the afternoon service and an excellent meeting was enjoyed, which should be a testimony to the Saints that their duty lies in the assembling of themselves at the appointed hour and place of worship. They were admonished to heed the teachings of the servants of the Lord, and they should be blessed in so doing.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Our Geiger hall meeting still continues with good interest. By vote of the congregation last night we will continue another week. Some are deeply interested, and some of the brethren and sisters are standing nobly by us in our efforts. It may result in a permanent mission.

We had a pleasant Sunday School and meeting at South St. Joseph yesterday, where we are trying to build up the work through the kindness of Bro. and Sr. John Nanney who furnish the room.

We were called to Cameron on Saturday to preach the funeral of Grandma Maria M. Powers, widow of Apostle Samuel Powers, who preceded her in death since 1878. She was nearing her seventy-eighth birthday when she passed away. Was baptized in 1852 by Father Gurley. Having a great anxiety to come to Zion, she removed with her daughter, Sr. Chas. H. Brooks, to a farm just north of Cameron, Missouri, last September, where after a short illness she passed away on Thursday, November 21, at 9:55 a. m., firm in the faith. Her son, Ambrose C., of Beloit, Wisconsin, her daughter, Sr. L. E. Hills, and husband, of Marion, Iowa, were in attendance at the funeral which occurred at the Delano branch church, where she was interred. Elder J. S. Constance took charge of the rites. Elder Hills expected to remain and preach for them on Sunday.

Bro. H. O. Smith took a south bound Burlington on Thursday evening to re-enter his field, his first point being a conference in the Indian Territory.

The missionary companion of the writer has been sorely afflicted with la grippe for over a week. She is now some better. Sr. Neidorp has been very sick. We hear of the sickness of Sr. Best also.

Bro. C. E. Guinaud preached at the church last night. The six o'clock prayer service was said to be better than the average.

FIRST KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

2324 Wabash Ave., Sunday School 9:30 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; social service 12:15 p. m. D. F. Winn, pastor, 2306 Bellfontaine; telephone 205 Union. Superintendent Sunday School, B. Elzenhouser, 507 Massachusetts Building, Telephone 618. Missionary in charge, John D. White, 609 Main St., telephone 1358.

The sisters of the branch were disappointed in not getting a suitable room in which to hold their social last week, consequently it has been postponed until the near future; they have many nice articles of their own hand make which they will try and sell before Christmas.

All our meetings Sunday were good and well attended. Elder F. C. Warnky preached at 11 a. m., and Elder D. F. Winn at 7:30 p. m. Bro. E. J. Scott preached at the east mission.

Pres. J. D. White is holding a revival meeting at the west branch, 23d and Holly streets, preaching every night this week. Some of the Saints from here intend to assist in making it a success.

Elder Warnky will leave us this week to go to Montevideo, to hold the discussion with Rev. John Geddens, of the Christian church, and will not be back for some time. The prayers of the branch go with him that his labors may be crowned with success.

SECOND KANSAS CITY BRANCH.

Corner 23d and Holly. One block south of Observation Park line.

We were glad Sunday morning to listen to Bro. J. A. Robinson, Sr., and although suffering from throat affliction he delivered an interesting and we trust profitable discourse. In the evening our series of preaching services was commenced, Bro. J. D. White being the speaker. A large and attentive audience listened to the effort which was good. Bro. W. H. Pease was announced for Monday night and Bro. J. D. again for Tuesday. The choir is doing all it can to make these services interesting and in all we hope for good results.

Our afternoon prayer and testimony meeting was a "shower" of spiritual blessing, the Saints without one exception we believe being cheered and edified; at least the expressions heard indicated this.

We rejoice at present with the family of Bro. McIntosh who have just passed through some sore afflictions. Their son Alex., for whom the doctors entertained no hope, is now, by the mercy of the Lord in the ordinance of his gospel, able to be out and is rapidly mending. Last Friday Sr. McIntosh, the mother, was taken suddenly ill with something that seemed to hold her life in a balance for several hours, but through the administration of one of the elders she was as quickly restored, and we rejoiced to have her meet with us at all the meetings Sunday.

Bro. Chas. Cleveland and family, of Reed City, Michigan, have taken up their abode one block northwest of the church. This makes a nice little addition to our numbers.

Sr. Malisa Clark and daughter Sr. Mattie Shippy Ball, are visiting with relatives in our branch.

A joint entertainment of the Religio and Sunday School will be held on the 10th of December, and as it is for a worthy cause we hope to have all who can make it convenient attend.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Services at "Druid's Temple," Cor. 14th and Folsom Sts. Sunday School 9:45 a. m.; preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sacrament meeting on first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

Sunday, the 11th inst., the writer had the pleasure of addressing the Saints at the morning service. There was a good attendance, as there always is, at the morning hour. Bishop C. A. Parkin went to Santa Rosa and preached there. He also spoke for us here in the evening.

There was a good turnout at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, and a good refreshing time was had.

Friday evening the "Religio" gave an open meeting at the residence of Bro. Parkin. There were sixty people in attendance, and a very pleasant evening was spent. The "Book of Mormon" lesson was considered, and a good literary and musical program rendered. All were well pleased.

We miss several of our members of late. Arizona seems to be growing attractive for them. Bro. Balshan, Rbewald and Johnson have gone there.

At 11 a. m. yesterday we had a very fine sermon delivered by Elder John A. Saxe. It was timely and instructive. In the evening Elder J. A. Anthony occupied the pulpit. Bishop Parkin preached at Oakland at the morning session.

Fred B. Blair is quite sick and has been for several days. Last week our elders went over twice and administered to him. He is better but is still confined to the house.

Elder Thos. Daley is very sick at Middletown, Sonoma county. Bro. Fred Ursebach, is quite low at Petaluma.

Elder Albert Haws is still pushing the mission work he has established at Stockton.

Elder George Daley has returned from Sacramento to Santa Rosa.

All usually well with us here.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

First Chicago Branch, 8 So. Wood St., Sunday School at 1:30, preaching at 3 and 7:45 p. m.; Central Branch, 3411 Cottage Grove Ave., Sunday School at 9:30 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; West Pullman, preaching at 10:30 a. m., followed by Sunday School, preaching at 7:30 p. m.; Graves' Mission, 2458 State St.

Our visitors from out of the city in attendance on the west side yesterday, were Elmer Kaler and Walter McBell, of Wilming ton, and Mary Anderson, of Mission.

Bro. Hackett preached yesterday at West Pullman, and at the south side in the eve. The Sunday School on the south side under the care of Bro. W. I. Cochran is moving along nicely. Bro. Elmer Johnson has been worse during the past few days, the weather has been unfavorable.

The debate at the Religio on the west side, brought out a number of outsiders, all agreed that Bro. Mead took the white plume.

Bro. Earl preached on the south side and Bro. Sheehy, Kier, and Sheerman on the west. Bro. Cochran has been attending meetings held in private houses, in the interests of the Shiloh people.

Bro. Strange and Sheehy accompanied him last week and each made a speech.

The Shiloh movement has inscribed on its banner the angels' message of Rev. 14:6. Their headquarters are on the banks of the Androscoggin river, near Lisbon Falls, Maine. They are about to introduce the feature of having apostles and seventy, etc. These later attempts to apotheosize the significance of that message are too late in the day, and in point of time, savor of the counterfeit. Why did not some of these claimants antedate the claims of the "Choice Seer" and save themselves the chagrin of trying so clumsily to imitate him and his work? Well "it won't do" the Seer of Palmyra totally eclipses these smaller magnitudes.

Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt, of Cornell University, lectured here yesterday on "The ethics of Jesus." The Prof. is spoken of as one of the leading young Biblical scholars of the country, in sympathy with the modern scientific and social spirit. He canvassed the historical value of the New Testament from the Greek, Roman and Jewish viewpoints and readily concluded that the New Testament was of no particular value; that many of the writings that were not canonized, as well as the apocryphal ones were just as good. After showing that about all the writings thereof were gotten up at a later period, and those that were from originals were so plagiarized, that they did not properly reflect what this excellent young Jewish religious genius did convey, he concluded with an excellent apostrophe to Jesus, admitting all that is claimed for him by his disciples, in point of moral excellence. It looked incongruous that so grand and peerless a character as he finally represented the Christ to be, could be gleaned from such a mess of lies, plagiarisms and such an awfully mistaken set as these New Testament fellows were. I guess the wisdom of the wise will have to perish on some times surely. NOVICE.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

CHELSEA, I. T., Nov. 9.

Dear Ensign—I thought I would drop you a few lines from this part of the Lamanite country. Though living alone and never having the privilege of hearing one of our elders I am yet strong in the faith and am ever looking with faith to the redemption of Israel. The Ensign is ever a welcome visitor with its sermons and letters from the dear brothers and sisters. It gives me such pleasure and hopes to read the dear letters from the brothers and sisters, and I pray God that the ENSIGN may long have as a beacon of light to those who are willing to follow its teachings.

I want to also thank through the Ensign the dear brothers and sisters who have sent me a lot of reading matter. I just received eight parcels by mail Autumn Leaves, Sunday School Hopes, Saint's Herald, and ENSIGN. I want to say dear brothers and sisters, it cheers and strengthens and helps me onward in the paths of duty to receive such kind consideration from you. It shows me that I am not alone in this warfare for the truth: God bless you dear ones; after reading all you have sent I shall give them to others and try to get others to see the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

How pleased I would be if it was so that one of our elders could come through here so I could bear some preaching; I would try and get them a place to preach in, and I would like to go with one over in the Osage country as there are some who seem to be interested and are investigating. I have done all I could with them by talking and letting them have literature to read. Will some elder note this down, and if possible come? Now, dear Ensign if this is worthy of publishing, please give it space.

I am as ever your brother in the one gospel,

JOHN D. TENNEY.

WHEATLAND, MO., Nov. 18th.

Editor Ensign—The Chatburn and Carlin debate is now an experience of the past, but not of the character to be soon forgotten by the Saints here and many others who attended first ten lectures delivered by Elder A. Carlin against what he was pleased to call "Mormonism." That is, in his lecture he tried to class the church organized in 1830 by Joseph Smith that existed in organization till 1844, at the Prophet's death, the Utah apostasy, and the Reorganized church as all being the same; representing the Saints as thieves, liars, counterfeiters, and in fact capable of, and willing to do any mean act that could be conjured up in the mind of man. We attended all the lectures taking notes so that when Bro. Chatburn came, these served as captured artillery to use against the enemy.

We had three or four hundred bills struck, which were scattered among the crowd, also presenting Mr. Carlin with one, embracing the two church propositions. He would not accept these, but wrote out two to suit his own idea; to see after forward acknowledged had each a trap in them that he had no idea that our man would sign them. He said in the lectures he had been following up our elders for nine years and could never catch up with them; that they were like fleas, when he thought he had them they were gone. He also repeatedly said he could not talk on what he called Mormonism and be religious. He also expected to follow lecturing this way as long as he lived. He waxed very earnest towards the last of his lectures and made a statement like this: "I tell you brethren, if you will work shoulder to shoulder it won't take but a little while to exterminate 'Mormonism' from Hickory county." Many in the large crowd said amen, and we wondered then how they would go about it. The night before Bro. Chatburn came he made the statement that Bro. Chatburn was the most gentlemanly disputant he had ever debated with except Elder Sawyer—myself. I debated with Mr. Carlin four years ago.

The greatest excitement prevailed and fuel was added to the flames when Bro. Chatburn arose in the audience and introduced himself as the gentleman he had referred to the night before, and that he had come to let the people find out that there was another side to the question. After much gabbling and real genuine squeezing to avoid a debate by Mr. Carlin, he was finally forced into the conflict, agreeing to debate twelve two hour sessions; but the discussion closed two sessions short, because we could not hold him any longer. After all his great boasting, crying coward against the Saints; he said he could not, and had not for the last nine years lectured anywhere against us, but what we were always right after him, so he could not lecture peaceably on "Mormonism."

For fear that this article is already too long, I will close by saying that Bro. Chatburn did nothing in defending our cause. Many substantial friends were won over to our side, who were anxious to begin with. Two were baptized at the close of the debate. Others have given their names for baptism, others are earnestly investigating, and, best of all, the Saints were greatly strengthened, cheered and comforted; new life was enthused in them, and the grand work of the Lord is moving as it never moved before in these parts. Who will be the next to shake the "mustard stalk" to scatter the seed, and in a sense, cause the truth to shine the brighter?

I close feeling that I have come far short of telling all the interesting features, because of not wanting to intrude on the space given in our noble ENSIGN.

Respectfully,
ELDER F. L. SAWLEY.

RAYMOND, IDAHO, Nov. 13th.

Editor Ensign—I am still on the deck of the old ship Zion, battling for the truth; but, like many others of like precious faith, have to contend for every inch of advantage over the enemy. Since coming to my field of labor I have been very busy traveling and preaching the gospel of God's dear Son; labored in Utah and Idaho until about the first of October, when I crossed over into Wyoming, where I have since been laboring in new fields making new openings. Am meeting with a degree of success; and although meeting with some opposition, yet the Lord has stood by me, and opened the way before me, so that I have not lacked for anything necessary to enable me to place the gospel before strangers for their consideration. And I am pleased to be able to say I have found friends wherever I have labored, who kindly cared for me, and not only this, but they nearly always use their influence with their friends and neighbors for good.

My labors in Wyoming have mostly been among the Mormon people, and I wish to say that I have been treated very kindly by them. Not only have they open their houses of worship for me to preach in, but sometimes have furnished a choir to sing for me, and have taken me into their houses, fed and sheltered both myself and team; and although opposing me on the issues between the two churches, yet generally the opponents were gentlemanly. In Star Valley I was challenged to meet a man of their choice in public discussion. I told them I would accept the challenge provided we could agree on the time and propositions. But for the present I would have to decline on account of not being in good health, having at the time a severe cold, lagrippe or something of that nature, and it required an effort on my part to preach. So I came home for a few days of much needed rest, leaving my address, with a request for them to write to me, sending propositions to discuss. I consider the outlook for this mission brighter and better than for years.

Yours in bonds,
A. J. LAYLAND.

INDEPENDENCE, MO., Nov. 21.

Editor Ensign—Can we have mentioned in this week's ENSIGN a notice of an entertainment to be given in Argentine, Kansas, December 6th, for the benefit of a new church? The few Saints there are working hard to get the gospel to the outside world, and are doing fine considering all they have to meet. We have just recently completed a series of meetings with good results. Several have asked for baptism which will be attended to Thursday (Thanksgiving).

Several lots have been tendered us for reasonable prices, ranging from $75.00 to $350.00 each in good locations. We can build a small church for about $100.00. We now have in view over $200.00 in cash subscription, besides promises of labor from several. We were compelled to meet in private house last winter. This fall we were successful in getting use of the Union mission hall (a small store room) a portion of the time, but are excluded on every Sunday night when the most people can come, and are now about to be excluded entirely on account of doctrine. No other rooms or halls in that location can be secured, and we can see no sure way of success without building a little room and let the good word (the gospel) continue to sound. "Build up Zion, gather in the regions round about," etc, is the command.

Saints of Independence, A. Armstrong and other Kansas City branches, can you not help us in Argentine? Buy a ticket for 15 cents. You will enjoy the trip on car line. Several of our young people from Independence, 1st and 2d Kansas City branches are to render the program which is recommendation that you can be entertained to your satisfaction. We need your help, not alone in finance, but your presence will add to future results. The city people can see the class of citizens that forms the L. D. S. church.

The few at Argentine have for years been rendering assistance in other localities to build up the church, but now by reason of missionary labors in their locality, are continuing the struggle at home. They will appreciate the presence of our near by Saints.

Yours for the Master,
J. D. WHITE.

LAMONT, IA., Nov. 19.

Editor Ensign—Through the courtesy of the ENSIGN management, your paper now makes its regular and weekly visits at our home, and is, I believe, duly appreciated. But as I am opposed to becoming simply and only a receiver, so long as I may be able, though but a slight extent, to be a giver, I contribute this note to your editorial inspection. My days for active ministerial work in the field appear to be gone, though I would gladly have it otherwise if I could. However, to learn to submit to the inevitable with good grace, because of our faith in God, is a very important and useful lesson, though sometimes a very difficult one to learn; but when learned it brings much peace to the soul.

I am pleased to express my confidence in the great gospel work which has come to us by virtue of a restoration from heaven, in fulfillment of the promise of him who cannot lie. It is true that, as yet, we know but little about the work; but the more we know about it the better are we satisfied with its claims, and the more we love it. But when it comes to the speedy redemption of Zion, and the triumph of the work now, or in the immediate future, I may not be so hopeful as some. This is my faith and hope: God will continue to burn and overturn till he has accomplished his work in his own way, and the victory will be complete. Neither the wisdom of man nor the cunning of the devil can do more than to defer the day of triumph. God will not change his purposes nor methods, no matter how promising the inducements which we may hold out to him.

Yes, more wisdom (God's wisdom), more purity and selfishness; a better knowledge of the principles of truth and right, with a corresponding desire and determination to observe them in all the affairs of life, must obtain before Zion triumphs. Let us give careful consideration to the following passages of scripture, considering their connections, purposes, and the times at which they were given, together with the circumstances calling them forth.

"Jesus answered, my kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence."—John 18:36.

"The works, and the desires, and the purposes of God, cannot be frustrated, neither can they come to nought, for God doth not walk in crooked paths; neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore his paths are straight, and his course is one eternal round."—Doctrine and Covenants 2:1.

If in matters of traditional belief or in any manner of chains put forth, it is found that we are in conflict with the plain statements of God's word, and we are not willing that that word should set us right, it is sad indeed. Or if while attempting to build up the kingdom of God, we remain in the spirit of the world and pursue the methods of the world which are in conflict with the word of God, our efforts will prove a failure in the end. In this way we can neither save ourselves nor them that hear us.

Your brother in the love of the truth,

J. R. LAMBERT.

SCOTTS CORNERS, N. Y., Nov. 8.

Editor Ensign—Our conference of the Massachusetts district, held October 5th and 6th, was well attended, and a good time enjoyed. Bro. Greene and Anderson were the speakers and after conference continued the meetings through the week. On Monday night, however, there was no meeting, as the hour had been set apart for the marriage of Bro. Calvin Rich and Sr. Rena Busiel. The chapel was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and evergreen, gathered by a party of friends of "Cal" and Rena. The church was full and at the appointed hour the bridal party marched slowly up the aisle to the strains of the wedding march. Bro. Richard Bullard performed the marriage ceremony that made Calvin and Rena one. A reception was held at the home of the bride's father, where an enjoyable time was had, and the next day Bro. and Sr. Rich left for Maine amid showers of rice, oil shoes, etc., etc. Well may the good Lord bless them abundantly.

The writer tarried a day or two longer in Summerville, and was kindly cared for by Bro. and Sr. Newcom and Sr. Lewis. Wednesday night found me at prayer meeting in Providence, and God remembered and blessed us. Preached in Providence on Sunday evening and took the boat for New York on Friday night following. Bro. Richard Bullard was my traveling companion. We thought of Bro. M. T. Short and wondered if he would want to preach to the people if he were aboard. Not very rough, just a little shaky. On arriving in Brooklyn we were informed that an attack was to be made on the faith by a Congregational minister at Long Ridge, Connecticut, so the writer, in company with Bro. George Potts, hastened to the place where the attack was to be made.

On arriving we found some excitement among our friends, and not a little anxiety respecting the possible result. Bro. Greene and Anderson had been laboring at Long Ridge and vicinity for some months, and at Scott's Corners had baptized a number into the fold. Quite a large number had become interested at High Ridge, so I presume the reverend gentleman thought something must be done, and as Bro. Greene and Anderson were well out of the country, it would be a good time to fire his little gun. I always like to see fire-works and hear guns go off, little or big, so was on hand. Well, Mr. Moon (that was his name) made a direct attack on the Reorganization, and charged the missionaries with teaching falsely, and concealing much that they did believe; also charging a lot of other things too numerous to mention. He said, "I challenge any body in this house, or on Long Ridge, to disprove one word I say." I thought that there were several words he had said that I might disprove if I had the chance, so quietly arose and respectfully asked permission to accept the challenge. I also said that I would be willing to affirm the usual church propositions if he would do the same. On the impulse of the moment he answered "yes," but afterwards denied that he said he would debate church propositions. I announced an answer to his lecture, and made an appointment with him to arrange for debate. I have often heard that there is no atmosphere on the moon, but there was enough atmosphere on this moon, although not much of anything else. We met Bro. Stone, Bro. Bullard, a big deacon, a little preacher, the Rev., and the writer.

The moon was shining, but high up, and refused to come down to consider anything longer than one night in debate. However, under the circumstances it was thought best to get him under fire one night anyhow. So the news was circulated far and near, and a large crowd came to hear the debate and see the Moon turn his wonderful light on "Mormonism" and show its horrible deformity. But alas, the moon shines, but with a borrowed light, and in this case the sun refused to lend its light, leaving Moon lustreless. To make a long story short, God was with us and many friends have been made for the cause. Some of his own church members are on our side and I think it will be a long time before he tries to show up Mormonism again.

Bro. Bullard and the writer are holding meetings at Scott's Corner, New York, this week. Bro. B. goes to Brooklyn for Sunday, the writer to Hunting Ridge, Connecticut, near a number of the followers of Mr. Moon. A good Methodist brother has opened his house for meetings.

In the conflict,
Geo. W. Rowley.

IDAHO, Nov. 7th.

Editor Ensign—For a month past I have been out among the populous districts somewhat; spent a couple weeks in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, visiting with my brother John and family, and preached twice while there; but in this, the Teton Basin, I have preached almost every night for nearly two weeks, and we expect to tangle some before leaving; several have given their names. Bro. Adolphus Hendrickson, his mother and six brothers are living on Badger Creek at the lower end of the Basin and through the efforts of Bro. Adolphus, supplemented by four sermons I have delivered four of the family, his mother, two brothers, and a brother's wife, have confessed readiness, while twenty-five miles above some leading families are believing, and three or more are waiting the return of my brother John, when they expect to obey while he and I are together with them. Thus the good work goes on and we feel blessed by the Spirit of the Master.

Bro. John Condit hopes to do some labor for the Master this winter, and we feel encouraged with the general outlook. Trust the Saints throughout the district will take courage and move forward with tithes and offerings to sustain the work, as well as by example and precept, as the financial condition is too low to warrant an increase of missionary force, which this field sadly needs. Tithes should be sent, from this district, to Henry R. Evans, Malad City, Idaho. I will be pleased to hear from the Saints in the various parts of the field and desire to visit as many of them as practicable and not slight the work.

McLOUD, O. T., Nov. 22.

Dear Ensign—Will you give me a place in the ENSIGN at once to tell your many readers a few items of news. I left home on the 31st of October. My first stop was Ft. Worth, stopped with Bro. McFarland and noble family who know just how to make a missionary feel well. Our next stop was at Beaver, Wichita county. Here we met a goodly number of Saints in conference; had a good time; the Saints here also know how to treat an elder. Bro. A. J. Moore was in charge. The next stop was at Beaver, where Bro. Bryan, John Hawley and Wm. H. Smart did the balance of the preaching that was done at conference.

From there I went by invitation to Oklahoma branch, where I met another good lot of Saints and friends. I preached eight times to good turn-outs and interest; they wished me to stay and preach another week, but my arrangements would not permit it. I left these good Saints on the 15th inst., stopped off at Beaver again to see Bro. Moore, and folks, and other of the Saints there. I would have stayed longer than I did but had to hasten on my trip to Oklahoma, where I arrived at my brother's this morning. I find himself and family well and doing well, still strong in the faith and living the religion of Christ. We aim to hold some meetings. Hope for good results, will let you know later on. I am
Yours in bonds,

THE ISLANDS OF THE SEA.

BY ELDER C. F. BELKHAM.

Much has been said pro and con, in the last three years, as to the wisdom of acquiring, and retaining, as American territory, the islands of the sea, the result of the Spanish American war. It is the intention of this article to find, if possible, the key note of the whole drama. Was it a mere chance? Was it by reason of the fact that we, as a nation, held this power, that the aims of our nation were successful, or was it the working out of the Infinite mind? I believe it is agreed by our greatest scholars of an ecclesiastical turn of mind, that we are living in the last days, when the prophecies of Daniel are being fulfilled, just prior to the second coming of Christ. All nations come into existence for a purpose, and whenever a nation has failed to carry out that purpose, became lifted up in their own pride, and rendered not homage to him who brought them forth, they have gone down. And in looking back over the coast of time, we see them all a wreck on the same rocky shore.

Now, no one will deny the fact that in all these islands papal Rome has held her power supreme during the entire time of the christian era. Bear in mind, kind reader, there has not been a day during all this time that the angel's message could have been sent to those people. In Matthew 24: 14 we find a proclamation sent forth by the stainless Christ:

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come."

All great reforms come through war, and cannot we now recognize the fact that the time had fully come when this papal power should be broken, and make it possible for the gospel to be sent to this people? Remember the proclamation says it must be preached unto all nations, ere the end will come. We must also recognize the one fact that this government came into existence for a purpose of the infinite mind. First of all for the Restoration of the gospel, for it could not have taken place anywhere else, by reason of the fact that the records of its fullness were here. And who of all nations should be more competent, or under more obligations to the divine One who brought them forth, to break this Roman power and make it possible to send the angel's message to these islands, than the United States government?

Now, kind reader, carefully survey the events of the Spanish-American war, and you cannot escape the conclusion that the United States was the unconscious agent to break this Roman power, and make it possible to send the gospel to these islands, for these people are a part of the world where this gospel must be preached for a witness ere the end shall come.

Let us take a look at Spain at a time when she stood at the zenith of her power. It has been said by the historians that the sun did not set where she did not rule, so vast were her possessions; but like the great Roman empire, standing at her very heights, and surveying her grandeur and power, she rendered not devotions to her God, but bowed to him who sat in the papal chair. Amid great display she sent her navy to fight her battles; around that fleet that went to Santiago clustered the hope of a nation, but you all know the results. After struggling amid shot and shell three hours, a nation's only hope and pride lay a wreck on the beach, with their dead and dying, while on our side only one man was killed, and our noble fleet uninjured, ready for another battle. Kind reader, can you not see the hand of God moving upon the waters, as our protector in time of battle? And cannot I say again that the American Union was working out another great problem of the Infinite mind, that this gospel might be preached there for a witness ere the end shall come?

Should not we, as Saints of the kingdom, be among the first to recognize these stubborn facts. And should not we be among the first to preach this message ere the people become perplexed with the "isms of the age? And are we not facing a grave duty, and an obligation that we cannot throw off without standing under condemnation before our God? I believe we, as a church, will be held accountable for more, yes, doubly so, than any of God's people that ever pursued the walks of men before us, by reason of the fact that we see where God's people fell before, and as the final restoration, I believe, has come, we have the greater light.

Now, if we, as the American people, will render devotion to God, who brought us forth as a nation, where the old flag has been once reared as a standard it will never be furled and hauled down. But if we, like the great Roman empire, fail to render our devotions to our God, who brought us forth and maintained us as a nation, we must still remember God is no respecter of persons. The events of the last five years are startling. We then, as a nation, reached from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but now reaching out into the eastern hemisphere. Even there, 10,000 miles away, the old flag is waving for the protection of the missionary; how long will that people have to wait for this message? The hastening time is upon us, brother, great events stare us in the face, will we be able, as God's chosen people, to meet them?

Russia in The Holy Land.

Bejrout, Syria.—Sept. '03.—To the majority of people what takes place in the Orient is practically unknown, and yet there is considerable activity in those historic lands that are so closely associated with the origin of christianity and so dear to the heart of Christendom. At the present time this hallowed portion of the world is the scene of much intrigue on the part of several nations.

The Russians are systematically invading Galilee, their evident design being to extend their influence by means of the orthodox schools which they place at the disposal of the Greeks resident in the country. At Nazareth there is a largely attended normal school directed by Greek instructors, and managed under Russian discipline. The directors actually wear the Russian national costume, and the moral atmosphere of the place is thoroughly Russian. In cases where the Greek priests refuse outright to concede to the invading Russians their ancient schools, the latter erect them next door at their own expense. The fact that the Russians seem to have unlimited funds strengthens the impression that the Czar's government is behind them in their schemes of proselytization, which are in line with the unswerving Muscovite policy of territorial expansion.

Another striking and systematic invasion of this sacred country is that of the Jews, who aspire to reconquer their native land, and dream of a reconstituted Israelite nation in the land of their fathers. Jewish societies with this end in view have bought immense tracts of land near Mount Tabor. They have, moreover, built a fine road up the mountain, so that it is now possible for the first time to make the ascent in a carriage. Plots of land have been sold by installment with the understanding that in fifteen years the purchasers will own them.

A similar combination has been formed near Magdala, to the north of Tiberias, and another near the city of Jaffa, where there are already many Jews. To offset the influence of the Jewish emigrants in Palestine the Turkish Government is considering giving free tracts of land to the nomad tribes. These aggressive people are roused up on to keep the Jew's at arm's length and to prevent them from getting a foothold on the soil.

The Protestants have a share in this competition for proselytes. They have established schools in the villages of 500 inhabitants, just as the Greeks, Russians and Latins have. They have opened orphan asylums, and, as fishers of men, they have taken care to bait their lines with pieces of gold.

The French religious communities, which have accomplished so much in these lands, are opposing these recent invasions as best they can. They make extraordinary efforts and sacrifices to maintain their ground, and remain undiscouraged at the cynical neglect with which the Christian world regards them. The Turkish government, which scatters protection and favors with a lavish hand upon the Russian and English schools, refuses all help and countenance to the French establishments. The recent threat of France, through its Minister to Turkey, M. Constant, to coerce the Sultan, will probably still further prejudice the cause of the French missions in the Orient.

This very interesting extract from a typical Russian organ shows the attitude of the Czar's government toward the great project of Leo XII, and reveals an absolute determination to dominate the Holy Land to the exclusion of the Catholic influences which have thriven under the protecting regis of France:

"The religious character of the mission of the Russian people imposes upon it the duty of opposing incessantly in the Holy Land the great progress of the Catholic and Lutheran proselytism. Leo XIII is working too earnestly there. The progress of Catholicism in the Indies and in Japan, the blood of the martyrs which has enriched the Catholic church, have not sufficed to console the Papacy for the loss of the half of Europe, nor for the schism of the Eastern Church. The recent attempts of the Vatican have not attained their desired object. The letters of the Pope, precisely those addressed to the Apostolic Delegates, reveal the fact that his desires of union look to the Latinization of the Orthodox Churches, which he desires to attach to the wheels of the Papal chariot."

Another point of extreme interest at this time, and which seems to have been entirely overlooked by the secular press, is that the determination of the Czar may possibly sow the seeds of dissension between France and Russia, whose interests now seem knit together in an iron-bound alliance. What may be regarded as certain is that Russia will abate no jot of effort in her attempt to dominate Palestine—not even at the behest of her highly valued ally, France. The reason for this is clear. The Czar has no choice in the matter. His policy in the Holy Land has behind it the strongest of all influences, religious fanaticism, before which everything gives way. The Orthodox Russians passionately point to history in proof that they have been cruelly robbed of the custody of the Holy Places, and they are resolved in regaining them. This fanaticism, gathering into a torrent, may sweep all before it, and, backed as it is for a need by the bayonets of Russia, it deserves to be taken into consideration by the statesmen who govern France.

If such opinions as those quoted above from a Russian newspaper were generally known in France, there would, perhaps, be a little less enthusiasm over the Franco-Russian alliance, which is now the most popular issue in France. How does this sound in French ears? It is taken from the organ of the Imperial Russian Society of Palestine:

"To Russia has been confided the great mission of Orthodoxy. The French Protectorate (in the Holy Land) is on the point of disappearing. It has lasted long enough in the East; the dissonances of the Latin missionaries have brought it within a few steps of the grave. Upon us devolves the duty of turning all our thoughts toward Palestine, in order that it may again become, as in the past, the land of Orthodoxy, with Russia as its faithful guardian."—The (New York) Catholic News, Oct. 23.

NO CLAIM TO CATHOLICITY

In the course of his sermon last Sunday in St. Francis Xavier's church, Brooklynn, of which the Rev. D. J. Hickey is pastor, the Rev. Dr. William F. McGinnis, president of the International Catholic Truth Society, alluded to the efforts of the Protestant Episcopal Convention in San Francisco, to discard the name by which that church has hitherto been known, and assume the title of the Catholic Church in the United States. He said:

"If an individual delays finding out his name until his declining years, one would be tempted to fear that there was something wrong with his birth record." Dr. McGinnis also referred to an article which appeared in the Brooklyn Eagle "as a specimen of the loose, incoherent sort of argument with which the pretensions to Catholicity by the Protestant Episcopal Church are frequently bolstered up."

As was afterward learned, Dr. McGinnis had in mind the article in the Eagle on "The Proper Name of the Church," by the Rev. Wm. T. Fitch.

To an Eagle reporter who called on him afterward, Dr. McGinnis said:

"The Eagle did well to state in its headlines to the article in question, that the Rev. Mr. Fitch discussed the subject interestingly; but the interest was rather psychological than historical. It is a long time since we have seen such a combination of arrogant claims and puerile reasoning. The contention of the writer and of those who share his conclusions is that the present Protestant Episcopal Church is the legitimate child of the old church in England, which existed from Apostolic times. I readily admit that the gospel of Christ was known in Britain at the beginning of the second century, but from that time down to the dark divorce days of Henry VIII, the clergy and laity of the Catholic church in England were united to the chair of Peter precisely the same as any other people in Europe. The English church was then Catholic because it was a part of the Universal church governed by the Bishop of Rome, and how a man could read the history of England for ten centuries and then say that the supremacy of the pope was not acknowledged by England; that during these ages the English Church was an independent entity, is to me incomprehensible.

"Is the Episcopal church recognized today by the Catholic world? Rome has condemned her orders; with the Catholicity of Roman Catholic countries she has no part, and the Greek church has plainly said: 'You have no part with us; we have seven sacraments, you recognize but two.' Cardinal Newman recognized the utility of such claims to Catholicity and recalled the fact that the attitude of the Church of England toward Rome was a repetition of the behavior of many ancient heresies.

"Let me give a few facts, and, if necessary, I could give a few thousand: The Pelagian heresy was making some progress in England, and Pope Celestine, about the year 433, sent his two Bishops, Germanus of Auxerre and Lupus of Troy, to arrest the progress of such doctrines. Later on Pope Gregory the Great (577), sent missionaries into England, and by them was Ethelbert instructed and baptized. Later on Augustine received the pallium, the mark of archiepiscopal power from the pope. Ere long the English nation brought Peter's Pence to the Bishop of Rome.

"If the pope did not rule in England, as elsewhere, why did St Anselm (1094) bring his dispute with the King of England to the court of Rome and beg permission to resign his see? Why did King Henry and Thomas a Becket refer their differences to the Bishop of Rome if the ancient Church of England believed, as the Rev. Mr. Fitch contends, that his authority should not extend beyond Rome or Italy? We would be surprised to see the present King of England or his successor asking the pope for a dispensation from a matrimonial impediment, and yet Henry VII begged Julius II for such dispensation for the marriage of his son, Henry, with Katherine, and not until late the following year, July 6, 1504, did the pope grant it, 'when he had considered the case maturely.' And why did this Henry VIII spend six long years in his futile efforts to have his marriage annulled by Clement VII? Why did his messengers, Dr. Knight, Stephen Gardner and Edward Fox, plead in season and out of season; why did they even attempt to bribe Cardinal Quatuor that the marriage tie be annulled if Clement were not supposed to have spiritual authority 'outside of Rome and Italy?'"

"As I said before, these are but a few instances out of thousands that might be given to show that the Church of England recognized the pope as the head of Christendom.

"The Rev. Mr. Fitch argues that Protestantism no longer means what it once did, but to me it means today what it did in the eventful year 1529—a protestation against the authority of the Roman Catholic church. I would suggest that Catholicity must also have changed its meaning, according to the Rev. Mr. Fitch. It used to mean universality, and the Catholic church was the one which taught everywhere, to all peoples, the same doctrines. I would like Mr. Fitch to designate the doctrines to which all ministers in the Protestant Episcopal Church subscribe. I have heard that some of them that in the Holy Communion the faithful receive a piece of bread, others that it is the actual Body of Jesus Christ. Recently in New York City an Episcopalian minister denied the mystery of the Trinity and the Incarnation. This is not Catholicity, even though such discordant doctrines were taught by the Protestant Episcopal church from pulpits in every city and hamlet on earth."—The Catholic News (N. Y.), Oct. 23.

THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE

The approaching centennial celebration of the Louisiana Purchase [at St. Louis, Missouri], has suggested to the Treasury Bureau of Statistics the compilation of some data regarding the present condition and productions of the territory included within that purchase. This statement which will be published in the October number of the Monthly Summary of Commerce and Finance, shows that the land area of the Louisiana Purchase exceeds that of the original thirteen states, being 864,944 square miles, against a total land area of 820,944 square miles in the original thirteen states. The states and territories which have been created in whole or in part from its area number fourteen, and their population in 1900 was 14,708,616, against a population of less than 100,000 in the territory at the time of its purchase. Their total area is nearly one-third that of the entire union, and their population about one fifth that of the entire United States.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

They produced in 1890 164 million bushels of wheat, and in 1900 264 million bushels, at a value in 1900 of 152 million dollars, their total wheat production being over 50 per cent of that of the entire United States. They produced 602 million bushels of corn in 1890, and 1,013 million bushels in 1900, with a value in 1900 of 314 million dollars, their total corn crop forming in 1890 40 per cent, and in 1900 48 per cent of the total corn crop of the United States. Of oats they produced in 1900 311 million bushels, or 98 per cent of the total product of the country, with a valuation of 71 million dollars. Their production of barley in 1900 was valued at over 10 million dollars, and of rye over 2 million dollars; while their production of potatoes in 1900 amounted to over 25 million dollars, that of hay 180 million dollars, and that of cotton 50 million dollars in value. The total value of the agricultural products of the States formed from the Louisiana Purchase, including in that category simply wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, hay, potatoes and cotton was, in 1890 670 million dollars, and in 1900, 755 million dollars. The wool product of these states amounted to 61,871 pounds in 1894, and in 1900 to 100,990,982, or 35 per cent of the total wool product of the country, with an estimated value of about fifteen million dollars, or equal to the cost of the entire area. The value of the farm animals in these states in 1900 was 722 million dollars, and in 1900, 825 millions. Add to these easily measured farm products the estimated value of the wool, the sugar, the dairy and poultry products, and the proportion of the live-stock annually turned into provisions, and it may be safely estimated that their agricultural products during a single year amount to one hundred times the original cost of the area; or, in other words, that its cost is repaid by 1 per cent of the agricultural productions of each recurring year.

MINERAL WEALTH.

The products of the mines is also very great. The coal produced in this area in 1899 amounted to 22 million tons, against 14 million in 1890; the iron ore to 8,491,000 tons in 1900, against 1,869,000 tons in 1890; the silver product of 1899 $50,300,768 in coining value against $44,799,998 in 1890; and gold $87,712,400 in 1899, against $10,650,000 in 1890.

BANKING STATISTICS.

The prosperity evidenced by these figures is further evidenced by the banking institutions of the states formed from this territory. Their capital stock amounted in 1900 to over 80 million dollars; their circulation to $36,600,000 in 1900, against $15,644,000 in 1890; their loans and discounts to $317,563,000 in 1900, against $269,016,000 in 1890; and their total resources, $1,099,111,000, in 1900, against $746,903,000 in 1890; while a still more gratifying evidence of the prosperity of this section is in the fact that individual deposits in national banks in 1900 amounted to $229,669,000, against $216,609,000 in 1890, an increase of more than $110,000,000 in individual deposits during the decade.

EDUCATIONAL CONDITIONS.

A study of the educational conditions shows equally rapid and gratifying development. The pupils enrolled in the public schools in the states in question in 1890 numbered 2,580,495, and in 1899 3,161,112; the teachers employed numbered in 1890 39,558, and in 1899, 102,202; and the expenditures for public schools in 1890 was $80,284,752, and in 1899, $37,185,881. The number of pupils in attendance at high schools in 1899 was 119,847, with 4,937 teachers; at normal schools 15,843 students, with 625 teachers; and at higher educational institutions, 40,249 students, with 3,925 teachers. The total figures for schools and educational institutions in the fourteen states formed from the Louisiana Purchase show: teachers in 1890, 95,365; in 1899, 111,689; attendance, in 1890, 2,670,541; in 1899, 3,331,051.

NEWSPAPERS, POSTOFFICE AND RAILWAYS.

The number of newspapers and periodicals published in this area in 1890 was 4,759, and in 1900, 5,618; the number of post-offices in 1890, 12,919; and in 1900, 16,228; the miles of railway in operation in 1890 numbered 51,323, and in 1899, 59,324, or 31 per cent of the total railway mileage of the country.

FUTURE POSSIBILITIES CONSIDERED.

The power of this vast area, with its agricultural and mineral wealth, to sustain a population much greater than that which it now supports is suggested by a comparison of its area with the area and population of the prosperous countries of Europe. The total area of the Louisiana Purchase (including land and water surface) is 875,025 square miles, and is slightly less than that of the United Kingdom, Netherlands, Belgium, Germany, France, Spain, Italy and Switzerland, whose total area is 885,978 square miles, with a present population of 202,368,578, as against a present population of 14,708,616 in the territory under consideration, whose agricultural and mineral possibilities fully equal those of the European states named.

RUSSIA'S FAMINE.

Relief Wholly Inadequate.

St. Petersburg, Wednesday, Nov. 6.—It is becoming apparent that the famine is worse than the government seems to have anticipated, or at least than the means now available will suffice for.

From the zemstvos (local government boards) of many provinces and provincial districts there are being sent in daily reports of deep and increasing distress and an appalling scarcity of grain and provender. Not one-half the demands that are made upon the central government can be met from the funds that have been assigned for relief work, and recently there has been a large increase in the number of petitions. Simbirsk asks for 180,000 poods of grain, 200,000 roubles to buy grain with, 35,000 roubles for medical relief and 10,000 roubles for public works in each district.

Furthermore, one district of this government which had hitherto not been proclaimed in famine condition is reported to be in dire distress, as the winter grain sown this autumn failed to sprout and the populace is helpless. The reports from many provinces show that the dry autumn has disastrously affected the new sowing. From Tomsk, West Siberia, are reported local crop failures and a flight of the peasants back to European Russia. The assignment of money (15,000 roubles) and grain is declared to be insufficient, and the hungry peasants have been driven to robbery and even murder. Deeds of violence are declared to be of daily occurrence. But this is not a new symptom, public safety being but insufficiently guarded in many parts of Siberia.

The zemstvo of Perm, where subordinate officials, in the governor's absence, reported everything all right, has held an extraordinary session in the presence of the governor. It asserts that the famine is worse than it was in 1891, but not quite so bad as in 1898. The average crop per dessiatine (equal to 2.7 English acres) during ten years, including the famine years, was 46.5 poods. This year it is only 27.31, and in two districts, Shadrinsk and Irbit, the crop is only from 34 to 36 per cent of the average. As a result, live stock is being generally sold and grain is dear. In 1898-99 3,400,000 poods of grain was distributed and 224,000 roubles were expended for public works and 156,000 roubles for provender. The central government also gave 1,591,000 poods of grain and 156,000 roubles. This year nothing is promised. The zemstvo demands 1,890,000 roubles as a loan and has decided to take 700,000 from its fire insurance capital.

At the extraordinary meeting of the Veronej zemstvo three districts were declared to be in desperate straits, six to be suffering and only three in satisfactory condition. Credits were demanded for public works in five districts, and for the purchase of grain and cattle amounting to 250,000 roubles, and the Red Cross Society was asked to vote 28,000 roubles for medicine and free restaurants.

The municipal council of Yekaterinboorg wants 100,000 roubles to organize a public grain market.

Epidemics of scurvy and typhoid fever are making steady progress in many governments. Between October 1st and 23d, 373 cases of scurvy were reported in 11 villages of the district of Kvalinsk. Both diseases have re-appeared in the government of Kherson, where they raged last year.

The Red Cross Society is receiving practically no support from the public, which treats it as any government institution, and its subsidies and other sources of income appear to be far from sufficient. Up to now the Red Cross has voted comparatively small sums. It is stated today that it has ordered 35,000 roubles to be expended in the government of Samara, 21,200 in Kazan and 15,000 in Tobolsk.

An American Protectorate Over England.

The London correspondent of the St. Petersburg, Novoye Vremya writes to his paper that to all practical purposes England "must be considered to be under an American protectorate." In elucidation of this novel and startling idea, the correspondent says:

"The United States will not permit any radical change in the territorial status of England. Indeed, the relation of the United States to England is similar to that of Germany to Austria. Just as Germany has used Austria for her own purposes, while guarding her from external violence, so does America take advantage of British needs and weaknesses, caring for England only insofar as self-interest prompts. The British have lost all pride in their relation to the United States. They admit that they cannot successfully resist the republic. They no longer trust to their own strength, but place their reliance on the social, racial and literary ties which attract the Americans to England. In this surrender to the American there is a sentimental motive as well as a practical one. Losing her maritime, commercial and even financial primacy, England can bear with more resignation the passing of this primacy to a nation akin to her in language, civilization, and even blood."

This would seem, at the first glance, to be an unjustified statement of conditions by an enemy of England with the purpose of humiliating her, but it will not appear so in the light of an article recently published in the London Daily Telegraph—an article, by the way, which shows a remarkable knowledge of American affairs on the part of the writer, as well as a statesman like grasp of the world's great movements. The only perceptible difference between the two articles in their economic phases is that the Russian regards as already accomplished that which the Englishman considers as inevitable at some not very distant date in the life of the two nations.

Our Englishman starts off with the statement that the speech of President McKinley at the Buffalo exposition marked the date when America "finished up her growing time and entered upon her strength." In his opinion the world has paid too little attention to what President McKinley said on that occasion. "We must not," he says, "allow the crime against the president's life to obscure what had happened immediately before. Upon the previous day the president, who was a most sonorous and powerful speaker when warmed into a serious glow by the rising earnestness of his argument, had made what was recognized at once as the most remarkable speech of his life. In the United States it was most admired. For the remainder of the world it was incomparably the most significant. Had the outrage not occurred within twenty-four hours of his delivery, the press of every country would have been full of it."

As interpreted by this Englishman the speech of the president announced the intention of the United States to enter at once upon three projects which are destined to give the United States the financial and commercial supremacy of the world. He declared for the building of a great merchant marine, for the construction of the Nicaragua canal, and for such a modification of the tariff laws as would increase the competitive power of American productions. These three things, says our Englishman, are all that are needed to put the United States so far in front of the other nations of the globe as to form "a wholly unprecendented phenomenon in the history of the world."

England, says this English writer, finds her position determined by the external attribute of sea power, for which the United States is now to become a competitor. "Without that," he says, "we should have lacked from the outset, the raw material for our textile trades, and modern Lancaster would never have come into existence. To lose it now would mean the stopping of our mills and the starving of our people. But America depends upon no external attribute, not even upon the magnificent assistance of sea power. For the first time in the history of the world the bid for commercial supremacy is made by a semi-continent which is more completely self-contained in an economic sense than any society ever before seen. At our present stage we are compelled to import our food, our ore, our raw cotton. To be cut off from our source of supply in these respects would mean ruin. But while America can become far richer and more powerful with a great foreign trade than without it, and, therefore, concentrates her whole ambition upon obtaining it, foreign trade is not, and never can be, the matter of life and death to her that it is to us. She can dispense with the world in case of absolute need. She is the greatest producer of food and raw materials, as well as the possessor of the most efficient manufacturing apparatus, the most consummate organizing ability, the most numerous and energetic population among all the commercial states. Her political security is even more complete than ours ever was. There is not a single factor of economic activity in which she may not reasonably expect to excel any rival."

The writer affirms that there is not the slightest doubt that the United States will accomplish the three proposals enunciated by President McKinley—that we shall dig the Nicaragua canal, build a merchant marine, and revise our tariffs in a manner that will extend American trade. As for England, he hopes that she can remain at least a good second to her gigantic rival across the sea. "If," he says in conclusion, "the laws of nature forbid us to hope that we can retard that extension of productive pre-eminence which America has already won, she will continue to supply us with the food and raw material which will enable us to sustain the economic struggle with the remainder of the world so long as there is need to count."—The Kansas City (Mo.) Journal, Nov. 20, 1901.

A Tale Almost Too Good to be True.

During the blizzard of '90 I started one day from the central office of the Bureau of Charities to distribute money to some cases reported for "instant relief." In an attic I found a poor widow, a seamstress, with one child, a boy of six. The room was cold and bare; there was no fire, the windows were loose and snow lay upon the floor. The boy had been kept in bed for two days to keep warm. I asked the usual questions and gave the woman two dollars. All this before I discovered the boy. Suddenly his head bobbed from beneath the bedclothes, and at sight of the two bills his eyes became moons. "Gee-ee, Mister! All that for us? Then we can give some to Ted Burn's mother downstairs to buy coal. Can't we, Mom?"—The Rev. David M. Steele, in The Ladies' Home Journal for December.

An inch of rainfall, the drops frozen as they form into delicate crystals, will make ten inches of snow.—December Ladies' Home Journal.

Monroe Doctrine Again Applied.

There has been little disposition of late years to dispute the Monroe doctrine, on the part of the great powers of the world. It is not surprising, therefore, to find the influential London journals giving unequivocal indorsement to the doctrine in its application to the present Colombian rebellion. The English press remarks—a little grudgingly, it is true—that the affairs connected with the insurrection are playing right into the hands of the United States, but takes the matter good naturedly and there is no withholding of heartiness in the recommendation that the doctrine be recognized with all the solemnity of official sanction. It makes no difference who made the first advances in the matter of the new canal treaty. The fact remains that the last vestige of any claim of authority has been surrendered and the right of this country to solve the canal problem in its own way is completely recognized.

The Monroe doctrine is very clearly emphasized in the attitude of our government toward the Colombian rebellion, but the emphasis comes chiefly in connection with what might be called the corollary event. The main assertion of the doctrine prevents foreign aggression; the corollary is the guarantee of domestic integrity, and in announcing its intention to prevent the bombardment of Colon this is made plain. The interruption of transportation facilities will not be tolerated and the United States enforces its guarantee that all the rules of international warfare shall be observed and of course, all American rights protected.—Kansas City Journal, Nov. 27th.

HEART DISEASES TREATED FREE!

THE CELEBRATED SPECIALIST, FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B. WILL SEND $2.50 WORTH OF HIS NEW TREATMENT FREE.

Our afflicted readers will certainly never have a better chance to try a new and highly recommended treatment for Heart Disease, complicated with Headache, Dizziness, Dulness, Neuralgia, Backache, Weak Stomach, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Prostration, etc.

Dr. Miles' Individual Treatments are the latest result of twenty-five years of laborious investigation and extensive experience. They are eminently scientific, and three times as successful as the usual methods.

Many hundreds of prominent people have testified to the almost miraculous results of these new treatments. The Doctor has for years been well and probably known as a leading specialist in the diagnosis and treatment of all the above mentioned ailments.

Mr. C. M. Buck, a prominent banker of Fairbank, Minn., was cured after six eminent physicians of Chicago and elsewhere had failed. Mr. J. S. Zeit of Indianapolis, State Representative of the New York Life Insurance Co., was cured after failure of many other doctors.

Dr. Miles certainly has the largest practice in treating heart diseases of any physician in the United States. He has an able and extensive corps of physicians and investigators in his private offices. His patients are in every State, Territory, Canada, Mexico, South America, Alaska, Africa and New Zealand. He cordially invites the afflicted to write to him. Candid advice given without charge.

You may never have another such opportunity. Do not fail to write for $2.50 worth of free treatment. Address The Dr. Franklin Miles Association, 201 to 209 State St., Chicago. Please mention this paper.

OUR AIM, MANICING TO BLESS. DAUGHTERS OF ZION

MRS. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the churches, mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "manicng to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

A BOOK FOR GIRLS.

Sometime ago the Advisory Board of the Daughters of Zion appointed a committee of three, consisting of Mrs. M. Walker, Lucy L. Resseguie and Frances W. Davis, who are so well known in the church for their work in behalf of the young, to prepare the MS. of this book, "Fireside Talks With Girls." From the reputation of this committee, the approval of the work by Bro. Joseph Smith and E. L. Kelley, of the Presidency, and the favorable editorials in the Herald and ENSIGN, the Advisory Board feel we can urge the mothers and daughters to purchase a copy of this useful little book, which is now on sale. Until the present edition is exhausted the price of limp cloth binding will be 30 cents; paper covers 20 cents.

The work of the sisters of this committee has been freely given and we are grateful to our heavenly Father for all the aid thus rendered.

Please send orders to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Ia., Lock Box E, as soon as possible, in order that we may be prepared to publish other books.

ADVISORY BOARD.

INDEPENDENCE, MO., NOV. 25.

"Few of Christ's parables contain a more important lesson than the parable of the talents. It applies to everyone. The servants possessing five talents and two talents were commended when they reported that they had doubled the talents, but they were commended not for their success, but for their faithful-ness. The Master's words were: 'Thou good and faithful servant.' The man with one talent would have been commended as highly had he been equally faithful. Had he used his talent it would have been doubled and the doubling of his talents would have continued so long as he continued faithful in their use.

"The reason so many one-talented people fail is that they make no effort. They are unfaithful to the trust imposed in them. If they used the one talent, they would soon find that they were accomplishing something. The world is more indebted to men who started in life with but one talent than to men who started with five talents.

"Harriet Hosmer, when a child, became conscious of the possession of a talent for sculpture. In her play she came across a clay-pit near her father's home and this she turned into a studio. This use of her talent made her the most famous woman sculptor the world has known.

"There have been many instances of faithful one-talented servants in the kingdom of God. Among these was Wm. Carvoso, who could neither read nor write until he was more than sixty years old and yet was the means of leading so many souls to Christ that he is known in Methodist history as the Soul-winner. God asks for the faithful use of our talents, whether one or many. For that we shall receive our reward. He alone can tell what the result of our labor will be."—Sci.

GRACIOUSNESS is the pilot that guides our barks aright upon the broad sea of social and religious life. In our intercourse with one another how often this pilot deserts us and our craft runs counter to another.

Of what does graciousness consist? Is it not based upon the broad principle of living and letting live? It seems so. When we break the divine command to "judge not," when we fail to have pity for a wrong, when we harbor ill feeling towards our neighbor, when we fail to bridle our tongues, so often we depart from the pleasant paths of graciousness, incurring the displeasure of God and our fellow man.

Graciousness does not imply insincerity. It is not required of us that we state pleasant untruths any more than we are being honest when we voice every unpleasant truth we may hear or know. Graciousness is looking for the good and clothing the evil with the mantle of divine and holy charity, having for our sincere desire the fulfillment of that injunction to "love our neighbor as ourself."

Especially should woman cultivate this royal gift. The world looks to her for the finer qualities, and in no way will it be more disappointed than at a cross, fault finding, sarcastic, uncharitable woman. She may have a powerful intellect and great executive ability, but if she be uncivil, with little charity for our weaknesses (and if she censures others, we know she will censure us sometimes), her power for good is lost and we learn to avoid her.

Should we deem it necessary to speak truths that are unpleasant, it still can be done in a helpful way if we bear in mind that we are to love instead of hate, and to forbear in all kindness to one another.

One need have no delicacy in asking a person to return a borrowed book. Books are property, and when borrowed they should be carefully protected from injury and promptly returned to their owners.

EX VOTO.

Yes sir! "according to vow" to perform every imposed duty in behalf of church interest, have again dipped my pen in ink to urge upon the attention of Saints the necessities of Graceland; and although my pen seemed to rest for the past month, my brain has not. Please note: the college building and grounds cost some thing to keep them up, and from going to waste, and the school commenced the fore part of September, at which time began the expense of professors and janitor; later we have to add expense of fuel to keep the college comfortable for those attending, and as the amount received from students is not equal to the running expense we are under the painful necessity of BEGGING for aid in sustaining this church institution; and experience has taught us that to obtain must ask. Yes! every time we greet you with an appeal there is a response; but when we neglect this means of grace to stir up your pure minds to duty, and our want, then is there a perceptible falling off of receipts.

Having curtailed the current expenses, and with an increased income, we expect to be able to make a better showing, and a decrease of liabilities by next General Conference. Saints, will you help us?

We are making a TORTOISE race in paying the "college debt," but a few of the many are manifesting their willingness by contributing of their means for that purpose. Had there been prompt and immediate action last spring, union in complying with God's word, money enough could have been saved to the church to have kept at least five active elders out in the mission field for a year. Truly procrastination is the thief of time, yea, more! Procrastination in paying an interest bearing debt is a waste of good money that might be put to a better use than to enrich the money lender, and impoverish the interest payer; of a truth are the "mammon." The art of business of the worldly wise surpasses too frequently the rule employed by the children of light. When Saints! O when!! shall we reverse this long standing statement of the Master, for although positively true, it is nowise to our praise.

We ask, Saints, for a consideration of increasing the roll of our students for the winter term, for at Graceland the probability is your children will not be educated away from the faith of their fathers, or out of the church. As a college we are striving to give the youth every advantage to gain a useful, practical education, and as a branch we seek by the Sabbath School, divine service, and high moral entertainment, that that will be an incentive to a pure and noble life of usefulness in both the church and the world.

Think upon these things and act promptly and wisely for your own and the church's good.

In bonds,
ROBT. M. ELVIN.

BORN.

PAGE.—Born at Gilroy, California, November 5, 1901, to Bro. and Sr. Walter A. Page of San Benito, a daughter.

DIED.

DUNCAN.—Charles R. Duncan was born at Mirable, Caldwell county, Missouri, May 8, 1863; died at his temporary home at Husted, Colorado, November 17, 1901, of pulmonary consumption. He was married June 12, 1892 to Sr. May Baker, to them were born two children, one of whom, a sweet little girl of four years, with her mother, live to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father. He was baptized April 6, 1878, by Bro. G. T. Griffiths. He was ordained to the office of priest in 1887, and an elder in 1890, and April 14, 1893, was ordained to the office of a seventy and became a member of the first quorum. He has traveled in the interests of the church as a missionary since 1888, and was quite well and favorably known to the church, as a valiant and able defender of the truth. He was serving on a mission to Colorado at the time of his death. Before departing this life he bore a strong testimony to the truthfulness of the restored gospel; Bro. Baker, who was watching by his bedside, wrote it down at the time. He said: "I want to testify before I leave you, this gospel which I have been presenting for so many years is true. Angels have stood by me in presenting it. The angel spoken of by John the Revelator, is the one who ordained Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery." When asked by Bro. Baker what he should tell the Coal Hill Saints, he replied: "Tell them I died in the faith;" then he said, "Now I'm going into a kind of stupor, if I rally, all right; if not, let her go, good-night," and waved his hand and closed his eyes in death. Funeral services were held at Colorado Springs, Tuesday 19th, in charge of Bro. A. B. Hansen, the sermon being preached by Bro. J. B. Roush, of Denver, and the remains taken to Lebeck, Missouri, to be interred at the Saints' cemetery at Coal Hill.

With her husband she united with the church in 1841 and with the Reorganization in 1865, remaining faithful until death. Funeral service was held in the Saints' church, Thurman, Iowa; sermon by Elder Charles Fry, assisted by Geo. Kemp. She was laid to rest in Thurman cemetery to await a glorious resurrection.

Tobacco the Best Insecticide.

Most of the insects common to house plants dislike tobacco as much as does the cleanly housewife. The best way to use it as an insecticide upon window plants is to secure a good handful of tobacco stems, place them in an old basin, pour boiling water upon them, and let them stand for several hours. Then drain off the liquid into a basin or tub deep enough for immersing the tops of your plants in, and dilute it with warm water until it shows only a faint tint of brown. Then take up the plants one at a time, and hold them, tops down, in the water, washing them clean.—December Ladies' Home Journal.

BROKEN REEDS.

A study of the weaker side of humanity, its follies and foibles, can only be profitable when it is made the basis for education in an effort to avoid the pitfalls into which others may have been so unfortunate as to have fallen; or it may also serve in the minds of sincere and honest persons, conscious of their own imperfections, as an encouragement for perseverance in well doing, in view of the scriptural assurance, that notwithstanding that weakness has been manifested in worthy individuals of old, yet because those weaknesses were incidental and not the predominating characteristic in their lives, they have been accepted when showing repentance, and finally were permitted to enter into eternal life in joyful hope of a dwelling with God.

Take, for instance, the varied traits of character exhibited by the Apostle Peter; a man of splendid force and courage, selected by the Lord for important work in his service, and to whom he said, "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." (Matt. 16: 19). It was he who, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, standing up with the eleven, on that ever memorable and glorious Pentecost day, made that mighty defense of the Lord's work that carried conviction to the hearers, and added three thousand to the church; a defense which has thrilled the hearts of thousands as the ages have passed, and remains today a scripture that is as much, perhaps more, frequently referred to and quoted, than any other one passage. It was this noble character, who, in company with the Apostle John, was passing into the temple through the Beautiful gate, on one occasion, and had his heart filled with compassion at the spectacle of the poor lame man, born a cripple, who was carried there daily for alms, by which he was moved to say: "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." (Acts 3: 6). It was this Simon Peter who, in the depths of his love for the Master, when that Master foretold of his impending persecution, under which all his disciples should be "offended," passionately declared, "Though all men shall be offended because of thee yet I will never be offended;" and when advised that the cock should not crow that night until he had thrice denied his Lord, replied with great earnestness, "Even if I must die with thee, yet will I not deny thee." (Matt. 26: 33-35, Revised Version). And when the mob came to take the Lord to the Judgment hall, it was he who signalized the sincerity of his devotion to him, by using a sword in his defense, smiting off the ear of Malchus, a servant of the high priest, which act gave emphasis to the declaration which the Savior afterward made to Pilate, "My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight that I should not be delivered to the Jews; but now is my kingdom not from hence." (John 18: 36).

But these grand characteristics of the man are sometimes overlooked in the judgment, which is often passed upon the weaknesses of humanity. It is true, according to the Record, that the Master's prediction was verified, in the thrice denial of his knowledge of the Savior; but who is there, among men, able to judge of the motives he had for his action at that time? Some have accused him of cowardice in the matter; but it was hardly the sense of fear of personal violence that moved him when he followed his Lord to the "hall of judgment," for he could better have manifested that feeling by going off and taking care not to be seen, as did some of the other disciples. But, true to his promise not to be "offended" at him, he, with another disciple, followed the Lord to his trial. It could not then have been the fear of the consequences to himself that caused him to deny any knowledge of the Master, and we must certainly seek farther for a motive, if indeed he did not speak from impulse rather than motive. Is it beyond reason to ascribe to him a good motive even in this apparently incomprehensible action, so inconsistent with the devotion and love which he had, under all circumstances, hitherto manifested for the Lord? Is there not a possibility that he had the thought that his denial would, in some way, mitigate the persecution and suffering of the Lord, by making it impracticable for his enemies to make use of him as a witness? Surely his former devotion should weigh as evidence that whatever he did with regard to the Master, would spring from love and a desire to serve him. And when the Master turned and looked upon him, the thought that he had unwittingly done the very thing he had protested he would not do, and the thought that his motive might not be understood and appreciated, so oppressed him, that the tears shed would indeed be very bitter and oppressing. But supposing the motive was an improper one; it was simply an exhibition of how little human nature can be depended upon in emergencies; and his sorrow that he had in fact denied him whom he loved supremely, was sincere and earnest. When the true motive however is known, we opine there will be found in it more of commendation for his loyalty to God, than of condemnation for disloyalty to his Master.

But there was an occasion later on in his ministry, when he did manifest a weakness for which he was sharply called to account, by the Apostle Paul. He had gone to Antioch, and, as Paul had done, consorted with the gentiles, partaking of their hospitality. But when some of the other brethren of the ministry came from "James, (at Jerusalem) he withdrew from the gentiles, fearing the censure of his Jewish brethren; for this dissimulation, and inconsistent action, Paul rebuked him, because his example also caused others to err. Others of the ministry and laity also manifested that they were possessed of such weaknesses as to plainly indicate that the Saints of former days had the same warring with "flesh and blood" as has the Saints in this day, though many of them had sat under the inspiration of the teachings and presence of the Son of God, and later, were under the power and teachings of the Comforter, the Holy Spirit, as promised by the Savior, just before he left his disciples. In this historical recording of events as they occurred, may be found a lesson of encouragement to those who are making an earnest, persistent, struggle against the weaknesses of their natures, in the effort to keep faith with the Lord in the covenant made with him; for they are not called upon to endure that which others, in almost every age when the gospel of power was on the earth, have been called to meet: and if they triumphed in the end through faith, and by perseverance in serving the Lord, wherein the atonement of the Son of God has been made effectual for them, so may and will every other child of God, who keeps steadily on, regardless of the difficulties that seem to confront him at almost every step.

None, however should find any consolation or encouragement in wrong doing, because these examples of the humanity of inspired and consecrated men of God, are recorded of them. It is well to bear in mind, that no man or woman has ever been exalted or made better because of wrong doing. Such exhibitions are no part of the gospel life or of Christ-like character. The gospel law is intended to counteract these influences for evil in the natural man, hence no one is justified in doing wrong, because it is recorded in the Scriptures that the Saints sometimes departed from right lines and allowed their humanity to exert itself. The Lord has said that he "cannot look upon sin with the LEAST DEGREE OF ALLOWANCE." Think of it, not the LEAST DEGREE of acknowledgment of the right of any one to sin, is given: why then should those who profess to follow Christ, whether they be young or old, find any relief for the pressure of their conscience, or the chidings of the Spirit when they are tempted to inconsistent actions, in the relation, or example of anyone, whatever his standing in the church, who may do things contrary to the spirit and genius of the gospel of Christ? No healthy person can touch fire without resultant pain and suffering; and no Saint can deliberately, willingly sin, without paying the penalty. "Obedience is better than sacrifice" (for sin), always, and in no individual, of whose life we have any detailed account, is there to be found an example wholly worthy of imitation, except the one man, Jesus Christ the Lord. He alone is the perfect pattern; and even he became such only because he made it the pleasure and work of his life among men, to do, not his own, but the Father's will; and any other individual who follows that course, will impress his individuality upon all men in the circle of his acquaintance, for good. The world will be better, for that life and influence, so far as that influence shall extend.

It is a reasonable proposition to which even the most hardened will accede, that it is safest to do right. There is never remorse of conscience to the one who thus acts; there is no fear of results in such a course, but a serenity of mind, and a peace of spirit, very comforting to those possessing it. Let every one who has been baptized into Christ bear in mind that he is not his own, but the Lord's, having been bought with the precious blood of Christ. "Let this mind be in you, which also was in Christ," admonishes the apostle in his letter to the Philippians 2: 5. It is safe to heed this counsel, and the "recompense of reward" will justify such a course, when the accounting time shall come, as it will, for all men.

"And, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." [unrighteousness, Revised Version] 2 Tim. 2: 19.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JOHN G. PACE, Box 539, Blairsville, Pennsylvania, says he is doing all that he can to get the gospel before the people of that place.

BRO. SAMUEL WOOD, Sioux City, Iowa, says that Elder T. W. Chatburn, his uncle, stopped over there recently en route to his mission field in Wisconsin and gave them a rousing sermon. The Saints were edified and cheered and he was greatly benefited by the advice and encouragement he received.

BRO. JAMES MCALISTER, Pleasanton, Kansas, thinks if an elder would come there he would do good. Some are interested through reading the ENSIGN, which our brother lends to them. He is one of the isolated class and would welcome the visit of an elder. He lives in the north part of the town; an inquiry at the post office will secure directions.

Extracts from Letters.

SR. GRACE CURRIE of Crescent, Iowa, in sending renewal, says:

I think the ENSIGN is just splendid, especially the Daughters of Zion department.

ELDER W. S. PENDER, Beaver, Utah, November 19:

Bro. Harris and I had the pleasure(?) of experiencing with the people of Beaver a severe earthquake. The buildings most damaged were the court house, the Mormon tabernacle and the buildings of Brigham Young Academy. The tabernacle cannot be used till repaired. Bro. Harris and I were about one block from the court house when all four of its chimneys toppled over.

SR. W. W. BASS, Monegan Springs, Mo:

I cannot do without the "silent preacher," it brings glad tidings of great joy to my soul. It was through its columns that I was brought to the light of the glorious gospel of the Son of God. O how I rejoice in this latter day work for I know it is of God. I am one among the isolated ones, and have not heard a sermon since last March, at which time my dear companion was taken home, and I am left sad and lonely though knowing we shall meet again. Pray for me dear Saints, that I may live worthy of the name I profess, and bring my boy up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord so that when he is old he will not depart from the right way.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

"Watchman's" article on page 8 of this issue, "A Query," should be given careful consideration; the law along the lines of the instruction given seems to be very plain so far as building is concerned.

Bro. I. N. White preached the sermon Thanksgiving morning, at the church. The day was delightful, and a fair sized audience was present.

Bro. M. T. Short returned home Monday morning from Kansas in poor health and suffering from an annoying bronchial cough.

The quarterly conference of the branch was held Monday evening, December 2d, Bro. Hulmes and Garrett presiding. The reports of officers showed an encouraging increase in active work being done. Bro. R. May, H. R. Mills and B. C. Smith, the committee appointed last meeting to consider a suitable financial system, reported in favor of the adoption of the plan in use in the Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, branch, with exception of the tithing fund. On motion their report and recommendation were adopted. The report of the reception committee was interesting, 14 visits were made and 4 visitors entertained. Report was adopted.

Bishop R. May, for the committee on substituting electric lights for gas now used, report progress. Owing to the necessary expense required to make the change, they thought it advisable to continue the present system of lights until further consideration could be given the matter. Bro. W. H. Murphy offered his resignation as presiding priest, being unable, on account of other duties, to satisfactorily fill the office. Resignation accepted, but no action was taken appointing his successor. Letters of removal to First Kansas City branch were authorized for Bro. Bernella Young, and her son Roscoe. Bro. Benj. Franklin Resch was received as a member of the branch on letter from Holden, Missouri, branch. On motion a special conference of the branch was called for the first Monday in January 1902 (Jan. 6), to hear report of Building Committee and elect new members. The decision of the chair that prohibitory legislation in use of the church for entertainments, applied solely to those who should require a part of the proceeds for their personal services, was appealed from, and pending its discussion, a motion to defer final action on the appeal until the next regular meeting in March, leaving the question of the use of the church for such purposes to the judgment of the presiding officers and their associate officers in the branch until that time, prevailed. Adjournment was then taken.

First snow of the season fell Wednesday night.

An athletic club of Independence has rented the old ENSIGN building for the winter. The laundry has moved to their new building on North Main Street.

Sunday Bro. Jos. Luff occupied the morning hour at the church and Bro. W. H. Garrett at the evening service. The afternoon communion service was excellent, the church being nearly filled, many taking part, until the close.

Sr. L. Z. Cook, of Coffeyville, Kansas, is visiting her daughter, Sr. Wesley Ballinger.

The street paving is about completed or nearly so. There are a few places where the sidewalk has not been laid, and owing to the freezing temperature, granitoid work has been suspended until warmer days come.

Bro. and Sr. D. Hougas, of Henderson, Iowa, are visiting Sr. Will Pitt, their daughter, and family. They are on their way to California for the winter.

Leroy Benjamin, infant son of A. B. and Blanche Clow, of Denver, Colorado, was blessed Sunday afternoon, Bro. Joseph Luff and Daniel Hougas officiating. A little adopted child of Bro. and Sr. Newlin, of Liberty, Missouri, was also blessed at that time, the same brethren officiating. Bro. Hougas being spokesman.

The funeral of our brother, Elder Charles J. Clark, took place from his late residence West Short Street Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Bro. Hulmes preaching the sermon. The house was crowded with sympathizing friends, and the floral offerings were lovely. Interment in city cemetery.

Sr. C. J. Clark expects to go to Chicago shortly to visit her daughter Sr. Alma Pitt and family. Her long and faithful vigil of a year beside her suffering companion has greatly taxed her strength. We trust she may receive much benefit from rest and change of air.

LAMONI, IOWA.

North wind with cooler temperature is now the order.

The latest social event of the season was a reception given last Tuesday evening the 26th, by the Ladies' Gymnasium Club, to the gentlemen friends of the members of the club, which is in charge of Prof. Mina Cook Hart. Nearly one hundred persons were present, and every one enjoyed themselves. The ladies acquitted themselves handsomely in the art of entertaining, and their efforts were highly appreciated by their gentlemen friends. Success to the Gymnasium.

The Thanksgiving services held on Thursday were well attended, and a handsome offering of nearly $60.00 was contributed for the benefit of the College debt. Many expressions of thankfulness were heard at the prayer service, which was held at the close of the Sunday School exercises.

An unusually good time was enjoyed at the Religio Friday evening in conducting the parliamentary program. This is an important feature of our work and should not be neglected by any of the societies.

On Saturday morning Bishop Kelley and wife arrived home from the European mission where they have been laboring for several months.

Pulpits were occupied on Sunday by the brethren as follows: Lamoni, at the morning service Bishop Kelley was the preacher, assisted by Bro. J. A. Gunsolley and H. S. Salisbury. In the evening Elder Heman C. Smith continued the historical lectures, assisted by Bro. J. A. Gunsolley and Jas. Allen.

At the Saint's Home in the evening Elder H. A. Stebbins occupied the hour. At Ellston, Elder R. M. Elvin; Davis City, Elders F. M. Weld and C. Scott, Elvergreen, President John Smith in the morning and Elder H. N. Snively in the evening.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

After twenty-six sermons, five of which were preached by Bro. E. O. Smith, we closed our meeting at Geiger Hall, last night. Without it was a satisfactory effort. At times the Spirit's power was marked in delivering the word; at no time was it absent. The Saints were strengthened, and the honest confirmed. The prospects for a permanent mission is good.

Bro. and Sr. C. E. Heath are having a happy visit with relatives and Saluts at Neola and Missouri Valley, Iowa.

Preparations are in progress for three different Sunday School Christmas entertainments. At the church, at Aspey mission and at South Park mission.

Bro. M. Shaw occupied the pulpit at the church yesterday morning. The sacrament service in the evening was well attended, and the spirit of the meeting was good. Bro. H. D. Ennis, our branch president, and Bro. C. E. Guinand were in charge.

With a desire to stand with the pure in heart in Zion, I am yours,
J. M. TERRY.

DENVER, COLORADO.

Church, corner of 22d and Arapahoe Sts. Services Sunday—Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.; preaching at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.; sacrament service the first Sunday in each month at 6 p. m. Prayer meeting Wednesday evening. Zion's Religio-Literary Society Sunday evening at 6 p. m. E. F. Shupe, pastor, 3633 Clayton St.

Dry, warm and dusty; the weather man has been promising rain or snow for several weeks, but it does not come.

Two of the prominent men of the state have died quite suddenly the past week. Ex Governor Waite, the noted Populist governor, and Prof. Winn, who, it is claimed, has discovered a process to make gold as plenty as potatoes.

Fire Saturday night damaged the city hall to the extent of $75,000.00.

Bro. Wm. A. Wells, of Frazer, Colorado, was in the city a few hours last week, on his way to visit his children in northeast Kansas.

Bro. Bacon and wife, of Colorado Springs, have been in the city several days. Bro. B. was summoned on the U. S. Jury.

Sr. Minor, with her husband, of Oregon, are spending the winter in Denver, for Sr. Minor's health, which is much improved since coming here.

At the Thanksgiving service quite a good meeting was held, and the bishop's agent will receive $29.10 as a thank offering from the Denver Saints. If other branches in the district do as well accordingly, the finances will be much increased.

Bro. J. B. Wildermuth baptized a child of Bro. and Sr. Hutchins at Ni Wor, a few days ago, which was enrolled as a member of the Denver branch, Sunday, the 1st.

Bro. Bowden and his young sister, of Kansas City, were in attendance at the 6 o'clock service Sunday evening.

The sacrament service was largely attended, the house being almost filled. The young folks were present in numbers; they are taking quite an active interest in all the services of late, which is very encouraging.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Nov. 13.

Dear Ensign—I have been some time since I've written a letter to you, not that I have less interest in the work, no, God forbid. I am still as firm as ever, and often sit and think what I can do to advance the cause I love so well: but sorry to say I have nothing new to report at present. I have been still alone here until last spring, since which time a brother and sister have moved back again to San Diego, whom I was partly the means of bringing out of the Brighamite church into ours; and together with them, have been waiting all summer for some of the missionaries to come here and hold meetings: but alas, in vain, although Sr. Salter and I both have offered our houses for their disposal.

I should like so much to see a branch organized here. I have been praying and praying to our heavenly Father, to send some of his servants here, and I hope he will inspire some one to come: still we have to do our part also. It seems my husband is more favorable to the cause than he has been for some time: well I have the promise that if I am faithful those things which hinder me now shall be removed, and I think the time is coming. My husband will be glad to see the elders stop here with us if they only use good judgment and see how to handle him. Let us be wise servants and harmless as doves, especially so before the outsiders. I know my husband has great respect for our people and our church in general.

The other day a lady paid me a visit and brought back my Book of Mormon, together with other church literature which I let her have for investigation. And I wish some one could have listened to my husband in defending our church, while I was preparing dinner, it was wonderful; and he urged her to take more tracts with her and some ENSIGNS, and read the sermons, they are fine he said. I surely believe if we could have had steady preaching here, or more of it, he would have joined the church long ago; so brethren come along and don't let San Diego go to the winds. I know there are some honest in heart here, who would gladly come out of Babylon, don't leave it all to the Brighamites. Not long since I heard that fifteen in all had left the Brighamite church, for some trouble; they had quite a congregation here once, but it seems they don't make much progress now.

The ENSIGN is always a great pleasure to me, and the sermons I read with delight; but Bro. J. J. Cornish's sermon in the ENSIGN of August 22, 1901, was especially interesting to me as he had about the same experience about soul question as I had, and if I don't worry our good editor I shall tell my story as short as I can.

If the eyes of Bro. F. G. Pitt will fall on this letter, he will remember that before I joined the church I asked him two questions; I said,

"Bro. Pitt, if I join your church must I believe that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God?" He said, "No." Then I asked him, "Must I believe that I have an immortal soul?" He said, "No." "Well," I answered, "Then I am ready for baptism," as I believed all the rest of the doctrine to be all right. I was baptized during the week, and confirmed on the next Sunday before the service began, after which we had sacrament and testimonial meeting, and while others bore their testimony, it was as though somebody was forcing me to arise, which I did, and bore my testimony that I knew that this was the work of God and that Joseph Smith, was a prophet of God. After which, Bro. Pitt arose with a smile on his face, and said, "Any one that will do his will, shall know of the doctrine." Well, that settled that question so far as that was concerned, but as I had been a First Day Adventist for fourteen years, the immortality of the soul I could not yet believe, although I had read some good books on that subject. But in 1896, after we had moved to San Diego, there appeared quite a lengthy piece in the ENSIGN, dated September 12th, on the pre-existence of man, written by A. J. Headlee, Benton county, Missouri. It was the best piece, to my mind, I had ever read on that subject, the brother showed forth so plain the difference between the soul and spirit, and I could see clearly how I, and my dear Advent friends, had mixed up the two. I wish it was printed in tract form, it would do lots of good, I think; I have the ENSIGN yet. Although seeing plainly my mistakes, the good Lord wanted to make it plainer still, so I might never be entangled again with such doctrine. I think that same night, when I had read the ENSIGN during the day, I had a dream. I saw my body sitting upright in bed, and my spirit was standing before my bed: well, I was so astonished, I looked at myself (my spirit), then at my body, and so I did several times, and while so doing was thinking, Well, there are two personalities of yourself (the same like Bro. Cornish). Of course that settled the soul question forever, and I thank my heavenly Father for his goodness, and that he makes his promises sure, and that he sends his Spirit to guide us into all truth, if we are willing to be led. Now I fear my letter is too long, but as I don't come very often, I hope the good editor will pardon me.

Your sister in the gospel,

OAKLAND, CAL., Nov. 21st.

Editor Ensign—On Sunday November 10th, Elder F. B. Blair preached two very instructive sermons, both morning and evening, although feeling much indisposed. Sunday morning was quite rainy, causing only a small attendance at Sunday School, but clearing away through the day, a full attendance at the Religio at 6:30 was the result.

On the discussion of "The condition of the Jews and Jerusalem at the coming of Christ, we were fortunate in having Dr. Sivarth, having lived in Palestine a number of years, explain its present condition and by colored charts illustrated the fulfillment of prophecy in the last days according to Ezekiel. Among other things he said if Jerusalem should grow to be a large city as predicted, it would be the most sightly city in the world being seen hundreds of miles from every direction.

Bro. F. B. Blair has been seriously and painfully afflicted for the past week, necessitating close confinement to his room. Bro. C. A. Parlin filling the pulpit Sunday morning, November 17th, and Bro. J. B. Price in the evening. A splendid session of the Religio was held, many visitors and non-members being present, all manifesting great interest in the exercises.

We were glad to see a number of the West Berkeley Saints at the evening services. Our Wednesday evening prayer meetings are usually marked with a good degree of the Spirit.

LEAMINGTON, Ont., Nov. 17th.
 Dear Ensign:—It is with the greatest pleasure that I go to the post office to get the ENSIGN, and if not there, feel very disappointed; but I am thankful to say, that it does not happen very often. My family and myself, are living on the shore of Lake Erie, near the pretty little town of Leamington; it is a lovely place, here in the summer to live, it being the most southernmost point in Ontario. We are the only family of Saints in this neighborhood, that we know of, the nearest branch of the church being about twenty miles away, at a place called Tilbury, so you see it is quite a long way to go to meeting. We have enjoyed a visit from our beloved Bro. Geo. Greene, district president, also Bro. B. St. John, and S. Brown, which revived our spirits considerably; come again brethren, you are always welcome. We have been living here nearly a year, and have been trying to warn our neighbors, but most of them, don't seem to take much interest in religion, although some of them are fishermen. I would like to see the district tent come down this way, next summer; it would be a lovely place for it on the bank of the lake, and I think it would be the means of doing much good, and if a branch of the church could be raised here, with the Lord's help, it would be a center place between Chatham and Windsor; from what I have heard, the gospel was preached through some of these townships, in the county of Essex, some twenty-five or thirty years ago, and if the gospel trumpet was blown again, it might have a familiar sound to some of the lost sheep of Israel, and be the means of making some of them rally around the standard once more.

Dear Saints, as I said before, we are the only family of Saints that I know of, here in this place: we miss the meetings of the Saints very much, but still we are not alone, for we know that our heavenly Father is watching over us, for I have had to call on him for help on several occasions, and he has answered my prayer, every time that I have gone to him in humbleness, and sincerity of heart; I feel thankful to God that I have had the privilege of obeying the gospel, and pray that I may have faith to endure to the end. We read in 1 Peter 1:13, that we are to be sober, and hope to the end; also 1 Peter 3:15, we are to be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh of you a reason for the hope that is in you with meekness and fear.

As regards the ENSIGN, I really could not do without it, as I love to read what the Saints are doing in other places; also I gain much strength and knowledge from reading the different articles and sermons, and often wonder how families of Saints can do without it, or one of the church papers. I have been taking the ENSIGN and Herald for years, and do not intend to do without them if I can help it; I would say to every family of Saints, take the church papers by all means, if you possibly can, as they will keep you in touch with the church, and how it is progressing.

In conclusion I would say, read the 7th verse of Revelation 21, and let it be stamped upon the tablets of your memory, and in your mind; it reads thus, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." When we feel our temper rising, let us think of this verse, and pray for help to overcome, for the wise man has said, "Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man," and now with love to all my brothers and sisters, let us strive lawfully that all may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates of the city, is the prayer of your brother, JOHN SWAINSON.

HENDERSON, Ill., Nov. 16th.
 Editor Ensign:—I don't remember of sending a letter this year to the ENSIGN, so thought it my duty to contribute some to your useful columns. I find the "silent preacher" in the homes of most of the Saints, I visit, which is as it should be: all God's people should take the church papers, read them and then talk to their neighbors; in this way all can help build up the church and kingdom. We have not a very glowing account to report in our mission work, very discouraging things either, only the average experience of a missionary. We find some places where people will come out and hear the word preached, others where they will not. After the Rock Island conference of the Keweenaw district, Bro. O. H. Bailey and the writer moved the tent to Illinois City, and staid there for one week; good was done. Bro. E. A. Stedman and F. A. Russell came and preached a few times at the close of the meeting with good effect. The Saints of Buffalo Prairie branch brought tables to be used in boarding the preachers; Sr. Beaves did the cooking, and they gave money also; the Canton Saints sent money, so did the Peoria branch; this was in accordance with the conference resolution "that all the branches should collect money for the running of the tent." We feel thankful that the Saints did as well as they did in the matter.

In the first part of October Bro. Stedman and the writer went to Savanna, Carroll county, and found a little band of Saints doing the best they can under present conditions. They held meetings in a nice little hall on the outskirts of the town. Prayer meetings and Sunday School is the order of their services, as there is no one who holds the priesthood of their number. We tried to get a hearing in town by getting the old rink building up town; the Saints and preachers did all that could be done at the time. The tent is the only way to reach such a town.

From this place I went to Joy, and Bro. Stedman to Millersburg. I was told he did some grand preaching there. The two days meeting there was a success so Bro. O. H. Bailey tells me. We are holding meetings at this place in the town hall, the M. E. people would not let us use their church building notwithstanding they have used our church three miles west, at old Sopperville for years. I can see it is all for the best; our turnout on the first was very poor but getting better every evening. We will do our part, and trust in God. There are only a few families of Saints in this section, Bro. and Sr. Thomas Junk the two Bro. Williams John and Hyrum, and families and Bro. Brown and wife. Quite a number of the ministry have done work here in years past, and are not forgotten by the Saints. This Keweenaw district is not to be brought up in one year. I like thought expressed in a late Herald, by Bishop E. L. Kelley, that we should wisely and patiently work, and wait God's time for the ingathering.

The missionary force is all at work and doing all they can to do their part. Bro. E. A. Stedman is at Canton, Bro. E. A. Russell at Rock Island, Bro. O. H. Bailey and I at this place. I have written to all the Saints whose addresses I could get to learn if work could be done near them. I trust all will live so our lives will be examples for others.

Yours for truth,
 J. ARTHUR DAVIS.

SOMERVILLE, Mass., Nov. 13th.
 Editor Ensign:—Our Massachusetts district Sunday School convention held at Providence Saturday and Sunday last was a success, a pleasant and profitable gathering; not quite up to the standard of the one held six months before, however, we think, but good enough to show the interest and progress which is being made by our Sunday School workers in New England. Bro. Greene and Anderson being with us assisting materially in the exercises.

Monday evening following, the Providence Saints had planned to surprise Bro. Anderson; and about 8 o'clock a large share of the branch poured into the home of the writer, Chapin avenue, loaded up with material for stomach troubles etc. Phonograph, games, supper, closing with substantial tokens of appreciation and good will in the shape of a presentation of money to Bro. Greene and Anderson, closed the old and opened the new day. These brethren going on to Haverhill, Massachusetts, to hold a series of meetings and to aid our work in this place. Bro. Anderson expects to return in about two weeks to Fall River and vicinity as with the brethren of that city a new opening has been effected, and interest awakened in our work, which we trust may be made permanent in character.

Bro. Anderson has been well received and is liked very much as a minister, his knowledge of music being also of great assistance. The help of these brethren has been timely and we believe effective for good, and we are looking forward to still farther improvement in church affairs in Providence, Fall River and elsewhere in the district. What has been accomplished, as well as what is possible of accomplishment in the future in the way of permanent establishment of our work, has not been done without effort, painful and protracted effort, in opposition to those subtle forces, so carefully and cunningly concealed from the superficial gaze by the methods of the adversary and through which the well meaning but unwary, are often led to array themselves with their prejudices and sympathies in direct hostility and opposition to law and counsel of authorized or accredited representatives of the church; and in nothing is the work of the adversary made more clear and potent to those whose business it is to know and try the spirits that are commissioned to the work of overthrow of the success of this latter day work, than in his success of painting off spurious "manifestations" or imitations of the gospel gifts, dreams, visions, etc., etc., that are clearly opposed to the law, counsel, order or books of the church. The excellent advice and comments given by the bishop of the church and as contained in his "notes of travel" in current number of Herald are worth reading in this connection.

A "Saint" or convert, who is begotten, born, and grown in a day; a church planted, builded in a night or a week is liable to be short lived and go down when the storms strike it, or them. It takes time, and care, and wise and continuous pruning and training to bring forth fruit to perfection, and give the necessary experience to arm us against fraud and deception. It's a fine thing to have health and strength and vigor with which to go out and present to the stranger to our faith its glorious consistencies. But what a sorrowful proportion who at first "receive the word with joy," in time, because they "having no root in themselves," in time of temptation "endure for a season and then fall away" or into the snare of the adversary. The labor, anxiety, and cost of building surely, permanently, in a community after the work has been started has not been as universally considered as its merit or our safety or well being as a church demands; and we have been mocked and sometimes left to just reproach because of haste, vain glory and assumption which the law and facts could not warrant.

These lessons however are being learned by some through discipline in "the things they have suffered" in the past; but the sooner "Zion's watchmen see eye to eye" in these important matters, the sooner a uniform sentiment and general education of the masses as to the rights and privileges of the ministry and laity respectively are understood by all, the faster and more permanent will be our progress.

We came to this place last Wednesday expecting to be here over Sunday. Bro. O. F. Coombs is to occupy at Providence. The Utah representatives are again in evidence in Providence. Elder Rich lately in charge of southern mission having been there, with others; a few street efforts, and house to house canvass has been the character of their effort so far; we have tried to locate or hear them, but failed so far, but have got after them in the Providence press. We are, and have been trying to get them to say something about us in their travels and work. Hardly anything in our favor to be expected of course, from their stand point of view, but a denunciation from them could hardly affect us otherwise than favorably as that would assist us in drawing the line between us, a thing they have studiously and persistently avoided doing, generally leaving this impression rather among, I may say, the majority, that they are the sole representatives of the belief, doctrine or practice of Latter Day Saints.

Notwithstanding obstacles, we are making progress in Providence. Some excellent people have united with us in the past year, and more are seriously investigating. There is far more unity and good feeling and desire to help further our gospel work and get the truth before the people, and we hope for and expect further progress and success in all lines of church work.

COLPOYS BAY, Ont., Nov. 21.

Editor Ensign:—On Sunday, November 10th, one of the most substantial church buildings now owned by the church in Canada, was dedicated to the Lord by the Saints of the Port Elgin branch. It is a stone structure and is an evidence of what even a small number of persons can accomplish by united and persistent effort, as the branch only numbers about twenty-five, and some are children. About $300.00 was all the cash the Saints had to expend. With their teams they drew the stone, sand, and other material gratis. They also burned a kiln of lime and a man—non-member—gave the logs for lumber at two dollars per thousand feet, while they would sell readily at ten dollars. Bro. Guyer cut the lumber in his mill: the others of the brethren handling the material to and from the saw. I cannot mention all by name who devoted time and energy to the erection of this building, but I must mention Elder J. L. Mortimer, who, as first mechanic, built the walls; and the young sisters, who, when the brethren could not leave the harvest, aided in handling stone; and one (since baptized), holding the profession of school teacher, did not think it beneath her to aid, and has since nailed on lath and painted woodwork.

The dedication occurred one year from the day the Rev. H. Dierlamm, of the German Evangelical church, gave his lecture "Exposing the doctrines of the Book of Mormon and the covenants of the Latter Day Saints church." Elder J. L. Mortimer and I attended; his only quotation from the Book of Mormon was, "A bible, a bible, we have got a bible, and there cannot be any more bible; but thus saith the Lord God: Oh fools they shall have a bible." He stopped here and says, "You see they call us all fools for believing the Bible." He read the revelation on polygamy from the Brighamite edition of Doctrine and Covenants and says, "What do you think of such men, can you trust such men?" While the users were taking up collection, I arose and asked the privilege to make an announcement. "No sir, you can't speak here," was the response. Immediately there were yells, "put him out," and a stamping of feet and a clapping of hands among his people; they being incensed against us by his slanders and misrepresentations. After his meeting was dismissed and the people going out Bro. Mortimer says, "It was the books of the Salt Lake Mormons he used; come to the town hall tomorrow evening." On the street we were followed by a rabble of boys and young men, making the night air hideous with their yells, and using abusive language. We replied to the lecture next evening in the town hall to about two hundred and fifty persons. The mob followed us again, this time throwing stones at us. The electric plant was broken and the nights pitch dark. Wednesday we were brought before the justice of the peace for "disturbing the public worship of Almighty God." Sunday evening Rev. Dierlamm, on oath, stated that Bro. J. L. got up twice and interrupted him; while the fact was, Bro. Mortimer never spoke till his meeting was dismissed.

Questioning the preacher on his evidence I said: The Doctrine and Covenants you used "said" like Utah edition published in Salt Lake City? "Yes." You read the revelation on polygamy? "Yes sir." You meant me when you said what do you think of such men? Can you trust such men? "No sir, I did not know you were there." Well, you meant Elder Mortimer, you knew he was there? "Yes, I know him of old." Will you swear before this court that you did not read from those books and speak as you did purposely to prejudice the people and injure our influence? No response, although pressed for an answer. The magistrates stated they were satisfied we had no influence, but disturbing his meeting, but we had spoken; a commotion followed, and the law had been broken and was so strict they could not dismiss the case without establishing a bad precedent, but would exact the lowest possible fine. However, the town council and Rev. Dierlamm's own members paid the major portion of the fine and costs of court. While we felt bad over the injustice of the affair, yet it gave us one of the best chances had here to set forth the difference between the Reorganization and the Utah faction. We were indeed given in that hour what we ought to say, in fulfillment of Matthew 10:19. Many friends were won to the cause, and the Saints gathered and confirmed in the work.

The first preaching in this part done by J. L. Mortimer, some years ago. Elders R. C. Evans, Daniel MacGregor, Fredrick Gregory, B. St. John, S. W. Tomlinson, and the writer have all labored some here. On July 28th, 1st, Port Elgin branch was organized by Apustic R. C. Evans, Edward Leeder was ordained priest, and James Phillips teacher. At the dedication a number of Saints were present from Warton, Colpoys Bay, Sauble Falls, Owen Sound, Kincaidine, and Bruce township. At 10 a. m. an enjoyable prayer service was held. At 3 p. m. Elder J. L. Mortimer opened the service. Mission President R. C. Evans preached the dedication sermon to a crowded house. It was a logical and well directed and was listened to with rapt attention. After the sermon the dedicatory prayer was offered by the writer. At 7:30 p. m. Elder Fredrick Gregory gave the benediction. He was assisted by Elder William Gerrie, of Sauble Falls.

Meetings were continued during the week by Elders Evans, Mortimer and Shields. The weather was very bad and interfered with the attendance, but a number are believing when we come to obey ere long, some of them members of the Dierlamm's church. Elder R. C. Evans has gone to Owen Sound to deliver a course of Lectures, Elder Mortimer to assist.

Yours in bonds,
 JOHN SHIELDS.

ZION'S ENSIGN.

A Missionary's Experience.

Editor Ensign.—Last week I held meetings in Sloan. Only a very few came to my meetings even after I had gone from house to house with tracts.

While in Sloan I learned that Holly Springs, a village not far away, was a new place, where the angels message had never been sounded, so I turned prayerfully to this place, expecting an opening. Two churches are here, Methodist and Christian, and both are fine buildings.

I was told that the Christian church was open to other denominations, and was directed to go to Mr. Winegart, one of the trustees of the church. So last Sunday morning I attended their morning service, and also to see the trustees. I met Mr. Winegart after service, and after an introduction and telling him my mission, he said he believed I could have the use of the church. He went to the other trustees and after consultation with them, he came with provision for me to use the house three nights, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. I found him to be a very fair man, and he being one of their leading men, I believe it was through him that I got the use of the church.

I requested that my meetings for the succeeding nights be announced at the evening service, which they promised would be done. But I learned long ago, if you want anything done go, if not, send; so I went to the meeting in the evening to be on hand should my meetings not be announced. What kind of a sermon had we in the evening? Well, truths were not held out for the consideration of the people, but darts were thrown into their minds, evidently to weaken their judgment, and to prejudice the people against "these genteel fellows who come among you with nice manners," etc. And Joseph Smith was held up as not being worth any consideration. New revelations were spoken of disparagingly. But a position or two was taken which became a very powerful weapon in my hands afterwards; such as, Hebrews 8:1 does not mean "Leave the principles of Christ's doctrine behind," but "Leave them as they are." Also, "We never get so far that we do not need our A B C alphabet. I explained, at the proper time, to the people what the A B C's of the gospel were, and that christianity was not to be superseded by another system like many systems of men have been, but should stand forever. The speaker declared emphatically that "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation," and stated repeatedly, and emphasized as positively, that the gospel was not preached before Pentecost, that Christ, John the Baptist and the apostles never preached the gospel.

Since he expressed his willingness to answer questions, I, at the close of his service, after shaking hands with him, very quietly and kindly asked him, if "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation, and no one should use unfried means," as has been said, and it was never preached before Pentecost, by what was Abraham and Enoch and hosts of others saved? He looked down, appeared crestfallen, and with forced confidence, said, "By faith." Then is faith the gospel, I asked? "No." Then by what? "By the sacrifices that looked forward to Christ." Then the sacrifices are the gospel? "No." Then by what were they saved? "By—well, I suppose if Joseph Smith had had anything to do with it they would all have been saved?" (The trustees and several others had, by this time, gathered around in time to hear this profound answer). You have now attacked Joseph Smith publicly and privately, will you deny before the public that he was a prophet of God? "Yes, sir!" Then let us write it down. But he became highly wrought up, and he said their church had had enough trouble with our people. "Rather singular," I replied, "you people have never been any trouble to us." He must do something, so, "I will affirm that the Bible is the final and complete revelation of God's will to man." Very well, I replied, let us write it down. But would he? When he saw I did not cover or shrink in the least, he became indignant, and attacked my character. I have seen too much of the weakness of man to fear mortality, but may I ever fear God. He did not announce my meetings, so I went to the front immediately after the benediction, and requested Mr. Winegart to announce them, which he did.

This man's attacking Joseph Smith publicly, and not giving out my meetings, went back up on him like boomerangs. The former created within the people a desire to hear what Joseph Smith really did teach, the latter showed his christian spirit.

Monday night came bright and fair and to the church came a nice audience. I spoke on the "Restoration of the Gospel," and heralded some of its leading points. I endeavored to present what would be perfectly clear to all, to drive pegs which I knew could not be pulled. By Tuesday night the heaven had worked, for I received from Elder Rama, the speaker referred to, as I was about to step in the pulpit, the following questions:

- (1) Do you believe the Bible contains the complete plan of salvation? If no, where can I find it complete? If yes, what use have you for the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants?
- (2) What do you call the Inspired Translation of the Scriptures?
- (3) Was the gospel preached in its fullness before Pentecost?
- (4) Do you believe the book we call the Bible to be of divine origin, and do you accept King James' Translation as a complete rule of faith and practice?
- (5) If a man reads the New Testament and believes, obeys, and lives up to its requirements, will he have the Holy Spirit, will he be a christian? If not, what use have we for it?

(6) If the Holy Spirit operates independent of the word, what seed does he sow? Nothing can be produced without seed.

(7) If the Holy Spirit operates independent of the word, by what authority does he do it? Christ commanded his apostles to disciple all nations, they could, or could not, did the Holy Spirit supersede the apostles?

(8) Has the everlasting gospel been preached since the apostles, or was it hid until Joseph Smith received the revelation?

(9) Did "these signs," spoken of as "following them that believe" apply to all believers or only part, some certain portion of them that believe?

(Signed) H. E. RAMA.

As I read the questions to myself, light from above came to me, and if ever God was with me he was with me answering those questions. Of course one could answer them from a reasoning standpoint alone; but how blessed it is to have power from above to give life. It can be seen that the questions enabled me to bring out the work of God, and thus, indirectly, batter down finite institutions, on which are stamped, by man, divinity.

I read from their hymn book a verse of No. 40, "An Open Bible," and showed that it had in it divine sentiments and to follow an open Bible would be to follow the path of safety. I then took as a text, "Search the Scriptures," and proceeded to answer the questions. I would not leave them for the next night lest some would say I took time in order to evade the questions.

To answer the first question I said it would be necessary to know what the Book of Mormon is, in order to know what use we have for it. I turned to the Bible and then said: One reason we need it is because the Bible speaks of it. In answer to the question, if the Bible contains a complete plan of salvation, why do we need any more revelation? I asked, if Enoch had enough to save him why did God continue to reveal himself in succeeding generations? You see Elder Rama has shifted from his position taken Sunday evening, for he now asks if the gospel was preached in its fullness before Pentecost. I showed how "Christ went about all Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom," and how "the gospel was preached in the wilderness as well as unto us," and the people could judge as to whether Christ taught a full gospel, or whether there could be such a thing as imperfection come from God.

In answer to the sixth question I turned to 1 Corinthians 12, and showed the nine gifts. "Nothing can be produced without seed." Has the Holy Spirit sown any seed here? In answer to the 8th question I said it would be necessary to know what the everlasting gospel was and the true church. I briefly expounded what they were and then asked, Where is the church of God, that heralds the same God, the same gospel, and the same results of nineteen hundred years ago? Where is the church that has twelve apostles? (Elder Rama has been on an uncomfortable seat for a long time, he must now say something). He speaks out, "We have them."

Where are they? "Right here" holding up his Bible. If the church of God was directed personally by the apostles nineteen hundred years ago and yours is directed in a different way now, it is weighed in the balance and found wanting. How many apostles have you in your church? (No answer). How many were there in the ancient church? "Thirteen." I will show you more than that.

"Fourteen, if you count Christ as an apostle." I will show you more than "fourteen" (people all astonished look at him). Turn to Acts 1:26 and you find Matthias chosen an apostle; Acts 14:14 Paul and Barnabas, Romans 16:7, Andronicus and Junia; 1 Thessalonians 1:1; 2:6, Silvanus and Timothy; Galatians 1:19, James the Lord's brother. Now then tell this people how many dead apostles you have in your church at a time. Also, if dead apostles will do, why will not dead elders? No answer came. I then told the people I stood before them sent of God or sent of men, and that I could not be sent of God unless revelation or light had come from above, and if sent of men I had no business to represent God. If no revelation comes to man now, I would like to know by what authority men represent God, let him answer, that will (This will not do). "By the recognition of my brethren," Elder Rama manages to say: By what authority? "By, by—I don't have to answer your question here sir." My friends, I said, you see how the matter stands. The baptism of John, was it of heaven or of men? Why was it of heaven? Because there was a man sent from God whose name was John.

I had spoken for about two hours under the light of heaven and things were being turned inside out. And he commenced to think, "This Paul is persuading and turning away many people, and says there be no God made with hands. So that not only is our craft in danger but the temple of the great goddess Diana is being despised, and they were full of wrath and cried out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" So Elder Rama answers and reads four propositions.

The first proposition was on the Book of Mormon, but he wanted me to affirm that the book was of divine origin, binding on mankind and essential to salvation. This I would not do, for for the book does not even claim it. The second was on the Bible being the final and complete revelation of God's will to man. I would accept this proposition and deny it. The third and fourth propositions were on the identity of the respective churches to the primitive church of Christ. The wording of the two last propositions were a little faulty, and I told him if he would correct them, and make the first proposition read: "Resolved, That the Book of Mormon is of divine origin," I would accept them, that I asked for fairness only. But he said, "Take them as they are or not at all."

When I then stated two of my own propositions that were fair, so fair that the people could see it, he began to feel miserable: so he gets up and loudly says: "He came around here and went to those who knew nothing of their doctrines, that's how he got the use of the church. He is like a little boy who comes around with a chip on his shoulders and dares some one to knock it off. Braden and Bays have been the means now of breaking up nine churches in the state." Then you acknowledge if I had come to you I wouldn't have gotten the church? "Yes sir." Then I went to the proper party. You people have elders out trying to get places to preach in. "Do unto others as you would like to be done by." I never claimed to be any more than a boy, but it seems to me he is the one that put the chip on the shoulder and now he runs so that I can't knock it off. You have the honor of beating me running. But what is the cause of this ignorance among the brethren? Shame!

Last night we met again, my last night. Tuesday evening must have had an effect something like the day of Pentecost, for people came from nearly every house to hear and see, "this new doctrine." I could see all along that the majority of the people looked with favor upon my proceedings, and I told them that I had come to their village to give them light, not for the object of discussion; but I have been challenged and I am not here to run up a flag of truce, so here are four differently worded sets of proposition that I wish Elder Rama to take and read to you and show you, if he can, where there is unfairness in any of them. But he grew exasperated and would not take them. Then I said to the people I will read them to you myself and you can see where we stand. Elder Rama, when I started to read, then said, "I'm going home." He took his hat and went out. The people's eyes followed him till he shut the door. I went on and read the proposition and said the reason I am ready to stand by them is because I believe our work is of God. I then took up the thought, God don't speak any more; miracles are done away; the heavens were once silver but they are now brass, and turned to Zechariah 14 and said: If God's power is not yet to be shown forth, the Scriptures are false, because it says the Mount of Olives shall cleave in twain and there shall be a great valley; and the mount is now as it was when the prophecy was given; also that Revelation 11 speaks of two prophets who are yet to prophesy and have power to smite the earth with plagues; and if we say truly that prophets of God should not come, we preclude the possibility of the Scriptures being fulfilled. (But here comes Elder Rama in). I likened the church of God the night before to a train that started out eighteen years ago, electrically lighted and run by power, and it should roll into our station now with a similar make up. And now we should not mistake a wheelbarrow for that train. Some looked at him as much as to say, he has the wheelbarrow. Others told me afterwards, when he went out and then came in, he lost even that. But after he got well seated I started on the authority question. If there is no revelation from God now how am I to know that he wants me to represent him. If men have not heard from God by what authority do they represent him? (People look at Elder Rama, so this went do). "By the authority of, 'Lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world,'" answers Rama. Then, I asked, if God is with you always even unto the end of the world, why do you fear to meet me? Does a servant of God dare not meet a deceiver? This quotation referred to was spoken to the eleven apostles. Why don't you go and build an ark because God commanded Noah to build one. Or take the command of God to Moses, and go into the wilderness? "Here is my authority, the word." Then you have three authorities: first, the recognition of your brethren; second, what was given to the apostles; third, the word which is a record of what Christianity is. The church of Christ nineteen hundred years ago was built up without the New Testament, hence that is not the proper authority to bid men "go forth."

How true is the revelation, "Call upon your enemies to meet you, both in public and in private, and inasmuch as ye are faithful their shame shall be manifest." I was not harsh with this man, but when he gave me the questions and then interrupted me while answering nearly every question, I let the force of his remarks fall on his own head. In my closing remarks I said, "Now forever let everyone say nothing against the book of Mormon privately if they are afraid to deny it publicly when someone is here to tell what the books. And, my friends, when the Inspired Translation is spoken of reproachfully, demand that it be placed side by side with the King James Translation and its errors pointed out. Not a word was said to this, for the propositions had been read and they were afraid I meant what I said.

Thus closed an effort in a new place. The hearty handshakes, long holding of the hand and asking me to come back again, give encouragement to the messengers of truth. Several asked me to come back again, when the school closes. The school-house could not be obtained now for fear the books would be disturbed. There is consolation in the thought that our work cannot be proven false. More and more I see it is the angel's message.

Love to all,

PAUL M. HANSON.

CALIFORNIA CHRONICLES.

Editor Ensign.—My trip westward (if not too late to write of it) was pleasant. Stops at Colorado Springs and Salt Lake City were made very enjoyable by the kind and loyal Saints resident there. At the latter place I made fuller acquaintance with Bro. J. M. Stubbart; heard him preach, was entertained and made to realize he had skirminished among the disciples of the dominant church there. I stopped a half day each in Sacramento and San Francisco; who can do cities faster than that? Spent a Sunday at San Jose and away to Tulare to start the tent campaign. Bro. C. C. Joehnk was assigned the position of business manager and assistant in general. The Saints rallied nobly to the support of the work, so much so, that four months and one week of a steady run, occasioned a cash outlay for direct running expense of only $5.65; expense enlarging the equipment something over $20.00. I was convinced by this that tent work need not be expensive. So much for a good business manager.

The tent was pitched at nine places. Saints came from short distances to twenty-five miles to attend, and nearly all were thoughtful to contribute to supply for the tent, many taking extra pains to do their share. It is pleasant to labor among such. The hearing on the whole was not large despite any kind or amount of advertising. Bro. Benjamin F. Dailey, who was one of us in the sixties, had only occasionally been at meeting, whether to regain lost time or not, with more or less of his family, attended forty-five services. Six of the family were baptized; left a widower a few years since, he found, in due time, an excellent woman, of Baptist faith, who, with two of her children, were of the six. Sr. Ellen Dailey-Evans-Cox is also a staunch Saint and has excellent standing as a useful as well as kind member of society. She enjoyed the tent meetings much. Samuel, of the family, is dead; George never accepted the truth. Old acquaintanceship did not call him out to a single service, although two places were near by. So much for those who, with me, knew and associated with these in the sixties.

Bro. Joehnk felt obligated to attend the reunion and did so, afterward joining the forces of the northern district. Bro. John F. Wiles, though not ordained, volunteered to finish the season as a helper and did so, with the exception of two weeks, being called to the bedside of his mother in sickness. Bro. Joseph Flory, E. F. Dailey and Charles Deuel conveyed the tent from place to place. We scarce waited an hour on them for a long or short haul.

The last set made was at Traver, the home of my brother John. Annie, my sister-in-law, had not known of the faith favorably and did not favor it. Intended to kindly assist in other ways, but not attend much, becoming interested, attended all the services but three, and did battle for us when assailed by others. She furnished the table liberally while in camp there. Proposed to read up and investigate more fully. At this point eight of the cheap edition of the Book of Mormon were sold, also several of the "Manuscript Found."

On October 13th the tent was stored; conference at Monterey shortly after, with other things effecting the close of the campaign. I called at Fresno, visiting a few Saints who propose to open the work there as soon as they are furnished a preacher. Bro. Thos. Daley hoped to be there ere this, health permitting. They shall be supplied not long hence. Bro. Keeler and E. P. Schmidt were transferred to Northern District, and at close of tent work Bro. Keeler has been detailed to the Southern district. Bro. J. B. Carmichael and self to supply the Central district, as matters now stand.

The conference at Monterey, Oct. 25-27, though very sparsely attended, was a peaceful session. All branch reports were in at first session. A gain of twenty since the spring conference, for a district of small membership, not a bad showing perhaps. Migratory life, so common in California, disturbs church conditions much. Santa Cruz branch is almost depopulated, yet Sr. Anna Smith conducts a flourishing Sunday School there, as report showed. The San Benito and Jefferson branches are well depleted from the same cause. The Lone branch and the San Jose are adding to their numbers. Delivering one hundred and thirteen discourses during the heated term, consecutively, with the exception of one evening, with accordingly as much effort in other ways, depleted my physical forces, which, with a little of "unwell," mixed in, almost unmanned me at the conference time. Bro. F. H. Lawn, Chas. Hawkin, and E. Keeler did the preaching acceptably. I roamed the beach for ten days to recuperate, fishing betimes; landed one hundred and twenty one day. Wished I could as successfully fly the gospel net. Came over the Coast range with Bro. Nat Carmichael and family by team. Enjoyed the trip.

I embraced the privilege of visiting Mt. Olivet—the Burton Mt. Olivet—rapped on the door but got no response, remembered they had sailed for the isles, so took the echo to my rap as a response, good naturedly. Soliloquized that the Burton's had not so much of an earthly estate as to deprive them of a large future heritage. Mt. Olivet, however, is a lovely spot mid the hills and vales. Sr. Burton, in her late laudation of this Mt. Olivet, no doubt rated it on the scale of, "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

Rev. I. H. Hazel has signed up to discuss the church propositions, he representing the Disciples at San Jose. The time not yet set and the usual uncertainty attaches.

Principal contributors to Herald and ENSIGN are not yet telling us where to find useful quotations they furnish. Very recently we are referred to Christian Evangelist. Will you editors and contributors please be particular in this? Name of book or other publication, volume, page, etc., is needed. Don't give it once and omit it twice and think you are complying. Some rain has fallen. One of the subjects of speculation is, Will it be a dry year? Grain was harvested by the harvester process, the machine that does both at once, in this month (November) here. Harvest began in June. Who can beat California?

CHURCH ETIQUETTE.

"It always has been given to the elders of my church, from the beginning, and ever shall be, to conduct all meetings as they are directed and guided by the Holy Spirit; nevertheless—"

This provision of God's law should never be lost sight of. This precludes a stereotyped form of worship; it prevents ritualism, and debars perfunctory service. Set forms and stereotyped phrases are inimical to a spiritual service. While this is true, it does not give license to obtrude our vagaries and objectionable eccentricities upon the people for "all things must be done in order" in the church. While no one is warranted in laying down set rules for service, still we can offer for your consideration that which experience and the Spirit's promptings have brought time and again, to our attention.

First. We should bear in mind when we are in the church, that we are in God's house; we are his guests and should govern our actions so that we will not do injustice to his hospitality. It is a house of prayer and praise, and not one for idle talk and gossip. Above all else it is not a place to visit.

Second. Those in charge of the preaching service should endeavor to be on hand at least fifteen minutes before the time appointed for commencing the service. This interval can be profitably employed in the service of song.

It indicates a very unfortunate condition of things when the one in charge is compelled to announce with a loud voice, "The house will now please come to order." This clearly evidences that they have been out of order, and that in God's house, which is clearly intended to be a house of order. No loud talking, no gossiping, no visiting, save to inquire as to the health of another or the immediate friends, should be indulged in. No man can go to church and for fifteen or twenty minutes talk about the weather, and the crops, and the defects of his neighbor and, at a moment's notice, bring himself into a worshipping mood.

Absolute quiet should reign when the minister in charge, or the one assisting him, arises to announce the opening hymn. This hymn should be announced in clear full tones and repeated so that every body in the audience can hear. It is best on ordinary occasions to forbear reading the hymn, and particularly so if one is a poor reader.

It is distressing to see different members of the congregation rise, in straggling groups of two and three during the opening song service. It detracts from the beauty and order of the meeting. At a given signal all should endeavor to rise simultaneously. If the one in charge of the service has a certain amount of tact and leadership, this mistake can be easily avoided. It is better, under ordinary circumstances, to permit the audience to remain seated during the singing of the second hymn.

In a compact audience, where it would be practically impossible for all to kneel, it is best to have the audience seated and then, all having bowed their heads, let the one offering the opening prayer, kneel, not behind the pulpit for then the audience can not hear what he says, but a little to one side of the pulpit. It is best to announce before the singing of the first hymn the attitude that you expect all to assume during the following prayer. If possible, let all kneel; otherwise permit them to resume their seats at the close of the hymn. I think this far preferable than to have some kneeling; others sitting bolt upright and others in an attitude of indifference on the floor. I have several times seen sisters practically sit on the floor and lounge with their head on the seat during the prayer. Uniformity in attitude will bring the more readily unanimity in spirit.

The opening prayer should be short, concise, and to the point. This prayer should not include all human wants and earthly needs. The burden of the prayer should be for that particular service. The preacher, the audience, should be of paramount consideration. Many times I have listened to the opening prayer where the party forgot the preacher entirely. Outside of the particular needs of the hour, special solicitation for the sick, the poor and distressed, the spiritual authorities of the church and the general needs of the gospel work can be incidentally mentioned. It is distinctly out of place for the brother to proceed to preach a sermon to the audience over the Lord's head. The prayer is offered to God and not to the audience. The one offering the prayer should be, so far as possible, entirely oblivious of the audience. How often has it seemed that the one offering the introductory prayer was endeavoring to make a favorable impression upon the audience instead of penitently supplication the Almighty for grace and power. We should not be like the Pharisee, "pray to be heard of men." We should not "be heard for our much speaking" either.

When the speaker is unknown to the audience it is very proper to make a formal introduction. The stereotyped and oftentimes meaningless phrase, "I have the pleasure of presenting for your speaker this evening," can well give way to the statement, "Bro. Joseph Smith will be the speaker," or "As previously announced Bro. Kelley will address you this evening."

Where the speaker is well known an introduction is entirely unnecessary. Let the one assisting open the meeting; he is never introduced, and likewise permit the speaker to proceed at once without any formality. I do not think it becoming to use the terms President, Apostle, or High Priest. The term Brother is all sufficient. It is painful to note how these titles and handles are used in some of our church publications.

The service should not last over one hour unless the Spirit suggests otherwise. Ten minutes for opening; sermon forty-five minutes; closing five minutes.

Immediately after dismissal the people should quietly disperse. Prolonged gossip or visiting should not be tolerated by the deacon. Whispering during service, writing notes, making a bed of one's chair, scraping the feet, looking at the watch, yawning, nudging, turning around to view new comers, coming in late, scrutinizing others clothes, unnecessary hawking; these are all marks of ill breeding and should be avoided.

There are many little things which contribute to make a meeting a success which, if avoided or ignored, grate harshly on the sensitive and refined. It is just as easy to be refined as to be boorish or uncultured, and it is much more spiritual, for the gospel is purely a refining influence.

The one who opens the service is properly the assistant. Everything should be subordinate to the wishes of the speaker. The song service and the arrangements. Everything should be contributed to his ease and encouragement. He should be consulted in all the features of the service and particularly in the selection of the hymns. Certainly, if he has nothing special in mind he will leave the selection to the chorister but, if he has a special subject, there may be certain hymns which the Spirit may suggest to accompany the same. It is just as appropriate to select hymns and practice the same for a given service, as it is for the preacher to write and rehearse his sermon before hand. Let the singers become efficient in the rendition of all the hymns of the church and be prepared for any emergency. This will not refer to anthems and difficult pieces for certain seasons and occasions out of the ordinary. Sometimes the speaker feels that he can best appear before the people and God by offering the prayer himself. When services are left in his hands, and the brother associating is considered as an assistant, which he really is, the best results will be realized. He can easily turn the music over to the chorister and the introductory services entirely to the assistant if he feel so led; or he can do part himself. Sometimes I have seen the speaker so discomfited by the bungling man ner in which the introductory service has been conducted that he was compelled to quit after making the attempt to speak. The opening and closing may well be considered half of the service. Other churches make these the drawing cards. With them an ordinary speaker with a nicely rendered accompaniment is far more desirable than the reverse. A well delivered spiritual sermon is enhanced in value by appropriate accompaniments, as a good dish is made more palatable by a suitable sauce.

EXPORTS.

The United States Leads the World.

The United States continues at the head of the list of the world's exporting nations. The comparative figures prepared each month by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, exhibiting the imports and exports of each of the principal countries of the world and the average per month during a given period, show that the domestic exports from the United States are greater than those from any other country, and that the monthly average during the year 1901 has been higher than that of any other country. For the nine months ending with September, our exports of domestic products were $1,024,605,181, against $1,018,845,768 from the United Kingdom, the next largest exporter of domestic products, in the same period. While a comparison during the same period with Germany, France Russia, Netherland and India, which follow in the order named in the magnitude of their exports, is impracticable because their fiscal years are not co-terminous with that of the United States; the totals of their exports during the latest available years show not only that the United States is clearly in the lead as an exporter, but that the growth in her exports has been more rapid than that of any other great exporting nation. In the calendar year 1900, for which the statistics of most exporting countries are now available, the figures for the United States were $1,453,018,659 of exports of domestic products, against $497,263,737 in 1875, an increase of nearly two hundred per cent during that period; while those of Germany were, in 1900, $1,050,611,000, and in 1875, $607,096,000, an increase of seventy three per cent; and those of the United Kingdom, in 1900, $1,418,348,000, and in 1875, $1,087,497,000, an increase of about forty per cent.

The very latest available data for comparing the commerce of the United States with that of other countries, however, are furnished in a statement just prepared by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, which shows the monthly exports of domestic merchandise from each of the principal countries of the world during that period of its fiscal year for which statistics are available. This shows that the monthly average for the United States is greater than that of any other country, and that the figures of 1901 show in the case of the United States a material increase over those of 1900, while those of the United Kingdom and Germany show a decrease. The average monthly exportation of domestic merchandise from the United States in the nine months ending with September 1901 was $113,935,020, against $112,529,440 in the corresponding months of last year, an increase of about one and one-half millions per month; while those of the United Kingdom were in the same months of 1901, $113,205,085, against $113,132,533 in the same months of 1900, showing a decrease of about five millions per month; and those of Germany were $37,831,833 per month for the six months ending with June, 1901, against $38,520,833 for the corresponding months of the preceding year, showing a decrease of a little less than one million dollars per month.

Knew What to Expect.

At Wichita [Kansas] the other night a revivalist said: "Oh, yes, we have hypocrites and liars and such in the church. Nod your heads, why just look at the heads nodding. You have them here, too, do you? (Laughter) Why, yes of course you have, if some of you don't steal from me it will be the first meeting I ever held that some one didn't. I expect some one has walked off with one of our song books already, but I'd rather risk them here than concert tickets in every seat at a circus, wouldn't it you?"—The Kansas City Journal, Nov. 27th.

DAUGHTERS OF ZION

"OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS." Mrs. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the auspices of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

Editor's Address, 1210 West Short St., Independence, Mo.

It is said, "You may judge the character of a nation by its women."

Time was when woman was burdened with civil and religious disabilities and degraded by social customs. She had no voice in the government of her family and no control over her property or life.

But with the dawn of Christianity a new conception was created of woman's true position. Under the influence of Christianity, wonderful changes began. First, the absolute power of the husband was broken, the guardianship of woman was abolished and she had rights in property, she became a recognized factor in the church, a heroine at the stake, and in the arena, for the love of Christ.

Since that time civilization has advanced with rapid progress and all that ingenious workmanship could invent, has been to lighten her burdens and beautify her surroundings. With the prejudice of the ages confronting her on every hand, she has pushed steadily forward and the stone wall of opposition is beginning to crumble. Ever since woman began to think for herself, ever since she took her life in her own hands, the dawning of a great light has flooded this world. We are the mothers of men. "Show me the mothers of the country and I will tell you of its sons," are the words of one. Is there not much depending upon the woman of today, for in her hands holds she the destiny of nations.

It will please our young girls to know that Max O'Reil, a celebrated French wit, recently made the assertion that if he could choose his nation and his sex, he would choose to be an American woman. Occupying this enviable position what should be her deportment in looks, manner, speech and dress?

What shall be a wise course of conduct must ultimately be determined by the young woman herself. No two are situated alike, but we may erect a few guide posts along this untrodden path that the young girl may be warned of the dangers near her.

First we will speak of dress. That the goddess of fashion reigns supreme none can deny; we see her devotees on every hand, within the church and without. It is a form of servitude that enslaves the mind, prevents expansion of thought and development of the higher life. To keep pace with all the latest fads imposes upon woman the most constant attention to her toilet. There is a jingle which says:

Ladies must have All manner of things, that a woman can put On the crown of her head or the sole of her foot, Or wrap round her shoulders or fit round her waist, Or that can be sewed on, or pinned on or laced Or tied on with a string, or stitched on with a bow, In front or behind, above or below, Bonnets, mantillas, capes, collars or shawls, Dresses to eat breakfast, and dinners and balls, Dresses to sit in, and stand in and walk in, Dresses to dance in, and flirt in and talk in, Dresses in which to do nothing at all.

If this interminable list of articles of the toilet were left for the possession of the exclusively fashionable woman, it would not so much matter; but the girls, far from having wealth at their command, are to a great extent affected by these mandates of fashion—they will try to imitate their—to them—more fortunate sisters, thus sacrificing their independence of thought and their womanliness.

It may seem a great sacrifice on the part of our young girls to attire themselves in plain clothing in keeping with the commandment of the Lord, while their friends and associates indulge in ornamentation to their heart's desire; but do our girls esteem less highly the approval and blessing of the Lord than the opinion of the world? Let some one of you be an example, and if your conduct in all other things agrees with the spirit of the gospel, see if you will not have a following.

Now about "Manner." There is a little rhyme which reads: True politeness is to do and to say, The kindest thing in the kindest way.

There are certain conventionalities necessary in society, not only in society abroad, but in the home. Politeness cannot be done for certain occasions, and doffed at one's will. It must emanate from the heart, or its shallowness will soon be discovered. Be sure to be polite with the growing, perhaps rude brothers of the family. If they are careless and coarse in speech let them never hear the same from you. "Speak gently, 'tis a little thing," but kindness is a power. The tender heart, the gentle manner, and unselfish spirit go to make up the womanly woman.

"Looks" comes next. It seems almost a waste of time to dwell upon other than the beauty of the soul. "She is not beautiful, however complete on the out-

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

Dear Ensign:—Since jotting you from "Voree" and through the kindness of our amiable missionary, H. C. Smith, we have enjoyed a furlough from our field, the first one since being a regular missionary. Immediately on arriving at Independence, Bro. I. N. White desired we should meet one Abe Carlin, who was lecturing in Hickory county, Missouri, against our church. Of course we complied and met Carlin, resulting in a complete victory for our cause, of which you have been apprised. We now return to Voree and pick up the thread of our story.

Under the leadership of J. J. Strang, the movement receiving impetus from the appointive letter claimed by Strang, Voree grew to be no unimportant city; but like all other factions running without tidings, came to grief in a few short years. Rumors of fraud in reference to the letter of appointment, also to the finding of the plates, and the utter failure of prophecy given by James were soon current among the Saints, which finally evolved a vigorous opposition to the Strang movement. An opposition paper was soon launched the "New Era" in which Strang and his methods were fully ventilated. The seceding party were called "Pseudos" by the "Loyal" party and thus the war raged.

Such men as Gurley, Marks, Davis, Gaylord, Briggs and others were among the seceders, who relying on the promise that "by their fruits YE SHALL KNOW THEM," made the opposition a fierce one; so much so that finally Strang and the "loyal" ones under a revelation of Strang's hid away to Beaver Island, situated in Lake Michigan, where James was crowned king and was afterwards called "King James." Polygamy and its kindred evils were rife; matters going from bad to worse until the king was shot and the loyal scattered from Beaver Island. Strang returned to Voree and there died of his wound, and thus ended the career of one of the main factions created at the death of Joseph the Seer.

Returning now to the "Pseudos", who were partially organized and now members of the Zarahemla branch—a branch established during the life time of Joseph the Seer—forming a nucleus around which dissenters could gather, with the avowed understanding to follow no faction; regarding Strang, Brigham and others and firmly standing on the principles as given by Joseph the Seer, would wait the time of the Lord when the seed of promise should take his father's place. Conferences were called and organization effected as nearly as could be under all the circumstances, God acknowledging their efforts by prophecy, tongues and miraculous healings.

It was given oftentimes by the Spirit, "To this branch would young Joseph the promise seed come;" and in the fall and winter of 1859 revelation was had and given in various ways that at the next spring conference (1860), appointed at Amboy, Illinois, Joseph would come and take his father's place. At the appointed time Joseph was there—"not by my own will, but by a higher power," was the mission he bore to this band of faithful ones who, with streaming eyes and joyful hearts, received him in due form as Israel's guide and deliverer, to build up the waste places and to occupy "until the name of Latter Day Saint was made honorable among men. And thus can be traced the footprints of authoritative truth with those who were with Strang for a season and who had the right under the promise to know the fruit of the good tree, who stood fast in the liberty that made men free, and thus the links of the gospel chain are intact from Joseph the Seer to Joseph's son, and we are more convinced and more fully persuaded now than ever before of the truthfulness of the position of the Reorganization and feel we can better defend our position as against all others. They were merely side issues, man made, known as Brighamism, Strangism, etc., etc., and never should be known as or called "Mormonism." I pause for the critic.

A QUERY.

Editor Ensign:—Having had our attention called by an article in the ENSIGN of November 23th to a notice of an entertainment to be given in Argentine, Kansas, December 5th, for the benefit of a new church; and having read the notice, it set me to thinking, and I desire to express a few of those thoughts.

First, had we not better consider the method by which we work? It was stated several years ago by the chief quorums of the church, that in building church houses the bishopric should be consulted. Argentine is in the Independence Stake, where they have both a bishopric and high council. Have they been consulted? If not, why not? Argentine has no branch organization to take this matter in hand, and this being a financial enterprise, in an organized Stake, who will be responsible for it, if not the bishopric? In Sec. 122:6, the bishopric seem to be made responsible, and if there tells us who they should consult in their work. It would be well to read this carefully. This being in a Stake, and the Stake permanent, it might be thought wise to build a better house than "about $400" would build; or it might be thought best to wait until an organization is effected and a permanent branch assured. Then would it not have been better for the Saints of Independence, Kansas City and Armstrong, (other than those rendering the program) to give the amount of car fare and the 15 cents, which would be 35 cents from Independence and 25 cents each from Kansas City and Armstrong, rather than give the greater amount to the street car company, (if thought best to build). "Zion cannot be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself." We do not want to build out of harmony with the law, lest the Master rejects our building. No doubt all mean well, but the Master has said: "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to not in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence.

M. R. SHOEMAKER, Dist. Pres.
Beardstown, Ill., Nov. 25.

The Far West District conference will convene with the St. Joseph branch Saturday and Sunday, December 21st and 22d, at the usual time. We again call the attention of branch secretaries and the ministry to have their reports sent to the secretary one week prior to convening of conference. Please do not neglect this for by thus sending ahead the district secretaries can have the reports and credentials properly arranged, saving work and expediting the business of the conference.

CHARLES P. FAUL, Sec.
Stewartsville, Mo. Nov. 25th.

Convention Notices.

The convention of the Far West Missouri district Sunday School association will meet with the St. Joseph school, December 20th, 1901 at 10 a. m. Secretaries of schools please send reports according to resolution on district record. Superintendents please comply with paragraph 1 article 2 page 15 of the constitution and by laws. Last convention not one superintendent in the district complied with this: what is the use in having rules to follow if we make no effort to follow them? Therefore let each one see if we cannot advance and occupy higher grounds than we have in the past. Let each one bring the Spirit of the Master with them to the convention that we may have a profitable time.

THOMAS.—At Jeffersonville, Wayne county, Illinois, November 21, 1901, Elder John E. Thomas, aged 71 years, 10 months and 1 day. He was born January 20, 1830. Enlisted in the U. S. Volunteers in 1861, 14th Illinois Cavalry, Co. G, and served until the end of the war. Funeral sermon by Elder F. M. Slover. He was a firm believer in the great mission work of Joseph the Seer.

JONES.—At Canton, Illinois, Nov. 2, 1901, Bro. Lewis Lloyd Jones. He was born in Merthyr Tydfil, Glamorganshire, Wales, March 16, 1827; emigrated to America in 1849, landing in New Orleans, going from there by ox team to Utah. Was married in Salt Lake City to Mrs. Elizabeth Davis, who survives him. They remained in Utah eight years, but becoming dissatisfied came east to St. Louis, Missouri, and was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1864; was ordained an elder the same year, which office he held to the time of his death, but of late years has been unable to attend to the duties attached to the office because of his failing health. He leaves a wife, two daughters and three sons all living in Canton, as well as a host of friends.

GOULD.—At Battle Lake, Ottertail county, Minnesota, Bro. Winfield M. Gould, aged 24 years, 4 months and 20 days. He was born June 10, 1877, at Battle Lake; was baptized and confirmed September 16, 1898 by Elder George Gould and endeavored faithfully to follow in the footsteps of his Master, living a life well worthy of an imitation. Was taken sick October 19th with typhoid fever and died October 30, 1901. Father, mother and five sisters are left at home to mourn their bitter loss, also one sister, Sr. P. A. Sherman of Independence, Mo., and one brother, Leon A. Gould, now in the Society Islands acting as scribe for Patriarch A. H. Smith. May God grant strength to him and to us all in this hour of trouble. Funeral sermon at Clitherall, Minnesota, by Elder T. C. Kelley; interment in the Clitherall cemetery.

Is the Most Economical

Greater in leavening strength, a spoonful raises more dough, or goes further. Working uniformly and perfectly, it makes the bread and cake always light and beautiful, and there is never a waste of good flour, sugar, butter and eggs.

While it actually costs less to make a batch of biscuit with the Price Baking Powder than with the so-called cheap powders, there is the additional advantage of better and more healthful food.

NOTE.—Alum powders should not be used, no matter how cheap they are. They induce dyspepsia, liver complaint and kidney trouble.

Some Religion.

F. M. COOPER.

Religion is a funny thing,
It plays both new and old,
It has the power to pray or sing,
But easily catches cold.

It tackles both the old and young,
With power that makes them quake,
But gets it's strings so tightly strung,
That they are apt to break.

It works upon the timid mind,
And horrid stories tell,
And sends the sinner "poor and blind
Down to an endless hell."

The preachers talk would make us think,
That God was very good,
To snatch us from hell's awful brink,
As a loving Father would.

But all at once his God gets mad,
See how his wrath doth burn;
He's sent a soul forlorn and sad,
From whence there's no return.

Repentant tears are all in vain,
Unheard that helpless cry,
This God in wrath will now remain,
While ceaseless ages fly.

From Diplomatist to 'Longshoreman.

There is no city in the world with so many foreigners as New York," writes the Rev. David M. Steele in an article on "The Other Side of the Town," in the December Ladies' Home Journal. "Nor is there any class of persons in the city among whom there are so many 'queer cases.' I met a man in the Bowry one cold, wet, winter night selling shoe laces. He looked so hungry that I took him to a restaurant, where, after I had given him something to eat, he gave me his confidence. He talked five languages—Italian, Spanish, German, French and Arabic—with equal fluency, but did not know a word of English.

"But who was he? A man of thirty five, well educated, well connected and well bred. For five years after graduating he taught Sanskrit in a great university, and for the five years following acted as the foreign diplomatic correspondent of a Berlin daily. He had in person interviewed half the crowned monarchs of Europe, and when this work grew commonplace he enlisted in the Secret Information Service of the German army. Sent on a mission into Russia, he committed a most serious blunder, and he suddenly found himself wanted by two armies at one time to be shot as a spy. His father cursed him, his patrons deserted and his friends derided him. He escaped with his life in time to flee the country. Today this son of a Russian Count is rolling salt barrels on a New York dock."

Fruit cakes may be made two or three months in advance of Christmas. In fact they are better when a year old.—December Ladies' Home Journal.

Asthma

"One of my daughters had a terrible case of asthma. We tried almost everything, but without relief. We then tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and three and one-half bottles cured her."—Emma Jane Entsminger, Langsville, O.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral certainly cures many cases of asthma.

And it cures bronchitis, hoarseness, weak lungs, whooping-cough, croup, winter coughs, night coughs, and hard colds.

Three sizes: 25c., enough for an ordinary cold; 50c., just right for bronchitis, hoarseness, hard colds, etc.; $1.00, most economical for chronic cases and in keeping on hand. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

THE PURPOSE OF LIFE.

The query "Why am I here?" will probably present itself to the mind at some time in the life of every one. The thought of the absence of a purpose in the mind of the great Creator in placing man—the highest type of his handiwork—upon the earth, none can admit and do justice to his own intelligence. It is in no wise a reflection upon the great and glorious plan of creation that conditions of hardship and distress are seen and felt by large numbers of humanity; such conditions have only been possible by reason of sin, the power of evil having prevailed among the inhabitants of the world, because they have yielded to the domination of the adversary instead of carrying out the grand designs of the Creator, and working with him for the completion of his plans. Many a poor struggling soul, discouraged by the terrible odds arrayed against the right, despairing of success in the effort to maintain an honest existence, has been led to even question whether or not there is a God, because the assistance so much needed and desired is not extended; and to such an extent has this feeling been manifest of late years, that many writers have endeavored to satisfactorily answer the question, "Is life worth living?"

If the experiences of the masses in this small fraction of life called "Time," were to be the criterion by which to judge, and there was no hope or knowledge of that which, under differing conditions and in brighter spheres, is to be revealed, there might be cause for questioning the wisdom that placed us here in the midst of so much unhappiness and suffering—from a worldly point of view. But the very fact that unfavorable conditions do exert so much of an influence upon the lives of men, is indubitable evidence that he who is the great Author of our existence here, is not responsible for them. Everything that comes to us directly from him, is placed at the disposal of all alike. The sun shines for all; the rain falls upon "the just and the unjust." The great invitation is "Let him that is athirst come, and partake of the water of life freely." It is "man's in humanity to man" that makes "countless thousands mourn." It is his hard heartedness, his selfish, grasping, lack-love, disposition that makes it hard for thousands to obtain a bare living honestly. It is man, and man alone—except in the inspiration the devil, the great enemy of God and man, renders—to whom is traceable all the ills under which humanity groans, and with which it is so sadly burdened.

Take the teachings of the greatest representative of the Creator, and exponent of his character and designs the world has ever witnessed since its creation, and we find enunciated such noble sentiments as these:

"Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets."—Matt. 7: 12.

"I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust."—Matt. 5: 43, 44.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" was the Father's command, and these noble, uplifting sentiments, if obeyed, would speedily change every unfavorable, unhappy condition now experienced by so many under the influence of principles which are directly opposite to those enunciated from the heavens, and make even this life a joyous one. When the law and will of the Lord prevails on the earth as they should, it will speedily be changed into a heaven for all who dwell under such rule.

But what is the purpose of our creation, and what part in the great plan of the Creator is left for man to do, that God's purposes may be executed in the final destiny of man? These are questions in which every living soul is vitally interested; and an intelligent understanding of them will the better enable us to co-operate in the completion of those designs by which all who so work are to be benefited to an infinite extent.

In studying upon the work of creation, we find that the earth upon which we dwell was first planned, and then built for the blessing and use of man; constructed with a special view to his occupancy; and after all the other creations had been placed upon it he was created as its sovereign or governor, being given dominion over the entire world, subject only to the direction of the Creator. This dominion he partly lost subsequently, through transgression; but the fact of so stupendous a work being done with a view to his good, evidences some high and grand purpose contemplated on the part of the Creator for him. The Psalmist declares that man was created but "a little lower than the angels—in intelligence or understanding we apprehend—hence his capabilities are, we may say, immeasurable to finite mind no one can say how far his intelligence may be developed under right conditions. In his normal state he is a very king among all the other creations, and in his adaptability for development intellectually, lies his power and pre-eminence. But doubtless his intellect is more frequently the subject of divine inspiration than is comprehended, so that the glory or honor for his development does not attach to him wholly as an individual, but to the source from which his inspiration comes. It may be thought by some that the Creator did all this good work for his own satisfaction and honor; but we think that one of the considerations which largely influenced him was the exaltation and happiness of man. His work would not be a perfect and complete one, worthy of so noble a conception as is manifested in the works of the creation, unless as its crowning virtue, the highest degree of happiness possible of bestowal should be attained by this creature made in his own image.

Life is therefore a subject for very grave consideration. What shall for each of us, be the ultimate, must be thoughtfully weighed, and our course of conduct measured by the decision each may accept. "Whose your treasure is, there will your heart be also" (Matt. 6: 21), is a truism which has demonstrated itself all along the ages, and makes it incumbent upon every one to see that the object upon which the best impulses and affections of our natures are placed is worthy, so that disappointment will not be the result.

The word of God declares that at some time in the future the Lord Jesus is to return to the earth; that he is to bring with him "ten thousands" of his saints; that he is to take up his abode here for a thousand years, after which the earth is to be renewed, cleansed and fitted for man's final abode, all conditions which first showed it to be the perfect work of a perfect Creator being restored. We are here to fit ourselves for this condition, and by conforming our characters to the expressed will of the eternal Father, we will make ourselves worthy of this privilege. If we do not, we must be content to dwell in a condition less satisfactory, of which we have not been a part, and which will always be a cause of regret. We are here to govern our spirits and natures to the extent that doing the will of our heavenly Father may be our pleasure as well as duty. There can be no mistake in this course; the results will be found eminently satisfactory and well worthy all of the sacrifice of worldly pleasure we will necessarily have to place upon the altar of service to God.

"Who is on the Lord's side?"

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We are indebted to Sr. (Mrs.) F. J. Clute, 16 Marye Terrace, San Francisco, California, for a most excellent photograph of Bro. Joseph and Alexander Smith, the president and the patriarch of the church. The clear air of that climate has enabled the artist to get about as perfect an effect as it seems possible to make. The view was taken at the Los Angeles reunion last summer, and shows the brethren standing together, presumably on the reunion grounds, with a background of trees and a high board fence. One noticeable feature is that the brethren had unwittingly taken a position immediately under a large natural wreath, growing on one of the trees near where they stood. Sr. Clute says when she discovered this fact in looking at the picture, she thought it quite significant and prophetic. The view is 6x8 inches or little more, the card being nearly an inch and half larger, very suitable for framing. Copies may be had for fifty cents by addressing Sr. Clute. "It is truly a splendid picture and we appreciate having a copy."

ELDER O. J. TARY, Wheeling, West Virginia, in nearly a column and half article in The Wheeling News, of Nov. 18th, a daily paper of Wheeling, West Virginia, makes a fine reply to a Rev. R. R. Bigger, who had been telling his audiences what he supposed he knew about "Mormonism" (?) Bro. "Okey" is a very clear and forceful writer, and really makes these great fellows look decidedly small in their pretensions. He has a way of making their ignorance of the subject so plainly manifest that if they have any sense of honor it should move them to study their subjects from another standpoint, than from that of an avowed autogonist, before posing as a teacher of truth. Bro. Tary was also interviewed by a reporter of the Daily Intelligencer of that city of the 20th in which he stated the position of the Reorganized church, very pointedly on the objectionable features alluded to by Rev. Bigger, such as polygamy, etc. It is evident Bro. Tary's defense is inviting inquiry and interests which cannot otherwise than result in good to the cause. He has the esteem and respect of his acquaintances out of the church, and the love and confidence of his brethren. The Wheeling Saints are to be congratulated in having so able an exponent for their presiding elder.

Our friends should remember when asking us to print little notices which are wholly for their own personal information that such notices take space which should be used for the general good, unless the space is paid for. It costs money for every line of type set up, so that if these personal notices are not paid for by the individual requesting them, some one else has to do so, which is not fair to them. Hereafter then, when sending notices with request for publication, which are of personal interest only, the sender should accompany the notice with a remittance to cover it, of five cents per line of six words, to insure insertion.

ELDER F. A. RUSSELL, 1046 17th street, Rock Island, Illinois, sending for ENSIGN, the money for which was furnished by a sister, says: "The paper goes to two quite old ladies, who take great comfort in reading it. I wish more of this kind of service would be rendered."

The suggestion of Bro. Russell is a timely one; it would be a splendid way to do a kindly and beneficial work in the name of the Master. Try it ye who are willing to make the small sacrifice required.

Extracts from Letters.

Sr. (Mrs.) CELESTINE HAGGERTY, Lewistown, Fergus county, Montana, Nov. 22:

We have recently moved here from Ironton, Ohio. This is a nice little town, situated in the center of Montana. The latter day work has never been presented here. There are quite a number of denominations but no Latter Day Saints. Would like very much for an elder to visit us, if there are any near."

BRO. J. R. MCKINNEY, Winthrop, Arkansas:

I have been doing all I could for the cause since my return from Conference last spring, and though the adversary is at work all the time, I have good liberty every time I have a chance to speak. I get more calls than I can fill. Bro. J. W. Jackson has been to see me a time or two since Conference, and with Bro. D. D. Babcock, are all the Saints I have seen since my return. Those who are isolated as I am can only appreciate such visitors as these brethren when they come.

BRO. JAMES MCCONNAUGHY, Akron, Ohio, December 1st:

The Saints at present are well; Bro. S. F. Cushman just left after a week's stay, giving good instructions helping to comfort and cheer the Saints. I am doing what little I can to help this great cause; am preaching every other Sabbath about six miles from town.

ELDER J. L. TERRY, Millersburg, Illinois, November 21, in remitting for ENSIGN for Sr. Rebecca Bivens, adds:

Mother Bivens, being isolated from the Saints, feels she could hardly get along without the many sermons and letters contained in the ENSIGN to cheer her along life's uneven journey. She has become so infirm with age that she is unable to meet with the Saints any more, the distance from her abode to the place of meeting being too great. She is between 80 and 90 years old but her mind is unimpaired on the subject of her faith. She holds her membership in the Millersburg branch and still continues faithful to the covenant made when she took upon her the name of Christ. There are quite a goodly number of faithful Saints belonging to this branch, but there are also a few who seem to be somewhat indifferent in regard to their spiritual welfare; but as a branch I think we are in a good condition spiritually. We had a two days meeting the 9th and 10th inst., preaching by Elders J. Arthur Davis, E. A. Stedman and O. H. Bailey, three able ministers and men who are calculated to do a vast amount of good if they continue faithful. They occupied the district tent several weeks at Illinois City where they had a good attendance all the time, and there seemed to be a good deal of interest among the people. When they first went there so much opposition was manifested that much difficulty was encountered in securing a place to set up the tent, but after they got to preaching the opposition seemed to vanish and everything moved smoothly along until the weather became too cold to longer use the tent.

SR. MAGGIE B. P. PEARSON, Rochester, Indiana, renewing for the ENSIGN, says:

I have been reading some ENSIGNS which were given me by a dear sister in Michigan, and it is truly a grand paper. I have been reading some at intervals, but did not get interested until of late. There is truly food for the soul in its columns.

"Cast thy bread upon the waters," etc., is the advice of Solomon. "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not," says the apostle (Gal. 6:9). This evidence should encourage our brethren and sisters to continue sending the ENSIGN to those whom they wish to interest in the gospel of Christ so long as they manifest a willingness to read it. Results will surely be seen at the proper time. Send in the names and subscriptions, consecrating the service by prayer and faith to the Lord and trust him for the increase. You will in no wise lose your reward.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bro. M. T. Short is improving some, but is yet kept close at home.

Our genial brother, Dr. O. H. Riggs, of Kansas City, attended two services here Sunday.

We ought to have a much greater attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting. Are you doing your duty in this regard?

Bro. Smart is resting easy, but unable to be out of doors. He suffers considerably at times.

Bro. and Sr. D. Hougas contemplate renewing their journey to California Wednesday of next week.

We had about an inch of snow Wednesday of last week but it soon disappeared. Two or three days of good rain would be appreciated by a great many people. Cisterns are empty, and even some farmers are hauling water.

The schools closed Tuesday until after the holidays. This was deemed advisable by the Board as a precautionary measure, and to assist in stamping out the contagious diseases. There are some fifteen cases of the so called small-pox, and a very few cases of scarlet fever. There is nothing in the situation at all alarming, but it is a good thing to be on the safe side always.

Bro. Mark H. Forscutt, of Nebraska City, Nebraska, surprised the Saints by a visit Sunday. He was in Kansas City on business, and came down to worship with and visit the Saints here. He was accorded a warm welcome. He departed Tuesday.

Sunday morning President Hulmes addressed the Saints, and at night Bro. Mark H. Forscutt, of Nebraska City, Nebraska, occupied, both efforts were good. The afternoon service was enlightening and comforting. The increased interest and attendance shown in these afternoon services is truly gratifying. The lower auditorium is nearly filled with earnest worshippers.

Bro. Geo. E. Harrington returned from Pennsylvania, Wednesday morning; he intends to remain with us. There is room for you, Bro. George.

We are informed that Sr. Eli Etzenhouser, of Kansas City, was to leave for California, this (Thursday) morning.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Our worthy business manager of the Herald plant, Bro. John Smith; with his wife, Sundayed with us, and Bro. Smith occupied the church pulpit Sunday morning. Bro. S. is an ever welcomed guest to our borders.

Bro. R. J. Parker, of Independence, came up as a substitute for Bro. I. N. White, who was hindered by sickness of family, and gave us a round of sermons at our missions, preaching at the church last night. His soul delights in plainness, and he tells the gospel story in a simplified form. He returned home today.

A beautiful wedding occurred on Thursday night at the house of Bro. Wm. Cook, in our city, his beloved daughter, Sr. Ella Mae, and Mr. S. G. Frosschle being the center of attraction. Our beautiful church ceremony was officially repeated by the writer.

The Lord has remarkably blessed of late some of our sick through administration of his servants. To him belongs praise and honor.

In bonds,

J. M. TERRY.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

FONDA, Ia., Dec. 1.

Editor Ensign:—The ENSIGN comes regularly every week. We are of the isolated ones, and you can think how glad we are, and how we appreciate reading the columns laden with such glorious news. I did enjoy reading Bro. Ebeling's sixth speech; how I would like to have heard that debate.

We had a visit from Bro. W. H. Kephart November 25th; how glad we were to see him, although he could not stop long enough to preach to us this time; we hope the time is not far off when he will come and preach here in Fonda. I do believe that God has a people here also; they seem kind hearted, but appear to be asleep so far as religion is concerned. There is a M. E. church, one Presbyterian and a Catholic church; the latter have the largest congregation. How I do wish there was a Latter Day Saints' church here also so that the people could hear our doctrine preached by our elders. There are so few of us here; my daughter and husband, and myself. My husband does not belong to the church yet, but likes our elders, and I am sure is almost convinced of the truth of this gospel; my prayer is that he will come into the church. He is a good honest upright man. Although he does not belong to the church has been paying tithing for some years, which is very favorable. Our daughter, (Mrs.) Sr. Cushman, which Bro. Kephart baptized last June, and administered to, is growing stronger and better, for which we praise our heavenly Father. Her husband and little child are well, and give honor and praise to God for healing and giving strength to wife and mother.

Pray for us dear brothers and sisters that we may prove faithful, for that is my desire. Although we are isolated from God's children we feel and know that his watchcare is over us and that he owns us as his.

We would like to see Bro. Hunt and hear him preach (his husband thinks a great deal of him). Any elders will be welcome at our home if they will come.

Your sister in Christ,
SARAH ELVA OLSON.

ELDORADO SPRINGS, Mo.

November 20.

Dear Ensign:—The Saints at Eldorado Springs are still alive and in the faith, looking forward to the redemption of Zion, and I believe we are trying to so order our lives as to help to bring about our redemption. We are rejoicing in having a house of our own in which to worship. We have it all finished inside, and a good coat of paint on the outside; and now one more short pull, and a strong pull all together financially, and our chapel will be ready to dedicate.

We have already had two series of meetings in our chapel; one by Bro. R. T. Walters of ten days, and one by Bro. James Moler, of two weeks; and during our last meeting two precious souls were baptized into the kingdom by Bro. Moler. We had splendid turnouts by the people to hear the gospel, and Bro. Moler did not hesitate to give saint and sinner their portion in due season; now what will we do with it?

The 17th inst. there were four more dear ones baptized, by our beloved pastor, Bro. Abner Lloyd, and now we are seeing the promises given by the Spirit fulfilled. Dear Saints, pray for us that we may live so faithful that other promises made to us may be fulfilled. I pray that our love for God and each other may be so strong that the power of the evil one may not find entrance among us. How grand and glorious it is to be serving God in Spirit and in truth. Oh, how I rejoice in his goodness, and for the privilege of seeking him in this latter day.

I have read Elder Gilbert's "Zig Zags" with pleasure. I hope he will still let us hear from them, and when we read Bro. Peterson's letter telling of the trials that he and Sr. Peterson have gone through, my tears flowed in sympathy with Sr. Peterson, and I wished that I could have been there to help her in those hardships, but as I cannot be a missionary, I am thankful to be able to do a little work here in my own, dear native land, for that great latter day work. Oh, it is a marvel and a wonder.

Yours in the one faith,
Mrs. A. J. GILMORE.

DARKENED, Ill., Nov. 25th.

Dear Brother:—I send you a notice of the death of Elder J. F. Thomas. Just before Bro. Thomas left home for the war in 1861, he copied the revelation given by Joseph Smith December 25th, 1832, from the "Pearl of Great Price," onto a sheet of foolscap paper in his own hand writing which document he carried with him through the war, and brought it home with him at his return. I saw said document a few months ago, and I was permitted to take a verbatim copy. He informed me that during his services as a soldier for his country, that he had taken the revelation from his pocket and had read the same to his comrade. I thought I might write you this in hopes that it might be useful to your many readers. There are others who have heard Bro. Thomas speak of the same thing many times. He died in the faith of the gospel.

Your brother,
F. M. SLOVER.

BELLCENTER, Wis., Nov. 10.

Editor Ensign:—I love to read the letters and sermons in the ENSIGN, in fact, I love to read it all, and as our time has expired, will send and renew it, for we cannot think of doing without it. Was glad to read that our Bro. F. L. Sawley is still in the work, for he can make the gospel so plain that all can understand. Our beloved brother, A. L. Whiteaker, was here and preached some excellent sermons, and made the gospel look so plain that all seemed edified. Come again, Bro. A. L., for the Wheatville branch loves to have the elders come.

Elder J. W. Whiteaker is doing all he can to feed the flock that spiritual food, and instruct them and teach them their duty, and keep the flock together. I can say the most of the members are alive in the work. Bro. Brookover is also doing all he can, battling for the truth; he is a earnest worker. Our branch is somewhat scattered, but we meet the first Sunday in every month to partake of the sacrament, and in two weeks we meet again, some time for preaching and some time prayer and testimony, and the Lord is with us when we come together in faith.

This work grows brighter each day. I often think I am the weakest and most unworthy of all the hand-maidens in the vineyard of our God, but I know if I am, it is required of me to do what I can for my Master; so I intend to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints, and to tell others all I can of the gospel, God helping me. Dear brethren and sisters of the one faith, pray for us of the Wheatville branch, that we may not be slothful, but earnest workers in this great work of our God. Hoping and praying for the spread of the gospel, I am

Your sister in bonds,
M. E. WHITEAKER.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 26.

Editor Ensign:—Perhaps a few words from this city of "brotherly love" would not be out of order at this time. Our good cause here is attracting some attention and we are doing all we can to give the people a proper understanding of the same. I have succeeded in getting fair reports of our work here inserted in all the most prominent papers of this city. A week ago three of the papers here had a short notice of our Sunday School convention and each one stated that we were not in any way connected with the Utah institution of the salt land.

In last Sunday's Times there was a short article also which has a fair report of our work, a picture of the writer and of the new church we have about completed here. I give an extract from this article:

"Although the doctrines and all who follow them were at first severely condemned by the cloth and laity of this city, those who listen to the faith as set forth by Mr. LaRue find very little to censure, many of the principles being strictly orthodox. The pastor and members of this, Latter Day Saints Church repudiate the doctrine of polygamy. They look upon the teachings of Brigham Young as a delilement of the sacred doctrines of the true Mormons," etc.

If they had left the word "Mormon" out it would have been much better; not that there is anything bad about the word "Mormon," but it is so very hard to get the people to understand "who and what we are." I have written a tract for the purpose of introducing our work here and to show the people that we are not of the Utah Mormons. It is doing good.

Bishop E. L. Kelley arrived here yesterday from New York; he will likely remain here over next Sunday, December 1st, when we expect to open our new church. Bro. Pitt is to preach the opening sermon. Bro. Parsons is expected here this week, also Bro. Robley who is now preaching at Bridgeton, New Jersey; others of the ministry will likely be present. All kinds of talk seems to be afloat about us. Yesterday a woman brought me her old family Bible and at the close it gave a short sketch of all religious denominations and it truly gave all "Mormons" a hard name. It said we believed after we died we would turn into a God, and a whole lot of ignorant trash likely gotten up by some one whose mind was full of prejudice and who lacked a thing very essential to every public man, namely, good common sense. Another party near by was heard to say, "Oh yes, they are 'Mormons,' but they will not let them practice polygamy round here!" Another rumor has it that we do not have music in our church, and so it goes. We kindly invite them to come and let us tell our side of the story and many have promised to do so.

After all we ought not to condemn the people for looking down upon us as evil doers when we consider all that has been said falsely of us. Nearly every means of information that the people in general have by which to find out anything about us shamefully misrepresents us in every way, and the old adage is yet true, here as elsewhere, "Fongues will wag." Our services are usually very well attended, especially on Sunday evening. We have several willing helpers, among whom are Bro. Geo. E. Harrington, who is working here, Geo. H. Smith, H. H. Bacon and H. D. Angus, who is our up-to-date branch teacher. We also hold service at the homes of Saints at Germantown, where Bro. Bacon has faithfully held the fort for quite a long time; several seem to be somewhat interested.

We will likely hold a series of meetings following the opening of the church, which we trust will have a good effect on this new neighborhood. We trust that everything pertaining to our work may be duly executed with prudence, carefulness and wisdom, for behold, the eyes of this world are upon us; and we each one can be a great power either for good or evil, for success or failure. On which side of the balance are we to be found?

Brethren, pray for us that we may be blameless and harmless the sons of God without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation among whom ye shine as lights in the world; holding forth the word of life, that we may all rejoice in the day of Christ that we have not run in vain, neither labored in vain.

On duty,
WILL E. LA RUE.

BIRCH HARBOR, Me., Nov. 26.

Dear Ensign:—Over a year has passed away with all its changes; mistakes and results since I have written for publication in your columns. My time has been spent in Maine and Nova Scotia; I trust not without some good results to compensate for mistakes and lack of tact and wisdom. I am now at a point I left last June with a good interest and some near the kingdom. I find the interest still good and a number having joined the church under the ministrations of Elders W. W. Blanchard,

U. M. Kelley and I. M. Smith. The new members are getting along nicely, striving to live their religion, and numbers still investigating the work. There is something quite remarkable concerning the planting of the work here last winter and spring, the history of which will make a very interesting and profitable story when the proper time comes around to tell it.

Elder C. H. Rich is associated with me and we purpose standing right by the work in these neighborhoods as long as there is a demand for it, averaging six services a week; we are arranging for a Thanksgiving service at South Gouldsboro—a change from the ordinary preaching services. Before leaving Nova Scotia it was my happy privilege on the 30th day of October to unite in matrimonial bonds Sr. Lols A. Graham and Bro. Leander C. Johnson at Wentworth. In the evening was called to lead the Presbyterian prayer meeting by the general pastor, who assisted at the wedding. A few days later it was my sad duty to preach the funeral sermon of the departed Sr. Susan Fillmore, an aged sister whom all will greatly miss and of whom none, either saint or sinner, can say a reproachful word. Her life was above it. May all the Saints and neighbors take pattern by her example—living quietly and peaceably with no harm to say of any one, then hardness and strife will all disappear.

The Saints are striving to keep up regular meetings. Promptness and punctuality with patience goes a long way in the success of meetings and sometimes it takes even Saints a long time to learn that simple lesson.

Hoping and praying and working for the final triumph of the church, I am,
Yours in the faith,

H. J. DAVISON.

HUSTED, Colo., Nov. 11.

Editor Ensign:—It has been some time since I troubled your columns. This evening I feel like a man that has traded horses and got wonderfully beaten. I have been transferred from the south Missouri mission to the Colorado mission. Thus far the efforts I have made in this section are not very promising. We have made a few friends at Husted, where Sr. C. R. Duncan is teaching. Some seem to be carried away with our views on the future state. Most of the people out here are bitter and antagonistic to anything that savors of "Mormonism." They look upon Joseph Smith, Brigham Young and the Book of Mormon as frauds. I will relate the following experience as a sample of Colorado mission work.

I left Sr. Duncan's on my wheel this morning for the Edgerton school district about four miles below. I had a down hill push and in a few minutes halted the school master and found who the trustees were. I came first to Mr. Green's, who had gone to the city, but I had a pleasant conversation with Mrs. Green, who is English by birth. I left her a tract with the understanding that I represented the Reorganized Church of Christ. I proceeded to find Mr. McCuttings, who lived back in the hills. After considerable labor I stood in front of their door, featuring a big snarly dog. Being afraid to venture further, I yelled "hello" about a dozen times and finally succeeded in bringing an elderly woman to the door, who said in rather doubtful terms: "I don't think the dog will bite." I explained the object of my errand and learned that McCuttings was over to one of the neighbors'. Then I turned to continue my search. Found the gentleman alright working as a carpenter. Explained my business. He inquired what denomination? "Reorganized Church of Christ." I have no objections; will come to hear you if you preach. I thanked the gentleman, left him a tract and started down the ridge in search of Mr. Moon; but by this time I began to feel that the inward man needed some nourishment. Therefore I halted and in the lonely dells, where my eyes feasted on the beauty of nature, I dined on the dainty repast provided by loving hands, and quenched my thirst at the gurgling stream many feet below. The "man in the moon" was on my mind (and we are about 5,000 feet or more nearer that heavenly orb, than in the land of Zion).

The "moon" is hard to find sometimes, at least it was so in this case. I lost the trail and had to pull off my shoes and wade the ice water in the gorge below, carrying my wheel. To make a long story short, I finally reached Mr. Moon's, who had gone over to a neighbor's and wouldn't be back for about two hours. By invitation of his good wife, I entered the house, glad to rest from weary toil. We improved the time. The differences between our people and the Brighamites were discussed. I could see that prejudice was "hub" deep. They couldn't see why old Joe Smith was called to do such a wonderful work. Anathemas were hurled at this innocent man, and I simply tried to defend him as an honest man, for it is impossible to get people to believe he was a prophet if they believe him to be a rascal. The cyclopedia was brought from its hiding and the article on Joseph Smith read. I did nothing more but tear it to pieces with historical facts. It stated that Smith was killed on May 27th, that he had a revelation on polygamy, and that the Book of Mormon was a story spun by Smith and Rigdon out of the Spalding romance.

By the time I had explained these points, the Moon had arisen. I told the object of my mission. Mr. Moon is hard of hearing and I had to talk rather loud. He brought out the "cyclopedia" and read Smith's history. At this juncture I stood before Mr. Moon and preached a regular sermon. They couldn't see why we should object to the term Mormon, when we believed in the Book of Mormon. Mr. Moon finally told me he was not willing I should use the school house. I told him I would go and see Mr. Green and if he was favorable would announce meeting. His wife suggested that Mr. Moon send a note to Mr. Green stating his decision.

The note was written and placed in an envelope unsealed. I told Mr. Moon I would read this note before going. I should have said, by your permission. The note read as follows:

Mr. Green:—Mr. Baker, a Mormon preacher, called today and asked permission to use the school house. I am decidedly opposed to it. The rest of the board may do as they please.

Mr. Moon.

I handed this note to Mr. Moon and told him I wouldn't carry that note, as it was a misrepresentation. I bid them all good day. Mr. Moon thought I was going to see Mr. Green; therefore he saddled his horse and started alone. When I saw what he was going to do, I changed my course and started for Mr. Green's. Mr. Moon wanted to get there before I did and so I gave him a race. We both got there the same time. Mr. Green had not yet returned from the city. The case was laid before Mrs. Green, who heard us patiently. After Mr. Moon had gone I remained and talked with the lady some time. It made me late getting home, and I said in my heart "O God pity the Colorado missionaries." May the Lord bless his work more abundantly in other places. I am still in the faith.

In gospel bonds,

A. M. BAKER.

DELTA, Col., Dec. 2.

Editor Ensign:—Since last writing I have endeavored to "keep the camp fire blazing," by instructing the Saints in these parts and opening up some new places where there are no Saints, but where we hope there will be some day.

Owing to the ranchers in these parts being very busy, watering, haying, digging potatoes, etc., I found it impracticable to do much of week evenings, so I did what I could Sunday, and whenever opportunity offered, to get the Saints in these parts on a higher plane of action and right living.

There has been considerable advancement made in many of them, and most of them are now active in the work, and preaching, by example. Still some are loth to leave off their old careless habits and take hold and live the Christ life as they should. Wild oats are not all rooted out in a few days or months. This is one of the worst parts of God's moral vineyard for the "little foxes" (Sunday work, drinking, swearing, etc.) to destroy the vines.

I opened up the work in Gabbert, and also in Ridgeway, two new places where the people never heard a sermon delivered by our representatives before. I did not preach many sermons, but did considerable fireside preaching, and made a number of friends to the cause, who invited me back and told me not to want for a bed or a meal's victuals while in the neighborhood. At Ridgeway there are a number of members of the Utah church; they gave me the use of their hall to hold evening meetings in, but the dark nights and threatening storm prevented holding meeting but one evening. Three Utah elders were there to see to it that I did not capture any of their flock. I expect to return there again and take Bro. Kemp with me, if all goes well.

I made a trip with some of the Saints here, to the saw mill, some thirty-five miles southwest of Delta, for lumber for their new church building they contemplate erecting soon. We also viewed some timber land that they have taken up for the benefit of the church. It is fine timber. Bro. J. Kemp has just returned from home and the eastern part of the state, where he has been since the middle of August. He and I will hold meetings here this week and assist at the monthly meeting next Saturday and Sunday here, and then go down to Fruita, when we will begin active work for the winter.

Three precious souls were added to the church by baptism here of late. They were baptized by Bro. T. Park (priest), and confirmed yesterday by Bro. Kemp and myself. The Spirit shewed to me a few weeks ago that there would be several unite to the church, so I look for more to follow.

Our trip to Fruita is hastened some, owing to a letter received from Bro. Tomlinson urging me to come and baptize an excellent young man, whom I left investigating when there in the summer. So the good work goes on. We are not moving rapidly, but I believe our work, so far, has been effectual. We find plenty of places to preach, and we trust we will be able to fill them all.

Yours in the faith,

J. M. STUBBART.

HOLDEN, Mo., Nov. 27.

Dear Ensign:—President Hulmes came to Holden on the 26th inst., and held a short series of meetings. He came accompanied by the Spirit of the Master "to feed his sheep." Before he came I wondered what he could preach that had not been preached here; what new thought would be presented? In the first sermon I readily saw that the Lord knew who to place as president of this Stake, to look after and feed his sheep. And the sheep heard and recognized the voice of the Shepherd through this chosen servant. "And yet show I unto you a more excellent way," was made so plain that with one accord we were gladdened over the new ideas we gathered on the subject.

Number two was a direct appeal, presented in his own peculiar way, upon a higher living among his people. My heart swelled with gratitude and thanksgiving to our Father for the rich blessing of those precious truths, and of the fulfilling of his word. "He that is sent of God will teach the things of God," and the sweet testimony was like food to the hungry and drink to the thirsty. Then the sermon on the divine mission of Joseph Smith was very interesting. And last but not least the presentation was on consecration, as some desired it. The Saints came anxious to hear, some with pencil and tablet, and how grand it was. Another strong testimony of the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith. No man could concoct such a wondrous scheme that would bring about such satisfactory results to all parties. He so unlearned and his career cut short so early in years. When we examine the depth of those revelations given through him and carefully link together the many evidences on record, beside the many evidences given by the Holy Spirit to the thousands now living, of this marvelous work in these last days, we are led to exclaim, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

I am so glad that I am numbered among his people who have such a full knowledge of his work, with its purposes and far-reaching plans. Oh, that each of our lives may be replete with good works, each one helping in whatsoever place we are best qualified to fill for the best good to the cause entrusted with us. What are our petty trials, that overthrow us so quickly, compared with the great final results to be brought about through our faithfulness? Then who has time to sit down and study over wrongs, real or fancied? Getting darker and lower and deadlier, influencing those with whom we associate, while the weaker ones will partake, in a measure, of the darkening influence, thus helping on the cause of Satan, instead of the cause of Christ. Oh! had we not better arise in the strength of Israel's God? Come up higher and still higher. We see the necessity of it, why not do it? Nothing to lose by it, but much to be gained.

On Sunday the Saints voted to postpone the prayer meeting until 6 p. m., so that all those desiring to do so, might attend a temperance mass meeting, to be held at 3 p. m., at the Cumberland Presbyterian church, they having sent us a cordial invitation to attend; and another incentive to go was, Sr. Dora Young had been solicited to write and read a paper for the occasion, which was very good. About twenty-five of our members were present. Pres. Hulmes was called upon to open with prayer; also when a couple of votes were called for in behalf of the temperance cause, with one accord each Latter Day Saint arose. I must say I felt justly proud of them. I have lived in Holden for over one year; I love the place for a home, and the Saints are very near and dear to me, and a good people. I want to live out my days with them here, and then enjoy eternity with them.

Bro. Devore has been absent since the middle of May, and expects to continue in his field of labor until March. While the sacrifice is great, we are happy in the thought that it is made for the work of the Lord, which is so dear to us both; and we strengthen each other's hands and smooth our pathway through the blessing obtained through the mail facilities.

We have a good set of officers in this branch, all are trying to fill their office and calling and manifest an earnest desire for the welfare of the Saints. We have much to be thankful for, and the closing up of Thanksgiving day will be a supper for the entire branch, at the home of Sr. Allen, where the willing hearts and hands of the sisters will have prepared it, and the willing hands of the brethren and boys will leave a ten cent piece in the hand of the treasurer for purposes not wholly decided yet.

Happy in being a co-laborer in this glorious work.

ELLA R. DEVORE.

PLEASANT VIEW, Kan., Nov. 25.

Editor Ensign:—This leaves me busily engaged in this great latter day work; I am holding meetings at this place with fine interest. Just closed another debate at Hiawasse, Arkansas, with one J. T. Hinds, a nice man, which is an exception among the Campbellite people; large crowds and intense interest, about five or six hundred people to hear it; a new place where the gospel had never been preached. I hope much good will result from it.

My debate at Fairland, Indian Territory, with D. B. Bay, was a great success for truth. Debates are all right when necessary and demanded. I get plenty of them without urging them on the people. The gospel stirs them up and they want to debate; we can depend on what we teach and I am glad we have a sound theology that will stand the test against every thing; but I would not affirm that all mankind will be saved, because it cannot be proven by the three books which we claim to believe and teach; one class have not one ray of hope or promise, in fact, none but the people of God, those who hear and obey the gospel, will be saved with a full and complete salvation, and I don't want the moon or stars. The three books teach there is a hell and the wicked will go there, and Christ taught, Fear not those who can kill the body, but to fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. The gospel pure and simple is what the people need, and not mix universalism and adventism with it. Better preach the gospel and leave judgment with God until we learn sense enough to handle such things. The Lord tells us to preach repentance to this generation. Let us pray that the Spirit may guide us into all truth.

In bonds,

HARTINGTON, Neb., Dec. 6.

Editor Ensign:—It has been a long time since I wrote to your columns, so I thought it was not amiss to write from this part of the Lord's vineyard, and inform the readers of the Ensign that the missionaries in these parts are hard at work, trying to get people to live in the light of freedom and not under "the yoke of bondage."

Since June 1st I have held ten series of services, and have been sustained by the omnipotent One, as well as the prayers and assistance of the faithful in Christ. I am at the present time in company with Bro. James Huff and we have a fine interest. Hope to continue in the conflict until victory is won. We have baptized several this season, and others are near the kingdom at this place as well as several other places I have labored this year.

I find this field a pleasant place to labor, although we face difficulties occasionally, but we expect that until tears and sighing, trouble and worry is over and peace reign supreme.

So let us labor on.
"Till blessings crown our efforts with a crown,
And peace our steps attend."

ZION'S ENSIGN.

OUR FUTURE HOPE.

Sermon delivered at the Washington Park, Hamilton, near Independence, Missouri, Sunday P. M., September 2, 1900, by Elder Columbus Scott.

We have reached the concluding service of the reunion for this place this year. A variety of topics have been discussed by the brethren who have delivered the word; joy and gladness have filled the hearts of the people as they worshipped before the Lord in the reunion. I believe that the question of our hope and expectation with regard to the future as set forth in the promises of God found in the divine revelations would perhaps be appropriate at this concluding service.

These reunions are but little primary gatherings pointing us forward to a great re-union expected to be realized in the sweet by and by. The circumstances by which we are to be surrounded will be somewhat different there to what they are here. We find that circumstances here are continually changing. Things are not always what they seem, and with time pleasures are fleeting, and many times that which we think is pleasure is but dissipation. It is only in that which brings joy and consolation to the heart, and that brings glory and power to the mind in knowledge and wisdom and of that character that shall abide, do we find enduring peace and joy.

We cannot bring these conditions around without the interposition of the Divine hand; and the great Father of all sent his Son into the world to tell us the truth with regard to how we should live here in this world, and what we should realize in the world to come, provided we would abide to the end faithfully the conditions laid down in the Divine record, many of which have been so ably presented during this reunion as found set forth in the Divine revelations.

In this reunion, this service is typical of the time at which we have arrived in the world's history. There is an expression found in the book of Daniel used by the angel of the Lord referring to these days in which we live, and from now on until the second coming of Christ, called the "time of the end." Tonight is the time of the end of this reunion. We anticipate a reunion on the other side, though it may have an ending, yet its ending will not be like this one in many regards. Those who are so fortunate as to reach a place with the redeemed of God on the other side when the time comes for the reunion to end, will not say, "I will meet you here next year, or I hope to meet you in the near future, at the reunion provided we are alive;" that provision will not be necessary to be found there; those who reach that side will be blessed and can leave that expression out. I will meet you in the reunion over there in the city of Zion or over in Jerusalem, or some other appointed place when the time arrives. This idea "If we live" will then be a thing of the past. Jesus says, "When the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, then shall he reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 16:27.

This is a strange doctrine to the world in this age. "Though the world is filled with Bibles, though the missionaries are numerous; notwithstanding churches are being established in the various civilized nations of the earth, yet the doctrine announced in this text, is a strange doctrine. The world at large does not contemplate it that way. They contemplate, many of them, that our judgment is going on now; that when we come to lay the armor down and pass beyond the veil that hides the invisible from us, that then we enter into our reward either happiness or woe. I am glad, however, that the Savior and the Scriptures teach another idea, one more consistent with the character of God; one more in harmony with the Savior, who is the same, yesterday, today and forever; one that accords with the idea of the infinite justice of God. I can say infinite justice or justice at least, and can conceive it to be infinite justice that all the Lord's children shall be permitted to enter into their reward at the same time.

I can hardly see the righteousness of the thought on the one hand that a Cain who was a murderer should have passed from the world nearly six thousand years ago into an immediate and full recompense for his wrong doing, and then another man six thousand years later, guilty of the same wrong should have six thousand years less of recompense than Cain, can you? I can hardly see why it would be just or just righteousness that Abel should have gone on to his full reward six thousand years ago, while the humble, persecuted tried people of God who should pass on six thousand years afterward, should have six thousand years less of glory and peace, and of crown and bliss than the other one, can you?

My text announces that when the Son of Man comes he shall reward every one according to his works. That is a beautiful thought, all children of the one Father by the same principles of adoption, brethren of the one Savior. There is a time coming when he will enter in upon the probation of that law and will deal out the rewards to his faithful ones—when he comes—that is a beautiful thought.

Now in the revelation of St. John after the Lord had returned to the Father, and been there for a long time, several years, he said to this weary, tried, persecuted apostle, banished for the word of God, from the cheer and companionship of his brethren here in the world, he comforted him with the thought, "Behold I come quickly and my reward is with me to give to every man according as his works shall be."—Rev. 22:12. Not only will he bless his children in the possession of the reward at the same time, but there seems to be such a beautiful uniqueness and such an exalted conception of justice in the expression, "Reward every man according to his works." Why numbers of people in this age of the world think that we do not have to work to be saved. Just ask the Lord to save us and we will be saved. They forget that the New Testament as a book opens with the instruction, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father." "Let your light so shine before men that they, seeing your good works may be constrained to glorify your Father which is in heaven;" and all along through the biographies of Christ and the acts of the apostles, the epistles of Paul, and James, and Jude, and of John, until we get away down toward the closing sentences of the New Testament, and still it holds forth that men will be judged according to their works.

That is the beautiful thought. The works that God hath enjoined, the works that he hath required under the gospel of Jesus Christ, and it closes almost with these words, "Blessed and holy are they that do his commandments." We are to do and keep on doing and working, toiling and laboring, "That they may have right to the tree of life and enter through the gates into the city."—Rev. 22:14. We start out by doing. We travel all the way along by doing, and we have a right only by virtue of doing God's commandments, to enter through the gates into the beautiful city by and by. I wonder where this reward will be. We have learned that it will be when Christ comes, so far as the time is concerned. We learn further that it will be according to our works so far as the glory and the degree of reward is concerned. Where will it be?

Is there anything to indicate that our salvation is nearer than when we believed? Will the child of the father who falls asleep today and is buried in the grave yard, have to lie there now for eighteen or nineteen hundred years longer, like Paul and others may have waited? I hardly think so, my friends. For I look out on the world and find the world's heart set on the things of the world more than on the things of God. I am reminded that it is the evening, that the end is approaching. It is to be as in the days of Noah, eating, drinking, marrying and being given in marriage, building, selling. Not that these things governed by the bounds and conditions of the law, in themselves, are wrong, but that the world is so given to these things that they have no time to serve God. There is the difficulty. For indeed we are told by the judge upon the bench, also the learned statisticians like Mulhall of England, or others, that evil is increasing in the world, that wickedness reigns more supreme, that the liquor association largely controls; that while it is plain that the Christian Endeavor Society is increasing, the Epworth League is increasing, and claim that the Young People's Baptist Society is increasing, I notice that the manufacture of liquor is not decreasing; the number of saloons is not decreasing, the number of criminals not decreasing, and it is a strange thing that both are increasing and yet all these societies claim to oppose liquor and saloons. How do you account for it? If you tell me, as the others do, that evil is increasing in the land. I tell you that the Bible states that in the end the transgression of the earth shall be heavy upon it, as is expressed by the great evangelical prophet Isaiah in the 25th chapter of his book; looking down to our day.

If you tell me that the people are aroused to the dangers that beset the lives of men today by the famine, the pestilences, the war, the plague and by the roaring tornado, and the blighting, withering, curling, twisting cyclone, I answer again, It is simply a fulfillment of prophecy in the language of Isaiah: "Fear and the pit and the snare are upon thee, O inhabitants of the earth," and I ask the question, How are we going to escape? The answer in the language of the prophet is, "He who flees from the noise of the fear shall fall in to the pit: and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare." It is no use to run away from Missouri or Kansas to California to get away from the cyclone, you cannot do it, is the idea.

Joel (3:16) looked forward to this day and says, "The Lord will be the hope of his people and the strength of the children of Israel," so the Lord is the only hope of the children of men. If you tell me that these things are so, they tell me the end of the world is near, then sir, I tell you that these are signs of the coming of the Lord in glory.

Sometimes men say, "I guess we will have a change in circumstances. Times will grow better. We have a class of financiers that are coming up in the world, known as the Jews, they are taking hold of the reins financially of the world; that in the great parade they occupy the front chariot with the lines in hand. I presume they will administer things alright." I want to tell you that the Bible in general terms teaches that about the time of the end of their captivity to the gentiles they are to come to the front; that their countenance would grow ruddy, that their wealth would be made to appear, and that that is the sign of the near coming, the approach of the end of the world. Sometimes people who have not investigated along these lines do not know what you mean by the end of the world. They imagine the earth is to be blotted out, the sun and moon and stars to fade away and this world to disappear. Such is not the Bible idea, such is not the idea that the Latter Day Saints, so far as I have heard them express it, entertain upon this point. Jesus once came as a little child; he is yet to come arrayed in glory. He once came a servant of all; he comes this time to be served of all. He came once as a lamb to be slain for men; he comes this time the lion of the tribe of Judah. He came once to wear the crown of thorns, but he comes crowned with glory, power, honor and majesty. He came once wearing the swaddling bands of the infant, but he comes the next time wearing as his garments the Clouds of glory from heaven. He came once to be offered as an offering; he comes now to receive the offerings of the nations of the earth and their homage. He will come as they sang in the beautiful anthem, "The King of Kings and Lord of Lords."

Ah, but says one, "Don't you think that when the Saints die, they will pass on to heaven and stay there forever, and when the wicked die they will go down to that warm country we have heard about and stay there?" What will be the use of the earth? We won't need it, sun, moon nor stars. Well, Abraham understood differently from that. God told Abraham that he was his friend and he made Abraham the father of the faithful. God is the Father of the faithful and so is Abraham. How is that, we have two fathers? Yes, by adoption. Christ came, the seed of Abraham according to the flesh, and when one is adopted into Christ, he is Abraham's heir; and when you are adopted into Christ, you are the heir of God and God's son, by the Spirit, while he is called the Son of man because of the flesh. So we read, "You are all the children of God by faith." Notice it. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, and if you are Christ's then are you Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3:27-29. To what is Abraham heir? In the 4th chapter of the Roman letter Paul tells us that Abraham is the heir of the world. He has a special lot over on the eastern continent and his children, the literal children, are getting ready to go back and inhabit it.

You read of four wonderful conventions and reunions that they have had, one in London lately, the question of going back is settled; the question of being a government there in Palestine is settled; the only question is, how to carry out and fulfill, accomplish the work. You read it in all the papers as "Zionism."

That is a strange thing, too, that right here in our day, while the Lord has set his hand to establish the mountain of his house religiously, in a gospel sense, and the elders have been preaching for the last seventy years that Israel would go back, somehow or other every heart has been fired, their intellect touched, their ambition stirred as if by super-natural power and light, and they have caught the spirit of going back to the father-land. It is peculiar, isn't it? And as you notice some of the nations of the earth dying, like some of the little republics in South America, like Spain, like Turkey and even like China, it indicates that the times of the gentiles' ending is upon us and the reign of the Jew is about to come in; and it is the harbinger of the bright day when the Son of man shall come in glory to reward every man according as his works shall be.

It is a lovely thought. We can form conceptions of it. We can foresee its gradual development; we can anticipate it. God gave a law over there to Abraham and through David tells of Abraham that God gave it to him when he could affirm by no greater, he affirmed it by himself; gave a lot to Abraham by an everlasting covenant, renewed it with Isaac, confirmed it to Jacob with an oath and that it was given to him "to a thousand generations." One generation today is thirty-one or thirty-two years, and a thousand of such generations would not be a short period would it? Six thousand years would not nearly fill the bill. That is in the 105th Psalm of David, it is to be realized through Christ, through his coming, through the glory of the development of his kingdom on the other side.

Hold I will say is prepared: "Behold I will send my messenger and he shall prepare the way before me." That messenger, to your speaker's mind embodies the gospel and its ministry, and when they shall have prepared the way, "the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple." I admit that on the one hand, of the world, the outlook is dark. Watchman, what of the night? The night cometh and also the morning; and while to the world it is increasing evil, it is loss of credit as with some of the nations, its despondent future betokens a night, yet the word is that while it shall be light the night cometh and also the morning. We believe that the gospel restored marks the rising of the day star indicated by the apostle Peter in his prophecy; and when the day star appears, soon the world's sun of righteousness will be seen reflecting his beams over the world, that the day of glory and of rest is at hand.

There seems to be material evidence of this to the close thinker, it hardly needs argument. All we may need to do is to mention the facts, call attention to the prophecies foreshadowing the facts and it is enough. The world is moving at a speed rapidly, beyond comparison with any period of its past in the aggregation and accomplishment of great events in the world. Men are endeavoring to bar against danger by scientific development, but the more science they get the more danger they create. And it will not be beyond the strength of the marvelous and even the field and region of facts or truth when we can see the electric wires so numerous in the world, the telephone wires and the telegraph wires erected in the atmosphere, so that about the right time the Almighty will touch one of these buttons and set the elements on fire and bring about the time predicted by Peter when he said that the day comes in which the elements being on fire shall be dissolved and melt with fervent heat and the earth also. It will melt to some extent also, and the corruptible things there shall be burned up, in order to prepare the world for the inheritance of the children of Abraham.

Sometimes men have to be met in discussion in order to the accomplishment of good, because they will not be counseled; they will not think, they will not take hold of the facts of the problem of their redemption. And when they stand up in their mighty efforts against the purposes of God, God's purposes go right along. It will injure the work of God and his purposes in the ultimate no more than your butting your head against Gibraltar will hurt that rock! God's purposes will never be moved, and if we are in the way, we will be moved out. Such has been the history of the past, such continues to be the history of it, until the grand purposes of God are accomplished.

It seems to me then, it is reasonably more in harmony with God's purposes to conclude that God will let the earth remain, cleanse it, winnow his floor, gather the wheat into his granary and burn the chaff and the tares with unquenchable fire, so as to clear the way for the inheritance of the people of God. So when Jesus comes, what is the reward? He will reward everyone according to his works. "Those who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for honor and glory; immortality and eternal life" are promised, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." "Behold, I show you a mystery, we shall not all sleep." That is, not all God's children shall be asleep in the grave when Christ comes, but he says, "We shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the sound of the last trump." I can conceive it no more unreasonable that God should raise my body up and change it from mortality to immortality; power to exist seventy millions of years, than to give me a body to exist seventy years, no more unreasonable the one to me than the other. The power is there to do it, and where the knowledge, infinite knowledge is, there is the power.

Men accomplish miracles in a sense, in the scientific world because of their knowledge; and the resurrection of the dead is an easy thing for the Almighty. Was there ever a man resurrected? I want to make an appeal for two minutes to the man or woman here doubting the resurrection tonight. Robert G. Ingersoll and others of like thinking say that Jesus Christ was here in the land of Judea nineteen hundred years ago and a little less. I believe it too. You believe that Pilate was governor there. So do I. You believe that Pilate represented the whole iron Roman world with all that that means? So do I, it meant armies, it meant power and authority, it meant money, and when the word went out, it meant fiat, unchangeable. Christ before Pilate went into the halls of justice, you believe? So do I. Pilate permitted the Savior to be slain. You believe? So do I. You believe that he was permitted to be laid in the tomb? So do I.

You believe that a great rock was rolled to the door of that tomb? So do I. You believe that that rock had a seal placed upon it, indicating that if any man attempted to break that seal and move that rock the Roman Empire was upon him? And so do I. You believe that the great Roman guard were placed around that tomb's door? And so do I. You believe that Jesus predicted that He would be resurrected the third day, and so do I. You say he was not resurrected. I believe he was. There your faith ends, mine goes on. Why did not Pilate, who had all this power command on the third day, "open that seal," and say to the soldiers, "Bring that body out here, show it, dead, to these fanatical followers of this Nazarine?" Yes, you believe you would have done that, and so do I. Why did not the Pharisees and the scribes, with Pilate, combined, do that? Why was it not done? It would have been the easiest thing in the world to do; it would have been the most natural thing for a man not of the christian faith to have done; why was it not done? Ah, my friend, there was a power greater than Pilate's, greater than the Roman government, that power that upholds the universe, that power that is the source of life, the source of all intelligence, the source of all light, the source of all law and authority.

It is more reasonable to believe, to my mind, that there is an infinite mind like that with knowledge and power, than to believe in this puny doctrine that the universe, with all of its thought and intelligence and science and power and law, all sprang out of absolute opposite of all intelligence as by the so called scientific statement of evolution is taught. The idea that all thought came from the abyss of the absolute emptiness of intelligence, that the world of wisdom came from the bottomless pit of absolute wisdom; that the intelligent universe filled with law sprang from chance, is contrary to your common sense and experience of every legislature thinker, every government maker in the world—just the opposite of it. There is not a line of experience by which that doctrine of evolution can be demonstrated.

Isaiah saw this day; he saw this evolutionary thought as it exists in the minds of men, and he said, "The wisdom of your wise men shall perish and the understanding of your prudent men shall be hid, for shall the thing framed (the universe) say of him that framed it, he had no understanding? Shall the thing created, say of him that created it, he possess not knowledge?" is the sense of the language in the 29th chapter of Isaiah. Isaiah said that thought would be necessary to be met in the development of the marvelous work and a wonder in these latter days. Isn't that a little peculiar, too? Think about it. Ah, my friends, that governor of the universe, this infinitely wise, knowing and infinitely powerful God has planned for the bringing about of these glorious purposes. We do not want to step too far into eternity. The coming of the Lord draweth nigh. James said in the day when men would "heap unto themselves treasures-for the last days," gather them into great corporations, the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. They are getting these heaped together. There is no dream about that. You did not merely dream of it last night. You see it in the world. James predicted it, and he says that at that time, the coming of the Lord draweth nigh; and when the Savior comes and the bodies of the Saints are changed, the righteous dead brought from the graves by the power of the resurrection through the glory of the Lamb, and the living Saints are changed from mortality to immortality, when God shall cause mortality to pass out of the body, from the bones and sinews and capillaries; and nerves and veins and arteries, and, when understood, even the blood will pass out; God will put enough of the Holy Ghost in the body, causing it to pulsate from the heart, change it to a spiritual body. This mortal body put on immortality; this corruptible body put on incorruption; this body vile, changed into the likeness and image of Christ's glorious body and the spirit come back into it with powers to grow and expand to dig into the earth and read it as an open book geologically; to soar into the heavens where the multitudes of heavenly bodies are, and visit their realms and measure the distances of the stars.

Capabilities of this kind will be possessed by the mind, with tongues immortal, with spirits glorified, sanctified, and purified by trial, by obedience, by discipline as we have it here in the gospel. Do not forget the beautiful impressions and the powerful evidences of this reunion when you leave here; do not stop praying and do not cease your labors, move right on more energetically than ever. Grow in your qualifications; seek wisdom, knowledge, and understanding. We will need it all. Ah, when the Savior shall come and Zion and Jerusalem, the palace royal, shall grace fair earth renewed, when the vine and the olive shall be reset, when the people shall build and another not inhabit, when they will bring gold as the dust, and silver in multitude, and make iron as stones, the materials will be there with which to build, that will endure for the thousand years, and that is a matter of prophecy too, and Jesus reigns as King of kings and Lord of lords, and rebuke many strong nations and give his people peace and rest.

Ah, indeed, as we go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, to the palace royal, the beautiful songs of the anthem, the development and the harmony of the voice, it is only just a little foretaste of the voice of mighty thunderings of the little trump, or shadow of it, the mere echo of it; you get here from the sounding board, in the park across the way, when the band plays for you. The Christ that will sing, the enraptured strains of music that will thrill the heavens and invite the Spirit's power unto us in an infinite degree and develop the powers. I was born a lover of music, but I want to get a thousand times its depth of the present time, and there will be lots of time to do it, thank the Lord, on the other side.

These, to me, become realities. Then will be the day of the reunions; then will be the time to recount, and we will hear Abraham, and Isaac and Jacob get up and bear their testimony and speak of the goodness of God to them, and tell what he had done in their day; and Daniel will speak and describe the angel that went and stood by him and said to the lions, "Cease your roarings and let your peace abide. My servant is in mine hand." The three children who went through the fire and came out without the smell of fire on their garments, will tell of that experience. To me these are going to be realities. The possibilities of it are seen in the demonstrations of the present and its very developments as we pass along, does it not?

Then is not that a hope worth striving for? You expect to be there. When you think about it sometimes and speak about it, does not the Spirit bear testimony to you of it? Then they will sing and really experience the song, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord, our feet shall stand within thy gates. Oh Jerusalem." Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together. No wonder David said, "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem, they shall prosper that love thee." No wonder the inspiration that touched the harp of the prophet bard in the olden times when he was looking toward this time of its realization as you and I look forward to it, touches your heart in confirmation of its testimony; and sometimes when that Spirit is upon you, the resurrection of the dead would seem but a light thing for the Omnipotent power, who dwells in the midst of eternity, to accomplish.

We cannot magnify this hope too greatly. We cannot speak of it in too wondrous strains. Oh, that it may be impressed upon our every heart and mind, that when we get off in the busy city, absorbed in business of the world, let us not forget God. Let us remember that the time will come when it will be said, "Come my people, enter into thy chamber; shut thy doors about thee for a little moment until the indignation be overpast." We want to be ready. If I cannot live in this mortal state until the Savior comes, I want to hear the voice of the trump of the arch-angel, and in my spirit, that I trust in that condition shall rest in the paradise of God, will come back and take its body, this new body, brought up and regenerated and immortalized when the Savior shall come and enter in upon this reign of peace and rest and glory.

That we may be there without the loss of one, I appeal now: As

I feel to sorrow for my fellow-man, as you grieve in your heart for them; though the Spirit may be with you at the time and you contemplate this promise, ah, if my friend is not there, and I am so fortunate as to be there, my brother or sister that I have known, or any that I may learn of, it seems to me that I shall feel sad on the other side. We have not any to lose. Father and mother never can afford to lose any child from the family, however numerous. So with the heart of the child of God. You will be there and I will be there, and we will have brilliant conceptions, & we will be rejoicing in the midst of glory, power and love, that shall be committed to us, because Jesus said, "You have been faithful over a few things, I will make you ruler over many."

But in that day, where will appear the Saint that has fallen by the way and forgotten his obligations and grown weary? Where will the unconcerned man and woman be who have let their opportunities go by? Ponder upon these things. May we be impressed with them. The day hasteneth, the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, the glory is soon to be revealed. Our light afflictions which are but for a moment, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Don't you want to be in that new earth wherein dwells righteousness, as Peter expected? Don't you want to be in the kingdom, when the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens shall be given to the people of the Saints of the Most High? Not a few persons only, but the Saints, from the Ancient of Days, Father Adam, right on down to the last son and daughter that will be redeemed who chooses to be. Ah, all the Saints will then be placed in possession of the promised glory, power, rest and peace and life, never to pass away. I want to be there. I now expect to be there. I do not want any power to come between me and God to hinder my being there, and I am so earnest about it, that I want to feel so humble before you tonight in my mind and heart, that I want every good, faithful Latter Day Saint when you pray and my name comes before you, ask the Father to help me to meet you on the other side.

Address of Pres. Joseph Smith

Delivered to the General Conference, Independence, Missouri, on Friday, April 19, 1901.

I may not have another opportunity to address all of you, as some of you are proposing to leave. I hesitate somewhat in attempting to address or instruct those who are engaged in the ministerial field, as I myself have never been an itinerant missionary, though I have done some preaching away from home.

The questions that are agitating our minds in regard to salvation and the church and its establishment and its continuation, are, as a matter of course, matters vital to us; and it ought not to be necessary for me to call attention to this one factor, in the contest that is waging; that is this: that the personal conduct in dress and in speech and in pulpit—the actions of the representatives of our faith, are taken cognizance of by those to whom we preach; and carelessness of statement, carelessness of speech, uncleanness of person, carelessness of conversation, are taken into account in the makeup of the minister in the effect that he has upon the people to whom he addresses himself; and it behooves every man that represents the church to strive to make his representation the fairest, the most honorable and the cleanest that he possibly can under any and all circumstances.

Another important factor is that the elder and minister ought not to be a tale-bearer; he ought not to listen to, nor retail what may be said in regard to a fellow-minister, either in the same field or in another field, whether a near or a remote one; and I trust that we shall take it into consideration that we are considerate of each other's feelings and observe the proper courtesies as between brethren in the field.

There is an important mission for us to fill in this religious conflict. The position that we occupy is a unique one. No other elders or ministers who are abroad occupy a similar field to the one that we do. We are not advocates of the plenary inspiration of the Bible, and yet we are expected to maintain the Bible as against criticisms made by unbelievers. We are not atheists, and yet we have to contend against what we hold to be an improper understanding of the God-head, and sometimes get the reputation of lessening the character of God by making him like unto a mortal man. We are not extremists, and yet we have to stand against a great amount of superstition and dogmatism that are in the world. It makes a kind of three-cornered fight.

We deny the successive authority received from the original church, and hold that all who have been teaching can trace their authority only back a certain distance, and that they all stand on the same level. Fortunately for us, to a certain extent, this thought is being impressed upon the world here and there in this religious controversy; but we stand for the restoration of authority, through the ministrations of an angel. It subjects us to the charge of being superstitious, of being credulous, of being fanatical. Now it behooves us to prove to the world and those among whom our labors lie, that we are not fanatical, that we are not superstitious, but that we are open to such inspiration as God may give from the heavens to us as individuals. And it behooves us not to be afraid that our position may be over-turned. I know something about the character of you men as a rule in this regard. The same spirit that makes you maintain your position here among your brethren, when you go out into the field makes you specially antagonistic to what you do not approve of there. But there is a way of meeting these exigencies that frequently turns inquiry from us. There is a method of inviting men to come to Christ which wins their confidence and their esteem; it is far better for us to adopt this under the philosophy that the Savior instituted or gave voice to when he said, "And I, if I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me." It is far better to draw men than to drive them.

We have been for some little time, and are still being recognized as strongly antagonistic to doctrines that have grown up under the appellation of Mormonism, with which the world especially has confounded us in the days that are past; and now in almost every place the difference is being strongly emphasized. While we are thus showing this attitude, we ought to be careful to remember that up to a certain distance we believe alike. Now it is not right for us to say that we have nothing in common with them, for that is not true. We have a great deal in common with them, as we have with the rest of the religious world. We have something in common with the Methodists; we have something in common with the Baptists; we have something in common with the Christians, and something in common with the Catholics, for we believe in authority as they do. We believe that there should be a place where men may be able to say authoritatively in these days, as servants of Christ, thus: "It is and thus it shall be; and we as a people having accepted that, while we do not believe in infallibility, we concede the fact that Christ has and does command his church or his people, and that his command when received by us is our rule of conduct. Now just as closely as we follow that, we have every right to anticipate that he will stand by us in the conflict; but wherever we depart from it, we understand that we cannot bind him. I think we ought to all understand that.

Personally, I have no conflict with man as an individual. I accept the statement made by the Apostle Paul, that our weapons are spiritual, not carnal, and that we are engaged in a spiritual conflict; and we ought to stand by our principles and the rules that we have ourselves subscribed to, under which we are laboring. One thing that must surely result to us if we do not, is precisely what occurred to the Apostle Paul when he said that he consented to the law that it was good, and by the law he died. Sin revived and he died, simply because he admitted that the commandment of God was good. Now this may happen to us.

Another thing: a great many of us are intensely anxious to have realized, while we are connected with the work and living, that incoming of such a spirit of unification as will unite all classes of believers in the angelic message, and what is known as the Book of Mormon. A great many of us can echo the statement made by Elder Hill the other night, "How long, how long shall be this continued division and separation?" Now, I can predict, without any appeal to what may be said to be divine, that there never will come a unification unless there is a mutual willingness to concede something. If either or all parties insist upon the rigid application of their own rules and their own declarations or professions of faith, you can calculate that we will always be far apart—always.

I understand that the revelation that was given in Kirtland, Ohio, some years ago, indicated that we were not to be over-careful about receiving those of other factions: evidently fore-shadowing the thought that there might come a time when some portion of these would desire to unite. Now, I do not want anybody to suppose that I anticipate or expect to compromise a vital principle for the sake of numbers. I admit, just as frankly as Elder Hill stated it, that righteousness does not go by numbers; and we cannot always tell and count on those who accepted of God because they are more numerous than any other party may be; but the recognition that we receive from the Spirit, whether we be few or many, indicates whom he will receive sooner or later, and our labor should be to so continue to serve Christ, that when the time of our probation shall have ended, when we lay down our ministry, we shall do so, confident that when the time shall come that we shall stand in the presence of the Judge, that he whom we recognize now as our Prince, the captain of our salvation, will simply say to him who sits upon the throne, "These are mine," and will claim that we be exempted from punishment.

It behooves us as individuals, as ministers, as citizens, both of the state and of what we understand to be the kingdom, to live upright, cheerful, attentive, honest lives before God and before men; and credit every man and woman with whom our lives are associated, with being just as honest and having motives just as good as we ourselves have. It seems to me that if we will do this, it will remove the mist and the pain of suspicion that frequently interferes and prevents a proper association of co-laborers in the ministry. Let us do just what the Spirit has enjoined upon us to do time after time, and that is to "stand together."

Some of you may remember that some fifteen or twenty years ago, I prophesied that the adversary would seek to bring dissension into the body through making a division among the eldership. How many of you are not willing to say that I prophesied straight? I guess the most of you that have been in the field any length of time are willing to concede that that prophecy is true; but I do not want you brethren to be afraid of me, for all that. I simply foresaw it.

Personally, speaking for myself, I believe that that revelation given in 1834, after the people had been driven from this part of Missouri, is in force —to gather in the regions round about, as many in one place as is consistent with the feelings of the people—and try to live upright, consistent lives, commending ourselves to the citizens of the state wherever we may be, and continuing to do that until the Master tells us to do something else, then we can accomplish what he bids us to do. A great many things may be thought of and may appear very nice when presented by a good talker, and a man of good brain and fluent speech; but sometimes some of these speculations are not good, so that we have to be very careful about it. I once stated that I would sooner be sectarian and right, than to be non-sectarian and wrong. Not all things that are sectarian are bad, by a great deal.

I have a compliment for the people of this place here, uttered by a minister of this town, that to me was very grateful when I heard it. He said to me in the presence of another, "I wish our people were as faithful as yours," and stated further that in conversation with other ministers in the place, they had expressed a concurrence of opinion that they wished that their members were as earnest and faithful as the Latter Day Saints. Now, see to it, my brethren, that neither here nor anywhere else, there shall ever be any other record than that. That we are not only earnest and faithful, but that we are also honest. Let me tell you one of the finest things this world can show is a manly man, against whom the law of the land, nor the law of God, has condemnation. A man who so lives that neither in the statute books of man, nor the statute books of God, is a line written for his condemnation; that is a free man.

I thank you, brethren, for the kindness with which you have sustained me as your presiding officer during the Conference. I hope to continue to merit, while my faculties shall last good, the confidence of the brethren, and I say unto you as men, if anything occurs by which that confidence may seem to be shaken, if you will come to me, I will try to make the wrong that I may have done you right; and I am approachable, I believe, to every man in the church.

Some Interesting Facts About Boiling Water.

It may seem presumptuous to suggest that few people know how to boil water, but such is the case. The boiling point under ordinary atmospheric pressure (sea level) is 212 degrees Fahrenheit; this point changes according to the altitude. When bubbles form on the bottom of the kettle, come clear to the surface and rupture quietly, without making an ebullition, we have simmering. At this point the thermometer should register 180 degrees Fahrenheit, and it is at this temperature that we cook meats and make soups. When the bubbles begin to form on the sides and surface of the vessel and come toward the top of the water, there is a motion in the water, but it has not really reached the boiling point. It is only when the thermometer reaches 212 degrees Fahrenheit and the water is in rapid motion that it can be said to boil; and the atmospheric gases still continue to be given off with the steam for a considerable time after the water has commenced to boil rapidly; in fact, it is difficult to determine when the last traces have been expelled. It is safe to suppose, however, that ten minutes' boiling will free the water from its gases, make it tasteless, and render it unfit for the making of tea, coffee or other light infusions of delicate materials.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer in the December Ladies' Home Journal.

CANCER A CURABLE DISEASE.

Many people have an idea that cancer is incurable, but we have over 150 original and recent testimonials of cures of actual cancer, the sufferers having taken 8 to 24 bottles of the famous B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) which is meant to 'cure old obstinate blood and skin troubles. B. B. B. kills the cancer poison in the blood and the sores quickly heal. No cutting required. Among others cured was Mrs. M. L. Adams, of Fredonia, Alabama. Had an eating cancer, the bones of her nose and upper part of her mouth entirely eaten out. DAUGHTERS OF ZION

"OUR AIM, MANHOLD TO BLESS."
MRS. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers, and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "manhold to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

"Fireside Talks With Our Girls."

Dear Sisters:—Have you sent in your order yet for one of these books? If not, we trust you will see your way clear to do so as soon as possible. Some time since one sister wrote that when the book was ready for sale she wished several numbers to be used as Christmas presents. Now is the best time to order for this purpose. Send in your orders to the Herald Publishing House, Lock Box B, Lamoni, Decatur Co., Iowa. Price of limp cloth binding, 30 cents; paper covers, 20 cents.

LISTEN, GIRLS!

I am not going to "preach" to you myself, dear girls, I am only going to tell you some reasons why you should listen and heed when others do so.

I know you get dreadful tired of being talked to "for your own good," and are apt to imagine that the person who finds fault with you when you only want to have a good time, is fussy, and does not want the young folks to enjoy themselves. Perhaps some of us older ones are a little too particular once in a while, but girls, you do not always realize the kindness, and true desire for your welfare which prompts advice. There is so much of evil in the world, and older ones see this so much more plainly than you can, by reason of their experience, and so feel prompted to put you on your guard against it; but to the young all things seem innocent, and it is hard for them to understand why they should not do as others do and get all the fun out of life they can.

Dear girls, you cannot know till you are older, how the heart of the woman who has passed girlhood's sweet years, yearns over you, and longs, by means of her knowledge of the world, to save you many a hard lesson. When such a woman sees you growing a little bit careless of your conduct, or perhaps associating with those whose character you do not, in your heart, exactly approve of, and determined to have a good time anyway, her heart trembles for you, and she, perhaps, tries by means of a serious talk with you to get you to be more careful. Very often you resent this, and think it is too bad you can't be allowed to have a little fun without being "preached" to. Don't feel that way, girls, we all want you to have a good time; to get the very best there is to be had while you are young; but while you are thus enjoying yourselves, we want you to build a good foundation for future happiness and usefulness.

There is something else to be considered—your influence over others. Every action of your lives has its effect, either for good or otherwise; and it is a solemn thought that you are responsible for the way this influence of yours leads. You may be unconscious of exerting any, but sometimes very trivial things turn the scale for, or against you, in some one's mind. "Shun the very appearance of evil," let your conduct be such, that you can always respect yourselves, and you will not fail in gaining the true respect of others. SISTER CLARA.

"If a man expects to succeed he must acquire good judgment and depend on his own final decision."

To the young man or woman just starting in life what advice can be fraught with more potent meaning than that of Bryant, "Follow thou thy choice." We look upon the lives of those around us and see wrecks everywhere. What is the cause—for cause there surely must be? We see them putting forth every effort and yet without success. Upon inquiry we often learn that they are following some one else's choice instead of their own; the father or mother or some kind friend, or sister or brother thought it would be best. In connection with the advice of Bryant comes the wise admonition, nay, it is almost the command of that greatest philosopher of modern times, Emerson, "Trust thyself." How the shackles fall, what freedom we experience, how the blood bounds through our veins at the mere thought. Truly "every heart vibrates to that iron string."

When the time comes, boys, for you to step out upon the platform of manhood, choose for yourself what you will be and do. If you are honest you will estimate aright your capabilities along every line, and with the help of the divine Father will make no mistake.

In your business, religious and social life, "be thyself;" "imitation is suicide;" trust yourself step by step, for it is this way strength comes. To ask and accept advice is right, but to a greater extent than we realize we are the arbiters of our own fortunes. Do not drift, but act. The latter day work needs men of action and thought and we cannot develop if we allow ourselves to be led always.

A MODERN FABLE.

BY ELDER T. W. WILLIAMS.

A peddler visited me the other day. He had a gentlemanly bearing, an honest face, and a courteous demeanor. After the formality of an introduction I offered him a chair, and we conversed on different things. He spoke of my family; played with the children, and finally we drifted into a consideration of various subjects, social, political and moral. He remained for dinner, but failed to acquaint me with his business or to make any effort to display his goods for sale. I wondered at this. Finally, I ventured to broach the subject and asked him what particular line he carried and would he show them to me? "Certainly," he said, "that is what I came for." He opened his grip and displayed an excellent piece of woolen cloth. It seemed perfect in every particular: the best I had ever seen. It was the very thing I had long been looking for. But, somehow the manner of the agent did not enthrust me. I thought, "If his goods are what they appear to be on the surface why is this man so diffident about their sale?" The goods to all appearance suited me exactly but I refrained from buying simply because I could not understand the apathy of the agent. He never even asked me to buy and did not seem disappointed because I did not buy. When he left I told him to call again. It was my intention to investigate the matter and, if there was nothing the matter with the individual or his goods, I had concluded to purchase the next time he called. I could not help but conjecture why a responsible house should have such a representative! Had the agent been enthusiastic I would have purchased on the spot for even now, as the recollection comes to me, I am sure it was the most perfect piece of cloth I ever handled.

A few days afterward another agent came, representing another firm. I did not like his appearance so well as the other one. True, he was affable and gentlemanly, but one could tell, at a glance, that he was coached for service. He dwelt on the virtue of his goods and, with an adroitness that was artistic, avoided any reference to defects which were clearly apparent. When his attention was called to some of them he said they were more imaginary than real and would not appear in the delivered article. I did not particularly want what he had for sale but he pressed me so hard and sounded the praises of his goods so loud and withal, he offered me the goods at a reduced rate and his cloth was somewhat wider than that offered by his competitor so I concluded to purchase, believing that the added width and reduced price would more than compensate for the inferiority in the goods. My purchase was largely due to the bland, entertaining manner of the agent.

Now, that I have had the goods some time I find I have been swindled; the goods are half cotton; the weaving is defective

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder

Each time the United States Government has officially tested the baking powders the report has shown Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder to be of superlative leavening strength, free from alum, absolutely pure and wholesome.

This is gratifying, for Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is depended upon by millions of people to raise their daily bread.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

NOTE.—These Government inquiries also developed the fact that there are many mixtures upon the market made in imitation of baking powder, but containing alum or other caustic acid, whose use in food is dangerous.

and, while I have no cause for action against either, I can not help but feel that, if the first agent had done what he should have done, this would not have occurred. He would have secured his commission and I would have been the possessor of better goods. As it is I have been cheated and he is out his commission.

Moral. The first agent was a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The second agent, was a representative of the Utah Church. 1322 Myrtle Ave., Los Angeles, Cal.

Book of Mormon Lesson Leaflet.

A number of the Religio workers of our district realizing the necessity of having the Book of Mormon lessons for the local societies and more especially for the Home Class work in the district, have taken the "Study Corner" from the Arena Department of the Autumn Leaves for November (also added the review lesson from the October Arena) and issued it in a 4 page leaflet, same size as the Arena page, for the Religio work. We thus hope to see a very large number of the Des Moines Saints take up the Book of Mormon study. Should any Religians outside of our district desire these leaflets for the same purpose for which we will use them, we can supply a limited number at 10 cents per dozen. Single leaflets will be sent to any, especially the scattered Saints, upon request.

Clergy Credentials 1902.

The Central, Western, Southwestern and Trans-Continental Passenger Associations—the Associations that issue clergy credentials—have been furnished with up-to-date lists of general officers and general missionaries of the church entitled to clergy credentials. Said lists are furnished regularly, after appointments are made by each General Conference, and on or about December 1 annually. While other Associations do not issue credentials, they may be obtained from some (though not all) of the local railroads, on application to General Passenger Agents. All local ministers entitled to clergy credentials are referred to general missionaries in charge for endorsement, as heretofore, in harmony with established rule. R. S. SALLYARDS, Church Secretary.

INDEPENDENCE STAKE.

The organizing of a Stake at Independence, Missouri, last April, under the instructions given in the revelation received during the sitting of the General Conference of 1901, has given rise to some criticism on the part of some who, while in sympathy with the organizing of the church in 1890, are yet not in sympathy with the Reorganized church as its successor. It will not, we believe, be denied, that there has ever been a time since the expulsion of the inmates from the Garden of Eden, when the Lord undertook a work among the children of men, that there has not been some one or more, ready to criticize and animadvert upon that action. But it is equally true, that the fact that some have considered the Lord's actions open to adverse criticism in all ages, has in no wise affected the work he proposed to do for those who were wise enough to heed his direction, save upon those who were so unfortunately situated that they could not "see when good cometh." However, the absence of criticism with regard to that which may be presented for our consideration, does not argue that therefore, as a consequence, it must be true; but on the other hand, because there may be criticism offered against things divine, it should not be taken as conclusive evidence that there is fault in the thing criticized. A criticism should itself be criticized, and if it stands the test of fair, searching and honorable weighing, the object against which it is directed may then be examined in the light it sheds, and if sustained by the facts revealed, it may be accounted as justified.

A sentence, often heard, which, because of its relevancy, has come to be accepted as a truism, is that "order is heaven's first law;" and viewing the courses of the planets as they have come to be understood, as well as every thing else affected by the divine guidance, the thoughtful are confirmed in their estimate that surely heaven must be a place where all things are conducted in an orderly manner. This being true, it is not claiming too much to assert that whatever God controls in the earth, must likewise be in an orderly way, for he must be like himself wherever he may manifest himself. No effective work can be done without organization, and the more perfect that organization and the more it is honored by those who are members therein, the more perfect will be the work done and the results attained. A scattering desultory plan of action in any campaign is a failure, so far as the accomplishment of any great work is concerned. Concentration, unity of purpose and action, under a wise direction, is the only plan by which great ends are reached.

For years the Lord has been preparing his people for advancement and the admonition has been frequently given "Come Up Higher;" but, as in the ages past, they who were to be the direct beneficiaries in the important work to be accomplished by this exalted position, were slow to hearken, and the progress made, has not been rapid. But the heaven was working; the Spirit was moving throughout the church; a higher spirituality, a deeper consecration obtained, and as the representatives of the body gathered at the last General Conference, calling upon the Lord in tears, and in prayer and fasting, the response was ready and abundant; and to a degree that many had seldom experienced, the Holy Spirit was shed abroad upon the assemblies, giving assurance of acceptance with God, and that the time to "favor Zion," had truly begun. When therefore on the 15th day of April our beloved president presented the communication of the Spirit to him, the assembly was prepared to give it the credence and respect its important and sacred character enjoined; and in so doing, light and direction were manifestly enjoyed, and the perfect unanimity among all the brethren regarding its acceptance, was good indeed to realize.

But to no one item of that important communication was there a more generous and united, grateful, joyous, heart-throbbing acquiescence by the hundreds present, who listened with bated breath to its presentation, than the one which directed that two stakes be organized, one at Independence and one at Lamon, according to the pattern given. Instantly every soul recognized the higher position all were required to occupy, and with that comprehension came the desire for the ability to meet the requirements that the work of the Lord should not be further hindered in the purposes he had in view for the redemption of Zion and her converts. To all of this action, the Holy Spirit bore swift witness. There was no mistake in this; there could be none, for it was to be done according to the pattern already given. Hence, when the body convened for the organization of the Stake, a spirit of deep solemnity, befitting the occasion, seemed to pervade the hearts of those assembled and there was not the least intimation of a dissenting mind present.

But it has been urged that the forming of a Stake at Independence was wrong because that place had been hitherto appointed and set apart as the center place for the gathering of God's people, and that stakes were only to be appointed as curtains for the strength of Zion, when there was no more room in the center place. But we opine our critic will not object to the statement that a stake is to be the counterpart of the government at the center place. There must be the presidency, the high council, the bishopric, in the one as in the other, with the exception that the central government has supreme jurisdiction in appeals, and direct authority. The same laws of the celestial kingdom will rule all; and if this be true, then there must be an organization at the center place, after which all others are patterned; and if the Lord sees fit to cause such an organization at Independence now, as a preparatory work, who shall say he has not the right to do so? Who shall say his wisdom and his knowledge are faulty?

The conditions that must govern when the central government is established do not now obtain at Independence, and, indeed, cannot at this time. Such government will necessitate the dividing of the inheritances by lot; and if the plan of the city shown to some, is reliable, an entire rearrangement of the city will take place. Where are the means to purchase land and make alterations required, now? It cannot be done otherwise than by purchase according to the law of God, and to wait until such a sum is gathered before forming an organization would find the saints very much unprepared to enter into the work and occupy the position required of them. The heedlessness and slothfulness of the past have sadly changed conditions, and made what was easily within the reach of the church at one time, under present conditions utterly impracticable. The designs of the Lord, while they have been hindered by this slackness, have not been frustrated nor changed; they cannot be, by men or devils. Hence as a preparatory work, as a means of educating the people along spiritual lines; to inculcate the true spirit of sacrifice and consecration, which must prevail in the establishment of the perfect central government, that there shall be neither rich nor poor, but that all may have according to their wants and needs—the Lord has commanded an organization of a government, at the center place just as it shall be in its perfected state—except with lessened powers, and called it precisely what such organized governments are—a Stake; and his servants of the bishopric are calling for first consecrations that there may be "meat" in the Lord's storehouse to carry out his purposes and designs. Who is so presumptuous as to assert that there is not manifest wisdom in this action? Shall the thing framed say of him who framed it: "He has no understanding; surely not in this work."

But, again, our objector seems to have lost sight of the fact that Independence is NOT ZION. Does that sound heretical? Let us see. We have stated some things that are absolutely to exist when the central government is established. We have not deemed it needful to take space in citing the authorities for the statement, for the reason that all who claim any connection with the latter day work, are, we believe, conversant with them, and therefore our claim is not likely to be disputed in that respect. Do those conditions exist at Independence now? Have they ever existed there? Can it ever be ZION, in the sense and acceptance of the term, as revealed by the Lord, unless such conditions do prevail? What folly then to make a play upon words, and say there is to be no Stake in Zion, and that therefore, the action forming such organization at Independence was unlawful. No Stake has been formed in Zion, for the very good and sufficient reason, that as yet Zion does not exist. When Zion, is established, as it shall be, there will be then time enough to deny the establishing of a Stake there, if such should be found. Be not hasty in judgment neither forward to doubt the Lord's handiwork.

What then is the true status occupied by Independence? We answer, we do not know that it really has any, so far as the Lord's work is concerned. The government of that city, is at present, wholly a worldly institution. But the land on which it is situated, has been designated as the place for Zion, when the time comes for its establishing, and a spot not far from what is now recognized as the center of the city has been divinely pointed out as the place where a temple is to be builded unto the Lord, Most High. But the temple is not there yet, and until it is, it would be very improper to call the above lot the temple; it is simply the place for the temple, as the land in and around Independence is the place for Zion to be built; but it is highly and manifestly improper to call it Zion now. It would be just as proper to call the temple lot, "the temple" before the temple is built, as to call Independence Zion, while present conditions exist. When Zion is really established, it will be a very easy matter for the larger and more complete government to supersede the lesser one, now established and called a Stake, whose boundaries are limited to six counties in Missouri and three counties in Kansas, bordering the Missouri line. Zion's limits will be much, very much larger than that.

The Savior gave the key by which all works should be properly judged, "Ye shall know them by their fruits." "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit," it is an evering law in physical life, and it is every whit as certain in the spiritual kingdom. It is not a wise thing to jump at conclusions, or to condemn a thing, which we may not understand, to be evil, on that account. "Judge righteous judgment" said the Master. "Prove all things," admonishes the apostle, and if we shall always "hold fast that which is good" happy will we be, for "Wisdom is justified of her children."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JAMES T. DAVIS, Ozark, Missouri, desires the address of Bro. A. J. Fletcher of Illinois.

Extracts, from Letters.

BRO. CHAS. CLEMENT, Grant's Pass, Oregon, renewing for the ENSIGN, says:

I should feel very much lost without it here in my isolated condition, so far as I know. How I do miss those good meetings we always had at Cove, Arkansas, and long to again enjoy the company of the Saints. If this should meet the attention of any Saints in or around Grant's Pass, I should like to meet or hear from them, as I desire to locate some of the branches in southern Oregon.

SR. CALLIE HICKS, Hunt, Arkansas, renewing for the ENSIGN, says of it:

It seems to be a part of my life; it renews life, strengthens life, builds up life, and helps prepare for the next life. Thank the Lord for the glorious news it brings of the many gospel battles won.

THE ENSIGN FOR 1902.

About five months past two brethren, who were engaged in business in another city, visited the ENSIGN; they expressed surprise that we didn't manifest more push and enterprise in having the ENSIGN plant up-to-date. They thought we were SLOW! SLOW!!

Now, dear Saints, I want to have a chat with you about the ENSIGN, from the business manager's standpoint. I have heard this expression of "slow" applied to the church many, many times and in various ways; but who composes the church but its members?

Let us look over the situation and see what can be done to improve the ENSIGN. The plant has been carrying quite a debt and the most rigid economy is necessary in its management; but while this is true, at very little expense per capita, the ENSIGN reaches thousands of good people who otherwise would never have heard of the gospel in this life. Did you ever consider this point that with such a paper as the ENSIGN the gospel can be effectually preached, with actually no expense whatever to the general church treasury? How such a paper should be sustained! God seems to have ordained that in this age of the printing press its power shall be used for the spread of the glorious gospel. You will notice in the last revelation given to the church how the Lord advises the church to expand along this very line—of reaching people by the printed word. Many people read the ENSIGN who perhaps would never listen, through prejudice, to a sermon. They can have sermons right before them and in the house to be read and reread. We are constantly receiving letters from subscribers who have been convinced of the truthfulness of our claims through the matter contained in the ENSIGN, and who have been confirmed in their belief by a continued perusal of its pages. The ENSIGN has a mission—a God-given mission—all its own, and should be abundantly sustained in its work. The question is,

HOW TO IMPROVE THE PAPER?

I am speaking now of the mechanical part. I know what we would and should have, but we must deal with what we can and will have. I have learned of an opportunity to purchase a press at nearly one-third of its value that will print, fold, paste and trim the paper at one operation. By having this press we could get the ENSIGN out in much better condition than at present, with less effort. If we want this press we must not be SLOW! SLOW! about it, but quick! We want to have the ENSIGN delivered to you out and the inside pages pasted in tight, which will make it more convenient to read and bring it up-to-date.

We want to close our pages to every line of objectionable advertising. We cannot do that now because the paper is not sustained the way it should be; we are constantly refusing advertising, but we must carry enough to help pay our expenses.

Sustain the paper better in the future and we will accept very little advertising and only that which will give prestige to the paper.

We wish we could afford to print the ENSIGN on better paper. Do you not know that people are often judged by the clothes they wear? A business concern is often judged by the character of its stationery, that is why so much money is often invested in that way. The same will apply to our tracts and periodicals; they will not make as good an impression if poorly printed and on cheap paper as if gotten up in the best manner possible. Good printing is getting to be the rule instead of the exception. We can do it if we have the outfit. Are you in favor of having the ENSIGN reach twice as many investigators as at present? We can make every one of these improvements if our circulation is increased to what it should be.

WE CAN DO IT.

The majority of our people find it necessary to struggle for an existence, but with a little sacrifice from each we can accomplish all that our heart is set to do.

Here are some suggestions. Send us now, this week or next, two, three or five years' subscription in advance, which will be placed to your credit. Get some one who does not now take the ENSIGN to subscribe; with a little effort you can do this. In every branch there are some who cannot afford to take the paper but would love to have it, subscribe for them. If you do not know of any, we do, and will send the paper to such on your order and remittance. Subscribe for the "Gospel Banner," reduced to 15 cents per year, and distribute these splendid sermons broadcast. Subscribe for several copies and get your friends investigating. We have some exceptionally good numbers in preparation. Buy our books and pamphlets and circulate them. Get new members to subscribe or send us their names and addresses and we will mail them sample copies.

In your Christmas joys don't forget the ENSIGN and its special mission on earth; in your New Year's resolutions resolve that you are going to help increase the power of the paper to push forward this latter day work.

Now, brother or sister, suppose I stop right here, what will probably be the results? In the goodness of your heart you will wish us success and hope that some one more favorably situated than yourself will respond to this appeal, and then you will turn to the next article, eventually lay the paper aside and forget all about the matter, and the ENSIGN will have to plod along in the same back-number way. It is the hardest thing on earth to get large bodies of people in unison. I will illustrate this with an ancient legend.

At one time all the rulers of the earth agreed that they were going to request their subjects to send up a mighty shout at a certain day and at a certain time of that day. There was much speculation as to what the result of that great shout would be;

some thought it would be so mighty that the everlasting hills would shake under its power. The time approached and after many difficulties had been overcome, all was in readiness, but all the noise heard was the screech of a poor old woman—everybody else was listening to hear how much noise there would be!

Do the subscribers of the ENSIGN believe in encouraging push and enterprise? We are going to have a new press if it is possible to get it. Watch the "Editorial Items" during next month and we will tell you how we are progressing. Are we going to be SLOW! SLOW!

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Paul Murdock, infant son of Brn. Ralph G. and Sr. Bertha S. Smith was blessed Sunday afternoon, Bro. G. H. Hulmes and I. N. White officiating.

The sad news was circulated at Sunday School and church services Sunday morning of the sudden and unexpected death, about 9:30 that morning of Sr. Melissa Mabel Nesbitt, more commonly known as "Lissie," youngest daughter of Sr. Mary Nesbitt. She had been passing through a seige of sickness of several weeks duration, but it was thought she was making progress toward recovery in which belief the deceased shared. She took suddenly worse that morning however, and quietly and peacefully fell asleep in the Lord. This bereavement comes with added weight to this family from the fact that just three months ago lacking nine days, another daughter, Sr. Roy Madison, was taken. Sr. "Lissie" was highly esteemed by all her acquaintances, and was of a bright, cheery and lovable disposition. She was born on a Sunday March 28, 1880, at Maroa, Illinois, was baptized Sunday, April 14, 1895, by Elder R. C. Evans, at Independence, and died on Sunday. The funeral took place from the church Tuesday afternoon, Bro. G. H. Hulmes preaching the sermon.

Rachel Isabelle, infant daughter of Dr. H. B. and Sr. Clara L. Curtis, granddaughter of Bro. and Sr. C. J. Clark, was blessed at the afternoon service, December 8th, Elders Joseph Luff and W. H. Garrett officiating.

Bro. Wm. Crick, who is now at Pasadena, California, is improving very much and enjoying the summer weather of that state. He is feeling well, but will have to remain some six months until his bronchial organs are restored entirely.

Bro. and Sr. D. Hougas, who have been visiting their daughter, Sr. Will Pitt, and family left yesterday (Wednesday) morning for Los Angeles, California, to spend the winter. They propose stopping in Riverside a week.

Bro. Frank Mills, of this city, and Sr. Laura Mader, of Lamoni, Iowa, are to be married Christmas. The ENSIGN tenders congratulations. They will reside in their new home on West Short street.

Bro. and Sr. Sidney Preston are running a confectionary store two doors east of postoffice on Maple avenue.

The contractors for the municipal light plant, E. M. Reed & Co., of Kansas City, seem to be doing nothing that is apparent toward the completion of their contract. The boilers are at the power house, outside, no attempt having been made as yet to get them in place. They have been in Independence ready to be set up about three weeks. None of the machinery has as yet been received. The fact that they are under forfeit seems not to be seriously considered. Meanwhile the citizens are using lanterns where there are no gas lamps, or, stumbling along in the dark.

Sunday morning the Saints listened to a good sermon upon the benefits of truth from their former pastor, Elder G. E. Harrington, all were glad to have him with us once more. At night Bro. C. E. Miller presented some telling thoughts in showing the church which he represented to be "orthodox" according to Webster's definition of the word, and the scriptural account of the doctrines taught by the Lord and his servants. It was a chilly day, but the attendance was good. The afternoon service was also well attended and refreshing.

Winter has assumed control of things mundane since Friday of last week, and has held every thing out of doors and in some instances many articles indoors. The thermometer has been registering 8 and 10 degrees below zero, and the idler no longer tarries at the corner of the street. The fuel merchants are busy and the plumber man greets his friends with a pleasant smile. There has been some snow, so that wheat and other small grain will be protected and benefited.

LAMONI, IOWA.

The lecture given for the Religion by Professor Follansbee on the 5th from the subject, "Genius and Gumption," was highly entertaining, educational and elevating. Every one should have heard it.

Quite a severe storm, followed by cold, struck this section the middle of last week, and as a consequence, the services for the latter part of the week and over Sunday were not very well attended.

Elder G. H. Hilliard preached in the morning on Sunday and Elder E. A. Stedman in the evening.

President Joseph Smith, Bishop E. L. Kelley and Elder Homan C. Smith went to Kewanee, Illinois, the latter part of last week to dedicate the new church at that place.

Graceland closed for the holidays last Friday, having finished the fall term. Professor Salisbury and several of the students returned to their homes to spend their holiday vacation with relatives and friends. We understand that several new students are expected to begin with the next term, which opens January 6th.

As usual the Star of Bethlehem Sunday School will give an entertainment on Christmas eve. The committee are laboring hard to make it a success, and we trust that they may be greeted by a full house upon that occasion.

Bro. John Coiner, and Sr. Emily H. Scovill, both of Saint's Home, were married last week by Elder C. Scott. They immediately left the Home, taking up a residence in the southwest part of town.

ETRA.
2820 Dayton St., Dec. 16.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.
Services at "Druid's Temple," Cor. 14th and Polson Sts. Sunday School 9:45 a. m.; preaching 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sacrament meeting on first Sunday of each month at 12:15 noon. Elder C. A. Parkin presiding elder, residence 3010 16th street.

Sunday, Nov. 23d, preaching to a full house at 11 a. m. by Bishop C. A. Parkin. In the evening we had the pleasure of listening to Elder Ward, president of the Seattle branch.

Last Sunday Bishop Parkin again addressed the Saints at the morning hour, and the writer occupied the pulpit in the evening. At 12:15 we held our sacramental and prayer meeting. It was a very peaceful meeting, a great many of those present taking part. Our young people are coming to the front nobly and are not ashamed to add their testimonies with the rest. We are growing in the faith. Our younger members are quite an honor to the cause. Some of our services look almost like a young people's meeting.

Our Wednesday eve. prayer meetings are very well attended as a rule and are always spiritual and inspiring.

The Sisters' Prayer Union continues to meet as usual every Thursday afternoon and devotes its time to petitions and prayers.

Last Saturday quite a calamity occurred to our city. For several days we had been covered with quite a heavy fog, but Saturday it became denser than ever. We could scarcely see across the street. Travel on the Bay was very dangerous, but still the boats ventured across with their loads of flying freight. About 7 o'clock in the evening two of them collided and the "San Rafael" was sunk to the bottom of the Bay. Many of the passengers had narrow escapes, but so far only four are known to have lost their lives, but how many more are among the dead may never really be known.

All are generally well among the Saints here.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Dec. 2.
Dear Ensign:—When last I wrote you I was at "home" down in sunny Tennessee. We left Paris, Tennessee, on the morning of May 5th, bound for the land of Zion, arriving here (Independence, Mo.) the morning of the 6th, all tired out and sleepy. It was a cold dreary day and we felt almost like strangers in a strange land. Two of my brothers and a friend had come over to conference and they with our dear friend and Bro. T. C. Kelley, met us at the train and conducted us to the home of Bro. T. C., where he and family made us so welcome and treated us so kindly that we soon felt that we were with friends, indeed. Bro. T. C. Kelley having been one of our southern missionaries and having been to our house in Tennessee, quite often, seemed almost like "home folks" sure enough. I had met his family in Kentucky, some time before, so it did not take long to get pretty well acquainted, and we shall ever feel grateful to them for their kindness to us.

This is a pleasant place to live although when we first came I would get dreadfully "home sick," at times. When I would go to church and look over an audience of three or four hundred and not a familiar face to be seen I would feel "kinder lonesome." There are many privileges here to be enjoyed that those Saints living in the country in small branches do not have, and I've often thought since I've been here that those privileges are not appreciated as they should be.

I often think of the good little meetings we have had at Glenwood, on the hill, and how the promise of Christ was often verified that, where two or three are gathered together in his name there will be in their midst to own and bless. I have attended some lovely meetings here and enjoy the Sunday School very much. The fourth time I attended Sunday School Bro. Ammon White, assistant superintendent, asked me to take charge of a class, as the 1r teacher. I felt like I never could attempt such a thing amongst so many strangers not even knowing the pupils in the class. But I must either try or back out entirely so I promised to try and do the best I could. I'm still trying to instruct them the best I can and often enjoy the lessons with them very much. I feel the need of being taught myself instead of trying to teach, but I hope to be ever ready and willing to do what I can to roll on the glorious work we are engaged in.

A few nights after coming to Independence I had a dream which has impressed me greatly. I thought I was on a ship with a large company of strangers to me. The ship was on the land and was going up a hill, there was a large crowd in the ship and there were those on the outside who were working to move the ship, with its load, up the hill. She had gotten over half way—perhaps two-thirds up, when she came almost to a standstill—the load on the ship was getting too heavy for the number of workers on the outside. Seeing she was too heavily loaded I, with a number of others, got off to help move her on up the hill. Now all around this large ship were fixed handles or levers, they were fastened—securely to the ship some very close to the sides and low down, others higher up, while there were still others that were longer and stood out from the ship, these too, were fixed low and high up and all were placed in such a way that a person taking hold to work would not be in the way of anyone else at all. There were places for all, both large and small, so none need sit idle if they wanted to help roll this ship on. I took hold of one of the handles and went to work and after a while I stood with the toilers at the top of the hill with the ship safely landed there. There were empty handles on the side of the ship I was on when the work was done so it seemed there were some who had failed to work when they might have done so.

The thought came to me almost in words when I awoke. "There is a work here for you to do." This ship was made to represent the gospel work and the handles the different places in which we may all find work which will help roll it on. So let us all take courage and do what we can: If we can't reach a high handle, let us work at one of the lower ones, and thus help to roll on the gospel ship, and when the ship reaches the hill-top, may we all be found standing with the toilers who have proven faithful and be ready to receive our reward. May this be our happy lot.
Your sister in Christ,
ADA ROBERTS.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 1.
Editor Ensign:—The Philadelphians enjoyed the pleasure of a beautiful day on Sunday, which was of especial importance to them, being the opening day of their comfortable and neat brick church, on the corner of Howard and Ontario streets. The happy faces of the Saints spoke unmistakably of the joys within, particularly that of Bro. Zimmerman's, who has contributed largely to that end. On my arriving at the church Bro. E. G. Pitt was about to commence his discourse upon the subject of true worshiping, presenting in a clear and happy way, thoughts leading to a conviction of the need of worshiping in the true way—God's way. The epitome of Faith was hastily examined and conveyed to his hearers some of the distinctive features of our work, in contrast with others, urging the need of examination and application of the truth.

At 2 p. m., or near that time, the Saints met in communion service; time was precious, twenty-five minutes allowed for song, prayer and testimonies. The time was well taken up and the presence of the heavenly spiritual forces were with us, melting us to tears of joy and causing love of heart to God for his blessings.

At 3 p. m. Bro. Wm. LaRue discoursed upon the subject of church building, seeking to impress the audience with the thought that God was greater than his temple, and that true character was greater than earthly materials, and that from his children he intended building a spiritual house. That a tried and precious stone had been laid—Jesus Christ—that the superstructure might have a sure foundation. In the evening Bro. Geo. Robley was the speaker. The church was almost full, and the light of truth was with our brother; his efforts were exceptionally good, sparkling, at times, with gems of oratorical beauty. His subject was the Perfect Law, arguing in defense of its self-demonstrating powers and calling attention to the facts of Scripture promising the privilege to earnest seekers the right of divine direction. One notable expression that found a responsive amen in the heart of the writer, was that from this platform any representative man of any religious faith might have the liberty to present his faith, and further that liberty would be granted even to lecture against: still further that any infidel representative of that class might have the same privilege; claiming that the gospel or perfect law should possess the powers of self-demonstration, and had nothing to fear from investigation or attack, being invincible. A thrill of pleasure passed through me when I thought of the invulnerability of the truth from the intellectual genius of opposition, combined with Satanic inspirations.

Yes, "man by wisdom knew not God." Simple and humble men, freighted with the Spirit of God, are able to bring to naught those that are mighty. (See 1 Cor. 1: 26-29). The day closed leaving pleasant thoughts to revert to in the future. The hearty, helpful singing of our earnest co-laborer, Bro. Pitt, will help to encourage, as the bright light of his countenance: so on we move to Ellwood City, Pennsylvania, next Friday, and if unfavorable to work there, will return to the land Zion.
Yours in the faith,
G. E. HARRINGTON.

HOOD RIVER, Ore., Nov. 23.
Editor Ensign:—There is a matter I wish to speak of, and while I am only a pop gun among the cannons, yet it has been said that every little helps, but before beginning upon that matter let me say that the debate with Elder L. G. Dix, of Christian Adventist fame, is a thing of the past. We closed last evening the 22d. Sixteen nights was used in discussing six propositions; the first two involved the organization, doctrine and practice of the two churches; the second two were upon the mortality of the soul and the immortality; the last two were upon the divine calling of Joseph Smith and read as follows: "Resolved, That the Bible, the writings of Joseph Smith, with the archaeology of America, prove him to have been a false prophet" (and true prophet) We had for chairman a Christian minister, who had beforehand shown himself very fair and honorable, had asked us for the use of our tent in which to preach, and in March last had signed propositions with me to discuss our differences, but on the evening of commencement got upon the platform and backed out; but with all his friendliness he had an opportunity to show himself. His rulings were quite fair until Joseph Smith came up, then when Bro. Chase who was my moderator, objected to certain testimony being brought in, he said it reminded him of the story of the small boy, that was walking around the load of hay that had tipped over; a preacher came along and told him he must not swear about it, to which the boy said, "You don't know anything about it, Dad is under there;" and as dad (Joe Smith) was under all this rubbish, get him out if you can.

My opponent used Lamb's Golden Bible to overthrow the Book of Mormon, and when it came the proper time, I asked the chair if he would set aside a witness who had deliberately lied? he said he would. I then cited him to where the Rev. Lamb had said on page 208, 209 of his Golden Bible that the book of Mormon had nothing whatever upon the laying on of hands. I took Lamb's book then read from Book of Mormon Alma 4: 1, and asked the chair if he was satisfied; he said in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word should be established. I then read Moroni 1: 2, 3, and he ruled Lamb's work out, but oh how the fire flew. My opponent, when he got the floor, declared he would show where the Doctrine and Covenants lied, and read chapter 1: 4 and said, Mr. Chairman, unless my opponent can prove that God spoke to Joseph Smith, and that an angel appeared to him and gave him the plates, I say it is a lie and ask this book be rejected; but he was overruled. He then took up the Book of Mormon, and read about the end of iron and the tree of life and the fountain of water which represented the love of God, then turning to another place read about the river that represented the fifth of the world; there, said he, is a contradiction, one place it calls the water the love of God, in the other place it calls the water the fifth of the world. It was very apparent that both my opponent and the chairman were prepared before hand for an emergency; the chair arose and said he could not rule the book out upon the objection raised, but as the account in the Book of Mormon was given in a dream or vision he would rule the book out, because he did not believe in dreams nor visions. I asked him if he would rule the Bible out, because of the accounts given there of dreams and visions, he would not rule them.

Next we were treated to a reading of that purported revelation to fasten polygamy upon Joseph Smith; he read from D. et-riens and Douglas of Mormonism by D. H. Bays. I gave him the court decision and also the Doctrine and Covenants of 1845 and asked him to show any such thing there, then quoted Doctrine and Covenants on one wife marriage etc. My opponent closed by an appeal to the people to stand by the Bible.

Now to the matter referred to in my opening, in a late Ensign appeared an article in which it was stated that an attorney attended a discussion somewhere [Wheatland, Missouri], and, at the close, having heard the accusations made against Joseph Smith and his character, also the rebutting testimony, said that a man could be convicted for libel in a court for making such statements. May I say to my brethren who stand at the head, is this true? Are these statements of such a nature as would convict men for libel? If so, would it not be one of the best investments the church could make to use the money to prosecute some of these? Take Davis H. Bays, Clark Braden et al. Do you say you have not the money, if so, I think there is not an elder in the field who would not give $2.50, and make a sum sufficient to complete such a prosecution, if it was done. We then could use the time in talking truth to the people, instead of spending a majority of our time in a refutation of these slanderous statements. I am ready with my $2.50. What say you, brethren? Because if it cannot be sustained, it ought to be stopped. Ever praying for the advancement of truth, I am

THE SABBATH QUESTION AND ITS FALSE CLAIMS CONSIDERED.

BY JAMES SCHOFIELD.

The Sabbath question seems to be bothering a great many people at this day and age of skepticism and infidelity, and some sticklers for the law have gone so far as to offer money to anyone finding a text in support of Sunday keeping. In this article we will show to whom the Sabbath was given—how the old covenant, of which the Sabbath is a part, was fulfilled in the coming of Christ and the ushering in of the gospel dispensation.

Modern Sabbatarians, by taking isolated texts of scripture and tradition of the fathers, succeed in putting up an argument that looks quite plausible, and would make one believe that there was something in it, and hence they catch the unwary. And they go so far as to pronounce the judgments of the Almighty upon those who do not keep it and classify them with the wicked—teach in an infernal way that annihilation awaits them.

We are as a people, I believe, settled on the Sabbath question, and perchance that I may disseminate some correct information on this latter day fallacy that broke out several years ago in what was called the "Advent Movement." I offer a few thoughts.

Sabbatarians say that Adam and Eve kept the Sabbath in the Garden of Eden; for this great light(?) we are indebted to Mrs. E. G. White who claims to have had it shown to her in vision; and some have inferred from this that Adam and Eve retired to some secluded spot and there did "remember the seventh day to keep it holy." In Gen. 2:2, it speaks of God resting from all his work on the seventh day, but no mention is made of a Sabbath; and some contend that it was the seventh day Sabbath given to the Jews at the exodus of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage.

When, where, and to whom was the Sabbath given, and for what purpose? is a question that we shall consider in our investigation. The ten commandments, as given to Israel and codified in Exodus 20 and Deuteronomy 5, are not applicable to Adam and Eve.

"And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm; therefore [or for this reason] the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."—Deut. 5:15. (Italics mine)

Before this they had no command to keep it, and how can it apply to Adam and Eve? Will some Sabbatarian answer? The truth is, the Sabbath was given to Israel as a "sign" of their remarkable deliverance from Egyptian bondage and was necessitated by rebellious Israel, being local and temporary and not given in a universal manner.

There is no more evidence that the patriarchs kept or knew anything about a Sabbath than they did the new moons or other festivals, and there is no need of speculating as to when the weekly Sabbath was instituted.

But men will speculate and often "ride a hobby to death." It seems that the example of the apostles ought to keep us from running wild. Paul was fearful that he had bestowed labor in vain upon a class who observed "days and months," and long after the introduction of the gospel to the gentiles there arose a question about circumcision and the law—some contending that it was necessary to turn back to the law of Moses (see Acts 15) and be circumcised, "Now therefore, why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?"

This is evidently made plain by the Apostle Paul where he says "he that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses"—no space granted for repentance and consequently was a "yoke" that the fathers could not bear.

"But," says the Sabbatarian, "this is not the ten commandment law." Let us see.

"And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness they found a man that gathered sticks upon the Sabbath day. And the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died; as the Lord commanded Moses."—Num. 15:32, 36.

I want nothing to do with such a law, and if all mankind are to be judged by that law, as Adventists tell us, every one of us will be damned for we cannot keep it as given to Israel. If Christ abolished the penalty then the law is useless and inoperative. If that was the law that Christ "magnified" and made "honorable," why did he not enforce the penalty when the woman was brought to him, charged with adultery, who was commanded to be stoned, in the law of Moses? And as he did not enforce the penalty we accept his words in the sermon on the mount:

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets, I am not come to destroy but to fulfill." "Fulfill"—finish, complete, make an end to—see!

It seems that the weekly Sabbath was not instituted until after the exodus of Israel as is made plain from Exodus 16:5, and the people were not accustomed to keep it as the circumstances of its institution show. The manna was sent in a double quantity and kept over the Sabbath day, while it would not keep over other days. When they went out to gather it on the Sabbath, they were chided and afterwards yielded and rested.

"* * * The Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm; therefore [or for this reason] the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."

Before this they had no command to keep it.

"And madest known unto them the holy Sabbath * * * and laws by the hand of Moses."—Neh. 9:14.

Therefore, previous to Moses it was not made known. If it had been known by them before, it could not be said that it was "made known by Moses."

The Sabbath advocates do most-wretched work in trying to support the ten commandments as a part of the new covenant, and that the ten precepts are immutable and eternal principles; and for proof reference is made to 1 Chronicles 16:15-17, leaving out verse 18, all of which plainly refers to the covenants of promise confirmed with an oath to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob of an everlasting possession of the land, and not the slightest reference is made to the decalogue.

When "Moses called all Israel" he said "The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers [this proves that this covenant was local and not universal], but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day."—Deut. 5:2, 3.

In the light of this statement I can't see how any one can say that this is the covenant God made with Abraham: The idea that the covenant which God promised to make with Judah and Israel is the same covenant made on Mt. Sinai is subversive and supplants the gospel and puts the law in its place. Such an argument is necessary to sustain this heresy. "The new covenant was to be not according to—not like the ten commandments," the one made at the exodus on "Mt. Sinai which gendereth to bondage." It required the death of Christ to ratify the new covenant. He who came to give us the "life more abundant" and to redeem us from the curse.

The Sabbath advocates deny that the old covenant is the decalogue and they do more twisting of the scriptures to get out of this fact than any other party of wretches ever did, to their own destruction. In Exodus 24:8 the ten commandments are called the covenant; also Deuteronomy 4:13; 9:9-11. This is all the covenant or anything called the covenant made with Israel, and there is no allusion to any other.

The Sabbatarians also say there are two laws; one, the ten commandments, the moral, immutable and eternal law that even the angels keep and obey; the other, the ceremonial law, the law of Moses written in a book; but that is a bold assertion. It is "the law," not one of the laws. "The law was all one and the law of Moses was the law of God, because God was its author and Moses its mediator, and it is never spoken of in distinction to the law of Moses." That the ten commandments were called the law of Moses the following from the ten commandments is proof. "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy * * *." And the individual "died without mercy" that was caught gathering sticks upon the Sabbath day." Was not this the ten commandments?

"And they found written in the law which the Lord had commanded by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in booths in the feast of the seventh month."—Nehemiah 8:14.

"Thou camest down upon Mt. Sinai; * * * and gavest them right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and commandments; and madest known unto them thy holy Sabbath, and commanded them precepts, statutes and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant."—Neh. 9:13, 14.

"They clave to their brethren, their nobles, and entered into a curse, and into an oath, to walk in God's law, which was given by Moses the servant of God, and to observe and do all the commandments of the Lord our Lord, * * *."—Neh. 10:29.

"Wherefore I also gave them statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they should not live."—Ezek. 20:25.

"* * * The law of Moses my servant which I commanded unto him in Horeb" (or Mt. Sinai).—Mal. 4:4.

The above texts show clearly and intelligently that the ten commandments were called "the law of Moses"—that Moses was the mediator of the old covenant and God its author.

The believer in the Sabbath says the decalogue is God's law, and the new moons and so forth were Moses', but in Psalms 81:3, 4, all these institutions are called a law of the God of Jacob. The law of Moses is God's law. (See Luke 2:22-27).

Whenever you hear a Sabbatarian preach you will hear the two law subterfuge introduced and quote Ezekiel 20:25, and leave out the contexts to prove that the law of Moses was not good. "Did Moses command them to sacrifice their children to idols?"

Christ certainly deviated from the law and broke the Sabbath as given to Israel, that no man should "go out of his place," "Abide ye every man in his place," etc. His going through the grain fields with his disciples and gathering and eating was as much a violation of the Sabbath, as was the Israelites going out to gather manna, which could have been gathered the day before as well as the manna gathered in the desert; and when he was accused of the Jews he did not justify himself on the ground that it was lawful, but cited to two cases, one of profaning the Sabbath, and yet being blameless, seeing he was both greater than the "temple" and "Lord of the Sabbath day."

Let us notice the statement of our Savior again in his Sermon on the Mount:

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets; I am not come to destroy but to fulfill."

Read the Sabbatarian's idea into the text and see how it sounds:

"I am come not to fulfill, but to perpetuate the law."

According to Greenfield fulfill means to fill fully, finish, complete, to end. To say that the law is perpetual is to say that Christ did not fulfill it to the least jot. But Sabbath advocates say that the ten commands are a perpetual covenant. True, but perpetual throughout the generations of Israel, not perpetual in the sense that all mankind must observe it from one generation to another.

The Sabbath is among the elements of bondage to which the house of Hagar was subject.

"But he who was of the bond-woman was born after the flesh; but he of the free-woman was by promise. Which things are an allegory [a description of real facts]; for these are the ten covenants; the one from Mt. Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agor."—Gal. 4:23, 24.

That the decalogue (from deka, ten, and logos, precepts) is secondary and inferior to fundamental divine ethics is seen from Christ's answer to the lawyer. "Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."—Matt. 22:37-40.

The two great commandments in the law were not in the decalogue, but on them all the law was suspended. Several years ago there was issued from the headquarters of the Sabbath Advocates, a colored lithograph of a tree—the main trunk was the law, with its branches hanging with golden fruit—representing large oranges, twelve in number—each labeled and represented as the commandments, and among them were the two great commandments. They thus reversed the Lord's arrangements by hanging the two on the law, because they did not understand how to hang the law on the two."

The two great commandments are not in the decalogue and according to Adventism are ceremonial and belong to the law of Moses.

The Sabbath was a "sign" of Israel's deliverance from Egyptian bondage, and they alone were commanded to keep it. The preparation to keep the Sabbath, that was just as necessary, modern Sabbatarians do not comply with. If the Sabbath is still a "sign," I think it is a "sign" between those who profess to keep it, and God. But I don't know of a man keeping the Sabbath as God commanded it to be kept, kept with all God's requirements, that is, complying with the preparation day and building no fire on the Sabbath, enforcing the death penalty upon the transgressor when he breaks the Sabbath, etc. The ten commandments are, by themselves, inoperative and absolutely useless because they lack the necessary elements to their execution.

It is a great pity if the Sabbath is so important and so necessary to salvation that so much fanaticism has been associated with it by a pretended prophetess who claims to have visions and to be inspired of God. The visions relating to the "health reform," we are asked to accept, being "closely allied with the third angel's message." These visions are equal with the word of God to these Advent people; to put it mildly, they are simply childish utterances, caused by a disordered mind. And all this conglomeration of silly nonsense is necessary to keep the Sabbath. A man may be ever such a firm believer in the Sabbath and fail to endorse these testimonies as the word of God, and he is turned out of the church and is then engaged in the "low cunning work of Satan," according to their own teaching.

Now, to return to our subject, "The law of life [the gospel] in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." What was this "law of sin and death"? Now if the ministration of death written and graven upon stone was glorious, etc. the ten commandments were written on stones and was "the law of sin and death," but "the law of life in Christ Jesus" makes us free from "the law of sin and death"—a law given to a single nation, while to us it has no appeal.

The ten commandments were the basic principles of the old covenant and under it the transgressor was condemned to death, but under the new Covenant provision is made for the sinner's salvation, offering him everlasting life through Christ and the gospel. "Great peace have they that love thy law and nothing shall offend them," but I deny it being the ten commandments—a law not conducive to man's happiness, necessitated by rebellious Israel. "The law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple." (Psalms 19: 7) Adventists quote this text quite often and say that it is the ten commandments. There is no mention of the ten commandments in the text or chapter and the margin renders it, "The doctrine of the Lord is perfect, restoring the soul." Jesus said, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." Jesus taught no doctrine that was out of harmony with that which had already been given. Taking this with 2 John 9, "He that transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ he hath [What?] both the Father and the Son," we have a harmony and get some sense out of it. If the law of Psalms 19: 7 is the one given on Mt. Sinai, why did it fail in converting the Jew, individually and nationally?

Let me notice another text considered the Adventist Gibraltar: "But whose looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, he being not a forceful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deeds."—James 2: 5.

That this is the law spoken of by David (Psalms 19: 7) the writer has no doubt; for they are speaking of a law, or plan, by which salvation may be obtained; but to apply it to the ten commandments is not doing the Scriptures justice. Where was the "liberty" in the ten commandments? That individual that "died without mercy" that was found "gathering sticks up on the Sabbath" did not have the "liberty" spoken of in the text, hence the ten commandments are not "the perfect law of liberty."

"Prove all things and hold fast to that which is good," is the motto of the writer.

SAINTS HAVE BUILT A TEMPLE.

FIRST CHURCH OF ANNY POLYGAMOUS MORMONS IN PITTSBURG.

There is a handsome little church building almost ready to be dedicated that most Pittsburgers do not know anything about; and yet it is in the midst of one of the most thickly inhabited residence sections of the city. It is located as nearly as possible at the center of population of the city, because its members come from all over the territory comprised within the city limits. And the completion of this church is visible, tangible evidence of the prosperity of the religious sect to which it belongs—the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Not Mormons, quite; for they do not believe in polygamy, and disagree with a number of other doctrines taught by the priests of the Utah cult. But they are a part of a sect that seceded from the Mormons when they made Brigham Young their president, and set up a new organization under Joseph Smith, Jr., the son of the Joseph Smith who first preached Mormonism.

But this seceding body claims that it is the real legal successor of the church founded by Joseph Smith the elder; that the Utah organization is an interloper and has no real right to the church name or its property, since Joseph Smith the younger was the natural successor to his father. They claim that the doctrine of polygamy, which the Utah people claim was preached by Joseph Smith, was, in fact, first promulgated by Brigham Young, who, they say, perverted the faith in various other ways and led the church into many errors.

The "Reorganized" church is still under the presidency of Joseph Smith, Jr., whose headquarters, as well as those of the church government, are at Lamoni, Iowa. This church has about 27,000 [45,000—Ed ENSIGN] members in the United States, and supports many missionaries, some of them working even in Utah among the members of the Salt Lake church.

The local church was started as a mission church about thirty years ago. For a number of years, however, it has been self supporting, and, indeed, prosperous. It has met weekly for several years at a hall on Fourth avenue, near Wood street. While the new church has been in course of erection they have been meeting and holding services in a hall over the Fifth avenue National bank. It now numbers 180 members, and it may be mentioned as one point in favor of the principles of the church that not one of these members uses either tobacco or alcoholic drinks. That, it may be remarked, is also true of the members of the Mormon church in Utah.

Curiously enough, the lot on which the church is being built, was purchased from a United Presbyterian minister, Rev. J. M. Wallace, pastor of the Eighth United Presbyterian church. Mr. Wallace made the following statement concerning the transaction to the Leader.

"A lot was sold by me to Edward Davis, a member of my own church, who intended to build a residence thereon. Afterwards he changed his mind and sold the lot. After changing hands once or twice, it came into the possession of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Finding that this lot was too narrow for a church building, the 'Saints' were very anxious to exchange it for two lots which I owned on Miller street, so as to have sufficient width for their church. Thinking it quite fitting that a church with so broad a creed should have a broad building, I made the exchange on satisfactory terms.

"My action in this matter had nothing to do with bringing these people into the neighborhood. They were practically here already and here to stay, and I only made an exchange of properties with them which was mutually satisfactory. I shall certainly treat them very kindly as neighbors, although I am sure it will not be suspected that I have any sympathy with their distinctive doctrines."

So the new church stands on these two Miller street lots, in a position very accessible from the hill district and also from both Center and Fifth avenue cars. Being the only church of this denomination in the city, and having a much scattered membership, this matter of convenient street car transportation is an important one.

The agreement was signed February 11th, of this year. E. E. Omchundro, E. S. Parley and A. K. Booher represented the church, as trustees. There was some difficulty about signing the deed, and it was two months later before ground was broken for the new church building.

It is now nearly finished, and it is expected that it will be ready for dedication before the Christ mashi-days. For this dedication few definite arrangements have yet been made. But it will be an event of no little importance to all Latter Day Saints, and it is expected that many men high in the councils of the church will be present at the dedication. There will be a number of the "traveling ministry," as they are called; among those will be W. H. Kelley, of Kirtland, Ohio, where is located the church's temple, built by Joseph Smith the elder.

The ceremonies will last one week. Beginning on a Monday there will be meetings every evening. At these meetings there will be preaching and the usual features of the regular meetings of the church, which are not very unlike the meetings of some of the Gentile churches. On Friday evening there will be an elaborate supper and a social meeting of the church members and their friends. And on Sunday preaching services will be held in the morning, afternoon and evening. At some of these meetings the pastor, F. G. Pitt, will preach; at others, some of the visiting "Saints" will occupy the pulpit.

The church is a very pretty little building, about 40x50 feet, of modern design. It is of yellow brick, with gable end toward the street. It is roofed in and plastered, although the windows are not yet in and the floor not laid. The door is in one corner and leads through a small vestibule directly into the auditorium, which is about forty feet square. The pulpit is a slightly raised platform in the corner opposite the entrance, an unusual but apparently a good plan.

The auditorium extends the full width of the building, and also its full depth, except about ten feet at the rear. This ten foot strip is divided into three or four smaller rooms.

The plumbing is not yet in, but is to be of the most modern type. The building is but one story in height, and has no steeple or tower. The structure is to cost about $3,500.

The following information concerning the history of the church and its doctrines was obtained from F. G. Pitt, the pastor of the local church:

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized at Palmyra, New York, on April 6, 1830, by Joseph Smith, and removed the same year, in a body, to Kirtland, Ohio. The church was founded upon doctrines found in the Bible, and in the Book of Mormon, and the book of Doctrine and Covenants, both of which latter books were accepted as additional divine revelations. The church bought land there, and erected a temple, where they worshipped until 1844, in which year they moved to Nauvoo, Illinois, where Joseph Smith was killed, and the church became disorganized. Its membership, then about 100,000, organized a number of churches, each claiming to be the original and true church of Latter Day Saints.

One of these organizations, estimated at 10,000, removed to Utah, under the leadership of Brigham Young, and now constitutes the church of Utah. After the departure of this organization, a number of the officials and members of the original church organized under the name of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, being incorporated in Illinois February 5, 1873, and in 1870 this church obtained recognition as the legal successor of the church of Joseph Smith in an action brought in Ohio by which the Kirtland temple property was declared to rightfully belong to it.

Although sometimes called Mormons, the members of this church repudiate that name. They have always opposed especially the doctrine of polygamy, as well as the other doctrines introduced by Brigham Young, who, they say, led away a portion of the church and brought reproach on the entire church by his wicked teachings.

Some of the articles of their creed are as follows. (Here follows the epitome).—The Pittsburg (Penn.) Leader, December 1.

How People Use Uncle Sam as a Savings Bank.

Whenever the time shall come for the establishment of a postal savings bank system in this country, which, by the way, Postmaster Van Cott heartily advocates, the Money Order Bureau of the New York post office will be deprived of a decidedly unique branch of its business. This is the business it has to do with persons who "send" money orders to themselves. And the number of such persons and the magnitude of their "personal" business is best demonstrated in the statement that fully $18,000 are paid yearly to persons drawing money orders on themselves.

The inauguration of a postal savings-bank system would doubtless absorb this business, but at present it is flourishing. Every week produces its quota of persons who seek Uncle Sam as a guardian of their spare funds. Of course they draw no interest and have to pay Uncle Sam three tenths of 1 per cent for safeguarding their money, but they have the satisfaction of knowing that their dollars are safe beyond fire, water and thieves.

The majority of those who do this singular banking business with Uncle Sam are player-folk, and, among them, women predominate. The proportion is 5 to 4. Among the rank and file of stage people there is a disinclination to put money in savings banks. It is looked upon, in a measure, as inconvenient, especially by those in "road companies," which, if they are fortunate, do not see New York for thirty or forty weeks. It is to guard against the misfortune which ever menaces minor "road companies," a stranding on a foreign shore, that theatrical people bought them of the money order plan. And, from what post office officials say, many a song of gladness has gone up from Peoria or Galveston, or Lima, Ohio, or some other one night place when the stranded player has carelessly regarded his money order, drawn to his own order in New York for the "rainy day."

In the springtime the "outer-self" money order business is at its height. Then the "road companies" are going out, and players take affairs by the forelock by drawing orders which they hope not to need until the season closes. Oftentimes during their season members of traveling companies go to local post offices and there draw orders payable to themselves in New York. Then, if anything happens, they can send the orders on to some friend who may draw them and forward the money.

Superintendent Joseph Elliott, who is at the head of the money order bureau, said today:

"We pay out thousands of dollars every year to persons who have obtained money orders payable to themselves. It does not seem such a long time ago that I paid Maggie Clive $1,200 on orders she had drawn in that way. She was traveling about the country and deemed Uncle Sam the best caretaker of her money, so she sent order after order to this office. When the season ended, she came on and drew the lump sum.

"About two years ago, one of Barnum's jugglers presented orders made out to himself to the amount of $2,700. When I asked him for identification, he said he could not identify himself further than to submit a lithograph poster 'billing' his performance. In the poster he was represented with his head between those of two big bulldogs and he was trying to look more ferocious than the dogs. No sooner had he unrolled the poster than I said to him, 'If you make that face, I'll pay you the money.' He whipped his hat off in an instant, tumbled his hair, and leered at me through the bars of the window-wicket. There was no doubt in my mind then, and I paid him the money. He seemed much amused at my plan at getting at his identity, and as he walked off he said, 'I'll use that again!'"

Money orders are good for one year only, but at the expiration of the year one may still draw his money by making a claim and establishing his identity. While there have been several cases of persons leaving their funds in the post office for a year, the improvised "savings bank" is generally used for six or eight or ten months. Theatrical people also use the office as a means of transporting their money without risk. Instead of taking large sums from this city to their destination, they draw a money order to themselves, pin a slip of paper bearing their signature to it, and go on their way rejoicing. The signature slip is forwarded by the postmaster with his advice, and serves as an identification agent. Many foreigners, particularly Swedes, take their money to "the old country" in the shape of personal money orders. They thus avoid the risk of being robbed of all their savings.—N. Y. Evening Post, Nov. 9, 1901.

Money Decides A Man's Worth

"Pernicious as it is, the tendency of the times nowadays is to judge absolutely of a man's worth by the money he commands. To many, character seems as nothing compared with the gold a man possesses."

In talking of the features of modern commercial life which seemed to warrant such a statement Dr. Morgan Wood closely held the attention of a great audience at the Plymouth church last night.

"A great cause of this is the present mad desire to get rich quickly," said Dr. Wood. "Men seem fairly insane to possess great sums of money now, either through pure avariciousness or through an overmastering desire to live in the height of luxury.

"As an example of the great injustice of such a condition, but one illustration is needed. Let a girl in the lower walks or middle walk of life go wrong. That instant she is scourged. She is an outcast from society and her doom is sealed.

"But change the scene and let a girl from the so-called higher walks of life go wrong. And they do go wrong. After a few months she is again received with open arms into the ranks of polite society, and why? Simply because she has money."

Continuing, Dr. Wood said:

"Our good women do not realize that in the eager quest for bargains that they themselves are dishonest. They may go into one of our great stores in search of perhaps a yard of silk. The price upon it is quoted as being $1.25 per yard. Then in the desire to prevent the making of a living profit this good woman will instantly say, 'Why, I can get the same silk, and perhaps a better piece, for $1 at another store.'

"And thus this woman is not only dishonest herself, but forces upon the storekeeper another and maybe dishonest means of getting the living profit to which he is entitled and must have if he is to hold his head above water."

For a few moments Dr. Wood more especially turned his address towards the men in the audience. Without any equivocation he placed an emphatic condemnation upon the buying and selling of stocks upon a margin. "You may squirm in your seats, but I am going to tell you exactly what you are. If you deal in margins on stocks you are a gambler and a thief. Polite, well dressed and well bred you may be, but you are none the less a thief."

The obtaining of franchises by means of bribery was also touched upon by the speaker as part of the general condition of popular thieving. "And let me say here, that the laws in this respect are miserably weak," he said. "There are plenty of laws for the smaller criminals, but a great lack of laws for the great criminals. The man who accepts a bribe and is caught is heavily punished, but what becomes of the man who offers the bribe? He goes serenely on because the laws do not reach him. He should be the one, however, to be punished, and that with a punishment swift and sufficient."

According to Dr. Wood, the great commercial success of the United States is due to the substratum of honesty, which underlies it all. But the popular forms of dishonesty "with which it is honeycombed," needs the attention of all thoughtful people, in his opinion.—Cleveland Plain Dealer, December 2, 1901.

"THE BOOKS and Utah Mormonism in Contrast," enlarged new edition, is now ready. Bro. E. L. Kelley's splendid argument against the "revelation" on polygamy is contained in this edition. Price 12 cents each; 3 for 30 cents; 15 for $1.00.

UNTIL JANUARY FOR ONLY $1.00

Autobiography of Elder Joseph Luff, of absorbing interest to Saints or those not members of the church. Just the thing for a Xmas gift to the youth. (See page 10.)

Who Was Joseph Smith, Was He a False Prophet? by Elder J. W. Peterson, now missionary to the Society Islands. The author first examines and disposes of the negative side of this question, then proceeds to the affirmation that Joseph Smith was all that is claimed for him; an interesting and convincing argument.

The More Excellent Way, 68 double column page exposition of 1 Corinthians 12:31, by Elder E. C. Kelley, a lucid refutation of the theory that the gospel gifts are "done away."

The Books and Utah Mormonism in Contrast, enlarged and containing Bro. E. L. Kelley's argument against the polygamous "revelation."

The Two Ways Illustrated, a splendid tract of the Gospel Banner series

God is Light, by W. H. Kelley, A Retrospective View of the Reorganization, by Elder E. C. Briggs, the first missionary of the Reorganized church.

The Legal Successor in the Presidency of the Church, by Elder J. W. Wight, a clear and concise exposition of the subject, and fallacies of the Utah faction.

The Resurrection of the Wicked, by Elder W. J. Smith, an excellent treatise on the resurrection of those who "die in their sins."

Mutilation of the Pyramids.

Hundreds of thousands of tons of stone have been removed by generation after generation, from the Pyramids, to build and rebuild modern Cairo. This constant mutilation is most clearly shown in the case of the second Pyramid of Gizeh, of which an illustration is given in the January Delimitator, with numerous others of Egypt and its historic wonders, in an extremely interesting article by the evangelist Ira D. Sankey, the first of two papers describing his trip through Egypt and Palestine.

"INCURABLE" HEART DROPSY SPEEDILY CURED.

THE WELL KNOWN HEART SPECIALIST, FRANKLIN MILES, M. D., LL. B., OF CHICAGO, WILLS BLDG. 49 N. WOOD ST. HIS NEW DROPSY TREATMENT FREE.

Drowning in the water of one's own blood is a fearful death which Dr. Miles' great Dropsy discovery will almost invariably cure. It is certain to be the result of this new and startling cure for Heart Disease and Dropsy, though complicated with nerve and stomach trouble, that a short course of treatment will be sent free to any of our readers. As Dr. Miles is well known throughout the United States as a specialist in Heart Diseases every one afflicted with weakness or disease of the heart or dropsy is advised to write at once for his new treatment, and opinion.

Hardly a day passes but that incurable cases have been cured by this new treatment after five to twenty physicians had failed.

Mrs. M. B. Moreland of Toledo, O. (Michigan Co. Ohio), says: "Dr. Miles saved my life by curing me of that awful disease, dropsy, and heart trouble. Miss Sophia Snowberg of No. 232 1/2 St. Ave., Minneapolis, writes that "three days after commencing to take treatment for Dropsy it was nearly all gone, after two applications and two hours of rest, and I felt very well." Mr. A. P. Colburn of Mesquite, Iowa, writes: "Dr. Miles' treatment of my heart trouble was a miracle for me. I had been suffering from dropsy for three years. I had lost my leg from dropsy. My heart reached to his lungs and caused another scotch cough, shortness of breath. He soon cured me. Dropsy of all kinds better every way." Mr. James Pinkerton, editor of the Rushville, Ind., writes: "Mrs. Lewis gives me three physicians, she owes her life to Dr. Miles' skill. She now performs her household duties at sixty years of age."

1000 References to Bishops, Clergymen, Pastors, Farmers, and others. Copyright Examination Blank pamphlets and Special Personal Treatment free on request. Twenty-five years experience in all cases. Every State, Territory, Canada, Mexico and Europe. Send full address, before this liberal offer expires, to Dr. Franklin Miles, 491 to 209 Wood St., Chicago, Ill., with history of your case. "OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS." DAUGHTERS OF ZION Mrs. H. B. CURTIS, Editor.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committees will be pleased to hear from you, and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

The Home a Preparatory Factor

More than nineteen hundred Christmas-tides have come and gone since the night when the watchful shepherds, on the plains of Bethlehem, heard the glad song of the angels, "Peace on earth, good will to men;" and received the announcement, "Unto you, is born, this day, in the city of David, a Savior which is Christ the Lord."

It was a small and humble group to receive announcement of the coming of a King, and it was a lowly pillow on which the head of the King rested; but his kingdom was destined to wield a greater influence in the world than any other kingdom had ever done. One historian writing of the event, says, "It was unheralded in Rome, though it was filled with profound significance, not only for Rome, but for the whole world."

The great works of God are not often apparent in their beginning, for they are not attended with pomp and show; but quietly, though surely, they move on to their accomplishment. So this King, though opposed by those who should have been his friends, went quietly about establishing his kingdom in the midst of those ready to receive him, and its influence has gone on through all the intervening ages down to our own time; and still his work is not completed, for it must go on and on, until all the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ. Ah! happy time that will be: for his kingdom will not be set up by a conquest of blood, but by a conquest of love, and his subjects are his by choice and not by force.

What a change must needs take place, when those who are now moved by feelings of selfishness, pride and avarice, submit and surrender themselves to the peaceful and gentle influence of love, and all enmity is banished from the earth. Every one who has taken upon himself the name of the King, is called on to be a co worker with him in the accomplishment of this purpose. Each one in his own place, and according to the ability he possesses, by example and by precept.

Daughters of Zion, who among all of those thus called, are placed in a position to wield greater influence in that direction than are we? It is our inherent right and duty to labor with those upon whom impressions are most easily and lastingly made. Shall we see to it that those impressions are for good and not for evil? God is the author of homes, they have his divine sanction, and should partake of his divine methods, in-so far as we are given wisdom to understand and apply them. His love is compared to that mother-love, than which there is nothing greater, save it be his own. In striving to make our homes preparatory to the kingdom of God, dare we slight or overlook even one of the principles he has established for the building up of that kingdom, virtue, faith, obedience, godliness? Verily no. It is in the home that these principles are inculcated within the hearts and minds of its inmates to grow and be nurtured by us. And what is more susceptible to any influence than the heart and mind of a little child? It is not only our privilege, but our solemn duty to follow closely the plan of God in our homes; loving, but chastising where needful, and withal striving to build up characters in those whom God has given us, of whom he will not be ashamed at his coming.

Only in this way are we fulfilling our duty as home-makers and builders, and making the home what God destined it should be, one of the great factors to prepare his people for his coming. One sister said, in my hearing, the other day, after having seen a parent successful in securing obedience where it had seemed well nigh improbable, that she had almost been convinced we could have our children pretty much what we desire, if we go about it in the right way.

A few days ago I was visiting a friend who has three little boys, as lively little fellows as you would find in a day's journey, but during the dinner hour they were as quiet and orderly as any children I ever saw, and, being intimate in the family, I complimented the little fellows on being such little gentlemen at the table; when their father said, "We won't have any other kind of little folks at the table. There is where we draw the line; they may play as much as they like at other times, but when they come to the table they must be quiet and orderly." That is just the point. Where we draw the line and stand firmly by it, we are generally able to secure obedience. It is because we are too easily overcome by the obstacles in our way, and yield our influence too readily, that we so often fail in our efforts. Can we not look back upon our past experiences and recall instances where we have been just on the point of giving up in some struggle with our children; but we were prompted to a little more effort, and lo! our purpose was accomplished.

But if we are to be co-workers with the King in this great work of bringing the nations of the earth to a willing submission to his sway, our homes—for that is where our work lies—must be a reflex of the dealings of God with his children. God's gift to the world was a little child, 'twas given through woman's agency. Let the honor sink deeply into the heart of every mother in Israel, to the renewing of our determination to mould the characters of our children—also God's gift to us—after the divine model, and if we do this, we must surely employ the means divine made manifest in the life of Christ and clearly set forth in his teachings to mankind, so that when he shall come again as King of Kings, our own may also be kings and priests of his own choosing.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

Dear Ensign.—While waiting the critic's report, and as the pale moon peeps above the eastern horizon and sends her glimmering rays of silvery light through the silent trees on the "Hill of Promise" and across the calm waters that were once sanctified(?) and held sacred for the salvation of the dead by innocent and misguided ones of this "Strang's," once busy city now wrapped in that weird and awful silence akin to that of the damned—we turn our footsteps homeward—and onward to other fields; the soft autumnal wind, moaning its requiem over the silent mounds that hold the unrevealed secrets and many, many, mysterious events, that make up as a whole or contribute to "The marvelous work and a wonder." Bro. Heman has secured a few valuable acquisitions to his historical library and gleaned facts which will be laid away in the archives to be heard and read in after years and coming ages.

On the morrow, seated in the old "platform" driven by our worthy Bro. Penilton, we wend our way to the East Delavan branch on the beautiful shores of Lake Geneva, near the village of Williams Bay. Here we meet some of the old time saints who have ever been zealous in good works. The branch is presided over by W. A. McDowell High Priest. Business meeting called, Bro. Heman gives good and wholesome council to all concerned. In company with our brethren we visit the Yerkes academy in which is located the second largest telescope in the world; it stands in a tower ninety feet in diameter and one hundred and twenty feet high, overlooking Lake Geneva, Williams Bay and a beautiful surrounding country. The lenses of this mammoth sky gazer are 40 inches and cost $40,000 each; the "scope" is sixty-two feet in length and weighs sixty tons, it cost $80,000 without the lenses, and was a gift by Mr. C. T. Yerkes, in 1897—additional machinery is employed in connection with this monster in measuring diameters of planets, distances and magnitudes of stars—nebulous comets etc. In visiting this, one of the grandest lake resorts in Wisconsin, do not forget the tower.

Bidding good bye to our Bro. Heman, who has been called home to attend the funeral of his cousin, and our much beloved and lamented brother, D. W. Wight, in whom were all the elements of spiritual greatness, whose brilliancy and usefulness were so grandly unfolding; such a serious loss or why it should be permitted only intensifies the great mystery; but in the language of another, "Its God's way, his will and not ours be done."

Stopping over night in the beautiful little village of Geneva—with a worthy lonely bereaved brother—with whom some duplicate sister could find a haven of rest, we board the cars for Elgin, Illinois, especially so to visit our brother, David H. Smith, who has endured so patiently for lo, these many years. In due time Elgin is announced, and we wend our way to the beautiful grounds of a thousand acres in the center of which is situated the state asylum.

Crossing over the threshold and through the ponderous gates we encounter the guard, after the salutation we make inquiry for one, David H. Smith. We were directed to the doctor in charge, who kindly and pleasantly furnished a guide directing us toward a group of men, who were enjoying the shadow and shade 'neath the evergreen monarch's. "That's Mr. Smith in the rustic seat," he said pointing in the direction. We stepped up to him extending our hand, with, "And this is David H. Smith I presume." "Yes sir, but I do not recall you, what is your name please?" But here's the ENSIGN, excuse us until our next.

Pittsburg Church Dedication.

We are pleased to announce that our new church is nearing completion and Providence permitting, will be dedicated Sunday, January 5, 1902. The erection of this church by this little band of Saints has been no small undertaking, but friends both in and out of the church have assisted and the Lord has opened up the way beyond our expectations and has crowned their efforts with success. To him be all the glory.

We hope all who can conveniently do so will attend the dedication services. We hope to see the church crowded, and expect to have a glorious time. There will be prayer meeting in the morning at 9:30; preaching at 10:45 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. by several of the brethren—each occupying about 10 minutes—and preaching at night at 7:30.

On account of the scattered condition of the Saints in order to attend all the meetings, it has been suggested that we bring our lunches and come prepared to stay all day. The church is located on Miller Street near Colwell Street. Take Center Avenue cars to Miller, or 5th Avenue cars to 5th Avenue High school.

Those who cannot come, but desire to assist us financially, may forward their donations to Wm. Dougherty, California Avenue, Avalon, Allegheny Co., Pa. The smallest amount will be appreciated and thankfully received.

In gospel bonds,

F. G. PITT, Pastor.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

The 12th conference of the North-east Texas and Choctaw Nation district convened at Wilburton, I. T., Friday, November 22 to 25, 1901; presidents E. D. Bailey and E. A. Erwin in charge; A. Z. Rudd clerk.

Branches reported: Wilburton, Manchester, Jacksonville, Shawnee, Cove and Granville.

Ministerial reports were read from 16 elders, 6 priests and 3 teachers; 408 sermons preached.

A resolution was passed that this conference request each branch in the district to take up a collection the 3d Sunday of each month to be placed in the hands of the district president for a tract fund. A collection of $3 51 was taken up to start this fund.

The next conference is to convene with the Jacksonville branch near Euclid, Arkansas, about July 25th or August 1st. The exact date was left with the district president; conference to begin on Friday, and after conference business is over to continue over two Sundays in reunion. The district president was authorized to appoint a committee to arrange for the reunion.

The majority of delegates present at General Conference were empowered to cast the entire vote of the dis-

How Mistletoe Comes to Be.

The story of how the mistletoe gets on the trees is a most interesting one. Covering the mistletoe twigs are pearly white berries. These come in the winter season, when food is comparatively scarce, and hence some of our birds eat them freely. Now when a robin eats a cherry he swallows simply the meat and flips the stone away. The seed of the mistletoe the bird cannot flip. It is sticky and holds to his bill.

His only resource is to wipe it off, and he does so, leaving it sticking to the branches of the tree on which he is sitting at the time. This seed sprouts after a time and not finding earth—which indeed its ancestral habit has made it cease wanting—it sinks its roots into the bark of the tree and hunts there for the pipes that carry the sap. Now the sap in the bark is the very richest in the tree, far richer than that in the wood, and the mistletoe gets from its host the choicest of food. With a strange foresight it does not throw its leaves away as do most parasites, but keeps them to use in winter, when the tree is leafless.—Prof. S. C. Schaeucker in December Ladies' Home Journal.

Mormonism Denounced.

The twenty seventh annual meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at The Willard, 1921 Arch St., yesterday morning. It opened at 10:30 o'clock with a large attendance, and, with a short recess, lasted until late in the afternoon.

The special subjects of debate were Mormonism and the anti-cantent movement. Mormonism was denounced in the report of the president, Mrs. Anne Craig Peacock, and Mrs. Mary Clark De Vere, a returned missionary from Utah, spoke of her experiences in the Territory of Brigham Young.

"The advance of Mormonism," said Mrs. Peacock, "is a great overshadowing blight of national extent and importance. Once shut up within the Territory of Utah, it now boasts of the control or balance of power in thirteen States. Besides, it is permeating with its poison our own and other States through missionaries being successful in leading many silly dupes, especially women, into its deadly embrace. It is recommended that most earnest prayer and petition work and other means of influence be brought to bear upon our national lawmakers to present a Constitutional amendment for action by the people from this Satanic blight upon the twentieth century.—The Philadelphia Times, Nov. 30, 1901.

Long Hair

"About a year ago my hair was coming out very fast, so I bought a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor. It stopped the falling and made my hair grow very rapidly, until now it is 45 inches in length."—Mrs. A. Boydston, Atchison, Kans.

There's another hunger than that of the stomach. Hair hunger, for instance. Hungry hair needs food, needs hair vigor—Ayer's. This is why we say that Ayer's Hair Vigor always restores color, and makes the hair grow long and heavy. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

OBEY THE TRUTH.

To be "Orthodox" in one's faith now a days, it is necessary to bring ones views into line with the standard of ideas and theories resultant from the placing of a strained interpretation upon the Scriptures, by a class of men who have set themselves up as judges as to what is proper and right to believe, as being essential to salvation. To have an opinion of your own, and to express it forcibly, is to call down upon you the contempt and disdain of these wise men of the "orthodoxy," regardless of the fact that you may have the irrefragable support of the very standard which they themselves accept as being authoritative. When we look at the matter squarely, it does seem an act of inexcusable presumption for any set of men to place an interpretation upon that which belongs to one as much as to another—and in fact is not their property at all—and then say, "Unless you accept our interpretation you are wrong," enforcing ostracism and contempt so far as they may be able, upon all who refuse to join with them. But it is a fact, that in effect this has been in the past, and is today, being done with regard to the Scriptures, the word of God. Peter, the apostle, says:

"Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."
—2 Peter 1: 20, 21.

Mr. Cowper recognized man's fallibility when he undertakes to place his interpretation on the things of God, and in that grand hymn which has brought comfort to hundreds and thousands, he expresses the sentiment:

Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan his work in vain.
God is his own Interpreter,
And he will make it plain.

The principle of unbelief is the very foundation of the interpretation the so-called "orthodoxy" have placed upon that which is written; consequently errors have taken the place of truth in many instances, and when the Scriptures are cited and the Lord's own interpretation is placed upon his teachings, it is made apparent that their interpretations do not correctly interpret, though the argument to sustain them be ever so ingenious. It is not often that two individuals from the same viewpoint will see things exactly alike in every respect; and it is seldom that two individuals from their own judgments will comprehend the same subject precisely the same way; and though on general lines an agreement may be reached, each will have his own reasons for doing so. Hence, when it comes to so important a matter as the interpretation of the things of God, it is not safe or wise to accept that of any man or class of men, unless such interpretation is undeniably in harmony with that which is revealed from heaven, and written for our guidance. There is one thing upon which all may rest their faith, God never changes; his word is sure; hence the significance of the Apostle Peter's statement:

"We have also a more sure word of prophecy whereunto ye do well to take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place."
—2 Peter 1: 3.

It never alters, but remains the same through all ages until its fulfillment, and every one may turn to it with the fullest confidence knowing it to be just as true now as when it was written.

It is a clear statement of the Apostle Paul that the things of God are only discernible by the Spirit of God (1 Cor. 2: 14), from which the argument is justifiable that without men are in possession of the same Spirit in which these things were revealed and indited, serious errors are liable to be made. The conclusion is also justified that no one who has himself neglected to honor the revealed will of God, so far as it has been made plain in the Scriptures, is a safe guide to follow in his interpretation of them. Our Savior has plainly informed us as to how a true follower may be discerned and known. "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." (John 14: 21). And no matter how strong a profession of loyalty to God an individual may make, if he fails to follow the Lord, and uses his ingenuity in an argument to evade what is plainly shown to be a necessary requisite to his admission into the kingdom of God—baptism (immersion) for the remission of sins, by an authorized minister of Christ, his profession is vain, and he stands as a false witness in the sight of heaven and the true followers of Christ.

To be "orthodox" with God and with men, has very many times been shown to be two widely different matters. Christ was not orthodox with the sects of his day. Nor is he with many of them today, judging by the record he left of himself. Only a very small proportion of the distinctive doctrines that mark the church of the New Testament, can be found in the popular societies of this day; hence in them he would not be accounted "orthodox;" at least, some of his doctrines are not accepted as being "needful in the churches which men have formed, and called Christ's," today. Let a humble servant of Jesus Christ, clothed with his authority to officiate in all the ordinances of his house, go to any of the popular churches of the day and teach just what Jesus and his servants taught, faith, repentance, baptism (by immersion), for the remission of sins, laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, resurrections and eternal judgment, insisting upon their obedience before men can become heirs of salvation, and how many would open their doors to receive him? Yet those are the principles of the doctrine of Christ (Heb. 6: 1, 2), and Paul says: "If any man though an angel from heaven preach any other, let him be accursed." (Gal. 1: 8). But those are the things which are not accepted as "orthodox" today, as being necessary for salvation now. If any one doubts this statement it can be easily verified by inquiry of any minister of almost any church, anywhere. It is a strange state of affairs indeed.

To be orthodox, is to be absolutely right in the true meaning of the term. It is to be in perfect harmony with the Lord; to make the will of God paramount in all things; to accept and obey that which he has given for our guidance. Webster's definition of the word orthodox is, 1, "Sound in opinion or doctrine, especially in religious doctrine; hence holding the christian faith; believing the doctrines taught in the Scriptures." [Emphasis ours.—Ed.] 2, "According or congruous with the doctrine of Scripture, the creed of a church, the decree of a council, or the like."

The Scriptures themselves, are manifestly the basis or foundation for a correct and truthful belief. The interpretation of all who claim to be "orthodox" must therefore, be supported by the Scriptures; if they are not, as so very frequently is manifest, then they wrongfully assume prerogatives which do not belong to them, when accusing of heterodoxy or as being in error, those who differ from them on scriptural grounds. If you notice it, error always requires considerable argument to sustain it, and there must be a great deal of wresting of records to give it prestige. It is not the truth which requires any great argument to establish it, for it will always demonstrate itself if opportunity is given. It is the error that necessitates argument to overthrow it, and in combatting it, the truth must be used. For instance, the statement of the Savior in John 7: 17: "If any man will do his [God's] will, he [any man] shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself," does not really require an argument to show that God's promises have always been fulfilled, to prove that this one is true. The most simple and direct way is to meet its requirements, obey the gospel and permit it to demonstrate itself, in doing which an experience will be gained which no argument or sophistry, however deep or cunning, can overthrow. When God speaks it ought to be an end of controversy with all who profess to give credence to his word as being authority; but unfortunately this is not so; and so long as the world lasts, in its present condition, error will make itself felt. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, presents the same doctrine in all its ordinances and blessings for the consideration and acceptance of all, with the definite and certain promise that if any man will obey the gospel precisely as men and women obeyed it in the days of the Savior, under the same authority, they WILL receive precisely the same evidences, testimony and recognition as the Saints of those days did, and will know that they have accepted the truly, and only, orthodox faith. Try it honestly, humbly, sincerely, prayerfully—and witness the demonstration of the truth to you, by the Holy Spirit of promise.

GENERAL CHURCH NEWS.

INDEPENDENCE.

Bro. Joseph Luff will preach at the Saint's church next Sunday morning.

Bro. W. A. Smith returned from his mission field in Iowa the 15th inst. to spend the holidays with his family.

Bro. and Sr. Roy Newkirk returned Saturday last from Illinois, where they have been residing the past four months. Sr. Newkirk was marvelously helped in answer to prayer offered in her behalf. They were given a welcome home by the Saints.

Sunday was a lovely day and the attendance was pretty fair. At the morning Bishop R. May, delivered a very instructive and forceful sermon, upon the mission of Christ. At night Bro. Wm. A. Smith discoursed on the resurrection in a manner that called forth approving comments. The afternoon fellowship meeting was most excellent, the Spirit admonishing the Saints to diligence and giving promise of needed blessing for the future. The lower auditorium was nearly full. It was a grand experience.

Bro. James C. and Rufus T. and Sr. Emma Dell Smith were received as members of the Independence branch last Sunday afternoon on letters of removal from Des Moines, Iowa; and Brn. Clifford R. and Victor V. and Sr. Olive May Bell Smith were received on certificates of baptism, their names through some oversight or misunderstanding not having been recorded on any branch record. We welcome them to our midst.

Bro. and Sr. H. R. Mills and daughter Mabel, Bro. and Sr. A. H. Mills and Bro. Frank Mills departed for Lamoni, Iowa, on Tuesday morning, where Sr. Laura Mader of that place and Bro. Frank Mills were to be married Christmas day, Bro. H. R. Mills being selected to pronounce the mystic and portentous words. Lamoni is gradually coming our way and we have plenty of room for all the good people they send us.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

Our quarterly conference closed last night under a most excellent spirit of peace and good will. It will be one of the green spots in the memory of good old Far West district—Bro. T. W. C. please take notice. The district was quite well represented by delegates who brought the spirit of love and unity, uniting with that already in St. Joseph, made a happy aggregate. Bro. T. T. Hinderks presided, assisted by Elder B. J. Dice. "Charley" did the reading, and Bro. Leverton was the scribe—we had no Pharissee present. Reports showed 263 sermons, 13 baptisms with a net gain for the district of 33, the present number being 1,216. Brn. Swensen, Adams, Haden, Dice, Faul of the missionary force were present. Brn. Adams, Haden and Swensen doing the preaching. The afternoon was occupied by a splendid prayer service, presided over by our veteran Bro. Summerfield and Bro. Dice. The same officers were continued, with Stewarts ville as the place for next conference, March 22d. Thus history is made.

With the new year we have planned to enter still deeper into the mission work, commencing with a protracted meeting at the Aspey mission, Sunday January 5, 1902, to be followed by like meetings at other points. Aid for the mission work in the city is always acceptable, in money, prayers and presence. We are laborers together with God for the accomplishment of good. Prospects are good for the opening of a new and important mission the first of the year. If successful we hope to open with a rally and under divine favor.

Bro. E. J. Dice occupied the Aspey mission pulpit last evening. Bro. Chas. Householder gave us a good gospel talk at South Park in the morning.

At the close of last evening's service an appeal was made in behalf of the church publications. A response of one five year subscriber for the ENSIGN, resulted.

Aside from the sadness of parting with our dear Bro. Elmer E. Johnson, our trip to Chicago was a happy feast in being privileged to see many of the dear Saints, endeared to us by their associations. We found Bro. Sheehy very busy with a branch in each hand to look after, with the missionary wing also; but he has enough of the blood of Erin and the wisdom of the Lord to make him adequate to the task. He is well liked by the Saints.

Elder Wm. Roberts, our young Kansas missionary, took in our Sunday's service en route home where he expects to meet his wife from whom he has been separated for about five months. He will take the early morning fast train east.

A quiet wedding occurred in rooms of the St. Joseph hotel on Saturday evening. Mr. James E. Dodson and Miss Mary E. Kent being the contracting parties. The writer officiated.

The Sunday School convention and Rehgo passed off nicely with Brn. C. P. Faul and J. Gardner in charge respectively. Success to these helps.

Yours in bonds,

J. M. TERRY.

We have had all kinds of weather the past week; first, six inches of snow, then the mercury dropped to 14 below zero for one day, then it turned warm and the snow is all gone, and Sunday the wind blew and the dust flew.

Sunday was bright and warm and a large congregation of Saints greeted Bro. J. W. Morgan at the morning service as he discoursed on the duties and responsibilities of latter day Israel. He was also the speaker at the evening service.

The Religio was well attended; a great deal more interest is being taken in this branch of the work than heretofore.

Sr. Roush, mother of J. B., is visiting in Denver.

Bro. Sam Brannon is home from Graceland for the holidays. Several new branches will be organized in the district in the beginning of the new year.

LETTER DEPARTMENT.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Dec. 7.

Editor Ensign—When we wrote last we were just closing our tent work in the city. Bro. Wight and the writer left the city about November 10th, going to Underwood, where we labored a week, the writer going to Neola, where I preached twice on Sunday, 17th. Monday we both took train for Carson, where we labored all week until Saturday, when Bro. Wight went to Wheeler's Grove, the writer staying at Carson.

On Tuesday Bro. Chambers came on the ground to make arrangements for conference. His health is not very good, although he is feeling some better than in the past. On Friday the Sunday School convention met at Wheeler, with a good attendance for the location. Bro. T. A. Hougas and a number of workers from Farm Creek were present, and added greatly to the interest of the work. Two excellent papers were read, one by Sr. Edna Elswick, and one by Sr. Myrtle Gifford, by proxy. They were discussed at some length by the delegates. The schools in the district are making some progress, but great improvement might be made along some lines. Taken all together we have much to be thankful for in this line of gospel work.

Conference met Saturday with only a fair representation, but more delegates arrived during the day. Bro. D. H. Chambers was elected to preside for the ensuing three months, to succeed himself. Bro. Henry Kemp was chosen to assist. The reports from the priesthood showed that much gospel work had been done, but only by a few; many made the usual report, done no preaching, no reason being assigned for this neglect of duty. While the district has on its rolls some fifty members of the priesthood, there is not to exceed ten or twelve in active work, outside of the branches. Fifty per cent send no report, what is the cause of it? Some are unable to do much work because of old age, others have to contend against poverty, with large families to support, others with strong bodies and fair ability could devote Sundays, at least, to the work, but fail to do it. Others have abundance of this world's goods, but their entire time is taken up caring for earthly things, and getting more, and they have no time to devote to gospel work. The call is to go into the vineyard and labor, not alone for the mammon of this world, but for Christ. The Lord knew what excuses men would make: one had bought a yoke of oxen, another a farm, another had married; but will these excuses obtain, or will they be accepted when the Master calls us to give an account of our stewardship. They may satisfy the conscience of an avaricious man who spends all his time in accumulating the perishing things of life. Where is thy talent? will be the query. Oh, I had so much of this world's goods it took all my time to look after it, that it might accumulate. Ah, but thy talent. Thou slothful servant, you might at least have put my money where it would bring usury.

We have men who are able to devote their entire time to the ministry of the word, whose talents are rusting for want of use. Others who have nothing of this world's goods are giving their entire time to the work. Such, God will appropriate; such, will hear the Master say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Wealth may give us social position and furnish a passport into the best of society, but will, unless used wisely as God's stewards, be a means of bringing us into condemnation. I believe if we, as a people, and especially Saints who have an abundance of this world's goods, would prayerfully study what Bible consecration means, we would soon have an overflowing treasury, and the College debt would be lifted at once, and the College filled with students from the families of Saints. It is foolish to talk of the gathering time when we are not willing even to keep the law of tithing.

It will be necessary for a great change to come over the spirit of our dreams before we are ready to enter upon that important work. One who is not willing to make an entire consecration of everything to God, and be willing to devote the excess toward the work of building up Zion, and enlarging her borders, is not fitted to enter into this important work.

I have talked to some about taking the church papers, and the reply has been, We are not able, and yet a little cutting down here and there, a little plainer style of dress, and above all, a disposition to aid the church enterprises, would loose the purse strings. "The Saints in common, with all others, have prospered for several years greatly, and have grown rich under God's blessings. Oh, what a blessing it would be to us as a people, if we were only willing to sacrifice. What we do that costs us no labor, pain, or that will not be missed or felt, is no sacrifice to God. Only the giving, or doing of that which costs some effort, will be acceptable to God. The Master said the widow who cast her mite into the treasury gave more than all the others, because she gave all, even her living. I have no money to give out of my little pension, but am giving all my time to the ministry, asking nothing of the church. May God awaken us, as a people, to see our duty, and put it in our hearts to lift the burden from Graceland College, and aid our brethren in the foreign missions is my prayer.

Yours in bonds,
J. S. STRAIN.

TOPEKA, Kans. Dec. 17.

Editor Ensign—It has been a long time since I have troubled your columns, though all the while I have been a reader of its pages, which are always laden with good news, how the gospel winds its way.

We have no very flattering report to make from this part, but good seed has been sown and people are becoming more and more acquainted with our claims; yet it seems like the world is slow to accept of this work. I was directed by our sub-missionary in charge, Elder J. C. Foss, to come to this place, and labor in the country, in a community where the Utah elders had been at work and converted some of their faith.

We found considerable prejudice against us at first, most people thinking we were the same as the Utah elders; but we are glad to state that a great many now understand that there is a difference between us and them, and that we condemn polygamy. Some are quite friendly, while others are very bitter, and closed the school-house against us; this was done by the school teacher, backed by one of the school board. The reason given for closing it against us, while the Methodists were permitted to hold meetings when they wanted to, was that we were unpopular in the neighborhood. The other two directors seemed willing for us to have the house; they had a meeting of the school board, it is now open for all in the day time only.

While in this part I shared the hospitality of Mr. W. E. Noble and family, who believe with us, but for some reason, are not ready to take the initiative step to make them heirs in the kingdom. Have preached at other places in and around Topeka; here in town we have our meetings in a private house, as we have no public place of meeting. There is a willing little band of Saints here, presided over by Bro. Chas. Tillighast. We certainly believe there are many of the sheep of God here in this town, who are blinded by pretercraf, but its a hard matter to reach them with the gospel; our numbers so few and little means to procure halls to hold meetings in.

I have been laboring alone this fall and winter and can heartily endorse the article of Bro. C. J. Spurlock in a  Herald  of a few weeks ago, regarding the ministry laboring two and two. Bro. Frank Tignor has arranged to go out with me some this winter; he has horse and buggy for our conveyance. We had made all arrangements to start north on a four the 17th inst., but on account of the sudden change in the weather we left our horse at home, and went by rail to Stratton, twenty miles south, where we met with the Saluts on Sunday in prayer, and preaching services. We have some good people here, willing to sacrifice for the work, with plenty of others indifferent and willing to let them. It was not forgotten that it costs a missionary something to ride on the cars, if it is only half price. Our fare was more than paid. We came back on Monday; expect to leave tomorrow (Wednesday) on our before contemplated trip.

Owing to difficulties in getting places to preach I have not made an average of more than two preaching services a week. If our people who live in communities where churches or school-houses are open for preaching, would let us know about such as might be profitable to work, I would save much unnecessary work and would be a great help to the missionary. We are all, or should be, workers together to build up the kingdom of God among men. I feel courageous to battle on; the work gets brighter to me as I continue in it. Dear Saints, let us all work while it is day.

Yours in the covenant of truth,

OLIVERALL, IND., Dec. 16.
Editor Ensign—I love to read the letters and also the sermons in these columns. This morning as I read the letter of Sr. Ella R. Devore, (although I am not acquainted with her) my heart was made to rejoice. She spoke of the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith and of his career cut short so early in life. It brought to my mind a view I had of the prophet Joseph Smith and his son. If the editor will allow me space I will relate it.

I first heard this gospel when I was fourteen years old and believed it, and united at that time with the church known as the Cutlerite church; and while I remained with them, I tried to live to the principals they taught; I was contented and to some degree was happy. Let me state here as I look back upon that time I have only to bless the day and the people who taught me the first principles of the gospel. I was honest in my belief and so I judge them. I am looking forward and praying that all the different factions of the church who are honest will yet be united. About twenty-five years ago I first heard of the Reorganized Church; Elder T. W. Smith and his wife came on a mission to this people; and at that time I partly believed they were right. But it seemed to me before I would be justified in making the change I must have a testimony. I made this a subject of prayer but did not get the witness I desired. I believe there was good seed sown at that time, and also the evil one sowed his seed: things arose which kept me from uniting with the true church.

However I became dissatisfied where I was and for the last fourteen years I have been doing nothing in any church. I turned my attention to the ball room and other amusements; I got no satisfaction there. As years rolled on and I saw my children growing up without receiving the teaching that I knew was my duty to give them, I began to think it was time to make a change. I desired to be a Christian but I did not know which way to turn. My mind was troubled, none but God knew the anguish of my heart. Often I have gone to my room and told the Lord if I knew which way to turn I would do so; it seemed to me that the Spirit of the Lord had almost withdrawn from my heart; the Bible almost seemed like a sealed book to me, yet at times that small still voice called after me.

In this condition of mind I attended the reunion held here last June; their preaching and the power which attended it was wonderful; it was different than what I expected; they spoke as men having authority. I listened with attention and felt that I wanted to go back and hear them again. I continued to attend. I desired to have a talk with the elders but dreaded to do so as I had seen so much of a spirit of contention between the two churches and I knew that these men were learned men; I thought what little I could say would amount to nothing. However the opportunity came, and I was surprised, and astonished; we had not talked long before I could see that the Spirit of contention was not with them, it seemed to me they were praying for me. I asked Elder Hilliard to explain a passage in the book of Covenants; he did so, and also read the passage where it speaks of the blessing that should rest upon the head of Joseph's posterity after him, and while he was reading I thought in my mind I believe Joseph's son is the man to lead the church, and I determined to obey. I was baptized, and praise be to God, when I went to the water for baptism, the lake was as calm as a summer's morning; the peace of heaven was upon those waters, and within my heart I felt a spirit of forgiveness towards all mankind. I knew I had found the right way, the more excellent way, and to God I give the praise.

A short time after I had united with the church the thought occurred to my mind that I had never received a testimony that it was Joseph's son's right to lead the church. I could only say I believed it. While I was pondering these things in my mind, this view came before me—I saw the prophet Joseph driven from his home, mobbed, cast into prison, the last morning he left Nauvo never to return again alive. How he said he was going like a lamb to the slaughter all for the one purpose of bringing back this gospel to earth again, and then gave up his own life, and then these words seemed to speak right within my soul: Would I desire to take away from his son that blessing which God had said should rest upon the head of his posterity after him? I could see this man grown to manhood an honorable man, a man believing in the same gospel his father did, and enjoying the same blessing his father would have enjoyed had he lived; and again the voice spoke, "Would I be one to say it was not his right?" God forbid, I pondered these things over in my mind, and again the voice spoke, "Is not this testimony enough?" And I said Yes, Lord, it is enough, I will never doubt again. And I felt in my mind I had rather give up my own life than ever doubt again but that Joseph's son was the man to lead this church.

I have not words to express the sadness that came into my heart when I realized that I had been one who had tried to place that blessing somewhere else. Neither can I tell you the joy and gladness that filled my heart when I knew I had gained the testimony that I desired years ago. The question of authority was settled forever in my mind. My husband united with the church the same time that I did, and together we rejoice in this great latter day work. The truth of this work is written upon the tablets of my heart; it is imprinted upon my soul, and God alone, not man, has placed it there.

Hoping and praying for the spread of this gospel, I am your sister in the one faith.

ETHELBERT, Manitoba, Dec. 4.

Dear Ensign—As I have been placed in this far famed northwest in company with Elder Alexander McMullen, as a collaborator, to prosecute missionary work; and thinking perhaps a few lines from these parts would be of interest to some of the Saints, at least, I thought I would pen a few thoughts while the shades of night are gathering. I have waited for some time to have something to write, but nothing of moment seemed to present itself, neither could we discover it,—though we did considerable exploring,—until last Sabbath eve last inst. when we attended a Presbyterian service. The student who was on the circuit had exchanged appointments with an ordained man (make note of the cause of exchanging, we will draw attention to it later) that he might administer the sacrament. As stated, we attended the meeting and listened attentively and "note-or-lously" (as supposed to be exposition of Mormonism, which consisted chiefly in a rehearsal of "Joe Smith's" money digging and gold hunting explorations, together with some ridiculous statements with regard to "sain washing in water" (baptism) and the laying on of hands "for some purpose" as his reverence(?) was pleased to affirm.

We cannot remember all of the non-sensical things which he said, nor would we deem it wise to write them if we could, for many were too silly to tell twice over. We let him go through his catechism un molested,—always trying to muster a smile of encouragement when he chanced to glance our way—and when he had succeeded in getting the animosity of his congregation worked up to a goodly pitch against their neighbors—especially those who belonged to the Mormons—he administered the sacrament. Query: whether is it better to administer the sacrament when the mind is filled with hate, or when it was filled with love? Further, is it the minister's duty to stir up his subject's animosity or their mercy and love?

But back to our story, again: after attending to this ordinance he pronounced his benediction and before the congregation began to move out I announced that if they would come to order we would reply to some statements that had been made, etc., at which, the stentorian voice of Rev. (?) Mr. Taylor rang out with "Not now sir" but being confident of our position and that with the pronouncing of his benediction he had forfeited his command, we meekly informed him—for he seemed to be ignorant of it till then—that, "he had pronounced his benediction," and stepped on the platform beside him. At this he demanded, in thundering tones, "Who are you?" We informed him that it didn't matter much who we were but that we were representing the faith which he had tried to demolish? At this he extended his hand for me to grasp and said "Oh, you are a Mormon." I refused the outstretched hand and gravely shaking my head replied in the negative, seeing I could not be caught by that bait, he said, "You're a Latter Day Saint." I replied in the affirmative and accepted the still extended hand. No sooner had I taken it when the words "Your a Mormon" "Your a Mormon" resounded in my ears with this sequel "You believe in the Book of Mormon" of course these old scores were easily met and we tried to get the attention of the audience, but this noisy preacher had to keep his tongue wagging, though we repeatedly asked him to be quiet and show Christian principal. I think his supply was short, for every minute or two he would interrupt our reply as long as he stayed, this was no longer than it took him to get ready to leave, however, and when he went part of the congregation followed.

This caused a lull in proceedings; and to the remaining number the review was continued by Elder McMullen (he then taking the stand) and for three quarters of an hour was not interrupted while he showed up many of Mr. Taylor's false statements and misrepresentations. Suffice to say we think we gained friends while his reverence (?) "kicked against the pricks"; for numbers of his own mind voiced their displeasure at his conduct toward us. And so the glorious work rolls on.

We find Manitoba has room for advancement in many ways but that is the case with every new country. Since our arrival our minds have been carried back to the memories of childhood when we listened to our parents tell of the tallow-dip which they used to use for illuminating purposes having basked under one on one occasion. Again, to one who it used to a densely settled country where all the modern appliances, together with building material is within reach of nearly all: to see a log cabin with sod-roof or thatched-roof there is quite a striking contrast. However there are many honest people under their shelter and they must have the gospel preached to them.

We have just arrived at this place and have to make our first effort tonight. Already there are rumors of "The Mormons;" may God soon remove the mire that impedes the wheels of the gospel. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion and the uplifting of fallen humanity, I remain as ever,

HONNERTOWN, N. J., Dec. 16
Editor Ensign—I thought I would let you know how much we appreciate reading the ENSIGN; those to whom I have given it have also enjoyed reading it so much; it seems to strike the right chords, coming, as it does, with such good cheer and comforting words, refreshing to the soul, for which we are thankful to our heavenly Father, who helps his weary children along the road, bidding them to trust in him.

We are very few in number, and do not have the privilege of having meeting; conflicting circumstances hindering us somewhat just now, but we trust it will not always be this way. Some weeks past Bro. LaLue came, by request, from Philadelphia, to baptize a lady here, and he spoke in the evening to a few, and all seemed to enjoy it. I hope we may have opportunity for preaching in the future.

I want to do all the good I can if it is ever so little, and to help others to see the light of the gospel, for those who understand it can never forget, and I pray that the Lord will give me faith and sustain me, that I may live faithful unto the end. I trust every one who reads this welcome paper may come to the light and understanding of the gospel.

Yours in the faith,
MRS. SARAH A. HOPKINS.

BRYANT, MO., Dec. 16
Dear Ensign—Your pages come laden with news which makes the lonely missionary rejoice. Just closed a meeting at this point and another close by; baptized a couple of old people who belonged to the Campbellite faith. The gentleman has been investigating a long time, but he says my "bedstead sermon" settled the matter for him; there are several others very near, I think. Bro. Davis baptized four as he passed through here a few weeks ago. The Saints here have done well, they now have a nice log church, nicely furnished. There are some noble Saints here who think no sacrifice too great for this work. Many of them will give an elder the best bed and take anything themselves; and they don't all forget that it takes stamps; to write letters and a little money to buy shoes.

We were sorry to see our little preacher get the worst of his trade; I hope by next Conference he will be willing to come back to South Missouri district and be content in the land of the big, red apples.

It is storming now and very cold for this country, and I have to drive fifty miles to quarterly conference, and I am to miss my English plum pudding this Christmas. But our trials are very small compared to some of our missionaries no doubt, for we can get large crowds out to hear as a rule. We feel well in the work and desire to continue.

In bonds,

MONTREAL, MO., Dec. 3.
Editor Ensign—Permit me through the ENSIGN to make a few statements in regard to the work in this district. Notwithstanding we are having considerable opposition the work is moving along fairly well. Saturday November 30th I left home to join Bro. F. C. Warnky at this place, who had arranged to meet the Rev. Giddens, of the Christian church, in discussion to begin Monday evening, December 2d, each disputant affirming his church to be in harmony with the church of Christ, set up by divine authority nearly nineteen hundred years ago. I stopped at El Dorado Springs, and preached there Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night. We had a good hearing. Bro. A.

Lloyd recently baptized four there, those, with the two I recently baptized, makes six additions by baptism in the last month.

On my arrival here last evening I found both disputants on the ground, and seemingly anxious for the fray; however Mr. Giddens seemed determined to have things his way or he would not debate, and as it appeared that there had not been a positive agreement which church should be examined first, Mr. Giddens declared that he would not discuss unless his church went upon trial first, so we had to either accept it that way or have no discussion; so we consented and the discussion began, Mr. Giddens choosing for his moderator a minister of the Christian church, Bro. F. C. Warnky choosing the writer, and we chose for chairman a Mr. Howell. Notwithstanding Mr. Giddens affirms that his church harmonizes in faith, doctrine, organization and practice, with the church established or set up by divine authority nearly nineteen hundred years ago, and is the church of God in fact, he made no effort to show its identity, nor wherein it harmonizes, but simply made some statements and read and quoted some scripture relative to Christ establishing a church, and said that he was a member of that church. Bro. Warnky showed by different scripture that that church long ago ceased to exist as an organization, and requested his opponent to show where, when, and through whom it was restored. Bro. Warnky pressed Mr. Giddens to show wherein the said Christian church harmonizes with the ancient church, but it is apparent that Mr. Giddens is going to beat around and put in the time the best that he can until he gets upon the next proposition and then he expects to show his opponent wrong; but I rather think Bro. Warnky will bob up occasionally and by his pleasant smiles will demonstrate that he is there.

The discussion is to continue: twelve sessions of two hours each. There was a large attendance last evening, and the audience was quite orderly with the exception of a cheer and applause occasionally given each speaker. Bro. F. C. and I are domiciled with Mr. Thomas Collins and his good wife, who is a firm Latter Day Saint. They both do their best to make us comfortable, and we enjoy ourselves hugely. May the Lord bless them and all such helpers for their kindness. More later on.

Yours happy in the conflict,
JAMES MOLIER.

MIRACLES.

BY ALVIN KNISLEY.

It is often announced by the enemies of new revelation that if Joseph Smith was a divinely inspired prophet, and the Book of Mormon really what it purports to be, it ought to be demonstrated to them as such by an open display of the power of miracles which we claim is associated with the gospel, for the benefit and confirmation of the Saints. They tell us that Christ performed them for this object; and that object being accomplished they ceased, and therefore if God has again visited the earth, they say they have equally the same right to see similar manifestations.

Now if the sole object of Christ's miracles was to convince unbelievers of the truthfulness of his Messiahship, then these parties may expect to see the same today if they are in existence. But if this was not Christ's object in exhibiting miracles, but rather for the candidates to whom they were administered, and for his disciples, the unbelievers just casually seeing them, then modern revelation deniers may or may not see them, and yet the message may be true.

That Christ's principal object in performing miracles was not for unbelievers is evident from the fact that he always required faith on the part of the recipient of the cure. Farther, the fact that he was so secretive about his miracles in trying to keep it from being spread abroad in many instances, affords strong evidence that they were designed only for believers or for his disciples. Again, his refusal to give a sign where it was demanded by the Pharisees and other unbelievers is still more corroborative that they were not intended for those parties.

For proof of this see the following scriptural arguments: In Matthew 8:1-4 we find (in the first year of Christ's ministry) that a leper came to him and desired to be cleansed. After Jesus had responded to his prayer he said, "See thou tell no man." In Matthew 9:30 it is recorded that after he had cured or restored the sight of two blind men, he "charged them, saying, see that no man know it." After raising Jairus' daughter as found in Mark 5, it says "the [Christ] charged them strictly that no man should know it," 43d verse. In Mark 7:31-37 we read that after Christ left Tyre and Sidon and came into Galilee, one was brought unto him that was deaf and had an impediment in his speech. After Christ had taken "him aside from the multitude" and healed him, he "charged them that they should tell no man."

The eighth chapter of Mark informs us that when Jesus came to Bethsaida a blind man was brought unto him to be healed. And after Jesus "led him out of the town" he healed him, "And he sent him away to his house, saying, neither go into the town, nor tell it to any one in the town."—26th verse. In the next chapter we are told that Jesus cast a devil out of a boy, (his disciples' previously failing in the attempt) and when he had accomplished this wonderful event, the record says (verse 30) "And he would not that any man should know it." How strong this is! If Jesus wanted to verify the divine authenticity of his mission by miracles, why was he so private about it where circumstances permitted? Why did he not exhort them to publish it abroad if that was an entire proof of his Sonship?

People say if we will just show a sign they will believe. They tell us that they will embrace our doctrine, and that it would be the means of closing the mouths of those who are continually defying us to work miracles. I ask, What would they "believe" if we were to show them signs? Why they would believe(?) the Bible and that Jesus told the truth, when he said "these signs shall follow them that believe." If they believed the Bible as they should, they would believe our claim is right, without a sign.

It is claimed that the New Testament says that the spiritual gifts or signs were to be done away, and then these parties will turn directly around and tell us that if we will show them a sign they will believe we are right. What a dilemma they put themselves in when they say that if the New Testament says that the signs were to be done away, it would not change such a divine declaration in the least, if we would work a miracle. The New Testament prediction would remain the same with regard to the cessation of miracles, and if we did work a miracle, it would not prove that the New Testament did not say so. So in order for the sign seeker to believe in our miracle, they would have to disbelieve the blessed little book which they inform us declares they were to cease. If the word does say that miracles were to be done away and we would perform any, it would either prove our miracles to be of the devil, or that the supposed divine statement of their cessation is false.

We know, if the Bible is true, that those who do not even claim to have the spiritual gifts are wrong. It is not necessary to investigate their other claims, for if they teach that the spiritual gifts are not in their possession, they could not be otherwise than in error. So then, so far as supernatural gifts are concerned, Latter Day Saints cannot be condemned, and are right theoretically. When the seeker after truth has arrived at this point it will greatly assist him in his theological researches as there are but few who make the extraordinary claim of supernaturalism. He can then soon "seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness." But I would remind Mr. "Seeker" not to get so anxious and credulous that he would allow anything that has a semblance of the church of Christ to be palmed upon him because they do wonders. Remember that Jesus says, "There shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and they shall show forth great signs and wonders; insomuch that if it were possible they would deceive even the very elect."

If a doctrine is true in every other respect and the "signs" promised by Jesus attend it, accept it; but if you find one tenet wrong, reject it though its advocates turn rods into snakes, make frogs come upon the land as the magicians of Egypt, or make fire come down from heaven. The latter, the Apostle John said, would be done in the last days, as found in the 14th, 15th and 19th chapters of Revelation. If those things are not done in the last days, then John and Jesus did not tell the truth in saying they would. If then, they are or will be done in the last days, the man who says "Show me a sign and I will believe" places himself in a dangerous position—a position to be deceived.

Isaiah says (8:19, 20) "To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them." And Jesus says "He that is sent of God speaketh the things of God." An impostor will not teach a perfect doctrine. At least there is no case in history of which I am aware, where a doctrine true in every respect was taught or invented by an impostor. When people test a twenty dollar gold piece their object is to find out whether there is full value in it. If there is, it is regarded as genuine. If not, it is not genuine. It is silly in the extreme to suppose that a man will try to counterfeit a twenty dollar gold piece and put twenty dollars worth of gold in it. Although it is possible, it is very improbable, as his work would be for nothing. The object of an impostor is to deceive and impose something spurious on the people; and in order to perpetrate his scheme effectually, he must have some truth mixed with it. Therefore when I say an impostor will not teach a perfect doctrine I mean as a whole. It is contrary to his principle. Another idea is, the counterfeit comes in existence secondly or after the genuine. There never was a religious imposition but what the defects could be pointed out by the true servant of God. Mohammed, Swedenborg, and others taught doctrines that were in some respects true, yet they were impostors and their errors or defects are easily shown.

"But," says one, "you said if a doctrine is true and the signs promised by Jesus follow it, accept it; and yet you reason that I should accept it without seeing the signs." Most assuredly. But, I said miracles were not performed simply to make believers, but for the sick, and to confirm those who are believers, and consequently if you do see them; it will be by chance. When I ask people why they believe Christ performed miracles, they say, "Because the Bible says so." Then if it is consistent that we should believe dead witnesses who lived over 1800 years ago, is it not much more or just as consistent that you should believe living witnesses? I can furnish testimonies of healing from home to over 3000 miles away—incontrovertible. Moreover I ask if a miracle has been done in the 19th century is it not possible to prove it to anyone without them seeing it? Certainly it is; and for anyone to object to believing it because they did not happen to see it, is a sign that they are something like the multitude that followed Jesus around; not for his sake, but evidently to get filled with the loaves and fishes.

Again I ask professed believers in the Bible why they believe baptism is for the remission of sins? They will answer, "Because the Bible says so." That is just exactly why I believe the spiritual gifts and signs follow us. Now if the people can believe the former without a sign, why not the latter? Now how did Jesus respond when a sign was demanded of him in order that faith might be exercised in his divine mission. In Matthew 12: 38-42 we read that after he had been teaching the multitude "certain of the scribes and Pharisees answered, Master, we would see a sign from thee." But he answered and said unto them, "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall be no sign given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas." [Which was his resurrection]: "The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it; because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold, a greater than Jonas is here." Why will the men of Nineveh condemn "this generation?" Simply because "this generation" wont repent until they see a sign; and the men of Nineveh repented without signs at the preaching of Jonas. If it was inconsistent to suppose that they should have believed in him without signs, Jesus would certainly not have used such language. He surely thought he had given them sufficient reasons to believe in him without miracles.

In Matthew 16:1-4 there is recorded an interview Jesus had with the Pharisees and Sadducees, similar to the one quoted in the foregoing. It is shown that they tempted him in the act of asking a sign. Jesus said (John 4:48) "Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe." Thus it was wisest and most rational to believe without. In nearly, if not in every instance where the people demanded of Jesus a sign, he confronted them with the fact that it was not a good method to pursue, and farther he termed them a wicked and adulterous generation.

It is the height of absurdity for denominations, who deny spiritual gifts in this age, to claim that they were done anciently to make believers only; for if they were manifest for that purpose we unquestionably need them now, as there are thousands of people who do not believe. "But," says one, "we have the New Testament now to convince them with." I reply, that does not alter the case in the least. They do not believe the New Testament, and if people would not believe living witnesses 1800 years ago, who delivered the New Testament orally, why would they believe the written testimony of dead witnesses? If God is no respecter of persons, and he performed miracles 1800 years ago to convince the unbelieving nations of the authenticity of his Son's mission, he will not expect the unbelieving nations today to accept the same message without the same evidence (miracles) to substantiate it. If he does not do them today, it is either because everybody believes, or because there are no believers at all, as a medium through whom to perform them; or else, it is apparent he did not do them to make believers when the primitive organization of the church was effected. So down goes popular sectarianism on this point.

Common sense and the scriptures warrant the belief that if a man performs miracles under gospel influences and authorities it is a strong pre sumptive evidence that he is sent of God. Yet if he performs no miracles and brings a perfect doctrine, it should be accepted just the same. The message of Noah, and John the Baptist, who performed no miracles that we are aware of, was just as true and essential to the salvation of the human family as the message taught by Jesus, Peter or any other wonder worker.

New revelation deniers tell us that miracles were only given for the establishment of primitive christianity, and that purpose being accomplished, they therefore ceased; and the servant or ambassador of Christ after that was to be received without any miraculous exhibition. The same parties who make this claim admit that there was an apostasy from the original faith, and that christianity became extinct (on the earth). If they are correct in all this, why do they ask Latter Day Saints to authenticate their claims by signs now a days? The church the writer represents was organized in 1830 by Joseph Smith—over sixty years ago. It has been well established in the sense that I understand them to make use of the term. Miracles would be just as necessary for the re-establishment of the church as they would be for the primitive establishment; and if the church was disorganized as our opposers admit, it must of course therefore be reorganized before it could again exist. Then if miracles were to cease as soon as the church was established or re-established, I ask again (taking modern religionists on their own ground) Can we not prove the Book of Mormon and other church revelations true, in the absence of them.

Another prominent bulwark our opposers imagine they have which is unanswerable(?) to us, is found in the gospel as recorded by St. John, which reads, "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples which are not written in this book; but these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ." Certainly they were; but why do they (who use this quotation to rebut Latter Day Saints claims) not believe it when it is written? If they believe that Jesus is the Son of God and that he told the truth when he said, "These signs shall follow them that believe," why do they not abandon the doctrine that says they do not "follow"? James also says "Is any sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord * * * and the Lord shall raise him up," etc. Why do they not believe that, when it is written? A failure to observe the foregoing injunction as found in James 5: 14, 15 would show that they do not fully believe what is "written." They profess to believe that Jesus is the Son of God, but they want a sign in order to believe what he said. If individuals are satisfied with "written" signs for the establishment of the primitive church, why not be satisfied with written signs for its re-establishment. I could refer them to Orson Pratt's works where there are quite a number of cases and well authenticated. I have not disputed what John says about the signs, nor do I now; but I claim they were not done mainly to make believers. Paul speaks of nine supernatural gifts in the 12th chapter of his first letter to the Corinthians, one of which was called the "working of miracles." What about all the rest? Were they to cease? For what purpose were they given? Let our would be wise religionists of the 20th century answer.

How do Protestants know without new revelations that they are keeping even one tenth of the ordinances commanded by Christ for his people's observance? It lies beyond their power to prove that the New Testament is a sufficient guide for his church during future ages; it contains not the most remote intimation to that effect. No; it nowhere says that revelation was to be ended with the Apostle John. Were the men inspired who selected the epistles and other books which compose the New Testament? No, not one of them; it is not so claimed. Then, I ask, how do Protestants know that in their selection of the manuscripts supposed to be written by the apostles, that they got just the number that contains all the law of God? In 1 Corinthians 5:9 we are told by Paul that he had written an epistle to that church previously to the one he was then writing—the one known in the New Testament as "First Corinthians." In Jude it is intimated that he had written an epistle called the "Common Salvation." Paul also speaks of the epistle to the Laodiceans. None of these are now to be found in the Bible. They were no doubt equally inspired with what we have. If so, and it is true that "All scripture given by inspiration is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction," etc., would it not be important to have those books that would greatly help to "thoroughly furnish us unto all good works?" Indeed, how do those know, I therefore ask, who take the Bible as their ONLY rule of faith and practice, but what there are numbers of ordinances spoken of in the missing books referred to, which effect their salvation to the same extent that it is effected by those they are now pleased to observe.

If it be said they were uninspired, I ask, How do they know those are inspired which they now have? There are none of the books of the New Testament that mention the names of the other books that were to finish up the canon of scripture. If God would have named, in his epistle, or specified all other books that were to form the rule or guide for the church in future ages, then uninspired compilers might have known just what books were genuine. They would then have known the very number; yes, more, the very ones that were required to serve the purpose for which they wanted them. But alas! Jude does not do that, neither do any of the other writers of the New Testament. So the New Testament is only known (?) to be complete by tradition. If all the revelations God has given to the human family in the past are necessary for his people in future ages, we certainly cannot expect to be guided rightly with a part of them.

Some learned divines argue that there is enough in the Bible for the salvation of the human family. They must admit that if we had it all we would have to much, or more than enough. So according to their teaching God gave a little too much; that is if they are right in believing—or according to their belief—that a part is enough. But, I must remind these gentlemen who unhesitatingly denounce everything purporting to be inspired but what happens to be bound up with the number of books called the Bible; thus if a part of God's revelations are sufficient for us, it certainly needs a new revelation to tell us which part it is. But, if it is true on the other hand that ALL of God's revelations are needed now, we need a new revelation to supply the deficiency. Take it either way, new revelation is absolutely necessary! Hence all those who take the Bible as a sufficient guide, repudiating all coming under the head of new revelation, are greatly jeopardizing their eternal welfare. Christ has said "Search the Scriptures, but he never has told us that we should rely wholly upon them—that is, they did not intend that we should put our dependence on them to the extent that we would not be willing to receive any scripture or communication he might see fit to give us in the future. God does not give all his revelations at once, as every body knows who has read the Bible; but as Isaiah says, "He gives line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little."

Even if we had all the revelations that God has ever given to man, bound up into one book it would not be enough to fill the requirements from the time the last was given, henceforth. Revelation not only brought to the church the law by which they were to be governed collectively, but it also brought law for certain individuals and for certain branches of the "body," and it was applicable only to those to whom it was directed, and oftentimes could be obeyed by no one else. For example, God called Paul and Barnabas to the ministry—not by a revelation that had been given to somebody else; no, it only applied to Paul and Barnabas and could only be obeyed by them. Also revelation was given to rebuke certain churches sometimes; it told them numbers of things of infinite importance to them that they could not find out by the written word or the scriptures which were given for the church collectively in the past.

Taking it for granted that the little book called the New Testament contained all the inspired writings of the christian dispensation, it would not be the New Testament in reality—that is, it would not be the real absolute gospel of Christ as delivered by inspired servants of God eighteen centuries ago. It took more than the mere word to constitute the New Testament in the apostolic age. Paul says, "Our gospel came not unto you in word only, but in power and in the Holy Ghost and in such assurance."—1 Thes. 1:5. If the "word" then, required the attendance of the Holy Ghost in order to be constituted the New Testament it would not be the New Testament in the absence of the Holy Ghost. Then if we can not be saved without the New Testament now, the inference must be fairly drawn that we need the Holy Ghost manifesting itself in power now.

But one sect in order to evade the force of this argument has sought shelter in advocating that there is no such thing as the "mere word," that the Spirit ceased to produce the gifts that were found in the primitive church; that it will no more inspire God's servants to deliver the word orally, but that these things all ceased having served their purpose, and from thenceforth the Spirit works through the Word. Now, for this position I have up to date of writing failed to find one single sound argument in support. The sect who claims this is the Campbellites or Disciples. Whatever other end they can have in view than accounting somehow for the verse quoted in the foregoing (which is so detrimental to their creed) in order that their mistaken followers and others might not so soon detect the error of their doctrine, I am unable to tell. Of the people who read the New Testament but few ought to be misled, it is so glaring. If God will use his Spirit to convert souls to him by operating it through the mediumship of the New Testament, why will he not do the same or convert them by using his servants as mediums for his Spirit? In the absence of scriptural ratification I would have the same right to believe one, that they would to believe the other. But, as I have already shown, the scripture is not silent about this matter.

Now if they are right in their assumption that the New Testament is really the New Testament, then Paul must have referred to that book in its complete form when he said "Our gospel came not unto you in word only." Hardly could he have referred to that; for it was not then yet all written, and he certainly did not mean that part of the New Testament came unto them in word only. The new testament existed before it was ever written. It would exist now if it never had been written. Then if the new testament before it was written, came unto them in power and in the Holy Ghost; and if the Holy Ghost ceased to be given, it is unfair to argue that it comes through the written word in power, or that the written word is enabled by it to come to us in power—therefore the written word is NOT the New Testament. It is ONLY the "mere word."

But how would the Disciples simplify their position? How does the Spirit operating through the bare word make it any clearer to the reader? I fail to see that it could make a bit of difference whether there is any Spirit there or not; because the Spirit, in order to do the reader any good, would have to act on his heart, that is, strive with him and prepare him to receive the truth or written word. But as soon as this is admitted, it must be conceded that it does not work through the word. I can, without any difficulty, conceive how the Spirit could make clear the unwritten word—the oral word. It could, by resting upon the servant of God, influence him to speak with power; to speak with assurance; to speak the truth; to speak to the understanding of the people, and to speak the mysteries of the gospel that he could not otherwise. Remember the word referred to is not literal Spirit, but the result of the moving of the Spirit upon a person. Of course it may be argued that the Spirit could empower the servant of God to make clear the written word, to speak or write the truth etc. I admit that the Spirit did do that with the authors of the New Testament. I farther admit that it was made most too plain to suit some theories. But why argue that the Spirit continues to work with the word after it is made plain and "clear?" How could it (the Spirit) make it any clearer after it is written once? It is easily perceived that that argument is foundationless and will hardly endure careful examination.

Protestants only know the New Testament to be true by TRADITION. Tradition is very uncertain. It taught Pope Innocent at the Third Council of Carthage in the year 404 A. D., to reject as spurious a number of books that previously formed a part of the collection. Those books were evidently thought to be genuine by the men who selected them in the year 397 A. D., tradition taught them to receive them into the canon; which tradition taught Pope Innocent afterward to eliminate them from the number which he regarded by tradition—with the knowledge that tradition afforded him—as genuine. Eventually one of the "harlot" daughters of the old Mother began to think that the old Mother had collected most too many, and she sat in judgment and excluded a number, or about half a score more because tradition taught her that they were not genuine. The number retained by her, is the English translation of the Bible which Protestants profess to believe and revere so highly.

How can it be proved that this last Bible referred to, contains the very amount and all the scripture we need? Who, without new revelation, can honestly and truthfully answer yes? If tradition was so uncertain in the former cases, is it not possible, yes more, probable, that it was in the latter case? If tradition is to be relied on, would it not be MORE reliable three or four hundred years after Christ than it would be over a thousand years after Christ? As the Protestants retained some that the Catholics retained, and excluded some that the Catholics retained, is it not probable that they would have retained some that the Catholics rejected, had they had access to them?

A Resume of Labor.

ELDEN M. T. SHORT.

As I take the pen in hand the thought comes to me how judicious and wise, how edifying and instructive it would be to communicate or express the right thing in a proper way, and at a convenient time, and in the place of suitable occasion. Great events come not often in the brief span of life. The threads form a tangled skein with many knots and kinks. The well performed tasks at hand, and the daily, yea the hourly duties, conscientiously done, are the things that aggregate in developing and rounding out true life and genuine character.

I have spent more than a quarter of a century as an active missionary in field service, with diversified, but in the main, happy experience. To aver that no clouds have fallen across my pathway and obscured the road by times is not for me to say, but surely more sunshine and light have dawned on the straight, narrow way, than otherwise. I have often desired to baptize many thousands instead of a few hundred; but, withal, I have striven to sow, with a liberal hand, the good gospel seed. The field includes the beaten track of the frequented highway, the rocky crags, and sterile wastes, the rank growth of noxious weeds, as also on ground that may be termed good, better and best.

For the eight months of this conference year, I led as many into the "washing of regeneration" as on previous occasions, but on the 1st inst. I found the temporary end of the soldier's warfare. I felt, when pulling against wind and tide, Woe is me if I preach not. An asthmatic cough, of long standing, impaired my voice, and weakened my physical frame and bodily health. From this local rasping distress, much toil, grave responsibilities and intense anxiety, a fever set in, that caused a homeward retreat. I feel far better, and well of my fever since Elder I. N. White came to see, pray with, and for me. This throat trouble will have to relinquish before my voice box can render normal service. I have lifted up my voice on ship board, and the islands along the Atlantic sea shore, as well as in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Canada, and in our native land.

I could recount so very many blessings, on divers times and in substantial ways, that have and do come to your humble servant and his household, I do modestly forbear lest an air of boasting might be assigned the motive. In honor to the power we adore providence and mercy, light and truth, grace and amiability, dwelleth in his lofty pavilion. He is no stranger to the hovel of the poor, the sick chamber, the pest house and hospital. The halls of revelry, the banqueting of wealth, the fierce, heartless competitions and combinations of commerce and trade, and the pomp, pageantry and splendor of royalty, are ever visible to his all-seeing eye. In the language of the illustrious Lincoln, "Why should the spirit of mortal be proud." This wise maxim was adopted by him.

As I stand beside the Jasper Sea, and stoop to gather a white stone and purple shell, if the great wave sweeping landward by the swell, and restless pulse of the hungry brink does not overtake me all of a sudden, and the treacherous undertow carry me out in the coral deep, I may yet, under the care of the pilot of blue Galilee, go forth on the high mountains of ministerial usefulness, and lift up a strong voice in cities afar as heretofore and by-gone years. If not, I hope to wield a facile pen for Zion's weal, and to light up the walk of humankind.

First part of meetings held in Formosa, Kansas, were not largely patronized, but the last four were well attended, because of advertising each service plainly, as follows:

"PREACHING.
 "November 18th, Elder M. T. Short, of Independence, Missouri, will speak in the Green Front Hall this 7:30 p. m. Subject:—The Holy Spirit, what and where is it; how received and retained; its office work or what it does; the fruits, gifts, graces and blessings thereof; and the sin against the Holy Ghost, and who is liable to do so, etc. Prove all things, shun the evil and adhere to the good and the pure; nor heed Old Mother Grundy or Madam Rumor, or the popular clamor of bigots, hirelings and hypocrites in general.

 "This 7:30 p. m., November 19th. Subject:—What is Man, by Elder Short. His first estate, pre-existence and heavenly origin; his temporal sojourn, or mortal career amid demons; his intermediate state between death and the resurrection; his final destiny or whether are we tending; Adventism will be thrown into the scales of justice; her darts blunted, turned aside, broken and shivered; her fallacies and errors exposed, refuted and crushed. Also the orthodox hell exposed and blown into atoms, as well as truth maintained, exonerated and defended. If you are afraid of your craft or your good name, you had better stay at the shrine of evangelical paganism and the altar of pride.

"November 20th, in Green Front Hall. Joseph Smith the Martyr, a true prophet of the living God, and his son, Joseph, is the lawful successor in the prophetic office, leadership and presidency of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; the 'Book of Mormon' is the inspired history of ancient America, and the first occupants of this land. Brigham Young became a vile heretic, a traitor, a false shepherd, and a lying, licentious, polygamous apostate. The harem of the desert is a scandal on the domain of this nation, and a departure from the faith of the true church; and a lustful, murderous disgrace on the annals of decency and civilization. Hear the facts, heed the truth, nor fear the face of clay.

"This 7:30 p. m., November 21st, Elder Short's farewell. A review of the great essentials of religion; a final summary of the gospel principles, or doctrine; recapitulation of the whole plan of life and salvation; and a direct appeal to the heart and brain, or intellect; the sin-loving world with its teeming millions are always wrong; the popular clamor is a treacherous guide; evangelical faiths are dead and dying; old orthodoxy is on her last legs, and leaning on the rotten crutch of the creeds, dogmas, doctrines and commandments of men; false shepherds, lying pastors, hireling hypocrites, and blind guides are having a hard time in thrashing over the old straw, and getting a morsel of bread from their dupes that are beginning to see through their pious frauds, and old defunct systems that are to soon be relegated to the dark gulf of oblivion and despair. Presto it is done."

Pure Coconut Candy for Children.

Take one pint of sugar, a quarter of a pint of desiccated coconut and a quarter of a pint of milk. Boil these ingredients in a granite ware or porcelain lined saucepan for five minutes. Remove from the fire, set the saucepan in a dish of cold water and stir briskly until the mixture is creamy. Pour on a lightly buttered dish and mark it in squares while warm, so that it may be easily broken when cold. Coconut cakes are very easily made and would be a variety. Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth; add gradually a small cupful of sugar, the same quantity of coconut, either desiccated or freshly grated, and one tablespoonful of flour. Drop on a buttered tin in small round cakes and bake for five minutes in a quick oven.—January Ladies Home Journal.

"OUR AIM, MANKIND TO BLESS."
DAUGHTERS OF ZION
 MRS. H. B. CURTIS, EDITOR.

The Daughters of Zion is an organization in the church, of mothers and others who are interested in the welfare of our homes. Under the supervision of the general society, local societies are established, where they may meet to consider together their work as home keepers, and as moulders of character. Their purpose is to increase love for the home, to promote social purity, to study the problem of child care and development; that thus they may better prepare themselves for their responsibility as wives and mothers, and that from the home may go the influence that shall fulfill their aim, which is "mankind to bless." Have you a local in your branch? If not, can you not organize one? Send to the corresponding secretary for constitutions. The Advisory Committee will be pleased to hear from you and will gladly furnish you any assistance in their power. Send your list of names of members to the recording secretary.

Editor's Address, 1210 West Short St., Independence, Mo.

At one of our late Daughters' of Zion meeting, there was something in the reading about the child being in the hands of the parent, as clay in the hands of the potter, when one of the sisters said she would like to hear the experience of some mother who found her children as clay in her hands. The request was not granted in full; but from the discussion which followed, the following thoughts were evolved: We are just as surely moulding the characters of our children as the potter moulds the clay, though we do not see the results that we desire. We are too haphazard in our work, and often labor unskillfully and without a definite purpose in view. An unskilled potter can no more fashion a beautiful vessel than an unskilled parent can develop a beautiful character.

It would not be well to be too persistent in laboring to develop according to our own ideas of what our child should be, lest we should not be moulding to best fit him for the work which the Lord designed him to do. God has given to each child an individuality of its own, and as the potter sometimes has one kind of clay to work with, and sometimes another; and of one kind he makes a vessel for one purpose, and of another one for another use; so the mother cannot train all her children alike; but they can all be made vessels fit for the Master's use, if parent and child are consecrated to that end.

"A girl cannot too sedulously guard her mother nor too gently bear with her, if the mother has reached a period where she is more easily wearied than formerly and where little things vex her. To some of us there come days when our hearts are heavy because we were not so sweet and loving as we might have been, and God alone can help us when this realization comes too late."

AS OTHERS SEE US.

"O' wad some Power the giftie gie us To see ourselves as others see us! It wad frae monie a blunder free us And foolish notion."

We had been spending the afternoon with some married people of our acquaintance—such nice people—and the cutest children—so bright we thought it a pity—but I anticipate.

The father came home early, and we discussed—as who does not—the troubles of some friends.

"Well, I never saw such unruly children. If they were mine I'd whip them until they could behave!" said our host.

"Yes, they are about the worst spoiled children I ever saw. It's a wonder to me how people can let children do as they please to such an extent," said his wife.

There was much more in this vein, so that when their children came in to supper we were prepared to see models of deportment. This is something like the reality.

"I want to sit by grandma."
 "No, I've doin' to sit by drama!"

"No, you sha'n't!"

"Come, darlings, one can sit on either side of drama. Now wait a minute (as the older was about to assert his rights to the place nearest or between papa and mamma—pushing the other); you can sit here by mamma, and have grandma on the other side; see now (coaxingly, as he was still rebellious), you can have the prettiest plate" and so on. Finally this seating matter was arranged to the satisfaction of the older one and supper began.

"I want a pickle."
 "Me wants pickle too!" and both were served with pickles, then, "Gimme some meat!" and both had large helpings of meat.

"But you must eat some bread too," said mamma, seeing to it that both were supplied with bread; they nibbled the bread and ate the meat and pickles, soon calling for more of the latter edibles, and when the meal was over I wondered how they would sleep, and was not surprised to be told that they were "so restless it nearly wore mamma out."

My friend quoted the opening stanza by Burns as we were returning home, and I recalled the instance of a friend whom we had visited whose son was in trouble—how we pitied her! She assured us she "had tried to attend church and had done all she could for the 'Cause'" and now she was brought low in trouble," and on leaving her somewhat comforted by our sympathy and offers of help we called at a near neighbor's who said—

"Well, Mrs. Blank has only herself to blame—why, I lived next door to her for years and she would send that boy to the door when creditors came (she was always buying things on 'tick') to say she was not home, and she would come in my house Colburn of Des Moines, Iowa, writes: "Dr. Miles' treatment has performed a miracle for Mrs. C. after five physicians had failed." A. Grace of 401 Mountain St., Elgin, Ill., aged 52, was thought to be incurable from dropsy, which resulted in that awful and cruel smothering spells, cough, shortness of breath. to say how she had to have the money for a new dress or for something else (that could have been done without—but she thought they must make a good appearance); and the boy got so used to getting things on promises, with no intention or certainly no effort to pay unless compelled to, that it is no wonder he is dishonest."

We wondered if the mother could not see the results of lax methods of bringing up in the morals of the boy.

One more incident if I am not getting wearisome. The mother in this case was to be pitied because somewhat of an invalid; but her methods were the worst possible for herself and her boy.

I had known her many years, but living a long distance apart had not seen her for some time, and we were having a cozy talk when Willie came in, followed by his dog.

"How time flies! It seems only yesterday or little more, when he was a baby, and now he is six years old!" I exclaimed.

"Willie, go shake hands with Mrs. A.," said mamma—but Willie sat by the dog pulling his tail and making him growl.

"Don't do that, Willie, he may bite you," said mamma plaintively, but Willie paid no heed. We kept up the conversation and Willie kept on teasing and the dog growling—until mamma said, "Willie, I'm going to tell your papa when he comes home"—and after this threat had been repeated several times at intervals, and Willie was given something nice to go outside, he went.

Shortly before the time of papa's arrival Willie began to cry most piteously. "Why, what is the matter?" I cried.

"Mamma is going to tell papa and he'll whip me. Oh—oh—oh," he wailed.

After a little his mamma told him to "be a good boy and stop crying" and she wouldn't tell papa." "His papa is so strict and whips him so hard," she said to me by way of explanation.

Right here can you not ponder a little on the folly of this habit of expressing to a child, threats which you never execute, which perhaps you never intended to execute? He may be quick to notice and learn these things, and then what kind of seeds are you planting in his mind? The seed of a distrust in his mother's word? The seed of a growing tendency to give his own word lightly and as lightly break it? Surely not good seed, is it?

I noticed that Willie was very good when papa came home, and as obedient as could be wanted. He knew—as what child does not?—whom he must obey.

I heard from a visiting friend not long since that "Mrs. B— had no comfort for the life with that boy, he was so unruly and disrespectful to her, and she wished she could put him in some reform school because he was so bad." And he is not twelve years old yet. What a man he will make!

Why don't mothers pray, in a slight parody on Burns: Would that our God some gift would give us To see ourselves as others see us! It would from many a, bad child free us

And sad commotion. E. B.

NOW READY.

The public discussion between H. M. Riggle of the Church of God and Elder F. J. Ebeling upon the following questions: First five nights upon the nature, extent, establishment and subsequent location of the kingdom of God. Four nights upon the punishment of the wicked and final destiny of man. Two nights upon the origin and authority of the so-called Church of God. JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

Dear Ensign:—We have read the "silent preacher" freighted as it is with tidings from Israel's hosts from every clime, as they go marching on. The "preacher" keeps us in touch with the "boys," and we assure them we are trying to keep step with the inspiring strains of Zion's song, and strengthening the ranks occasionally by adding a few recruits.

Permit us now to return to David H. Smith, Elgin, Illinois. He said, "Yes, sir, that is my name, but I do not recall you; what may be your name, please?" I replied, "My name is Chatburn." "Chatburn," said he, "I remember very distinctly one J. W. Chatburn of Council Bluffs, Iowa, you cannot be him surely." We then informed him that the Chatburn he knew was the father of the one he was talking with, etc. We then sat down and enjoyed the visit very much, and from his looks and actions we are assured it was mutual.

David is well and has grown to be portly—a very fine looking and commanding physique indeed. Any one acquainted with Joseph or Alexander would readily see that David is of the same stock. I could not lead him into conversation on church lines. He did not care to talk on that line. He was well posted on the assassination of President McKinley and many of the current topics of the day, which were discussed in a very intelligent way. We went with him to his room in the beautiful building, he introducing us very pleasantly to some of his close acquaintances; after which I asked, David, have you lost your fondness for music? "Oh no," he said, "I often sing and play the organ for my comrades here." He then took his seat at the organ, at my request, and sang and played most beautifully the following hymns from the Hymnal, in the order given: "Let us walk in the light," "Home, home, beautiful home," "The Saints shall wear robes as the lilies."

His playing was faultless and his singing was excellent, and as the sweet, melodious strains echoed through the corridors of the building, commanding attention and the most profound silence and respect from patient and attendant, we were filled with emotions that cannot be told by word or pen. Like a flash there came the inspired words that had dropped from his pen many years ago:

Joseph's star is bright and shining, Alexander's more than mine, Mine is just below the horizon, Abide its time and it shall shine.

We could not help feeling in our soul that by and by this star will shed its brilliant lustre on patient and waiting Israel again, and as the Spirit of peace came o'er us, we reheard the assuring words, "David is in God's hands."

I took my "jot book" and made a minute of my visit and the hymns sang—asking David to sign his autograph to it. He looked it over carefully and refused to sign it. I asked for the reason, whereupon he said, "Mr. Chatburn, you have not the hymns in their order, and I will not sign it. If you will place them in their order as sang I will cheerfully do so." Of course I placed them in order, then he signed his name almost faultlessly, "David Hyrum Smith, Elgin, Illinois."

Christmas Greeting.

This is the particular season of the year that there is a universal outpouring of gifts and offerings to relatives, friends and institutions of our admiration, and some of these donations are away up to "G." or look so to us of Graceland.

The Chicago University received this month from John D. Rockefeller and others, $1,050,000. Reader, think of this mammoth institution, that in the last ten years has received in gifts about sixteen million dollars, and while they count their students by the thousands, and yet every year have over and above receipts from tuition, a deficit of from $100,000 to $265,000, and yet we have those in the church who express themselves, that Graceland should be a self-sustaining institution, and because she is not, they refuse to give us any aid. If all people would adopt that rule, and withhold help from all institutions that are not self-sustaining, there would be a general collapse of colleges throughout this country, even the oldest and most popular colleges would be badly crippled or go into bankruptcy.

If the whole membership of the church would send in an equal amount to what they spend this Christmas, I am of the opinion that the debt would be fully wiped out, and we would have a good working balance for running expenses.

From one Sabbath school class of Independence, Missouri, received the handsome amount of thirteen dollars. If all the schools would go and do likewise, the undersigned would obtain a rest from asking aid for Graceland. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to all.

A Profitable Occupation for Women.

A large number of men and women, partly from the necessity of outdoor life, but largely under the fascination that grows on one when brought into close touch with Nature, have become actual tillers of the ground—some as a source of health and pleasure, but vastly more with a view to making money. The field is still open, and the demand for first class productions exceeds the supply. "Gardening for Profit" in the January Delimitator covers this phase of industry very fully, going into the subject of flower culture and the raising of vegetables in complete detail, with hints as to shipping, packing and the developing of patronage.

Joseph's Land Leads.

"The annual return of the foreign trade of the Empire of Japan for the year 1900," which has just reached the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, shows that the growth in American imports into Japan during the decade has been far greater than that of any other nation. The total value of imports from the United States into Japan in 1900 was, according to this official publication of the Japanese government, 62,761,196 yen, against 6,874,581 in 1890, being thus nearly ten times as much in 1900 as in 1890. That this growth of imports from the United States has been far in excess of that of other countries, or of that of the average, is shown by the fact that the total imports of Japan are but three and a half times as much in 1900 as in 1890, while those from the United States are, as already indicated, nearly ten times as much in 1900 as in 1890. The total imports of Japan in 1900 are 287,261,845 yen, against 80,554,874 in 1890.

A Quarterly Statement.

The commerce of the Philippine Islands during the quarter ending September 30, 1901 is shown in a copy of the Manila Times of November 2d, which has just reached the Treasury Bureau of Statistics. It shows that the United States stands second in the countries from which importations were received during the quarter, and second in the list of countries to which exports were sent during the same period. Hong Kong heads the table of countries from which importations were received, nearly all of the merchandise from that point, however, being fresh fruits and vegetables; while England heads the list of the countries to which articles are exported, the total to England in the quarter being $1,867,798, against $1,842,580 to the United States. Cotton goods heads the list of articles of imports, the value being $1,351,994, while hemp heads the list of articles exported, its value for the quarter being $3,047,278, tobacco and cigars, $1,052,901.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints in the Northeastern Illinois District:—The missionary force of the district is anxious to do what they can for the advancement of the cause, but they find themselves in need of the co-operation of the membership. Branch officers, do you want any meetings held in your branches to revive the work and perchance lead others to the light? If you do, and you want the assistance of any of the missionaries, let me know at once and when you would like the meetings held so we can arrange for them. We would be glad to hear from any of the scattered members where any place can be secured to hold meetings. Can any one give us the address of some one where there will be a place to hold meetings?

Saints, don't say "Our elders cannot do any good here now," but try and get the elder, get a place for him to preach and do what you can to let the meetings be well advertised, and then if the people do not come out to hear, you will have a consciousness that you have done your duty in that matter. Don't give up, but TRY. Address me at Dow City, Iowa.

D. M. RUDP, Sub-Missionary in Charge. PLANO, Ill., Dec. 18.

Pittsburg Church Dedication.

We are pleased to announce that our new church is nearing completion and Providence permitting, will be dedicated Sunday, January 5, 1902. The erection of this church by this little band of Saints has been no small undertaking, but friends both in and out of the church have assisted and the Lord has opened up the way before our expectations and has crowned their efforts with success. To him be all the glory.

We hope all who can conveniently do so will attend the dedication services. We hope to see the church crowded, and expect to have a glorious time. There will be prayer meeting in the morning at 9:30; preaching at 10:45 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. by several of the brethren—each occupying about 10 minutes—and preaching at night at 7:30.

On account of the scattered condition of the Saints in order to attend all the meetings, it has been suggested that we bring our lunches and come prepared to stay all day. The church is located on Miller Street near Colwell Street. Take Center Avenue cars to Miller, or 5th Avenue cars to 5th Avenue High school.

Those who cannot come, but desire to assist us financially, may forward their donations to Wm. Dougherty, California Avenue, Avalon, Allegheny Co., Pa. The smallest amount will be appreciated and thankfully received.

In gospel bonds, F. G. PITT, Pastor.

Conference Notices.

The conference of the Southern Nebraska district will convene with the Wilber branch, January 19 and 20, 1902, at Wilber, Nebraska. The branches will please see to it that their statistical reports are ready and sent in due time. We would be pleased to see a full representation present. Come and let us have a good time together and see to it that we can do what is best for the cause. This will be the time and place to choose delegates to represent the district at the General Conference, which meets at Lamoni, Iowa, April 6, 1902.

J. W. WALDSMITH, Dist. Pres. 404 4th Corso, Nebraska City, Neb. December 17.

End of the World.

Archdeacon Percy C. Webber, of Boston, Massachusetts, opened his ten days' parochial mission at St. Mark's church, corner of Franklin avenue and Liberty street, last evening. The church was well filled, and the indications for a successful mission are very favorable.

At the opening of the services Dr. F. E. J. Lloyd of St. Mark's bestowed the stole upon Archdeacon Webber, thus turning the parish and the congregation over to the latter's absolute charge during his stay in Cleveland.

Archdeacon Webber spoke on the second coming of Christ. He said that scientists as well as theologians, are teaching that the world is coming to a speedy end, and announced his assurance that many of the congregation present would live to see the end of this sphere.

During Archdeacon Webber's ten days' mission there will be four services at St. Mark's every day. The archdeacon is one of the most famous missionaries in the United States.—From Cleveland Plain Dealer, Dec. 7.

Church Dedication.

On Sunday, January 12, 1902, at 11 a. m., our new chapel on North Washington Avenue, Ogden, Utah, will be dedicated. Saints of the surrounding settlements please take notice and let all attend who can. Several of the missionary force will be present.

PETER ANDERSON. Salt Lake City, Utah, Dec. 13.
